

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Friday, August 2, 1991

The House met at 10 a.m.

Rev. Dr. Ronald F. Christian, Office of the Bishop, Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, Washington, DC, offered the following prayer:

Gracious God, Your mercies are new to us each day, Your goodness is always present for each person, Your peace is available to all who seek it.

We pray, O God, that our personal whims will not replace in our lives, Your wishes, for what is good and just, or that our individual desires will not supplant in our actions Your demand for righteousness and mercy.

And, may we always remember to call upon You for wisdom in moments of uncertainty, to seek Your consolation in times of great need and sorrow, to return thanks to You when joy and happiness abound. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. NICHOLS] to lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. NICHOLS led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bills and a joint resolution of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 230. An act to authorize the transfer of certain programs and functions of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to the Department of the Interior, and for other purposes;

S. 855. An act to amend the act entitled "An Act to authorize the erection of a memorial on Federal land in the District of Columbia and its environs to honor members of the Armed Forces of the United States who served in the Korean War;"

S. 1554. An act to provide emergency unemployment compensation, and for other purposes; and

S.J. Res. 187. Joint resolution to make a technical correction in Public Law 101-549.

WE MUST REMEMBER AMERICAN WORKERS

(Mr. DOWNEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. Speaker, I would ask you to deliver a message to the President of the United States. We also share the great pride in the accomplishments of the President in the Soviet Union. Mr. Speaker, I must say that there is a growing unease in the land that this President seems more concerned with the plight of workers in Moscow, Kiev, and Leningrad than those in Milwaukee, Columbus, and Los Angeles.

Mr. Speaker, I have spoken to the people who are the victims of this recession. They are waiting in unemployment lines, but they want to work. It is the responsibility of this Government to make sure that they do not lose their families, their homes, their apartments because they have lost their jobs.

Today the House will be able to pass the same bill that the other body passed, to extend unemployment benefits. It is up to the President to sign this bill and to trigger the emergency so that the benefits will go and we will not see 300,000 people exhausting their benefits each month.

Mr. Speaker, please tell the President that if he does not sign this bill and trigger this emergency, he will have fired the first shot of the 1992 campaign at the heart of American working men and women.

RECOGNITION OF TOM REYNOLDS

(Mr. HOUGHTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize a distinguished friend of New York's 34th Congressional District, Mr. Tom Reynolds. Tom's hard work and dedication has been brought to my attention by some of the great veterans of Jamestown. He is currently a member of the Royal Canadian Legion, branch 75, in Toronto.

This brief statement is to express my gratitude to Tom for his extraordinary work for American and Canadian veterans. The veterans of western New York salute him for his efforts.

This Legionnaire has proved his enduring commitment to the country many times, but particularly serving as an overseas member of the 15th General Medical Corps and devoting 20 years to the Canadian Medical Militia. As the president of branch 75 of the Royal Canadian Legion, Tom has involved himself in military and veteran events, including youth development, for years.

For everyone today, I would like to recognize Tom for all the work he has done for veterans by fostering a greater understanding and more neighborly relationship between the United States and Canada. By serving as parade marshal and liaison officer, Tom coordinates and organizes all American units and Canadian veterans for the Warriors Day Parade held annually at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto on August 15.

Always willing to lend a hand, Tom, at 75 is very young, loved, and admired by veterans of both the United States and Canada.

REMEMBER THE KURDS

(Mr. BILBRAY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BILBRAY. Mr. Speaker, tomorrow, August 3, the Kurdish National Congress of North America will convene in Washington, DC, in order to discuss and map out future strategy to resolve the continuing Kurdish crisis in northern Iraq. I am greatly honored to have been invited to address this gathering.

Although we do not continue to see nightly pictures of dying refugees, tent cities, and food drops, there are still a number of issues that need to be settled. Although we now have a rapid action force in Turkey, we can still not guarantee the safety of these people. The Iraqi Government's past actions have shown an incredible disdain for the existence of the Kurds.

Of utmost importance is the fact that people are still dying. Our economic embargo upon Iraq is necessary and justified. However, we must devise ways in which to deliver the assistance and subsistence that every human deserves.

And finally Saddam Hussein is still in power. No one, especially Kurds, will be safe until this dictator is removed. I hope my colleagues will join me in commending the continuing actions of the Kurdish front and I hope that we will not forget their struggle.

NOTICE TO FOREIGN TERRORISTS

(Mr. LAGOMARSINO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, the indictment of a Salvadoran guerrilla for the cold blooded murder of two United States servicemen represents a significant advance in the worldwide fight against terrorism.

This action by a Federal grand jury puts all foreign terrorists on notice that they are subject to U.S. justice no matter where they may threaten or harm U.S. citizens.

It also sends a clear signal to the FMLN guerrillas that military attacks against United States citizens or the Salvadoran Government will not advance their cause. The only course for peace in El Salvador is for the FMLN to continue negotiations with the Salvadoran Government and for the FMLN finally to agree to a cease-fire.

WHAT ABOUT AMERICAN WORKERS?

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, the President said, even though there are 3 million American workers who have run out of unemployment benefits, we cannot continue to declare budget emergencies, and we cannot continue to bust the budget.

Wow! "Continue" is the key word, because in March of this year, he busted the budget for Turks; in the same month, he again busted the budget for the Israelis; the following month he busted the budget for the Kurds. However, when it comes to American workers, sorry, Charlie.

The truth of the matter is, this President is more involved in the Midwest than he is in the Midwest.

There is one other thing I would like to say. It is the American workers who pay the taxes to give Americans a budget. Not the Soviets, not the Eastern Europeans, the Kurds or the Turks. It is time to extend those unemployment benefits and start taking care of the American workers who pay the bills around here.

BUREAUCRATIC DISTORTIONS OF CLEAN WATER ACT THREATEN PRIVATE PROPERTY RIGHTS

(Mr. DOOLITTLE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Speaker, the people's fundamental right to use and enjoy their private property is being infringed by overzealous bureaucrats. They have transformed the Clean Water Act into the Wetlands Protection Act. This steady expansion of regulatory jurisdiction is happening without the approval of Congress.

The original intent of the Clean Water Act was to limit discharges of pollutants into the Nation's waterways.

EPA and the Corps of Engineers have moved from merely stopping water pollution to wetlands protection, and the wetlands in question need not be ecologically valuable or indeed even wet.

Regulators began to expand the wetlands definition in the 1980's. Today, wetlands include a muddy patch between two railroad ties in Idaho, a North Dakota cornfield where water pools during spring runoff, and 75-year-old irrigation ditches within the State of Nevada.

Owners of such land who fail to secure permits before altering their wetlands face stiff fines and even prison sentences.

Regulatory claiming of supposed wetlands is inappropriate, ridiculous, and indeed embarrassing to the Federal Government.

H.R. 1330, the Comprehensive Wetlands Conservation and Management Act, which I support, has been introduced to correct this error.

Let us leave the Clean Water Act to police our waterways, and enact separate legislation to regulate wetlands responsibly.

A WAR CRIMES TRIAL FOR SADDAM HUSSEIN

(Mr. STEARNS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, President Bush performed an unprecedented act of courage and diplomatic skill in rolling back the Iraqi aggression that began 1 year ago today.

The President secured the approval of the United Nations and Congress to commit troops to remove the Iraqi Army from the sovereign nation of Kuwait. Then, when the U.N. mandate was fulfilled, the President ceased offensive operations. From start to finish, Operation Desert Storm was conducted under the rule of law.

It's time the United States and the nations of this coalition, take the rule of law to the next logical step: Trying Saddam.

A war crimes trial for Saddam would send an unmistakable message to tyrants throughout the world. Initiating this trial now, against Saddam, will show that, even in times of war, basic human rights must be respected.

Let Saddam confront, on the world stage, the human beings he stuck with cattle prods, charged with bolts of electricity, and beat unmercifully.

Bring charges against Saddam now. We cannot wait for Mr. Hussein to step down. This House should take the lead in demanding war crimes trials for all Iraqis involved in the torture of American military personnel. And, we should begin at the top with Saddam Hussein.

FORCING A RELUCTANT PRESIDENT TO RECOGNIZE THE UNEMPLOYMENT CRISIS

(Mr. FROST asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, every so often the Congress must drag the President kicking and screaming into doing something that is needed for the country. Today is just such an occasion.

President Bush and his advisers have been refusing to extend additional weeks of unemployment benefits for the millions of Americans who are out of work as a result of the Bush recession. As far as the President and his men are concerned, there is no unemployment problem in the country.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to see the President explain that to the 50-year-old unemployed aerospace worker who stood up at one of my town hall meetings in Grand Prairie, TX, 3 weeks ago. He told me his unemployment compensation had run out and that he still could not find a job and needed help.

I promised him that day that I would go back to Washington and do everything I could to see that unemployment benefits were extended for him and his family. I will honor my commitment today by voting for the bill before the House.

And I hope an overwhelming number of my colleagues will join in dragging the President kicking and screaming to a solution to this problem.

PLANNED PARENTHOOD'S DECEPTIONS

(Mr. DELAY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to paint a picture that is not all too uncommon today. We are in New Haven, CT, in the lobby of a planned parenthood clinic. A girl, about 18 years of age, has come in for abortion counseling. She tells the counselor that she has no job and no income, and promptly sees her fee waived—picked up by the American taxpayers; you and me, Mr. Speaker.

In this case, Mr. Speaker, that young girl is a college student—at Yale University. You see, clients desiring title X subsidies report only personal, rather than family income. That wealthy, educated, young girl has had Joe Six Pack pay for someone to tell her that abortion is an option if she becomes pregnant—and she does not need parental consent.

Is this what the creators of title X envisioned? Mr. Speaker, it is time for us to end the deception and tell the truth. Title X was envisioned as a humane program to help couples plan a family. Today, one-third of title X clients are teenagers—only 31 percent are married. Rather than planning for families, over 50 percent of title X clients reported zero live births.

Perhaps planned parenthood's biggest deceptions are true stories like the one I related about the young Yale coed. Planned parenthood says that 85 percent of its clients are poor women. HHS, however, reports that only 46 percent of planned parenthood clients are under 150 percent of the poverty line. When you take into account that one-third of their clients are under 21 years of age, and that many of those young women can report no income because they live at home, you see that the actual percentage of title X clients who are underprivileged is remarkably small. In fact, only 9 percent of female planned parenthood clients who received contraceptives were on Medicaid.

Planned parenthood has fought the title X regulations with deceptions and falsehoods. The arrogance they have displayed in their fight is appalling. Can we afford to continue their governmental subsidies of 37 million taxpayer dollars for yet another year?

BRING SADDAM HUSSEIN TO TRIAL

(Mr. LANTOS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the congressional human rights caucus held a hearing on Iraqi violations of the human rights of American prisoners of war. The testimony from our Department of Defense was shocking. Physical abuses of American POW's ranged from electrical shocks and the breaking of bones to being slapped. Psychological threats ranged from the threatened severing of fingers to the placing of weapons to the head and the pulling of the trigger of an unloaded handgun.

Other types of torture inflicted on U.S. prisoners of war included beating to the legs with an ax handle and a pipe, kicks to the body, whipping with a leather strap, strikes to the back of the neck and the head with a metal ball pendulum device.

Mr. Speaker, after Saddam Hussein has gassed his Kurdish citizens, violated the human rights of the Kuwaiti people, and perpetrated unspeakable horrors against his own citizens, we now find that American prisoners of war were subjected to physical torture by Saddam Hussein's troops.

Mr. Speaker, the time to try Saddam Hussein for war crimes before an international tribunal is now. He should be tried in absentia. In that way he will be out of office soon and he will pay the penalty for his horrendous crimes.

THE CRISIS IN YUGOSLAVIA

(Mr. GEKAS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, the Congress of the United States has not paid enough attention to the events that are unfolding in Yugoslavia. After all, history will recall that the fire of war was centered in that region for two world wars and could very well engender a third world war out of the same conflict; so today I am introducing a sense-of-the-House resolution that would prompt us, and I hope will prompt us, to hold hearings and to do everything we can to raise the level of appreciation for what is happening in Yugoslavia.

Although the European community and the Security Council of that region is doing its utmost to wring out as much negotiating power among the republics as possible, we must learn more about it, and the American people must have a greater realization of how our future, the future of our own country, depends on a resolution of those very serious conflicts in Yugoslavia.

INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION FOR HOSPICE CARE TO TERMINALLY ILL VETERANS

(Ms. LONG asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. LONG. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation to provide hospice care to terminally ill veterans. People facing terminal illness deserve the opportunity to arrive at their own conclusions regarding the care that they receive at the end of their lives. Some might choose to fight their illness by receiving treatment in a hospital, but for some, this option is not appealing. For those persons, hospice care, which is provided in the home by trained professionals with the support of family members, might be a better choice.

Unfortunately, this choice is not available to America's veterans. Despite the cost savings associated with hospice care as opposed to inpatient treatment, no nationwide program exists within the Department of Veterans Affairs [DVA] to provide hospice care to terminally ill veterans.

For this reason, I am introducing legislation today to institute a demonstration project, within the DVA, studying the feasibility of providing hospice care. My legislation is very similar to a Senate bill, S. 1358, which has been reported out of the full Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee by a unanimous vote and has the support of many veteran advocacy organizations, including the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the Disabled American Veterans.

The legislation would establish a demonstration project, within DVA, at between 15 and 30 facilities, to determine how hospice care should be incorporated into the DVA health care delivery system. Urban and rural areas will be represented in the project. This bill does not require the DVA to contract out to private hospice providers. In fact, the study will include facilities that provide hospice care on an in-house basis. In addition, only those veterans who are currently eligible for hospitalization benefits will participate in the project.

An important provision of this legislation—which is not included in the Senate version—codifies budget neutrality that we know already exists because hospice care is more cost effective than inpatient hospital care. This bill merely makes that fact the letter of the law.

Mr. Speaker, at this time, when DVA budgets and benefits are suffering cutbacks, any proposal which might result in better care for veterans, as well as a cost savings to the Department, must be explored. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

PRESIDENT BUSH HAS AN EXTENSIVE DOMESTIC POLICY

(Mr. BOEHNER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Speaker, for months now my colleagues on the other side of the aisle have come down to the well of the House every day and slammed President Bush, saying that he does not have a domestic policy. Every day we hear it about the President "doesn't do this" and "the President doesn't do that."

Well, come on, folks; George Bush is a decent human being who is trying to do a decent job. As a matter of fact, he is doing a great job as our President. He has a domestic agenda: America 2000, an education plan that will help America's schools; a highway bill that will help America's infrastructure without raising taxes; an energy program to move us toward energy sufficiency; a crime bill that will take criminals off the street; and a growth package that will provide jobs to Americans.

What he does not have, he does not have a majority in Congress who will work with him.

Mr. Speaker, let us be honest with ourselves and our constituents, let us get off our rear ends and begin to move the President's domestic agenda.

LEGISLATION TO INCREASE PELL GRANT MAXIMUMS

(Mr. ROEMER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Speaker, it has often been said that as education goes so goes America.

After 44 hearings in our Committee on Education and Labor, we have heard countless times that the Pell grant is the foundation, the catalyst for access for our families to improved education, higher education in this country. It gives me great pleasure today to introduce legislation which will increase the maximum Pell grant from $3,100 to $4,500 and increase the child care expense allowance for Pell grant recipients from $1,000 to $3,600.

Mr. Speaker, as we face the challenging problems going into a new century, I hope that through the Committee on Education and Labor, working with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, that we can work to improve the educational structure not only for our middle-class working families, our long-income working families, but for our working people who want to go into vocational education as well too.

THE UNITED STATES SHOULD GATHER AND COORDINATE DOCUMENTATION FOR WAR CRIMES TRIAL OF SADDAM HUSSEIN

(Mr. WELDON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WELDON. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, I chaired a 2½-hour hearing that was designed to provide an overview of the process and evidence necessary to try Saddam Hussein for war crimes. Two very troubling and shocking revelations came out of the hearings with the seven witnesses whom we had before us.

The first was that all of our POW's and all allied POW's, for the first time acknowledged by the Defense Department, were abused and mistreated, one of whom was shocked on a continual basis to such an extent that at one point in time one of his teeth exploded from its socket, one of our POW's.

But perhaps the most extensive shocking revelation to come out of our hearing was the fact that no one agency, no one entity is in fact coordinating the documentation of the evidence necessary to try Saddam Hussein for war crimes.

We can talk about war crimes all we want and pass all the resolutions we want, but if we do not have the evidence to present in a court of law, we will not be able to make the case.

Mr. Speaker, I will be introducing legislation that will require the State Department to talk to our POW's, talk to our hostages, talk to citizen groups, talk to the Kuwaitis and to the environmental experts in order to document the evidence so that we can pursue a trial of Saddam Hussein at the appropriate international tribunal.

UPDATE ON MIDDLE EAST PEACE NEGOTIATIONS

(Mr. DREIER of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, as President Bush has just returned from an extraordinary successful mission on his first postcold war summit, we mark the first anniversary of Saddam Hussein's horrendous invasion of Kuwait. While Saddam Hussein continues to pose a threat to many in the region, I would like to express my appreciation to Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who has just indicated that he is going to go before his colleagues on Sunday and make the formal request that they proceed with negotiations with Syria, Jordan, and Lebanon, for the first time since December 1973, that the Arabs will have embarked on this kind of widening negotiation.

It remains to be seen whether or not the Palestinians will agree to be part of this process, but it is very clear that to see Israel make this very bold and dynamic step deserves our great appreciation and hearty congratulations.

HUMAN SUFFERING CONTINUES AS AFTERMATH OF GULF WAR

(Mr. PENNY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. PENNY. Mr. Speaker, 1 year ago today, Saddam Hussein shocked the world when he invaded Kuwait. This act of naked aggression against a helpless neighbor could not go unanswered. The response was Operation Desert Shield followed by Operation Desert Storm: An international military coalition—led by the United States—which expelled the Iraqis and defeated Saddam Hussein's army.

Desert Storm was a great victory, but now it is time to deal with the aftermath of the war. The economic embargo remains against Iraq. Yet in spite of war and continued sanctions Saddam Hussein remains in power—seemingly insulated from outside pressure. He also seems impervious to the cries of the vulnerable children in his own country, who are dying by the thousands due to shortages of food, medicine, and the lack of adequate sanitation.

Medical teams visiting Iraq first reported the tragic living conditions in early June. At that time, I proposed House Concurrent Resolution 168 to release a portion of Iraq's frozen assets for humanitarian aid. Now—nearly 2 months later—the Bush administration seems to agree that it is time to help ease the suffering.

The U.N. Security Council—with America's blessing—is considering a plan to allow Iraq to export oil for the purchase of food and medicine. Frankly, I felt that allowing the sale of oil—money we do not directly control—would be more problematic than using Iraq's frozen assets—which we can control. Nevertheless, if the Security Council approves the sale of oil, I will support the decision. It is time the world community takes steps to stop this needless human suffering in Iraq, and to call on Saddam Hussein to—once—do the right thing and allow this food and medicine to reach the children in peril.

Mr. Speaker, the war is long over. The dying must stop.

TAX INCREASES LEAD TO HIGHER UNEMPLOYMENT

(Mr. JAMES asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, today the House of Representatives will vote on the unemployment crisis, while that side of the aisle struggles once more to raise taxes on the American people.

Millions of Americans are unemployed today as a direct result of the last tax increase imposed on the American people.

When will we learn? Taxes are too high. As Government keeps squeezing, we get no blood from the turnip; but we destroy jobs, block progress, crush the hopes of American families.

I am asking my friends on that side of the aisle, as you talk today about the misery of mothers and fathers who cannot support their children, think about what you have done.

THE ISSUE THAT STIRS THE REPUBLICANS TO THEIR DEPTHS

(Mr. DURBIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Speaker, now here is a news item: The Republicans are leading the fight to repeal the luxury tax. The Republicans argue that it is unreasonable to ask a person to pay an extra tax on his million dollar yacht, a higher tax on his Jaguar luxury sedan, a new tax on his personal jet plane.

Leave it to be the Republicans to zero in on human suffering. They are blind to working families unable to afford a college education for their kids, middle income families struggling to pay medical bills and the homeless. No, the issue that stirs the Republicans to their depths is whether Donald Trump has to pay a luxury tax on the diamond bracelet he is giving to the next Mrs. Trump.

Now, before falling for the line that the Republicans are really fighting for the yacht builders, and airplane assembly line workers, remember when the Republicans and President Bush rejected a tax on millionaires last year. They accepted a tax on the toys of the rich, so, if they really want to protect the toymakers, will they now accept a tax on the superrich to make up the difference?

Do not wait for that ship to come in.

NORTHWEST OLD GROWTH PROTECTION AND ECONOMIC STABILITY ACT OF 1991

(Mr. MORRISON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MORRISON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to tell my colleagues that the Northwest is moving ahead together to save the families and communities of our struggling timber economy, and the old growth forests we are so proud of.

Today a bipartisan majority of Members from the Northwest, who have been working together for many months, have something to present to the rest of you, and urge you to support.

The Northwest Old Growth Protection and Economic Stability Act of 1991, represents our region's best effort to reach a balance that the Nation has been asking for—it balances the needs of timber dependent families and communities with the need to protect our Nation's natural heritage.

We introduce this legislation to focus the debate in Congress, so that we can move our families and jobs, our towns and cities, our forests, fish and streams, out of the courts and into a more certain future.

The special interests have already begun attacking us on every flank. Just remember that they will never accept the balance we need for Congress to succeed. And our forests, and the folks who depend on them, need us to succeed now more than ever.

A MOST REGRESSIVE AND UNFAIR TAX

(Mr. SANDERS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, this Congressman is strongly in favor of Federal action which will pump billions of dollars into rebuilding this Nation's deteriorating infrastructure—our roads, our bridges, our mass transit systems, and our other transportation needs. I am not, however, in favor of raising the gasoline tax 5 cents per gallon in order to finance these projects—as current legislation proposes.

The gasoline tax is one of the most regressive and unfair taxes imaginable. Clearly, this tax will come down heavily on working people, like the workers in a rural State like Vermont, who often have to travel long distances in order to get to work. Raising the gas tax last year by a nickel per gallon was wrong, and raising it another 5 cents per gallon this year is even more wrong.

Mr. Speaker, the wealthiest people in our country have grown much wealthier during the last decade, yet at the same time they have seen a significant decline in their tax burden. The working people and the middle class have grown poorer, but they have seen an increase in their tax burden.

Let us say no to the 5-cent gas tax and return, after the recess, with a new revenue raising proposal which will be fair and progressive—not another tax on working people.

WHITE HOUSE ANTI-CRIME BILL NEEDED

(Mr. OXLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, it seems that every morning when I pick up the morning paper I read another story about a paroled killer or rapist or child molester who has been released to repeat his unspeakable crimes.

Last year, this body overwhelmingly passed strong law enforcement legislation that included habeas corpus reform, expansion of the Federal death penalty, liberalization of the exclusionary rule, and mandatory victims' restitution. Yet these provisions were scuttled in conference committee.

Recently, the Senate passed a crime bill which the Attorney General has termed "acceptable," although it lacks exclusionary rule reform.

Now comes word that the House Democrat leadership has come up with its own crime bill which purports to emphasize crime prevention. It includes $260 million less than the Senate bill for more FBI and DEA agents and $700 million less for Federal prison expansion. It also includes so-called fairness in death sentencing provisions which would invite a quota approach to the application of the death penalty and which could have the effect of abolishing capital punishment in most States.

Mr. Speaker, that is not crime prevention and it is not crime control.

The time has come to pass the President's anticrime package.

INTRODUCTION OF THE CHATTAHOOCHEE FOREST PROTECTION ACT OF 1991

(Mr. JENKINS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to introduce the Chattahoochee Forest Protection Act of 1991. This legislation will provide protection for vital natural resources in the Chattahoochee National Forest in north Georgia.

Rapid expansion of urban areas around the Chattahoochee National Forest has threatened the delicate balance of nature which we have grown accustomed to through the years, and, perhaps begun to take for granted. I fear that the major emphasis for management in the Chattahoochee National Forest has been focused on timber harvesting. That is why I have designated five areas within the forest, totaling approximately 56,240 acres, for management practices which emphasize the recreational and scenic qualities of these areas. This proposal contains only Forest Service lands, omitting any privately held lands.

I realize that there are many who depend on the timber industry for their livelihood. With that in mind, the boundaries for the five areas were carefully drawn to include land which was the least suitable for timber harvesting to lessen any adverse economic impact. My proposal contains less than 10 percent of the total acreage of the Chattahoochee National Forest in Georgia.

However, within this land lies some of the most scenic and pristine areas of the Chattahoochee National Forest. The areas which I have included in this legislation contain such resources as the headwaters of the Chattahoochee River and the beginning of the historic Apalachian Trail.

Prior to introducing this legislation, I questioned my constituents as to their feelings regarding these designations. I was pleasantly surprised at the high number of responses I received from the ninth district, as well as others from the State of Georgia. Their support was overwhelming, and many advocated greater protection than what I was proposing. It appears that our Nation is becoming more sensitive to the destruction of our environment that many of our activities cause, and want to ensure that the resources which we enjoy will be there for future generations.

Specifically, my legislation would designate three areas as wilderness areas, one area as a scenic area, and one area as a national recreation area. The first area I am proposing for inclusion in the Wilderness Preservation System is an addition to the existing Brasstown Wilderness Area. Approximately 1,160 acres will be designated for protection. The area contains the scenic slopes of Brasstown Bald and has three wild trout streams.

The second and third areas will be newly designated wilderness areas comprised of 24,680 acres. The Blood Mountain Wilderness Area is approximately 7,800 acres and is named for Blood Mountain which is one of the highest peaks in Georgia which cannot be reached by road at an elevation of 4,467 feet. Eleven miles of the Appalachian Trail are also within the boundaries of this area.

The Mark Trail Wilderness Area contains approximately 16,880 acres and is being named after the cartoon character created by the late Ed Dodd who was a resident of my district. Ed Dodd was an outdoorsman, sportsman, gentleman, farmer, and artist. These unique qualities were combined by the artist, and the character of Mark Trail emerged into the comic strips. Mark Trail is known as a champion outdoorsman and wildlife educator. His life in the comic strips began on April 15, 1946, and he still enjoys a loyal following. Prior to his death, Ed Dodd turned over the strip to his collaborator, Jack Elrod. Through the talents of Jack Elrod, the philosophy of Ed Dodd that "every organism is dependent on all others" lives on the Mark Trail comic strip. I think that it is only fitting that Ed Dodd be remembered for the contributions which he made to conservation through the Mark Trail comic strip.

The Mark Trail Wilderness Area also contains 15 miles of the Appalachian Trail and the crest of the Blue Ridge Mountains. The area is home to the headwaters of the Chattahoochee River, as well as several species of wildlife, wild trout streams, and several rare plant species.

The fourth area I am proposing is to be designated as the Coosa Bald Scenic Area. It is comprised of approximately 7,100 acres and is named for the 4,287 foot high point of Coosa Bald. The area is noted for its scenic views, as well as the challenging Duncan Ridge and Coosa trails. Famous wildflower displays and a rare stand of distinctive yellow birch are also within the boundaries.

The final area I am proposing is the Springer Mountain National Recreation Area. Approximately 23,330 acres have been included in the area which contains Rock Creek Lake and sections of the Toccoa River. The area provides a variety of recreational opportunities which include water activities, hiking, camping, and for the truly adventurous a swinging bridge over the Toccoa River. The Appalachian Trail also begins at Springer Mountain.

Mr. Speaker, the basic purpose of my proposal is to change the management practices on this small portion of our national forest to give greater emphasis to recreation and scenic values rather than timber harvesting and to preserve the resources for the impact they have in sustaining for future generations.

AUTHORIZING THE SPEAKER TO DECLARE RECESSES TODAY

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it may be in order for the Speaker to declare recesses today, subject to the call of the Chair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, if I might, I take this time just to engage in a colloquy with the majority leader, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT].

Mr. Speaker, I ask the gentleman if the recess authority that he is asking for now is solely for the purpose of allowing the Committee on Ways and Means to get over here to consider the unemployment insurance bill and not for the purpose of taking up other legislation later today.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SOLOMON. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] is correct. If there is a need for this later in the day, we will consult with the minority to make sure it is acceptable.

Mr. SOLOMON. Further, Mr. Speaker, would we be taking up the rule, and then having the recess, or will we be recessing before we take up the rule?

Mr. GEPHARDT. We hope to go straight from the rule through the bill and its completion.

Mr. SOLOMON. So that after the 1 minute, we will go on the rule and then recess to wait for the Committee on Ways and Means to come over?

□ 1040

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, we will go to the rule and the bill. As soon as the rule is prepared and ready, we will go to the rule and then to the bill, and we will try to finish.

The reason for the recess authority is because after that, we do not know when the Senate will be finishing and we have got to be in coordination in terms of finishing today.

Mr. SOLOMON. Then after the 1 minutes, we will not take up the rule, which we reported last night at 9 o'clock? The rule is ready on the floor here now, but we will not take it up. We will recess and then take up the rule and the bill as soon as possible?

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is correct.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

Mr. MCEWEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SOLOMON. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. MCEWEN. Mr. Speaker, if I may just encourage the majority leader, I think we are prepared to go to the rule presently.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, that is correct.

Mr. MCEWEN. We will proceed with the rule here, if there is no objection, right after the 1 minute.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, the only reason for this request was to have recess authority today if later, coordinating our final adjustment with the Senate, we needed more time.

Mr. MCEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman. As I understand it, then, after 1 minute we will proceed directly to the rule.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, that is correct.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McNULTY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri? There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING THE SPEAKER AND THE MINORITY LEADER TO ACCEPT RESIGNATIONS AND MAKE APPOINTMENTS, NOTWITHSTANDING ADJOURNMENT

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that, notwithstanding any adjournment of the House until Wednesday, September 11, 1991, the Speaker and the minority leader be authorized to accept resignations and to make appointments authorized by law or by the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

DISPENSING WITH CALENDAR WEDNESDAY BUSINESS ON WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1991

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule be dispensed with on Wednesday, September 11, 1991.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

CONDITIONAL AUTHORITY FOR MEMBERS TO REVISE AND EXTEND REMARKS IN THE CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, NOTWITHSTANDING ADJOURNMENT

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that notwithstanding the adjournment of the House until Wednesday, September 11, 1991, all Members of the House shall have the privilege to extend and revise their own remarks in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on more than one subject, if they so desire, and may also include therein such short quotations as may be necessary to explain or complete such extensions of remarks; but this order shall not apply to any subject matter which may have occurred or to any speech delivered subsequent to the said adjournment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING REMOVAL OF THE MACE OF THE HOUSE AFTER ADJOURNMENT TO THE SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION FOR REPAIRS

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the resolution.

H. RES. 211

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House of Representatives is authorized and directed, on behalf of the House of Representatives, to deliver the mace of the House of Representatives, following the adjournment of the House, to the Smithsonian Institution only for the purpose of having necessary repairs made to the mace and under such circumstances as will assure that the mace is properly safeguarded; Provided, however, That the mace shall be returned to the House of Representatives before noon on the day before the House reconvenes or at any sooner time when so directed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Mr. GEPHARDT (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the resolution?

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

ADVICE FOR THE DEMOCRATS

(Mr. HEFLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Speaker, yesterday morning and, indeed, throughout the week, the House has witnessed a shameless display of self-interest and partisanship by Members of this body.

This week, President George Bush culminated a 10-year effort and signed a historic Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty with the Soviet Union. If successful, this treaty will cut superpower nuclear arms by 30 percent and outlaw heavy new intercontinental missiles.

In response to this achievement, some Democrats marched to the House floor and announced that the President wasn't spending enough time here at home, breaking the budget deal and raising taxes.

Mr. Speaker, evidently the Democratic Party has decided the President should neglect his duties outlined in the Constitution. Maybe they do not think nuclear treaties are important. Maybe they think we should abandon arms control and concentrate instead on their priorities of increasing the size of Government.

Or perhaps there is a different reason why the Democrats have acted so shamelessly. Perhaps they acted out of envy. Maybe the want to control the White House and enjoy a Constitutional mandate to set foreign policy and negotiate treaties. I guess they think tearing of the President is the way to do that.

Well, Mr. Speaker, if these Democrats want to gain access to the White House and play a larger role in setting foreign policy—I have a simple solution.

Get in tune with the American people.

Join the Republican Party.

IN FAVOR OF EXTENSION OF EMERGENCY UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFITS

(Mr. MAZZOLI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, this appears to be the last day that we will have in session before the August district work period starts, and so I would like to take this moment to wish my colleagues a happy, healthy, and productive recess, with a little vacation thrown in for good measure.

I would also like to commend leaders on both sides of the aisle in the House and in the other body for having achieved a compromise agreement on extending emergency unemployment benefits to unemployed workers. Many of them happen to be in my community of Louisville, and I am pleased to see from looking at the conference committee report that Kentucky will qualify for 13 additional weeks of unemployment benefits under the formulae which are incorporated into that bill.

I am also pleased to see in there extended unemployment benefits for returning Desert Storm veterans and for reservists who have come off of active duty.

Currently, under the law it is extremely difficult for these people to achieve their unemployment benefits and to get back into the mainstream.

This bill, in line with other bills we have passed to assist veterans and reservists, is a step in the right direction. I salute my colleagues for having achieved this agreement and look forward to voting for it and then to see my colleagues back here, healthy, safe, and sound in September.

BUSH TITLE X REGULATIONS WILL BE PRESERVED BY HOUSE

(Mr. SMITH of New Jersey asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to announce that there is no doubt that we have the votes to sustain the President's veto so as to preserve the new title X regulations designed to ensure that abortion not be promoted, counseled, or referred for as a method of family planning in federally subsidized family planning projects. A Member-to-Member whip check over the last 2 weeks has confirmed that we are well over the top and building additional support by the day. This will be the most important right-to-life vote of the year and I'm looking forward to the debate.

Of interest to Members is the fact that we are finding that the pro-abortion lobby's distortion campaign is backfiring. For the first time ever, planned parenthood is being exposed for performing counseling and referring over 200,000 abortions a year, many of them on minors without their parents' knowledge or consent.

Sadly, planned parenthood, which receives millions under the title X program, has become in many towns across the United States the local neighborhood abortionist.

Mr. Speaker, our Member-to-Member poll has found, notwithstanding some exceptions, that most pro-life Members understand that counseling and referring for abortion grossly undermines the respect for the life of the unborn child. If we were talking about counseling for a cancer or for a disease, that would be one thing, but pregnancy is not a disease and an unborn child cannot be likened to a diseased pancreas.

This fight is about abortion advocacy and taxpayers ought not be forced to subsidize advocacy that destroys children. The consequence of abortion referral and counseling is very simply that unborn babies die.

Mr. Speaker, referrals for prenatal care on the other hand, which are provided for in the Bush regulations, recognize that every pregnancy includes two patients, the mother and the baby. Both patients are absolutely worthy of respect and the best maternal and prenatal care possible.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, let me remind Members that yesterday's vote on the DC conference report—which contains fundings for abortion on demand—was 41 votes short of the number needed to overturn the President's anticipated veto. The Member-to-Member whip check coupled with yesterday's vote suggests we will indeed preserve every current pro-life policy.

OTHER THOUGHTS ON ABORTION

(Mr. WYDEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. Speaker, in spite of the remarks you just heard from my friend, the gentleman from New Jersey, there is some very good news this morning for the millions of low-income women who depend on federally funded family planning programs. Late yesterday the Commerce Committee voted to send to the floor the bill of the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN], to reauthorize the federally funded family planning program.

Without this legislation, our country would have two tiers of health care: The well to do could get access to all the information they needed about family planning from their private doctors, but because of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Rust versus Sullivan, the low-income women would not be able to get the facts. Their doctors could not be straight with them.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER] and I have introduced legislation with more than 170 of our colleagues to reverse the Supreme Court ruling. Yesterday the Commerce Committee voted to reauthorize the family planning program, throw out the Rust versus Sullivan decision, provide for an increase in funding, and stipulate that State law would provide under the issues of parental notification.

The gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] deserve great credit for moving forward this legislation. It will be a good bill that we can take up early this fall.

REMEMBER THE MIA'S, POW'S, AND HOSTAGES

(Mr. DORNAN of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Speaker, as I try to do whenever we are about to take a long break here, I try to get up for at least a moment and mention that there are six Americans still rotting in Beirut, and our POW's. I am wearing my POW tie today. I have been to five hearings this week, spent 1 hour 15 minutes with Mr. Cheney last night in the conference room of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL], and there will be another conference this afternoon. We are not getting anywhere.

But before I do that, I want to comment on the last two speakers. I want to associate myself, in total, with the remarks of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], and point out also that on the parental notification—and I say this as a parent with my wife five times over, with eight grandchildren, and more to come—on parental notification on abortion, major surgery, it also lost in that same Commerce vote that my friend from Oregon mentioned, 23 to 20.

Now, let me make note of something. Everybody listen well on this gag rule, so-called gag rule description.

Yet another Congressman is divorcing his wife, and he wants the gag rule enforced on his wife, who has just endorsed his opponent.

Isn't it interesting that gag rules are great, when you lock up and tape the mouth of your former spouse. A lot of people get Potomac fever around here and reject that partner that just spent 10, 15, 20, or 30 years getting them here. That gag rule is OK, but the other gag rule is not.

Mr. Speaker, back to the POW's and our hostages in Beirut. We still do not know the story of what happened to Americans after World War II that were in Siberian camps. We left 389 people behind in Korea. That was 38 years ago last Saturday that we had the cessation of hostilities there.

We have the six hostages, including Terry Anderson, captured March 16, 1985.

This is 1991, folks. Six years and four votes by the time we get back from this break. Tom Sutherland was captured June 9. We still do not know how to find people missing in action in Laos, from where not a single American came home.

We have got our work cut out for us, and let us pray hard during this break that we get at least the people back from Beirut.

PRESIDENT SHOULD DECLARE EMERGENCY FOR UNEMPLOYED AMERICANS AT HOME

(Mr. WISE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, a previous speaker talked about challenging the Democrats on foreign policy, and I understand that, because he did not want to challenge us on domestic policy, because then we would have to talk about the Republican failings.

Today we are going to have a chance to address that. We are going to have a chance to deal with Americans who have got real problems at home.

I know it is not the same as being a foreign country. It is not the Kurds, it is not the Ukrainians, it is not the Soviets, it is not all those people that we love to help, except it is our own people. It is time to help them.

Today we have a chance to vote on an unemployment bill that will extend benefits for working families that are out of work temporarily. This is a bill, for instance, that will help people keep their mortgages going; it will help people make the tuition payments in the fall for their children in college. It will help working Americans keep body and soul together. I hope the President will sign it, and then declare the financial emergency that is necessary to trigger this bill.

Mr. Speaker, just so everyone understands, the emergency was declared for the Kurds, the emergency was declared for Bangladesh. The question is whether the President will declare an emergency for Americans here at home.

Welcome home, Mr. President. We have got problems, and we are looking forward to having you work on them.

CONGRESS WOULD FAIL ECONOMICS 101

(Mr. ARMEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, it is soon time for our summer students and our summer classes in universities to suffer their summer final exams. When those students in that first year economics course answer on their exam that we should raise taxes in a recession, their professor will say, "You failed."

When the students say that if you levy a special excise tax on any commodity in this country there will be no reduction in sales of that commodity, there will be no drop in production of that commodity, there will be no unemployment pursuant to that reduction in production, nor will there be any loss in revenues to the Government from the taxes not paid by those people who are unemployed, the professor will say, "You fail."

For you unfortunate students out there that get failed for saying these things, tell your professor, "What are you failing me for? Congress is getting away with doing it, and they are continuing to do it—keeping those oppressive luxury taxes in place and keeping those poor folks out of jobs and losing $20 million a year for the Government in lost taxes otherwise not paid."

WORK ON DAIRY LEGISLATION CONTINUING

(Mr. DE LA GARZA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I would like to advise Members where we are on the dairy legislation. We begin the process out there with the dairymen, with the producers, with the users, with the consumers, and work through the different associations, work through the umbrella federation, work through the subcommittee, work through the committee, and pass legislation out of the committee.

It now has been referred to two other committees that have jurisdiction over parts of the legislation. So for this part of the session, we have no time now to act on it.

Mr. Speaker, this is to assure Members and producers, users, and consumers, that we will continue working through the recess. Late yesterday we met with the Secretary of Agriculture, Members of the Senate, and members of the House Committee on Agriculture. So we are working, trying to bring a viable, workable piece of legislation when we come back in the fall.

MAINTAINING THE INTEGRITY OF THE FEDERAL FAMILY PLANNING PROGRAM

(Mrs. VUCANOVICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, it is time to tell the truth about the title X regulations. Our Federal Family Planning Program now makes a distinction between abortion and family planning—as the overwhelming majority of Americans do. In past years, Planned Parenthood recognized the distinction between abortion and preventive family planning.

