Subtitle C—National Child Protection Act

SEC. 881. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "National Child Protection Act of 1993".

SEC. 882. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) more than 2,500,000 reports of suspected child abuse and neglect are made each year, and increases have occurred in recent years in the abuse of children by persons who have previously committed crimes of child abuse or other serious crimes;

(2) although the great majority of child care providers are caring and dedicated professionals, child abusers and others who harm or prey on children frequently seek employment in or volunteer for positions that give them access to children;

(3) nearly 6,000,000 children received day care in 1990, and this total is growing rapidly to an estimated 8,000,000 children by 1995;

(4) exposure to child abusers and others who harm or prey on children is harmful to the physical and emotional well-being of children;

(5) there is no reliable, centralized national source through which child care organizations may obtain the benefit of a nationwide criminal background check on persons who provide or seek to provide child care;

(6) some States maintain automated criminal background files and provide criminal history information to child care organizations on persons who provide or seek to provide child care; and

(7) because State and national criminal justice databases are inadequate to permit effective national background checks, persons convicted of crimes of child abuse or other serious crimes may gain employment at a child care organization.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this subtitle are—

(1) to establish a national system through which child care organizations may obtain the benefit of a nationwide criminal background check to determine if persons who are current or prospective child care providers have committed child abuse crimes or other serious crimes;

(2) to establish minimum criteria for State laws and procedures that permit child care organizations to obtain the benefit of nationwide criminal background checks to determine if persons who are current or prospective child care providers have committed child abuse crimes or other serious crimes;

(3) to provide procedural rights for persons who are subject to nationwide criminal background checks, including procedures to challenge and correct inaccurate background check information;

(4) to establish a national system for the reporting by the States of child abuse crime information; and

(5) to document and study the problem of child abuse by providing statistical and informational data on child abuse and related crimes to the Department of Justice and other interested parties.

SEC. 883. DEFINITIONS.

In this subtitle—

"authorized agency" means a division or office of a State designated by a State to report, receive, or disseminate information under this subtitle.

"background check crime" means a child abuse crime, murder, manslaughter, aggravated assault, kidnapping, arson, sexual assault, domestic violence, incest, indecent exposure, prostitution, promotion of prostitution, and a felony offense involving the use or distribution of a controlled substance.

"child" means a person who is a child for purposes of the criminal child abuse law of a State.

"child abuse" means the physical or mental injury, sexual abuse or exploitation, neglectful treatment, negligent treatment, or maltreatment of a child by any person in violation of the criminal child abuse laws of a State, but does not include discipline administered by a parent or legal guardian to his or her child provided it is reasonable in manner and moderate in degree and otherwise does not constitute cruelty.

"child abuse crime" means a crime committed under any law of a State that establishes criminal penalties for the commission of child abuse by a parent or other family member of a child or by any other person.

"child abuse crime information" means the following facts concerning a person who is under indictment for, or has been convicted of, a child abuse crime: full name, social security number, age, race, sex, date of birth, height, weight, hair and eye color, legal residence address, a brief description of the child abuse crime or offenses for which the person is under indictment or has been convicted, and any other information that the Attorney General determines may be useful in identifying persons under indictment for, or convicted of, a child abuse crime.

"child care" means the provision of care, treatment, education, training, instruction, supervision, or recreation to children.

"domestic violence" means a felony or misdemeanor involving the use or threatened use of force by—

(A) a present or former spouse of the victim;

(B) a person with whom the victim shares a child in common;

(C) a person who is cohabiting with or has cohabited with the victim as a spouse; or

(D) any person defined as a spouse of the victim under the domestic or family violence laws of a State.

"exploitation" means child pornography and child prostitution.

"mental injury" means harm to a child's psychological or intellectual functioning, which may be exhibited by severe anxiety, depression, withdrawal or outward aggressive behavior, or a combination of those behaviors or by a change in behavior, emotional response, or cognition.

"national criminal background check system" means the system of information and identification relating to convicted and accused child abuse offenders that is maintained by the Attorney General under this subtitle.

"negligent treatment" means the failure to provide, for a reason other than poverty, adequate food, clothing, shelter, or medical care so as to seriously endanger the physical health of a child.

"physical injury" includes lacerations, fractured bones, burns, internal injuries, severe bruising, and serious bodily harm.

"provider" means

(A) a person who—
(i) is employed by or volunteers with a qualified entity;

(ii) who owns or operates a qualified entity; or

(iii) who has or may have unsupervised access to a child to whom the qualified entity provides child care; and

(B) a person who—

(i) seeks to be employed by or volunteer with a qualified entity;

(ii) seeks to own or operate a qualified entity; or

(iii) seeks to have or may have unsupervised access to a child to whom the qualified entity provides child care.

"qualified entity" means a business or organization, whether public, private, for-profit, not-for-profit, or voluntary, that provides child care or child care placement services, including a business or organization that licenses or certifies others to provide child care or child care placement services.

"sex crime" means an act of sexual abuse that is a criminal act.

"sexual abuse" includes the employment, use, persuasion, inducement, enticement, or coercion of a child to engage in, or assist another person to engage in, sexually explicit conduct or the rape, molestation, prostitution, or other form of sexual exploitation of children or incest with children.

"State" means a State, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and the Trust Territories of the Pacific.

SEC. 884. REPORTING BY THE STATES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—An authorized agency of a State shall report child abuse crime information to the national criminal background check system.

(b) PROVISION OF STATE CHILD ABUSE CRIME RECORDS TO THE NATIONAL CRIMINAL BACKGROUND CHECK SYSTEM.—(1) Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall—

(A) investigate the criminal records of each State and determine for each State a timetable by which the State should be able to provide child abuse crime records on an on-line capacity basis to the national criminal background check system;

(B) establish guidelines for the reporting of child abuse crime information, including guidelines relating to the format, content, and accuracy of child abuse crime information and other procedures for carrying out this subtitle; and

(C) notify each State of the determinations made pursuant to subparagraphs (A) and (B).

(2) The Attorney General shall require as a part of the State timetable that the State—

(A) achieve, by not later than the date that is 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act, at least 80 percent currency of child abuse crime case dispositions in computerized criminal history files for all child abuse crime cases in which there has been an entry of activity within the last 5 years; and

(B) continue to maintain such a system.

(c) EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION.—An authorized agency of a State shall maintain close liaison with the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect, the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, and the National Center for the Prosecution of Child Abuse for the exchange of information and technical assistance in cases of child abuse.

(d) ANNUAL SUMMARY.—(1) The Attorney General shall publish an annual statistical summary of the child abuse crime information reported under this subtitle.

(2) The annual statistical summary described in paragraph (1) shall not contain any information that may reveal the identity of any particular victim of a crime.

(e) ANNUAL REPORT.—The Attorney General shall publish an annual summary of each State's progress in reporting child abuse crime information to the national criminal background check system.

(f) STUDY OF CHILD ABUSE OFFENDERS.—(1) Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention shall begin a study based on a statistically significant sample of convicted child abuse offenders and other relevant information to determine—

(A) the percentage of convicted child abuse offenders who have more than 1 conviction for an offense involving child abuse;

(B) the percentage of convicted child abuse offenders who have been convicted of an offense involving child abuse in more than 1 State;

(C) whether there are crimes or classes of crimes, in addition to those defined as background check crimes in section 883, that are indicative of a potential to abuse children; and

(D) the extent to which and the manner in which instances of child abuse form a basis for convictions for crimes other than child abuse crimes.

(2) Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit a report to the Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate and the Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives containing a description of and a summary of the results of the study conducted pursuant to paragraph (1).

SEC. 885. BACKGROUND CHECKS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) A State may have in effect procedures (established by or under State statute or regulation) to permit a qualified entity to contact an authorized agency of the State to request a nationwide background check for the purpose of determining whether there is a report that a provider is under indictment for, or has been convicted of, a background check crime.

(2) The authorized agency shall access and review State and Federal records of background check crimes through the national criminal background check system and other criminal justice recordkeeping systems and shall respond promptly to the inquiry.

(b) GUIDELINES.—(1) The Attorney General shall establish guidelines for State background check procedures established under subsection (a), including procedures for carrying out the purposes of this subtitle.

(2) The guidelines established under paragraph (1) shall require—

(A) that no qualified entity may request a background check of a provider under subsection (a) unless the provider first completes and signs a statement that—

(i) contains the name, address, and date of birth appearing on a valid identification document (as defined by section 1028(d)(1) of title 18, United States Code) of the provider;

(ii) the provider is not under indictment for, and has not been convicted of, a background check crime and, if the provider is under indictment for or has been convicted of a background check crime, contains a description of the crime and the particulars of the indictment or conviction;

(iii) notifies the provider that the entity may request a background check under subsection (a);

(iv) notifies the provider of the provider's rights under subparagraph (B); and

(v) notifies the provider that prior to the receipt of the background check the qualified entity may choose to deny the provider unsupervised access to a child to whom the qualified entity provides child care;

(B) that each State establish procedures under which a provider who is the subject of a background check under subsection (a) is entitled—

(i) to obtain a copy of any background check report and any record that forms the basis for any such report; and

(ii) to challenge the accuracy and completeness of any information contained in any such report or record and obtain a prompt determination from an authorized agency as to the validity of such challenge;

(C) that an authorized agency to which a qualified entity has provided notice pursuant to subsection (a) make reasonable efforts to complete research in whatever State and local recordkeeping systems are available and in the national criminal background check system and respond to the qualified entity within 15 business days;

(D) that the response of an authorized agency to an inquiry pursuant to subsection (a) inform the qualified entity that the background check pursuant to this section—

(i) may not reflect all indictments or convictions for a background check crime;

(ii) is not certain to include arrest information; and

(iii) should not be the sole basis for determining the fitness of a provider;

(E) that the response of an authorized agency to an inquiry pursuant to subsection (a)—

(i) at a minimum, state whether the background check information set forth in the identification document required under subparagraph (A) is complete and accurate; and

(ii) be limited to the information reasonably required to accomplish the purposes of this subtitle;

(F) that no qualified entity may take action adverse to a provider, except that the qualified entity may choose to deny the provider unsupervised access to a child to whom the qualified entity provides child care, on the basis of a background check under subsection (a) until the provider has obtained a determination as to the validity of any challenge under subparagraph (B) or waived the right to make such challenge;

(G) that each State establish procedures to ensure that any background check under subsection (a) and the results thereof shall be requested by and provided only to—

(i) qualified entities identified by States;

(ii) authorized representatives of a qualified entity who have a need to know such information;

(iii) the providers;

(iv) law enforcement authorities; or

(v) pursuant to the direction of a court of law;

(H) that background check information conveyed to a qualified entity pursuant to subsection (a) shall not be conveyed to any person except as provided under subparagraph (G);

(I) that an authorized agency shall not be liable in an action at law for damages for failure to prevent a qualified entity from taking action adverse to a provider on the basis of a background check; and

(J) that a State employee or a political subdivision of a State or employee thereof responsible for providing information to the national criminal background check system shall not be liable in an action at law for damages for failure to prevent a qualified entity from taking action adverse to a provider on the basis of a background check.

(c) EQUIVALENT PROCEDURES.—(1) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in this section, the Attorney General may certify that a State licensing or certification procedure that differs from the procedures described in subsections (a) and (b) shall be deemed to be the equivalent of such procedures for purposes of this subtitle, but the procedures described in subsections (a) and (b) shall continue to apply to those qualified entities, providers, and background check crimes that are not governed by or included within the State licensing or certification procedure.

(2) The Attorney General shall by regulation establish criteria for certifications under this subsection. Such criteria shall include a finding by the Attorney General that the State licensing or certification procedure accomplishes the purposes of this subtitle and incorporates a nationwide review of State and Federal records of background check offenses through the national criminal background check system.

(d) RECORDS EXCHANGE.—The Attorney General may exchange Federal Bureau of Investigation identification records with authorized agencies for purposes of background checks under subsection (a) and may by regulation authorize further dissemination of such records by authorized agencies for such purposes.

(e) REGULATIONS.—(1) The Attorney General shall by regulation prescribe such other measures as may be required to carry out the purposes of this subtitle, including measures relating to the security, confidentiality, accuracy, use, misuse, and dissemination of information, and audits and recordkeeping.

(2) The Attorney General shall, to the maximum extent possible, encourage the use of the best technology available in conducting background checks.

SEC. 886. FUNDING FOR IMPROVEMENT OF CHILD ABUSE CRIME INFORMATION.

(a) USE OF FORMULA GRANTS FOR IMPROVEMENTS IN STATE RECORDS AND SYSTEMS.—Section 509(b) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3759(b)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2) by striking “and” after the semicolon;

(2) in paragraph (3) by striking the period and inserting “; and”; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(4) the improvement of State record systems and the sharing of all of the records described in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) and the records required by the Attorney General under section 884 of the National Child Protection Act of 1993 with the Attorney General for the purpose of implementing the National Child Protection Act of 1993.”

(b) ADDITIONAL FUNDING GRANTS FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF CHILD ABUSE CRIME INFORMATION.—(1) The Attorney General shall, subject to appropriations and with preference to States that as of the date of enactment of this Act have the lowest percent currency of case dispositions in computerized criminal history files, make a grant to each State to be used—

(A) for the computerization of criminal history files for the purposes of this subtitle;

(B) for the improvement of existing computerized criminal history files for the purposes of this subtitle;

(C) to improve accessibility to the national criminal background check system for the purposes of this subtitle; and

(D) to assist the State in the transmittal of criminal records to, or the indexing of criminal history records in, the national criminal background check system for the purposes of this subtitle.

(2) There are authorized to be appropriated for grants under paragraph (1) a total of $20,000,000 for fiscal years 1994, 1995, and 1996.

(c) WITHHOLDING STATE FUNDS.—Effective 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General may reduce by up to 10 percent the allocation to a State for a fiscal year under title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 of a State that is not in compliance with the timetable established for that State under section 884.

Subtitle D—Jacob Wetterling Crimes Against Children Registration Act

SEC. 891. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the “Jacob Wetterling Crimes Against Children Registration Act”.

SEC. 892. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) STATE GUIDELINES.—The Attorney General shall establish guidelines for State programs requiring any person who is convicted of a criminal offense against a victim who is a minor to register a current address with a designated State law enforcement agency for 10 years after release from prison, being placed on parole, or being placed on supervised release.

(2) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this subsection, “criminal offense against a victim who is a minor” includes—

(A) kidnapping of a minor, except by a non-custodial parent;

(B) false imprisonment of a minor, except by a noncustodial parent;

(C) criminal sexual conduct toward a minor;

(D) solicitation of minors to engage in sexual conduct;

(E) use of minors in a sexual performance; or

(F) solicitation of minors to practice prostitution.

(b) REGISTRATION REQUIREMENT UPON RELEASE, PAROLE, OR SUPERVISED RELEASE.—An approved State registration program established by this section shall contain the following requirements:

(1) NOTIFICATION.—If a person who is required to register under this section is released from prison, paroled, or placed on supervised release, a State prison officer shall—

(A) inform the person of the duty to register;

(B) inform the person that if the person changes residence address, the person shall give the new address to a designated State law enforcement agency in writing within 10 days;

(C) obtain fingerprints and a photograph of the person if these have not already been obtained in connection with the offense that triggers registration; and

(D) require the person to read and sign a form stating that the duty of the person to register under this section has been explained.

(2) TRANSFER OF INFORMATION TO STATE AND THE FBI.—The officer shall, within 3 days after receipt of information described in paragraph (1), forward it to a designated State law enforcement agency. The State law enforcement agency shall immediately enter the information into the appropriate State law enforcement record system and notify the appropriate law enforcement agency having jurisdiction where the person expects to reside. The State law enforcement agency shall also immediately transmit the conviction data and fingerprints to the Identification Division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(3) ANNUAL VERIFICATION.—On each anniversary of a person's initial registration date during the period in which the person is required to register under this section, the designated State law enforcement agency shall mail a nonforwardable verification form to the last reported address of the person. The person shall mail the verification form to the officer within 10 days after receipt of the form. The verification form shall be signed by the person, and state that the person still resides at the address last reported to the designated State law enforcement agency. If the person fails to mail the verification form to the designated State law enforcement agency within 10 days after receipt of the form, the person shall be in violation of this section unless the person proves that the person has not changed his or her residence address.

(4) NOTIFICATION OF LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES OF CHANGES IN ADDRESS.—Any change of address by a person required to register under this section reported to the designated State law enforcement agency shall immediately be reported to the appropriate law enforcement agency having jurisdiction where the person is residing.

(c) REGISTRATION FOR 10 YEARS.—A person required to register under this section shall continue to comply with this section until 10 years have elapsed since the person was released from imprisonment, or placed on parole or supervised release.

(d) PENALTY.—A person required to register under a State program established pursuant to this section who knowingly fails to so register and keep such registration current shall be subject to criminal penalties in such State. It is the sense of Congress that such penalties should include at least 6 months' imprisonment.

(e) PRIVATE DATA.—The information provided under this section is private data on individuals and may be used for law enforcement purposes and confidential background checks conducted with fingerprints for child care services providers.

SEC. 893. STATE COMPLIANCE.

(a) COMPLIANCE DATE.—Each State shall have 3 years from the date of the enactment of this Act in which to implement this subtitle.

(b) INELIGIBILITY FOR FUNDS.—The allocation of funds under section 506 of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3756) received by a State not complying with this subtitle 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act shall be reduced by 25 percent and the unallocated funds shall be reallocated to the States in compliance with this section.

TITLE IX—EQUAL JUSTICE ACT

SEC. 901. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Equal Justice Act”.

SEC. 902. PROHIBITION OF RACIALLY DISCRIMINATORY POLICIES CONCERNING CAPITAL PUNISHMENT OR OTHER PENALTIES.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—The penalty of death and all other penalties shall be administered by the United States and by every State without regard to the race or color of the defendant or victim. Neither the United States nor any State shall prescribe any racial quota or statistical test for the imposition or execution of the death penalty or any other penalty.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this title—

(1) the action of the United States or of a State includes the action of any legislative, judicial, executive, administrative, or other agency or instrumentality of the United States or a State, or of any political subdivision of the United States or a State;

(2) the term "State" has the meaning stated in section 513 of title 18, United States Code; and

(3) the term "racial quota or statistical test" includes any law, rule, presumption, goal, standard for establishing a prima facie case, or mandatory or permissive inference that—

(A) requires or authorizes the imposition or execution of the death penalty or another penalty so as to achieve a specified racial proportion relating to offenders, convicts, defendants, arrestees, or victims; or

(B) requires or authorizes the invalidation of, or bars the execution of, sentences of death or other penalties based on the failure of a jurisdiction to achieve a specified racial proportion relating to offenders, convicts, defendants, arrestees, or victims in the imposition or execution of such sentences or penalties.

SEC. 903. GENERAL SAFEGUARDS AGAINST RACIAL PREJUDICE OR BIAS IN THE TRIBUNAL.

In a criminal trial in a court of the United States, or of any State—

(1) on motion of the defense attorney or prosecutor, the risk of racial prejudice or bias shall be examined on voir dire if there is a substantial likelihood in the circumstances of the case that such prejudice or bias will affect the jury either against or in favor of the defendant;

(2) on motion of the defense attorney or prosecutor, a change of venue shall be granted if an impartial jury cannot be obtained in the original venue because of racial prejudice or bias; and

(3) neither the prosecutor nor the defense attorney shall make any appeal to racial prejudice or bias in statements before the jury.

SEC. 904. FEDERAL CAPITAL CASES.

(a) JURY INSTRUCTIONS AND CERTIFICATION.—In a prosecution for an offense against the United States in which a sentence of death is sought, and in which the capital sentencing determination is to be made by a jury, the judge shall instruct the jury that it is not to be influenced by prejudice or bias relating to the race or color of the defendant or victim in considering whether a sentence of death is justified, and that the jury is not to recommend the imposition of a sentence of death unless it has concluded that it would recommend the same sentence for such a crime regardless of the race or color of the defendant or victim. Upon the return of a recommendation of a sentence of death, the jury shall also return a certificate, signed by each juror, that the juror's individual decision was not affected by prejudice or bias relating to the race or color of the defendant or victim, and that the individual juror would have made the same recommendation regardless of the race or color of the defendant or victim.

(b) RACIALLY MOTIVATED KILLINGS.—In a prosecution for an offense against the United States for which a sentence of death is authorized, the fact that the killing of the victim was motivated by racial prejudice or bias shall be deemed an aggravating factor whose existence permits consideration of the death penalty, in addition to any other aggravating factors that may be specified by law as permitting consideration of the death penalty.

SEC. 905. EXTENSION OF PROTECTION OF CIVIL RIGHTS STATUTES.

(a) SECTION 241.—Section 241 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "inhabitant of" and inserting "person in".

(b) SECTION 242.—Section 242 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "inhabitant of" and inserting "person in", and by striking "such inhabitant" and inserting "such person".

TITLE X—FUNDING, GRANT PROGRAMS, AND STUDIES

Subtitle A—Safer Streets and Neighborhoods

Subtitle C—Study on Police Officers' Rights

SEC. 1021. STUDY ON POLICE OFFICERS' RIGHTS.

The Attorney General, through the National Institute of Justice, shall conduct a study of the procedures followed in internal, noncriminal investigations of State and local law enforcement officers to determine if such investigations are conducted fairly and effectively. The study shall examine the adequacy of the rights available to law enforcement officers and members of the public in cases involving the performance of a law enforcement officer, including—

- (1) notice;
- (2) conduct of questioning;
- (3) counsel;
- (4) hearings;
- (5) appeal; and
- (6) sanctions.

Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to the Congress a report on the results of the study, along with findings and recommendations on strategies to guarantee fair and effective internal affairs investigations.

Subtitle D—COP-ON-THE-BEAT GRANTS

SEC. 1031. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as "The Cop-on-the-Beat Act of 1993".

SEC. 1032. COP-ON-THE-BEAT GRANTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.), as amended by section 633(a), is amended—

- (1) by redesignating part Q as part R;
- (2) by redesignating section 1701 as section 1801; and
- (3) by inserting after part P the following new part:

"PART R—COP-ON-THE-BEAT GRANTS"SEC. 1701. GRANT AUTHORIZATION.

"(a) GRANT PROJECTS.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance may make grants to units of local government and to community groups to establish or expand cooperative efforts between police and a community for the purposes of increasing police presence in the community, including—

- "(1) developing innovative neighborhood-oriented policing programs;
- "(2) providing new technologies to reduce the amount of time officers spend processing cases instead of patrolling the community;
- "(3) purchasing equipment to improve communications between officers and the community and to improve the collection, analysis, and use of information about crime-related community problems;
- "(4) developing policies that reorient police emphasis from reacting to crime to preventing crime;
- "(5) creating decentralized police substations throughout the community to encourage interaction and cooperation between the public and law enforcement personnel on a local level;
- "(6) providing training and problem solving for community crime problems;
- "(7) providing training in cultural differences for law enforcement officials;
- "(8) developing community-based crime prevention programs, such as safety programs for senior citizens, community anticrime groups, and other anticrime awareness programs;
- "(9) developing crime prevention programs in communities that have experienced a recent increase in gang-related violence; and
- "(10) developing projects following the model under subsection (b).

"(b) MODEL PROJECT.—The Director shall develop a written model that informs community members regarding—

- "(1) how to identify the existence of a drug or gang house;
- "(2) what civil remedies, such as public nuisance violations and civil suits in small claims court, are available; and
- "(3) what mediation techniques are available between community members and individuals who have established a drug or gang house in the community.

"(c) MODEL PROJECT.—The Director shall develop a written model that informs community members regarding—

- "(1) how to identify the existence of a drug or gang house;
- "(2) what civil remedies, such as public nuisance violations and civil suits in small claims court, are available; and
- "(3) what mediation techniques are available between community members and individuals who have established a drug or gang house in the community.

"SEC. 1702. APPLICATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) To be eligible to receive a grant under this part, a chief executive of a unit of local government, a duly authorized representative of a combination of local governments within a geographic region, or a community group shall submit an application to the Director in such form and containing such information as the Director may reasonably require.

"(2) In an application under paragraph (1), a single office, or agency (public, private, or nonprofit) shall be designated as responsible for the coordination, implementation, administration, accounting, and evaluation of services described in the application.

"(b) GENERAL CONTENTS.—Each application under subsection (a) shall include—

- "(1) a request for funds available under this part for the purposes described in section 1701;

"(2) a description of the areas and populations to be served by the grant; and

"(3) assurances that Federal funds received under this part shall be used to supplement, not supplant, non-Federal funds that would otherwise be available for activities funded under this part.

"(c) COMPREHENSIVE PLAN.—Each application shall include a comprehensive plan that contains—

- "(1) a description of the crime problems within the areas targeted for assistance;
- "(2) a description of the projects to be developed;
- "(3) a description of the resources available in the community to implement the plan together with a description of the gaps in the plan that cannot be filled with existing resources;
- "(4) an explanation of how the requested grant shall be used to fill those gaps;
- "(5) a description of the system the applicant shall establish to prevent and reduce crime problems; and
- "(6) an evaluation component, including performance standards and quantifiable goals the applicant shall use to determine project progress, and the data the applicant shall collect to measure progress toward meeting project goals.

"SEC. 1703. ALLOCATION OF FUNDS; LIMITATIONS ON GRANTS.

"(a) ALLOCATION.—The Director shall allocate not less than 75 percent of the funds available under this part to units of local government or combinations of such units and not more than 20 percent of the funds available under this part to community groups.

"(b) ADMINISTRATIVE COST LIMITATION.—The Director shall use not more than 5 percent of the funds available under this part for the purposes of administration, technical assistance, and evaluation.

"(c) RENEWAL OF GRANTS.—A grant under this part may be renewed for up to 2 additional years after the first fiscal year during which the recipient receives its initial grant, subject to the availability of funds, if the Director determines that the funds made available to the recipient during the previous year were used in a manner required under the approved application and if the recipient can demonstrate significant progress toward achieving the goals of the plan required under section 1702(c).

"(d) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of a grant made under this part may not exceed 75 percent of the total costs of the projects described in the application submitted under section 1702 for the fiscal year for which the projects receive assistance under this part.

"SEC. 1704. AWARD OF GRANTS.

"(a) SELECTION OF RECIPIENTS.—The Director shall consider the following factors in awarding grants to units of local government or combinations of such units under this part:

- "(1) NEED AND ABILITY.—Demonstrated need and evidence of the ability to provide the services described in the plan required under section 1702(c).
- "(2) COMMUNITY-WIDE RESPONSE.—Evidence of the ability to coordinate community-wide response to crime.
- "(3) MAINTAIN PROGRAM.—The ability to maintain a program to control and prevent crime after funding under this part is no longer available.

"(b) GEOGRAPHIC DISTRIBUTION.—The Director shall attempt to achieve, to the extent practicable, an equitable geographic distribution of grant awards.

"SEC. 1705. REPORTS.

"(a) REPORT TO DIRECTOR.—Recipients who receive funds under this part shall submit to the Director not later than March 1 of each year a report that describes progress achieved in carrying out the plan required under section 1702(c).

"(b) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Director shall submit to the Congress a report by October 1 of each year containing—

- "(1) a detailed statement regarding grant awards and activities of grant recipients; and
- "(2) an evaluation of projects established under this part.

"SEC. 1706. DEFINITIONS.

"For the purposes of this part:

"(1) The term 'community group' means a community-based nonprofit organization that has a primary purpose of crime prevention.

"(2) The term 'Director' means the Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.), as amended by section 633(b), is amended by striking the matter relating to part Q and inserting the following:

- (2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(11) There are authorized to be appropriated $150,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1994, 1995, and 1996 to carry out projects under part Q."

Subtitle E—National Commission to Support Law EnforcementSEC. 1041. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "National Commission to Support Law Enforcement Act."

SEC. 1042. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

- (1) law enforcement officers risk their lives daily to protect citizens, for modest rewards and too little recognition;
- (2) a significant shift has occurred in the problems that law enforcement officers face without a corresponding change in the support from the Federal Government;
- (3) law enforcement officers are on the front line in the war against drugs and crime;
- (4) the rate of violent crime continues to increase along with the increase in drug use;
- (5) a large percentage of individuals arrested test positive for drug usage;
- (6) the Presidential Commission on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice of 1965 focused attention on many issues affecting law enforcement, and a review 25 years later would help to evaluate current problems, including drug-related crime, violence, racial conflict, and decreased funding; and

(7) a comprehensive study of law enforcement issues, including the role of the Federal Government in supporting law enforcement officers, working conditions, and responsibility for crime control would assist in redefining the relationships between the Federal Government, the public, and law enforcement officials.

SEC. 1043. ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMISSION.

There is established a national commission to be known as the "National Commission to Support Law Enforcement" (referred to in this subtitle as the "Commission").

SEC. 1044. DUTIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Commission shall study and recommend changes regarding law enforcement agencies and law enforcement issues on the Federal, State, and local levels, including the following:

(1) FUNDING.—The sufficiency of funding, including a review of grant programs at the Federal level.

(2) EMPLOYMENT.—The conditions of law enforcement employment.

(3) INFORMATION.—The effectiveness of information-sharing systems, intelligence, infrastructure, and procedures among law enforcement agencies of Federal, State, and local governments.

(4) RESEARCH AND TRAINING.—The status of law enforcement research and education and training.

(5) EQUIPMENT AND RESOURCES.—The adequacy of equipment, physical resources, and human resources.

(6) COOPERATION.—The cooperation among Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies.

(7) RESPONSIBILITY.—The responsibility of governments and law enforcement agencies in solving the crime problem.

(8) IMPACT.—The impact of the criminal justice system, including court schedules and prison overcrowding, on law enforcement.

(b) CONSULTATION.—The Commission shall conduct surveys and consult with focus groups of law enforcement officers, local officials, and community leaders across the Nation to obtain information and seek advice on important law enforcement issues.

SEC. 1045. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) NUMBER AND APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall be composed of 23 members as follows:

(1) Seven individuals from among national law enforcement officers, of whom—

(A) Two shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

(B) Two shall be appointed by the Majority Leader of the Senate;

(C) One shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the House;

(D) One shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the Senate; and

(E) One shall be appointed by the President.

(2) Seven individuals from national law enforcement organizations representing law enforcement management, of whom—

(A) Two shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

(B) Two shall be appointed by the Majority Leader of the Senate;

(C) One shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the House;

(D) One shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the Senate; and

(E) One shall be appointed by the President.

(3) Two individuals with academic expertise regarding law enforcement issues, of whom—

(A) One shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Majority Leader of the Senate.

(B) One shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the Senate and the Minority Leader of the House of Representatives.

(4) Two Members of the House of Representatives, appointed by the Speaker and the Minority Leader of the House of Representatives.

(5) Two Members of the Senate, appointed by the Majority Leader and the Minority Leader of the Senate.

(6) One individual involved in Federal law enforcement from the Department of the Treasury, appointed by the President.

(7) One individual from the Department of Justice, appointed by the President.

(8) The Comptroller General of the United States, who shall serve as the chairperson of the Commission.

(b) COMPENSATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Members of the Commission shall receive no additional pay, allowance, or benefit by reason of service on the Commission.

(2) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—Each member of the Commission shall receive travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, in accordance with sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(c) APPOINTMENT DATES.—Members of the Commission shall be appointed no later than 90 days after the enactment of this title.

SEC. 1046. EXPERTS AND CONSULTANTS.

(a) EXPERTS AND CONSULTANTS.—The Commission may procure temporary and intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code.

(b) STAFF OF FEDERAL AGENCIES.—Upon request of the Commission, the head of any Federal agency is authorized to detail, on a reimbursable basis, any of the personnel of that agency to the Commission to assist the Commission in carrying out its duties under this subtitle.

(c) ADMINISTRATIVE SUPPORT.—The Administrator of General Services shall provide to the Commission, on a reimbursable basis, administrative support services as the Commission may request.

SEC. 1047. POWERS OF COMMISSION.

(a) HEARINGS.—The Commission may, for purposes of this subtitle, hold hearings, sit and act at the times and places, take testimony, and receive evidence, as the Commission considers appropriate.

(b) DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY.—Any member or agent of the Commission may, if authorized by the Commission, take any action that the Commission is authorized to take by this section.

(c) INFORMATION.—The Commission may secure directly from any Federal agency information necessary to enable it to carry out this subtitle. Upon request of the chairperson of the Commission, the head of an agency shall furnish the information to the Commission to the extent permitted by law.

(d) GIFTS AND DONATIONS.—The Commission may accept, use, and dispose of gifts or donations of services or property.

(e) MAILS.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other Federal agencies.

SEC. 1048. REPORT.

Not later than the expiration of the 18-month period beginning on the date of the appointment of the members of the Commission, a report containing the findings of the Commission and specific proposals for legislation and administrative actions that the Commission has determined to be appropriate shall be submitted to Congress.

SEC. 1049. TERMINATION.

The Commission shall cease to exist upon the expiration of the 60-day period beginning on the date on which the Commission submits its report under section 1048.

SEC. 1050. REPEALS.

Title XXXIV of the Crime Control Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 3721 note) and section 211(B) of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1991 (42 U.S.C. 3721 note; 104 Stat. 2122) are repealed.

Subtitle F—Other Provisions

SEC. 1062. LAW ENFORCEMENT FAMILY SUPPORT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.), as amended by section 1032(a), is amended—

(1) by redesignating part R as part S;

(2) by redesignating section 1801 as 1901; and

(3) by inserting after part Q the following new part:

"PART R—FAMILY SUPPORT

"SEC. 1801. DUTIES OF DIRECTOR.

"The Director shall—

"(1) establish guidelines and oversee the implementation of family-friendly policies within law enforcement-related offices and divisions in the Department of Justice;

"(2) study the effects of stress on law enforcement personnel and family well-being and disseminate the findings of such studies to Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies, related organizations, and other interested parties;

"(3) identify and evaluate model programs that provide support services to law enforcement personnel and families;

"(4) provide technical assistance and training programs to develop stress reduction and family support to State and local law enforcement agencies;

"(5) collect and disseminate information regarding family support, stress reduction, and psychological services to Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies, law enforcement-related organizations, and other interested entities; and

"(6) determine issues to be researched by the Bureau and by grant recipients.

"SEC. 1802. GENERAL AUTHORIZATION.

"The Director is authorized to make grants to States and local law enforcement agencies to provide family support services to law enforcement personnel.

"SEC. 1803. USES OF FUNDS.

"(7) Counseling for peers.

"(8) Counseling for families of personnel killed in the line of duty.

"(9) Seminars regarding alcohol, drug use, gambling, and overeating.

"SEC. 1804. APPLICATIONS.

"A law enforcement agency desiring to receive a grant under this part shall submit to the Director an application at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Director may reasonably require. Such application shall—

"(1) certify that the law enforcement agency shall match all Federal funds with an equal amount of cash or in-kind goods or services from other non-Federal sources;

"(2) include a statement from the highest ranking law enforcement official from the State or locality applying for the grant that attests to the need and intended use of services to be provided with grant funds; and

"(3) assure that the Director or the Comptroller General of the United States shall have access to all records related to the receipt and use of grant funds received under this part.

"SEC. 1805. AWARD OF GRANTS; LIMITATION.

"(a) GRANT DISTRIBUTION.—In approving grants under this part, the Director shall assure an equitable distribution of assistance among the States, among urban and rural areas of the United States, and among urban and rural areas of a State.

"(b) DURATION.—The Director may award a grant each fiscal year, not to exceed $100,000 to a State or local law enforcement agency for a period not to exceed 5 years. In any application from a State or local law enforcement agency for a grant to continue a program for the second, third, fourth, or fifth fiscal year following the first fiscal year in which a grant was awarded to such agency, the Director shall review the progress made toward meeting the objectives of the program. The Director may refuse to award a grant if the Director finds sufficient progress has not been made toward meeting such objectives, but only after affording the applicant notice and an opportunity for reconsideration.

"(c) LIMITATION.—Not more than 10 percent of grant funds received by a State or a local law enforcement agency may be used for administrative purposes.

"SEC. 1806. DISCRETIONARY RESEARCH GRANTS.

"The Director may reserve 10 percent of funds to award research grants to a State or local law enforcement agency to study issues of importance in the law enforcement field as determined by the Director.

"SEC. 1807. REPORTS.

"(a) REPORT FROM GRANT RECIPIENTS.—A State or local law enforcement agency that receives a grant under this part shall submit to the Director an annual report that includes—

"(1) program descriptions;

"(2) the number of staff employed to administer programs;

"(3) the number of individuals who participated in programs; and

"(4) an evaluation of the effectiveness of grant programs.

"(b) REPORT FROM DIRECTOR.—(1) The Director shall submit to the Congress a report not later than March 31 of each fiscal year.

"(2) A report under paragraph (1) shall contain—

"(A) a description of the types of projects developed or improved through funds received under this part;

"(B) a description of exemplary projects and activities developed;

"(C) a designation of the family relationship to the law enforcement personnel of individuals served; and

"(D) a statement of the number of individuals served in each location and throughout the country.

"SEC. 1808. DEFINITIONS.

"For purposes of this part—

"(1) the term 'family-friendly policy' means a policy to promote or improve the morale and well being of law enforcement personnel and their families; and

"(2) the term 'law enforcement personnel' means individuals employed by Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.), as amended by section 1032(b), is amended by striking the matter relating to part S and inserting the following:

"PART R—FAMILY SUPPORT

(4) by inserting after paragraph (4) of subsection (a), as designated by paragraph (1), the following new paragraph:

"(5) provide notice of release of prisoners in accordance with subsection (b)."; and

(5) by inserting after subsection (a), as designated by paragraph (1), the following new subsection:

"(b) NOTICE OF RELEASE OF PRISONERS.—(1) Except in the case of a prisoner being protected under chapter 224, the Bureau of Prisons shall, at least 5 days prior to the date on which a prisoner described in paragraph (3) is to be released on supervised release, or, in the case of a prisoner on supervised release, at least 5 days prior to the date on which the prisoner changes residence to a new jurisdiction, cause written notice of the release or change of residence to be made to the chief law enforcement officer of the State and of the local jurisdiction in which the prisoner will reside.

"(2) A notice under paragraph (1) shall disclose—

"(A) the prisoner's name;

"(B) the prisoner's criminal history, including a description of the offense of which the prisoner was convicted; and

"(C) any restrictions on conduct or other conditions to the release of the prisoner that are imposed by law, the sentencing court, or the Bureau of Prisons or any other Federal agency.

"(3) A prisoner is described in this paragraph if the prisoner was convicted of—

"(A) a drug trafficking crime (as defined in section 924(c)(2)); or

"(B) a crime of violence (as defined in section 924(c)(3)).

"(4) The notice provided under this section shall be used solely for law enforcement purposes."

(b) APPLICATION TO PRISONERS TO WHICH PRIOR LAW APPLIES.—In the case of a prisoner convicted of an offense committed prior to November 1, 1987, the reference to supervised release in section 4042(b) of title 18, United States Code, shall be deemed to be a reference to probation or parole.

TITLE XI—ILLEGAL DRUGS

Subtitle A—Drug Testing

SEC. 1101. DRUG TESTING OF FEDERAL OFFENDERS ON POST-CONVICTION RELEASE.

(a) DRUG TESTING PROGRAM.—(1) Chapter 229 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§3608. Drug testing of Federal offenders on post-conviction release

"The Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, in consultation with the Attorney General and the Secretary of Health and Human Services, shall, as soon as is practicable after the effective date of this section, establish a program of drug testing of Federal offenders on post-conviction release. The program shall include such standards and guidelines as the Director may determine necessary to ensure the reliability and accuracy of the drug testing programs. In each district where it is feasible to do so, the chief probation officer shall arrange for the drug testing of defendants on post-conviction release pursuant to a conviction for a felony or other offense described in section 3563(a)(4)."

(2) The chapter analysis for chapter 229 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"3608. Drug testing of Federal offenders on post-conviction release."

(b) DRUG TESTING CONDITION FOR PROBATION.—

(1) CONDITIONS OF PROBATION.—Section 3563(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in paragraph (2) by striking "and";

(B) in paragraph (3) by striking the period and inserting "; and"; and

(C) by inserting after paragraph (3) the following new paragraph:

"(4) for a felony, an offense involving a firearm as defined in section 921 of this title, a drug or narcotic offense as defined in section 404(c) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 844(c)), or a crime of violence as defined in section 16 of this title, that the defendant refrain from any unlawful use of the controlled substance and submit to periodic drug tests (as determined by the court) for use of a controlled substance. This latter condition may be suspended or ameliorated upon request of the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, or the Director's designee. In addition, the Court may decline to impose this condition for any individual defendant, if the defendant's presentence report or other reliable sentencing information indicates a low risk of future substance abuse by the defendant. A defendant who tests positive may be detained pending verification of a drug test result."

(2) DRUG TESTING FOR SUPERVISED RELEASE.—Section 3583(d) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following: "For a defendant convicted of a felony or other offense described in section 3563(a)(4), the court shall also order, as an explicit condition of supervised release, that the defendant refrain from any unlawful use of a controlled substance and submit to periodic drug tests (as determined by the court), for use of a controlled substance. This latter condition may be suspended or ameliorated as provided in section 3563(a)(4)."

(3) DRUG TESTING IN CONNECTION WITH PAROLE.—Section 4209(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following: "If the parolee has been convicted of a felony or other offense described in section 3563(a)(4), the Commission shall also impose as a condition of parole that the parolee refrain from any unlawful use of a controlled substance and submit to periodic drug tests (as determined by the Commission) for use of a controlled substance. This latter condition may be suspended or ameliorated as provided in section 3563(a)(4)."

(c) REVOCACTION OF PAROLE.—Section 4214(f) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after "substance" the following: ", or who unlawfully uses a controlled substance or refuses to cooperate in drug testing imposed as a condition of parole."

SEC. 1362. REQUIRED REPORTING BY CRIMINAL COURT CLERKS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each clerk of a Federal or State criminal court shall report to the Internal Revenue Service, in a form and manner as prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, the name and taxpayer identification number of—

(1) any individual charged with any criminal offense who posts cash bail, or on whose behalf cash bail is posted, in an amount exceeding $10,000; and

(2) any individual or entity (other than a licensed bail bonding individual or entity) posting such cash bail for or on behalf of such individual.

(b) CRIMINAL OFFENSES.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term "criminal offense" means—
(A) any Federal criminal offense involving a controlled substance;

(B) racketeering;

(C) money laundering; and

(D) any violation of State criminal law involving offenses substantially similar to the offenses described in the preceding paragraphs;

(2) the term "money laundering" means an offense under section 1956 or 1957 of title 18, United States Code; and

(3) the term "racketeering" means an offense under section 1951, 1952, or 1955 of title 18, United States Code.

(c) COPY TO PROSECUTORS.—Each clerk shall submit a copy of each report of cash bail described in subsection (a) to—

(1) the office of the United States Attorney; and

(2) the office of the local prosecuting attorney, for the jurisdiction in which the defendant resides (and the jurisdiction in which the criminal offense occurred, if different).

(d) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall promulgate such regulations as are necessary to implement this section within 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section shall become effective on the date that is 60 days after the date of the promulgation of regulations under subsection (d).

SEC. 1363. AUDIT REQUIREMENT FOR STATE AND LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES RECEIVING FEDERAL ASSET FORFEITURE FUNDS AND REPORT TO CONGRESS ON ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 524(c)(7) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

“(7)(A) The Fund shall be subject to annual audit by the Comptroller General.

“(B) The Attorney General shall require that any State or local law enforcement agency receiving funds conduct an annual audit detailing the uses and expenses to which the funds were dedicated and the amount used for each use or expense and report the results of the audit to the Attorney General.”

(b) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Section 524(c)(6) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking “and” at the end of subparagraph (B);

(2) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting “, which report should also contain all annual audit reports from State and local law enforcement agencies required to be reported to the Attorney General under paragraph (7)(B).”; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

“(D) a report for the fiscal year containing a description of the administrative and contracting expenses paid from the Fund under paragraph (1)(A).”

SEC. 1364. DNA IDENTIFICATION.

(a) FUNDING TO IMPROVE THE QUALITY AND AVAILABILITY OF DNA ANALYSES FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT IDENTIFICATION PURPOSES.—

(1) DRUG CONTROL AND SYSTEM IMPROVEMENT GRANT PROGRAM.—Section 501(b) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3751(b)), as amended by section 531, is amended—

(A) by striking “and” at the end of paragraph (20);

(B) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (21) and inserting “; and”; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(22) developing or improving in a forensic laboratory a capability to analyze deoxyribonucleic acid (referred to in this title as ‘DNA’) for identification purposes.”

(2) STATE APPLICATIONS.—Section 503(a) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3753(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(12) If any part of a grant made under this part is to be used to develop or improve a DNA analysis capability in a forensic laboratory, a certification that—

“(A) DNA analyses performed at the laboratory will satisfy or exceed then current standards for a quality assurance program for DNA analysis issued by the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation under section 1388(b) of the Crime Control Act of 1993;

“(B) DNA samples obtained by and DNA analyses performed at the laboratory will be made available only—

“(i) to criminal justice agencies, for law enforcement identification purposes;

“(ii) for criminal defense purposes, to a defendant, who shall have access to samples and analyses performed in connection with the case in which the defendant is charged; and

“(iii) to others, if personally identifiable information is removed, for a population statistics database, for identification research and protocol development purposes, or for quality control purposes; and

“(C) the laboratory and each analyst performing DNA analyses at the laboratory will undergo, at regular intervals not exceeding 180 days, external proficiency testing by a DNA proficiency testing program meeting the standards issued under section 1388(b) of the Crime Control Act of 1993.”

(3) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For each of the fiscal years 1994, 1995, and 1996 there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary for grants to the States for DNA analysis.

(b) QUALITY ASSURANCE AND PROFICIENCY TESTING STANDARDS.—

(1) PUBLICATION OF QUALITY ASSURANCE AND PROFICIENCY TESTING STANDARDS.—(A) Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall appoint an advisory board on DNA quality assurance methods. The Director shall appoint members of the board from among nominations proposed by the head of the National Academy of Sciences and professional societies of crime laboratory directors. The advisory board shall include as members scientists from State and local forensic laboratories, molecular geneticists and population geneticists not affiliated with a forensic laboratory, and a representative from the National Institute of Standards and Technology. The advisory board shall develop, and if appropriate, periodically revise, recommended standards for quality assurance, including standards for testing the proficiency of forensic laboratories, and forensic analysts, in conducting analyses of DNA.

(B) The Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, after taking into consideration such recommended standards, shall issue (and revise from time to time) standards for quality assurance, including standards for testing the proficiency of forensic laboratories, and forensic analysts, in conducting analyses of DNA.

(C) The standards described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) shall specify criteria for quality assurance and proficiency tests to be applied to the various types of DNA analyses used by forensic laboratories. The standards shall also include a system for grading proficiency testing performance to determine whether a laboratory is performing acceptably.

(D) Until such time as the advisory board has made recommendations to the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Director has acted upon those recommendations, the quality assurance guidelines adopted by the technical working group on DNA analysis methods shall be deemed the Director's standards for purposes of this section.

(2) ADMINISTRATION OF THE ADVISORY BOARD.—For administrative purposes, the advisory board appointed under paragraph (1) shall be considered to be an advisory board to the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Section 14 of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) shall not apply with respect to the advisory board appointed under subsection (a). The board shall cease to exist on the date that is 5 years after the date on which initial appointments are made to the board, unless the existence of the board is extended by the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(c) INDEX TO FACILITATE LAW ENFORCEMENT EXCHANGE OF DNA IDENTIFICATION INFORMATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation may establish an index of—

(A) DNA identification records of persons convicted of crimes;

(B) analyses of DNA samples recovered from crime scenes; and

(C) analyses of DNA samples recovered from unidentified human remains.

(2) CONTENTS.—The index established under paragraph (1) shall include only information on DNA identification records and DNA analyses that are—

(A) based on analyses performed in accordance with publicly available standards that satisfy or exceed the guidelines for a quality assurance program for DNA analysis, issued by the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation under section 1364(b) of the Crime Control Act of 1993;

(B) prepared by laboratories and DNA analysts that undergo, at regular intervals not exceeding 180 days, external proficiency testing by a DNA proficiency testing program meeting the standards issued under section 1364(b) of the Crime Control Act of 1993; and

(C) maintained by Federal, State, and local criminal justice agencies pursuant to rules that allow disclosure of stored DNA samples and DNA analyses only—

(i) to criminal justice agencies, for law enforcement identification purposes;

(ii) for criminal defense purposes, to a defendant, who shall have access to samples and analyses performed in connection with the case in which the defendant is charged; or

(iii) to others, if personally identifiable information is removed, for a population statistics database, for identification research and protocol development purposes, or for quality control purposes.

(3) FAILURE TO MEET REQUIREMENTS.—The exchange of records authorized by this subsection is subject to cancellation if the quality control and privacy requirements described in paragraph (2) are not met.

(d) FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION.—

(1) PROFICIENCY TESTING REQUIREMENTS.—(A) Personnel at the Federal Bureau of Investigation who perform DNA analyses shall undergo, at regular intervals not exceeding 180 days, external proficiency testing by a DNA proficiency testing program meeting the standards issued under subsection (b). Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall arrange for periodic blind external tests to determine the proficiency of DNA analysis performed at the Federal Bureau of Investigation laboratory. As used in this subparagraph, the term “blind external test” means a test that is presented to the laboratory through a second agency and appears to the analysts to involve routine evidence.

(B) For each of the 5 years following the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall submit to the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives and the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate an annual report on the results of each of the tests described in subparagraph (A).

(2) PRIVACY PROTECTION STANDARDS.—(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the results of DNA tests performed for a Federal law enforcement agency for law enforcement purposes may be disclosed only—

(i) to criminal justice agencies for law enforcement identification purposes; or

(ii) for criminal defense purposes, to a defendant, who shall have access to samples and analyses performed in connection with the case in which the defendant is charged.

(B) If personally identifiable information is removed, test results may be disclosed for a population statistics database, for identification research and protocol development purposes, or for quality control purposes.

(3) CRIMINAL PENALTIES.—(A) Whoever—
(i) by virtue of employment or official position, has possession of, or access to, individually identifiable DNA information indexed in a database created or maintained by any Federal law enforcement agency; and

(ii) willfully discloses such information in any manner to any person or agency not entitled to receive it, shall be fined not more than $100,000.

(B) Whoever, without authorization, willfully obtains DNA samples or individually identifiable DNA information indexed in a database created or maintained by any Federal law enforcement agency shall be fined not more than $100,000.

(F) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Federal Bureau of Investigation $2,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1994, 1995, and 1996 to carry out subsections (b), (c), and (d).

SEC. 1365. SAFE SCHOOLS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.), as amended by section 1062(a), is amended—

(1) by redesignating part S as part T;

(2) by redesignating section 1901 as section 2001; and

(3) by inserting after part R the following new part:

"PART S—SAFE SCHOOLS ASSISTANCE

"SEC. 1901. GRANT AUTHORIZATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, may make grants to local educational agencies in urban, suburban, and rural areas for the purpose of providing assistance to such agencies most directly affected by crime and violence.

"(b) MODEL PROJECT.—The Director, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, shall develop a written safe schools model in a timely fashion and make such model available to any local educational agency that requests such information.

"SEC. 1902. USE OF FUNDS.

"Grants made by the Director under this part shall be used—

"(1) to fund anticrime and safety measures and to develop education and training programs for the prevention of crime, violence, and illegal drugs and alcohol;

"(2) for counseling programs for victims of crime within schools;

"(3) for crime prevention equipment, including metal detectors and video-surveillance devices; and

"(4) for the prevention and reduction of the participation of young individuals in organized crime and drug and gang-related activities in schools.

"SEC. 1903. APPLICATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In order to be eligible to receive a grant under this part for any fiscal year, a local educational agency shall submit an application to the Director in such form and containing such information as the Director may reasonably require.

"(b) REQUIREMENTS.—An application under subsection (a) shall include—

"(1) a request for funds for the purposes described in section 1902;

"(2) a description of the schools and communities to be served by the grant, including the nature of the crime and violence problems within such schools;

"(3) assurances that Federal funds received under this part shall be used to supplement, not supplant, non-Federal funds that would otherwise be available for activities funded under this part; and

"(4) statistical information in such form and containing such information that the Director may require regarding crime within the schools served by such local educational agency.

"(c) COMPREHENSIVE PLAN.—An application under subsection (a) shall include a comprehensive plan that shall contain—

"(1) a description of the crime problems within the schools targeted for assistance;

"(2) a description of the projects to be developed;

"(3) a description of the resources available in the community to implement the plan together with a description of the gaps in the plan that cannot be filled with existing resources;

"(4) an explanation of how the requested grant will be used to fill gaps; and

"(5) a description of the system the applicant will establish to prevent and reduce crime problems.

"SEC. 1904. ALLOCATION OF FUNDS; LIMITATIONS ON GRANTS.

"(a) ADMINISTRATIVE COST LIMITATION.—The Director shall use not more than 5 percent of the funds available under this part for the purposes of administration and technical assistance.

"(b) RENEWAL OF GRANTS.—A grant under this part may be renewed for up to 2 additional years after the first fiscal year during which the recipient receives its initial grant under this part, subject to the availability of funds, if—

"(1) the Director determines that the funds made available to the recipient during the previous year were used in a manner required under the approved application; and

"(2) the Director determines that an additional grant is necessary to implement the crime prevention program described in the comprehensive plan as required by section 1903(c).

"(c) RURAL AREAS.—The Director shall use not less than 15 percent of the funds available under this part for grants to local educational agencies in rural areas.

"SEC. 1905. AWARD OF GRANTS.

"(a) SELECTION OF RECIPIENTS.—The Director, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, shall consider the following factors in awarding grants to local educational agencies:

"(1) CRIME PROBLEM.—The nature and scope of the crime problem in the targeted schools.

"(2) NEED AND ABILITY.—Demonstrated need and evidence of the ability to provide the services described in the plan required under section 1903(c).

"(3) POPULATION.—The number of students to be served by the plan required under section 1903(c).

"(b) GEOGRAPHIC DISTRIBUTION.—The Director shall achieve an equitable geographic distribution of grant awards.

"SEC. 1906. REPORTS.

"(a) REPORT TO DIRECTOR.—Local educational agencies that receive funds under this part shall submit to the Director a report not later than March 1 of each year that describes progress achieved in carrying out the plan required under section 1903(c).

"(b) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Director shall submit to the Congress a report by October 1 of each year in which grants are made available under this part, which report shall contain—

"(1) a detailed statement regarding grant awards and activities of grant recipients;

"(2) a compilation of statistical information submitted by applicants under section 1903(b)(4); and

"(3) an evaluation of programs established under this part.

"SEC. 1907. DEFINITIONS.

"For the purpose of this part:

"(1) The term 'Director' means the Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance.

"(2) The term 'local educational agency' means a public board of education or other public authority legally constituted within a State for either administrative control or direction of, or to perform a service function for, public elementary and secondary schools in a city, county, township, school district, or other political subdivision of a State, or such combination of school districts of counties as are recognized in a State as an administrative agency for its public elementary and secondary schools. Such term includes any other public institution or agency having administrative control and direction of a public elementary or secondary school."

"PART S—SAFE SCHOOLS ASSISTANCE

"Sec. 1901. Grant authorization.

(6) For the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, $15,000,000 to hire, equip, and train not less than 100 special agents and support personnel to investigate firearms violations committed by drug trafficking organizations, particularly violent gangs.

(7) For the United States courts, $20,000,000 for additional magistrates, probation officers, other personnel, and equipment to address the case-load generated by the additional investigative and prosecutorial resources provided in this title.

TITLE XVI—FEDERAL PRISONS

SEC. 1601. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR NEW PRISON CONSTRUCTION.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1993 to the buildings and facilities account, Federal Prison System, Department of Justice, $500,000,000 for the planning of, acquisition of sites for, and the construction of new penal and correctional facilities, such appropriations to be in addition to any appropriations provided in regular appropriations Acts or continuing resolutions for that fiscal year.

TITLE XVII—PRE-TRIAL INTERROGATION

SEC. 1701.

It is the sense of the Congress that the Attorney General shall instruct all U.S. Attorneys, and implement policies consistent therewith, that confessions obtained in conformity with 18 U.S.C. Section 3501 will be offered into evidence.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

TITLE I—FEDERAL DEATH PENALTY

This title provides necessary procedural provisions and conforming amendments to enable law enforcement authorities to seek the death penalty for the most heinous federal crimes (47 separate federal offenses) and it authorizes the death penalty for the District of Columbia. It is identical in most respects to the federal death penalty proposal which passed the House in 1991 and in 1990.

In all, the bill provides the death penalty for the following 47 federal offenses:

Existing Capital Crimes

1. espionage¹
2. treason¹
3. aircraft destruction where death results
4. motor vehicle destruction where death results
5. retaliatory murder against official's family
6. murder of members of Congress or Cabinet
- 7., 8., 9. three explosives offenses where death results
10. murder in special territorial jurisdiction
11. murder of federal judges and court officers
12. witness tampering where death results
13. mailing dangerous articles where death results
14. Assassination of President, V.P. or staff

15. wrecking trains where death results
16. bank robbery where death results
17. certain drug related killings
18. air piracy where death results

New Death Penalty Authorizations

19. violence at international airports where death results
20. federal child abuse resulting in death
21. conspiracy against civil rights where death results
22. deprivation of civil rights where death results
23. violence against exercising of federal rights w/ death
24. firearms murders during federal crimes of violence
25. fatal firearms attacks at federal facilities
26. drive by shootings where death results
27. murder in furtherance of genocide
28. murder of local law enforcement assisting feds.
29. murder of certain foreign officials
30. murder by prisoner serving life term
31. murder by escaped federal prisoner
32. kidnapping where death results
33. hostage taking where death results
34. murder of jurors and court officers
35. retaliatory murder of witnesses
36. attempted assassination of the President¹
37. murder for hire
38. murder in aid of racketeering
39. sexual exploitation resulting in death
40. violence against maritime navigation w/ death
41. violence against maritime platforms w/ death
42. terrorist murders of Americans abroad
43. use of weapons of mass destruction w/ death
44. torture where death results
45. drug kingpins currently subject to mandatory life¹
46. d.k. who attempt to kill to obstruct justice¹
47. murder in the course of drug felonies

The bill also amends title 18 of the U.S. Code to authorize capital punishment for murders in the District of Columbia. It proposes a separate set of procedures applicable to cases brought in the District in order to address D.C.'s particular problems as well as the unique federal-district relationship.

TITLE II—HABEAS CORPUS REFORM

This title curbs the abuse of habeas corpus by state and federal prisoners and is identical to the habeas corpus amendment to the crime bill which passed by the Senate by a vote of 58 to 40 in 1991. Subtitle A proposes general habeas corpus reform.

Subtitle B contains reforms aimed at addressing the unique problems of abuse and delay in capital cases. It is modeled after the "Powell Committee" proposal for death penalty litigation (the States may opt in, if a State opts in it must provide counsel in state collateral review, and it limits the petitioner to a single habeas petition). It improves upon Powell by including the "full and fair" rule of deference for state court adjudications and placing time limits upon the federal courts.

Subtitle C insures that, each year, State Attorneys General shall receive habeas corpus litigation support grants equal in amount to the grants given to capital resource centers.

TITLE III—EXCLUSIONARY RULE REFORM

This title is identical to the exclusionary rule reform proposal which passed the House of Representatives as an amendment to H.R. 3371 IN 1991. This legislation would add a new section 3509 to the federal criminal code.

Sec. 301. Creates new section 3509 to title 18. Subsection 3509(a) would provide that evidence shall not be excluded in any federal proceeding on the ground that the search or seizure was in violation of the Fourth Amendment if the search or seizure was carried out in circumstances justifying an objectively reasonable belief that it was in conformity with the Fourth Amendment. A police officer's mere subjective belief in the legality of his or her own search is insufficient to support admissibility. This would extend the underlying principle of United States v. Leon, 468 U.S. 897 (1984), so as to bar the exclusion of evidence obtained in cases involving warrantless searches, as well as in cases involving searches made pursuant to a warrant.

The subsection also provides specifically that the fact that evidence was obtained pursuant to a warrant constitutes prima facie evidence of the existence of circumstances justifying an objectively reasonable belief that a search was in conformity with the Fourth Amendment.

Subsection 3509(b) would bar the exclusion of evidence in federal proceedings on the basis of non-constitutional violations except as expressly authorized by statute or rule promulgated by the Supreme Court. Subsection 3509(c) makes it clear that the section is not to be construed as reflecting legislative approval of the exclusion of evidence as a sanction for official misconduct in any circumstances.

TITLE IV—RURAL CRIME AND DRUG CONTROL

This legislation improves the fight against drug traffickers and violent criminals in rural America.

Subtitle A—Drug Trafficking in Rural Areas

Sec. 401. Amends current state and local law enforcement grants program to authorize an additional $50 million in grants for rural States.

Sec. 402. Directs the Attorney General to establish Rural Crime and Drug Enforcement Task Forces in every federal judicial district that includes significant rural areas. Headed by the local U.S. Attorneys, the Task Forces would include personnel from DEA, FBI, Customs, U.S. Park Police, U.S. Marshals, and state and local law enforcement. These Task Forces would be required to coordinate activities to ensure that resources are used as effectively as possible.

Sec. 403. Permits the A.G. to cross-designate up to 100 law enforcement officers from the U.S. Park Police, U.S. Forest Service, BLM, and other law enforcement agencies to enforce federal drug and criminal law in rural areas. As well, the section requires the A.G. to ensure that the Task Forces are adequately staffed with investigators.

Sec. 404. Establishes a specialized training program at the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center in Glynco, Georgia to teach police officers and sheriffs from rural agencies the most effective methods of conducting drug trafficking investigations.

Subtitle B—Rural Drug Prevention and Treatment

Sec. 411. Proposes a $25 million HHS drug prevention and treatment program for rural areas. Grants will go to hospitals, community health centers, and State agencies responsible for treatment. Requires that, to the extent practicable, one grant shall go to each state.

Subtitle C—Rural Areas Enhancement

Sec. 421. Requires that the assets forfeited by Rural Task Forces be used to enhance the operations of the Task Force and participating state and local law enforcement agencies.

Sec. 422. Requires federal prosecutors bringing charges against "ice" manufacturers to seek environmental related indictments as well as civil suits where environmental damage has occurred or hazardous waste has been illegally dumped.

TITLE V—FIREARMS AND RELATED AMENDMENTS

Sec. 501. Enhances penalties for smuggling firearms in furtherance of drug trafficking.

Sec. 502. Ten year maximum penalty for theft of firearms.

Sec. 503. Increase maximum penalty for making a knowingly false, material statement in connection with the purchase of a firearm.

Sec. 504. Summary destruction of explosives subject to forfeiture.

Sec. 507. Prohibition against theft of firearms or explosives from a licensee.

Sec. 508. Ten year maximum penalty for interstate gun trafficking.

Sec. 509. Prohibition against transactions involving stolen firearms.

Sec. 510. Technical amendment making possession of explosives by felons equivalent to receipt of explosives.

Sec. 511. Facilitates the disposition of firearms forfeited to the federal government. Government may use forfeited weapons or sell firearms which are historic or antiques.

Sec. 512. Defines burglary under the armed career criminal statute.

TITLE VI—JUVENILES AND GANGS

Sec. 611. Enhancement of maximum penalties for using minors in drug trafficking in drug free zones.

Sec. 621. Establishes $100 million grant program for efforts at the State and local level, and by private not-for-profit anti-crime organizations, to assist in prevention and enforcement programs aimed at fighting juvenile gangs.

Sec. 622. Creates a new federal offense which adds an additional period of incarceration of up to 10 years for violent crimes or drug offense committed by criminal street gangs.

Sec. 623. Creates a presumption in favor of adult prosecution of leaders of juvenile gangs or juveniles with history of violent crime or drug activity.

Sec. 631. Treats certain serious drug crimes by juveniles as armed career criminal predicate offenses.

Sec. 632. Creates a new $200 million dollar grant program to the State and local government for the purpose of developing alternative methods of punishment for young offenders.

Sec. 641. Adds another objective to State and local law enforcement block grants to support programs addressing the need for effective binder systems for adult prosecution of juveniles who commit serious violent crimes.

Sec. 642. Requires that the Attorney General develop a national strategy aimed at coordinating federal gang-related investigations.

Sec. 643. Clarification that juveniles records be produced before the commencement of any proceedings against him or her.

TITLE VII—TERRORISM AND INTERNATIONAL MATTERS

Sec. 701. Terrorism Civil Remedy—Provides U.S. victims of terrorism with a federal civil cause of action.

Sec. 702. Criminalizes the providing of material support to terrorists.

Sec. 703. Authorizes criminal forfeiture of property used in or derived from terrorist crimes.

Sec. 704. Alien Witness Cooperation Act—authorizes admission into the U.S. of up to 200 aliens annually who cooperate in terrorism or other investigations.

Sec. 705-706. Extends territorial sea included in the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the U.S. to 12 miles. Assimilates crimes which occur in this extended area.

Sec. 707. Ensures jurisdiction over crimes by or against U.S. nationals on foreign ships having a scheduled departure from or arrival in the U.S.

Sec. 708. Increases the maximum penalty for crimes of manslaughter and aggravated assault committed abroad by terrorists against U.S. nationals.

Sec. 709. Authorizes additional $67.5 million in appropriations for federal (and state) anti-terrorism efforts.

Sec. 710. Enhanced maximum penalties for certain offense likely to be terrorist offenses.

Sec. 711. Instructs the Sentencing Commission to review guidelines for terrorist offense, and if warranted, increase the guidelines.

Sec. 712. Extends the statute of limitations for certain terrorism offenses.

Sec. 713. Criminalizes international parental child kidnapping where the intent is to obstruct the lawful enforcement of parental rights.

Sec. 714. Criminalizes the foreign murder of U.S. nationals.

Sec. 715. Facilitation of the extradition of murderers of U.S. citizens abroad.

Sec. 716. Improves FBI access to telephone subscriber information in connection with counterintelligence and anti-terrorism investigations.

TITLE VIII—SEXUAL VIOLENCE, CHILD ABUSE, AND VICTIMS' RIGHTS.

TITLE IX—EQUAL JUSTICE ACT

The Equal Justice Act establishes additional safeguards against racial bias in the administration of capital punishment and other penalties. It codifies certain Supreme Court decisions addressing racial discriminatory practices in the imposition of the death penalty. It permits a motion by the defense attorney to examine jurors on the risk of racial prejudice during voir dire (Turner v. Murray (1986)); permits a change of venue where an impartial jury cannot be obtained (Irvin v. Dowd (1967)), and prohibits all appeals to racial prejudice or bias by defense counsel or the prosecutor before the jury.

TITLE X—FUNDING, GRANT PROGRAM, AND STUDIES

Subtitle A—Safer Streets and Neighborhoods

Sec. 1001-1004. These provisions incorporate the Republican alternative to Police Corps. It increases the current DOJ formula law enforcement grant program from $900 million to $1 billion. It requires that all additional appropriations under this program (current funding is at approximately $500 million) be used to hire additional law enforcement officers. The bill also adjusts the DOJ formula to treat rural states more fairly.

Subtitle B—Retired Public Safety Officer Death Benefits

Sec. 1011. Extends existing death benefits to cover retired officers killed or injured while responding to an emergency.

Subtitle C—Study of Police Officer's Bill of Rights

• Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I am pleased to join many of my colleagues, including the distinguished minority leader and the new ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, Senator HATCH, and our former ranking member, Senator THURMOND, to cosponsor the Crime Control Act of 1993. Passage of a strong, effective, and comprehensive crime control bill must be a priority for Congress this year.

Everyone recognizes that crime is one of the most serious problems confronting our Nation. Criminals hold many neighborhoods in our inner cities in their grasp. The law-abiding majority in these communities have become prisoners of these vicious criminals. People fear to leave their homes after dark. Some corners are off-limits to anyone not a member of some gang at all hours of the day. Weapons have become commonplace, and the handgun has become the preferred method for settling disputes. Fear reigns in many of our inner-city neighborhoods. At the same time, violent crime, formerly a stranger to many of our mid-size cities and smaller communities and rural areas, has spread into these locales. Local police in small towns can be overwhelmed as national gangs move into the community to use as a drug distribution center or to set up a methamphetamine laboratory.

We are unanimous in Congress in saying every year that the plague of violent crime must stop. But we appear unwilling to confront the real issues and pass tough legislation that will assist police officers and benefit our people who are held in terror at the seeming power of criminals to control their communities. In the 102d Congress, the Senate passed a tough anticrime bill, only to see its toughest provisions eviscerated in conference. With the start of the 103d Congress, the time comes to try again to develop and enact tough anticrime legislation.

The Crime Control Act of 1993 is such a tough, comprehensive bill. It addresses many of the most important issues confronting our Nation. It provides for a constitutional Federal death penalty for a wide range of murders. Adoption of such a law, strongly supported by a large majority of the American people, is long overdue.

The bill also provides tough, increased penalties for those who use firearms in the commission of crimes. Since the adoption of my Armed Career Criminal Act in 1984 and its expansion in 1986 to cover additional crimes, the Federal Government has turned its resources against violent criminals. The Armed Career Criminal Act has proved to be extremely successful in ridding our streets of thousands of our most violent criminals by putting them in jail for lengthy mandatory sentences. Increasing penalties for using firearms in the commission of crimes will have a similar salutary effect. We will not curb the plague of gun violence until we get serious about punishing those who use firearms illegally.

This bill also adopts many of the provisions included in the antigang legislation I introduced in the 102d Congress, S.1337. Gangs have become a serious national problem, and we must fight them at the Federal level. Small communities throughout our Nation which never had serious crime problems have recently been turned into local headquarters for national gangs like the Crips and the Bloods, both founded in Los Angeles but now involved in a crime-spree across the Nation. The antigang proposals in this bill will put effective tools into the hands of Federal law enforcement agencies to fight gang crime and violence.

I am also pleased to see the increased authorization for block grants to State and local police to assist them to hire additional officers. Law enforcement remains primarily a local responsibility. Local police know their communities best and are closest to their neighbors and friends. The Federal Government does have responsibilities in law enforcement, and I have worked for years to expand these responsibilities. But in the end, we must rely on our local police to keep our neighborhoods safe. That is why the Federal Government must assist in making some of its resources available to State and local governments to hire more police. This bill will increase the authorization levels to do just that. Once enacted, we can work to secure increases in appropriations to make the promise of this bill a reality.

In this connection, I want to note briefly the absence from this legislation of my Police Corps proposal. The fact that the Police Corps is not included in this bill, despite its inclusion in the Republican alternative anticrime bill of last year, does not indicate any lack of support for the program. Indeed, it indicates just the opposite. The Police Corps won approval in both the Senate and the House in the 102d Congress, and it was endorsed by both President Bush and President Clinton during the campaign. It is not included in this package only because we want to work closely with the incoming administration in drafting a Police Corps bill that will be enacted speedily on its own.

I want to point out that I do not support all the elements of this package. Habeas corpus reform has been a top priority of mine for several years now. I am troubled by the provisions of this bill that might be read to restrict Federal habeas corpus review to cases that have been fully and fairly adjudicated in State courts. I believe that finality in these cases is necessary, but Federal courts must be free to determine Federal rights. I will work closely with my colleagues to fashion comprehensive habeas corpus reform that will result in finality without sacrificing the traditional role of the Federal courts.

I am also very troubled by the provision of the bill cutting back on the exclusionary rule. This court-fashioned rule excludes illegally seized evidence from use at trial. As far as I can tell, police and courts manage quite well under the strictures of the rule, and very few cases are thrown out because of the effects of the exclusionary rule. The Supreme Court has created a good faith exception to the rule, under which evidence seized illegally by police officers otherwise acting in good faith under a defective warrant can be relied on in a prosecution. Some courts, like the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, have extended the good faith exception further and the law continues to develop in the courts to meet the particulars of each specific case. I believe that continued judicial development of the exclusionary rule is the wisest course. Thus, I opposed the provision of this bill on the exclusionary rule in the 102d Congress, as I opposed the attempted codification contained in the conference report on the anticrime bill last year. This is an issue that should be left to the courts.

Despite my reservations over two of this bill's key provisions, I view this legislation on the whole as a positive development. I will support this bill, even as I work to ameliorate some of its provisions. I am pleased to join in cosponsoring this measure, and I look forward to working with my colleagues to fashion necessary anticrime legislation this year. *

By Mr. COATS (for Mr. MCCAIN (for himself, Mr. COATS, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. BROWN, Mr. GRAMM, Mr. SIMPSON, Mr. MCCONNELL, Mr. WALLOP, Mr. NICKLES, Mr. BOND, Mr. MACK, Mr. SMITH, Mrs. KASSEBAUM, Mr. HELMS, Mr. BURNS, Mr. KEMPTHORNE, Mr. LOTT, Mr. CHAFEE, Mr. LUGAR, Mr. WARNER, Mr. DANFORTH, Mr. COVERDELL, Mr. PRESSLER, and Mr. BOREN)):

S. 9. A bill to grant the power to the President to reduce budget authority; to the Committee on the Budget and the Committee on Governmental Affairs, jointly, pursuant to the order of August 4, 1977, with instructions that if one committee reports, the other committee have 30 days to report or be charged.

BUDGET REDUCTION AUTHORITY

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, yesterday President Clinton gave our Nation a call to arms. He called for an American renewal. I pledge to work with our newly elected President to renew our country and refurbish our Nation's vitality.

Now, Mr. President, is the time to move quickly and decisively. Now is the time to give the President what he has asked for. Now is the time to pass the line-item veto.

Today I am joining Senators COATS, THURMOND, BROWN, GRAMM, SIMPSON, MCCONNELL, WALLOP, NICKLES, BOND, MACK, SMITH, KASSEBAUM, HELMS, BURNS, KEMPTHORNE, LOTT, CHAFEE, LUGAR, WARNER, and DANFORTH in reintroducing as one of the Republican priority bills the legislative line-item veto.

This bill is very simple. It enables the President, 20 days after the enactment of an appropriations bill, to identify items of spending within that bill which the President believes are wasteful, and to notify the Congress that the President is eliminating or reducing the funds for those items.

The President may veto part or all of the funds for programs deemed wasteful. It also allows the President to submit such enhanced rescissions with the budget submission at the beginning of the year. This second opportunity to propose rescissions ensures that the President has the opportunity to strike at wasteful pork barrel spending that may not be obvious during the first rescission period.

The Congress is required to overturn these line-item vetoes with majority votes in the House and Senate within 20 days or they become effective. The President may veto the rescission disapproval bill. In that case, the veto may be overridden by a two-thirds vote of the House and Senate. Last, this bill would not allow the President to rescind appropriations for entitlements such as Social Security, Medicaid, or food stamps.

More specifically, the Line-Item Veto Act of 1993 amends part B of title X of the Impoundment Control Act of 1974. It does not amend part A of title X of the Impoundment Control Act of 1974.

Mr. President, to those who charge that the line-item veto is a partisan game or an unneeded shift in power, I resoundingly state, you are wrong. The line-item veto is a necessity. Our Nation's fiscal house is in disarray. We are mortgaging our children's future. We must pay heed to President Clinton and listen to the trumpets that are heralding change throughout our country.

We must give the President the line-item veto.

On page 17 of then-Governor Clinton's "Putting People First, A National Economic Strategy for America," the President specifically states the following:

Line-Item Veto. To eliminate pork-barrel projects and cut government waste, I will ask Congress to give me the line-item veto.

During the President's stirring Inauguration Address, he boldly and most correctly declared:

Americans deserve better . . . so that power and privilege no longer shout down the voice of the people. Let us put aside personal advantage so that we can feel the pain and see the promise of America. . . . Let us give this capital back to the people to whom it belongs.

It is time to give the President the power that 43 governors possess. It is time to give the President the line-item veto. It is time to do the people's bidding. The people who send us here want the line-item veto. We must now put aside partisan and institutional pride and do what the people demand: we must give the President the line-item veto.

While as some will wax eloquently on the floor, giving us history lessons, explaining theoretical concepts that baffle the working men and women on America's streets, the public is demanding more. They want change. They want a renewed America.

The public has grown full of "pork books" and "pork kings." As the Washington Times stated on January 20, 1993:

The economy is down. Unemployment is up. The deficit is rising. Respect for government officialdom is failing. Yet the Congress of the United States can still spend billions on projects of absolutely no use to the taxpayers. Appropriately, our elected leaders have also allocated $140,000 for swine research.

A line-item veto will allow President Clinton an opportunity to do what we have shown ourselves incapable of doing—exercising fiscal restraint and eliminating funding for things like swine research.

Mr. President, I state again, we must give the President the line-item veto. I hope the Congress will act quickly on this issue.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the Legislative Line-Item Veto Act of 1993 appear in the RECORD following my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 9

Be it enacted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Legislative Line Item Veto Act of 1993."

SEC. 2. ENHANCEMENT OF SPENDING CONTROL BY THE PRESIDENT.

The Impoundment Control Act of 1974 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new title:

"TITLE XI—LEGISLATIVE LINE ITEM VETO RESCISSION AUTHORITY

"PART A—LEGISLATIVE LINE ITEM VETO RESCISSION AUTHORITY

"GRANT OF AUTHORITY AND CONDITIONS

"SEC. 1101. (a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding the provisions of part B of title X and subject to the provisions of part B of this title, the President may rescind all or part of any budget authority, if the President—

"(1) determines that—

"(A) such rescission would help balance the Federal budget, reduce the Federal budget deficit, or reduce the public debt;

"(B) such rescission will not impair any essential Government functions; and

"(C) such rescission will not harm the national interest; and

"(2)(A) notifies the Congress of such rescission by a special message not later than 20 calendar days (not including Saturdays, Sundays, or holidays) after the date of enactment of a regular or supplemental appropriations Act or a joint resolution making continuing appropriations providing such budget authority, or

"(B) notifies the Congress of such rescission by special message accompanying the submission of the President's budget to Congress and such rescissions have not been proposed previously for that fiscal year.

The President shall submit a separate rescission message for each appropriations bill under paragraph (2)(A).

"(b) RESCISSION EFFECTIVE UNLESS DISAPPROVED.—(1)(A) Any amount of budget authority rescinded under this title as set forth in a special message by the President shall be deemed canceled unless during the period described in subparagraph (B), a rescission disapproval bill making available all of the amount rescinded is enacted into law.

"(B) The period referred to in subparagraph (A) is—

"(i) a Congressional review period of 20 calendar days of session under part B, during which Congress must complete action on the rescission disapproval bill and present such bill to the President for approval or disapproval;

"(ii) after the period provided in clause (i), an additional 10 days (not including Sundays) during which the President may exercise his authority to sign or veto the rescission disapproval bill; and

"(iii) if the President vetoes the rescission disapproval bill during the period provided in clause (ii), an additional 5 calendar days of session after the date of the veto.

"(2) If a special message is transmitted by the President under this section during any Congress and the last session of such Congress adjourns sine die before the expiration of the period described in paragraph (1)(B), the rescission shall not take effect. The message shall be deemed to have been retransmitted on the first day of the succeeding Congress and the review period referred to in paragraph (1)(B) (with respect to such message) shall run beginning after such first day.

"DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 1102. For purposes of this title the term "rescission disapproval bill" means a bill or joint resolution which only disapproves a rescission of budget authority, in whole, rescinded in a special message transmitted by the President under section 1101.

"PART B—CONGRESSIONAL CONSIDERATION OF LEGISLATIVE LINE ITEM VETO RESCISSIONS

"PRESIDENTIAL SPECIAL MESSAGE

"SEC. 111. Whenever the President rescinds any budget authority as provided in section 1101, the President shall transmit to both Houses of Congress a special message specifying—

"(1) the amount of budget authority rescinded;

"(2) any account, department, or establishment of the Government to which such budget authority is available for obligation, and the specific project or governmental functions involved;

"(3) the reasons and justifications for the determination to rescind budget authority pursuant to section 1101(a)(1);

"(4) to the maximum extent practicable, the estimated fiscal, economic, and budgetary effect of the rescission; and

"(5) all facts, circumstances, and considerations relating to or bearing upon the rescission and the decision to effect the rescission, and to the maximum extent practicable, the estimated effect of the rescission upon the objects, purposes, and programs for which the budget authority is provided.

"TRANSMISSION OF MESSAGES; PUBLICATION

"SEC. 1112. (a) DELIVERY TO HOUSE AND SENATE.—Each special message transmitted under sections 1101 and 1111 shall be transmitted to the House of Representatives and the Senate on the same day, and shall be delivered to the Clerk of the House of Representatives if the House is not in session, and to the Secretary of the Senate if the Senate is not in session. Each special message so transmitted shall be referred to the appropriate committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate. Each such message shall be printed as a document of each House.

"(b) PRINTING IN FEDERAL REGISTER.—Any special message transmitted under sections 1101 and 1111 shall be printed in the first issue of the Federal Register published after such transmittal.

"PROCEDURE IN SENATE

"SEC. 1113. (a) REFERRAL.—(1) Any rescission disapproval bill introduced with respect to a special message shall be referred to the appropriate committees of the House of Representatives or the Senate, as the case may be.

"(2) Any rescission disapproval bill received in the Senate from the House shall be considered in the Senate pursuant to the provisions of this section.

"(b) FLOOR CONSIDERATION IN THE SENATE.—

"(1) Debate in the Senate on any rescission disapproval bill and debatable motions and appeals in connection therewith, shall be limited to not more than 10 hours. The time shall be equally divided between, and controlled by, the majority leader and the minority leader or their designees.

"(2) Debate in the Senate on any debatable motion or appeal in connection with such a bill shall be limited to 1 hour, to be equally divided between, and controlled by, the mover and the manager of the bill, except that in the event the manager of the bill is in favor of any such motion or appeal, the time in opposition thereto shall be controlled by the minority leader or his designee. Such leaders, or either of them, may, from the time under their control on the passage of the bill, allot additional time to any Senator during the consideration of any debatable motion or appeal.

"(3) A motion to further limit debate is not debatable. A motion to recommit (except a motion to recommit with instructions to report back within a specified number of days, not to exceed 1, not counting any day on which the Senate is not in session) is not in order.

"(c) POINT OF ORDER.—(1) It shall not be in order in the Senate or the House of Representatives to consider any rescission disapproval bill that relates to any matter other than the rescission of budget authority transmitted by the President under section 1101.

"(2) It shall not be in order in the Senate or the House of Representatives to consider any amendment to a rescission disapproval bill.

"(3) Paragraphs (1) and (2) may be waived or suspended in the Senate only by a vote of three-fifths of the members duly chosen and sworn."

• Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I am happy to join Senators MCCAIN and COATS in introducing the legislative Line-Item Veto Act. This legislation gives the President the authority to strike specific provisions from spending bills without having to veto the entire bill.

It is clear to most of us here in the Senate that we must begin to take the necessary steps to reduce the deficit. The national debt—now exceeding $4 trillion—is choking the Federal Government, and threatens our ability, as elected representatives, from effectively addressing the problems facing this country. Most economists agree that the Federal Government's huge Federal deficits were a factor in the recent recession, and hinder the recovery that is underway.

Last year the Federal Government paid almost as much in interest as it spent on all domestic discretionary programs combined. Interest expense is the third largest single expenditure in the Federal budget, behind Social Security and defense. If we continue our present course, interest will soon surpass defense as the second largest spending item in our budget.

We must remember that paying interest on the debt does nothing to address this country's most pressing needs. Interest does not assist in providing pregnant women and newborns with the medical and nutritional help they need. It does nothing in support of enhancing research and development to make our country more competitive. Interest provides no funds for expanding the Head Start Program so that all eligible children can receive the educational assistance they need. In short, the interest we now pay to support our past excesses robs us of the ability to meet today's pressing needs.

The line-item veto authority is one tool that we can give to the President to combat the deficit. It alone cannot balance the budget. Entitlement programs comprise almost half of all Federal outlays, yet they are not subject to the annual appropriations process. We must also find a way to control these programs. And, finally, it may be necessary to look at additional revenue sources to help balance the budget, but it is my hope that we will look long and hard at the spending side of the budget before we take that step.

Mr. President, I commend the Senator from Arizona, Mr. MCCAIN and the Senator from Indiana, Mr. COATS for reintroducing this legislation. I urge my colleagues to support this effort so that the new President has the tools he needs to fulfill his campaign pledge to reduce the deficit. •

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, during this past year the citizens of my State and the country have demonstrated grave concerns with regard to the fiscal crisis and dilemma being experienced by our country.

In the Presidential campaign, all candidates spoke eloquently and often to issues of debt and deficit. In his inaugural speech, President Clinton addressed the issue of debt in our Nation.

In record numbers, Georgians and Americans turned out to express their frustration and concern in this past election. It is clear to me that much of this concern is rooted in the issue of the financial crisis faced by our country as shown by this debt and deficit.

Mr. President, 49 Governors of the United States, including the former Governor of Arkansas and now the President of the United States, had as a fiscal tool to utilize in financial discipline, the line-item veto.

Mr. President, as a member of the Georgia Senate for many years, I had the opportunity to witness first hand the value of the chief executive of our State having as a financial discipline the tool of the line-item veto.

I believe it is exceedingly important that the 103d Congress be responsive to the call of our new President. I believe it is responsible for us to react to the electorate of this country when it calls for enormous proportions the institution of new disciplines and rules that relate to the manner in which we manage our financial affairs.

Therefore, I join with the President of the United States, Senator MCCAIN, and others, and the people of this country, in their call for the institution of a line-item veto.

Mr. President, thank you.
I yield the floor.

By Mr. CRAIG (for himself, Mr. DOLE, Mr. HATCH, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. BURNS, Mr. SIMPSON, Mr. KEMPTHORNE, and Mr. HATFIELD):

S. 10. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide tax incentives for the adoption of flexible family leave policies by employers; to the Committee on Finance.

FLEXIBLE FAMILY LEAVE TAX CREDIT ACT

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I rise to urge my colleagues to support and cosponsor legislation I am introducing today with our distinguished Republican, the Senator from Kansas [Mr. DOLE], and several other colleagues. This bill, numbered S. 10, is the Flexible Family Leave Tax Credit Act of 1993.

I want to remind my colleagues of a little of the history behind this bill. Back in the middle of the last decade, some concerns began to arise because demographic shifts and changes in the economy and the work force were forcing some working parents to make difficult decisions between work and family, when critical family events occur.

The not-surprising response of some, those who see Government control as the answer to every challenge, was to propose that the Federal Government impose a one-size-fits-all, inflexible mandate that employers provide the Government's idea of an appropriate personnel policy change.

And there were those of us who care deeply about families and who also realize that business owners are laborers too, who have families of their own, and who value every dimension of their employees' well-being. Small businesses, especially, often operate at the margin, and generally provide what they can—based also on what their employees want—in the way of compensation and benefits.

Congresses and Presidents and Federal public policy has long recognized the constraints that a dynamic economy places on both employers and employees, and—until very recently—understood that incentives are the best Government tool for introducing changes in the employment relationship.

In that spirit, some 4 years ago, as a Member of the other body, I cosponsored legislation to create a tax incentive for employers to provide family and medical leave. Because of the restrictive rules of that body, we were never given a fair hearing and we were never allowed to offer a floor amendment along those lines.

Two years ago, as a Member of this body, I introduced similar legislation. I discussed my bill back then with colleagues, the business community, family advocates, and the administration. I did not offer my bills as an amendment when the Senate took up S. 5 in the 102d Congress, because it was obvious then that no alternative was going to be given serious consideration until after a veto was sustained.

The proof of that fact came in the treatment accorded the one major substitute that was offered during the 1991 floor debate. Those of us who had a variety of ideas on alternatives to mandated benefits decided to support one of them and deferred to the distinguished ranking minority member of the Labor and Human Resources Committee at the time, Senator HATCH. The gentleman from Utah had put much thought and effort into his bill, the preferred rehire alternative. I know he and his staff were working on it well before the beginning of the 102d Congress and that it was a very serious undertaking. But, when it came to the floor, arms were twisted, the special interest groups howled, and Senator HATCH's very good proposal was not given the consideration it deserved. It was obvious that the same fate would befall any other serious alternative, as well.

Before S. 5 was vetoed, several of us in this body and the last administration worked on a new family leave tax credit that improved on our previous proposals. We were ready then to go to the table to work out a bill—a nonmandate bill, an incentive bill—that could have become law last year. But again, we were not really given that chance.

Now, once again, we have the opportunity to really consider all sides of this issue fully and seriously. We, who support family leave but oppose writing private sector employers' personnel policies for them, offer a positive alternative. We want to see a family leave bill become law, if it provides an incentive, if it applies broadly, and if it increases the family-friendly benefits employers offer voluntarily because they are now able to do so.

I understand that the family leave mandate bill that will be introduced today will be the same as last year's vetoed version. I would like to add to the RECORD a brief side-by-side analysis comparing these two approaches. I ask unanimous consent to print that in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 10

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Flexible Family Leave Tax Credit Act of 1993".

TITLE I—FAMILY LEAVE CREDIT

SEC. 101. CREDIT CREATED.

Subpart D of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to business related credits) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 45A. FAMILY LEAVE CREDIT.

"(a) AMOUNT OF CREDIT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of section 38, the amount of the family leave credit for any employer for any taxable year is 20 percent of the qualified compensation with respect to an employee who is on family leave.

"(2) LIMITATIONS ON AVAILABILITY AND AMOUNT OF CREDIT.—

"(A) FEWER THAN 500 EMPLOYEES.—An employer is not entitled to a family leave credit for any taxable year unless—

"(i) in the case of an employer that is in its first taxable year, the employer had fewer than 500 employees at the close of that year, and

"(ii) in the case of other employers, the employer averaged fewer than 500 employees for its preceding taxable year.

An employer is considered to average fewer than 500 employees for a taxable year if the sum of its employees on the last day of each quarter in that year divided by the number of quarters is fewer than 500.

"(B) DOLLAR CAP ON QUALIFIED COMPENSATION.—The amount of qualified compensation that may be taken into account with respect to an employee may not exceed $100 per business day.

"(C) MAXIMUM PERIOD OF FAMILY LEAVE.—No family leave credit will be available to the extent that the period of family leave for an employee exceeds 12 weeks, defined as 60 business days, in any 12-month period.

"(D) ADDITIONAL LIMITATION ON LEAVE FOR PERSONAL SERIOUS HEALTH CONDITIONS.—Leave from an employer in connection with a qualified purpose described in subsection (b)(2)(D) will qualify as family leave only if the employee on leave has no unused sick, disability, or similar leave.

"(b) FAMILY LEAVE.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, an employee is considered to be on 'family leave' if the employee is on leave from the employer in connection with any qualified purpose.

"(2) QUALIFIED PURPOSES.—The term 'qualified purposes' means—

"(A) the birth of a child,

"(B) the placement of a child with the employee for adoption or foster care,

"(C) the care of a child, parent or spouse with a serious health condition, or

"(D) the treatment of a serious health condition which makes the employee unable to perform the functions of his or her position.

"(3) DEFINITIONS OF CHILD, PARENT AND SERIOUS HEALTH CONDITION.—

"(A) CHILD.—The term 'child' means an individual who is a son, stepson, daughter, stepdaughter, eligible foster child as described in sections 32(c)(3)(B)(iii) (I) and (II), or legal ward of the employee or employee's spouse, or a child of a person standing in loco parentis and who either has not reached the age of 19 by the commencement of the period of family leave or is physically or mentally incapable of caring for himself or herself.

"(B) PARENT.—The term 'parent' means an individual with respect to whom the employee would be considered a 'child' within the meaning of subsection (b)(2)(A) without regard to the age limitation.

"(C) SERIOUS HEALTH CONDITION.—The term 'serious health condition' means an illness, injury, impairment, or physical or mental condition that involves the inpatient care in a hospital, hospice or residential health care facility, or substantial and continuing treatment by a health care provider.

"(c) CREDIT REFUNDABLE.—In the case of so much of the section 38 credit as is attributable to the family leave credit—

"(1) section 38(c) will not apply, and

"(2) for purposes of this section, such credit will be treated as if it were allowed under section 103 of the Flexible Family Leave Tax Credit Act of 1993.

"(d) NONDISCRIMINATION REQUIREMENT.—The family leave credit is available to an employer for a taxable year only if the employer provides family leave to its employees for that year on a nondiscriminatory basis.

"(e) OTHER DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section—

"(A) EMPLOYER.—Except as otherwise provided in this subpart, the term 'employer' has the meaning provided by section 3306(a)(1) and (3).

"(B) EMPLOYEE.—The term 'employee' includes only permanent employees who have been employed by the employer for at least 12 months and have provided over 1000 hours of service to the employer during the 12 months preceding commencement of the family leave.

"(C) QUALIFIED COMPENSATION.—The term 'qualified compensation' means the greater of—

"(i) cash wages paid or incurred by the employer to or on behalf of the employee as remuneration for services during the period of family leave, and

"(ii) cash wages that would have been paid or incurred by the employer to or on behalf of the employee as remuneration for services during the period of family leave had the employee not taken the leave.

"(D) COMPUTATION.—For purposes of subsection (e)(1)(C)(ii), the amount of cash wages that would have been paid to the employee for any business day the employee is on family leave is the average daily cash wages of that employee for the four calendar quarters preceding the commencement of the family leave.

"(E) AVERAGE DAILY CASH WAGES.—For purposes of the computation described in subsection (e)(1)(D), an employee's average daily cash wages is his or her total cash wages for the period described in such subsection divided by the number of business days in that period.

"(F) BUSINESS DAY.—The term 'business day' includes any day other than a Saturday, Sunday or legal holiday.

"(2) EMPLOYMENT AND BENEFITS PROTECTION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Leave taken under this section shall qualify an employer for a family leave credit only if—

"(i) upon return from such leave, the employee is entitled to be restored by the employer to the position of employment held by the employee when the leave commenced, or to be restored to an equivalent position with equivalent employment benefits, pay, and other terms and conditions of employment;

"(ii) the taking of such leave does not result in the loss of any employment benefit accrued prior to the date on which the leave commenced; and

"(iii) the employer maintains coverage under any 'group health plan' (as defined in section 5000(b)(1)) for the duration of such leave, at the level and under the conditions coverage would have been provided if the employee had continued in employment continuously during the leave period.

"(B) LIMITATION.—Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to require an employer, as a condition of qualifying for a family leave credit, to entitle any employee taking leave to—

"(i) the accrual of any seniority or employment benefits during any period of leave; or

"(ii) any right, benefit, or position of employment other than any right, benefit, or position to which the employee would have been entitled had the employee not taken the leave.

"(3) EXPECTATION THAT EMPLOYEE WILL RETURN TO WORK.—No family leave credit will be available for any portion of a period of family leave during which the employer does not reasonably believe that the employee will return from leave to work for the employer.

"(4) SPECIAL RULES.—Rules similar to the rules of section 52 shall apply for purposes of this section.

"(5) REGULATORY AUTHORITY.—The Secretary may prescribe such regulations or other guidance as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this section, including guidance relating to ensuring adequate employment and benefits protection and guidance to prevent abuse of this section."

SEC. 102. COORDINATION WITH REFUND PROVISION.

For purposes of section 1324(b)(2) of title 31 of the United States Code, section 45A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as added by this Act) will be considered to be a credit provision of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 enacted before January 1, 1978.

SEC. 103. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

(a) Section 38 is amended by deleting the "plus" after subsection (b)(7) and "and" after subsection (b)(8), by inserting "plus" after subsection (b)(8), and by adding a new subsection (b)(9) to read as follows:

"(9) the family leave credit under section 45A."

(b) The table of sections for subpart D of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

SEC. 104. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by this title shall apply to family leave that commences 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

TITLE II—DEFICIT NEUTRAL REVENUE OFFSET

SEC. 201. CORPORATE ESTIMATED TAX PROVISIONS.