Their own brochure, printed in 1963, reads: "What is birth control? Is it an abortion?" The brochure goes on to answer:

Definitely not, an abortion kills the life of a baby after it has begun * * * Birth Control merely postpones the beginning of life.

Mr. Speaker, for the first time in years, I find myself agreeing with Planned Parenthood and longing for the 1960's. Planned Parenthood acknowledged in 1963 that abortion is not family planning, that once a baby has been conceived, it is too late to plan pregnancy. This view is shared by 77 percent of Americans who oppose "offering abortions as a method of birth control in taxpayer-funded family planning programs" according to a June 1991 Wirthlin Group poll. Let us maintain the integrity of the Federal Family Planning Program and support the current regulations.

CRITICAL DECISIONS LOOM IN THE MIDDLE EAST

(Mr. SCHUMER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the President toured the Ukraine and shed tears as he recalled the 33,000

Ukrainian Jews who were killed over 36 hours in 1941, and the thousands more who followed as the Nazi genocide continued at Babi Yar. I was moved by the President's emotions, as no doubt were people around the world, Jews and non-Jews.

But, Mr. Speaker, some shed tears about the Holocaust every day: Those who lost their loved ones, those who are awakened at night with memories of the concentration camps, and those who saw their people and culture obliterated by a madman.

It is those of us with such strong feelings about the Holocaust who strive daily to ensure the safety of Israel. We know that only the existence of an independently secure Jewish state can truly guarantee that the Holocaust is never repeated. I ask the President to remember the emotions he felt at Babi Yar when he convenes the Middle East Peace Conference. Mr. Shamir has agreed, cautiously, to attend the conference, contingent upon certain reasonable conditions. If Israel seems overly cautious, or overly conservative to some of my colleagues, it is because the Jews of Israel remember the Holocaust, they remember a history of persecution, and they remember that they were always given assurances that they would be safe. It is in the Middle East that the United States has the opportunity to safeguard the future of the Jewish people, or to jeopardize it. I pray that the President steers the right course.

RESCUE THE AMERICAN WORKER

(Ms. PELOSI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, it has been one year since the most recent recession has begun. The administration says the recession is over, but most Americans will tell you something quite different.

Two million more Americans have become unemployed since June of last year—a 33-percent increase.

With nearly 9 million Americans out of work and at least 3.5 million facing life without unemployment benefits, we have a real economic emergency at home.

Mr. Speaker, this Nation has acted with compassion in addressing the emergency needs of the people of countless countries around the world, including the Kurds, the Bangladeshis, Kuwaitis and others, but where is the President when it comes to the American worker.

The people in this country without unemployment benefits are the very workers whose taxes have financed the President's global generosity.

Today, the Congress will act to help Americans who have lost their jobs.

The ball will then be in the President's court. He can either declare an emergency to help Americans survive this recession, or he can continue to ignore the needs of America's families. We came to the rescue of the Kuwaitis, now it is time to come to the rescue of Americans.

CIVIL RIGHTS

(Mr. KENNEDY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Speaker, the President has just rejected the latest proposal for a compromise on civil rights legislation. A proposal from a member of his own party. A proposal that is completely consistent with a quarter century of civil rights laws. A proposal that simply says employers cannot set standards that are unrelated to job performance. A proposal to guarantee that everyone gets a fair shot at a job.

What the President wants is a civil rights bill that would allow a menswear company not to hire a woman just because she doesn't fit in with the corporate image. He wants a society where it is OK not to hire blacks or Latinos just because a biased employer thinks they might affect the morale of other employees. He would, in short, turn the clock back, not ahead. Above all, it is becoming clearer by the day that this President craves a campaign issue that will exploit the fears of working men and women who live constantly on the brink of joblessness and poverty. An issue that will put a smokescreen in front of a Reagan-Bush recession that has put 9 million men and women out of work, and crippled living standards for millions more.

Mr. Speaker, the party of Lincoln deserves better. If this President can stand up for the Kurds and Shiites, then surely he can take a stand for those in this country who continue to suffer in the dark corners of bigotry.

RESCUE AMERICA'S UNEMPLOYED

(Mrs. SCHROEDER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise her remarks.)

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, the President of the United States says the following things are dire emergencies: aid to Turkey, the gulf war, the savings and loan bailout, and the IMF funding for the International Monetary Fund.

Well, that is what has happened, and those are off budget, and that costs another $60 billion to the American taxpayer this year. The thing that he says is not, not an emergency, are Americans unemployed. I cannot believe we can be turning our backs on people who have lost their jobs because of the incredible international competition we have come under.

It is interesting that it is more important to give most-favored-nation status to the Chinese, the only country who runs over their own children with their tanks, and therefore we import more and more products from them, lose more and more jobs to them, and we do not care about our jobless rate at home.

I certainly hope the administration changes its mind. I think if we were in the moccasins of those people who are unemployed, this would be a very difficult distinction to understand.

PRESIDENT DID NOT BUST THE BUDGET

(Mr. SOLOMON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, we have just heard the gentlewoman from Colorado criticize the President of the United States for following through on all the programs she personally voted for, according to the National Taxpayers' Union.

I happened to vote against most of those programs myself, but that point is irrelevant here. The point is that no President of the United States can bust the budget. Only the Congress of the United States can bust the budget, and we are one of the most irresponsible bodies that has ever served. During the Reagan economic growth policy that was so miraculous during the 1980's, the money coming into the Federal coffers, without raising taxes, nearly doubled. It went from something like $700 billion up to $1.2 or $1.3 trillion, and we did not raise taxes at all.

Do Members know this Congress spent every nickel of it and more? That is why we have the deficit we have today. We have a deficit not because tax receipts are too low, but because spending is too high. In fact, studies show that, over the past 45 years, every dollar of revenue raised by new taxes has been matched by $1.60 in new spending.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SOLOMON. I am happy to yield to the gentlewoman.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman for studying my record so closely, but if he would look again, the gentleman would find that I did not vote for the foreign aid budget, the gulf war, or the savings and loan bailout. So I have to bring it over and show it to the gentleman.

Mr. SOLOMON. Does the gentlewoman mean that she voted with JERRY SOLOMON?

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Absolutely. I followed the gentleman's lead. The gentleman should look and see who is following.

Mr. SOLOMON. The gentlewoman is improving. I commend her for it.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Under the rule, further proceedings under the call are dispensed with.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill and a concurrent resolution of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 1006. An act to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1992 for the Federal Maritime Commission, and for other purposes; and

H. Con. Res. 113. Concurrent resolution to express the sense of the Congress that the President should seek an international moratorium on the use of large-scale driftnets called for in United Nations Resolution 44-225, while working to achieve the United States policy of a permanent ban on large-scale driftnets.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 884. An act to require the President to impose economic sanctions against countries that fail to eliminate large-scale driftnet fishing; and

S. 1620. An act to make technical corrections with respect to the Immigration Act of 1990 and other immigration laws.

EMERGENCY UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION ACT OF 1991

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 210 and ask for its immediate consideration.

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of a bill, to be introduced by Representative Rostenkowski of Illinois on August 2, 1991, relating to unemployment compensation, and the first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. All points of order against the bill and against its consideration are hereby waived. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and which shall not exceed one hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means, the bill shall be considered as having been read for amendment under the five-minute rule. No amendment to the bill shall be in order. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McNULTY). The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCEWEN], and pending that, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, during the consideration of this resolution all time yielded is for purposes of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, the President has asked for emergency funding for the Kurds, for the Persian Gulf conflict, for aid to Bangladesh, debt relief for Egypt. What about the emergency that we have right here in America? Right here at home?

Mr. Speaker, there are about 9 million Americans out of work in this country. That is an emergency. Unemployment is still near 7 percent nationwide, has been over 9 percent in my home State of Michigan, and, if we look at the latest figures that came out this morning, Mr. Speaker, we will find that 415,000 workers were dropped out of the labor force, dropped out of the labor force. Add them to the numbers, and the figures actually go up to 7.1 percent of people that are unemployed, and the effects will last far beyond any economic upturn.

We have been in a slow, long, prolonged recession, Mr. Speaker. Slow and sluggish to recover. Since January of this year, the 1.6 million unemployed Americans have exhausted their benefits. They have nothing.

The rhetoric we hear from this administration is as follows: the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Brady, said at one point about the recession, "It's no big deal."

Mr. Speaker, I say, "It is a big deal if you don't have a job, you have kids to feed, you have mortgage payments to make, you have educational opportunities that bypass your children."

Mr. Darman says, "Extended unemployment benefits only encourage people to stay unemployed." What cynicism. What insensitivity! And while these people have nothing, we are asked to send more and more millions overseas.

Mr. Speaker, that does not make any sense. Being out of work is painful, it is cruel, and it is for literally tens of millions of Americans. It robs them of hope.

I say, "If you have no income for your family, you cannot pay bills, you can't pay rent, you can't pay mortgages, you can't put food on the table for hungry kids." That, Mr. Speaker, is an emergency.

The President must sign this bill, and he must declare it an emergency. It is desperately needed. It cannot be said that this recession is over and then expect it to end. Well, there are signs that the recession may be easing, but its effect will be felt for a very long time unfortunately.

There are urgent needs that we must address here at home: tax relief for our middle class that is being squeezed, health care benefits, transportation benefits, better schools. We have got to start focussing our attention in this country and in this Chamber on America's own.

While this measure will not solve the problems of middle income America, it will ease their pain because it is hard-working American middle income families who have been put out of work, who go to work in the morning and find the plant gate closed, or who go to the store they have been working at for years to find that they are pink slipped. These people need our help.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues, I urge my colleagues, to support this legislation and, beyond that, urge the President to sign the bill and to declare the emergency that is needed to get the assistance we have provided for in this bill to the people who desperately need it.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MCEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR] has described fully the technical details of the proposed rule under which the House would debate H.R. 3201, the Emergency Unemployment Compensation Act of 1991.

As my colleagues heard the gentleman explain, the rule would allow no amendments whatsoever. Again the House would be denied the opportunity to make amendments on this critical issue. Yet this rule and the bill to which it pertains represents a dramatic improvement over that which was contemplated just 48 hours ago, and so, with reservations, I rise to support the rule for two reasons.

No. 1, Mr. Speaker, if this legislation is to be enacted, it must be exactly the same as that which passed the Senate last evening. Subsequent amendments would prevent that from being sent to the President tomorrow.

Second, I would point out that we have had no requests for amendments, and so, with those reservations, I rise to support the rule.

I hope also to support the bill when it is considered later today.

Members should be aware also that 48 hours ago we were faced with the prospect of Republicans on the Committee on Ways and Means being denied the very right to file their dissenting views on this bill.

There was a legislative slam dunk being considered and that would have completely trampled the rights of the minority in this House.

Fortunately, Mr. Speaker, cooler heads have prevailed in the last 2 days, and I give a great deal of credit not only to the Speaker but to the minority leader, to the chairman of the Committee on Rules, and to the ranking minority member of the Committee on Rules, the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON].

Fortunately, now we have before us a new rule followed by a much improved piece of legislation. I would urge my colleagues to accept this rule so that we can move quickly to consider an extension of unemployment benefits that is expected to be identical to the one passed last evening. It will provide a temporary extended benefit to workers who have exhausted the 26-week benefit schedule which the law allows. This temporary extension of benefits would begin next month, run through June of next year, if enacted into law.

Second, it would provide unemployment benefits to our military members on the same basis as civilians, a significant step forward in my opinion.

Finally, these benefits would only be extended if and when the President designates this additional Federal spending as an emergency and, as such, it would not be subject to the restraints of the budget agreement of last year.

It is worth noting at this point that most economists now agree that our economy is pulling out of its mild recession and into a slight recovery. Second, as that recession began and as Republicans argued for progrowth changes in the law, we heard nothing from the other side, even for the need to declare an unemployment benefit emergency. Now, only on the eve of recess and on the nearing approaching election do we begin to hear the call to the attention of the press corps of an unemployment benefit emergency.

Further, it is worth noting that the President may not consider the current 6.8-percent unemployment rate to be an emergency, recognizing it is significantly three points lower than the Carter Presidency, when the former President did not consider it an emergency.

Unfortunately, some Members wanted to play politics with the lives of Americans who are currently out of work. More interested in trying to corner the President, rather than trying to create new job opportunities and a growing economy. Instead, those Members wanted to dictate to the President what his finding would be in regard to the emergency in this matter. By so doing, they were willing to welch on the budget agreement of last year between the Congress and the administration. They sought short-lived political points.

Mr. Speaker, the majority of the Congress clearly was not going to accept that earlier bill. That did not matter to some but, fortunately, it did not work.

The New York Times and the Washington Post editorialized against the assumptions in the earlier bill. The Times noted that the deficit is large enough and the Democrats should just enact a tax increase over the President's objection. Although it appears today that many are leery of enacting a tax increase before they head home, the Post was right when it said that the earlier bill deserved to be vetoed.

Finally, when the present bill is before us, the fact is, Mr. Speaker, Republicans have spelled out a far more constructive and more compassionate course. It is included in the Gramm-Gingrich economic growth package and in the Wallop-DeLay growth opportunity package. It would cut capital gains and foster investment, productivity and increased jobs. It would cut Federal spending wherever possible and reduce interest rates.

Thankfully, as a result of the meetings over the past 2 days, we will now be considering a far better bill than that which was considered earlier in the week.

It is important that the President have the discretion that we agreed to as part of last year's lengthy budget negotiations with the White House. Then with this behind us, hopefully we can return from the recess united in the desire to pursue ways to expand our economy, to get people back to work and not seek political points at their expense.

Mr. Speaker, that is the truly compassionate approach, the way to truly help unemployed Americans, the way to maintain the dignity of hard-working men and women who have the desire to work.

I hope that today's action will result in some of them getting at least a few weeks of additional benefits. However, my representation of the people of Ohio is focused on creating jobs. Ohioans want to work, just as others do, and I submit that all unemployed Americans wish that they could.

Now that we appear to be coming out of this recession, this body ought to exert its energies to undoing the damage that it has done in the last recent years.

Members will remember, Mr. Speaker, the individual retirement accounts that encouraged people to save, passed this House in 1981 by only one vote. The other side sought to undo it time after time, and they have successfully eliminated it for 85 percent of all Americans to have individual retirement accounts.

From 1981 to 1985, the cost of capital, the tax on capital in America was the lowest of the industrialized world. It is now 17th. As a result, we are not creating the jobs that we should be making.

It is estimated that $170,000 is necessary for the creation of one job, and unless we encourage that, we will continue to have unemployment.

The answer is not to deal with the result. The answer is to cure the cause. And the cause is because we have pursued in the last 36 months tax policies that destroy job creation in America.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MFUME].

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the extension on unemployment compensation benefits and in support of this rule.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY].

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I do not mind if the gentleman from Ohio, who just spoke, says what he says. I just hope that he does not believe it. Because frankly, nobody else will who takes a serious look at the situation.

I hope that nobody will use today's temporary dip in the unemployment numbers as an excuse for not doing something on unemployment. The fact is that while the unemployment rate went down this morning, it went down because 400,000 people gave up looking for work and are no longer officially counted as being among the unemployed.

The fact is, 175,000 fewer Americans are working today than were working last month. Fewer people are working now than were working in June, and the people who are working are earning less and they are working shorter hours than they were just a month ago.

What is more, the Federal Reserve has indicated that they expect unemployment by the end of 1992 to still be at 6.5 percent. That means that there will be no significant recovery. That means that we are in a long-term economic trough. That means stagnation. That means that up to 10 million American families will experience unemployment by someone in their family over the next year and a half.

That may not be an emergency to the White House, but it is certainly an emergency to every working American who experiences that loss of unemployment. I deeply regret the fact that the President is given an option under this legislation. I do not think he ought to be given an option, but the fact is that if he is given an option, he has an obligation to sign the bill because it most certainly is going to be an emergency to those people.

Last, I would simply like to say that I do not find it surprising but I do find it quaint that we still have minority party Members of this House who suggest that the way to deal with the problem of unemployment is by giving the very wealthiest people in this society yet another tax break through capital gains. The fact is that the very wealthiest people in this society, the richest 2.5 million people in this society, have seen their income increased by 122 percent since the day Ronald Reagan walked into the White House in 1981.

The fact is that the average worker in the 90 percent of Americans not in that elite has experienced a reduction in income of about $800 over that same period of time. It seems to me that the proper remedies not to provide another trickle-down tax cut for the very wealthy in this society, but to provide direct employment opportunity and direct unemployment assistance to workers who need that assistance. That is what this bill does, not in as good a way as the original bill but it is certainly better than nothing.

I hope that the President can take his eyes off the golf course at Kennebunkport long enough to recognize the problems being faced by working Americans, and to provide the relief they have a right to expect.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBEY. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] makes a very good point on the issue of capital gains that may friend, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCEWEN], raised as an answer to resolve this problem.

Here we have a situation in this country where the top 1 percent, 2.5 million Americans, have had their income increased 122 percent since Ronald Reagan took office. If they were paying the same tax rate today that they were paying in 1977, it would be an additional $42 billion—billion with a "b"—$42 billion extra in the Treasury. We would not have to be dealing with this insanity of calling this an emergency to take care of 10 million Americans who are out of work, who cannot deal with the needs of their families, cannot put food on the table, cannot take care of their education, and all the other things they are struggling with.

Mr. Speaker, this idea of a capital gains rescue for the unemployed is absurd, and that is the difference between what you stand for, and what we stand for.

Mr. MCEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Speaker, I would observe that in 1981 this country was losing 50,000 jobs a week, America was in a decline, and the suggestion was that rather than taxing productivity, growth, and opportunity, we ought to encourage it. So we did.

From 1982 until 1990, America created two out of every three jobs created on this planet, an average of 310,000 jobs per month, for 84 consecutive months.

Now, as a result of the tax policies of 1986 and 1987, those incentives, many of them were removed. Those who loved the unemployed, those who loved the poor, those who loved the disenfranchised, can rejoice, because as a result of those changes, there was an increase in those numbers.

What they look to is the fact that more people are at work, creating more money, and being more successful, which is a great source of disappointment to many. I think that is the answer for America, and we should encourage it, rather than discourage it. We should encourage taxpayers, and not abuse them.

As a result of the taxes that the successful have paid in this country, revenues to the U.S. Government have increased at an average of 7 percent a year for the last 8 years. The only problem is the Democratic Congress of the United States, has increased spending at 9 percent a year.

Mr. Speaker, one need not be a rocket scientist to figure out when revenues are going up at 7 percent per year, and taxes are going up at 9 percent per year, you have the deficit of which they cry so loudly.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARMEY].

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, the media can stop wondering when the Presidential campaign will begin and mark their calendars. Today's vote marks the beginning of Presidential politics in this Congress.

Even without a candidate I've never seen a more blatant display of politics masquerading as policy in my tenure here. The Democrats' position on unemployment benefits has little to do with the latest employment data and everything to do with the latest polling data.

As the recession ends and economic expansion begins, the Democrats suddenly discover an emergency. Let's face it folks, their real emergency with long-term unemployment is the long-term unemployment of their party's Presidential candidates.

Which brings us to some historical perspective on this debate, since the long-term unemployment of their Presidential candidates is partly due to the short-term employment of their one recent President.

When Jimmy Carter left office in 1981, the average duration of unemployment was 14.3 weeks, more than the average now, and it had risen by 3.9 weeks. And this was during a weak economic expansion.

During the recently ended recession, the average duration of unemployment climbed to 14.2 weeks, rising by 2.2 weeks. In other words, the best of times under Jimmy Carter were worse than what the Democrats say is now the worst of times under George Bush.

And in the face of all that unemployment, Jimmy Carter never signed an extension of benefits, let alone an emergency extension. In fact, the last three Presidents to extend unemployment benefits were Republicans.

I don't recall the Democrat Congress clamoring for Jimmy Carter to extend benefits when the duration of unemployment rose by nearly twice what it has in this recent recession, but this is an emergency now.

Surely this emergency has been building for months, hasn't it? Surely the Democrats who've accused the President of not acting have been working hard to remedy this emergency. Surely they've introduced bills and held hearings.

Surely not.

The air smells of grease from this bill's tracks. Top Democrats met 2 weeks ago and decided that the President's popularity was too high to field a credible challenger and they had to go on the attack. Last Wednesday night, this bill gets introduced in the Senate, marked up on Thursday, voted on Monday, comes over here for markup, goes to rules yesterday and makes it to the floor today.

Mario Andretti could not drive a bill faster.

And my amendment to repeal a so-called luxury tax that's been destroying thousands of jobs all year is barred from the floor by the very same Democrats pushing this bill. I now understand their economic policy for middle America:

Democrats throw you out of work now and expect you to thank them later—when they extend your unemployment benefits.

This issue illustrates the underlying conflict of visions between Democrats and Republicans. We want a pro-growth economic policy that allows jobs to flourish in an economy free from burdensome regulations and withering taxes. They want to be the arbiters of fairness, taxing jobs out of existence then preying on the unemployed they've created for votes.

It's brilliant. The Democrats are creating in politics what's known in economics as a vertical monopoly. Like the furniture dealer who owns the trees and the finishing factory and the furniture store, the Democrats are producing the policies that produce the unemployment that produces the fairness issue they hope will produce them votes on election day.

Let's look at how we're going to pay for this $6 billion emergency bill. Calling it an emergency lets them bust the budget today, but eventually we'll have to pay for this massive increase in spending. The answer is likely to be in the form of increased Federal unemployment taxes.

Again, we're told this would be fair to working Americans. But the fact is we're talking about a tax on jobs, and just like when they tax boats there's less demand for boats, when they tax jobs there will be less demand for jobs.

And so, Mr. Speaker, we come full circle. Next year these same political monopolists will be back on this floor before the election, hoping to sell their supply of fairness rhetoric to a market of unemployed workers they've created.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. DOWNEY].

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I have been privileged to serve as the acting chairperson of the Committee on Ways and Means' Subcommittee on Human Resources for the last 4 years. I have tried for the last 3 years to change the unemployment compensation system that our country currently lives with.

Mr. Speaker, let me digress and make a personal note, if I might. Given the responsibility of dealing with the unemployed, part of the job description is that you spend a lot of time talking to people who are unemployed and a lot of people who deal with the unemployed.

Mr. Speaker, the enduring feeling that I have when I meet with people who are unemployed is one of real anxiety. When you spend time with somebody who is unemployed, you can see their stomach knot up. You can sense the desperation in their voice about the future.

And the other thing you know about the unemployed is that they hate the idea of being unemployed. When you ask somebody what their name is, that is the first question you ask them. Normally the next thing you say is, "What do you do?" Well, robbed of a portion of your identity is a devastating thing to happen to a person, and I think the most important thing for us to understand, whether we are Democrats or Republicans, is that the people who are unemployed are ready to work, are willing to work, and are desperately anxious to get to work.

We should do whatever we can to try to put them there, but if they cannot find jobs, and millions of them cannot find jobs, it is our responsibility, the responsibility of Government, to tide them over in an emergency. That is what unemployment benefits are about.

They were designed in 1935 in the middle of a depression as a countercyclical tool to prevent future depressions. It worked fine for 28 years. It has not worked so fine the last couple of years.

Extended benefits programs simply do not work anymore. Fewer than half the people who are unemployed are eligible for the first 26 weeks of unemployment benefits. That is because a lot of the States have been a lot tougher on who becomes eligible. The triggering mechanism that says if you have gotten the 26 weeks and you are in a tough condition and you want the additional weeks, requires that there be 5 percent of the workforce being insured and unemployed.

Right now, there are only three States in the Union that meet this category. The mechanism for paying unemployment benefits has to change.

In the mid-1970's, for example, we paid 65 weeks of unemployment insurance, and let me say to my Republican friends that I would much rather see people work. So would they. That is not what we are talking about.

We are talking about a safety net that is deeply frayed and needs repair. That is what part of this bill does.

So rather than have an exercise of blaming Jimmy Carter, of saying that we have to somehow lower the tax rates on the rich or blame the unemployed for the consequences of their plight, let us talk policy about what we can do for them.

What we can do for them is extend benefits the way this bill before you will do.

Everyone in the country who is currently eligible for benefits will get 4 weeks, even if unemployment is under 6 percent; 7 weeks if it is 6; 13 weeks if it is 7; and 20 weeks of extended benefit if it is 8 percent or more.

I do not like the mechanism. I do not like the fact that we are not paying for it, but I think it is fair for those of us who are Democrats to say a couple of partisan things, with all due respect.

One, when you have the Office of Management and Budget Director saying publicly that extended benefits will only encourage unemployment, I think we have to speak out. When you have a mechanism that will allow the President to sign the bill but conceivably not extend the benefits, it is fair for us to say, "Mr. President, we are deeply proud of your foreign achievements." I have waited for a long time to see a START agreement signed. I am tremendously satisfied that he accomplished that. But I am just as concerned that this President does not see the problem in front of his eyes of unemployed workers. They are in desperate trouble, and they need our help, and that is what this bill does.

Mr. McEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM].

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, you know, before I joined this body 6 months ago, I took a look at why I thought that this country was going to hell.

I have heard the liberal left wing of the Democratic party cry about people that are unemployed, but yet they continue to attack businesses and attack policies which would create jobs. They have voted to cut defense by 25 percent, and in the recent base closures, we have seen thousands of jobs lost, luckily not in my district. We have seen defense plants cut. We have seen across-the-board cuts at Rohr, General Dynamics, McDonnell Douglas and many more.

What does that mean? That means that in the cities that support those employees, whether you sell real estate or sell insurance, people there are also being laid off. They, who once paid into the income tax system, are drawing unemployment and account for the current 7-percent unemployment rate. That sickens me.

Rather than pay unemployment, encourage business to create jobs, some pay people to work.

Democrats insisted in June last year, that any budget deal include a tax increase, which just killed business. The 5-cent-a-gallon tax that they are trying to push through right now on a transportation bill—that you did not allow us to have a rule on originally—would have been disastrous for the trucking and transportation industries not to mention lower- and middle-income families. It would have cost thousands of jobs. You know, this really sickens me.

This legislation is like having your cake and eating it too.

It is like the 186 that voted and turned their backs on our troops in Desert Storm, and then wanted to give them a silver medal. Now they support policies which cause unemployment, and cap it off by saying, "We want to pay you."

Another example is the so-called luxury tax. It has cost thousands of jobs. If we repeal the tax, maybe we'll get those jobs back.

My distinguished colleague from Michigan was crying about all the money that goes overseas for foreign aid. Well, he voted for the foreign aid bill along with the other Members on the other side of the aisle here. Let us be consistent.

Paul Tsongas, a Democrat that is trying to run for President, called this bill Twinkie economics. It sounds good but does little.

How do we cut unemployment and put people back to work?

Let us quit attacking the defense industry and try and convert it to civilian work. Let us repeal luxury taxes. Let us quit raising taxes and taking money from the American people.

Let us give the President a line-item veto.

I agree with my friend, the gentleman from New York [Mr. DOWNEY], no one wants to be unemployed. This bill does not create jobs for the unemployed. This is a signature, and a loud political cry, and I am sound against it.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE].

(Mr. WISE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this rule today to provide temporary extended benefits to thousands, indeed, millions of Americans—working families—who are temporarily out of work and searching for work again.

I rise in support of this because of the 5,000 West Virginians who were cut off July 13 because of when the formula triggered them off, and they ought to be back on.

I rise because this is an important bill for working Americans—working middle-income Americans—to help them be working middle-income Americans, and not do what we have seen during the last decade, sliding from middle- to low-income status.

Now, let us talk about what the real issue is. The issue is whether the President signs this bill, No. 1, and in signing it, then, whether 10 days later he declares it a financial emergency, so as to trigger the benefits.

And the question is: Is it an emergency? Is it the same kind of emergency, for instance, that was declared in order for Bangladesh families who lost their homes to get assistance? And I supported that. But if it is an emergency for Bangladesh families who lost their homes, then it is an emergency for working American families who are going to lose their homes, because they cannot make mortgage payments. If it is an emergency for Kurds who are stuck on the hillsides and had to leave their towns and villages, then it is an emergency for working families who have to make a tuition check out this fall to keep their kids in college. If it is an emergency and taken off the budget for the savings and loan depositors to be reimbursed, then it is an emergency for working American families who have been making tax deposits for many years. They are entitled to the same treatment.

Mr. Speaker, that is the kind of emergency it is.

I hope many of the families in America during this August break will take time to write to President Bush in Kennebunkport, ME. I think you can just write to him: President George Bush, Kennebunkport, ME. I think it is going to get there all right if you just put that on it.

I urge you to invest in a postage stamp and to write and say, "We think that working Americans should be treated the same under the budget as Kurds, as foreign flood victims, as savings and loan depositors."

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WISE. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. Speaker, I just want to correct the RECORD. The President has his 10 constitutional days to wait to sign it, but he must declare the emergency the day he signs the bill. He only has 24 hours, not an additional 10 days, so if they want to get their cards and letters out, it is in that first 10-day period.

Mr. WISE. I appreciate the clarification. So I hope Americans during the next 2 weeks will write the President at Kennebunkport, ME. My understanding is that he will be there—and say that you think working Americans should be treated the same as foreign flood victims who are homeless, our working Americans may be homeless, which is the same as the Kurds who needed assistance, and I have supported that, but so do Americans need assistance.

As those who are receiving saving and loan deposit assistance, so should working American people who made tax deposits.

I urge all Members to make sure the President understands there is an emergency at home as well as abroad. We ought to be treated the same. Show we are interested in working Americans in this country who need assistance, and who have been paying taxes for a long time.

Citizens can write to President Bush in Kennebunkport, I think he will get any mail sent there.

Mr. McEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4½ minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DELAY.]

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, I think those persons that reject these kinds of failed economic policies ought to write the President and tell him that they reject such notions as creating new programs to put people out of jobs.

I rise in opposition to this rule for H.R. 3201 to extend unemployment benefits. This closed rule does not allow Congress to address the problems facing our economy. This is simply another example of the inability of the Democrats to seriously confront the recession they have caused with their ever-increasing tax-and-spend policies.

The Democrats passed a budget agreement last year that is costing millions of jobs in this country, and then come back and want to create an extended program, raising spending, to pay for the unemployment that they created. It is absolute craziness.

The Federal Government is going to be spending over 25 percent of our gross national product, and we have a tax policy now that—for the first time in the history of this country—we will be taxing the American people over 20 percent of GNP every consecutive year from now on, over 20 percent of GNP. The last two times in the last 20 years that we have reached 19 percent of GNP in taxes, we went into deep recessions. This recession is caused by these kinds of Democratic policies.

I am glad the gentleman from California brought up the Democrats only Presidential candidate, Paul Tsongas, who stated the problem very clearly when he said the Democratic Party has no economic policy worthy of them, and it is going into 1992 in a populist, class warfare, protectionist kind of mode which does not add one job to the American economy.

I call that Twinkie economics. Twinkies taste great, but have no nutritional value. At least the Democratic Presidential nominee is understanding what is happening in the real world, and does not pay attention to what is happening in the unreal world on the floor of this House.

Mr. Speaker, this rule allows Members to only vote on extending these benefits, but it does not allow the Congress the opportunity to fix a broken economy. This is merely an extension of those Twinkie economics that the Democrats practice. Extending benefits simply attempts to put a little frosting on the problem. I believe that if we put frosting on a Twinkie, we get a Ding-Dong. It tastes a little sweeter, but it still has no nutritional value.

The Democrats passed the luxury tax which has caused thousands of Americans to become unemployed. These unemployed workers do not want another handout from the Democrats. They want a helping hand. They want jobs. We have the ability in Congress to put Americans back to work. We can start repealing that luxury tax today.

I say to the gentleman, the distinguished whip, history has shown when we raise taxes on middle income and up, we cost jobs, because revenues go down; Government policies and spending policies are initiated by Government to take care of it. History shows it. History shows it. Read your history. I think Congress should take additional steps when it returns in September to provide the incentives in the economy which would lead to strong economic growth.

This would be done with passage of bipartisan legislation I introduced with the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. TALLON], H.R. 960, the Economic Growth and Job Creation Act. Cutting taxes leads to economic growth and creates jobs. Growth will increase total revenues to the Government because more workers are employed and paying taxes, and fewer are unemployed, drawing these extended benefits.

Oppose the rule and reject the Twinkie economics. Demand a rule which allows a vote on policies with real nutritional value.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS].

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation to extend unemployment insurance benefits to the millions of America's workers who have exhausted their benefits.

Let me tell you why this bill is so vital to workers in Montana:

From 1985 to 1990, the average annual unemployment rate in Montana consistently exceeded the national annual average by at least one-half of 1 percent.

In the last 10 years—1981–90—the number of Montanans covered by unemployment insurance grew only by 12 percent while nationally the number of people covered grew by 47 percent, a whopping differential.

The number of weeks that Montanans on UI received benefits dropped by one-third during the last 10 years—this is due to the sporadic nature of employment available with Montanans moving in and out of the labor force, thus not accruing a sufficient number of weeks to be eligible for benefits and change in laws relating to coverage.

Montanans were only eligible for an average potential of 18 weeks of unemployment benefits versus a national average of 24 weeks; a full 25 percent less than the national average; in fact, Montana workers had the lowest potential average number of weeks that they could receive unemployment benefits of any State.

The number of Montanans who exhausted unemployment benefits exceeded the national average by 10 percent in December 1990; in June 1990, it was 14 percent; in December 1989, it was 18.6 percent; in December 1985, it was 29 percent; and in December 1981, it was 22 percent.

In 1989, the average wage increase for Montanans was only 1.6 percent; the average wage increase during the last 5 years—1985–89—for Montanans was 2 percent.

In December 1990, the 7,400 Montanans who had exhausted UI benefits was up by 300 from June 1990.

In March 1991, 35,700 Montanans were unemployed, which was 5,500 more than in February 1991, and 12,700 more than in March 1990.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HAYES].

Mr. HAYES of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3040, legislation that would extend unemployment insurance benefits.

Nearly 9 million Americans are unemployed and 1.6 million have exhausted their unemployment compensation benefits. The protracted recession has showered our Nation with unemployment rates in excess of 7 percent, families are struggling to put food on the table and pay the rent, and an increase in criminal activities is occurring daily in our towns and cities.

If anyone has doubts as to whether or not the unemployed men and women of this country need extended benefits, I ask you to take note of the humility and suffering workers and their families are enduring as they exhaust their 26 weeks of unemployment compensation, which is modest in contrast to world standard. Yugoslavia and Hungary's unemployment standards far exceed those for American workers.

Talk to any family that has exhausted their 26 weeks of benefits and they will ask: How will I pay the rent? How will I make the car payment? How will I clothe the children?

Imagine the frustration and despair that the working fathers and mothers endure when they cannot provide food or shelter for their children, or must choose between medicine or other bare necessities. Mr. Speaker, it seems that many of us think that human suffering cannot exist on American soil.

To add insult to injury, Police Superintendent LeRoy Martin of the Chicago Police Department has indicated that unemployment can be cited as one of the major causes impacting on the increase of crime, particularly with robberies and street violence. People need help. How can we as a nation turn our backs on people that become so desperate that they turn to crime. This is an emergency and we cannot afford to continue to ignore this crisis.

The human suffering that this recession has yielded can be clearly compared with the suffering of the Kurds, Israelis, and the Turks for whom the President sought emergency legislation to provide financial assistance. On the other hand, the cry of the unemployed working men and women of this country has fallen on deaf ears. The administration says that, "it would be counterproductive to breach the budget agreement to provide additional unemployment benefits." Does President Bush really mean that the Kurds, Israelis, and the Turks are more important than hard working Americans and their families? His focus on the needs abroad certainly suggests that circumstance.

It seems to me that the further away you reside from the White House the better your chances of receiving basic survival assistance. I find it very difficult to explain this disregard for domestic concerns to my constituents.

Some Members of this body would rather push the issue of extended benefits aside. They seemingly fail to realize that there is an emergency going on in my own city of Chicago, as well as nationwide. I would suggest that there is a clear alternative to extending these benefits—provide jobs for this Nation. There is a great need for this Government to provide a serious jobs program, jobs that will build the infrastructure of this country, jobs that would return dignity to our constituents. Common sense should tell us that the best and most long-lasting way to decrease the deficit is to put people back to work—to, in fact, increase our revenue by increasing the pool of taxpayers.

Today, I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 3040 so that we can send a message, although somewhat belated, that an emergency in American cities and localities is just as important as an emergency thousands of miles around the globe.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. LEVIN].

Mr. LEVIN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, the people who have exhausted their benefits may be nameless to us, 1½ million this last period in that category. Members can get up on the floor and say this is frosting on the cake. If I might say so, that is callous. These are human beings. They have been working. They are out of work.

We have a law. It is supposed to trigger unemployment benefit insurance, but it is a farce. It is our farce. Those who are unemployed should become our employed.

We have tried year after year to change the trigger. When times are good, they say, "Don't bother." When times are bad, they say, "We don't have the money."

So we have done nothing, and that is on your hands over there on that side of the aisle.

If you have any doubt about who those people are, go to an unemployment office like I have. You do it next week and let the President do it next week, and he is not going to find loafers. He is going to find workers who only ask for a job or a safety net.

I read an article in the Detroit News a few days ago. A welder who worked all his life with his hands, a week away from going off unemployment compensation. He has been everywhere. He has looked in the yellow pages. He has called 70 places and always the answer is the same, "We already have people laid off."

This is not frosting on the cake, my colleagues. This is our basic duty to answer the needs of people who want to work for a living and give them some minimum benefit so they can live with dignity, and if you do not act, that is your indignity.

Mr. Speaker, let us get busy on this at long last.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI].

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my friend from Michigan for yielding me this time. I do rise in support of the rule and of the bill.

Every now and then playwrights break the tension, and this is a tense day and a tense issue, but let me try to break the tension by saying this is the last day we will be in session until September, so, I want to take this moment to wish all my colleagues a very healthy, happy and productive district work period, and look forward to seeing everybody back here in September safe and sound.

Having said that, Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the bill because I think it is needed. I think we have problems in America, emergency problems, and I hope that the President not only signs the bill, but then declares the emergency that will implement the money part of it.

I gather from studying the report of the bill that unemployed workers in Kentucky and the city of Louisville, the area of Jefferson County which I represent, will be entitled to 13 additional weeks of unemployment benefits under the various guidelines written into the bill. I think this is appropriate, because we have had a tough economic hit.

I would like, however, to devote a few moments to something in the bill which is not much discussed and is yet very important. That has to do with the permanent changes in the law that this bill would make, dealing with the ability of reservists who become unemployed and of military people, ex-service people, who become unemployed to become eligible for unemployment assistance.

If I understand correctly, under current law an ex-service person has to wait 4 weeks before he or she is entitled to 13 weeks of unemployment. Under this bill, a permanent change is made to match the civilian unemployed population: 1 week of waiting for 26 weeks of benefits. Reservists would only have to be on duty for 90 consecutive days instead of 180 days in order to warrant their unemployment benefits.

We have said from the start since last August that we would not as a nation "do another Vietnam" with regard to the men and women of Desert Storm. We pledged not to forget them. Adopting this bill is one way, Mr. Speaker, that we would honor the word that we pledged to America's reservists and America's service people.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes and 15 seconds to the gentleman from California [Ms. WATERS].

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3021.

There has been some interesting debate here today; however, much of the opposition in this debate has nothing to do with the legislation before us.

These are bad times in America. We are still in a recession and our citizens are out of work. They are hurting. These are good, decent human beings, who would love to have a job, who are unable to work. This bill would allow all States to be eligible to provide emergency unemployment compensation benefits to the unemployed workers who have exhausted their unemployment benefits under existing programs. These benefits would be available between September 1, 1991, and July 4, 1992.

Also in this provision, we would make a permanent change to provide unemployment benefits for ex-service members on the same basis as benefits are provided to unemployed civilians. Unemployed veterans of Operation Desert Storm and other ex-service members would have a waiting period of no more than 1 week and would be eligible for a full 6 weeks of regular benefits, versus a 4-week wait and only 13 weeks of regular benefits under current law.

In addition, Reserve members who have been called to active duty would receive benefits after serving a continuous period of 90 days, instead of having to meet the current 180-day requirement. That is all it does.

This is unemployment benefits for civilians and ex-service members. You are either for them or you are against them. The President is either going to provide a little help for citizens who are hurting or he is not. That is all it is about.

We can debate the other things a little bit later, but today this is about unemployment benefits for those who need it desperately in our country.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. APPELEGATE].