(a) INCREASE IN ESTIMATED TAX.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (d) of section 6655 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to amount of required installments) is amended—

(A) by striking "91 percent" each place it appears in paragraph (1)(B)(i) and inserting "100 percent";

(B) by striking "91 PERCENT" in the heading of paragraph (2) and inserting "100 PERCENT", and

(C) by striking paragraph (3).

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(A) Clause (ii) of section 6655(e)(2)(B) of such Code is amended by striking the table contained therein and inserting the following new table:

"In the case of the following required installments:

2nd	50
4th	100."

(B) Clause (i) of section 6655(e)(3)(A) of such Code is amended by striking "91 percent" and inserting "100 percent".

(b) MODIFICATION OF PERIODS FOR APPLYING ANNUALIZATION.—

(1) Clause (i) of section 6655(e)(2)(A) of such Code is amended—

(A) by striking "or for the first 5 months" in subclause (II),

(B) by striking "or for the first 8 months" in subclause (III), and

(C) by striking "or for the first 11 months" in subclause (IV).

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 6655(e) of such Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) ELECTION FOR DIFFERENT ANNUALIZATION PERIODS.—

"(i) If the taxpayer makes an election under this clause—

"(I) subclause (II) of subparagraph (A)(i) shall be applied by substituting '4 months' for '3 months'.

The applicable percentage is:

"(II) subclause (III) of subparagraph (A)(i) shall be applied by substituting '7 months' for '6 months', and

"(III) subclause (IV) of subparagraph (A)(i) shall be applied by substituting '10 months' for '9 months'.

"(ii) If the taxpayer makes an election under this clause—

"(I) subclause (II) of subparagraph (A)(i) shall be applied by substituting '5 months' for '3 months'.

"(II) subclause (III) of subparagraph (A)(i) shall be applied by substituting '8 months' for '6 months', and

"(III) subclause (IV) of subparagraph (A)(i) shall be applied by substituting '11 months' for '9 months'.

"(iii) An election under clause (i) or (ii) shall apply to the taxable year for which made and such an election shall be effective only if made on or before the date required for the payment of the second required installment for such taxable year."

(3) The last sentence of section 6655(g)(3) of such Code is amended by striking "and subsection (e)(2)(A)" and inserting "and, except in the case of an election under subsection (e)(2)(C), subsection (e)(2)(A)".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to any installment due date occurring more than 90 days after the date of enactment of this act.

² Source: Office of Management and Budget.

⁴ Based on Joint Tax Committee estimates of S. 3265 and H.R. 11, 102d Congress.

⁵ Based on a combination of General Accounting Office and Small Business Administration methodologies. In 1991, SBA estimated that 12 weeks of mandated maternity leave alone would cost employers $1.2 to $7.9 billion a year. GAO's earlier report estimated this type leave would account for about half of the leave taken under the mandate bill.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, our bill, S. 10, offers the compromise approach of creating a new, refundable, 20-percent tax credit that would be a powerful incentive for employers to offer family and medical leave benefits.

I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD a description and fact-sheet on this legislation.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

REINTRODUCTION OF FLEXIBLE FAMILY LEAVE TAX CREDIT

Senators LARRY CRAIG (ID), BOB DOLE (KS), ORRIN HATCH (UT), ALAN SIMPSON (WY), CHUCK GRASSLEY (IA), CONRAD BURNS (MT), and DICK KEMPTHORNE (ID) today introduced S. 10, the Flexible Family Leave Tax Credit Act of 1993.

The bill would make available a refundable tax credit, based on 20% of an employee's usual compensation, when the employee's employer gives him or her up to 12 weeks of family leave—paid or unpaid—due to the birth or adoption of a child, the serious health condition of an immediate family member, or the employee's own serious health condition.

S. 10 is similar to S. 3265 in the 102nd Congress, which built on earlier family leave tax incentive proposals introduced in the 102nd and 101st Congress. Summary information about S. 3265 is attached. Besides technical changes, the new bill would allow intermittent leave to qualify for the tax credit, and include clearer language on the tax credit being conditional on the protection of reinstatement and benefits.

The Joint Tax Committee (JTC) has just estimated the cost of the S. 3265 tax credit at $4.8 billion through FY 1998. To offset this revenue loss, S. 10 includes a 100% estimated tax payment rule for large corporations (see attached), would yield almost $5.7 billion over 5 years. This provision was included in last year's HR 11 and was not controversial. This provision simply would require large corporations (i.e., with taxable income of $1 million or more) to base their quarterly estimated tax payments on 100% of their current year tax liability (rather than the current law 97% through 1996 and 91% thereafter). Most corporations already overpay as a precaution.

FLEXIBLE PARENTAL LEAVE POLICY (102D CONGRESS)

President Bush has consistently supported employer policies to provide parental leave. But he has opposed mandates that require businesses to provide leave to employees. These mandates are a hidden tax on employers and employees that will cost the economy thousands of jobs.

However, the President supports tax credits for employers that will encourage flexible parental leave policies without stifling economic growth.

PARENTAL LEAVE TAX CREDIT

The Administration supports refundable tax credits for businesses that establish non-discriminatory parental leave policies. The credit would be available for:

All businesses with under 500 employees, so long as the benefit is provided to all employees on a nondiscriminatory basis;

For 20% of total employee benefits and compensation of up to $2,000 per month, for a period of up to 12 weeks;

For birth or adoption leave, or for the care of a seriously ill child, parent or spouse; and

The cost of the credit would be less than $500 million per year.

The advantages of this approach over parental leave mandates are:

It gives employers the flexibility to design a leave package that best fits their employees' needs. The $400/month or $100/week credit is designed to allow the employer to cover the benefits of an absent employee—whether those costs are for continued health coverage, pension or 401k contributions, partial pay, or any other component of a flexible benefits package that an employer may offer. It may also partially defray the cost of temporary replacement employees.

It provides incentives for most small and mid-sized employers, where the need is greatest and the costs are more burdensome, to develop responsible parental leave policies. The Democratic plan excludes companies with under 50 employees in a weak attempt to limit the economic damage to small and mid-sized businesses. The Republican plan would offer positive incentives to all employers—of any size—to provide parental leave.

Instead of mandating hidden payroll taxes on small and mid-sized businesses, it would provide direct economic incentives to encourage the adoption of the responsible parental leave policies that President Bush has long supported.

FACT SHEET

CURRENT LAW

No deduction or credit is available to an employer who provides employees with unpaid leave for childbirth, medical care of children or parents or other serious medical needs. Compensation paid to employees during leave for these purposes is deductible under general tax principles.

REASONS FOR CHANGE

Care for family members with serious mental or physical health problems, including injuries and sickness necessitating hospital, hospice or substantial and continuous medical treatment, present substantial hardships on families. Families are further burdened by the requirements of childbirth and childcare. The increase in the number of two wage-earner families, as well as single parent families, has resulted in pressures to balance these family needs with employment requirements. This balancing has resulted in difficult decisions for both employers and employees.

Employers face significant costs related to extended employee absences. Extended absences could result in substantial lost production and lost business opportunities if the employee is not replaced. These costs are particularly high for small and medium-sized businesses. Economies of scale permit large firms to reduce these costs. Large businesses can train and maintain floating employees, temporarily shift employees to replace absentees or enter into regular arrangements with third parties for trained temporary employees. The costs of extended absences on small and medium size businesses may not be as readily reduced. For small and medium-sized businesses, it is often not economically reasonable to maintain floating employees, to shift employees from other duties or to retrain workers for only a temporary need. Accordingly, small and medium size businesses are more likely to experience severe economic consequences if they do not quickly replace absent workers.

Regardless of a business' ability to mitigate costs, all businesses must balance the legitimate family needs of their employees with the costs of extended absences. Since most businesses cannot economically tolerate unlimited employee absences, employers frequently must place limits on such absences. As a result of these limitations, employees can be placed in the situation of choosing between their employment and the serious medical or health needs of their families.

The proposal's tax incentives encourage small and medium-sized businesses to adopt flexible leave policies related to childbirth, adoption or serious family health problems. The tax incentives do not require that any particular form of flexible leave be adopted. Instead, the proposal allows employers and employees to arrive at a program based on their specific needs, while also providing an offset to the cost of extended employee absences.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISION

The provision provides a 20% refundable tax credit to small or medium-sized employers that provide family leave to their employees. "Family leave" is leave in connection with the birth of a child; the placement of a child with the employee for adoption or foster care; caring for a child, parent or spouse with a serious physical or mental health condition; or a serious physical or mental health condition that prevents the employee from performing his or her job. All employers with fewer than 500 employees are eligible for the family leave tax credit.

The amount of the credit is 20% of the cash wages that the employer provided to the employee during the period of family leave, or would have been provided to the employee during that period had he or she not taken the leave. The cash wages that would have been provided is based on the average wages for the preceding calendar year (or absent a sufficient period of employment, the preceding four calendar quarters). The maximum amount of wages taken into account for this purpose is $100 for each business day. The maximum period of family leave for which the credit is available shall not exceed 60 business days (12 calendar weeks) in any 12-month period. This results in a maximum available family leave credit of $1,200 per employee per year.

The proceeds of the family leave credit may be used by an employer for any purpose. For example, the proceeds may be contributed to a pool of funds provided by the employer and other employees to defray employee leave costs, paid as partial wage supplements to employees on leave or used to purchase wage continuation insurance or other insurance to cover leave related costs or to provide leave related benefits.

The credit is only available with respect to employees (whether part-time or full-time) who satisfy certain length of service requirements. Under these requirements, the employees must have been employed by the employer for at least 12 months before beginning the family leave and must have performed at least 1,000 hours of service for the employer in the preceding 12 months. Moreover, the credit applies only for the portion of family leave during which the employer reasonably expects that the employee will return to work for the employer.

In order to qualify for the credit, employers must provide employment and benefits protection to employees on family leave. Health benefits must continue during the leave under the terms and conditions that would have applied had the employees remained at work. In addition, all family leave must be provided on a nondiscriminatory basis.

REVENUE OFFSET

Modify estimated tax payment rules for large corporations.

PRESENT LAW

A corporation is subject to an addition to tax for any underpayment of estimated tax. For taxable years beginning after June 30, 1992 and before 1997, a corporation does not have an underpayment of estimated tax if it makes four equal timely estimated tax payments that total at least 97 percent of the tax liability shown on the return for the current taxable year. A corporation may estimate its current year tax liability based upon a method that annualizes its income through the period ending with either the month or the quarter ending prior to the estimated tax payment date.

For taxable years beginning after 1996, the 97-percent requirement becomes a 91-percent requirement. The present-law 97-percent and 91-percent requirements were added by the Unemployment Compensation Amendments of 1992.

A corporation that is not a "large corporation" generally may avoid the addition to tax if it makes four timely estimated tax payments each equal to at least 25 percent of its tax liability for the preceding taxable year (the "100 percent of last year's liability safe harbor"). A large corporation may use this rule with respect to its estimated tax payment for the first quarter of its current taxable year. A large corporation is one that had taxable income of $1 million or more for any of the three preceding taxable years.

REASONS FOR CHANGE

The committee believes that corporate estimated tax requirements should be increased to require corporations to more timely remit their current year tax liabilities. In addition, the committee believes that in order to simplify and rationalize the calculation of annualized income for corporate estimated tax purposes, an additional set of annualization periods should be provided and applied consistently.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISION

For taxable years beginning after 1992, a corporation that does not use the 100 percent of last year's liability safe harbor for its estimated tax payments is required to base its estimated tax payments on 100 percent (rather than 97 percent or 91 percent) of its current year tax liability, whether such liability is determined on an actual or annualized basis.

The bill does not change the present-law availability of the 100 percent of last year's liability safe harbor for large or small corporations.

In addition, the bill modifies the rules relating to income annualization for corporate estimated tax purposes. Under the bill, annualized income is to be determined based on the corporation's activity for the first 3 months of the taxable year (in the case of the first and second estimated tax installments); the first 6 months of the taxable year (in the case of the third estimated tax installment); and the first 9 months of the taxable year (in the case of the fourth estimated tax installment). Alternatively, a corporation may elect to determine its annualized income based on the corporation's activity for either: (1) the first 3 months of the taxable year (in the case of the first estimated tax installment); the first 4 months of the taxable year (in the case of the second estimated tax installment); the first 7 months of the taxable year (in the case of the third estimated tax installment); and the first 10 months of the taxable year (in the case of the fourth estimated tax installment); or (2) the first 3 months of the taxable year (in the case of the first estimated tax installment); the first 5 months of the taxable year (in the case of the second estimated tax installment); the first 8 months of the taxable year (in the case of the third estimated tax installment); and the first 11 months of the taxable year (in the case of the fourth estimated tax installment). An election to use either of the annualized income patterns described in (1) or (2) above must be made on or before the due date of the second estimated tax installment for the taxable year for which the election is to apply, in a manner prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, a tax credit incentive to provide family and medical leave—as opposed to mandating fringe benefits in Federal law—is the approach that is consistent with how we always have approached both employee benefits and tax policy.

Generally speaking, we pass laws that punish to deter bad behavior and enact incentives to encourage good behavior. That is the approach we are taking in introducing the Family Leave Tax Credit Act.

Sixty years ago, there were virtually no employer-provided employee benefits. Congress enacted tax incentives. Today, more than 85 percent of employers provide health insurance. Some 90 percent of employees in medium and large firms have disability leave with at least some income replacement. According to surveys of employee benefits by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in recent years, 97-99 percent of employers voluntarily provide some type of paid benefits.

It is not a fair or an accurate assessment of need, merely to identify how many employers provide the precise benefits provided for in S. 5. To a significant extent, when such benefits are not offered it is because other benefits were negotiated, instead. A Gallup Poll from a couple of years ago found that parental leave was the most important benefit to only 1 percent of respondents.

Because employee benefits must be carved from a finite pie of resources the employer has available for compensation, mandating one set of benefits means that employee choice will be overridden and, in some cases, employees will wind up losing other benefits they would have preferred.

The mandate bill represents one of the noble, but most misguided, impulses of legislators: The tendency to legislate by anecdote, to govern according to relatively isolated horror stories, and to ignore the possibility that, in doing so, the baby can be thrown out with the bath water.

In saying this, I do not argue that we should ignore each and every workplace that is without family leave benefits. The question is how best to expand the availability of such benefits. Experience shows us that tax incentives obviously have worked when Congress has wanted to expand the universe of available benefits.

The answer also turns on how we judge human nature. A balanced view is that the laws of human nature apply equally to employers and employees. Those of us who believe that individuals will be as good to others as they can be, believe in using the carrot rather than the club to foster good behavior.

I urge my colleagues, if you want to enact the fairest and most balanced bill, if you want a true compromise, if you want a family leave law this year, let us start by looking at our Flexible Family Leave Tax Credit Act. It's a new Congress. Let us sit down with the leadership from both sides of the aisle and the administration, and work out an effective, nonmandated, compromise.

Mr. President, let me discuss in this time that I have remaining the legislation that my leader, BOB DOLE, and I have introduced today, Senate S. 10, Flexible Family Leave Tax Credit Act of 1993. This issue has been debated on the floor before. Obviously by the introduction of both Republican leadership and Democratic leadership of this issue this year, it will be front and center and it probably deserves that kind of treatment.

I introduced this legislation a year ago, but it was obvious that it was not going to get the kind of treatment that it deserved because, frankly enough, this important issue became a political issue in the final days of the session and Members on the other side wished to use it for scoring purposes in the election process. That is unfair. It is unfortunate. Those kinds of things happen. I understand it.

Hopefully, with my introduction of opposing or differing approaches to the same problem this year early on in the session of the 103d, we will be able to deal with it in a fair and justifiable way. It is very important that that happen.

Mr. President, let me, therefore, in a brief way look at the two bills that have been offered because it is important that early on we begin to understand where all of us are coming from. We are talking about working people, people out there who, by necessity the commitment for the family, for their own personal reasons, need to leave the workplace for a period of time and in that, let me give that kind of an analogy.

That legislation introduced today by the Democratic majority leader covers a certain percentage of people working out there today estimated to be between 40 and 50 percent of those working. What about the rest of them? It is important that they be covered. The legislation we are looking at would address nearly 99 percent of the working people of this country in groups of 500 or fewer employees. We understand that the large companies already have oftentimes leave requirements.

So we would strive to cover a great many more of the citizens of this country, and we would not mandate. It is not going to be the heavy hand of the Federal Government reaching down and saying, "You will." It is going to be, as it should be in the workplace, management and labor coming together and saying here it what we have agreed is best for our work environment. We would create the incentive for that kind of chemistry to exist, and that would be created in the form of a tax credit. That is the way it ought to be.

As it relates to the budget impact of this kind of thing, when you mandate it, the private sector picks it up, obviously. You say to the private sector, you are going to do it; it is going to come out of your back pockets; we are not worried about competition; in an international economy, you do it. That is what was just spoken to by the other side.

What we are suggesting is that that relationship is going to cost some money, and if we give tax credits, it will cost. We have some offsets. And in doing those effective offsets we create a revenue neutral situation that I think is important as we struggle with the deficit in the coming year. Cost imposed on employers, well, in a general sense, the mandatory one as argued would be about $2.4 billion and we give the kind of encouragements through incentive that it ought to be.

As it relates to the type of leave, we are both suggesting unpaid although ours could be a paid environment, depending again upon the incentives, for all of the reasons I have given: birth, adoption, serious health conditions of the child, the parent, and the employee. And it is broken out in the text I have submitted to the RECORD. It is an important issue. We will move aggressively on it this year and I hope effectively address it for the working men and women of this country.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I am pleased to be an original cosponsor of the Flexible Family Leave Tax Credit Act of 1993, which provides for refundable tax credits for businesses that establish nondiscriminatory parental leave policies.

FLEXIBLE FAMILY LEAVE TAX CREDIT ACT OF 1993

This credit would be available for all businesses with under 500 employees—covering 6 million businesses and almost 50 million workers.

The amount of the credit would be for 20 percent of total employee compensation of up to $2,000 per month for a period of up to 12 weeks. In other words, the credit would amount to $100/week or a maximum of $1,200 per employee to cover agreed-upon benefits during the period of absence.

An employee would be eligible to take leave in the event of the birth of a child, the placement of a child with the employee for adoption or foster care, or for a child, parent, or spouse with a serious health condition, or a serious health condition that prevents the employee from performing his or her job.

ADVANTAGES OF LEGISLATION

Mr. President, the need to enact family leave legislation is greater than ever. We have more and more households where both parents are in the workplace and more and more households run by single parents. We are told that these trends are here to stay.

The key for me is to find a legislative solution to this issue that is both pro-family and pro-business. I believe that the legislation introduced by the distinguished Senator from Idaho meets these two important objectives.

PRO-FAMILY

It is pro-family because it provides for a flexible leave program that allows the employer and employee—and not the Federal Government—to freely determine the terms of leave that works best for them.

It provides for the same types of leave and the same types of protections as legislation supported by my colleagues on the other side of the aisle. And this it accomplishes without all of the harmful effects that mandates cause to the economy and to efforts to create new jobs.

Finally, it is worth noting that the legislation offered by my distinguished colleague helps 15 million more families than legislation promoted by the other side of the aisle which excludes businesses with under 50 employees in a weak attempt to limit the acknowledged economic damage such legislation would do to smaller businesses.

PRO-BUSINESS

The legislation introduced by my distinguished colleague from Idaho is also a pro-business package and stands in sharp contrast to legislation supported by my colleagues on the other side of the aisle.

The Flexible Family Leave Tax Credit Act provides an incentive for businesses to establish family and medical leave programs.

Democrat alternatives, on the other hand, are mandates; hidden taxes; Washington, DC reaching out into every community, every office, and every factory telling the American people what is best for them.

It is an approach that for all its good intentions to help families—will ultimately cause more harm than good.

PRO-JOBS

Indeed, legislation mandating benefits demands an offset and will force employers to cut jobs or other more desirable employee benefits to pay for the hidden tax.

Some cost estimates run as high as $7 billion for such legislation.

To say the least, that's a lot of jobs—particularly at a time when we have an unemployment rate that is unacceptable high.

The legislation offered by the distinguished Senator from Idaho is a pro-jobs bill. Not only does it not tax employers to pay for a congressionally mandated benefit, but the credit provides an incentive to create new jobs to temporarily fill the places of those workers on leave.

You hear a lot of speeches around this place and in the media about creating jobs—preserving jobs.

And yet, anyone who supports legislation mandating that employers provide this benefit are doing the exact opposite. Simply put, mandating family leave will force employers to mandate a permanent leave program for some of their other workers.

DEFICIT NEUTRAL

The legislation introduced by the distinguished Senator from Idaho is also deficit neutral. It contains a pay-for previously contained in H.R. 11 from the 102d Congress which increases the corporate estimated tax to 100 percent.

I think everyone will agree that it is not easy to pay for legislation. Indeed, rather than do so, my colleagues on the other side of the aisle prefer to impose mandates on business so that they have to pay for it.

In this Senator's opinion, that is not the direction we should be moving in.

It hurts the economy and it hurts jobs. It is the easy way out—an out of sight-out of mind approach that shirks the responsibility we have to pay for the programs we make into laws.

JUDGE LEGISLATION BY MERIT—NOT BY POLITICS

Mr. President, we all support family and medical leave. There has never been a debate on the need and value of such programs. Rather, the debate has always been how you go about doing it, and it is there that the difference of opinion could not be greater.

I urge my colleagues to carefully review this legislation based on its merits—not on the politics that has governed this issue for the last 7 years.

My colleagues on the other side of the aisle support a bill that is an in kind tax on business—a clumsy, harmful one-size-fits-all mandate.

I think we can do better and the distinguished Senator from Idaho has done just that in the legislation he has introduced today.

S. 11. A bill to combat violence and crimes against women on the streets and in homes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN ACT

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce Senate bill number 11, the Violence Against Women Act of 1993—the first comprehensive legislation to address the growing problem of violent crime confronting American women.

Since I first introduced this legislation in 1990, the Judiciary Committee has held a series of four hearings; we have refined the legislation and issued reports; we have garnered the support of prominent groups and individuals with widely differing interests—from law enforcement, women's groups, and victims' advocates. The bill has twice received the unanimous approval of the Judiciary Committee. Now, it is time to complete our efforts.

I am particularly heartened that my colleague, the gentlewoman from California [Mrs. BOXER], the author of this measure in the House of Representatives—can join me this year, here in the Senate, to help fight for this legislation. I know that she shares my conviction that we must do everything in our power to ensure that the Violence Against Women Act becomes law this year.

We have waited in my view too long, already, to recognize the horror and the sweep of this violence. For too many years, our idea of crime has left no room for violence against women. We now face a problem that has become doubly dangerous, as invisible to policymakers as it is terrifying to its victims.

Our blindness costs us dearly:

Every week, 21,000 women report to police that they been beaten in their own homes;

Every day, over 2,500 women visit an emergency room because of a violent act perpetrated against their persons;

Every hour, as many as 70 women across the Nation will be attacked by rapist—every hour.

Today, I believe more firmly than ever before, that this Nation will be powerless to change this course of violent crime against women unless the Congress takes a leadership role with the cooperation of the President of the United States. Only then can we as a Nation inscribe this violence with a name so that it will never be mistaken or dismissed as anything other than brutal, a brutal series of crimes and unconditionally, whether in the home or out of the home—wrong.

It bothers me when we talk about domestic violence, Mr. President. It implies somehow it is like a domesticated cat or a domesticated dog—that domestic violence is less violent than any other type.

The women who suffer the consequence of domestic violence are women who are shot, murdered, killed, beaten, deformed. This violence is of a most coarse nature. It is perpetrated and committed by someone who a person in that household trusts; had at one time, at least, loved; in fact lives with. It is the worst of all violence.

The bill I introduce today attacks violent crime against women at all levels—from our streets to our homes, from squad cars to courtrooms, from schoolrooms to hospitals. In large measure, it is the same bill that was introduced in the 102d Congress, with the addition of minor and technical amendments and a special new provision authored by Senator KENNEDY to provide Federal funds for a national domestic violence hotline.

Let me briefly review the principal parts of the legislation.

TITLE I—SAFE STREETS FOR WOMEN ACT

Title I focuses on making our streets safer by boosting funding for police, prosecutors, and victim advocates, promoting rape education, and changing evidentiary rules to make our justice system fairer for the victims of this violence—to make our courts more user-friendly.

TITLE II—SAFE HOMES FOR WOMEN

Title II—The Safe Homes for Women Act—acknowledges, for the first time, the role of the Federal Government in fighting spouse abuse. It creates the first Federal laws against battering, provides nationwide coverage for stay-away orders, encourages arrest of spouse abusers, and boosts funding for battered women's shelters.

TITLE III—CIVIL RIGHTS FOR WOMEN

Title III—the most innovative provision of this bill—recognizes that violence against women presents questions not only of criminal justice, but also of equal justice. It takes a dramatic step forward by defining gender-motivated crime as bias crime and declaring, for the first time, that civil rights remedies should be available to victims of such crimes.

TITLE IV—SAFE CAMPUSES FOR WOMEN

Title IV, much of which passed in the higher education amendments of 1992, now authorizes increased funding for campus rape education efforts.

TITLE V—EQUAL JUSTICE FOR WOMEN IN THE COURTS ACT

Finally, Title V of the bill recognizes the crucial role played by the judicial branch in forming an effective response to violence against women, authorizing comprehensive training programs for State and Federal judges.

Let me close by urging my colleagues to join me in supporting this desperately needed legislation. Already, 40 Senators have indicated their support as original cosponsors. I hope that a significant number of others will join us so that we can ensure swift consideration and debate in the full Senate. Let us not wait another year as millions more suffer the pain of violence against women.

I will not take any further time to describe the contents of the bill. I ask unanimous consent that a summary and the complete text of the legislation appear in the RECORD following my remarks.

TITLE I—SAFE STREETS FOR WOMEN

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Streets for Women Act of 1993".

Subtitle A—Federal Penalties for Sex Crimes

SEC. 111. REPEAT OFFENDERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 2247. Repeat offenders

"Any person who violates a provision of this chapter, after one or more prior convictions for an offense punishable under this chapter, or after one or more prior convictions under the laws of any State or foreign country relating to aggravated sexual abuse, sexual abuse, or abusive sexual contact, is punishable by a term of imprisonment up to twice that otherwise authorized."

(b) CHAPTER ANALYSIS.—The chapter analysis for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

SEC. 112. FEDERAL PENALTIES.

(a) RAPE AND AGGRAVATED RAPE.—Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall amend its sentencing guidelines to provide that a defendant convicted of aggravated sexual abuse under section 2241 of title 18, United States Code, or sexual abuse under section 2242 of title 18, United States Code, shall be assigned a base offense level under chapter 2 of the sentencing guidelines that is at least 4 levels greater than the base offense level applicable to criminal sexual abuse under the guidelines in effect on November 1, 1992, or otherwise shall amend the guidelines applicable to such offenses so as to achieve a comparable minimum guideline sentence. In amending such guidelines, the Sentencing Commission shall review the appropriateness of existing specific offense characteristics or other adjustments applicable to such offenses, and make such changes as it deems appropriate, taking into account the severity of rape offenses, with or without aggravating factors; the unique nature and duration of the mental injuries inflicted on the victims of such offenses; and any other relevant factors.

(b) EFFECT OF AMENDMENT.—If the sentencing guidelines are amended after the effective date of this section, the Sentencing Commission shall implement the instructions set forth in subsection (a) so as to achieve a comparable result.

SEC. 113. MANDATORY RESTITUTION FOR SEX CRIMES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"§ 2248. Mandatory restitution

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding the terms of section 3663 of this title, and in addition to any other civil or criminal penalty authorized by law, the court shall order restitution for any offense under this chapter.

"(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) The order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

"(A) the defendant pay to the victim (through the appropriate court mechanism) the full amount of the victim's losses as determined by the court, pursuant to paragraph (2); and

"(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'full amount of the victim's losses' includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

"(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

"(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation;

"(C) necessary transportation, temporary housing, and child care expenses;

"(D) lost income;

"(E) attorneys' fees, expert witness and investigators' fees, interpretive services, and court costs; and

"(F) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

"(3) Restitution orders under this section are mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

"(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

"(B) the fact that a victim has, or is entitled to receive, compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance or any other source.

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid.

"(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'economic circumstances' includes—

"(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

"(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

"(iii) any financial obligations of the defendant, including obligations to dependents.

"(C) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall also provide that the defendant's restitutionary obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

"(D) In the event that the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim for the victim's other losses before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

"(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

"(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

"(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

"(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or the United States Attorney's delegate), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or the United States Attorney's delegate) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or the United States Attorney's delegate) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit and shall provide the victim with an affidavit form which may be used to do so.

"(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to subsection (1) shall be entered in the court's restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or the United States Attorney's delegate) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim's losses.

"(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant's objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this section, shall be in camera in the judge's chambers.

"(4) In the event that the victim's losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or the United States Attorney's delegate) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim's losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

"(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term 'victim' includes the individual harmed as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim's estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court: Provided, That in no event shall the defendant be named as such representative or guardian."

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"2248. Mandatory restitution."

SEC. 114. AUTHORIZATION FOR FEDERAL VICTIM'S COUNSELORS.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1993 $1,500,000 for the United States Attorneys for the purpose of appointing Victim/Witness Counselors for the prosecution of sex crimes and domestic violence crimes where applicable (such as the District of Columbia).

Subtitle B—Law Enforcement and Prosecution Grants to Reduce Violent Crimes Against WomenSEC. 121. GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by—

(1) redesignating part P as part Q;

(2) redesignating section 1601 as section 1701; and

(3) adding after part O the following new part:

"PART N—GRANTS TO COMBAT VIOLENT CRIMES AGAINST WOMEN"SEC. 1601. PURPOSE OF THE PROGRAM AND GRANTS.

"(a) GENERAL PROGRAM PURPOSE.—The purpose of this part is to assist States, Indian tribes, cities, and other localities to develop effective law enforcement and prosecution strategies to combat violent crimes against women and, in particular, to focus efforts on those areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women.

"(b) PURPOSES FOR WHICH GRANTS MAY BE USED.—Grants under this part shall provide additional personnel, training, technical assistance, data collection and other equipment for the more widespread apprehension, prosecution, and adjudication of persons committing violent crimes against women and specifically, for the purposes of—

"(1) training law enforcement officers and prosecutors to more effectively identify and respond to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

"(2) developing, training, or expanding units of law enforcement officers and prosecutors specifically targeting violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

"(3) developing and implementing police and prosecution policies, protocols, or orders specifically devoted to identifying and responding to violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence;

"(4) developing, installing, or expanding data collection systems, including computerized systems, linking police, prosecutors, and courts or for the purpose of identifying and tracking arrests, prosecutions, and convictions for the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence; and

"(5) developing, enlarging, or strengthening victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence programs, to increase reporting and reduce attrition rates for cases involving violent crimes against women, including the crimes of sexual assault and domestic violence.

"Subpart 1—High Intensity Crime Area Grants

"SEC. 1611. HIGH INTENSITY GRANTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance (referred to in this part as the 'Director') shall make grants to areas of 'high intensity crime' against women.

"(b) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this part, 'high intensity crime area' means an area with one of the 40 highest rates of violent crime against women, as determined by the Bureau of Justice Statistics pursuant to section 1612.

"SEC. 1612. HIGH INTENSITY GRANT APPLICATION.

"(a) COMPUTATION.—Within 45 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall compile a list of the 40 areas with the highest rates of violent crime against women based on the combined female victimization rate per population for assault, sexual assault (including, but not limited to, rape), murder, robbery, and kidnapping (without regard to the relationship between the crime victim and the offenders).

"(b) USE OF DATA.—In calculating the combined female victimization rate required by subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics may rely on—

"(1) existing data collected by States, municipalities, Indian reservations or statistical metropolitan areas showing the number of police reports of the crimes listed in subsection (a); and

"(2) existing data collected by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, including data from those governmental entities already complying with the National Incident Based Reporting System, showing the number of police reports of crimes listed in subsection (a).

"(c) PUBLICATION.—After compiling the list set forth in subsection (a), the Bureau of Justice Statistics shall convey it to the Director who shall publish it in the Federal Register.

"(d) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (e), any high intensity crime area shall be qualified for a grant under this subpart upon application by the chief executive officer of the governmental entities responsible for law enforcement and prosecution of criminal offenses within the area and certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1601(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate program grants, with nongovernmental nonprofit victim services programs; and

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated, without duplication, to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(e) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application must provide the certifications required by subsection (d) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (d)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

"(A) need for the grant funds;

"(B) intended use of the grant funds;

"(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(D) demographic characteristics of the population to be served, including age, marital status, disability, race, ethnicity, and language background; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(f) DISBURSEMENT.—

"(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall issue regulations to ensure that grantees—

"(A) equitably distribute funds on a geographic basis;

"(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population to be served;

"(C) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need; and

"(D) recognize and address the needs of underserved populations.

"(g) GRANTEE REPORTING.—(1) Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this part.

"(2) A section of the performance report shall be completed by each grantee or subgrantee performing the services contemplated in the grant application, certifying performance of the services under the grants.

"(3) The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report or if funds are expended for purposes other than those set forth under this subpart. Federal funds may be used to supplement, not supplant, State funds.

"Subpart 2—Other Grants to States To Combat Violent Crimes Against Women

"SEC. 1621. GENERAL GRANTS TO STATES.

"(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director may make grants to States, for use by States, units of local government in the States, and nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs in the States, for the purposes outlined in section 1601(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women.

"(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be—

"(1) $500,000 to each State; and

"(2) that portion of the then remaining available money to each State that results from a distribution among the States on the basis of each State's population in relation to the population of all States.

"(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any State shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1601(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate, with nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs, including sexual assault and domestic violence victim services programs;

"(3) at least 25 percent of the amount granted shall be allocated, without duplication, to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—The application requirements provided in section 513 of this title shall apply to grants made under this subpart. In addition, each application shall include the certifications of qualification required by subsection (c) including documentation from nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs showing their participation in developing the plan required by subsection (c)(2). Applications shall—

"(1) include documentation from the prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services programs to be assisted showing—

"(A) need for the grant funds;

"(B) intended use of the grant funds;

"(C) expected results from the use of grant funds; and

"(D) demographic characteristics of the populations to be served, including age, marital status, disability, race, ethnicity and language background; and

"(2) proof of compliance with the requirements for the payment of forensic medical exams provided in section 162 of this title.

"(e) DISBURSEMENT.—(1) No later than 60 days after the receipt of an application under this subpart, the Director shall either disburse the appropriate sums provided for under this subpart or shall inform the applicant why the application does not conform to the terms of section 513 of this title or to the requirements of this section.

"(2) In disbursing monies under this subpart, the Director shall issue regulations to ensure that States will—

"(A) give priority to areas with the greatest showing of need;

"(B) determine the amount of subgrants based on the population and geographic area to be served;

"(C) equitably distribute monies on a geographic basis including nonurban and rural areas, and giving priority to localities with populations under 100,000; and

"(D) recognize and address the needs of underserved populations.

"(f) GRANTEE REPORTING.—Upon completion of the grant period under this subpart, the State grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. A section of this performance report shall be completed by each grantee and subgrantee that performed the direct services contemplated in the application, certifying performance of direct services under the grant. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report or if funds are expended for purposes other than those set forth under this subpart. Federal funds may only be used to supplement, not supplant, State funds.

"SEC. 1622. GENERAL GRANTS TO TRIBES.

"(a) GENERAL GRANTS.—The Director is authorized to make grants to Indian tribes, for use by tribes, tribal organizations or nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs on Indian reservations, for the purposes outlined in section 1401(b), and to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women in Indian country.

"(b) AMOUNTS.—From amounts appropriated, the amount of grants under subsection (a) shall be awarded on a competitive basis to tribes, with minimum grants of $35,000 and maximum grants of $300,000.

"(c) QUALIFICATION.—Upon satisfying the terms of subsection (d), any tribe shall be qualified for funds provided under this part upon certification that—

"(1) the funds shall be used to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women and for at least 3 of the purposes outlined in section 1401(b);

"(2) grantees and subgrantees shall develop a plan for implementation, and otherwise consult and coordinate with nonprofit; and

"(3) at least 25 percent of the grant funds shall be allocated to each of the following three areas: prosecution, law enforcement, and victim services.

"(d) APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS.—(1) Applications shall be made directly to the Director and shall contain a description of the tribes' law enforcement responsibilities for the Indian country described in the application and a description of the tribes' system of courts, including whether the tribal government operates courts of Indian offenses under section 201 of Public Law 90-284 (25 U.S.C. 1301) or part 11 of title 25, Code of Federal Regulations.

"(2) Applications shall be in such form as the Director may prescribe and shall specify the nature of the program proposed by the applicant tribe, the data and information on which the program is based, and the extent to which the program plans to use or incorporate existing victim services available in the Indian country where the grant will be used.

"(3) The term of any grant shall be for a minimum of 3 years.

"(e) GRANTEE REPORTING.—At the end of the first 12 months of the grant period and at the end of each year thereafter, the Indian tribal grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. A section of this performance report shall be completed by each grantee or subgrantee that performed the direct services contemplated in the application, certifying performance of direct services under the grant. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report or if funds are expended for purposes other than those set forth under this subpart. Federal funds may only be used to supplement, not supplant, State funds.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—(1) The term 'Indian tribe' means any Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community, including any Alaska Native village or regional or village corporation (as defined in, or established pursuant to, the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.), which is recognized as eligible for the special services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians.

"(2) The term 'Indian country' has the meaning stated in section 1151 of title 18, United States Code.

"Subpart 3—General Terms and Conditions

"SEC. 1631. GENERAL DEFINITIONS.

"As used in this part—

"(1) the term 'victim services' means any nongovernmental nonprofit organization that assists victims, including rape crisis centers, battered women's shelters, or other rape or domestic violence programs, including nonprofit nongovernmental organizations assisting victims through the legal process;

"(2) the term 'prosecution' means any public agency charged with direct responsibility for prosecuting criminal offenders, including such agency's component bureaus (such as governmental victim/witness programs);

"(3) the term 'law enforcement' means any public agency charged with policing functions, including any of its component bureaus (such as governmental victim services programs);

"(4) the term 'sexual assault' includes not only assaults committed by offenders who are strangers to the victim but also assaults committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim;

"(5) the term 'domestic violence' includes felony or misdemeanor offenses committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, a person who is cohabitating with or has cohabitated with the victim as a spouse, a person similarly situated to a spouse of the victim under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies, or committed by any other adult person upon a victim who is protected from that person's acts under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies; and

"(6) the term 'underserved populations' includes populations underserved because of geographic location (such as rural isolation), underserved racial or ethnic populations, and populations underserved because of special needs, such as language barriers or physical disabilities.

"SEC. 1632. GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.

"(a) NONMONETARY ASSISTANCE.—In addition to the assistance provided under subparts 1 or 2, the Director may direct any Federal agency, with or without reimbursement, to use its authorities and the resources granted to it under Federal law (including personnel, equipment, supplies, facilities, and managerial, technical, and advisory services) in support of State and local assistance efforts.

"(b) BUREAU REPORTING.—No later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year for which grants are made under this part, the Director shall submit to the Judiciary Committees of the House and the Senate a report that includes, for each high intensity crime area (as provided in subpart 1) and for each State and for each grantee Indian tribe (as provided in subpart 2)— "(1) the amount of grants made under this part;

"(2) a summary of the purposes for which those grants were provided and an evaluation of their progress;

"(3) a statistical summary of persons served, detailing the nature of victimization, and providing data on age, sex, relationship of victim to offender, geographic distribution, race, ethnicity, language, and disability; and

"(4) a copy of each grantee report filed pursuant to sections 1612(g), 1621(f), and 1622(c).

"(c) REGULATIONS.—No later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this part, the Director shall publish proposed regulations implementing this part. No later than 120 days after such date, the Director shall publish final regulations implementing this part.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for each of fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995, $100,000,000 to carry out subpart 1, and $190,000,000 to carry out subpart 2, and $10,000,000 to carry out section 1622 of subpart 2."

Subtitle C—Safety for Women in Public Transit and Public Parks

SEC. 131. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION.

Section 24 of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 (49 U.S.C. App. 1620) is amended to read as follows:

"GRANTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION

"SEC. 24. (a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—From funds authorized under section 21, not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary shall make capital grants for the prevention of crime and to increase security in existing and future public transportation systems. None of the provisions of this Act may be construed to prohibit the financing of projects under this section where law enforcement responsibilities are vested in a local public body other than the grant applicant.

"(b) GRANTS FOR LIGHTING, CAMERA SURVEILLANCE, AND SECURITY PHONES.—

"(1) From the sums authorized for expenditure under this section for crime prevention, the Secretary is authorized to make grants and loans to States and local public bodies or agencies for the purpose of increasing the safety of public transportation by—

"(A) increasing lighting within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

"(B) increasing camera surveillance of areas within and adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages;

"(C) providing emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public transportation systems, including bus stops, subway stations, parking lots, or garages; or

"(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of existing or planned public transportation systems.

"(2) From the sums authorized under this section, at least 75 percent shall be expended on projects of the type described in subsection (b)(1) (A) and (B).

"(c) REPORTING.—All grants under this section are contingent upon the filing of a report with the Secretary and the Department of Justice, Office of Victims of Crime, showing crime rates in or adjacent to public transportation before, and for a 1-year period after, the capital improvement. Statistics shall be broken down by type of crime, sex, race, ethnicity, language, and relationship of victim to the offender.

"(d) INCREASED FEDERAL SHARE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Federal share under this section for each capital improvement project which enhances the safety and security of public transportation systems and which is not required by law (including any other provision of this chapter) shall be 90 percent of the net project cost of such project.

"(e) SPECIAL GRANTS FOR PROJECTS TO STUDY INCREASING SECURITY FOR WOMEN.—From the sums authorized under this section, the Secretary shall provide grants and loans for the purpose of studying ways to reduce violent crimes against women in public transit through better design or operation of public transit systems.

"(f) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—All grants or loans provided under this section shall be subject to all the terms, conditions, requirements, and provisions applicable to grants and loans made under section 2(a)."

SEC. 132. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN NATIONAL PARKS.

Public Law 91-383 (commonly known as the National Park System Improvements in Administration Act) (16 U.S.C. 1a-1 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 13. NATIONAL PARK SYSTEM CRIME PREVENTION ASSISTANCE.

"(a) From the sums authorized pursuant to section 7 of the Land and Water Conservation Act of 1965, not to exceed $10,000,000, the Secretary of the Interior may provide Federal assistance to reduce the incidence of violent crime in the National Park System.

"(b) The Secretary shall direct the chief official responsible for law enforcement within the National Park Service to—

"(1) compile a list of areas within the National Park System with the highest rates of violent crime;

"(2) make recommendations concerning capital improvements, and other measures, needed within the National Park System to reduce the rates of violent crime, including the rate of sexual assault; and

"(3) publish the information required by paragraphs (1) and (2) in the Federal Register.

"(c) No later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this section, and based on the recommendations and list issued pursuant to subsection (b), the Secretary shall distribute funds throughout the National Park Service. Priority shall be given to those areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

"(d) Funds provided under this section may be used for the following purposes:

"(1) To increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas.

"(2) To provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas.

"(3) To increase security or law enforcement personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas.

"(4) Any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas."

SEC. 133. GRANTS FOR CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS TO PREVENT CRIME IN PUBLIC PARKS.

Section 6 of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (16 U.S.C. 4601-8) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(h) CAPITAL IMPROVEMENT AND OTHER PROJECTS TO REDUCE CRIME.—In addition to assistance for planning projects, and in addition to the projects identified in subsection (e), and from amounts appropriated, the Secretary shall provide financial assistance to the States, not to exceed $15,000,000 in total, for the following types of projects or combinations thereof:

"(1) For the purpose of making capital improvements and other measures to increase safety in urban parks and recreation areas, including funds to—

"(A) increase lighting within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(B) provide emergency phone lines to contact law enforcement or security personnel in areas within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas;

"(C) increase security personnel within or adjacent to public parks and recreation areas; and

"(D) any other project intended to increase the security and safety of public parks and recreation areas.

"(2) In addition to the requirements for project approval imposed by this section, eligibility for assistance under this subsection is dependent upon a showing of need. In providing funds under this subsection, the Secretary shall give priority to those projects proposed for urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of crime and, in particular, to urban parks and recreation areas with the highest rates of sexual assault.

"(3) Notwithstanding subsection (c), the Secretary may provide 70 percent improvement grants for projects undertaken by any State for the purposes outlined in this subsection. The remaining share of the cost shall be borne by the State."

Subtitle D—National Commission on Violence Against Women

SEC. 141. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established a commission to be known as the National Commission on Violence Against Women (referred to as the "Commission").

SEC. 142. DUTIES OF COMMISSION.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE OF THE COMMISSION.—The Commission shall carry out activities for the purposes of promoting a national policy on violent crime against women, and for making recommendations for how to reduce violent crime against women.

(b) FUNCTIONS.—The Commission shall—

(1) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, current law enforcement efforts at the Federal and State levels to reduce the rate of violent crimes against women;

(2) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the responsiveness of State prosecutors and State courts to violent crimes against women;

(3) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of current education, prevention, and protection services for women victims of violent crime;

(4) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the role of the Federal Government in reducing violent crimes against women;

(5) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, national public awareness and the public dissemination of information essential to the prevention of violent crimes against women;

(6) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, data collection and government statistics on the incidence and prevalence of violent crimes against women;

(7) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of State and Federal laws on sexual assault and the need for a more uniform statutory response to sex offenses, including sexual assaults and other sex offenses committed by offenders who are known or related by blood or marriage to the victim;

(8) evaluate the adequacy of, and make recommendations regarding, the adequacy of

State and Federal laws on domestic violence and the need for a more uniform statutory response to domestic violence; and

(9) evaluate and make recommendations regarding the feasibility of maintaining the confidentiality of addresses of domestic violence victims in voting, welfare, licensed public utilities, and other public records.

SEC. 143. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) NUMBER AND APPOINTMENT.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall be composed of 15 members as follows:

(A) Five members shall be appointed by the President—

(i) 3 of whom shall be—

(I) the Attorney General;

(II) the Secretary of Health and Human Services; and

(III) the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who shall be nonvoting members, except that in the case of a tie vote by the Commission, the Attorney General shall be a voting member;

(ii) two of whom shall be selected from the general public on the basis of such individuals being specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their education, training, or experience; and

(iii) at least one of whom shall be selected for their experience in providing services to women victims of sexual assault or domestic violence.

(B) Five members shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives.

(C) Five members shall be appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate on the joint recommendation of the Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate.

(2) CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS.—In making appointments under subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (1), the Majority and Minority Leaders of the House of Representatives and the Senate shall duly consider the recommendations of the Chairmen and Ranking Minority Members of committees with jurisdiction over laws contained in title 18 of the United States Code.

(3) REQUIREMENTS OF APPOINTMENTS.—The Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate and the House of Representatives shall—

(A) select persons who are specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their experience in State or national efforts to fight violence against women and demonstrate experience in State or national advocacy or service organizations specializing in sexual assault and domestic violence; and

(B) engage in consultations for the purpose of ensuring that the expertise of the ten members appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President pro tempore of the Senate shall provide as much of a balance as possible and, to the greatest extent possible, include representatives from law enforcement, prosecution, judicial administration, legal expertise, public health, social work, victim compensation boards, victim advocacy, and survivors of violence.

(4) TERM OF MEMBERS.—Members of the Commission (other than members appointed under paragraph (1)(A)(i)) shall serve for the life of the Commission.

(5) VACANCY.—A vacancy on the Commission shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(b) CHAIRMAN.—Not later than 15 days after the members of the Commission are appointed, such members shall select a Chairman from among the members of the Commission.

(c) QUORUM.—Seven members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number may be authorized by the Commission to conduct hearings.

(d) MEETINGS.—The Commission shall hold its first meeting on a date specified by the Chairman, but such date shall not be later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act. After the initial meeting, the Commission shall meet at the call of the Chairman or a majority of its members, but shall meet at least 6 times.

(e) PAY.—Members of the Commission who are officers or employees or elected officials of a government entity shall receive no additional compensation by reason of their service on the Commission.

(f) PER DIEM.—Except as provided in subsection (e), members of the Commission shall be allowed travel and other expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(g) DEADLINE FOR APPOINTMENT.—Not later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the members of the Commission shall be appointed.

SEC. 144. REPORTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date on which the Commission is fully constituted under section 143, the Commission shall prepare and submit a final report to the President and to congressional committees that have jurisdiction over legislation addressing violent crimes against women, including the crimes of domestic and sexual assault.

(b) CONTENTS.—The final report submitted under paragraph (1) shall contain a detailed statement of the activities of the Commission and of the findings and conclusions of the Commission, including such recommendations for legislation and administrative action as the Commission considers appropriate.

SEC. 145. EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR AND STAFF.

(a) EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall have an Executive Director who shall be appointed by the Chairman, with the approval of the Commission, not later than 30 days after the Chairman is selected.

(2) COMPENSATION.—The Executive Director shall be compensated at a rate not to exceed the maximum rate of the basic pay payable for a position above GS-15 of the General Schedule contained in title 5, United States Code.

(b) STAFF.—With the approval of the Commission, the Executive Director may appoint and fix the compensation of such additional personnel as the Executive Director considers necessary to carry out the duties of the Commission.

(c) APPLICABILITY OF CIVIL SERVICE LAWS.—The Executive Director and the additional personnel of the Commission appointed under subsection (b) may be appointed without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and may be paid without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates.

(d) CONSULTANTS.—Subject to such rules as may be prescribed by the Commission, the Executive Director may procure temporary or intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code, at rates for individuals not to exceed $200 per day.

SEC. 146. POWERS OF COMMISSION.

(a) HEARINGS.—For the purpose of carrying out this subtitle, the Commission may conduct such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence, as the Commission considers appropriate. The Commission may administer oaths before the Commission.

(b) DELEGATION.—Any member or employee of the Commission may, if authorized by the Commission, take any action that the Commission is authorized to take under this subtitle.

(c) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—The Commission may request directly from any executive department or agency such information as may be necessary to enable the Commission to carry out this subtitle, on the request of the Chairman of the Commission.

(d) MAILS.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the United States.

SEC. 147. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subtitle $500,000 for fiscal year 1993.

SEC. 148. TERMINATION.

The Commission shall cease to exist 30 days after the date on which its final report is submitted under section 144. The President may extend the life of the Commission for a period of not to exceed 1 year.

Subtitle E—New Evidentiary Rules

SEC. 151. SEXUAL HISTORY IN ALL CRIMINAL CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by inserting after rule 412 the following new rule:

"Rule 412A. Evidence of victim's past behavior in other criminal cases"

"(a) REPUTATION AND OPINION EVIDENCE EXCLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, reputation or opinion evidence of the past sexual behavior of an alleged victim is not admissible.

"(b) ADMISSIBILITY.—Notwithstanding any other law, in a criminal case, other than a sex offense case governed by rule 412, evidence of an alleged victim's past sexual behavior (other than reputation and opinion evidence) may be admissible if—

"(1) the evidence is admitted in accordance with the procedures specified in subdivision (c); and

"(2) the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice.

"(c) PROCEDURES.—(1) If the defendant intends to offer evidence of specific instances of the alleged victim's past sexual behavior, the defendant shall make a written motion to offer such evidence not later than 15 days before the date on which the trial in which such evidence is to be offered is scheduled to begin, except that the court may allow the motion to be made at a later date, including during trial, if the court determines either that the evidence is newly discovered and could not have been obtained earlier through the exercise of due diligence or that the issue to which such evidence relates has newly arisen in the case. Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the alleged victim.

"(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At the hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the alleged victim and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence which the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for such purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether such condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

"(3) If the court determines on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2), that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant, not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of such evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, such evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies the evidence which may be offered and areas with respect to which the alleged victim may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance, and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences."

SEC. 152. SEXUAL HISTORY IN CIVIL CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence, as amended by section 151, are amended by adding after rule 412A the following new rule:

"Rule 412B. Evidence of past sexual behavior in civil cases"

"(a) REPUTATION AND OPINION EVIDENCE EXCLUDED.—Notwithstanding any other law, in a civil case in which a defendant is accused of actionable sexual misconduct, reputation or opinion evidence of the plaintiff's past sexual behavior is not admissible.

"(b) ADMISSIBILITY.—Notwithstanding any other law, in a civil case in which a defendant is accused of actionable sexual misconduct, evidence of a plaintiff's past sexual behavior other than reputation or opinion evidence may be admissible if—

"(1) it is admitted in accordance with the procedures specified in subdivision (c); and

"(2) the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice.

"(c) PROCEDURES.—(1) If the defendant intends to offer evidence of specific instances of the plaintiff's past sexual behavior, the defendant shall make a written motion to offer such evidence not later than 15 days before the date on which the trial in which such evidence is to be offered is scheduled to begin, except that the court may allow the motion to be made at a later date, including during trial, if the court determines either that the evidence is newly discovered and could not have been obtained earlier through the exercise of due diligence or that the issue to which such evidence relates has newly arisen in the case. Any motion made under this paragraph shall be served on all other parties and on the plaintiff.

"(2) The motion described in paragraph (1) shall be accompanied by a written offer of proof. If necessary, the court shall order a hearing in chambers to determine if such evidence is admissible. At the hearing, the parties may call witnesses, including the plaintiff and offer relevant evidence. Notwithstanding subdivision (b) of rule 104, if the relevancy of the evidence that the defendant seeks to offer in the trial depends upon the fulfillment of a condition of fact, the court, at the hearing in chambers or at a subsequent hearing in chambers scheduled for the purpose, shall accept evidence on the issue of whether the condition of fact is fulfilled and shall determine such issue.

"(3) If the court determines on the basis of the hearing described in paragraph (2) that the evidence the defendant seeks to offer is relevant and not excluded by any other evidentiary rule, and that the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice, the evidence shall be admissible in the trial to the extent an order made by the court specifies evidence that may be offered and areas with respect to which the plaintiff may be examined or cross-examined. In its order, the court should consider—

“(A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance; and

“(B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.

“(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this rule, a case involving a claim of actionable sexual misconduct, includes sexual harassment or sex discrimination claims brought pursuant to title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000(e)) and gender bias claims brought pursuant to title III of the Violence Against Women Act of 1993.”

SEC. 153. AMENDMENTS TO RAPE SHIELD LAW.

Rule 412 of the Federal Rules of Evidence is amended—

(1) by adding at the end the following new subdivisions:

“(e) INTERLOCUTORY APPEAL.—Notwithstanding any other law, any evidentiary rulings made pursuant to this rule are subject to interlocutory appeal by the government or by the alleged victim.

“(f) RULE OF RELEVANCE AND PRIVILEGE.—If the prosecution seeks to offer evidence of prior sexual history, the provisions of this rule may be waived by the alleged victim.”; and

(2) by adding at the end of subdivision (c)(3) the following: “In its order, the court should consider (A) the chain of reasoning leading to its finding of relevance; and (B) why the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice given the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased jury inferences.”.

SEC. 154. EVIDENCE OF CLOTHING.

The Federal Rules of Evidence, as amended by section 152, are amended by adding after rule 412B the following new rule:

“Rule 413. Evidence of victim's clothing as inciting violence

“Notwithstanding any other law, in a criminal case in which a person is accused of an offense under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, evidence of an alleged victim's clothing is not admissible to show that the alleged victim incited or invited the offense charged.”.

Subtitle F—Assistance to Victims of Sexual Assault

SEC. 161. EDUCATION AND PREVENTION GRANTS TO REDUCE SEXUAL ASSAULTS AGAINST WOMEN.

Part A of title XIX of the Public Health and Health Services Act (42 U.S.C. 300w et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

“SEC. 1910A. USE OF ALLOTMENTS FOR RAPE PREVENTION EDUCATION.

“(a) PERMITTED USE.—Notwithstanding section 1904(a)(1), amounts transferred by the State for use under this part may be used for rape prevention and education programs conducted by rape crisis centers or similar non-governmental nonprofit entities, which programs may include—

- “(1) educational seminars;
- “(2) the operation of hotlines;

“(3) training programs for professionals;

“(4) the preparation of informational materials; and

“(5) other efforts to increase awareness of the facts about, or to help prevent, sexual assault, including efforts to increase awareness in underserved racial, ethnic, and language minority communities.

“(b) TARGETING OF EDUCATION PROGRAMS.—States providing grant monies must ensure that at least 25 percent of the monies are devoted to education programs targeted for middle school, junior high school, and high school students.

“(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $65,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995.

“(d) LIMITATION.—Funds authorized under this section may only be used for providing rape prevention and education programs.

“(e) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, the term ‘rape prevention and education’ includes education and prevention efforts directed at offenses committed by offenders who are not known to the victim as well as offenders who are known to the victim.

“(f) TERMS.—States shall be allotted funds under this section pursuant to the terms of sections 1902 and 1903, and subject to the conditions provided in this section and sections 1904 through 1909.”.

SEC. 162. RAPE EXAM PAYMENTS.

(a) No State or other grantee is entitled to funds under title I of the Violence Against Women Act of 1993 unless the State or other grantee incurs the full cost of forensic medical exams for victims of sexual assault. A State or other grantee does not incur the full medical cost of forensic medical exams if it chooses to reimburse the victim after the fact unless the reimbursement program waives any minimum loss or deductible requirement, provides victim reimbursement within a reasonable time (90 days), permits applications for reimbursement within one year from the date of the exam, and provides information to all subjects of forensic medical exams about how to obtain reimbursement.

(b) Within 90 days after the enactment of this Act, the Director of the Office of Victims of Crime shall propose regulations to implement this section, detailing qualified programs. Such regulations shall specify the type and form of information to be provided victims, including provisions for multilingual information, where appropriate.

SEC. 163. EDUCATION AND PREVENTION GRANTS TO REDUCE SEXUAL ABUSE OF FEMALE RUNAWAY, HOMELESS, AND STREET YOUTH.

Part A of the Runaway and Homeless Youth Act (42 U.S.C. 5711 et seq.) is amended by—

- (1) redesignating sections 316 and 317 as sections 317 and 318, respectively; and
- (2) inserting after section 315 the following new section:

“GRANTS FOR PREVENTION OF SEXUAL ABUSE AND EXPLOITATION

“SEC. 315. (a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall make grants under this section to private, nonprofit agencies for street-based outreach and education, including treatment, counseling, and information and referral, for female runaway, homeless, and street youth who have been subjected to or are at risk of being subjected to sexual abuse.

“(b) PRIORITY.—In selecting among applicants for grants under subsection (a), the Secretary shall give priority to agencies that have experience in providing services to female runaway, homeless, and street youth.

“(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $10,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995.

“(d) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this section—

“(1) the term ‘street-based outreach and education’ includes education and prevention efforts directed at offenses committed by offenders who are not known to the victim as well as offenders who are known to the victim; and

“(2) the term ‘street youth’ means a female less than 21 years old who spends a significant amount of time on the street or in other areas of exposure to encounters that may lead to sexual abuse.”.

SEC. 164. VICTIM'S RIGHT OF ALLOCATION IN SENTENCING.

Rule 32 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure is amended—

(1) by striking “and” at the end of subdivision (a)(1)(B);

(2) by striking the period at the end of subdivision (a)(1)(C) and inserting “; and”;

(3) by inserting after subdivision (a)(1)(C) the following new subdivision:

“(D) if sentence is to be imposed for a crime of violence or sexual abuse, address the victim personally if the victim is present at the sentencing hearing and determine if the victim wishes to make a statement and to present any information in relation to the sentence.”;

(4) in the penultimate sentence of subdivision (a)(1), by striking “equivalent opportunity” and inserting “opportunity equivalent to that of the defendant's counsel”;

(5) in the last sentence of subdivision (a)(1) by inserting “the victim,” before “or the attorney for the Government.”; and

(6) by adding at the end the following new subdivision:

“(f) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this rule—

“(1) the term ‘victim’ means any person against whom an offense for which a sentence is to be imposed has been committed, but the right of allocation under subdivision (a)(1)(D) may be exercised instead by—

“(A) a parent or legal guardian in case the victim is below the age of 18 years or incompetent; or

“(B) 1 of more family members or relatives designated by the court in case the victim is deceased or incapacitated, if such person or persons are present at the sentencing hearing, regardless of whether the victim is present; and

“(2) the term ‘crime of violence or sexual abuse’ means a crime that involved the use or attempted or threatened use of physical force against the person or property of another, or a crime under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code.”.

TITLE II—SAFE HOMES FOR WOMEN

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Safe Homes for Women Act of 1993”.

Subtitle A—Family Violence Prevention and Services Act Amendments

SEC. 211. GRANTS FOR A NATIONAL DOMESTIC VIOLENCE HOTLINE.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10401 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

“SEC. 316. NATIONAL DOMESTIC VIOLENCE HOTLINE GRANTS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may award grants to 1 or more private, nonprofit entities to provide for the operation of a national, toll-free telephone hotline to provide information and assistance to victims of domestic violence.

"(b) ACTIVITIES.—Funds received by an entity under this section shall be utilized to open and operate a national, toll-free domestic violence hotline. Such funds may be used for activities including—

"(1) contracting with a carrier for the use of a toll-free telephone line;

"(2) employing, training and supervising personnel to answer incoming calls and provide counseling and referral services to callers on a 24-hour-a-day basis;

"(3) assembling, maintaining, and continually updating a database of information and resources to which callers may be referred throughout the United States; and

"(4) publicizing the hotline to potential users throughout the United States.

"(c) APPLICATION.—A grant, contract or cooperative agreement may not be made or entered into under this section unless an application for such grant, contract or cooperative agreement has been approved by the Secretary. To be approved by the Secretary under this subsection an application shall—

"(1) provide such agreements, assurances, and information, be in such form and be submitted in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe through notice in the Federal Register;

"(2) include a complete description of the applicant's plan for the operation of a national domestic violence hotline, including descriptions of—

"(A) the training program for hotline personnel;

"(B) the hiring criteria for hotline personnel;

"(C) the methods for the creation, maintenance and updating of a resource database; and

"(D) a plan for publicizing the availability of the hotline;

"(3) demonstrate that the applicant has nationally recognized expertise in the area of domestic violence and a record of high quality service to victims of domestic violence; and

"(4) contain such other information as the Secretary may require.

"(d) SPECIAL CONSIDERATIONS.—In considering an application under subsection (c), the Secretary shall also take into account the applicant's ability to offer multilingual services and services for the hearing impaired.

"(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $500,000 for each of fiscal years 1993, 1994, and 1995."

Subtitle B—Interstate Enforcement

SEC. 221. INTERSTATE ENFORCEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 110 the following new chapter:

"CHAPTER 110A—VIOLENCE AGAINST SPOUSES

"Sec. 2261. Traveling to commit spousal abuse.

"Sec. 2262. Interstate violation of protection orders.

"Sec. 2263. Interim protections.

"Sec. 2264. Restitution.

"Sec. 2265. Full faith and credit given to protection orders.

"Sec. 2266. Definitions.

"§ 2261. Traveling to commit spousal abuse

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person who travels across State lines—

"(1) and who, in the course of or as a result of such travel, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner; or

"(2) for the purpose of harassing, intimidating, or injuring a spouse or intimate partner and who, in furtherance of that purpose, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 10 years but not less than 3 months, or both, in addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under State law.

"(b) CAUSING THE CROSSING OF STATE LINES.—Any person who causes a spouse or intimate partner to cross State lines by force, coercion, duress or fraud and, in the course or as a result of that conduct, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner shall be punished as provided in subsection (c).

"(c) PENALTIES.—A person who violates this section shall be punished as follows:

(1) If permanent disfigurement or life-threatening bodily injury results, by imprisonment for not more than 20 years; if serious bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both; if bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(2) If the offense is committed with intent to commit another felony, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(3) If the offense is committed with a dangerous weapon, with intent to do bodily harm, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(4) If the offense constitutes sexual abuse, as that conduct is described under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code (without regard to whether the offense was committed in the maritime, territorial or prison jurisdiction of the United States) by fine or term of imprisonment as provided for the applicable conduct under chapter 109A.

"(d) CRIMINAL INTENT.—The criminal intent of the offender required to establish an offense under subsection (b) is the general intent to do the acts that result in injury to a spouse or intimate partner and not the specific intent to violate the law of a State.

"(e) NO PRIOR STATE ACTION NECESSARY.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal prosecution or conviction or a prior civil protection order issued under State law to initiate Federal prosecution.

"§ 2262. Interstate violation of protection orders

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person against whom a valid protection order has been entered who travels across State lines—

"(1) and who, in the course of or as a result of such travel, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State; or

"(2) for the purpose of harassing, injuring, finding, contacting, or locating a spouse or intimate partner and who, in furtherance of that purpose, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State, shall be punished as provided in subsection (c).

"(b) CAUSING THE CROSSING OF STATE LINES.—Any person who causes a spouse or intimate partner to cross State lines by force, coercion, duress, or fraud, and, in the course or as a result of that conduct, commits an act that injures his or her spouse or intimate partner in violation of a valid protection order issued by a State shall be punished as provided in subsection (c).

"(c) PENALTIES.—A person who violates this section shall be punished as follows:

"(1) If permanent disfigurement or life-threatening bodily injury results, by imprisonment for not more than 20 years; if serious bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both; if bodily injury results, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(2) If the offense is committed with intent to commit another felony, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(3) If the offense is committed with a dangerous weapon, with intent to do bodily harm, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or both.

"(4) If the offender has previously violated any prior protection order issued against that person for the protection of the same victim, by fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 5 years and not less than 6 months, or both.

"(5) If the offense constitutes sexual abuse, as that conduct is described under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code (without regard to whether the conduct was committed in the special maritime, territorial or prison jurisdiction of the United States) by fine or term of imprisonment as provided for the applicable offense under chapter 109A.

"(d) CRIMINAL INTENT.—The criminal intent required to establish the offense provided in subsection (a) is the general intent to do the acts which result in injury to a spouse or intimate partner and not the specific intent to violate a protection order or State law.

"(e) NO PRIOR STATE ACTION NECESSARY.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal prosecution or conviction under State law to initiate Federal prosecution.

"§ 2263. Interim protections

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In furtherance of the purposes of this chapter, and to protect against abuse of a spouse or intimate partner, any judge or magistrate before whom a criminal case under this chapter is brought, shall have the power to issue temporary orders of protection for the protection of an abused spouse or intimate partner pending final disposition of the case, upon a showing of a likelihood of danger to the abused spouse or intimate partner.

"(b) LIMITATION ON JURISDICTION.—This section does not confer original jurisdiction in a Federal district court to issue any order of protection in a case of injury to a spouse or intimate partner unless the case—

"(1) has been brought by a Federal prosecutor pursuant to section 2261 or 2262; and

"(2) includes the interstate nexus required under section 2261 or 2262.

"(c) APPLICATION OF STATE LAW.—In issuing a temporary order of protection pursuant to subsection (a), the judge or magistrate shall look to the law of the State where the injury occurred to determine the types of relief that are appropriate.

"§ 2264. Restitution

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In addition to any fine or term of imprisonment provided under this chapter, and notwithstanding section 3663, the court shall order restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter.

"(b) SCOPE AND NATURE OF ORDER.—(1) An order of restitution under this section shall direct that—

"(A) the defendant pay to the victim (through the appropriate court mechanism) the full amount of the victim's losses as determined by the court, pursuant to paragraph (2); and

"(B) the United States Attorney enforce the restitution order by all available and reasonable means.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'full amount of the victim's losses' includes any costs incurred by the victim for—

"(A) medical services relating to physical, psychiatric, or psychological care;

"(B) physical and occupational therapy or rehabilitation;

"(C) lost income;

"(D) attorneys' fees, plus any costs incurred in obtaining a civil protection order; and

"(E) any other losses suffered by the victim as a proximate result of the offense.

"(3) A restitution order under this section is mandatory. A court may not decline to issue an order under this section because of—

"(A) the economic circumstances of the defendant; or

"(B) the fact that victim has, or is entitled to receive, compensation for his or her injuries from the proceeds of insurance.

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding paragraph (3), the court may take into account the economic circumstances of the defendant in determining the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid, including—

"(i) the financial resources and other assets of the defendant;

"(ii) projected earnings, earning capacity, and other income of the defendant; and

"(iii) any financial obligations of the offender, including obligations to dependents.

"(B) An order under this section may direct the defendant to make a single lump-sum payment, or partial payments at specified intervals. The order shall provide that the defendant's restitutionary obligation takes priority over any criminal fine ordered.

"(C) If the victim has recovered for any amount of loss through the proceeds of insurance or any other source, the order of restitution shall provide that restitution be paid to the person who provided the compensation, but that restitution shall be paid to the victim for the victim's other losses before any restitution is paid to any other provider of compensation.

"(5) Any amount paid to a victim under this section shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim from the defendant in—

"(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

"(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

"(c) PROOF OF CLAIM.—(1) Within 60 days after conviction and, in any event, no later than 10 days prior to sentencing, the United States Attorney (or the United States Attorney's delegate), after consulting with the victim, shall prepare and file an affidavit with the court listing the amounts subject to restitution under this section. The affidavit shall be signed by the United States Attorney (or the United States Attorney's delegate) and the victim. Should the victim object to any of the information included in the affidavit, the United States Attorney (or the United States Attorney's delegate) shall advise the victim that the victim may file a separate affidavit and shall provide the victim with an affidavit form which may be used to do so.

"(2) If no objection is raised by the defendant, the amounts attested to in the affidavit filed pursuant to paragraph (1) shall be entered in the court's restitution order. If objection is raised, the court may require the victim or the United States Attorney (or the United States Attorney's delegate) to submit further affidavits or other supporting documents, demonstrating the victim's losses.

"(3) If the court concludes, after reviewing the supporting documentation and considering the defendant's objections, that there is a substantial reason for doubting the authenticity or veracity of the records submitted, the court may require additional documentation or hear testimony on those questions. Any records filed, or testimony heard, pursuant to this subsection, shall be in camera in the judge's chambers.

"(4) If the victim's losses are not ascertainable 10 days prior to sentencing as provided in subsection (c)(1), the United States Attorney (or the United States Attorney's delegate) shall so inform the court, and the court shall set a date for the final determination of the victim's losses, not to exceed 90 days after sentencing. If the victim subsequently discovers further losses, the victim shall have 60 days after discovery of those losses in which to petition the court for an amended restitution order. Such an order may be granted only upon a showing of good cause for the failure to include such losses in the initial claim for restitutionary relief.

"(d) RESTITUTION AND CRIMINAL PENALTIES.—An award of restitution to the victim of an offense under this chapter shall not be a substitute for imposition of punishment under sections 2261 and 2262.

"(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the term 'victim' includes the person harmed as a result of a commission of a crime under this chapter, including, in the case of a victim who is under 18 years of age, incompetent, incapacitated, or deceased, the legal guardian of the victim or representative of the victim's estate, another family member, or any other person appointed as suitable by the court, but in no event shall the defendant be named as such a representative or guardian.

"§ 2265. Full faith and credit given to protection orders

"(a) FULL FAITH AND CREDIT.—Any protection order issued consistent with subsection (b) by the court of 1 State (the issuing State) shall be accorded full faith and credit by the court of another State (the enforcing State) and enforced as if it were the order of the enforcing State.

"(b) PROTECTION ORDER.—(1) A protection order issued by a State court is consistent with this subsection if—

"(A) the court has jurisdiction over the parties and matter under the law of the State; and

"(B) reasonable notice and opportunity to be heard is given to the person against whom the order is sought sufficient to protect that person's right to due process.

"(2) In the case of an order under paragraph (1) that is issued ex parte, notice and opportunity to be heard shall be provided within the time required by State law, and in any event within a reasonable time after the order is issued, sufficient to protect the respondent's due process rights.

"(c) CROSS- OR COUNTER-PETITION.—A protection order issued by a State court against one who has petitioned, filed a complaint, or otherwise filed a written pleading for protection against abuse by a spouse or intimate partner is not entitled to full faith and credit if—

"(1) no cross- or counter-petition, complaint, or other written pleading was filed seeking such a protection order; or

"(2) if a cross- or counter-petition has been filed, if the court did not make specific findings that each party was entitled to such an order.

"§ 2266. Definitions

"As used in this chapter—

"(1) the term 'spouse or intimate partner' includes—

"(A) a present or former spouse, a person who shares a child in common with an abuser, and a person who cohabits or has cohabited with an abuser as a spouse; and

"(B) any other person similarly situated to a spouse who is protected by the domestic or family violence laws of the State in which the injury occurred or where the victim resides, or any other adult person who is protected from an abuser's acts under the domestic or family violence laws of the State in which the injury occurred or where the victim resides;

"(2) the term 'protection order' includes an injunction or other order issued for the purpose of preventing violent or threatening acts by 1 spouse against his or her spouse or intimate partner, including a temporary or final order issued by a civil or criminal court (other than a support or child custody order or provision) whether obtained by filing an independent action or as a pendent lite order in another proceeding, so long as, in the case of a civil order, the order was issued in response to a complaint, petition, or motion filed by or on behalf of an abused spouse or intimate partner;

"(3) the term 'act that injures' includes any act, except one done in self-defense, that results in physical injury or sexual abuse;

"(4) the term 'State' includes a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, and any Indian tribe, commonwealth, territory, or possession of the United States; and

"(5) the term 'travel across State lines' includes any travel except travel across State lines by an Indian tribal member when that member remained at all times on tribal lands."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The part analysis for part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item for chapter 110 the following new item:

"110A. Violence against spouses 2261."

Subtitle C—Arrest in Spousal Abuse Cases SEC. 231. ENCOURAGING ARREST POLICIES.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10401 et seq.), as amended by section 211, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 317. ENCOURAGING ARREST POLICIES.

"(a) PURPOSE.—To encourage States, Indian tribes and localities to treat spousal violence as a serious violation of criminal law, the Secretary may make grants to eligible States, Indian tribes, municipalities, or local government entities for the following purposes:

"(1) To implement pro-arrest programs and policies in police departments and to improve tracking of cases involving spousal abuse.

"(2) To centralize police enforcement, prosecution, or judicial responsibility for, spousal abuse cases in one group or unit of police officers, prosecutors, or judges.

"(3) To coordinate computer tracking systems to ensure communication between police, prosecutors, and both criminal and family courts.

"(4) To educate judges in criminal and other courts about spousal abuse and to improve judicial handling of such cases.

"(b) ELIGIBILITY.—(1) Eligible grantees are those States, Indian tribes, municipalities or other local government entities that—

"(A) demonstrate, through arrest and conviction statistics, that their laws or policies have been effective in significantly increasing the number of arrests made of spouse abusers;

"(B) certify that their laws or official policies—

"(i) mandate arrest of spouse abusers based on probable cause that violence has been committed; or

"(ii) permit warrantless arrests of spouse abusers, encourage the use of that authority, and mandate arrest of spouses violating the terms of a valid and outstanding protection order;

"(C) demonstrate that their laws, policies, practices and training programs discourage 'dual' arrests of abused and abuser; and

"(D) certify that their laws, policies, and practices prohibit issuance of mutual protection orders in cases where only one spouse has sought a protection order, and require findings of mutual aggression to issue mutual protection orders in cases where both parties file a claim.

"(2) For purposes of this section—

"(A) the term 'protection order' includes any injunction issued for the purpose of preventing violent or threatening acts of spouse abuse, including a temporary or final order issued by civil or criminal courts (other than support or child custody orders or provisions) whether obtained by filing an independent action or as a pendente lite order in another proceeding; and

"(B) the term 'spousal or spouse abuse' includes a felony or misdemeanor offense committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, a person who is cohabiting with or has cohabited with the victim as a spouse, a person similarly situated to a spouse of the victim under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies, or committed by any other adult person upon a victim who is protected from that person's acts under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction receiving grant monies.

"(3) The eligibility requirements provided in this section shall take effect on the date that is 1 year after the date of enactment of this section.

"(c) DELEGATION AND AUTHORIZATION.—The Secretary shall delegate to the Attorney General of the United States the Secretary's responsibilities for carrying out this section. There are authorized to be appropriated not in excess of $25,000,000 for each fiscal year to be used for the purpose of making grants under this section.

"(d) APPLICATION.—An eligible grantee shall submit an application to the Secretary. Such an application shall—

"(1) contain a certification by the chief executive officer of the State, Indian tribe, municipality, or local government entity that the conditions of subsection (b) are met;

"(2) describe the entity's plans to further the purposes listed in subsection (a);

"(3) identify the agency or office or groups of agencies or offices responsible for carrying out the program; and

"(4) identify and include documentation showing the nonprofit nongovernmental victim services programs that will be consulted in developing, and implementing, the program.

"(e) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this section, the Secretary shall give priority to a grantee that—

"(1) does not currently provide for centralized handling of cases involving spousal or family violence in any one of the areas listed in this subsection—police, prosecutors, and courts; and

"(2) demonstrates a commitment to strong enforcement of laws, and prosecution of cases, involving spousal or family violence.

"(f) REPORTING.—Each grantee receiving funds under this section shall submit a report to the Secretary evaluating the effectiveness of the plan described in subsection (d)(2) and containing such additional information as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(g) REGULATIONS.—No later than 45 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall publish proposed regulations implementing this section. No later than 120 days after such date, the Secretary shall publish final regulations implementing this section."

Subtitle D—Funding for Shelters

SEC. 241. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 310(a) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10409(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this title $85,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, $100,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and $125,000,000 for fiscal year 1995."

Subtitle E—Family Violence Prevention and Services Act Amendments

SEC. 251. GRANTEE REPORTING.

(a) SUBMISSION OF APPLICATION.—Section 303(a)(2)(C) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(a)(2)(C)) is amended by inserting "and a plan to address the needs of underserved populations, including populations underserved because of ethnic, racial, cultural, language diversity or geographic isolation" after "such State".

(b) APPROVAL OF APPLICATION.—Section 303(a) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10402(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) Upon completion of the activities funded by a grant under this subpart, the State grantee shall file a performance report with the Director explaining the activities carried out together with an assessment of the effectiveness of those activities in achieving the purposes of this subpart. A section of this performance report shall be completed by each grantee or subgrantee that performed the direct services contemplated in the application certifying performance of direct services under the grant. The Director shall suspend funding for an approved application if an applicant fails to submit an annual performance report or if the funds are expended for purposes other than those set forth under this subpart, after following the procedures set forth in paragraph (3). Federal funds may be used only to supplement, not supplant, State funds."

Subtitle F—Youth Education and Domestic Violence

SEC. 261. EDUCATING YOUTH ABOUT DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10401 et seq.) as amended by section 231, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 318. EDUCATING YOUTH ABOUT DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

"(a) GENERAL PURPOSE.—For purposes of this section, the Secretary shall delegate the Secretary's powers to the Secretary of Education (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary"). The Secretary shall select, implement and evaluate 4 model programs for education of young people about domestic violence and violence among intimate partners.

"(b) NATURE OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall select, implement and evaluate separate model programs for 4 different audiences: primary schools, middle schools, secondary schools, and institutions of higher education. The model programs shall be selected, implemented, and evaluated in the light of the comments of educational experts, legal and psychological experts on battering, and victim advocate organizations such as battered women's shelters, State coalitions and resource centers. The participation of each of those groups or individual consultants from such groups is essential to the selection, implementation, and evaluation of programs that meet both the needs of educational institutions and the needs of the domestic violence problem.

"(c) REVIEW AND DISSEMINATION.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall transmit the design and evaluation of the model programs, along with a plan and cost estimate for nationwide distribution, to the relevant committees of Congress for review.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $400,000 for fiscal year 1993."

Subtitle G—Confidentiality for Abused Persons

SEC. 271. CONFIDENTIALITY OF ABUSED PERSON'S ADDRESS.

Not later than 90 days after enactment of this Act, the United States Postal Service shall promulgate regulations to secure the confidentiality of domestic violence shelters and abused persons' addresses consistent with the following guidelines:

(1) Confidentiality shall be provided to a person upon the presentation to an appropriate postal official of a valid court order or a police report documenting abuse.

(2) Confidentiality shall be provided to any domestic violence shelter upon presentation to an appropriate postal authority of proof from a State domestic violence coalition (within the meaning of section 311 of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10410)) verifying that the organization is a domestic violence shelter.

(3) Disclosure of addresses to State or Federal agencies for legitimate law enforcement or other governmental purposes shall not be prohibited.

(4) Compilations of addresses existing at the time the order is presented to an appropriate postal official shall be excluded from the scope of the proposed regulations.

Subtitle H—Technical Amendments

SEC. 281. STATE DOMESTIC VIOLENCE COALITIONS.

Section 311(a) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10410(a)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (1), (2), (3), and (4) as paragraphs (2), (3), (4), and (5);

(2) by inserting before paragraph (2), as redesignated by paragraph (1), the following new paragraph:

"(1) working with local domestic violence programs and providers of direct services to encourage appropriate responses to domestic violence within the State, including—

"(A) training and technical assistance for local programs and professionals working with victims of domestic violence;

"(B) planning and conducting State needs assessments and planning for comprehensive services;

"(C) serving as an information clearinghouse and resource center for the State; and

"(D) collaborating with other governmental systems which affect battered women;"

(3) in paragraph (2)(K), as redesignated by paragraph (1), by striking "and court officials and other professionals" and inserting "judges, court officers and other criminal justice professionals";

(4) in paragraph (3), as redesignated by paragraph (1)—

(A) by inserting "criminal court judges," after "family law judges," each place it appears;

(B) in subparagraph (F), by inserting "custody" after "temporary"; and

(C) in subparagraph (H), by striking "supervised visitations that do not endanger victims and their children," and inserting "supervised visitations or denial of visitation to protect against danger to victims or their children"; and

(5) in paragraph (4), as redesignated by paragraph (1), by inserting "including information aimed at underserved racial, ethnic or language-minority populations" before the semicolon.

Subtitle I—Data and Research

SEC. 291. REPORT ON RECORDKEEPING.

(a) STUDY.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Government Accounting Office shall complete a study of, and shall submit to Congress, a report on the progress of the Department of Justice in collecting statistics showing the relationship between an offender and victim for all reported Federal crimes, including the crimes of rape, kidnapping, assault, aggravated assault, and robbery.

(b) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—No later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the study required under subsection (a) shall be completed and a report describing the findings made submitted to the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives, the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate, and the National Commission on Violence Against Women.

SEC. 292. RESEARCH AGENDA.

(a) REQUEST FOR CONTRACT.—The Director of the National Institute of Justice shall request the National Academy of Sciences, through its National Research Council, to enter into a contract to develop a research agenda to increase the understanding and control of violence against women, including rape and domestic violence. In furtherance of the contract, the National Academy shall convene a panel of nationally recognized experts on violence against women, in the fields of law, medicine, criminal justice and the social sciences. In setting the agenda, the Academy shall focus primarily upon preventive, educative, social, and legal strategies. Nothing in this section shall be construed to invoke the terms of the Federal Advisory Committee Act.

(b) DECLINATION OF REQUEST.—If the National Academy of Sciences declines to conduct the study and develop a research agenda, it shall recommend a nonprofit private entity that is qualified to conduct such a study. In that case, the Director of the National Institute of Justice shall carry out subsection (a) through the nonprofit private entity recommended by the Academy. In either case, whether the study is conducted by the National Academy of Sciences or by the nonprofit group it recommends, the funds for the contract shall be made available from sums appropriated for the conduct of research by the National Institute of Justice.

(c) REPORT.—The Director of the National Institute of Justice shall ensure that no later than 9 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the study required under subsection (a) is completed and a report describing the findings made is submitted to the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives, the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate, and the National Commission on Violence Against Women.

SEC. 293. STATE DATABASES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The National Institute of Justice, in conjunction with the Bureau of Justice Statistics, shall study and report to the States and to Congress on how the States may collect centralized databases on the incidence of domestic violence offenses within a State.

(b) CONSULTATION.—In conducting its study, the National Institute of Justice shall consult persons expert in the collection of criminal justice data, State statistical administrators, law enforcement personnel, and nonprofit nongovernmental agencies that provide direct services to victims of domestic violence. The Institute's final report shall set forth the views of the persons consulted on the Institute's recommendations.

(c) REPORT.—The Director of the National Institute of Justice shall ensure that no later than 9 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the study required under subsection (a) is completed and a report describing the findings made is submitted to the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives and the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized such sums as are necessary to carry out this section.

SEC. 294. NUMBER AND COST OF INJURIES.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services, acting through the Centers for Disease Control Injury Control Division, shall conduct a study to obtain a national projection of the incidence of injuries resulting from domestic violence, the cost of injuries to health care facilities, and recommend health care strategies for reducing the incidence and cost of such injuries.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $100,000 for fiscal year 1993.

TITLE III—CIVIL RIGHTS

SEC. 301. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Civil Rights Remedies for Gender-Motivated Violence Act".

SEC. 302. CIVIL RIGHTS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) crimes motivated by the victim's gender constitute bias crimes in violation of the victim's right to be free from discrimination on the basis of gender;

(2) current law provides a civil rights remedy for gender crimes committed in the workplace, but not for gender crimes committed on the street or in the home;

(3) State and Federal criminal laws do not adequately protect against the bias element of gender-motivated crimes, which separates these crimes from acts of random violence, nor do those laws adequately provide victims of gender-motivated crimes the opportunity to vindicate their interests;

(4) existing bias and discrimination in the criminal justice system often deprives victims of gender-motivated crimes of equal protection of the laws and the redress to which they are entitled;

(5) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by deterring potential victims from traveling interstate, from engaging in employment in interstate business, and from transacting with business, and in places involved, in interstate commerce;

(6) gender-motivated violence has a substantial adverse effect on interstate commerce, by diminishing national productivity, increasing medical and other costs, and decreasing the supply of and the demand for interstate products;

(7) a Federal civil rights action as specified in this section is necessary to guarantee equal protection of the laws and to reduce the substantial adverse effects of gender-motivated violence on interstate commerce; and

(8) victims of gender-motivated violence have a right to equal protection of the laws, including a system of justice that is unaffected by bias or discrimination and that, at every relevant stage, treats such crimes as seriously as other violent crimes.

(b) RIGHT TO BE FREE FROM CRIMES OF VIOLENCE.—All persons within the United States shall have the right to be free from crimes of violence motivated by gender (as defined in subsection (d)).

(c) CAUSE OF ACTION.—A person (including a person who acts under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of any State) who commits a crime of violence motivated by gender and thus deprives another of the right declared in subsection (b) shall be liable to the party injured, in an action for the recovery of compensatory and punitive damages, injunctive and declaratory relief, and such other relief as a court may deem appropriate.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term "crime of violence motivated by gender" means a crime of violence committed because of gender or on the basis of gender; and

(2) the term "crime of violence" means an act or series of acts that would come within the meaning of State or Federal offenses described in section 16 of title 18, United States Code, whether or not those acts have actually resulted in criminal charges, prosecution, or conviction and whether or not those acts were committed in the special maritime, territorial, or prison jurisdiction of the United States.

(e) LIMITATION AND PROCEDURES.—

(1) LIMITATION.—Nothing in this section entitles a person to a cause of action under subsection (c) for random acts of violence unrelated to gender or for acts that cannot be demonstrated, by a preponderance of the evidence, to be motivated by gender (within the meaning of subsection (d)).

(2) NO PRIOR CRIMINAL ACTION.—Nothing in this section requires a prior criminal complaint, prosecution, or conviction to establish the elements of a cause of action under subsection (c).

SEC. 303. ATTORNEY'S FEES.

Section 722 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1988) is amended in the last sentence—

(1) by striking "or" after "Public Law 92-318"; and

(2) by inserting "or title III of the Violence Against Women Act of 1993," after "1964".

SEC. 304. SENSE OF THE SENATE CONCERNING PROTECTION OF THE PRIVACY OF RAPE VICTIMS.

(a) FINDINGS AND DECLARATION.—The Congress finds and declares that—

(1) there is a need for a strong and clear Federal response to violence against women, particularly with respect to the crime of rape;

(2) rape is an abominable and repugnant crime, and one that is severely underreported to law enforcement authorities because of its stigmatizing nature;

(3) the victims of rape are often further victimized by a criminal justice system that is insensitive to the trauma caused by the crime and are increasingly victimized by news media that are insensitive to the victim's emotional and psychological needs;

(4) rape victims' need for privacy should be respected;

(5) rape victims need to be encouraged to come forward and report the crime of rape without fear of being revictimized through involuntary public disclosure of their identities;

(6) rape victims need a reasonable expectation that their physical safety will be protected against retaliation or harassment by an assailant;

(7) the news media should, in the exercise of their discretion, balance the public's interest in knowing facts reported by free news media against important privacy interests of a rape victim, and an absolutist view of the public interest leads to insensitivity to a victim's privacy interest; and

(8) the public's interest in knowing the identity of a rape victim is small compared with the interests of maintaining the privacy of rape victims and encouraging rape victims to report and assist in the prosecution of the crime of rape.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that news media, law enforcement officers, and other persons should exercise restraint and respect a rape victim's privacy by not disclosing the victim's identity to the general public or facilitating such disclosure without the consent of the victim.

TITLE IV—SAFE CAMPUSES FOR WOMEN

SEC. 401. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 1541(i) of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992 (20 U.S.C. 1145h(i)) is amended to read as follows:

"(i) For the purpose of carrying out this part, there are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1993 and such sums as are necessary for fiscal years 1994, 1995, 1996, and 1997."

TITLE V—EQUAL JUSTICE FOR WOMEN IN THE COURTS ACT

SECTION 501. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Equal Justice for Women in the Courts Act of 1993".

Subtitle A—Education and Training for Judges and Court Personnel in State Courts

SEC. 511. GRANTS AUTHORIZED.

The State Justice Institute may award grants for the purpose of developing, testing, presenting, and disseminating model programs to be used by States in training judges and court personnel in the laws of the States on rape, sexual assault, domestic violence, and other crimes of violence motivated by the victim's gender.

SEC. 512. TRAINING PROVIDED BY GRANTS.

Training provided pursuant to grants made under this subtitle may include current information, existing studies, or current data on—

(1) the nature and incidence of rape and sexual assault by strangers and nonstrangers, marital rape, and incest;

(2) the underreporting of rape, sexual assault, and child sexual abuse;

(3) the physical, psychological, and economic impact of rape and sexual assault on the victim, the costs to society, and the implications for sentencing;

(4) the psychology of sex offenders, their high rate of recidivism, and the implications for sentencing;

(5) the historical evolution of laws and attitudes on rape and sexual assault;

(6) sex stereotyping of female and male victims of rape and sexual assault, racial stereotyping of rape victims and defendants, and the impact of such stereotypes on credibility of witnesses, sentencing, and other aspects of the administration of justice;

(7) application of rape shield laws and other limits on introduction of evidence that may subject victims to improper sex stereotyping and harassment in both rape and nonrape cases, including the need for sua sponte judicial intervention in inappropriate cross-examination;

(8) the use of expert witness testimony on rape trauma syndrome, child sexual abuse accommodation syndrome, post-traumatic stress syndrome, and similar issues;

(9) the legitimate reasons why victims of rape, sexual assault, and incest may refuse to testify against a defendant;

(10) the nature and incidence of domestic violence;

(11) the physical, psychological, and economic impact of domestic violence on the victim, the costs to society, and the implications for court procedures and sentencing;

(12) the psychology and self-presentation of batterers and victims and the implications for court proceedings and credibility of witnesses;

(13) sex stereotyping of female and male victims of domestic violence, myths about presence or absence of domestic violence in certain racial, ethnic, religious, or socioeconomic groups, and their impact on the administration of justice;

(14) historical evolution of laws and attitudes on domestic violence;

(15) proper and improper interpretations of the defenses of self-defense and provocation, and the use of expert witness testimony on battered woman syndrome;

(16) the likelihood of retaliation, recidivism, and escalation of violence by batterers, and the potential impact of incarceration and other meaningful sanctions for acts of domestic violence including violations of orders of protection;

(17) economic, psychological, social and institutional reasons for victims' inability to leave the batterer, to report domestic violence or to follow through on complaints, including the influence of lack of support from police, judges, and court personnel, and the legitimate reasons why victims of domestic violence may refuse to testify against a defendant;

(18) the need for orders of protection, and the implications of mutual orders of protection, dual arrest policies, and mediation in domestic violence cases;

(19) recognition of and response to gender-motivated crimes of violence other than rape, sexual assault and domestic violence, such as mass or serial murder motivated by the gender of the victims; and

(20) current information on the impact of pornography on crimes against women, or data on other activities that tend to degrade women.

SEC. 513. COOPERATION IN DEVELOPING PROGRAMS IN MAKING GRANTS UNDER THIS TITLE.

The State Justice Institute shall ensure that model programs carried out pursuant to grants made under this subtitle are developed with the participation of law enforcement officials, public and private nonprofit victim advocates, legal experts, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and recognized experts on gender bias in the courts.

SEC. 514. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subtitle $600,000 for fiscal year 1993. Of amounts appropriated under this section, the State Justice Institute shall expend no less than 40 percent on model programs regarding domestic violence and no less than 40 percent on model programs regarding rape and sexual assault.

Subtitle B—Education and Training for Judges and Court Personnel in Federal Courts

SEC. 521. AUTHORIZATIONS OF CIRCUIT STUDIES; EDUCATION AND TRAINING GRANTS.

(a) STUDY.—In order to gain a better understanding of the nature and the extent of gender bias in the Federal courts, the circuit judicial councils are encouraged to conduct studies of the instances, if any, of gender bias in their respective circuits. The studies may include an examination of the effects of gender on—

(1) the treatment of litigants, witnesses, attorneys, jurors, and judges in the courts, including before magistrate and bankruptcy judges;

(2) the interpretation and application of the law, both civil and criminal;

(3) treatment of defendants in criminal cases;

(4) treatment of victims of violent crimes;

(5) sentencing;

(6) sentencing alternatives, facilities for incarceration, and the nature of supervision of probation and parole;

(7) appointments to committees of the Judicial Conference and the courts;

(8) case management and court sponsored alternative dispute resolution programs;

(9) the selection, retention, promotion, and treatment of employees;

(10) appointment of arbitrators, experts, and special masters; and

(11) the aspects of the topics listed in section 512 that pertain to issues within the jurisdiction of the Federal courts.

(b) CLEARINGHOUSE.—The Judicial Conference of the United States shall designate an entity within the Judicial branch to act as a clearinghouse to disseminate any reports and materials issued by the gender bias task forces under subsection (a) and to respond to requests for such reports and materials. The gender bias task forces shall provide this entity with their reports and related material.

(c) MODEL PROGRAMS.—The Federal Judicial Center, in carrying out section 620(b)(3) of title 28, United States Code, may—

(1) include in the educational programs it presents and prepares, including the training programs for newly appointed judges, information on issues related to gender bias in the courts including such areas as are listed in subsection (a) along with such other topics as the Federal Judicial Center deems appropriate;

(2) prepare materials necessary to implement this subsection; and

(3) take into consideration the findings and recommendations of the studies conducted pursuant to subsection (a), and to consult with individuals and groups with relevant expertise in gender bias issues as it prepares or revises such materials.

SEC. 522. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be appropriated—

(1) $400,000 to the Salaries and Expenses Account of the Courts of Appeals, District Courts, and other Judicial Services, to carry out section 521(a), to be available until expended through fiscal year 1994;

(2) $100,000 to the Federal Judicial Center to carry out section 521(c) and any activities designated by the Judicial Conference under section 521(b); and

(3) such sums as are necessary to the Administrative Office of the United States Courts to carry out any activities designated by the Judicial Conference under section 521(b).

(b) THE JUDICIAL CONFERENCE OF THE UNITED STATES.—(1) The Judicial Conference of the United States Courts shall allocate funds to Federal circuit courts under this subtitle that—

(A) undertake studies in their own circuits; or

(B) implement reforms recommended as a result of such studies in their own or other circuits, including education and training.

(2) Funds shall be allocated to Federal circuits under this subtitle on a first come first serve basis in an amount not to exceed $50,000 on the first application. If within 6 months after the date on which funds authorized under this Act become available, funds are still available, circuits that have received funds may reapply for additional funds, with not more than $200,000 going to any one circuit.

BIDEN VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN ACT OF 1993 (S. 11)

TITLE I—SAFE STREETS FOR WOMEN

Creates new penalties for sex crimes

Creates new penalties for sex offenders.
Increases restitution for the victims of sex crimes.

Encourages women to prosecute their attackers

Extends "rape shield law" protection to civil cases (e.g. sexual harassment cases) and all criminal cases (other than sexual assault cases where it already applies) to bar embarrassing and irrelevant inquiries into a victim's sexual history at trial.

Bars the use of a woman's clothing to show, at trial, that the victim incited or invited a sexual assault.

Requires States to pay to rape exams.

Targets places most dangerous for women, including public transit and parks

Authorizes $300 million for law enforcement efforts to combat violence against women, aiding police, prosecutors and victim advocates.

Funds increased lighting and camera surveillance at bus stops, bus stations, subways and parking lots and targets existing funds for increased lighting, emergency telephones and police in public parks.

Education and prevention

Authorizes $65 million for rape education, starting in junior high.

Establishes the "National Commission on Violent Crime Against Women"

Creates a commission to develop a national strategy for combating violence against women.

TITLE II—SAFE HOMES FOR WOMEN

Protects women from abusive spouses

Creates federal penalties for spouse abusers who cross state lines to continue their abuse.

Requires all states to enforce any "stay-away" order, regardless of which state issues it.

Promotes arrests of abusive spouses

Authorizes $25 million for states that promote the arrest of abusing spouses and experiment with new techniques to increase prosecution.

Provides more money for shelters

Boosts funding for battered women's shelters.

Establishes a national domestic violence hotline

Provides federal funding for a national domestic violence hotline (Senator Kennedy).

Increases research and data

Authorizes research and increases data collection on violence against women.

TITLE III—CIVIL RIGHTS FOR WOMEN

Extends "Civil Rights" protections to all gender-motivated crimes

Makes gender-based assaults a violation of federal civil rights laws.

Allows victims of all felonies "motivated by gender" to bring civil rights suits against their assailants.

Funds rape prevention programs

Boosts of $20 million funding for the neediest colleges to fund campus rape education and prevention programs.

TITLE V—EQUAL JUSTICE FOR WOMEN

Makes courts fairer by training judges

Creates training programs for State and Federal judges to raise awareness and increase sensitivity about crimes against women.

• Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I am honored to join Senator BIDEN and many other colleagues today in introducing the Violence Against Women Act of 1993, a bill to combat violence and crimes against women on the streets and in their homes.

Domestic violence has reached epidemic proportions in this country. A Judiciary Committee staff report last October found that more than 1.1 million women every year are victims of reported domestic violence and as many as 3 million more domestic violence crimes go unreported each year.

Domestic violence occurs everywhere. It is not confined to any one class, race, or ethnic group. Women in all walks of life are the victims. They are beaten and maimed by husbands and boyfriends, stabbed in their homes, killed on the street. Sometimes they are battered while pregnant, or with their children looking on.

On December 31, the Boston Globe published a list of 26 women and 18 children and bystanders who lost their lives in Massachusetts in 1992 as a result of domestic violence. The articles described the horrible circumstances of each death. No one can read this grisly list without pledging to do something to combat such violence.

I commend Senator BIDEN for his leadership in holding a series of Judiciary Committee hearings on violence against women, and in drafting comprehensive legislation to address the problem in a variety of creative ways. The Violence Against Women Act will establish Federal penalties for such crimes where the perpetrator crosses State lines. It will authorize additional Federal funds for training and information sharing by State and local law enforcement authorities, and new funds for shelters for battered women.

These measures are urgently needed. Better training of police and prosecutors will help to ensure that abuse of women in their own homes is treated like the crime that it is. Establishment of more battered women's shelters will help to ensure that women who decide to leave home have a safe place to go. All too often, women in abusive situations are trapped between fear of staying where they are and fear of leaving, because they simply have no place to go.

One resource that has proved to be of great assistance to women in abusive situations is the 24-hour telephone hotline—a link to information and counseling that can help guide victims out of danger. Unfortunately, many communities do not have a local hotline. In the past, women in these areas could call a toll-free national line that would provide counseling and referrals to local agencies and shelters.

The national hotline, however, ran out of funds and went out of business last June. According to experts in this field, its restoration is urgently needed. It averaged 7.5 calls an hour, 180 calls a day, 65,520 calls a year. These numbers represent victims not being served—and violence not being prevented.

We have therefore included, in the Violence Against Women Act, a new provision authorizing Federal grants for the operation of a national toll-free domestic violence hotline. The national hotline must be revived, and soon. Women's lives are at stake.

All of us who support this legislation hope that it will be enacted this year. I look forward to working with other Senators on certain issues of concern, such as the mandatory sentencing provisions that affect the important role of the Sentencing Commission, and to enacting this important bill as soon as possible.

• Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I am honored to join Senator BIDEN in reintroducing the Violence Against Women Act today.

For too long, society has chosen to ignore the growing epidemic of violence against women—so much so that even our statistics fail to adequately describe the full scope of the problem. In a groundbreaking report issued by the Senate Judiciary Committee last year, the committee documented that the 200 incidents of violence against women in their week long survey represented less than one-hundredth of the violent attacks against women reported to the police every week.

We live in a world where women are afraid to work late in offices, or to take public transit alone at night for fear of being sexually assaulted. They are afraid to walk the streets of their neighborhood and have become prisoners in their own homes. Tragically, for millions of women each year, even their own homes are unsafe. Domestic violence is now the leading cause of injury to women.

It is time to end the terror and the assault on women by passing the Violence Against Women Act. This far-reaching proposal focuses needed attention on this issue and provides for solutions which aid the survivors, increase the police and prosecutor response, and work to break persistent stereotypes which cause both society and our judicial institutions to treat the crimes of rape and domestic violence as less serious and deserving of our resources than other violent crimes.

Like Senator BIDEN, I intend to make passage of the Violence Against Women Act one of my highest legislative priorities. I urge my colleagues to join us in supporting this bill.●

● Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I rise to express my support for the Violence Against Women Act, a bill that was introduced today. I am proud to be an original cosponsor of this important piece of legislation.

It is unconscionable that in a land that places so much emphasis on individual rights, one group is repeatedly denied their most basic rights by the crimes of rape and domestic violence. The No. 1 health risk to women today is violent attacks by men. Over the past decade, crimes against women have increased four times as much as other crimes. In fact, a woman is now 10 times more likely to be the victim of sexual assault than she is to die in a car accident.

The Violence Against Women Act significantly strengthens three areas essential to combating crimes against women: First, law enforcement, responsible for preventing these crimes and apprehending the suspects; second, the courts, responsible for protecting the rights of victims and punishing offenders; and third, the social service community, responsible for providing shelter, counseling, and other support services.

I encourage each of my colleagues to support this comprehensive bill, which simply promotes a basic right for women that all Americans should enjoy. Americans deserve the right to feel safe—in our homes, on the street, and in our courts. I hope that this Congress moves quickly to enact the Violence Against Women Act.●

● Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, today I once again join as an original cosponsor of the Equal Remedies Act. This simple bill would expeditiously deal with an inequity in our civil rights laws.

Currently, unlimited monetary damages may be requested by a person who proves to a court that they suffered racial discrimination in employment. However, only limited damages are available to those who prove they were subjected to discrimination based on nonracial factors such as gender or handicap.

Like many flukes in our laws, this one has an interesting history. Briefly, in 1976 the Supreme Court decided that an old post-Civil War law making race discrimination in contracts illegal, applies to employment contracts. That law allows unlimited damages. However, title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which governs other types of employment discrimination, does not allow monetary damages. We partially addressed this unequal remedy scheme in the Civil Rights Act of 1991 by allowing limited damages for nonracial discrimination. Now we seek to lift these limits so that all employment discrimination, regardless of the group being protected, may receive the same remedy.

I know some employers fear an explosion of litigation if this legislation is passed. I am sensitive to those concerns. However, data provided by the National Women's Law Center suggests otherwise. Statistics are available on cases involving race discrimination in employment, in which unlimited damages are already available. From 1980 to 1991 a total of 594 such cases—less than 60 a year—were tried by Federal courts. In only 69 cases—11.6 percent of the total—were damages awarded. Only three awards were over $200,000 and one of those was reversed on appeal.

In addition to this information, which seems to indicate that uncapping damages will not encourage frivolous litigation, it is important to remember two things: One, that the Equal Remedies Act would allow uncapped damages only for intentional employment discrimination, not so-called "adverse impact" discrimination where an employer uses a practice which unintentionally results in discrimination. Second, to receive damages under the Equal Remedies Act, a plaintiff must prove to a court of law that the employer intentionally discriminated—not an easy burden of proof.

Mr. President, the Equal Remedies Act will bring parity to our scheme of civil rights laws and should be enacted. I urge my colleagues' support.●

By Mr. BIDEN:

S. 12. A bill to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to make grants to States and local governments for the construction of projects in areas of high unemployment, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

INFRASTRUCTURE GROWTH AND EMPLOYMENT ACT

● Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, our economy is balanced precariously between the grim reality of recent stagnation and the hope for revived growth in the future. I want to be optimistic about our economy. But more than once in the recent past, we have been told that full recovery was just around the corner, only to find ourselves still stuck in a rut of growth too slow to revive jobs and investment.

Today, I am introducing legislation that will provide a support for our fragile recovery, legislation that will create private sector jobs on State and local projects that need doing now. By rehabilitating the public foundations of our private enterprise economy, these projects will also help to sustain economic growth in the future.

Mr. President, I know there are many today who—based on mixed economic statistics—question the need for such a boost to our economy. Because this is such an important issue, I want to address those concerns.

Some point to encouraging statistics, claiming that the recovery we have been waiting for is here. But in fact, the prolonged economic stagnation that has marked so-called recovery from the last recession has driven home the lesson that our economy no longer operates the way it used to.

Global changes in important industries like autos, steel, electronics, and finance continue to force painful adjustments. Corporate restructuring continues to eliminate jobs and idle resources.

The current slump in the international economy and our prolonged hangover from the debt binge of the 1980's have slowed what used to be the normal process of creating new jobs and businesses. And continuing reductions in defense spending, a necessary adjustment to new circumstances, only add to these problems.

Because of these factors, this recovery is running far behind our modern experience in replacing lost jobs. High unemployment has persisted long after the last recession, and the best estimates are for a weak labor market for at least the next year, more likely for years to come.

In my own State of Delaware, the world's largest corporation, General Motors, has announced plans to close its Boxwood assembly plant. Last year, DuPont cut thousands of positions from its Delaware work force. Every day brings news of similar corporate restructuring—IBM may be the most striking recent example—from what used to be our economy's most stable employers.

These realities were undoubtedly behind the resounding support my plan received last year in my home State of Delaware. The State Chamber of Commerce and local public officials, building trades workers and building contractors—all agreed that quick investment in needed local infrastructure projects would give an important boost to Delaware's economy that the private sector alone could not provide.

Many in the business community agree with this analysis. Just last month, Business Week editorialized that "there is no clear-cut evidence that, unaided,"—and I emphasize "unaided"—"the U.S. economy can sustain the 3-percent growth needed for a significant long-term decline in unemployment."

Still, Mr. President, some observers point to discouraging projections for Federal budget deficits and argue that economic stimulus will come at the expense of long-term growth, as deficits threaten public and private investment.

This is a serious concern, Mr. President, but in fact quick, focused support for employment, incomes, and public confidence is essential to our goals of long-term growth and deficit reduction.

Stronger growth is a necessary step toward bringing the deficit under control. Of course, in addition to providing the additional stimulus needed now we must also address the long-term deficit problem with a comprehensive program that includes a review of entitlement programs and health care cost controls.

I have supported a line-item veto, sunset legislation, budget freeze, and other steps to restore balance to our Government's finances. But without economic growth, none of these steps could achieve its goal.

Recent experience shows that increasing deficits are due in large part to weak economic activity. Unless and until we revive economic growth, bringing down the deficit will not only force much more difficult political choices—which are therefore more likely to be deferred—but also threaten to cut off our fragile recovery.

Finally, even some who agree that economic stimulus is justified by continued weak economic performance are skeptical that we can design legislation that will achieve its goals.

The legislation I am introducing today answers that objection: It will provide jobs quickly for millions of Americans, rehabilitating our Nation's economic foundations—the roads, bridges, water systems, and other facilities that support our private enterprise system.

This legislation is limited to 1 year—or less if the national unemployment rate drops below 6 percent. The Secretary of Commerce will allocate funds to States and localities based on their histories of unemployment and approve projects based on their capacity to create jobs and support private sector growth in the future.

Local governments will provide 20 percent matching funds, to ensure their commitment to the projects they propose. Sixty-day approval of the projects by the Secretary of Commerce will speed the process of job creation and keep the focus on those projects, already locally approved, that have been put on hold due to strained State and local budgets.

In a hearing last year, a similar proposal of mine earned the support of respected economists Alan Blinder and David Alan Aschauer. It has the endorsement of the AFL-CIO, National League of Cities, the National Association of Towns and Townships, National Association of Counties, National Association of Development Organizations, American Consulting Engineers Council, and other groups.

I hope my colleagues will join with me in this proposal, a program to support economic recovery now and to rehabilitate the foundations of our economy for the future.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill and a section-by-section analysis be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 12

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Infrastructure Growth and Employment Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) the national economy has failed for several years to maintain sufficient levels of economic growth;

(2) the current inadequate levels of economic activity and job creation are anticipated to persist into the foreseeable future;

(3) this prospect will mean continued high rates of business failures and unemployment, increased Federal spending and reduced revenues, thereby deepening the Federal deficit;

(4) recovery of the economy and reduction of the Federal deficit depend on the creation of higher levels of employment and economic activity;

(5) in recent years all levels of government have neglected to add to or maintain existing public infrastructure essential to economic efficiency and the future prosperity of the country; and

(6) economic growth rates and the future efficiency and competitiveness of the national economy will be substantially enhanced by a program of Federal Government assistance to State and local governments to construct and rehabilitate the Nation's economic infrastructure.

SEC. 3. DIRECT GRANTS.

(a) CONSTRUCTION.—The Secretary is authorized to make grants to any State or local government for the construction (including demolition and other site preparation activities), renovation, repair, or other improvement of local public works projects, including those public works projects of State and local governments for which Federal financial assistance is authorized under provisions of law other than this Act. To the extent appropriate, the Secretary may coordinate with other Federal agencies in assessing grant request and in providing appropriate levels of support.

(b) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of any project for which a grant is made under this section shall be no more than 80 percent of the cost of the project.

(c) TERMINATION OF GRANTS.—No new grants shall be made pursuant to this Act after the expiration of any 3-consecutive-month period during which the national unemployment rate remained below 6 percent for each such month, or after September 30, 1994, whichever first occurs.

SEC. 4. ALLOCATION OF FUNDS; PREFERENCES.

(a) ALLOCATION OF FUNDS.—The Secretary shall allocate funds appropriated pursuant to section 8 of this Act as follows:

(1) INDIAN TRIBES.—Three-quarters of one percent of such funds shall be set aside and shall be expended only for grants for public works projects under this Act to Indian tribes and Alaska Native villages. None of the remainder of such funds shall be expended for such grants to such tribes and villages.

(2) OTHERS.—After the set-aside required by paragraphs (1), (3) and (4) of this subsection, 60 percent of such funds shall be allocated among the States on the basis of the ratio that the number of unemployed persons in each State bears to the total number of unemployed persons in all the States and 40 percent of such funds shall be allocated among those States with an average unemployment rate for the preceding 6-month period in excess of 6 percent on the basis of the relative severity of unemployment in each such State, except that no State shall be allocated less than three-quarters of one percent or more than twelve and one-half percent of such funds for local public works projects within such State, except that in the case of Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, not less than one-half of one percent in the aggregate shall be granted for such projects in all 4 of such territories.

(3) SET-ASIDE.—Not less than 10 percent of each State's allocations shall be set aside and shall be expended only for grants for public work projects under this Act for local units of general government with populations under 10,000.

(4) DEVELOPMENT AND ADMINISTRATION.—Up to three-quarters of one percent of the total grant award will be available for project development and preparation, and for ongoing project administration. This allocation will be available for local units of government defined as nonentitlement under the Housing and Urban Development Community Development Block Grant Program. Such allocation shall not exceed $15,000 for any single grant award.

(b) PREFERENCES.—

(1) LOCAL GOVERNMENT PROJECTS.—In making grants under this Act, the Secretary shall give priority and preference to public works projects of local governments.

(2) LOCALLY ENDORSED PROJECTS.—In making grants under this Act, the Secretary shall also give priority and preference to any public works project requested by a State or by a special purpose unit of local government which is endorsed by a general purpose local government within such State.

(3) SCHOOL DISTRICT PROJECTS.—A project requested by a school district shall be accorded the full priority and preference to public works projects of local governments provided in this subsection.

(4) APPLIED INDUSTRIAL RESEARCH PROJECTS.—A project that creates or adds to an applied research facility at an institution of higher education, and that facility is intended to promote the development of new products and processes, or that the Secretary determines will improve the competitiveness of American industry shall be accorded full priority and preference. For projects under this section, matching funds requirements shall be waived if the company or companies and school involved commit, in the Secretary's determination, to undertake all future equipment and maintenance expenses.

(c) HIGH UNEMPLOYMENT RATES.—

(1) PRIORITY.—In making grants under this Act, for the 12 most recent consecutive months, the average national unemployment rate is equal to or exceeds 6 percent, the Secretary shall (A) expedite and give priority to applications submitted by States or local governments having unemployment rates for the 12 most recent consecutive months in excess of the national unemployment rate, and (B) shall give priority thereafter to applications submitted by States or local governments having average unemployment rates for the 12 most recent consecutive months in excess of 6 percent, but less than the national unemployment rate.

(2) INFORMATION REGARDING UNEMPLOYMENT RATES.—Information regarding unemployment rates may be furnished either by the Federal Government, or by States or local governments, provided the Secretary (A) determines that the unemployment rates furnished by States or local governments are accurate, and (B) shall provide assistance to States or local governments in the calculation of such rates to ensure validity and standardization.

(3) LIMITATION OF APPLICABILITY.—Paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not apply to any States which receives a minimum allocation pursuant to paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this section.

(d) STATE AND LOCAL PRIORITIZATION OF APPLICATIONS.—Whenever a State or local government submits applications for grants under this Act for 2 or more projects, such State or local government shall submit as part of such applications its priority for each such project.

(e) LOCALIZATION OF UNEMPLOYMENT DETERMINATIONS.—The unemployment rate of a local government may, for the purposes of this Act, and upon request of the applicant, be based upon the unemployment rate of any community or neighborhood (defined without regard to political or other subdivisions or boundaries) within the jurisdiction of such local government.

SEC. 5. RULES, REGULATIONS, AND PROCEDURES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall, not later than 30 days after date of enactment of this Act, prescribe those rules, regulations, and procedures (including application forms) necessary to carry out this Act. Such rules, regulations, and procedures shall assure that adequate consideration is given to the relative needs of various sections of the country. The Secretary shall consider among other factors (1) the severity and duration of unemployment in proposed project areas, (2) the income levels and extent of underemployment in proposed project areas, and (3) the extent to which proposed projects will contribute to the reduction of unemployment and future economic growth.

(b) CONSIDERATION OF APPLICATIONS.—The Secretary shall make a final determination with respect to each application for a grant submitted to him under this Act not later than the 60th day after the date the Secretary receives such application.

(c) CONSIDERATION OF CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY UNEMPLOYMENT.—For purposes of this section, in considering the extent of unemployment or underemployment, the Secretary shall consider the amount of unemployment or underemployment in the construction and construction-related industries.

SEC. 6. GENERAL LIMITATIONS.

(a) ACQUISITION OF LAND.—No part of any grant made under section 3 of this Act shall be used for the acquisition of any interest in real property.

(b) MAINTENANCE COSTS.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to authorize the payment of routine scheduled maintenance costs in connection with any projects constructed (in whole or in part) with Federal financial assistance under this Act.

(c) ON-SITE LABOR.—Grants made by the Secretary under this Act shall be made only for projects for which the applicant gives satisfactory assurances, in such manner and form as may be required by the Secretary and in accordance with such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe, that, if funds are available, on-site labor work can begin within 90 days of project approval.

(d) CONTRACTING.

(1) CONTRACTING OUT REQUIRED.—No part of the construction (including demolition and other site preparation activities), renovation, repair, or other improvement of any public works project for which a grant is made under this Act shall be performed directly by any department, agency, or instrumentality of any State or local government.

(2) COMPETITIVE BIDDING.—Construction of each project for which a grant is made under this Act shall be performed by contract awarded by competitive bidding, unless the Secretary shall affirmatively find that, under the circumstances relating to such project, an alternative method is in the public interest.

(3) LOWEST RESPONSIVE BID.—Contracts for the construction of each project for which a grant is made under this Act shall be awarded only on the basis of the lowest responsive bid submitted by a bidder meeting established criteria of responsibility.

(4) ADVERTISING.—No requirement or obligation shall be imposed as a condition precedent to the award of a contract to a bidder for a project for which a grant is made under this Act, or to the Secretary's concurrence in the award of a contract to such bidder, unless such requirement or obligation is otherwise lawful and is specifically set forth in the advertised specifications.

(e) ENVIRONMENTAL SAFEGUARDS.—All local public works projects carried out with Federal financial assistance under this Act shall comply with all relevant Federal, State, and local environmental laws and regulations.

(f) BUY AMERICAN.—If a local public works project carried out with Federal financial assistance under this Act would be eligible for Federal financial assistance under provisions of law other than this act and, under such other provisions of law, would be subject to title III of the Act of March 3, 1933, or similar requirements, such project shall be subject to such title of such Act of March 3, 1933, or similar requirements under the Act in the same manner and to the same extent as such project would be subject to such title of such Act of March 3, 1933, or such similar requirements under such other provisions of law.

(g) MINORITY PARTICIPATION.—If a local public works project carried out with Federal financial assistance under this Act would be eligible for Federal financial assistance under provisions of law other than this Act and, under such other provisions of law, would be subject to any minority participation requirement, such project shall be subject to such requirement under this Act in the same manner and to the same extent as such project would be subject to such requirement under such other provisions of law.

(h) APPLICABILITY OF LAWS REGARDING INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES.—Section 504 and 505 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 and the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 shall apply to local public works projects carried out under this Act.

SEC. 7. PREVAILING RATE OF WAGES.

If a local public works project carried out with Federal financial assistance under this Act would be eligible for Federal financial assistance under provisions of law other than this Act and, under such other provisions of law, would be subject to the Act of March 3, 1931, known as the Davis-Bacon Act (40 U.S.C. 276a-276a-5), or similar requirements, such project shall be subject to such Act in the same manner and to the same extent as such project would be subject to such Act of March 3, 1931, or such similar requirements under such other provisions of law.

SEC. 8. FUNDING.

There is authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000,000 to carry out this Act. Moneys appropriated pursuant to this authorization shall remain available until expended. Any amounts made available under this Act for fiscal year 1992 shall be deemed to be emergency spending under section 251(b)(2)(D) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985.

SEC. 9. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this Act, the following definitions apply:

(1) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Commerce, acting through the Economic Development Administration.

(2) LOCAL GOVERNMENT.—The term "local government" means any city, county, town, parish, or other political subdivision of a State, and any Indian tribe.

(3) PUBLIC WORKS.—The term "public works" includes water and sewer lines, streets and roads, water and sewage treatment plants, port facilities, police and fire stations, detention centers, schools, health facilities, and industrial research or development parks, research facilities at institutions of higher education, and other projects the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

(4) STATE.—The term "State" includes the several States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

By Mr. HATCH:

S. 13. A bill to institute accountability in the Federal regulatory process, establish a program for the systematic selection of regulatory priorities, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

REGULATORY ACCOUNTABILITY ACT OF 1993

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Regulatory Accountability Act of 1993. This legislation is designed to make the Federal regulatory process more accountable and to establish a program for the systematic selection of regulatory priorities.

Jean Baptiste Colbert once said:

The art of taxation consists in so plucking the goose as to obtain the largest amount of feathers with the least amount of hissing.

Well Mr. President, the Government has found a way to pluck the goose by increasing the burdens on its citizens without voting for tax increases: Federal regulation.

Federal regulation is a hidden tax. The costs of compliance and the costs of enforcement are necessarily passed on to American families. For example, if to comply with a new regulation a company has to purchase a new scrubber system for a smokestack at a cost of $2 million, the consumers of products produced by that factory will pay more.

If other regulations force that same company to spend another $4 or $5 million on special packaging and to hire extra staff to comply with the paperwork requirements that document compliance with those regulations, the prices of its goods will rise again to absorb these added costs. Since they do not contribute to the production or distribution of economic goods or services, this additional staff is nonproductive. Of course, if the market in which that company competes cannot bear these extra costs, then the company may even be forced to go out of business.

Not only that, these regulatory costs also steal valuable resources from other sectors of that firm: research and development, upgrading equipment and facilities, and hiring productive staff to produce goods and services.

Mr. President, these are not unrealistic examples. There are countless indicators of costly regulation adversely affecting business, both large and small throughout this Nation. In my home State of Utah, job growth relies heavily on a spirit of entrepreneurship that is reflected in the creation of small businesses statewide. Unfortunately, Federal regulation often hits these small businesses the hardest. Many of these small businesses, for the first few years of existence, operate on a shoestring and make just enough to continue paying their operating costs. Regulation steals these valuable funds for compliance, making business starts more difficult and threatening the ability of small business to succeed.

As I examined the costs and effects of regulation, I went to some people who actually have to live with rules created here in Washington—the people of Utah. I asked business people how regulation affected them, and I received some very clear responses. In addition, I have also been contacted by elected officials in Utah's small towns who are frustrated with a Federal Government that not only interferes in local decisionmaking, but also provides no means to pay for compliance with the regulations the Federal Government mandates.

For example, I received a letter from Mr. Don Gallent, the president and chief executive officer, and Mrs. Loretta Gallent, chairman, of Digitran Simulation Systems. Mrs. Gallent founded this company and, together with her husband, operates an international organization from Logan, UT, that successfully markets products around the world.

They have told me that the effects of Government regulation on American business are many. While some of these regulations may serve to help a few selected industries, by and large, the effect on most businesses is negative. When the hand of Government weighs heavily upon us, it stifles our ability to create, to grow, and, indeed, to even exist.

Mr. President, I believe that Mr. Frank Shaw, manufacturing services manager of National Semiconductor of West Jordan, UT, has hit the issue directly on target when he states:

National Semiconductor fully supports the intent of all health, safety, environment, and employment regulations. These requirements establish a sound foundation for good business policies. However, just as our manufacturing process must continually be improved for us to remain competitive in a world marketplace, the procedures and cost of regulation compliance must also be improved and simplified.

Mr. President, we continue to regulate new burdens on top of our businesses, regardless of the costs or number of jobs lost. Yet, ironically, we expect these same businesses to get back on their feet and produce a sustained economic recovery.

Mr. President, this is not only a small business problem, it is also affecting our local governments. Let me share a few of the experiences of Utah's small towns.

Stockton, UT, has a population of approximately 440. These Utahns work hard, and they don't have a lot of money to spare. This small town has been trying to come to grips with the Americans with Disabilities Act and the costs to comply with the regulations.

Mayor Elden Sandino writes:

We support these regulations in theory and are willing to do what we can to abide by them. Unfortunately, like most small towns in the State of Utah, we are very limited in our funds and feel if these regulations are to be imposed on us, some kind of federal or state funding or grants also need to be addressed.

Mr. President, regulations are a way of imposing the costs of Governments' priorities on others. Who is going to provide the funds for remodeling public buildings in Stockton and other small Utah towns? Additionally, how are very small businesses located in these areas going to find the funds to pay for compliance with regulations?

Two other small towns in Utah, Fountain Green and Enoch, are struggling to decide who is going to pay for provisions of the Clean Water Act that would require them to install expensive sewer systems. Fountain Green has discovered that, to satisfy the regulations implementing this statute, the town would have to borrow $2.1 million to install a new sewer system for 250 users. They have concluded that they would have to charge each resident $35 per month for 20 years just to pay back the loan. This does not include the cost of operating the facility and the residents' usual water bills. The town of Enoch would be forced to charge each resident $54.67 per month over a 20-year period on a $6.5 million loan for its new sewer system.

Mr. President, these amounts may not seem large to those who deal in billions of dollars every day, but to the residents of rural Utah, these costs are tremendous. New regulation on top of new regulation is burdening these Utahns beyond belief, and they want to know why. They, and others like them across the Nation, want to be sure the benefits of a new regulation will justify its cost.

Mr. President, I agree that there are benefits to certain regulations. I am not arguing that all regulations are bad or unnecessary. Regulation, used properly, is a positive tool that can provide the American people with some protection against the bad actors in our society.

But, there are some regulations that have not been reviewed in decades. Some regulations have become inflexible and inefficient given rapid changes in the American economy, the development of new technologies, and increased competition in the global marketplace. Instead of regulating more, instead of filling out additional forms and conducting more and more audits, it is time for us to regulate smarter.

THE HIDDEN TAX

Mr. President, how many of us truly realize the staggering burden the hidden tax of regulation is placing on each and every American household? How many of us truly comprehend what the cost of Government regulation is and how these costs affect our economy?

In a recently published report entitled "The Costs of Federal Regulation," Professor Thomas Hopkins of the Rochester Institute of Technology provides some very startling information regarding the overall cost of Government regulation. He estimates that currently the United States spends over $400 billion each year on the entire spectrum of Government regulation and compliance with promulgated rules. Professor Hopkins concludes that, given the current rate of growth, regulatory costs could easily balloon to over $600 billion per year by the year 2000. These staggering amounts do not even include State and local regulation. The average American household picks up this tab through higher prices, decreased product selection, increased paperwork, lost time, job loss, and other costs of compliance.

Mr. President, this cost does not show up on any Government ledgers. It does not appear in any withholding category on a paycheck stub. But in all, according to Professor Hopkins, this hidden tax in 1988 accounted for over $4,100 per household and has been on the rise ever since. By comparison, the average Federal tax burden for an American family during that same time was under $4,000, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics Consumer Expenditure Survey, 1988-89.

Mr. President, there are some on both sides of the aisle who are shaking their heads in disbelief. I did the same thing when I first saw these figures. But report after report supports the fact that regulatory costs are both substantial and increasing. Esteemed economists such as Prof. Murray Weidenbaum, of Washington University in St. Louis and former Chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers from 1981-82; Dr. Ronald Utt, vice president, of the National Chamber Foundation; Robert Hahn, adjunct professor, Carnegie Mellon University; and John A. Hird, assistant professor of political science and research associate, University of Massachusetts have all concluded studies that build on each others' work and support this startling picture. Imagine, over $400 billion spent in complying with Federal regulation.

The economic impact of most regulations is never studied because they are considered relatively minor. By minor, I mean that the agency estimates the cost of implementing the regulation to be under $100 million. However, the cumulative effect of these so-called minor regulations can be staggering. For example, in the October 1991 edition of the Unified Agenda of Federal Regulations only 102 of 4,863 regulatory entries had a regulatory impact analysis either finished or in the process of completion. How much do the other 4,761 regulations cost?

Mr. President, add up the cost of 10, 20, 50, or 100 of these regulations at just $100 million apiece, and you end up with a monstrous burden. For example, implementation of new regulations in just one area are expected to significantly increase compliance costs in 1992. Prof. Robert Hahn has estimated that, in 1992 alone, the compliance costs associated with environmental regulation will increase by $70.5 billion over 1991 costs.

Mr. President, in the Regulatory Program of the U.S. Government, April 1991 through March 1992, the Office of Management and Budget outlines general guidelines each agency should apply to pending regulations so that new rules will be the most beneficial and the most efficient. This report also stresses the need for accountability. While these guidelines are admirable and look good on paper, they are only guidelines and as such, difficult to enforce.

Government must take responsibility for this hidden tax of regulation. It is time to be honest with the American people. We simply cannot continue to turn our heads and pretend this burden does not exist. It does.

The level of public interest in regulatory policy was confirmed in a recent poll compiled by Penn & Schoen Associates, Inc., on March 30, 1992, just after President Bush's 90-day moratorium on new regulations was announced. When asked whether or not the country currently has a lot of unnecessary and costly regulation, 83 percent answered yes.

When asked if Congress and agencies adequately considered the impact of regulations on jobs, 71 percent said no.

Another question revealed very interesting results. When asked if Congress and Federal agencies currently adequately consider how much the regulations will cost consumers, 82 percent answered no.

Obviously, Mr. President, shifting the public policy agenda from direct spending—which we cannot afford—to regulatory requirements—so we can get business and individuals to pick up the tab—is not fooling anyone.

THE REGULATORY ACCOUNTABILITY ACT OF 1993

For these reasons, Mr. President, I am introducing the Regulatory Accountability Act of 1993.

It is time to take control of this skyrocketing burden. This is especially important during this period of economic recovery. It should be the task of this Congress, starting with this Senate, to take responsibility for setting guidelines. And, we must force each promulgating agency to account for the entire impact of a pending regulation. We must make certain that the American people receive the greatest benefit in the most cost-effective and efficient manner.

This legislation places a 3-year cap on the overall costs of regulation. Under this cap, in order for a new regulation to go into effect, the agency would be required to offset any new costs by equal regulatory savings achieved through revoking or revising existing regulations, trimming and streamlining the paperwork burden, or by any other regulatory offsets. After a regulation has undergone this offsetting process, it may then be promulgated. During this time, agencies promulgating new rules would be required to study the entire cost of compliance and outline effective alternative approaches.

Nothing in this legislation would prohibit an agency from issuing a new rule. If the overall cap has been reached, however, and unless the President declares that the rule is needed to address an emergency, before a new regulation could be issued the agency would have to offset the cost of the new rule by revoking or reversing already existing rules.

The revisions and revocations to existing regulations could be on a rule issued by that agency or by another agency of the Federal Government. The President would be responsible for coordinating these interagency offsets. If the President believes the rule cannot wait to be implemented, and declares an emergency need for the rule, the requirement to offset the costs could be delayed until the necessary research and coordinating action could be considered. However, the President would be required to set a deadline for compliance with the statute.

Now, what would this legislation mean for future regulatory policy?

Essentially this: New regulations must be prioritized. Agencies will only promulgate the most important new rules. This bill will promote more effective and efficient regulation and accountability.

The act would sunset in 3 years. This period will give American enterprise the opportunity to grow without an increasing regulatory burden. Resources that otherwise would be used in complying with new regulations would be available for research and development, new jobs, and investments in plan and equipment.

Also, this act will provide relief to the American people—a chance to see exactly what their hard-earned money is paying for before some unseen regulatory hand in Washington digs into their pockets again.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, I believe a leaner, more effective regulatory policy will grow from this legislation. Nothing in this act would prohibit the promulgation of new, necessary protections. Rather, we are simply giving the American people the ability to understand what they are receiving for their hard-earned money and the power to control the hidden tax they are being forced to pay. Mr. President, this legislation will ensure that the hidden tax is not an irresponsible tax.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill; the letters I have received from Mr. and Mrs. Gallant, Mayor Sandino, and Prof. Thomas Hopkins, and an article by Robert Genetski from the Wall Street Journal of February 19, 1992, be inserted in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 13

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Regulatory Accountability Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS AND STATEMENT OF PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds and declares that—

(1) the overall cost of Federal regulation in the United States has risen to well over $400,000,000,000 per year;

(2) this regulatory burden is paid by individual citizens and their families in the form of a "hidden tax" because intermediaries have no option that do not pass these expenditures to individuals;

(3) the most recent data reveals that the "hidden tax" paid by the citizens of this Nation now exceeds $4,100 annually for each household;

(4) left unchecked, this "hidden tax" will increase by 50 percent between now and the year 2000; and

(5) it is in the best interests of the American people to have the Federal Government devise a systematic way to account for the new regulatory costs that taxpayers are forced to absorb and to have this financial burden better controlled.

(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this Act to establish that each agency shall, as a mandatory requirement for the issuance of—

(1) any proposed regulation—

(A) thoroughly assess and document the anticipated benefits, reasonable alternative approaches, and all foreseeable compliance costs of each approach; and

(B) assess, and include in all proposed regulatory actions, a range of possible offsets for the costs; and

(2) any final regulation—

(A) have selected the most cost-effective alternative; and

(B) for a period of 3 years following enactment, have fully offset all foreseeable costs through revocation or revision of one or more existing regulations.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this Act—

(1) the term "agency" has the same meaning given such term in section 3502(1) of title 44, United States Code, excluding those agencies specified in section 3502(10) of title 44, United States Code; and

(2) the term "regulation" or "rule" means any agency statement of general applicability and future effect designed to implement, interpret, or prescribe law or policy or describing the procedure or practice requirements of an agency, but does not include—

(A) administrative actions governed by the provisions of sections 556 and 557 of title 5, United States Code;

(B) regulations issued with respect to a military or foreign affairs function of the United States; or

(C) regulations related to agency organization, management, or personnel.

SEC. 4. MANDATORY REQUIREMENT FOR THE ISSUANCE OF NEW REGULATIONS.

In taking any regulatory action, each agency shall strictly adhere to the following requirements:

(1) Administrative regulatory decisions shall be based on substantial evidence on the public record documenting—

(A) the ability of an action to result in specific, reasonably anticipated benefits;

(B) all alternative regulatory approaches, including performance-based approaches, that will result in the benefits documented under subparagraph (A); and

(C) all foreseeable costs that can reasonably be expected to flow, directly or incidentally, from each approach documented under subparagraph (B).

(2) No final regulatory actions may be taken unless the specific benefits resulting from a specific regulatory approach documented under paragraph (1) clearly outweigh the costs documented under paragraph (1).

(3) Agencies shall—

(A) for all proposed new regulatory actions that will generate any cost, propose a range of possible revisions to, or revocation of, one or more existing regulations, that can reasonably be expected to fully offset the reasonably anticipated costs of such proposed regulatory action; and

(B) fully offset the costs documented under paragraph (1) through revision to, or revocation of, existing Federal regulation.

SEC. 5. EXEMPTION.

The requirements of section 4(3) shall not apply in the case of regulatory actions for which the President includes in the Federal Register, accompanying the regulatory action, a statement of waiver that fully outlines the reasons and needs for waiving the requirements of section 4(3) because of emergency need for such specific regulatory action and includes a timetable for satisfying the requirements of section 4 at the earliest possible date thereafter.

SEC. 6. INDEPENDENT EVALUATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Three years following the date of enactment of this Act, the President shall provide for independent evaluation of the regulatory process and the effect of regulations on the different areas of the economy, including—

(1) business startups and viability;

(2) employment, including job creation, compensation, and employment of foreign nationals by United States firms;

(3) international trade and competitiveness with foreign entities;

(4) research and development;

(5) impact on State and local governments; and

(6) direct Federal spending for enforcement of regulations.

(b) STUDY FOCUS.—The evaluation required by this section shall also include a study of—

(1) the effect of the regulatory cost cap imposed by this Act;

(2) the methodologies used by regulatory agencies to estimate the cost of a rule or regulation; and

(3) the use of alternative regulatory approaches described in section 4(1)(B).

(c) OMB.—The Office of Management and Budget shall carry out the provisions of this section.

(d) FUNDING.—Notwithstanding section 1346 of title 31, United States Code, the President is authorized to transfer up to $50,000 from the funds available to any agency for administrative purposes to the Office of Management and Budget for the purpose of carrying out this section.

SEC. 7. EFFECTIVE DATE; SUNSET PROVISION.

(a) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The provisions of this Act shall take effect upon the date of enactment of this Act, except that the effective date for regulations or rules promulgated pursuant to a law enacted after the date that is 2 years before the date of enactment of this Act and not later than the date of enactment of this Act shall be 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) SUNSET.—The requirements of section 4(3) shall cease to have effect on the date that is 3 years following the date of enactment of this Act.

DIGITRAN SIMULATION SYSTEMS,

Logan, UT, May 28, 1992.

HON. ORRIN G. HATCH,

U.S. Senator, Russell Senate Office Bldg., Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR HATCH: The effects of government regulation on American businesses are many. While some of these regulations may serve to help a few select industries, by and large, the effect on most businesses is negative. When the hand of government weighs heavily upon us, it stifles our ability to create, to grow, and, indeed, to even exist.

A good example of this is an incident which recently took place involving our company. Last year, Digitran undertook the necessary procedures to be listed on the National Association of Security Dealers Automated Quotation System (NASDAQ). What should have been a relatively easy listing procedure turned into a nightmare when we learned that the Securities and Exchange Commission, acting under the mandate of the Penny Stock Reform Act of 1990, had changed the listing rules.

Suddenly we were required to have between two and five million dollars in net tangible assets and a five dollar per share stock price. Under these new regulations, if our stock ever fell below that $5 per share price, our company and any broker dealing with our stock would be penalized severely. These regulations have a rippling effect of great consequence. To begin with, no broker in his right mind would touch a company's stock that couldn't be maintained above five dollars. This in turn would slam the door on capital formation. Without capital, the company would be unable to grow, growth necessary to meet the five dollar per share price. Without capital and without growth, the company would die.

As the Creator of most new jobs and economic prosperity in this country, small business needs a friend in government. The current adversarial relationship between business and government is detrimental to the very growth for which both are seeking.

The story is told of a new car traveling the backroads of Brazil in the early part of this century. This car with its large body and powerful engine took the hills and valleys of the country with ease until it encountered a cloud of migratory butterflies. One by one the tiny butterflies were pressed against the radiator of the car until no more air could be circulated, the engine overheated, the car stopped.

Like this car, American business has been tied down with excessive rules and regulations which have effectively stifled the spirit of the free enterprise system. I find it ironic that the very country we criticize most in fits of economic jealousy, is known by the term of Japan Inc. Japan's government-business relationship is one of friendship and co-operation. While its foreign trade practices may be irritating and frustrating, there is no question as to the value Japan places on her businesses. No less frustrating is the fact that members of Congress will verbally flail Japan one day and the next day enact dozens more of business regulations which only make American business weaker and less competitive.

We look to you and the other members of Congress for relief of this situation. America's competitiveness problem will not be fixed by turning to the workplace, the schools, or even Japan. It will have to be resolved in the United States Congress.

Sincerely,

DON GALLENT,
President and CEO.
LORETTA GALLENT,
Chairman.

TOWN OF STOCKTON,
Stockton, UT, Oct. 25, 1991.

Re ADA regulations.

Senator ORRIN G. HATCH,
125 South State Street, Room 3438, Salt Lake City, UT.

DEAR SENATOR HATCH: We recently received a copy of the ADA Regulations from the League of Cities and Towns and would like to address some of our concerns.

We support these regulations in theory and are willing to do what we can to abide by them. Unfortunately, like most small towns in the State of Utah, we are very limited in our funds and feel if these regulations are to be imposed upon us, some kind of Federal or State funding or grant also needs to be addressed.

Our building does have a ramp access in the rear, however our restrooms are down stairs. Our building used to be an elementary school and the stairs and stalls in the restrooms are rather small. Making these facilities handicap accessible would be a major undertaking and very costly. The Town Board has discussed the matter and has decided it would be feasible to rent a handicap accessible portable toilet for times when many people would be using the building (such as elections) but don't know if this would be an acceptable solution.

We would appreciate these concerns being addressed for small towns in Utah.

Respectively,

ELDEN SANDINO,
Mayor.

ROCHESTER INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY,
Rochester, NY, Apr. 28, 1992.

Senator ORRIN G. HATCH,
Committee on Labor and Human Resources,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR HATCH: Thank you for the opportunity to review draft legislation entitled "Regulatory Accountability Act of 1992."

It is clear to me that regulatory costs are not now adequately monitored and controlled. In my judgment, the bill directly and effectively addresses this troublesome weakness in our current regulatory system. I believe it warrants the Senate's serious consideration.

Sincerely,

THOMAS D. HOPKINS,
Arthur J. Gosnell
Professor of Economics.

[From the Wall Street Journal, Feb. 19, 1992]

THE TRUE COST OF GOVERNMENT

(By Robert Genetski)

President Bush showed he had some understanding of problems of the economy when he announced his 90-day freeze on regulation in the State of the Union address. But it is clear that Mr. Bush hasn't grasped the full extent to which regulation has added to the burden that taxes impose on the economy. Regulation's effect on the economy can be every bit as damaging as the effect of taxes. Even though Americans have not seen it in their pay stubs, they have borne the equivalent of growing tax burdens. And tax burdens have climbed as dramatically during his watch as they have under any other President.

The table shows the combined tax and regulatory burden that has been placed on American businesses and workers in recent years. The numbers refer only to increases over and above whatever was imposed the previous year. For example, a new tax of $25 billion in year one and nothing thereafter. Only if the tax is increased above its initial level is the increase presented in a subsequent year.

HIDE BURDEN

In a few cases, Congress and the administration have decided to hide the true burden of government programs by ordering businesses to spend the necessary money to comply with certain edicts. But ordering companies to spend $25 billion to fulfill a public need does not mean that the public has avoided a $25 billion tax. Businesses today earn only 4 cents in profit for every dollar of sales. When a businessman receives the bill for a mandated benefit, the business must reorganize its operations in order to survive. This often means layoffs, plants closing and other cost-cutting moves. Companies that are not able to cut cost sufficiently to pay for the additional burdens are forced to close entirely.

The Clean Air Act and the Americans with Disabilities Act represent two of the largest hidden tax burdens to hit the economy in 1991 and 1992. In both of these cases, the administration and Congress appear to have seriously underestimated the cost of compliance with these acts. Both of these acts are worded so vaguely that the regulatory bodies have raised the cost of compliance far above the official figures. The numbers presented in the accompanying table are conservative estimates.

The official estimate for complying with the Clean Air Act was put at roughly $25 billion per year. Nongovernmental estimates of the cost of complying with the act range as high as $100 billion per year. The table shows a compromise compliance cost of $25 billion in new compliance expenditures for 1991 and an additional $25 billion for 1992.

It appears too that the cost of complying with the Americans with Disabilities Act will be staggering. The disabilities act was supposed to cost $2 billion annually, but depending on how aggressively it is implemented, the cost of compliance could easily amount to at least $20 billion a year for the next five years.

Based on an early sample of plans to alter office buildings to comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act, the cost of compliance appears to be close to $5 per square foot. This figure does not take into account all possible modifications, but just those that are deemed "reasonable."

There are an estimated 180,000 square feet in an average office building. This places the cost of compliance at almost $1 million per building. There are an estimated nine billion square feet of office space in the nation, bringing the total compliance cost nationwide to $45 billion. And that's just for office space.

The American Hospital Association, a hospital lobby, estimates that its members will have to spend $20 billion and counting—and that's before considering the costs for equipping trains, buses, restaurants, rental cars and public facilities.

In addition to the costs of complying with these mandates, there are legal and administrative costs to consider. In the case of the Americans with Disabilities Act vague terminology virtually assures billions of dollars per year in legal expenses. No attempt was made to estimate these legal and administrative expenses.

None of these calculations should be taken to suggest that it is somehow wrong or bad to spend money for cleaner air or to help the disabled. The list of worthy causes has no real limits. Unfortunately, there are definite limits to the amount by which tax and regulatory burdens can be raised without having a serious economic impact. The present economic situation strongly suggests that the push toward higher tax and regulatory burdens has had much greater costs in terms of lost jobs and weaker productivity than most people had assumed.

Recent productivity trends clearly support the sense that something is wrong. But the problem is not the Americans are "lazy" as a Japanese politician has recently been quoted as suggesting. Part of the recent weakness in productivity can be attributed to the recession. Productivity tends to increase more slowly than normal during recessions and faster than normal during recoveries.

Still, adjustments can be made for cyclical developments. Judging from past experience, the magnitude of the current recession should have caused actual productivity to fall approximately 2% below a level consistent with a fully employed economy. After making such an adjustment, we see that it becomes readily apparent that U.S. cyclically adjusted productivity has deteriorated dramatically in recent years. The record of what we can call underlying productivity is convincing support for the widespread sense that America's economic problems are more fundamental than cyclical.

Each society has its fair share of workers and loafers. The extent to which those workers improve their productivity depends far more on the overall economic environment in which they operate than on their inherent intelligence or initiative. Tax burdens are an important determinant of that environment.

During the period from the late 1970's to 1981, productivity growth in the U.S. deteriorated dramatically as tax burdens rose. With the tax cuts of 1982-84, U.S. productivity growth returned to its long-term average. Productivity rose by approximately 1.5% per year in the mid-1980's, and the nation experienced its longest peacetime expansion. More recently, the resumption of higher traditional and hidden tax burdens has again brought about a fundamental deterioration in the nation's productivity trend and a renewed sense of economic malaise.

After showing the rest of the world how lower tax rates could boost productivity and living standards, the U.S. regressed. Fortunately, the U.S. economy can revive. Layoffs can be brought to an end and productivity growth restored.

PAINFUL MEASURES

Many politicians have maintained that such a revival would mean painful measures. In a sense, they are right. A true revival would involve major cuts in traditional and hidden taxes to offset the increased burdens that have occurred. This, of course, would not be painful for most workers and businesses; they would keep more of their income. But it would be painful for politicians and, in some cases, those who benefit from regulation, such as the handicapped. Cuts in traditional taxes or in regulation would mean that politicians would be forced to recognize that there are effective limits to what public policy can accomplish.

In a democracy, the public seldom tolerates poor economic performance for very long. For those politicians who fail to recognize the limits to public policy, there will eventually be political costs as well.

By Mr. HATCH (for himself and Mr. BENNETT):

S. 14. A bill to amend the amount of grants received under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

EDUCATIONAL EQUITY ACT OF 1993

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, there is not one of us in this body who is not concerned about education. Republican or Democrat, there is not one of us who does not want to help our State and local governments cope with the mounting demand for more rigorous curricula, new and expanded equipment and facilities, and more specialized and experienced teachers.

One of the things we can do at the Federal level to help improve our schools is to ensure fairness in the distribution of scarce Federal resources. Today, I am reintroducing the Educational Equity Act to do precisely that. Congressman JIM HANSEN, the dean of Utah's delegation in the House of Representatives, will sponsor an identical bill in the House.

Under current law, the dominant factor in the chapter 1 program formula is State per pupil expenditure. States that can afford to spend more money per pupil receive a greater share of the chapter 1 money than States that spend less. This means that a poor child living in a wealthy State is valued more highly in terms of chapter 1 funds than the same poor child if he or she lived in a poorer State. Despite the floors and ceilings currently built into the chapter 1 formula, there are still wide disparities. Even after the 1990 census data is taken into account, an estimated 28 States would benefit from this legislation.

The bill I am introducing today, S. 14, would simply change the chapter 1 formula so that allocations are based on the national per pupil expenditure. This means that poor children will be treated the same under this program regardless of whether they live in Utah or Massachusetts, Mississippi, or Connecticut. The problem of inequality in the distribution of Federal funds was made especially clear in the recent report prepared for the Department of Education by Stephen M. Barro, "The Distribution of Federal Elementary-Secondary Education Grants Among the States."

Some may argue that this bill would simply reward States for not spending their own resources on education. In response, I would make two points. First, the Federal Government supplies only about 7 percent of all education funding. States and local governments are already bearing the lion's share of the costs of educating our children. Second, the current chapter 1 formula does not measure tax effort. In that category, Utah, for example, ranks 10th in the Nation.

And, Mr. President, let me emphasize that I am not proposing to rob from the rich to give to the poor. S. 14 does not require that States with higher per capita incomes receive less in chapter 1 funds per eligible student than any other State. On the contrary, my legislation, the Educational Equity Act, would treat each eligible child the same regardless of whether the child lived in Utah or Maryland. It's treating Johnny and Mary who live in Arkansas the same as Johnny and Mary who live in Michigan.

The inherent unfairness—and inefficiency—of the current chapter 1 formula has also been compounded over the years because it has been used to allocate funds for a number of other education programs—some of which do not even have low-income children as their primary target.

If chapter 1 is a program to help States and local school districts serve educationally/economically disadvantaged children, it makes no sense to me that wealthier States get a disproportionate share of the funds. It's not pork, and it's not partisan. It's just good education policy.

Mr. President, I am proud of what my State has been able to accomplish in education. Utahns are above the national average in years of schooling completed. Our school administration costs are among the lowest in the Nation. Utah citizens make an above average contribution to education through their taxes. Utah is 50th in the Nation of Federal education aid despite being 10th in the Nation in total tax effort. And, Utah has the highest percentage of students who pass advanced placement exams.

The Educational Equity Act will, however, provide equal treatment for educationally/economically disadvantaged children in all States so that Utah and 27 other States can better address continuing educational needs. While many of our States have been able to make do with less than their fair share, it is time to rectify this longstanding imbalance in the chapter 1 formula.

I am very pleased to have the support of the Utah State Office of Education for this important bill, and I ask unanimous consent that this letter be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

I urge all Senators to join me as a cosponsor of this important education legislation.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of S. 14 be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 14

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Educational Equity Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. AMOUNT OF GRANTS.

The Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 2701 et seq.) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A) of section 1005(a)(2), by striking the second sentence and inserting "The amount determined under this sentence shall be the average per pupil expenditure in the United States."; and

(2) in each of sections 1201(b), 1221(c), and 1241(b), by striking "in the State (or (A) in the case where the average per pupil expenditure in the State is less than 80 percent of the average per pupil expenditure in the United States, of 80 percent of the average per pupil expenditure in the United States, or (B) in the case where the average per pupil expenditure in the State is more than 120 percent of the average per pupil expenditure in the United States, of 120 percent of average per pupil expenditure in the United States)" and inserting "in the United States".

THE UTAH STATE OFFICE OF EDUCATION.

Salt Lake City UT, January 20, 1993.

Hon. ORRIN G. HATCH,
U.S. Senator, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR HATCH: We understand that you will soon be introducing legislation in the Senate which will focus on revising the funding formula currently in place for Chapter 1 of Title I under Public Law 100-297. As you well know, the current formula makes use of state per pupil expenditure (PPE) amounts rather than utilizing the national average per pupil expenditure. This approach has resulted in poorer states receiving less funding than those with greater financial resources, although the avowed purpose of Chapter 1 is to provide additional educational assistance to children of poverty.

The change which you are suggesting, that of revising the formula to utilize the national average per pupil expenditure, will be a significant move toward providing equitable educational opportunity for all children of poverty. Regardless of how poor a particular state may be, the formula change which you are proposing will generate equal per pupil amounts of funding for all Chapter 1 students in all states. No longer will the students in poorer states be faced with the double jeopardy of low state per public expenditures and low Chapter 1 federal funding allocations. Your proposed formula revision will truly provide equitable support for all Chapter 1 students and should result in significant educational benefits.

Please know that Utah educators appreciate and applaud the leadership you are taking with this important issue. We wish you every success in securing passage of this critical legislation.

Sincerely,

SCOTT W. BEAN,
State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

S. 15. A bill to establish a Commission on Government Reform.

REINVENTING GOVERNMENT ACT

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, yesterday, in his inaugural address, President Clinton talked about the vision and courage to reinvent America. President Clinton, this is an answer to your call. I rise today to introduce legislation aimed at fundamental reform of the organization and operations of the Federal Government.

If the recent election was about anything, it was about change. The American people are demanding that the Government be more responsive to their needs and more efficient in its missions. And, frankly, the people are right. The Federal Government plays a tremendous role in our lives. Yet whenever we try to accomplish something, the number of agencies one must go through, the bureaucratic struggles one must engage in, the regulations and redtape one must conquer, are enough to discourage even the most courageous among us. This must change if America is to change.

The American people are demanding a Government that is responsive, efficient, capable of completing the mission it has been given. In addition, the Federal Government must become more responsive to making our Nation economically competitive. While the Government plays a fundamental role in our lives and the Nation's business, its structure is based on the outdated model of the 1930's, 1940's, and 1950's. President Clinton's inaugural sounded this same theme:

Let us resolve to make our government a place for what Franklin Roosevelt called "bold, persistent experimentation," a government for the tomorrows, not our yesterdays.

If we are to reinvent America, Mr. President, we must reinvent government.

We need to reform the structure and operations of our Government. The American people are yearning for a government that works. I find it very troubling to have the Comptroller General of the United States, Charles Bowsher, recently tell the Committee on Governmental Affairs that there are practically no programs, no agencies, no departments that he can say are well run.

That is why I am introducing legislation to establish a Presidential Commission on Government Reform.

We all know that a new President comes in with the best of intentions, but the President has so many matters before him. Internationally, this new President is going to have his plate full on just that alone. But we must look into bringing this Government into the 21st century. That is why establishing a Presidential Commission on Government Reform is so necessary.

During the confirmation hearing for Congressman Leon Panetta, the President Clinton's designee to be the new Director of the Office of Management and Budget, I asked him whether he would support such an approach. He responded that:

I think you have to do it. I think you do need to have a Commission do it, because, frankly, the problem is it has to be done in a comprehensive fashion. And if you just try to nit-pick away at this, you will never get anywhere. You will run into jurisdictional problems in the Congress on both sides * * * I do think it is essential that we do that. We have not moved into the 21st century yet in terms of our structure of government.

I could not agree with the new Director of OMB more, and I look forward to working with him during this session to see this legislation enacted.

We need to create a new government structure that is much less bureaucratic and more responsive in its provision of daily services to the public. From environmental laws to workplace safety to the regulation of the financial industry, the government is involved in almost every aspect of American business and trade. Instead of an impediment to being competitive, the Government must employ policies which promote competitiveness. The Government must also be able to respond quickly to needs of new business. In formulating such a Commission, I am not suggesting that we weaken laws which help to achieve cleaner air, safer workplaces, and stable financial markets. I am simply proposing that whatever role we mandate for government, that it be performed efficiently and effectively.

With this goal in mind, I am introducing the Reinventing Government Act, which would establish a nine-member Commission on Government Reform. The bipartisan Presidential Commission would develop up to five major pieces of legislation restructuring the executive branch and overhauling personnel systems. Those proposals approved by the President would be voted on, unamended, by Congress. Unless disapproved by both Houses, they would go into effect. This legislative mechanism is similar to that recently used to close military bases and may be the only way we can hope to achieve real action on these politically difficult issues.

The legislation mandates the Commission to propose ways to consolidate and streamline agencies and programs, to reduce the size of the Federal workforce through attrition, and to sunset programs every 5 years.

The Commission would recommend reforms to personnel and management systems which promote personal accountability, maximize productivity, and reward excellence. It also would recommend ways to consolidate the nearly 600 separate grant programs to State and local governments, and to establish criteria for awarding the grants on the basis of performance.

Mr. President, I want to give this new Commission the authority to reorganize the executive branch and to reform the Civil Service System. Government needs to be less costly and more results-oriented. We need to eliminate obsolete programs, unnecessary offices, and overlapping responsibilities. We need more personal accountability and pay-for-performance. Mr. President, this legislation would help to achieve all of these goals.

This Nation is challenged by an increasingly complex set of economic and social problems in the period since World War II. The complicated, seemingly intractable nature of these problems has spawned a host of public sector responses. New agencies, new programs and a vast array of regulatory mandates are evidence of this governmental response.

But as government has tried to grapple with the tough problems, the role of government in our lives has expanded immensely, governmental expenditure levels have risen almost exponentially, and the institutional relationships within government have taken on the complexity of the very problems that government seeks to address. It is no secret to me or to the American people that governmental performance rarely lives up to its promise.

The Commission on Government Reform provides the means for us to step back and examine the broad sweep of how our Government is structured and how it operates. The recommendations produced by the Commission will lay the groundwork for the structural and managerial changes so badly needed in government today.

We have already begun such a process aimed at reforming Congress: The Joint Committee on Organization of Congress, which is due to report on the operations of Congress and recommend ways to make Congress more efficient. Now a similar examination of the executive branch is needed. Its departments and agencies need to be restructured, consolidated, and streamlined. The size of government reduced through attrition, while we take advantage of the technological progress which will take us into the 21st century.

Mr. President, the Commission would consider such ideas as a major restructuring of the Federal Government to make it more efficient and responsive to the needs of the public. Of equal importance, the legislation provides a strategy for carrying through with the implementation of the recommended changes. Like the Base Closure and Realignment Commission, the recommendations of this Commission will have real teeth. I believe this mechanism has worked well for the Base Commission, and I believe it can work well here.

It is important to emphasize that the Commission will be strictly bipartisan in nature. The Commission will be comprised of nine members, appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. The members of the Commission will be selected by the President after consultation with congressional leaders. It will not be subject to the influence of one political party or another, or to any particular philosophical bias other than the one based upon effective public service delivery at a minimal cost.

The Commission on Government Reform will provide the independent and objective review we need to improve Government service and efficiency. It will encourage action on the common-sense governmental reforms that so often receive inadequate attention. And it will break the strangle hold of special interests which has prevented Congress from reforming those Government agencies and services in most need of change.

In his inaugural, President Clinton sounded the trumpet of change: "Thomas Jefferson believed that to preserve the very foundations of our Nation, we would need dramatic change from time to time. Well, my fellow citizens, this is our time. Let us embrace it." President Clinton pledged his efforts to America renewal. Government reform will be an essential part of America's renewal. I pledge my efforts for that renewal, and look forward to working with the new President to see these changes take effect.

I ask unanimous consent that a section-by-section analysis and the text of the legislation be included in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 15

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE AND FINDINGS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Reinventing Government Act".

(b) FINDINGS.—

The Congress finds that the American people face a crisis of confidence in the Federal Government that cannot be remedied without dramatic and fundamental reform. Recent polls indicate that an all-time low of only 17 percent of the public approves of Congress, that 78 percent are dissatisfied or angry about the Federal Government, and that Americans think an average of 48 cents out of every dollar in Federal taxes is wasted. While the American people are demanding more performance from their Government for less money, Congress and the executive branch still debate the same old options of fewer services or higher taxes.

The Federal Government has many talented and hardworking employees whose effectiveness is hindered by existing organizations and operations. Such organizations have too often become inefficient and have structures and missions not reflecting current domestic and international priorities. These organizations were developed during the industrial era and have large, centralized bureaucracies, a preoccupation with rules and regulations, and a hierarchical chain of command. Such governmental organizations are so obsessed with regulating processes and procedures that they have ignored the outcomes of their programs.

Unlike the Federal Government, American corporations have spent the last decade making revolutionary changes by streamlining their organizations, decentralizing authority, flattening hierarchies, focusing on quality, and emphasizing responsiveness to the customer. State and local governments have also begun to apply those same principles of post-industrial organization and uses of technology in successful efforts aimed at reinventing government. There is now a crucial need for a serious examination of how the Federal Government might apply such organizational and operational reforms to its own institutions.

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act—

(1) "Commission" means the Commission on Government Reform established by section 3.

(2) "executive entities" includes all Federal departments, independent agencies, Government-sponsored enterprises, and Government corporations.

SEC. 3. THE COMMISSION.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established an independent commission to be known as the "Commission on Government Reform".

(b) DUTIES.—The Commission shall carry out the duties specified for it in this Act.

(c) APPOINTMENT.—(1) The Commission shall be bipartisan, composed of 9 members appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, of whom there must be at least 4 each from the two major political parties.

(2) The President shall transmit to the Senate the nominations for the appointment to the Commission not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(3) In selecting nominees for appointment to the Commission, the President shall consult with—

(A) the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

(B) the majority leader of the Senate;

(C) the minority leader of the House of Representatives; and

(D) the minority leader of the Senate.

(4) When the President submits to the Congress nominations for appointment to the Commission, the President shall designate 1 nominee to serve as chairman of the Commission.

(d) TERMS.—Each member of the Commission appointed under paragraph (1)(A) shall serve until the termination of the Commission.

(e) MEETINGS.—(1) Each meeting of the Commission, except a meeting in which classified information is to be discussed, shall be open to the public.

(2) All the proceedings, information, and deliberations of the Commission shall be open, upon request, to the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Government Operations of the House of Representatives.

(f) VACANCIES.—A vacancy on the Commission shall be filled in the same manner as was the original appointment.

(g) PAY AND TRAVEL EXPENSES.—(1)(A) The chairman of the Commission shall be paid at a rate equal to the daily equivalent of the minimum annual rate of basic pay payable for level III of the Executive Schedule under section 5314 of title 5, United States Code, for each day (including traveltime) during which the chairman is engaged in the performance of duties vested in the Commission.

(B) Each member of the Commission other than the chairman shall be paid at a rate equal to the daily equivalent of the minimum annual rate of basic pay payable for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, for each day (including traveltime) during which the member is engaged in the performance of duties vested in the Commission.

(2) Members of the Commission shall receive travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, in accordance with sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(h) DIRECTOR AND STAFF.—(1) The Commission shall appoint a director of the Commission without regard to section 5311(b) of title 5, United States Code.

(2) The director shall be paid at the rate of basic pay payable for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code.

(i) STAFF.—(1) The Director may, with the approval of the Commission, appoint and fix the pay of employees of the Commission without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointment in the competitive service, and any Commission employee may be paid without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of that title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates, except that a Commission employee may not receive pay in excess of the annual rate of basic pay payable for level V of the Executive Schedule under section 5316 of title 5, United States Code.

(2) Upon request of the director, the head of any Federal department or agency may detail any of the personnel of the department or agency to the Commission to assist the Commission in carrying out its duties under this title.

(3) The Comptroller General of the United States shall provide assistance, including the detailing of employees, to the Commission in accordance with an agreement entered into with the Commission.

(j) OTHER AUTHORITY.—(1) The Commission may procure by contract the temporary or intermittent services of experts or consultants pursuant to section 3109 of title 5, United States Code.

(2) The Commission may lease space and acquire personal property to the extent that funds are available for that purpose.

(k) FUNDING.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Commission such sums as are necessary to enable the Commission to carry out its duties under this Act, such sums to remain available until expended.

(l) TERMINATION.—The Commission shall terminate 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4. PROCEDURES FOR MAKING RECOMMENDATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Commission shall transmit to the President findings and recommendations regarding reforms of the organization and operations of the executive branch of the Federal Government that would improve governmental performance while minimizing costs. Such recommendations shall promote economy, efficiency, and improved service in the transaction of the public business, and shall include ways to—

(1) define program missions in terms of measurable outcomes, emphasizing quality of service, customer satisfaction, and result-oriented accountability;

(2) reform personnel and management systems so as to improve morale, inspire initiative, maximize productivity and effectiveness, promote personal accountability, and reward excellence;

(3) increase program responsiveness by reducing paperwork and procedural requirements and increasing managerial discretion, in return for greater accountability for achieving results;

(4) consolidate and streamline departments, agencies, and programs so as to reduce costs, minimize hierarchy, and focus responsibility;

(5) reduce the size of the Federal work force through attrition and redirect funding toward improved training and rewarding excellence in the work force;

(6) promote the application of new information technologies to improve management and reduce administrative costs;

(7) consolidate Federal grant programs to State and local governments and establish criteria for awarding grants on the basis of performance;

(8) develop procedures for the substantive review and reauthorization of each Federal program at least once every 5 years; and

(9) develop mechanisms to promote greater cooperation and coordination between the legislative and executive branches and greater attention to the long-term impacts of budgetary and policy decisions.

(b) ACTION BY THE CONGRESS, COMPTROLLER GENERAL, AND THE DIRECTOR OF THE OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET.—The Comptroller General of the United States and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall—

(1) assist the Commission, to the extent requested, in the Commission's review and analysis of the matters described in subsection (a); and

(2) not later than January 1, 1994, transmit to the Congress and to the Commission a report containing a detailed analysis of any findings and statutory recommendations they may choose to offer.

(c) REPORTS.—Not later than June 1, 1994, the Commission shall transmit to the President and Congress not more than 5 reports containing the Commission's findings and statutory recommendations for the restructuring of, or improving the operations of, governmental entities.

(d) UNDERLYING INFORMATION.—After June 1, 1994, the Commission shall, upon request, promptly provide to any member of Congress information used by the Commission in making its findings and statutory recommendations.

(e) REPORTS BY THE PRESIDENT.—(1) Not later than July 1, 1994, the President shall transmit to the Commission and Congress separate reports containing the President's approval or disapproval of the Commission's reports made pursuant to subsection (c).

(2) If the President approves a report of the Commission, the President shall transmit a copy of the report to the Congress, together with a certification of the approval.

(3) If the President disapproves a report of the Commission, in whole or in part—

(A) the President shall transmit to the Commission and Congress the reasons for the disapproval; and

(B) not later than July 15, 1994, the Commission shall transmit to the President a revised report containing revised findings and statutory recommendations.

(4) If the President approves a revised report of the Commission submitted to the President pursuant to paragraph (3)(B), the President shall transmit to Congress a copy of the revised report together with a certification of such approval.

(5) If the President does not transmit to the Congress an approval and certification of a report or reports by August 1, 1994, the process by which the report or reports of the Commission are to be implemented shall be terminated.

SEC. 5. IMPLEMENTATION OF COMMISSION RECOMMENDATIONS FOR THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (b), the President shall—

(1) restructure and improve the operation of all executive branch organizations recommended for reform by the Commission in its reports transmitted to the Congress by the President pursuant to section 4 (c) and (e);

(2) initiate all such restructuring and improvements not later than 2 years after the date on which the President transmits a report to the Congress pursuant to section 4 (c) and (e) containing such restructurings and improvements; and

(3) complete all such restructurings and improvements not later than the end of the 6-year period beginning on the date on which the President transmits the report pursuant to section 4 (c) and (e) containing such restructurings and improvements.

(b) CONGRESSIONAL DISAPPROVAL.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The President may not carry out any restructuring and improvements recommended by the Commission in a report transmitted from the President pursuant to section 4 (c) and (e) if a joint resolution is enacted, in accordance with subsection (c), disapproving the recommendations of the Commission before the earlier of—

(A) the end of the 30-day period beginning on the date on which the President transmits the report; or

(B) the adjournment of Congress sine die for the session during which the report is transmitted.

(2) CONGRESS NOT IN SESSION.—For the purposes of paragraph (1) and subsection (c) (1) and (3), the days on which either the House of Representatives or the Senate is not in session because of an adjournment of more than 3 days to a day certain shall be excluded in the computation of a period.

(c) CONGRESSIONAL CONSIDERATION OF COMMISSION REPORT.—

(1) TERMS OF THE RESOLUTION.—For the purposes of subsection (b), the term "joint resolution" means a joint resolution that—

(A) is introduced within the 5-day period beginning on the date on which the President transmits a report to the Congress under section 4 (c) and (e);

(B) does not have a preamble;

(C) states after the resolving clause "That Congress disapproves the recommendations of the Commission on Government Reform submitted by the President on _____", the blank space being filled in with the appropriate date; and

(D) is entitled a "Joint resolution disapproving the recommendations of the Commission on Government Reform."

(2) REFERRAL.—(A) A resolution described in paragraph (1) that is introduced in the House of Representatives shall be referred to the Committee on Government Operations of the House of Representatives.

(B) A resolution described in paragraph (1) that is introduced in the Senate shall be referred to the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate.

(3) DISCHARGE.—If the committee to which a resolution described in paragraph (1) is referred has not reported the resolution (or an identical resolution) by the end of the 20-day period beginning on the date on which the President transmits the report to the Congress under section 4 (c) and (e), such committee shall, at the end of that period, be discharged from further consideration of the resolution, and the resolution shall be placed on the appropriate calendar of the House of Representatives or the Senate, as the case may be.

(4) CONSIDERATION.—(A)(i) On or after the third day after the date on which the committee to which a joint resolution described in paragraph (1) is referred has reported, or has been discharged (under paragraph (3)) from further consideration of, such a resolution, it is in order (even though a previous motion to the same effect has been disagreed to) for any member of the House of Representatives or the Senate, respectively, to move to proceed to the consideration of the resolution (but only on the date after the calendar day on which the member announces to the House concerned the member's intention to do so).

(ii) All points of order against a resolution described in paragraph (1) (and against consideration of the resolution) are waived.

(iii)(I) A motion to proceed to the consideration of a joint resolution described in paragraph (1) is highly privileged in the House of Representatives and is privileged in the Senate and is not debatable.

(II) A motion described in subclause (I) is not subject to amendment, to a motion to postpone consideration of the resolution, or to a motion to proceed to the consideration of other business.

(III) A motion to reconsider the vote by which a motion described in subclause (I) is agreed to or not agreed to shall not be in order.

(IV) If a motion described in subclause (I) is agreed to, the House of Representatives or the Senate, as the case may be, shall immediately proceed to consideration of the joint resolution without intervening motion, order, or other business, and the resolution shall remain the unfinished business of the House of Representatives or the Senate, as the case may be, until disposed of.

(B)(i) Debate on a joint resolution described in paragraph (1) and on all debatable motions and appeals in connection therewith shall be limited to not more than 5 hours, which shall be divided equally between those favoring and those opposing the resolution.

(ii) An amendment to a joint resolution described in paragraph (1) is not in order.

(iii) A motion further to limit debate on a joint resolution described in paragraph (1) is in order and not debatable.

(iv) A motion to postpone consideration of a joint resolution described in paragraph (1), a motion to proceed to the consideration of other business, or a motion to recommit the resolution is not in order.

(v) A motion to reconsider the vote by which a resolution described in paragraph (1) is agreed to or not agreed to is not in order.

(C) Immediately following the conclusion of the debate on a joint resolution described in paragraph (1) and a single quorum call at the conclusion of the debate if requested in accordance with the rules of the House of Representatives or the Senate, as the case may be, the vote on final passage of the resolution shall occur.

(D) Appeals from the decisions of the Chair relating to the application of the rules of the House of Representatives or of the Senate, as the case may be, to the procedure relating to a joint resolution described in paragraph (1) shall be decided without debate.

(5) CONSIDERATION BY OTHER HOUSE.—(A) If, before the passage by one House of a joint resolution described in paragraph (1) that was introduced in that House, that House receives from the other House a joint resolution described in paragraph (1)—

(i) the resolution of the other House shall not be referred to a committee and may not be considered in the House that receives it otherwise than on final passage under clause (ii)(I); and

(ii)(I) the procedure in the House that receives such a resolution with respect to such a resolution that was introduced in that House shall be the same as if no resolution had been received from the other House; but (II) the vote on final passage shall be on the resolution of the other House.

(B) Upon disposition of a joint resolution described in paragraph (1) that is received by one House from the other House, it shall no longer be in order to consider such a resolution that was introduced in the receiving House.

(6) RULES OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.—This subsection is enacted by Congress—

(A) as an exercise of the rulemaking power of the Senate and House of Representatives, respectively, and is deemed to be part of the rules of each House, respectively, but applicable only with respect to the procedure to be followed in that House in the case of a joint resolution described in paragraph (1), and it supersedes other rules only to the extent that it is inconsistent with such rules; and

(B) with full recognition of the constitutional right of either House to change the rules (so far as they relate to the procedure of that House) at any time, in the same manner, and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of that House.

THE REINVENTING GOVERNMENT ACT— SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

SEC. 1. SHORT TITLE AND FINDINGS

This Act may be cited as the "Reinventing Government Act".

The Congress finds that—

The American people face a crisis of confidence in the Federal Government, which cannot be remedied without fundamental reform. While the American people are demanding more performance from their government for less money, Congress and the Executive branch continue to debate the same old options of fewer services or higher taxes. The public wants governmental institutions that respond quickly to citizens needs, with high-quality services delivered at the minimum necessary cost, and with ever more value squeezed out of each tax dollar.

The government has many talented and hardworking employees whose effectiveness is hindered by existing organizational structures and operations. Such organizations have too often become inefficient and have structures and missions not reflecting current priorities. These organizations were developed during the industrial era, and have large, centralized bureaucracies, a preoccupation with rules and regulations, and a hierarchical chain of command. Such governmental organizations are so obsessed with regulating processes and procedures, that they have ignored the outcomes of their programs.

Unlike the Federal Government, American corporations have spent the last decade making revolutionary changes by streamlining their organizations, decentralizing authority, focusing on quality, and emphasizing responsiveness to the customer. State and local governments have also begun to apply those same principles of post-industrial organization and uses of technology in successful efforts aimed at reinventing government. There is a crucial need for a serious examination of how the Federal Government might apply such organizational and operational reforms to its own institutions.

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS

Defines the term "Commission" as the Commission on Government Reform.

Defines the term "governmental entities" as all Federal departments, independent agencies, Government-sponsored enterprises, and Government corporations.

SEC. 3. THE COMMISSION

The bipartisan Commission shall be composed of nine members appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. There must be at least four members from each of the two major political parties. The President shall transmit to the Senate the nominations for appointment no later than 60 days after enactment.

In selecting individuals for the bipartisan Commission, the President shall consult with the Speaker of the House, the majority leader of the Senate, the minority leader of the House, and the minority leader of the Senate.

Each meeting of the Commission, other than meetings in which classified information is to be discussed, shall be open to the public.

SEC. 4. PROCEDURES FOR MAKING RECOMMENDATIONS

The Commission shall transmit to the President findings and statutory recommendations regarding reforms to the organization and operations of the executive branch which would improve governmental performance while minimizing costs. Such recommendations shall promote economy, efficiency, and improve service in the transaction of the public business, and include ways to—

(1) define program missions in terms of measurable outcomes, emphasizing quality of service, customer satisfaction, and results-oriented accountability;

(2) reform personnel and management systems so as to improve morale, inspire initiative, maximize productivity and effectiveness, promote personal accountability, and reward excellence;

(3) increase program responsiveness, by reducing paperwork and procedural requirements and increasing managerial discretion, in return for greater accountability for achieving results;

(4) consolidate and streamline departments, agencies, and programs, so as to reduce costs, minimize hierarchy, and focus responsibility;

(5) reduce the size of the Federal workforce through attrition and redirect funding toward improved training and rewarding excellence in the workforce;

(6) promote the application of new information technologies, to improve management and reduce administrative costs;

(7) consolidate Federal grant programs to State and local governments and establish criteria for awarding grants on the basis of performance;

(8) develop procedures for the substantive review and reauthorization of each Federal program at least once every five years; and

(9) develop mechanisms to promote greater cooperation and coordination between the legislative and executive branches, and greater attention to the long-term impacts of budgetary and policy decisions.

The Director of the Office of Management and Budget and the Comptroller General of the United States shall assist the Commission to the extent requested by the Commission. Not later than January 1, 1994, both the OMB Director and Comptroller General may transmit to the Congress and Commission any recommendations they may choose to offer.

The Commission shall conduct public hearings on the recommendations. The Commission shall, by no later than June 1, 1994, transmit to the President a series of no more than five reports containing the Commission's findings and statutory recommendations.

The President shall, by no later than July 1, 1994, transmit to the Commission and to the Congress the President's approval or disapproval of the Commission's recommendations. The President shall treat each report of the Commission as a separate report. If the President approves the recommendations of the Commission, the President shall transmit a copy of such recommendations to the Congress, together with a certification of the approval.

If the President disapproves the recommendations in any of the reports of the Commission, the President shall transmit to the Commission and to the Congress the reasons for that disapproval. The Commission shall then transmit to the President, by no later than July 15, 1994, a revised list of recommendations with regard to that report. If the President approves the revised report, the President shall transmit a copy of the revised report to the Congress, together with a certification of such approval.

If the President does not transmit to the Congress an approval and certification by August 1, 1994, of a particular report, the process by which the recommendations under this Act are to be implemented shall be terminated.

SEC. 5. IMPLEMENTATION OF EXECUTIVE BRANCH RECOMMENDATIONS

Subject to Congressional disapproval of a particular report, the President shall initiate all the recommendations within two years and complete all action no later than the end of six years.

The President may not carry out any of the recommendations if a joint resolution is enacted disapproving such recommendations of a particular report of the Commission before the earlier of the end of the 30-day period beginning on the date on which the President transmits the report or the adjournment of Congress sine die for the session.

A joint resolution is required to be introduced within the 5-day period beginning on the date on which the President transmits a report to the Congress. The resolution shall be referred to the Committee on Government Operations in the House and the Committee on Governmental Affairs in the Senate.

If the committee has not reported a resolution by the end of the 20-day period beginning the date the President transmits the report, the committee will be discharged from further consideration, and the resolution placed on the calendar of the House involved.

On or after the third day after the date on which the committee reported or been discharged of the resolution, it is in order for any Member to move to proceed to the consideration of the resolution. Debate on the resolution shall be limited to not more than five hours, which shall be divided equally between those favoring and those opposing the resolution. An amendment to the resolution is not in order.

TIMETABLE

60 days after enactment: President submits names of the bipartisan Presidential Commission members to Senate for confirmation.

January 1, 1994: Optional reports to Commission by the Office of Management and Budget and the Comptroller General of the United States.

June 1, 1994: Commission reports recommendations in a maximum of five separate reports.

July 1, 1994: President accepts recommendations and sends them to Congress or returns recommendations to the Commission for further review.

July 15, 1994: If President returned recommendations, Commission can issued revised recommendations.

August 1, 1994: President either sends recommendations to the Congress or rejects them.

30 Days: If accepted by the President, the Congress then has 30 days to vote on resolution of disapproval for both executive and legislative branch findings and statutory recommendations.

By Mr. MOYNIHAN:

S. 16. A bill to amend title IV of the Social Security Act to require full funding of the Job Opportunity and Basic Skills Training Program under part F of such title, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

WORK FOR WELFARE ACT

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, ask American parents what they dislike about how things are in our country, and chances are good that pretty soon they'll get to welfare.

Americans are the most generous people on Earth. But we have to go back to the insight of Franklin Roosevelt who, when he spoke of what became the welfare program, warned that it must not become "a narcotic" and a "subtle destroyer" of the spirit.

Welfare was never meant to be a life-style; it was never meant to be a habit; it was never supposed to be passed from generation to generation like a legacy.

It is time to replace the assumptions of the welfare state, and help reform the welfare system.

Today I am introducing a bill to do just that.

In his State of the Union Address of 1935, FDR was not addressing the subject of welfare as we know it today. He was referring, as he stated, to the then gigantic relief rolls which cared for able-bodied men and their families in the depths of the Great Depression. Probably a quarter of work force was then unemployed. He was proposing a giant public works program.

What we now call welfare is title IV of the Social Security Act which was enacted later in 1935. Originally designed as a "widow's pension," it has since become a vast program supporting single parent, female headed households. There are at present twice as many AFDC cases as unemployment cases. AFDC supports some 4.4 million adults at this time, along with 9 million children, over 13 million Americans in all.

In 1988 the Family Support Act, overwhelmingly passed by Congress and signed by President Reagan changed the terms of the AFDC program. The bill would not have passed without the leadership of a chairman of the Governors Association, namely Bill Clinton, our new President. With his help, a new social contract was put in place. Society would help the dependents in return for a concerted effort by dependents to help themselves. Welfare would be temporary; it would lead to work.

Title II of the act created the Job Opportunities and Basic Skills Training Program [JOBS].

The terms of the JOBS Program are simple and direct. All able-bodied adult recipients of AFDC must enroll or lose their benefits. The exceptions are mothers with children under age 3, or, at State option, under age 1.

The program has been coming along. There are now some 500,000 adults in the JOBS pipeline, with about half that number actually in education or jobs programs. Current expenditures, including day care, are $1.5 billion per year.

However, Federal funds for JOBS are capped at $1 billion, and the State match is such that in the current recession many States are not using all the Federal funds available.

The Work for Welfare Act of 1993 would respond to this emergency by: eliminating the cap on Federal funds, and eliminating State matching requirement beyond current outlays.

The additional funding will come to $4.5 billion, including some $1.4 billion for day care.

The bill answers the public's demand for action. As of the date of enactment, signing up for JOBS becomes part of signing up for welfare.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 17. A bill to amend section 1977A of the Revised Statutes to equalize the remedies available to all victims of intentional employment discrimination, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

EQUAL REMEDIES ACT OF 1993

• Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, on behalf of Senators DURENBERGER, PACKWOOD, AKAKA, BRADLEY, MOSELEY-BRAUN, DECONCINI, FEINGOLD, FEINSTEIN, INOUE, MIKULSKI, MURRAY, PELL, ROBB, SIMON, WELLSTONE, ROCKEFELLER, BOXER, BINGAMAN, WOFFORD, LEAHY, CAMPBELL, BIDEN, DODD, and METZENBAUM, I am pleased to reintroduce the Equal Remedies Act, to repeal the caps on the amount of damages available in employment discrimination cases brought under the Civil Rights Act of 1991.

The Civil Rights Act of 1991 for the first time gave women, religious minorities, and the disabled the right to recover compensatory and punitive damages when they suffer intentional discrimination on the job—but only up to specified monetary limits. Victims of discrimination on the basis of race or national origin, by contrast, can recover such damages without arbitrary upper limits. The Equal Remedies Act will remove this inequity by eliminating the caps on damages that were imposed by the 1991 act.

The caps on damages in the Civil Rights Act of 1991 were a compromise necessitated by concern about passing a bill that then-President Bush would sign. The issue was only one of the important issues covered in that piece of legislation, which also reversed a series of Supreme Court decisions that had made it far more difficult for working Americans to challenge discrimination. The bill as a whole represented a significant advance in the ongoing battle to overcome discrimination in the workplace. In order to guarantee that the bill would become law, many Senators joined in agreeing to the compromise on damages. However, many of us made clear that we intended to work for swift enactment of separate legislation to remove the caps.

I am committed to enactment of the Equal Remedies Act in this Congress. We must end the double standard that relegates women, religious minorities, and the disabled to second-class remedies under the civil rights laws.

The caps on damages deny an adequate remedy to the most severely injured victims of discrimination. For example, if a woman proves that as a result of discrimination, she needs extensive and costly medical treatment exceeding the level of the caps, she will be limited to receiving only partial compensation for her injury.

At the same time, the caps limit the extent to which employers who discriminate—particularly the worst violators—are punished for their discriminatory acts and deterred from engaging in such conduct in the future. The more offensive the conduct and the greater the damages inflicted, the more the employer benefits from the caps.

The caps on damages are unjustifiable and unacceptable. Damages available to victims of job discrimination based on race and national origin are not limited in this way. No similar caps exist in any other civil rights laws, and they are not appropriate in this instance. Enactment of the Equal Remedies Act is essential to remove this glaring injustice in our civil rights laws.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SEC. 2. EQUALIZATION OF REMEDIES.

Section 1977A of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1981a), as added by section 102 of the Civil Rights Act of 1991, is amended—

- (1) in subsection (b)—
 - (A) by striking paragraph (3), and
 - (B) by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (3), and
- (2) in subsection (c), by striking "section—" and all that follows through the period and inserting "section, any party may demand a jury trial." •

• Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my distinguished colleague, Senator KENNEDY, and other Members of this body in sponsoring the Equal Remedies Act, which was first introduced in the 102d Congress. I strongly support this bill, which is aimed at achieving equitable application of our civil laws.

Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 was intended to guarantee equity in employment, proscribe discrimination, and remedy injury caused by discrimination by ensuring accountability for intentional wrongdoing by employers. The Civil Rights Act of 1991 reinforced the original act's intent, and for the first time established the right of women, religious minorities, and the disabled to recover compensatory and punitive damages. However, the 1991 act set arbitrary limits on the amount of damages that can be recovered by these groups of individuals. The limits range from $50,000 to $300,000, depending on the number of employees who work for the defendant. For 15 to 100 employees, the limit is $50,000; for 101 to 200 employees, the limit is $100,000; for 201 to 500 employees the limit is $200,000; and for more than 500 employees, the limit is $300,000.

The effect of these limits violates the fundamental principles of equality, which underlie our uniquely American form of democracy. Within this context, no law can remedy injustice if it is unjust on its face. As it stands, the 1991 Civil Rights Act creates a double standard remedy for those who are victims of intentional illegal discrimination. This bill seeks to eliminate the double standard, and to avoid the creation of a two-tiered system of justice. At its heart is a reaffirmation of the basic principles of civil rights law, full and fair remedy for employment discrimination. Further, the current act's arbitrary treatment of women, religious minorities and the disabled flies in the face of the 14th amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Equal treatment under law requires that the same standards be applied in the application of law and the administration of justice to all those who are affected and protected by the law.

Opponents of this legislation will argue that it will open the flood gates of litigation. However, a 10-year study of litigation under the civil rights statute without arbitrary limitations or damages did not reveal excessive awards. There is simply no basis for assuming any different results in cases involving intentional discrimination covered by the Equal Remedies Act of 1993.

Employers who intentionally discriminate must be held fully accountable for their actions. We cannot tolerate laws that shield lawbreakers from full responsibility. The employing community itself should welcome strict enforcement and imposition of penalties for those who intentionally commit acts that damage the reputation of all businesses.

Mr. President, the Equal Remedies Act of 1993 would simply establish equitable treatment for all victims of invidious discrimination, regardless of whether that discrimination is based upon race or national origin, gender, religious beliefs, or disability. There is no justifiable basis for continuing this double standard of justice. •

• Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I rise as an original cosponsor of the Equal Remedies Act of 1993. For millions of working women, as well as millions of religious minorities and disabled Americans, this bill represents a giant step toward equal treatment under the law.

The Civil Rights Act of 1991 addressed a longstanding injustice in terms of the remedies available under Federal civil rights law. The injustice was a simple one: Racial minorities could recover unlimited compensatory and punitive damages for intentional discrimination, but women, religious minorities, and the disabled could not.

The Civil Rights Act of 1991 allowed these excluded groups to recover damages for the first time. But President Bush refused to sign the bill unless we included strict limits on the damages they could recover. So the injustice in Federal law remains: Racial minorities can still recover unlimited punitive and compensatory damages, but women, religious minorities, and the disabled cannot. Instead, these groups are stuck with limited damages no matter how outrageous an employer's conduct was, no matter how many months or years that conduct continued, and no matter how severe a worker's injuries or losses were.

The Equal Remedies Act we are introducing today eliminates these monetary limitations, to ensure that we treat all forms of intentional discrimination equally.

For workers, the costs of job discrimination go far beyond just lost wages. There is living evidence all around us of the emotional and psychological damage that bigotry inflicts on its victims. Often this harm is accompanied by physical symptoms as well, such as migraines, ulcers, miscarriages, and other stress-related injuries.

In addition, there may be other economic losses. These include medical expenses, as well as professional injuries.

One of the principal goals of our Federal civil rights laws is to make discrimination victims whole for all losses they have suffered. Putting a limit on compensatory damages is completely incompatible with this purpose. The losses suffered by these victims are not capped in any way; why should their remedies be?

Our Nation was built upon the premise that every person has a fair chance, based on ability, to make it in our society. That is the essence of the American dream. But the very laws that embody that dream of equal opportunity discriminate against women, religious minorities, and the disabled in terms of the remedies they may recover. We must remove this inequity from our laws.

• Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I support the Equal Remedies Act of 1993 because all Americans have a right to work in an environment free from harassment and intimidation.

Our Constitution promises equal opportunity and our Government must guarantee it. The Civil Rights Act of 1991 took an important step toward eradicating discrimination in the workplace. The Equal Remedies Act will finish the job.

By lifting the cap on damages for intentional discrimination against women, religious minorities, and the disabled, we will and the double standard that has offered these groups second-class remedies under civil rights laws.

I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

By Mr. SPECTER:

S. 18. A bill to provide improved access to health care, enhance informed individual choice regarding health care services, lower health care costs through the use of appropriate providers, improve the quality of health care, improve access to long-term care, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

COMPREHENSIVE HEALTH CARE ACT

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, the Federal Government should act promptly to reform the health care system in the United States. Aside from stimulating an economic recovery, the 1992 great national political debate demonstrated that health care legislation is our Nation's highest priority.

Escalating costs are out of control while 37 million Americans have no health care insurance. In 1992, Americans spend $839 billion¹ on health care or 14 percent of our gross national product. Those figures for 1970 were $74.4 billion and 7.4 percent of the GNP. At the current rate of increase, the cost of national health care by the year 2000 is projected to be $1.6 trillion, or 18 percent of GNP.²

This bill has two objectives:

First, to provide health insurance for 37 million Americans now not covered; Second, to reduce the health care costs for all Americans.

Health care reform is a very complex issue for Congress to address. But it is not so complex that we cannot act now. As many of my colleagues will recall, in 1990 the Congress passed the Clean Air Act that many said was not possible. That issue was brought to the Senate floor, and task forces were formed which took up the complex question of sulfuric acid in the air. We targeted the removal of 10 million tons in a year. We made significant changes in industrial pollution and in tailpipe emissions. We produced a balanced bill which protected the environment and retained jobs.

During the 102d Congress, I pressed to have the Senate take action on this issue. On July 29, 1992, I offered an amendment on health care to other legislation then pending on the Senate floor. When the majority leader argued that the health care amendment did not belong on that bill, I offered to withdraw the amendment if he would set a date certain to take up health care, just as product liability legislation had been placed on the calendar for September 8, 1992. The majority leader rejected that suggestion and the Senate did not consider comprehensive health care legislation during the balance of the 102d Congress.

While there were early suggestions that the new administration and the congressional leaders would place health care legislation on a priority basis, recent reports suggest that it will be deferred until the end of the first 100 days or perhaps beyond that time.

I urge the new President and the congressional leaders to act now on health care legislation. I suggest this bill is a good starting point.

The health care legislation which I am introducing is comprised of initiatives which are reforms that our health care system can readily adopt—now. They are reforms which both improve access and affordability of insurance coverage and implement systemic change to bring down the escalating cost of care in this country.

This bill, entitled the Comprehensive Health Care Act of 1993, melds together the three health care reform bills I introduced in the 102d Congress and builds upon them with significant additions. The additions include the implementation of small business insurance market reforms which I pressed for, and which were adopted by the Senate in modified form, during the last Congress. They also include new incentives to increase the supply of generalists physicians and a program to provide comprehensive health education to children from preschool through high school.

Taken together, I believe these reforms will both improve the quality of health care delivery and will cut the escalating cost of health care in this country. They represent a blueprint which can be modified, improved, and expanded. In total, I believe this bill can significantly reduce the number of uninsured Americans, improve the affordability of care, and yield cost savings of billions of dollars to the Federal Government which can be used to insure the remaining uninsured and underinsured Americans.

SUMMARY OF THE BILL

In the eight titles described below, this bill seeks to reduce the health care costs for the 219 million Americans now covered, 86.1 percent, and to cover the other 37 million Americans, 13.9 percent, who are not. The 219 million Americans now covered derive their health insurance coverage as follows: approximately 64.3 percent from employer plans; 15 percent from Medicare; 9.6 percent from Medicaid; 3.6 percent from the military; and 7.5 percent from individual private insurance.³

Title I, which deals with health insurance market reforms, targets the 29 million uninsured who are employed or are dependents of employed persons. While it is not possible to predict with certainty how many additional Americans will be covered by the full deductibility of health insurance costs for the self-employed, small employer health insurance market reforms, health insurance purchasing groups, and the elimination of managed care plan restrictions imposed by the States, as set forth in title I, a reasonable expectation would be that approximately 15 million Americans would be added to those covered at a cost of $8.6 billion over 5 years. The coverage estimate is based on the fact that over 50 percent of the 29 million uninsured individuals who are employed, or dependents of employed persons, work in businesses covered by the insurance market reforms under title I of the bill. It is anticipated that cost would be offset by administrative savings from the development of purchasing groups as I propose. Such savings have been estimated as high as $9 billion.⁴

With the expansion of primary and preventive health services—focusing particularly on low-birthweight babies—and the expansion of health care education to cover toddlers through 12th graders, as proposed in title II, it is conservatively projected that approximately $2.5 billion per year could be saved. I believe the savings will be higher. Again, it is impossible to be certain of such savings; only experience will tell. For example, how do you quantify today the savings that will surely be achieved tomorrow from future generations of children that are truly educated in a range of health-related subjects including hygiene, nutrition, physical and emotional health, drug and alcohol abuse, accident prevention and safety, et cetera? I suggest these projections, subject to future modification, only to give some generalized perspective on the impact of this bill.