Mr. MCEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield an additional 30 seconds to the gentleman from Ohio.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McNULTY). The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. APPELEGATE] is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. APPELEGATE. Mr. Speaker, I thank both gentleman very much for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I am not going to support this rule, but I am going to vote for the bill because it is the only game that we have in town now. As inequitable as I think it is, at least it is something, and that is only if the President of the United States decides to declare it an emergency.

Now, let me tell you why I will ask you not to vote for the rule, because it is a simple thing. I would like to have put in at least an amendment that would have exempted supplemental payments from income tax. I am not talking about all benefits. I am just talking about the supplemental. They are not getting them now. There is no tax on them now, like they are taxing regular benefits, so there is no loss of revenue. The moneys in the first place would not go into the trust fund. They would go into the Federal coffers.

Now it seems to me there will be no effect on the budget and it seems to me that this is very equitable. As minimal as the number of weeks are and the amount of money they will get, this will be just a little extra money in their pockets. I just hate to see the Government putting a few bucks in one pocket and then the IRS coming around the other side and taking it out of the other one.

Now, the inequitable part of this is that it takes the previous 6 months of an entire State to be able to determine what each and every individual county or region in the State gets. They do not take into consideration the high unemployment in any one county.

If you go into the district of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCEWEN] and my district and the district of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT] and the district of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MILLER], you find very high unemployment, but because of the fact that Ohio has a lower unemployment rate in other areas, we are going to lose out, so that counties or States across the Ohio River in Kentucky and West Virginia are going to be getting 20 weeks and 13 weeks. Our little river counties in Ohio are only going to get 7 weeks. I think that is very inequitable. My people are hurting.

Let me just say this, that my people are hurting, my people are out of work. CHARLIE HAYES was talking about being on unemployment compensation at one time. Nobody knows what the traumatic effect is that it has on you or the effect that it has on your family to be out of work. Nobody wants to be out of work. They want to be able to have enough income so they can house, clothe and feed their families. That is all they are asking for.

This is a little bit of extra money. Now it is not of their making. It is because of Government bad trade policy, Government economic policy that has gone awry, through a host of business bankruptcies, and now we have the Clean Air Act, which in Ohio is going to cost us thousands of more jobs. We are going to have people out of work. They are going to be coming back eventually and looking for some supplemental benefits.

They want to have a quality of life just like anybody else. We have supported the rest of the Nation for a good many years; now I think the rest of the Nation at least ought to look back and take care of those of us who helped the rest of the country.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McNULTY). The Chair would announce that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCEWEN] has 9½ minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR] has 1¼ minutes remaining. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR] has the right to close.

Mr. MCEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON].

Mr. SOLOMON. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Let me just rise in support of this rule. I do not normally stand here and support closed rules. But I do want to pay tribute to my counterpart, the chairman of the Committee on Rules, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY], as well as to the Speaker of the House. In a bipartisan effort we did try to craft a rule that was acceptable to both sides of the aisle so that we could get this bill out on the floor and get it to the President.

I want to commend an earlier speaking on the floor here today, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HAYES], because he got up and he said we should not be political about this, that we should be humane, that we should talk about the issues, and he did.

Mr. Speaker, I commend the gentleman from Illinois for his statement. I know he was sincere and that it came from his heart.

But then we had a speaker stand up, I think it was the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. LEVIN], who talked about Members on his side of the aisle having tried and tried and tried and tried again to make improvements in the unemployment insurance law as it stands, but they were blocked by this side of the aisle, the minority side.

Well, Mr. Speaker, let's look at the makeup of the Committee on Ways and Means and every committee of this House. They are all controlled by the Democratic Party, by a nearly 2 to 1 majority. I think, in the Committee on Ways and Means, it is 23 to 13, Democrats over Republicans. In the Committee on Rules, on which I serve, we Republicans are outnumbered 9 to 4. In the House of Representatives as a whole, the Democratic Party, with one Socialist included, has 268 votes to our 166.

So, let us not talk about being partisan here and that majority members have tried and tried and tried to get something done. Let us try together to do what is right for the American people. That is why I am standing up here right now supporting this rule and asking every Republican to vote for it. I am also asking you to vote for the bill when it comes to the floor in about an hour.

Mr. McEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. Speaker and colleagues, I recognize that I am an unlikely supporter of this legislation now standing in the well. I am a conservative, and I am a harsh critic of Federal spending. I am absolutely convinced that we cannot subsidize this country into prosperity. And I recognize as well that much of the debate today about the rule and about the bill is politically motivated. But the fact remains, Mr. Speaker, 100,000 people are out of work in Oregon, and that number is growing. Estimates are that between 60,000 and 100,000 additional people in Oregon and Washington could be thrown out of work to protect the northern spotted owl, the marbled murrelet, the goss hawk, the stub-nosed sucker, the sockeye salmon, and you name it, anything wiggly and crawly known to mankind, and we will protect it.

Seventy-two communities in Oregon are wholly dependent upon the timber industry, dependent upon it for their survival. Not only will vast amounts of people be unemployed but communities are going to become extinct in my State. Congress has enacted all these environmental laws which place wild-life ahead of people.

Well, it is time to pay. We have provided this protection for everything except the Homo sapiens, people.

Well, that is not without great cost, and it is due today. If this legislation has a problem with pay as you go, then I propose that Congress enact the opposite principle. I suggest this body ought to say we ought to call it "as you go you must pay." If you injure people, you must pay for it as you go on.

Congress has ignored its responsibility to pay for the actions it has taken over the years, passing the Endangered Species Act, the Migratory Bird Treaty Act, the National Forest Management Act, and all the other laws that are hastening a crippling depression in the Pacific Northwest. It is unfair, and it ought to stop.

We are staring down the barrel of the worst economic crisis we have ever faced in our history in the Northwest. Talk about compassion and understanding all you want, Congress has ignored our pleas. This is a Band-Aid, this is a crumb; it only does very little. We need a tourniquet to stop the bleeding in the Northwest. It is small solace, but at least we ought to do something. We ought to get on with the progress in the business of correcting unemployment in the Northwest, and that is simply because of laws passed by this body.

I urge my colleagues to throw my fellow men and women in Oregon a crumb; vote for this bill.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of our time to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLPE].

Mr. McEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield one additional minute to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLPE].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLPE] is recognized for 2¼ minutes.

Mr. WOLPE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in the strongest possible support of this rule, and this critically needed legislation to assist American workers. H.R. 3201 would provide up to 20 weeks of additional benefits to workers whose regular State benefits have run out, depending on the State's total unemployment rate, from September 1 of this year until July 4, 1992. The bill would also provide 4 weeks of benefits to workers in all States who have exhausted all of their benefits during the same time period.

Mr. Speaker, let us be clear. We have a crisis here at home. My home State of Michigan has been plagued with high unemployment for many, many months. But persistent unemployment is not restricted to Michigan. This is a national crisis, and we need a national response.

It is amazing that this administration should resist the declaration of an emergency. What an extraordinary comment on the administration's insensitivity to the hardships of millions of working people throughout our Nation.

Why is it that we can find the means to assist those in need all over the world, most recently in Kuwait and the Persian Gulf, and yet we cannot recognize the urgent needs of our own people, in our own communities, in our own States, in our own country?

Mr. Speaker, it's about time we start paying attention to America. It is about time we are honest with ourselves and our constituents in acknowledging the gravity of our economic crisis, whose symptoms are all around us. Many parts of our Nation are still in the grip of a deep recession. Millions of Americans are unemployed, and even those who still have jobs have seen their standard of living erode dramatically over the past decade. The gap between the rich and poor is wider today than it has been since the years of the Great Depression, and the middle class is being squeezed as never before.

Mr. Speaker, it is time for some straight talk, and some straight answers. It is time for us to deal with the American emergency. I urge passage of this critically needed legislation.

Mr. McEWEN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. McNULTY). Pursuant to House Resolution 210 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 3201.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3201) to provide emergency unemployment compensation, and for other purposes, with Mr. BONIOR in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI].

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 3201, the Emergency Unemployment Compensation Act of 1991.

The committee bill establishes a temporary program which provides extended benefits to long-term unemployed workers; establishes the same benefits for ex-military personnel as civilian personnel; and establishes an unemployment compensation advisory council.

The primary feature of the bill is a restoration of extended benefits to long-term unemployed workers by providing emergency unemployment compensation benefits. In addition to the normal 26 weeks of benefits provided by the regular State programs, the bill would make available at least 4, and up to 20, additional weeks of benefits, depending on the unemployment rate in each State. In addition, the bill would reach back to provide benefits to unemployed workers who have exhausted their basic benefits since April of the year.

Current statistics support the need for extended benefits. Although there has been speculation that the recession is nearing or has reached an end, the need for an extension of unemployment benefits will increase in the months ahead. Like past recessions, the rate at which workers are running out of benefits has risen from about 28 to 33 percent, while the number of workers exhausting benefits each month has climbed from about 200,000 last July to about 300,000 today. Put more simply, already over 1 million more workers have run out of benefits this year compared to last year, and the total could reach 3.5 million next year.

Some critics have argued that the recent unemployment rates suggest little need for an extension. However, the Joint Economic Committee has found that the rate of job loss in this recession has been more severe than the average rate of job loss in the last five recessions. It is time for Congress to provide relief for the casualties of this recession.

The committee bill also restores unemployment benefits for ex-military personnel to the same benefits received by civilians. As a result, ex-servicemembers' benefits will increase from 13 to 26 weeks. In addition, the number of continuous days a reservist must serve on active duty to qualify for unemployment benefits is reduced from 180 to 90 days.

Mr. Chairman, the additional benefits provided in this bill are essential in securing the financial well-being of millions of American workers who have lost their jobs. The recession has been tough on these families. They deserve our help. Over 3 million workers would receive benefits with the emergency declaration. About 20 percent of those workers qualify because of the reach back period; the remainder are workers who are expected to exhaust their benefits after the date of enactment.

My colleagues know I am a strong supporter of the pay-as-you-go requirements enacted in last year's budget agreement. I am very disappointed that the bill is not adequately financed. I would have preferred to give the President the choice to allow the taxes necessary to finance the benefits to go into effect, as Tom Downey and I proposed in the introduced bill, or to designate the benefits as an emergency and to forego the taxes. I am very disappointed that the committee did not agree with this approach.

By my count, we have on four occasions this year declared an emergency and bypassed the pay-go requirements of the Budget Enforcement Act. In each of these instances, we did it at the President's request. Given this pattern of Presidentially initiated emergencies, I can understand why a majority of my colleagues believe this bill should also qualify for an emergency designation. Many Members are frustrated with the apparent willingness to declare emergencies to help citizens of foreign countries, while ignoring equally compelling emergencies at home.

However, I want to emphasize to my colleagues that I view this bill as an exception. I will continue to insist on pay-as-you-go financing for future legislation which increases spending or which reduces revenue.

I also want to express my irritation that the Senate Rules constantly are used to frustrate the work of my committee and the House. The inflexibility of the other body's rules destroys our negotiating ability and ultimately the quality of our legislative product.

Mr. Chairman, we can no longer delay providing relief to the millions of unemployed workers in this country. They have waited long enough for this Congress to take action and we cannot let them down. I urge my colleagues to join me in support of this important bill.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, there is simply no good justification for establishing these new, and unfunded, benefits at this time, and several good reasons why we should not.

Extending the potential duration of UI benefits would help some unemployed workers and their families, but could also be costly. The budgetary costs would be significant if large numbers of workers were assisted. Moreover, the extension of benefits itself would encourage some UI recipients to remain unemployed longer, resulting in lost output and further increases in program costs. The wide variation found in this study in the economic well-being of persons who would probably be affected by an extension of UI benefits reinforces the difficulty of making the policy choices.

This bill would commit over $5 billion to temporarily expand unemployment compensation benefits and declare such benefits to be emergency spending that would not be subject to pay-as-you-go restrictions.

The majority's justification for this legislation is that the Nation is afflicted by an unemployment level that compels us to take emergency action to give special benefits to workers who have exhausted their 26 weeks of regular benefits.

The last time Congress enacted an emergency expansion like this was in September 1982. In that month, unemployment stood at 10.1 percent, and had exceeded 7 percent for the previous 31 months.

By contrast, the unemployment rate dropped today to 6.8 percent. The average level of unemployment in the preceding 31 months has been 5.8 percent. If we have an emergency now, what did we have in 1982?

The majority also believes we need this legislation because they claim the current system of unemployment insurance is ineffective. This year unemployment compensation will pay $24.3 billion worth of benefits to 10.7 million workers, up from $16.8 billion that was paid to 8.1 million workers last year. The system works: unemployment increased by 20 percent this year, and as a result, the number of beneficiaries increased by 30 percent, and total payments increased by over 40 percent.

Not only are the majority's two major reasons for enacting this legislation weak, there are good reasons for actively opposing this bill. Although it does not raise taxes, it will nonetheless require increased taxes in the future. The emergency procedures allow us to pretend money is not being spent, but every dollar still shows up in the deficit.

The bill will come due one day.

Equally important is the majority's plan to spend down the Federal unemployment trust fund. For the past 3 years this same majority has asked the Ways and Means Committee to report legislation requiring States to increase the balances in their trust accounts.

Does it make sense to argue that State trust funds should be increased while simultaneously urging Congress to deplete Federal trust funds?

Our economy is improving, and appears to be pulling out of the recession. But, what if things suddenly turn bad? What if someday we must again face double-digit national unemployment rates. Will the trust funds be there to protect workers? Not if we enact this legislation. We will then have to raise taxes, and by so doing produce exactly the effect we are trying to fight.

Mr. Chairman, this legislation is not good for America. Its justifications for emergency spending are weak, and it could seriously damage the unemployment trust funds and our attempts to reduce the Federal deficit.

Mr. Chairman, there is widespread agreement in the Nation that the most important issues before Congress has been and continues to be the Federal budget deficit. The most recent in a long line of attempts to reduce the deficit is last year's Budget Enforcement Act, enacted after one of the most bitter and divisive legislative struggles in recent history.

The fundamental problem addressed by the Budget Act, as well as by the earlier Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law, is how to control Federal spending. After four decades of unrelenting growth in Federal spending and taxes, most Members of Congress came to realize that the desire to spend would always exceed the political ability to tax. From this realization, it was a short step to concluding that Congress, lacking discipline and will, had to figure out some device by which it could automatically control its urge to spend.

Under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings that device was sequestration. Though the Budget Act retained sequestration as one of its control devices, the major new devices for controlling the deficit were spending caps for military, domestic discretionary, and foreign discretionary programs and the so-called pay-go requirement that any expansion of entitlement programs must be completely paid for by tax increases or cuts in other entitlement programs.

As it now turns out, the Budget Act's attempt to put Congress on automatic pilot contained a potential seed of self-destruction. Reasoning that war, pestilence, depression, and similar calamities might require spending above the forecasted amounts, Congress inserted a provision that if the President and Congress agreed that an emergency was at hand, new money could be spent without counting it against the caps or the pay-go requirement.

But what is an emergency? The majority is arguing that the President and Congress have declared a host of emergencies already. Reference is then made to all manner of disasters all over the world. In fact, however, Congress and the administration have used the emergency clause of the Budget Act to exempt a total of only $1 billion from Budget Act provisions. This money has been used for three purposes:

First, $236 million for disaster assistance to Kurds and others affected by Desert Storm;

Second, $59 million to protect and evacuate Americans from the Persian Gulf region; and Third, $850 million for Israel and Turkey to help them defray costs incurred in supporting the United States in Iraq.

None of the other emergencies cited by Democrats were paid for by exemptions from the Budget Act; they were paid for by emergency funds set aside for such purposes by various domestic and foreign aid programs and they still counted against the budget spending totals.

In my view, Congress and the administration must be extremely responsible and use the emergency escape valve to violate spending caps only in the most dire emergencies. Our current unemployment situation, though serious, has not risen to a level which justifies the complete restructuring of the extended benefits program contained in this bill.

This bill violates last year's Budget Enforcement Act in one important respect. It proposes mandatory entitlement expansions totaling approximately $5.5 billion over the next 6 years, none of which is offset by increased revenues or reductions in other outlays. This is a straightforward and substantial breach of last year's budget agreement—unless there is an emergency. As I have argued at length above, I do not think an emergency exists—and it is instructive to note that a majority of committee members apparently did not see the problem to be sufficiently severe to justify raising taxes to pay for the new spending called for in this legislation.

Perhaps the most important principle agreed upon in last year's budget deal was that future program expansions should only be made if Congress is willing to pay for them. The will to raise the necessary taxes for these benefits does not exist in Congress at this time—hence the attempt to force the President to declare an emergency. If we are true to the letter and spirit of the Budget Act, we will not enact this legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. DOWNEY].

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. Chairman, I think it is fair to say that this recession is not over. Even if it is, and I certainly hope that is, this bill is still needed more than ever before. In all the history of post-World War II recessions, we have found that unemployment remains high at least a year after the end of the recession, the trough of the recession. So if, for instance, we are out of a recession now and do not know it, and I would add that if we talk about unemployed workers, the recession is a depression for them and, if we take a look in my State of New York, we will find that municipal, county workers, workers at banks, are all currently facing the prospect of layoff. But let us assume for the moment that it is over. Then I anticipate that the unemployment rate will be well above 6 percent for the remainder of the year.

We will have those people who were first hired exhausting their unemployment benefits. Clearly, we need to have a better mechanism than the current insured rate of unemployment to provide benefits to these workers.

It is, I guess, an ill-spent adulthood if you really understand the difference between total unemployment rates and insured unemployment rates, but I think it probably merits just a moment of discussion.

The insured unemployment rate is those percentage of people who are unemployed who are eligible for benefits. Routinely across our country that is less than half.

The State of Texas, it is under 30 percent of the people who are actually eligible receiving benefits. So in order for extended benefits under the current law to be triggered into a place like Texas, the unemployment rate would have to be a catastrophic 15 percent.

We have heard mention on this floor, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER] just did it, and it is part of a Republican mantra, that the unemployed enjoy unemployment and that the more we pay unemployment benefits, the happier they are receiving them.

The gentleman from Texas mentioned the CBO report, and he said the CBO report said that some people, some people, not mentioning how many, may actually stay on unemployment if unemployment benefits are higher. I concede the point. Some people might.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, that was the only point that was being made.

Mr. DOWNEY. But the gentleman does not make the other point, which is that the vast majority of them want to work and cannot find jobs. And because they cannot find jobs, because a couple of them may not go to work, we should deny everyone. That is part of your legacy as a party, isn't it? And you have the temerity to stand up here and tell us that the bill is weak because we do not pay for it, and you oppose the tax. And then when we decide not to have the tax, you say there is no emergency.

Face it. Many of you in your party do not want to provide benefits to people because if in fact you do not provide benefits to people, you force them into the work force sooner and at lower wages.

That is not what my party is about. My party in this bill is about making sure that people do not lose homes, do not lose apartments, and do not lose families because they are temporarily unemployed.

This bill, as the chairman has mentioned, does not go as far as it should. It does not make the permanent changes in law that we need to make. We need to permanently change the insured rate of unemployment trigger to a total unemployment rate.

I am satisfied that the senior Senator from Texas and others in the Senate want to see that happen. And it is my hope that in the following month we will be able to do that.

We will also have an opportunity to test one other Republican, and that is our Chief Magistrate of the land. When we send him this bill, he will have the opportunity not only to sign it but also to extend the benefits. And then the issue will be joined. We will know once and for all whether or not a middle class entitlement program that goes to people who want to work, who are willing to work, who are eligible to work but who just cannot find jobs, is going to be helped by this President.

I hope and pray that this President does not turn his back on these hard-pressed middle income workers, because, if he does, I will make this promise: We will be back doing this again in September, with a more permanent bill, with better benefits that are designed to help people.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARMEY].

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I was on my way off the floor when I heard what has to be the silliest, most asinine speech I have heard on this floor in the 7 years I have been here. Not only was it grotesquely silly, but it was indictful in a manner that is totally without justification.

How anybody can suggest that anybody in this body purposefully wants to put people out of work and keep them out of work, or pretend that people like being out of work, is just amazing to me.

Mr. Chairman, I thought we had in essence a protocol in this body where we rose above questioning the motives of each other. But to hear that kind of diatribe, totally without foundation, requires a response.

The fact of the matter is, we do care about the unemployed on this side of the aisle. We care passionately about the unemployment problems that real people have in their real lives. We want to see them have jobs. We do not think it is enough to simply make a gesture in the direction of extending unemployment benefits to sustain the recessionary unemployment for a period of time, which otherwise could have been a recovery, in order to keep silly, silly taxes, designed to soak the rich, taxes which have not laid a glove on the rich, in place. In the last 6 months alone these soak the rich taxes have destroyed 9,400 jobs. There is hardcore documented evidence of that job destruction.

No, we do not want to extend unemployment benefits and keep people on unemployment indefinitely. We want to restore them to their jobs. Because, yes, we understand people want to work. We understand people do not want to be wards of the State. We understand that is precisely why the majority of people vote for Republicans for President, and not Democrats.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I would inquire how much time each side has remaining.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] has 18 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER] has 21 minutes remaining.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. DOWNEY].

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. Chairman, I would say before my friend, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARMEY], leaves, if he wants to hear silly speeches, I will record some of his, and he can have an anthology of the silliest ones I have ever heard.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER].

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Chairman, this is a very important matter. I strongly support the bill of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] that is before us.

Mr. Chairman, for 50 years this country has provided a safety net to working men and women. In the event that the economy sours and they lose their jobs, unemployment insurance allows the unemployed to shelter and clothe themselves and their families. That is what this bill is about.

However, in the last two decades, as the gentleman from New York [Mr.

DOWNEY] has so correctly pointed out, this safety net has frayed from neglect. The careful weave of Federal and State law designed to protect them now supports less than 40 percent of unemployed Americans.

The last administration said there were no hungry Americans. The last administration said there were no homeless Americans. Perhaps this administration believes there are no unemployed Americans. But the facts belie that belief.

Moreover, it is estimated that of this 40 percent, nearly 3 million Americans will run out of benefits by the end of the year. Added to the millions of Americans who never had this coverage, it is easy to see why we must stitch the Unemployment Insurance Program back together.

Unfortunately and incredibly, the President refuses to acknowledge the problems with the Unemployment Insurance Program, and discounts the 7-percent unemployment rate. For a man with such purported vision, it is clear he is farsighted. Emergencies in Bangladesh and Kurdistan are clear as day to him, but emergencies close at home are blurred and indiscernible.

If we can find money for people hurting overseas, we can find money to help those hurting at home. Let's pass this bill and bring the President face to face with the problems millions of Americans already see too clearly.

Mr. Chairman, let us act. Let us act today. Let us do what this country has always done, or at least in the last 50 years, and said that those who want to participate, but who, through no fault of their own, are let down by fate, will not be let down by our continuing neglect.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SHAW].

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, as ranking member of the Subcommittee on Human Resources of the Committee on Ways and Means, I have worked long and hard with the gentleman from New York [Mr. DOWNEY] in trying to find an area on which we might agree. Unfortunately, we still have disagreement.

Mr. Chairman, we must recognize in this country that there are pockets of unemployment that must be addressed. In my home district of Broward County, FL, and all of south Florida, many lives and many careers have been devastated by the collapse of Eastern Airlines. This is true in other areas of the country, because of particular industries.

Mr. Chairman, we need to start addressing those problems. I am not sure that this bill does, except on a blanket basis. There has been a lot of talk this afternoon about what the Democrats stand for and what the Republicans stand for, and I think it is fair to say that both parties, and all Members, every Member of this body, are compassionate about the unemployed. There is no way that any of us want to go home and tell somebody that we did not extend their benefits. There are many wonderful people, hardworking people, out there, that are unemployed through no fault of their own, who have desperately been looking for jobs. There is no question about that.

Mr. Chairman, there does come a time when the Treasury of the United States becomes exhausted. There does come a time under existing law when the Government says these benefits terminate after 6 months, half a year. We are a compassionate people. That is why we support the law that we have today.

Mr. Chairman, the question is, Are we in an emergency situation in this country to the extent that we need to extend benefits beyond that and risk exhaustion of the trust fund that has been set up to help us in times of real trouble and real deep unemployment?

Mr. Chairman, 6.8 percent is a big number, particularly if you are part of that 6.8 percent. But it is not the double digit unemployment that we had back in the early 1980's.

I think if there is one way to differentiate between the two parties on this particular issue, I think the Republicans put the cure of the problem more in creation of jobs, and not creation of benefits. I will let the Democrats speak as to what their priority would be. But we on this side desperately want to be fiscally responsible, to have a strong fiscal system in place in this Government, and produce jobs in the private sector, and just simply produce additional benefits.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. PEASE].

Mr. PEASE. Mr. Chairman, there have been some fairly partisan comments made this morning. I would like to lay a little bipartisan blame, if I can.

Mr. Chairman, I have been involved in unemployment compensation legislation for 10 years. In 1981 I was active in extending extended benefits and Federal supplemental compensation. In 1983, as the recession was ending, I introduced for the first time a reform bill to reform unemployment compensation on a long-term basis.

Mr. Chairman, I argued that year, and every session since, that we ought to be reforming unemployment compensation at a time when we were in a good economic period, and not wait until we were in a recession. I argued that to no avail.

So here we are once again, as we historically have been, at a last-minute effort to temporarily extend unemployment benefits, to do so in an inadequate fashion, and with no basic reform at all of the system. That is not the right way for us to be legislating.

Mr. Chairman, to make matters worse, this time we are acting within 10 months of passage last fall of the budget summit agreement, which requires that the extra expenditures be paid for. We are violating the spirit, if not the letter, of that agreement today.

Mr. Chairman, this bill does not pay for itself. We in this body have lacked the fiscal responsibility and the political courage to pay for this bill now as we ought to be doing. We should have followed the Rostenkowski-Downey bill introduced earlier this week, which provided the benefits, but also provided the means of paying for them by raising the taxable wage base for FUTA.

Mr. Chairman, we have a terrible choice to make between doing what is right fiscally for America, and doing what is right for unemployed Americans. Today I will vote with the unemployed workers of my district and my State, but it saddens me that we are faced with that choice, that we are not able to vote today on a measure which is good for workers and also good for America.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. ROHRBACHER].

Mr. ROHRBACHER. Mr. Chairman, I think we should put this debate a little bit in perspective.

It was last year that we were talking about a deficit reduction package. Some of us warned that if this deficit reduction package was passed that it would knock the legs out from under the economy, that we would have higher unemployment, we would have higher taxes, and in the end would have a higher deficit. And that is exactly what we have gotten. And now that we have instituted the Democrats' plan to bring down the deficit and we have a higher deficit, and higher taxes, and higher unemployment, now we are talking about extending unemployment compensation.

The American people are going to continue to suffer as long as these wrong-headed solutions are being put into place by this body. The fact is we should be focusing on trying to get our economy moving again. But since 1986, when the Democrats took control of the U.S. Senate, they have had control from 1987 on of both Houses of Congress, and slowly but surely we have gone right back to the politics of over-regulation, of high taxation that makes America less competitive and puts more Americans unemployed and on the streets.

I hope the American people during this debate will keep in mind just who is to blame, just who is to blame for the fact that we have more unemployed today than we had last year when we raised taxes.

I think that all of us have compassion, all of us have compassion here for the unemployed. I do not come from a wealthy background. I come from a very, very hard working background, and I have gone through periods of unemployment myself.

We are trying to create jobs for people because we care about them, and I am sure that on this side of the aisle there is just as much compassion with the policies that are being advocated. The question today that the American people should be asking is not just should we extend unemployment benefits but should we have policies that are aimed at a growing, expanding economy versus other policies that have failed.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. KAPTUR].

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Chairman, I stand in strong support of the chairman's bill, the Emergency Unemployment Compensation Act.

The Emergency Unemployment Compensation Program we are considering today is just that—an emergency. All across this Nation, millions of Americans have lost their jobs and many more will despite proclamations that the recession has ended. Certainly in my district there are no signs that the recession has ended.

Hard-working men and women have exhausted their benefits. No jobs are to be found, and many of these people have watched their life savings dwindle to nothing. Life-long retirement savings are gone; their children will now have to postpone college; and necessary medical care is being forfeited. These people need our help—and they need it now.

It's bad enough that only 40 percent of those who should be receiving benefits are actually receiving them. The unemployment compensation system that has kept Americans from falling through the cracks for over a half-century is full of holes. In my district, the relief rolls have risen dramatically in the past 6 months because people have run out of unemployment benefits and out of time. Let us stop the clock and give Americans at least a fair chance to get back on their feet.

President Bush says that we don't need this bill—that the unemployment rate is not high enough and the economy is on an upturn. In addition to Moscow, Paris, and London, I would like to invite the President to visit Ohio's Ninth District and talk to those who have been without work for weeks and, in many cases, months.

These people have worked all their lives making this country what it is today, and we owe them our help in their hour of need. I urge my colleagues to ignore the threat of yet another veto. A "yes" vote today is a vote for America and those who build it. If George Bush can help Turkey, Albania, the Soviet Union, China, Kuwait, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, and every country in the world, he can sure help America.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA].

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 3201, the Emergency Unemployment Compensation Act of 1991.

Currently there are 8.5 million unemployed persons in this country, an increase of 1.6 million persons since the start of the recession last July.

Though the unemployment rate in July declined to 6.8 percent, from 7 percent in June, the data behind that number show few signs of strength.

The establishment—that is, business—survey, which is the more reliable indicator of employment, showed a decline of 51,000 non-farm jobs.

The household survey also showed a decline of employment: 172,000 jobs.

However, the unemployment rate declined because the labor force shrank by 415,000—presumably because 244,000 unemployed became discouraged and stopped looking for work.

The establishment data showed declines of employment in both goods- and service-producing industries; only manufacturing and retail trade showed small gains.

The establishment survey also found that average weekly hours or work actually declined in July, which wiped out the gains of the preceding 2 months. As a result of this decline plus the decline in employment, total hours worked fell by 1.4 percent. Hours worked is considered an important indicator of the staying power of a recovery.

As Dr. Janet L. Norwood, Commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics stated in announcing the new figures, "changes in the labor market continued to show little clear direction in July. The unemployment rate slipped back to 6.8 percent, but for the second month in a row there was no growth in the number of payroll jobs."

Commissioner Norwood further urged "caution in interpreting the data from our household survey * * *. It seems wiser to take a longer-term perspective * * * the July unemployment rate is the same as the rate for March and has shown no clear trend since then * * * labor force growth continues to be minimal and uneven."

As a result of the recession more people are staying unemployed for a longer period of time, exhausting their savings and credit and often their will to keep looking for work.

THE NEED FOR EXTENDED BENEFITS

One of the major concerns with the current unemployment situation is the continued high level of those who are unemployed for 27 weeks and more. Of the 8.5 million unemployed Americans, 1.1 million have been unemployed for 27 weeks or more—a 61-percent increase since July 1990. Yet only three States are currently eligible for extended benefits which can trigger on after the basic 26 weeks of coverage have run out.

When the House Budget Committee held a hearing on the unemployment issue on June 6 of this year, the Department of Labor claimed that the extended benefit program was working as intended as evidenced by the eight States and Puerto Rico which had triggered onto the program. Since that hearing the unemployment rate has continued at unacceptably high levels, but the number of extended benefit States has declined by five States to only three States. Three of those States which fell out of the program have unemployment rates of 8.5 percent or higher.

The Department of Labor projects that 3.1 million Americans will exhaust their unemployment benefits in 1991, and because of the traditional lag between the end of a recession and improvement in employment, the Department projects 3.4 million will exhaust their benefits in fiscal year 1992.

As Members are aware, there are real concerns that we may fall back into recession later this year or next, which could increase the number of workers needing extended benefits above the Labor Department projections.

People without jobs and without unemployment benefits are facing difficult times. The stress and pain they and their families face is enormous. We have a chance here today to provide some minimal assistance to keep the long-term unemployed going until the economy strengthens. We are in an emergency situation, and this is a measured and appropriate reaction to the needs of struggling American families who want to work and through no fault of their own cannot find employment.

I would also like to take this opportunity to commend the leadership for the approach they are taking today on this measure. By providing for the consideration of the same approach that the Senate agreed to last night, we ensure that the final action on the bill can be completed before adjournment so that the bill can be sent on to the President.

EMERGENCY DESIGNATION

I am also pleased that the bill reflects the Senate approach on the emergency designation and makes the benefits available only if the President agrees to designate the bill as an emergency requirement. This language protects against a sequester if the President does not agree to the designation, while allowing us to remain within the framework of last year's budget agreement and to provide these critically needed extended unemployment benefits.

I urge support for the bill.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. DONNELLY].

Mr. DONNELLY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of this very necessary, and in my personal opinion long overdue legislation. I will take my minute to rebuke statements that have been made on this floor quoting unnamed bureaucrats that I find insulting to working men and women of America, that extension of unemployment benefits will encourage people to stay unemployed. It is an insult. It is an absolute, unmitigated insult to the working people of America.

To suggest that workers, and we are not talking about people that have been on the dole, people that have been on welfare, but these are people that rose every morning at 6 a.m. and worked a good 8- to 10-hour day and lost their job through no fault of their own, and to suggest that they would continue to receive unemployment benefits to deprive families of hard-earned income is utter balderdash. And

I have heard that from the highest members of the administration, and I think it has to be rebuked and denounced every time that it is said.

This legislation is paid for. The fund has over $8 billion in it. The money has been set aside for times like this, when the economy turns down and people lose their job.

We should have addressed this issue months ago. I congratulate the committee for addressing it now. I would hope the President would show some compassion and some understanding of what it is like out in the real world, what it is like to face mortgage foreclosure, what it is like to see your son not be able to go back to school because you cannot earn a living.

Show some compassion, Mr. President, and sign this bill, because this is an emergency to millions of Americans.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURPHY].

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the extension of unemployment compensation benefits and congratulate and compliment Chairman ROSTENKOWSKI and his committee for bringing this up before the August recess.

Mr. Chairman, today I rise in support of extension of unemployment insurance benefits for the victims of our current recession. Like many pressing issues, this crisis situation has been papered over by a President who governs by the old maxim out of sight out of mind. Mr. Bush's domestic agenda has been repeatedly run over by the constantly moving wheels of Air Force One, as it taxis the President once more to destinations far from the realities of day-to-day American life.

Although many experts suggest that our economic downturn is over, the rising unemployment rate is proof that a turnaround has not yet quite arrived. It is a disgrace that 8.7 million American workers now find themselves without jobs.

In June, the unemployment rate rose to 7 percent. It has increased by 1.7 percentage points since the recession began last July. Most troubling, however, is that almost 1.2 million American workers have been without work for more than 26 weeks and are no longer eligible for unemployment benefits. Another 1.4 million workers have been unemployed for more than 15 weeks but less than 26 weeks. Many of these additional workers will soon join the ranks of those losing unemployment insurance benefits, even if the economy starts to recover. While many of these workers would like to jet off to other parts of the world like the President until the bad times subside, the cold, hard fact is that for the unemployed their greatest concern now is feeding families and paying bills.

In every economic downturn over the past 50 years, Washington has stepped in and extended unemployment benefits beyond the initial 26 weeks for the majority of the long-term unemployed. At a time when almost 1.2 million workers have been unemployed for more than 26 weeks, the Unemployment Benefits Program currently provides assistance to fewer than 100,000 workers. This situation itself, is a case study in misapplied priorities. While we should exercise fiscal restraint with regard to many big Federal spending programs, hesitation in providing benefits to many desperately unemployed people has created a surplus in the program of nearly $7 billion.

This mockery should not be allowed to continue. I urge the President to act now. To work with the Congress to enact legislation expanding eligibility for extended unemployment benefits assistance. Both the money and the need exist now, and I ask that you act promptly for the good of those hardest hit by the recession.

Mr. Chairman, I do not seek to denigrate the President's efforts in the foreign arena, but I do question his judgment on those issues that he has chosen to ignore. It is inherent in the duties of the Presidency to represent our Nation throughout the world, but it is more intrinsic to the job to act responsibly upon the needs and concerns of American citizens. The fact that the President may be listening to this debate from 30,000 feet, does not lessen his ability to respond. You may remember that he faxed his veto message on the first minimum wage bill from somewhere over the Midwest. Maybe the thinner air of flight makes one more callous, or maybe the clear skies and white clouds at that altitude makes one truly believe in that delightful, uncluttered image of the world that Presidents Reagan and Bush have been peddling for far too long.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. AUCOIN].

Mr. AUCOIN. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, if any Member thinks it is not essential to pass this bill, I would urge them to look to—or perhaps visit—Oregon's timber-dependent counties. These areas are hard hit by court injunctions preventing logging because of the spotted owl controversy in the Northwest.

The number of people there who have exhausted their unemployment benefits before finding a job has doubled since last August. Lane County alone saw a 134-percent increase during the first 6 months of this year alone. The same trend exists in Douglas County, another timber-dependent area, and all throughout the Northwest is timber country.

In Lane County, for example, 100 Oregonians a week are receiving their final unemployment insurance benefits. In Douglas county, which is smaller than Lane, 50 Oregonians a week are receiving their final unemployment benefits.

Of course, much of this distress could have been averted a decade ago. In 1981, Congress approved changes in the Federal unemployment program that dealt a body blow to the extended benefits program. Many of you in this Chamber and in the other body voted to change the system. Now you are seeing the painful result of those Reagan-Bush reforms. And now innocent Oregonians are facing a catastrophe, Mr. Chairman. Twenty-six weeks of unemployment insurance does not cut it for them.

My colleagues, Oregon timber workers have for years provided this Nation with the raw materials of home ownership, that essential part of the American dream. Therefore, it is not too much to expect that we keep them from facing unemployment without unemployment benefits, the ultimate American nightmare.

I urge my colleagues to pass this bill, and I urge the President to sign it.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES].

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3201, the Emergency Unemployment Compensation Act of 1991, which will finally provide some relief to the millions of unemployed Americans suffering through the deep economic recession our country is currently experiencing.

I also want to take this opportunity to commend the gentleman from New York [Mr. DOWNEY] for his persistence in advancing the cause of the long-term unemployed. It is largely because of his determination to see legislation brought to the floor to provide extended unemployment benefits to workers who have exhausted their regular 26 weeks of benefits that we have the opportunity to approve these extended benefits today and let the working men and women of America know that Congress has not forgotten or abandoned them.

Mr. Chairman, I firmly believe that this legislation is absolutely necessary in light of the current recession. Permit me to cite unemployment statistics from my home town of Cleveland, OH. According to a recent report of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, in 1990, Cleveland had the highest unemployment rate for blacks among large U.S. cities for the second year in a row. The overall unemployment rate in Cleveland in 1990 was second in the Nation, trailing only Detroit among large cities. These rankings do not tell the whole story, the actual numbers are startling.

In 1990, the black unemployment rate in Cleveland was 20.7 percent. In other words, more than 1 in 5 of Cleveland's blacks was unemployed. The overall unemployment rate was 13.8 percent, meaning that more than 1 in 8 of all Clevelanders was unemployed last year.

More importantly, these numbers do not tell the real story, because unemployment figures are not valid estimates of the true unemployment rate. Official Government unemployment estimates do not count workers who have exhausted their benefits, or given up searching for jobs that simply are not available. These statistics also count part-time workers as part of the labor force, which completely ignores the fact that these individuals are underemployed.

Mr. Chairman, extending unemployment benefits beyond 26 weeks is absolutely necessary. I can hardly imagine a situation which could be more damaging to the self-esteem and mental health of an individual than to become unemployed. Consider how much more painful it must be to still not be able to find work after searching for work for more than 6 months.

The administration tells us that the recovery has begun. Where is the recovery in Cleveland, Mr. Chairman? Our unemployed workers cannot use promises of a recovery to pay their rent, or to purchase food and clothing. Our unemployed workers cannot use statistical decimal points from Labor Department reports to buy supplies for children preparing to start school this fall.

Opposition to extending unemployment benefits on the basis of an illusory promised recovery is a slap in the face of millions of citizens. If the President can find an emergency in Kuwait, or in Kurdistan, what about Cleveland? Let's not hear talk about the budget or the deficit from the administration whose budgets and economic policies over the last 11 years produced the deficit and the recession that produced the unemployment that this bill addresses.

I urge my colleagues to show compassion to the millions of Americans who face the tragedy of being unemployed every day. Show the working men and women that you care about them and their plight by voting to provide extended benefits to help them when they are in their time of most desperate need. Vote in favor of H.R. 3201 because it is compassionate, and humane legislation. But also, vote in favor of H.R. 3201 because it is reasonable and absolutely necessary legislation for American workers.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I thank the committee chairman for yielding time to me and want to commend him and the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from New York [Mr. DOWNEY] for bringing this bill to the floor. It is extremely important.

Mr. Chairman, in my home State of Florida 480,000 workers are out of a job. These are people who want to work, who were working, and who are unable to work now thanks to the Republican recession.