Title III of the bill, relating to disclosure of information to Medicare and Medicaid beneficiaries, can lead to savings of very substantial dollars because consumers will be provided with material information regarding the quality and cost of health care services. This will cause the health care services market to function more efficiently, with a concomitant decrease in health care costs. I believe that such disclosure will result in savings, but there is no source material available estimating such savings.

Title IV, concerning the patient's right to decline medical treatment, will also lead to substantial dollar savings. Approximately 27 percent of Medicare expenditures are made in the final days of life,⁵ and conservatively estimating that approximately 10 percent of such expenditures are unwanted, we could save well over $3 billion.⁶

Increasing the number of primary care providers like generalists, physicians, nurse practitioners, and physician assistants, as proposed in title V, I believe will also yield substantial savings. A study of the Canadian health system utilizing nurse practitioners projected a 10 to 15 percent savings for all medical costs—or $300 million to $450 million. While our system is dramatically different from Canada's, it may not be unreasonable to project a 5-percent—or $41.5 billion—savings from the increase in the number of primary care providers in our system. Again, experience will raise or lower this projection. Assuming this savings, though, it seems reasonable, based on an average expenditure for health care of $3,742 per person projected for 1992, that we could cover another 10 million uninsured persons.⁷

I believe that we can achieve 20 percent, if not more, savings by increasing the use of managed care in the Medicare Program. Title VI promotes this. Managed care has worked in the private sector to help control costs. Successful private sector management principles can, and should, be applied to Medicare beneficiaries. This could control costs, improve quality of care, and could result in a savings of as much as $26 billion, based on projected Medicare expenditures in 1993 of $131 billion.

Outcomes research is another area where we can achieve considerable health care savings in the long run. According to the former editor-in-chief of the New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. Marcia Angell, 20 to 30 percent of health care procedures are either inappropriate, ineffective, or unnecessary. If the implementation of medical practice guidelines eliminates 10 to 20 percent of these costs, savings between $8 and $16 billion can be realized.⁸ To achieve this we must, as Dr. C. Everett Koop, former Surgeon General of the United States says, have a well funded program for outcomes research. Title VII accomplishes this by imposing a one-tenth of 1 cent surcharge on all health insurance premiums. Based on the Congressional Budget Office's estimate that in 1992 private health insurance premiums totaled $254 billion, this surcharge would result in a $254 million outcomes research fund—compared to the approximately $70 million appropriated for fiscal year 1993.

Finally, title VIII addresses the issue of home nursing care. The costs of such care to those requiring it are exorbitant. Title VIII proposes, among other things, tax credits and tax deductions to defray such costs and proposes home and community-based care benefits as less costly alternatives to institutional care. The cost to the Treasury of this needed proposal is also expected to be costly, however, possibly approximately $20 billion.

Action must also be taken to eliminate health care fraud and streamline the cumbersome and costly administrative structure within the health care system. The General Accounting Office has estimated that $70 billion per year is the cost of health care fraud in this country.

Last year the Labor, HHS, and Education Appropriations Subcommittee, on which I serve as the ranking member, appropriated nearly $400 million for fiscal year 1993 to safeguard Medicare payments and combat fraud and abuse in the system. While this is a substantial amount, a recent report by the General Accounting Office stated that limited resources and the fluctuations in administrative budgets have disrupted fraud detection efforts and limited enforcement capabilities. In reviewing five of the Medicare contractors, the GAO found that only half of the complaints involving allegations of fraud or abuse Medicare contractors reported receiving in fiscal year 1990 were investigated. As ranking member, I intend to press for additional funding in fiscal year 1994 to ensure that allegations involving fraud and abuse in the Medicare Program are fully investigated.

Estimates for administrative costs range as high as 25 cents per dollar spent on health care, or over $200 billion annually. Regarding action to reduce administrative costs, the Senate report accompanying the Labor, HHS, and Education appropriations bill for fiscal year 1993 noted that substantial savings could be achieved from the $838 billion expended for health care services through the development of a national uniform electronic billing system. The report directed the Health Care Financing Administration to use a portion of the funds appropriated for research and demonstration projects to support projects designed to enable a speedier and more successful move to a national uniform electronic billing and data system.

While the development of a national electronic claims system to handle the billions of dollars in claims is complex and will take time to implement fully, I believe it is essential for operating a more efficient health care system and achieving the savings necessary to provide insurance for the remaining uninsured Americans. I am prepared to work with other Senators and take a leadership role in the development of implementing legislation, to press this important area of health care reform.

To repeat, the specifications of expanded coverage and savings are necessarily imprecise. Suggested modifications on the projections are welcome from other Senators or anyone else interested in this subject. It is hoped that this bill and hearings will stimulate discussion and input from specialists in the field.

While precision is again impossible, it is a reasonable projection that we could achieve under my proposal a net savings of approximately $82 billion I arrived at this sum by totaling the projected savings of $112.4 billion—$9 billion in small business administrative cost savings; $12.5 billion for preventive health services; $15 billion for reducing unwanted care; $41.9 billion from increasing primary care providers; $26 billion through managed care reform; and $8 billion through outcomes research—and netting against that the projected cost of $30.4 billion—$254 million for funding outcomes research, $8.6 billion for the health insurance market reforms, $20 billion for long term care, and approximately $1.6 billion in funding for the primary and preventive health care, low birth weight, health education and generalists physician—for the initiatives that I am proposing. I believe this net savings of $82 billion would be sufficient for new Federal programs to provide health care coverage for the 12 million Americans who would still not be covered. Obviously, experience will require modification of these projections, but at least it is a beginning.

TITLE I

HEALTH INSURANCE MARKET REFORMS

We have the greatest health system that has ever been devised, but it needs substantial improvement. Our system covers 86 percent of the American people, yet 37 million Americans are uncovered, and it is too expensive for those who are covered. It is estimated that 80 percent of the individuals without health insurance today have jobs or are dependents of those who are employed. In 1990, about half of the working uninsured and their dependents were connected to the labor force through small businesses which employed fewer than 25 persons. Clearly, one means of improving access to health care is to make insurance more affordable to these employers and their employees. Title I, therefore, implements a series of health insurance market reforms in order to make health insurance more affordable and available to employers and employees of small businesses.

The substance of each of these initiatives passed the Senate on two occasions during the last Congress. Regrettably, they did not become law. The reforms are long overdue, and given their bipartisan support, they deserve our prompt attention. They include the following: First, expanding full deductibility of insurance premiums to self-employed individuals; second, establishing a basic health benefits plan for small employers and setting minimum standards for insurers offering insurance to small businesses; third, authorizing Federal grants for the support of small business health insurance purchasing groups; and fourth, fostering the development of efficient managed care plans by exempting plans which meet Federal standards from State mandates.

DEDUCTIBILITY FOR SELF-EMPLOYED

Under current law, businesses are permitted to deduct 100 percent of what they pay for the health insurance of their employees, but self-employed individuals may not deduct any of their costs. The provision permitting self-employed individuals to deduct 25 percent of their health insurance costs expired on December 31, 1992. It is hard to find a provision in the Internal Revenue Code that is more discriminatory than this one concerning the deductibility of health care costs.

It is estimated that 13.6 percent of uninsured workers are self-employed. Providing full deductibility of health insurance premiums for self-employed individuals is a simple matter of fairness. It also should make health insurance coverage more affordable for the estimated 4.6 million self-employed individuals and their families who are now uninsured.

It is estimated that the cost of this provision is $1.7 billion in the first year and $8.6 billion over the next 5 years.⁹

SMALL EMPLOYER HEALTH INSURANCE

Two factors contribute heavily to the cost and lack of availability of health insurance for small employers. The first is State mandated benefits. There are over 800 mandated benefit requirements which states have enacted to regulate health insurance coverage. Overall, estimates of the cost of mandates vary from a low of 3 percent of premiums in Iowa to a high of 21 percent of premiums in Maryland. For those health plans which meet the Secretary's basic benefit standards for small employers, the bill would exempt insurers from these State mandated benefit requirements.

The second factor which limits the ability of small employers to afford insurance coverage is insurers engaging in activities with regard to small groups, such as medical underwriting and exclusionary practices, that effectively preclude small employers from obtaining coverage. For example, in setting premiums insurers build a margin of 8.5 percent of claims for risk and profit for groups of one to four employees, compared with 1.1 percent for larger firms.

To combat these practices, the bill implements several Federal standards for the sale of insurance to employers with 3 to 49 employees who work at least 20 hours per week. Insurers would be required to meet these standards or, failing that, they would lose valuable tax deductions for reserves set aside to meet future liabilities. The standards include: First, guaranteed issue and re-newability requirements; second, strict limits on preexisting condition exclusions in order to expand coverage to the estimated 1.5 million persons presently excluded from group plans; third, limits on the variation of premiums across and within business classes; fourth, meeting the minimum benefits requirements established by the bill; and lastly, permit termination of small employer insurance contracts only if the entire class of business is terminated.

HEALTH INSURANCE PURCHASING GROUPS

A major obstacle for making health insurance affordable to small employers is the fact that they generally pay higher premiums for comparable benefits than large employers. This is due in large measure to the fact that charges for administrative costs in premiums for small employers can be as high as 40 percent of claims. This contrasts with an average charge for large firms of 5.5 percent.

In order to help reduce the administrative costs associated with marketing and administering plans to small employers, title I also establishes a new grant program intended to encourage the development of health insurance purchasing groups for small employers. The program authorizes the Secretary of Health and Human Services to award grants to assist in the formation and initial operation of qualified small employer purchasing groups. The purchasing groups, consisting of a minimum of 100 small employers, would enter into health insurance contracts with insurance carriers, and would market and administer the products in order to provide health insurance for their employee members. The establishment of these purchasing groups should substantially reduce the cost of insurance to participating small businesses and to their employees.

My bill authorizes such sums as may be necessary to implement this provision. Similar proposals have included authorizations of up to $150 million per year.

MANAGED CARE PLAN RESTRICTIONS

Increasingly, managed care plans, such as health maintenance organizations and preferred provider organizations, are viewed as critical components to controlling the cost of care and increasing the affordability of coverage. Because these plans actually manage both the providers and the delivery of health care, they are able to better control costs.

Many States, however, have enacted restrictions on managed care plans which have hampered the ability of insurers to operate efficiently and effectively. To remedy this problem, the bill directs the Secretary of Health and Human Services to develop standards for approved managed care plans which meet the basic benefit requirements. The Secretary is to take into account the recommendations of the Managed

Care Advisory Committee established in the bill. For those health plans which meet these standards, the bill would exempt them from State restrictions on managed care.

Key aspects of the bill I am introducing today focus on expanding primary and preventive health services, and enhancing the management of health care costs in several areas: First, enhancing consumer decision-making about their health care; second, reducing inefficient and unnecessary care; third, preventing disease and ill health, particularly low-birthweight births which result in costly neonatal care; fourth, expanding Federal health education and disease prevention programs among children from preschool through high school; fifth, improving efficiency by permitting access to the most appropriate providers and increasing the number of generalists physicians; sixth, encouraging the development of medical practice guidelines; and lastly, studying the feasibility of implementing health care expenditure targets.

TITLE II

PRIMARY AND PREVENTIVE HEALTH SERVICES LOW BIRTHWEIGHT BABIES

While examining the issues that contribute to our health care crisis, I was struck by the fact that so much attention is being focused on treating the symptoms and so little on some of its root causes. Granted, our existing health care system suffers from some very serious structural problems. But there also are some commonsense steps we can take to head off problem before they reach crisis proportions. Subtitle A includes three initiatives which enhance primary and preventive care services aimed at preventing disease and ill health.

Each year about 7 percent, or 287,000, of the 4,100,000 American babies born in the United States are born of low birthweight, multiplying their risk of death and disability. Although the infant mortality rate in the United States fell to an all-time low in 1989, an increasing percentage of babies still are born of low-birthweight. The Executive Director of the National Commission to Prevent Infant Mortality, put it this way: More babies are being born at risk and all we are doing is saving them with expensive technology."

It is a human tragedy for a child to be born weighing 16 ounces with attendant problems which last a lifetime. I first saw 1-pound babies in 1984, when I was astounded to learn that Pittsburgh, PA, had the highest infant mortality rate of African-American babies of any city in the United States. I wondered, how could that be true of Pittsburgh, which has such enormous medical resources. It was an amazing thing for me to see a 1-pound baby, about as big as my hand.

It is tough enough coming into this world if you weigh 8 pounds 10 ounces, as I was reported to have weighed when I was born. If you weigh 16 or 20 ounces, it is a tragedy. Even if the child responds to the medical treatment and survives, the physical and developmental consequences of being born of such low weight last long into life.

Beyond the human tragedy of low birth weight there are the financial consequences. Low-birthweight children, those who weigh less than 5.5 pounds, account for 16 percent of all costs for initial hospitalization, rehospitalization, and special services up to age 35. The short- and long-term costs of saving and caring for infants of low birth weight is staggering. A study issued by the Office of Technology Assessment in 1988, concluded that $8 billion was expended in 1987 for the care of 262,000 low-birthweight infants in excess of that which would have been spent on an equivalent number of babies born of normal weight. Furthermore, the OTA estimated that for every low-birthweight birth averted by earlier or more frequent prenatal care, the U.S. health care system saves between $14,000 and $30,000 in the first year in addition to the projected savings in lifetime care.

The Department of Health and Human Services estimated that by reducing the number of children born of low-birthweight by 82,000 births, we could save between $1.1 billion and $2.5 billion per year.

The costs associated with low-birthweight babies obviously are more pronounced for those of exceptional low-birthweight, babies who weigh 2 pounds or less at birth. It is also a financial disaster. According to the National Association of Children's Hospitals, the costs of hospital care for a 1-2 pound baby range from $120,000 to $180,000 during their initial hospitalization, with a length of stay between 80 and 100 days.

We know that in most instances prenatal care is effective in preventing low-birthweight babies. Numerous studies have demonstrated that low-birthweight is associated with inadequate prenatal care or lack of prenatal care. To improve pregnancy outcomes for women at risk of low-birthweight, subtitle A authorizes the establishment of an innovative maternal and infant care coordination Federal grant program.

The program targets Federal resources to States to assist them in the development and implementation of coordinated, comprehensive primary health care, social services, and health and nutrition education for women at high risk for low-birthweight pregnancies. Participating States would be required to offer comprehensive services including:

- Family planning counseling;
- Pregnancy testing;
- Prenatal care;
- Delivery, intrapartum and postpartum care;

Pediatric care for infants, including in-home services for low-birthweight babies; and Social services, including, outreach, home visits, child care, transportation, risk assessment, nutrition counseling, dental care, mental health services, substance abuse services, services relating to HIV infection, and prevention counseling.

States would coordinate to the maximum extent possible existing Federal and State resources, such as, Medicaid, WIC, and other maternal and child health programs. They also would be required to demonstrate that the major service providers, and community-based organizations involved in maternal and child health, are involved in the program. Finally, the grantees would need to demonstrate that health promotion and outreach activities under the State program are targeted to women of childbearing age, particularly those at risk for having low-birthweight babies.

At the suggestion of Dr. Koop, the program authorizes incentives of $500 for pregnant teenagers, women 19 years of age and under, who agree to enroll in prenatal care consisting of five prenatal and one postnatal care visit. Dr. Koop noted that the French once paid pregnant women to have such prenatal and postnatal visits, and this resulted in materially improving the health of French babies. While in an ideal world such an incentive payment should not be necessary, if it is effective, it is money well spent, both in humanitarian and economic terms.

HEALTH EDUCATION

The second initiative involves the provisions of comprehensive health education for our Nation's children. The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching recently conducted a survey of teachers. More than half of the respondents said that poor nourishment among students is a serious problem at their schools; 60 percent cited poor health as a serious problem. Another study issued last year by the Children's Defense Fund reported that children deprived of basic health care and nutrition are ill-prepared to learn. Both studies indicated that poor health and social habits are carried into adulthood and often passed on to the next generation.

To interrupt this tragic cycle this Nation must invest in proven preventive health education programs. My legislation includes two comprehensive health education and prevention initiatives.

The first focuses on elementary and secondary school students. To meet the needs of these children my bill establishes a $50 million program of grants to local educational agencies to develop and strengthen comprehensive health education programs. A portion of these funds could be used for curriculum development, teacher training, coordination, and program evaluation.

Drawn from the recommendations of the Carnegie Foundation's report entitled "Ready to Learn," this effort supports school-based instruction in health education. Through an integrated health curriculum, students advancing from grade to grade would be taught a range of health-related subjects, including nutrition, physical and emotional health, drug and alcohol abuse, accident prevention and safety, and environmental hazards. Throughout the course of study, special emphasis will be placed on prevention of chronic and communicable disease ranging from the basics of washing hands before meals to stopping the spread of AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases.

About one million teenage girls each year risk their futures through early pregnancy and childbearing. My proposal would deal with this issue by teaching preteens prevention options, the consequences of becoming pregnant, responsibilities of parenting, and the challenges of child rearing.

As it stands now, over half of the teens who become pregnant receive no early prenatal care. My bill would provide information to these teens on the importance of nutrition during pregnancy, early prenatal care and effective use of health services and the health care delivery system. "This Nation", Dr. Ernest Boyer, of the Carnegie Foundation recently wrote, "simply must interrupt the cycle of ignorance that will have such tragic consequences for the coming generations. Today's students urgently need to be taught the facts of health—as well as the facts of life."

In order to lay the foundation for sound health and nutrition habits, however, we must begin when children are in their most formative years. As Dr. Koop has recently suggested, everything we do in public education is too late; we have neglected to focus on toddlers through kindergartners. "These early years in every child's life when preventive measures can actually stop a lifetime of poor health and poor prospects for learning, deserve our caring and nurturing attention."

The second phase of my proposal would address this issue by authorizing a $40 million grant program to be awarded to Head Start resource centers to support health education training programs for teachers and other day care workers. This amount, according to the Children's Defense Fund would provide sufficient funds for expansion of the current training program.

Head Start currently serves 722,000 children, or approximately 36 percent of the eligible 3-, 4-, and 5-year olds. My proposal would support training to enhance teacher skills and the development of a comprehensive health education curriculum at the preschool level. Expanding training to day care workers will support health and education instruction for preschool children who now receive little or no training in health and personal hygiene. By emphasizing the consequences of alcohol and drug use, seat belt safety, proper use of smoke detectors, and health and fitness, this initiative would instill in these young minds good behavior patterns which will have social as well as cost-saving benefits for the future. Other components of this effort will strengthen the role of parent involvement, ensure coordination, and the transition of students into the public school environment.

This Nation's children spend thousands of hours in day care, Head Start, and elementary and secondary schools. These experiences shape the quality of their lives. If a comprehensive health education program is begun in the early childhood programs and continued through the formative years, the health of the next generation, and succeeding generations, will be greatly improved and this Nation will be well on its way to solving a large part of the health care crisis.

Title II further expands the authorization for a variety of public health programs, such as breast and cervical cancer prevention, childhood immunizations, family planning, and community health centers. These existing programs are designed to improve the public health and prevent disease through primary and secondary prevention initiatives. It is essential that we invest more resources now in these programs if we are to make any substantial progress in reducing the costs of acute care in this country.

TITLE III

DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION TO BENEFICIARIES UNDER MEDICARE & MEDICAID

The Nation's attention is focused today on improving the access to, and the financing of, health care for all Americans. These two issues cannot be resolved satisfactorily, however, without expanding the involvement of the consumer in decisionmaking and focusing on patient-centered care. This should include, at a minimum, a payment system that gives patients a choice of health care plans, physicians and nonphysician providers, and hospitals; access to the kind of patient information and education that allows informed choice; and rewards the practitioners and facilities that provide the type of care consumers choose. Consumers should compare hospitals and health care providers on price and performance, much as people compare mileage rating, service records, and sticker prices when they shop for automobiles.

A recent report issued by the Congressional Budget Office [CBO] on the economic implications of rising health care costs found that consumers lack information regarding the quality and cost of health care services. The CBO argued that this is a key factor in the increasing cost of care. According to the CBO, consumers do not have information about the full range of alternative treatments and prospective outcomes of treatment alternatives. Furthermore, consumers lack basic information about the cost of care that is required to make informed decisions about health care providers and procedures.

To address patient-centered care and increase consumer information and participation, my bill requires that institutional health care providers receiving payment for services provided under the Medicare and Medicaid Programs make an annual report available to the beneficiaries. The annual report would include: First, mortality rates relating to services provided to individuals, including incidence and outcomes of surgical and other invasive procedures; second, hospital-originated infection rates; third, a list of routine preoperative tests and other frequently performed medical tests and the cost of such tests; and fourth, the number and types of malpractice claims filed, decided or settled against the institution.

Each noninstitutional provider receiving Medicare and Medicaid payments is also required to make an annual report available to the beneficiaries. The annual report would include: First, provider's education, experience, qualifications, board certification, and a license to provide health care services; second, disciplinary actions taken against the provider by any health care facility, State medical agency, or medical organization which result in a finding of improper conduct; third, malpractice action taken against the provider resulting in verdict, judgment, or settlement; and fourth, a disclosure of any provider health care ownership.

Finally, all health care providers receiving payment under Medicare and Medicaid will be required to make certain information available to the patient prior to the performance of a procedure. The following information is required: First, the nature of the procedure or treatment; second, a description of the procedure or treatment; third, the risk and benefits associated with the procedure; fourth, the success rate for the procedure or treatment generally, and for the provider; fifth, the provider's cost range for the procedure; sixth, any alternative treatment which may be available; seventh, any known side effects of any medications required in connection with the procedure; and eighth, the interactive effect of the complete regimen of medications associated with the procedure.

TITLE IV

PATIENT'S RIGHT TO DECLINE MEDICAL TREATMENT

It has become increasingly apparent that, despite the enactment of landmark legislation by the Congress in November 1990, added safeguards should be enacted in order to assure that patients are not needlessly and unlawfully treated against their will.

In 1990, the Congress enacted the Patient Self-Determination Act [PSDA] as part of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990. This legislation states, in summary, that health care providers must adopt written policies concerning adult patients' rights, under State law, to consent to, or to refuse, treatment. The statute states further that providers must adopt written policies concerning adult patients' rights under State law to formulate so-called advance directives—written instruments by which incapacitated patients may speak, despite incapacity, concerning their treatment wishes. Finally and most important, the Patient Self-Determination Act requires that health care providers inform patients of these rights in writing. Thus, the PSDA enlists the assistance of health care providers in educating patients concerning their rights under State law.

The Patient Self-Determination Act's reliance entirely on State law in defining the scope and extent of patients' rights appears to have given rise to at least two problems. First, in many States the full scope of patients' rights has not yet been clearly articulated by the legislatures or by the courts. A recent white paper issued by The Annenberg Washington Program of Northwestern University entitled "The Patient Self-Determination Act—Implementation Issues and Opportunities" supports this conclusion, stating:

The Act relies on state law governing withdrawal and withholding of life-support, yet the status of such law in most states is confused and conflicting. * * * By pragmatically avoiding an effort to declare a uniform, national law regarding end-of-life decisions, the Act relies instead on vague and widely varying interpretations of the law in 51 separate jurisdictions.

As a result, health care providers are placed in an uncertain position with respect to their duty to notify patients, in writing, of their rights under the Patient Self-Determination Act. In short, in too many States, health care providers face great difficulty in informing patients of their rights since the precise scope of those rights has not yet been defined by State law.

A second problem which continues to surface is a product of the degree to which our society is mobile. In many States, the law on patient self-determination is relatively clear. For example, many States have adopted model "living will" and/or "Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care" forms which are recognized by health care providers throughout the State. Forms however, vary from State to State; there is no uniform national form.

As a result, there is, in the words of the Annenberg white paper, a portability problem. That is, patients continue to present in local hospitals out-of-State forms to document their treatment wishes. In cases where the patient is competent, such an out-of-State form may not present an insurmountable obstacle since such patients may always sign the in-State form provided to them when they are admitted to the health care facility. In many cases, however, patients who have signed out-of-State forms have lost the capacity to sign new forms.

In such cases, the health care provider again is placed in a highly tenuous position. Should the unfamiliar form be honored even though it differs from the form sanctioned by local law? Or should the patient's written wishes be disregarded due to legal technicality? If the patient's wishes are to be disregarded, who, then, is to make critical decisions concerning care? Such problems—which are not uncommon—could be avoided entirely by the creation of nationally recognized advance directive and "Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care" forms.

Title IV addresses these problems by first stating that the patient's right to self-determination, including the patient's personal right to decline treatment, shall be recognized in all States. This is a fundamental right of self-determination which has been sustained by the U.S. Supreme Court in its 1990 landmark decision in the Cruzan case. Second, it directs that the Secretary of Health and Human Services, in conjunction with the U.S. Attorney General, develop nationally recognized forms for advanced directives and "Durable Powers of Attorney for Health Care."

Uniformity and portability, however, are not the only issues left unresolved with the enactment of the Patient Self-Determination Act. For example, the Annenberg white paper notes that despite the Patient Self-Determination Act, patients still are reluctant to exercise their rights, and health care providers still are hesitant to honor those rights. Reinforcing the point, a special report in the New England Journal of Medicine, authored by a panel of distinguished physicians, nurses, ethicists, attorneys, and educators, concluded that despite "widespread agreement that (written) directives can have many benefits * * * few Americans have executed advance directives." Another recent study by the National Center for Health Statistics of the Public Health Service found that only 8.9 percent of decedents in 1986 had executed living wills.

This of course points out the need for educating both providers and patients on the need for, and use of, advanced directives and durable powers of attorney for health care and related end-of-life decisions. To improve the education of patients and providers, my bill directs the Secretary to examine a number of other issues related to the PSDA, such as, education and training of health care professionals and patients, ethical considerations, and the timing for initiating discussions with patients regarding their rights to determine their course of treatment. The bill requires that the Secretary report to the Congress within 180 days from enactment on these subjects. To educate patients, the bill also requires the periodic dissemination of information to Social Security beneficiaries when they receive their checks and to Medicare and Medicaid beneficiaries on the utility of such forms and related end-of-life decisions. Consideration has been given to distributing the forms to recipients; however, no provision has been included in this legislation awaiting hearings on this issue.

There has been no definitive study of the fraction of end-of-life care dollars which are spent on treatments which have been declined either verbally or by advance directives. A frequently cited 1978 health care financing review study reported that Medicare expenditures were 6.2 times higher per enrollee for people who died than for survivors. The 1.1 million Medicare beneficiaries who died that year consumed 27.9 percent of all Medicare expenditures. About 30 percent of expenditures for people who died were spent in the last 30 days of life and constituted 8 percent of total Medicare expenditures that year. In a 1985 update of the 1978 study, few changes were found. In 1985, 5.3 percent of the Medicare population died which accounted for 26.7 percent of expenditures. Assuming a conservative estimate that 5 to 10 percent of these costs are for unwanted care, nearly $3.5 billion could be saved from the projected costs of the Medicare Program in 1993.

Nonetheless, I believe that the conclusion of the Annenberg white paper, which states that greater respect for the patient's right to decline treatment could result in reduced health care costs, is valid.

Nothing in my bill mandates the use of uniform forms—their use would be completely voluntary. The point, however, is that terminal patients should have the option—uniformly recognized in each State—to decline unwanted care. A legitimate basis for action by the Federal Government would be to prohibit the expenditure of Federal funds under Medicare and Medicaid to providers who knowingly deliver care to patients contrary to written directive.

I believe unnecessary and unwanted expenses amount to billions of health care expenditures each year. It is crucial that reliable data be developed to evidence the magnitude of expense being incurred unnecessarily for unwanted treatment. This bill directs the Secretary to take steps necessary to develop these data.

TITLE V

PRIMARY CARE PROVIDERS

During my tenure on the Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, I have met with many nurses and nurses' organizations and discussed with them our Nation's health care crisis and requested their recommendations for alleviating the problems of access and for reducing health care costs. Central to their recommendations is the provision of improved access to nurses as a means of advancing the Nation's health, increasing consumers' satisfaction with their care, and reducing health care costs.

Nurses have innovative solutions to some of health care's most pressing problems. Indeed, current health care trends, such as an aging population, increasing prevalence of chronic diseases, the AIDS epidemic, increased reliance on medical technologies, and the resultant problems from substance abuse, are increasing the strain on our national health resources, which demand new solutions.

I believe that effective utilization of nurse practitioners [NP's] and physician assistants [PA's] has the potential to increase access to health care, to increase efficiency in health care, and to provide cost savings. In a 1983 review of the literature on the impact of nurse practitioners, the American Nurses' Association [ANA] found consistently good conclusions about their cost effectiveness. Subsequent studies support ANA's report.

For example, in a report comparing direct-care providers, the Office of Technology Assessment recommends extending reimbursement to NP's, PA's, and certified-nurse midwives [CNM's] and believes that in some settings this "could benefit the health status of segments of the population currently not receiving appropriate care and that the long term effect could be a decrease in total costs." Although OTA did not stipulate the exact savings for the United States, they reported on the potential health care savings for Canada. OTA cites findings in 1980 by Canadian researchers that the utilization of NP's and PA's could result in 10-15 percent savings for all medical costs—or from $300 to $450 million. While no comparative studies are available in the United States, it is clear that the savings from utilization of these providers could amount to billions of dollars.

A more specific example of cost-effective quality nursing care is a study conducted by a group of University of Pennsylvania School of Nursing researchers, dealing with early discharge of very low birth-weight infants, with home followup by nurse specialists.¹⁰ In this study, very low birth-weight infants were discharged from the hospital early and received home followup services from a master's prepared perinatal nurse specialist.

The group of infants was discharged a mean of 11 days earlier, 200 grams less in weight, and 2 weeks younger than those babies that remained in the hospital. There was also a mean savings of $18,560 per infant over conventional care.

In an era in which cost, quality, and access present increasingly difficult problems, NP's, PA's, and CNM's are an extremely valuable and untapped resource. In their 1992 report to Congress, the Physician Payment Review Commission stressed the importance of NP's, PA's, and CNM's in meeting the primary health care needs of underserved communities. Primary health care is a vital component in the delivery of health care. It includes identification, management, and referral of health problems, as well as promotion of health-maintaining behavior and prevention of illness.

These nonphysician providers evolved in response to shortages of primary health care providers in certain parts of the country. To encourage retention of these health care professionals and potentially attract more of them to shortage areas, the Commission recommended in their 1991 report to Congress that the Medicare bonus payment or approximately 10 percent over the established reimbursement amount be applied to the services of these providers in underserved urban and rural health care settings. This recommendation has been incorporated into my legislation. As high-quality, cost-effective health care providers these professionals are prepared to make a vital contribution to addressing our Nation's access and cost problems. Accordingly, the bill provides consumers access to services by nurse practitioners, clinical nurse specialists, certified nurse midwives, and physician assistants. These nonphysician providers would receive direct reimbursement through the Medicare and Medicaid Programs.

GENERALISTS PHYSICIANS

This subtitle also provides incentives to improve the supply of general physicians. There is a critical need for Congress not only to increase access to affordable health care services, but to assure that this Nation's citizens have an adequate supply of generalists physicians—primary care providers—family physicians, general internists, and general pediatricians. In testifying before Congress, Dr. Koop has stated that "if we are to control the skyrocketing cost of health care, we need to get a handle on the partition of generalists versus specialist." Dr. Koop maintains that "generalists seem able to function adequately as diagnosticians and therapists without resorting to overuse of resources now rather common among specialists."

The number of generalists physicians practicing in the United States has declined significantly over the last several years even though the need for their services has increased. According to a recent report issued by the Council on Graduate Medical Education, created by Congress in 1986 to advise the Department of Health and Human Services on improving the Nation's physician work force, only about one-third of all doctors today are family physicians, general internists, and pediatricians. The Federal advisory panel reported that only one-sixth of all medical school graduates are choosing to become generalists. This is a dramatic change from 1961, when the ratio was 50-50. The ratio began to shift in 1962 when health professionals began increasingly choosing to specialize.

The number of generalists physicians versus specialist physicians in other countries is far different than in our country. For example, in England, 73 percent of the physicians are generalists. In Germany and Belgium, the figures are 54 percent and 53 percent respectively. In Canada, where the Government funds universal health insurance, 47 percent of the physicians are generalists.

Despite a doubling of the physician population in the last 30 years, from 300,009 to 600,000, inner-city and rural areas continue to suffer from a critical shortage of physicians, making access to care extremely difficult. Today, 99 of the Nation's 126 medical schools have departments of family medicine. But this hasn't reversed the continuing trend toward specialization. In my home State of Pennsylvania, 1990 data for family practice graduates reflects the national average: University of Pennsylvania 3.3 percent, Pittsburgh's Medical School 8.2 percent, Medical College of Pennsylvania 10 percent, Pennsylvania State 3.8 percent, Temple University 8.6 percent, Hahnemann Medical College 2.6 percent, and Jefferson Medical School 14.4 percent.

Given the critical improvement of the generalists physician to the health and welfare of our country, this legislation would enact several important reforms to encourage medical students to pursue training as general physicians.

First, the bill realigns the Federal financial support for graduate medical education [GME] under the Medicare Program in order to encourage residency training of generalists physicians. Currently, the Medicare Program provides payments only to hospitals and hospital-owned clinics for the direct and indirect cost of training medical residents. Under my bill, eligibility to receive payment for approved direct medical education costs is expanded to include all hospital and non-hospital public and nonprofit private entities that sponsor approved medical residency training programs. Thus, health maintenance organizations, clinics, and physicians practices who train generalists physicians would now be eligible to receive Medicare GME payments.

¹⁰D. Brooten, S. Kumar, et al., "A randomized clinical trial of early hospital discharge and home follow up of very low birth-weight infants," New England Journal of Medicine, 1986.

Direct GME support payments would be limited to residents in the first three years of postgraduate training. Medicare support for the indirect costs of GME would also be extended to qualified noninpatient services provided in all sites affiliated with approved medical residency programs in family medicine, general medicine, and general pediatrics. Expanding these payments will create more avenues for the training of residents as generalist physicians.

Second, the bill authorizes a new Federal health professions grant program in the area of the generalists physician. The program is designed to increase medical students' involvement in the community to encourage them to continue in general medicine, increase the profile of family practice, pediatrics, and general internal medicine among undergraduate and high-school-age students considering the medical profession as a career through mentor relationships, and demonstrate effective means of increasing the percentage of medical school students graduating as generalists physicians. The program authorizes grants to accredited schools of medicine to pay medical students, specializing in primary care, to tutor public high school students in the areas of math and science. The funds also would support medical students involved in health promotion and disease prevention activities in community settings. This interaction is crucial if we are to elevate the status of the generalists within the community and to increase the future supply of primary care physicians. This interaction will also serve to heighten the medical students' comprehension of the real problems of children and their families, and the challenge of teaching health as opposed to just treating disease.

The new program also authorizes the Secretary to award grants to eligible medical schools, hospitals, and non-profit entities to demonstrate effective strategies for increasing the number of medical school students graduating as generalists physicians. It is essential that effective strategies be developed to overcome the growing trend toward specialty medicine.

Finally, in the 102d Congress, we enacted the Health Professions Education Extension Amendments of 1992—Public Law 102-408. The act authorizes the Secretary to develop a direct medical student loan program which provides low interest loans to encourage medical students and residents to enter primary health care; for example, family medicine, general internal medicine, general pediatrics, preventive medicine, or osteopathic general practice. The act authorizes appropriations of $15 million to capitalize the fund. As the ranking member of the Labor, HHS, and Education Appropriations Subcommittee, I intend to press for the maximum appropriation to get this program under way in the next fiscal year.

TITLE VI MEDICARE PREFERRED PROVIDER DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

In October of 1990, I visited a Pennsylvania health care company. After touring the facility, I discussed with company officials their methods of containing costs. They reported that in their experience the key to improving quality and controlling health care costs is the management of specialty care. Such services are expensive, are associated with significant complications, show considerable small area variation, and frequently fail to meet the appropriateness of care criteria.

Successful management of these costs have yielded savings of an estimated 20 percent. Furthermore, they reported their cost savings strategy could be replicated and applied to federally supported programs, such as Medicare and Medicaid. A suggestion was made to initiate a Medicare demonstration program to test the efficacy of a coordinated care network for Medicare beneficiaries which manages the use of specialty care.

I subsequently have met with other providers from Pennsylvania who have adopted and found success in managed care approaches to containing health care costs and improving the quality of care. On several occasions, I raised this matter with former Secretary Sullivan with the view that the Department undertake a pilot program to test this approach with Medicare beneficiaries. On October 31, 1990, I sent a letter to the Secretary suggesting this approach be tested as a pilot program. Again, on April 8, 1991, I wrote the Secretary raising the matter of undertaking a model Medicare coordinated care demonstration program. I also raised the pilot program with the Secretary during a January 23, 1992, meeting regarding health care reform, and during the Secretary's appearance before the Labor, HHS, and Education Appropriations Subcommittee on May 12 of last year. While the Secretary expressed support for the concept, no demonstration has yet been undertaken by the Department.

In the meantime, Medicare expenditures have increased at an alarming rate. Despite the introduction of the hospital prospective payment system, Medicare spending will have grown from $34 billion in 1980 to an estimated $131 billion by 1993. Without reform, Medicare will grow at an average rate of 12 percent per year. It is estimated that Medicare will exceed 27 percent of the Federal budget by the year 2025.

Coordinated care plans have shown promise for providing the management necessary to control the volume and intensity of specialty services. A number of studies have reported cost savings of up to 30 percent with the use of managed care contrasted with fee-for-service plans. Assuming cost reductions of just 10 percent, it would yield a decrease in the projected expenditures for the Medicare Program in 1993 of $13 billion. A 20-percent reduction would yield savings of twice the amount, or $26 billion.

The Medicare Program, however, has not seen the rapid expansion of managed care found in the private sector. Only 7 percent, or 2.1 million, of Medicare beneficiaries participate in Medicare HMO's; this is contrasted with a participation of 27 percent in the private sector.

The reasons for the low participation rate are not clear. What is needed is a series of projects to demonstrate a Medicare managed care program which effectively recruits participants and provides cost effective quality care. These demonstration projects would combine the new Medicare part B fee schedule with a specialty provider network with three managed care components: The monitoring of physician and nonphysician provider performance; the provision of individual incentives for quality improvement and the coordination patient care; and health promotion activities.

Accordingly, title VI directs the Secretary of Health and Human Services to institute up to 10 pilot projects within 1 year after enactment to test the efficacy of establishing these coordinated networks of primary and specialty care providers. The network of providers would be selected and monitored based on quality and appropriateness of care measures.

This approach has successfully been implemented in the private sector. I am convinced these management principles can be applied to Medicare beneficiaries, and can both control Medicare costs and improve the quality of care delivered to Medicare patients.

TITLE VII COST CONTAINMENT

In fiscal year 1990, the National Institutes of Health had approved, but was not able to fund, over $110 million in major new clinical trials. This underfunding of clinical trials occurred in spite of the social and economic costs of the leading diseases. For example, Alzheimer's disease has societal costs of $88 billion compared to $290 million in federally funded research; heart disease has societal costs of $94 billion compared to $704 million in federally funded research; cancer, including breast, cervical, ovarian, and prostate cancers, has societal costs of $72 billion compared to $2 billion in federally funded research; AIDS societal costs $66 billion compared to $1.1 billion in federally funded research.

Title VII specifically authorizes a program at the National Institutes of Health to expand support for clinical trials on promising new drugs and disease treatments. Priority will be given to the most costly diseases and those impacting the most number of people.

Rapid development and diffusion of technologies is a component of our high-technology health care system. Our ability to produce more health care devices and procedures is going beyond our knowledge of when and how they should be used. There is also extensive variation in our physician's practice patterns as well as the resultant health care outcomes. The problem of increasing technology and proliferation of high-technology services within our health care system contributes to the high, and rapidly rising, health care costs. There exists a potential that medical practice research may address these concerns and reduce health care costs and improve quality.

In an article which appeared in the Washington Post last year regarding the need for fundamental reform of the health care system, Dr. Koop stated:

The scientific basis of medicine is much weaker than most patients or even physicians realize, and this leads to treatment based on uncertainty. * * * We need to undertake a systematic well-funded program of outcomes research to enable patients and physicians to know the outcomes of all medical treatments. If we allocated about one-fourth of a cent of each insurance dollar to fund outcomes research, we would achieve lower costs and higher quality health care for everyone.

In this context the Rand Corporation has looked at several major, expensive health care procedures. Their study convened panels of physicians to examine their colleagues' decisions on procedures, such as coronary artery bypass, upper GI tract endoscopy, and coronary angiography. The panels found rates of inappropriate care ranging from 14 to 32 percent. A former editor-in-chief of the New England Journal of Medicine, Dr. Marcia Angell, has stated that at least 20 to 30 percent of all care delivered by well-meaning physicians in good hospitals is either inappropriate, ineffective, or unnecessary.

No one knows with any degree of certainty the cost of waste in the health care system; however, based on the above-mentioned items, estimates range from 10 to 30 percent. It is reasonable to expect that accelerating the development and implementation of medical practice guidelines will help eliminate much of these unnecessary costs. Furthermore, while no precise savings can be projected, it seems reasonable to assume they will achieve savings of at least 10 to 20 percent, or between $8 to $16 billion, as discussed in the summary.

Accordingly, title VII establishes a trust fund for medical effectiveness research. The trust fund will be financed by implementing a .001 percent—one-tenth of 1 cent—surcharge on all health insurance premiums. Based on the Congressional Budget Office's estimate that in 1992 private health insurance premiums totaled $254 billion, this surcharge would result in a $254 million outcome research fund—compared to the approximately $70 million appropriated for fiscal year 1993. This would dramatically increase the level of effort in this country to define effective medical treatment, including establishing medical practice guidelines on the conditions for which there is found to be a wide variation in current medical practice. These systematically developed guidelines will assist the practitioner and the patient in decisions about appropriate health care.

Finally, title VII establishes the Health Care Cost Control Advisory Committee to make recommendations to the Congress regarding the development of national spending targets for health care and health care services. In November 1991, I participated in a joint hearing of the Special Committee on Aging and the Government Affairs Committee regarding strategies of cutting the cost of health care. Witnesses at the hearing testified concerning the fact that health care expenditures in the United States continue to increase at a rate well above inflation. The percent of our country's gross domestic product devoted to health care grew from 7.3 percent in 1970 to 14 percent in 1992. The Congressional Budget Office projects that for the year 2000 health care costs will consume 18 percent of the Nation's economic output.

In contrast, other industrialized nations have had some success at limiting the growth in health care expenditures by establishing caps and targets for health care spending and for the payment of services. A General Accounting Office report, released on November 15, 1991, found that France, Germany, and Japan have implemented health care spending targets and caps and have successfully lowered the rate of increase in health care costs. In Germany, for example, the report found that spending caps had reduced expenditures by as much as 17 percent below what would have been spent on physician care without the caps.

While I am opposed to capping health care spending, my bill would create an advisory committee to explore the feasibility of implementing national spending targets. The bill directs the Secretary of Health and Human Services to issue a report to the Congress regarding establishing national spending targets for health care and health care services as a means of controlling health care costs. The report is to be prepared after the Secretary's consideration of the recommendations of the Health Care Cost Control Advisory Committee. The committee is to be comprised of representatives from the provider communities, organized labor, business, academia, and private insurers.

TITLE VIII

HOME NURSING CARE

Addressing the growing need for, and the high cost of, long-term care is essential for achieving meaningful health care reform. According to the Congressional Research Service [CRS], in 1988, the country spent $43 billion on nursing home care. The Health Care Financing Administration [HCFA] estimates that total spending for nursing home care will grow from almost $36 billion in 1985 to $129 billion by the year 2000. Only 1 percent of these costs were paid for by private insurance while 48 percent were paid for out of pocket. With both the population over age 65 rapidly rising and the average life expectancy increasing, our country faces an ever-growing need for appropriate and cost-effective long-term care which the present system is ill equipped to handle.

Unfortunately, few but the wealthiest of Americans can afford the exorbitant costs of extended nursing home stays. In my travels throughout my home State of Pennsylvania, I have visited with residents of long-term care facilities and their families, and have heard about their personal tragedies in having their homes and all of their savings depleted by nursing home stays. I responded by introducing legislation in 1991, which is being incorporated as title III of this bill, to help Americans plan for, and afford, their families' long-term care needs. The legislation also assists individuals dependent on medical assistance for their health care to get appropriate long-term care.

Title VIII includes: First, creating tax credits for the purchase of long-term care insurance and tax deductions for amounts paid toward long-term care services of family members; second, excluding life insurance and IRA savings used to pay for long-term care from income tax; third, implementing an "extraordinary cost protection provision" by expanding Medicaid to include coverage of any individual, excluding the wealthiest Americans, who has been confined to a nursing home for at least 30 months; and fourth, setting standards that require long-term care insurance and State Medicaid Programs to provide home and community-based care benefits as alternatives to nursing home care to eliminate the current bias that favors institutional care over other, often less costly, alternatives.

This plan sets a starting point for addressing this important issue confronting millions of families. I support comprehensive long-term care which provides access to services based on need rather than age, cause of disability or income level; covers social and medical services aimed at maximizing functional independence; provides support—financial and other—to assist rather than supplant home and community caregivers; and offers a range of choices for long-term care that are culturally appropriate.

CONCLUSION

The provisions which I have outlined today contain the framework for providing affordable health care for all Americans. I am opposed to rationing health care. I do not want it for myself, for my family, or for America. The question is whether we have essential resources—doctors and other health care providers, hospitals, pharmaceutical products, et cetera—to provide medical care for all Americans. I am confident that we do.

I welcome comments and suggestions on the provisions of this bill. I am fully prepared to consider modifications warranted by the facts, and I look forward to hearings and debate on the concepts and proposals herein which will lead to final legislation.

In my judgment, we should not scrap, but build on our current health delivery system. I believe that we can provide care for the 37 million Americans who are now not covered and reduce the cost of health care for those who are now covered within the $838 billion a year which is now being expended for health coverage.

With the savings projected in this bill, I believe we can provide comprehensive affordable health care to all Americans. If experience shows that cannot be done, I am prepared to extend Medicare and Medicaid and to provide tax credits and deductions for the purchase of health insurance to those who cannot be covered within these initiatives and the projected savings.

It is obvious that the total answer to the health care issue will not be achieved immediately or easily but time has come—if not already passed—for concerted action on this subject.

I understand and acknowledge that there are many controversial issues presented in this bill and I am open to suggestions on possible modifications. I urge the congressional leadership, including the appropriate committee chairmen, to move this legislation and other health care bills forward promptly.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 18

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Comprehensive Health Care Act of 1993".

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents of this Act is as follows:

TITLE I—HEALTH CARE INSURANCE REFORM PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Model Health Care Insurance Benefits Plan

- Sec. 101. Model health care insurance benefits plan.
- Sec. 102. Definitions.

Subtitle B—Managed Care

- Sec. 111. Development of standards for managed care plans.
- Sec. 112. Preemption of provisions relating to managed care.

Subtitle C—Small Employer Purchasing Groups

- Sec. 121. Qualified small employer purchasing groups.
- Sec. 122. Preemption from insurance mandates for small employer purchasing groups.

Subtitle D—Insurance Market Reform

- Sec. 131. Failure to satisfy certain standards for health care insurance provided to small employers.

Subtitle E—Deduction for Health Insurance Costs of Self-Employed Individuals

- Sec. 141. Increase in deductible health insurance costs for self-employed individuals.

TITLE II—PRIMARY AND PREVENTIVE CARE SERVICES

- Sec. 201. Maternal and infant care coordination.
- Sec. 202. Reauthorization of certain programs providing primary and preventive care.
- Sec. 203. Comprehensive school health education program.
- Sec. 204. Comprehensive early childhood health education program.

TITLE III—DISCLOSURE OF CERTAIN INFORMATION TO BENEFICIARIES UNDER THE MEDICARE AND MEDICAID PROGRAMS

- Sec. 301. Regulations requiring disclosure of certain information to beneficiaries under the medicare and medicaid programs.
- Sec. 302. Outreach activities.

TITLE IV—PATIENT'S RIGHT TO DECLINE MEDICAL TREATMENT

- Sec. 401. Right to decline medical treatment.
- Sec. 402. Federal right enforceable in Federal courts.
- Sec. 403. Suicide and homicide.
- Sec. 404. Rights granted by States.
- Sec. 405. Effect on other laws.
- Sec. 406. Information provided to certain individuals.

- Sec. 407. Recommendations to the Congress on issues relating to a patient's right of self-determination.
- Sec. 408. Effective date.

TITLE V—PRIMARY AND PREVENTIVE CARE PROVIDERS

- Sec. 501. Increasing payments to certain nonphysician providers under the Medicare program.
- Sec. 502. Requiring coverage of certain nonphysician providers under the Medicaid program.
- Sec. 503. Medical student tutorial program grants.
- Sec. 504. General medical practice grants.
- Sec. 505. Payments for direct and indirect graduate medical education costs.

TITLE VI—MEDICARE PREFERRED PROVIDER DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

- Sec. 601. Establishment of Medicare primary and specialty preferred provider organization demonstration projects.

TITLE VII—COST CONTAINMENT

- Sec. 701. New drug clinical trials program.
- Sec. 702. Medical treatment effectiveness.
- Sec. 703. Health care cost control—expenditure targets.

TITLE VIII—LONG-TERM CARE

Subtitle A—Tax Treatment of Qualified Long-Term Care Insurance Policies

- Sec. 801. Amendment of 1986 Code.
- Sec. 802. Definitions of qualified long-term care insurance and premiums.
- Sec. 803. Treatment of qualified long-term care insurance as accident and health insurance for purposes of taxation of insurance companies.
- Sec. 804. Treatment of accelerated death benefits under life insurance contracts.

Subtitle B—Tax Incentives for Purchase of Qualified Long-Term Care Insurance

- Sec. 811. Credit for qualified long-term care premiums.
- Sec. 812. Deduction for expenses relating to qualified long-term care.
- Sec. 813. Exclusion from gross income of benefits received under qualified long-term care insurance.
- Sec. 814. Employer deduction for contributions made for long-term care insurance.
- Sec. 815. Inclusion of qualified long-term care insurance in cafeteria plans.
- Sec. 816. Exclusion from gross income for amounts withdrawn from individual retirement plans and section 401(k) plans for qualified long-term care premiums and expenses.
- Sec. 817. Exclusion from gross income for amounts received on cancellation of life insurance policies and used for qualified long-term care insurance.
- Sec. 818. Use of gain from sale of principal residence for purchase of qualified long-term health care insurance.

Subtitle C—Medicaid Amendments

- Sec. 821. Expansion of Medicaid eligibility for long-term care benefits.
- Sec. 822. Effective date.

TITLE I—HEALTH CARE INSURANCE REFORM PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Model Health Care Insurance Benefits Plan

SEC. 101. MODEL HEALTH CARE INSURANCE BENEFITS PLAN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall request that the NAIC—

(1) develop a model health care insurance benefits plan that shall contain standards that entities offering health care insurance policies should meet with respect to the benefits and coverage provided under such policies, and

(2) report to the Secretary on such standards, not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

If the NAIC develops such a plan by such date and the Secretary finds that such plan implements the requirements of subsection (c), such plan shall be the model health care insurance benefits plan under this Act.

(b) ROLE OF THE SECRETARY IN ABSENCE OF NAIC PLAN.—If the NAIC fails to develop and report a model health care insurance benefits plan by the date specified in subsection (a) or the Secretary finds that such plan does not implement the requirements of subsection (c), the Secretary shall develop and publish such a plan, by not later than 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act. Such plan shall then be the plan under this Act.

(c) CONTENTS.—The standards under the model benefits plan should require—

(1) that coverage be provided under health care insurance policies for basic hospital, medical and surgical services, including preventive care services, mental health services, and other ancillary services determined appropriate by the Secretary;

(2) reasonable cost sharing by the beneficiaries under such policies; and

(3) appropriate copayments and deductibles.

SEC. 102. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this title:

(1) HEALTH CARE INSURANCE.—The term "health care insurance" means any hospital or medical expense incurred policy or certificate, hospital or medical service plan contract, health maintenance subscriber contract, multiple employer welfare arrangement, other employee welfare plan (as defined in the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974), or any other health insurance arrangement, and includes an employment-related reinsurance plan, but does not include—

(A) a self-insured health care insurance plan; or

(B) any of the following offered by an insurer—

(i) accident only, dental only, or disability income only insurance,

(ii) coverage issued as a supplement to liability insurance,

(iii) worker's compensation or similar insurance, or

(iv) automobile medical-payment insurance.

(2) MANAGED CARE PLAN.—The term "managed care plan" means a health care insurance plan in which the insurer offering such plan utilizes the recommended standards developed under section 111 concerning the benefits and coverage under such plan.

(3) MODEL BENEFITS PLAN.—The term "model benefits plan" means the model health care insurance benefits plan developed under section 101(a).

(4) NAIC.—The term "NAIC" means the National Association of Insurance Commissioners.

(5) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

(6) SMALL EMPLOYER.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "small employer" means any employer which, on an average business day during the preceding taxable year, had more than 2 but less than 100 employees.

(B) EMPLOYEE.—The term "employee" shall not include—

(i) a self-employed individual as defined in section 401(c)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or

(ii) an employee who works less than 20 hours per week.

Subtitle B—Managed Care

SEC. 111. DEVELOPMENT OF STANDARDS FOR MANAGED CARE PLANS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary, taking into account recommendations of the Managed Care Advisory Committee, shall develop recommended standards that insurers offering managed care plans should meet with respect to the benefits, coverage, and delivery systems provided under such plans. Such standards shall encompass the standards by which managed care entities operate.

(b) MANAGED CARE ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—There shall be established a Managed Care Advisory Committee (hereinafter referred to as the "Committee").

(2) MEMBERSHIP.—The Committee shall be composed of individuals appointed by the Secretary, representing the following:

(A) Consumers.

(B) Physicians.

(C) Nurses.

(D) Hospitals.

(E) Community-based providers.

(F) Organizations delivering managed care services.

(G) Academia (with specific expertise in managed care plans).

(H) Business management.

(I) Organized labor.

(3) COMPENSATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Members of the Committee shall serve without compensation.

(B) EXPENSES, ETC., REIMBURSED.—While away from their homes or regular places of business on the business of the Committee, the members may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, for persons employed intermittently in Government service.

(C) APPLICATION OF ACT.—The provisions of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) shall not apply with respect to the Committee.

(D) SUPPORT.—The Secretary shall supply such necessary office facilities, office supplies, support services, and related expenses as necessary to carry out the functions of the Committee.

SEC. 112. PREEMPTION OF PROVISIONS RELATING TO MANAGED CARE.

In the case of a managed care plan meeting the recommended standards developed under section 111 that is offered by an insurer, the following provisions of State law are preempted and may not be enforced against the managed care plan with respect to an insurer offering such plan:

(1) RESTRICTIONS ON REIMBURSEMENT RATES OR SELECTIVE CONTRACTING.—Any law that restricts the ability of the insurer to negotiate reimbursement rates with health care providers or to contract selectively with one provider or a limited number of providers.

(2) RESTRICTIONS ON DIFFERENTIAL FINANCIAL INCENTIVES.—Any law that limits the financial incentives that the managed care plan may require a beneficiary to pay when a nonplan provider is used on a non-emergency basis.

(3) RESTRICTIONS ON UTILIZATION REVIEW METHODS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Any law that—

(i) prohibits utilization review of any or all treatments and conditions;

(ii) requires that such review be made by a resident of the State in which the treatment is to be offered or by an individual licensed in such State, or by a physician in any particular specialty or with any board certified specialty of the same medical specialty as the provider whose services are being rendered;

(iii) requires the use of specified standards of health care practice in such review or requires the disclosure of the specific criteria used in such review;

(iv) requires payments to providers for the expenses of responding to utilization review requests; or

(v) imposes liability for delays in performing such review.

(B) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in subparagraph (A)(ii) shall be construed as prohibiting a State from requiring that utilization review be conducted by a licensed health care professional, or requiring that any appeal from such a review be made by a licensed physician or by a licensed physician in any particular specialty or with any board certified specialty of the same medical specialty as the provider whose services are being rendered.

(4) RESTRICTIONS ON BENEFITS.—Any law that mandates benefits under the managed care plan that are greater than the benefits recommended under the standards developed under section 111.

Subtitle C—Small Employer Purchasing Groups

SEC. 121. QUALIFIED SMALL EMPLOYER PURCHASING GROUPS.

(a) DEFINED.—For purposes of this title, an entity is a qualified small employer purchasing group if—

(1) the entity submits an application to the Secretary at such time, in such form and containing such information as the Secretary may require; and

(2) on the basis of information contained in the application and any other information the Secretary may require, the Secretary determines that—

(A) the entity is administered solely under the authority and control of its member employers;

(B) the membership of the entity consists solely of small employers (except that an employer member of the group may retain its membership in the group if, after the Secretary determines that the entity meets the requirements of this subsection, the number of employees of the employer member increases to more than 100);

(C) with respect to each State in which its members are located, the entity consists of not fewer than 100 employers;

(D) at the time the entity submits its application, the health care insurance plans with respect to the employer members of the entity are in compliance with applicable State laws and the model benefits plan relating to such plans;

(E) the health care insurance plans of the entity and the employer members of the entity are not self-insured plans;

(F) each enrollee in the program of the entity may enroll with any participating carrier that offers health care insurance coverage in the geographic area in which the enrollee resides; and

(G) such entity will be a nonprofit entity; and

(3) such entity has a board of directors as described in subsection (b) with authority to act as described in subsection (c).

(b) OPERATIONS.—A small employer purchasing group shall be administered by a board of directors. The members of such board shall be elected by the employers that are members of the group, and such board members shall serve at the pleasure of the majority of such employers.

(c) DUTIES OF BOARD.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The board shall have the authority to—

(A) enter into contracts with carriers to provide health care insurance coverage to eligible employees and their dependents;

(B) enter into other contracts as are necessary or proper to carry out the provisions of this subtitle;

(C) employ necessary staff;

(D) appoint committees as necessary to provide technical assistance in the operation of the entity's program;

(E) assess participating employers a reasonable fee for necessary costs in connection with the program;

(F) undertake activities necessary to administer the program including marketing and publicizing the program and assuring carrier, employer, and enrollee compliance with program requirements;

(G) issue rules and regulations necessary to carry out the purpose of this subtitle; and
(H) accept and expend funds received through fees, grants, appropriations, or other appropriate and lawful means.

(2) PROGRAM MANAGEMENT.—

(A) GEOGRAPHIC AREAS OF COVERAGE.—The board shall establish geographic areas within which participating carriers may offer health care insurance coverage to eligible employees and dependents. The board shall contract with sufficient numbers and types of carriers in an area to assure that employees have a choice from among a reasonable number and type of competing health care insurance carriers.

(B) CONTRACT REQUIREMENTS.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—The board shall enter into contracts with qualified carriers for the purpose of providing health care insurance coverage to eligible employees and dependents, and shall pay qualified carriers on at least a monthly basis at the contracted rates.

(ii) GENERAL QUALIFICATIONS OF CARRIERS.—Participating carriers shall be qualified if such carriers have—

- (I) adequate administrative management,
- (II) financial solvency, and

(III) the ability to assume the risk of providing and paying for covered services.

A participating carrier may utilize reinsurance, provider risk sharing, and other appropriate mechanisms to share a portion of the risk described in subclause (III). The board may establish risk adjustment mechanisms that can be utilized to address circumstances where a participating carrier has a significantly disproportionate share of high risk or low risk enrollees based upon valid data provided by the carrier. Any such risk adjustment mechanism may be developed and applied only after consultation with the participating carriers.

(C) PROGRAM STANDARDS.—The board shall require that participating carriers that contract with or employ health care providers shall have mechanisms to accomplish at least the following, satisfactory to the program:

(i) Review the quality of care covered.

(ii) Review the appropriateness of care covered.

(iii) Provide accessible health services.

(D) UNIFORMITY OF BENEFITS.—The board shall assure that participating carriers—

(i) shall offer substantially similar benefits to enrollees in the program, except that enrollees cost sharing required by participating carriers may vary according to the basic method of operation of the carrier, and

(ii) shall not vary rates to small employers or enrollees in the program on account of claim experience, health status, or duration from issue.

(E) PAYMENT MECHANISM.—The board shall establish a mechanism to collect premiums from small employers, including remittance of the enrollee's share of the premium.

(3) NOTIFICATION OF PROGRAM BENEFITS.—The board shall use appropriate and efficient means to notify employers of the availability of sponsored health care insurance coverage under the program. The board shall make available marketing materials which accurately summarize the carriers' insurance plans and rates which are offered through the program. A participating carrier may contract with an agent or broker to provide marketing, advertising, or presentation proposals or otherwise disseminate information regarding coverage or services or rates offered in connection with the program.

(4) CONDITIONS OF PARTICIPATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The board shall establish conditions of participation for small employers and enrollees that—

(i) assure that the entity is a valid small employer purchasing group and is not formed for the purpose of securing health care insurance coverage;

(ii) assure that individuals in the group are not added for the purpose of securing such coverage;

(iii) require that a specified percentage of employees and dependents obtain health care insurance coverage;

(iv) require minimum employer contributions; and

(v) require prepayment of premiums or other mechanisms to assure that payment will be made for coverage.

(B) MINIMUM PARTICIPATION.—The board may require participating employers to agree to participate in the program for a specified minimum period of time and may include in any participation agreements with employers a requirement for a financial deposit or provision for a financial penalty, which would be invoked in the event the employer violates the participation agreement.

(d) GRANTS.—

(1) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary may award grants to qualified small employer purchasing groups to assist such groups in paying the expenditures associated with the formation and initial operations of such groups.

(2) APPLICATION.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this subsection, a qualified small employer purchasing group shall request such a grant as part of the application submitted by such group under subsection (a)(1).

(3) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for awarding grants under this subsection such sums as may be necessary.

(e) FREEDOM OF CONTRACT.—Nothing in this subtitle shall be construed to prohibit a participating carrier from offering health care insurance coverage to small employers that are not participating in the program of a small employer purchasing group.

SEC. 122. PREEMPTION FROM INSURANCE MAN-DATES FOR SMALL EMPLOYER PUR-CHASING GROUPS.

(a) FINDING.—The Congress finds that qualified small employer purchasing groups organized for the purpose of obtaining health insurance for the employer members of such groups affect interstate commerce.

(b) PREEMPTION OF STATE MANDATES.—In the case of a qualified small employer purchasing group, no provision of State law shall apply that requires the offering, as part of the health care insurance plan with respect to an employer member of such a group, of any services, category of care, or services of any class or type of provider that is in excess of that recommended under the model benefit plan.

Subtitle D—Insurance Market Reform

SEC. 131. FAILURE TO SATISFY CERTAIN STAND-ARDS FOR HEALTH CARE INSUR-ANCE PROVIDED TO SMALL EMPLOY-ERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter L of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to insurance companies) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new part:

"PART IV—HEALTH CARE INSURANCE PROVIDED TO SMALL EMPLOYERS

"Sec. 850. Failure to satisfy standards for health care insurance of small employers.

"Sec. 850A. General issuance requirements.

"Sec. 850B. Specific contractual requirements.

"Sec. 850C. State compliance agreements.

"Sec. 850D. Definitions and other rules.

"SEC. 850. FAILURE TO SATISFY CERTAIN STAND-ARDS FOR HEALTH CARE INSUR-ANCE OF SMALL EMPLOYERS.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—No health insurance contract issued to an eligible small employer shall be treated as a contract for purposes of section 807 or 832 if the issuer of such a contract fails to meet at any time during any taxable year—

"(1) the general issuance requirements of section 850A, or

"(2) the specific contractual requirements of section 850B.

"(b) LIMITATION.—

"(1) SECTION NOT TO APPLY WHERE FAILURE NOT DISCOVERED EXERCISING REASONABLE DILIGENCE.—Subsection (a) shall not apply with respect to any failure for which it is established to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the person described in such subsection did not know, or exercising reasonable diligence would not have known, that such failure existed.

"(2) SECTION NOT TO APPLY WHERE FAILURES CORRECTED WITHIN 30 DAYS.—Subsection (a) shall not apply with respect to any failure if—

"(A) such failure was due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect, and

"(B) such failure is corrected during the 30-day period beginning on the 1st date any of the persons described in such subsection knew, or exercising reasonable diligence would have known, that such failure existed.

"(3) WAIVER BY SECRETARY.—In the case of a failure which is due to reasonable cause and not to willful neglect, the Secretary may waive the application of subsection (a).

"SEC. 850A. GENERAL ISSUANCE REQUIREMENTS.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—The requirements of this section are met if a person meets—

"(1) the mandatory policy requirements of subsection (b),

"(2) the guaranteed issue requirements of subsection (c), and

"(3) the mandatory registration and disclosure requirements of subsection (d).

"(b) MANDATORY POLICY REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The requirements of this subsection are met if any person issuing a health care insurance contract to any eligible small employer makes available to such employer a health care insurance contract which—

"(A) provides benefits and coverage consistent with the model health care insurance benefits plan developed under section 101 of the Comprehensive Health Care Act of 1993, and

"(B) is for a term of not less than 12 months.

"(2) PRICING AND MARKETING REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements of paragraph (1) are not met unless—

"(A) the price at which the contract described in paragraph (1) is made available is not greater than the price for such contract determined on the same basis as prices for other health care insurance contracts within the same class of business made available by the person to eligible small employers, and

"(B) such contract is made available to eligible small employers using at least the marketing methods and other sales practices which are used in selling such other contracts.

"(C) GUARANTEED ISSUE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The requirements of this subsection are met if the person offering health care insurance contracts to eligible small employers issues such a contract to any eligible small employer seeking to enter into such a contract.

"(2) FINANCIAL CAPACITY EXCEPTION.—Paragraph (1) shall not require any person to issue a health care insurance contract to the extent that the issuance of such contract would result in such person violating the financial solvency standards (if any) established by the State in which such contract is to be issued.

"(3) DELIVERY CAPACITY EXCEPTION.—Paragraph (1) shall not require any person to issue a health care insurance contract to the extent that the issuance of such contract would result, upon demonstration to the Secretary, in such person exceeding such person's administrative capacity to serve previously enrolled groups and individuals (and additional individuals who will be expected to enroll because of affiliation with such previously enrolled groups).

"(4) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN EMPLOYERS.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to a failure to issue a health care insurance contract to an eligible small employer if—

"(A) such employer is unable to pay the premium for such contract, or

"(B) in the case of an eligible small employer with fewer than 15 employees, such employer fails to enroll a minimum percentage of the employer's eligible employees for coverage under such contract, so long as such percentage is enforced uniformly for all eligible small employers of comparable size.

"(5) EXCEPTION FOR ALTERNATIVE STATE PROGRAMS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply if the State in which the health care insurance contract is issued—

"(i) has a program which—

"(I) assures the availability of health care insurance contracts to eligible small employers through the equitable distribution of high risk groups among all persons offering such contracts to such employers, and

"(II) is consistent with a model program developed by the NAIC;

"(ii) has a qualified State-run reinsurance program, or

"(iii) has a program which the Secretary of Health and Human Services has determined assures all eligible small employers in the State an opportunity to purchase a health care insurance contract without regard to any risk characteristic.

"(B) REINSURANCE PROGRAM.—

"(i) PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)(ii), a State-run reinsurance program is qualified if such program is one of the NAIC reinsurance program models developed under clause (ii) or is a variation of one of such models, as approved by the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

"(ii) MODELS.—Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of the Comprehensive Health Care Act of 1993, the NAIC shall develop several models for a reinsurance program, including options for program funding.

"(d) MANDATORY REGISTRATION AND DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements of this subsection are met if the person offering health care insurance contracts to eligible small employers in any State—

"(1) registers with the State commissioner or superintendent of insurance or other State authority responsible for regulation of health insurance,

"(2) fully discloses the rating practices for small employer health care insurance contracts at the time such person offers a health care insurance contract to an eligible small employer, and

"(3) fully discloses the terms for renewal of the contract at the time of the offering of such contract and at least 90 days before the expiration of such contract.

"SEC. 850B. SPECIFIC CONTRACTUAL REQUIREMENTS.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—The requirements of this section are met if the following requirements are met:

"(1) The coverage requirements of subsection (b).

"(2) The rating requirements of subsection (c).

"(b) COVERAGE REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The requirements of this subsection are met with respect to any health care insurance contract if, under the terms and operation of the contract, the following requirements are met:

"(A) GUARANTEED ELIGIBILITY.—No eligible employee (and the spouse or any dependent child of the employee eligible for coverage) may be excluded from coverage under the contract.

"(B) LIMITATIONS ON COVERAGE OF PRE-EXISTING CONDITIONS.—Any limitation under the contract on any preexisting condition—

"(i) may not extend beyond the 6-month period beginning with the date an insured is first covered by the contract, and

"(ii) may only apply to preexisting conditions which manifested themselves, or for which medical care or advice was sought or recommended, during the 3-month period preceding the date an insured is first covered by the contract.

"(C) GUARANTEED RENEWABILITY.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The contract must be renewed at the election of the eligible small employer unless the contract is terminated for cause.

"(ii) CAUSE.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'cause' means—

"(I) nonpayment of the required premiums;

"(II) fraud or misrepresentation of the employer or, with respect to coverage of individual insureds, the insureds or their representatives;

"(III) noncompliance with the contract's minimum participation requirements;

"(IV) noncompliance with the contract's employer contribution requirements; or

"(V) repeated misuse of a provider network provision in the contract.

"(2) WAITING PERIODS.—Paragraph (1)(A) shall not apply to any period an employee is excluded from coverage under the contract solely by reason of a requirement applicable to all employees that a minimum period of service with the employer is required before the employee is eligible for such coverage.

"(3) DETERMINATION OF PERIODS FOR RULES RELATING TO PREEXISTING CONDITIONS.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(B), the date on which an insured is first covered by a contract shall be the earlier of—

"(A) the date on which coverage under such contract begins, or

"(B) the first day of any continuous period—

"(i) during which the insured was covered under one or more other health insurance arrangements, and

"(ii) which does not end more than 120 days before the date employment with the employer begins.

"(4) CESSATION OF SMALL EMPLOYER HEALTH INSURANCE BUSINESS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, a person shall not be treated as failing to meet the requirements of paragraph (1)(C) if such person terminates the class of business which includes the health care insurance contract.

"(B) NOTICE REQUIREMENT.—Subparagraph (A) shall apply only if the person gives notice of the decision to terminate at least 90 days before the expiration of the contract.

"(C) 5-YEAR MORATORIUM.—If, within 5 years of the year in which a person terminates a class of business under subparagraph (A), such person establishes a new class of business, the issuance of such contracts in that year shall be treated as a failure to which this section applies.

"(D) TRANSFERS.—If, upon a failure to renew a contract to which subparagraph (A) applies, a person offers to transfer such contract to another class of business, such transfer must be made without regard to risk characteristics.

"(c) RATING REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The requirements of this subsection are met if—

"(A) the requirements of paragraphs (2) and (3) are met, and

"(B) any increase in any premium rate under the renewal contract over the corresponding rate under the health care insurance contract being renewed does not exceed the applicable annual adjusted increase.

"(2) LIMIT ON VARIATION OF PREMIUMS BETWEEN CLASSES OF BUSINESS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The requirements of this paragraph are met if the index rate for a rating period for any class of business of the insurer does not exceed the index rate for any other class of business by more than 20 percent.

"(B) EXCEPTIONS.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to a class of business if—

"(i) the class is one for which the insurer does not reject, and never has rejected, eligible small employers included within the class of business or otherwise eligible employees and dependents who enroll on a timely basis, based upon risk characteristics,

"(ii) the insurer does not transfer, and never has transferred, a health care insurance contract involuntarily into or out of the class of business, and

"(iii) the class of business is currently available for purchase.

"(3) LIMIT ON VARIATION IN PREMIUM RATES WITHIN A CLASS OF BUSINESS.—The requirements of this paragraph are met if the premium rates charged during a rating period to eligible small employers with similar case characteristics (other than risk characteristics) for the same or similar coverage, or the rates which could be charged to such employers under the rating system for that class of business, do not vary from the index rate by more than 20 percent of the index rate.

"(4) APPLICABLE ANNUAL ADJUSTED INCREASE.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(B)—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The applicable annual adjusted increase is an amount equal to the sum of—

"(i) the applicable percentage of the premium rate under the health care insurance contract being renewed, plus

"(ii) any increase in the rate under the renewal contract due to any change in coverage or to any change of case characteristics (other than risk characteristics), plus

"(iii) 5 percentage points.

"(B) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the applicable percentage is the percentage (if any) by which—

"(I) the premium rate for newly issued contracts for substantially similar coverage for an employer with similar case characteristics (other than risk characteristics) as the employer under the health care insurance contract (determined on the 1st day of the rating period applicable to such contracts), exceeds

"(II) such rate on the 1st day of the rating period applicable to the contract being renewed.

"(ii) CASES WHERE NO NEW BUSINESS.—If no new contracts are being issued for a class of business during any rating period, the applicable percentage shall be the percentage (if any) by which the base premium rate determined under paragraph (5)(B) with respect to the renewal contract exceeds such rate for the contract to be renewed.

"(5) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) INDEX RATE.—The term 'index rate' means, with respect to a class of business, the arithmetic average of the applicable base premium rate and the corresponding highest premium rate for that class.

"(B) BASE PREMIUM RATE.—The term 'base premium rate' means, for each class of business for each rating period, the lowest premium rate which could have been charged under a rating system for that class of business by the insurer to eligible small employers with similar case characteristics (other than risk characteristics) for health care insurance contracts with the same or similar coverage.

"SEC. 850C. STATE COMPLIANCE AGREEMENTS.

"(a) AGREEMENTS.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services may enter into an agreement with any State—

"(1) to apply the standards set by the NAIC for health care insurance contracts in lieu of the requirements of this subchapter, and

"(2) to provide for the State to make the initial determination as to whether a person is in compliance with such standards for purposes of applying the sanctions under section 850.

"(b) STANDARDS.—An agreement may be entered into under subsection (a)(1) only if—

"(1) the chief executive officer of the State requests that such agreement be entered into,

"(2) the Secretary of Health and Human Services determines that the NAIC standards to be applied under the agreement will carry out the purposes of this subchapter, and

"(3) the Secretary determines that the NAIC standards to be applied under the agreement will apply to substantially all health care insurance contracts issued in such State to eligible small employers.

"(c) TERMINATION.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall terminate any agreement if the Secretary determines that the application of NAIC standards by the State ceases to carry out the purposes of this subchapter.

"(d) NAIC STANDARDS.—Not later than 270 days after the date of the enactment of the Comprehensive Health Care Act of 1993, the NAIC shall develop standards which provide for requirements substantially similar to the requirements of this subchapter.

"SEC. 850D. DEFINITIONS AND OTHER RULES.

"For purposes of this part—

"(1) HEALTH CARE INSURANCE.—The term 'health care insurance' means any hospital or medical expense incurred policy or certificate, hospital or medical service plan contract, health maintenance subscriber contract, multiple employer welfare arrangement, other employee welfare plan (as defined in the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974), or any other health insurance arrangement, and includes an employment-related reinsurance plan, but does not include—

"(A) a self-insured health care insurance plan; or

"(B) any of the following offered by an insurer—

"(i) accident only, dental only, or disability income only insurance,

"(ii) coverage issued as a supplement to liability insurance,

"(iii) worker's compensation or similar insurance, or

"(iv) automobile medical-payment insurance.

"(2) CLASS OF BUSINESS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the term 'class of business' means, with respect to health care insurance provided to eligible small employers, all health care insurance provided to such employers.

"(B) ESTABLISHMENT OF GROUPINGS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—An issuer may establish separate classes of business with respect to health care insurance provided to eligible small employers but only if such classes are based on one or more of the following:

"(I) Business marketed and sold through persons not participating in the marketing and sale of such insurance to other eligible small employers.

"(II) Business acquired from other insurers as a distinct grouping.

"(III) Business provided through an association of not less than 20 eligible small employers which was established for purposes other than obtaining insurance.

"(IV) Business related to managed care plans (as defined in section 102(2) of the Comprehensive Health Care Act of 1993).

"(V) Any other business which the Secretary of Health and Human Services determines needs to be separately grouped to prevent a substantial threat to the solvency of the insurer.

"(ii) EXCEPTION ALLOWED.—Except as provided in subparagraph (C), an insurer may not establish more than one distinct group of eligible small employers for each category specified in clause (i).

"(C) SPECIAL RULE.—An insurer may establish up to 2 groups under each category in subparagraph (A) or (B) to account for differences in characteristics (other than differences in plan benefits) of health insurance plans that are expected to produce substantial variation in health care costs.

"(3) CHARACTERISTICS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'characteristics' means, with respect to any insurance rating system, the factors used in determining rates.

"(B) RISK CHARACTERISTICS.—The term 'risk characteristics' means factors related to the health risks of individuals, including health status, prior claims experience, the duration since the date of issue of a health insurance plan or arrangement, industry, and occupation.

"(C) GEOGRAPHIC FACTORS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In applying geographic location as a characteristic, an insurer may not use for purposes of this subchapter areas smaller than 3-digit postal zip code areas.

"(ii) STUDY AND REPORT.—Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of the Comprehensive Health Care Act of 1993, the Comptroller General of the United States shall study and report to the Congress concerning—

"(I) insurance industry practices in determining the geographic boundaries of communities used for setting rates,

"(II) the feasibility and desirability of establishing standardized geographic communities for setting rates, and

"(III) the effect such standardized geographic communities would have on rates charged small employers.

"(4) ELIGIBLE SMALL EMPLOYER.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'eligible small employer' means any person which, on an average business day during the preceding taxable year, had more than 2 but less than 50 employees.

"(B) AGGREGATION RULES.—All members of the same controlled group of corporations (within the meaning of section 52(a)) and all persons under common control (within the meaning of section 52(b)) shall be treated as 1 person.

"(C) EMPLOYEE.—The term 'employee' shall not include—

"(i) a self-employed individual as defined in section 401(c)(1), or

"(ii) an employee who works less than 20 hours per week.

"(5) NAIC.—The term 'NAIC' means the National Association of Insurance Commissioners."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Subchapter L of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Part IV. Health Care Insurance Provided to Small Employers."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to contracts issued, or renewed, after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) GUARANTEED ISSUE.—The provisions of section 850A(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as added by this section, shall apply to contracts which are issued, or renewed, after the date which is 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3) PREMIUM RANGE.—In the case of any contract in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act, the provisions of section 850B(c)(1)(A) of such Code, as added by this section, shall not apply to the premiums under such contract or any renewal contract for benefits provided during the period beginning on such date and ending on the last day of the 2nd plan year beginning after such date.

Subtitle E—Deduction for Health Insurance Costs of Self-Employed Individuals

SEC. 141. INCREASE IN DEDUCTIBLE HEALTH INSURANCE COSTS FOR SELF-EMPLOYED INDIVIDUALS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (1) of section 162(l) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to special rules for health insurance costs of self-employed individuals) is amended by striking "25 percent" and inserting "100 percent".

(b) REPEAL OF TERMINATION PROVISION.—Paragraph (6) of section 162(l) of such Code (relating to termination) is repealed.

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 110(a) of the Tax Extension Act of 1991 is amended by striking paragraph (2).

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after June 30, 1992.

TITLE II—PRIMARY AND PREVENTIVE CARE SERVICES

SEC. 201. MATERNAL AND INFANT CARE COORDINATION.

(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to assist States in the development and implementation of coordinated, multidisciplinary, and comprehensive primary health care and social services, and health and nutrition education programs, designed to improve maternal and child health.

(b) GRANTS FOR IMPLEMENTATION OF PROGRAMS.—

(1) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereafter referred to in this section as the "Secretary") is authorized to award grants to States to enable such States to plan and implement coordinated, multidisciplinary, and comprehensive primary health care and social service programs targeted to pregnant women and infants.

(2) ELIGIBILITY.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, a State shall—

(A) prepare and submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require;

(B) provide assurances that under the program established with amounts received under a grant, individuals will have access (without any barriers) to comprehensive family planning counseling, pregnancy testing, prenatal care, delivery, intrapartum and postpartum care, pediatric care for infants, and social services as appropriate, including outreach activities, home visits, child care, transportation, risk assessment, nutrition counseling, dental care, mental health services, substance abuse services, services relating to HIV infection, and prevention counseling;

(C) provide assurances that under the program individuals will have access, without any barriers, to the full range of pediatric services provided by pediatric nurse practitioners and clinical nurse specialists, including in-home services for low birth weight babies;

(D) as part of the State application, submit a plan for providing incentive payments of up to $500 to pregnant women who—

(i) have not attained age 20;

(ii) are at risk of having low birth weight babies;

(iii) agree to attend not less than 5 prenatal visits and 1 postnatal visit; and

(iv) agree to attend a requisite number of prenatal care and parenting classes, as determined by the State;

(E) as part of the State application, submit a plan for the coordination and maximization of existing and proposed Federal and State resources, including amounts provided under the Medicaid program under title XIX of the Social Security Act, the special supplemental food program under section 17 of the Child Nutrition Act of 1966, family planning programs, substance abuse programs, State maternal and child health programs funded under title V of the Social Security Act, community and migrant health center programs under the Public Health Service Act, and other publicly, or where practicable, privately supported programs;

(F) demonstrate that the major service providers to be involved, including private nonprofit entities committed to improving maternal and infant health, are committed to and involved in the program to be funded with amounts received under the grant;

(G) with respect to States with high infant mortality rates among minority populations, demonstrate the involvement of major health, multiservice, professional, or civic group representatives of such minority groups in the planning and implementation of the State program; and

(H) demonstrate that health promotion and outreach activities under the State program are targeted to women of childbearing age, particularly those at risk for having low birth weight babies.

(3) TERM OF GRANT.—A grant awarded under this subsection shall be for a period of 5 years.

(4) USE OF AMOUNTS.—Amounts received by a State under a grant awarded under this subsection shall be used to establish a State program to provide coordinated, multidisciplinary, and comprehensive primary health care and social services, and health and nutrition education program services, that are designed to improve maternal and child health.

(5) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection, $100,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, $300,000,000 for fiscal year 1995, and $500,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1996 through 1998.

(c) MODEL HEALTH AND NUTRITION EDUCATION CURRICULA.—

(1) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary, in conjunction with the Secretary of Education and the Secretary of Agriculture, is authorized to award grants, on a competitive basis, to public or nonprofit private entities to enable such entities to develop model health and nutrition education curricula for children in grades kindergarten through twelfth.

(2) APPLICATION.—To be eligible to receive a grant under paragraph (1), an entity shall prepare and submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require.

(3) CURRICULA.—Curricula developed under paragraph (1) should be consistent with the goals of "Healthy People 2000: National Health Promotion and Disease Prevention Objectives", published by the Department of Health and Human Services in September 1990, and shall address the cultural and lifestyle realities of racial and ethnic minority populations.

(4) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection, $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1994.

SEC. 202. REAUTHORIZATION OF CERTAIN PROGRAMS PROVIDING PRIMARY AND PREVENTIVE CARE.

(a) IMMUNIZATION PROGRAMS.—Section 317(j)(1)(A) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247b(j)(1)(A)) is amended—

(1) by striking "and such sums" and inserting "such sums"; and

(2) by striking "each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1995" and inserting "each of the fiscal years 1992 and 1993, $380,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 through 1998".

(b) TUBERCULOSIS PREVENTION GRANTS.—Section 317(j)(2) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247b(j)(2)) is amended—

(1) by striking "and such sums" and inserting "such sums"; and

(2) by striking "each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1995" and inserting "each of the fiscal years 1992 and 1993, $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 through 1998".

(c) SEXUALLY TRANSMITTED DISEASES.—Section 318(d)(1) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247c(d)(1)) is amended—

(1) by striking "and such sums" and inserting "such sums"; and

(2) by inserting before the first period the following: "$125,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 through 1998".

(d) MIGRANT HEALTH CENTERS.—Section 329(h)(1)(A) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 254b(h)(1)(A)) is amended by striking "and 1991, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1994" and inserting "through 1993, $80,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 through 1998".

(e) COMMUNITY HEALTH CENTERS.—Section 330(g)(1)(A) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 254c(g)(1)(A)) is amended by striking "and 1991, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1994" and inserting "through 1993, $700,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 through 1998".

SEC. 203. COMPREHENSIVE SCHOOL HEALTH EDUCATION PROGRAM.

Section 4605 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 3155) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4605. COMPREHENSIVE SCHOOL HEALTH EDUCATION PROGRAMS.

"(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to establish a comprehensive school health education and prevention program for elementary and secondary school students.

"(b) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary, through the Office of Comprehensive School Health Education established in subsection (d), shall award grants to States to enable such States to—

"(1) award grants to local or intermediate educational agencies, and consortia thereof, to enable such agencies or consortia to establish, operate and improve local programs of comprehensive health education and prevention, early health intervention, and health education, in elementary and secondary schools (including preschool, kindergarten, intermediate, and junior high schools); and

"(2) develop training, technical assistance and coordination activities for the programs assisted pursuant to paragraph (1).

"(c) USE OF FUNDS.—Grant funds under this section may be used to improve elementary and secondary education in the areas of—

- "(1) personal health and fitness;
- "(2) prevention of chronic diseases;
- "(3) prevention and control of communicable diseases;
- "(4) nutrition;
- "(5) substance use and abuse;
- "(6) accident prevention and safety;
- "(7) community and environmental health;
- "(8) mental and emotional health;
- "(9) parenting and the challenges of raising children; and
- "(10) the effective use of the health services delivery system.

"(d) OFFICE OF COMPREHENSIVE SCHOOL HEALTH EDUCATION.—The Secretary shall establish within the Office of the Secretary an Office of Comprehensive School Health Education which shall have the following responsibilities:

"(1) To recommend mechanisms for the coordination of school health education programs conducted by the various departments and agencies of the Federal Government.

"(2) To advise the Secretary on formulation of school health education policy within the Department of Education.

"(3) To disseminate information on the benefits to health education of utilizing a comprehensive health curriculum in schools.

(e) RESERVATIONS AND STATE ALLOTMENTS.

(A) RESERVATIONS.—Except as provided in subsection (c), from the sums appropriated or otherwise made available to carry out this title for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall reserve—

(1) 1 percent for payments to Guam, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands, to be allotted in accordance with their respective needs;

(2) 1 percent for programs for Indian youth under section 5133;

(3) 0.2 percent for programs for Hawaiian natives under section 5134;

(4) 8 percent for programs with institutions of higher education under section 5131;

(5) 3.5 percent for Federal activities under section 5132; and

(6) 4.5 percent for regional centers under section 5135.

(b) STATE ALLOTMENTS.—(1) From the remainder of the sums not reserved under subsection (a), the Secretary shall allot to each State an amount which bears the same ratio to the amount of such remainder as the school-age population of the State bears to the school-age population of all States, except that no State shall be allotted less than an amount equal to 0.5 percent of such remainder.

(2) The Secretary may reallocate any amount of any allotment to a State to the extent that the Secretary determines that the State will not be able to obligate such amount within 2 years of allotment. Any such reallotment shall be made on the same basis as an allotment under paragraph (1).

(3) For each fiscal year, the Secretary shall make payments, as provided by section 6503(a) of title 31, United States Code, to each State from its allotment under this subsection from amounts appropriated for that fiscal year.

"(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 and 1996 to carry out this section.

"(2) AVAILABILITY.—Funds appropriated pursuant to the authority of paragraph (1) in any fiscal year shall remain available for obligation and expenditure until the end of the fiscal year succeeding the fiscal year for which such funds were appropriated."

SEC. 204. COMPREHENSIVE EARLY CHILDHOOD HEALTH EDUCATION PROGRAM.

(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to establish a comprehensive early childhood health education program.

(b) PROGRAM.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall conduct a program of awarding grants to agencies conducting Head Start training to enable such agencies to provide training and technical assistance to Head Start teachers and other child care providers. Such program shall—

(1) establish a training system through the Head Start agencies and organizations conducting Head Start training for the purpose of enhancing teacher skills and providing comprehensive early childhood health education curriculum;

(2) enable such agencies and organizations to provide training to day care providers in order to strengthen the skills of the early childhood workforce in providing health education;

(3) provide technical support for health education programs and curricula; and

(4) provide cooperation with other early childhood providers to ensure coordination of such programs and the transition of students into the public school environment.

(c) USE OF FUNDS.—Grant funds under this section may be used to provide training and technical assistance in the areas of—

- (1) personal health and fitness;
- (2) prevention of chronic diseases;
- (3) prevention and control of communicable diseases;
- (4) dental health;
- (5) nutrition;
- (6) substance use and abuse;
- (7) accident prevention and safety;
- (8) community and environmental health;
- (9) mental and emotional health; and
- (10) strengthening the role of parent involvement.

(d) RESERVATION FOR INNOVATIVE PROGRAMS.—The Secretary shall reserve 5 percent of the funds appropriated pursuant to the authority of subsection (c) in each fiscal year for the development of innovative model health education programs or curricula.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 and 1996 to carry out this section.

TITLE III—DISCLOSURE OF CERTAIN INFORMATION TO BENEFICIARIES UNDER THE MEDICARE AND MEDICAID PROGRAMS

SEC. 301. REGULATIONS REQUIRING DISCLOSURE OF CERTAIN INFORMATION TO BENEFICIARIES UNDER THE MEDICARE AND MEDICAID PROGRAMS.

Part A of title XI of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1301 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"DISCLOSURE OF CERTAIN INFORMATION TO BENEFICIARIES UNDER THE MEDICARE AND MEDICAID PROGRAMS

"SEC. 1144. (a) ANNUAL REPORTS.—

"(1) INSTITUTIONAL HEALTH CARE PROVIDERS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall issue regulations requiring that each institutional health care provider receiving payment for services provided under title XVIII or XIX shall make an annual report available to the recipients of services under such title.

"(B) CONTENTS OF REPORT.—The annual report referred to in subparagraph (A) shall include—

"(i) mortality rates relating to services provided to individuals, including incidence and outcomes of surgical and other invasive procedures;

"(ii) nosocomial infection rates;

"(iii) a list of routine preoperative tests and other frequently performed medical tests, including blood tests, chest x-rays, magnetic resonance imaging, computerized axial tomography, urinalysis, and heart catheterizations, and the cost of such tests;

"(iv) the number and types of malpractice claims against the provider decided or settled for the year; and

"(v) such other information as the Secretary shall require.

"(2) NONINSTITUTIONAL HEALTH CARE PROVIDERS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall issue regulations requiring that each non-institutional provider receiving payment for services provided under title XVIII or XIX shall make an annual report available to the recipients of services under such title.

"(B) CONTENTS OF REPORT.—The report referred to in subparagraph (A) shall include—

"(i) information regarding the provider's education, experience, qualifications, board certification, and license to provide health care services, including a list of the States in which such provider is licensed and any limitations on such provider's license;

"(ii) any disciplinary actions taken against the provider by any health care facility, State medical agency, or medical organization which result in a finding of improper conduct;

"(iii) any malpractice action against the provider decided or settled;

"(iv) a disclosure of any ownership interest the provider may have in any health care facility, laboratory, or health care supply company; and

"(v) such other information as the Secretary shall require.

"(b) DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION REGARDING HEALTH CARE PROCEDURES AND FORMS.—

"(1) INFORMATION REGARDING HEALTH CARE PROCEDURES AND FORMS.—The Secretary shall issue regulations requiring that each institutional and noninstitutional health care provider receiving payment for services under title XVIII or XIX shall make available any forms required in connection with the receipt of services under such title which consist of any diagnostic, surgical, or other invasive procedure, prior to the performance of such procedure.

"(2) INFORMATION PROVIDED BEFORE PERFORMANCE OF PROCEDURE.—The Secretary shall issue regulations requiring each institutional and noninstitutional health care provider receiving payment for services provided under title XVIII or XIX to disclose to any individual receiving any surgical, palliative, or other health care procedure or any drug therapy or other treatment, the following information prior to the performance of such procedure or treatment:

"(A) The nature of the procedure or treatment.

"(B) A description of the procedure or treatment.

"(C) The risk and benefits associated with the procedure or treatment.

"(D) The success rate for the procedure or treatment generally, and for the provider.

"(E) The provider's cost range for the procedure or treatment.

"(F) Any alternative treatment which may be available to such individual.

"(G) Any known side effects of any medications required in connection with the procedure or treatment.

"(H) The interactive effect of the complete regimen of medications associated with the procedure.

"(I) The availability of the information under this subsection and under subsections (a) and (c).

"(J) Such other information as the Secretary shall require.

"(3) EMERGENCIES.—The Secretary shall issue regulations with respect to the waiver of any requirement established under paragraphs (1) and (2) in a case where emergency health care is needed.

"(c) PATIENT'S RIGHT TO REFUSE INFORMATION AND TREATMENT.—The Secretary shall issue regulations requiring each institutional and noninstitutional health care provider receiving payment for services provided under title XVIII or XIX to inform any individual receiving services under such title of such individual's right—

"(1) to refuse any information which is available to such individual under the regulations described in subsections (a) and (b);

"(2) to refuse any procedure or treatment;

"(3) to refuse attendance by any such provider; or

"(4) to leave the premises of any such provider.

"(d) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section—

"(1) INSTITUTIONAL HEALTH CARE PROVIDER.—The term 'institutional health care provider' means any hospital, clinic, skilled nursing facility, comprehensive outpatient rehabilitation facility, home health agency, hospice program, or other facility receiving payment for services provided under title XVIII or XIX, as determined by the Secretary.

"(2) NONINSTITUTIONAL HEALTH CARE PROVIDER.—The term 'noninstitutional health care provider' means any physician, physician assistant, nurse practitioner, certified nurse midwife, certified registered nurse anesthetist, or other individual receiving payment for services provided under title XVIII or XIX, as determined by the Secretary.

"(e) COMPLIANCE.—

"(1) PENALTIES FOR FAILURE TO COMPLY.—The Secretary shall issue regulations establishing appropriate penalties for any failure to comply with the regulations issued under this section.

"(2) WAIVER OF COMPLIANCE.—The Secretary may waive any of the requirements under the regulations issued under this section if a health care provider demonstrates that such requirements will result in an undue burden on such provider."

SEC. 302. OUTREACH ACTIVITIES.

(a) MEDICARE PROGRAM.—

(1) GRANTS TO NONPROFIT PRIVATE ENTITIES FOR OUTREACH ACTIVITIES.—

(A) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereafter referred to in this paragraph as the "Secretary"), is authorized to award grants, on a competitive basis, to nonprofit private entities to enable such entities to develop outreach activities to inform beneficiaries under title XVIII of the Social Security Act of the information available to such beneficiaries pursuant to regulations issued by the Secretary under section 1144 of the Social Security Act as added by section 311 of this Act.

(B) APPLICATION.—To be eligible to receive a grant under subparagraph (A), an entity shall prepare and submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require.

(C) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1995, and $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1996.

(2) OUTREACH THROUGH NOTICE OF MEDICARE BENEFITS.—Section 1804 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395b-2) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (2), by striking ", and" and inserting a comma,

(B) in paragraph (3), by striking the period and inserting ", and", and

(C) by inserting after paragraph (3), the following new paragraph:

"(4) a description of the information available to beneficiaries under this title pursuant to regulations issued by the Secretary under section 1144."

(b) MEDICAID PROGRAM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 1902(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)), is amended—

(A) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (54),

(B) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (58) (as added by section 4751(a)(1)(C) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990) and inserting a semicolon,

(C) by redesignating the second paragraph (58) (as added by section 4752(c)(1)(C) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990) as paragraph (59) and by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and", and

(D) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(60) provide for an outreach program informing individuals who receive medical assistance under this title of the information available to such individuals pursuant to regulations issued by the Secretary under section 1144."

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (1) shall apply to calendar quarters beginning on or after January 1, 1994.

(B) GENERAL RULE.—In the case of a State which the Secretary determines requires State legislation (other than legislation authorizing or appropriating funds) in order to comply with paragraph (1), the State shall not be regarded as failing to comply with such paragraph solely on the basis of its failure to meet the requirements of such paragraph before the first day of the first calendar quarter beginning after the close of the first regular session of the State legislature that begins after the date of the enactment of this Act. For purposes of the previous sentence, in the case of a State that has a 2-year legislative session, each year of such session shall be deemed to be a separate regular session of the State legislature.

TITLE IV—PATIENT'S RIGHT TO DECLINE MEDICAL TREATMENT

SEC. 401. RIGHT TO DECLINE MEDICAL TREATMENT.

(a) RIGHTS OF COMPETENT ADULTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), a State may not restrict the right of a competent adult to consent to, or to decline, medical treatment.

(2) LIMITATIONS.—

(A) AFFECT ON THIRD PARTIES.—A State may impose limitations on the right of a competent adult to decline treatment if such limitations protect third parties (including minor children) from harm.

(B) TREATMENT WHICH IS NOT MEDICALLY INDICATED.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to require that any individual be offered, or that any individual may demand, medical treatment which the health care provider does not have available, or which is futile, or which is otherwise not medically indicated.

(b) RIGHTS OF INCAPACITATED ADULTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding incapacity, each adult has a right to consent to, or to decline, medical treatment. Except as provided in subsection (a)(2)(A), States may not restrict the right to consent to, or to decline, medical treatment as exercised by an adult through the documents specified in this subsection, or through similar documents or other written methods of directive which clearly and convincingly evidence the adult's treatment choices.

(2) ADVANCE DIRECTIVES AND POWERS OF ATTORNEY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—In order to facilitate the communication, despite incapacity, of an adult's treatment choices, the Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereafter in this title referred to as the "Secretary"), in consultation with the Attorney General, shall develop a national advance directive form that—

(i) shall not limit or otherwise restrict, except as provided in subsection (a)(2)(A), an adult's right to consent to, or to decline, medical treatment; and

(ii) shall, at a minimum—

(I) provide the means for an adult to declare such adult's own treatment choices in the event of a terminal condition;

(II) provide the means for an adult to declare, at such adult's option, treatment choices in the event of other conditions (such as persistent vegetative state) which are chronic and debilitating, which are medically incurable, and from which such adult likely will not recover; and

(III) provide the means by which an adult may, at such adult's option, declare such adult's wishes with respect to all forms of medical treatment, including forms of medical treatment such as the provision of nutrition and hydration by artificial means which may, in some circumstances, relatively nonburdensome.

(B) NATIONAL DURABLE POWER OF ATTORNEY FORM.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Attorney General, shall develop a national durable power of attorney form for health care decisionmaking. The form shall provide a means for any adult to designate another adult or adults to exercise the same decisionmaking powers which would, under State law, otherwise be exercised by next of kin.

(C) HONORED BY ALL HEALTH CARE PROVIDERS.—The national advance directive and durable power of attorney forms developed by the Secretary shall be honored by all health care providers.

(D) LIMITATIONS.—No individual shall be required to execute an advance directive.

This title makes no presumption concerning the intention of an individual who has not executed an advance directive. An advance directive shall be sufficient, but not necessary, proof of an adult's treatment choices with respect to the circumstances addressed in the advance directive.

(3) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "incapacity" means the inability to understand the nature and consequences of health care decisions (including the intended benefits and foreseeable risks of, and alternatives to, proposed treatment options), and to reach informed decisions concerning health care. Individuals who are incapacitated include adjudicated incompetents and individuals who have not been adjudicated incompetent but who, nonetheless, lack the capacity to formulate or communicate decisions concerning health care.

(c) HEALTH CARE PROVIDERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—No health care provider may provide treatment to an adult contrary to the adult's wishes as expressed personally, by an advance directive as provided for in subsection (b)(2), or by a similar written advance directive form or another written method of directive which clearly and convincingly evidence the adult's treatment choices. A health provider who acts in good faith pursuant to the preceding sentence shall be immune from criminal or civil liability or discipline for professional misconduct.

(2) HEALTH CARE PROVIDERS UNDER THE MEDICARE AND MEDICAID PROGRAMS.—Any health care provider who knowingly provides services to an adult contrary to the adult's wishes as expressed personally, by an advance directive as provided for in subsection (b)(2), or by a similar written advance directive form or another written method of directive which clearly and convincingly evidence the adult's treatment choices, shall be denied payment for such services under titles XVIII and XIX of the Social Security Act.

(3) TRANSFERS.—Health care providers who object to the provision of medical care in accordance with an adult's wishes shall transfer the adult to the care of another health care provider.

(d) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, the term "adult" means an individual who is 18 years of age or older.

SEC. 402. FEDERAL RIGHTS ENFORCEABLE IN FEDERAL COURTS.

The rights recognized in this title may be enforced by filing a civil action in an appropriate district court of the United States.

SEC. 403. SUICIDE AND HOMICIDE.

Nothing in this title shall be construed to permit, condone, authorize, or approve suicide or mercy killing, or any affirmative act to end a human life.

SEC. 404. RIGHTS GRANTED BY STATES.

Nothing in this title shall impair or supersede rights granted by State law which exceed the rights recognized by this title.

SEC. 405. EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as specified in subsection (b), written policies and written information adopted by health care providers pursuant to sections 4206 and 4751 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (Public Law 101-508), shall be modified within 6 months of enactment of this title to conform to the provisions of this title.

(b) DELAY PERIOD FOR UNIFORM FORMS.—Health care providers shall modify any written forms distributed as written information under sections 4206 and 4751 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (Public Law 101-508) not later than 6 months after promulgation of the forms referred to in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 401(b)(2) by the Secretary.

SEC. 406. INFORMATION PROVIDED TO CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS.

The Secretary shall provide on a periodic basis written information regarding an individual's right to consent to, or to decline, medical treatment as provided in this title to individual's who are beneficiaries under titles II, XVI, XVIII, and XIX of the Social Security Act.

SEC. 407. RECOMMENDATIONS TO THE CONGRESS ON ISSUES RELATING TO A PATIENT'S RIGHT OF SELF-DETERMINATION.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act the Secretary shall provide recommendations to the Congress concerning the medical, legal, ethical, social, and educational issues related to this title. In developing recommendations under this section the Secretary shall address the following issues:

(1) the contents of the forms referred to in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 401(b)(2);

(2) issues pertaining to the education and training of health care professionals concerning patients' self-determination rights;

(3) issues pertaining to health care professionals' duties with respect to patients' rights, and health care professionals' roles in identifying, assessing, and presenting for patient consideration medically indicated treatment options; and

(4) such other issues as the Secretary may identify.

SEC. 408. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This title shall take effect on the date that is 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

TITLE V—PRIMARY AND PREVENTIVE CARE PROVIDERS

SEC. 501. INCREASING PAYMENTS TO CERTAIN NONPHYSICIAN PROVIDERS UNDER THE MEDICARE PROGRAM.

(a) INCREASE IN PAYMENTS TO NURSE PRACTITIONERS, CLINICAL NURSE SPECIALISTS, CERTIFIED NURSE MIDWIVES, AND PHYSICIAN ASSISTANTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 1833(a)(1) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395l(a)(1)) is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (K), by striking "80 percent" and all that follows through "physician" and inserting "97 percent of the fee schedule amount provided under section 1848 for the same service performed by a physician";

"(A) payment under this part may only be made on an assignment-related basis; and

"(B) the prevailing charges determined under paragraph (3) shall not exceed—

"(i) in the case of services performed as an assistant at surgery, 97 percent of the amount that would otherwise be recognized if performed by a physician who is serving as an assistant at surgery, or

"(ii) in other cases, 97 percent of the fee schedule amount specified in section 1848 for such services performed by physicians who are not specialists.";

(3) DIRECT PAYMENT FOR ALL NURSE PRACTITIONERS OR CLINICAL NURSE SPECIALISTS.—Section 1832(a)(2)(B)(iv) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395k(a)(2)(B)(iv)) is amended by striking "provided in a rural area (as defined in section 1886(d)(2)(D))".

(4) REMOVAL OF RESTRICTIONS ON SETTINGS.—Section 1861(s)(2)(K) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395x(s)(2)(K)) is amended—

(A) in clause (i), by striking "(I) in a hospital" and all that follows through "professional shortage area,";

(B) in clause (ii), by striking "in a skilled" and all that follows through "1919(a)"; and

(C) in clause (iii), by striking "in a rural" and all that follows through "(d)(2)(D))".

(b) BONUS PAYMENT FOR SERVICES PROVIDED IN HEALTH PROFESSIONAL SHORTAGE AREAS.—Section 1833(m) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395l(m)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "(m)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) In the case of services of a nurse practitioner, clinical nurse specialist, physician assistant, certified nurse midwife, or certified registered nurse anesthetist furnished to an individual described in paragraph (1) in an area that is a health professional shortage area as described in such paragraph, in addition to the amount otherwise paid under this part, there shall also be paid to such service provider (or to an employer in the cases described in subparagraph (C) of section 1842(b)(6)) (on a monthly or quarterly basis) from the Federal Supplementary Medical Trust Fund an amount equal to 10 percent of the payment amount for such services under this part."

SEC. 502. REQUIRING COVERAGE OF CERTAIN NONPHYSICIAN PROVIDERS UNDER THE MEDICAID PROGRAM.

Section 1905(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396d(a)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (21), by striking "and" and inserting a semicolon;

(2) in paragraph (24), by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon;

(3) by redesignating paragraphs (22), (23), and (24) as paragraphs (25), (22), and (23), respectively;

(4) by inserting after paragraph (23) the following new paragraph:

"(24) services furnished by a physician assistant, nurse practitioner, clinical nurse specialist (as defined in section 1861(aa)(5)), and certified registered nurse anesthetist (as defined in section 1861(bb)(2)); and";

(5) by striking the semicolon at the end of paragraph (25), as redesignated, and inserting a period; and

(6) by transferring and inserting paragraph (25), as redesignated, after paragraph (24).

SEC. 503. MEDICAL STUDENT TUTORIAL PROGRAM GRANTS.

Part C of title VII of the Public Health Service Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 753. MEDICAL STUDENT TUTORIAL PROGRAM GRANTS.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish a program to award grants to eligible schools of medicine or osteopathic medicine to enable such schools to provide medical students for tutorial programs or as participants in clinics designed to interest high school or college students in careers in general medical practice.

"(b) APPLICATION.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, a school of medicine or osteopathic medicine shall prepare and submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require, including assurances that the school will use amounts received under the grant in accordance with subsection (c).

"(c) USE OF FUNDS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Amounts received under a grant awarded under this section shall be used to—

"(A) fund programs under which students of the grantee are provided as tutors for high school and college students in the areas of math, science, health promotion and prevention, first aide, nutrition and prenatal care;

"(B) fund programs under which students of the grantee are provided as participants in clinics and seminars in the areas described in paragraph (1); and

"(C) conduct summer institutes for high school and college students to promote careers in medicine.

"(2) DESIGN OF PROGRAMS.—The programs, institutes and other activities conducted by grantees under paragraph (1) shall be designed to—

"(A) give medical students desiring to practice general medicine access to the local community;

"(B) provide information to high school and college students concerning medical school and the general practice of medicine; and

"(C) promote careers in general medicine.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1995."

SEC. 504. GENERAL MEDICAL PRACTICE GRANTS.

Part C of title VII of the Public Health Service Act (as amended by section 503) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 754. GENERAL MEDICAL PRACTICE GRANTS.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish a program to award grants to eligible public or private nonprofit schools of medicine or osteopathic medicine, hospitals, residency programs in family medicine or pediatrics, or to a consortium of such entities, to enable such entities to develop effective strategies for recruiting medical students interested in the practice of general medicine and placing such students into general practice positions upon graduation.

"(b) APPLICATION.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, an entity of the type described in subsection (a) shall prepare and submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require, including assurances that the entity will use amounts received under the grant in accordance with subsection (c).

"(c) USE OF FUNDS.—Amounts received under a grant awarded under this section shall be used to fund programs under which effective strategies are developed and implemented for recruiting medical students interested in the practice of general medicine and placing such students into general practice positions upon graduation.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, $25,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1994 through 1998, and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years thereafter."

(c) SUBSECTION (d) HOSPITALS.—Section 1886(d)(5)(B) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww(d)(5)(B)) is amended by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(v) In determining such adjustment the Secretary shall count only those interns and residents who are in the initial 3 years of postgraduate medical training."

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall be effective for cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1993.

TITLE VI—MEDICARE PREFERRED

PROVIDER DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

SEC. 601. ESTABLISHMENT OF MEDICARE PRIMARY AND SPECIALTY PREFERRED PROVIDER ORGANIZATION DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act the Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereafter referred to in this section as the "Secretary") shall provide for up to 10 demonstration projects to test the effectiveness of providing payment under the Medicare program under title XVIII of the Social Security Act for primary and specialty procedures and services (as determined appropriate by the Secretary) furnished by preferred provider organizations. The demonstration projects provided for under this section by the Secretary shall—

(1) test the cost-effectiveness of preferred provider organizations furnishing primary and specialty services in controlling the volume of such services performed or ordered by physicians, and nonphysician providers such as nurse practitioners, clinical nurse specialists, certified nurse midwives, certified registered nurse anesthetists, and physician assistants, for which payment is made under title XVIII of the Social Security Act;

(2) gather information on factors which may encourage medicare beneficiaries to participate in a preferred provider organizational network;

(3) examine the efficacy of permanently establishing managed care networks of primary and specialty service providers; and

(4) examine the factors necessary to increase the quality and efficiency of primary and specialty services furnished by preferred provider networks in order to realize increased savings under the medicare program and to increase medicare beneficiary participation in such networks.

(b) WAIVER OF MEDICARE REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary may waive such requirements of title XVIII of the Social Security Act as the Secretary determines necessary in conducting demonstration programs under this section, including—

- (1) coinsurance requirements;
- (2) provider payment arrangements;
- (3) beneficiary deductibles; and
- (4) reimbursement for nonphysician providers.

(c) DURATION OF PROJECTS.—The demonstration projects provided for under this section shall be conducted for a period not to exceed 3 years from the date of the enactment of this Act.

(d) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of expiration of the demonstration projects conducted under this section the Secretary shall report to the Congress on the results of the demonstration projects including recommendations for modifications in the medicare program to increase the utilization of preferred provider organizations in providing primary and specialty services under such program.

TITLE VII—COST CONTAINMENT

SEC. 701. NEW DRUG CLINICAL TRIALS PROGRAM.

Part B of title IV of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 284 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

“SEC. 409A. NEW DRUG CLINICAL TRIALS PROGRAM.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the National Institutes of Health (hereafter referred to in this section as the ‘Director’) is authorized to establish and implement a program for the conduct of clinical trials with respect to new drugs and disease treatments determined to be promising by the Director. In determining the drugs and disease treatments that are to be the subject of such clinical trials, the Director shall give priority to those drugs and disease treatments targeted toward the diseases determined—

- “(1) to be the most costly to treat;
- “(2) to have the highest mortality; or
- “(3) to affect the greatest number of individuals.

“(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, $120,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary in each of the fiscal years 1995 through 1998.”

SEC. 702. MEDICAL TREATMENT EFFECTIVENESS.

(a) RESEARCH ON COST-EFFECTIVE METHODS OF HEALTH CARE.—Section 926 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 299c-5) is amended—

“(b) DEFINITION.—For purposes of subsection (a), the term ‘policy of health insurance’ means any policy or other instrument by whatever name called whereby a contract of insurance is made, continued, or renewed with respect to the health of an individual or group of individuals.

“SEC. 4502. LIABILITY FOR TAX.

“The tax imposed by this subchapter shall be paid, on the basis of a return, by any person who makes, signs, issues, or sells any of the documents and instruments subject to the tax, or for whose use or benefit the same are made, signed, issued or sold. The United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof shall not be liable for the tax.”

(B) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of subchapters for chapter 36 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

“SUBCHAPTER G. TAX ON HEALTH INSURANCE POLICIES.”

(2) ESTABLISHMENT OF TRUST FUND.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter A of chapter 98 of such Code (relating to trust fund code) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

“SEC. 9512. TRUST FUND FOR MEDICAL TREATMENT OUTCOMES RESEARCH.

“(a) CREATION OF TRUST FUND.—There is established in the Treasury of the United States a trust fund to be known as the ‘Trust Fund for Medical Treatment Outcomes Research’ (hereafter referred to in this section as the ‘Trust Fund’), consisting of such amounts as may be appropriated or credited to the Trust Fund as provided in this section or section 9602(b).

“(b) TRANSFERS TO TRUST FUND.—There is hereby appropriated to the Trust Fund an amount equivalent to the taxes received in the Treasury under section 4501 (relating to tax on health insurance policies).

“(c) DISTRIBUTION OF AMOUNTS IN TRUST FUND.—On an annual basis the Secretary shall distribute the amounts in the Trust Fund to the Secretary of Health and Human Services. Such amounts shall be available to the Secretary of Health and Human Services to pay for research activities related to medical treatment outcomes.”

(B) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for subchapter A of chapter 98 of such Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

“Sec. 9512. Trust Fund for Medical Treatment Outcomes Research.”

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to policies issued after December 31, 1993.

SEC. 703. HEALTH CARE COST CONTROL—EXPENDITURE TARGETS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereafter referred to in this section as the ‘Secretary’), after considering the recommendations of the Health Care Cost Control Advisory Committee established under subsection (b), shall prepare and submit to the appropriate committees of the Congress a report concerning the establishment of national spending targets for health care and health care services. Such report shall contain the recommendations of the Secretary concerning the feasibility—

(1) for controlling the cost of health care, reducing cost shifting and maintaining the quality of care;

(2) of establishing national targets for health expenditures;

(3) of establishing national reimbursement targets for hospital services;

(4) of establishing national reimbursement targets for physicians’ services; and

(5) of establishing national reimbursement targets for prescription drug services.

(b) HEALTH CARE COST CONTROL ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—There shall be established a Health Care Cost Control Advisory Committee (hereafter referred to in this subsection as the ‘Committee’).

(2) MEMBERSHIP.—The Committee shall be composed of 8 individuals appointed by the Secretary, representing—

- (A) physicians;
- (B) hospitals;
- (C) pharmacies;
- (D) private insurers;

(C) APPLICATION OF THE ACT.—The provisions of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) shall not apply with respect to the Committee.

(D) SUPPORT.—The Secretary shall supply such necessary office facilities, office supplies, support services, and related expenses as necessary to carry out the functions of the Committee.

TITLE VIII—LONG-TERM CARE

Subtitle A—Tax Treatment of Qualified Long-Term Care Insurance Policies

SEC. 801. AMENDMENT OF 1986 CODE.

Except as otherwise expressly provided, whenever in this title an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

SEC. 802. DEFINITIONS OF QUALIFIED LONG-TERM CARE INSURANCE AND PREMIUMS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 79 (relating to definitions) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 7705. QUALIFIED LONG-TERM CARE INSURANCE AND PREMIUMS.

"(a) QUALIFIED LONG-TERM CARE INSURANCE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this title, the term 'qualified long-term care insurance' means insurance under a policy or rider, issued by a qualified issuer, which—

"(A) provides coverage for not less than 12 consecutive months for each covered person,

"(B) provides benefits on an expense incurred, indemnity, disability, prepaid, capitation, or other basis,

"(C) provides benefits for—

"(i) medically necessary diagnostic, preventive, therapeutic, rehabilitation, or maintenance services,

"(ii) personal care services necessitated by physical disability, or

"(iii) preventive, therapeutic, rehabilitation, maintenance, or personal care services necessitated by cognitive impairment or the loss of functional capacity, when provided in a nursing home, a respite care facility, the home of the covered individual, or any other setting which is not an acute care unit of a hospital or a medical clinic, and

"(D) provides coverage for care described in subparagraph (C) (other than nursing home care) equal to not less than 47.5 percent of the national median cost of nursing care coverage, as determined by the Secretary.

"(2) QUALIFIED ISSUER.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'qualified issuer' means any of the following, if subject to the jurisdiction and regulation of at least 1 State insurance department:

"(A) Private insurance company.

"(B) Fraternal benefit society.

"(C) Nonprofit health corporation.

"(D) Nonprofit hospital corporation.

"(E) Nonprofit medical service corporation.

"(F) Prepaid health plan.

"(b) QUALIFIED LONG-TERM CARE PREMIUMS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this title, the term 'qualified long-term care premiums' means the amount paid during a taxable year for qualified long-term care insurance covering an individual, to the extent such amount does not exceed the limitation determined under the following table:

"In the case of an individual with an attained age before the close of the taxable year of:	The limitation is:
40 or less	$200
More than 40 but not more than 50	375
More than 50 but not more than 60	750
More than 60 but not more than 70	1 900
More than 70	2,000.

"(2) INDEXING.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1993, each dollar amount contained in paragraph (1) shall be increased by the medical care cost adjustment for such taxable year. If any increase determined under the preceding sentence is not a multiple of $10, such increase shall be rounded to the nearest multiple of $10.

"(B) MEDICAL CARE COST ADJUSTMENT.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the medical care cost adjustment for any taxable year is the percentage (if any) by which—

"(i) the medical care component of the Consumer Price Index (as defined in section 1(f)(5)) for August of the calendar year preceding the calendar year in which the taxable year begins, exceeds

"(ii) such component for August of 1992."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 79 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 7704 the following new item:

"Sec. 7705. Qualified long-term care insurance and premiums."

SEC. 803. TREATMENT OF QUALIFIED LONG-TERM CARE INSURANCE AS ACCIDENT AND HEALTH INSURANCE FOR PURPOSES OF TAXATION OF INSURANCE COMPANIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 818 (relating to other definitions and special rules) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(g) QUALIFIED LONG-TERM CARE INSURANCE TREATED AS ACCIDENT OR HEALTH INSURANCE.—For purposes of this subchapter, any reference to noncancellable accident or health insurance contracts shall be treated as including a reference to qualified long-term care insurance."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 804. TREATMENT OF ACCELERATED DEATH BENEFITS UNDER LIFE INSURANCE CONTRACTS.

(a) EXCLUSION OF AMOUNTS RECEIVED.—Section 101 (relating to certain death benefits) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(g) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN ACCELERATED DEATH BENEFITS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, any amount paid to an individual under a life insurance contract on the life of an insured who is a terminally ill individual, who has a dread disease, or who has been permanently confined to a nursing home shall be treated as an amount paid by reason of the death of such insured.

"(2) TERMINALLY ILL INDIVIDUAL.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'terminally ill individual' means an individual who has been certified by a physician, licensed under State law, as having an illness or physical condition which can reasonably be expected to result in death in 12 months or less.

"(3) DREAD DISEASE.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'dread disease' means a medical condition which has required or requires extraordinary medical intervention without which the insured would die, or a medical condition which would, in the absence of extensive or extraordinary medical treatment, result in a drastically limited life span.

"(4) PERMANENTLY CONFINED TO A NURSING HOME.—For purposes of this subsection, an individual has been permanently confined to a nursing home if the individual is presently confined to a nursing home and has been certified by a physician, licensed under State law, as having an illness or physical condition which can reasonably be expected to result in the individual remaining in a nursing home for the rest of the individual's life."

(b) TREATMENT OF QUALIFIED ACCELERATED DEATH BENEFIT RIDERS AS LIFE INSURANCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 818 (relating to other definitions and special rules), as amended by section 803, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection: "(h) QUALIFIED ACCELERATED DEATH BENEFIT RIDERS TREATED AS LIFE INSURANCE.—For purposes of this part—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Any reference to a life insurance contract shall be treated as including a reference to a qualified accelerated death benefit rider on such contract.

"(2) QUALIFIED ACCELERATED DEATH BENEFIT RIDER.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualified accelerated death benefit rider' means any rider or addendum on, or other provision of, a life insurance contract which provides for payments to an individual on the life of an insured upon such insured becoming a terminally ill individual (as defined in section 101(g)(2)), incurring a dread disease (as defined in section 101(g)(3)), or being permanently confined to a nursing home (as defined in section 101(g)(4))."

(2) DEFINITIONS OF LIFE INSURANCE AND MODIFIED ENDOWMENT CONTRACTS.—

(A) RIDER TREATED AS QUALIFIED ADDITIONAL BENEFIT.—Subparagraph (A) of section 7702(f)(5) (relating to definition of life insurance contract) is amended by striking "or" at the end of clause (iv), by redesignating clause (v) as clause (vi), and by inserting after clause (iv) the following new clause:

"(v) any qualified accelerated death benefit rider (as defined in section 818(h)(2)), or any qualified long-term care insurance which reduces the death benefit, or"

(B) TRANSITIONAL RULE.—For purposes of applying section 7702 or 7702A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to any contract (or determining whether either such section applies to such contract), the issuance of a rider or addendum on, or other provision of, a life insurance contract permitting the acceleration of death benefits (as described in section 101(g)) or for qualified long-term care insurance shall not be treated as a modification or material change of such contract.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1992.

Subtitle B—Tax Incentives for Purchase of Qualified Long-Term Care Insurance

SEC. 811. CREDIT FOR QUALIFIED LONG-TERM CARE PREMIUMS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subpart C of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 (relating to refundable credits) is amended by redesignating section 35 as section 36 and by inserting after section 34 the following new section:

"SEC. 35. LONG-TERM CARE INSURANCE CREDIT.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—In the case of an individual, there shall be allowed as a credit against the tax imposed by this subtitle for the taxable year an amount equal to the applicable percentage of the qualified long-term care premiums (as defined in section 7705(b)) paid during such taxable year for such individual or the spouse of such individual.

"(b) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the term 'applicable percentage' means 28 percent reduced (but not below zero) by 1 percentage point for each $1,000 (or fraction thereof) by which the taxpayer's adjusted gross income for the taxable year exceeds the base amount.

"(2) BASE AMOUNT.—For purposes of paragraph (1) the term 'base amount' means—

"(A) except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, $25,000.

"(B) $40,000 in the case of a joint return, and

"(C) zero in the case of a taxpayer who—
 "(i) is married at the close of the taxable year (within the meaning of section 7703) but does not file a joint return for such taxable year, and

"(ii) does not live apart from his or her spouse at all times during the taxable year.

"(c) COORDINATION WITH MEDICAL EXPENSE DEDUCTION.—Any amount allowed as a credit under this section shall not be taken into account under section 213."

"SEC. 136. DISTRIBUTIONS FROM INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT PLANS AND SECTION 401(k) PLANS FOR QUALIFIED LONG-TERM CARE PREMIUMS AND EXPENSES.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—In the case of an individual, gross income shall not include any qualified distribution.

"(b) QUALIFIED DISTRIBUTION.—For purposes of this section, the term 'qualified distribution' means any amount distributed from an individual retirement plan or a section 401(k) plan during the taxable year if such amount is used during such year—

"(1) to pay qualified long-term care premiums (as defined in section 7705(b)) for the benefit of the payee or distributee or the spouse of the payee or distributee, if such policy may not be surrendered for cash, or

"(2) to pay long-term care expenses (as described in section 7705(a)(1)(C)) of such an individual.

"(c) SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) QUALIFIED DISTRIBUTIONS FROM IRA DEEMED MADE FIRST FROM DESIGNATED NON-DEDUCTIBLE CONTRIBUTIONS.—For purposes of section 72, qualified distributions from an individual retirement plan shall be treated as made from designated nondeductible contributions to the extent thereof and then from other amounts.

"(2) SPECIAL RULES FOR SECTION 401(k) PLANS.—

"(A) QUALIFIED DISTRIBUTIONS FROM SECTION 401(k) PLAN MAY NOT EXCEED ELECTIVE DEFERRALS.—This section shall not apply to any distribution from a section 401(k) plan to the extent the aggregate amount of such distributions for the use described in subsection (a) exceeds the aggregate employer contributions made pursuant to the employee's election under section 401(k)(2) (and the income thereon).

"(B) WITHDRAWALS NOT TO CAUSE DISQUALIFICATION.—A plan shall not be treated as failing to satisfy the requirements of section 401, and an arrangement shall not be treated as failing to be a qualified cash or deferred arrangement (as defined in section 401(k)(2)), merely because under the plan or arrangement distributions are permitted which are excludable from gross income by reason of this section.

"(d) SECTION 401(k) PLAN.—For purposes of this section, the term 'section 401(k) plan' means any employer plan which meets the requirements of section 401(a) and which includes a qualified cash or deferred arrangement (as defined in section 401(k))."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Subsection (k) of section 401 is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(11) CROSS REFERENCE.—

"For provision permitting tax-free withdrawals for qualified long-term care premiums and expenses, see section 136."

(2) Subsection (d) of section 408 is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(8) CROSS REFERENCE.—

"For provision permitting tax-free withdrawals for qualified long-term care premiums and expenses, see section 136."

(3) The table of sections for such part III is amended by striking the item relating to section 136 and inserting the following new items:

"Sec. 136. Distributions from individual retirement plans and section 401(k) plans for qualified long-term care premiums and expenses.

"Sec. 137. Cross references to other Acts."

(c) INCREASE IN AMOUNT OF DEDUCTIBLE CONTRIBUTIONS TO INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT PLANS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subparagraph (A) of section 219(b)(1) (relating to maximum amount of deduction) is amended by striking "$2,000" and inserting "$4,000".

(2) SPOUSAL IRA.—Paragraph (2) of section 219(c) (relating to special rules for certain married individuals) is amended by striking "$2,250" and "$2,000" and inserting "$4,500" and "$4,000", respectively.

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(A) Section 408(a)(1) is amended by striking "in excess of $2,000 on behalf of any individual" and inserting "on behalf of any individual in excess of the amount in effect for such taxable year under section 219(b)(1)(A)".

(B) Section 408(b)(2)(B) is amended by striking "$2,000" and inserting "the dollar amount in effect under section 219(b)(1)(A)".

(C) Section 408(j) is amended by striking "$2,000".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 817. EXCLUSION FROM GROSS INCOME FOR AMOUNTS RECEIVED ON CANCELLATION OF LIFE INSURANCE POLICIES AND USED FOR QUALIFIED LONG-TERM CARE INSURANCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) EXCLUSION FROM GROSS INCOME.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Part III of subchapter B of chapter 1 (relating to items specifically excluded from gross income), as amended by section 216, is further amended by redesignating section 137 as section 138 and by inserting after section 136 the following new section:

"SEC. 137. AMOUNTS RECEIVED ON CANCELLATION, ETC., OF LIFE INSURANCE CONTRACTS AND USED TO PAY PREMIUMS FOR QUALIFIED LONG-TERM CARE INSURANCE.

"No amount (which but for this section would be includible in the gross income of an individual) shall be included in gross income on the whole or partial surrender, cancellation, or exchange of any life insurance contract during the taxable year if—

"(1) such individual has attained age 59½ on or before the date of the transaction, and

"(2) the amount otherwise includible in gross income is used during such year to pay for any policy of qualified long-term care insurance which—

"(A) is for the benefit of such individual or the spouse of such individual if such spouse has attained age 59½ on or before the date of the transaction, and

"(B) may not be surrendered for cash."

(B) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for such part III is amended by striking the last item and inserting the following new items:

"Sec. 137. Amounts received on cancellation, etc., of life insurance contracts and used to pay premiums for qualified long-term care insurance.

"Sec. 138. Cross references to other Acts."

(2) CERTAIN EXCHANGES NOT TAXABLE.—Subsection (a) of section 1035 (relating to certain exchanges of insurance contracts) is amended by striking the period at the end of paragraph (3) and inserting "; or", and by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) in the case of an individual who has attained age 59½, a contract of life insurance or an endowment or annuity contract for a policy of qualified long-term care insurance, if such policy may not be surrendered for cash."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 818. USE OF GAIN FROM SALE OF PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE FOR PURCHASE OF QUALIFIED LONG-TERM HEALTH CARE INSURANCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (d) of section 121 (relating to 1-time exclusion of gain from sale of principal residence by individual who has attained age 55) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(10) ELIGIBILITY OF HOME EQUITY CONVERSION SALE-LEASEBACK TRANSACTION FOR EXCLUSION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the term 'sale or exchange' includes a home equity conversion sale-leaseback transaction.

"(B) HOME EQUITY CONVERSION SALE-LEASEBACK TRANSACTION.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'home equity conversion sale-leaseback' means a transaction in which—

"(i) the seller-lessee—

"(I) has attained the age of 55 before the date of the transaction,

"(II) sells property which during the 5-year period ending on the date of the transaction has been owned and used as a principal residence by such seller-lessee for periods aggregating 3 years or more,

"(III) uses a portion of the proceeds from such sale to purchase a policy of qualified long-term care insurance, which policy may not be surrendered for cash,

"(IV) obtains occupancy rights in such property pursuant to a written lease requiring a fair rental, and

"(V) receives no option to repurchase the property at a price less than the fair market price of the property unencumbered by any leaseback at the time such option is exercised, and

"(ii) the purchaser-lessor—

"(I) is a person,

"(II) is contractually responsible for the risks and burdens of ownership and receives the benefits of ownership (other than the seller-lessee's occupancy rights) after the date of such transaction, and

"(III) pays a purchase price for the property that is not less than the fair market price of such property encumbered by a leaseback, and taking into account the terms of the lease.

"(C) ADDITIONAL DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of subparagraph (B)—

"(i) OCCUPANCY RIGHTS.—The term 'occupancy rights' means the right to occupy the property for any period of time, including a period of time measured by the life of the seller-lessee on the date of the sale-leaseback transaction (or the life of the surviving seller-lessee, in the case of jointly held occupancy rights), or a periodic term subject to a continuing right of renewal by the seller-lessee (or by the surviving seller-lessee, in the case of jointly held occupancy rights).

"(ii) FAIR RENTAL.—The term 'fair rental' means a rental for any subsequent year which equals or exceeds the rental for the first year of a sale-leaseback transaction."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to sales after December 31, 1992, in taxable years beginning after such date.

Subtitle C—Medicaid Amendments

SEC. 821. EXPANSION OF MEDICAID ELIGIBILITY FOR LONG-TERM CARE BENEFITS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title XIX of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"ELIGIBILITY FOR LONG-TERM CARE BENEFITS

"SEC. 1931. (a) ELIGIBILITY FOR NURSING FACILITY SERVICES.—Any individual—

"(1) who is 65 years of age or older,

"(2) who has resources (including resources of the individual's spouse) which do not exceed the resource limitation specified in subsection (c)(1),

"(3) who is not otherwise eligible for medical assistance for nursing facility services under this title, and

"(4) who has been provided 30 months of nursing facility services (during a period in which the individual required the level of care provided in a nursing facility) during the previous 48 months (or, with respect to the application of subsection (e), 72 months), is eligible, notwithstanding any other provisions of this title, for medical assistance under this title for nursing facility services so long as the individual continues to meet the requirements of this subsection (other than paragraph (4)) and is confined to a nursing facility or otherwise requires the same level of care as is provided in a nursing facility.

(b) ELIGIBILITY FOR HOME AND COMMUNITY-BASED CARE.—Any individual—

"(1) who is 65 years of age or older,

"(2) who has resources (including resources of the individual's spouse) which do not exceed the resource limitation specified in subsection (c)(1), and

"(3) who is not otherwise eligible for medical assistance for home and community-based long-term care under this title, is eligible, notwithstanding any other provisions of this title, for medical assistance under this title for home and community-based long-term care so long as the individual continues to meet the requirements of this subsection and requires the same level of care as is provided in a nursing facility.

"(c) RESOURCE LIMITATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the resource limitation specified in this subsection is $500,000, increased, for each year after 1993, by the percentage increase in the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers (all items; U.S. city average) from July 1992 to July of the previous year, rounded (if not a multiple of $1,000) to the nearest $1,000.

"(2) CERTAIN PERSONAL PROPERTY NOT INCLUDED.—Personal property items with a fair market value less than $5,000 in the aggregate shall not be included in any calculation of resources under subsections (a) and (b) which are subject to the resource limitation specified in paragraph (1).

"(d) TREATMENT OF LEVEL OF CARE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of subsections (a) and (b), an individual is considered to require the level of care provided in a nursing facility if the individual cannot perform (without substantial human assistance) at least 3 activities of daily living or needs substantial human assistance because of cognitive or other mental impairment (including Alzheimer's disease).

"(2) ACTIVITIES OF DAILY LIVING DEFINED.—The 'activities of daily living' referred to in paragraph (1) are the following: eating, bathing, dressing, toileting, and transferring in and out of a bed or in and out of a chair.

"(e) SUBSTITUTION OF EXPENSES INCURRED FOR QUALIFIED HOME CARE FOR MONTHS IN NURSING FACILITY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In determining whether an individual has been provided 30 months of nursing facility services under subsection (a)(4), expenses incurred (whether paid for by insurance, themselves, or relatives but not including expenses for which payment is made under this title, by the Department of Veterans Affairs, the Department of Defense, or other Federal programs) for qualified home care (as defined in paragraph (3)) shall be taken into account in the manner specified in paragraph (2).

"(2) CONVERTING EXPENSES TO MONTHS.—Expenses described in paragraph (1) shall be converted to months of nursing facility services by dividing such expenses by the national median monthly cost (as determined by the Secretary, and using a weighted average for both public and private nursing facilities) for nursing facility services in the month in which the expenses are incurred.

"(3) QUALIFIED HOME CARE DEFINED.—In this subsection, the term 'qualified home care' means home and community-based services described in section 1915(d)."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 1902(a) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)), as amended by section 302, is further amended—

(1) in paragraph (10)—

(A) in clause (i) of subparagraph (A), by striking "or" at the end of subclause (VI), by striking the semicolon at the end of subclause (VII) and inserting "; or", and by adding at the end the following:

"(VIII) who are described in subsections (a) and (b) of section 1931"; and

(B) in the matter following subparagraph (F)—

(i) by striking "; and (XI)"; and inserting "(XI)";

(ii) by striking "; and (XI)" and inserting "(XII); and

(iii) by inserting before the semicolon at the end the following: "; and (XIII) the making available of medical assistance for certain nursing facility services and home and community-based long-term care in accordance with section 1931 shall not, by reason of this paragraph, require such assistance to be made available to other individuals";

(2) in paragraph (59), by striking "; and" and inserting a semicolon,

(3) in paragraph (60), by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and", and

(4) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(61) provides for medical assistance for certain nursing facility services and home and community-based long-term care in accordance with section 1931."

SEC. 822. EFFECTIVE DATE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this subtitle apply (except as provided under subsection (b)) to payments under title XIX of the Social Security Act for calendar quarters beginning on or after 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, without regard to whether regulations to implement such amendments are promulgated by such date.

(b) DELAY PERMITTED IF STATE LEGISLATION REQUIRED.—In the case of a State plan for medical assistance under title XIX of the Social Security Act which the Secretary of Health and Human Services determines requires State legislation (other than legislation authorizing or appropriating funds) in order for the plan to meet the additional requirements imposed by the amendments made by this subtitle, the State plan shall not be regarded as failing to comply with the requirements of such title solely on the basis of its failure to meet these additional requirements before the first day of the first calendar quarter beginning after the close of the first regular session of the State legislature that begins after the date of the enactment of this Act. For purposes of the previous sentence, in the case of a State that has a 2-year legislative session, each year of such session shall be deemed to be a separate regular session of the State legislature.

(c) TRANSITION.—In applying the amendments made by this subtitle, only months beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act may be counted toward meeting the 30-month deductible described in section 1931(a)(4) of the Social Security Act, as added by this subtitle.

By Mr. SPECTER (for himself and Mr. DOMENICI):

S. 19. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide economic growth incentives in 1993 and for no other purpose; to the Committee on Finance.

ECONOMIC RECOVERY ACT

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I am today introducing legislation intended to assure strong and sustained growth in our economy. The legislation includes the common elements of the economic recovery proposals made by President Bush and the economic recovery program passed by the Senate during the 102d Congress. Unfortunately, they did not become law. Notwithstanding recent optimistic reports about the state of our economy, I believe this plan remains very necessary for a solid economy; hence its reintroduction.

Recent reports suggests an upturn in our economy—consumers made significant expenditures during the holiday season, inventories are thinning, and orders for goods and factory output seem to be picking up. In fact, the National Bureau of Economic Research reported on December 22, 1992, its determination that the recession is over, having ended in March 1991.

However, sustained consumer spending of the type just experienced over the holidays is not expected. And the economic strength of some of our major trading partners remains in question. This could jeopardize the strength and sustainability of U.S. economic growth. Moreover, in view of the continuing lack of new job growth, I remain concerned that the recent signs of strength in our economy will remain just that—signs.

In order to move ahead with as far-reaching a program as possible, I urge enactment of the portions of the economic recovery proposals advanced by the President and the Senate. While it is not a perfect approach to take the commonly agreed upon provisions from the last Congress, it is, I believe, vastly preferable to no action at all.

In my judgment, we should enact a reduction in the capital gains tax. Unfortunately, that is not possible given the present opposition. As my colleagues will recall, during the 101st Congress the House of Representatives passed a capital gains tax cut, and in 1991 there were 56 votes in the Senate for that tax cut, which was insufficient for cloture.

In the immediate term, however, we must work to avoid the on-again, off-again economic recovery we have experienced during the last year. That is why I am introducing legislation comprised largely of the provisions that both sides agree will sustain a recovery.

The principal components of this legislation include: First, a $5,000 first-time homebuyer tax credit, which is estimated to stimulate approximately 215,000 housing starts and 415,000 new jobs; second, penalty-free IRA withdrawal for middle-income purchasers of homes and new automobiles, which last year was estimated to create between $40 billion and $120 billion in increased spending; third, a 15-percent investment tax allowance proposal, which would promote capital investment, modernization, and more rapid cost recovery; fourth, passive loss liberalization for real estate professionals intended to help stabilize the real estate market; and fifth, liberalization of the debt-financed income rules to facilitate investment in real estate by pension funds, also intended to stabilize real estate market values.

The first two provisions of this legislation, the $5,000 first-time homebuyers tax credit and penalty-free IRA withdrawals, would assist tremendously the homebuilding and automobile industries, the two industries that traditionally have led this country out of recessions. Under the credit for first-time homebuyers, a taxpayer would be entitled to a credit equal to 10 percent of the purchase price of the home up to a maximum of $5,000. The provision would also be available to first-time homebuyers buying older homes. According to the National Association of Home Builders, this provision would stimulate 215,000 housing starts and 415,000 additional jobs.

Similarly, the penalty-free IRA withdrawal provisions would assist the homebuilding industry. It would also assist the automobile industry. This provision would permit individuals with incomes under $75,000—$100,000 for married couples filing jointly—to withdraw penalty-free up to $10,000 from an IRA, 401(k), or Keogh plan, provided that the funds are expended on new automobiles or first-time home purchases within 6 months from withdrawal. The tax on such withdrawal would be due over the succeeding 4 years. However, in each year that the tax is due, taxpayers would have the option to either pay the tax on one-fourth of the withdrawal or retribute to their account one-fourth of the withdrawal and avoid such tax.

There are more than $800 billion in assets currently existing in IRA, 401(k), and Keogh retirement plans. This is a big pool of money, a modest amount of which could be accessed for the purpose of consumers making big ticket or capital expenditures—homes and cars. This is not a frivolous use of funds especially when it will strengthen our apparent economic recovery. Moreover, it would not be inconsistent with the saving purpose of IRA's because of the provision's short-term duration and because of the incentive to retribute the funds back to these accounts—namely, avoiding the tax due on the withdrawal.

Mr. President, when Senator DOMENICI and I offered this provision as an amendment to the first Senate tax bill in the last Congress, the Joint Committee on Taxation had estimated the cost of this measure as negligible; that is costing less than $1 million, over 5 years. The country's return on this investment would be great. I have received consumer spending estimates based on its provision ranging from approximately $40 billion—from the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System Chairman Alan Greenspan—to well over $120 billion according to the results of a consumer poll conducted by Interpublic Group of Companies, Inc., in New York. This poll was conducted back in December 1991, shortly after our predecessor bill, S. 1984, was introduced. Ninety days later, March 1992, Interpublic conducted a second poll refining its questions on S. 1984, and the results were even more encouraging. As stated by Mr. Philip Geier, chairman and CEO of Interpublic, in a letter to me dated April 3, 1992—which letter, I am informed, was also mailed to each member of the Senate Finance Committee and House Ways and Means Committee:

Bottom line is that [this] proposal would free up $32 billion from retirement plan savings to help get our economy moving. When multipliers are included the money Americans would use to complete their purchases results in a total of $153 billion—home purchase $116 billion; new car purchase $29 billion; home improvement $8 billion dollars that would move into our economy. * * *

Findings in the March 1992 survey make it very conclusive. This is a plan which Americans believe in. A plan from which they and our nation's economy will benefit. Clearly this proposal has a powerful triggering effect. It comes at a time when the effect of lowered interest rates is being blunted by the more restrictive consumer lending policies of our financial institutions. This proposal allows responsible access to funds. These will go to responsible investment. Economic activity will be triggered, jobs ensured and created. It provides a stimulus we need right now.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Interpublic Group letters dated December 24, 1991, and April 3, 1992, describing its poll results be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks, as well as a copy of the full page ad Interpublic placed in the March 6, 1992, edition of USA Today describing this proposal. I also ask unanimous consent that the Federal Reserve Board memorandum to me dated February 12, 1992, also detailing the consumer spending impact of my proposal also be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The investment tax allowance is another provision on which there is much agreement between the political parties as well as Congress and the President on its utility and benefit to the economy. I have taken note of recent reports suggesting that President Clinton may be proposing an investment tax credit. While I support investment tax credits, I am concerned that in view of our budget constraints such legislation may be too costly. Hence, I am making a more modest proposal.

Under this proposal, productivity enhancing equipment such as machinery, computers, and machine tools, purchased on or after January 1, 1993, and before January 1, 1994, and placed in service before June 1, 1994, would be eligible for a 15-percent additional depreciation allowance in the first year after the property was placed in service. Many believe, and I do not disagree, that this temporary acceleration of depreciation would promote capital investments by businesses, and when coupled with the consumer investments I have already mentioned, would have a very positive effect on our economy.

Passive loss reform and facilitating pension fund investment in real estate, will further this effect. Again Mr. President, Republicans and Democrats agree that these reforms will help our economy. Congress adopted these proposals at the end of the last Congress. Regrettably, they did not become law.

The passive loss provision of the bill I have introduced repeals the irrebuttable presumption that real estate rental activities are per se passive activities regardless of the taxpayer's participation. Thus, it allows real estate activities to be treated like other trade or business activities. The present passive loss rules prevent real estate professionals from deducting necessary business expenses. This, in turn, exacerbates cash flow problems they may have with their properties, and is a significant contributing factor in their losing their properties to lenders who hold mortgages on those properties. Reforming the passive loss rules as I propose will encourage these property owners to hold and maintain their property rather than default and relinquish it to their lenders. Fewer defaults will also facilitate the availability of credit and, in turn, strengthen the economic expansion.

That expansion will also be bolstered by better enabling pension funds to invest in real estate. Pension funds are a major source of investment capital for real estate. Making these funds available for investment will assist in the stabilization of real estate values, which is necessary for economic growth.

Mr. President, the Congress and President Clinton should act to stave off another economic downturn. The bill I have introduced avoids the intensely partisan issues that have prevented the enactment and signing of economic recovery legislation to date. It is a bill that we all agree will help our Nation. Therefore, I call on my colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation.

I ask unanimous consent a bill and other material be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 19

TITLE I—ECONOMIC GROWTH INCENTIVES

SEC. 101. CREDIT FOR FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subpart A of part IV of chapter 1 is amended by inserting after section 22 the following new section:

"SEC. 23. PURCHASE OF PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE BY FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER.

"(a) ALLOWANCE OF CREDIT.—If an individual who is a first-time homebuyer purchases a principal residence (within the meaning of section 1034), there shall be allowed to such individual as a credit against the tax imposed by this subtitle an amount equal to 10 percent of the purchase price of the principal residence.

"(b) LIMITATIONS.—

"(1) MAXIMUM CREDIT.—The credit allowed under subsection (a) shall not exceed $5,000.

"(2) LIMITATION TO ONE RESIDENCE.—The credit under this section shall be allowed with respect to only one residence of the taxpayer.

"(3) MARRIED INDIVIDUALS FILING JOINTLY.—In the case of a husband and wife who file a joint return under section 6013, the credit under this section is allowable only if both the husband and wife are first-time homebuyers, and the amount specified under paragraph (1) shall apply to the joint return.

"(4) OTHER TAXPAYERS.—In the case of individuals to whom paragraph (3) does not apply who together purchase the same new principal residence for use as their principal residence, the credit under this section is allowable only if each of the individuals is a first-time homebuyer, and the sum of the amount of credit allowed to such individuals shall not exceed the lesser of $5,000 or 10 percent of the total purchase price of the residence. The amount of any credit allowable under this section shall be apportioned among such individuals under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary.

"(5) APPLICATION WITH OTHER CREDITS.—The credit allowed by subsection (a) shall not exceed the amount of the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year, reduced by the sum of any other credits allowable under this chapter.

"(c) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) PURCHASE PRICE.—The term 'purchase price' means the adjusted basis of the principal residence on the date of the acquisition thereof.

"(2) FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'first-time homebuyer' means any individual if such individual has not had a present ownership interest in any residence (including an interest in a housing cooperative) at any time within the 36-month period ending on the date of acquisition of the residence on which the credit allowed under subsection (a) is to be claimed. An interest in a partnership, S corporation, or trust that owns an interest in a residence for purposes of this paragraph except as may be provided in regulations.

"(B) CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), an individual is not a first-time homebuyer on the date of purchase of a residence if on that date the running of any period of time specified in section 1034 is suspended under subsection (h) or (k) of section 1034 with respect to that individual.

"(3) SPECIAL RULES FOR CERTAIN ACQUISITIONS.—No credit is allowable under this section if—

"(A) the residence is acquired from a person whose relationship to the person acquiring it would result in the disallowance of losses under section 267 or 707(b), or

"(B) the basis of the residence in the hands of the person acquiring it is determined—

"(i) in whole or in part by reference to the adjusted basis of such residence in the hands of the person from whom it is acquired, or

"(ii) under section 1014(a) (relating to property acquired from a decedent).

"(d) RECAPTURE FOR CERTAIN DISPOSITIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), if the taxpayer disposes of property with respect to the purchase of which a credit was allowed under subsection (a) at any time within 36 months after the date the taxpayer acquired the property as his principal residence, then the tax imposed under this chapter for the taxable year in which the disposition occurs is increased by an amount equal to the amount allowed as a credit for the purchase of such property.

"(2) ACQUISITION OF NEW RESIDENCE.—If, in connection with a disposition described in paragraph (1) and within the applicable period prescribed in section 1034, the taxpayer purchases a new principal residence, then the provisions of paragraph (1) shall not apply and the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year in which the new principal residence is purchased is increased to the extent the amount of the credit that could be claimed under this section on the purchase of the new residence (determined without regard to subsection (e)) is less than the amount of credit claimed by the taxpayer under this section.

"(3) DEATH OF OWNER; CASUALTY LOSS; INVOLUNTARY CONVERSION; ETC.—The provisions of paragraph (1) do not apply to—

"(A) a disposition of a residence made on account of the death of any individual having a legal or equitable interest therein occurring during the 36-month period to which reference is made under paragraph (1),

"(B) a disposition of the old residence if it is substantially or completely destroyed by a casualty described in section 165(c)(3) or compulsorily or involuntarily converted (within the meaning of section 1033(a)), or

"(C) a disposition pursuant to a settlement in a divorce or legal separation proceeding where the residence is sold or the other spouse retains the residence as a principal residence.

"(e) PROPERTY TO WHICH SECTION APPLIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The provisions of this section apply to a principal residence if—

"(A) the taxpayer acquires the residence on or after February 1, 1993, and before January 1, 1994, or

"(B) the taxpayer enters into, on or after February 1, 1993, and before January 1, 1994, a binding contract to acquire the residence, and acquires and occupies the residence before July 1, 1994."

"(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for subpart A of part IV of chapter 1 is amended by inserting after section 22 the following new item:

"Sec. 23. Purchase of principal residence by first-time homebuyer."

"(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section are effective on August 1, 1993.

SEC. 102. SPECIAL DEPRECIATION ALLOWANCE FOR CERTAIN EQUIPMENT ACQUIRED IN 1993.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 168 (relating to accelerated cost recovery system) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(j) SPECIAL ALLOWANCE FOR CERTAIN EQUIPMENT ACQUIRED IN 1993.—

"(1) ADDITIONAL ALLOWANCE.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), in the case of any qualified equipment—

"(A) the depreciation deduction provided by section 167(a) for the taxable year in which such equipment is placed in service shall include an allowance equal to 15 percent of the adjusted basis of the qualified equipment, and

"(B) the adjusted basis of the qualified equipment shall be reduced by the amount of such deduction (without regard to paragraph (2)) before computing the amount otherwise allowable as a depreciation deduction under this chapter for such taxable year and any subsequent taxable year.

"(2) MAXIMUM FIRST-YEAR DEDUCTION.—Of the aggregate deduction allowable under paragraph (1)—

"(A) 0 percent shall be allowed for the taxable year in which the property is placed in service, and

"(B) 100 percent shall be allowed for the succeeding taxable year.

"(3) QUALIFIED EQUIPMENT.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified equipment' means property to which this section applies—

"(i) which is section 1245 property (within the meaning of section 1245(a)(3)),

"(ii) the original use of which commences with the taxpayer on or after February 1, 1993,

"(iii) which is—

"(I) acquired by the taxpayer on or after February 1, 1993, and before January 1, 1994, but only if no written binding contract for the acquisition was in effect before February 1, 1993, or

"(II) acquired by the taxpayer pursuant to a written binding contract which was entered into on or after February 1, 1993, and before January 1, 1994, and

"(iv) which is placed in service by the taxpayer before July 1, 1994.

"(B) EXCEPTIONS.—

"(i) ALTERNATIVE DEPRECIATION PROPERTY.—The term 'qualified equipment' shall not include any property to which the alternative depreciation system under subsection (g) applies, determined—

"(I) without regard to paragraph (7) of subsection (g) (relating to election to have system apply), and

"(II) after application of section 280F(b) (relating to listed property with limited business use).

"(ii) ELECTION OUT.—If a taxpayer makes an election under this clause with respect to any class of property for any taxable year, this subsection shall not apply to all property in such class placed in service during such taxable year.

"(C) SPECIAL RULES RELATING TO ORIGINAL USE.—

"(i) SELF-CONSTRUCTED PROPERTY.—In the case of a taxpayer manufacturing, constructing, or producing property for the taxpayer's own use, the requirements of clause (iii) of subparagraph (A) shall be treated as met if the taxpayer begins manufacturing, constructing, or producing the property on and after February 1, 1993, and before January 1, 1994.

"(ii) SALE-LEASEBACKS.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)(ii), if property—

"(I) is originally placed in service on or after February 1, 1993, by a person, and

"(II) is sold and leased back by such person within 3 months after the date such property was originally placed in service, such property shall be treated as originally placed in service not earlier than the date on which such property is used under the lease-back referred to in subclause (II).

"(D) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 280F.—For purposes of section 280F—

"(i) AUTOMOBILES.—In the case of a passenger automobile (as defined in section 280F(d)(5)) which is qualified equipment, the Secretary shall increase the limitation under section 280F(a)(1)(A)(i), and decrease each other limitation under subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 280F(a)(1), to appro-privately reflect the amount of the deduction allowable under paragraph (1).

"(ii) LISTED PROPERTY.—The deduction allowable under paragraph (1) shall be taken into account in computing any recapture amount under section 280F(b)(2)."

(b) ALLOWANCE AGAINST ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAX.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 56(a)(1)(A) (relating to depreciation adjustment for alternative minimum tax) is amended by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(iii) ADDITIONAL ALLOWANCE FOR EQUIPMENT ACQUIRED IN 1993.—The deduction under section 168(j) shall be allowed."

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Clause (i) of section 56(a)(1)(A) is amended by inserting "or (iii)" after "(ii)".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to property placed in service on or after February 1, 1993, in taxable years ending on or after such date.

SEC. 103. PENALTY-FREE WITHDRAWALS FROM PENSION PLANS THROUGH 1993.

(a) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any qualified withdrawal—

(1) no additional tax shall be imposed under section 72(b)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 with respect to such qualified withdrawal, and

(2) except as provided in subsection (b), any amount includible in gross income by reason of such qualified withdrawal (determined without regard to this section) shall be includible ratably over the 4-taxable year period beginning with the taxable year in which such qualified withdrawal occurs.

(b) ELECTION TO RECONTRIBUTE TO PLAN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The amount required to be included in gross income for any taxable year under subsection (a)(2) shall be reduced by any designated recontribution.

(2) DESIGNATED RECONTRIBUTION.—For purposes of paragraph (1), a designated recontribution is any contribution to any plan described in subsection (c)(1)(B)—

(A) which the taxpayer designates (in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe) as in lieu of all (or any portion of) any amount required to be included in gross income under subsection (a)(2) for a taxable year, and

(B) which is made not later than the due date (without extensions) for such taxable year.

(3) NO DEDUCTION ALLOWED FOR RECONTRIBUTION, ETC.—For purposes of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, a designated recontribution shall not be treated as a contribution for any taxable year.

(c) QUALIFIED WITHDRAWAL.—For purposes of this section—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The term "qualified withdrawal" means any payment or distribution—

(A) which is made to an individual during 1992,

(B) which is made from—

(i) an individual retirement plan (as defined in section 7701(a)(37) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) established for the benefit of the individual, or

(ii) amounts attributable to employer contributions made on behalf of the individual pursuant to elective deferrals described in section 402(g)(3)(A) or (C) or 501(c)(18)(D)(iii) of such Code, and

(C) which is used by the individual for a qualified acquisition not later than the earlier of—

(i) the date which is 6 months after the date of such payment or distribution, or

(ii) the date on which the individual files the individual's income tax return for the taxable year in which such payment or distribution occurs.

(2) QUALIFIED ACQUISITION.—The term "qualified acquisition" means—

(A) the payment of qualified acquisition costs with respect to a principal residence of a first-time homebuyer who is the taxpayer or the child or grandchild of the taxpayer, or

(B) the purchase of a new passenger automobile.

(3) DOLLAR LIMITATION.—The aggregate amount which may be treated as qualified withdrawals under paragraph (1) with respect to all plans and amounts of an individual described in paragraph (1)(B) shall not exceed $10,000.

(4) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this subsection—

(A) QUALIFIED ACQUISITION COSTS.—The term "qualified acquisition costs" means the costs of acquiring, constructing, or reconstructing a residence. Such term includes any usual or reasonable settlement, financing, or other closing costs associated with such qualified acquisition costs.

(B) FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER; OTHER DEFINITIONS.—

(i) FIRST-TIME HOMEBUYER.—The term "first-time homebuyer" means any individual if such individual (and if married, such individual's spouse) had no present ownership interest in a principal residence during the 2-year period ending on the date of acquisition of the principal residence to which this paragraph applies.

(ii) PRINCIPAL RESIDENCE.—The term "principal residence" has the same meaning as when used in section 1034.

(iii) DATE OF ACQUISITION.—The term "date of acquisition" means the date—

(I) on which a binding contract to acquire the principal residence to which this subsection applies is entered into, or

(II) on which construction or reconstruction of such a principal residence is commenced.

(C) SPECIAL RULE WHERE DELAY IN ACQUISITION.—If—

(i) any amount is paid or distributed from an individual retirement plan to an individual for purposes of being used as provided in paragraph (1), and

(ii) by reason of a delay in the acquisition of the residence, the requirements of paragraph (1) cannot be met, the amount so paid or distributed may be paid into an individual retirement plan as provided in section 408(d)(3)(A)(i) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 without regard to section 408(d)(3)(B) of such Code, and, if so paid into such other plan, such amount shall not be taken into account in determining whether section 408(d)(3)(A)(i) of such Code applies to any other amount.

(D) DISTRIBUTION RULES.—Any qualified withdrawal shall not be treated as failing to meet the requirements of sections 401(k)(2)(B)(i) or 403(b)(11) of such Code.

(d) ORDERING RULES FOR INCOME TAX PURPOSES.—For purposes of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986—

(1) all plans and amounts described in subsection (c)(1)(B) with respect to an individual shall be treated as one plan, and

(2) qualified withdrawals from such plan shall be treated as made—

(A) first from amounts which are includible in gross income of the individual when distributed to such individual, and

(B) then from amounts not so includible.

SEC. 104. PASSIVE LOSS EQUITY FOR REAL ESTATE PROFESSIONALS.

(a) RENTAL REAL ESTATE ACTIVITIES OF PERSONS IN REAL PROPERTY BUSINESS NOT

AUTOMATICALLY TREATED AS PASSIVE ACTIVITIES.—Section 469(c) (defining passive activity) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7) RULES FOR TAXPAYERS IN REAL PROPERTY BUSINESS TO END DISCRIMINATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If this paragraph applies to any taxpayer for a taxable year—

"(i) paragraph (2) shall not apply to any rental real estate activity of such taxpayer for such taxable year, and

"(ii) this section shall be applied as if each interest of the taxpayer in rental real estate were a separate activity.

Notwithstanding clause (ii), a taxpayer may elect to treat all interests in rental real estate as one activity.

"(B) TAXPAYERS TO WHOM PARAGRAPH APPLIES.—This paragraph shall apply to a taxpayer for a taxable year if more than one-half of the personal services performed in trades or businesses by the taxpayer during such taxable year are performed in real property trades or businesses in which the taxpayer materially participates.

"(C) SPECIAL RULES FOR SUBPARAGRAPH (B).—

"(i) CLOSELY HELD C CORPORATIONS.—In the case of a closely held C corporation, the requirements of subparagraph (B) shall be treated as met for any taxable year if more than 50 percent of the gross receipts of such corporation for such taxable year are derived from real property trades or businesses in which the corporation materially participates.

"(ii) PERSONAL SERVICES AS AN EMPLOYEE.—For purposes of subparagraph (B), personal services performed as an employee (other than as an owner-employee) shall not be treated as performed in real property trades or businesses."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 469(c)(2) is amended by striking "The" and inserting "Except as provided in paragraph (7), the".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after February 1, 1993.

SEC. 105. REAL PROPERTY ACQUIRED BY A QUALIFIED ORGANIZATION.

(a) INTERESTS IN MORTGAGES.—The last sentence of subparagraph (B) of section 514(c)(9) is hereby transferred to subparagraph (A) of section 514(c)(9) and added at the end thereof.

(b) MODIFICATIONS OF EXCEPTIONS.—Paragraph (9) of section 514(c) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(G) SPECIAL RULES FOR PURPOSES OF THE EXCEPTIONS.—For purposes of subparagraph (B), except as otherwise provided by regulations, the following additional rules apply—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—

"(I) For purposes of clauses (iii) and (iv) of subparagraph (B), a lease to a person described in clause (iii) or (iv) shall be disregarded if no more than 10 percent of the leasable floor space in a building is covered by the lease and if the lease is on commercially reasonable terms.

"(II) Clause (v) of subparagraph (B) shall not apply to the extent the financing is commercially reasonable and is on substantially the same terms as loans involving unrelated persons; for this purpose, standards for determining a commercially reasonable interest rate shall be provided by the Secretary.

"(ii) QUALIFYING SALES OUT OF FORECLOSURE BY FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS.—In the case of a qualifying sale out of foreclosure by a financial institution, clauses (i) and (ii) of subparagraph (B) shall not apply. For this purpose, a 'qualifying sale out of foreclosure by a financial institution' exists where—

"(I) a qualified organization acquires real property from a person (a 'financial institution') described in section 581 or 591(a) (including a person in receivership) and the financial institution acquired the property pursuant to a bid at foreclosure or by operation of an agreement or of process of law after a default on indebtedness which the property secured ('foreclosure'), and the financial institution treats any income realized from the sale or exchange of the property as ordinary income,

"(II) the amount of the financing provided by the financial institution does not exceed the amount of the financial institution's outstanding indebtedness (determined without regard to accrued but unpaid interest) with respect to the property at the time of foreclosure,

"(III) the financing provided by the financial institution is commercially reasonable and is on substantially the same terms as loans between unrelated persons for sales of foreclosed property (for this purpose, standards for determining a commercially reasonable interest rate shall be provided by the Secretary), and

"(IV) the amount payable pursuant to the financing that is determined by reference to the revenue, income, or profits derived from the property ('participation feature') does not exceed 25 percent of the principal amount of the financing provided by the financial institution, and the participation feature is payable no later than the earlier of satisfaction of the financing or disposition of the property."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to debt-financed acquisitions of real estate made on or after February 1, 1993.

SEC. 106. SPECIAL RULES FOR INVESTMENTS IN PARTNERSHIPS.

(a) MODIFICATION TO ANTI-ABUSE RULES.—Paragraph (9) of section 514(c) (as amended by section 131 of this Act) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(H) PARTNERSHIPS NOT INVOLVING TAX AVOIDANCE.—

"(i) DE MINIMIS RULE FOR CERTAIN LARGE PARTNERSHIPS.—The provisions of subparagraph (B) shall not apply to an investment in a partnership having at least 250 partners if—

"(I) investments in the partnership are organized into units that are marketed primarily to individuals expected to be taxed at the maximum rate prescribed for individuals under section 1,

"(II) at least 50 percent of each class of interests is owned by such individuals,

"(III) the partners that are qualified organizations owning interests in a class participate on substantially the same terms as other partners owning interests in that class, and

"(IV) the principal purpose of partnership allocations is not tax avoidance.

"(ii) EXCEPTION WHERE TAXABLE PERSONS OWN A SIGNIFICANT PERCENTAGE.—In the case of any partnership, other than a partnership to which clause (i) applies, in which persons who are expected (under the regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary), at the time the partnership is formed, to pay tax at the maximum rate prescribed in section 1 or 11 (whichever is applicable) throughout the term of the partnership own at least a 25-percent interest, the provisions of subparagraph (B) shall not apply if the partnership satisfies the requirements of subparagraph (E)."

(b) PUBLICLY TRADED PARTNERSHIPS; UNRELATED BUSINESS INCOME FROM PARTNERSHIPS.—Subsection (c) of section 512 is amended by striking paragraph (2) (relating to publicly traded partnerships), by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (2), and by striking "paragraph (1) or (2)" in paragraph (2) (as so redesignated) and inserting "paragraph (1)".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to partnership interests acquired on or after February 1, 1992.

TITLE II—REVENUE OFFSETS

Subtitle A—General Provisions

SEC. 201. ELIMINATION OF THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS ON COLLECTION OF GUARANTEED STUDENT LOANS.

Section 3(c) of the Higher Education Technical Amendments of 1991 (Public Law 102-26) is amended by striking out "that are brought before November 15, 1992".

SEC. 202. INCREASED BASE TAX RATE ON OZONE-DEPLETING CHEMICALS AND EXPANSION OF LIST OF TAXED CHEMICALS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (1) of section 4681(b) (relating to amount of tax) is amended to read as follows:

"(B) BASE TAX AMOUNT.—The base tax amount for purposes of subparagraph (A) with respect to any sale or use during a calendar year before 1997 with respect to any ozone-depleting chemical is the amount determined under the following table for such calendar year:

Calendar year:	Base tax amount:
1993	$1.85
1994	$2.75
1995	$3.65
1996	$4.55."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Rates retained for chemicals used in rigid foam insulation.—The table in subparagraph (B) of section 4682(g)(2) (relating to chemicals used in rigid foam insulation) is amended—

(A) by striking "15" and inserting "13.5", and

(B) by striking "10" and inserting "9.6".

(2) FLOOR STOCK TAXES.—

(A) Subparagraph (C) of section 4682(h)(2) (relating to other tax-increase dates) is amended by striking "1993, and 1994" and inserting "1995 and 1996, and July 1, 1993".

(B) Paragraph (3) of section 4682(h) (relating to due date) is amended—

(i) by inserting "or July 1" after "January 1", and

(ii) by inserting "or December 31, respectively," after "June 30".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable chemicals sold or used on or after July 1, 1993.

SEC. 203. MARK TO MARKET INVENTORY METHOD FOR SECURITIES DEALERS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subpart D of part II of subchapter E of chapter 1 (relating to inventories) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 475. MARK TO MARKET INVENTORY METHOD FOR DEALERS IN SECURITIES.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this subpart, the following rules shall apply to securities held by a dealer in securities:

"(1) Any security which is inventory in the hands of the dealer shall be included in inventory at fair market value.

"(2) In the case of any security which is not inventory in the hands of the dealer and which is held at the close of any taxable year—

"(A) the dealer shall recognize gain or loss as if such security were sold for its fair market value on the last business day of such taxable year, and

"(B) any gain or loss shall be taken into account for such taxable year.

Proper adjustment shall be made in the amount of any gain or loss subsequently realized for gain or loss taken into account under the preceding sentence. The Secretary may provide by regulations for the application of this paragraph at times other than the times provided in this paragraph.

"(b) EXCEPTIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to—

"(A) any security held for investment,

"(B) any security described in subsection (c)(2)(C) which is originated or acquired by the taxpayer in the ordinary course of a trade or business of the taxpayer and which is not held for sale, and

"(C) any hedge with respect to—

"(i) a security to which subsection (a) does not apply, or

"(ii) a position or a liability which is not a security in the hands of the taxpayer.

Subparagraph (C) shall not apply to any security held by a person in its capacity as a dealer in securities.

"(2) IDENTIFICATION REQUIRED.—Any security shall not be treated as described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) of paragraph (1), as the case may be, unless such security is clearly identified in the dealer's records as being described in such subparagraph before the close of the day on which it was acquired, originated, or entered into (or such other time as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe).

"(3) SECURITIES SUBSEQUENTLY NOT EXEMPT.—If a security ceases to be described in paragraph (1) at any time after it was identified as such under paragraph (2), this section shall apply to such security as of the time such cessation occurs.

"(4) SPECIAL RULE FOR PROPERTY HELD FOR INVESTMENT.—To the extent provided in regulations, subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) shall not apply to any security described in subparagraph (D) or (E) of subsection (c)(2) which is held by a dealer in such securities.

"(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) DEALER IN SECURITIES DEFINED.—The term 'dealer in securities' means a taxpayer who—

"(A) regularly purchases securities from or sells securities to customers in the ordinary course of a trade or business; or

"(B) regularly offers to enter into, assume, offset, assign or otherwise terminate positions in securities with customers in the ordinary course of a trade or business.

"(2) SECURITY DEFINED.—The term 'security' means any—

"(A) share of stock in a corporation;

"(B) partnership or beneficial ownership interest in a widely held or publicly traded partnership or trust;

"(C) note, bond, debenture, or other evidence of indebtedness;

"(D) any interest rate, currency, or equity notional principal contract;

"(E) evidence of an interest in, or a derivative financial instrument in, any security described in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (D), or any currency, including any option, forward contract, short position, and any similar financial instrument in such a security (but not including any contract to which section 1256(a) applies); and

"(F) position which—

"(i) is not a security described in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), (D), or (E),

"(ii) is a hedge with respect to such a security, and

"(iii) is clearly identified in the dealer's records as being described in this subparagraph before the close of the day on which it was acquired or entered into (or such other time as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe).

"(3) HEDGE.—The term 'hedge' includes any position which reduces the dealer's risk of interest rate or price changes or currency fluctuations.

"(d) SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) CERTAIN RULES NOT TO APPLY.—The rules of sections 263(g) and 263A shall not apply to securities to which subsection (a) applies.

"(2) IMPROPER IDENTIFICATION.—If a taxpayer—

"(A) identifies any security or position under subsection (b)(2) as being described in such subsection and such security or position is not so described, or

"(B) fails under subsection (c)(2)(F)(iii) to identify a security or position which is described in such subsection at the time such identification is required, the provisions of subsection (a) shall apply to such security or position, except that any loss under this section prior to the disposition of the security shall be recognized only to the extent of gain previously recognized under this section with respect to such security.

"(e) REGULATORY AUTHORITY.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this section, including rules—

"(1) to prevent the use of year-end transfers, related parties, or other arrangements to avoid the provisions of this section, and

"(2) to provide for the application of this section to hedges which do not hedge a specific security, position, or liability."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 988(d) is amended—

(A) by striking "section 1256" and inserting "section 475 or 1256", and

(B) by striking "1092 and 1256" and inserting "475, 1092, and 1256".

(2) The table of sections for subpart D of part II of subchapter E of chapter 1 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 475. Mark to market inventory method for dealers in securities."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to all taxable years ending on or after December 31, 1994.

(2) CHANGE IN METHOD OF ACCOUNTING.—In the case of any taxpayer required by this section to change its method of accounting for any taxable year—

(A) such change shall be treated as initiated by the taxpayer,

(B) such change shall be treated as made with the consent of the Secretary, and

(C) the net amount of the adjustments required to be taken into account by the taxpayer under section 481 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall be taken into account ratably over the 10-taxable year period beginning with the first taxable year ending on or after December 31, 1993.

SEC. 204. DISALLOWANCE OF INTEREST ON CERTAIN OVERPAYMENTS OF TAX.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subsection (e) of section 6611 is amended to read as follows:

"(e) DISALLOWANCE OF INTEREST ON CERTAIN OVERPAYMENTS.—

"(1) REFUNDS WITHIN 45 DAYS AFTER RETURN IS FILED.—If any payment of tax imposed by this title is refunded within 45 days after the last day prescribed for filing the return of such tax (determined without regard to any extension of time for filing the return) or, in the case of a return filed after such last date, is refunded within 45 days after the date the return is filed, no interest shall be allowed under subsection (a) on such overpayment.

"(2) REFUNDS AFTER CLAIM FOR CREDIT OR REFUND.—If—

"(A) the taxpayer files a claim for a credit or refund for any overpayment of tax imposed by this title, and

"(B) such overpayment is refunded within 45 days after such claim is filed, no interest shall be allowed on such overpayment from the date the claim is filed until the day the refund is made.

"(3) IRS INITIATED ADJUSTMENTS.—Notwithstanding any other provision, if an adjustment, initiated by or on behalf of the Secretary, results in a refund or credit of an overpayment, interest on such overpayment shall be computed by subtracting 45 days from the number of days interest would otherwise be allowed with respect to such overpayment."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 6611(e) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as amended by subsection (a)) shall apply in the case of returns the due date for which (determined without regard to extensions) is on or after July 1, 1993.

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 6611(e) of such Code (as so amended) shall apply in the case of claims for credit or refund of any overpayment filed on or after July 1, 1993 regardless of the taxable period to which such refund relates.

(3) Paragraph (3) of section 6611(e) of such Code (as so amended) shall apply in the case of any refund paid on or after July 1, 1993 regardless of the taxable period to which such refund relates.

Subtitle B—Electromagnetic Spectrum Function

SEC. 211. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Emerging Telecommunications Technologies Act of 1993".

SEC. 212. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) spectrum is a valuable natural resource;

(2) it is in the national interest that this resource be used more efficiently;

(3) the spectrum below 6 gigahertz (GHz) is becoming increasingly congested, and, as a result entities that develop innovative new spectrum-based services are finding it difficult to bring these services to the marketplace;

(4) scarcity of assignable frequencies can and will—

(A) impede the development and commercialization of new spectrum-based products and services;

(B) reduce the capacity and efficiency of the United States telecommunications system; and

(C) adversely affect the productive capacity and international competitiveness of the United States economy;

(5) the United States Government presently lacks explicit authority to use excess radiocommunications capacity to satisfy non-United States Government requirements;

(6) more efficient use of the spectrum can provide the resources for increased economic returns;

(7) many commercial users derive significant economic benefits from their spectrum licenses, both through the income they earn from their use of the spectrum and the returns they realize upon transfer of their licenses to third parties; but under current procedures, the United States public does not sufficiently share in their benefits;

(8) many United States Government functions and responsibilities depend heavily on the use of the radio spectrum, involve unique applications, and are performed in the broad national and public interest;

(9) competitive bidding for spectrum can yield significant benefits for the United States economy by increasing the efficiency of spectrum allocations, assignment, and use; and for United States taxpayers by producing substantial revenues for the United States Treasury; and

(10) the Secretary, the President, and the Commission should be directed to take appropriate steps to foster the more efficient use of this valuable national resource, including the reallocation of a target amount of 200 megahertz (MHz) of spectrum from United States Government use under section 305 of the Communications Act to non-United States Government use pursuant to other provisions of the Communications Act and the implementation of competitive bidding procedures by the Commission for some new assignments of the spectrum.

SEC. 213. NATIONAL SPECTRUM PLANNING.

(a) PLANNING ACTIVITIES.—The Secretary and the Chairman of the Commission shall, at least twice each year, conduct joint spectrum planning meetings with respect to the following issues—

(1) future spectrum needs;

(2) the spectrum allocation actions necessary to accommodate those needs, including consideration of innovation and marketplace developments that may affect the relative efficiencies of different portions of the spectrum; and

(3) actions necessary to promote the efficient use of the spectrum, including proven spectrum management techniques to promote increased shared use of the spectrum as a means of increasing non-United States Government access; and innovation in spectrum utilization including means of providing incentives for spectrum users to develop innovative services and technologies.

(b) REPORTS.—The Secretary and the Chairman of the Commission shall submit a joint annual report to the President on the joint spectrum planning meetings conducted under subsection (a) and any recommendations for action developed in such meetings.

(c) OPEN PROCESS.—The Secretary and the Commission will conduct an open process under this section to ensure the full consideration and exchange of views among any interested entities, including all private, public, commercial, and governmental interests.

SEC. 214. IDENTIFICATION OF REALLOCABLE FREQUENCIES.

(a) IDENTIFICATION REQUIRED.—The Secretary shall prepare and submit to the President the reports required by subsection (d) to identify bands of frequencies that—

(1) are allocated on a primary basis for United States Government use and eligible for licensing pursuant to section 305(a) of the Communications Act;

(2) are not required for the present or identifiable future needs of the United States Government;

(3) can feasibly be made available during the next 15 years after enactment of this title for use under the provisions of the Communications Act for non-United States Government users;

(4) will not result in costs to the Federal Government that are excessive in relation to the benefits that may be obtained from the potential non-United States Government uses; and

(5) are likely to have significant value for non-United States Government uses under the Communications Act.

(b) AMOUNT OF SPECTRUM RECOMMENDED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall recommend as a goal for reallocation, for use by non-United States Government stations, bands of frequencies constituting a target amount of 200 MHz, that are located below 6 GHz, and that meet the criteria specified in paragraphs (1) through (5) of subsection (a). If the Secretary identifies (as meeting such criteria) bands of frequencies totalling more than 200 MHz, the Secretary shall identify and recommend for reallocation those bands (totalling not less than 200 MHz) that are likely to have the greatest potential for non-United States Government uses under the Communications Act.

(2) MIXED USES PERMITTED TO BE COUNTED.—Bands of frequencies which the Secretary recommends be partially retained for use by United States Government stations, but which are also recommended to be reallocated and made available under the Communications Act for use by non-United States Government stations, may be counted toward the target 200 MHz of spectrum required by paragraph (1) of this subsection, except that—

(A) the bands of frequencies counted under this paragraph may not count toward more than one-half of the amount targeted by paragraph (1) of this subsection;

(B) a band of frequencies may not be counted under this paragraph unless the assignments of the band to United States Government stations under section 305 of the Communications Act are limited by geographic area, by time, or by other means so as to guarantee that the potential use to be made by which United States Government stations is substantially less (as measured by geographic area, time, or otherwise) than the potential United States Government use to be made; and

(C) the operational sharing permitted under this paragraph shall be subject to procedures which the Commission and the Department of Commerce shall establish and implement to ensure against harmful interference.

(c) CRITERIA FOR IDENTIFICATION.—

(1) NEEDS OF THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.—In determining whether a band of frequencies meets the criteria specified in subsection (a)(2), the Secretary shall—

(A) consider whether the band of frequencies is used to provide a communications service that is or could be available from a commercial provider;

(B) seek to promote—

(i) the maximum practicable reliance on commercially available substitutes;

(ii) the sharing of frequencies (as permitted under subsection (b)(2));

(iii) the development and use of new communications technologies; and

(iv) the use of nonradiating communications systems where practicable;

(C) seek to avoid—

(i) serious degradation of United States Government services and operations;

(ii) excessive costs to the United States Government and civilian users of such Government services; and

(iii) identification of any bands for reallocation that are likely to be subject to substitution for the reasons specified in section 405(b)(2)(A) through (C); and

(D) exempt power marketing administrations and the Tennessee Valley Authority from any reallocation procedures.

(2) FEASIBILITY OF USE.—In determining whether a frequency band meets the criteria specified in subsection (a)(3), the Secretary shall—

(A) assume such frequencies will be assigned by the Commission under section 303 of the Communications Act over the course of fifteen years after the enactment of this title;

(B) assume reasonable rates of scientific progress and growth of demand for telecommunications services;

(C) determine the extent to which the reallocation or reassignment will relieve actual or potential scarcity of frequencies available for non-United States Government use;

(D) seek to include frequencies which can be used to stimulate the development of new technologies; and

(E) consider the cost to reestablish United States Government services displaced by the reallocation of spectrum during the fifteen year period.

(3) COSTS TO THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.—In determining whether a frequency band meets the criteria specified in subsection (a)(4), the Secretary shall consider—

(A) the costs to the United States Government of reaccommodating its services in order to make spectrum available for non-United States Government use, including the incremental costs directly attributable to the loss of the use of the frequency band; and

(B) the benefits that could be obtained from reallocating such spectrum to non-United States Government users, including the value of such spectrum in promoting—

(i) the delivery of improved service to the public;

(ii) the introduction of new services; and

(iii) the development of new communications technologies.

(4) NON-UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT USE.—In determining whether a band of frequencies meets the criteria specified in subsection (a)(5), the Secretary shall consider—

(A) the extent to which equipment is commercially available that is capable of utilizing the band; and

(B) the proximity of frequencies that are already assigned for non-United States Government use.

(d) PROCEDURE FOR IDENTIFICATION OF REALLOCABLE BANDS OF FREQUENCIES.—

(1) SUBMISSION OF REPORTS TO THE PRESIDENT TO IDENTIFY AN INITIAL 50 MHZ TO BE MADE AVAILABLE IMMEDIATELY FOR REALLOCATION, AND TO PROVIDE PRELIMINARY AND FINAL REPORTS ON ADDITIONAL FREQUENCIES TO BE REALLOCATED.—

(A) Within 3 months after the date of the enactment of this title, the Secretary shall prepare and submit to the President a report which specifically identifies an initial 50 MHz of spectrum that are located below 3 GHz, to be made available for reallocation to the Federal Communications Commission upon issuance of this report, and to be distributed by the Commission pursuant to competitive bidding procedures.

(B) The Department of Commerce shall make available to the Federal Communications Commission 50 MHz as identified in subparagraph (A) of electromagnetic spectrum for allocation of land-mobile or land-mobile-satellite services. Notwithstanding section 553 of the Administrative Procedure Act and title III of the Communications Act, the Federal Communications Commission shall allocate such spectrum and conduct competitive bidding procedures to complete the assignment of such spectrum in a manner which ensures that the proceeds from such bidding are received by the Federal Government no later than September 30, 1993. From such proceeds, Federal agencies displaced by this transfer of the electromagnetic spectrum to the Federal Communications Commission shall be reimbursed for reasonable costs directly attributable to such displacement. The Department of Commerce shall determine the amount of, and arrange for, such reimbursement. Amounts to agencies shall be available subject to appropriation Acts.

(C) Within 12 months after the date of the enactment of this title, the Secretary shall prepare and submit to the President a preliminary report to identify reallocable bands of frequencies meeting the criteria established by this section.

(D) Within 24 months after the date of enactment of this title, the Secretary shall prepare and submit to the President a final report which identifies the target 200 MHz for reallocation (which shall encompass the initial 50 MHz previously designated under subparagraph (A)).

(E) The President shall publish the reports required by this section in the Federal Register.

(2) CONVENING OF PRIVATE SECTOR ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—Not later than 12 months after the enactment of this title, the Secretary shall convene a private sector advisory committee to—

(A) review the bands of frequencies identified in the preliminary report required by paragraph (1)(C);

(B) advise the Secretary with respect to—

(i) the bands of frequencies which should be included in the final report required by paragraph (1)(D); and

(ii) the effective dates which should be established under subsection (e) with respect to such frequencies;

(C) receives public comment on the Secretary's preliminary and final reports under this subsection; and

(D) prepare and submit the report required by paragraph (4).

The private sector advisory committee shall meet at least quarterly until each of the actions required by section 405(a) have taken place.

(3) COMPOSITION OF COMMITTEE; CHAIRMAN.—The private sector adviser committee shall include—

(A) the Chairman of the Commission, and the Secretary, or their designated representatives, and two other representatives from two different United States Government agencies that are spectrum users, other than the Department of Commerce, as such agencies may be designated by the Secretary; and

(B) Persons who are representative of—

(i) manufacturers of spectrum-dependent telecommunications equipment;

(ii) commercial users;

(iii) other users of the electromagnetic spectrum; and

(iv) other interested members of the public who are knowledgeable about the uses of the electromagnetic spectrum to be chosen by the Secretary.

A majority of the members of the committee shall be members described in subparagraph (B), and one of such members shall be designated as chairman by the Secretary.

(4) RECOMMENDATIONS ON SPECTRUM ALLOCATION PROCEDURES.—The private sector advisory committee shall, not later than 12 months after its formation, submit to the Secretary, the Commission, the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation of the Senate, such recommendations as the committee considers appropriate for the reform of the process of allocating the electromagnetic spectrum between United States Government users and non-United States Government users, and any dissenting views thereon.

(e) TIMETABLE FOR REALLOCATION AND LIMITATION.—The Secretary shall, as part of the final report required by subsection (d)(1)(D), include a timetable for the effective dates by which the President shall, within 15 years after enactment of this title, withdraw or limit assignments on frequencies specified in the report. The recommended effective dates shall—

(1) permit the earliest possible reallocation of the frequency bands, taking into account the requirements of section 406(a);

(2) be based on the useful remaining life of equipment that has been purchased or contracted for to operate on identified frequencies;

(3) be based on the need to coordinate frequency use with other nations; and

(4) avoid the imposition of incremental costs on the United States Government directly attributable to the loss of the use of frequencies or the changing to different frequencies that are excessive in relation to the benefits that may be obtained from non-United States Government uses of the reassigned frequencies.

SEC. 215. WITHDRAWAL OF ASSIGNMENT TO UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT STATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The President shall—

(1) within 3 months after receipt of the Secretary's report under section 404(d)(1)(A), withdraw or limit the assignment to a United States Government station of any frequency on the initial 50 MHz which that report recommends for immediate reallocation;

(2) with respect to other frequencies recommended for reallocation by the Secretary's report in section 404(d)(1)(D), by the effective dates recommended pursuant to section 404(e) (except as provided in subsection (b)(4) of this section), withdraw or limit the assignment to a United States Government station of any frequency which that report recommends be reallocated or available for mixed use on such effective dates;

(3) assign or reassign other frequencies to United States Government stations as necessary to adjust to such withdrawal or limitation of assignments; and

(4) publish in the Federal Register a notice and description of the actions taken under this subsection.

(b) EXCEPTIONS.—

(1) AUTHORITY TO SUBSTITUTE.—If the President determines that a circumstance described in section 405(b)(2) exists, the President—

(A) may, within 1 month after receipt of the Secretary's report under section 404(d)(1)(A), and within 6 months after receipt of the Secretary's report under section 404(d)(1)(D), substitute an alternative frequency or band of frequencies for the frequency or band that is subject to such determination and withdraw (or limit) the assignment of that alternative frequency or band in the manner required by subsection (a); and

(B) shall publish in the Federal Register a statement of the reasons for taking the action described in subparagraph (A).

(2) GROUND FOR SUBSTITUTION.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the following circumstances are described in this paragraph:

(A) the reassignment would seriously jeopardize the national security interests of the United States;

(B) the frequency proposed for reassignment is uniquely suited to meeting important United States Governmental needs;

(C) the reassignment would seriously jeopardize public health or safety; or

(D) the reassignment will result in incremental costs to the United States Government that are excessive in relation to the benefits that may be obtained from non-United States Government uses of the reassigned frequency.

(3) CRITERIA FOR SUBSTITUTED FREQUENCIES.—For purposes of paragraph (1), a frequency may not be substituted for a frequency identified by the final report of the Secretary under section 404(d)(1)(D) unless the substituted frequency also meets each of the criteria specified by section 404(a).

(4) DELAYS IN IMPLEMENTATION.—If the President determines that any action cannot be completed by the effective dates recommended by the Secretary pursuant to section 404(e), or that such an action by such date would result in a frequency being unused as a consequence of the Commission's plan under section 406, the President may—

(A) withdraw or limit the assignment to United States Government stations on a later date that is consistent with such plan, by providing notice to that effect in the Federal Register, including the reason that withdrawal at a later date is required; or

(B) substitute alternative frequencies pursuant to the provisions of this subsection.

(c) COSTS OF WITHDRAWING FREQUENCIES ASSIGNED TO THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT; APPROPRIATIONS AUTHORIZED.—Any United States Government licensee, or non-United States Government entity operating on behalf of a United States Government licensee, that is displaced from a frequency pursuant to this section may be reimbursed not more than the incremental costs it incurs, in such amounts as provided in advance in appropriation Acts, that are directly attributable to the loss of the use of the frequency pursuant to this section. The estimates of these costs shall be prepared by the affected agency, in consultation with the Department of Commerce.

(d) There are authorized to be appropriated to the affected licensee agencies such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this section.

SEC. 216. DISTRIBUTION OF FREQUENCIES BY THE COMMISSION.

(a) PLANS SUBMITTED.—

(1) With respect to the initial 50 MHz to be reallocated from United States Government to non-United States Government use under section 404(d)(1)(A), not later than 6 months after enactment of this title, the Commission shall complete a public notice and comment proceeding regarding the allocation of this spectrum and shall form a plan to assign such spectrum pursuant to competitive bidding procedures, pursuant to section 408, during fiscal years 1994 through 1996.

(2) With respect to the remaining spectrum to be reallocated from United States Government to non-United States Government use under section 404(e), not later than 2 years after issuance of the report required by section 404(d)(1)(D), the Commission shall complete a public notice and comment proceeding; and the Commission shall, after consultation with the Secretary, prepare and submit to the President a plan for the distribution under the Communications Act of the frequency bands reallocated pursuant to the requirements of this title. Such plan shall—

(A) not propose the immediate distribution of all such frequencies, but, taking into account the timetable recommended by the Secretary pursuant to section 404(e), shall propose—

(i) gradually to distribute the frequencies remaining, after making the reservation required by subparagraph (ii), over the course of a 10-year period beginning on the date of submission of such plan; and

(ii) to reserve a significant portion of such frequencies for distribution beginning after the end of such 10-year period;

(B) contain appropriate provisions to ensure—

(i) the availability of frequencies for new technologies and services in accordance with the policies of section 7 of the Communications Act (47 U.S.C. 157); and

(ii) the availability of frequencies to stimulate the development of such technologies; and

(C) not prevent the Commission from allocating bands of frequencies for specific uses in future rulemaking proceedings.

(b) AMENDMENT TO THE COMMUNICATIONS ACT.—Section 303 of the Communications Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

“(u) Have authority to assign the frequencies reallocated from United States Government use to non-United States Government use pursuant to the Emerging Telecommunications Technologies Act of 1991, except that any such assignment shall expressly be made subject to the right of the President to reclaim such frequencies under the provisions of section 407 of the Emerging Telecommunications Technologies Act of 1991.”

SEC. 217. AUTHORITY TO RECLAIM REASSIGNED FREQUENCIES.

(a) AUTHORITY OF PRESIDENT.—The President may reclaim reallocated frequencies for reassignment to United States Government stations in accordance with this section.

(b) PROCEDURE FOR RECLAIMING FREQUENCIES.—

(1) UNASSIGNED FREQUENCIES.—If the frequencies to be reclaimed have not been assigned by the Commission, the President may reclaim them based on the grounds described in section 405(b)(2).

(2) ASSIGNED FREQUENCIES.—If the frequencies to be reclaimed have been assigned by the Commission, the President may reclaim them based on the grounds described in section 405(b)(2), except that the notification required by section 405(b)(1) shall include—

(A) a timetable to accommodate an orderly transition for licensees to obtain new frequencies and equipment necessary for their utilization; and

(B) an estimate of the cost of displacing the licensees.

(c) COSTS OF RECLAIMING FREQUENCIES.—Any non-United States Government licensee that is displaced from a frequency pursuant to this section shall be reimbursed the incremental costs it incurs that are directly attributable to the loss of the use of the frequency pursuant to this section.

(d) EFFECT ON OTHER LAW.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit or otherwise affect the authority of the President under section 706 of the Communications Act (47 U.S.C. 606).

SEC. 218. COMPETITIVE BIDDING.

(a) COMPETITIVE BIDDING AUTHORIZED.—Section 309 of the Communications Act is amended by adding the following new subsection:

“(j)(1)(A) The Commission shall use competitive bidding for awarding all initial licenses or new construction permits, including licenses and permits for spectrum reallocated for non-United States Government use pursuant to the Emerging Telecommunications Technologies Act of 1991, subject to the exclusions listed in paragraph (2).

“(B) The Commission shall require potential bidders to file a first-stage application indicating an intent to participate in the competitive bidding process and containing such other information as the Commission finds necessary. After conducting the bidding, the Commission shall require the winning bidder to submit a second-stage application. Upon determining that such application is acceptable for filing and that the applicant is qualified pursuant to subparagraph (C), the Commission shall grant a permit or license.

“(C) No construction permit or license shall be granted to an applicant selected pursuant to subparagraph (B) unless the Commission determines that such applicant is qualified pursuant to section 308(b) and subsection (a) of this section, on the basis of the information contained in the first- and second-stage applications submitted under subparagraph (B).

“(D) Each participant in the competitive bidding process is subject to the schedule of changes contained in section 8 of this Act.

“(E) The Commission shall have the authority in awarding construction permits or licenses under competitive bidding procedures to (i) define the geographic and frequency limitations and technical requirements, if any, of such permits or licenses; (ii) establish minimum acceptable competitive bids; and (iii) establish other appropriate conditions on such permits and licenses that will serve the public interest.

“(F) The Commission, in designing the competitive bidding procedures under this subsection, shall study and include procedures—

“(i) to ensure bidding access for small and rural companies,

“(ii) if appropriate, to extend the holding period for winning bidders awarded permits or licenses, and

“(iii) to expand review and enforcement requirements to ensure that winning bidders continue to meet their obligations under this Act.

“(G) The Commission shall, within 6 months after enactment of the Emerging Telecommunications Technologies Act of 1991, following public notice and comment proceedings, adopt rules establishing competitive bidding procedures under this subsection, including the method of bidding and the basis for payment (such as flat fees, fixed or variable royalties, combinations of flat fees and royalties, or other reasonable forms of payment); and a plan for applying such competitive bidding procedures to the initial 50 MHz reallocated from United States Government to non-United States Government use under section 404(d)(1)(A) of the Emerging Telecommunications Technologies Act of 1991, to be distributed during the fiscal years 1994 through 1996.