Unfortunately, the situation doesn't look like it is going to get better anytime soon.

This past year, thousands of Eastern Airlines workers were laid off. By now, most of their benefits have run out. With the possible demise of Pan Am, soon thousands more workers may be out of a job and their benefits, too, will eventually expire.

Just last month Citibank laid off 17,000 workers, Unisys laid off 10,000 and GM laid off 6,200. That's 33,200 American workers laid off last month by 3 companies alone.

If we can find tens of billions of dollars to protect the Kuwaitis, rescue the Kurds, and help the people of Bangladesh—we can help working Americans stay in their homes and keep food on their tables.

By passing this legislation we will not be breaking the budget agreement from last year.

We will not be taxing the American people.

By passing this legislation we will be recognizing that our country is in a crippling recession and our workers need help.

Mr. President, when you return, look out the window of Air Force One. You will see that this country needs leadership, jobs, and help for the unemployed. It is an emergency. Sign this bill.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 3040 and I would like to thank the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI], the distinguished chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, the gentleman from New York [Mr. DOWNEY], and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARCHER], the ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee, for their efforts in bringing this very important issue to the floor.

Mr. Chairman, our Nation has finally begun its recovery from the recession. However, there are still too many people unemployed. The unemployment rate rose in the month of June by one-tenth of 1 percent to a total of 7 percent. As we speak, 8.75 million Americans are looking for jobs.

We cannot ignore these figures. The Government cannot turn its back on our Nation's workers who have found themselves out of work due to the recent recession.

The upturn of our economy is encouraging. The economic indicators were up for the fifth straight month. But our workers have not yet found jobs and their unemployment insurance is about to run out or has already run out.

In my congressional district in New York there is an even greater rate of unemployment than the national average. Many of my constituents inform me that they cannot find work and as their unemployment insurance runs out, they are having difficulty feeding their families.

It is time that we address their desperate situation. Let us throw our hard-working citizens a lifeline to keep them afloat a little while longer by extending their unemployment benefits a little longer until these hard-working Americans, who have been put out of work through no fault of their own, can find employment in our reviving economy.

Mr. Chairman, I support this measure and I urge all my colleagues to support this measure.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this legislation. It is critically needed in my State. We are one of the three States that have already extended benefits, and we need more.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3201, the Emergency Unemployment Compensation Act of 1991. This legislation does what the President has failed to do—recognizes that the recession is not over, especially not in Rhode Island. My State's economy is in a deep recession, not because of the absence of a capital gains cut, but because of the combined effects of our credit union crisis, continuing high unemployment—even in the summer months—possible layoffs at the State's biggest employer, and the administration's policy of abandoning our city and State governments. I invite any administration official to visit Rhode Island and tell one unemployed factoryworker or one small businessman who cannot use his account at a closed credit union that the recession is over.

Many of my colleagues have mentioned the fact that only three States presently qualify for extended benefits under the current system—Rhode Island is one of those States. In Rhode Island we have an 8-percent unemployment rate—more than 1 full percent above the national level of 6.8 percent. This translates into 40,000 Rhode Islanders without jobs. These are not people looking for a handout, these are my neighbors—people who want dearly to go back to work. It would be a tragedy if the President were to say to the hard-working men and women of America that in their time of need there will be no aid, no emergency spending for you.

I rise in strong support of this legislation and I hope my colleagues will join me.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. MILLER of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased that this legislation extending unemployment benefits has incorporated a measure that I have proposed in the last two Congresses. The legislation I am referring to eliminates the disparate restrictions on unemployment benefits for former members of the Armed Forces. This measure will make such individuals eligible for the same unemployment compensation benefits as civilian workers.

Despite our involvement in the Persian Gulf, it is evident that defense reductions will continue and that in the future we will be relying on a military that is substantially smaller than at present. The Department of Defense budget for fiscal year 1992 projects that, between 1991 and 1995, active duty manpower will be reduced by 332,000. It is likely that a significant portion of these cuts will be made through involuntary separations.

Many of those who may be forced out will have looked to the military as a career and will have to begin their lives anew. I am pleased that this legislation will correct an inequity that has existed for some time.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FOGLIETTA].

Mr. FOGLIETTA. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to voice my strong support for H.R. 3201. This will provide extended unemployment benefits for Americans who are out of work, who want work, but can't find work.

In my own Philadelphia, 62,000 Philadelphians have run out of benefits in the first 5 months of this year.

And these numbers are only going to increase.

Mr. Chairman, 2 days ago, this House voted on a proposal which will lead to the closure of the Philadelphia navy yard. And that decision is going to cost up to 47,000 jobs in the region.

Dramatic changes in our economy—like defense cutbacks—and the recession have prompted an emergency here at home, just like there were emergencies with the Kurds and in Bangladesh.

Unemployed Americans have families to feed and mortgages to pay.

H.R. 3201 recognizes the dire straits so many of our people face. Let us pass this critical legislation to extend benefits and bring them the help they need.

Mr. SPRATT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Unemployment Insurance Reform Act. This overdue bill will provide badly needed assistance to millions of unemployed Americans suffering from the effects of our Nation's recession. Eight million Americans including 120,000 South Carolinians are unemployed today. The national unemployment rate has now risen to 7 percent from 5.3 percent just a year ago. Two million more Americans are unemployed today than 1 year ago. Just last month, new claims across the Nation for benefits jumped by 30,000 to 425,000. The unemployment rate in my own State jumped between May and June by an entire percentage point from 5.8 percent to 6.8 percent. In many counties in my congressional district, the rate is even higher: Chester County's rate is 15 percent, Sumter's is over 11 percent and Lancaster's is over 9 percent. In fact, the real unemployment rate is even higher than these figures suggest since they only cover those unemployed individuals who are actively seeking new jobs. Millions of others who have become discouraged and given up their job searches are excluded from these figures.

The administration claims that this is a mild recession which has already ended reflect an insensitivity to the hardships of those Americans who are unemployed and can't find jobs. In truth, we don't know whether this recession is ending. Economists are divided. But we do know that the national unemployment rate in June is almost two points higher than 1 year ago. And we do know that benefits either already have or are about to run out for millions of eligible people.

This measure would extend unemployment benefits for those individuals who have exhausted their 26 weeks of assistance. Under the bill, and additional 7, 13, or 20 weeks of benefits will be available to unemployed workers once the regular benefits expire. The bill provides that for those States with an unemployment rate above 6 percent, benefits will be extended for 7 weeks, for States with rates above 7 percent, rates will be extended for 13 weeks and for those States with rates above 8 percent, benefits will continue for an extra 20 weeks. The bill also provides that unemployed workers in all States, regardless of the unemployment level, would be eligible for at least 4 weeks of additional benefits. Aside from the aid it would bring to unemployed civilians, this measure would increase ex-service members' unemployment benefits from 13 weeks to 26 weeks and would reduce the time they must wait to receive these benefits after leaving the military from 4 to 1 week. Many of these ex-servicemen are Desert Storm veterans who need and certainly deserve this additional aid. Today's bill reverses a program cut adopted under President Reagan which shortened the eligibility period and reduced benefits. Ironically, this bill would not even be necessary if Reagan cuts had never gone into effect.

This legislation would provide direct and immediate benefits to thousands of eligible South Carolinians who are without jobs. As I mentioned, South Carolina's average unemployment in June was 6.8 percent while our 6-month average was 6.2 percent. As a result, the bill will extend unemployment compensation coverage in our State for an extra 7 weeks from 26 weeks to 33 weeks. That additional 7 weeks will bring badly needed relief to many families trying to make ends meet during a difficult period when they have lost their single source of funds. It will help them pay overdue bills and keep them afloat until they can find new jobs.

The bill declares that the cost of the benefits are an emergency expenditure, as provided under last year's budget agreement, and requires the President to make a separate emergency finding before the benefits are triggered. The costs of the bill will be totally covered by the Federal Government with funds in the extended unemployment compensation account [EUCA]. This fund, now a surplus of $8 billion and it continues to grow, even though we are in a recession. One level, it makes sense to tap the money from this fund since it was created to respond to the "counter-cyclical" forces of a recession. If we do not use the money in this fund during a recessionary period, why was this fund created and when are we supposed to use it?

At the same time, I would feel better about this bill if it provided a mechanism to pay for itself. The cost, according to CBO, is approximately $6 billion. Next year our Nation's deficit is projected to reach $350 billion and I don't want to take any steps which will make the deficit bigger. The original measure passed by Ways and Means gave the President a choice of either raising the unemployment tax or declaring an "emergency" and avoiding the tax. I think that approach made much more sense and was more consistent with the spirit of last year's budget agreement.

Despite this concern, this measure will bring important benefits to millions of deserving Americans and I urge its prompt approval.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, unemployment benefits are not a welfare program. They are designed to keep the working men and women of our country, and their families, on stable ground when they lose their jobs. This is not a handout, it is a sensible approach to keeping American families economically viable.

Mr. Chairman, the unemployment benefits program is an investment in preserving our economy. By preventing our workers from becoming clients of the welfare system during temporary setbacks, we not only maintain the integrity of our labor pool, but we avoid spending thousands more dollars due to joblessness in the future.

We also allow these working people to maintain their pride and dignity, because these men and women want to work. They ask only the ability to continue to support their families, as they always have, by working their chosen trade.

Mr. Chairman, this is why we must, at this time, extend the period of unemployment benefits to workers who have lost their job. All of us have been feeling the steady pinch of the ongoing recession, and it has taken its toll on all sectors of our society. Because of the lingering effects of the recession, so much of our industry has been effected, and it is taking much longer than has been usual or anticipated for our workers to find new jobs. They need this shot in the arm to continue managing their lives while they look for work.

Mr. Speaker, this is good public policy. Investing in our working men and women saves us countless dollars in future public assistance. Investing in our work force maintains the integrity of our labor pool. Investing in the pride and dignity of our working families, the backbone of our Nation, is what democracy is all about.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, unemployment has been almost no part of the discourse of this session. On this last day before the August recess, let action be added to words. Chairman ROSTENKOWSKI's bill is one that no Member should go home without.

This bill is a modest response to a serious situation in the Nation. The unemployment rate in the Nation's Capitol is 7.6 percent and is bound to get worse as layoffs and attrition in the District government continue.

Millions of Americans are cynical about talk of recovery. This bill will not bring recovery for them. It is a finger in the dike that is necessary to save the whole arm, the arm that wants to work but can find no jobs. Please pass H.R. 3201.

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Chairman, today we are considering legislation to provide assistance to millions of unemployed Americans. The unemployment rate has been rising steadily over the past 6 months, and there is no relief in sight. The legislation before us today is sorely needed and I urge my colleagues to acknowledge the emergency that presently exists in the unemployment insurance program and to support this legislation.

In California the unemployment rate reached 8.2 percent in June. This is up from 7.4 percent in May and represents a stunning increase since last year at the same time when the unemployment rate was only 5.1 percent. In my district of Sacramento, the unemployment rate during June was 7.1 percent.

Because of the inadequacies of the unemployment insurance program, some 37,000 Californians exhaust their State unemployment insurance benefits each month. During the first 5 months of 1991, 183,000 unemployed Californians reached the end of their benefits.

This legislation would provide real relief to the millions of Californians and others around the country who are without jobs or regular income. California, like many other States that have passed the 7 percent unemployment rate, is unable to secure extended benefits for its citizens.

The current unemployment insurance system is ill-equipped to serve the number of people needing continued benefits. Cuts in the unemployment insurance extended benefits program during the 1980's have left this program unable to meet the needs of the unemployed. This is the first recession since the 1950's during which extended benefits have not been triggered for the long-term unemployed. It is unacceptable that Michigan, Maine, and West Virginia, all of which are experiencing unemployment rates of over 9 percent, fail to qualify for the extended benefits program. Congress must act to extend these benefits to the millions of unemployed Americans who have exhausted their regular unemployment benefits.

The United States is a country made up of people who are proud to work. It is offensive that there are those who argue these people are lazy or do not try hard enough to find employment. The jobs are not there and it is our responsibility as Members of Congress to do all that is within our power to provide an adequate safety net to protect them when they are in need. I urge my colleagues to support this critical legislation.

Mr. ATKINS. Mr. Chairman, my remarks are directed to the President of the United States and to ask him to please sign this bill when it comes across his desk.

Lowell, MA, the largest city in my district, is in many ways a microcosm of America. It is a proud city that has built its heritage on one simple concept: hard work. Lowell was the first planned industrial city in America and with its broad, brick mills along the Merrimack River it was once the undisputed capital of the textile industry. In the 19th century, Irish immigrants came to Lowell to work in the mills. Then came the French Canadians, Greeks, Armenians, Poles, and now Southeast Asians. The mills were replaced by high-tech firms like Wang laboratories and other manufacturing industries. But people kept coming to Lowell for the same reason: To build a family and to realize the American dream through hard work.

Today more and more people are not working in Lowell. Mr. President, it isn't because they are lazy or that they are bad people. They aren't working simply because there are no jobs available. The unemployment rate, which is 9.5 percent in Massachusetts, is over 13 percent in Lowell and is just as high in Lawrence, and Gardner, and Ayer, and Fitchburg, and Framingham, and Worcester, and on and on.

They are the same people who held a job 1 year ago when no one would have considered them lazy or deserving of joblessness. Ironically, Mr. President, many of these people voted for you when times were good. Now they desperately need help.

I've heard some people in the administration, including Governor Sununu, say that the recession is over and that it was only mild. I suggest that the next time Governor Sununu goes to a stamp auction, that he attend one in his home State of New Hampshire where the economy is in an absolute free fall. And Mr.

President, the next time you go to Kennebunkport, take a drive through the small industrial communities in Maine and see how soft this recession really is.

Here is an example from Massachusetts. This is the want ad section from the Sunday Lowell Sun. The Sun has a circulation of 57,000 serving Lowell, the surrounding towns and southern New Hampshire. Here it is—three pages with 67 job listings. Let me read a couple of them: Asbestos workers for Massachusetts and New Hampshire; bill collectors for Wilmington, MA collection agency; show girls where experience is a plus but not necessary—lodging available upon request. These are jobs of last resort, where a paycheck means the difference between paying the rent or losing a home, meeting a payment or defaulting on a loan, putting enough food on the table or going hungry.

There are other job listings that provide better opportunities but many require very specialized skills. For example, there are 10 listings for registered nurses. There are a few other decent jobs, but you can be sure that hundreds of people will apply. They apply on the thin hope that they will finally land a job—any job.

Mr. Chairman, these people are not lazy. Many you; they counted on you; and now they need your help. I implore you to sign this legislation to extend unemployment benefits.

Mrs. LOWEY of New York. Mr. Chairman, I am proud to join in strong support of this urgently needed legislation to provide extended unemployment benefits to unemployed workers around our Nation.

Tragically, there are many in the administration and in Congress who have downplayed the importance of the current recession and who are not convinced of the need to provide extended unemployment benefits.

These individuals are either blind or they are purposefully ignoring the facts. The recession is real, it is deep, and it is devastating to families all over this Nation. Throughout the Northeast, many workers find themselves either underemployed or completely unemployed. In New York State, the unemployment rate stands at 7.1 percent and the number of claims for unemployment benefits continues to skyrocket. In my own district, unemployment in the construction industry has reached crisis proportions of almost half the existing work force.

But statistics alone do not accurately reflect the level of misery and suffering that is being experienced by many American families. Unemployment means a loss of income, loss of medical benefits, and the possible loss of homes and possessions. These are wrenching events that tear at the fabric that holds our families and communities together. It is absolutely essential that we act now to protect working families from the devastating effects of the recession and to get our economy moving again so that unemployment will be reduced.

I have recognized for some time that the current benefit system for unemployed individuals is totally inadequate. Due to budget cuts enacted during the last 10 years, the Extended Benefit Program of the Federal Government has lost its effectiveness in recent years, and the long-term unemployed are not being adequately protected.

That is why, earlier this year, I cosponsored comprehensive legislation introduced by Representative TOM DOWNEY to provide additional unemployment benefits to workers in metropolitan areas with high unemployment rates. And that is why I pressed hard for the early consideration of this legislation.

I am pleased that we are now bringing forward legislation that seeks to address this very serious problem. The bill before us today authorizes a much needed expansion of the Unemployment Compensation Program. Under this proposal, the number of weeks of extended unemployment benefits would vary depending on the total unemployment rate in the State. Further, the President would be required to declare expenditures for this purpose as emergency expenditures in order for the extended benefits to be enacted.

I am pleased that Congress is finally responding to the crisis of unemployment that is being faced in our communities. However, I am also somewhat disappointed that our response is not more emphatic. For instance, earlier versions of the bill would have correctly designated spending for this purpose as emergency spending, without the need for a Presidential declaration. Given this new requirement in the bill, we must all bring strong pressure to bear on the President to ensure that he makes the appropriate declaration and releases these urgently needed funds without delay. Certainly, we would not want the President to declare an emergency if we were not experiencing one, but the present circumstances clearly warrant an immediate declaration on the part of the President.

Moreover, the new bill authorizes only a temporary program and omits some of the important reforms that were contained in earlier versions of the bill. Our experience during the current recession demonstrates that it is extremely difficult to achieve an expansion of benefits during a time of need. Therefore, it would be more prudent to enact long-term changes in the program that will ensure adequate coverage for the future.

It is also important to note that this bill does not respond to one of the most urgent crises facing unemployed workers, which is the loss of medical coverage that often accompanies loss of employment. I feel strongly that Congress must act to respond to this crisis as well. I have endorsed the concept of universal health care, and I am working hard in Congress to ensure that all Americans have access to quality, affordable health care, regardless of their income or their employment status. While Congress is currently considering several proposals for universal health care, I do not believe we are moving quickly enough toward consideration and adoption of a universal health care plan. I believe we should redouble these efforts in light of the current recession and move quickly toward achieving a consensus in this area.

However, despite these drawbacks, it is incumbent on all of us to strongly support the present bill, which offers the best hope yet that we will provide support to unemployed workers around our Nation. I urge all of my colleagues to join me in approving the bill, and also in convincing the President of the need to declare an emergency and release the funds for extended benefits.

In addition, we must take strong and aggressive steps aimed at getting our economy moving again. I have endorsed a package of proposals designed to spur economic growth and create more jobs. This package includes proposals to spur growth by rebuilding our infrastructure, including roads, bridges, and sewer systems. It also contains savings incentives for individuals and businesses, strategies for the expansion of exports and the development of advanced technologies, and other proposals designed to create more jobs for American workers.

At this time of economic difficulty, we cannot forget the very real individuals who are being victimized by the current recession. The impact on workers and their families of prolonged unemployment takes many forms and causes often unbearable strains. In the short term, we must provide all affected families with the support they need to weather this storm. In the long run, we must enact policies for the future that will revitalize our economy and create more jobs. My constituents can count on me to be an outspoken advocate of policies that directly benefit American workers and American families.

Mr. FEIGHAN. Mr. Chairman, we should not have to be here today. It saddens me that we must pass an emergency measure to extend unemployment compensation benefits.

We would not have to do this if the Bush administration's economic policies were working. Unemployment wouldn't be an issue if the administration wasn't recklessly allowing American jobs to move to other parts of the world.

Mr. Chairman, since June of 1990, 2 million working Americans lost their jobs. And there were 51,000 more victims of the recession in the last 30 days alone.

President Bush keeps telling us that we are coming out of the recession. But you wouldn't know that from these statistics. Republican economists keep telling us that the recession is a mild one. But you wouldn't know that when you hear that since this past January, 1.6 million Americans have exhausted their unemployment benefits. Thirty-two percent of the unemployed will do so before this year is over.

I am going to support this bill because we owe it to millions of working men and women. We must ensure—when their jobs are pulled out from under them—that they can provide for their families in their hard times of unemployment.

But let me say this. Our actions here to extend unemployment benefits highlight the Democrats' commitment to America's working families. Our commitment extends beyond this. We are determined to pursue policies that are going to keep Americans working.

Mr. WEISS. I rise in support of H.R. 3040, the Unemployment Insurance Reform Act. Congress must act now to help the millions of hard-working Americans who have lost their jobs due to the recession.

The Labor Department announced that during the second week of July, the number of new claims filed for State unemployment insurance benefits rose by 30,000, to reach 425,000. This astronomical increase is 75,000 more than the average number of new claims being filed each week just a year ago. The unemployment rate for June rose to 7 percent, compared to 5.3 percent in June of last year. Since last June, an additional 2 million workers have become unemployed, a 33-percent increase over last year. It is clear that we must extend unemployment benefits to help this wave of unemployed workers feed and clothe their families. They can't wait any longer.

In all but one prior recession, Congress has extended unemployment insurance past the 26 weeks offered under normal economic conditions. These additional benefits have been provided through either the permanent Extended Benefits Program or temporary Federal supplemental benefits that have been enacted on an ad hoc basis.

Changes in the unemployment insurance Extended Benefits Program in the 1980's have made it less responsive to the needs of the unemployed. The "Gramm-Latta II" law of 1981 and changes in State laws, for example, have dramatically weakened the Extended Benefits Program. Currently, extended benefits are available in just three States—Alaska, Rhode Island, and Maine.

Certain provisions of the Budget Enforcement Act of 1990 have made the problem worse. Prior to fiscal year 1990, when claims for unemployment benefits exceeded the level on which the initial appropriation was based, the U.S. Department of Labor would request supplemental funds to pay for services to the additional unemployed workers. However, in fiscal year 1990, the administration stated that it would not request a supplemental appropriation, and only after the urging of Congress was this supplemental appropriation granted.

The Budget Enforcement Act of 1990, however, limits any benefit gained by such a supplemental. Under the Budget Act, the additional funds would cause domestic discretionary spending to exceed its specified cap, thereby triggering a sequester on other domestic discretionary programs. Clearly, this budget provision must be reformed, and I have introduced the Congressional Budget Responsibility Act to do so.

To help stranded unemployed workers, the legislation before us today provides additional unemployment benefits to long-term unemployed workers and restricts the ability of States to disqualify workers otherwise eligible for unemployment insurance. Pending the President's approval, the moneys appropriated to provide this unemployment relief would be designated as emergency funds, pursuant to the budget agreement of last year.

Clearly, we are in an emergency situation. Enactment of H.R. 3040 is needed to provide relief for the unemployed who are suffering in the midst of this severe recession. This legislation will help the hundreds of thousands of struggling families who have fallen prey to this recession in my district in the city of New York and across the United States.

While Congress must begin looking into a comprehensive economic growth package to help all Americans permanently, it is imperative that during this recession we extend unemployment insurance. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 3040.

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the unemployment compensation provisions we are considering today.

Over 8 million people are out of work across the country. If this is not a crisis, if this is not an emergency, then what is?

How can the President turn his back on the millions of Americans whose lives are in complete disarray as the result of unemployment?

How can the President fly around the world offering economic assistance to foreign lands while refusing to acknowledge the desperate need for such assistance in his own back yard?

There is no doubt that these are tough times for America, and particularly so in New England. Even though this region represents only 5 percent of the population, New England accounted for 20 percent of all jobs lost in the United States in the past 2 years.

In my State of Connecticut, we are losing more than 10,000 manufacturing jobs a year. Since the recession began in Connecticut nearly 2 years ago, we have lost 75,000 jobs overall.

These are not just statistics. Each one of these numbers represents a human being whose life has been turned inside out. They represent families who are losing the struggle to afford the basic essentials.

I wonder how the President of the United States can say to these families, you are on your own?

Congress certainly should not.

Mr. MOODY. Mr. Chairman, I applaud Chairman ROSTENKOWSKI and Chairman DOWNEY for their work with the Senate to extend unemployment benefits to the millions of Americans facing a cutoff of unemployment benefits. We have a good bill, a bill that fulfills a chief aim of the unemployment system—maintaining the purchasing power of the unfortunate workers who cannot find work. By priming the pump in this way, we keep the recession from deepening.

This bill puts the House and Senate on the record as declaring that we are in an emergency. However, the language of the bill gives the President the option of signing the bill without declaring an emergency, thereby preventing any of the funds from getting to the unemployed. The President might very well come back to us and tell us that he agrees that additional benefits are necessary, but they must be paid for.

I urge the President not to make this serious economic or humanitarian mistake. This bill calls for nearly $1 billion of spending in fiscal year 1991. To pay for this, as the Budget Act demands for nonemergencies, would require us to raise taxes or cut $1 billion of spending by October 1, 1991.

Can you imagine this? Medicare, child care, Social Security—where would we get $1 billion in 1 or 2 months? Whom would we tax? Such an enormous tax increase or spending cut would wreak havoc on the economy at its most vulnerable moment. It would completely defeat the purpose of propping up a sagging economy, which is, after all, central to the whole unemployment system.

The President and his economic advisors well know that signing the bill without declaring an emergency is tantamount to vetoing it. Everybody in this body knows it. The American people should stand ready to reject such a weak-reasoned rationalization should the President mouth it.

And make no mistake about it—we are facing an emergency.

While the unemployment rate fell to 6.8 percent in July, unemployment—as measured by the household survey—slipped by 172,000. Payrolls declined by 51,000.

The unemployment rate fell because 415,000 workers dropped out of the labor force altogether. So while the rate dropped, the prospects for finding a new job within 26 weeks are no better. Indeed, they are worse. The Labor Department estimates that 3.4 million workers will exhaust their UI benefits in the coming fiscal year.

It is clear that, whatever the Nation's economic prospects as a whole, there are real pockets of stubborn unemployment such as New England, West Virginia, Michigan. Unemployed workers in these States have no decent job prospects. They need additional benefits. They need them now. We must heed their call. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 3201, the Unemployment Insurance Reform Act of 1991. It is our duty and responsibility as Members of Congress to provide relief for the millions of unemployed Americans who are in desperate need of extended unemployment benefits. In my home State of Michigan, unemployment has risen to 9 percent. In my hometown of Flint, MI, it hovers at 11 percent. The Michigan State Building Trades Council estimates that 40,000 of its 100,000 union members are currently out of work. Thousands of laid off workers across the State have searched literally for months for employment. During this recession, Michigan has suffered the second worst decline in the Nation, with a 0.7-percent drop in personal income just during the first 3 months of the year. Our State has been hit hard by auto plant layoffs, resulting in a 7.9 percent decline in durable goods manufacturing—the worst in the Nation.

Mr. Chairman, recently our Nation has generously provided assistance to the Kuwaiti people, the Kurdish people, the Bangladeshi people, Filipino people—now it is time to help the American people. America's working families face unprecedented pressures and dangers. Most households need two wage earners to afford the standard of living their parents enjoyed. And yet many families are no more than one paycheck from homelessness. The Federal Government must provide a secure safety net of financial aid and other assistance to help out working families through the current recession.

Many experts say that we have already seen the worst of the recession and that the national economy is strongly rebounding. They would have a very difficult time proving that to many of the people in my congressional district who have lost their jobs and see little hope of finding employment in the near future. Domestic auto sales continue to slump and auto production remains stagnant. H.R. 3201 offers hope to the unemployed people of Michigan. It would repeal the ineffective extended benefits program and replace it with a federal supplemental compensation program funded through drawing down the $8 billion surplus in the extended benefits fund. The program would provide an additional 5, 10, 15, or 20 weeks of benefits at unemployment rates of under 6 percent, 7 percent, or 8 percent respectively. This supplement would be in addition to the normal 26 weeks of unemployment benefits available in the States.

Moreover, this bill would correct inequities in our current unemployment program. Today, former military service personnel, including those who just fought in the Persian Gulf, are only eligible for 13 weeks of benefits, and must wait up to 4 weeks before receiving benefits. H.R. 3201 would restore them to the same 26 weeks of benefit civilians receive, and require only a 1-week waiting period.

America's workers and employers paid taxes into the extended benefits fund in order to secure their families' economic future. But the Federal Government has been slow to tap the surplus in this fund because it helps mask the true extent of the overall Federal budget deficit. H.R. 3201 designates the spending under this bill to be an emergency for the purposes of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985. Thus, the funds spent out of the trust fund would not trigger a sequester.

Mr. Chairman, I urge all Members of the House to support passage of H.R. 3040. We must send a strong message to the President that this bill is important to America's economic future. And we must send an equally strong message to the millions of American families facing the trauma of unemployment that Congress cares about their plight and is willing to do something about it.

Ms. LONG. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the bill.

Mr. Chairman, I commend the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI, and the chairman of the subcommittee, Mr. DOWNEY, for bringing this legislation to the floor. It is a needed measure which I hope will be approved by the House, and ultimately, sent to and signed by the President.

As many of my colleagues know, for several years, I have been urging the Congress to take a longer view of how the unemployment program operates. I have said that we in the Congress need to see what we can do to facilitate a more efficient unemployment program which ensures that those workers who find themselves unemployed will receive the benefits to which they are entitled. For too long, the budget process by which the unemployment program operates has denied benefits to these individuals—not because there was not enough money in the unemployment trust fund [UTF]—not because these workers did not pay unemployment taxes, and not because the businesses did not pay unemployment taxes, but because the Congress must appropriate funds to the States to administer unemployment programs. Unless these funds are released—in a timely manner—benefits to unemployed workers go unpaid. And the ripple effect on the lives of these unemployed individuals and their families—and often the economies in the smaller cities and towns of our Nation—all suffer. They suffer because of inaction on the Federal level. They suffer—needlessly may I add—because the budgeting process is flawed.

The legislation I have been urging, the Unemployment Insurance Program Budgeting Reform Act, both during the last Congress, and this Congress—H.R. 5434, and H.R. 888 respectively—would address this situation by reforming the way we budget the unemployment program.

The administration of the unemployment insurance program is paid for by a Federal tax on employers. The revenue raised by this tax is held in the UTF and is dedicated solely to the unemployment insurance program. However, the unemployment trust fund is included in the deficit reduction calculations and the funds that pay for the administration of the unemployment insurance program are counted against the discretionary spending caps and are subject to sequester.

Recent funding shortfalls have been due to rising unemployment as well as an appropriations process which restricted the ability of legislators to free funds from the UTF. Discretionary spending caps have limited the total appropriations—including the appropriation of administrative funds from the UTF.

However, these budget actions saved money on paper only. Any unspent moneys from the trust fund are required to remain in the fund where they build up, unspent. A recent estimate for the year-end balance in administrative funds account is $2.52 billion.

My legislation, H.R. 888, would address the shortfall by removing the UTF from the deficit calculation and the Budget Enforcement Act [BEA] budget process including the discretionary caps and sequesters, in essence moving the unemployment program off budget. By removing the UTF from the BEA budget process, any pressure that may exist to hold down expenditures from the UTF and to build up the surplus in the trust fund would be eliminated. The stockpiling of funds that derive from a dedicated tax defeats the purpose of a dedicated tax and is merely an accounting device to meet budget targets.

Mr. Chairman, this legislation would help bring integrity to the budget process and to protect the unemployment insurance program from unwarranted funding shortfalls at a time of rising unemployment. I urge my colleagues to consider this measure as we move toward a comprehensive reform of the unemployment insurance program.

But, Mr. Chairman, today we are not considering a long-term approach to addressing the flaws in the unemployment program, but a needed measure which will provide additional unemployment benefits—through next July—for millions of American workers and their families.

This legislation is needed because of the unfortunate situation in which our Nation finds itself—a situation which now presents our Nation with the highest unemployment rate in 5 years. And in my congressional district, the Fourth District of Indiana, the rates are also still high.

As many of my colleagues know, last week, the Labor Department announced that new claims for State unemployment insurance benefits rose by 30,000 to 425,000 during the second week of July. That level is a full 75,000 more than the average number of new claims that were filed per week a year ago. In fact, since 1 year ago June, over 2 million additional workers have become unemployed. That is a 33-percent increase over last year.

Mr. Chairman, I want to raise a point which I think needs to be brought to the attention of the Members. Officials in the administration have indicated that there is not a need to extend unemployment benefits because the recession has ended.

While this argument to do nothing for American workers and families may make sense to some in the administration, many of us do not agree—nor would I guess that those currently being squeezed as a result of being unemployed for so long would be moved by this argument.

In fact, if you look at the last three recessions—in 1975, 1981, and 1983—unemployment has continued to rise during the months immediately following these recessions. In 1975, the recession ended in March, but it was not until a full 8 months later that the unemployment rate began to decrease. In 1981, the recession ended in July, but it took 4 months—until December—for the unemployment rate to begin to decline. And in 1983, the recession ended in November, but it was not until July of the next year—a full 9 months later that the unemployment rate dropped.

Mr. Chairman, the administration argument that we don't need to extend unemployment benefits because the recession is or has ended is a red herring. You don't need to be a rocket scientist to figure out that unemployment claims will continue to rise—even if the recession ends today.

The fact of the matter is that the loss of unemployment benefits is a significant problem that is economically squeezing an already pinched middle-class America. It is a problem that is affecting workers and families. And, despite claims to the contrary, it is a problem that will continue to affect workers and families.

I urge support of the bill to help remedy this unfortunate situation.

Mr. MFUME. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the unemployment compensation amendments and urge our colleagues to support this measure that will provide emergency assistance to the many Americans who are in need of economic relief because their unemployment benefits have been exhausted.

Mr. Chairman, this bill would make benefits available only from September 1, 1991, through July 4, 1992. Workers who exhausted their regular benefits prior to the enactment of this bill, but after April 1, 1991, would be eligible for 7, 13, or 20 weeks of extended benefits if they live in States in which these additional benefits have been triggered.

Currently there are only three States that are providing such emergency assistance to unemployed workers. Unfortunately, many States are facing financial crises of their own and may be able to provide little to no emergency assistance for their citizens.

President George Bush stated, 3 years ago, that his administration was dedicated to a more kinder and gentler Nation. If this is true, then President Bush will support this legislation and demonstrate his sincerity and commitment, to his words, for the American people.

Mr. Chairman, it is my hope that this is an issue that everyone on both sides of the aisle can rally in support of. The recession has hit Americans from all walks of life and individuals on different rungs of America's socioeconomic ladder. America's unemployed need compassion, understanding, and assistance. Their national leaders must provide relief and reassurances that their years of hard work and service were not delivered in vain.

Mr. LEVINE of California. I rise today in strong support of H.R. 3040 which will provide extended benefits for up to 3.5 million Americans who have exhausted their unemployment benefits.

Despite the fact that the administration has declared the recession over, millions of Americans remain out of work. The recession may be over for the President and his friends in Kennebunkport, but it is most certainly not over for working people in this country.

In my home State of California, unemployment has reached 8.2 percent. One in seven unemployed Americans now lives in California.

Every month more than 37,000 unemployed Californians exhaust their unemployment benefits.

This crisis affects the entire State and workers from every sector of our economy. Aerospace and defense manufacturers have lost more than 60,000 jobs during the current recession.

The State's agricultural industry remains hard hit. The workers whom the severe drought and freeze left jobless have now run out of unemployment benefits and are not eligible to receive any other aid.

Even Silicon Valley, the heart of our high technology sector, has seen unemployment skyrocket as computer manufacturers lay off workers. This is a national crisis, not limited to California. The number of long-term unemployed in our country has increased to more than 1.2 million people. Yet, fewer than 50,000 of these unemployed workers are eligible for extended benefits.

Mr. Chairman, I simply do not understand the lack of compassion and understanding exhibited by the administration toward American workers facing joblessness.

The people of California want to work.

They are not standing in soup lines and sending their children to school hungry because they are lazy.

The Democratic proposal on the floor today goes a long way to providing some relief to Americans who were forced from their jobs because of the recession.

It would provide additional unemployment benefits to long-term unemployed workers, limit the ability of States to disqualify workers from receiving unemployment benefits, and provide additional benefits for ex-military personnel.

For the millions of Americans who are unemployed, who cannot find a job, and have exhausted their unemployment benefits, this is an emergency. Congress must act now to provide them with a modicum of relief.

I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to join me in supporting the working person.

Vote for the Unemployment Insurance Reform Act of 1991.

Mrs. COLLINS of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, today I rise to add my support for enactment of a bill whose time has come: the Unemployment Insurance Reform Act. While I would much prefer to see the House version, H.R. 3040, become law, I am so concerned that something be done now for America's workers that I am willing to accept the compromise, H.R. 3201.

We need to pass some form of additional assistance for our work force, not just to help American workers, but because we owe it to American workers. We have all heard the figures: 7 percent of American workers now are unemployed. Since June of last year, 2 million workers have been added to the list of unemployed. This means that right now 8.75 million Americans cannot find work. Of these unemployed workers, 1.6 million have exhausted their unemployment insurance benefits just since January of this year. Without an extension of benefits, it is estimated that more than 3 million workers will have exhausted their benefits by the end of this fiscal year.

Now I ask my colleagues to put aside the figures and statistics and think instead about the individual lives that are being damaged and destroyed because there is no work, no paycheck, and no unemployment insurance benefits. In my district in Illinois, Mr. Speaker, there are fathers and mothers who cannot find jobs to support themselves or their families. For them, 26 weeks is simply not long enough to find a job during this recession. For them, an extension of unemployment insurance benefits could allow them to maintain their homes, their lifestyles, and their dignity. The legislation before us, Mr. Speaker, is a bill that we can and must pass in order to support and save millions of American workers.

H.R. 3201 speaks to the President declaring an emergency to exist before the additional benefits can be released. There is no question that we are in a serious, emergency situation. The unemployment rate is higher than it has been in almost 5 years. Our workers need concrete assistance from us and they need it quickly. I hope that partisan politics and wishful thinking about the economy will both be put aside; let's work together so that we can do what is right and what is necessary. Let's pass H.R. 3201.

Mr. FAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the Unemployment Insurance Reform Act, legislation to address the unemployment emergency which grips the American economy. This bill will extend unemployment compensation benefits to more than a million unemployed Americans who have exhausted their benefits since the beginning of this year.

The administration will argue that the recession is over, or at least that things are getting better. They tell us that this legislation is unnecessary. But the 8.5 million American workers who are out of work know otherwise.

In June, our unemployment rate hit a 5-year high, at 7 percent. And Federal Reserve Board Chairman, Alan Greenspan, has estimated that, in the fourth quarter, inflation will also rise 3.25 percent. But the administration would have us believe that the recession is ending.

The number of long-term unemployed Americans has jumped 76 percent in the past year—to 1.2 million people. These aren't just numbers. These are people with names and faces. These figures represent American families with mortgages, with car payments, with kids to feed, and bills to pay.

But fewer than 50,000 of these unemployed workers live in States eligible for extended benefits. The unemployment problem in my home State of California is among the worst in the country. Although our unemployment rate was 8.2 percent in June, we have been denied extended benefits. One in every seven of the Nation's jobless workers lives in California. This year alone, an average of 37,000 jobless Californians have exhausted their regular State unemployment benefits each month without receiving additional unemployment aid. Our total from January through May of this year was 183,000 workers.

President Bush has requested aid to help people in Turkey, the Sudan, and Iraq—to name a few—but has threatened to veto our unemployment compensation bill. Why not support aid to American workers, Mr. President? In the past 40 years, every President has extended unemployment benefits during a recession, as we are attempting to do now.

This Republican recession has put close to 9 million Americans out of work. This country remains in a recession despite the wishful forecasting of this administration. Yet, George Bush continues to pack his bags and bury himself in foreign policy and House Republicans have spent the week stewing and stalling to keep this bill from coming to a vote.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 3040. The Unemployment Insurance Reform Act offers hope and much needed relief for the 1.6 million working Americans who have lost their jobs due to this recession. Since the President prefers to spend his time helping Soviet citizens and refuses to take care of his own people, Congress must stand today for the millions of American families who need our help.

We are past the halfway mark of George Bush's term and his accomplishments read more like a Secretary of State's than a President's. It's time to come home, Mr. President. It's time to help our own.

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 3201, the Emergency Unemployment Compensation Act of 1991. As an original sponsor of legislation to extend unemployment benefits, I am deeply committed to its passage.

In many areas of western Massachusetts we are plagued with double-digit unemployment. Just 2 days ago we learned that total unemployment in the area has risen to 9.7 percent, an increase nearly double the rate of a year ago. But we don't need new statistics to know that families are struggling, and the hardships continue. In western Massachusetts, the recession has been long and deep, and sadly, the end is not yet in sight.

Despite this, here in Washington, President Bush declares we're out of the recession—well families in Holyoke, Pittsfield, and North Adams will tell you a different story. And every weekend when I go home, my friends and neighbors tell me their stories of hardships. They talk of steady layoffs at General Electric, months of getting by on only a portion of their former wages, and now, a sudden end to the unemployment benefits that they had been surviving on.

H.R. 3201 is of critical importance to the people of my district. As the recession drags on in western Massachusetts, unemployed men and women and their families need a bridge to help get past the recession and get back to work. For these people, losing their benefits is an emergency. They've already gone too long with the heavy burden of being without work.

It is an emergency that this Congress must immediately recognize. Now is not the time to point fingers to past inactions; it is time to help our struggling families. We must put a bill on the President's desk that makes no concessions, and gives the unemployed men and women of America what they need—a new lease to hold together their lives and their families, and the opportunity to continue their search for work.

If the President does not accept our demands, then he must answer to all those who now find themselves unemployed and without any source of income. He must explain to the 8.7 million unemployed people in America, and the over 40,000 in western Massachusetts, how he comes to the conclusion that the recession is over. If President Bush can declare an emergency to provide aid to Kurdish refugees, why can't we declare an emergency to help the unemployed men and women in my district and in our country?

The President says the recession is over. Well, Mr. President, come to my district and look into the eyes of a parent struggling to find work and provide for her family, and then tell us we are out of the recession. How can we turn our backs on these families?

I am excited about H.R. 3201, and I look forward to its quick and unaltered passage. I hope that we can finally recognize the depth of our current recession—and realize that while we may not be able to end it, we have all the power in the world to help those who are being most hurt by it.

Mr. FRANKS of Connecticut. Mr. Chairman, although there are many signs that our national economy is turning the corner toward prosperous time, many people are still feeling the pain and suffering of unemployment, especially workers in the State of Connecticut.

That is why I rise in support of H.R. 3201—the Unemployment Compensation Act of 1991.

Mr. Chairman, the people of my district and my State continue to struggle through rough times. There are many factors for this—a weak real estate market, an uncertain budget stalemate in Hartford, and tight credit, a result of several bank failures.

Connecticut's unemployment rate for the month of July was 6.2 percent, 5.9 percent seasonally adjusted. More disturbing, officials from the Connecticut Department of Labor have disclosed that since January, between 1,200 and 1,500 people unemployment recipients have exhausted their benefits. Last month, during one reporting period, the State reported 2,000 unemployed have befallen a similar fate.

While I do not support increasing unemployment taxes, I do believe the release of surplus funds to extend benefits to areas hard hit by unemployment is both fair and essential to our economic recovery.

These funds will extend these benefits to Connecticut workers for another 4 weeks.

This extension is not a hand out, but a hand up. Unemployment rates in several towns in my district are very disturbing and these funds will help them stay whole as they continue to seek new opportunities.

Also, this legislation would help ex-military personnel and reservists, many of whom served with valor in Operation Desert Storm.

It would be a dishonor to the brave men and women of our military if we did not try to assist them in joining the civilian work force.

This legislation merely release surplus funds for those who qualify. That is what these funds are intended for and we should authorize their disbursement once the President has declared the situation an emergency.

Mr. Chairman, the voters elected all of us to manage the resources of our Nation and to be both prudent but compassionate. This legislation is both prudent and compassionate.

I believe this is a special situation which requires flexibility on the part of the Congress. So let us be encouraged by the improvements in our economy but show that we, the Congress, must help working Americans get back on their feet so they may prosper and contribute to this recovery.

Ms. SNOW. Mr. Chairman, I rise to express my support for the legislation before us today which will provide up to 20 weeks of additional unemployment benefits to people in my State of Maine.

Over 50,000 people were unemployed in Maine in June, an unemployment rate of 7.6 percent. Between June 1990, and June 1991, the number of nonagricultural jobs fell by 30,000.

Maine is one of only nine States in which extended benefits were triggered and one of only three still using them. These additional 13 weeks of benefits have gone to over 19,000 individuals since February. Even this extension, however, has not proven to be enough.

I have heard, as have many of my colleagues, from my constituents that they want to work, they are looking for work but they cannot find a job. I have heard this from people laid off from their first job out of school and from those in midlevel management, from electricians, store clerks, and myriad occupations.

Some of them have chosen to leave Maine and try their luck elsewhere, leaving behind family and friends. But the rest are looking for work, and they are ready to work, but they must wait for jobs to open up.

The legislation before us, by allowing Maine to provide up to 20 additional weeks of benefits to those who have exhausted their regular benefits, will help families stay together, keep roofs over their heads, and pay the bills.

These people need our help, and I am pleased that we are taking action to provide it. I urge my colleagues to support passage of this bill.

My constituents are hard working people and all they are looking for is a chance to prove it. By adopting this legislation we will be providing them with additional financial assistance to make it through this rough period.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the bill to extend benefits to the unemployed workers across this country.

The employment picture in Michigan is grim, although it has improved somewhat in the last 2 months. The statewide unemployment rate is 8.3 percent, meaning that 371,000 people are looking for work but cannot find it. Even in counties such as Washtenaw, where the unemployment rate is less severe, there are thousands of people who have been laid off in the last 6 months, in plant closings and other mass layoffs, who cannot find a job, and who are about to exhaust their unemployment insurance benefits. In Wayne County, where 1 person in every 10 is unemployed, the crisis is even more apparent. They need help, and this bill will give them the help they need.

Some people object to declaring a national economic emergency. Those people have jobs, full bellies, and paid vacations. For the 9 million jobless Americans whose only income is unemployment compensation, we have been in a national emergency for a year, and the emergency is showing no sign of disappearing. The national unemployment rate is at the highest level in 5 years.

My own State is suffering mightily. The recession in Michigan is not a matter of temporary, seasonal layoffs. We are witnessing the destruction of major elements of our basic industries and the permanent loss of tens of thousands of good-paying jobs.

The number of WARN notices in Michigan— notices to the State of permanent mass layoffs and plant closings involving 50 or more workers—was greater in the first 6 months of 1991 than in the entire year of 1990. By mid-June, 106 companies had sent in WARN notices, 71 of them involving plant closings.

The bill before us will provide $5.2 billion in extended unemployment benefits and will provide between 4 and 20 weeks of extended unemployment benefits, depending on the jobless rate of each State. It will also provide $600 million in additional benefits for veterans of Operation Desert Storm and other former armed service members. If signed by the President, the bill takes effect on September 1.

I must admit, I am more than a little disappointed with the final version of the bill. I would rather we had an opportunity to consider a bill comparable to H.R. 2839, which I have cosponsored.

Unlike the proposal we are considering today, H.R. 2839 would make permanent changes in the unemployment benefits program. H.R. 2839 would repeal the Federal-State Extended Benefits Program and replace it with a permanent Federal Supplemental Compensation Program providing three tiers of up to 20 additional weeks of benefits, funded 100 percent out of Federal unemployment taxes. It would increase the Federal unemployment taxable wage base, beginning in 1993, from its current $7,000 to the Social Security taxable wage base estimated to be $58,300 in that year. Had we followed such a funding scheme, we would not have to rely on the President to declare an emergency in order to provide these important benefits to unemployed workers.

Unlike the bill before us today, H.R. 2839 would have made the benefits retroactive to April 1991. Thousands of people who were denied extended benefits when the program triggered off in Michigan will be left without any help from this bill. Instead, many workers will go months without benefits before the bill goes into effect.

Fortunately, both bills increase ex-servicemembers' unemployment benefits from 13 weeks to 26 weeks and reduce the time they must wait to receive those benefits after leaving the military from 4 to 1 week. It also reduces the number of continuous days a reservist must serve on active duty from 180 to 90 in order to be eligible for unemployment insurance.

But, the reality of the situation has resulted in this more limited proposal.

Mr. Chairman, my constituents need this bill. In July, my home State of Michigan had 371,000 people out of work. More than 90,000 jobless workers in Michigan have seen their benefits run out in the first 6 months of 1991. We have to do something and we have to do it now.

The President has said that he will veto this bill because it violates last year's budget agreement. The President says we have to either make cuts in other programs or raise new taxes to pay for the extended unemployment benefits. I find this incredible when just months ago, the President asked for and received emergency spending to help the people of other nations. The President has been more than willing to provide emergency, off-budget aid to the Kurds, to Bangladesh, Israel, Turkey, and other countries.

It is time to meet the needs of Americans. I urge my colleagues to support this important proposal.

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the compromise measure, H.R. 3201, to help the thousands of men and women in the unemployment lines around this Nation.

I know in my State of New York alone there are thousands of people who were once employed, working for a living and paying taxes, but who have lost their jobs because of a recession that for them has not relented.

Despite what economists in pin-stripe suits are telling the White House, and thence the President telling us, times are not getting better. Large populations without jobs are in desperate need of assistance through unemployment compensations and their payment extensions.

So that those people who want to carry their own weight can do so, we need to create an economic atmosphere wherein the creation of new jobs is seen as vital. We need to help these people get back in the workforce. My district, the poorest in the Nation, definitely needs added assistance. Through demonstration job search assistance programs and extended benefits when times are hardest, we can help them. Times are hardest now.

People do want to work, but until there are jobs for them, they will need help. H.R. 3201 is bold and addresses this crisis.

Mrs. KENNELLY. Mr. Chairman, Americans are generous people. Where famine, war or natural disaster have struck, Americans have often been the first ones there to provide assistance to ease human suffering. Today, we must take a step to ease suffering at home. Today we must restore a little bit of hope to the lives of millions of unemployed men and women.

Mr. Chairman, for a year a recession has gripped our Nation. Some say the recession is over. Well even if the economy is on the mend, it is clear that the recession has not yet loosened its grip on the Northeast. The unemployment rate jumped by one-half of 1 percent just last month in my State so we have not bottomed out. This bill addresses the needs of those people who will suffer from being out of work—the people who are often the first fired and last hired. This bill will help families to survive and communities to remain stable during the difficult days which will linger on for them. It will help meet the mortgage payments while they try to hold on. It will put gas in the tank so they can go look for work and food to sustain them and their families.

I in no way imply that this bill is sufficient, only that it is all we can do right now. So let's do it—we owe working people that. Let's pass this bill and send it to the President. Let's hope he implements it.

Mr. COYNE. Mr. Chairman, I believe the House should act now to provide a safety net for out-of-work Americans who have exhausted their unemployment benefits. These men and women are facing a true emergency and hard choices on how to feed their children and pay their rent or mortgages.

On three separate occasions, the Congress and the administration have recognized emergencies overseas that justified new spending. If we can respond to the plight of the Kurds and disasters in Bangladesh, how can we possibly ignore the suffering of our own citizens who have exhausted their unemployment benefits? How can the Congress or the administration claim that the needs of the unemployed represent less of an emergency than the needs of those in distant lands?

We must remember that millions of Americans are still without jobs before we celebrate the end of the current recession proclaimed by the Administration. We all want to see an economic recovery but the fact remains that joblessness continues to be a major problem.

Even yesterday's news of a slight drop in the unemployment rate—from 7 percent in June to 6.8 percent in July—indicated that many companies will not be calling many workers back soon. In fact, a separate Labor Department survey of business establishments showed that companies continued to cut jobs last month, as payrolls fell by 51,000.

Furthermore, in many areas, the unemployment rate increased in July. In the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, the rate rose from 6.8 percent to 7 percent. Nearly half a million Pennsylvanians are out of work, with many at risk of falling through the safety net which unemployment compensation is supposed to offer.

The reality for many unemployed Americans is that finding a new job will be increasingly difficult. This represents a dark horizon even for those still receiving unemployment benefits. Men and women who have exhausted all benefits are living in the heart of this darkness.

I believe the compromise bill represents a minimum response to the economic reality faced by the unemployed in America. The original House bill was a stronger measure since it attempted to correct long-standing systemic problems in the Federal unemployment compensation system.

Still, if we cannot do all that we should, let us not be found guilty of doing nothing at all for the millions of unemployed men and women in America. I urge my colleagues to pass this bill and I sincerely hope President Bush will remember the families of the unemployed when he is asked to sign this measure into law.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 3201, The Unemployment Insurance Reform Act of 1991. At this moment, 18 of the 24 counties in my congressional district—75 percent of my counties—have unemployment rates which exceed the national average. In my home State of Arkansas 23,600 persons will exhaust their unemployment benefits in 1991. Of that number, more than 7,000 will be unable to find work.

Mr. Chairman, we are in the midst of a prolonged recession. The recovery promises to be slow and difficult. In the lower Mississippi River Delta, which encompasses much of my congressional district, unemployment rates are commonly in double digits and often exceed 20 percent. People want to work and are looking for work—but for many, there is simply no work to be found. An intractable poverty grips much of the region. The persistent downward spiral of the economy has now caused unemployment to reach beyond the chronically poor and overtake many in the working middle class.

We cannot forsake those who have fallen victim to failed national economic policies. Many of these people have no one to turn to but their Government—and if we fail to act they will await the tender mercies of the constant companions of the poor—hunger, sickness and misery.

While we struggle in the search for an economic and political solution to the problem of unemployment, we have a moral obligation to hear peoples' cries for help. If we fail to act, we will find the answer to our neglect in the suffering which will surely follow our indifference.

I urge passage of the bill.

Mr. LEHMAN of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to voice my support for H.R. 3201, the unemployment compensation amendments. Over the past 5 years, we have consistently witnessed an increasing unemployment rate. Recently the Labor Department announced that new claims for State unemployment insurance benefits rose by 30,000 to a total of 425,000 during the second week of July. This is 75,000 more than the average number of new claims being filed each week a year ago.

In my State of California the most recent figures report an 8.2 percent unemployment rate. If the President signs into law H.R. 3201 over 500,000 people in California will receive much needed assistance. In my district the average unemployment rate is in the double digits. The largest city in my district, Fresno, has an unemployment rate of 11.7 percent. The combination of the December 1990 freeze, the California drought and the recession has left many people out of work and depleted of regular 26 weeks of unemployment benefits.

In all but one prior recession since the 1950's, Congress has enacted legislation to make available extra weeks of benefits in addition to the regular 26 weeks of unemployment insurance. However, in the early 1980's changes to the unemployment insurance program have made it much less responsive to the needs of the unemployed. Obviously, it is much more difficult to find a job in a recession and the law must reflect this difficulty.

I support H.R. 3201 as a fair—although temporary—approach to providing much needed unemployment benefits. It is ridiculous at best to ignore the economic realities all around us and deny the unemployed an additional 7 to 20 weeks of compensation. This is a temporary bill which will last only 1 year but it will provide immeasurable relief to the millions of workers who have become unemployed. I urge my colleagues to support this measure and I call on President Bush to listen to the millions of unemployed in this Nation and sign this bill into law.

Mr. ARCHER. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read for amendment under the 5-minute rule.

The text of the bill is as follows:

H.R. 3201

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

SEC. 2. FEDERAL-STATE AGREEMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Any State which desires to do so may enter into and participate in an agreement under this Act with the Secretary of Labor (hereafter in this Act referred to as the "Secretary"). Any State which is a party to an agreement under this Act may, upon providing 30 days written notice to the Secretary, terminate such agreement.

(b) PROVISIONS OF AGREEMENT.—Any agreement under subsection (a) shall provide that the State agency of the State will make payments of emergency unemployment compensation—

- (1) to individuals who—
  - (A) have exhausted all rights to regular compensation under the State law;
  - (B) have no rights to compensation (including both regular compensation and extended compensation) with respect to a week under such law or any other State unemployment compensation law or to compensation under any other Federal law (and are not paid or entitled to be paid any additional compensation under any State or Federal law); and
  - (C) are not receiving compensation with respect to such week under the unemployment compensation law of Canada; and
- (2) for any week of unemployment which begins in the individual's period of eligibility (as defined in section 7(2)).

(c) EXHAUSTION OF BENEFITS.—For purposes of subsection (b)(1)(A), an individual shall be deemed to have exhausted such individual's rights to regular compensation under a State law when—

- (1) no payments of regular compensation can be made under such law because such individual has received all regular compensation available to such individual based on employment or wages during such individual's base period; or
- (2) such individual's rights to such compensation have been terminated by reason of the expiration of the benefit year with respect to which such rights existed.

(d) WEEKLY BENEFIT AMOUNT.—For purposes of any agreement under this Act—

- (1) the amount of emergency unemployment compensation which shall be payable to any individual for any week of total unemployment shall be equal to the amount of the regular compensation (including dependent's allowances) payable to such individual during such individual's benefit year under the State law for a week of total unemployment;

(2) the terms and conditions of the State law which apply to claims for extended compensation and to the payment thereof shall apply to claims for emergency unemployment compensation and the payment thereof, except where inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, or with the regulations or operating instructions of the Secretary promulgated to carry out this Act; and

(3) the maximum amount of emergency unemployment compensation payable to any individual for whom an account is established under section 3 shall not exceed the amount established in such account for such individual.

(e) ELECTION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of Federal law (and if State law permits), the Governor of a State in a 7-percent period or an 8-percent period, as defined in section 3(c), is authorized to and may elect to trigger off an extended compensation period in order to provide payment of emergency unemployment compensation to individuals who have exhausted their rights to regular compensation under State law.

SEC. 3. EMERGENCY UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION ACCOUNT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Any agreement under this Act shall provide that the State will establish, for each eligible individual who files an application for emergency unemployment compensation, an emergency unemployment compensation account with respect to such individual's benefit year.

(b) AMOUNT IN ACCOUNT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The amount established in an account under subsection (a) shall be equal to the lesser of—

(A) 100 percent of the total amount of regular compensation (including dependents' allowances) payable to the individual with respect to the benefit year (as determined under the State law) on the basis of which the individual most recently received regular compensation, or

(B) the applicable limit times the individual's average weekly benefit amount for the benefit year.

(2) APPLICABLE LIMIT.—For purposes of this section—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in this paragraph, the applicable limit shall be determined under the following table:

In the case of weeks beginning during a:	The applicable limit is:

(B) APPLICABLE LIMIT NOT REDUCED.—An individual's applicable limit for any week shall in no event be less than the highest applicable limit in effect for any prior week for which emergency unemployment compensation was payable to the individual from the account involved.

(C) INCREASE IN APPLICABLE LIMIT.—If the applicable limit in effect for any week is higher than the applicable limit for any prior week, the applicable limit shall be the higher applicable limit, reduced (but not below zero) by the number of prior weeks for which emergency unemployment compensation was paid to the individual from the account involved.

(3) REDUCTION FOR EXTENDED BENEFITS.—The amount in an account under paragraph (1) shall be reduced (but not below zero) by the aggregate amount of extended compensation (if any) received by such individual relating to the same benefit year under the Federal-State Extended Unemployment Compensation Act of 1970.

(4) WEEKLY BENEFIT AMOUNT.—For purposes of this subsection, an individual's weekly benefit amount for any week is the amount of regular compensation (including dependents' allowances) under the State law payable to such individual for such week for total unemployment.

(c) DETERMINATION OF PERIODS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the terms "8-percent period", "7-percent period", "6-percent period", and "other period" mean, with respect to any State, the period which—

(2) APPLICABLE TRIGGER.—In the case of an 8-percent period, 7-percent period, 6-percent period, or other period, as the case may be, the applicable trigger is on for any week with respect to any such period if the average rate of total unemployment in the State for the period consisting of the most recent 6-calendar month period for which data are available—

(A) equals or exceeds 6 percent, and

(B) falls within the applicable range (as defined in paragraph (3)).

Subparagraph (A) shall only apply in the case of an 8-percent period, 7-percent period, or 6-percent period.

(B) EXCEPTION IF APPLICABLE RANGE INCREASES.—If, but for subparagraph (A), another period with a higher applicable range would be in effect for such State, such other period shall take effect without regard to subparagraph (A).

(5) NOTIFICATION BY SECRETARY.—When a determination has been made that an 8-percent period, 7-percent period, 6-percent period, or other period is beginning or ending with respect to a State, the Secretary shall cause notice of such determination to be published in the Federal Register.

A State shall not be entitled to any reimbursement under such chapter 85 in respect of any compensation to the extent the State is entitled to reimbursement under this Act in respect of such compensation.

(c) DETERMINATION OF AMOUNT.—Sums payable to any State by reason of such State having an agreement under this Act shall be payable, either in advance or by way of reimbursement (as may be determined by the Secretary), in such amounts as the Secretary estimates the State will be entitled to receive under this Act for each calendar month, reduced or increased, as the case may be, by any amount by which the Secretary finds that his estimates for any prior calendar month were greater or less than the amounts which should have been paid to the State. Such estimates may be made on the basis of such statistical, sampling, or other method as may be agreed upon by the Secretary and the State agency of the State involved.

SEC. 5. FINANCING PROVISIONS.

The Secretary of the Treasury, prior to audit or settlement by the General Accounting Office, shall make payments to the State in accordance with such certification, by transfers from the extended unemployment compensation account (as established by section 905 of the Social Security Act) to the account of such State in the Unemployment Trust Fund.

(1) shall be ineligible for further emergency unemployment compensation under this Act in accordance with the provisions of the applicable State unemployment compensation law relating to fraud in connection with a claim for unemployment compensation; and

(b) REPAYMENT.—In the case of individuals who have received amounts of emergency unemployment compensation under this Act to which they were not entitled, the State shall require such individuals to repay the amounts of such emergency unemployment compensation to the State agency, except that the State agency may waive such repayment if it determines that—

(1) the payment of such emergency unemployment compensation was without fault on the part of any such individual, and

(2) such repayment would be contrary to equity and good conscience.

(c) RECOVERY BY STATE AGENCY.

(1) IN GENERAL.—The State agency may recover the amount to be repaid, or any part thereof, by deductions from any emergency unemployment compensation payable to such individual under this Act or from any unemployment compensation payable to such individual under any Federal unemployment compensation law administered by the State agency or under any other Federal law administered by the State agency which provides for the payment of any assistance or allowance with respect to any week of unemployment, during the 3-year period after the date such individuals received the payment of the emergency unemployment compensation to which they were not entitled, except that no single deduction may exceed 50 percent of the weekly benefit amount from which such deduction is made.

The CHAIRMAN. No amendment to the bill is in order.

Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. AUCOIN) having assumed the chair, Mr. BONIOR, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 3201) to provide emergency unemployment compensation, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 210, he reported the bill back to the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. GEPHARDT was allowed to speak out of order for 5 minutes.)

JOBLESS RAP

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, in a recession, this country makes a promise not simply to the jobless but to all of us.

By providing unemployment benefits to workers, we replace their wages and enable them to eat and take care of their children, and we fight recession by maintaining, even for a limited time, their purchasing power.

That is a promise we kept during the last Republican recession, and that is a promise we mean to keep during this Republican recession.

We have been in recession for over a year; there are nearly 9 million Americans without jobs; millions of them have exhausted their benefits, and only three States are sustaining their long-term unemployed.

Today, we acknowledge and affirm that this legislation should have been on the President's desk weeks and months ago. But getting here required scaling a wall of resistance from an administration that was late recognizing the recession, and far behind in fulfilling its responsibilities to the unemployed.

It was Secretary Brady calling the recession no big deal. It was Secretary Martin calling our bill a deterrent to economic growth.

It was Budget Director Darman who said jobless benefits encourage people to become unemployed. It was the junior Senator from Texas who tried to spook us into giving up by threatening to delay the recess until next Thursday.

It was the President telling his Republican allies—vote for the bill, because I can rig it so the checks never get mailed. What cynicism. What heartlessness. What irresponsibility.

This morning, we heard stirring speeches from our Republican colleagues about how effective the President is overseas. This President is farsighted, no question about it. Not in the philosophical sense, but farsighted the way optometrists mean it.

The President can see suffering overseas but not when it is happening right before his eyes.

Mr. Speaker, $55 billion in help for disasters from Bangladesh to Kurdistan—aid to Egypt, Poland, Israel, Turkey, and the U.S. Information Agency—that sounds like an emergency. But what about the jobless here at home?

People like Margaret Jenkins—one of a number of jobless Americans I saw the other day. She's a 53-year-old woman. Worked for 35 years, and she spent the last 7 cleaning rooms in a hotel.

Raised seven children by working two jobs at the same time. Last September she was thrown out of work.

Her benefits ran out 4 months ago. And she needs our help, and so does her family.

What about Margaret Jenkins, and the people like her who live in New York, with unemployment at 7.1 percent? In Pennsylvania, with a jobless rate of 7 percent. In Texas at 6.7 percent and rising.

In Michigan with 8.3 percent. In Ohio, 6.9 percent and rising. In California at 7.6 percent. In Florida at 7.8 percent and rising.

In St. Louis, with 7.3 percent out of work. What do these people have to do to get the President's attention, move to the Balkans? For them, for the 8.5 million Americans out of work last month, the hope of finding jobs is dim.

Every economist concedes that unemployment lags beyond the recovery period after a recession.

The Labor Department's own findings show us that the unemployment rate only looks slightly better because some people are so fed up with chronic, long-term unemployment, that they have stopped looking any more—400,000 of them in today's report have simply given up.

And the Labor Department doesn't count these people any more; they are merely statistics to be discarded.

So now is the time to act, and to take actions that will make a real difference in the lives of the American people.

Not the deceit of a capital gains tax reduction; that will only widen the gap between the richest in this society and the rapidly shrinking and deeply despairing middle-class.

Not the absurdity of cutting more people from the Guaranteed Student Loan Program so that fewer middle class kids go to college.

Because the fact is, we need to cut middle class taxes and expand the number of their children who go on to higher education.

And Democrats expect to bring legislation that does those things to the floor next fall and next year.

But we can take concrete action today by throwing his modest lifeline to the people who expect this Government to keep the promise; the people who paid their unemployment taxes and who now rightly expect to receive their unemployment benefits.

And then, quite frankly, the spotlight will be on the President. A President who bowed his head in prayer on the West Front of this Capitol, and said, "Heavenly Father, write on our hearts these words: 'Use Power to help people'."

And we will look to that President and say to him: sign the bill, declare the emergency, use your enormous power to help the people who elected you.

Not just the Turkish people. Not just the Russian people. Not just the Kurdish people. Use your power to help the American people.

Declare the emergency, Mr. President. Keep your promise and fulfill your prayer. Use your power to help the American people.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. AUCOIN). The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, the majority leader has just spoken out of order for 5 minutes by unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. By unanimous consent, that is correct.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, is it going to set a precedent that we are going to extend debate in this manner in some other time? I thought debate had been concluded on the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair does not expect that any precedent has been set. A unanimous-consent request was made. No objection was heard. The Chair so ruled that the majority leader's unanimous consent to speak out of order for 5 minutes was granted.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, a further parliamentary inquiry. Is it not normal, however, in such situations to limit such speeches to 1 minute, rather than 5 minutes?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The unanimous consent, the Chair will state to the gentleman, was for the majority leader to be recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WALKER. So in the future the Chair will entertain further unanimous-consent requests for 5-minute speeches in the middle of the day?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will further state that there are no normal requests for unanimous consent when the previous question has been ordered. There is no normal time period for recognition, although the Speaker has in the past recognized the majority or minority leaders to request unanimous consent to speak out of order.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the Chair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 375, nays 45, not voting 13, as follows:

Mr. JONES of North Carolina (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I will not object, I make this reservation for the purpose of allowing the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. JONES] to explain what is in the bill.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. LENT].

Mr. Speaker, the bill authorizes the appropriation of $17,974,000 for the Federal Maritime Commission for fiscal year 1992. This amount, which was approved by both the House and Senate, is identical to the administration's budget request.

H.R. 1006 authorizes the Secretary of Transportation to issue certificates of documentation in the coastwise and fisheries trades of the United States for a number of privately owned vessels.

It also waives coastwise trading restrictions for the sulphur tanker, Nordic Louisiana. This will permit this British-built ship to temporarily operate in the United States coastwise trade until a vessel to replace the United States-built vessel, the Louisiana Brimstone, is built.

This waiver is conditioned upon the construction of, or rebuilding of, this replacement vessel in the United States within 4 years. All repair work on the Nordic Louisiana must be performed in the United States, and its officers and crew must be United States citizens.

Finally, the bill amends the Shipping Act of 1984 to require that service contracts entered into by State-controlled carriers be subject to the same standards applicable to all other rates filed in the tariffs of such carriers.

Section 16 of the 1984 Shipping Act authorizes the FMC to exempt specified activities from requirements of the statute, if it makes certain findings. We all recognize that Congress did not intend for this provision to be used to make fundamental or substantial changes in the regulation of our ocean commerce.

The Advisory Commission on Conferences in Ocean Shipping is currently undertaking a review of the Shipping Act of 1984. This Commission is composed of a broad range of private citizen members from every segment of the ocean shipping world, as well as Members of Congress and the executive branch.

In April 1992, this advisory body, created by Congress, will report to the President and the Congress its "recommendations for such administrative, judicial, and legislative action as it deems advisable." As a member of the Advisory Commission, I support its important work and urge that neither Congress nor the regulatory agency preempt any aspect of its mandate.

Mr. Speaker, I commend the Chairman and members of the Federal Maritime Commission for their timely and vigorous application of the Foreign Shipping Practices Act. On July 22, 1991, The Commission began a formal investigation into allegations that China imposes severe burdens on United States ocean carriers doing business in that country. This proceeding must be completed in 120 days.

China wants to keep most-favored-nation status. President Bush wants China to have it. In return, the United States must insist that China not impose unfair burdens on United States companies doing business in China. The FMC is playing an important role in this area.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly support the bill, H.R. 1006, as amended by the Senate, and urge its immediate passage.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I strongly endorse the gentleman's request and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. AUCOIN). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the initial request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the legislation just considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 991) to extend the expiration date of the Defense Production Act of 1950, and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The Senate amendment struck out all of the House bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The Senate recedes from its amendment.

SECTION 2 OF THE HOUSE BILL

This section extends the non-permanent provisions of Titles I, III, and VII of the Act to September 30, 1991.

SECTION 3 OF THE HOUSE BILL

This section authorizes appropriations for programs under section 301, 302 and 303 of the Act.

SECTION 4 OF THE HOUSE BILL

This section repeals section 708A of the Defense Production Act. The only remaining effective provision in section 708A is subsection (c), which prohibits the use of voluntary agreements under section 708 to implement any international agreement relating to petroleum products to which the United States is a party. Repeal of section 708A would rectify this situation.

SECTION 5 OF THE HOUSE BILL

This section would make several technical amendments to section 708 of the Defense Production Act, which governs antitrust treatment of emergency actions initiated by the President. There would be an affirmative defense to federal antitrust enforcement for any participant in the formulation or implementation of a voluntary agreement or a "plan of action" to implement such an agreement. The defense would apply only to conduct within the scope of an agreement or plan initiated by the President, and only if the conduct is actively supervised by the President or his designee. These requirements embody the concept of "Federal Action" under which a private actor is insulated from antitrust exposure provided that a government entity expressly authorizes the conduct involved and actively supervises it. The party asserting the defense has the burden of proving that the requisite elements are met. The defense is not available under this section if the party against whom the defense is asserted shows that any part of the conduct was undertaken for the purpose of violating the antitrust laws.

There would also be an affirmative defense to a breach of contract suit in State or Federal court, if the alleged breach was predominantly caused by action undertaken during an emergency to carry out a voluntary agreement or plan of action authorized and approved in accordance with the provisions of the Defense Production Act. The party asserting the defense would still be obligated to mitigate damages "to the fullest extent possible."

Other amendments made to section 708 of the Defense Production Act by this section exempt activities conducted under a properly approved voluntary agreement or plan of action from the Federal Advisory Committee Act, enhance various "sunshine" requirements in the voluntary agreement and plan of action process, and modify public access requirements regarding transcripts of advisory committee meetings in order to protect confidential or proprietary information.

SECTION 6 OF THE HOUSE BILL

This section makes it clear that the DPA's contract priority and allocation provisions in both section 101(a) and 101(c) apply to "service" contracts. This section also eliminates some reporting requirements that must accompany the use of section 101(c) authority.

SECTION 7 OF THE HOUSE BILL

Section 7 of the bill provides for retroactive effect of the extension to October 20, 1990.

SECTION 8 OF THE HOUSE BILL

Section 8 removes section 721 from the sunset provisions of the Act, thus making permanent the so-called Exon-Florio authority. From the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs for consideration of the House bill, and title I of the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference:

Mr. CARPER. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 991) to extend the expiration date of the Defense Production Act of 1950, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the conference report be considered as read, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Delaware?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, DPA stands for the Defense Production Act, a law providing the Federal Government with priority claims on industrial production in case of war or national emergency. But lately DPA has meant "Don't Pass Anything," and that's exactly what happened last year. The law has been expired since October 20, 1990, and even this short-term extension was until recently held up in conference.

While it is true that our Government successfully conducted a war in the interim, that conflict was mercifully short and occurred during a time of relatively slack demand for goods—thanks to our recession. The authority is still needed in case the next conflict presents a more adverse situation. Today we bring to the floor a short-term extension that will plug the gap until the House and the Senate pass a long-term DPA bill. Just this week the full committee passed such a long-term extension and we look forward to receiving it on the floor in the near future.

This short-term extension is a modest bill. It will provide the Secretary of Defense the needed authority to contract for defense-related goods. It makes changes to existing authority for the Federal Government to call on the expertise of private-sector energy experts to help with energy policy in times of conflict. Finally, it permanently extends the Exon-Florio law, which allows the President to review and potentially block foreign acquisitions of domestic producers where such an acquisition negatively affects national security. The recent on-again, off-again status of Exon-Florio has needlessly complicated the review process, and the uncertainty has prevented at least one domestic firm from obtaining the necessary foreign investment it needed to grow. It is only fair that we have in place a precise system of review to protect our national security interests while not jeopardizing benign—sometimes crucial—foreign investment.

I also want to take this time to commend my colleague and friend, the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. CARPER] for the tremendous work he has done in breaking this procedural and substantive logjam in order to bring this matter before the floor today.

Mr. CARPER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIDGE. I yield to the gentleman from Delaware.

Mr. CARPER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me. It might be useful at this time to bring Members up to speed on the current status of the Defense Production Act and the nature of the measure before us.

The Defense Production Act expired on October 20, of last year, when the Senate was unable to agree to a conference report on a bill to reauthorize the act for 3 years. The Defense Production Act is law that gives the President the authority to prioritize defense contracts in times of emergency so that we can assure an adequate supply of necessary equipment, supplies and services. This act also provides assistance necessary to ensure a reliable domestic defense production base, capable of meeting demand for critical military items. And this act is home for the so-called Exon-Florio provision, which requires the President to review foreign acquisitions of U.S. companies which could compromise our national defense.

Since the Defense Production Act lapsed last October, this country has engaged in a blessedly short and successful war in the Persian Gulf. Had the conflict lasted any longer, we could well have found ourselves in grave military supply difficulties without this act in place. We were lucky, but we can't rely on luck; we must get the Defense Production Act up and running. That is what this conference report will enable us to do.

Among other things, this bill will carry the act forward to September 30 of this year, will make the provisions of the act retroactive to last October 20, and will provide for the permanent authorization of the essential Exon-Florio provisions.

This conference report reflects the House bill—exactly. The other body has agreed to accept our bill with no conditions. H.R. 991 passed the House early this year with only 18 dissenting votes. This is a good deal for the House, and I urge adoption of the conference report to accompany H.R. 991.

Mr. HOAGLAND. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIDGE. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. HOAGLAND. Mr. Speaker, let me just point out one particular feature of this bill, which I think is an excellent feature. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has already discussed this, and that is a permanent extension of the Exon-Florio provisions of our senior U.S. Senator from Nebraska, JIM EXON, along with Governor Florio of New Jersey, who were the original coauthors of this provision which requires a review when a foreign corporation attempts to purchase an American company or producer of materials that have defense significance, defense security significance.

This gives the Treasury Department, operating through a committee, the opportunity to deny that kind of a purchase if it threatens national security grounds.

As the gentleman from Pennsylvania pointed out, this provision expired in October before the gulf war and created considerable confusion.

I think it is a salutary provision in this bill to make the Exon-Florio amendment a permanent part of our law, and I think it is a particularly worthy provision in this legislation.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Delaware?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Delaware [Mr. CARPER] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RIDGE] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. CARPER].

Mr. CARPER. Mr. Speaker, I have no requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the conference report.

There was no objection.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NUTRITION INFORMATION AND LABELING ACT TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S. 1608) to make technical amendments to the Nutrition Information and Labeling Act, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, while I will not object, I make this reservation for the purpose of allowing the gentleman from California to explain briefly what is in the bill.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, the bill would extend certain effective dates that were included in the Nutrition Labeling and Education Act of 1991, enacted last fall. Under the bill, labels printed before July 1, 1991, would be exempt from the new requirements for ingredient labeling and disclosure of color additives. In addition, the requirement for percent of juice labeling would be extended until May 8, 1993, the effective date for the nutrition labeling provisions of the bill.

In addition, technical amendments are made to the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act and the Public Health Service Act.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I strongly support the gentleman's motion and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 1608

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. INGREDIENT LABELING.

Section 10(c) of the Nutrition Labeling and Education Act of 1990 (21 U.S.C. 343 note) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) SECTION 7.—

"(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), the amendments made by section 7 shall take effect one year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

"(2)(A) If a food subject to section 403(g) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act or a food with one or more colors required to be certified under section 706(c) bears a label which was printed before July 1, 1991, and which is attached to the food before May 8, 1993, such food shall not be subject to the amendments made by section 7(1) and section 7(3).

"(B) If a food described in subparagraph (A)—

"(i) bears a label which was printed after July 1, 1991, but before the date the proposed regulation described in clause (ii) takes effect as a final regulation and which was attached to the food before May 8, 1993, and

"(ii) meets the requirements of the proposed regulation of the Secretary of Health and Human Services published in 56 Fed. Reg. 28592-28636 (June 21, 1991) as it pertains to the amendments made by this Act, such food shall not be subject to the amendments made by section 7(1) and section 7(3).

"(3) A food purported to be a beverage containing a vegetable or fruit juice which bears a label attached to the food before May 8, 1993, shall not be subject to the amendments made by section 7(2)."

SEC. 2. TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.

(a) NUTRITION LABELING.—Section 403(q)(4)(A) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (as added by section 2(a) of the Nutrition Labeling and Education Act of 1990) is amended by striking out "(C)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(D)".

(b) UNIFORM LABELING.—Section 403A(a)(5) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (as added by section 6 of the Nutrition Labeling and Education Act of 1990) is amended by striking out "clause (B) of such section" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 403(r)(5)(B)".

TERRY BEIRN COMMUNITY BASED AIDS RESEARCH INITIATIVE ACT OF 1991

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S. 1594), to honor and commend the efforts of Terry Beirn, to amend the Public Health Service Act to rename and make technical amendments to the community-based AIDS research initiative, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Cox of Illinois). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do so for the purpose of allowing the gentleman from California [Mr. WAXMAN] to explain the legislation.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, the bill will reauthorize the NIH Program for Community Trials for AIDS Drugs, and rename it in honor of Terry Beirn.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California for his explanation.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 1594

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Terry Beirn Community Based AIDS Research Initiative Act of 1991".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND SENSE OF CONGRESS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) community-based clinical trials complement the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases' university-based research in order to provide increased access to experimental therapies;

(2) community-based clinical trials provide an efficient and cost-effective means to develop new HIV-related treatments, benefiting all people living with HIV disease and other illnesses; and

(3) because the community-based clinical trials model has a proven ability to conduct rapid trials that meet the very highest standards of scientific inquiry, this program should be reauthorized and significantly expanded.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that, because of Terry Beirn's tireless efforts to foster a partnership among all parties invested in AIDS research (including the National Institutes of Health university-based research system, primary care physicians practicing in the community, and patients), the community-based clinical trials program should be renamed as the "Terry Beirn Community-Based AIDS Research Initiative" in his honor.

SEC. 3. COMMUNITY-BASED EVALUATIONS OF EXPERIMENTAL THERAPIES.

Section 2313 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300cc-13) is amended—

(1) in the section heading to read as follows:

(2) in subsection (c)—

(A) by amending the subsection heading to read as follows: "PARTICIPATION OF PRIVATE INDUSTRY, SCHOOLS OF MEDICINE AND PRIMARY PROVIDERS"; and

(B) by striking out "schools of medicine and osteopathic medicine" and inserting in lieu thereof "schools of medicine, osteopathic medicine, and existing consortia of primary care providers organized to conduct clinical research concerning acquired immune deficiency syndrome"; and

(3) in subsection (e)—

(A) by striking out "1991" in paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "1996"; and

EXPRESSING GRATITUDE TO FEDERAL CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES FOR CONTRIBUTIONS TO OPERATIONS DESERT SHIELD AND DESERT STORM

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service be discharged from further consideration of the Senate concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 36) expressing gratitude of Congress to the Nation's Federal civilian employees for their contributions to Operation Desert Shield and Operation Desert Storm and commending and congratulating the Nation's Federal civilian employees on a job superbly done, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do so simply to acknowledge the author and chief sponsor of the resolution, the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER], who obviously has put a full court press on to secure the requisite number of cosponsors. I appreciate the good efforts of the gentleman.

I yield to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER].

Mr. HOYER. Mr. President, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania for his generosity, and the leadership of my good friend, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER], the chairman of the committee. Both gentlemen have been very cooperative on this effort.