“(2) Competitive bidding shall not apply to—

“(A) license renewals;

“(B) the United States Government and State or local government entities;

“(C) amateur operator services, over-the-air terrestrial radio and television broadcast services, public safety services, and radio astronomy services;

“(D) private radio end-user licenses, such as Specialized Mobile Radio Service (SMRS), maritime, and aeronautical end-user licenses;

“(E) any license grant to a non-United States Government licensee being moved from its current frequency assignment to a different one by the Commission in order to implement the goals and objectives underlying the Emerging Telecommunications Technologies Act of 1991;

“(F) any other service, class of services, or assignments that the Commission determines, after conducting public comment and notice proceedings, should be exempt from competitive bidding because of public interest factors warranting an exemption; and “(G) small businesses, as defined in section 3(a)(1) of the Small Business Act.

“(3) In implementing this subsection, the Commission shall ensure that current and future rural telecommunications needs are met and that existing rural licensees and their subscribers are not adversely affected.

“(4) Monies received from competitive bidding pursuant to this subsection shall be deposited in the general fund of the United States Treasury.”

(b) RANDOM SELECTION NOT TO APPLY WHEN COMPETITIVE BIDDING REQUIRED.—Section 309(i)(1) of the Communications Act is amended by striking the period after the word “selection” and inserting “, except in instances where competitive bidding procedures are required under subsection (j).”

(c) SPECTRUM ALLOCATION DECISIONS.—Section 303 of the Communications Act is amended by adding the following new subsection:

“(v) In making spectrum allocation decisions among services that are subject to competitive bidding, the Commission is authorized to consider as one factor among others taken into account in making its determination, the relative economic values and other public interest benefits of the proposed uses as reflected in the potential revenues that would be collected under its competitive bidding procedures.”

SEC. 219. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this subtitle:

(1) The term “allocation” means an entry in the National Table of Frequency Allocations of a given frequency band for the purpose of its use by one or more radio-communications services.

(2) The term “assignment” means an authorization given by the Commission or the United States Government for a radio station to use a radio frequency or radio frequency channel.

(3) The term “Commission” means the Federal Communications Commission.

(4) The term “Communications Act” means the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 151 et seq.).

(5) The term “Secretary” means the Secretary of Commerce.

Subtitle C—Other Provisions

SEC. 221. EXTENSION OF CURRENT LAW REGARDING LUMP-SUM WITHDRAWAL OF RETIREMENT CONTRIBUTIONS FOR CIVIL SERVICE RETIREES.

(a) CIVIL SERVICE RETIREMENT SYSTEM.—Section 8343a(f)(3) of title 5, United States

Code, is amended by striking out “October 1, 1995” and inserting in lieu thereof “October 1, 1996”.

(b) FEDERAL EMPLOYEES RETIREMENT SYSTEM.—Section 8420a(f)(3) of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking out “October 1, 1995” and inserting in lieu thereof “October 6, 1996”.

SEC. 222. EXTENSION OF THE PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE USER FEE SURCHARGE THROUGH 1996.

Section 10101 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (35 U.S.C. 41 note) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a) by striking “1995” and inserting “1996”;

(2) in subsection (b)(2) by striking “1995” and inserting “1996”; and

(3) in subsection (c)—

(A) by striking “1995” the first place it appears and inserting “1996”; and

(B) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(6) $107,000,000 in fiscal year 1996.”

SEC. 223. ONE-YEAR EXTENSION OF CUSTOMS USER FEES.

Paragraph (3) of section 13031(j) of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 (19 U.S.C. 58c(j)(3)) is amended by striking out “1995” and inserting “1996”.

SEC. 224. DISCLOSURES OF INFORMATION FOR VETERANS BENEFITS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 6103(l)(7)(D) (relating to programs to which rule applies) is amended by striking “September 30, 1992” in the last sentence and inserting “September 30, 1998”.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 5317(g) of title 38, United States Code, is amended by striking “September 30, 1992” and inserting “September 30, 1998”.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on September 30, 1992.

SEC. 225. REVISION OF PROCEDURE RELATING TO CERTAIN LOAN DEFAULTS.

(a) REVISION.—Section 3732(c)(1)(C)(ii) of title 38, United States Code, is amended by striking out “resale,” and inserting in lieu thereof “resale (including losses sustained on the resale of the property).”

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on October 1, 1991.

SEC. 226. APPLICATION OF MEDICARE PART B LIMITS TO FEHBP ENROLLEE AGE 65 OR OLDER.

(a) FEDERAL EMPLOYEES HEALTH BENEFITS PROGRAM.—Subsection 8904(b) of title 5, United States Code, is amended:

(1) by amending paragraph (1) to read as follows:

“(b)(1)(A) A plan, other than a prepayment plan described in section 8903(4) of this title, may not provide benefits under this chapter, in the case of any individual enrolled in the plan who is not an employee and who is age 65 or older, to the extent that—

“(i) a benefit claim involves a charge by a health care provider for a type of service or medical item which is covered for purposes of benefit payments under both this chapter and title XVIII of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395–1395ccc) relating to medicare hospital and supplementary medical insurance, and “(ii) benefits otherwise payable under such provisions of law in the case of such individual would exceed applicable limitations on hospital and physician charges established for medicare purposes under sections 1866 and 1848 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww and 1395w-4), respectively.

“(B)(i) For purposes of this subsection, hospitals, physicians, and other suppliers of medical and health services who have in force participation agreements with the Secretary of Health and Human Services consistent with sections 1842(h) and 1866 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395u(h) and 1395cc), whereby the participating provider accepts medicare benefits in full payment of charges for covered items and services after applicable patient copayments under sections 1813, 1833 and 1866(a)(2) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395e, 1395f, and 1395cc(a)(2)) have been satisfied, shall accept equivalent benefit payments and enrollee copayments under this chapter as full payment for any item or service described under subparagraph (A) which is furnished to an individual who is enrolled under this chapter and is not covered for purposes of benefit payments applicable to such item or service under provisions of title XVIII of the Social Security Act.

"(ii) Physicians and other health care suppliers who are nonparticipating physicians, as defined by section 1842(i)(2) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395u(i)(2)) for purposes of services furnished to medicare beneficiaries, may not bill in excess of the limiting charge prescribed under section 1848(g) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395w-4(g)) when providing services described under subparagraph (A) to an individual who is enrolled under this chapter and is not covered for purposes of benefit payments applicable to those services under provisions of title XVIII of the Social Security Act.

"(iii) The Office of Personnel Management shall notify the Secretary of Health and Human Services if a hospital, physician, or other supplier of medical services is found to knowingly and willfully violate this subsection and the Secretary shall invoke appropriate sanctions in accordance with subsections 1128A(a)(2), 1848(g)(8), and 1866(b)(2) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1320a-7a(a)(2), 1395w-4(g)(8), and 1395cc(b)(2)) and applicable regulations."; and

(2) by amending paragraph (3)(B) to read as follows:

"(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'medicare program information' includes—

"(i) the limitations on hospital charges established for medicare purposes under section 1866 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww) and the identity of hospitals which have in force agreements with the Secretary of Health and Human Services consistent with section 1866 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395cc); and

"(ii) the annual fee schedule amounts for services of participating physicians and 'limiting charge' information for nonparticipating physicians established for medicare purposes under section 1848 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395w-4) and the identity of physicians and suppliers who have in force participation agreements with the Secretary consistent with subsection 1842(h) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395u(h))."

(b) MEDICARE AGREEMENTS WITH INSTITUTIONAL PROVIDERS.—Section 1866(a)(1) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395cc(a)(1)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (P);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (Q) and inserting ", and"; and

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (Q) the following new paragraph:

"(R) to accept as payment in full the amounts that would be payable under this part (including the amounts of any coinsurance and deductibles required of individuals entitled to have payment made on their behalf) for an item or service which the provider normally furnishes to patients (or others furnish under arrangement with the provider) and which is furnished to an individual who has attained age 65, is ineligible to receive benefits under this part, and is enrolled, other than as an employee, under a health benefits plan described in paragraphs (1) through (3) of section 8903 and section 8903a of title 5, United States Code, if such item or service is of a type that is covered under both this title and chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code."

(c) MEDICARE PARTICIPATING PHYSICIANS AND SUPPLIERS.—Section 1842(h)(1) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395u(h)(1)) is amended, after the second sentence, by inserting the following new sentence: "Such agreement shall provide, for any year beginning with 1993, that the physician or supplier will accept as payment in full the amounts that would be payable under this part (plus the amounts of any coinsurance or deductibles required of individuals on whose behalf payments are made under this title) for an item or service furnished during such year to an individual who has attained age 65, is ineligible to receive benefits under this part, and is enrolled, other than as an employee, under a health benefits plan described in paragraphs (1) through (3) of section 8903 and section 8903a of title 5, United States Code, if such item or service is of a type that is covered under both this part and chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code."

(d) MEDICARE ACTUAL CHARGE LIMITATION FOR NONPARTICIPATING PHYSICIANS.—Section 1848(g) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395w-4(g)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following paragraph:

"(8) LIMITATION OF ACTUAL CHARGES FOR ENROLLEES OF THE FEDERAL EMPLOYEES HEALTH BENEFITS PROGRAM.—(A) A nonparticipating physician shall not impose an actual charge in excess of the limiting charge defined in paragraph (2) for items and services furnished after 1993 in any case involving—

"(i) an individual who has attained age 65, is ineligible to receive benefits under this part, and is enrolled, other than as an employee, under a health benefits plan described in paragraphs (1) through (3) or section 8903 or section 8903a of title 5, United States Code; and

"(ii) an item or service of a type that is covered for benefits under both this part and chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code.

"(B) If a person knowingly and willfully bills for physicians' services in violation of subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall apply sanctions against the person in accordance with section 1842(j)(2)."

(e) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to health care provider charges for items and services furnished to individuals enrolled in plans under chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code, in contract years beginning after December 31, 1993.

(2) The amendment made by subsection (b) applies to agreements for periods after 1991.

THE INTERPUBLIC GROUP
OF COMPANIES, INC.,

New York, NY, December 24, 1991.

Mr. NICHOLAS F. BRADY,

Secretary of the Treasury, Department of the Treasury, Washington, DC.

DEAR NICK: I recently reviewed the Specter/Domenici Bill (S#1984) which has the possibility of stimulating the economy in two key sectors—housing and automobiles—major indicators of economic vitality both with the so-called experts on the economy, but more importantly, with the consumer (not to mention the impact this would have on unemployment).

We amended some of the aspects of the Bill (see attachment) and put it into national consumer research; I found the results more than interesting, and I believe you and the White House should review the data and the approach as a possible major element in a package of measures for stimulating an economic recovery.

With due respect, I point out that the consumer confidence level, which is a major problem and has been so for many months, was not addressed. The past is the past but if scenarios had been worked out in advance (what if the economy did not respond, etc.), the Administration might be in a better position to be on the attack with Congress. Of course, the media has not helped the situation at all. If you consider that the 1981-82 recession which had almost 10 percent unemployment and interest rates in the high teens (but a solid banking system and reasonable ability to lend), versus what we have today where the primary problems of the lending institutions require not only larger down-payments but a stronger consumer credit-worthiness as well, we can understand one of the major problems we face.

Because I share this concern and was intrigued by the Specter/Domenici approach, my company commissioned a study through a leading research company to estimate the number of American families who would make use of their IRA and 401K savings for housing and automobiles on a one-time basis, and to estimate the amount of money these families would invest above the levels they would spend without the use of these funds. Please note that the proposal provides that the IRA and 401K monies used would be tax free for five years, whereupon the consumer could put this money back into those retirement funds on a tax free basis (see attachment). Therefore, the program would be revenue neutral.

We have amended the Specter/Domenici Bill as follows:

A. We limited the use of IRA and 401K funds to housing and autos. These industries are the key industries for economic resurgence, and new vigor here would have a huge effect on the overall economy.

B. We suggested that autos purchased have at least 75 percent of content made in the USA. I recognize the GATT issue, but I believe our trading partners could be persuaded that a non-deficit 6 month domestic program that lifts the US economy would be to their own benefit over time as well. Additionally, this provision certainly would shake up the Japanese which the President politically must consider.

The research, a national probability sample of 1,000 households, was conducted in the middle of December, and is representative of U.S.A. demographics by age, sex, religion and race. Let me summarize the findings on this basis:

1. This proposed use of IRA and 401K funds would increase intentions to buy or improve a home or to buy a car from 26 to 44 million families—a gain of 18 million families.

2. One in three (33.5 percent) American families claim they would use some of their IRA and/or 401K funds to buy a new home, improve their home or buy a car under this proposal. Of these, over 10,300,000 families say they are "very" likely to take positive action.

3. Another 20,700,000 households say they are "somewhat" likely to act per this proposal.

4. Of these 31,000,000 households, fully 65 percent say they would use the maximum $10,000. Another 18 percent report they would use more than $5,000 but less than $10,000. This proposed legislation would motivate 26,000,000 American families to spend more than $5,000 on housing and autos, with another 5,000,000 families spending less than $5,000.

5. If they do as they say, these 31 million families would theoretically transfer over $224 billion dollars from existing IRA and 401K funds to the housing and auto industries. According to the BEA, American families spent $647 billion in these two sectors in 1990—not including maintenance and operations. At a very minimum, the proposed action would produce impactful double-digit gains in both industries.

6. Over half (55%) of the 31 million families who say they would make use of IRA and/or 401K funds for housing and autos, report, they do not intend to invest at this time in new or improved housing or buy a new car without this proposal. In other words, the Specter/Domenici proposal motivates many more people to act now. Using just this 55% figure, the impact would be over $120 billion in incremental spending coming into these two industries at this critical time.

I am very enthused about these findings. Although the sample size is not large, the responses are statistically reliable within 3%. Even if one applies a conservative adjustment to these stated consumer actions, the numbers are still very impressive.

I have heard a lot of qualitative research recently which suggests the President should adopt a more pro-American business stance. While we are all believers in free trade, there is a deep seated popular concern that the Japanese are receiving special treatment with respect to their markets versus ours. This viewpoint is being strengthened by the current U.S. auto industry problems and the attendant negative publicity. I believe this proposal is an appropriate response.

I do hope this study might be of help to you and the President. We would be happy to have our research analyst come to Washington to go over the detailed results with your staff or whomever you wish.

On a related note, a lot of us believe that a cut in the capital gains tax rate would be revenue positive and is the right thing to do. However, I believe the average American family is much more concerned with holding onto or getting jobs, and unless this tax change can be explained simply and succinctly and backed up with facts on how it creates jobs, we really should let it pass. Our indications are that this will be a detriment with the average person in getting a tax stimulus approved.

In my view, the direction proposed in the Specter/Domenici Bill is exactly right for this time and these conditions.

I hope you and your family have a very happy holiday, and I look forward to seeing you soon in the New Year.

Sincerely,

PHILIP H. GEIER, Jr.

AMENDED STATEMENT OF SENATOR SPECTER'S PROPOSAL AS USED IN RESEARCH

As you may know, recently the US economy has been stagnant. A proposal is before the US Senate to help get things moving again. It is intended to provide the economy with needed stimulation from consumers such as yourself. This Senate proposal would allow consumers to withdraw up to $100,000 from their own individual IRA or 401K accounts penalty free and without tax consequences.

The funds may be used within six months either, for purchase of a home, for improvements to a home or for purchase of an automobile having at least 75% of its content made in the USA.

If consumers choose to eliminate the tax consequence, they only need to return the withdrawal to their IRA or 401K account within the next five tax years.

If consumers choose not to return the funds withdrawn, they can still reduce the tax consequences by paying tax on only 1/4 of the amount in each of the next five years.

THE INTERPUBLIC GROUP

OF COMPANIES, INC.,

New York, NY, April 3, 1992.

Hon. ARLEN SPECTER,
Hart Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPECTER: In December 1991, we commissioned a consumer survey—a national probability sample of 1000 adults—to learn how Americans would respond to the Specter/Domenici proposal S-1984. We described the proposal to these people, in consumer language. We told them the Senate proposal would permit them to withdraw up to $10,000 from their IRA's or 401K's without penalty if they used the monies to either buy a new car, make a home improvement or buy a new home within the next six months.

The results were very encouraging. Fully one out of every three households in the country said they'd like to take advantage of this Senate proposal . . . 31 million households said they would act on this proposal . . . if it were passed.

Ninety days later, we conducted a second round of research. This time we beefed up the questionnaire to make sure those Americans who said they would act on this Senate proposal were, in fact, qualified to act on the proposal.

The results of the second round of research are even more encouraging. Among the 26 million families that qualify . . . those who say they have an IRA, a 401K, or a Keogh plan and a household income of no more than $100K (75K for single heads) . . . fully 40%, that is 10.5 million families, say they will take advantage of the Senate proposal to buy a new car, van or truck, make a home improvement or buy a new home.

We also asked everybody we interviewed, regardless of whether they qualify or don't qualify, whether they thought this proposal would be good for the economy.

69% of all American families think the Senate proposal will have a positive impact on our economy. That is 65,000,000 families favor seeing this proposal passed. Even more impressive is the fact that 74% of America's middle-class families (HH income from $25K to $50K) believe the Senate proposal will stimulate our economy.

Both rounds of research say that Americans . . . those qualified and those who wish they were, are very much in favor of seeing this Senate proposal passed. Not once but twice they told us they would use their own funds to get our economy moving.

The proposal is powerful. It stimulates people to spend money; their own money. It motivates people to take action and buy a new home, make a home improvement or buy a new car. The research shows there are 10,500,000 qualified families who would withdraw money from their IRA's, their 401K, or their Keogh plan to make these investments.

Nearly 50% of these qualified families, (5,000,000) were motivated to invest in these properties solely by the Senate proposal. That is 5 million families did not intend to buy a new car, a new home or do any home improvements before this Senate proposal made it possible for them to consider taking these actions within the next six months.

These 5 million families say they will withdraw $32 billion dollars to invest: 2.1 million families investing $14 billion for new cars; 1.2 million families investing $10 billion for new homes and 1.6 million families investing $8 billion in home improvements.

But that's not all. The $24 billion for new homes and new cars is "seed money". It needs to be multiplied by the money they would take from their savings or borrow from banks to complete their purchases. (We're making the conservative assumption that the money they withdraw to spend on home improvement is their total investment.)

The average cost of a "new" home last year was $95,000. The money they would "borrow" from their plans (on average $7,900) needs to be multiplied by about 11X to equal the balance of the down payment (assuming 20%) and mortgage requirements to complete the purchase cost of a new home. That alone is an additional $106 billion dollars that would flow from lending institutions to support these intentions.

The average cost of a new car, van or truck last year was $13,500. In the survey new car buyers "borrowed" $6,450 (on average) from their plans. The additional funds from savings or a bank loan needed to complete the purchase is $7,050. The multiplier is 1.1x. Therefore, the "seed money" this Senate proposal would put into the economy generates an additional $15 billion dollars in economic activity.

Bottom line is that the Senate proposal would free up $32 billion from retirement plan savings to help get our economy moving. When multipliers are included the money Americans would use to complete their purchases results in a total of $153 billion . . . home purchase $116 billion; new car purchase $29 billion; home improvement $8 billion dollars that would move into our economy.

And 75% of these qualified Americans say they will return the money they borrow from their plans within the time frame required to avoid paying any penalties or additional taxes.

As I indicated, the findings were encouraging when we initially surveyed the issue in December 1991.

Findings in the March 1992 survey make it very conclusive. This is a plan which Americans believe in. A plan from which they and our nations economy will benefit. Clearly this proposal has a powerful triggering effect. It comes at a time when the effect of lowered interest rates is being blunted by the more restrictive consumer lending policies of our financial institutions. This proposal allows responsible access to funds. These will go to responsible investments. Economic activity will be triggered, jobs ensured and created. It provides a stimulus we need right now.

I urge you to make this opportunity available to our citizens. There is no doubt of their response and there can be little doubt concerning its positive and immediate economic impact.

With regards,

PHILIP H. GEIER, Jr.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM—DIVISION OF RESEARCH AND STATISTICS

Date: February 12, 1992.

Subject: Analysis of Senator Specter's proposal regarding penalty-free withdrawals from retirement accounts.

This memorandum analyzes Senator Specter's proposal regarding penalty-free withdrawals from retirement accounts, focusing especially on the issue of how great an impact the action would have on household spending. Section I describes in greater detail the provisions of the proposal; Section II discusses some analytical considerations bearing on the spending issue; Section III presents some relevant estimates derived from the national Survey of Consumer Finance; Section IV offers some conjectures on the likely spending effects.

I. The proposal

The proposed legislation would allow certain taxpayers to make penalty-free withdrawals from retirement-type accounts, provided the withdrawals are applied toward one or more qualified purchases. Specifically:

The proposal would allow withdrawals from IRAs, Keoghs, and 401(k)s.

Eligibility would be restricted to those earning less than $100,000 (if married and filing jointly), $50,000 (if married and filing separately), or $75,000 (all others).

According to the legislation in its current form, qualified expenditures would include the purchase or improvement of real property, and the purchase of durable goods. In his floor speech and in other communications, Senator Specter has also mentioned medical expenses and college tuition.

Each taxpayer would be allowed to withdraw no more than $10,000.

Withdrawals would have to be made on or before December 31, 1992; associated expenditure would have to be made either (a) within six months of the withdrawal, or (b) by the time the taxpayer files his/her return for the relevant tax year (in most cases, no later than April 15, 1993). The more restrictive of (a) or (b) would be the binding rule.

Regular tax liability on the withdrawn funds would still be owed; however, the liability could be spread over a period of four years following the withdrawal.

In his floor speech and written communications, Senator Specter also mentions the possibility of allowing those who take advantage of this proposal to replenish the funds in their IRA or 401(k) over the five years following the withdrawal. The existing legislation does not contain this provision.

II. Analytical considerations

Several analytical points are worth making about the likely impact of the proposal on household spending:

It is useful to think of qualifying households as falling in one of three categories: not liquidity-constrained, extremely liquidity-constrained, and somewhat liquidity-constrained.

Households that are not liquidity-constrained will probably not be interested in tapping their retirement savings, because doing so would remove those savings from their current tax-sheltered status.

Households that are extremely pressed for the funds will be tapping their funds in any event, and would choose to pay the 10 percent penalty in the absence of Senator Specter's proposal. The extra spending generated by the Senator's proposal via these households would be only $1,000—smaller by an order of magnitude than the overall amount of $10,000.

Therefore, the proposal likely would have its greatest impact on the spending of the intermediate group: those households that are somewhat liquidity-constrained, but not too much so. These households will be induced to make a withdrawal that they otherwise would not have made.

About two-thirds of 401(k)s have borrowing provisions. Therefore, owners of these accounts have access to the wealth they hold in 401(k)s even in the absence of Senator Specter's proposal. Evidence suggests that many households take advantage of these loan provisions. For example, one recent survey found that 9 percent of account-holders initiated a new loan during 1990, while 21 percent had a loan outstanding at the end of 1990.¹ Roughly 90 percent of such plans allow general-purpose loans (and therefore cover a wider range of expenditures than would Senator Specter's plan).

The tax amortization feature probably will make relatively little difference to the proposal's influence on spending: Standard theories of consumer behavior predict that taxpayers who know that a liability is outstanding will be inclined to set aside most, if not all, of the tax liability upon receipt of the withdrawal. This prediction is supported by available evidence concerning the relationship between ordinary income tax refunds and consumer spending.^{2,3}

III. Empirical evidence

The following estimates from the 1989 Survey of Consumer Finance shed further light on the likely impact of the proposal on household spending:

According to the SCF, qualified accounts (including IRAs, 401(k)s, Keoghs, thrift, and saving plans) amounted to $1.239 trillion in 1989.⁴

Of this amount, $893 billion was held by families headed by someone aged less than 59 years old. Older people already can withdraw funds from retirement accounts without penalty.

Next $736 billion was held by families meeting both the income constraints specified under the Specter proposal and the above-mentioned age cutoff.

Ownership of that $736 billion was highly concentrated, however. If we count only the first $10,000 in retirement funds per family, then the qualified pool of funds shrinks to only $136 billion.

Median liquid assets held by all families meeting the proposed age and income criteria were $1,950.⁵ Among families reporting ownership of some retirement funds, median liquid asset holdings were $6,180. Among families holding at least $5,000 in retirement funds, median liquid asset holdings were $9,800. This result conforms with the common finding that those who save via IRAs and Keoghs also tend to save by other means. Families that are holding substantial amounts outside their retirement accounts will be less interested in tapping their retirement funds if given the opportunity to do so penalty-free.

Transaction costs could be sufficiently great to persuade some families who otherwise would take advantage of Senator Specter's proposal not to liquidate their IRAs or 401(k)s. These costs would include, for example, early withdrawal penalties on time deposits and broker commissions.

IV. Spending effects

A fundamental fact should be kept in mind while assessing the likely influence of the proposed program on household spending:

Footnotes at end of article.

The proposal would do nothing to raise the wealth of households, other than of those who anticipated incurring a withdrawal penalty. Therefore, the proposal would influence household spending mainly by relaxing liquidity constraints currently binding on some households. The above data from the SCF suggest that this impact probably would not be very great, given that a considerable portion of the available retirement related wealth is owned by families holding substantial amounts of other liquid assets.

Some withdrawals undoubtedly would occur if the proposal were to be adopted, but the incremental effect of the proposal on expenditure will be less than the total amount withdrawn for two reasons: First, some withdrawals would have been taken, even in the absence of the program, by families extremely pressed for liquidity. Second, some withdrawals from 401(k)s will represent, in effect, a substitution of outright withdrawal for borrowing that would have taken place in the absence of the program.

There is no way of predicting with any confidence the amount of additional expenditure that would be forthcoming in response to implementation of the proposal. It seems reasonable to guess, on the basis of the evidence presented here, that the increment to spending would amount to less than one percent of personal consumption expenditure (or $40 billion)—and it quite possibly would be substantially less. If the permissible penalty-free withdrawal were to be raised to $20,000, it would raise the amount released on the estimates above from $136 billion to $206 billion. However, while the spending effect probably would be greater, it would likely be only modestly so, because the additional balances affected would, on average, be held by individuals who are less liquidity-constrained.

³Low-income taxpayers will experience some benefit from being allowed to smooth some of the liability into lower tax brackets. However, evidence from the Survey of Consumer Finance suggests that eligible families would have higher-than-normal incomes, and so would not benefit from this aspect of the proposal to any great degree.

⁴Respondents to the 1989 SCF reported total holdings in IRAs and Keoghs of $598 billion. For comparison, The Employee Benefit Research Institute puts the total for IRAs and Keoghs in 1989 at $494 billion. SCF respondents reported an additional $295 billion in 401(k)s, quite close to the estimate for 1988 of $277 billion based on data from the Department of Labor's Form 5500. Finally, SCF respondents reported $346 billion in thrift or saving plans, or other defined-contribution plans with borrowing provisions.

⁵Liquid assets were defined as the sum of checking accounts, money market accounts, CDs, other bank accounts, mutual fund holdings, savings bonds, other government and private bonds, direct stock holdings, and accounts held at brokers.

[An advertisement from USA Today, Mar. 6, 1992]

In the next 6 months, Congress can help Detroit sell more than a million more new cars, help builders sell more than 500,000 more new homes, and American tradesmen improve millions of old homes.

Without costing the taxpayers a penny. And without waiting for a new tax bill.

It's remarkable. It's immediate. And it's a conservative estimate based on an independent market research response to an amended version of the Specter/Domenici Bill S-1984.

When asked whether they would use up to $10,000 of their money currently in IRA's and/or 401K's—if there were no penalty—to purchase a new home, improve their current home, or buy an automobile or truck. Americans overwhelmingly answered "yes."

Indeed, 38% more people than are currently in the auto market said this would turn them from being bystanders into buyers. That's 4.8 million more people spending 65 billion new dollars. Out of a projected total of over $200 billion in purchasing power that this suggested amended bill could unleash. (and this doesn't include additional mortgage money generated, either.)

Additionally, they understood the only time qualifications was that they do this in the next six months, and return the money to their accounts within five years to reinstate tax-free benefits without a taxable event taking place.

And because people had not planned on withdrawing the money anyway, there would be no loss of revenue to the government from the loss of withdrawal penalties.

It's a provocative idea. A practical idea. And an affordable idea. And judging from the response to the market research, it's an idea for jump-starting the economy whose time has come.

By Mr. ROTH (for himself, Mr. GLENN, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. METZENBAUM, Mr. MCCAIN, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. ROBB, and Mr. LUGAR):

S. 20. A bill to provide for the establishment, testing, and evaluation of strategic planning and performance measurement in the Federal Government, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

GOVERNMENT PERFORMANCE AND RESULTS ACT

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I am reintroducing today S. 20, the Government Performance and Results Act. This legislation represents a very important and fundamental reform of the way Federal Government does business. When fully implemented, after an initial series of pilot projects, all Federal agencies would have to establish measurable program performance goals and to report actual results.

The legislation, in other words, would bring about a new form of accountability to the American taxpayers—an accountability by Federal agencies for the results they achieve when they spend tax dollars.

That this commonsense reform is long overdue is evidenced by the broad, bipartisan cosponsorship it received in the last Congress, and by the fact that it passed the Senate under unanimous consent on October 1. I am hopeful that with similar support in this Congress and from the new administration, we can move this bill quickly to enactment during the first 100 days.

This new emphasis on Government performance and results is a fundamental element underlying what has come to be referred to as reinventing Government. It is what will allow us to give program administrators greater managerial flexibility and discretion—the freedom to be innovative—in return for greater results-oriented accountability. It is what allows us to move toward performance-based budgeting, with specific program goals linked directly in the budget to the required resources. These reforms, too, are incorporated as objectives of S. 20.

For too long, Federal program performance has suffered from a lack both of specific program goals and the measurement of results. Accountability has been strictly process-oriented—did program managers properly follow a detailed set of procedural requirements, in a rigidly mandated program structure, with resources used in precisely the manner prescribed? That is what seems to matter most, not whether the program is achieving the desired results.

Rarely is the question even asked, much less answered, "What outcomes do we want for the money we are going to spend?" As a result, on those seemingly few occasions when program outcomes are actually reported, there is no preestablished benchmark against which to objectively measure success or failure. This, in turn, makes it difficult to spotlight excellence or to expose mismanagement.

The Government Performance and Results Act will address this major shortcoming in how the Federal Government operates. In doing so, it will go a long way toward improving the efficiency, effectiveness, and responsiveness of governmental institutions.

I believe it is significant that the National Academy of Public Administration and the American Society for Public Administration have called for the types of reforms mandated by S. 20. Both organizations, whose members include many esteemed present and former Government managers, have endorsed the need for such legislation, and made valuable suggestions in the development of the bill.

This is because most Government managers truly do want to do a good job. But to do this, they need a clear understanding of specifically what it is their programs should accomplish, and accurate, timely information on program performance. They want program goals that relate to program resources, and they want the discretion to manage those resources to achieve maximum results. In all of this, they are no different than managers in the private sector.

Both the Office of Management and Budget, and the General Accounting Office, in testimony before the Governmental Affairs Committee, stated that the measures called for in S. 20 are already now being adopted in various State and local governments—and at the national government level in such countries as Australia and the United Kingdom. While the specifics of implementation are necessarily different for our Federal Government, many of the fundamental principles are applicable.

The legislation incorporates those principles. Each agency would develop a 5-year strategic plan, with a set of specific, long-term program goals. It would then develop an annual performance plan, also with measurable program goals, aiming its day-to-day activities at achieving the long-term objectives. And then each agency would publish an annual performance report, showing what it achieved compared to those goals.

Implementation of these steps would begin first on a pilot project basis, in programs within at least 10 agencies for 3 years. If satisfied with the results of those pilot projects, Congress would then approve a resolution mandating governmentwide implementation of the requirements. At that point, several pilot projects in performance-based budgeting would begin—showing proposed program budgets in a format that directly links recommended spending levels with expected results.

Mr. President, public opinion polls indicate that the average American believes 48 cents out of every tax dollar sent to Washington is wasted. This is a key reason underlying the public's frustration with the Federal Government. The Government Performance and Results Act is a major reform of how Government operates, and is aimed squarely at addressing that frustration. Its enactment will be an important and significant step toward restoring the public's confidence in our institutions of Government.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed following this statement.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Government Performance and Results Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) waste and inefficiency in Federal programs undermine the confidence of the American people in the Government and reduces the Federal Government's ability to address adequately vital public needs;

(2) Federal managers are seriously disadvantaged in their efforts to improve program efficiency and effectiveness, because of insufficient articulation of program goals and inadequate information on program performance; and

(3) congressional policymaking, spending decisions and program oversight are seriously handicapped by insufficient attention to program performance and results.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this Act are to—

(1) improve the confidence of the American people in the capability of the Federal Government, by systematically holding Federal agencies accountable for achieving program results;

(2) initiate program performance reform with a series of pilot projects in setting program goals, measuring program performance against those goals, and reporting publicly on their progress;

(3) improve Federal program effectiveness and public accountability by promoting a new focus on results, service quality, and customer satisfaction;

(4) help Federal managers improve service delivery, by requiring that they plan for meeting program objectives and by providing them with information about program results and service quality;

(5) improve congressional decisionmaking by providing more objective information on achieving statutory objectives, and on the relative effectiveness and efficiency of Federal programs and spending; and

(6) improve internal management of the Federal Government, and the intent of this Act is not to create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law by any party against the United States, or any agency or office of the United States.

SEC. 3. STRATEGIC PLANNING.

Chapter 3 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding after section 305 the following new section:

"§ 306. Strategic plans

"(a) No later than September 30, 1997, the head of each agency shall submit to the Director of the Office of Management and Budget a strategic plan for program activities. Such plan shall contain—

"(1) a comprehensive mission statement covering the major functions and operations of the agency;

"(2) general goals and objectives, including outcome-related goals and objectives, for the major functions and operations of the agency;

"(3) a description of how the goals and objectives are to be achieved, including a description of the operational processes, skills and technology, and the human, capital, information, and other resources required to meet those goals and objectives;

"(4) a description of how the performance goals included in the plan required by section 1115(a) of title 31 shall be related to the general goals and objectives in the strategic plan;

"(5) an identification of those key factors external to the agency and beyond its control that could significantly affect the achievement of the general goals and objectives; and

"(6) a description of the program evaluations used in establishing or revising general goals and objectives, with a schedule for future program evaluations.

"(b) The strategic plan shall cover a period of not less than five years forward from the fiscal year in which it is submitted, and shall be updated and revised at least every three years.

"(c) The performance plan required by section 1115 of title 31 shall be consistent with the agency's strategic plan. A performance plan may not be submitted for a fiscal year not covered by a current strategic plan under this section.

"(d) When developing a strategic plan, the agency shall consult with the Congress, and shall solicit and consider the views and suggestions of those entities potentially affected by or interested in such a plan.

"(e) For purposes of this section the term 'agency' means an Executive agency defined under section 105, but does not include the Central Intelligence Agency, the General Accounting Office, the Panama Canal Commission, the United States Postal Service, and the Postal Rate Commission."

SEC. 4. ANNUAL PERFORMANCE PLANS AND REPORTS.

(a) BUDGET CONTENTS AND SUBMISSION TO CONGRESS.—Section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(29) beginning with fiscal year 1999, a Federal Government performance plan for the overall budget as provided for under section 1115."

(b) PERFORMANCE PLANS AND REPORTS.—Chapter 11 of title 31, United States Code, is amended by adding after section 1114 the following new sections:

"§ 1115. Performance plans

"(a) In carrying out the provisions of section 1105(a)(29), the Office of Management and Budget shall require each agency to prepare an annual performance plan covering each program activity set forth in the budget of such agency. Such plan shall—

"(1) establish performance goals to define the level of performance to be achieved by a program activity;

"(2) express such goals in an objective, quantifiable, and measurable form unless permitted an alternative form under subsection (b);

"(3) describe the operational processes, skills and technology, and the human, capital, information, and other resources required to meet the performance goals;

"(4) establish performance indicators to be used in measuring or assessing the relevant outputs, service levels, and outcomes of each program activity;

"(5) provide a basis for comparing actual program results with the established performance goals; and

"(6) describe the means to be used to verify and validate measured values.

"(b) If an agency, in consultation with the Office of Management and Budget, determines that it is not feasible to express the performance goals for a particular program activity in an objective and quantifiable form, the Office of Management and Budget may authorize an alternative form. Such alternative form shall—

"(1) include separate descriptive statements of—

"(A) a minimally effective program, and

"(B) a successful program, with sufficient precision and in such terms that would allow for an accurate, independent determination of whether the program activity's performance meets the criteria of either description; or

"(2) state why it is infeasible or impractical to express a performance goal in any form for the program activity.

"(c) In preparing a comprehensive and informative plan under this section, an agency may aggregate, disaggregate, or consolidate program activities, provided that any aggregation or consolidation does not omit or minimize the significance of any program activity constituting a major function or operation for the agency.

"(d) An agency may prepare a classified or non-public annex to its plan covering program activities or parts of program activities relating to—

"(1) national security;

"(2) the conduct of foreign affairs; or

"(3) the avoidance of interference with criminal prosecution or revenue collection.

"(e) For purposes of this section and sections 1116 through 1119, and section 9704 the term—

"(1) 'agency' means an Executive agency defined under section 105 of title 5, United States Code, but does not include the Central Intelligence Agency, the General Accounting Office, the Panama Canal Commission, the United States Postal Service, and the Postal Rate Commission;

"(2) 'outcome measure' refers to an assessment of the results of a program activity compared to its intended purpose;

"(3) 'output measure' refers to the tabulation, calculation, or recording of activity or effort and can be expressed in a quantitative or qualitative manner;

"(4) 'performance goal' means a target level of performance expressed as a tangible, measurable objective, against which actual achievement shall be compared, including a goal expressed as a quantitative standard, value, or rate;

"(5) 'performance indicator' refers to a particular value or characteristic used to measure output or outcome;

"(6) 'program activity' means a specific activity or project as listed in the program and financing schedules of the annual budget of the United States Government; and

"(7) 'program evaluation' means an assessment, through objective measurement and systematic analysis, of the manner and extent to which Federal programs achieve intended objectives.

"§ 1116. Program performance reports

"(a) No later than March 31, 2000, and no later than March 31 of each year thereafter, the head of each agency shall prepare and submit to the President and the Congress, a report on program performance for the previous fiscal year.

"(b)(1) Each program performance report shall set forth the performance indicators established in the departmental or agency performance plan, along with the actual program performance achieved compared with the performance goals expressed in the plan for that fiscal year.

"(2) If performance goals are specified by descriptive statements of a minimally effective program activity and a successful program activity, the results of such program shall be described in relationship to those categories, including whether the performance failed to meet the criteria of either category.

"(c) The report for fiscal year 2000 shall include actual results for the preceding fiscal year, the report for fiscal year 2001 shall include actual results for the two preceding fiscal years, and the report for fiscal year 2002 and all subsequent reports shall include actual results for the three preceding fiscal years.

"(d) Each report shall—

"(1) review the success of achieving the performance goals of the fiscal year;

"(2) evaluate the performance plan for the current fiscal year relative to the performance achieved towards the performance goals in the fiscal year covered by the report;

"(3) explain and describe, where a performance goal has not been met, including when a program activity's performance is determined not to have met the criteria of a successful program activity under section 1115(b)(2)—

"(A) why the goal was not met;

"(B) those plans and schedules for achieving the established performance goal; and

"(C) if the performance goal is impractical or infeasible, why that is the case and what action is recommended;

"(4) describe the use and assess the effectiveness in achieving performance goals of any waiver under section 9703 of this title; and

"(5) include the summary findings of those program evaluations completed during the fiscal year covered by the report.

"(e) The agency head may include all program performance information required annually under this section in an annual financial statement required under section 3515 if any such statement is submitted to the Congress no later than March 31 of the applicable fiscal year.

"§ 1117. Exemption

"The Director of the Office of Management and Budget may exempt from the requirements of sections 1115 and 1116 and section 306 of title 5, any agency with annual outlays of $20,000,000 or less."

SEC. 5. MANAGERIAL ACCOUNTABILITY AND FLEXIBILITY.

(a) MANAGERIAL ACCOUNTABILITY AND FLEXIBILITY.—Chapter 97 of title 31, United States Code, is amended by adding after section 9702, the following new section:

"§ 9703. Managerial accountability and flexibility

"(a) Beginning with fiscal year 1999, the performance plans required under section 1115 may include proposals to waive administrative procedural requirements and controls, including specification of personnel staffing levels, limitations on compensation or remuneration, and prohibitions or restrictions on funding transfers among budget object classification 20 and subclassifications 11, 12, 31, and 32 of each annual budget submitted under section 1105, in return for specific individual or organization accountability to achieve a performance goal. In preparing and submitting the performance plan under section 1105(a)(29), the Office of Management and Budget shall review and may approve any proposed waivers. A waiver shall take effect at the beginning of the fiscal year for which the waiver is approved.

"(b) Any such proposal under subsection (a) shall describe the anticipated effects on performance resulting from greater managerial or organizational flexibility, discretion, and authority, and shall quantify the expected improvements in performance resulting from any waiver. The expected improvements shall be compared to current actual performance, and to the projected level of performance that would be achieved independent of any waiver.

"(c) Any proposal waiving limitations on compensation or remuneration shall precisely express the monetary change in compensation or remuneration amounts, such as bonuses or awards, that shall result from meeting, exceeding, or failing to meet performance goals.

"(d) Any proposed waiver of procedural requirements or controls imposed by an agency (other than the proposing agency or the Office of Management and Budget) shall be endorsed by the agency that established the requirement, and the endorsement included in the proposing agency's performance plan.

"(e) A waiver shall be in effect for one or two years. A waiver may be renewed for a subsequent year. After a waiver has been in effect for three consecutive years, the performance plan prepared under section 1115 may propose that a waiver, other than a waiver of limitations on compensation or remuneration, be made permanent."

SEC. 6. PILOT PROJECTS.

(a) PERFORMANCE PLANS AND REPORTS.—Chapter 11 of title 31, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 1117 (as added by section 4 of this Act) the following new section:

"§ 1118. Pilot projects for performance goals

"(a) The Director of the Office of Management and Budget, after consultation with the head of each agency, shall designate not less than ten agencies as pilot projects in performance measurement for fiscal years 1994, 1995, and 1996. The selected agencies shall reflect a representative range of Government functions and capabilities in measuring and reporting program performance.

"(b) Pilot projects in the designated agencies shall undertake the preparation of performance plans under section 1115, and program performance reports under section 1116, other than section 1116(c), for one or more of the major functions and operations of the agency. A strategic plan shall be used when preparing agency performance plans during one or more years of the pilot period.

"(c) No later than May 1, 1997, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall submit a report to the President and to the Congress which shall—

"(1) assess the benefits, costs, and usefulness of the plans and reports prepared by the pilot agencies in meeting the purposes of the Government Performance and Results Act of 1992;

"(2) identify any significant difficulties experienced by the pilot agencies in preparing plans and reports; and

"(3) set forth any recommended changes in the requirements of the provisions of Government Performance and Results Act of 1992, section 306 of title 5, sections 1105, 1115, 1116, 1117, 1119 and 9704 of this title, and this section."

(b) MANAGERIAL ACCOUNTABILITY AND FLEXIBILITY.—Chapter 97 of title 31, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 9703 (as added by section 5 of this Act) the following new section:

"§ 9704. Pilot projects for managerial accountability and flexibility

"(a) The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall designate not less than five agencies as pilot projects in managerial accountability and flexibility for fiscal years 1995 and 1996. Such agencies shall be selected from those designated as pilot projects under section 1118 and shall reflect a representative range of Government functions and capabilities in measuring and reporting program performance.

"(b) Pilot projects in the designated agencies shall include proposed waivers in accordance with section 9703 for one or more of the major functions and operations of the agency.

"(c) The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall include in the report to the President and to the Congress required under section 1118(b) the following—

"(1) an assessment of the benefits, costs, and usefulness of increasing managerial and organizational flexibility, discretion, and authority in exchange for improved performance through a waiver; and

"(2) an identification of any significant difficulties experienced by the pilot agencies in preparing proposed waivers.

"(d) For purposes of this section the definitions under section 1115(e) shall apply."

(c) PERFORMANCE BUDGETING.—Chapter 11 of title 31, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 1118 (as added by section 6 of this Act) the following new section:

"§ 1119. Pilot projects for performance budgeting

"(a) The Director of the Office of Management and Budget, after consultation with the head of each agency shall designate not less than five agencies as pilot projects in performance budgeting for fiscal years 1998 and 1999. At least three of the agencies shall be selected from those designated as pilot projects under section 1118, and shall also reflect a representative range of Government functions and capabilities in measuring and reporting program performance.

"(b) Pilot projects in the designated agencies shall cover the preparation of performance budgets. Such budgets shall present, for one or more of the major functions and operations of the agency, the varying levels of performance, including outcome-related performance, that would result from different budgeted amounts.

"(c) The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall include, as an alternative budget presentation in the budget submitted under section 1105 for fiscal year 1999, the performance budgets of the designated agencies for this fiscal year.

"(d) No later than March 31, 2001, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall transmit a report to the President and to the Congress on the performance budgeting pilots which shall—

"(1) assess the feasibility and advisability of including a performance budget as part of the annual budget submitted under section 1105;

"(2) describe any difficulties encountered by the pilot agencies in preparing a performance budget;

"(3) recommend whether legislation requiring performance budgets should be proposed and the general provisions of any legislation; and

"(4) set forth any recommended changes in the other requirements of the Government Performance and Results Act of 1992, section 306 of title 5, sections 1105, 1115, 1116, 1117, 1118, and 9704 of this title, and this section.

"(e) After receipt of the report required under subsection (d), the Congress may specify that a performance budget be submitted as part of the annual budget submitted under section 1105."

SEC. 7. UNITED STATES POSTAL SERVICE.

Part III of title 39, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new chapter:

"CHAPTER 28—STRATEGIC PLANNING AND PERFORMANCE MANAGEMENT

"Sec.

"2801. Definitions.

"2802. Strategic plans.

"2803. Performance plans.

"2804. Program performance reports.

"§ 2801. Definitions

"For purposes of this chapter the term—

"(1) 'outcome measure' refers to an assessment of the results of a program activity compared to its intended purpose;

"(2) 'output measure' refers to the tabulation, calculation, or recording of activity or effort and can be expressed in a quantitative or qualitative manner;

"(3) 'performance goal' means a target level of performance expressed as a tangible, measurable objective, against which actual achievement shall be compared, including a goal expressed as a quantitative standard, value, or rate;

"(4) 'performance indicator' refers to a particular value or characteristic used to measure output or outcome;

"(5) 'program activity' means a specific activity related to the mission of the Postal Service; and

"(6) 'program evaluation' means an assessment, through objective measurement and systematic analysis, of the manner and extent to which Postal Service programs achieve intended objectives.

"§ 2802. Strategic plans

"(a) No later than September 30, 1997, the Postal Service shall submit to the President and the Congress a strategic plan for its program activities. Such plan shall contain—

"(1) a comprehensive mission statement covering the major functions and operations of the Postal Service;

"(2) general goals and objectives, including outcome-related goals and objectives, for the major functions and operations of the Postal Service;

"(3) a description of how the goals and objectives are to be achieved, including a description of the operational processes, skills and technology, and the human, capital, information, and other resources required to meet those goals and objectives;

"(4) a description of how the performance goals included in the plan required under section 2803 shall be related to the general goals and objectives in the strategic plan;

"(5) an identification of those key factors external to the Postal Service and beyond its control that could significantly affect the achievement of the general goals and objectives; and

"(6) a description of the program evaluations used in establishing or revising general goals and objectives, with a schedule for future program evaluations.

"(b) The strategic plan shall cover a period of not less than five years forward from the fiscal year in which it is submitted, and shall be updated and revised at least every three years.

"(c) The performance plan required under section 2803 shall be consistent with the Postal Service's strategic plan. A performance plan may not be submitted for a fiscal year not covered by a current strategic plan under this section.

"(d) When developing a strategic plan, the Postal Service shall solicit and consider the views and suggestions of those entities potentially affected by or interested in such a plan, and shall advise the Congress of the contents of the plan.

"§ 2803. Performance plans

"(a) The Postal Service shall prepare an annual performance plan covering each program activity set forth in the Postal Service budget, which shall be included in the comprehensive statement presented under section 2401(g) of this title. Such plan shall—

"(1) establish performance goals to define the level of performance to be achieved by a program activity;

"(2) express such goals in an objective, quantifiable, and measurable form unless an alternative form is used under subsection (b);

"(3) describe the operational processes, skills and technology, and the human, capital, information, and other resources required to meet the performance goals;

"(4) establish performance indicators to be used in measuring or assessing the relevant outputs, service levels, and outcomes of each program activity;

"(5) provide a basis for comparing actual program results with the established performance goals; and

"(6) describe the means to be used to verify and validate measured values.

"(b) If the Postal Service determines that it is not feasible to express the performance goals for a particular program activity in an objective and quantifiable form, the Postal Service may use an alternative form. Such alternative form shall—

"(1) include separate descriptive statements of—

"(A) a minimally effective program, and

"(B) a successful program,

with sufficient precision and in such terms that would allow for an accurate, independent determination of whether the program activity's performance meets the criteria of either description; or

"(2) state why it is infeasible or impractical to express a performance goal in any form for the program activity.

"(c) In preparing a comprehensive and informative plan under this section, the Postal Service may aggregate, disaggregate, or consolidate program activities, provided that any aggregation or consolidation does not omit or minimize the significance of any program activity constituting a major function or operation.

"(d) The Postal Service may prepare a non-public annex to its plan covering program activities or parts of program activities relating to—

"(1) the avoidance of interference with criminal prosecution; or

"(2) matters otherwise exempt from public disclosure under section 401(c) of this title.

"§ 2804. Program performance reports

"(a) The Postal Service shall prepare a report on program performance for each fiscal year, which shall be included in the annual comprehensive statement presented under section 2401(g) of this title.

"(b)(1) The program performance report shall set forth the performance indicators established in the Postal Service performance plan, along with the actual program performance achieved compared with the performance goals expressed in the plan for that fiscal year.

"(2) If performance goals are specified by descriptive statements of a minimally effective program activity and a successful program activity, the results of such program shall be described in relationship to those categories, including whether the performance failed to meet the criteria of either category.

"(c) The report for fiscal year 2000 shall include actual results for the preceding fiscal year, the report for fiscal year 2001 shall include actual results for the two preceding fiscal years, and the report for fiscal year 2002 and all subsequent reports shall include actual results for the three preceding fiscal years.

"(d) Each report shall—

"(1) review the success of achieving the performance goals of the fiscal year;

"(2) evaluate the performance plan for the current fiscal year relative to the performance achieved towards the performance goals in the fiscal year covered by the report;

"(3) explain and describe, where a performance goal has not been met, including when a program activity's performance is determined not to have met the criteria of a successful program activity under section 2803(b)(2)—

"(A) why the goal was not met;

"(B) those plans and schedules for achieving the established performance goal; and

"(C) if the performance goal is impractical or infeasible, why that is the case and what action is recommended; and

"(4) include the summary findings of those program evaluations completed during the fiscal year covered by the report."

SEC. 8. CONGRESSIONAL OVERSIGHT AND LEGISLATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed as limiting the ability of Congress to establish, amend, suspend, or annul a performance goal. Any such action shall have the effect of superseding that goal in the plan submitted under section 1105(a)(29) of title 31, United States Code.

(b) GAO REPORT.—No later than June 1, 1997, the Comptroller General of the United States shall report to Congress on the implementation of this Act, including the prospects for compliance by Federal agencies beyond those participating as pilot projects under sections 1118 and 9704 of title 31, United States Code.

SEC. 9. TRAINING.

The Office of Personnel Management shall, in consultation with the Director of the Office of Management and Budget and the Comptroller General of the United States develop a strategic planning and performance measurement training component for its management training program and otherwise provide managers with an orientation on the development and use of strategic planning and program performance measurement.

SEC. 10. APPLICATION OF ACT.

No person who is not an officer or employee of the United States acting in such capacity shall have standing to file any civil action in a court of the United States to enforce any provision or amendment made by this Act. No provision or amendment made by this Act may be construed as creating any right, privilege, benefit, or entitlement for any person who is not an officer or employee of the United States acting in such capacity.

SEC. 11. TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.

(a) AMENDMENT TO TITLE 5, UNITED STATES CODE.—The table of sections for chapter 3 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding after the item relating to section 305 the following:

"306. Strategic plans."

(b) AMENDMENTS TO TITLE 31, UNITED STATES CODE.—

(1) AMENDMENT TO CHAPTER 11.—The table of sections for chapter 11 of title 31, United States Code, is amended by adding after the item relating to section 1114 the following:

"1115. Performance plans.

"1116. Program performance reports.

"1117. Exemptions.

"1118. Pilot projects for performance goals.

"1119. Pilot projects for performance budgeting."

(2) AMENDMENT TO CHAPTER 97.—The table of sections for chapter 97 of title 31, United States Code, is amended by adding after the item relating to section 9702 the following:

"9703. Managerial accountability and flexibility.

"9704. Pilot projects for managerial accountability and flexibility."

(c) AMENDMENT TO TITLE 39, UNITED STATES CODE.—The table of chapters for part III of title 39, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"28. Strategic planning and performance management 2801".

SEC. 12. EFFECTIVE DATES AND PROCEDURES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The provisions of this Act and amendments made by this Act shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act, except sections 3, 4, 5, 6(c), and 7 of this Act, and the amendments made by such sections, shall take effect on the date of enactment of the resolution described in subsection (b).

(b) RESOLUTION APPROVING PERFORMANCE PLANS.—

(1) RESOLUTION DESCRIBED.—A resolution referred to in subsection (a) is a joint resolution the matter after the resolving clause of which is as follows: "That Congress approves the development of departmental and agency strategic plans, performance plans and reports pursuant to section 306 of title 5, United States Code, sections 1105(a)(29) and 9703 of title 31, United States Code, sections 1115, 1116, 1117, and 1119 of title 31, United States Code, and chapter 28 of title 39, United States Code (as amended by sections 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 of the Government Performance and Results Act of 1992)."

(2) INTRODUCTION OF RESOLUTION.—No later than 30 days after the transmittal by the Comptroller General of the United States to the Congress of the report referred to in section 7(b), a resolution as described in paragraph (1) shall be introduced in the Senate by the chairman of the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate, or by a Member or Members of the Senate designated by such chairman, and shall be introduced in the House by the chairman of the Committee on Government Operations of the House of Representatives, or by a Member or Members of the House designated by such chairman.

(3) REFERRAL.—A resolution described in paragraph (1), shall be referred to the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Government Operations of the House of Representatives by the President of the Senate or the Speaker of the House of Representatives, as the case may be. The committee shall make its recommendations to the Senate or the House of Representatives, respectively, within 30 calendar days following the date of such resolution's introduction.

(4) DISCHARGE OF COMMITTEE.—If the committee to which is referred a resolution introduced pursuant to paragraph (2) (or, in the absence of such a resolution, the first resolution introduced with respect to the same departmental or agency plans and reports) has not reported such resolution or identical resolution at the end of 30 calendar days after its introduction, such committee shall be deemed to be discharged from further consideration of such resolution and such resolution shall be placed on the appropriate calendar of the House involved.

(5) PROCEDURE AFTER REPORT OR DISCHARGE OF COMMITTEE; VOTE ON FINAL PASSAGE.—(A) When the committee has reported, or has been deemed to be discharged (under paragraph (4)) from further consideration of a resolution described in paragraph (1), it is at any time thereafter in order (even though a previous motion to the same effect has been disagreed to) for any Member of the respective House to move to proceed to the consideration of the resolution. The motion is highly privileged and is not debatable. The motion shall not be subject to amendment, or to a motion to postpone, or to a motion to proceed to the consideration of other business. A motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to shall not be in order. If a motion to proceed to the consideration of the resolution is agreed to, the resolution shall remain the unfinished business of the respective House until disposed of.

(B) Debate on the resolution, and on all debatable motions and appeals in connection therewith, shall be limited to not more than 10 hours, which shall be divided equally between individuals favoring and individuals opposing the resolution. A motion further to limit debate is in order and not debatable. An amendment to, or a motion to postpone, or a motion to recommit the resolution is not in order. A motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution is passed or rejected shall not be in order.

(C) Immediately following the conclusion of the debate on the resolution and a single quorum call at the conclusion of the debate if requested in accordance with the rules of the appropriate House, the vote on final passage of the resolution shall occur.

(D) Appeals from the decisions of the Chair relating to the application of the rules of the Senate or the House of Representatives, as the case may be, to the procedure relating to a resolution described in paragraph (1), shall be decided without debate.

(E) If, prior to the passage by one House of a resolution of that House, that House receives a resolution with respect to departmental or agency strategic plans, performance plans and reports from the other House, then—

(i) the procedure in that House shall be the same as if no resolution had been received from the other House; but

(ii) the vote on final passage shall be on the resolution of the other House.

(F) It shall not be in order in either the Senate or the House of Representatives to consider a resolution described in paragraph (1), or to consider any conference report on such a resolution, unless the Comptroller General of the United States transmits to the Congress a report under section 7(b).

(6) RULEMAKING POWER OF CONGRESS.—The provisions of this section are enacted by the Congress—

(A) as an exercise of the rulemaking power of the Senate and the House of Representatives and as such shall be considered as part of the rules of each House, and shall supersede other rules only to the extent that they are inconsistent therewith; and

(B) with full recognition of the constitutional right of either House to change the rules (so far as they relate to the procedures of that House) at any time, in the same manner, and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of that House.

• Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I rise today to cosponsor the Government Performance and Results Act of 1993. This legislation, which is very similar to a bill I cosponsored with Senator ROTH in the last Congress, will bring greater accountability and performance to the delivery of our public services, along with a wiser use of taxpayer dollars.

For too long, the Federal Government has been largely unable to measure the successes and failures of the hundreds of programs it administers. The absence of any systematic measurement of performance has meant that no one really knows whether programs are effective and reach the people they were intended to help, and whether the taxpayers footing the bill are getting their money's worth.

Today, more than ever, as we make the tough choices necessary to reduce the deficit while still providing essential public services, we must ensure that the programs and services of government operate as effectively as possible. The Government's role is to provide Americans with the vital services they need, and to provide those services at the least possible cost.

In my opinion, the Government Performance and Results Act will go a long way toward accomplishing these goals. This bill will help Federal agencies to take the steps they need to make programs work for the people and the taxpayer—and to make the Government accountable to both. The most important contribution that this bill can make is to help restore the confidence of the American people in their government, by systematically holding Federal agencies accountable for achieving program results.

Mr. President, I also would like to commend Senator ROTH for his leadership on this issue. He first introduced S. 20 at the beginning of the 102d Congress, laying the groundwork for the committee's subsequent work in this area. Since the introduction of the bill, Senator ROTH and I have worked closely together to hold hearings and to make subsequent revisions to the legislation. Then on August 5, 1992, we held a committee markup at which time we approved a revised version of the bill.

Now I believe that this new bill makes some important improvements on the original concept. One very important change is that we will begin our Federal performance measurement effort with a number of carefully selected pilot projects. Before we have the entire Federal Government instituting performance measurement systems, we must have several successful Federal models for the rest of the agencies to follow. Considering the very limited number of agencies which are currently using this concept, and considering the lingering uncertainties about how to apply performance measurement at the Federal level, it would be unwise to have the entire government trying to do it simultaneously.

Only when we have seen the results of the pilot projects and are convinced that performance measurement is working at the Federal level should we go ahead to mandate it government-wide. S. 20 provides for an expedited resolution process that will give the Congress an opportunity to expand the use of performance measurement at that time.

In order to make that determination, the bill calls for a report by the General Accounting Office by June 1, 1997. This report will analyze the success of the pilot projects, as well as looking ahead to the prospects for expansion to the entire government. Thus, the Congress will have the objective analysis we need to determine whether performance measurement has lived up to our expectations.

All-in-all, this process strikes a good balance between our desire to institute worthwhile improvements and our concern about creating new paper exercises. The agencies will have a chance to experiment with this potentially useful concept, but we will hold off on broader application until we are certain that it is worth the effort.

Mr. President, we must also understand that in order to measure and then judge the performance of Federal agencies, we must first make sure that those agencies have the capacity to perform the public missions that we ask of them. In recent years, many Federal agencies have not had the adequate resources—in qualified people, in management systems and in equipment, for instance—to do their jobs well. Capacity and performance measurement must go hand in hand if we are to fairly and accurately judge the success and failure of Federal programs.

The Government Performance and Results Act will, I believe, help to improve the effectiveness of Federal programs by promoting a new focus on results, on service quality and on customer satisfaction. The bill will help Federal managers improve service delivery by requiring that they plan for meeting program objectives and by setting up a system that will for the first time provide agencies with information about program results and service quality.

Moreover, the act would improve our own decisionmaking here in the Congress, by providing us with more objective information about achieving statutory objectives and helping us to make wiser program spending choices based on more accurate, complete, and timely information.

Our Government and our country need this legislation if we are to move forward to truly serve the needs of the people and at the same time reduce our mounting deficit. I look forward to working with the new administration on this issue, and on improving the performance of government programs.■

S. 21. A bill to designate certain lands in the California Desert as wilderness, to establish Death Valley, Joshua Tree, and Mojave National Parks, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

CALIFORNIA DESERT PROTECTION ACT

Ms. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, today I am introducing the California Desert Protection Act, a bill to provide for the protection of public lands in the California desert. I'm very pleased that my colleague from California, Senator BARBARA BOXER, and 20 other Senators are joining me as cosponsors of this legislation.

The California desert contains some of the most outstanding scenic, cultural, ecological, scientific, and recreational resources in the Nation. Comprising 25 million acres, the California desert is incredibly diverse, with sand dunes, extinct volcanoes, 90 mountain ranges, the world's largest Joshua Tree forest, and over 100,000 archaeological sites. These varied landforms provide habitats rich in biological diversity, with more than 760 different wildlife species. The finest of these resources deserve protection as part of the National Park and National Wilderness System. The California Desert Protection Act provides that protection.

The bill designates 74 Bureau of Land Management wilderness areas and 1 wilderness study area in the California desert, comprising nearly 4 million acres. It adds 1.3 million acres of national park quality land to Death Valley National Monument and national park quality land to Death Valley National Monument and redesignates the area as a national park, adds 234,000 acres to Joshua Tree National Monument and redesignates the area a national park, and establishes a 1.5 million-acre Mojave National Park.

The bill also designates national park wilderness for Death Valley, 3.18 million acres, Joshua Tree, 131,800 acres, and Mojave, 695,000 acres. It transfers 20,500 acres of Bureau of Land Management land to the State of California for addition to Red Rock Canyon State Park. And it designates a 2,040-acre Desert Lily Sanctuary.

In addition to protecting these nationally significant natural resources, the bill recognizes other important uses of the California desert. It allows livestock grazing to continue for up to 25 years in the Mojave National Park and gives priority to acquisition of ranchers' private property on a willing seller basis. It provides for the continuation of utility rights-of-way, upgrading of utility facilities, and continuation of customary operations of utilities, maintenance, repair, and replacement activities. The boundaries of the parks and wilderness areas have been drawn to avoid known or potential mineral conflicts. For example, I have excluded the Viceroy Gold Corp. mining claims in the Mojave where more than 200 people are currently working at an operating mine. More than 33,000 miles of roads and primitive routes providing access to desert lands are unaffected by the legislation and remain available for offroad vehicle use.

Finally, the bill recognizes the important military testing, training, and research activities conducted in the California desert. It withdraws public lands for continued military use of China Lake Naval Weapons Center and Chocolate Mountain Aerial Gunnery Range and does not restrict or preclude low-level overflights of military aircraft in the California desert.

Mr. President, there is tremendous support in California for desert protection. Thirty-six cities in the State, including the eight largest, have endorsed the California Desert Protection Act. A September 1988 survey conducted by the Field Institute found that the vast majority of Californians support more parks and wilderness in the California desert. Seventy-five percent of those polled said they want to see more protection for desert wildlife and ecology. More recently, a September 1992 Field Institute poll found that more than 70 percent of Californians, including more than 70 percent of the people living in desert counties, support park status for the Mojave as the bill provides.

I hope this Congress will pass the California Desert Protection Act, not only for the people of California, but so all Americans will continue to enjoy this spectacular and fragile landscape.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 21

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "California Desert Protection Act of 1993".

FINDINGS AND POLICY

SEC. 2. (a) The Congress finds and declares that—

(1) the federally owned desert lands of Southern California constitute a public wildland resource of extraordinary and inestimable value for this and future generations;

(2) these desert wildlands display unique scenic, historical, archaeological, environmental, ecological, wildlife, cultural, scientific, educational, and recreational values used and enjoyed by millions of Americans for hiking and camping, scientific study and scenic appreciation;

(3) the public land resources of the California desert now face and are increasingly threatened by adverse pressures which would impair, dilute, and destroy their public and natural values;

(4) the California desert, embracing wilderness lands, units of the National Park System, other Federal lands, State parks and other State lands, and private lands, constitutes a cohesive unit posing unique and difficult resource protection and management challenges;

(5) through designation of national monuments by Presidential proclamation, through enactment of general public land statutes (including section 601 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 90 Stat. 2743, 43 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.) and through interim administrative actions, the Federal Government has begun the process of appropriately providing for protection of the significant resources of the public lands in the California desert; and

(6) statutory land unit designations are needed to afford the full protection which the resources and public land values of the California desert merit.

(b) In order to secure for the American people of this and future generations an enduring heritage of wilderness, national parks, and public land values in the California desert, it is hereby declared to be the policy of the Congress that—

(1) appropriate public lands in the California desert shall be included within the National Park System and the National Wilderness Preservation System, in order to—

(A) preserve unrivaled scenic, geologic, and wildlife values associated with these unique natural landscapes;

(B) perpetuate in their natural state significant and diverse ecosystems of the California desert;

(C) protect and preserve historical and cultural values of the California desert associated with ancient Indian cultures, pattern of western exploration and settlement, and sites exemplifying the mining, ranching and railroading history of the Old West;

(D) provide opportunities for compatible outdoor public recreation, protect and interpret ecological and geological features and historic, paleontological, and archaeological sites, maintain wilderness resource values, and promote public understanding and appreciation of the California desert; and

(E) retain and enhance opportunities for scientific research in undisturbed ecosystems.

TITLE I—WILDERNESS ADDITIONS

FINDINGS

SEC. 101. The Congress finds and declares that—

(1) wilderness is a distinguishing characteristic of the public lands in the California desert, one which affords an unrivaled opportunity for experiencing vast areas of the Old West essentially unaltered by man's activities, and which merits preservation for the benefit of present and future generations;

(2) the wilderness values of desert lands are increasingly threatened by and especially vulnerable to impairment, alteration, and destruction by activities and intrusions associated with incompatible use and development; and

(3) preservation of desert wilderness necessarily requires the highest forms of protective designation and management.

DESIGNATION OF WILDERNESS

SEC. 102. In furtherance of the purpose of the Wilderness Act (78 Stat. 890, 16 U.S.C. 1131 et seq.), and sections 601 and 603 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 2743, 43 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.), the following lands in the State of California, as generally depicted on maps, referenced herein, dated February 1986 (except as otherwise dated), are hereby designated as wilderness, and therefore, as components of the National Wilderness Preservation System:

(1) Certain lands in California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately seventy-four thousand eight hundred and ninety acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Argus Range Wilderness—Proposed 1", dated May 1991, and two maps entitled "Argus Range Wilderness—Proposed 2" and "Argus Range Wilderness—Proposed 3", dated January 1989, and which shall be known as the Argus Range Wilderness.

(2) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately ten thousand three hundred and eighty acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Bigelow Cholla Garden Wilderness—Proposed", dated October 1991, and which shall be known as the Bigelow Cholla Garden Wilderness.

(3) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, and within the San Bernardino National Forest, which comprise approximately thirty-nine thousand two hundred acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Bighorn Mountain Wilderness—Proposed", dated September 1991, and which shall be known as the Bighorn Mountain Wilderness.

(4) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area and the Yuma District, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately forty-seven thousand five hundred and seventy acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Big Maria Mountains Wilderness—Proposed", and which shall be known as the Big Maria Mountains Wilderness.

(5) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise thirteen thousand nine hundred and forty acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Black Mountain Wilderness—Proposed", and which shall be known as the Black Mountain Wilderness.

(6) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately nine thousand five hundred and twenty acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Bright Star Wilderness—Proposed", dated May 1991, and which shall be known as the Bright Star Wilderness.

(7) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately sixty-eight thousand five hundred and fifteen acres, as generally depicted on two maps entitled "Bristol Mountains Wilderness—Proposed 1", and "Bristol Mountains Wilderness—Proposed 2", dated September 1991, and which shall be known as Bristol Mountains Wilderness.

(8) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately forty-two thousand six hundred and forty acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Cadiz Dunes Wilderness—Proposed", and which shall be known as the Cadiz Dunes Wilderness.

(9) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately eighty-five thousand nine hundred and seventy acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Cady Mountains Wilderness—Proposed", dated July 1992, and which shall be known as the Cady Mountains Wilderness.

(10) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area and Eastern San Diego County, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately fifteen thousand seven hundred acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Carrizo Gorge Wilderness—Proposed", and which shall be known as the Carrizo Gorge Wilderness.

(11) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area and Yuma District, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately sixty-four thousand six hundred and forty acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Chemehuevi Mountains Wilderness—Proposed", dated October 1991, and which shall be known as the Chemehuevi Mountains Wilderness.

(12) Certain lands in the Bakersfield District, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately thirteen thousand seven hundred acres, as generally depicted on two maps entitled "Chimney Peak Wilderness—Proposed 1" and "Chimney Peak Wilderness—Proposed 2", dated May 1991, and which shall be known as the Chimney Peak Wilderness.

(13) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately eighty thousand seven hundred and seventy acres, as generally depicted on two maps entitled "Chuckwalla Mountains Wilderness—Proposed 1" and "Chuckwalla Mountains Wilderness—Proposed 2", dated July 1992, and which shall be known as the Chuckwalla Mountains Wilderness.

(14) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise thirty-four thousand three hundred and eighty acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Cleghorn Lakes Wilderness—Proposed", dated September 1991, and which shall be known as the Cleghorn Lakes Wilderness.

The Secretary may, pursuant to an application filed by the Department of Defense, grant a right-of-way for, and authorize construction of, a road within the area depicted as "non-wilderness road corridor" on such map.

(15) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately forty thousand acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Clipper Mountain Wilderness—Proposed", dated May 1991, and which shall be known as Clipper Mountain Wilderness.

(16) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately fifty thousand five hundred and twenty acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Coso Range Wilderness—Proposed", dated May 1991, and which shall be known as Coso Range Wilderness.

(17) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately eighteen thousand six hundred acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Coyote Mountains Wilderness—Proposed", dated May 1991, and which shall be known as Coyote Mountains Wilderness.

(18) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately eight thousand six hundred acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Darwin Falls Wilderness—Proposed", dated May 1991, and which shall be known as Darwin Falls Wilderness.

(19) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area and the Yuma District, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately forty-eight thousand eight hundred and fifty acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Dead Mountains Wilderness—Proposed", dated October 1991, and which shall be known as Dead Mountains Wilderness.

(20) Certain lands in the Bakersfield District, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately thirty-six thousand three hundred acres, as generally depicted on two maps entitled "Domeland Wilderness Additions—Proposed 1" and "Domeland Wilderness Additions—Proposed 2", and which are hereby incorporated in, and which shall be deemed to be a part of, the Domeland Wilderness as designated by Public Laws 93-632 and 98-425.

(21) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately sixteen thousand one hundred acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "El Paso Mountains Wilderness—Proposed", and which shall be known as the El Paso Mountains Wilderness.

(22) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately twenty-six thousand three hundred acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Fish Creek Mountains Wilderness—Proposed", dated May 1991, and which shall be known as Fish Creek Mountains Wilderness.

(23) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately twenty-eight thousand one hundred and ten acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Funeral Mountains Wilderness—Proposed", dated May 1991, and which shall be known as Funeral Mountains Wilderness.

(24) Certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, which comprise approximately thirty-seven thousand seven hundred acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Golden Valley Wilderness—Proposed", and which shall be known as Golden Valley Wilderness.

ADMINISTRATION OF WILDERNESS AREAS

Sec. 103. Subject to valid existing rights, each wilderness area designated under section 102 shall be administered by the appropriate Secretary in accordance with the provisions of the Wilderness Act, except that any reference in such provisions to the effective date of the Wilderness Act shall be deemed to be a reference to the effective date of this title and any reference to the Secretary of Agriculture shall be deemed to be a reference to the Secretary who has administrative jurisdiction over the area.

GRAZING

Sec. 104. Within the wilderness areas designated under section 102, the grazing of livestock, where established prior to the enactment of this Act, shall be permitted to continue subject to such reasonable regulations, policies, and practices as the Secretary deems necessary, as long as such regulations, policies, and practices fully conform with and implement the intent of Congress regarding grazing in such areas as such intent is expressed in the Wilderness Act and section 108 of Public Law 96-560 (16 U.S.C. 133 note).

BUFFER ZONES

Sec. 105. The Congress does not intend for the designation of wilderness areas in section 102 of this Act to lead to the creation of protective perimeters or buffer zones around any such wilderness area. The fact that non-wilderness activities or uses can be seen or heard from areas within a wilderness shall not, of itself, preclude such activities or uses up to the boundary of the wilderness area.

MINING CLAIM VALIDITY REVIEW

Sec. 106. The Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture shall not approve any plan of operation prior to determining the validity of the unpatented mining claims, mill sites, and tunnel sites affected by such plan within any wilderness area designated under section 102.

FILING OF MAPS AND DESCRIPTIONS

Sec. 107. As soon as practicable after enactment of section 102, a map and a legal description on each wilderness area designated under this title shall be filed by the Secretary concerned with the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Natural Resources of the House of Representatives, and each such map and description shall have the same force and effect as if included in this title, except that the Secretary may correct clerical and typographical errors in each such legal description and map. Each such map and legal description shall be on file and available for public inspection in the office of the Director of the Bureau of Land Management, Department of the Interior, or the Chief of the Forest Service, Department of Agriculture, as is appropriate.

WILDERNESS REVIEW

Sec. 108. The Congress hereby finds and directs that lands in the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, not designated as wilderness or wilderness study areas by this Act have been adequately studied for wilderness designation pursuant to section 603 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 2743, 43 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.), and are no longer subject to the requirements of section 603(c) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 pertaining to the management of wilderness study areas in a manner that does not impair the suitability of such areas for preservation as wilderness.

DESIGNATION OF WILDERNESS STUDY AREA

Sec. 109. In furtherance of the provisions of the Wilderness Act, certain lands in the California Desert Conservation Area of the Bureau of Land Management which comprise eleven thousand two hundred acres as generally depicted on a map entitled "White Mountains Wilderness Study Area—Proposed", dated May 1991, are hereby designated the White Mountains Wilderness Study Area and shall be administered by the Secretary in accordance with the provisions of section 603(c) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976.

SUITABILITY REPORT

Sec. 110. The Secretary is required, ten years after the date of enactment of this Act, to report to Congress on current and planned exploration, development or mining activities on, and suitability for future wilderness designation of, the lands as generally depicted on maps entitled "Surprise Canyon Wilderness—Proposed", "Middle Park Canyon Wilderness—Proposed", and "Death Valley National Park Boundary and Wilderness 15", dated September 1991 and a map entitled "Manly Peak Wilderness—Proposed", dated October 1991.

WILDERNESS DESIGNATION AND MANAGEMENT IN THE NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE SYSTEM

Sec. 111. (a) In furtherance of the purposes of the Wilderness Act, the following lands are hereby designated as wilderness and therefore, as components of the National Wilderness Preservation System:

(1) Certain lands in the Havasu National Wildlife Refuge, California, which comprise approximately three thousand one hundred and ninety-five acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Havasu Wilderness—Proposed", and dated October 1991, and which shall be known as the Havasu Wilderness.

(2) Certain lands in the Imperial National Wildlife Refuge, California, which comprise approximately five thousand eight hundred and thirty-six acres, as generally depicted on two maps entitled "Imperial Refuge Wilderness—Proposed 1" and "Imperial Refuge Wilderness—Proposed 2", and dated October 1991, and which shall be known as the Imperial Refuge Wilderness.

(b) Subject to valid existing rights, the wilderness areas designated under this section shall be administered by the Secretary in accordance with the provisions of the Wilderness Act governing areas designated by that Act as wilderness, except that any reference in such provisions to the effective date of the Wilderness Act (or any similar reference) shall be deemed to be a reference to the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) As soon as practicable after enactment of this section, the Secretary shall file a map and a legal description of each wilderness area designated under this section with the Committees on Energy and Natural Resources and Environment and Public Works of the Senate and Natural Resources and Merchant Marine and Fisheries of the House of Representatives. Such map and description shall have the same force and effect as if included in this Act, except that correction of clerical and typographical errors in such legal description and map may be made. Such map and legal description shall be on file and available for public inspection in the Office of the Director, United States Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior.

TITLE II—DEATH VALLEY NATIONAL PARK FINDINGS

Sec. 201. The Congress hereby finds that—
(1) proclamations by Presidents Herbert Hoover in 1933 and Franklin Roosevelt in 1937 established and expanded the Death Valley National Monument for the preservation of the unusual features of scenic, scientific, and educational interest therein contained;

(2) Death Valley National Monument is today recognized as a major unit of the National Park System, having extraordinary values enjoyed by millions of visitors;

(3) the Monument boundaries established in the 1930's exclude and thereby expose to incompatible development and inconsistent management, contiguous Federal lands of essential and superlative natural, ecological, geological, archaeological, paleontological, cultural, historical and wilderness values;

(4) Death Valley National Monument should be substantially enlarged by the addition of all contiguous Federal lands of national park caliber and afforded full recognition and statutory protection as a national park; and

(5) the wilderness within Death Valley should receive maximum statutory protection by designation pursuant to the Wilderness Act.

ESTABLISHMENT OF DEATH VALLEY NATIONAL PARK

Sec. 202. There is hereby established the Death Valley National Park, as generally depicted on 23 maps entitled "Death Valley National Park Boundary and Wilderness—Proposed", numbered in the title one through twenty-three, and dated September 1991 or prior, which shall be on file and available for public inspection in the offices of the Superintendent of the Park and the Director of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior. The Death Valley National Monument is hereby abolished as such, the lands and interests therein are hereby incorporated within and made part of the new Death Valley National Park, and any funds available for purposes of the monument shall be available for purposes of the park.

TRANSFER AND ADMINISTRATION OF LANDS

Sec. 203. Upon enactment of this title, the Secretary shall transfer the lands under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Land Management depicted on the maps described in section 202 of this title, without consideration, to the administrative jurisdiction of the Director of the National Park Service for administration as part of the National Park System. The boundaries of the public lands and the national parks shall be adjusted accordingly. The Secretary shall administer the areas added to the National Park System by this title in accordance with the provisions of law generally applicable to units of the National Park System, including the Act entitled "An Act to establish a National Park Service, and for other purposes", approved August 25, 1916 (39 Stat. 535; 16 U.S.C. 1-4).

MAPS AND LEGAL DESCRIPTION

Sec. 204. Within six months after the enactment of this title, the Secretary shall file maps and a legal description of the park designated under this title with the Energy and Natural Resources Committee of the Senate and the Natural Resources Committee of the House of Representatives. Such maps and legal description shall have the same force and effect as if included in this title, except that the Secretary may correct clerical and typographical errors in such legal description and in the maps referred to in section 202. The maps and legal description shall be on file and available for public inspection in the offices of the Superintendent of the Park and the Director of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

DISPOSITION UNDER MINING LAWS

Sec. 205. Subject to valid existing rights, the Federal lands and interests therein added to the National Park System by this title are withdrawn from disposition under the public land laws and from entry or appropriation under the mining laws of the United States, from the operation of the mineral leasing laws of the United States, and from operation of the Geothermal Steam Act of 1970.

STUDY AS TO VALIDITY OF MINING CLAIMS

Sec. 206. The Secretary shall not approve any plan of operation prior to determining the validity of the unpatented mining claims, mill sites, and tunnel sites affected by such plan within the additions to the park and shall submit to Congress recommendations as to whether any valid or patented claims should be acquired by the United States, including the estimated acquisition costs of such claims, and a discussion of the environmental consequences of the extraction of minerals from these lands.

GRAZING

Sec. 207. The privilege of grazing domestic livestock on lands within the park may continue to be exercised at no more than the current level, subject to applicable laws and National Park Service regulations, by those persons holding permits for such grazing on July 1, 1991. Upon the expiration of such permits the Secretary, acting through the Director of the National Park Service, may issue to such persons new permits for such grazing, subject to applicable laws and National Park Service regulations, but all grazing of such livestock on such lands shall cease on July 1, 2016. Further, if such a permittee informs the Secretary that such permittee is willing to convey to the United States any base property with respect to which the permit was issued and to which such permittee holds title, the Secretary shall make the acquisition of such base property a priority as compared with the acquisition of other lands within the park, provided agreement can be reached concerning the terms and conditions of such acquisition.

Any such base property which is located outside the park and acquired as a priority pursuant to this section shall be managed by the Federal agency responsible for the majority of the adjacent lands in accordance with the laws applicable to such adjacent lands.

TITLE III—JOSHUA TREE NATIONAL PARK FINDINGS

Sec. 301. The Congress hereby finds that—
(1) a proclamation by President Franklin Roosevelt in 1936 established Joshua Tree National Monument to protect various objects of historical and scientific interest;

(2) Joshua Tree National Monument today is recognized as a major unit of the National Park System, having extraordinary values enjoyed by millions of visitors;

(3) the Monument boundaries as modified in 1950 and 1961 exclude and thereby expose to incompatible development and inconsistent management, contiguous Federal lands of essential and superlative natural, ecological, archaeological, paleontological, cultural, historical and wilderness values;

(4) Joshua Tree National Monument should be enlarged by the addition of contiguous Federal lands of national park caliber, and afforded full recognition and statutory protection as a national park; and

(5) the nondesignated wilderness within Joshua Tree should receive statutory protection by designation pursuant to the Wilderness Act.

ESTABLISHMENT OF JOSHUA TREE NATIONAL PARK

Sec. 302. There is hereby established the Joshua Tree National Park, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Joshua Tree National Park Boundary—Proposed", dated May 1991, and four maps entitled "Joshua Tree National Park Boundary and Wilderness", numbered in the title one through four, and dated October 1991 or prior, which shall be on file and available for public inspection in the offices of the Superintendent of the Park and the Director of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior. The Joshua Tree National Monument is hereby abolished as such, the lands and interests therein are hereby incorporated within and made part of the new Joshua Tree National Park, and any funds available for purposes of the monument shall be available for purposes of the park.

TRANSFER AND ADMINISTRATION OF LANDS

Sec. 303. Upon enactment of this title, the Secretary shall transfer the lands under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Land Management depicted on the maps described in section 302 of this title, without consideration, to the administrative jurisdiction of the Director of the National Park Service for administration as part of the National Park System. The boundaries of the public lands and the national parks shall be adjusted accordingly. The Secretary shall administer the areas added to the National Park System by this title in accordance with the provisions of law generally applicable to units of the National Park System, including the Act entitled "An Act to establish a National Park Service, and for other purposes", approved August 25, 1916 (39 Stat. 535; 16 U.S.C. 1-4).

MAPS AND LEGAL DESCRIPTION

Sec. 304. Within six months after the enactment of this title, the Secretary shall file maps and legal description of the park designated by this title with the Energy and Natural Resources Committee of the Senate and the Natural Resources Committee of the House of Representatives. Such maps and legal description shall have the same force and effect as if included in this title, except that the Secretary may correct clerical and typographical errors in such legal description and in the maps referred to in section 302. The maps and legal description shall be on file and available for public inspection in the offices of the Superintendent of the Park and the Director of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

DISPOSITION UNDER MINING LAWS

Sec. 305. Subject to valid existing rights, Federal lands and interests therein added to the National Park System by this title are withdrawn from disposition under the public lands laws and from entry of appropriation under the mining laws of the United States, from the operation of the mineral leasing laws of the United States, and from the operation of the Geothermal Steam Act of 1970.

UTILITY RIGHTS-OF-WAY

Sec. 306. Nothing in this title shall have the effect of terminating any validly issued right-of-way or customary operation maintenance, repair, and replacement activities in such right-of-way, issued, granted, or permitted to the Metropolitan Water District pursuant to the Boulder Canyon Project Act (43 U.S.C. 617-619b), which is located on lands included in the Joshua Tree National Park, but outside lands designated as wilderness under section 501(2). Such activities shall be conducted in a manner which will minimize the impact on park resources. Nothing in this title shall have the effect of terminating the fee title to lands or customary operation, maintenance, repair, and replacement activities on or under such lands granted to the Metropolitan Water District pursuant to the Act on June 18, 1932 (47 Stat. 324), which are located on lands included in the Joshua Tree National Park, but outside lands designated as wilderness under section 501(2). Such activities shall be conducted in a manner which will minimize the impact on park resources. The Secretary shall prepare within 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, in consultation with the Metropolitan Water District, plans for emergency access by the Metropolitan Water District to its lands and rights-of-way.

STUDY AS TO VALIDITY OF MINING CLAIMS

Sec. 307. The Secretary shall not approve any plan of operation prior to determining the validity of the unpatented mining claims, mill sites, and tunnel sites affected by such plan within the park and shall submit to Congress recommendations as to whether any valid or patented claims should be acquired by the United States, including the estimated acquisition costs of such claims, and a discussion of the environmental consequences of the extraction of minerals from these lands.

TITLE IV—MOJAVE NATIONAL PARK FINDINGS

Sec. 401. The Congress hereby finds that—
(1) Death Valley and Joshua Tree National Parks, as established by this Act, protect unique and superlative desert resources, but do not embrace the particular ecosystems and transitional desert type found in the Mojave Desert area lying between them on public lands now afforded only impermanent administrative designation as a national scenic area;

(2) the Mojave Desert area possesses outstanding natural, cultural, historical, and recreational values meriting statutory designation and recognition as a unit of the National Park System;

(3) the Mojave Desert area should be afforded full recognition and statutory protection as a national park;

(4) the wilderness within the Mojave Desert should receive maximum statutory protection by designation pursuant to the Wilderness Act; and

(5) the Mojave Desert area provides an outstanding opportunity to develop services, programs, accommodations and facilities to ensure the use and enjoyment of the area by individuals with disabilities, consistent with section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, Public Law 101-336, the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12101), and other appropriate laws and regulations.

ESTABLISHMENT OF THE MOJAVE NATIONAL PARK

Sec. 402. There is hereby established the Mojave National Park, comprising approximately one million four hundred and sixty thousand acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Mojave National Park Boundary—Proposed", dated July 1992, and ten maps entitled "Mojave National Park Boundary and Wilderness—Proposed", numbered in the title one through ten, and dated July 1992 or prior, which shall be on file and available for inspection in the offices of the Director of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior.

TRANSFER OF LANDS

Sec. 403. Upon enactment of this title, the Secretary shall transfer the lands under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Land Management depicted on the maps described in section 402 of this title, without consideration, to the administrative jurisdiction of the Director of the National Park Service. The boundaries of the public lands shall be adjusted accordingly.

MAPS AND LEGAL DESCRIPTION

Sec. 404. Within six months after the enactment of this title, the Secretary shall file maps and a legal description of the park designated under this title with the Energy and Natural Resources Committee of the Senate and the Natural Resources Committee of the House of Representatives. Such maps and legal description shall have the same force and effect as if included in this title, except that the Secretary may correct clerical and typographical errors in such legal description and in the maps referred to in section 402. The maps and legal description shall be on file and available for public inspection in the offices of the National Service, Department of the Interior.

ABOLISHMENT OF SCENIC AREA

Sec. 405. The East Mojave National Scenic Area, designated on January 13, 1981 (46 FR 3994), and modified on August 9, 1983 (48 FR 36210), as hereby abolished.

ADMINISTRATION OF LANDS

Sec. 406. The Secretary shall administer the park in accordance with this title and with the provisions of law generally applicable to units of the National Park System, including the Act entitled "An Act to establish a National Park Service, and for other purposes", approved August 25, 1916 (39 Stat. 535; 16 U.S.C. 1-4).

DISPOSITION UNDER MINING LAWS

Sec. 407. Subject to valid existing rights, Federal lands within the park, and interests therein, are withdrawn from disposition under the public land laws and from entry or appropriation under the mining laws of the United States, from the operation of the mineral leasing laws of the United States, and from operation of the Geothermal Steam Act of 1970.

STUDY AS TO VALIDITY OF MINING CLAIMS

Sec. 408. The Secretary shall not approve any plan of operation prior to determining the validity of the unpatented mining claims, mill sites, and tunnel sites affected by such plan within the park and shall submit to Congress recommendations as to whether any valid or patented claims should be acquired by the United States, including the estimated acquisition costs of such claims, and a discussion of the environmental consequences of the extraction of minerals from these lands.

REGULATION OF MINING

Sec. 409. Subject to valid existing rights, all mining claims located within the park shall be subject to such reasonable regulations as the Secretary may prescribe to assure that mining will, to the maximum extent practicable, be consistent with the protection for the scenic, scientific, cultural and other resources of the park, and any patent which may be issued after the date of enactment of this title shall convey title only to the minerals together with the right to use the surface of lands for mining purposes subject to such reasonable regulations.

GRAZING

Sec. 410. The privilege of grazing domestic livestock on lands within the park may continue to be exercised at no more than the current level, subject to applicable laws and National Park Service regulations, by those persons holding permits for such grazing on July 1, 1991. Upon the expiration of such permits the Secretary, acting through the Director of the National Park Service, may issue to such persons new permits for such grazing, subject to applicable laws and National Park Service regulations, but all grazing of such livestock on such lands shall cease on July 1, 2016. Further, if such a permittee informs the Secretary that such permittee is willing to convey to the United States any base property with respect to which the permit was issued and to which such permittee holds title, the Secretary shall make the acquisition of such base property a priority as compared with the acquisition of other lands within the park, provided agreement can be reached concerning the terms and conditions of such acquisition. Any such base property which is located outside the park and acquired as a priority pursuant to this section shall be managed by the Federal agency responsible for the majority of the adjacent lands in accordance with the laws applicable to such adjacent lands.

UTILITY RIGHTS OF WAY

Sec. 411. (a)(1) Nothing in this title shall have the effect of terminating any validly issued right-of-way or customary operation, maintenance, repair, and replacement activities in such right-of-way, issued, granted, or permitted to Southern California Edison Company, which is located on lands included in the Mojave National Park, but outside lands designated as wilderness under section 501(3). Such activities shall be conducted in a manner which will minimize the impact on park resources.

(2) Nothing in this title shall have the effect of prohibiting the upgrading of an existing electrical transmission line for the purpose of increasing the capacity of such transmission line in the Southern California Edison Company validly issued Eldorado-Lugo Transmission Line right-of-way and Mojave-Lugo Transmission Line right-of-way (hereafter in this section referred to as "adjacent right-of-way"), including construction of a replacement transmission line: Provided, That—

(A) in the Eldorado-Lugo Transmission Line right-of-way (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Eldorado right-of-way") at no time shall there be more than 3 electrical transmission lines,

(B) in the Mojave-Lugo Transmission Line right-of-way (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Mojave right-of-way") and adjacent right-of-way, removal of the existing electrical transmission line and reclamation of the site shall be completed no later than three years after the date on which construction of the upgraded transmission line begins, after which time there may be only one electrical transmission line in the lands encompassed by Mojave right-of-way and adjacent right-of-way.

(C) if there are no more than two electrical transmission lines in the Eldorado right-of-way, two electrical transmission lines in the lands encompassed by the Mojave right-of-way and adjacent right-of-way may be allowed,

(D) in the Eldorado right-of-way and Mojave right-of-way no additional land shall be issued, granted, or permitted for such upgrade unless an addition would reduce the impacts to park resources,

(E) no more than 350 feet of additional land shall be issued, granted, or permitted for an adjacent right-of-way to the south of the Mojave right-of-way unless a greater addition would reduce the impacts to park resources, and

(F) such upgrade activities, including helicopter aided construction, shall be conducted in a manner which will minimize the impact on park resources.

(3) The Secretary shall prepare within 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, in consultation with the Southern California Edison Company, plans for emergency access by the Southern California Edison Company to its rights-of-way.

(b) Nothing in this title shall have the effect of terminating any validly issued right-of-way, or customary operation, maintenance, repair, and replacement activities in such right-of-way; prohibiting the upgrading of and construction on existing facilities in such right-of-way for the purpose of increasing the capacity of the existing pipeline; or prohibiting the renewal of such right-of-way; issued, granted, or permitted to the Southern California Gas Company, which is located on lands included in the Mojave National Park, but outside lands designated as wilderness under section 501(3). Such activities shall be conducted in a manner which will minimize the impact on park resources.

(c) Nothing in this title shall have the effect of terminating any validly issued right-of-way or customary operation, maintenance, repair, and replacement activities of existing facilities issued, granted, or permitted for communications cables or lines, which are located on lands included in the Mojave National Park, but outside lands designated as wilderness under section 501(3). Such activities shall be conducted in a manner which will minimize the impact on park resources.

PREPARATION OF MANAGEMENT PLAN

Sec. 412. Within three years of the date of enactment of this title, the Secretary shall submit to the Energy and Natural Resources Committee of the Senate and the Natural Resources Committee of the House of Representatives a detailed and comprehensive management plan for the park. Such plan shall place emphasis on historical and cultural sites and ecological and wilderness values within the boundaries of the park. Any development, including road improvements, proposed by such plan shall be strictly limited to that which is essential and appropriate for the administration of the park and shall be designed and located so as to maintain its primitive nature of the area and to minimize the impairment of park resources or ecological values. To the extent practicable, administrative facilities, employee housing, commercial visitor services, accommodations, and other park-related development shall be located or provided for outside of the boundaries of the park. Such plan shall evaluate the feasibility of using the Kelso Depot and existing railroad corridor to provide public access to and a facility for special interpretive, educational, and scientific programs within the park. Such plan shall specifically address the needs of individuals with disabilities in the design of services, programs, accommodations and facilities consistent with section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, Public Law 101-336, the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12101), and other appropriate laws and regulations.

GRANITE MOUNTAINS NATURAL RESERVE

Sec. 413. (a) There is hereby designated the Granite Mountains Natural Reserve within the park comprising approximately 9,000 acres as generally depicted on a map entitled "Mojave National Park Boundary and Wilderness—Proposed 6", dated May 1991.

(b) Upon enactment of this title, the Secretary of the Interior shall enter into a cooperative management agreement with the University of California for the purposes of managing the lands within the Granite Mountains Natural Reserve. Such cooperative agreement shall ensure continuation of arid lands research and educational activities of the University of California, consistent with the provisions of law generally applicable to units of the National Park System.

SODA SPRINGS DESERT STUDY CENTER

Sec. 414. Upon enactment of this title, the Secretary shall enter into a cooperative management agreement with California State University for the purposes of managing facilities at the Soda Springs Desert Study Center. Such cooperative agreement shall ensure continuation of the desert research and educational activities of California State University, consistent with the provisions of law generally applicable to units of the National Park System.

CONSTRUCTION OF VISITOR CENTER

Sec. 415. The Secretary is authorized to construct a visitor center in the park for the purpose of providing information through appropriate displays, printed material, and other interpretive programs, about the resources of the park.