Mr. Speaker, this simply states that we are all very proud of our uniformed personnel and the way in which they performed in the Desert Storm and Desert Shield effort. There is no doubt that all of us who went there were incredibly proud of their dedication, of their ability, of their understanding of their mission, and their commitment.

At the same time, all of us are very aware of the fact that without support personnel, without all of the real hundreds of thousands of civilian employees in the Federal service, with an equal amount of commitment and talent, dedicating their services to this effort, we could not have been successful.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution simply observes that fact, and congratulates them on their dedication and their effort.

I again want to thank the leadership of the subcommittee for allowing us, before we go home in August, to pass this resolution, and congratulate them on their efforts and the role they played in our successful prosecution of Desert Storm.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, continuing my reservation of objection, I yield to my friend, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER].

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, and pause at this moment only to reiterate the congratulations to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER], whose dedication and commitment and understanding of his mission today made possible this important recognition.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate concurrent resolution, as follows:

S. CON. RES. 36

Whereas American and Allied forces were resoundingly successful in carrying out their mandate to liberate Kuwait pursuant to United Nations Security Council resolutions;

Whereas a key factor in bringing that outcome about was the transporting of over 500,000 United States troops, almost half a million tons of ammunition, and approximately 100,000 motorized vehicles to the Persian Gulf region, representing the most massive movement of troops, supplies, and materiel that the world has ever seen, and which could not have been achieved without the tireless efforts of this Nation's Federal civilian employees;

Whereas more than 4,000 Federal civilian employees were relocated to work in the Persian Gulf theater of operations, over 20,000 Federal civilian employees were called to active duty as reservists, and thousands of other Federal civilian employees in the United States and around the world contributed to the war effort in ways too many to enumerate;

Whereas Federal civilian employees, despite seemingly insurmountable logistical problems, unrelenting pressure, and severe time constraints, successfully accomplished what this Nation asked of them in a manner consistent with the highest standards of excellence and professionalism; and

Whereas Federal civilian employees are truly among the unsung heroes in Operation Desert Shield and Operation Desert Storm: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress hereby—

(1) expresses its deepest gratitude to this Nation's Federal civilian employees for their contributions to Operation Desert Shield and Operation Desert Storm; and

(2) commends and congratulates this Nation's Federal civilian employees on a job superbly done.

The Senate concurrent resolution was concurred in; a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

H.R. 3084. THE AFFORDABLE HEALTH INSURANCE ACT OF 1991: A FREE MARKET APPROACH TO A GROWING NATIONAL PROBLEM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. DANNEMEYER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, on July 29, 1991, I introduced the Affordable Health Insurance Act of 1991. It would provide sorely needed relief to those who have been priced out of the market for health insurance by reforming the Tax Code to create a level playing field across different types of employment settings and by encouraging health care consumers to self-insure for small out-of-pocket health expenses. My proposal would also eliminate distortions in the marketplace caused by the proliferation of State insurance mandates.

INTRODUCTION

In 1950, national expenditures on health care totaled $12 billion, or only 4.4 percent of the gross national product [GNP]. The vast majority of this spending came from private sources, predominately from private insurers and direct payments by individuals. Since then, the governmental role in providing health care has expanded enormously through the Medicare and Medicaid programs; consequently, total health care expenditures have absorbed an ever-increasing share of GNP. In 1990, total spending is expected to reach $653 billion, and consume approximately 12 percent of total GNP.

What accounts for the explosion in the cost of health care and the public's growing frustration with the quality and cost of the care they receive? Some observers attribute these steady increases to the proliferation of third party payments by Government and private insurers. With an ever greater share of health care transactions occurring through third parties, consumers have lost the incentive to question the need for the care they receive, or the prices charged for it.

One unfortunate and unintended result of the rise of the third-party payer is the increasing number of Americans who cannot afford or gain access to basic health insurance.

THE UNINSURED

According to data collected by the Department of Health and Human Services, 37 million Americans cannot afford even the most basic health insurance. The vast majority of these individuals—78 percent—either work or live in families with a breadwinner and almost 60 percent work in businesses with fewer than 100 employees. In fact, workers in small businesses with 25 or fewer employees are much more likely to be uninsured than employees in large firms.

The Employee Benefit Research Institute [EBRI] conducted a similar survey and found that an even greater percentage of individuals without health insurance were attached to the work force—85 percent. Almost one-half of the uninsured, moreover, worked either on a self-employed basis or in firms with fewer than 25 employees.

That so many of the uninsured have a direct link to someone in the labor force suggests that the source of the problem lies in the health care marketplace itself. Full-time workers and their families should be able to afford basic, no-frills health insurance policies with coverage for catastrophic and major medical expenses. Unfortunately, it appears that these workers have been priced out of the market for health insurance by Federal and State policies which provide tax incentives for some, but not all, workers and which require workers to pay for coverage that they may not want or need. Both of these problems must be addressed in order to remedy the current situation.

THE EFFECT OF STATE MANDATES ON THE COST OF HEALTH INSURANCE

Many experts attribute the difficulty that small business employees encounter in obtaining health insurance to the proliferation of State mandates on consumers. Mandates are nothing more than concessions to special interests looking to coerce millions of consumers into purchasing coverage for specific diseases or health services, whether they want that coverage or not. John Goodman of the National Center for Policy Analysis in Dallas found that the total number of mandates exploded from 30 in 1970 to about 700 in 1988, and to more than 800 today.

Mandated services include those provided by chiropractors, psychologists, optometrists, podiatrists, nurse midwives, social workers, acupuncturists, naturopaths, and dieticians. Other mandates require consumers to purchase coverage for alcoholism, drug addiction, AIDS, mental illness, and even the accidental ingestion of cocaine, marijuana, morphine, hallucinatory drugs, and other controlled substances.

What has been the result of all these mandates? Unfortunately, millions of hard working Americans have discovered that the cost of even the most basic health insurance policy is beyond their reach. The National Center for Policy Analysis estimates that 32 percent of the 5 million Californians who were without health insurance in 1986 were priced out of the marketplace by State mandates. In some States, as many as 60 percent of the uninsured are the victims of mandates. Nationwide, up to one-quarter of the uninsured—9.3 million in all—would be able to afford basic, no-frills health insurance if some or all of these mandates were repealed.

The States have begun to realize the enormous cost of this approach. Since the beginning of 1990, 15 State legislatures have enacted measures to enable insurers to market basic, no-frills insurance plans. Ten others are considering such plans. The sponsor of the Rhode Island plan estimates that it would reduce the cost of health insurance by 30 percent. In Virginia, a proposal would allow insurers to market mandate-exempt policies to businesses with fewer than 50 employees. This has prompted Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Virginia to offer a no-frills policy for an adult with one child that would cover 30 days of hospitalization and preventive care at an annual cost of $1,644, about half the $3,168 it now costs to purchase a standard major medical policy in Virginia.

By driving up the minimum cost of health insurance policies, these mandates have forced millions of insurable Americans out of the marketplace entirely. It is the obligation of Government to offer consumers a choice in the purchase of health insurance; no person should be forced to pay for coverage that he does not want.

My legislation would address this part of the problem by preempting the hundreds of State mandates now in existence and allowing insurers to develop a wide range of policies, such as the no-frills policies described above.

THE NEED FOR A LEVEL PLAYING FIELD

The Federal Tax Code also contributes to the problem of the uninsured. Under current law, a large employer can bypass all State mandates simply by self-insuring under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act [ERISA], which entitles employees to receive an unlimited package of health benefits on a tax-free basis. Estimates of the average annual value of this benefit vary, but appear to be close to $2,750 per employee. As one might expect, the cost of these plans has skyrocketed; Foster Higgins estimates that the average cost of employer medical plans increased 20.4 percent in 1989. In some industries, the average cost per employee now exceeds $3,300 per year.

Many companies provide their employees with complete, first dollar coverage for a wide array of benefits; in fact, in 1989 the single greatest obstacle to a settlement in the strikes against the regional Bell operating companies was the nature and extent of the employees' health benefits package. In one instance, union negotiators accepted a cut of $125 million in wages and other benefits in exchange for continued first dollar health insurance coverage.

Sophisticated union negotiators would not sacrifice substantial salary gains if there were some sort of ceiling on the tax exclusion for employer provided benefits. The unlimited nature of the benefit, in fact, has seduced employees in self-insured firms to shift compensation away from salary and accept enhanced health benefits packages in its stead. Employer contributions for group health insurance accounted for only 0.8 percent of the employee's compensation in 1955. By 1987, that share had increased to 5.1 percent. According to the House Ways and Means Committee, the tax exemption for employer-provided coverage will cost the Federal Treasury $32.6 billion in 1990, $37.7 billion in 1992, and $45.1 billion by 1994.

Thus, employees in large, self-insured firms receive generous tax subsidies for unlimited, gold-plated coverage, while their counterparts in small firms enjoy no comparable incentives and must purchase coverage with after-tax dollars. Stuart M. Butler of the Heritage Foundation believes that this inequity "encourages the healthy and wealthy to demand excessive insurance, while leaving millions of others with no protection at all."

A comprehensive solution to the problem of the uninsured will correct this inequity by placing a ceiling on the exemption of employer provided benefits from the employee's income. The ceilings in my bill are high enough to protect coverage for major medical and catastrophic expenses. Of course, consumers would still be permitted to purchase more extensive coverage, but they would do so with after-tax dollars. Many employees would undoubtedly opt to scale back their coverage in exchange for more income. The Tax Code should not provide an incentive for individuals to overinsure, and thereby place additional inflationary pressure on the health care system.

The Joint Tax Committee estimates that the generous ceiling in H.R. 3084 of approximately $3,700 per employee per year for family coverage and $1,500 per employee per year for individual coverage would increase federal revenues by $86.1 billion over 5 years, and by $24.1 billion in 1996 alone. The Congressional Budget Office [CBO] speculates that such a reform would discourage workers from demanding additional coverage beyond the ceiling. "Without such coverage," CBO concludes, "there would be stronger incentives to economize in the medical marketplace, thereby reducing upward pressure on medical care prices."

CHOICES IN HEALTH INSURANCE

It is the obligation of the Federal Government to guarantee that all full-time workers, even those with earnings at or slightly above the minimum wage, can afford basic insurance coverage for themselves and their families. If governmental intrusions into the marketplace raise the cost of health care and insurance to an unacceptable and unaffordable level, as I believe they have, it is the obligation of the Congress to eliminate these distortions and restore the integrity of the free market.

A comprehensive solution should guarantee that the Tax Code provide adequate incentives to working persons who want to purchase health insurance and do not receive this benefit from their employers. It should also encourage relatives to help less fortunate family members purchase insurance.

These tax incentives should not be unlimited. Thus, the Tax Code should provide generous incentives for the purchase of no-frills, major medical coverage, but the incentive should stop there. The unlimited nature of the tax exemption for employer provided health benefits encourages employees to use health services that they may not need and regardless of their cost. This, in turn, fuels the inflationary spiral of health care, which has increased at twice the rate of inflation for most of the last three decades. Our Tax Code should not further encourage this trend.

To make such a ceiling attractive to taxpayers, employers would be strongly encouraged to offer employees the option of receiving the taxable portion of their package as additional salary in exchange for reduced coverage.

Employees who work for small firms and the self-employed comprise a disproportionately large share of the uninsured population. The Tax Code should provide them with an incentive to purchase health coverage that approximates the incentive available to those who work for self-insured employers. The ability to obtain affordable health insurance should not be a function of an individual's employment setting. Thus, a comprehensive, market-based initiative to expand the availability of health insurance must give employees in these categories a generous tax credit for the purchase of health insurance policies.

In addition, it is essential that our Tax Code provide strong incentives for taxpayers to self-insure for small out-of-pocket expenses through a device similar to an individual retirement account. Such an account would permit taxpayers to receive a second tax credit for contributions to a savings account with interest accruing on a tax-free basis, provided that withdrawals are used for health expenses. This credit would be available to all taxpayers, even those who receive their health coverage through their employers.

The Affordable Health Insurance Act of 1991 contains the following provisions:

Preempt State insurance mandates with respect to: first, diseases and disabilities; second, medical services; third, types of health care providers and provider organizations; and fourth, maximum or minimum levels of deductibles, coinsurance payments or payment rates. State insurance mandates have priced too many workers out of the health insurance marketplace. Consumers should not have to pay for coverage they do not want.

Establish a generous tax credit for the purchase of no-frills health insurance policies. The size of the credit, which would be refundable to low-income taxpayers, has been set according to the age of the taxpayer and would approximate the cost of a no-frills health insurance policy with a high deductible in a medium cost state.

Create health care savings accounts. To encourage taxpayers to self insure for small, out-of-pocket medical expenses, my bill will offer taxpayers a second tax credit for contributions of up to $825 for an individual and $1,650 for a married couple to an account similar in concept to an individual retirement account. Interest would accumulate on a tax-free basis so long as the taxpayer uses the proceeds for eligible medical expenses. Only taxpayers who have purchased health insurance can take advantage of this device.

Enable employees who receive health benefits from their employers to trade any unwanted benefits for additional salary. By placing a ceiling on the tax subsidy for employer-provided health benefits, my bill will enable employees who receive unwanted coverage to accept a scaled back package of benefits in exchange for additional salary. The Federal Government should not underwrite the cost of unnecessary or frivolous insurance coverage.

To provide low income families with the same tax benefits as more affluent families, both tax credits mentioned above would be refundable. This means that a family with tax liability that is less than the value of the credit would receive money back from the IRS.

In an era of $400 billion deficits, it is imperative that any comprehensive health insurance proposal be revenue neutral, that is, it should neither increase nor decrease Federal tax revenues. According to the Joint Tax Committee, my proposal is revenue neutral over the next 5 fiscal years.

We must recognize that, from a Federal budgetary perspective, we are living in lean times. The problem with our health care system, we must remember, is not a function of scarce resources—devoting 12 percent of our GNP to health care is more than enough.

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION ANNUAL REPORT, 1990—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Cox of Illinois). Laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

INTRODUCTION OF MIDDLE INCOME EDUCATION OPPORTUNITY ACT OF 1991

(Mr. ANDREWS of New Jersey asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute, to revise and extend his remarks, and to include extraneous material.)

Mr. ANDREWS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, our higher education policy has reached this point in the United States: If you own a home and if you have a decent income, your children are not eligible for Federal financial aid. We have to stop that.

Today, I am pleased to be introducing a bill that I believe will take a significant step in that direction. The Middle Income Education Opportunity Act of 1991 takes existing Federal loan programs and folds them into one new program that uses direct lending and borrowing by the Federal Government to cut out the middlemen, to cut out the bureaucrats and shift dollars from bureaucrats and deadbeats and bankers' profits to American families. It involves no tax increase. It involves no increase in Federal appropriations. It involves an increase in creative thinking to help educate the young people of this country.

Later today we will be voting on increased unemployment benefits, and I support that; but the long-range answer is to educate our people, make our economy grow, and the way to do that is to reopen the door of educational opportunity for middle class Americans.

Mr. Speaker, a summary of the bill is as follows:

ANDREWS DIRECT STUDENT LENDING BILL

This legislation replaces the Stafford, Supplemental Student Loan (SLS), Parent Loans for Undergraduate Students (PLUS) and Income Contingent Demonstration Loans with a program of direct Federal educational lending for all families.

The credit reform provisions of the Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 now track just the taxpayer subsidies in all Federal loan programs. Thus, it is now possible for the government to obtain capital for its largest student loan program at wholesale prices rather than the retail rates now paid for guaranteed student loan (GSL) capital.

The U.S. Department of Education (ED) estimates that substituting direct loans for the GSL Stafford, SLS, and PLUS programs will cost the taxpayers $1.4 billion less in the first year than the same programs which have operated as loan guarantee programs. The estimated savings for four years amount to $6.6 billion.

The bill has a number of important provisions which, in addition to being less costly to taxpayers, will improve benefits for students with financial need. Additionally, it will expand loan eligibility for middle income parents and simplify the application process for students and institutions.

Like the GSL program, direct loans will be an entitlement under the mandatory part of the budget and there will be no limit on the amount of capital that will be available. Capital availability will be determined by student and parent eligibility.

Student eligibility for subsidized direct loans will be based on financial need and loan limits will be increased (See ACE proposal and Administration FY 92 budget request).

Student eligibility for direct SLS loans will be similar to the current SLS program.

Parent eligibility for direct PLUS loans will continue to have no financial need test and the amount borrowed will be increased from $4,000 to the cost of education less any financial aid received by the student.

Interest rates will be similar to the current GSL program, except that student interest rates will not exceed 8% in the subsidized program. (Under GSL, the rate increases from 8% to 10% in the fifth year of repayment.) There will be no student origination fee (currently 5%), and students will not be charged insurance premiums (currently up to 3%).

The Secretary will be required to offer students income contingent, graduated and conventional repayment plans.

Parent loan interest rates will be continued at the existing PLUS program level. Interest income over cost of funds will be used, in part, to both help offset administrative costs and cover any defaults in the program.

The direct loan program will be financed through the sale of government securities by the Secretary of the Treasury and counted in the budget under the provisions of credit reform.

The Secretary of Education will receive the proceeds from Treasury sales and authorize the funds of eligible institutions of post-secondary education.

On behalf of the government, institutions will determine student and parent eligibility, prepare necessary promissory notes and allocate funds to students following procedures similar to the Perkins Loan Program.

Institutions will transmit the signed promissory notes to ED which will have responsibility for servicing and collection, including the use of IRS offsets on defaulters.

The Secretary of Education will operate the servicing aspects of the program through competitive, private sector contracts, including a contract for management of the national direct loan data system, servicing contracts, collection contracts, and a loan consolidation contract.

Institutions may, if they wish, form consortia to handle the disbursement and promissory note management function for them.

Institutions will be provided a $20 per loan administrative fee each year for each loan made.

To assure adequate administrative support for ED, student aid administrative costs will become a line item in appropriation bills.

Students who have Stafford or Perkins Loans and receive direct loans may choose to have their loans consolidated under direct lending authority.

Guarantee agencies will have their Administrative Cost Allowance (entitlement) changed from one percent of new loans made to .25% of loans outstanding. (Presently there are about $50 billion GSLs outstanding and approximately $10.8 billion new loans are made annually.)

Institutions will be authorized to invest Perkins loan collections in a designated institutional endowment or investment account. The income may then be used for student grant or work programs. Institutions will still be able to make need based loans from Perkins collections to students who demonstrate need after all grant and need based direct loan eligibility has been exhausted.

July 1, 1994, would be the earliest date for implementation of the direct loan program. Except for loan consolidation, no new GSLs would be authorized after the start up date for direct lending.

PAKISTANI OFFICIAL GUILTY OF SCURRILOUS, OUTRAGEOUS BIGOTRY

(Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, one always faces a dilemma when confronted with scurrilous bigotry. The dilemma is that you fear if you talk about it, talk about how scurrilous it is, you may be giving it further circulation. But sometimes it is necessary to do that.

I think this is one of those times. The Sindh Provincial Chief Minister in Pakistan, Minister Ali, has just added insult to injury, to the injury that was caused by the corrupt activities of the Bank of Commerce and Credit: He has added blatant anti-Semitism by blaming the closing of BCCI on the Jews. The chief minister of a major state in Pakistan, one of our major allies, scurrilously, outrageously, in the most bigoted fashion claims that efforts to end this corrupt enterprise, the BCCI, were somehow part of a Jewish conspiracy.

I am hesitant to give any further currency to this, but when the responsible official of a major nation engages in this kind of vicious comment, I think it is important that it be refuted, particularly when it has been given circulation in newspapers and elsewhere.

So I would ask, Mr. Speaker, that the very thoughtful comments of the Anti-Defamation League refuting this vile lie be printed here, and I would hope that our Government would make very clear to the Pakistani Government our extreme unhappiness at this sort of bigotry indulged in by an elected official in what is supposed to be one of our allied nations.

NEW YORK, NY, August 1.—Anti-Semitic and anti-Israel comments made by a Pakistani official while defending the founder of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International were termed "outrageous and despicable" today by the Anti-Defamation League.

Jam Dadoq Ali, the Sindh Provincial Chief Minister, blamed the closing of B.C.C.I. on the "West and Israel" in a statement claiming that Aga Hassan Abedi, the bank's founder, will not be extradited to New York where he was indicted by a grand jury on Monday.

"B.C.C.I. was a third world bank, and it took to the challenge of breaking a hegemonic control of the Jewish lobby on the world's financial institutions," Ali said.

In a statement issued here, Abraham H. Foxman, ADL's national director, said: "These remarks, while outrageous and despicable, are not surprising in light of the Pakistani government's long history of publicly expressed anti-Semitism. What is incredible is that Pakistan has no Jews, yet anti-Semitic and anti-Israel propaganda abound."

The ADL leader urged "all international regulatory agencies responsible for investigating B.C.C.I. to protest the rebirth of this age-old brand of bigotry."

AREA HEALTH EDUCATION CENTERS

(Mr. STENHOLM asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the House Rural Health Care Coalition, which I have the privilege of co-chairing, it is my pleasure to introduce today a bill suggesting reauthorization language for the Area Health Education Center [AHEC] program, which is part of the larger title VII of the Public Health Service Act which will be coming before us for consideration later this year.

Twenty years ago, the AHEC concept was proposed as a new type of regional education and training center which would link university health science centers with medically underserved communities in order to improve access to health care services. The recruitment, training, and retention of health care professionals has been the focus of AHEC's ever since. Programs encompass allied health, for example, physical therapy, occupational therapy, laboratory technology, dentistry, medicine, mental health, nursing, pharmacy, public health, social work, et cetera.

While Federal grants are made to university health science centers, those universities work with several regional AHEC's, and each AHEC Program then works with a number of individual communities in rural counties or inner city neighborhoods. AHEC's are prime examples of the positive possibilities of "States as laboratories," with each program having a unique approach to the health care personnel shortage problem. A very partial list of AHEC programs includes student rotations of medical or nursing students, enabling off-campus degrees for all types of health care personnel, continuing education, technical assistance or professional support services to practitioners in underserved communities, increasing the number of minority citizens in health careers through high school recruiting efforts, and library and information services.

Senators MCCAIN, GRAHAM, and BENTSEN are simultaneously introducing the companion to this bill in the other body today. I particularly want to commend the good work and support of Senator MCCAIN for this program.

I am submitting for the RECORD a brief outline of the bill I am introducing today, and I urge my colleagues to support this worthwhile program.

AREA HEALTH EDUCATION CENTERS

I. BASIC AHEC PROGRAM

The Basic AHEC Program would be reauthorized to allow for continuation of three types of projects: new starts, completion of existing obligations, and special initiatives. While the reauthorization should continue to allow for new starts, long term funding of AHEC should recognize that most states have now gotten into AHEC activities and less new-project money will be necessary. The reauthorization should allow for completion of existing obligations, but should require a more stringent state match, so that states will be matching 1-for-1 by the seventh year of the project. In the past, the modest grants for Special Initiatives have stimulated many new and creative ideas for AHECs. With the decrease in the need for new-start money, we encourage an increase for Special Initiative projects. (Authorization levels: FY92—$23 mil; '93—$23 mil; '94—$21 mil; '95—$19 mil; '96—$17 mil)

II. HEALTH EDUCATION AND TRAINING CENTER (HETC)

The HETC program's primary goal is to improve the supply, distribution, quality and efficiency of personnel providing health services to hispanic and other underserved population, especially along the United States-Mexico border. The reauthorization language would continue the HETC program in its established format, and would encourage the participation of a School of Public Health if one exists in the HETC service region. (Authorization levels: FY92—$6 mil; '93—$12 mil; '94—$16 mil; '95—$17 mil; '96—$18 mil)

III. STATE-SUPPORTED AHEC'S

For the 21 projects currently receiving federal AHEC funding from the current appropriation of about $18 million, there is a state/local match that ranges from 25-84 percent for the various projects. For the 15 projects which no longer received federal funding, there is a wide range of state/local support.

The new program concept suggested for this reauthorization would further encourage the participation of states in the funding of AHECs. The new responsibility on the states would be 30% financial support in the first year, 40% in the second, and 50% in the third. The benefit to the states, however, is the guarantee of continuing 50% support from the federal government from year three on, as opposed to federal funding being eliminated in later years of a project. (Authorization levels: FY92—$12 mil; '93—$24 mil; '94—$30 mil; '95—$36 mil; '96—$42 mil).

MFN TRADE STATUS FOR CHINA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAY] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. RAY. Mr. Speaker, I have taken out this special order to give a full account of an unfair trade practice which is resulting in the destruction of a critical industry in America.

Tuesday morning, while reading through the Washington Post I came across a disturbing article on China's campaign to evade United States textile quotas.

At that time I spoke on the floor and condemned the actions of the Chinese Government. In my statement, I mentioned a study recently released by the Department of Defense on the ability of the American textile industry to support mobilization efforts. I would like to submit for the RECORD one of the tables of this study which clearly highlights some of the deficiencies in our textile and apparel industry.

In this regard, I would like to commend the work that has been done in both the House and the Senate regarding trade with the Chinese. The actions taken in the Congress reflect a deep concern over the fate of American industry, and the unfair trade practices of the Chinese Government.

China has enjoyed normalized trade—MFN status—with the United States since 1980. Such trade status entitles foreign countries to tariff rates approximately one-tenth of what they would pay without it. Under current U.S. trade law, Communist countries which do not allow free emigration are prohibited from receiving MFN status. However, the President has annually waived this requirement, concluding that denial of MFN status is working toward more liberal emigration policies.

Rather than indicate that the People's Republic of China would end oppression, brutality, and human rights violations which culminated in the Tiananmen Square massacre, or investigate and end its illegal trade practices, Premier Li Peng recently indicated that without a renewal of MFN trade status China would retaliate against American Companies, specifically the Boeing Co.

I believe that the actions of the Chinese Government warrant investigation and are not indicative of the kind of cooperative relationship envisioned when MFN was renewed last year. I am both shocked and appalled at the blatant disregard the Chinese Government has shown for human rights and normal trade relationships. America cannot turn a blind eye to this behavior. We must protect both the American workers from unfair trade practices, and the Chinese citizen's inherent right to a life free from coercion and exploitation.

INTRODUCTION OF THE HEALTH INSURANCE COVERAGE AND COST CONTAINMENT ACT OF 1991

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing H.R. 3205, the Health Insurance Coverage and Cost Containment Act of 1991, on behalf of millions of hard-working men and women and millions more with no health insurance at all.

The Committee on Ways and Means has devoted the better part of the past year to learning about the problems of our Nation's health system. We've held a committee retreat on the subject, convened a series of hearings on long-term health strategies, and caucused among ourselves. A number of my colleagues—both on and off the committee—have introduced health care reform proposals. One bill memorializes the recommendations of the Pepper Commission; others follow the Canadian model, propose to nationalize Medicare or turn to an employer-based universal plan.

Today, to further the debate and focus discussions on a specific option, I am proposing an employer-based universal health plan that by 1996 will assure health insurance coverage for every American. And, consistent with my long-standing commitment to sound budget discipline, the costs of this bill are fully financed to assure the Federal deficit is not increased and the paygo requirements of the Budget Enforcement Act are met.

In introducing this bill, I want to make clear that I do not view this legislation as my last word on health care reform. Changes will certainly be made as the legislative process moves forward. As chairman, I intend to remain flexible regarding modifications that undoubtedly will be necessary as we seek to develop a political consensus and broaden public acceptance.

I also will continue my valued discussions with Senator LLOYD BENTSEN, to see if we can jointly agree on a more incremental health care package. From my perspective, that would be very desirable and would serve the public interest. What is needed now more than anything is to start a serious discussion about specific legislative approaches to health care reform. To encourage that discussion, I plan to hold hearings in October on this bill, and several other specific proposals for universal health coverage.

Approximately 150 million American workers and their dependents have health insurance today through their employer. An additional 20 million are self-insured. Government is the health insurance provider for nearly 34 million Medicare beneficiaries and another 23 million Americans who rely on Medicaid for their health care. The remainder, almost 34 million of our fellow citizens, have no health care coverage at all.

Even with approximately 227 million Americans having some form of health insurance, Americans of every income level are worried. The ranks of the uninsured or inadequately insured are growing steadily while the costs of health care skyrocket. In the process, health care has become a middle class issue.

It's no longer a question of what we can do for those unfortunate fellow citizens among us who have no health coverage. Today, sadly, it strikes much closer to home. For many, health care has now become a question of self-protection—what can I do to guarantee that my health insurance won't disappear precisely when I need it the most? Polls tell us that when it comes to health care, Americans are most frightened of losing coverage or facing a catastrophic illness that could wipe them out financially. They are asking for our help.

Coverage and access issues are not the only problems. The American people also want us to come to grips with the astronomical costs of health care. As long as health care costs continue to rise at 8 to 10 percent a year faster than the rate of inflation, as long as health spending consumes 12 percent or more of our gross national product, doomsday is just around the corner. How can America hope to compete in the world economy if more and more of our national resources are being consumed on health care? Clearly, real cost control must figure prominently in any reform effort—and real cost control is a major part of the bill I am introducing today.

The debate on how to provide universal health coverage will be a tough one. There are no cheap or easy answers and, at the moment, there is no broad consensus. Today, I am pleased to add this important proposal to the growing list of alternative solutions.

The bill is both comprehensive and responsible. It proposes to phase-in a pay-or-play health insurance system which would require each employer to choose from one of two options. Specifically, an employer would either have to provide private health insurance meeting certain minimum standards to all employees and dependents, or pay a payroll tax that would help finance a public health insurance plan which would in turn cover those employees.

At the outset, the payroll tax would be set at 9 percent of the Medicare wage base and indexed to the rate of growth in health benefits covered by the program. It is estimated that initially this will result in roughly 15 percent of employees participating in the public plan.

The plan would be phased in, starting first with larger employers, gradually adding smaller employers and ultimately covering all citizens by the fourth year. Employers and employees would share the premium or tax, with at least 80 percent paid by the employer, the remaining 20 percent by the worker. This is one of many ways to approach the transition to universal coverage. While I firmly believe that some appropriate transition is needed, for both policy and cost reasons, I welcome suggestions for alternative approaches.

Benefits under the plan would generally be the same as those available through Medicare. However, deductibles would be limited to $250 per individual and $500 per family and a limit would be set on out-of-pocket medical expenses to protect families from huge medical bills they cannot afford. Children's benefits and a pregnancy package would be added to the usual Medicare benefits, as would certain preventive services—colorectal screening, various immunizations, and additional mammography exams.

Another important feature of the bill is a gradual reduction in the age at which Americans qualify for Medicare. Under the bill, the age would be decreased annually from 65 to 60 over 5 years, providing significant new benefits to many early retirees and relieving many employers of a growing portion of their retiree health care liability. This retiree health feature is particularly important in light of the recent Federal Accounting Standards Board accounting change.

The bill also includes tough new cost containment provisions that, varied by type of provider, set annual targets for the rate of increase in the costs of overall health benefits. With health spending now consuming 12 percent of our Nation's GNP, strong cost containment is absolutely essential, and a critical part of this bill. One service that is not covered or subject to cost control in this bill is prescription drugs, even though I am very concerned about the recent rapid increase in drug costs. I invite comment in our hearings this fall on whether prescription drugs should be covered and subject to cost containment.

The bill also proposes to reform the group health insurance market by establishing standards for all group plans, prohibiting discrimination based on health status or medical history, and limiting exclusions for preexisting conditions to 6 months. In addition, no employer with less than 100 employees would be allowed to self-insure and insurers offering plans to small employers would have to offer year-round, open enrollment and community-rated premiums.

Another feature of the bill is a permanent extension of the present law 25-percent deduction that small businesses can take for certain health insurance costs. In addition, the bill would expand that deduction to 100 percent if the small business provides a Medicare-type benefit package that mirrors the benefits offered under this bill.

Mr. Speaker, the bill proposes to fund these benefits with a three-part revenue package. First, the Medicare wage base would be capped at $200,000 and the Medicare tax rate raised to 1.55 percent, effective January 1, 1993, and then to 1.65 percent on January 1, 1996. The revenue generated by this change would fund the cost of hospital services associated with lowering the age at which Medicare eligibility begins. It is appropriate that these additional Medicare benefits be partially funded by payroll taxes. Second, a gradually increasing surtax would apply to individuals and corporations. Third, when all Americans, including those who now rely on Medicaid for their health coverage, are brought into the new health system in 1996, the States would be asked to continue to maintain their previous share of the costs of the Medicaid Program to help fund the costs of providing health care by contributing to the general fund. This, in effect, holds States to their current level of health care financing, adjusted in the outyears for inflation.

Although I am convinced that this revenue package fully finances the proposed benefits for the next 5 years, the Congressional Budget Office and the Joint Committee on Taxation cannot provide reliable estimates of the costs of and revenues generated by the package after fiscal year 1996. That's understandable but I want to assure my colleagues of my concern for the costs that fall outside the budget window. I don't want unfunded costs that balloon in the outyears. I also expect to review the distributional impact of this financing plan and welcome suggestions for alternative financing mechanisms.

History tells me that we cannot underestimate the difficulty of reforming the health care system. I have been in Congress for more than 30 years, and am one of the few Members left who voted to create Medicare in 1965. That victory didn't come easily.

The fight to create what later became Medicare and Medicaid had some very heavy hitters on the side of reform. Momentum built after the tragic assassination of President Kennedy and the subsequent landslide election of President Johnson, who viewed his election as a mandate for health care reform. Even with all that political commitment, it still took more than 5 years to accomplish. And even then, we only solved part of the problem.

I believe there is no more important problem confronting our country today than health care. Nothing cries louder for a solution. Nor is there anything I would like to do more than to assure my constituents in Chicago and Americans across this great country that they will receive care when they are sick. People who are ill should worry solely about getting well. They shouldn't be worried about the bills that are piling up.

It is time to abandon the catchy slogans and gear up for the legislative long march. The debate begins in earnest when we return in September. But we must keep two things in mind.

First, absent Presidential leadership, we will not be able to achieve a major reform of the health care system by ourselves. If that means using next year to challenge the President to debate, so be it. If all we accomplish is making health care the cornerstone issue of the next Presidential election, all the better. George Bush is wrong to duck this issue. The American people are asking for our help.

Second, if we are going to be taken seriously, we have to confront the matter in a fiscally responsible manner. And we should not overpromise. Government has fallen in public esteem in recent years because we overpromise and don't deliver. That's a big mistake. This can be a defining issue for our Government. It can either prove the cynics right when they say that Government is more problem than solution, and confirm the public's worst fears about tax-and-spend big government politicians, or it can restore civic responsibility and respect.

It is really our choice—a choice which millions of Americans are waiting for this Congress and this President to make. They deserve no less than our full commitment to the critical issues of health care costs and access. I sincerely hope that the legislation I am introducing today improves the chances for political consensus and ultimate enactment of significant reform of the health care system.

H.R. 3205—THE HEALTH INSURANCE COVERAGE AND COST CONTAINMENT ACT OF 1991

1. HEALTH INSURANCE COVERAGE FOR EVERY AMERICAN

In general, universal health insurance coverage would be assured by requiring each employer to provide basic health insurance meeting certain minimum standards to all employees and dependents or to pay an excise tax assessed as a percentage of wages.

Employees of firms that chose to pay the tax would be covered under a public plan similar to the existing Medicare program. Individuals not connected to the work force would be covered under the public plan.

2. PAY-OR-PLAY PLAN

Employers could provide the basic benefit package through private health insurance or a self-insured employer plan. Employers could charge employees up to 20 percent of the premiums for the coverage. Firms choosing to pay the tax would pay 80 percent of the tax, with employees paying the remaining 20 percent.

3. PAY-OR-PLAY TRIGGER

The pay-or-play trigger would be imposed as an excise tax assessed as a percentage of wages. It would be initially set at 9.0 percent of the Medicare wage base and would be indexed to the rate of growth in the health benefits covered by the program. At the initial rate, it is estimated that employers employing fifteen percent of the covered employment-related population would select the public plan.

4. ESTABLISHMENT OF THE PUBLIC PLAN

A public plan similar to Medicare would be established. Benefit payments and direct provider relations would be operated, as is Medicare, through fiscal intermediaries at the state level. The plan would operate under the same rules for provider certification and quality assurance as Medicare. The program would be administered by the Department of Health and Human Services.

A Health Insurance Trust Fund would be established to receive funds from the excise tax and the other revenues dedicated to support of the program.

5. PHASED IMPLEMENTATION OF PAY OR PLAY REQUIREMENTS

The requirements of the legislation would be phased in beginning January 1, 1993. In 1993, employers with more than 100 employees would be required to provide health insurance coverage or pay the tax. Other employers could voluntarily join the public plan as of that date.

As of January 1, 1994, employers with 50 or more employees would be required to provide coverage or pay the tax.

As of January 1, 1995, employers with 25 or more employees would be required to provide coverage or pay the tax.

As of January 1, 1996, all employers would be required to provide coverage or pay the tax. In addition, all persons not connected to the work force would be enrolled in the public plan.

6. MULTIPLE EMPLOYER RULES

In the case of families with more than one worker and where both employers offer a private plan, families would choose under which employer plan they would be enrolled. The nonenrolling employer(s) would pay a special premium to the public plan equal to 40 percent of the applicable premium for the public plan. The enrolling employer would receive a subsidy from the public plan equal to that amount for each enrolled employee of another firm.

Families with employees covered by both a private and the public plan would be required to choose coverage under the private plan, and the private plan would receive a subsidy equal to forty percent of the applicable public plan premium for each enrolled employee of another firm. The employer participating in the public plan and the firm's employees would pay the tax.

Families with all employees covered by the public plan would receive coverage from that plan and each employee and their employer would pay the tax.

Families with more than one employed person would not be liable for paying the extra employee share(s) of taxes.

7. TREATMENT OF PART-TIME AND TEMPORARY EMPLOYEES

An employer could opt for private or public coverage of part-time employees, and such employees could be treated differently from full-time employees. Full-time work is defined as more than 17.5 hours per week. Temporary employees would be covered under the public plan.

For these employees participating in the public plan, the employer would pay the tax on the wages paid to the part-time or temporary employee. This amount would be credited against the public plan premium which the employee would otherwise owe as an individual, described below.

8. HEALTH BENEFITS

Basic benefits: Benefits would generally be the same as under the Medicare program except there would be a single deductible of $250 per individual/$500 per family and an out-of-pocket limit of $2,500 per individual/$3,000 per family. Certain new prevention benefits, also added to Medicare and described below, would be included in the basic benefit package.

Children's benefits: Benefits for children would include well-child care and preventive care as recommended by the American Academy of Pediatrics without co-payments or deductibles, and hospital care without co-payments or limits on days of care per spell of illness.

Pregnancy benefits: Benefits for pregnancy-related services would include prenatal care, inpatient labor and delivery, postnatal care, and postnatal family planning services based upon the recommendations of the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology, without co-payments or deductibles.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services would be required to establish a system for certifying that insurance plans and employer self-insured plans met the benefit requirements.

9. HEALTH CARE COST CONTAINMENT

A national limit would be set on the health expenditures of the public plan and of employer plans for services covered under the program. The limit would equal the rate of nominal growth in the gross national product (GNP) plus: Four percent in 1993 and 1994; three percent in 1995 and 1996; two percent in 1997 and 1998; and one percent in 1999 and 2000.

In 2001 and thereafter the increase would be equal to the nominal growth in the GNP.

A Health Care Cost Containment Commission would be established consisting of eleven experts in health financing, health insurance, provider reimbursement, and related fields. Commissioners would be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate.

The Commission would negotiate with health care providers to allocate national expenditures under the limit among the various sectors of the health care delivery system.

The Commission would also develop a national capital budget for needed health care facilities and equipment.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services would establish payment rates for health care services on an annual basis which would result in aggregate expenditures equal to the amount available under the national expenditure limit.

The rates would be based on the methodologies established under the Medicare system, including the Prospective Payment System for hospitals and the Resource-Based Relative Scale (RBRVS). The rates would be used by the public plan to pay providers and would be ceilings for rates of payment by private insurers and by self-insured employer plans. The extra billing limits of Medicare would apply to the public plan and to all private plans.

10. INDIVIDUAL ENROLLMENT IN PUBLIC PLAN

Individuals not connected to the workforce would be enrolled in the public plan. Premiums for individual would be based upon the actuarial cost of the benefits of the public plan. Individuals who did not enroll on a timely basis would be subject to a penalty of twice any premiums otherwise due.

11. LOW-INCOME ASSISTANCE

Low-income persons and families would be eligible for assistance relating to premiums, deductibles, and coinsurance for which they would otherwise be responsible.