ACQUISITION OF LANDS

Sec. 416. The Secretary is authorized to acquire all lands and interest in lands within the boundary of the park by donation, purchase, or exchange, except that—

(1) any lands or interests therein within the boundary of the park which are owned by the State of California, or any political subdivision thereof, may be acquired only by donation or exchange except for lands managed by California State Lands Commission; and

(2) lands or interests therein within the boundary of the park which are not owned by the State of California or any political subdivision thereof may be acquired only with the consent of the owner thereof unless the Secretary determines, after written notice to the owner and after opportunity for comment, that the property is being developed, or proposed to be developed, in a manner which is detrimental to the integrity of the park or which is otherwise incompatible with the purposes of this title.

SUITABILITY REPORT

Sec. 417. The Secretary is required, twenty years after the date of enactment of this Act, to report to Congress on current and planned exploration, development or mining activities on, and suitability for future park designation of, the lands as generally depicted on a map entitled "Mojave National Park Study Area—Proposed", dated July 1992.

TITLE V—NATIONAL PARK WILDERNESS DESIGNATION OF WILDERNESS

SEC. 501. The following lands are hereby designated as wilderness in accordance with the Wilderness Act (78 Stat. 890; 16 U.S.C. 1131 et seq.) and shall be administered by the Secretary of the Interior in accordance with the applicable provisions of the Wilderness Act:

(1) Death Valley National Park Wilderness, comprising approximately three million one hundred eighty-three thousand four hundred and thirty-eight acres, as generally depicted on 23 maps entitled "Death Valley National Park Boundary and Wilderness", numbered in the title one through twenty-three, and dated September 1991 or prior, and three maps entitled "Death Valley National Park Wilderness", numbered in the title one through three, and dated May 1991 or prior, and which shall be known as the Death Valley Wilderness;

(2) Joshua Tree National Park Wilderness Additions, comprising approximately one hundred thirty-one thousand seven hundred and eighty acres, as generally depicted on four maps entitled "Joshua Tree National Park Boundary and Wilderness—Proposed", numbered in the title one through four, and dated October 1991 or prior, and which are hereby incorporated in, and which shall be deemed to be a part of the Joshua Tree Wilderness as designated by Public Law 94-567; and

(3) Mojave National Park Wilderness, comprising approximately six hundred ninety-five thousand fifty-six acres, as generally depicted on ten maps entitled "Mojave National Park Boundary and Wilderness—Proposed", numbered in the title one through ten, and dated October 1991 or prior, and seven maps entitled "Mojave National Park Wilderness—Proposed", numbered in the title one through seven, and dated October 1991 or prior, and which shall be known as the Mojave Wilderness.

(4) Upon cessation of all uses prohibited by the Wilderness Act and publication by the Secretary in the Federal Register of notice of such cessation, potential wilderness, comprising approximately six thousand eight hundred and forty acres, as described in "1988 Death Valley National Monument Draft General Management Plan Draft Environmental Impact Statement" (hereafter in this title referred to as "Draft Plan") and as generally depicted on map in the Draft Plan entitled "Wilderness Plan Death Valley National Monument", dated January 1988, and which shall be deemed to be a part of the Death Valley Wilderness as designated in paragraph (1). Lands identified in the Draft Plan as potential wilderness shall be managed by the Secretary insofar as practicable as wilderness until such time as said lands are designated as wilderness.

FILING OF MAPS AND DESCRIPTIONS

SEC. 502. Maps and a legal description of the boundaries of the areas designated in section 501 of this title shall be on file and available for public inspection in the Office of the Director of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior, and in the Office of the Superintendent of each area designated in section 501. As soon as practicable after this title takes effect, maps of the wilderness areas and legal descriptions of their boundaries shall be filed with the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Natural Resources of the House of Representatives, and such maps and descriptions shall have the same force and effect as if included in this title, except that the Secretary may correct clerical and typographical errors in such maps and descriptions.

ADMINISTRATION OF WILDERNESS AREAS

SEC. 503. The areas designated by section 501 of this title as wilderness shall be administered by the Secretary in accordance with the applicable provisions of the Wilderness Act governing areas designated by that title as wilderness, except that any reference in such provision to the effective date of the Wilderness Act shall be deemed to be a reference to the effective date of this title, and where appropriate, and reference to the Secretary of Agriculture shall be deemed to be a reference to the Secretary of the Interior.

TITLE VI—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

TRANSFER OF LANDS TO RED ROCK CANYON STATE PARK

SEC. 601. Upon enactment of this title, the Secretary of the Interior shall transfer to the State of California certain lands within the California Desert Conservation Area, California, of the Bureau of Land Management, comprising approximately twenty thousand five hundred acres, as generally depicted on two maps entitled "Red Rock Canyon State Park Additions 1" and "Red Rock Canyon State Park Additions 2", dated May 1991, for inclusion in the State of California Park System. Should the State of California cease to manage these lands as part of the State Park System, ownership of the lands shall revert to the Department of the Interior to be managed as part of the California Desert Conservation Area to provide maximum protection for the area's scenic and scientific values.

DESERT LILY SANCTUARY

SEC. 602. (a) There is hereby established the Desert Lily Sanctuary within the California Desert Conservation Area, California, of the Bureau of Land Management, comprising approximately two thousand forty acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Desert Lily Sanctuary", dated February 1986. The Secretary of the Interior shall administer the area to provide maximum protection to the desert lily.

(b) Subject to valid existing rights, Federal lands within the sanctuary, interests therein, are withdrawn from disposition under the public land laws and from entry or appropriation under the mining laws of the United States, from the operation of the mineral leasing laws of the United States, and from operation of the Geothermal Steam Act of 1970.

LAND TENURE ADJUSTMENTS

SEC. 603. In preparing land tenure adjustment decisions with the California Desert Conservation Area, of the Bureau of Land Management, the Secretary shall give priority to consolidating Federal ownership within the national park units and wilderness areas designated by this Act.

LAND DISPOSAL

SEC. 604. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture may not dispose of any lands within the boundaries of the wilderness or park designated under this Act or grant a right-of-way in any lands within the boundaries of the wilderness designated under this Act. Further, none of the lands within the boundaries of the wilderness or park designated under this Act shall be granted to or otherwise made available for use by the Metropolitan Water District and any other agencies or persons pursuant to the Boulder Canyon Project Act (43 U.S.C. 617-619b) or any similar acts.

MANAGEMENT OF NEWLY ACQUIRED LANDS

SEC. 605. Any lands within the boundaries of a wilderness area designated under this Act which are acquired by the Federal Government, shall become part of the wilderness area within which they are located and shall be managed in accordance with all the provisions of this Act and other laws applicable to such wilderness area.

NATIVE AMERICAN USES

SEC. 606. In recognition of the past use of the parks and wilderness areas designed under this Act by Indian people for traditional cultural and religious purposes, the Secretary shall ensure access to such parks and wilderness areas by Indian people for such traditional cultural and religious purposes. In implementing this section, the Secretary, upon the request of an Indian tribe or Indian religious community, shall temporarily close to the general public use of one or more specific portions of park or wilderness areas in order to protect the privacy of traditional cultural and religious activities in such areas by Indian people. Such access shall be consistent with the purpose and intent of Public Law 95-341 (42 U.S.C. 1996) commonly referred to as the "American Indian Religious Freedom Act", and with respect to areas designated as wilderness, the Wilderness Act (78 Stat. 890; 16 U.S.C. 1131).

WATER RIGHTS

SEC. 607. (a) With respect to each wilderness area designated by this Act, Congress hereby reserves a quantity of water sufficient to fulfill the purposes of this Act. The priority date of such reserved water rights shall be the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) The Secretary of the Interior and all other officers of the United States shall take all steps necessary to protect the rights reserved by this section, including the filing by the Secretary of a claim for the quantification of such rights in any present or future appropriate stream adjudication in the courts of the State of California in which the United States is or may be joined and which is conducted in accordance with section 208 of the Act of July 10, 1952 (66 Stat. 560, 44 U.S.C. 666; commonly referred to as the McCarran Amendment).

(c) Nothing in this Act shall be construed as a relinquishment or reduction of any water rights reserved or appropriated by the United States in the State of California on or before the date of enactment of this Act.

(d) The Federal water rights reserved by this Act are specific to the wilderness areas located in the State of California designated under this Act. Nothing in this Act related to the reserved Federal water rights shall be construed as establishing a precedent with regard to any future designations, nor shall it constitute an interpretation of any other Act or any designation made thereto.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 608. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act.

STATE SCHOOL LANDS

SEC. 609. (a) Upon request of the California State Lands Commission (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "Commission"), the Secretary shall enter into negotiations for an agreement to exchange Federal lands or interests therein on the list referred to in subsection (b)(2) for California State School Lands (hereinafter in this section referred to as "State School Lands") or interests therein which are located within the boundaries of one or more of the wilderness areas or park units designated by this Act. The Secretary shall negotiate in good faith to reach a land exchange agreement consistent with the requirements of section 206 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976.

(b) Within 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall send to the Commission and to the Committees a list of the following:

(1) The State School Lands or interests therein (including mineral interests) which are located within the boundaries of the wilderness areas or park units designated by this Act.

(2) Lands under the Secretary's jurisdiction to be offered for exchange, including in the following priority:

(A) Lands with mineral interests, including geothermal, which have the potential for commercial development but which are not currently under mineral lease or producing Federal mineral revenues.

(B) Federal lands in California managed by the Bureau of Reclamation that the Secretary determines are not needed for any Bureau of Reclamation project.

(C) Any public lands in California that the Secretary, pursuant to the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, has determined to be suitable for disposal through exchange.

(c)(1) If an agreement under this section is for an exchange involving five thousand acres or less of Federal land or interests therein, or Federal lands valued at less than $5,000,000, the Secretary may carry out the exchange in accordance with the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976.

(2) If an agreement under this section is for an exchange involving more than five thousand acres of Federal land or interests therein, or Federal land valued at more than $5,000,000, the agreement shall be submitted to the Committees, together with a report containing—

(A) a complete list and appraisal of the lands or interests in lands proposed for exchange; and

(B) a determination that the State School Lands proposed to be acquired by the United States do not contain any hazardous waste, toxic waste, or radioactive waste.

(d) An agreement submitted under subsection (c)(2) shall not take effect unless approved by a joint resolution enacted by the Congress.

(e) If exchanges of all of the State School Lands are not completed by October 1, 1996, the Secretary shall adjust the appraised value of any remaining inholdings consistent with the provisions of section 206 of the Federal Land Management Policy Act of 1976. The Secretary shall establish an account in the name of the Commission in the amount of such appraised value. Title to the State School Lands shall be transferred to the United States at the time such account is credited.

(f) The Commission may use the credit in its account to bid, as any other bidder, for excess or surplus Federal property to be sold in the State of California in accordance with the applicable laws and regulations of the Federal agency offering such property for sale. The account shall be adjusted to reflect successful bids under this section or payments or forfeited deposits, penalties, or other costs assessed to the bidder in the course of such sales. In the event that the balance in the account has not been reduced to zero by October 1, 2000, there are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary for payment to the California State Lands Commission funds equivalent to the balance remaining in the account as of October 1, 2000.

(g) As used in this section, the term "Committees" means the Committee on Natural Resources of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate.

EXCHANGES

SEC. 610. (a) Upon request of the Catellus Development Corporation (hereafter in this section referred to as "Catellus"), the Secretary shall enter into negotiations for an agreement or agreements to exchange Federal lands or interests therein on the list referred to in subsection (b)(2) of this section for lands of Catellus or interests therein which are located within the boundaries of one or more of the wilderness areas or park units designated by this Act.

(b) Within six months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall send to Catellus and to the Committees a list of the following:

(1) Lands of Catellus or interests therein (including mineral interests) which are located within the boundaries of the wilderness areas or park units designated by this Act.

(2) Lands, wherever located, under the Secretary's jurisdiction to be offered for exchange, in the following priority:

(A) Lands, including lands with mineral and geothermal interests, which have the potential for commercial development but which are not currently under lease or producing Federal revenues.

(B) Federal lands managed by the Bureau of Reclamation that the Secretary determines are not needed for any Bureau of Reclamation project.

(C) Any public lands that the Secretary, pursuant to the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, has determined to be suitable for disposal through exchange.

(c)(1) If an agreement under this section is for (A) an exchange involving lands outside the State of California, (B) more than 5,000 acres of Federal land or interests therein in California, or (C) Federal lands in any State valued at more than $5,000,000, the Secretary shall provide to the Committees a detailed report of such land exchange agreements.

(2) All land exchange agreements shall be consistent with the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976.

(3) Any report submitted to the Committees under this subsection shall include the following:

(A) A complete list and appraisal of the lands or interests in land proposed for exchange.

(B) A complete list of the lands, if any, to be acquired by the United States which contain any hazardous waste, toxic waste, or radioactive waste which requires removal or remedial action under Federal or State law, together with the estimated costs of any such action.

(4) An agreement under this subsection shall not take effect unless approved by a joint resolution enacted by the Congress.

(d) The Secretary shall provide the California State Lands Commission with a 180-day right of first refusal to exchange for any Federal lands or interests therein, located in the State of California, on the list referred to in subsection (b)(2). Any lands with respect to which a right of first refusal is not noticed within such period or exercised under this subsection shall be available to Catellus for exchange in accordance with this section.

(e) On January 3, 1996, the Secretary shall provide to the Committees a list and appraisal consistent with the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 of all Catellus lands eligible for exchange under this section for which an exchange has not been completed. With respect to any of such lands for which an exchange has not been completed by October 1, 1996 (hereafter in this section referred to as "remaining lands"), the Secretary shall establish an account in the name of Catellus (hereafter in this section referred to as the "exchange account"). Upon the transfer of title by Catellus to all or a portion of the remaining lands to the United States, the Secretary shall credit the exchange account in the amount of the appraised value of the transferred remaining lands at the time of such transfer.

(f) Catellus may use the credit in the exchange account to bid, as any other bidder, for any property real, personal, or mixed, wherever located, owned or controlled by the United States, including in a corporate capacity or as a receiver, conservator, or similar fiduciary capacity to be sold in accordance with the applicable laws and regulations of the Federal agency or instrumentality, or any element thereof, offering such property for sale. Upon approval by the Secretary in writing, the credits in Catellus' exchange account may be transferred or sold in whole or in part by Catellus to any other party, thereby vesting such party with all the rights formerly held by Catellus. The exchange account shall be adjusted to reflect successful bids under this section or payments or forfeited deposits, penalties, or other costs assessed to the bidder in the course of such sales.

(g)(1) The Secretary shall not accept title pursuant to this section to any lands unless such title includes all right, title, and interest in and to the fee estate.

(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (1), the Secretary may accept title to any subsurface estate where the United States holds title to the surface estate.

(3) This subsection does not apply to easements and rights-of-way for utilities or roads.

(h) In no event shall the Secretary accept title under this section to lands which contain any hazardous waste, toxic waste, or radioactive waste which requires removal or remedial action under Federal or State law unless such remedial action has been completed prior to the transfer.

(i) For purposes of the section, any appraisal shall be consistent with the provisions of section 206 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976.

(j) As used in this section, the term "Committees" means the Committee on Natural Resources of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate.

TITLE VII—DEFINITIONS

SEC. 701. For the purposes of this Act:

(1) The term "Secretary", unless specifically designated otherwise, means the Secretary of the Interior.

(2) The term "public lands" means any land and interest in land owned by the United States and administered by the Secretary of the Interior through the Bureau of Land Management.

TITLE VIII—MILITARY LANDS AND OVERFLIGHTS

SEC. 801. SHORT TITLE AND FINDINGS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This title may be cited as the "California Military Lands Withdrawal and Overflights Act of 1991".

(b) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) Military aircraft testing and training activities as well as demilitarization activities in California are an important part of the national defense system of the United States, and are essential in order to secure for the American people of this and future generations an enduring and viable national defense system;

(2) the national parks and wilderness areas designated by this Act lie within a region critical to providing training, research, and development for the Armed Forces of the United States and its allies;

(3) there is a lack of alternative sites available for these military training, testing, and research activities;

(4) continued use of the lands and airspace in the California desert region is essential for military purposes; and

(5) continuation of these military activities, under appropriate terms and conditions, is not incompatible with the protection and proper management of the natural, environmental, cultural, and other resources and values of the Federal lands in the California desert area.

SEC. 802. MILITARY OVERFLIGHTS.

(a) Nothing in this Act shall restrict or preclude low-level overflights of military aircraft over the new units of the National Park or Wilderness Preservation System (or any additions to existing units) designated by this Act, including military overflights that can be seen or heard within the areas designated by this Act.

(b) Nothing in this Act shall restrict or preclude the designation of new units of special airspace or the use or establishment of military flight training routes over the new units of the National Park or Wilderness Preservation Systems (or any additions to existing units) designated by this Act.

(c) Nothing in this section shall be construed to modify, expand, or diminish any authority under other Federal law.

SEC. 803. WITHDRAWALS.

(a) CHINA LAKE.—(1) Subject to valid existing rights and except as otherwise provided in this title, the Federal lands referred to in paragraph (2), and all other areas within the boundary of such lands as depicted on the map specified in such paragraph which may become subject to the operation of the public land laws, are hereby withdrawn from all forms of appropriation under the public land laws (including the mining laws and the mineral leasing laws). Such lands are reserved for use by the Secretary of the Navy for—

(A) use as a research, development, test, and evaluation laboratory;

(B) use as a range for air warfare weapons and weapon systems;

(C) use as a high hazard training area for aerial gunnery, rocketry, electronic warfare and countermeasures, tactical maneuvering and air support; and

(D) subject to the requirements of section 804(f), other defense-related purposes consistent with the purposes specified in this paragraph.

(2) The lands referred to in paragraph (1) are the Federal lands, located within the boundaries of the China Lake Naval Weapons Center, comprising approximately 1,100,000 acres in Inyo, Kern, and San Bernardino Counties, California, as generally depicted on a map entitled "China Lake Naval Weapons Center Withdrawal—Proposed", dated January 1985, and filed in accordance with section 803.

(b) CHOCOLATE MOUNTAIN.—(1) Subject to valid existing rights and except as otherwise provided in this title, the Federal lands referred to in paragraph (2), and all other areas within the boundary of such lands as depicted on the map specified in such paragraph which may become subject to the operation of the public land laws, are hereby withdrawn from all forms of appropriation under the public land laws (including the mining laws and the mineral leasing and the geothermal leasing laws). Such lands are reserved for use by the Secretary of the Navy for—

(A) testing and training for aerial bombing, missile firing, tactical maneuvering and air support; and

(B) subject to the provisions of section 804(f), other defense-related purposes consistent with the purposes specified in this paragraph.

(2) The lands referred to in paragraph (1) are the Federal lands comprising approximately 226,711 acres in Imperial County, California, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Chocolate Mountain Aerial Gunnery Range Proposed—Withdrawal" dated November 1991 and filed in accordance with section 803.

SEC. 804. MAPS AND LEGAL DESCRIPTIONS.

(a) PUBLICATION AND FILING REQUIREMENT.—As soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this title, the Secretary of the Interior shall—

(1) publish in the Federal Register a notice containing the legal description of the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title; and

(2) file maps and the legal description of the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title with the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the United States Senate and with the Committee on Natural Resources of the United States House of Representatives.

(b) TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS.—Such maps and legal descriptions shall have the same force and effect as if they were included in this title except that the Secretary of the Interior may correct clerical and typographical errors in such maps and legal descriptions.

(c) AVAILABILITY FOR PUBLIC INSPECTION.—Copies of such maps and legal descriptions shall be available for public inspection in the Office of the Director of the Bureau of Land Management, Washington, District of Columbia; the Office of the Director, California State Office of the Bureau of Land Management, Sacramento, California; the office of the commander of the Naval Weapons Center, China Lake, California; the office of the commanding officer, Marine Corps Air Station, Yuma, Arizona; and the Office of the Secretary of Defense, Washington, District of Columbia.

(d) REIMBURSEMENT.—The Secretary of Defense shall reimburse the Secretary of the Interior for the cost of implementing this section.

SEC. 805. MANAGEMENT OF WITHDRAWN LANDS.

(a) MANAGEMENT BY THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.—(1) Except as provided in subsection (g), during the period of the withdrawal the Secretary of the Interior shall manage the lands withdrawn under section 802 pursuant to the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.) and other applicable law, including this title.

(2) To the extent consistent with applicable law and Executive orders, the lands withdrawn under section 802 may be managed in a manner permitting—

(A) the continuation of grazing pursuant to applicable law and Executive orders where permitted on the date of enactment of this title;

(B) protection of wildlife and wildlife habitat;

(C) control of predatory and other animals;

(D) recreation (but only on lands withdrawn by section 802(a) (relating to China Lake));

(E) the prevention and appropriate suppression of brush and range fires resulting from nonmilitary activities; and

(F) geothermal leasing on the lands withdrawn under section 802(a) (relating to China Lake).

(3)(A) All nonmilitary use of such lands, including the uses described in paragraph (2), shall be subject to such conditions and restrictions as may be necessary to permit the military use of such lands for the purposes specified in or authorized pursuant to this title.

(B) The Secretary of the Interior may issue any lease, easement, right-of-way, or other authorization with respect to the nonmilitary use of such lands only with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Navy.

(b) CLOSURE TO PUBLIC.—(1) If the Secretary of the Navy determines that military operations, public safety, or national security require the closure to public use of any road, trail, or other portion of the lands withdrawn by this title, the Secretary may take such action as the Secretary determines necessary or desirable to effect and maintain such closure.

(2) Any such closure shall be limited to the minimum areas and periods which the Secretary of the Navy determines are required to carry out this subsection.

(3) Before and during any closure under this subsection, the Secretary of the Navy shall—

(A) keep appropriate warning notices posted; and

(B) take appropriate steps to notify the public concerning such closures.

(c) MANAGEMENT PLAN.—The Secretary of the Interior (after consultation with the Secretary of the Navy) shall develop a plan for the management of each area withdrawn under section 802 during the period of such withdrawal. Each plan shall—

(1) be consistent with applicable law;

(2) be subject to conditions and restrictions specified in subsection (a)(3);

(3) include such provisions as may be necessary for proper management and protection of the resources and values of such area; and

(4) be developed not later than three years after the date of enactment of this title.

(d) BRUSH AND RANGE FIRES.—The Secretary of the Navy shall take necessary precautions to prevent and suppress brush and range fires occurring within and outside the lands withdrawn under section 802 as a result of military activities and may seek assistance from the Bureau of Land Management in the suppression of such fires. The memorandum of understanding required by subsection (e) shall provide for Bureau of Land Management assistance in the suppression of such fires, and for a transfer of funds from the Department of the Navy to the Bureau of Land Management as compensation for such assistance.

(e) MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING.—(1) The Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of the Navy shall (with respect to each land withdrawal under section 802) enter into a memorandum of understanding to implement the management plan developed under subsection (c). Any such memorandum of understanding shall provide that the Director of the Bureau of Land Management shall provide assistance in the suppression of fires resulting from the military use of lands withdrawn under section 802 if requested by the Secretary of the Navy.

(2) The duration of any such memorandum shall be the same as the period of the withdrawal of the lands under section 802.

(f) ADDITIONAL MILITARY USES.—(1) Lands withdrawn by section 802 may be used for defense-related uses other than those specified in such section. The Secretary of Defense shall promptly notify the Secretary of the Interior in the event that the lands withdrawn by this title will be used for defense-related purposes other than those specified in section 802. Such notification shall indicate the additional use or uses involved, the proposed duration of such uses, and the extent to which such additional military uses of the withdrawn lands will require that additional or more stringent conditions or restrictions be imposed on otherwise-permitted nonmilitary uses of the withdrawn land or portions thereof.

(g) MANAGEMENT OF CHINA LAKE.—(1) The Secretary of the Interior may assign the management responsibility for the lands withdrawn under section 802(a) to the Secretary of the Navy who shall manage such lands, and issue leases, easements, rights-of-way, and other authorizations, in accordance with this title and cooperative management arrangements between the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of the Navy. In the case that the Secretary of the Interior assigns such management responsibility to the Secretary of the Navy before the development of the management plan under subsection (c), the Secretary of the Navy (after consultation with the Secretary of the Interior) shall develop such management plan.

(2) The Secretary of the Interior shall be responsible for the issuance of any lease, easement, right-of-way, and other authorization with respect to any activity which involves both the lands withdrawn under section 802(a) and any other lands. Any such authorization shall be issued only with the consent of the Secretary of the Navy and, to the extent that such activity involves lands withdrawn under section 802(a), shall be subject to such conditions as the Secretary of the Navy may prescribe.

(3) The Secretary of the Navy shall prepare and submit to the Secretary of the Interior an annual report on the status of the natural and cultural resources and values of the lands withdrawn under section 802(a). The Secretary of the Interior shall transmit such report to the Committee on Natural Resources of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate.

(4) The Secretary of the Navy shall be responsible for the management of wild horses and burros located on the lands withdrawn under section 802(a) and may utilize helicopters and motorized vehicles for such purposes. Such management shall be in accordance with laws applicable to such management on public lands and with an appropriate memorandum of understanding between the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of the Navy.

(5) Neither this title nor any other provision of law shall be construed to prohibit the Secretary of the Interior from issuing and administering any lease for the development and utilization of geothermal steam and associated geothermal resources on the lands withdrawn under section 802(a) pursuant to the Geothermal Steam Act of 1970 (30 U.S.C. 1001 et seq.) and other applicable law, but no such lease shall be issued without the concurrence of the Secretary of the Navy.

(6) This title shall not affect the geothermal exploration and development authority of the Secretary of the Navy under section 2689 of Title 10, United States Code, except that the Secretary of the Navy shall obtain the concurrence of the Secretary of the Interior before taking action under that section with respect to the lands withdrawn under section 802(a).

SEC. 806. DURATION OF WITHDRAWALS.

(a) DURATION.—The withdrawal and reservation established by this title shall terminate 25 years after the date of enactment of this title.

(b) DRAFT ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT STATEMENT.—No later than 22 years after the date of enactment of this title, the Secretary of the Navy shall publish a draft environmental impact statement concerning continued or renewed withdrawal of any portion of the lands withdrawn by this title for which that Secretary intends to seek such continued or renewed withdrawal. Such draft environmental impact statement shall be consistent with the requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) applicable to such a draft environmental impact statement. Prior to the termination date specified in subsection (a), the Secretary of the Navy shall hold a public hearing on any draft environmental impact statement published pursuant to this subsection. Such hearing shall be held in the State of California in order to receive public comments on the alternatives and other matters included in such draft environmental impact statement.

(c) EXTENSIONS OF RENEWALS.—The withdrawals established by this title may not be extended or renewed except by an Act or joint resolution.

SEC. 807. ONGOING DECONTAMINATION.

(a) PROGRAM.—Throughout the duration of the withdrawals made by this title, the Secretary of the Navy, to the extent funds are made available, shall maintain a program of decontamination of lands withdrawn by this title at least at the level of decontamination activities performed on such lands in fiscal year 1986.

(b) REPORTS.—At the same time as the President transmits to the Congress the President's proposed budget for the first fiscal year beginning after the date of enactment of this title and for each subsequent fiscal year, the Secretary of the Navy shall transmit to the Committees on Appropriations, Armed Services, and Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and to the Committees on Appropriations, Armed Services, and Natural Resources of the House of Representatives a description of the decontamination efforts undertaken during the previous fiscal year on such lands and the decontamination activities proposed for such lands during the next fiscal year including:

(1) amounts appropriated and obligated or expended for decontamination of such lands;

(2) the methods used to decontaminate such lands;

(3) amount and types of contaminants removed from such lands;

(4) estimated types and amounts of residual contamination on such lands; and

(5) an estimate of the costs for full decontamination of such lands and the estimate of the time to complete such decontamination.

SEC. 808. REQUIREMENTS FOR RENEWAL.

(a) NOTICE AND FILING.—(1) No later than three years prior to the termination of the withdrawal and reservation established by this title, the Secretary of the Navy shall advise the Secretary of the Interior as to whether or not the Secretary of the Navy will have a continuing military need for any of the lands withdrawn under section 802 after the termination date of such withdrawal and reservation.

(2) If the Secretary of the Navy concludes that there will be a continuing military need for any of such lands after the termination date, the Secretary shall file an application for extension of the withdrawal and reservation of such needed lands in accordance with the regulations and procedures of the Department of the Interior applicable to the extension of withdrawals of lands for military uses.

(3) If, during the period of withdrawal and reservation, the Secretary of the Navy decides to relinquish all or any of the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title, the Secretary shall file a notice of intention to relinquish with the Secretary of the Interior.

(b) CONTAMINATION.—(1) Before transmitting a notice of intention to relinquish pursuant to subsection (a), the Secretary of Defense, acting through the Department of Navy, shall prepare a written determination concerning whether and to what extent the lands that are to be relinquished are contaminated with explosive, toxic, or other hazardous materials.

(2) A copy of such determination shall be transmitted with the notice of intention to relinquish.

(3) Copies of both the notice of intention to relinquish and the determination concerning the contaminated state of the lands shall be published in the Federal Register by the Secretary of the Interior.

(c) DECONTAMINATION.—If any land which is the subject of a notice of intention to relinquish pursuant to subsection (a) is contaminated, and the Secretary of the Interior, in consultation with the Secretary of the Navy, determines that decontamination is practicable and economically feasible (taking into consideration the potential future use and value of the land) and that upon decontamination, the land could be opened to operation of some or all of the public land laws, including the mining laws, the Secretary of the Navy shall decontaminate the land to the extent that funds are appropriated for such purpose.

(d) ALTERNATIVES.—If the Secretary of the Interior, after consultation with the Secretary of the Navy, concludes that decontamination of any land which is the subject of a notice of intention to relinquish pursuant to subsection (a) is not practicable or economically feasible, or that the land cannot be decontaminated sufficiently to be opened to operation of some or all of the public land laws, or if Congress does not appropriate a sufficient amount of funds for the decontamination of such land, the Secretary of the Interior shall not be required to accept the land proposed for relinquishment.

(e) STATUS OF CONTAMINATED LANDS.—If, because of their contaminated state, the Secretary of the Interior declines to accept jurisdiction over lands withdrawn by this title which have been proposed for relinquishment, or if at the expiration of the withdrawal made by this title the Secretary of the Interior determines that some of the lands withdrawn by this title are contaminated to an extent which prevents opening such contaminated lands to operation of the public land laws—

(1) the Secretary of the Navy shall take appropriate steps to warn the public of the contaminated state of such lands and any risks associated with entry onto such lands;

(2) after the expiration of the withdrawal, the Secretary of the Navy shall undertake no activities on such lands except in connection with decontamination of such lands; and

(3) the Secretary of the Navy shall report to the Secretary of the Interior and to the Congress concerning the status of such lands and all actions taken in furtherance of this subsection.

(f) REVOCATION AUTHORITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of the Interior, upon deciding that it is in the public interest to accept jurisdiction over lands proposed for relinquishment pursuant to subsection (a), is authorized to revoke the withdrawal and reservation established by this title as it applies to such lands. Should the decision be made to revoke the withdrawal and reservation, the Secretary of the Interior shall publish in the Federal Register an appropriate order which shall—

(1) terminate the withdrawal and reservation;

(2) constitute official acceptance of full jurisdiction over the lands by the Secretary of the Interior; and

(3) state the date upon which the lands will be opened to the operation of some or all of the public lands laws, including the mining laws.

SEC. 809. DELEGABILITY.

(a) DEFENSE.—The functions of the Secretary of Defense or the Secretary of the Navy under this title may be delegated.

(b) INTERIOR.—The functions of the Secretary of the Interior under this title may be delegated, except that an order described in section 807(f) may be approved and signed only by the Secretary of the Interior, the Under Secretary of the Interior, or an Assistant Secretary of the Department of the Interior.

SEC. 810. HUNTING, FISHING, AND TRAPPING.

All hunting, fishing, and trapping on the lands withdrawn by this title shall be conducted in accordance with the provisions of section 2671 of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 811. IMMUNITY OF UNITED STATES.

The United States and all departments or agencies thereof shall be held harmless and shall not be liable for any injury or damage to persons or property suffered in the course of any geothermal leasing or other authorized nonmilitary activity conducted on lands described in section 802 of this title.

SEC. 812. EL CENTRO RANGES.

The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to permit the Secretary of the Navy to use until January 1, 1996, the approximately 44,870 acres of public lands in Imperial County, California, known as the East Mesa and West Mesa ranges, in accordance with the Memorandum of Understanding dated June 29, 1987, between the Bureau of Land Management, the Bureau of Reclamation, and the Department of the Navy. Such use shall be consistent with such Memorandum of Understanding and such additional terms and conditions as the Secretary of the Interior may require in order to protect the natural, scientific, environmental, cultural, and other resources and values of such lands and to minimize the extent to which use of such lands for military purposes impedes or restricts use of such or other public lands for other purposes. All military uses of such lands shall cease on January 1, 1996, unless authorized by subsequent Act of Congress.

By Mr. LEAHY (for himself and Mr. DECONCINI):

S. 22. A bill to amend the Child Nutrition Act of 1966 to make available certain amounts of funding for the Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants, and Children [WIC], and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

MATERNAL AND CHILD INVESTMENTS ACT OF 1993

• Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, children are our most precious resource. They are our future. Yet when it comes to facing children's problems on the national level, other priorities seem to command more attention.

Now is the time to rethink our priorities and set them straight once and for all. With the end of the cold war, we have a once-in-a-generation opportunity to redirect taxpayer money into programs that help our children.

I agree with President Clinton that we must end this era of greed and self-interest, and act now to protect our children. Let us not wait, let us make the most of the opportunity before us, and do what is right—help those children crying out for our attention.

The Special Supplemental Food Program [WIC], created by Congress in 1972, is universally acclaimed as one of our Nation's most successful nutritional programs. In addition to food, WIC provides nutritional instruction, health assessments, and medically prescribed supplements. WIC also is a cost-saving program.

Much of the short-term savings realized by investments in WIC result because WIC reduces the chances that babies will have low birthweights, or that they will be born prematurely. Babies with low birthweight are at greater risk of a range of physical impairments, and often require very expensive long-term care. A USDA study showed that for every WIC dollar spent on a pregnant woman, between $1.77 and $3.13 was saved in Medicaid cost during the first 60 days after birth.

The purpose of the Maternal and Child Investment Act is simple—to provide mandatory funding for WIC and ensure that all eligible pregnant women, infants and children are served by the program. The bill would put the WIC program in the same general budgetary category as most other Federal nutrition programs.

President Clinton strongly supports increases in WIC to achieve full funding. In fact, the Bipartisan National Commission on Children, of which then Governor Clinton was a member, recommended funding increases to allow all eligible persons access to WIC.

The President knows that investments in WIC immediately produce savings in Federal mandatory programs.

WIC is one of America's best investments in our future. I am not just referring to the savings in Medicaid costs, or State medical costs, or regarding family medical expenses.

Much of the savings are generated because fewer newborns need emergency intensive medical care. Those savings represent healthier babies—babies with fewer medical problems.

Mental and physical handicaps can last a lifetime—lets invest some money up front to prevent these problems from happening in the first place.

If I were talking about any of your children—would anyone not invest the money? Would any Senator in this room say for their child, or grandchild—save the money and take the risk. Of course not. We should do the same for all low-income pregnant women and infants.

We must invest in our children and make their future our top priority. To be a productive and competitive Nation we must nurture and support our children.

If the United States is to progress into the 21st century, we must dedicate ourselves to sustaining and strengthening our Nation's children. Fully funding WIC is a giant step toward achieving that goal.

This body continues to appropriate more funding for WIC. We should guarantee that funding with this bill.

I recognize that there is automatic opposition to mandatory spending programs because of the fear of continuing cost escalations and litigation on the part of individual recipients.

My bill will solve both problems. It will not provide an entitlement to individual WIC participants but will instead assure funding levels to States based on mandatory spending caps set forth in the bill. Individuals would not have the right to file legal actions nor could costs exceed the caps.

My approach will also allow States to better plan in advance since they will be better able to predict funding levels. The bill will result in significant savings in other Federal mandatory programs and will assure funding for the WIC program at level that I—and many other Members—would have requested be appropriated.

Another WIC study showed that “for every dollar spent on the prenatal component of the WIC program, the associated savings in Medicaid costs for illnesses beginning in the first 60 days after birth ranged from $1.92 to $4.21 for newborns and mothers and from $2.98 to $4.75 for newborns only.” In 1991 an estimated 662,562 pregnant women were on WIC, and around 260,000 pregnant women eligible for WIC were not served.

Longer term savings are also generated by investments in WIC. According to GAO, each dollar invested in WIC saves $3.50 over the next 18 years.

In 1990 five CEO's of major corporations testified at Congressional hearings about the need to fully fund WIC by the year 1996. They concluded that—

Each pregnant woman, infant and child who could benefit from WIC but is left out of the program represents a potential drain both on budgetary outlays in subsequent years and on our nation's future economic growth, not to mention a tragic loss in human potential.

This bill will phase in full funding for WIC by providing specified mandatory spending amounts for the WIC Program for fiscal years 1994 through 1996. The 1996 full funding amount is approximately $4.1 billion. The 1996 baseline for WIC is just over $3 billion.

A modest reserve fund would be created by the bill to deal with unanticipated cost escalations without requiring further action of Congress. This will prevent States from having to take WIC participants off the program if food costs rise unexpectedly. In addition, the Secretary will be required to administer the WIC Program—the program is now optional. All the other provisions of current law, save for technical or conforming changes, remain the same.

As many of you will recall, this body passed a bill to permit States to borrow ahead and use almost $100 million more than appropriated because of freezes in California and in Florida. Twenty-seven States were preparing to take persons of the WIC rolls after juice, and other, costs rose. President Bush signed the final version of that bill into law.

The pay-as-you-go funding source is not set forth in the bill although I want to make clear that I will not seek to bring the bill to the floor unless it is paid for in some way. I will work with this body, and the new administration to find a source of funds to pay for the bill.

I strongly urge all Senators to support this important legislation.●

By Mr. HATCH:

S. 23. A bill to amend title 17, United States Code, to clarify news reporting monitoring as a fair use exception to the exclusive rights of a copyright owner; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

FAIR USE EXCEPTION TO RIGHTS OF COPYRIGHT OWNER

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I am introducing today a bill to clarify the state of the law with respect to the fair use of copyrighted materials. Specifically, my bill amends section 107 of title 17, United States Code, to clarify that the monitoring of news reporting can qualify as a fair use exception to the otherwise exclusive rights of a copyright owner when such news monitoring meets the four-factor test of section 107.

This bill does not create a blanket license to copy news programs nor does it lessen in any way the strict obstacle course posed by the current four-factor test of section 107. It simply provides that video news monitoring be considered an activity similar to scholarly research, to criticism, or to news reporting itself, in other words, an activity that should be entitled to rely on the fair use exception.

Mr. President, broadcast monitors have for some time been challenged in the courts by broadcasters and cable operators who claim that their services infringe the copyright in the news that program producers are entitled to. In their defense, broadcast monitors have relied on the fair use doctrine of the Copyright Act, to prove that monitoring activities are not an infringement of copyright. I believe that, when correctly applied to broadcast monitors, the copyright law—and the fair use doctrine—can be read to protect their services from claims of infringement. Because the courts have been inconsistent in their resolution of this issue, it is appropriate for Congress to resolve the question, and I believe it is correct for Congress to resolve the question, as my bill does, on the side of greater public access to the news.

Article I, section 8 of the U.S. Constitution grants Congress the authority to "promote the Progress of Science and useful Arts, by securing for limited Times to Authors and Inventors the exclusive Right to their respective Writings and Discoveries."

Congress gave exclusive rights to authors as an incentive for them to create new works for the public good. These rights, however, can create a tension with other rights and interests of the public—as embodied in the first amendment—in the broad dissemination of works of public significance.

Congress and the courts have developed, enacted, and applied the fair use doctrine to harmonize these disparate interests. The fair use doctrine is not, therefore, only a statutory exception to the exclusive rights afforded by the Copyright Act. Rather, it is a necessary bulwark of our constitutional scheme, protecting the public's interest in access to information as a balance to the exclusive rights of copyright owners.

When it enacted the Copyright Act of 1976, Congress decided that it was important to codify the longstanding common law doctrine of fair use. See 17 U.S.C. section 107. Section 107 states that it is not a copyright infringement to make certain uses of copyrighted material, where the use is for an important public purpose, such as "criticism, comment, news reporting, teaching, scholarship or research." In the legislative history accompanying the Act, section 107 was described as codifying "one of the most important and well-established limitations on the exclusive rights of copyright owners." (H.R. Rept. 1476, 94th Cong., 2d Sess., at 65 (1976).)

After indicating the types of uses that qualify for fair use consideration, section 107 sets out the factors a court should consider in determining whether a particular use of copyrighted material is a fair use. Those factors are:

First, the purpose and character of the use, including whether such use is of a commercial nature or is for non-profit educational purpose;

Second, the nature of the copyrighted work;

Third, the amount and substantiality of the portion used in relation to the copyrighted work as a whole; and

Fourth, the effect of the use upon the potential market for or value of the copyrighted work.

The legislative history of the Copyright Act makes clear that while "the bill endorses the purpose and general scope of the judicial doctrine of fair use," there "is not disposition to freeze the doctrine in the statute, especially during a period of rapid technological change." (H.R. Rept. supra, at 96). Thus, Congress intended that the fair use doctrine be flexible enough to protect new technological uses of copyrighted works. Important, productive and beneficial uses—such as broadcast monitoring—were not foreseeable when the Copyright Act was enacted.

Video clipping companies that provide news monitoring services would seem to fall squarely within the core range of activities protected by the fair use doctrine. In fact, the ultimate purposes of monitoring are precisely those defined in the first sentence of section 107, that is, they advance "criticism, comment, teaching, scholarship, and research." Therefore, I have concluded that news monitoring is exactly the type of activity that has traditionally been the subject of common fair use protections and the kind of activity that Congress intended to protect in its 1976 codification of the fair use doctrine. Thus, when a video news compilation satisfies the four-factor analysis of section 107, there should be no question of copyright infringement.

Broadcast monitors play an integral role in the broad dissemination of news and other public affairs programs. Recognizing this fact, most broadcasters have excellent working relations with monitors that serve their communities. Indeed, many refer viewer requests for clips of recent broadcasts to monitors. In this way broadcasters and broadcast monitors together ensure that the demand for both immediate news by local audiences and for retrieval of footage by a national audience is wholly satisfied.

The Supreme Court has correctly interpreted the fair use doctrine to mean that courts should not "inhibit access to ideas without any countervailing benefit." Sony Corp. v. Universal City Studios, 464 U.S. 417, at 450-51 (1984). Because monitoring has no real or potential economic impact on newscasters, monitors simply do not diminish the incentive to produce news or other programs. There is no countervailing benefit, economic or otherwise, to be derived from a decision to suppress the news, which is the inevitable result of a rule disqualifying news monitors from fair use consideration.

On the other hand, we must consider the harm that is manifestly present in viewing newscasters as the only appropriate gatekeepers to the news. Among the important individual rights that have been recognized in this country since its inception are the rights to an individual's good name and reputation. Without video monitors, there would be a very limited ability of slandered individuals to learn the source and content of slanders committed and almost no ability to assert their rights in courts.

For all these reasons, Mr. President, I believe that Congress should act to correct the judicial imbalance that has been created by those courts that have tilted the copyright law against the public's right to have access to broadcast information. We should enact legislation so that companies and individuals that provide clips, or compilations of clips, of broadcast news programming for the internal use of third parties will be recognized as engaged in an activity protected by the fair use doctrine.

It is true, Mr. President, that a useful hearing on this subject was held last year by the Subcommittee on Patents, Copyrights, and Trademarks. At that hearing, the Register of Copyrights, Mr. Ralph Oman, volunteered to oversee deliberations among the parties interested in this legislation to see if an industry agreement, or other arrangement, could not be fashioned to resolve this issue without the need of new legislation. While it is my understanding that substantial progress has been made in these informal deliberations, it remains true that no final resolution of the issue has yet been reached. Therefore, I continue to believe that, at this point in time, a legislative solution is required to restore the balance of rights between producers of news programs and the public.

By Mr. LEVIN (for himself and Mr. COHEN):

S. 24. A bill to reauthorize the independent counsel law for an additional 5 years, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

INDEPENDENT COUNSEL REAUTHORIZATION ACT

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, today I am introducing with Senator COHEN the Independent Counsel Reauthorization Act of 1993, S. 24.

The goal of this legislation is to return to the statute books the law that establishes the system for appointing independent counsel to investigate persons close to the President when there are allegations of criminal misconduct. That law expired at the end of 1992.

The bill is being introduced on a bipartisan basis, and reauthorization has the strong support of President Clinton. In 1983 and 1987, the law was reenacted with large bipartisan majorities in both Houses of Congress. On both occasions, President Reagan signed the bill into law. In 1988, by a vote of 7 to 1, the Supreme Court found the law constitutional.

It is our hope that early in this Congress the independent counsel law will once more be renewed with bipartisan support and widespread recognition of the contribution it makes to public confidence in Government.

The independent counsel law was the product of Watergate's bitter lesson that no administration can with public confidence, investigate and prosecute its own top officials. Controversies over the past 20 years, from the Iran-Contra affair to the HUD scandal to the BNL prosecution, demonstrate the continuing validity of that lesson. It is a lesson that applies to Democratic administrations as well as to Republican administrations.

The basis for the law is the need for public trust in our criminal justice system. Twenty years ago, Watergate did great injury to that public trust. The culminating event was the Saturday night massacre in which President Nixon ordered his Attorney General to fire the Watergate special prosecutor who had subpoenaed the White House tapes. Attorney General Elliot Richardson resigned instead. So did Deputy Attorney General William French Smith. Solicitor General Robert Bork, however, obeyed the President's directive and fired Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox.

This interference with the Watergate criminal prosecutions left the country reeling. The result was a constitutional crisis, the resignation of a President, the appointment of a new special prosecutor, and years of criminal investigations, prosecutions and convictions.

Another result was the creation of the independent counsel law as part of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978. Since its enactment over 14 years ago, 13 independent counsels have been appointed. Most closed their investigations without indictments—but with the public's confidence that the individuals being investigated were not given any special treatment.

Four independent counsels have issued indictments. All four have obtained convictions either through jury trials or guilty pleas, although some convictions have been reversed on appeal on legal grounds. One independent counsel, appointed in December to investigate the Clinton passport matter, has yet to reach a decision on indictments.

The longest and most complex independent counsel matter has been the Iran-Contra investigation. In December 1986, then Attorney General Edwin Meese asked the special court to appoint an independent counsel to investigate all crimes arising out of the Iranian arms sales and diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan Contras. In response to Mr. Meese's request, which was supported by President Reagan, the special court appointed Lawrence Walsh—a respected lawyer who was a life-long Republican, former Federal judge, and former head of the American Bar Association and who possessed a strong résumé of professional experience and honors.

Mr. Walsh accepted the assignment and has since worked through one of the most complex criminal investigations in the history of American jurisprudence. He has filed 14 indictments of top Government officials in the Defense Department, State Department, and CIA. Eleven have resulted in criminal convictions, either from guilty pleas or jury verdicts. One indictment was dismissed due to the Government's refusal to release relevant classified information. Two indictments never went before a jury due to pardons issued by President Bush on Christmas Eve.

Today, most of the criticism of the independent counsel law consists of criticism of the Iran-Contra investigation. It would be surprising, of course, if there were no criticism of this investigation, given its focus on powerful people, complex facts, and covert actions involving terrorists, hostages, and a disputed conflict in Central America.

But what is overlooked is that the debate is generally on whether the prosecutor is being overly zealous, not on whether he is letting top officials off the hook. There have been no cries of whitewash or widespread loss of public confidence in his investigation. That is because the independent counsel law has addressed the lessons of Watergate. While people have complained that the wheels of justice in this case have moved too slowly and cost too much, none has, as in Watergate's dark days, questioned the willingness of the prosecutors to get to the truth.

President Bush's apparent agreement with the critics of Mr. Walsh came to a head, last month, when he issued pardons to six Iran-Contra defendants, the two who were awaiting trial and four others who had been convicted after a guilty plea or jury trial. The primary charges against the six were that they had illegally lied to or withheld information from Congress.

In explaining his decision to issue the pardons, President Bush said the prosecutions represented "the criminalization of policy differences." But none of the six had been prosecuted for his policy views; each had been prosecuted by the independent counsel for misrepresenting important facts when questioned by Congress or the independent counsel. These facts went to the heart of the Iran-Contra scandal and to many of the central controversies of the Reagan years: the sale of weapons to a terrorist nation; trading arms for hostages; bankrolling a war in Nicaragua which Congress had specifically refused to fund.

Appointed officials who lie to Congress are not engaging in policy differences, they are engaging in criminal misconduct. Three of the defendants had pled guilty; one had been convicted by a jury; two were awaiting trial on indictments which the courts had upheld against attacks by their lawyers. By implying that none of these individuals had committed crimes and that each had been improperly prosecuted by the independent counsel, President Bush not only blurred the facts and set back the cause of accountability in Government, he also demonstrated the importance of and need for the independent counsel process in the first place.

Last summer, the Governmental Affairs Subcommittee on Oversight of Government Management, which I chair and on which Senator COHEN serves as ranking Republican, and which has jurisdiction over the independent counsel law, held a hearing to air concerns about the law. The full committee then approved legislation, on a bipartisan basis, to address many of the problems identified. However, that legislation did not become law last session because of a threatened filibuster.

Early this year, the subcommittee plans to hold additional hearings and will invite critics of the law, such as former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, to testify. We also plan to get comments on the bill we have introduced today which includes not only the reforms suggested last year but several more as well.

Essentially, the bill does three things: It reauthorizes the law for 5 years, strengthens fiscal and administrative controls on independent counsel operations, and makes it clear that the law applies to Members of Congress. In short, it retains the basic shape of the law as approved by the Supreme Court, while recognizing that the law is not perfect and improvements can be made.

We have also worked with Congressman JACK BROOKS, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, on this bill together with other members of that committee. He strongly supports reauthorization and will introduce companion legislation in the House.

I want to thank Senator COHEN for his long leadership in this area. We hope our colleagues will view our legislation in the same bipartisan manner in which we have operated and support its early passage this session.

Mr. President, I am delighted with two things that are going on here: First, to be the first one I believe to ask a unanimous consent request of our new Vice President.

I ask unanimous consent of the Chair that the bill and a summary of the bill be printed in the RECORD, and I add how pleased I am that the occupant of the Chair is the occupant of the Chair.

There being no objection, the material is ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 24

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Independent Counsel Reauthorization Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. FIVE-YEAR REAUTHORIZATION.

Section 599 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking "1987" and inserting "1993".

SEC. 3. ADDED CONTROLS.

(a) COST CONTROLS AND ADMINISTRATIVE SUPPORT.—Section 594 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(1) COST CONTROLS AND ADMINISTRATIVE SUPPORT.—

"(i) COST CONTROLS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—An independent counsel shall—

"(i) conduct all activities with due regard for expense;

"(ii) authorize only reasonable and lawful expenditures; and

"(iii) promptly, upon taking office, assign to a specific employee the duty of certifying that expenditures of the independent counsel are reasonable and made in accordance with law.

"(B) DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE POLICIES.—An independent counsel shall comply with the established policies of the Department of Justice respecting expenditures of funds, except to the extent that compliance would be inconsistent with the purposes of this chapter.

"(2) ADMINISTRATIVE SUPPORT.—The Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall provide administrative support and guidance to each independent counsel. The Administrative Office shall not disclose information related to an independent counsel's expenditures, personnel, or administrative acts or arrangements without the authorization of the independent counsel.

"(3) OFFICE SPACE.—The General Services Administration, in consultation with the Administrative Office, shall promptly provide appropriate office space for each independent counsel. Such office space shall be within a Federal building unless the General Services Administration determines that other arrangements would cost less."

(b) INDEPENDENT COUNSEL PER DIEM EXPENSES.—Section 594(b) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "An independent counsel" and inserting "(1) IN GENERAL.—An independent counsel"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(2) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—Except as provided in paragraph (3), an independent counsel and persons appointed under subsection (c) shall be entitled to the payment of travel expenses as provided by subchapter 1 of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code, including travel expenses and per diem in lieu of subsistence in accordance with section 5703 of title 5.

"(3) TRAVEL TO PRIMARY OFFICE.—An independent counsel and persons appointed under subsection (c) shall not be entitled to the payment of travel and subsistence expenses under subchapter 1 of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code, with respect to duties performed in the city in which the primary office of that independent counsel or person is located after 1 year of service under this chapter unless the employee assigned duties under subsection (1)(1)(A)(iii) certifies that the payment is in the public interest to carry out the purposes of this chapter."

(c) INDEPENDENT COUNSEL EMPLOYEE PAY COMPARABILITY.—Section 594(c) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking the last sentence and inserting: "Such employees shall be compensated at levels not to exceed those payable for comparable positions in the Office of United States Attorney for the District of Columbia under sections 548 and 550, but in no event shall any such employee be compensated at a rate greater than the rate of basic pay payable for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5."

(d) ETHICS ENFORCEMENT.—Section 594(j) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) ENFORCEMENT.—The Department of Justice and Office of Government Ethics have authority to enforce compliance with this subsection."

(e) COMPLIANCE WITH POLICIES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.—Section 594(f) is amended by striking "shall, except where not possible, comply" and inserting "shall, except to the extent that to do so would be inconsistent with the purposes of this chapter, comply".

(f) PUBLICATION OF REPORTS.—Section 594(h) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) PUBLICATION OF REPORTS.—At the request of an independent counsel, the Public Printer shall cause to be printed any report previously released to the public under paragraph (2). The independent counsel shall certify the number of copies necessary for the public service, and the Public Printer shall place the cost of the required number to the debit of such independent counsel. Additional copies shall be made available to the public through the depository library program and Superintendent of Documents sales program pursuant to sections 1702 and 1903 of title 44."; and

(2) in the first sentence of paragraph (2), by striking "appropriate" the second place it appears and inserting "in the public interest, consistent with maximizing public disclosure, ensuring a full explanation of independent counsel activities and decisionmaking, and facilitating the release of information and materials which the independent counsel has determined should be disclosed".

(g) ANNUAL REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—Section 595(a)(2) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking "such statements" and all that follows through "appropriate" and inserting "annually a report on the activities of the independent counsel, including a description of the progress of any investigation or prosecution conducted by the independent counsel. Such report may omit any matter that in the judgment of the independent counsel should be kept confidential, but shall provide information adequate to justify the expenditures that the office of the independent counsel has made".

(h) PERIODIC REAPPOINTMENT OF INDEPENDENT COUNSEL.—Section 596(b)(2) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "If the Attorney General has not made a request under this paragraph, the division of the court shall determine on its own motion whether termination is appropriate under this paragraph no later than 3 years after the appointment of an independent counsel and at the end of each succeeding 3-year period."

(i) AUDITS BY THE COMPTROLLER GENERAL.—Section 596(c) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) AUDIT.—By December 31 of each year, an independent counsel shall prepare a statement of expenditures for the fiscal year that ended on the immediately preceding September 30. An independent counsel whose office is terminated prior to the end of the fiscal year shall prepare a statement of expenditures by the date that is 90 days after the date on which the office is terminated. The Comptroller General shall audit each such statement and report the results of each audit to the appropriate committees of the Congress not later than March 31 of the year following the submission of any such statement."

SEC. 4. MEMBERS OF CONGRESS.

Section 591(c) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (1) and (2) as subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively;

(2) by designating the text as paragraph (1) and inserting at the beginning of the text the following: "(1) IN GENERAL.—"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(2) MEMBERS OF CONGRESS.—When the Attorney General determines that it would be in the public interest, the Attorney General may conduct a preliminary investigation in accordance with section 592 if the Attorney General receives information sufficient to constitute grounds to investigate whether a Member of Congress may have violated any Federal criminal law other than a violation classified as a Class B or C misdemeanor or an infraction."

SEC. 5. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by this Act shall become effective on the date of enactment of this Act.

SUMMARY OF INDEPENDENT COUNSEL REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 1993

S. 24, the Independent Counsel Reauthorization Act of 1993 would do essentially 3 things: (1) reauthorize the independent counsel law for 5 years, (2) strengthen fiscal and administrative controls on independent counsel operations, and (3) make it clear that the law applies to Members of Congress.

Short Title. Section 1 is the short title of the bill.

Five-year Reauthorization. Section 2 would reauthorize the law for five additional years.

Added Controls. Section 3 would impose additional fiscal and administrative controls on independent counsel operations. These provisions would:

Reasonable Expenditures: require independent counsels to comply with Justice Department spending policies, act with "due regard for expense," authorize only reasonable and lawful expenditures, and appoint a staff person to track and certify actual expenditures;

Administrative Support: clarify the responsibility of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts to provide administrative support and guidance to each independent counsel office;

Federal Office Space: require the General Services Administration to provide independent counsels with office space in federal buildings, unless other arrangements are less costly;

Per Diem Expenses: limit per diem expenses, by making it clear, after one year in office, independent counsels and staff are not entitled to travel and subsistence expenses when working in the city of which their primary office is located, unless payment is certified as in the public interest;

Staff Compensation: require independent counsel staff compensation to be comparable to the compensation paid by U.S. Attorney's Office in the District of Columbia;

Ethics Enforcement: make it clear that the Department of Justice and Office of Government Ethics can enforce standards of conduct for independent counsels, their staffs and law firms;

Law Enforcement Policies: clarify the obligation of independent counsels to comply with Justice Department law enforcement policies;

Annual Reports: require independent counsels to file annual reports with Congress, ensure public availability of their final reports;

Periodic Reappointment: require the special court to determine at least once every three years whether an independent counsel office should be terminated because its work is substantially complete; and Audits: require annual expenditure statements by independent counsels and annual audits by GAO.

Members of Congress. Section 4 would make it clear that the Attorney General may use the independent counsel process in cases involving Members of Congress.

Effective Date. The bill's provisions would become effective on the date of the enactment of the Act.

INDEPENDENT COUNSEL REAUTHORIZATION

• Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I am pleased to join with Senator LEVIN today in introducing legislation to reauthorize the independent counsel provisions of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978 which, regrettably, expired in December of last year.

As my colleagues know, the independent counsel process was established by the Congress in 1978—reauthorized in 1982 and 1987—as necessary to ensure that investigations and prosecutions of top-level executive branch officials are conducted fully and fairly.

Over the years, critics have challenged the wisdom and need for the independent counsel law. Justice Holmes once said that—

The life of the law has not been logic: it has been experience.

In this case, both logic and experience are on the side of reauthorizing the independent counsel law.

The law serves two ends, both equally important in our democratic society. One is that justice must be done, and the other that it must appear to be done. The appearance of justice is just as important as justice itself, in terms of maintaining public confidence in our judicial system. Such confidence is undermined when the administration of the law appears to be compromised.

By providing for a judicially appointed independent counsel to handle such cases in limited circumstances, the process established by the Ethics Act helps to assure the public that criminal wrongdoing by top-level government officials will not be buried or tolerated, and that top-level officials will not be treated as if they are above the law.

The independent counsel process should not be viewed as an affront to the integrity of the Department of Justice or administration. Conflict of interest problems are not unique to any one administration or political party. Scandals involving high-ranking government officials date far back in our Nation's history and transcend party lines.

I believe that an institutional mechanism, such as the independent counsel law, will always be necessary to guard against inherent conflicts of interest that occur whenever the executive branch is called upon to investigate itself. Not only does a statutory process enhance public confidence in the handling of prosecutions involving officials, but it also helps the officials themselves who have been cleared by such a process, by removing the suspicion that the official was let off easy by his or her own administration.

The independent counsel process is one that has worked, albeit with some flaws over its 14-year history of the law. Most recently, significant concerns have been raised over the monetary costs of the law, in light of the unanticipated scope and cost of independent counsel investigations in the past several years.

To address the cost issue, the legislation that Senator LEVIN and I are introducing includes several provisions to tighten fiscal controls. The bill would require independent counsels to conduct all activities with due regard for expense, to authorize only reasonable and lawful expenditures, and promptly upon taking office, assign to a specific employee the duty of certifying that expenditures are made in accordance with these principles.

The bill would also require independent counsels to comply with Justice Department spending policies, require GSA to provide independent counsels with office space in Federal buildings unless other arrangements would cost less, and require the administrative office of the U.S. courts to provide administrative support and guidance.

The bill also addresses a second, more controversial issue which is the law's coverage of Members of Congress. Most of those familiar with the statute recognize that Members were already covered by the so-called catchall provision. This provision allowed the Attorney General to seek appointment of an independent counsel whenever he determined that an investigation of a Member of Congress by the Justice Department may pose a conflict of interest—either personal, financial, or political.

There is, of course, no inherent conflict of interest when the Justice Department investigates or prosecutes Members of Congress, nor is there any evidence that the Department is hesitant to investigate or prosecute Members. However, to accommodate those who sincerely believe that the old law is inadequate in this respect, the legislation would give the Attorney General the authority to seek the appointment of an independent counsel in any case involving allegations of criminal wrongdoing by Members of Congress.

This new provision would not require a finding of a conflict of interest before it can be used. Therefore, the Attorney General could—if he or she chose—use an independent counsel in every case involving a Member of Congress, effectively creating mandatory coverage, or could confine its use to situations where a conflict exists as under current law. The discretionary nature of the provision would obviate any constitutional concerns raised by an absolute bar on Justice Department investigations of Members of Congress.

Mr. President, the Subcommittee on Oversight of Government Management, chaired by Senator LEVIN and on which I serve as ranking member, will hold a hearing on the independent counsel provisions later this year. The hearing will provide an opportunity to discuss fully the continued need for the independent counsel process and the means by which it can be improved. The legislation we are introducing today proposes some solutions to concerns that have arisen in the implementation of the Ethics Act. I look forward to working with Senator LEVIN and my colleagues to ensure enactment of legislation that restores and strengthens this important law.●

S. 25. A bill to protect the reproductive rights of women, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

FREEDOM OF CHOICE ACT

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I am introducing today the Freedom of Choice Act, to give statutory strength to the right of American women to govern their reproductive lives without coercive government interference.

The bill is identical to last year's Freedom of Choice Act, introduced with the original sponsor, former Senator Cranston, which gained 47 cosponsors by the close of the session.

We were unable to take up the measure last year, so it is reintroduced this year, with the expectation that the 103d Congress will be willing to debate it on the merits and vote.

The only small change made in the measure since last year is a change worked out last year, with the Catholic Health Association, the leadership group for the Nation's network of community Catholic hospitals.

That change provides that States have the right to protect unwilling private health care institutions, as well as private individuals, from providing abortion services against their will. Its practical effect is to continue what has been national policy since the ruling in the case of Roe versus Wade, which is to permit conscientiously opposed individuals and institutions to refrain from providing these services.

This change, worked out with the cooperation and agreement of the Catholic Health Association, makes it clear to the members of that body that passage of the Freedom of Choice Act will impose on them no obligations that existing law does not impose.

Our goal in doing this is to assure all parties that the goal of the Freedom of Choice Act is to do no more, but no less, than to codify the holding in Roe.

Since 1973, when the Supreme Court, in the Roe case, determined that the constitutional right of privacy is broad enough to include a woman's right to choose to terminate a pregnancy, American women have had the assurance that their choices in life are their own. American women have been free of the nightmare fears of back-alley abortions or unwanted pregnancies.

Abortion is no one's first preference. The best possible world would be one in which there were no unwanted pregnancies, where every pregnancy was the forerunner of a much-wanted and loved child.

That is not the reality, however.

Birth control does not always work. Women are raped. Young women are the victims of incest, a particularly disgusting form of rape. Far too many women don't have regular access to primary health care, including birth control.

Our society does far too little to enforce on men the idea that conceiving a child carries with it an obligation to care for that child. Too often, instead, single mothers are condemned for the crime of having a child, just as women seeking abortions are condemned for the crime of not wanting a child.

Most Americans, including many who dislike abortion and do not wish to encourage abortion, have concluded that the standards set by the Supreme Court's decision in Roe versus Wade, along with the subsequent cases defining the limits of State regulation of abortion, are a workable standard for a diverse society.

That is the majority view, because Americans know that the real-world alternative is either a reversion to the pre-1973 world of illegal abortions or a post-Roe world of intrusive government questioning of women's decisions about childbearing.

That is why the Freedom of Choice Act seeks to preserve the Roe standard and nothing more.

The availability of safe, legal abortion is the premise on which the broad majority of Americans make judgments about related matters, such as minors' rights, funding, and so forth. My bill does the same.

From 1973 to 1988, the Supreme Court reviewed various State restrictions on abortion and determined which were intentional obstacles to the free exercise of a woman's choice and which were not, based on the holding in Roe that the right to choose abortion is a right of constitutional standing.

From 1989 forward, however, with changes in the makeup of the Court, the standing of the right to choose has been under assault within the Court itself. There has been no change in public opinion about the fact that the Roe standard works. There has been no change in the real world outcome: The overwhelming majority—97 percent—of abortions are performed in the first 15 weeks of pregnancy.

The change has been in the political debate and in the makeup of the court. As a result, today, we face two conflicting and contradictory standards by which the right to choose abortion is judged.

On the one hand, there is the standard of strict scrutiny, applied in Roe and in subsequent cases, which holds that the right to reproductive choice is constitutionally based and thus demands the same level of protection as other constitutional rights. On the other hand, last year a 5-to-4 majority of the Court in the Casey ruling enunciated a new standard, the "undue burden" standard, whose parameters are not clear and whose main outcome seems likely to be a proliferation of new litigation, as persons opposed to all abortions seek to probe the extent to which the new standard relaxes the Constitutional protection of the basic right.

The Roe decisions was rooted, in part, in the understanding that of all the parties with an interest in a woman's pregnancy, the person with the greatest interest, for whom the consequences of a pregnancy are most direct, is the woman herself.

The findings in Roe, despite efforts to distort them, are clearcut: Until fetal viability, a woman has the right to choose an abortion for herself. After fetal viability, a State may restrict that right, except when the life or health of the woman is threatened. Appropriate, medically necessary State regulation of the procedure is recognized.

Roe did not foreclose further adjudication of related issues and in the years since Roe, such other cases have been decided involving questions of minors' rights and adult involvement, State funding obligations, and the right of conscientious refusal to participate in the provisions of abortion services.

Because the bill tracks the decision and does not seek to expand it, these factors are explicit in the language of the bill. At the same time, because the bill does intend to track Roe, and not to contract its area of protection, it does not grant new and untested rights of regulation to the States. States themselves must judge if they wish to legislate and litigate in such fields.

Abortion is a controversial subject because the views of Americans on the status of fetal life vary enormously.

Some believe that a fertilized ovum is the legal equivalent in every sense of an adult person. Some believe that at no point before birth does a fetus acquire any significance.

These differences are not reconcilable. The Roe ruling didn't reconcile them and my bill doesn't.

But the majority of Americans don't hold extreme views. They believe there are circumstances where an abortion is the only alternative. They believe that at some point in a pregnancy, the right of the woman must give way before the right of a potential life. That is the view the Roe decision upheld and the view my bill echoes.

The Roe Court agreed that the right of a woman to choose the outcome of a pregnancy is a right rooted in her personal right of privacy.

Since the late 19th century, the Supreme Court, in a series of rulings, has developed a body of law and precedent which establishes that Americans enjoy many rights not specifically enumerated in the Constitution. Among them is a right of personal privacy.

Privacy is not the only unenumerated right: The right of citizens to associate freely with each other is nowhere mentioned in the Constitution. The right of Americans to travel is not specified in the Constitution. The right to marry is not spelled out. Neither is the right to have children. But no one denies that these rights are fundamental rights of every American.

In Roe versus Wade, the Supreme Court concluded that the right of privacy "is broad enough to encompass a woman's decision whether or not to terminate her pregnancy."

That finding is what my bill seeks to uphold, no more and no less.

This right is controversial today. The assertion of the right to use birth control was controversial 30 years ago. The right of persons to marry across race lines was controversial.

Even today, when many of these cases have been settled law for decades, some Americans still find their premises offensive. We are a diverse and pluralistic society; we allow all our citizens to seek to persuade each other by peaceful means. But we don't let the preferences of some rule the actions and choices of others.

When one citizen asserts a constitutional right, the fact that its exercise may be offensive to someone else is not a ground for curtailing that right.

Lawmakers have an additional affirmative responsibility to examine all the alternatives to any course of action.

In this instance, opponents of this legislation offer absolutely no realistic alternatives.

The claim that changing a Supreme Court ruling will stop abortion is disproven by history and fact. It will not.

Before Roe, illegal abortions—back-alley abortions for the poor, self-induced abortion attempts for the young and desperate, and trips abroad for the fortunate few—were a common reality. So were neglected, unwanted and un-adopted children.

And, of course, opponents of this legislation are often—although not always—in the forefront of those opposed to family planning.

Many of today's most vocal opponents of abortion oppose birth control for any reason by any person.

The fact is that the opponents of abortion simply want to make abortion illegal. They know they can't stop it because abortions occur in every society, regardless of the legal position the society takes.

Opponents claim they don't want to make criminals of women. But their actions speak louder than their words. And their actions are directed entirely at making abortion illegal—not unnecessary.

The majority of Americans has seen through that argument and that is why, even though abortion is a difficult, painful and wrenching issue for most people, the majority nonetheless believes it must remain legal.

My bill achieves that goal: Not more, but not less. It makes the Roe standard, under which the nation has now lived for almost two decades, the law of the land. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD following my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 25

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Freedom of Choice Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. CONGRESSIONAL STATEMENT OF FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The 1973 Supreme Court decision in Roe v. Wade established constitutionally based limits on the power of States to restrict the right of a woman to choose to terminate a pregnancy. Under the strict scrutiny standard enunciated in Roe v. Wade, States were required to demonstrate that laws restricting the right of a woman to choose to terminate a pregnancy were the least restrictive means available to achieve a compelling State interest. Since 1989, the Supreme Court has no longer applied the strict scrutiny standard in reviewing challenges to the constitutionality of State laws restricting such rights.

(2) As a result of the Supreme Court's recent modification of the strict scrutiny standard enunciated in Roe v. Wade, certain States have restricted the right of women to choose to terminate a pregnancy or to utilize some forms of contraception, and these restrictions operate cumulatively to—

(A)(i) increase the number of illegal or medically less safe abortions, often resulting in physical impairment, loss of reproductive capacity or death to the women involved;

(ii) burden interstate commerce by forcing women to travel from States in which legal barriers render contraception or abortion unavailable or unsafe to other States or foreign nations;

(iii) interfere with freedom of travel between and among the various States;

(iv) burden the medical and economic resources of States that continue to provide women with access to safe and legal abortion; and

(v) interfere with the ability of medical professionals to provide health services;

(B) obstruct access to and use of contraceptive and other medical techniques that are part of interstate and international commerce;

(C) discriminate between women who are able to afford interstate and international travel and women who are not, a disproportionate number of whom belong to racial or ethnic minorities; and

(D) infringe upon women's ability to exercise full enjoyment of rights secured to them by Federal and State law, both statutory and constitutional.

(3) Although Congress may not by legislation create constitutional rights, it may, where authorized by its enumerated powers and not prohibited by a constitutional provision, enact legislation to create and secure statutory rights in areas of legitimate national concern.

(4) Congress has the affirmative power both under section 8 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States and under section 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution to enact legislation to prohibit State interference with interstate commerce, liberty or equal protection of the laws.

(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this Act to establish, as a statutory matter, limitations upon the power of States to restrict the freedom of a woman to terminate a pregnancy in order to achieve the same limitations as provided, as a constitutional matter, under the strict scrutiny standard of review enunciated in Roe v. Wade and applied in subsequent cases from 1973 to 1988.

SEC. 3. FREEDOM TO CHOOSE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—A State—

(1) may not restrict the freedom of a woman to choose whether or not to terminate a pregnancy before fetal viability;

(2) may restrict the freedom of a woman to choose whether or not to terminate a pregnancy after fetal viability unless such a termination is necessary to preserve the life or health of the woman; and

(3) may impose requirements on the performance of abortion procedures if such requirements are medically necessary to protect the health of women undergoing such procedures.

(b) RULES OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to—

(1) prevent a State from protecting unwilling individuals or private health care institutions from having to participate in the performance of abortions to which they are conscientiously opposed;

(2) prevent a State from declining to pay for the performance of abortions; or

(3) prevent a State from requiring a minor to involve a parent, guardian, or other responsible adult before terminating a pregnancy.

SEC. 4. DEFINITION OF STATE.

As used in this Act, the term "State" includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and each other territory or possession of the United States.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my distinguished colleague, Senator MITCHELL in proposing legislation which would restore women's reproductive freedom to the standard established in the 1973 Supreme Court decision on Roe versus Wade.

The Freedom of Choice Act is a vital step toward attaining full reproductive freedom for women. It would reinstate the level of protection afforded women until the 1989 Webster versus Reproductive Health Services decision open the door for States to impose burdensome restrictions.

Since the Webster decision, the Court has retreated even further from full protection by abandoning the strict scrutiny standard that is normally applied to other fundamental, constitutionally guaranteed rights. Instead, the Court has adopted a much less protective standard for women which allows States to legislate restrictions deemed not to pose an undue burden on a woman seeking to terminate a pregnancy.

Since these Court decisions, more than 500 antichoice bills have been introduced at the State level.

The Court and many of the individual 50 States are conducting a blow-by-blow assault on the reproductive rights of women. Federal legislation is necessary to stem the erosion of these rights and remove unwanted government interference from what should be a purely personal and private decision.

Some have called the Freedom of Choice Act a radical bill, but it is not. In reality it would simply reinstate what was the guiding principle for 17 years in this country under Roe versus Wade.

Specifically, Roe versus Wade states that the right to determine whether to terminate a pregnancy is protected by the Constitution, therefore the States may not interfere with a woman's right to obtain a safe and legal abortion. Once medical viability is determined however, the State may elect to impose restrictions or even prohibit an abortion unless the pregnancy jeopardizes the life or health of the mother. The Freedom of Choice Act closely follows this framework.

The authors of the Freedom of Choice Act were careful not to expand beyond the scope of Roe versus Wade in other areas. As under the original decision, States may pass parental consent or notification laws for minors as long as those laws contain a constitutional bypass provision.

I see these requirements as an onerous restriction for many teenagers who do not have a healthy family support system, and who may be understandably intimidated by court proceedings. Our overriding goal should be protecting the rights and privacy of all women in need of abortion services.

During the last 4 years I have witnessed a gradual chiseling away at a basic individual freedom. Burdensome restrictions such as waiting periods, spousal notice requirements and informed consent measures belittle a woman's ability to make her own decisions based on her own individual set of circumstances. S

Not only is the hand of government reaching into a woman's private decisionmaking, it is erecting a set of obstacles which many women may never clear. Women whom our society should most seek to empower face the greatest barriers; poor women, women in abusive relationships, or those with few outside sources of information and education.

These women are also the least likely to have the resources to pay for abortion or family planning services. The Freedom of Choice Act remains silent on government funding for abortion services, although I understand funding will be addressed through the Reproductive Health Equity Act. Without adequate funding levels and protection from government interference, we are creating a two-tiered system that will further trap women in the poverty spiral. Access to abortion services should not be dependent on wealth and education.

We have made great strides in eliminating inequality in the treatment of individual rights in this century. The Freedom of Choice Act will return to all American women the protection they deserve under the law.

As this new legislative session continues, I anticipate many new bills, under various guises, will attempt to make the right to an abortion more difficult to attain. Our swift movement to codify a long-held standard will help protect a woman's right to choose. The Freedom of Choice Act is a reasonable response to such attempts, and I urge my colleagues to push for swift passage of this important legislation.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I am pleased to join Senator MITCHELL and many other colleagues today in sponsoring the Freedom of Choice Act, a bill to codify the constitutional right to reproductive freedom established by the Supreme Court in 1973 in the landmark case of Roe versus Wade.

Tomorrow marks the 20th anniversary of Roe versus Wade. In that historic decision, the Supreme Court recognized, as part of the constitutional right to privacy, the fundamental right of a woman to choose to terminate her pregnancy. The Roe decision invalidated a variety of State laws that had prohibited or sharply restricted abortions, and put an end to the back-alley abortions that had maimed and killed so many women in the past.

In recent years, however, as the membership of the Supreme Court has changed, the barriers blocking access to safe and legal abortion have begun to be rebuilt. In the Webster case in 1989, the Court indicated that it would no longer hold State antichoice laws to the strict scrutiny standard of review. The States reacted by beginning to enact laws imposing a variety of restrictions on abortion. Then last summer in the Casey decision, the Court, upholding restrictions adopted in Pennsylvania, made it clear that it had indeed abandoned strict scrutiny of abortion legislation.

The Casey decision severely undermines the right of a woman to choose to terminate her pregnancy. Restrictions on abortion of the sort approved by the Court are all too likely to cause large numbers of women to sacrifice their dignity, risk their health, and sometimes give their lives, to terminate their pregnancies.

Two types of restrictions upheld by the Court in Casey that often operate in practice to prevent women from exercising their constitutional right to choose are the so-called informed consent provisions and mandatory waiting periods. Most informed consent laws do not actually ensure that a woman is genuinely informed about her options, which good medical practice guarantees in any event, nor are they intended to do so. Rather, these laws require abortion providers to recite a litany of biased and often irrelevant information in order to harass, frighten, and intimidate women.

Mandatory waiting periods are equally unnecessary and burdensome on the right to choose. A 24-hour waiting period requires women to make two trips to an abortion provider. For women who do not have an abortion provider near where they live, a waiting period can mean another day of travel, perhaps overnight accommodations, arranging for another day off from work, and extra child care arrangements. These burdens fall particularly heavily on poor women and those in rural areas. Their effect is at a minimum to delay access to a safe and legal abortion, and in many instances to deny such access altogether.

A recent study by the American Medical Association Council on Scientific Affairs found that restrictions which delay abortions—including mandatory waiting periods—increase the costs of the procedure and, more important, the health risks to the woman. The AMA report concluded:

As access to safer, earlier legal abortion becomes increasingly restricted, there is likely to be a small but measurable increase in mortality and morbidity among women in the United States.

American women deserve better than this.

Enactment of the Freedom of Choice Act is critical to ensure that the principles of Roe are restored and the right to a safe and legal abortion is guaranteed. The Freedom of Choice Act will ensure that the dark days of back-alley abortions do not return.

We should all work to reduce the need for abortions through more effective family planning, contraception research and adoption services. But we must also safeguard a woman's freedom to make the deeply personal choice to terminate a pregnancy, and to ensure that she can safely implement her choice without government interference.

Mr. President, I hope that Congress will expedite its action on this important legislation.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I rise today to reaffirm my support for S. 25, the Freedom of Choice Act, and to add my name as an original cosponsor. It is my hope that Congress passes and President Clinton signs this important legislation into law as soon as possible.

On June 29, 1992, the Supreme Court changed the standard under which States could restrict a woman's access to abortion. In Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pennsylvania versus Casey, the Court ruled that States could restrict a woman's right to choose whether to have an abortion as long as it did not impose an undue burden on that right. In Casey, the Court determined that requiring a woman to wait 24 hours for an abortion and to listen to her physician discuss specific antichoice material is not an undue burden, but that requiring her to notify her husband is an undue burden.

Mr. President, I believe that in its Casey decision, the Court not only abandoned its previous strict scrutiny standard; it abandoned American women as well. Under the 1973 Roe versus Wade decision, which I support, a woman's right to choose was considered a fundamental right to be protected under strict judicial scrutiny. Today that right has significantly less protection. In fact, the right of women to choose can be altered at whim. Today's Supreme Court has decided that a State's forcing a woman to notify her husband of her decision to have an abortion poses an undue burden on the woman's right to choose. What will tomorrow's Supreme Court decide? The lives of American women are now at the mercy of courts and State legislatures.

I support the Freedom of Choice Act because I believe that a woman has a fundamental right to make this most personal decision on her own. The Freedom of Choice Act would codify the Supreme Court's decision in Roe versus Wade. It would prevent States from restricting a woman's right to choose, and it would remove this important matter from an everchanging Supreme Court and State legislatures that can place obstacles in the way of women who choose to exercise their right to an abortion.

It is imperative that we pass S. 25 as soon as possible. As written, the Freedom of Choice Act codifies Roe versus Wade. It does nothing more. The bill would still allow States to restrict a woman's right to abortion after fetal viability except when the life of the mother is in danger, to impose medically necessary requirements on the performance of abortion procedures, to require the involvement of a parent or other responsible adult in a minor's abortion, and to protect individuals who oppose abortion from having to perform the procedure. The bill would not require States to fund abortions. The Freedom of Choice Act would allow States to regulate abortions but at the same time would assure that all American women have access to safe, legal abortions.

Before the Roe decision, each State was free to set its own abortion laws. Women with resources traveled to States with less restrictive laws, while women without resources often died. Poor women and young women who did not have access to safe, legal abortions often resorted to illegal or self-induced abortions. Most of today's young women cannot remember these tragic times. I fear that if the Freedom of Choice Act is not present, they will be forced to learn of this tragedy first hand.

Mr. President, in the interest of assuring that the women of this Nation have access to safe and legal abortions, I believe that we must pass the Freedom of Choice Act. I understand that some Americans oppose a woman's right to choose, and others would like to make changes to S. 25 before it is passed. I have heard from Ohioans who feel this way. While I certainly respect their views, I do not believe that the Government should prevent a woman from determining what is best for her life and her body. For this reason, I will fight to see that the Freedom of Choice Act, as introduced today, is enacted into law. Our Nation's women have struggled long and hard to gain their rights, and it is time that the Congress and the President act to ensure that the right of women to choose is not taken away by courts or politicians.

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I rise today to support the Freedom of Choice Act. Enactment of the Freedom of Choice Act is vitally important for the women of Michigan and America.

Recent Supreme Court decisions have eroded the constitutional rights expounded under Roe versus Wade. The weakening of that landmark ruling has encouraged and given rise to a crazy quilt of patchwork laws across the 50 States. States can now put up more road blocks for women choosing to have abortions prior to fetal viability. These road blocks continue to chip away at a woman's right to choose. In Michigan, the 2.2 million women of childbearing age are no longer protected from State government intrusion in this highly personal and difficult decision.

I strongly believe that the reproductive rights of American women should be the same regardless of which State they live in. That is why Congress must enact S. 25, the Freedom of Choice Act. The Freedom of Choice Act guarantees the essential protections provided for under the Roe versus Wade decision for a woman to choose to have an abortion before fetal viability.

A decision regarding abortion is deeply personal and I believe, is best made by the individual woman herself, guided by her own personal beliefs and convictions, in consultation with her doctor. This decision should be free from political interference. Enactment of the Freedom of Choice Act will keep the decision where it should be made, with the woman.

Mr. President, while I today ask my colleagues to enact legislation that will secure the reproductive rights for women across America, I also call upon President Clinton to take immediate administrative action to repeal the gag rule policy of restricting all federally funded health facilities that receive title X funding from discussing abortion as a medical option. I am pleased that President Clinton has indicated that one of his first acts as President will be to repeal the gag rule policy.

Over the years, this country, at the national, State, and local levels, and particularly through our court system, has continued to evaluate the issues surrounding abortion. In my years in Congress, I have consistently opposed legislative initiatives designed to limit the rights of individuals as defined by constitutional law. I am committed to supporting legislation to ensure that women have reproductive freedom in this country.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to cosponsor the Freedom of Choice Act which our distinguished majority leader is introducing today.

The Freedom of Choice Act will restore the full intent of Roe versus Wade and ensure, once and for all, that women have the right to choose. In Planned Parenthood versus Casey, the Supreme Court called this issue into question once again with its ruling empowering States with the right to impose new regulations on a woman seeking to terminate a pregnancy. It is critical that Congress act now and take the appropriate action before it is too late.

Currently, women are subject to the laws of their States. I am pleased that my home State of Connecticut recognizes a woman's right to choose. In 1990, the Connecticut General Assembly passed a law making the decision to terminate a pregnancy prior to fetal viability solely that of the pregnant women in consultation with her physician. Because nearly all abortions occur before viability, the law means that women in Connecticut will have the opportunity to make their own choices.

Unfortunately, this is not the case nationwide. States are now free to put up nearly insurmountable barriers for women seeking abortions. Mandatory 24-hour waiting periods, informed consent, and husband notice laws create onerous situations for many women. Without uniform regulations on the Federal level we are increasing the chances of forced pregnancies and illegal abortions that may result in life-threatening conditions.

Mr. President, the decision to have an abortion is a deeply private, personal, and often difficult matter—one that should not be decided by the courts. By stripping a woman of her right to choose we are denying her individual privacy. Roe versus Wade upholds that principle. In 1973, the Court ruled that the 14th amendment to the Constitution is broad enough to encompass a woman's decision whether or not to terminate her pregnancy. The Casey ruling indicates that the Court feels differently today.

For over 20 years we have been fighting to preserve women's choice. It is clear that we can no longer rely on the Courts to guarantee women their constitutional rights. For the past 12 years we have watched a concerted effort to stack the Court with individuals who have taken a strong position in opposition of the right to choose. As a result, the legislative branch must take a stand—one that is pro-choice and pro-women.

I am hopeful that the voice of millions of Americans demanding congressional action will be heard and that the Freedom of Choice Act will quickly become the law of the land. If passed, this legislation will safeguard a woman's privacy and codify the standards promised them by the U.S. Constitution. I urge my colleagues to support this vital and long overdue piece of legislation.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to be an original cosponsor of the Freedom of Choice Act, S. 25, a bill to codify the 1973 Roe versus Wade decision which annunciated as a matter of constitutional law a woman's right to choose relating to the question of abortion. Abortion is a personal matter. The decision relative to it should be made by the woman who has the opportunity to consult with those she trusts. It is an intimate, private decision which should be treated with caring concern and not the heavy hand of government.

We are here today because the basic fundamental right to choose has been under attack. The Supreme Court's Casey decision allows for restrictions under a weaker standard than Roe. The Casey decision reveals that the Court is only one vote away from completely overruling Roe. The Freedom of Choice Act would safeguard the right to choose as a matter of statutory right under the Roe standard, even if the Supreme Court overturns Roe, thereby striking down the constitutional right. The right to choose with the Roe standard for judging State restrictions could therefore be part of statutory law.

I have consistently believed in the privacy rights as detailed in Roe. That ruling answered the fundamental question, "Who decides?" and I agree with the Court's conclusion: "The woman, not the government."

I was a cosponsor of the revised Freedom of Choice Act in the 102d Congress because it included clarifying provisions concerning minors and States rights to legislate in that area. The legislation introduced today by Senator MITCHELL includes these provisions.

Specifically, the Freedom of Choice Act specifically states that the bill would not prevent States from requiring the involvement of a parent, guardian, or other responsible adult before a minor terminates a pregnancy. I had been concerned that the initial Freedom of Choice Act introduced in the 102d Congress could have been construed to prohibit States from enacting any adult involvement statutes.

I believe that teenage pregnancy is a serious problem. A minor who is pregnant needs and deserves the support and help of an adult who cares. However, not all teenagers can go to their parents for such guidance. Not every young woman has the gift of a supportive, understanding parent. This is why there needs to be a way to involve an adult before a minor decision, whether that adult is a family member of a counselor or other advisor. The purpose is not to make the decision for her, but for consultation that leads to an informed choice.

The Freedom of Choice Act also clarifies that it would not require States to fund the performance of abortions or require anyone who is opposed to abortions to participate in the provision of abortions. Further, it explicitly preserves the right of States to restrict abortion after fetal viability.

It is time to secure the fundamental right of choice as a matter of statute in the face of its uncertain future constitutional status.

• Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I am most pleased to again be an original cosponsor of the Freedom of Choice Act. No legislation before the 103d Congress is more critical or more timely.

The Supreme Court decision in Webster versus Reproductive Health Services in 1989 began the gradual sunseting of the most important constitutional right of women—the ability to control their own destinies by deciding whether and when to bear children. I would challenge those who would minimize the importance of choice to consider its impact on, for instance, a woman's education and job opportunities. While discrimination against a woman because of pregnancy or motherhood is illegal, there is no doubt that bearing and raising a child is a profound lifelong commitment, probably unequal in time and effort to any other type of endeavor. The ability to plan ones family is therefore crucial.

When the Freedom of Choice Act is taken up, we will probably see a slew of proposals which are presented as reasonable restrictions on the right to choose: waiting periods, so-called informed consent provisions requiring doctors to discourage women seeking abortions, and the like. I urge my colleagues to examine such proposals critically and ask, is this medically necessary to the health of the woman? Because anything less is not reasonable, but rather an attempt to place obstacles before women seeking abortions.

Mr. President, there is no bill I would be more pleased to have as part of the U.S. Code than the Freedom of Choice Act. During the bleak years before Roe my efforts to enact such legislation met with little support. In all the years since Roe, we have engaged in battle after battle to preserve it. I maintain a stubborn and persistent hope that we will bring this matter to a close, and will permanently guarantee reproductive rights to American women. Nineteen ninety-three would be a great year to do it.

• Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I am pleased to join as an original cosponsor of the Freedom of Choice Act. This is a very important piece of legislation that will protect the rights and privacy of American women.

Twenty years ago, the Supreme Court ruled in Roe versus Wade that States cannot restrict the right of a woman to terminate a pregnancy prior to fetal viability. In doing so, the Court established two basic constitutional principles: first, that a woman's right to terminate a pregnancy is a fundamental right; and second, that laws infringing on that right must be subjected to the most exacting judicial scrutiny. For nearly 17 years, that landmark decision permitted women to live secure in the knowledge that difficult and personal reproductive choices will be theirs to make.

But in 1989, the Supreme Court complicated the principles set forth in Roe when it issued its Webster versus Reproductive Health Care Services decision. The Webster decision presaged the beginning of the gradual erosion of this fundamental right. And since Webster there has been tremendous legislative activity at the State level to restrict choice, as well as another Supreme Court ruling—Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pennsylvania versus Casey, in which the Court upheld most of the provisions of the Pennsylvania Abortion Control Act by applying an undue burden test.

Congress must respond to these unsettling Supreme Court decisions that have chipped away at Roe by affirming its commitment to choice. The Freedom of Choice Act is such a response. Simply stated, the bill codifies the Supreme Court's decision in Roe versus Wade, guaranteeing a woman's right to choose to terminate a pregnancy as part of her constitutional right to privacy.

Women in America fought long and hard to attain this right. It is unconscionable to think that the government would take this basic right away, sending women back to fight State-by-State battles they have already won. Enactment of the Freedom of Choice Act will ensure that it does not.●

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I rise in support of the Freedom of Choice Act, and commend the distinguished majority leader, Senator MITCHELL, for all his hard work on this issue.

Women must be free to make their most personal and private decisions. Passage of the Freedom of Choice Act is critical to ensuring a woman's legal right to choose an abortion. This legislation would codify the Supreme Court's 1973 decision in Roe versus Wade which established that right.

Since 1989 the Supreme Court has backed away from protecting a woman's right to choose. The Webster case opened the door for States to enact new laws placing restrictions on a woman's right to choose. Then Pennsylvania versus Casey officially sanctioned those restrictions. And last week, the Court ruled in Bray versus Alexandria Women's Health Clinic, that health care clinic blockades set up by anti-abortion protectors do not discriminate against women. These rulings eliminate the essence of the Roe decision by establishing dangerous and insulting obstacles between women and the exercise of their fundamental rights.

Since American women can no longer rely on the Supreme Court to protect them, it is time to put Roe versus Wade into the Federal statutes and make it the law of the land. To do that, we must pass the Freedom of Choice Act.

I am proud to work with Senator MITCHELL and my colleagues in the Senate for quick passage of this important measure.

By Mr. DORGAN:

S. 26. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to end deferral for U.S. shareholders on income of controlled foreign corporations attributable to property imported into the United States; to the Committee on Finance.

AMERICAN JOBS AND MANUFACTURING
PRESERVATION ACT OF 1993

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I couldn't agree more with President Clinton on one point: We can no longer afford to ignore the adverse impact of misdirected U.S. tax policies which have contributed to a massive exodus of American businesses to foreign shores.

That is why I rise today to introduce the American Jobs and Manufacturing Preservation Act of 1993 to remove a perverse Federal tax incentive that persuades many of our finest U.S. companies to shut down manufacturing plants in the United States and to supply the U.S. markets from abroad.

Over the past decade, thousands of U.S. workers have lost jobs with domestic companies that have opened up operations abroad only to manufacture similar, if not identical, products for sale in the U.S. Domestic businesses that have remained to manufacture goods for sale in the U.S. market must unfairly compete with multinational companies who generally enjoy the lucrative benefit of U.S. tax deferral on foreign subsidiary income.

Specifically, my legislation removes this tax break for certain imported property income arising from runaway manufacturing plants that are controlled by a U.S. parent corporation. Identical legislation was passed by the House of Representatives in 1987, but was later dropped in conference.

It's patently unfair that our tax laws are permitted to shortchange both American workers and producers. We ought to rethink our tax code that pays some of our best and strongest companies to locate overseas. In 1992, the Joint Tax Committee estimated the tax deferral benefit provided to U.S. companies that set up shop in foreign tax havens—but manufacture for sale in the U.S. market—to be about $1.3 billion over 5 years. It is no wonder that U.S. companies leave to produce goods for U.S. consumption when we offer tax deferral that makes it more advantageous for them to operate abroad. This is especially true when foreign countries entice them with low tax rates or labor costs.

In this respect, the Federal tax code's deferral provisions fly in exactly the opposite direction of the incentives we ought to be providing. We ought to be encouraging U.S. companies to invest at home in the strength of this country—the American worker—by repealing the incentives for moving abroad. Yet, current tax policy only works to accelerate the exodus of domestic plants and jobs. That makes absolutely no sense.

This legislation will pull the plug on this U.S. tax deferral provision by imposing U.S. taxes currently on the income that arises from the activities of a U.S. controlled foreign plant operating in a tax haven, when it manufactures and sells a product to be used or consumed in the United States. Opponents to the legislation may claim that it will impede the ability of multinational companies to compete and grow in the global economy. However, that's simply not the case.

First, let's talk about the issue of competitive disadvantage. Imagine two competing companies on Mainstreet, USA manufacturing a product for sale in the U.S. market. Company A has a plant in the U.S. with American workers. It sells its product here at home, paying U.S. taxes currently on its sale proceeds. However, Company B decides to build a new plant in a foreign country because it can produce the same goods at a lower cost, using foreign workers who are frequently underpaid and overworked. Moreover, Company B pays almost no taxes in the foreign country and no taxes currently in the U.S. because it is entitled to tax deferral under our income tax laws. It seems to me that the U.S. company operating at home is really the one which is placed at a competitive disadvantage.

Second, the fact is that my bill does nothing to prevent U.S. multinationals from being competitive with foreign firms which produce goods for foreign markets. This legislation is carefully targeted to ensure that tax deferral is removed only for controlled foreign companies that supply our domestic markets from tax havens around the world.

Some folks have also raised a concern that the bill may be too difficult for the government to administer properly because it requires the tracking of goods. Let me be clear on this point. It is not my intention to set up a maze of complex rules in order to enforce this provision. But, the concept of tracking the destination of goods is not new to the code. Other existing tax benefits turn upon the flow and final destination of goods, and these provisions will provide helpful guidance to the Treasury Department in promulgating workable regulations. And I plan to work closely with the Treasury Department in order to craft rules that make sense in this area.

In conclusion, I think it is unfair that American workers—who have been the backbone of our Nation's economy—are losing thousands of jobs every year as companies shutdown U.S. operations to seek greater profits by supplying the U.S. market from overseas.