For individuals or families with incomes below 100 percent of the Federal poverty level, the assistance would equal the total amount of all premiums, deductibles, and coinsurance. For individuals and families with incomes between 100 and 200 percent of the poverty level, the assistance would diminish on a sliding scale.

Both employed persons and persons not connected to the work force could receive assistance, but employers would still pay their share of the costs of coverage for employed persons and their dependents.

Persons eligible for aid to families with dependent children, supplemental security income, or the earned income tax credit would be deemed to be eligible for assistance. Other persons would have to apply for assistance. If family income changed during the year, any assistance received would be reconciled to those changes at the end of the year.

Medicare beneficiaries would be eligible for low-income assistance under the same terms, except that the assistance available would relate to the Part A and B premiums, deductibles, and coinsurance otherwise due.

12. EXPANSION OF MEDICARE TO AGE 60

The age of eligibility for Medicare would be reduced one year of age in each year beginning January 1, 1993; eligibility would reach age 60 on January 1, 1997.

13. PREVENTION BENEFITS

Annual mammography screening, colorectal screening, various vaccinations, and well-child care would be required benefits for employer plans and the public plan and would be added to the Medicare program.

14. GROUP HEALTH INSURANCE STANDARDS

General Standards: All group health insurance plans would be required to meet certain standards. Plans not meeting these standards would be subject to a tax equal to fifty percent of the premiums collected and would lose their status as qualified employer plans for purposes of the pay-or-play requirements.

Under the standards, no group insurance plans could discriminate on the basis of health status, claims experience, receipt of health care, medical history, or evidence of insurability of an individual. Pre-existing condition exclusions could only apply for a six-month period and could not apply to newborns. No pre-existing condition exclusion could apply if an individual had been covered under another qualified plan or the public plan for more than six months prior to enrollment.

Small Group Standards: No employer with fewer than 100 employees would be allowed to self-insure.

Insurers offering insurance plans to small employers would be required to offer the plan to all small employers on a continuous, year-round basis. Insurers would be required to offer coverage for a full year. Premiums would be required to be community-rated for a given geographic area, but could be adjusted for age, gender, and type of family enrollment. Insurers would be required to offer a minimum benefit package which contained only the basic benefits required for all employers.

15. COBRA CONTINUATION REQUIREMENTS

The health insurance continuation requirements enacted as part of the Consolidated Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1985 would be repealed.

16. MEDICAID

Medicaid would continue for the currently eligible population for the benefits not covered under this program.

During the transition period, payments under State Medicaid programs to hospitals and physicians would be required to be increased. Payments would be required to equal the following specified percentages of Medicare payments, adjusted for differences in the covered populations: 70 percent in 1993; 80 percent in 1994; and, 90 percent in 1995. These payment levels could not be waived by the Secretary.

States would be subject to maintenance of effort rules that would require them to pay the amount they otherwise would have spent for Medicaid benefits into the Health Insurance Trust Fund.

17. DEDUCTION FOR HEALTH INSURANCE COSTS OF SELF-EMPLOYED INDIVIDUALS

The bill extends the present-law 25 percent deduction for health insurance costs of self-employed individuals for 1992 and modifies this deduction for subsequent years to conform to the universal health coverage policies of the bill.

Until the universal coverage provisions of the bill are effective (i.e., for 1993 through 1996), self-employed individuals and owners of personal service corporations are entitled to deduct 100 percent of their health insurance costs if they provide to all their employees who work more than 20 hours per week health coverage that meets the requirements of a qualified employer health plan under the bill. If such coverage is not provided, then the deduction for health insurance expenses of such person is limited to 25 percent.

For years after 1996, the deduction is 100 percent of the costs of health insurance coverage.

18. FINANCING

To the extent that it is not paid for by the payroll taxes under the pay-or-play provisions, the program would be financed through a combination of a health surtax imposed on corporations and individuals and increases in the Hospital Insurance payroll tax imposed on both employers and employees.

Universal health coverage surtax: The bill imposes a health surtax under which the tax liability (before any tax credits) of individuals (computed without regard to the surtax) would be increased. The surtax would be applied for purposes of the regular income tax as well as the alternative minimum tax. For taxable years beginning in 1993, the surtax would be six percent, for 1995 seven percent, and for 1996 nine percent. For example, if a taxpayer's tax liability was $1,000 in 1996, the taxpayer would owe an additional $90.

This surtax would be applied both to the regular income tax as well as the alternative minimum tax. The surtax also would apply to estates and trusts.

The bill would impose a similar health surtax on the tax liability (before tax credits) of corporations increased on the same schedule as the individual income tax. The surtax would apply for purposes of the regular income tax as well as the alternative minimum tax. For taxable years beginning in 1993 the surtax would be six percent, for 1995 seven percent, and for 1996 nine percent.

Hospital insurance tax: The Hospital Insurance payroll tax imposed on both employers and employees would be raised to pay for the improvements in Medicare benefits, including reduction in age of eligibility.

Under the bill, the HI taxable wage base would be increased from $125,000 to $200,000 (indexed), effective January 1, 1993.

In addition, the HI tax rate on both employers and employees would be increased from 1.45 percent to 1.55 percent in 1993 and to 1.65 percent in 1996. Corresponding changes would be made to self-employment taxes.

THE NATIONAL AIR AND SPACE MUSEUM EXPANSION SITE SELECTION ACT OF 1991

THE SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SKAGGS] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Speaker, I am today introducing, with my colleague, BENJAMIN L. CARDIN, and 22 other cosponsors, legislation to set up a national competition to select the location of the Smithsonian Institution's National Air and Space Museum [NASM] extension—a facility that will house aviation treasures like the space shuttle Enterprise, a Concorde, and the Enola Gay. This legislation has the potential to save the Federal Government hundreds of millions of dollars.

As some of my colleagues may know, the Smithsonian wants to locate the extension at Dulles Airport. However, many of us feel that the process for picking that site has not been fiscally prudent, fair, or comprehensive.

For example, the Smithsonian's own consultants projected that an NASM extension at Baltimore-Washington International Airport—just off I-95, the Baltimore-Washington Parkway, and with its own AMTRAK station—would draw significantly more visitors than Dulles. Maryland's proposal would have cost less and could have been built quicker, thus protecting the many historic aircraft that cannot fit on The Mall. Yet, it was rejected.

Another example is Denver's proposal to locate the extension at Stapleton International Airport, which is slated for closure in 1993. Stapleton is an especially attractive option for the NASM extension. It offers already-existing facilities, hangars, runways, buildings, and aviation facilities, all ideal for the Air and Space Museum. Recognizing Stapleton's potential, the city of Denver, along with community and business leaders, put together a plan to complete phase one of the NASM extension at no capital cost to the Federal Government.

A private study concluded that this option could save the Federal Government as much as $200 million in capital and operating costs during the 30-year projected life cycle of the extension. Given the budget climate around here, any proposal that has the potential for saving that kind of money is worthy of serious consideration. But that didn't happen.

And there may be even better proposals out there that haven't even yet entered the fray. The problem is, the current site-selection process would shut them out, too. That's just not the way we should do business around here. And that's why I'm convinced we need to do something about the process.

Those of us who don't believe the Smithsonian's site selection process has been fair are in good company. The GAO last February concluded that the Smithsonian's selection process:

*** cannot be relied upon to objectively defend the selection of Dulles. A fair and reasonable way to assure it has selected the best site and maximized the incentives received from localities would be for the Smithsonian to use a more formal, systematic, and cost-conscious process. Such a process would:

Define minimal, real requirements, and distinguish such requirements from optional niceties;

Clearly announce and communicate these requirements to all possible offerors, perhaps on a nationwide bases; and Systematically evaluate all responses that meet the Smithsonian's needs in terms of present value life cycle costs to the government.

The bill BEN, I, and others are proposing would set up just such a process.

Our approach would not only end up saving the Federal Government money, but would also give more states the chance to compete for the museum. And that's important. Beyond questions of cost and good process, there are philosophical issues concerning the national equity and the national interest in having the Smithsonian's facilities located almost exclusively in the Washington, DC, area.

The Smithsonian admits it will have to address the issue of geographic diversification in the future, but refuses to do so on the NASM extension facility. I believe it's time to begin the future now.

It's hard to quantify fairness. Still, statistics show that though most of the Nation's population lives west of the Mississippi, proportionately few of them ever are able to visit the Smithsonian's museums. Western citizens pay their fair share of taxes to support the Smithsonian, yet too often are unable to share in its national treasures. Western States should have the opportunity, at the very least, to compete for the NASM facility.

The bill we're introducing today could well be titled, the fair-shot bill. That's all we're asking for, a fair shot, with an objective process to determine what's in the national interest. Our bill would, first, set up a panel to develop fair criteria to judge proposals, second, invite States and cities to compete for the facility, and third, provide for an objective review of the proposals and for a final site selection.

Specifically, the panel would be composed of experienced museum professionals, Members of Congress, and a representative of the Smithsonian Institution, who would be responsible for developing the objective criteria by which all potential site proposals could be judged fairly. After the criteria were agreed upon, the panel would solicit site proposals from all interested parties. The panel would then evaluate each proposal and determine which one best met the stated requirements. It would then present its evaluations and its recommendation to the Smithsonian, which would ultimately make the decision about where to locate the new museum.

Obviously, it's our hope and expectation that the Smithsonian would accept the recommendation of the panel. However, the Smithsonian would have the chance to explain to Congress why the panel's recommendation was unacceptable, in the event the Smithsonian decided to proceed with a different location. I believe this is a balanced effort to retain the Smithsonian's autonomy while ensuring that it is more objective in its decisionmaking process.

Mr. Speaker, the Smithsonian Institution receives approximately 85 percent of its funds from U.S. taxpayers. I believe we in Congress therefore have the responsibility to insist on an open site-selection process that permits fair consideration of all competitive options.

Based both on the potential for significant savings in scarce Federal dollars, and a need to strike a better regional balance in the distribution of national resources, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the National Air and Space Museum Expansion Site Selection Act of 1991.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, today I am pleased to join with Representative SKAGGS and numerous other colleagues in introducing the National Air and Space Museum Expansion Site Selection Act of 1991. Representative SKAGGS and I, as Congressmen who have been closely involved with this issue, firmly believe that an open, systematic, and competitive selection process must be a fundamental condition for Federal involvement in the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum [NASM] expansion. The legislation we are introducing today sets out a fair selection process and authorizes design and planning for a facility. Our bill is based on the February 5, 1991, recommendations of the General Accounting Office [GAO] in their report on the selection process that stated: " * * * the Smithsonian's process to date cannot be relied upon to objectively defend the selection of Dulles."

The NASM expansion is a project with which I have had some experience, and I want to make clear as this bill is introduced, that I strongly support construction of an expansion. An airport-based facility is necessary to fully protect this Nation's rich aerospace heritage for future generations. The current museum on The Mall embodies much of the spirit that makes this Nation great and there is no collection I, or most Americans, enjoy more. The NASM well deserves to be one of the most visited museums in the world. However, the process chosen by the Smithsonian for selecting a NASM expansion site has been controversial, at best.

Congressional oversight of the Smithsonian's selection process provides the necessary opportunity to ensure that the public interest is protected before Federal dollars are invested. The Committees on Appropriations, House Administration, and Public Works and Transportation have closely followed the Smithsonian's efforts to develop the NASM expansion. Chairmen YATES and CLAY deserve special recognition for their commitment and diligence in oversight of this important project. I look forward to the hearings Chairman CLAY has called for the House Subcommittee on Libraries and Memorials to consider the legislation we are introducing today, as well as other issues related to the expansion site selection process.

Maryland initiated the competition for the NASM expansion in 1987 based on two fundamental, Baltimore-Washington International [BWI] Airport, advantages: location and the ability to get the project moving. BWI met all the Smithsonian's site criteria and the Institution, in response to questions posed this year by the Interior Appropriations Subcommittee, stated that BWI could be expected to attract 25 percent more visitors than Dulles. Further, the Smithsonian's consultants found the visitors to BWI would be more ethnically diverse and generally have lower incomes—goals that one might argue should be important for a federally funded museum.

The Smithsonian holds forth, as important in their decision, the fact that Dulles is the gateway to the Nation's Capital. Dulles may best serve international travelers and businessmen, but for the vast portion of families visiting Washington—mom, dad, and the kids in their Chevy wagon—I-95 is the gateway. This is not a fact likely to change. In addition to an exit off I-95, BWI has its own railroad station with regular, low-cost MARC commuter rail and Amtrak service, in 1992, will be connected to downtown Baltimore by light rail, and has direct access to Washington by way of a newly rebuilt Federal parkway.

Facing a number of large, pending-development projects—museums honoring American Indians and African-Americans—as well as new budget constraints, the Smithsonian is pursuing authorization to begin work on a NASM expansion, based on the need to house and protect historic aviation artifacts quickly. Maryland's Governor, William Donald Schaefer, has the proven capability to energize challenging public projects—from Baltimore's inner harbor, the Convention Center, the National Aquarium, the Maryland Science Center, and much of the rest of Baltimore's downtown redevelopment, to the new baseball stadium and subway and light-rail lines.

Prior to Maryland's 1987 proposal, the NASM expansion project had little momentum; Schaefer put the full resources of the State behind the project, and everyone, including the Virginians, woke up. As the selection process moved forward, the Governor organized for private fundraising, set out a program for issuing bonds, turned the State Aviation Administration and its consultants to preparing plans for State funding of all necessary site improvements, offered the Smithsonian more land than they requested, and most importantly—to my mind as a key difference—put $10 million on the table up front.

Apart from my own direct knowledge of Maryland's role in the selection process, the GAO's February 5, 1991, report to the Interior Appropriations Subcommittee on the competition between BWI, Dulles, and later, Denver, concluded that "the Smithsonian has not followed a purposeful, systematic process to assure that the Dulles selection is the most cost-effective site." Further, the GAO suggested:

A fair and reasonable way to assure it has selected the best site and maximized the incentives received from localities would be for the Smithsonian to use a more formal, systematic, and cost conscious process. Such a process would:

Define minimal, real requirements, and distinguish such requirements from optional "niceties";

Clearly announce and communicate these requirements to all possible offerors, perhaps on a nationwide basis; and

Systematically evaluate all responses that meet the Smithsonian's needs in terms of present value life-cycle costs to the government. The solicitation for offers also could ask offerors to respond to optional features and explain how they will be evaluated in relation to costs of meeting basic requirements.

Following the February 5, 1991, Interior Appropriations hearing, Smithsonian officials redefined the expansion project. Based on the new proposal, described as simple support operation for the Mall museum, the GAO stated that many of their original concerns were addressed. In testimony before Appropriations, however, Smithsonian officials clarified that this new plan was just phase I of the earlier proposal. As the expansion was always to be a phased project, there was in fact no change and the GAO's original concerns remain valid. A hearing held before the House Subcommittee on Libraries and Memorials on July 30, 1991, further confirmed the validity of the GAO's original findings and concerns. It might be added that the Smithsonian already has a substantial support operation for The Mall museum in the Suitland, MD, Paul E. Garber facility.

I have numerous problems with the Board of Regents January 1990 selection of Dulles over BWI, based upon the explanations offered following the regents' closed-door decision-making meeting. I could explain these concerns at length, but would prefer to stand by the GAO's independent findings and simply ask that a fair, open competition be conducted before Federal funds are invested. The legislation introduced today will set this process in motion and allow the Smithsonian to move ahead expeditiously with development of the necessary expansion at the best site for the Nation.

The NASM is among the most popular museums in the world. It is a proud monument to America's inventive spirit and continuing challenge of new frontiers. As the expansion cannot be built on The Mall, the siting process must necessarily be opened up. All Americans will be paying for this treasure and every community would like to house the facility, so the regents must be able to objectively defend their final site selection. Based on the GAO findings, and my own experiences, the Smithsonian has not met this test. While there are questions about the process, there will be problems. In order to protect the interests of all Americans, the Institution should initiate an open, systematic, and competitive selection process. It is only fair.

I would ask my colleagues to join me in support of this legislation.

THE NATIONAL DRUG TREATMENT GOALS ACT OF 1991

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York, Mrs. LOWEY, is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. LOWEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, the Judiciary Committee is in the midst of marking up a crime bill that puts the focus of our efforts exactly where it should be—on prevention. I congratulate them for moving in that direction. Arresting and punishing criminals is important; there's no question about that. But it is infinitely better if we can stop people from ever turning to a life of crime. Today, I am in-roducing legislation to move the annual national drug control strategy prepared by the President's Office of National Drug Control Policy in that same direction. My bill, the National Drug Treatment Goals Act of 1991, would require that the strategy include a specific goal for expanding the availability of drug treatment.

Every person who is out there on the street hooked on drugs, like crack or heroin, is a potential threat to public safety. If we're serious about making our country a safer place to live, then one of the things that we ought to be doing is helping people to get off of the substances that all too often lead to criminal activities. My bill says that it's time to make this vital crime-prevention step a prominent part of our national antidrug battle plan.

It's estimated that there are more than 10 million people who need treatment for alcohol or drug abuse in this country right now. Unfortunately, we have fewer than 1½ million drug treatment slots in this Nation today. As a result, waiting lists are long. Of those seeking help today, more than half have been waiting for over a month. In some States, including New York, almost all have been waiting for even longer periods of time. We are simply going to have to do a better job than that if we're going to be successful in ending the drug scourge.

The development of clearly defined goals for reducing drug use through expanded treatment is an excellent method for keeping everyone's nose to the grindstone. Laying down markers saying that we're going to add specific numbers of slots by specific dates will push people very hard to stay on course. The Federal Government must set goals for treatment if we are serious about getting people off drugs and keeping crimes from being committed. This is a preventive step designed to stop criminals before they commit crimes.

This bill also expresses the sense of Congress that, among the long-term goals of the national drug control strategy, should be the availability of drug treatment to all who are in need of such treatment. I firmly believe that we ought to have treatment on demand within the next decade. That's an ambitious goal, but if we don't set challenging goals then the massive drug problem will never be solved. When President Kennedy stood in this Chamber and said that we should put a man on the Moon in less than a decade, people thought that was an impossible dream as well. We must set a bold course so we can win this war, just as we put a man on the Moon. I hope that my colleagues will join me in supporting this bill.

H.R. 3202—THE TAX REDUCTION AND SIMPLIFICATION ACT OF 1991

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA], is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, I rise to introduce legislation that will provide the working families of America much needed relief from their growing tax liabilities and at the same time significantly reduce complexity in the tax code. I do not believe that any of my colleagues in this chamber would dispute the fact that lower-middle and middle-income taxpayers have seen a rise in their tax liabilities and warrant some kind of relief. This increase would not be so troubling if it were the result of economic gains for typical workers. However, this is not the case.

Typical middle- and lower-middle income families have not been sharing the fruits of economic growth. Many families have gained ground only by running faster and faster by putting a second spouse to work. Between 1977 and 1988, the share of after-tax income going to the lower 60 percent of the population fell from 34 percent to 29 percent. The share of after-tax income going to the wealthiest 5 percent of the population rose from 18.5 percent to 25.2 percent. In addition, although the Tax Reform Act of 1986 significantly reduced the complexity of the Tax Code for many of these taxpayers, many continue to have trouble complying with their annual tax responsibilities.

Taxpayers in the lowest 20 percent of the income range saw their real income fall by 5 percent during the 1980's while their total Federal tax burden increased by 15 percent over the same period. Middle-income taxpayers saw their real income rise by only 4 percent over 11 years and their burden increased. By contrast, those in the top 10 percent realized a 34-percent increase in average family income and an 8-percent decrease in Federal taxes. For the top 5 percent the income increase was 51 percent, the drop in taxes 13 percent. Studies also show that as unemployment rises as it now has, real income of typical families suffers. In the recessions of 1974 to 1975 and 1981 to 1982, the median income for the American family dropped. As the Congress considers legislation to respond to the new recession, we need to keep in mind the additional burdens that will fall on families—another reason to respond to the needs of lower- and middle-income workers for tax relief.

The Tax Reduction and Simplification Act of 1991 would reverse this inequitable trend in tax policy. It provides tax relief and simplification by increasing the basic standard deduction and supplementing the standard deduction according to family size. This pro-family, pro-middle class legislation would be financed by increasing the tax base rather than increasing tax rates. This should be at the core of tax reform: to improve equity and to reduce the size and influence of tax write-offs. This plan is fiscally and economically sound in that it does not reduce revenues overall, but rather distributes the tax burden more fairly.

In 1992, this legislation would institute a new supplemental deduction for dependents. The increase in the standard deduction for each dependent would be $1,400. Therefore, a family with two dependents would receive a new standard deduction of $8,500 from the present standard deduction of $5,700. Married couples filing jointly and heads of household would have their standard deductions increased by $390, giving joint returns a new standard deduction of $6,090 and heads of household a total of $5,390. And lastly, the legislation would increase the standard deduction for unmarried individuals by $235 for a standard deduction of $3,635, with married individuals filing separately receiving a $3,045 deduction.

As a result, overall income tax burden on families who make between $20,000 and $30,000 a year would be decreased by 9.5 percent on average. These increases in the standard deduction would also simplify our tax system by allowing thousands of families to use the simple standard deduction rather than itemizing their deductions. On average, every income group with incomes of less than $75,000 would see a tax reduction, with the greatest dollar reductions for median income level taxpayers, and the greatest percentage reductions for struggling families in the $10,000 to $20,000 income range.

The financing mechanism for this legislation pays for the tax relief and is progressive. The bill would reduce allowable itemized deductions by 10 percent. Many of my colleagues would argue that an increase in tax rates would hurt economic recovery; my legislation does not increase tax rates. More importantly, I believe that it is fairer and better for the economy to reduce the advantage enjoyed by upper-income taxpayers, who use tax write-offs disproportionately.

The attractiveness of this proposal is that it not only simplifies the Tax Code by reducing the numbers who itemize, but also, by increasing the standard deduction, gives lower-income taxpayers the greatest benefits as a percentage of income. In addition, unlike many other tax cut plans, my bill is revenue neutral and does not change current tax rates. It is time to face up to the impact of our tax policies over the past decade on lower-middle and middle-income families. If we seriously want to cut taxes for lower-middle and middle-income taxpayers we must pay for it in a fair and equitable way.

H.R. 3202

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

EL SALVADOR

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. LAGOMARSINO] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, during the recent visit of Salvadoran President

Freddy Cristiani to Washington, I had the pleasure of speaking to him about his government's efforts to find a peaceful solution to the ongoing guerrilla war in his country.

President Cristiani's comments were both interesting and startling for he outlined a continuing series of initiatives his Government has undertaken to seek peace in El Salvador. Much of what the Government has done has not received media attention in the United States, so there is little understanding or appreciation of the Government's efforts to counter the propaganda campaign of the FMLN guerrillas and the responsibility of the Salvadoran Government to protect its people from the continued, unprovoked attacks from the armed FMLN guerrillas.

I have requested this special order specifically to call to the attention of my colleagues the efforts carried out by the Government of El Salvador for a negotiated peace with the FMLN and also the Salvadoran Government's present position regarding the status of talks with the FMLN.

The following two papers prepared by the the Salvadoran Government offer a thorough review of recent events and efforts of the Government of President Cristiani to seek peace in El Salvador.

SUMMARY OF THE EFFORTS CARRIED OUT BY THE GOVERNMENT OF EL SALVADOR FOR A NEGOTIATED PEACE WITH THE FMLN; AGREEMENTS SIGNED; PRESENT STATUS OF DIALOGUE

1. Since President Alfredo Cristiani took office, the present Government of El Salvador has taken the lead in putting an end to the country's armed conflict. In his inaugural speech, the new President promised to set up a Dialogue Commission to hold peace negotiations with the FMLN on the basis of a program previously agreed on by both parties. This dialogue would have to be serious, uninterrupted and, once begun, neither of the parties could unilaterally withdraw from it.

2. Once the Dialogue Commission was set up, the Government entered into contact with the FMLN so as to hold a first round of discussions. These discussions, with the involvement of the Church, were carried out in Mexico City in September 1989. The final document, called the "Mexico Agreement", defined the conceptual framework for negotiations and set forth their procedural regulations. The negotiations' purpose, accepted by both parties, was to "put an end to the armed conflict as soon as possible by political means, promote the country's democratization and reunite Salvadoran society". The agreement was signed by both parties, and witnessed by Bishop Romeo Tovar Astorga and Bishop Gregorio Rosa Chavez.

3. The second meeting of the Government and FMLN delegations was held in San Jose, Costa Rica, on October 16, 17 and 18, 1989, before representatives of the Catholic church, the United Nations and the OAS. The final document, signed by both parties and by the above mentioned witnesses, was called the "San Jose Agreement". It set forth "the need to agree on the conditions which will make it possible, during a first stage, to put an end to the military confrontation and to any act which violates the rights of the civilian population, and to coordinate an end to hostilities within an agreed timetable".

4. At the San Jose meeting, the Government submitted a document called "Proposal by the Government of the Republic to reach peace, consolidate democracy and reunite Salvadoran society". The proposal was based on Esquipulas II and Tela, the agreements leading up to the peace conversations. It proposed an immediate end to hostilities, the Government's commitment to protect the life and physical integrity of FMLN members, and the necessary steps to be taken to insert the FMLN members into the country's life of peace and democracy. It also offered to help the FMLN become a political party, on a par with the existing political parties of El Salvador. All of the above served as a rather broad basis for negotiations, and disproves the assertion made later by the guerrillas alleging that the Government's position at the San Jose meeting was totally inflexible. With this assertion they intended to justify the guerrilla offensive which began on November 11, that is, less than a month after the Costa Rica meeting.

5. In the above mentioned San Jose agreement, a new meeting was scheduled to be held in Caracas, Venezuela, on November 20 and 21. In spite of the offensive launched on the 11th of that month, the largest and bloodiest of the conflict, the Government delegation attended the Caracas meeting so as not to interrupt the continuity of the efforts aimed at putting an end to the conflict by negotiated means. The FMLN did not attend, violating the commitment signed in Mexico to not withdraw unilaterally from meetings.

It is apparent that the November terrorist offensive had been planned for many months, and that the FMLN had considered that the dialogue meetings with the Government were merely a tactical resource to be used in its goal to seize power through violence.

6. In spite of the FMLN's behavior, the Government of El Salvador did not desist from its efforts to attain peace through negotiations, based on the spirit of the Regional Pacification Agreements signed by the Central American Presidents, especially the Declaration of San Isidro de Coronado, Costa Rica. With that objective in mind, the President of the Republic asked the United Nations Secretary General to use his good offices to promote negotiations with the FMLN, while offering the Government's good will and full cooperation to that end. The FMLN later accepted the UN's involvement.

On April 4, 1990, the UN Secretary General, Javier Perez de Cuellar, issued a declaration known as the "Geneva Declaration or Agreement", in which he stated that he had agreed to use his good offices within the terms of reference of the July 27, 1989 Security Council Resolution 637, and had received assurances from both parties that they were seriously and in good faith seeking a negotiated solution to the conflict.

The purpose of the Geneva Declaration agreement is to "put an end to armed conflict through political means as soon as possible, promote the country's democratization, guarantee the unrestricted respect of human rights and reunite Salvadoran society".

7. The UN Secretary General appointed Dr. Alvaro de Soto as his personal representative in the conflict. Both parties agreed to hold a first meeting with him in Caracas, Venezuela, from May 16 to 21, 1990. At that meeting, a document called the "Caracas Agreement" was signed on May 21. It includes the General Agenda and the Timetable for the Full Negotiation Process.

The objectives of the Geneva declaration are reiterated in that document, and the process is divided into three phases: the first phase sets forth the initial objective to reach political agreements aimed at coordinating an end to the armed confrontation and to any act that violates the rights of the civilian populations; the second phase would provide for the necessary guarantees and conditions to reinsert the FMLN members, within a framework of full legality, into the country's civilian, institutional and political life; and the third phase would provide for the consolidation of the above mentioned objectives and for UN verification of the agreements.

The questions to be negotiated were listed as follows:

(1st) Political agreements:

1. Armed Forces.
2. Human Rights.
3. Judicial System.
4. Electoral System.
5. Constitutional Reform.
6. Social and economic problems.
7. Verification by the UN.

(2d) Coordination of an end to the armed conflict and to any act that violates the civilian population's human rights.

The second stage includes the same questions, plus the reinsertion of FMLN members.

The text explains that the same questions are included in two stages of the process because some of their aspects may have to be dealt with in more than one stage. As far as the timetable is concerned, the tentative date to reach the objective set forth by the Geneva document, i.e., the achievement of political agreements and the end of armed confrontation, is by mid-September 1990.

8. At the beginning of June, the President of the Republic invited all the existing legal political parties of the country to form an Inter-party Commission, and committed himself to promote and endorse any and all agreements adopted by consensus by the Commission. As a result of the work carried out by the Inter-party Commission, a number of reforms were made to the Electoral Code. They were not supported by the FMLN at the negotiating table because, it alleged, they were not sufficiently and simply made a unilateral statement in favor of electoral Agreements.

The Agreement that increased the number of deputies (representatives) at the Legislative Assembly from 60 to 84 is of vital importance, since it expanded the political spectrum by including minority political parties.

9. After the Caracas meeting, another one was held in Oaxtepec, Mexico, from June 18 to 26, 1990. The question of restructuring the armed forces was widely discussed, although no agreements were signed.

10. The following July, a meeting was held in San Jose, Costa Rica, where a comprehensive Agreement to respect and guarantee human rights was signed. It includes an international verification mechanism, a UN mission with headquarters in El Salvador, under the responsibility of a Director appointed by the UN Secretary General.

With regard to this agreement, the United Nations and the Government of El Salvador have already signed the necessary arrangements, and provided for the proper mechanisms allowing the UN verification mission to set up and develop its activities in El Salvador, as part of an Agency called ONUSAL, established by the UN Security Council to supervise different aspects of the settlement of the Salvadoran conflict.

11. Later, two more meetings were held in San Jose, Costa Rica, one from August 16 to 23 and the second from September 12 to 19. No new agreements were reached, in spite of the fact that the questions in the Agenda, especially that of the Armed Forces, continued being the subject of in-depth discussions. Contrary to the seriousness and responsibility shown by the government Commission, the FMLN was inflexible, and submitted an eighteen-point proposal on the Armed Forces, in which it went back on the statements it had made in Oaxtepec, and took up once again many of the arguments and positions it had put forward in 1989 at Moravia in San Jose, Costa Rica.

After September, no new dialogue meetings were able to be arranged. On October 1, 1990, the President of the Republic visited UN headquarters during the Organization's XIV General assembly, where he made another peace offer to complement this and other peace proposals and offers. However, at the end of November, the FMLN launched a new terrorist offensive which, though not as strong as the offensive carried out the year before, caused many deaths, especially among the civilian population, as well as damages to the national economy and infrastructure.

As a result of the apparent stagnation of the process, the parties attended a meeting with the UN Secretary General in mid-October 1990 to review the process, as a result of which the parties committed themselves to enhance the intermediation role through periodic consultations, and a mechanism was established for meetings to be held with smaller commissions so as to try to make progress in the negotiations. These meetings were held in December 1990, and in January and February 1991.

12. On March 16, 1991, the FMLN proposed an initiative to the Ministers of Foreign Affairs of the European Economic Community and Central American countries who were meeting in Managua, Nicaragua, aimed at speeding up peace negotiations. At that time, the document was officially submitted to the UN intermediary, Dr. Alvaro de Soto. According to its text, the main objective was to simultaneously cover the three basic questions of the Caracas Agenda, i.e., the Armed Forces, the Constitutional Reform and the Cease-Fire. Maximum efforts would be carried out to reach an agreement on constitutional reforms before the end of the Legislative Assembly session which concluded on April 30, agree on the three fundamental questions so as to end the first phase of negotiations and on having a cease-fire by May 30, 1990, at the latest.

The deadline of April 30 to reach agreements on Constitutional Reforms was set because, according to the procedure to amend the Constitution of El Salvador, the reforms can only enter into force if they have been approved by one session of the Legislative Assembly and ratified by the next one, by a majority of two thirds of the votes.

13. The Government of El Salvador accepted to negotiate the three-point Agenda proposed by the FMLN in a meeting with no time limit, to conclude when an agreement had been reached with regard to the above mentioned questions, i.e., to submit constitutional reforms before April 30, and reach an agreement on the Armed Forces and on the end of armed confrontations by May 30, 1991. To that effect, the meeting's discussions began in Mexico on April 4, 1991, and concluded on April 27 with the Mexico Agreements, which contain a number of fundamental reforms to the Political Constitution in questions regarding the Armed Forces, the Judicial System, Human Rights and the Electoral System. In addition, the Commission of Truth was established, to be made up by three members appointed by the United Nations Secretary General, with the advice of the parties, which would be responsible for the investigation of major acts of violence carried out since 1980.

14. The Constitutional reforms agreed upon in Mexico were submitted by the Government to the Legislative Assembly before April 30, 1990, as had been agreed with the FMLN. The Government thus fulfilled its solemn commitment to promote reforms before the appropriate Body; the Legislative Assembly approved them with slight changes, adding complementary provisions to make them consistent with the rest of the Constitution. For these reforms to become constitutional rules, they must be ratified by the present Legislative Assembly, by a majority of two-thirds of the votes. The Mexico agreements provide that said ratification must be carried out in accordance with a timetable agreed upon by the parties to the negotiation.

15. The document signed in Mexico contains a number of agreements regarding constitutional reforms which represent a true change in El Salvador's institutional structure.

THE ARMED FORCES

It is clearly set forth that the Armed Forces are under civilian power, redefining this institution's functions by placing it in its rightful context within a democratic society.

A civilian National Police and a State Intelligence Agency are established, placing them under the leadership of civilian authorities chosen in accordance with the Constitution.

Military Justice is redefined, so that only crimes that strictly affect military juridical interests can be brought before it.

Mention should be made of the range of political agreements on the subject which will lead to a number of reforms to secondary laws, aimed at eliminating armed paramilitary groups and forced recruitment, and underlining professional training of members of Public Security and Defense Forces by giving prominence to aspects that emphasize human dignity, the respect of human rights, democratic values and the placement of these bodies under constitutional authority.

THE JUDICIAL SYSTEM

A reorganization will be made of the Supreme Court of Justice and the way in which its Justices are elected. Their election will be by a two-thirds majority of the Legislative Assembly deputies, from a list proposed by the National Council of Judges.

Under the Constitution, Government expenditures will include the Judicial Body, at a level of no less than 6 percent of the Government's general budget.

The National Council of Judges will be strengthened, giving it the necessary independence to nominate judicial authorities, and giving it authority over courses and management of the School for Judicial Training.

HUMAN RIGHTS

We now have the Agreement on Human Rights signed in San Jose, Costa Rica.

A position of National Attorney for Human Rights has been established, to be elected by a two-thirds majority of the Legislative Assembly deputies. The same majority will be needed to elect the Public Attorney of the Republic and the Attorney General of the Republic. With this new proportion, no political party will be able, by itself, to make appointments in the judicial branch, since it is practically impossible for one party alone to hold the above mentioned proportion of votes.

THE ELECTORAL SYSTEM

This organization is being expanded, giving it greater independence; in addition, all political parties will be monitored during the electoral process.

The Government party, under the agreement on constitutional reform which will give rise to a Supreme Electoral Tribunal, has demonstrated its support to the President of the Republic's initiative by giving up the authority it legally has to appoint the Chairman of the above mentioned supreme electoral body. This, added to the electoral body's reorganization, reflects the degree of maturity already reached by the political sectors of El Salvador.

In those same agreements (the Mexico agreements), a set of rules have been established to regulate through secondary legislation other questions related to the Armed Forces, the Judicial Body and the Electoral System. Mention should be made of the fact that an agency for the Investigation of Crimes, under the responsibility of the Judicial Office, has been established. Thus, the agreements respond to practically all of FMLN's concerns on these subjects. This, together with the Human Rights Agreement signed in Costa Rica and the establishment of ONUSAL by the United Nations to supervise compliance of agreements, with only a specific agreement on the Armed Forces missing, make up all the necessary elements to put an end to armed confrontation, in accordance with the concentrated Agenda proposed in Managua by the FMLN.

In effect, Part V (Final Declaration) of the Mexico agreements includes a clause that literally reads as follows: "The parties commit themselves to continue negotiations, within concentrated guidelines. Discussions on the questions agreed upon in the Caracas Agenda will continue in order to reach, as soon as possible, a political agreement on the Armed Forces and the necessary agreements to put an end to armed confrontations, under the supervision of the United Nations."

16. On the basis of the above, at the last meeting held in Caraballeda, Venezuela, from May 25 to June 3, 1991, the question of the Armed Forces and the End of Armed Confrontation should have been discussed exclusively and exhaustively until an agreement had been reached. In Mexico these subjects were not considered because of the lack of time, priority having been given to reforms to the Constitution. The Mexico agreements, in the last part of the final declaration, set forth that the process cannot be deemed interrupted when negotiations resume; which means that as long as the concentrated Agenda is being discussed, the Caraballeda discussions and subsequent meetings will be considered to be a continuation of the Mexico meeting.

The FMLN cannot continue sidestepping the commitment signed in Mexico to begin a serious discussion and reach conclusions on the Armed Forces question, which had been the subject of discussions for almost a year, and on the End to Armed Confrontation, which is the main objective of the first phase of these negotiations. It is absurd that at this point of the process, the hostilities which have caused so much damage, mourning and pain to the Salvadoran people continue. The time to put an end to armed confrontation cannot be postponed any longer under the false pretext of Government inflexibility. It is the FMLN which has prevented a settlement of the situation by maintaining absurd positions such as the one which seeks the dissolution of the Armed Forces or the one that would like the FMLN to become a political party without abandoning its armed structure. (San Salvador, June 10, 1991.)

THE SALVADORAN GOVERNMENT'S PRESENT POSITION REGARDING THE STATUS OF TALKS WITH THE FMLN

1. When looking at the development of the negotiations started by the present Salvadoran administration at the beginning of its term on June 1, 1989, it is obvious that this government has always been ready to forge ahead despite all the obstacles inherent in this type of undertaking, and despite the FMLN's continued use of delaying tactics and propaganda campaigns. The government has shown its commitment to these talks by signing important agreements on the issues being discussed. These agreements have involved issues that fundamentally required political decision-making by the government, and which have carried no risks for the FMLN. To wit: the Agreements on Human Rights, signed in July 1990 in Costa Rica; and the Agreements on Constitutional Reform and the Committee on Truth signed in Mexico in April of this year. Of the two pending issues on the Concentrated Agenda presently under consideration, Armed Forces and Ending the Hostilities, decisions on the first topic involve the government directly, because the Armed Forces are a legitimate and permanent institution, essential for the country's security and stability; while it is with regard to the second topic that the FMLN must make significant decisions. The FMLN has repeatedly shown its lack of commitment and determination by continually seeking to delay, postpone, and complicate any work leading to an agreement on ending the hostilities, which should certainly have been concluded by now. This demonstrates the FMLN's unwillingness or inability to fully commit to the negotiation process. The time has come to pressure the FMLN to make the necessary historic decisions.

2. The government's position on the armed forces has been clear and consistent from the beginning of the talks: the government is ready to implement reforms that will better define the Armed Forces' role in a democratic society in theory and in practice. Proof of this can be found in the constitutional reforms implemented in April and approved by the Legislative Assembly before it adjourned on April 30. However, the government has always made it very clear that the existence itself of the armed forces would not be discussed in these negotiations under any circumstances. The government bases its position on constitutional and historical grounds and feels that these reasons compel it to remain steadfast in its convictions. Furthermore, for reasons of security and stability, at a time when the country is going through a difficult and volatile transition it is absurd and senseless to even think of creating an institutional vacuum with its risky and unpredictable consequences. The government believes that the reforms already effected through constitutional amendment ensure that the military will remain under the power of civilian authority, as is necessary in any democratic society. The government also considers that the reasonable political agreements that will soon be concluded with regard to the armed forces are a sufficiently solid basis for the peace process while preventing the collapse of its institutions. The government's openness in the areas of the armed forces is apparent by the fact that there already are concrete possibilities for agreement in almost all the subtopics: changes in the Security Bodies, Evaluation of the Officer Corps of the Armed Forces, Changes in the National Intelligence Agency, Civilian Defense and Conscription. These areas of agreement made an accord possible as early as August 1990, but the FMLN has been using dilatory tactics, so as to postpone a decision on ending the hostilities.

The FMLN has sought to promote a false perception of the progress made on the Armed Forces issue, characterizing the problem as still being far from being resolved. This is being accomplished through a propaganda campaign regarding the government's amendments to the final draft submitted to the parties through the UN. Since this topic is already at the final stage of decision, in which the specific drafting of the agreements is being carried out, it is logical for the parties to propose improvements and adjustments of style in addition to some substantial issues that are still pending. The government is not trying to back out because of a change in its position or simply for tactical purposes; on the contrary, the government is trying to proceed rapidly toward a final version.

3. From the beginning, the government has shown the necessary flexibility for progress to occur. This flexibility, however, does not extend so far as to ignore legal institutions and the rule of law. The government has a mandate emanating from the body of laws and it operates within a given institutional framework. If the government were inflexibly legalistic it would not even agree to negotiate with an irregular group which, by its own admission, does not accept or abide by the law. But the government is fully aware of the fact that it must face reality and address these issues, that it is impossible to deny that there is an armed confrontation in El Salvador, and that this confrontation must be resolved politically. The government and the FMLN are very different in this respect. The government weighs and scrutinizes its decisions very carefully because it has institutional responsibilities that cannot and should not be ignored. The government must abide by the law. This does not mean that the government believes that the laws should never change, but rather that they should change only when change is reasonable, justified, and then only through the procedures established by the law itself. The Government's flexibility on this issue was apparent in the Agreement on Constitutional Reform which dealt with nothing less than the supreme law of the land.

4. The government has maintained consistent positions throughout the negotiations on all the topics on the Agenda, never changing its mind for tactical reasons, or engaging in obstructionary or delaying maneuvers as is and has been the procedure and habit of the FMLN. Anyone who is familiar with the detailed history of these negotiations will easily see that the government has invariably worked towards agreement, proposing positions that are as reasonable as possible, always seeking agreements. The FMLN, on the other hand, has on several occasions made sudden, drastic and unjustified changes in its proposals. For instance, the FMLN decided to return to its radical proposal to "dissolve both armies" after the Oaxtepec meeting, during which large areas of agreement on the armed forces issue had already been identified. The FMLN continues to use this proposal as a roadblock at the negotiating table. Also, at the preliminary meeting in Mexico on May 15 and 16, 1991, the FMLN expressed its intention to stray from the three topics included in the Concentrated Agenda, Constitutional Reform, Armed Forces, and End to Hostilities. The FMLN wanted to include a discussion of economic and social issues in the agenda, with the obvious intent of prolonging the preliminary political agreements phase of the end of hostilities, thus postponing agreement on this issue.

The government, moved by fundamental negotiation ethics, has opposed and continues to oppose this capricious move to abandon the concentrated format, which was proposed by the FMLN to begin with, for the now evident goal of ensuring that only constitutional accords are concluded. A commitment was made with regard to the Concentrated Agenda, and it must be honored. The government will not allow it to change because both the process and the country demand a speedy and effective end to armed confrontation.

5. Although the FMLN's tactics have artificially delayed agreement on an end to hostilities, there is no reason for this delay to continue. The government is very willing to speed up even more the work, within the Concentrated Agenda, on the two topics that are still pending: Armed Forces and End to Hostilities. The process still has enough momentum of its own to proceed without delays. An agreement on an end to hostilities can easily be reached in the next meeting if the FMLN is ready to take the negotiations seriously.

The above is proof of the government's continuing commitment towards advancing the negotiation process. The Government of El Salvador does not expect to receive any credit for these efforts which are aimed solely at ensuring the Salvadoran people's well-being after peace is restored. However, if the goal is to objectively evaluate the government's will to negotiate, taking into account the circumstances under which the negotiations are being held, it is important to note two essential factors of the climate in which the government has not only sustained its efforts, but actually increased them. First, when examining the negotiation process carried out by El Salvador we cannot ignore the fact that one of the parties is an essentially pluralistic, democratic and representative regime which includes various ideologies. The government's efforts are thus subject to criticism and opposition from groups who do not share the conviction that a negotiated settlement is the way to accomplish our goals, and who continuously criticize the peace efforts. The government must also contend with pressure from those who are unaware or who pretend to be unaware of legal problems resulting from constitutional restrictions, which must be respected and fulfilled by a law-abiding state. Saddam Hussein would surely not be faced with these problems.

One of the most important rights protected by the Salvadoran government in its democratic pluralistic system is, as is recognized internationally, the freedom of speech. This freedom of speech allows the free expression of ideas and criticisms essential in any democracy. In El Salvador, freedom of expression includes even the dissemination of the content of communiqués, statements and interviews from and with FMLN members. The content of these documents make the negotiations more difficult for the government, of course, because its positions are subject to systematic attacks and negative propaganda from special interests, who introduce confusion into the positions the government must adopt to abide by the Constitution.

Finally, we must keep in mind that the FMLN has treated progress in negotiations as if it were a war trophy. For example, in the case of the recent constitutional reforms, the people are curious about the FMLN's systematic delays in agreeing on an end to hostilities. Even more serious is the increasing amount of damage it continues to inflict on the electrical infrastructure, as well as the attempted attacks against military installations that have brought about the death of innocent civilians, with the alleged intention of pressuring the government to negotiate. This, as we have seen, is unnecessary, since the government has consistently shown its commitment to the process. Facts can be easily distorted and the government's good faith misconstrued as a sign of weakness when, after significant progress is made, the FMLN increases its belligerent attacks as was the case after the constitutional reforms. It is under these conditions that the Salvadoran government must demonstrate its will to negotiate.

THOUGHTS ON THE PEB

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, in April of this year, there was, after many, many months of negotiations between railroad workers and railroad companies, a threatened work stoppage. At that time, working with the railroad workers and their representatives, I introduced into the House a joint resolution on behalf of the workers.

My legislation would have created a 5-member special board, PEB Board. Very importantly, that Board and the members of that Board were to have, under my bill, to have been appointed by the Congress. Their purpose, of course, was to resolve the remaining disputes.

My bill also provided a 5-percent wage increase for railroad employees, because they had not had an increase since 1987.

The President would not accept that bill and informed Members that he would sign only certain legislation, and thus this House had no choice but to write a compromise that the President would agree to support. When that compromise was passed, thus ending the April 17 rail strike, agreement thus had been reached between the administration and the Congress.

Many Members, at that time, were doubtful that a fair and equitable result could be reached that benefited America's railroad workers as well as the economy served by the railroads. I personally doubted that the new Board would find a solution that was fair, because the members of this Board were not appointed by the Congress of the United States as they would have been under my legislation, but rather the members of that Board, under the bill that the House and Senate finally accepted, and that was signed into law by

Had the Congress simply intended to rubber stamp the recommendations of the Presidential Emergency Board No. 219, we could have done so right then and there, and not put America's railroad workers and the interested public, including the worker's families, through the last several months of charade and misplaced expectations.

Out my way in Montana there are 11,000 Montanans, including 8,000 annuitants, and 3,000 rail workers who were at least a little hopeful with the President's Board, and that the Board would provide recommendations that would benefit the rail workers and their families. Those Montanans are now disappointed and angered by the results.

The President's Board decked the merits of the issue placed before it, and relied, instead, on redefining congressional intent, and thus thumbed its nose at the Congress, and thumbed its nose at railroad workers across this country.

The Special Board's report exacerbates what is left of labor-management relations in the railroad industry, rather than leaving all parties with the feeling that the process gave everyone a fair shake. By leaving the results of the PEB in place, rail workers are left with work rules that are unfair, force them to be away from their family for weeks on end, and with only a token pay increase.

Mr. ECKART. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. ECKART. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I spoke with the gentleman about joining him in participation of this special order, and wanted to speak on that one point on the remark of the gentleman from Montana, because the precision of the point he made needed to be underscored.

As a member of the subcommittee, chaired by our colleague, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT], that oversaw the preparations in the days up to the strike, and held hearings on the day of the strike, our subcommittee was fully of the clear impression that we did not intend to simply rubber stamp the activities of the Presidential Emergency Board and its recommendations earlier this year in February.

Had our subcommittee intended to do that, and had the Congress wanted to join in that, we could have simply done so by simple resolution of our committee and the Congress combined. The fact of the matter is that we specifically placed one piece of legislation in the bill which refers to, long known as demonstrably inequitable, in which we hoped that the Special Board was tasked to meet an evaluation of the specifics of the earlier recommendations of PEB 219.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the chairman of the relevant committee on this matter, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. Swift].

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend very much for yielding.

If we had intended the original PEB's to go into effect, we would have done that. It is not that no one proposed that. It is not that that option was not considered. It is that that option was considered and expressly rejected.

Therefore, what could have possibly been in the minds of the people to whom we referred this a second time? It seems to me that we have to have the brains approximately of a granite post if we assume that we sent it down there so they could do what the PEB did, when we could have soldered it at that point in time ourselves, if we had seen that as the appropriate public policy to date.

Instead, what we said was, that a long rail strike would be disastrous to the Nation's economy, that we were not equipped to deal quickly with an evaluation of all the complex matters that were still at issue between the various parties, and therefore we created another review board to examine those.

The presumption has to be to respond to those. That was the congressional intent. That is not what the Board did.

Now, what concerns me is that I think in stifling organized rail labor on this issue, this Board has done something else. That is, I think, to foul the nest of the Federal Railway Labor Act. It is an elaborate act designed specifically to deal uniquely with labor-management disputes in the rail industry, because it recognizes the rail industry uniquely central to the core of our economy.

It establishes an elaborate process by which it is hoped strikes will be averted. In this particular instance, 3 years of work went into this proposal. Three years of work went into trying to work out the various things that were at issue and trying to find a resolution and they could not.

No one can seriously suggest you want to then take 3 years of complex issues that cannot be resolved by people who have been focusing exclusively on those issues and send it up to Congress and we are going to settle all that in 24 hours.

The alternative is to take time to understand all those details, take it on issue by issue, decide those in some rational process, and that would take months to do properly while the Nation's rail industry is on strike, a wholly impossible thing to contemplate.

What the second board has done is to reduce any faith anybody has in that process. They may well have totally fouled the whole mechanism of the Federal Railway Labor Act.

We cannot have a system that dumps complicated labor-management negotiations in the lap of Congress where we are supposed to act instantly.

Therefore, I think we are going to have to take a very, very close look not only at what has been done to the men and women who work on our railroads and run our railroads, but they have forced the issue where we are going to have to take a look as to whether the whole underlying legislation of the Federal Railway Labor Act is any longer going to be able to function and serve this country well.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Recovering my time, Mr. Speaker, let me ask the chairman if he anticipates that in taking that closer look that he mentioned, that would include the possibility of beginning hearings on the current usefulness of the Railway Labor Act. Those hearings, as I understand it, would be under the jurisdiction of the gentleman's committee.

Mr. SWIFT. I have announced that we will have a hearing on this issue on October 3, very shortly after we return. We will see where that leads us, but I think there will be some Members who will be interested in examining the specifics of this issue, this specific labor dispute.

I am going to be interested in trying to determine what is left of the Federal Railway Labor Act after this Board completely refused to do the job that Congress expressly and clearly intended it to do.

As chairman of the Subcommittee on Transportation and Hazardous Materials, I would like to express my concerns that the special board appointed by Congress to review the work of Presidential Emergency Board No. 219 did not adequately review or attempt to resolve those issues still in disagreement between rail labor and rail management. While Congress placed certain standards of review upon the special board, it is clear that House Joint Resolution 222 intended to allow any party to request "a modification of a particular Presidential Emergency Board recommendation" [sec. 1(d)]. Instead of addressing the merits of specific requests for modification of certain PEB recommendations, and the special board has thrown up a number of procedural technicalities, the result of which has been to defeat the clear intent of Congress of due process for all parties in the dispute.

I believe that the Congress can be justly proud for having crafted legislation in a 24-hour period that was intended to create such a dispute resolution procedure and did avert a nationwide rail strike. Having said that, I am concerned with the lock-step decisionmaking process that inevitably confronts Congress in the ultimate resolution of labor-management disputes in the rail industry. In the case of the recent dispute, for example, Railway Labor Act section 6 notices were first served in the spring of 1988; yet 3 years later Congress was forced to create emergency legislation over a 24-hour period to bring this dispute to a resolution. I do not believe that railroads should have to be run this way.

While there is an obligation by Congress to the public at large to ensure that essential transportation services be maintained and a commensurate obligation to ensure due process for all parties in such disputes, I am troubled that all labor-management disputes in the rail industry seem to end up in the lap of Congress. We are not equipped to resolve the multitude of complex technical issues in dispute, and—as the recent interpretation of congressional intent by the special board indicates—it is difficult to ensure a due process for dispute resolution when parties are constrained from utilizing the ultimate arbiter of self-help actions.

Consequently, I believe it important that the Subcommittee on Transportation and Hazardous Materials should hold a hearing on options available to Congress for ensuring due process in labor-management disputes in the rail industry. I have scheduled this hearing for October 3, 1991. I look forward to the opportunity to explore congressional options in the upcoming hearing.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for taking the time to join me in this special order.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman taking this special order. I want to associate myself with the statements of the gentleman from Montana, as well as the gentleman who preceded my comments in the well, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT], the chairman of the Energy and Commerce Subcommittee.

All of us obviously cooperated in mid-April. We thought the solution that was arrived at in terms of creating a new Presidential Emergency Board would provide some good-faith consideration of the issues that divided rail labor and management, and issues that persisted after the initial Presidential Emergency Board finding of January 15, 1991. The decision and outcome, even at that point, provided rail labor with less than "half a loaf of bread" as a settlement and back-to-work order.

Quite candidly, the Presidential Emergency Board that was initially appointed failed, failed in its attempt to try to reconcile the issues between rail labor and management. We know there was a serious impasse and the decision of the 11 rail labor unions that were affected by such contracts and their membership was to commence a strike, a legal strike as provided under the law. After a 3-year disagreement in which there had not been an accord reached in terms of the collective-bargaining process under the Railway Labor Act, and that strike commenced after all other avenues had been explored in mid-April 1991.

When the Congress faced this, we received the message from the President and from his Secretary of Transportation, Mr. Skinner, that indeed the strike would cause grave economic problems and they pleaded for cooperation on the part of the Congress in terms of taking some action and sound dire warnings as to the adverse economic crisis that would occur should this strike action continue.

Clearly, the action that they sought was the imposition of the Presidential Emergency Board—PEB 219—order of January 15.

The Congress, to the contrary, did not provide for that. They did not provide for the implementation of that order because most in Congress knew, and I think in good conscience Members knew that the rail labor did not agree with such findings, and almost all of management did agree with that particular course, which I think indicates the tenor and the tilt of that January Presidential Emergency Board bias. The PEB 219 had failed in its task. So when presented with the option to immediately implement that, the Congress rejected that idea as being unacceptable and unfair, and in fact opted for a back-to-work order only with the Presidential appointment of a new Presidential Emergency Board.

Inherent in that agreement was the understanding that there would be an opportunity to revisit the issues that had separated rail labor and management and disagreements with the findings of the Presidential Emergency Board, the January Board.

Of course, the upshot of it is that after bringing a large number of issues before that newly constituted Presidential Emergency Board, 60 days after that, the Board rejected every single issue brought before it by rail labor. They rejected every single issue, and what they did was implement the January 15, recommendations of the Presidential Emergency Board that, of course, had triggered and were responsible for the legal strike, the work stoppage, that was in place in mid-April. So, clearly, this Board disregarded the intent of Congress, acted in bad faith, and the clear opportunity to in fact bring about some redress in terms of the type of compensation, health care, important work rules for railroad workers, and other provisions of labor contract.

This really points out in my mind's eye and in that of many others the failure of the Railway Labor Act to function fairly. It is not functioning in terms of bringing about a fair shake for working men and women across this country who are trying to participate in the collective-bargaining process.

I think it is not functioning because we do not have a good-faith effort on the part of the Bush administration in terms of people appointed to the Presidential Emergency Boards. It is not functioning today because the administration is favoring management in the collective-bargaining process and management doesn't need to bargain when the law is administrated in their favor.

When the new special Presidential Emergency Board was appointed, many of my constituents, my friends in rail labor, that were affected by it were very displeased with the fact that I and many other Members of this House, almost on a unanimous basis, had acted in partial accord with the administration demand. They dismissed the new Presidential Emergency Board as an opportunity for some accommodation with their concerns.

So I must say to those constituents, they were right. You were right. You cannot trust the Bush administration. You cannot trust the Presidential Emergency Board. There was a bad-faith effort that existed in January. That bad-faith effort persisted in the appointment and findings of this new Board and the result has done a great disservice to the working men and women in my district and across this country who are looking for a fair shake in terms of the collective-bargaining process.

This result has set back this Congress, I think we have set back this Nation in terms of our ability to step in and try to do something by virtue of the administration's action in this instance.

It is a tough lesson. We do not have to pay for it, but I will tell you, I get thousands of constituents who are affected by this adversely, and I very much regret and will do whatever I can to rectify this action. This FEB decision is impossible, an improper decision that occurred here and the incredible lack of good faith on the part of the administration on this issue. I think you can throw trust out the window in terms of what is going on with regard to future Presidential Emergency Boards. There is no hope in the future to see actions which will redress and act in a fair manner, rather there is a constant realization, an acknowledgement that something is wrong with the National Government. After 10 years of the Government taking apart the collective-bargaining process and labor rights, we are going to end up with more acrimony in this country and an unwillingness on the part of people we represent to cooperate. When there is no cooperation or fair play for them in terms of the system the reaction and result will be more labor strife, not less, and a lack of confidence in the highest office in the land and, yes, this Congress.

In other words, what this speaks to, is a growing polarization in terms of our work force and the people across this country, the perception that you are not going to get a fair hearing in terms of issues that affect the individual in terms of your jobs and your working life, that the Government is operating to take advantage of the person, and against the working people in this country.

I for one will not be a part of such effort to compromise. I will tell you that. My goal is to see that this law is changed by whatever means possible to gain the type of redress for these rail workers is a very high priority in terms of my efforts in this House, and I will try to get as many Members as I can to join me, along with the gentleman from Montana, and others that have voiced concerns about this.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman's expression of concern and we appreciate his leadership on this important and vital issue as well.

Well, it is clear now that we have seen the work result of the Emergency Board, that America's rail workers have been suckered.

The members of this board provided America's rail workers with nothing, virtually nothing, zero, zilch, zip, nothing.

If President Bush had shown a willingness to sign the bill that I introduced in this Congress, the result would have been that the majority leader of the Senate and the Speaker of the House, not President Bush, would have appointed the members of this Emergency Board. I think if that had happened, and I will just bet dollars to doughnuts that America's rail workers would agree, the results of this board would have been very, very different.

Another thing that would have been different if the President had taken the bill that I offered, that is that our workers would have begun to immediately receive a small but, for them, significant 5 percent pay increase. That would have made up in part for the fact that they have not received a pay increase since 1987.

Mr. Speaker, I am more than delighted that the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Washington State has agreed and announced that he will hold a hearing, a rather historic hearing, on the basic law that affects these matters for America's system of rail transportation, a system that is designed to protect the bargaining rights of the workers in that transportation system.

I believe the chairman said that that hearing will be held in early October.

Mr. Speaker, I join the gentleman from Ohio who spoke earlier, as well as the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] in eagerly awaiting those hearings and trying to determine at that time if we cannot find a way to rectify the damage that has been done by the Emergency Board appointed by President George Bush.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring to light a broken promise, a betrayal by the administration of America's railroad workers.

Just 3½ months ago this body adopted legislation to end the national rail strike. However, the Congress of the United States would be fooling itself if we took full credit for sending the railroad workers back to their jobs. It was, after all, the railroad workers and rail management, in cooperation with this body, which brought a speedy end to the national strike.

But what is hanging over America's railroads now, is not the threat of another rail strike, but the work of the Presidential Emergency Board.

Mr. Speaker, the U.S. Government made a promise when the one-day national rail strike ended. It was a simple promise—go back to work and we'll arrange for a new special board to hear your concerns and make a fair decision.

The results of the first Presidential Emergency Board were disturbing to both management and labor. The railroad workers had rejected that plan, especially the wage and work provisions. Most railroad workers, I should note, had not received a wage increase since 1987.

A new special board was formed to examine the findings of its predecessor, take testimony from management and labor, and render a fair decision. The starting point for this new special board was to be the previous board's recommendations. However, little did we know that the starting point would wind up as the conclusion.

So, 56 days after the board began work to provide for a settlement of the outstanding railroad labor-management disputes, and after thousands of pages of testimony, we have the same decision that we had before this whole process began.

Now, why did the Congress put everything else aside and overwhelmingly pass legislation to end the rail strike, why did almost half a million men and women go back to work on America's railroads confident of a fair solution to a 3-year problem? The reason was simple. Trust. We had faith that the special board would render a decision which was fair to labor and management alike. Instead, what did we get? The railroad workers, Congress, and America got railroad.

The special board spent their time trying to decide how to repackage the original board's decision. The board didn't even bother to change the language of the decision, they simply agreed with it. But what I find to be the greatest outrage, to this body and the men and women of the rail industry, is the fact that the board devoted most of its 17-page decision to a description of what it thought was the intent of Congress in creating the special board. Then the board argued that it could do nothing to overturn the earlier results of the original board or resolve any of the outstanding disputes.

Mr. Speaker, we hoped that the President would appoint an Emergency Board that would render a fair decision. Instead, what we got were findings irrelevant to the solution of the problem. I hope that our economy, America's railroads, and its workers don't end up paying a painfully high price for the failures of this board.

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to ask for fairness for America's rail workers.

When the Congress worked through the night in early April after rail workers objected to the recommendations of the Presidential Emergency Board, we did so in good faith. Many rail workers had not had a wage increase since 1987, and it seemed that their objections were well-founded. At that time, we did not push the President into a corner, demanding that he deal. What we asked then was for a simple review of the board's decision, and a sincere attempt at compromise.

It was a relief for the country when the President accepted our compromise legislation, and requested a more palatable solution within the next 90 days from a newly appointed emergency board. This appeared to be an exercise in responsible government, a decision in the interest of the national economy. Over the course of reconsideration by the new Board, we here in Congress, along with America's rail workers, viewed developments hopefully. Our joint efforts had averted a crippling nationwide strike, and we had replaced enmity with a search for common agreement.

Apparently, this was simply an illusion. While we were awaiting sound recommendation for a reasonable compromise, members of the Board were wasting taxpayers' money, concocting convincing ways to do little while appearing to do a lot. When the new Board simply reissued the old recommendations with a new cover sheet and title page, we here in Congress realized that constructive compromise was too much to hope for. Once again the White House had shown blatant disregard for American workers.

I stand here today astounded by the lack of concern displayed by the White House with regard to this issue. Clearly, the President had no intention of peaceably settling this strike. The charade perpetrated at the expense of America's rail workers says loud and clear that domestic issues are far from the top of the White House priorities' list. Now, that you are home in Washington Mr. President, I urge you to clean out your overstuffed in-box, and carefully consider those domestic issues you have so neatly tucked away. While it is true that workers flung across the four corners of the world deserve our attention, your time would be best served by taking care of our own.

Mr. SIKORSKI. Mr. Speaker, 3½ years ago, rail workers in the country entered national contract negotiations with a semblance of hope for fair treatment. Today they have none.

We in Congress did not become directly involved in the rail dispute until last April. That was after rail workers had endured endless rounds of negotiations, had gone through numerous mediation sessions, and had their case pleaded before the PEB. We became involved because the rail workers exercised their right to strike. They told us that they had to strike—that there was no other way to make the process work. They told us that they were being shafted and that the PEB report was unfair and skewed against them.

I agreed with them and I know many of my colleagues did as well. When we reviewed the PEB report we saw glaring inequities. Nevertheless, Congress—balancing all the factors, including the good of the country, the right of these workers to strike, and the rigid process of the Railway Labor Act—devised what was believed to be a solution. Congress ended the strike and created a special board to review and modify that original report with the notion of fairness in mind.

Rail workers and I were skeptical a special board would work. But as a body and a Nation we are built on the idea of due process. Now Members of Congress should understand the feelings of frustration and betrayal that were expressed by rail workers around the country before the strike. For out of a contentious 118-page report, the special board tells us that there is not a single item, error or inequity that needs to be changed. Baloney.

Stated simply, the special board did not meet its mandate. It deliberately flaunted the will of Congress. As someone who was part of the round the clock efforts to create a mechanism to resolve the dispute, I can say unequivocally that we have been handed a decision which is misguided and patently unjust. This special board deliberately scoffed at the process. As one small example, the union leaders who went to the special board to plead their case were greeted at the opening hearing with the chairman saying, "Good morning suckers." The special board then made all of Congress "suckers."

Something is terribly wrong here and we must address it. I wrote Chairman SWIFT and I am pleased that he agreed to hold hearings on the options available to Congress for ensuring due process in these disputes. It is critical that we use this opportunity to review the findings of the special board and investigate legislative options for correcting its blatant misreading of the law.

This situation is not over. We will face it again, on the next round of rail negotiations. Working men and women of this country must not suffer because the process is unfair. Congress should not be forced into contract negotiations because the process doesn't work. We are the only ones who can correct this problem, and we must do it soon.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the subject of my special order today.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

TIMBER WORKERS OF WASHINGTON NEED HELP OF THE CONGRESS: JOBS NOT WELFARE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. CHANDLER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, I will insert in the RECORD at the appropriate time an article from the Washington Post of July 27, 1991, entitled Saw-Toothed Despair Leaves Mark on Northwestern Loggers.

Mr. Speaker, I want my colleagues, before they go home for this August recess, to think about a situation that is outlined in an article by Lou Cannon in this week's Washington Post. I want my colleagues to know that timber workers, people who rely on the forests in the State of Washington want jobs, not welfare.

Mr. Speaker, we need the help of Congress. We need your help.

In the article Mr. Cannon points out that because the northern spotted owl has been listed under the Endangered Species Act we literally have found ourselves in a state of chaos in the States of Oregon, Washington, and even parts of California.

A court decision based on all of this turmoil has set aside 11.6 million acres in the States of Oregon and Washington. To put that in perspective let me point out that 11.6 million acres would comprise the combined States of New Jersey, Massachusetts, Delaware, and Rhode Island.

Mr. Speaker, we cannot touch a tree on it, bringing about an absolutely catastrophic reduction of harvest levels in the Pacific Northwest. The potential loss of jobs from this action could be 40,000 to 60,000 people; 25,000 people in the State of Washington alone.

Now let us recall that those are not just numbers. That is a father or a mother coming home some night and telling the family, "We do not have a job." That is somebody trying to pick up the pieces from the community that may well be isolated from anywhere else, trying to sell a home that suddenly becomes worthless, finding themselves in a community where businesses are going broke, where schools cannot be supported because there is no more tax revenue, where there is despair to the point that some have even resorted to taking their own lives.

Mr. Speaker, these are human beings and we must keep that in mind. They are also skilled and highly trained professionals.

If you do not believe it, just visit our State and watch the operator of a modern head rig, which is the first saw to touch a log in a sawmill. They are also truck drivers, they are loggers, they are scalers, they are mill workers, and they are concerned conservationists.

They work and they work hard. They work under difficult conditions, in snow, on terrain that would be challenging to the best of us. They face layoffs and they often work for annual incomes that are substandard to the rest of society. But they do so willingly because they love their jobs and their communities.

They are business owners. Many of them are struggling and have invested their life savings and stand to be wiped out. They stand to lose their family business; or they may lose millions in equipment that cannot be used for any other purpose, such as an $80,000 logging truck, Caterpillars, spars, mills, and so forth. For them this represents more than a loss of independence, it is the end of their American dream.

Mr. Speaker, in July I visited the community of Usk, which is in the Speaker's district, a $388 million paper plant.

Mr. Speaker, that is a huge investment. It is a risk investment and they need a supply of timber in order to survive. And we need those products. The paper which I hold in my hand is probably from a Northwest log; we need the lumber, we need the plywood, the medicines, and all the other products that come from timber.

More than anything right now we need an increased harvest and we need your help and cooperation.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you to take a look at the situation in the Northwest and give it your attention. Please keep an open mind. If you can, colleagues, visit the Northwest and see how we harvest and replant.

Look at places where, yes, there is a clear cut and right next to it is an old-growth stand and somewhere nearby a 10-, 20-, 30-, 40-, or 50-year-old stand of trees and others that are ready to be harvested a second time.

Mr. Speaker, we can have a balanced solution. But we also must include in our equation the human needs of people who desperately, desperately need the help of the U.S. Congress.

SAW-TOOTHED DESPAIR LEAVES MARK ON NORTHWESTERN LOGGERS

(By Lou Cannon)

FORKS, WASH.—Early last month a despondent 31-year-old logger named Jeff King, facing the prospects of child support payments and unemployment, shot himself to death with a handgun in the living room of his mobile home here.

Dave Westerlund, a friend of King since boyhood who had talked to him a few minutes before his suicide, said later that he was a troubled man who was particularly depressed because his livelihood was coming to an end.

Such despair is a sign of the times in this logging town of 3,200 on Washington state's Olympic Peninsula, where the forced decline of the timber industry to save the northern spotted owl has coincided with increases in domestic violence, alcoholism, mental health breakdowns and juvenile crime and even attempted juvenile suicide.

"People are used to down times in the timber industry, but now there is no hope," said Ginger Haberman, wife of the Forks mayor.

Westerlund, 34, the owner of a small logging company is feeling the impact. He has not logged for a month, is $200,000 in debt and is faced with the loss of his equipment and his house. His wife, a dental technician, is working more than 100 miles away to support their two children.

"I've looked at jobs from Oregon to the Canadian border, but there's too many others in the same boat," Westerlund said. "Some of the workers don't understand what's happening, but they're not willing to lose homes and families and everything they have. When the reality sinks in, it's going to get worse. I'm afraid it's going to get violent out here."

The reality is difficult to define statistically because much of the dislocation in Forks is based on what is expected to happen when previously purchased timber sales expire in the next few months. But the Forks Re-Employment Support Center handled 159 jobless cases in June of 1991 compared with 59 in June of last year.

The growing social disorder in Forks is symptomatic of similar situations in timber-dependent communities throughout Washington, Oregon and Northern California, where 11.6 million acres of forests have been set aside as spotted owl habitat under an order issued June 24 in Seattle by U.S. District Judge William L. Dwyer.

The order gave the U.S. Forest Service until March 5 to determine a protection plan for the owl, a shy and nocturnal bird that biologists have found in second-growth and replanted forests as well as in the old-growth stands of Douglas fir and hemlock originally thought to be the owl's breeding habitat. The acreage set aside for the owl constitutes a land mass almost as large as New Jersey, Massachusetts, Delaware and Rhode Island combined. Less than 3 million acres of the set-aside land is old-growth forest.

Putting this much second-growth land off limits to logging has been the culminating blow in a series of pro-environmental actions that has reduced the timber yield from Forest Service lands in the Northwest from 5 billion board feet a year in the late 1980s to 1 billion board feet in 1990. University of Washington foresters say the 5 billion figure is the rate at which the region's forests are "sustainable," or capable of replacing themselves. A recent scientific study commissioned by Congress estimated that for there to be a "medium to high" probability of sustaining the forests and protecting the wildlife, the federal government could sell no more than 1.7 billion board feet of timber from the national forests each year.

While the debate rages in the courts, Congress and federal agencies, communities such as Forks are teetering on the edge of ruin. Rich Nalziger, a special assistant to Gov. Booth Gardner (D), puts the job loss at 25,000 in Washington state over the next three years and says that some rural communities will be destroyed. Senator Slade Gorton (R) estimates a loss of 40,000 jobs in the Northwest, plus thousands of other service jobs. The study commissioned by Congress estimated a loss of as many as 38,000 jobs.

On a recent evening in Forks, residents gathered in a downtown hall to pour out their frustrations to a visiting reporter. They talked of declining opportunities for their children and expressed resentment that loggers, have been stereotyped as rapacious predators who do not care about the stewardship of the forests on which they depend for a living.

These residents, some angry and others fighting back tears, seemed bewildered at the prevalent outside view that forests in the Northwest are in decline, when timber growth on Forest Service lands is actually increasing. They wondered why so many people overlook the 3.5 million acres of old-growth forests already protected in parks and wilderness areas. They railed against "preservationists" for ignoring human costs and for using the owl as an excuse to lock up forests that were not old growth at all. And they complained that the news media failed to tell the loggers' side of the story and that politicians made empty promises without offering any real help.

"I see people being put against the wall, and they don't see how they can be put in such a bad light," said Bob Tuttle, a young logger.

What worries Mayor Dick Haberman is that the increase in domestic violence and other social disorder has hit so hard even before the massive unemployment considered a certainty here. As Haberman sees it, loggers are being ground down by competing forces without any say in their own future.

"The typical logger is simply following a landowner's instruction, but he bears the brunt of the pain," Haberman said.

Though the issue in Washington, D.C., often is presented as a struggle between environmentalists and the timber industry, many big timber companies until recently have taken a low profile in the debate, leaving the small loggers who work by contract on federal and state land to fend for themselves. A private analyst of the industry said anonymously that some major companies had pursued this "shortsighted view" to eliminate competition even though their own land will be the next targets.

Gorton has observed that the big private timber owners will be compensated from the public treasury if prevented from harvesting trees. In contrast, there will be no such relief for communities such as Forks, where most logging occurs on Forest Service or state land.

"We laugh about the South and Appalachia and feel so cozy here," says Mike McGavick of Seattle, Gorton's former legislative aide. "But we're about to create a rural underclass right here in the Northwest."

The residents of such forgotten towns as Forks do not call themselves an underclass. But they feel frightened and isolated from the power centers in Washington, D.C., or the state capital of Olympia, which to them seem deaf to their cry that there is enough forest for loggers and owls.

"We're not getting anywhere, politically or any other way," says Westerlund. "Whenever there was a rally, I'd shut down the company and attend. I've gone to all the rallies and the protests, but we've lost every battle."

Gorton acknowledges that Forks is having a hard time being heard.

"The people of Forks are truly the most underrepresented category of Americans," he said in an interview. "They are ordinary working-class people. None of the defenders of the Endangered Species Act has even spoken to the human consequences. There's nothing for these people. They stand to lose their homes and stores and communities."

James Waldo, a Seattle attorney with conservationist credentials, worries that there will be a backlash against the environmental movement and the Endangered Species Act unless the plight of the loggers is taken seriously.

"People in this area have two tracks, two sets of values," Waldo said. "They want to save the environment, the owl, the salmon. At the same time they are vaguely concerned about the impact on private property and want to know when the government will leave them alone. These are conflicting values, and there is little room for reconciling them."

Back in Forks, the rising cost of lumber, which nationally has added $3,000 to the cost of a typical $150,000 house, is seen as the distant light in the tunnel. "Things won't turn around until toilet paper costs $5 a roll," says Dean Hurn, one of the biggest Forks loggers. The light in the tunnel for Gorton is the possibility, which he admits is less than 50-50, that Congress will pass legislation setting aside certain public forest lands for logging.

The talk of such long distance solutions seems like pie in the sky to the angry residents of Forks. Even here, however, there are those who are beginning to take a long view.

One of these is Dean Hurn's son, Rick, 32, who runs a small timber salvaging operation called Last Camp Timber. Wearing a button that said, "Give a hoot for people, too," he recently toured one of the last lumbering operations in Forest Service mountains above Forks, showing off stands of trees that had blown down in a freak windstorm and are rotting on the ground but cannot be harvested under Judge Dwyer's ruling.

"We need to survive somehow and keep our spirits up," he said philosophically. "This [controversy] could go on for 20 years. When it is all settled, there are still going to be trees here."

P	QUARTER

(Mark one square only)

IDENTIFICATION NUMBER

☐ YES ☐ NO

NOTE on ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

(i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)

(ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".

(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:

(i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.

(ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

☐ CHECK IF ADDRESS IS DIFFERENT THAN PREVIOUSLY REPORTED

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE on ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE on ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) description, (b) quantity distributed, (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and, if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out items "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly Report."

PURSUANT TO FEDERAL REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

P	QUARTER

IDENTIFICATION NUMBER _____

☐ YES ☐ NO

NOTE on ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

- (i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)
- (ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".
- (b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:
  - (i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.
  - (ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

☐ CHECK IF ADDRESS IS DIFFERENT THAN PREVIOUSLY REPORTED

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE on ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER—State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE on ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have ☐ terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) description, (b) quantity distributed, (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed.)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and, if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out items "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly Report."

STATEMENT OF VERIFICATION

[Omitted in printing]

NOTE on ITEM "D."—(a) IN GENERAL. The term "contribution" includes anything of value. When an organization or individual uses printed or duplicated matter in a campaign attempting to influence legislation, money received by such organization or individual—for such printed or duplicated matter—is a "contribution." "The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution"—§ 302(a) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN EMPLOYER.—(i) In general. Item "D" is designed for the reporting of all receipts from which expenditures are made, or will be made, in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Receipts of Business Firms and Individuals.—A business firm (or individual) which is subject to the Lobbying Act by reason of expenditures which it makes in attempting to influence legislation—but which has no funds to expend except those which are available in the ordinary course of operating a business not connected in any way with the influencing of legislation—will have no receipts to report, even though it does have expenditures to report.

(iii) Receipts of Multi-purpose Organizations.—Some organizations do not receive any funds which are to be expended solely for the purpose of attempting to influence legislation. Such organizations make such expenditures out of a general fund raised by dues, assessments, or other contributions. The percentage of the general fund which is used for such expenditures indicates the percentage of dues, assessments, or other contributions which may be considered to have been paid for that purpose. Therefore, in reporting receipts, such organizations may specify what that percentage is, and report their dues, assessments, and other contributions on that basis. However, each contributor of $500 or more is to be listed, regardless of whether the contribution was made solely for legislative purposes.

(c) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE.—(i) In general. In the case of many employees, all receipts will come under Items "D 5" (received for services) and "D 12" (expense money and reimbursements). In the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, it will be presumed that your employer is to reimburse you for all expenditures which you make in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Employer as Contributor of $500 or More.—When your contribution from your employer (in the form of salary, fee, etc.) amounts to $500 or more, it is not necessary to report such contribution under "D 13" and "D 14," since the amount has already been reported under "D 5," and the name of the "employer" has been given under Item "B" on page 1 of this report.

QUARTERLY REPORTS*

*All alphanumeric characters and monetary amounts refer to receipts and expenditures on page 2, paragraphs D and E of the Quarterly Report Form.

The following reports for the first calendar quarter of 1991 were received too late to be included in the published reports for that quarter:

OFFICE BUILDING, WASHINGTON, D.C. 20515

PURSUANT TO FEDERAL REGULATION OF LOBBYING ACT

P	QUARTER
	1st	2d	3d	4th

IDENTIFICATION NUMBER

Is this an Amendment?

☐ YES ☐ NO

NOTE on ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

- (i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)
  - (ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".
- (b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:
- (i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.
  - (ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

☐ CHECK IF ADDRESS IS DIFFERENT THAN PREVIOUSLY REPORTED

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE on ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER —State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE on ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(b) Before undertaking any activities in connection with legislative interests, organizations and individuals subject to the Lobbying Act are required to file a "Preliminary" Report (Registration).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) description, (b) quantity distributed, (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

(Answer items 1, 2, and 3 in the space below. Attach additional pages if more space is needed.)

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and, if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out items "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly Report."

STATEMENT OF VERIFICATION

[Omitted in printing]

NOTE on ITEM "D."—(a) IN GENERAL. The term "contribution" includes anything of value. When an organization or individual uses printed or duplicated matter in a campaign attempting to influence legislation, money received by such organization or individual—for such printed or duplicated matter—is a "contribution." "The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution"—§ 302(a) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN EMPLOYER.—(i) In general. Item "D" is designed for the reporting of all receipts from which expenditures are made, or will be made, in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Receipts of Business Firms and Individuals.—A business firm (or individual) which is subject to the Lobbying Act by reason of expenditures which it makes in attempting to influence legislation—but which has no funds to expend except those which are available in the ordinary course of operating a business not connected in any way with the influencing of legislation—will have no receipts to report, even though it does have expenditures to report.

(iii) Receipts of Multi-purpose Organizations.—Some organizations do not receive any funds which are to be expended solely for the purpose of attempting to influence legislation. Such organizations make such expenditures out of a general fund raised by dues, assessments, or other contributions. The percentage of the general fund which is used for such expenditures indicates the percentage of dues, assessments, or other contributions which may be considered to have been paid for that purpose. Therefore, in reporting receipts, such organizations may specify what that percentage is, and report their dues, assessments, and other contributions on that basis. However, each contributor of $500 or more is to be listed, regardless of whether the contribution was made solely for legislative purposes.

(c) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE.—(i) In general. In the case of many employees, all receipts will come under Items "D 5" (received for services) and "D 12" (expense money and reimbursements). In the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, it will be presumed that your employer is to reimburse you for all expenditures which you make in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Employer as Contributor of $500 or More.—When your contribution from your employer (in the form of salary, fee, etc.) amounts to $500 or more, it is not necessary to report such contribution under "D 13" and "D 14," since the amount has already been reported under "D 5," and the name of the "employer" has been given under Item "B" on page 1 of this report.