President Clinton believes that Congress must act quickly to both protect American jobs and prevent any further erosion of our domestic economic base. I agree. Many greedy companies may still choose to dislocate thousands of workers in America in search for greater profits abroad. But, at a minimum, we must stop participating in the outmigration of these businesses by refusing to pick up the tab for the move. I urge my colleagues to cosponsor this legislation to help protect America's economic future.

A detailed explanation of the bill follows.

The bill imposes current tax on U.S. shareholders of a controlled foreign corporation [CFC] to the extent of the corporation's imported property income. The bill also adds a new separate foreign tax credit limitation for imported property income, whether earned by a controlled foreign corporation or directly by a U.S. taxpayer.

Imported property income means income—whether in the form of profits, commissions, fees, or otherwise—derived in connection with manufacturing, producing, growing, or extracting imported property; the sale, exchange, or other disposition of imported property; or the lease, rental or licensing of imported property. Imported property income does not include any foreign oil and gas extraction income or any foreign oil-related income.

The bill defines "imported property" as property which is imported into the United States by the controlled foreign corporation or a related person. It also includes any property imported into the United States by an unrelated person if, when the property was sold to the unrelated person by the controlled foreign corporation—or a related person—it is reasonable to expect that the property would be imported into the United States or that the property would be used as a component in other property which would be imported into the United States. The Treasury Department would provide guidance concerning whether it is reasonable to expect that property sold to an unrelated person will be imported into the United States. Imported property does not include any property which is imported into the United States and which, before substantial use in the United States, is sold, leased, or rented by the controlled foreign corporation or a related person for direct use, consumption, or disposition outside the United States, or is used by the CFC or a related person as a component of other property which is sold, leased, or rented.

The term "import" means entering into, or withdrawal from the warehouse, for consumption or use. The term "import" for this purpose generally includes licensing or any grant to use marketing or manufacturing intangibles in the United States. For example, assume that a CFC produces a film in a foreign country. The CFC licenses that film to unrelated U.S. persons for viewing in the United States. Assume that the royalty payment is not subject to Subpart F under current tax law because it is derived in the conduct of an active trade or business and it is received from a person other than a related person. Under the bill, the income of the CFC that is attributable to the royalty is subject to current tax under Subpart F as imported property income; for foreign tax credit purposes, that subpart F inclusion is U.S. source income.

The term "import" doesn't include foreign currency, securities, or other financial instruments.

Under the look-through rules of the foreign tax credit limitation, interest, rents, and royalties from a CFC in which the recipient—or in certain cases, a related party—is a 10 percent owner are to be treated as imported property income to the extent properly allocable to imported property income of the CFC. Thus, foreign taxes imposed on other income could not offset U.S. tax on this income.

In the case of income that would be both foreign base company sales income and imported property income, that income is to be treated as imported property income.

In the application of subpart F to imported property income, various exceptions obtain. For example, assume that a CFC derives imported property income that is taxed by a foreign country at an effective rate greater than 90 percent of the maximum U.S. rate, and its U.S. shareholder elects the high tax kickout—section 954(b)(4)—from subpart F treatment. Subsequently, distributed dividends from the CFC will be treated as imported property income on a pro rata basis.

These provisions apply to taxable years for CFC's beginning after December 1992 and to U.S. shareholders within which such taxable years of such CFC's ends. In the case of imported property income earned by a U.S. person directly, the amendments apply to taxable years beginning after December 1992.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the entire text of the bill be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 26

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "American Jobs and Manufacturing Preservation Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. TAXATION OF INCOME OF CONTROLLED FOREIGN CORPORATIONS ATTRIBUTABLE TO IMPORTED PROPERTY.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Subsection (a) of section 954 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986

(defining foreign base company income) is amended by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (4), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting "and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) imported property income for the taxable year (determined under subsection (h) and reduced as provided in subsection (b)(5))."

(b) DEFINITION OF IMPORTED PROPERTY INCOME.—Section 954 of such Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) IMPORTED PROPERTY INCOME.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of subsection (a)(6), the term 'imported property income' means income (whether in the form of profits, commissions, fees, or otherwise) derived in connection with—

"(A) manufacturing, producing, growing, or extracting imported property,

"(B) the sale, exchange, or other disposition of imported property, or

"(C) the lease, rental, or licensing of imported property.

Such term shall not include any foreign oil and gas extraction income (within the meaning of section 907(c)) or any foreign oil related income (within the meaning of section 907(c)).

"(2) IMPORTED PROPERTY.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, the term 'imported property' means property which is imported into the United States by the controlled foreign corporation or a related person.

"(B) IMPORTED PROPERTY INCLUDES CERTAIN PROPERTY IMPORTED BY UNRELATED PERSONS.—The term 'imported property' includes any property imported into the United States by an unrelated person if, when such property was sold to the unrelated person by the controlled foreign corporation (or a related person), it was reasonable to expect that—

"(i) such property would be imported into the United States, or

"(ii) such property would be used as a component in other property which would be imported into the United States.

"(C) EXCEPTION FOR PROPERTY SUBSEQUENTLY EXPORTED.—The term 'imported property' does not include any property which is imported into the United States and which—

"(i) before substantial use in the United States, is sold, leased, or rented by the controlled foreign corporation or a related person for direct use, consumption, or disposition outside the United States, or

"(ii) is used by the controlled foreign corporation or a related person as a component in other property which is so sold, leased, or rented.

"(3) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—

"(A) IMPORT.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'import' means entering, or withdrawal from warehouse, for consumption or use. Such term includes any grant of the right to use an intangible (as defined in section 936(b)(3)(B)) in the United States.

"(B) UNRELATED PERSON.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'unrelated person' means any person who is not a related person with respect to the controlled foreign corporation.

"(C) COORDINATION WITH FOREIGN BASE COMPANY SALES INCOME.—For purposes of this section, the term 'foreign base company sales income' shall not include any imported property income."

(c) SEPARATE APPLICATION OF LIMITATIONS ON FOREIGN TAX CREDIT FOR IMPORTED PROPERTY INCOME.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (1) of section 904(d) of such Code (relating to separate application of section with respect to certain categories of income) is amended by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (H), by redesignating subparagraph (I) as subparagraph (J), and by inserting after subparagraph (H) the following new subparagraph:

"(I) imported property income, and".

(2) IMPORTED PROPERTY INCOME DEFINED.—Paragraph (2) of section 904(d) of such Code is amended by redesignating subparagraphs (H) and (I) as subparagraphs (I) and (J), respectively, and by inserting after subparagraph (G) the following new subparagraph:

"(H) IMPORTED PROPERTY INCOME.—The term 'imported property income' means any income received or accrued by any person which is of a kind which would be imported property income (as defined in section 954(h))."

(3) LOOK-THRU RULES TO APPLY.—Subparagraph (F) of section 904(d)(3) of such Code is amended by striking "or (E)" and inserting "(E), or (H)".

(d) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Clause (iii) of section 952(c)(1)(B) of such Code (relating to certain prior year deficits may be taken into account) is amended by inserting the following subclause after subclause (II) (and by redesignating the following subclauses accordingly):

"(III) imported property income,".

(2) Paragraph (5) of section 954(b) of such Code (relating to deductions to be taken into account) is amended by striking "and the foreign base company oil related income" and inserting "the foreign base company oil related income, and the imported property income".

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years of foreign corporations beginning after December 31, 1992, and to taxable years of United States shareholders within which or with which such taxable years of such foreign corporations end.

(2) SUBSECTION (c).—The amendments made by subsection (c) shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1992.

By Mr. SARBANES:

S. 27. A bill to authorize the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity to establish a memorial to Martin Luther King, Jr., in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

MEMORIAL TO MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR., IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

• Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, on January 18, 1993, we commemorated the 64th anniversary of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s birth. As a cosponsor of the legislation enacted in 1983 which authorized the national observance of the Martin Luther King, Jr., birthday holiday, I am very pleased to once again rise to recognize one of our Nation's greatest leaders in the ongoing struggle to achieve full equality for all our citizens.

The holiday we observed on Monday served to remind us of the importance of Martin Luther King, Jr.'s dream which he articulated so dramatically in August 1963, in the march on Washington speech at the Lincoln Memorial:

I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia, sons of former slaves and sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood. . . . I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character.

Twenty-five years after his death, we are still working toward the fruition of Dr. King's dreams. Our national celebration of Martin Luther King, Jr.'s birthday serves to pay tribute to a great leader and places us on record as rededicating ourselves to the principles of justice and equality which Dr. King's life so richly exemplified. In this regard, I am pleased to note that my State of Maryland has celebrated January 15, the actual birthday of Martin Luther King, Jr., as a legal holiday since 1974.

I am also pleased to rise today to reintroduce legislation to authorize Alpha Phi Alpha, the oldest African-American fraternity in the United States, to establish a monument to Martin Luther King, Jr., on Federal land in the District of Columbia. An identical bill passed the Senate in the 102d Congress with 60 cosponsors, but was unfortunately not passed by the House of Representatives before adjournment sine die.

Pursuant to this proposal, the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity of which Dr. King was a member, will coordinate the design and funding of the monument. The bill provides that the monument be established entirely with private contributions at no cost to the Federal Government. The Department of the Interior, in consultation with the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Commission on Fine Arts, will select the site and approve the design.

Alpha Phi Alpha was founded in 1906 at Cornell University and has hundreds of chapters across the country and many prominent citizens as members, including former Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall. Alpha Phi Alpha has strongly endorsed the Martin Luther King, Jr., memorial project and is committing its considerable human resources to the project's development.

Since 1955, when in Montgomery, AL, Dr. King became a national hero and an acknowledged leader in the civil rights struggle, until his tragic death in Memphis, TN in 1968, Martin Luther King, Jr., made an extraordinary contribution to the evolving history of our Nation. His courageous stands and unyielding belief in the tenet of non-violence reawakened our Nation to the injustice and discrimination which continued to exist 100 years after the Emancipation Proclamation and the enactment of the guarantees of the 14th and 15th amendments to the Constitution.

A memorial to Dr. King erected in the Nation's Capital will provide continuing inspiration to all who visit it, and particularly to the thousands of students and young people who visit Washington, DC, every year. While these young people may have no personal memory of the condition of civil rights in America before Dr. King, nor of the struggle in which he was the major figure, they do understand that there is much more that still needs to be done. As Coretta King said so articulately:

Young people in particular need nonviolent role models like him. In many ways, the civil rights movement was a youth movement. Young people of all races, many of whom were jailed, were involved in the struggle, and some gave their lives for the cause. Yet none of the youth trained by Martin and his associates retaliated in violence, including members of some of the toughest gangs of urban ghettos in cities like Chicago and Birmingham. This was a remarkable achievement. It has never been done before; it has not been duplicated since.

It is my hope that the young people who visit this monument will come to understand that it represents not only the enormous contribution of this great leader, but also two very basic principles necessary for the effective functioning of our society. The first is that change, even very fundamental change, is to be achieved through non-violent means; that this is the path down which we should go as a nation in resolving some of our most difficult problems. The other basic principle is that the reconciliation of the races, the inclusion into the mainstream of American life of all its people, is essential to the fundamental health of our Nation.

Mr. President, Martin Luther King, Jr., dedicated his life to achieving equal treatment and enfranchisement for all Americans through nonviolent means. I urge all of my colleagues to join me in this effort to ensure that the essential principles taught and practiced by Dr. King are never forgotten. •

By Mr. MCCAIN:

S. 28. A bill to improve the health of the Nation's children, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

CHILDREN'S HEALTH CARE IMPROVEMENT ACT
OF 1993

• Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Children's Health Care Improvement Act of 1993.

America is in the throes of a health care crisis, and most at risk are our children. The legislation I am introducing today directly addresses the problem of many American children lacking health care coverage.

While the quality of the American health care system is revered around the world, more than 37 million Americans have no health care coverage—nearly 10 million of whom are children. And, costs continue to go through the roof—with no apparent end in sight.

It was once said that the strength and energy of a society may be measured today and predicted for tomorrow by the health of its children. Applying such a measurement today would reveal that we are clearly a nation at risk.

The medical chart on the end of the health system's bed reveals some grim realities about our current health care system and children:

Nearly 10 million American children are without health care coverage, making up more than one-fourth of the uninsured;

There is a lack of access to primary and preventive care;

Many American children use the emergency room for their primary care because they lack insurance;

America's infant mortality rate exceeds that of every other industrialized country;

Twenty-four percent of pregnant women in America lack access to prenatal care;

And 20 to 30 percent of American children aged 2 and younger go without the necessary immunizations.

Without the excellent efforts of our Nation's Medicaid Programs, these statistics would be even more grim. Medicaid, however, is not able to address the whole problem.

The Children's Health Care Improvement Act of 1993 addresses the health care crisis facing our Nation's children head on. It will ensure access to coverage and bring down costs, while preserving quality and choice.

First, it would make a basic health insurance policy available to every child in our Nation's school systems.

In the same way the school lunch program has guaranteed that no child will go without a nutritious lunch, this legislation would guarantee that no child has to go without health insurance.

In Arizona, Blue Cross and Blue Shield has developed a policy that could serve as a model for this program. There are also managed care plans that could serve as models.

Second, it would expand the excellent Community and Migrant Health Center Program which provides ready access to primary and preventive care for lower income Americans, and those residing in underserved areas. In Arizona, last year this excellent program accommodated nearly 700,000 patient visits—many of them children.

Third, to make sure all of our Nation's children are immunized, it would increase funding for the critical Childhood Immunization Program.

Fourth, to reach out and serve the needs of mothers and/or children at high-risk for abuse and neglect, this legislation would provide funding to assist States in establishing a program to track at-risk children and pregnant women to ensure they are receiving the care and assistance they need.

And, fifth, it will eliminate needless bureaucracy by permitting States to combine the application and eligibility process for Medicaid, WIC, and Maternal and Child Health Programs. Together, these programs serve the nutritional, health screening, and basic health services needs of many low-income expectant mothers and children. As currently configured in most States, needy women and children face barriers to service because these programs usually operate independent of one another.

Together with a provision prohibiting discrimination based on preexisting conditions, and reform of the small employer insurance marketplace, which will be contained in other pieces of my health reform package to be introduced in the coming weeks, and part of which was reported out of the Finance Committee last year, this initiative will ensure that all of our Nation's children have access to health coverage.

One area not covered by this initiative is that of school nurses. As the Flynn Foundation put it, in a recent report on the health status of Arizona's children, school nurses are the Mash unit of health care for children. So right they are. Currently, the Arizona Medical Association and the Arizona Nurses Association are working jointly on a project to expand the role and presence of school nurses. I look forward to working with them and supporting their efforts.

Does the initiative I am introducing today cost money? Sure it does. But, so, too, does sending a child to the emergency room for nontrauma cases, overusing the neonatal care wards due to a lack of adequate prenatal care, and the like. If adopted, this legislation will actually end up reducing costs and ultimately holding costs in check by giving all children access to primary and preventive care.

For example, we know that every dollar spent on prenatal care saves $3 in the child's first year of life. Every dollar spent on immunizations saves $10 to $14 by reducing illness, disease, and death. Poor children who have comprehensive primary and preventive care have been shown to have annual health costs 10 percent lower than those children who did not receive such care. We will save a great deal of money by delivering basic care outside of the emergency room.

Addressing this aspect of our health care crisis is a national imperative. The current situation just cannot continue. It is my hope that as we pursue health reform in the 103d Congress, this legislation will receive serious consideration so that we will no longer risk sacrificing the future of this great country because of inadequate health care for our children. Under this initiative, all of our children will have access to health coverage. Our new President has indicated that addressing the needs of children will be among his highest priorities. I applaud him for this commitment, and would hope that he and his staff would consider this legislation as they study how best to address the health care coverage needs of our Nation's children.

Mr. President, I encourage my colleagues to review this legislation and consider joining me as a cosponsor. I look forward to continuing to work with all of my colleagues as we grapple with how best to address the critical problem of 10 million children who lack health care coverage.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the Children's Health Care Improvement Act of 1993 be printed in the RECORD immediately following my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 28

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Children's Health Care Improvement Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) America's children represent the hope and future of our country, and are a resource we cannot afford to squander;

(2) Americans under 18 represent one-fourth of those without health insurance, with nearly 9.8 million children completely uninsured;

(3) uninsured children are less likely to see a doctor for preventive or basic care and more likely to visit the more expensive emergency room setting for care when they become ill;

(4) uninsured children are more likely to miss school and may not learn as effectively as insured children;

(5) elementary and secondary schools provide a large applicant pool for insurance, much like that of a university, permitting children to join with their peers in purchasing insurance will result in lower rates;

(6) the WIC, Medicaid and Maternal and Child Health block grant programs each provide critical services to low income mothers and children, but barriers to services exist due to the fact that in most States these programs have individual eligibility processes;

(7) routine immunization of children against common disease is cost effective and an effective measure against disease proliferation;

(8) migrant and community health centers are a critical link to preventive and primary health care services, and there is a need for expansion of this critical program; and

(9) early identification and monitoring of those children and mothers at risk of abuse or neglect to ensure that they have access to health and social services is cost effective.

TITLE I—SCHOOL-BASED HEALTH INSURANCE

SEC. 101. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Education, in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, shall establish a program under which local educational agencies (as such term is defined in section 1471(12) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965) shall offer basic health insurance coverage to eligible students in such schools.

(b) REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) APPLICABILITY.—The provisions of this section shall apply to each local education agency that receives Federal educational assistance.

(2) STATE EDUCATION DEPARTMENTS.—

(A) POLICIES.—The department of education for a State shall determine the types of health insurance policies that should be offered under this section by local education agencies of such State. In making such determination, the department shall ensure that coverage under a fee-for-service plan and a managed care plan is available to the local educational agencies in the State.

(B) ANNUAL REPORTS.—The department of education for a State shall annually prepare and submit to the Secretary of Education a report that describes the health insurance policies offered under this section in the public schools in such State.

(3) HEALTH INSURANCE COVERAGE.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services, shall determine the minimum requirements that any health insurance plan offered under this section must meet, including—

(A) the primary, preventative, medical, emergency and surgical care services and benefits to be covered under such plan; and

(B) any other matter determined appropriate by such Secretary.

(4) LOCAL ADMINISTRATION.—The department of education for a State shall administer the requirements of this section through the local educational agencies.

(C) ELIGIBLE STUDENTS.—To be eligible to be covered under a health insurance plan offered by a local educational agency, an individual shall—

(1) not be more than 18 years of age and reside in the school district;

(2) be uninsured for a period of not less than 6 months prior to the date on which coverage under the plan offered by such school would commence;

(3) not be covered or enrolled under title XIX of the Social Security Act or under any other public health insurance program; and

(4) meet any other requirements determined appropriate by the State department of education or the Secretary of Education.

(D) ENFORCEMENT.—If the Secretary determines that a local educational agency is not in compliance with the requirements of this section, the Secretary may withhold, or request a remittance, of not to exceed 10 percent of the total amount of Federal educational assistance to be made available, or previously made available, to such local educational agency for the fiscal year during which such noncompliance is occurring.

(F) CONSTRUCTION.—This section shall not be construed as requiring the purchase of policies under this section.

(G) ADMINISTRATIVE SUPPORT.—The Secretary may provide assistance to local educational agencies to assist such agencies in off-setting the additional administrative costs to such agencies in complying with this section.

(H) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Education shall promulgate regulations necessary to carry out this section.

SEC. 102. REFUNDABLE TAX CREDIT FOR CHILDREN'S HEALTH INSURANCE EXPENSES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subpart C of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to refundable personal credits) is amended by inserting after section 34 the following new section:

"SEC. 34A. CHILDREN'S HEALTH INSURANCE EXPENSES.

"(a) ALLOWANCE OF CREDIT.—In the case of an individual, there shall be allowed as a credit against the tax imposed by this subtitle for the taxable year an amount equal to the qualified health insurance expenses paid by such individual during the taxable year.

"(b) QUALIFIED HEALTH INSURANCE EXPENSES.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified health insurance expenses' means amounts paid during the taxable year for medical care (within the meaning of section 213(d)(1)(C)) with respect to insurance policies issued pursuant to any program approved under section 101 of the Children's Health Care Improvement Act. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the rules of section 213(d)(6) shall apply.

"(2) DOLLAR LIMIT ON QUALIFIED HEALTH INSURANCE EXPENSES.—The amount of the qualified health insurance expenses paid during any taxable year which may be taken into account under subsection (a) shall not exceed $1,000 per qualifying child adjusted under regulations promulgated by the Secretary to reflect any increase in the consumer price index.

"(3) PHASEOUT.—In the case of any taxpayer whose adjusted gross income exceeds 100 percent of the income official poverty line (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget, and revised annually in accordance with section 673(2) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981) applicable to a family of the size involved, the dollar amount under paragraph (2) shall be reduced (but not below zero) by the percentage by which such income exceeds such poverty line.

"(4) ELECTION NOT TO TAKE CREDIT.—A taxpayer may elect for any taxable year to have amounts described in paragraph (1) not treated as qualified health insurance expenses.

"(5) COORDINATION WITH HEALTH INSURANCE PREMIUM CREDIT.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any amount taken into account in computing the amount of the credit allowed under section 32.

"(6) SUBSIDIZED EXPENSES.—No expense shall be treated as a qualified health insurance expense if—

"(A) such expense is paid, reimbursed, or subsidized (whether by being disregarded for purposes of another program or otherwise) by the Federal Government, a State or local government, or any agency or instrumentality thereof under title XIX of the Social Security Act; and

"(B) the payment, reimbursement, or subsidy of such expense is not includible in the gross income of the recipient.

"(c) QUALIFYING CHILD.—For purposes of this section, the term 'qualifying child' has the meaning given to such term by section 32(c)(3) (determined without regard to subparagraph (A)(iii)).

"(d) COORDINATION WITH ADVANCE PAYMENTS OF CREDIT.—

"(1) RECAPTURE OF EXCESS ADVANCE PAYMENTS.—If any payment in excess of the amount of the credit allowable under this section is made to the individual under 7524 during any calendar year, then the tax imposed by this chapter for the individual's last taxable year beginning in such calendar year shall be increased by the aggregate amount of such payments.

"(2) RECONCILIATION OF PAYMENTS ADVANCED AND CREDIT ALLOWED.—Any increase in tax under paragraph (1) shall not be treated as tax imposed by this chapter for purposes of determining the amount of any credit (other than the credit allowed by subsection (a)) allowable under this subpart.

"(f) REDUCTION OF CREDIT TO TAXPAYERS SUBJECT TO ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAX.—

The credit allowed under this section for the taxable year shall be reduced by the amount of tax imposed by section 55 (relating to alternative minimum tax) with respect to such taxpayer for such taxable year.

"(d) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this section."

(b) ADVANCE PAYMENT OF CREDIT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 77 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to miscellaneous provisions) is amended by inserting after section 7523 the following new section:

"SEC. 7524. ADVANCE PAYMENT OF CREDIT FOR CHILDREN'S HEALTH INSURANCE EXPENSES.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall make advance payments of refunds to which eligible taxpayers are entitled by reason of section 34A.

"(b) ELIGIBLE TAXPAYER.—For purposes of this section, the term 'eligible taxpayer' means, with respect to any taxable year, any taxpayer if the taxpayer furnishes, at such time and in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe, to the Secretary such information as the Secretary may require in order to—

"(1) determine if the individual will be eligible to receive the credit provided by section 34A for the taxable year, and

"(2) estimate the amount of qualified health insurance expenses (as defined in section 34A(b)) for the calendar year.

"(c) PAYMENTS.—The Secretary shall make payment of the amount determined under subsection (b)(2) upon receipt of the information described in subsection (b).

"(d) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this section."

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 213 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to deduction for medical, dental, etc., expenses) is amended by adding the following new subsection:

"(g) COORDINATION WITH HEALTH INSURANCE EXPENSES CREDIT UNDER SECTION 34A.—The amount otherwise taken into account under subsection (a) as expenses paid for medical care shall be reduced by the amount (if any) of the children's health insurance expenses credit allowable to the taxpayer for the taxable year under section 34A."

(d) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—Paragraph (2) of section 1324(b) of title 31, United States Code, is amended by inserting before the period "or from section 34A of such Code".

(e) CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) The table of sections for subpart A of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 34 the following new item:

"Sec. 34A. Children's health insurance expenses."

(2) The table of sections for chapter 77 of such Code is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 7523 the following new item:

"Sec. 7524. Advance payment of credit for children's health insurance expenses."

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1992.

TITLE II—WIC PROGRAM, MATERNAL AND CHILD HEALTH SERVICES BLOCK GRANT PROGRAM, AND MEDICAID

SEC. 201. DEVELOPMENT OF UNIFORM APPLICATION FORM AND PROCESS.

(a) UNIFORM MODEL APPLICATION FORM AND PROCESS.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereafter referred to in this title as the "Secretary"), working in consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, shall develop a single model uniform application form and process to be utilized in applying for and obtaining benefits under the Special Supplemental Food Program under section 17 of the Child Nutrition Act of 1966 (42 U.S.C. 1786), the Maternal and Child Health Services Block Grant Program under title V of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 701 et seq.), and the Medicaid program under title XIX of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396 et seq.). The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall provide any waivers necessary to carry out this section.

(b) AVAILABILITY OF FORM AND PROCESS.—The single model uniform application form and process shall be made available to States electing to adopt such form and process for use in applying for and obtaining benefits under such programs.

(c) OUTREACH PROGRAM.—The Secretary, working in consultation with the Secretary of Agriculture, shall provide an outreach program for States electing to adopt the single model uniform application form and process. The outreach program shall be designed to inform recipients and potential recipients of benefits under the Special Supplemental Food Program under section 17 of the Child Nutrition Act of 1966 (42 U.S.C. 1786), the Maternal and Child Health Services Block Grant Program under title V of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 701 et seq.), and the Medicaid program under title XIX of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396 et seq.) of the option to apply for benefits under those programs using the single model uniform application form and process.

SEC. 202. DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall make grants to not more than five States to enable such States to conduct demonstration projects for the purpose of encouraging women to obtain prenatal and well-baby care under the Special Supplemental Food Program under section 17 of the Child Nutrition Act of 1966 (42 U.S.C. 1786), the Maternal and Child Health Services Block Grant Program under title V of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 701 et seq.), and the Medicaid program under title XIX of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396 et seq.).

(b) APPLICATION.—

(1) SUBMISSION OF APPLICATION.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section a State shall prepare and submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such form, and containing such information as the Secretary may require.

(2) REVIEW AND APPROVAL OF APPLICATION.—The Secretary shall review and approve each application submitted pursuant to paragraph (1) in accordance with such criteria as the Secretary finds appropriate.

(c) AMOUNT OF GRANT.—The amount of a grant to a State under this section shall be an amount that the Secretary finds reasonable and necessary for the development and implementation of the State's demonstration program.

SEC. 203. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this title.

TITLE III—EXPANSION OF MIGRANT AND COMMUNITY HEALTH CENTER PROGRAM

SEC. 301. EXPANSION OF MIGRANT AND COMMUNITY HEALTH CENTER PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated, $250,000,000 to enable the Secretary of Health and Human Services to award grants for the planning and development of additional migrant and community health centers under sections 329 and 330 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 254b and 254c) in medically underserved areas or areas in which there is a high concentration of medically underserved populations.

(b) FUNDING FOR OPERATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated, $290,000,000 in each fiscal year to enable the Secretary of Health and Human Services to provide operational assistance to migrant and community health centers developed under subsection (a).

TITLE IV—REVISION OF NATIONAL HEALTH SERVICE CORPS PRIORITIES

SEC. 401. MISSION OF THE CORPS.

Section 331(a) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 254d(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) It shall be a principal mission of the National Health Service Corps to increase the access to primary health care services of urban and inner-city poverty stricken target populations (particularly infants and children), rural residents, high-risk pregnant women, migrant workers and their families, substance abusers, and homeless individuals."

SEC. 402. PRIMARY CARE PHYSICIAN STRATEGY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subpart II of part D of title III of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 254d et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 335, the following new section: "SEC. 335A. PRIMARY CARE PHYSICIAN STRATEGY."

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF STRATEGY.—The Secretary shall develop and implement, using amounts appropriated under section 338(c), a strategy to provide incentives to encourage primary care physicians to serve—

"(1) in migrant or community health centers or in related health programs; or

"(2) in medically underserved inner-city and rural areas.

"(b) REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary shall ensure that the strategy developed under subsection (a) requires the implementation of at least one of the programs described in paragraph (1) or (2) through the National Health Service Corps program.

"(1) RECRUITMENT PROGRAM.—Under the strategy developed under subsection (a), the Secretary shall establish a program under the National Health Service Corps to recruit individuals from medically underserved areas to serve as Corps members in the areas from which such individuals were recruited.

"(2) CONTINUED SERVICE PROGRAM.—Under the strategy developed under subsection (a), the Secretary shall establish a program under the National Health Service Corps to encourage Corps members to continue to serve in medically underserved areas after such individuals have discharged their service obligations to the Corps. In determining the method by which to encourage such individuals to continue such service, the Secretary shall evaluate the desirability of providing incentives for such individuals to start a private medical practice or join medical groups, hospitals, and health care systems operating in, or within a reasonable distance from, such medically underserved areas."

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 338 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 254K) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out section 335A, $100,000,000 for each fiscal year."

TITLE V—CHILDHOOD IMMUNIZATIONS

SEC. 501. INCREASE IN AUTHORIZATION FOR CHILDHOOD IMMUNIZATIONS.

Section 317(j)(1)(B) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247b(j)(1)(b)) is amended by striking out "such sums as may be necessary" and inserting in lieu thereof "$240,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1993 through 1997".

TITLE VI—CHILDREN AT RISK

SEC. 601. ESTABLISHMENT OF HEALTHY START DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall establish a demonstration program to award grants to five States to enable such States to implement healthy start programs that would track mothers and children at high-risk of abuse and neglect, and at risk of not receiving necessary services and care and enable such services to be obtained.

(b) ELIGIBILITY.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section a State shall prepare and submit to the Secretary of Health and Human Services an application at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require, including a description of the program to be implemented in the State with amounts received under the grant.

(c) PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS.—In implementing a healthy start program with amounts received under this section, a State shall distribute funds through the State department of health to community health centers or other community social service programs that agree to perform identification and monitoring activities with respect to at risk children.

(2) IDENTIFICATION AND TRACKING SERVICES.—In implementing a healthy start program with amounts received under this section, the department of health of a State shall develop and implement, either directly or through agreements with entities of the type described in paragraph (1), procedures to identify and track infants born in target areas designated by such department as areas in which children are more likely to be subject to abuse or neglect.

(3) INFORMATION.—In implementing a healthy start program with amounts received under this section, a State shall require that caseworkers providing services under such program to mothers provide such mothers with information concerning services or assistance available under the Special Supplemental Food Program under section 17 of the Child Nutrition Act of 1966, the Food Stamp Act of 1977, titles V and XIX of the Social Security Act and section 8 of the United States Housing Act of 1937.

(d) MODEL SCREENING PROGRAM.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall develop and implement, in States that receive assistance under this section, a screening program to identify children determined to be at risk of being subject to abuse or neglect.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

By Mr. MCCAIN:

S. 29. A bill to fully apply the rights and protections of Federal law to employment by Congress; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

OMNIBUS CONGRESSIONAL COMPLIANCE ACT OF 1993

• Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Omnibus Congressional Compliance Act of 1993. This legislation, which is long overdue, will apply to the Congress all the measures that the Congress believes worthy enough to pass into law for the remainder of society.

Mr. President, there is no excuse for the laws that govern our society not being applied to the Congress.

Mr. President, this bill will apply the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Americans With Disabilities Act, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, the National Labor Relations Act, the Fair Labor Standards Act, the Equal Pay Act of 1963, the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, the Freedom of Information Act, and the Privacy Act to the Congress in the same manner that these laws apply to the general public. Additionally, this bill applies these laws to Presidential appointees.

In the past, the Senate and the House have taken only token steps in this area. This legislation builds on the steps of the past but goes much further. The Omnibus Congressional Compliance Act of 1993 will fully apply these laws to the Congress, including allowing for enforcement of actions in court and compensatory and punitive damages to be awarded to aggrieved parties.

In recent years, during debate on this subject, I have heard many knowledgeable individuals argue, for this or that high-minded reason, for this or that political purpose, for this or that security reason, that the laws we pass should not be fully applicable to the Congress. The time for such debate is over. The public has demanded action. The public will no longer be duped by eloquent rhetoric. We must apply the laws of our country, fully and completely, to the Congress.

Mr. President, the Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1776, states:

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness.

That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.—

The words and the intent of our Founding Fathers is clear: We are a Congress of, by, and for the people. We are a Congress which derives its powers from the people. By exempting the Congress from our Nation's laws, we are allowing the existence of a royal Congress, separate and above the people.

Mr. President, such royal trappings are wrong. In 1776, royal arrogance and separation led the Founding Fathers to revolt. Some of the incumbents who lost their last election may say a new revolt has already begun.

Our new President has stated:

We cannot put people first and create jobs and economic growth without a revolution in government. We must take away power from entrenched bureaucracies and special interests that dominate Washington.

I wholeheartedly agree with our President, and I trust he will agree with me that we must apply the laws to Congress. Additionally, Mr. President, this legislation will apply all the laws to Presidential appointees. President Clinton has said he would hold his employees to the highest standards. I know he will support efforts to ensure that his appointees also live by all the laws of our great country.

Thomas Jefferson noted:

The basis of our Government being the opinion of the people, the very first object should be to keep that right.

I am dismayed to see that we have not kept sacred these words. My purpose is to remind my colleagues of the perception of hypocrisy that informs the public's judgment of our actions here, and of their dismay with how we are doing our jobs. We will not engender much public respect if we persist in legally committing the public to standards for a just society, from which we, the Congress, are excused.

Mr. President, it is time we remedied this situation.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of Omnibus Congressional Compliance Act of 1993 appear in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 29

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Omnibus Congressional Compliance Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. COVERAGE OF CONGRESS.

(a) CONGRESSIONAL EMPLOYMENT.—

(1) APPLICATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The rights and protections provided pursuant to the provisions specified in subparagraph (B) shall apply with respect to employment by Congress.

(B) PROVISIONS.—The provisions that shall apply with respect to employment by Congress shall be—

(i) the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000a et seq.);

(ii) the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12101 et seq.);

(iii) the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (29 U.S.C. 621 et seq.);

(iv) the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 701 et seq.);

(v) section 1977 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1981);

(vi) section 1977A of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1981a);

(vii) the National Labor Relations Act (29 U.S.C. 151 et seq.);

(viii) the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 201 et seq.);

(ix) the Equal Pay Act of 1963 (29 U.S.C. 206); and

(x) the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 (29 U.S.C. 651 et seq.).

(2) ENFORCEMENT BY ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—

(i) RIGHT TO BRING ACTION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and subject to the limitations contained in this paragraph, a congressional employee or any person, including a class or organization on behalf of a congressional employee, may bring an administrative action to enforce a provision of law referred to in paragraph (1) against the House of Representatives or the Senate, as appropriate, or the congressional employer of the employee, if a similarly situated complaining party may bring such an action before an Executive agency, as defined in section 105 of title 5, United States Code.

(ii) ENTITY.—Such an action may be brought, as appropriate—

(I) in the case of an employee of the House of Representatives, before a hearing panel of the Office of Fair Employment Practices of the House of Representatives, the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, or such other entity as the House of Representatives may designate;

(II) in the case of an employee of the Senate, before a hearing panel of the Office of Senate Fair Employment Practices, the Select Committee on Ethics of the Senate, or such other entity as the Senate may designate; or

(III) in the case of an employee of an instrumentality of the Congress, before such hearing panel or other entity as the instrumentality may designate.

(B) LIMITATIONS ON COMMENCEMENT OF ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION.—Except as provided in subparagraphs (D) and (E), an administrative action commenced under this paragraph to enforce a provision of law referred to in paragraph (1) shall be commenced in accordance with the limitations, exhaustion, and other procedural requirements of the law otherwise applicable to a similarly situated complaining party seeking to enforce the provision.

(C) ACTION.—Except as provided in subparagraphs (D) and (E), in any administrative action brought before a panel, committee, or entity designated in subparagraph (A) to enforce a provision of law referred to in paragraph (1), the panel, committee, or entity may take such action against the House of Representatives or the Senate, as appropriate, or the congressional employer as the agency could take in an action brought by a similarly situated complaining party.

(D) CIVIL RIGHTS VIOLATIONS.—

(i) HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.—The provisions of clauses 3, 5 through 8, 10 through 12, 14, and 15, of Rule LI of the Rules of the House of Representatives of the One Hundred Third Congress, shall—

(I) apply with respect to an allegation of a violation of a provision of Federal law specified in any of clauses (i) through (vi), of section 2(a)(1)(B), with respect to employment by the House of Representative of an employee of the House of Representatives; and

(II) apply to such an allegation in the same manner and to the same extent as such sections of such rule apply with respect to an allegation of a violation under such rule.

(ii) SENATE.—The provisions of sections 304 through 308, 310 through 313, and 316, of the Government Employee Rights Act of 1991 (2 U.S.C. 1204-1208, 1210-1213, and 1215) shall—

(I) apply with respect to an allegation of a violation of a provision of Federal law specified in any of clauses (i) through (vi) of section 2(a)(1)(B), with respect to Senate employment of a Senate employee; and

(II) apply to such an allegation in the same manner and to the same extent as such sections of the Government Employee Rights Act of 1991 apply with respect to an allegation of a violation under such Act.

(E) LABOR VIOLATIONS.—The provisions of clauses 1, 3, 5 through 8, 10 through 12, 14, and 15, of Rule LI of the Rules of the House of Representatives of the One Hundred Third Congress, shall—

(i) apply with respect to an allegation of a violation of a provision of Federal law specified in section 2(a)(1)(B)(viii), with respect to employment by the House of Representative of an employee of the House of Representatives; and

(ii) apply to such an allegation in the same manner and to the same extent as such clauses of such rule apply with respect to an allegation of a violation under such rule.

(3) ENFORCEMENT BY CIVIL ACTION.—

(A) CIVIL RIGHTS VIOLATIONS.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—Within 30 days of receipt of the decision or order of a hearing panel described in section 2(a)(2)(A)(ii), or of a committee, instrumentality, or entity described in such section on an appeal from such a decision or order, on a complaint of a violation of a provision of Federal law specified in any of clauses (i) through (vi) of section 2(a)(1)(B) brought pursuant to this Act, or after 180 days from the filing of such a complaint with an Office or instrumentality described in section 2(a)(2)(A)(ii) or the notice of appeal with a committee, instrumentality, or entity described in such section on an appeal from a decision or order of such hearing panel until such time as final action may be taken by the hearing panel, instrumentality, committee, or entity, a congressional employee, if aggrieved by the final disposition of the complaint of the employee, or by the failure to take final action on the complaint, may file a civil action as provided in section 706 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000e-5), in which civil action the Senate, the House of Representatives, or the congressional employer of the employee shall be the defendant.

(ii) PROCEDURES.—The provisions of paragraphs (3) through (5) of subsection (f), and subsections (g) through (k), of section 706 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000e-5 (f) (3)-(5), and (g)-(k)), as applicable, shall govern civil actions brought to enforce a provision of Federal law specified in any of clauses (i) through (vi) of section 2(a)(1)(B). The remedies and right to a jury trial made available to complaining parties under section 1977 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1981a) shall be equally available to any congressional employee bringing such a civil action.

(iii) PUNITIVE DAMAGES.—Notwithstanding any other provision of Federal law, in such a civil action a congressional employee may be awarded punitive damages on the same terms and conditions as such damages may be awarded to an aggrieved individual who is a nongovernmental complaining party.

(B) OTHER VIOLATIONS.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and subject to the limitations contained in this subparagraph, a congressional employee or any person, including a class or organization on behalf of a congressional employee, may bring a civil action to enforce a provision of Federal law specified in any of clauses (vii) through (x) of section 2(a)(1)(B) in a court specified in clause (iii) against the House of Representatives or Senate, as appropriate, or the congressional employer of the employee, if a similarly situated complaining party may bring such an action.

(ii) LIMITATIONS ON COMMENCEMENT OF CIVIL ACTION.—A civil action commenced under this subparagraph to enforce such a provision of Federal law shall be commenced in accordance with the limitations, exhaustion, and other procedural requirements of the law otherwise applicable to a similarly situated complaining party seeking to enforce the provision.

(iii) VENUE.—An action may be brought under this subparagraph to enforce such a provision of Federal law in any court of competent jurisdiction in which a similarly situated complaining party may otherwise bring an action to enforce the provision.

(iv) RELIEF.—In any civil action brought under this subparagraph to enforce such a provision of Federal law, the court—

(I) may grant as relief against the House of Representatives or the Senate, as appropriate, or the congressional employer any equitable relief otherwise available to a similarly situated complaining party bringing an action to enforce the provision;

(II) may grant as relief against the House of Representatives or the Senate, as appropriate, or the congressional employer any damages that would otherwise be available to such a complaining party; and

(III) shall allow such fees and costs as would be allowed in such an action.

(4) PAYMENTS BY THE PRESIDENT OR A MEMBER.—The President, a Member of the House of Representatives, or a Member of the Senate shall reimburse the appropriate Federal account for any payment made on the behalf of the President or Member out of such account for a violation of a provision of Federal law specified in section 2(a)(1)(B) by the President or Member, not later than 60 days after the payment is made.

(b) CONDUCT REGARDING MATTERS OTHER THAN EMPLOYMENT.—

(1) APPLICATION.—In accordance with section 509(a)(2) of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12209(a)(2)) the rights and protections provided pursuant to such Act shall apply with respect to the conduct of Congress regarding matters other than employment.

(2) ENFORCEMENT.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any person may bring an administrative action described in subsection (a)(2) in accordance with subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of such subsection, or a civil action described in subsection (a)(3)(B) in accordance with such subsection, against the House of Representatives or the Senate, as appropriate, or a congressional employer, to enforce paragraph (1).

(c) INFORMATION.—

(1) APPLICATION.—The rights and protections provided pursuant to section 552 of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the "Freedom of Information Act") and section 552a of title 5, United States Code (commonly known as the "Privacy Act of 1974") shall apply with respect to information in the possession of the Congress.

(2) ENFORCEMENT.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any person may bring an administrative action described in subsection (a)(2) in accordance with subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of such subsection, or a civil action described in subsection (a)(3)(B) in accordance with such subsection, against the House of Representatives or the Senate, as appropriate, or the congressional employer in possession of the information, to enforce paragraph (1).

(d) ETHICS IN GOVERNMENT.—

(1) APPLICATION.—The rights and protections provided pursuant to chapter 40 of title 28, United States Code (commonly known as title VI of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978) shall apply with respect to investigation of congressional improprieties.

(2) ENFORCEMENT.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any person may bring a civil action described in subsection (a)(3)(B) in accordance with such subsection against any party with a duty under chapter 40 of title 28, to enforce paragraph (1).

(e) PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTEES.—

(1) APPLICATION.—The rights and protections provided pursuant to the provisions described in subsections (a)(1), (b)(1), (c)(1), and (d)(1), shall apply with respect to employment of Presidential appointees.

(2) ENFORCEMENT.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a Presidential appointee or any person, including a class or organization on behalf of a Presidential appointee, may bring an administrative action before an Executive agency in accordance with subparagraphs (A)(i), (B), and (C) of subsection (a)(2), or a civil action described in subsection (a)(3)(B) in accordance with such subsection, against the United States to enforce paragraph (1), if a similarly situated complaining party may bring such an administrative or civil action.

(f) OTHER ENFORCEMENT.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no congressional employee or Presidential appointee may commence a proceeding or action to enforce a provision of Federal law specified in subsection (a)(1), (b)(1), (c)(1), or (d)(1), except as provided in this section.

(g) ADMINISTRATION.—

(1) SENATE.—The Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate shall issue such requirements as the Committee may determine to be appropriate to effectuate the application of the rights, protections, and requirements described in subsections (a) through (d) to the Senate.

(2) HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.—The Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives shall issue such requirements as the Committee may determine to be appropriate to effectuate the application of the rights, protections, and requirements described in subsections (a) through (d) to the House of Representatives.

(3) INSTRUMENTALITIES.—Each congressional employer described in subsection (i)(1)(C) shall issue such requirements as the Committee may determine to be appropriate to effectuate the application of the rights, protections, and requirements described in subsections (a) through (d) to the employees of the employer.

(h) ALTERNATIVE MEANS OF DISPUTE RESOLUTION.—Where appropriate and to the extent authorized by law, the use of alternative means of dispute resolution, including settlement negotiations, conciliation, facilitation, mediation, factfinding, minitrials, and arbitration, is encouraged to resolve complaints arising under a provision of Federal law specified in subsection (a)(1), (b)(1), (c)(1), or (d)(1).

(i) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

(1) CONGRESSIONAL EMPLOYER.—The term "congressional employer" means—

(A) a supervisor, as described in paragraph 12 of rule XXXVII of the Standing Rules of the Senate;

(B) a Member of the House of Representatives, with respect to the administrative, clerical, or other assistants of the Member;

(ii)(I) a Member who is the chairman of a committee, with respect, except as provided in subclause (II), to the professional, clerical, or other assistants to the committee; and

(II) the ranking minority Member on a committee, with respect to the minority staff members of the committee;

(iii)(I) a Member who is a chairman of a subcommittee which has its own staff and financial authorization, with respect, except as provided in subclause (II), to the professional, clerical, or other assistants to the subcommittee; and

(II) the ranking minority Member on the subcommittee, with respect to the minority staff members of the committee;

(iv) the Majority and Minority Leaders and the Majority and Minority Whips, with respect to the research, clerical, or other assistants assigned to their respective offices; and

(v) the other officers of the House of Representatives, with respect to the employees of the officers; and

(C)(i) the Architect of the Capitol, with respect to the employees of the Architect of the Capitol;

(ii) the Director of the Congressional Budget Office, with respect to the employees of the Office;

(iii) the Comptroller General, with respect to the employees of the General Accounting Office;

(iv) the Public Printer, with respect to the employees of the Government Printing Office;

(v) the Librarian of Congress, with respect to the employees of the Library of Congress;

(vi) the Director of the Office of Technology Assessment, with respect to the employees of the Office; and

(vii) the Director of the United States Botanic Garden, with respect to the employees of the United States Botanic Garden.

(2) CONGRESSIONAL EMPLOYEE.—The term "congressional employee" means an employee who is employed by, or an applicant for employment with, a congressional employee.

(3) INSTRUMENTALITY.—The term "instrumentality" includes the Office of the Architect of the Capitol, the Congressional Budget Office, the General Accounting Office, the Government Printing Office, the Library of Congress, the Office of Technology Assessment, and the United States Botanic Garden.

(4) PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTEE.—The term "Presidential appointee" means an employee, or an applicant seeking to become an employee—

(A) whose appointment is made by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; or

(B) whose position has been determined to be of a confidential, policy-determining, policy-making, or policy-advocating character by—

(i) the President for a position that the President has excepted from the competitive service;

(ii) the Office of Personnel Management for a position that the Office has excepted from the competitive service; or

(iii) the President or head of an agency for a position excepted from the competitive service by statute.

(5) SIMILARLY SITUATED COMPLAINING PARTY.—The term "similarly situated complaining party" means—

(A) in the case of a party seeking to enforce a provision with a separate enforcement mechanism for governmental complaining parties, a governmental complaining party; or

(B) in the case of a party seeking to enforce a provision with no such separate mechanism, a nongovernmental complaining party.

(j) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section shall take effect 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

By Mr. MCCAIN (for himself, Mr. SHELBY, Mr. MACK, Mr. SMITH, Mr. HELMS, Mr. DECONCINI, and Mr. COATS).

S. 30. A bill to amend title II of the Social Security Act, to eliminate the earnings test for individuals who have attained retirement age; to the Committee on Finance.

ELIMINATION OF SOCIAL SECURITY EARNINGS TEST

• Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to be joined by my colleagues, Senators SHELBY, MACK, SMITH, HELMS, DECONCINI, and COATS in introducing this bill, the Older Americans Freedom to Work Act of 1993, to fully repeal the Social Security earnings test for older Americans between the ages of 65 and 69. This legislation is identical to that which I introduced last year. It was adopted by the Senate, and would have provided freedom, opportunity, and fairness for our Nation's senior citizens. Unfortunately, the House failed to adopt it prior to the end of the 102d Congress.

Most people are amazed to find that older Americans are actually penalized for their productivity. For every $3 earned by a retiree over the $10,560 limit, they lose $1 in Social Security benefits. Due to this cap on earnings, our senior citizens, many of whom exist on low incomes, are effectively burdened with a 33.3 percent tax. Combined with Federal, State, and other Social Security taxes, it will amount to a shocking 70-percent tax bite, and sometimes even more—Federal tax—15 percent, FICA—15.3 percent, earnings test penalty—33.3 percent, State and local tax—5 percent. Obviously, this earnings cap is a tremendous disincentive to work. No one who is struggling along at $10,000 a year wants to face an effective marginal tax rate of 70 percent.

Mr. President, this is unquestionably an issue of fairness. No American should be discouraged from working. Unfortunately, as a result of the earnings test, Americans over the age of 65 are being punished for attempting to be productive. The earnings test doesn't take into account an individual's desire or ability to contribute to society. It arbitrarily mandates that a person retire at age 65 or face losing benefits. It is plainly age discrimination; it is plainly wrong.

There are more than 40 million Americans age 60 or older who have over 1 billion years of cumulative work experience—all going to waste. Three out of five of these people do not have any disability that would preclude them from working. Furthermore, almost half a million elderly individuals who do work earn annual incomes within 10 percent of the earnings limit. They are struggling to get ahead without hitting the limit. If not for the earnings test, many more would work, but the system is coercing them into retirement and idleness.

Perhaps most importantly, the earnings cap is a serious threat to the welfare of low-income senior citizens. Once the earnings cap has been met, a person with a job providing just $5 an hour would find the after tax value of that wage dropping to only $2.20. A person with no private pension or liquid investments—which, by the way, are not counted as earnings—from his or her working years may need to work in order to meet the most basic expenses, such as shelter and food. Health care costs, rising at an astronomical rate, are another expense many elderly Americans have trouble meeting. There is also a myth that repeal of the earnings test would benefit only the rich. Nothing could be further from the truth. The highest effective marginal rates are imposed on the middle income elderly who must work to supplement their income.

Finally, it is simply outrageous to pursue a policy that keeps people out of the work force who are experienced and want to work. We have been warned to expect a labor shortage. Why should we discourage our senior citizens from helping to meet that challenge? As the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, which strongly supports this legislation, has pointed out, "retraining older workers already is a priority in labor intensive industries, and will become even more critical as we approach the year 2000."

We have a massive Federal deficit. Studies have found that repealing the earnings test could net $140 million in extra Federal revenue. Furthermore, the earnings test is costing us $15 billion a year in reduced production. Taxes on that lost production would help to reduce the budget deficit. Nor, as it continues to become tougher to compete globally, can America afford to pursue any policy that adversely affects production or effectively prevents our citizens from working.

Repeal would also save the taxpayer over $200 million a year in reduced compliance costs. According to the Social Security Administration, the earnings test is its largest administrative burden. Sixty percent of all overpayments and 45 percent of benefit underpayments are attributable to the earnings test.

And, according to the Social Security Administration, repeal of the earnings test would only have a negligible impact on the health of the Social Security Trust Funds.

Several of our Nation's largest seniors organizations strongly support this particular bill: the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, the Seniors Coalition, the National Alliance of Senior Citizens, the Retired Officers Association, and the National Association of Retired Federal Employees.

My effort in the Senate last year to address this issue of fairness was nearly met with success. The Senate adopted this measure as an amendment to the Older Americans Act Reauthorization Bill, but the House leadership allowed it to languish in an attempt to kill it. It is hard to understand the unwillingness of some in Congress to resolve this issue of basic fairness. In the final days of the 102d Congress, I was left with little choice but to intervene in order to save the Older Americans Act Reauthorization Bill as they were willing to let both measures die. At that time, I resolved to continue the pressure for passage of this measure in the 103d Congress.

During the Presidential campaign, I noted with interest that addressing the injustice of the Social Security earnings test was among the few specific items related to the elderly on which Bill Clinton articulated a position. He indicated that he would help lead the fight to address this issue. I look forward to working with him to see that this injustice is finally brought to end.

Mr. President, it is my hope that we can act on the legislation I am introducing today very early in the first session of the 103d Congress. And, I hope that all of my colleagues will review this legislation and consider adding their name as a cosponsor.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the Older Americans Freedom to Work Act be printed in the RECORD following my statement.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 30

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Older Americans Freedom to Work Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. ELIMINATION OF EARNINGS TEST FOR INDIVIDUALS WHO HAVE ATTAINED RETIREMENT AGE.

Section 203 of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1) of subsection (c) and paragraphs (1)(A) and (2) of subsection (d), by striking "the age of seventy" and inserting "retirement age (as defined in section 216(1))";

(2) in subsection (f)(1)(B), by striking "was age seventy or over" and inserting "was at or above retirement age (as defined in section 216(1))";

(3) in subsection (f)(3), by striking "33½ percent" and all that follows through "any other individual," and inserting "50 percent of such individual's earnings for such year in excess of the product of the exempt amount as determined under paragraph (8)," and by striking "age 70" and inserting "retirement age (as defined in section 216(1))";

(4) in subsection (h)(1)(A), by striking "age 70" each place it appears and inserting "retirement age (as defined in section 216(1))"; and

(5) in subsection (j), by striking "Age Seventy" in the heading and inserting "Retirement Age", and by striking "seventy years of age" and inserting "having attained retirement age (as defined in section 216(1))".

SEC. 3. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS ELIMINATING THE SPECIAL EXEMPT AMOUNT FOR INDIVIDUALS WHO HAVE ATTAINED RETIREMENT AGE.

(a) UNIFORM EXEMPT AMOUNT.—Section 203(f)(8)(A) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking "the new exempt amounts (separately stated for individuals described in subparagraph (D) and for other individuals) which are to be applicable" and inserting "a new exempt amount which shall be applicable".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 203(f)(8)(B) of such Act is amended—

(1) in the matter preceding clause (i), by striking "Except" and all that follows through "whichever" and inserting "The exempt amount which is applicable for each month of a particular taxable year shall be whichever";

(2) in clause (i), by striking "corresponding"; and

(3) in the last sentence, by striking "an exempt amount" and inserting "the exempt amount".

(c) REPEAL OF BASIS FOR COMPUTATION OF SPECIAL EXEMPT AMOUNT.—Section 203(f)(8)(D) of such Act is repealed.

SEC. 4. ADDITIONAL CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

(a) ELIMINATION OF REDUNDANT REFERENCES TO RETIREMENT AGE.—Section 203 of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) in the last sentence of subsection (c), by striking "nor shall any deduction" and all that follows and inserting "nor shall any deduction be made under this subsection from any widow's or widower's insurance benefit if the widow, surviving divorced wife, widower, or surviving divorced husband involved became entitled to such benefit prior to attaining age 60."; and

(2) in subsection (f)(1), by striking clause (D) and inserting the following: "(D) for which such individual is entitled to widow's or widower's insurance benefits if such individual became so entitled prior to attaining age 60, or".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO PROVISIONS FOR DETERMINING AMOUNT OF INCREASE OF ACCOUNT OF DELAYED RETIREMENT.—Section 202(w)(2)(B)(ii) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking "either"; and

(2) by striking "or suffered deductions under section 203(b) or 203(c) in amounts equal to the amount of such benefit".

(c) CONTINUED APPLICATION OF RULE GOVERNING ENTITLEMENT OF BLIND BENEFICIARIES.—The second sentence of section 223(d)(4) of such Act is amended by inserting after "subparagraph (D) thereof" where it first appears the following: "(or would be applicable to such individuals but for the amendments made by the Older Americans Freedom to Work Act of 1990)".

SEC. 5. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by this Act shall apply only with respect to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1993.●

By Mr. MCCAIN:

S. 31. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to repeal the reduced Medicare payment provision for new providers; to the Committee on Finance.

REPEAL OF REDUCED MEDICARE PAYMENT PROVISION

● Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill which would eliminate discrimination in Medicare reimbursement practices for physicians and other health care providers receiving Medicare reimbursement. Current practices result in new physicians and other providers receiving less reimbursement for the same procedure than physicians and other providers who have been practicing for a longer period of time. This legislation is similar to that which I introduced last year which became a part of H.R. 11.

Specifically, the legislation I am introducing today will repeal the inequitable provision of existing law that reduces Medicare payment to so-called new physicians and other providers in their first 4 years of practice. With some limited exceptions, current law reduces the payment base or allowed amount by some 20 percent in the first year of practice, 15 percent in the second year, 10 percent in the third, and 5 percent in the fourth year. My bill would repeal this discriminatory law.

The rationale behind this discriminatory law, which was enacted a couple of years ago, was to achieve budget savings at the expense of young physicians and other providers who are new to providing care for Medicare beneficiaries, under the assumption that a new physician's or other provider's services are of less value—and therefore less worthy of full compensation—than those of a more experienced physician or other provider. However, the value of these physicians' or other providers' services, as evidenced by the new Medicare physician payment system which bases reimbursement on a resource-based relative value scale [RBRVS], is not modified based on the experience of the physician or other provider providing the care. Furthermore, the RBRVS assigns a value to each service—and that service does not cost those designated as new physicians or other providers any less to perform than physicians or other providers who have been in practice for a longer time. Under the current law, the definition of a new physician or other provider is so general and so vague that physicians or other providers who have served in the military for years, but have not previously billed the Medicare Program, are viewed as new physicians or other providers. Payments for their services to Medicare beneficiaries are reduced during the first 4 years of civilian private practice. Clearly, the existing law does not reward these dedicated physicians and other providers on a level commensurate with their experience.

The current law reducing payments to new physicians and other providers violates the underlying concepts behind the landmark Medicare physician payment reform, which became effective tive as of January 1, 1992. It also ignores the financial reality facing new physicians and other providers of meeting high start-up costs associated with building a new practice, and the skyrocketing costs of medical education. The provisions of the current law serve only to discourage new physicians and other providers from certain targeted specialties and providing care for Medicare beneficiaries, as well as causing group practices to steer Medicare beneficiaries away from those physicians and other providers defined under the law as new.

I urge support for this legislation, which will ensure that all physicians and other providers are treated fairly, and which corrects the inequities of the current law. I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD following my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 31

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Medicare Provider Payment Equity Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. REPEAL OF REDUCED MEDICARE PAYMENT PROVISION FOR NEW PROVIDERS.

(a) PHYSICIANS.—Section 1848(a) (42 U.S.C. 1395w-4(a)) is amended by repealing paragraph (4).

(b) OTHER PRACTITIONERS.—Section 1842(b)(4) (42 U.S.C. 1395u(b)(4)) is amended by striking subparagraph (F).

(c) BUDGET NEUTRALITY.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall provide that in carrying out the amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) that payments under section 1848 of the Social Security Act are no greater or lesser than what such payments would have been but for the provisions of this Act.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) shall apply with respect to physicians' services furnished on or after January 1, 1993.

By Mr. MOYNIHAN (for himself and Mr. CHAFEE):

S. 32. A bill to provide for the collection and dissemination of information on injuries, death, and family dissolution due to bullet-related violence, to require the keeping of records with respect to dispositions of ammunition, and to require that persons comply with State and local firearms licensing laws before receiving a Federal license to deal in firearms; to the Committee on Finance.

VIOLENT CRIME CONTROL ACT OF 1993

• Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill that comprehensively seeks to control the epidemic proportions of violence in America. This legislation, the Violent Crime Control Act of 1993, combines most of the provisions of three other crime-related bills I am introducing today as well.

By including several different crime-related provisions, my bill attacks the crime epidemic on numerous fronts. If we are truly serious about confronting our Nation's crime problem, we must learn about the nature of the epidemic of bullet-related violence and ways to control it, including the requirement of recordkeeping on the dispositions of ammunition. We need to insist that persons first comply with State and local firearms licensing laws before receiving a Federal license to deal in firearms.

Last October, the testimony we received during a Finance Committee hearing demonstrated that public health and safety experts have independently come to the conclusion that there is an epidemic of bullet-related violence. The facts are staggering.

In 1989, 34,776 people lost their lives in the United States from bullets, 14,464 were murdered, 18,178 committed suicide, the rest died from accidents or legal intervention. By focusing on bullets, and not guns, we realize that much like nuclear waste, guns remain active for centuries. With minimum care, they do not deteriorate. However, bullets are consumed. We have only a 4 year supply of them.

Not only am I proposing that we tax bullets used disproportionately in crimes—for examples 9 millimeter, .25, and .32 caliber bullets—I also believe we must set up a Bullet Death, and Injury Control Program within the Centers for Disease Control's National Center for Injury Prevention and Control. This center will enhance our knowledge of the distribution and status of bullet-related death and injury and subsequently make recommendations about the extent and nature of bullet-related violence.

So that the center would have substantive information to study and analyze, this bill also requires importers and manufacturers of ammunition to keep records and submit an annual report to the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms [BATF] on the disposition of ammunition. Currently, importers and manufacturers of ammunition are not required to do so.

Finally, this bill would prevent the issuance of a Federal license to deal firearms unless the applicant has a State and local license for the same purpose. A 3-year Federal license to deal in firearms may be obtained from BATF for just $30. A valid State or local dealers license is not required. It's a loophole you can drive a truck through, one Federal law enforcement official told the Washington Post. We can reduce unlawful gunrunning by closing this loophole.

Clearly, it will take intense effort on all or our parts to reduce violent crime in America. My legislation rests on the notion that we must confront this epidemic from several different angles, recognizing that there is no simple solution to this problem.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of this bill be printed in the RECORD at this time.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 32

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Violent Crime Control Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) there is no reliable information on the amount of ammunition available;

(2) importers and manufacturers of ammunition are not required to keep records to report to the Federal Government on ammunition imported, produced, or shipped;

(3) a loophole in current law permits a Federal licensee to order unlimited amounts of guns from a manufacturer, whether or not the licensee is legally permitted to sell them under State or local law;

(4) the rate of bullet-related deaths in the United States is unacceptably high and growing;

(5) three calibers of bullets are used disproportionately in crime: 9 millimeter, .25 caliber, and .32 caliber bullets;

(6) injury and death are greatest in young males, and particularly young black males;

(7) epidemiology can be used to study bullet-related death and injury to evaluate control options;

(8) bullet-related death and injury has placed increased stress on the American family resulting in increased welfare expenditures under title IV of the Social Security Act;

(9) bullet-related death and injury have contributed to the increase in Medicaid expenditures under title XIX of the Social Security Act;

(10) bullet-related death and injury have contributed to increased supplemental security income benefits under title XVI of the Social Security Act;

(11) a tax on the sale of bullets will help control bullet-related death and injury;

(12) there is no central responsible agency for trauma, there is relatively little funding available for the study of bullet-related death and injury, and there are large gaps in research programs to reduce injury;

(13) current laws and programs relevant to the loss of life and productivity from bullet-related trauma are inadequate to protect the citizens of the United States; and

(14) increased research in bullet-related violence is needed to better understand the causes of such violence, to develop options for controlling such violence, and to identify and overcome barriers to implementing effective controls.

SEC. 3. PURPOSES.

The purposes of this Act are—

(1) to increase the tax on the sale of 9 millimeter, .25 caliber, and .32 caliber bullets (except with respect to any sale to law enforcement agencies) as a means of reducing the epidemic of bullet-related death and injury;

(2) to undertake a nationally coordinated effort to survey, collect, inventory, synthesize, and disseminate adequate data and information for—

(A) understanding the full range of bullet-related death and injury, including impacts on the family structure and increased demands for benefit payments under provisions of the Social Security Act;

(B) assessing the rate and magnitude of change in bullet-related death and injury over time;

(C) educating the public about the extent of bullet-related death and injury; and

(D) expanding the epidemiologic approach to evaluate efforts to control bullet-related death and injury and other forms of violence;

(3) to develop options for controlling bullet-related death and injury;

(4) to build the capacity and encourage responsibility at the individual, group, community, State and Federal levels for control and elimination of bullet-related death and injury;

(5) to promote a better understanding of the utility of the epidemiologic approach for evaluating options to control or reduce death and injury from nonbullet-related violence; and

(6) to control the proliferation of illegal firearms currently causing an alarming rate of death.

TITLE I—BULLET DEATH AND INJURY CONTROL PROGRAM

SEC. 101. BULLET DEATH AND INJURY CONTROL PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established within the Centers for Disease Control's National Center for Injury Prevention and Control (referred to as the "Center") a Bullet Death and Injury Control Program (referred to as the "Program").

(b) PURPOSE.—The Center shall conduct research into and provide leadership and coordination for—

(1) the understanding and promotion of knowledge about the epidemiologic basis for bullet-related death and injury within the United States;

(2) developing technically sound approaches for controlling, and eliminating, bullet-related deaths and injuries;

(3) building the capacity for implementing the options, and expanding the approaches to controlling death and disease from bullet-related trauma; and

(4) educating the public about the nature and extent of bullet-related violence.

(c) FUNCTIONS.—The functions of the Program shall be—

(1) to summarize and to enhance the knowledge of the distribution, status, and characteristics of bullet-related death and injury;

(2) to conduct research and to prepare, with the assistance of State public health departments—

(A) statistics on bullet-related death and injury;

(B) studies of the epidemic nature of bullet-related death and injury; and

(C) status of the factors, including legal, socioeconomic, and other factors, that bear on the control of bullets and the eradication of the bullet-related epidemic;

(3) to publish information about bullet-related death and injury and guides for the practical use of epidemiological information, including publications that synthesize information relevant to national goals of understanding the bullet-related epidemic and methods for its control;

(4) to identify socioeconomic groups, communities, and geographic areas in need of study, develop a strategic plan for research necessary to comprehend the extent and nature of bullet-related death and injury, and determine what options exist to reduce or eradicate such death and injury;

(5) to provide for the conduct of epidemiologic research on bullet-related death and injury through grants, contracts, cooperative agreements, and other means, by Federal, State, and private agencies, institutions, organizations, and individuals;

(6) to make recommendations to Congress, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, and other Federal, State, and local agencies on the technical management of data collection, storage, and retrieval necessary to collect, evaluate, analyze, and disseminate information about the extent and nature of the bullet-related epidemic of death and injury as well as options for its control;

(7) to make recommendations to the Congress, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, and other Federal, State and local agencies, organizations, and individuals about options for actions to eradicate or reduce the epidemic of bullet-related death and injury;

(8) to provide training and technical assistance to the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms and other Federal, State, and local agencies regarding the collection and interpretation of bullet-related data; and

(9) to research and explore bullet-related death and injury and options for its control.

(d) ADVISORY BOARD.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Center shall have an independent advisory board to assist in setting the policies for and directing the Program.

(2) MEMBERSHIP.—The advisory board shall consist of 13 members, including—

(A) 1 representative from the Centers for Disease Control;

(B) 1 representative from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms;

(C) 1 representative from the Department of Justice;

(D) 1 member from the Drug Enforcement Agency;

(E) 3 epidemiologists from universities or nonprofit organizations;

(F) 1 criminologist from a university or nonprofit organization;

(G) 1 behavioral scientist from a university or nonprofit organization;

(H) 1 physician from a university or nonprofit organization;

(I) 1 statistician from a university or nonprofit organization;

(J) 1 engineer from a university or nonprofit organization; and

(K) 1 public communications expert from a university or nonprofit organization.

(3) TERMS.—Members of the advisory board shall serve for terms of 5 years, and may serve more than 1 term.

(4) COMPENSATION OF MEMBERS.—Each member of the Commission who is not an officer or employee of the Federal Government shall be compensated at a rate equal to the daily equivalent of the annual rate of basic pay prescribed for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, for each day (including travel time) during which such member is engaged in the performance of the duties of the Commission. All members of the Commission who are officers or employees of the United States shall serve without compensation in addition to that received for their services as officers or employees of the United States.

(5) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—A member of the advisory board that is not otherwise in the Federal Government service shall, to the extent provided for in advance in appropriations Acts, be paid actual travel expenses and per diem in lieu of subsistence expenses in accordance with section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, when the member is away from the member's usual place of residence.

(6) CHAIR.—The members of the advisory board shall select 1 member to serve as chair.

(e) CONSULTATION.—The Center shall conduct the Program required under this section in consultation with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms and the Department of Justice.

(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $1,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, $2,500,000 for fiscal year 1994, and $5,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1995, 1996, and 1997 for the purpose of carrying out this section.

(g) REPORT.—The Center shall prepare an annual report to Congress on the Program's findings, the status of coordination with other agencies, its progress, and problems encountered with options and recommendations for their solution. The report for December 31, 1995, shall contain options and recommendations for the Program's mission and funding levels for the years 1996–2000, and beyond.

TITLE II—INCREASE IN EXCISE TAX ON CERTAIN BULLETS

SEC. 201. INCREASE IN TAX ON CERTAIN BULLETS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 4181 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to the imposition of tax on firearms, etc.) is amended by adding at the end the following new flush sentence:

"In the case of 9 millimeter, .25 caliber, or .32 caliber ammunition, the rate of tax under this section shall be 1,000 percent."

(b) EXEMPTION FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT PURPOSES.—Section 4182 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to exemptions) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d) LAW ENFORCEMENT.—The last sentence of section 4181 shall not apply to any sale (not otherwise exempted) to, or for the use of, the United States (or any department, agency, or instrumentality thereof) or a State or political subdivision thereof (or any department, agency, or instrumentality thereof)."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to sales after December 31, 1995.

TITLE III—USE OF AMMUNITION

SEC. 301. RECORDS OF DISPOSITION OF AMMUNITION.

(a) AMENDMENT OF TITLE 18, UNITED STATES CODE.—Section 923(g) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)(A) by inserting after the second sentence "Each licensed importer and manufacturer of ammunition shall maintain such records of importation, production, shipment, sale, or other disposition of ammunition at the licensee's place of business for such period and in such form as the Secretary, in consultation with the Director of the National Center for Injury Prevention and Control of the Centers for Disease Control (for the purpose of ensuring that the information that is collected is useful for the Bullet Death and Injury Control Program), may by regulation prescribe. Such records shall include the amount, caliber, and type of ammunition."; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) Each licensed importer or manufacturer of ammunition shall annually prepare a summary report of imports, production, shipments, sales, and other dispositions during the preceding year. The report shall be prepared on a form specified by the Secretary, in consultation with the Director of the National Center for Injury Prevention and Control of the Centers for Disease Control (for the purpose of ensuring that the information that is collected is useful for the Bullet Death and Injury Control Program), shall include the amounts, calibers, and types of ammunition that were disposed of, and shall be forwarded to the office specified thereon not later than the close of business on the date specified by the Secretary."

(b) STUDY OF CRIMINAL USE AND REGULATION OF AMMUNITION.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall request the Centers for Disease Control to—

(1) prepare, in consultation with the Secretary, a study of the criminal use and regulation of ammunition; and

(2) submit to Congress, not later than July 31, 1996, a report with recommendations on the potential for preventing crime by regulating or restricting the availability of ammunition.

TITLE IV—COMPLIANCE WITH STATE AND LOCAL FIREARMS LAWS

SEC. 401. COMPLIANCE WITH STATE AND LOCAL FIREARMS LICENSING LAWS REQUIRED BEFORE ISSUANCE OF FEDERAL LICENSE TO DEAL IN FIREARMS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 923(d)(1) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (D);

(2) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (E) and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:
 "(F) in the case of an application for a license to engage in the business of dealing in firearms—

"(i) the applicant has complied with all requirements imposed on persons desiring to engage in such a business by the State and political subdivision thereof in which the applicant conducts or intends to conduct such business; and

"(ii) the application includes a written statement which—

"(I) is signed by the chief of police of the locality, or the sheriff of the county, in which the applicant conducts or intends to conduct such business, the head of the State police of such State, or any official designated by the Secretary; and

"(II) certifies that the information available to the signer of the statement does not indicate that the applicant is ineligible to obtain such a license under the law of such State and locality."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to applications for a license that is issued on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.●

By Mr. DANFORTH (for himself and Mr. BOND):

S. 33. A bill to require the Secretary of Education to waive certain regulations in considering an application submitted by the Winona R-III School District, MO; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

WAIVER OF CERTAIN REGULATIONS

● Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, once again, as we did more than 5 years ago, Senator BOND and I join together to request that the Senate move swiftly to help the people of Winona, MO. I know that Congressman BILL EMERSON has also introduced companion legislation to the bill we offer here today.

Educating the children of Winona is the responsibility of the Winona R-III

School District. It is a small, impoverished district which has suffered under a crippling financial burden since 1986. This burden arose out of an unfortunate sequence of circumstances, quite beyond the district's control, combined with the district's commitment to the safety of its children.

Approximately 47 percent of the Winona R-III School District's land is federally owned. A further 27 percent of the land is owned by the State of Missouri. As a consequence, almost three-fourths of the land in that district generates zero tax revenue. Moreover, even the revenue generated from the mere 26 percent which remains, is slight.

In fact, according to State income tax records, the average 1989 income of Winona was only $13,973—far lower than Missouri's average income that year of $49,048. Obviously, the burden of providing a decent education to its children is breaking the backs of the Winona taxpayers.

Nonetheless, Winona is trying. In 1985, Winona applied to the Department of Education for Federal impact aid construction funding. At that time, the Winona High School was located in a decrepit 68-year-old building with crumbling mortar which had already been declared by the State to be a hazard to public health and safety. But that was not all. Winona is situated near the New Madrid Fault line. The fault is subject to tremors and earthquakes. In fact, geologists expect a tremor of significant magnitude within this decade. A new building was needed because the old one could easily have collapsed.

In 1987, Federal officials came to Winona to determine its eligibility to receive the requested impact aid. They witnessed first hand the tax consequences of Federal ownership of land in and around Winona. They witnessed, too, the practical effects of the school district's poverty and the condition of the school building. The Federal Government acknowledged the district's need by ranking the Winona School District first in priority for impact aid construction funding.

At this point, the Winona school district's most immediate difficulties appeared to have been at least partially alleviated. However, circumstances conspired to present Winona with an ongoing problem from which it cannot escape without our help.

In 1985, when Winona first applied for impact aid, the district's valuation was assessed at $2,470,000. Later that year, however, the assessed valuation skyrocketed to $5,980,000. Prior to the reassessment, the property levy was $4 per $100 in assessed valuation. The State recognized that, despite the considerable change in the paper value of the land, the ability of the residents to generate revenue remained about the same. Missouri, therefore, enacted a law requiring a rollback of the property levy so that the paper increase would not result in any additional taxes. After the reassessment, the rollback resulted in a levy ceiling of $2.09 per $100 in assessed valuation, and the tax burden remained the same.

Unfortunately, the statewide reassessment also had a marked impact on Winona's school construction funding application. The impact aid school construction law requires a demonstration by each applicant school district of a substantial local effort toward building the school. And, the Department of Education considers 10 percent of the district's assessed valuation a satisfactory demonstration.

Cognizant of the Department's guidelines, at the time Winona applied to the Department, it expected to contribute this 10 percent, that is, a little under $250,000, toward construction. As burdensome as this would be, the new construction was simply a necessity. There was no alternative. In light of the subsequent reassessment, however, the Department of Education demanded that Winona pay almost $600,000 up front before it saw any of the impact aid dollars.

The district was caught between a rock and a hard place. Without the up-front $598,000, Winona would lose the Federal construction funding. Winona's school children would be forced to continue spending their days in a truly dangerous, ever more decrepit, old school building. Clearly, tempting fate with the health and safety of its children was out of the question. On the other hand, Winona simply did not have the up-front money.

In the end, the Winona School District took the only route it truly could have taken. Despite the obvious financial dangers, the district borrowed the $598,000 at uncomfortably high interest rates and contributed the money toward the new construction which was completed successfully, and houses its high school today.

Mr. President, as Congressman EMERSON stated when he introduced this legislation in the House of Representatives, "this tale should have had a happy ending." Unfortunately, the tale is far from over and the Winona School District still finds itself in financial desperation. Because of the timing of Missouri's reassessment and rollback, Winona now has a $598,000 debt which it is unable to repay. The government-owned acreage still contributes no revenue and the people have become no wealthier. An added complication is Missouri State law which forbids local school districts to finish a school year in deficit. Thus, Winona's meager educational resources are first channeled into servicing its debt. Only if funds remain can they be put toward educational needs.

Mr. President, this is not the first time I have risen on Winona's behalf. Nor is it the first time this body has considered Winona's situation and sought assistance. In the fiscal year 1987 supplemental appropriations bill, the Senate recognized Winona's plight and inserted language to the effect that Winona's local effort would be satisfied by a $200,000 contribution. When that provision was in conference, however, the conferees determined that the Secretary of Education already had discretion to provide relief to Winona. Accordingly, the conferees removed the statutory language and, in the report, "direct[ed] the Secretary to consider an amount of local effort not in excess of $200,000 as reasonable and adequate to satisfy the requirements of section 14(c)." (House Rpt. No. 100-195, 100th Congress p. 70, June 27, 1987).

Thus, Winona's problems should now be a matter of the past. Nonetheless, despite the direction given to the Department of Education over 5 years ago, the Winona School District, Senator BOND, Congressman EMERSON and I have had no success whatsoever in persuading the Department of Education to follow the direction of the conferees. Despite the conference report, the Department of Education insists it has no discretion to accept $200,000. It is inexplicable.

This bill is not about a free ride for anybody. It is about simple equity for Americans in dire straits. Americans who put the safety and education of their children first, despite terrible cost. If this legislation is passed, Winona will be relieved of the additional $398,000 the Department of Education has demanded due to reassessment. However, it will still be required to contribute a fair and reasonable local effort of $200,000 toward construction.

Even with this relief, Winona will be required to do its utmost. Indeed, the school district will still be required to pay the accrued and accruing high interest payments on its loan. Nonetheless, the relief embodied in this legislation will remove the heaviest burden now on its shoulders.

Senator BOND, Congressman EMERSON and I have lost no time in introducing this legislation at the first possible moment in both the Senate and the House of Representatives. It is a simple, clear bill, which addresses a very specific problem. And, although this legislation is intended to alleviate the suffering of just one school district in Missouri, it is appropriate that it be considered at the earliest possible moment. For the taxpayers of that district, and for their children, this situation has been an albatross for more than 7 years. Only we, the Congress, can help them. More than 5 years ago, this body resolved to help Winona. We agreed the relief in this bill was the appropriate vehicle. Let us now translate that resolve into action.●

By Mr. DURENBERGER:
S. 34. A bill for the relief of Randall G. Hain; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

RELIEF OF RANDALL G. HAIN

● Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, today I am introducing a private bill for the relief of Randall G. Hain of Minnesota.

Mr. Hain was drafted into the Army and served in Vietnam from October 13, 1966 to August 21, 1968. He attained the rank of specialist 5th class and received an honorable discharge.

In 1963, prior to entering the military, Mr. Hain was involved in a motorcycle/automobile accident. As a result of the accident, he underwent two surgeries and spent 5 months in traction. The surgeons strengthened his left leg by inserting a metal plate secured by 10 metal screws. This insertion shortened his left leg by 1 1/4 inches.

In September 1966, Mr. Hain was drafted and given a pre-induction physical; the surgery scars on his left leg were noted in the record, but the leg was not x rayed. This was a violation of the requirements of the Surgeon General's Medical Fitness Standards according to Army Regulation 40-501, chapter 6.

The Surgeon General's Office has stated that he "should have been considered unfit for induction because of residuals of a fracture of the left tibia and femur with retained metallic plate and screws."

During basic training at Fort Hood, Mr. Hain went on sick call and the Darnell Army Hospital did x ray the left leg, but due to lack of followup, no medical discharge recommendation was recorded.

The physical activity of basic training and being stationed in a war zone unwillingly exacerbated his original condition and have contributed to both his deteriorating physical and mental health.

Mr. Hain has attempted to right this wrong by filing claims with the Department of Veterans' Affairs six times. Only 20 percent disability compensation has been granted him. He has also filed unsuccessful claims with the Army Board for Correction of Military Records and the U.S. District Court in Minnesota. He now has exhausted all of his legal remedies.

Randall Hain has been unable to hold a steady job or lead a normal, productive life since his wrongful induction into the Army. Therefore, I offer this private bill to partially compensate for lost employment opportunity and provide him with 50 percent veteran's disability compensation. Had he not been inducted into the military, he would have pursued an academic career. I hope that this still could become a reality for him with the benefits we seek today.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 34

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SATISFACTION OF CLAIM AGAINST THE UNITED STATES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Randall G. Hain of Eden Prairie, Minnesota, the sum of $50,000 for any damages incurred by that individual (including any injury or aggravation of any injury relating to or arising from a leg injury of that individual) as a result of—

(1) the induction of that individual into the United States Army; and

(2) the service of that individual in the United States Army during the period from October 13, 1966, to August 23, 1968.

(b) CONDITION OF PAYMENT.—The payment of the sum referred to in subsection (a) shall be in full satisfaction of any claim of the individual referred to in that subsection against the United States arising out of the induction and service described in that subsection.

SEC. 2. DISABILITY RATING.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, Randall G. Hain of Eden Prairie, Minnesota, shall be deemed to have a service-connected disability rated at 50 percent for the purposes of chapter 11, title 38, United States Code, as a result of injuries of that individual incurred during or aggravated by the service referred to in section 1(a)(2).

(b) PROHIBITION ON RETROACTIVE BENEFITS.—Benefits may not be paid under chapter 11 of title 38, United States Code, to Randall G. Hain as a result of the enactment of this Act for any period before the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 3. LIMITATION ON ATTORNEY AND AGENT FEES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not more than 10 percent of the amount appropriated pursuant to section 1 to the individual referred to in that section shall be paid by or on behalf of that individual to any agent or attorney or received by any agent or attorney from or on behalf of that individual for services rendered in connection with the claim described in that section.

(b) ENFORCEMENT.—Any person who violates the provisions of this section shall be fined not more than $1,000.●

By Mr. CRAIG:

S. 35. A bill to provide for an extension of regional referral center classifications, and for other purposes.

EXTENSION OF REGIONAL REFERRAL CENTER CLASSIFICATION

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, today, I am introducing legislation that is of great importance to the citizens of my State, Idaho—and to citizens across the Nation who live in rural areas. This measure addresses a very pressing concern: The future provision of health care in rural America.

Action needs to be taken if this Nation's rural referral centers are to continue meeting the needs of their patients. The legislation I am introducing today would simply provide for the retroactive extension of a sunset provision of law which expired at the end of fiscal year 1992. It would be extended until fiscal year 1995, when the urban-rural differential will be phased out and reimbursements will be more equitable for rural hospitals.

The provision is commonly referred to as the "rural referral grandfather clause" and provides these unique hospitals with a reimbursement rate comparable to that of their urban counterparts.

Similar legislation extending the grandfather clause through fiscal year 1992 was included in the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1989. However, that expired last October. I introduced this legislation in the 102d Congress. It passed as a provision of H.R. 11, which was vetoed by President Bush. Now it is time to address this problem once again.

In my State of Idaho and in 41 other States, rural referral centers are the cornerstones of rural health care. In some communities, they are the sole source of health care—the only source of health care for other communities in their region.

Rural referral centers provide a large variety of specialized services and are therefore reimbursed from Medicare funds at a rate higher than that given to small rural hospitals. The larger rural referral centers must also pay salaries and expenses comparable to urban hospitals. If they are to continue offering the much needed, specialized care, rural referral centers must be reimbursed at a rate which properly reflects their costs. This legislation is fundamentally important to these hospitals if they are to be allowed to continue operating until the urban-rural differential is phased out.

Mr. President, rural referral centers are more than just health care centers—they are an important thread in the fabric of rural society. America's rural hospitals continue to face financial difficulties—difficulties that threaten not only their existence, but also the existence of the communities they serve. Medicare payments have long been inequitable to our rural referral centers. Let us protect them and the people they serve, until the present inequities in the system are phased out.

By Mr. BOREN:

S. 36. A bill to amend section 207 of title 18, United States Code, to tighten the restrictions on former executive and legislative branch officials and employees; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

ETHICS IN GOVERNMENT REFORM ACT

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, earlier today I introduced a bill which would reform the way campaigns are financed in our country. My hope is that this legislation will help restore some of the faith Americans have lost in our democracy. However, while campaign finance reform is a necessary step toward reforming our Government, if we ever expect the American people to trust their leaders, we must put an end to the revolving door of lobbying which has done so much to damage people's hope for honest Government in our Capitol.

Throughout last year's campaign, one of President Clinton's central themes was his promise to reform the executive branch by requiring his political appointees to pledge never to work for foreign governments. The country responded by electing him President. Yesterday, in his inaugural speech, President Clinton stated:

To renew America, we must revitalize our democracy.

This capital, like every capital since the dawn of civilization, is often a place of intrigue and calculation. Powerful people maneuver for position and worry endlessly about who is in and who is out, who is up and who is down, forgetting those people whose toil and sweat sends us here and pays our way.

Americans deserve better, and in this city today, there are people who want to do better. And so I say to all of us here, let us resolve to reform our politics, so that power and privilege no longer shout down the voice of the people. Let us put aside personal advantage so that we can feel the pain and see the promise of America.

Let us resolve to make our government a place for what Franklin Roosevelt called "bold, persistent experimentation," a government for our tomorrows, not our yesterdays.

Let us give this Capitol back to the people whom it belongs.

President Clinton backed these words with action by signing his executive order on lobbying restrictions as one of his first official actions as President. And while he continues to do his part by requiring antilobbying pledges from his Cabinet members and other top appointees, those restrictions cannot be a fully effective means of government reform unless they extend to Congress. In addition, to ensure that these restrictions are permanent and will continue after this President leaves office, they must be enacted into law. The bill I am introducing would do just that.

Today, I call upon Congress to help President Clinton in his reform efforts and to help itself by restoring the faith of the American people in government. Congress can answer this challenge by supporting the legislation I introduce today. The Ethics in Government Reform Act of 1993 codifies President Clinton's lobbying restrictions on executive branch appointees and extends those same restrictions to the Congress.

This legislation would mandate that executive branch appointees who are paid at or above Executive Schedule V would not be allowed to lobby their former agencies for 5 years after leaving office. It would also require that Executive Office of the President appointees abide by the aforementioned restrictions as well as refrain from lobbying for 2 years any other top appointees in the executive branch or independent agencies. The aforementioned political appointees and trade negotiators are also banned from ever becoming registered agents for any foreign government or political party.

In extending these same provisions to Congress, this legislation bans Members of Congress from lobbying committees on which they served for 5 years after the end of their tenure. Congressmen also may not lobby any Member of Congress or their staff members for 2 years after leaving office. These same measures apply to congressional staff who are paid at or above Executive Schedule V. As with appointees to the executive branch, there would be a lifetime ban on Members of Congress in the representation of or political parties.

These lobbying restrictions are stringent. Some may even call them harsh and claim that they discourage people from seeking government service. To those people I say, Heaven help our democracy if we cannot find people willing to serve their country through government service without the promise of future personal gains.

The American people have spoken, and they expect a new attitude in government—an attitude which puts the common person first and removes the special interests, lobbyists, and politics of personal gain from holding sway over our Nation's Capitol. In demanding lobbying restrictions, the American people have proven they have a voice. As their elected representatives, we must not ignore that voice. My hope is that the people will keep the pressure on us until we act and hold us accountable if we do not measure up.

I hope my colleagues will study this bill closely because there will be a chance to vote on this legislation this year. I can assure my colleagues that, if it does not come to the floor in bill form, it will be offered by me as an amendment to major legislation on the floor, and it will be offered again and again until meaningful reform is enacted. As one Senator, I will make sure there are many opportunities to cast recorded votes on this issue so that the people can hold us accountable. This issue will not go away. Because we will be casting recorded votes. I earnestly solicit input from my colleagues on ways in which this legislation can be improved.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

(1) APPEARANCES BEFORE AGENCY.—Section 207(d) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

“(3) RESTRICTIONS ON POLITICAL APPOINTEES.—(A) In addition to the restrictions set forth in subsections (a), (b), and (c) and paragraph (1) of this subsection, any person who—

“(i) serves in the position of Vice President of the United States; or “(ii) is employed in a position subject to Presidential appointment in the executive branch of the United States (including any independent agency) at a rate of pay equal to or greater than the rate of pay payable for level V of the Executive Schedule, and who, after the termination of his or her service or employment as such officer or employee, knowingly makes, with the intent to influence, any communication to or appearance before any officer or employee of a department or agency in which such person served within 5 years before such termination, during a period beginning on the termination of service or employment as such officer or employee and ending 5 years after the termination of service in the department or agency, on behalf of any other person (except the United States), in connection with any matter on which such person seeks official action by any officer or employee of such department or agency, shall be punished as provided in section 216 of this title.

“(B) In addition to the restrictions set forth in subsections (a), (b), and (c) and paragraph (1) of this subsection, any person who is employed in a position in the Executive Office of the President at a rate of pay equal to or greater than the rate of pay payable for level V of the Executive Schedule, and who—

“(i) after the termination of his or her service or employment as such employee, knowingly makes, with the intent to influence, any communication to or appearance before any officer or employee of a department or agency with respect to which the person had substantial personal responsibility within 5 years before such termination, during a period beginning on the termination of service or employment as such employee and ending 5 years after the termination of substantial personal responsibility with respect to the department or agency, on behalf of any other person (except the United States), in connection with any matter on which such person seeks official action by any officer or employee of such department or agency; or

“(ii) within 2 years after the termination of his or her service or employment as such employee, knowingly makes, with the intent to influence, any communication to or appearance before any person described in paragraph (2)(B) on behalf of any other person (except the United States), in connection with any matter on which such person seeks official action by the person described in paragraph (2)(B), shall be punished as provided in section 216 of this title.”.

(2) FOREIGN AGENTS.—Section 207(f) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

(A) redesignating paragraph (2) as paragraph (3);

(B) adding after paragraph (1) the following:

“(2) SPECIAL RESTRICTIONS.—Any person who—

“(A) serves in the position of Vice President of the United States;

“(B) is employed in a position subject to Presidential appointment in the executive branch of the United States (including any independent agency) at a rate of pay equal to or greater than the rate of pay payable for level V of the Executive Schedule;

“(C) is employed in a position in the Executive Office of the President at a rate of pay equal to or greater than the rate of pay payable for level V of the Executive Schedule; or

“(D) is a Member of Congress or employed in a position by the Congress at a rate of pay equal to or greater than the rate of pay payable for level V of the Executive Schedule, and who after such service or employment acts as an agent of a foreign government or foreign political party shall be punished as provided in section 216 of this title.”.

(3) TRADE NEGOTIATORS.—Section 207(b)(1) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

(A) inserting “(A)” after “IN GENERAL.—”; and

(B) adding at the end thereof the following:

“(B) For any person who—

“(i) is employed in a position subject to Presidential appointment in the executive branch of the United States (including any independent agency) at a rate of pay equal to or greater than the rate of pay payable for level V of the Executive Schedule;

“(ii) is employed in a position in the Executive Office of the President at a rate of pay equal to or greater than the rate of pay payable for level V of the Executive Schedule; or

“(iii) is a Member of Congress or employed in a position by the Congress at a rate of pay equal to or greater than the rate of pay payable for level V of the Executive Schedule, the restricted period after service referred to in subparagraph (A) shall be permanent.”.

(4) CONGRESS.—Section 207(e) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in paragraph (1)(A) by striking “within 1 year” and inserting “within 2 years”; and

(B) in paragraph (1) by adding at the end thereof the following:

“(D) Any person who is a Member of Congress and who, within 5 years after leaving the position, knowingly makes, with intent to influence, any communication to or appearance before any committee member or a staff member of any committee over which the Member had jurisdiction, on behalf of any other person (except the United States) in connection with any matter on which such former Member seeks action by the committee member or a staff member of the committee in his or her official capacity, shall be punished as provided in section 216 of this title.”.

(C) by redesignating paragraphs (6) and (7) as paragraphs (7) and (8), respectively; and

(D) by inserting after paragraph (5) the following new paragraph:

“(6) HIGHLY PAID STAFFERS.—For any person described in paragraph (2), (3), (4), or (5), employed in a position at a rate of pay equal to or greater than the rate of pay payable for level V of the Executive Schedule—

“(A) the restriction provided in paragraph (1)(A) shall apply; and

“(B) the restricted period after termination in paragraph (2), (3), (4), or (5), applicable to such person shall be 5 years.”.

(b) PENALTIES.—

(1) FUTURE LOBBYING.—Section 216 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

“(d) In addition to the penalties provided in subsections (a), (b), and (c), the punishment for violations of section 207 may include a prohibition on lobbying the United States for a period of not to exceed 5 years for each violation.”.

(2) USE OF PROFITS.—Section 216(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding after the first sentence the following: “Any amount of compensation recovered pursuant to the preceding sentence for a violation of section 207 shall be deposited in the general fund of the Treasury to reduce the deficit.”.

SEC. 3. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The restrictions contained in section 207 of title 18, United States Code, as added by section 2 of this Act—

(1) shall apply only to persons whose service as officers or employees of the Government, or as Members of Congress terminates on or after the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(2) in the case of officers, employees, and Members of Congress described in section 207(b)(1)(B) of title 18, United States Code (as added by section 2 of this Act), shall apply only with respect to participation in trade negotiations or treaty negotiations, and with respect to access to information, occurring on or after such date of enactment.

By Mr. THURMOND:

S. 38. A bill to reform procedures for collateral review of criminal judgments, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REFORM OF INTERVENTION IN STATE PROCEEDINGS ACT

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, the bill I am introducing today would reform Federal habeas corpus and collateral attack procedures. This legislation will minimize Federal judicial interference with State criminal convictions and deal with common abuses typical of habeas prisoner petitions. The Senate passed a bill identical to the one I am introducing by a vote of 67 to 9 several years ago. In fact, the habeas corpus proposal which passed the Senate as an amendment to the Senate crime bill by a vote of 58 to 40 was based in large part on this legislative proposal. This legislation is identical to S. 148 which I introduced last Congress.

This bill proposes amendments to various sections of chapter 153 of title 28 of the United States Code, and a related rule of appellate procedure. Its objectives are to establish a more appropriate scope and function for Federal habeas corpus for State prisoners, accord more appropriate weight to State procedures in criminal adjudication, improve the efficiency of habeas corpus litigation and appellate review of such litigation, and effect certain corresponding improvements in the operation of collateral remedies for Federal prisoners. The proposed amendments would change the operation of Federal collateral remedies in several respects.

First, the proposed amendments would preclude granting relief with respect to matters that have been fully and fairly adjudicated in State proceedings. This important change would enhance the finality of State criminal adjudications and avoid duplicative litigation of claims that have already been adequately considered and decided.

Second, the proposed amendments would generally bar the consideration of claims that have not been properly raised in State proceedings, provided the State has afforded the petitioner an opportunity, consistent with the requirements of Federal law, to raise his claims in the State proceedings.

Third, the proposed amendments would establish a 1 year limitation period for the filing of habeas corpus petitions by State prisoners, which would generally run from the time the prisoner exhausts his State remedies. This limitation period would bar petitions in cases in which the passage of time has made reliable adjudication of the petitioner's claim, or retrial of the petitioner, difficult or impossible. The limitation period would also advance the policies supporting the finality and repose in criminal adjudication.

Fourth, the proposed legislation would clearly state that a Federal habeas court can deny a petition on the merits without requiring prior exhaustion of State remedies. This would avoid the waste of judicial resources that result when a person presenting a frivolous petition is sent back to the State system to exhaust State remedies.

Fifth, the proposed amendments would vest in the judges of the courts of appeals exclusive authority to issue certificates of probable cause for appeal in habeas corpus proceedings. This would entrust the decision concerning the propriety of an appeal to the judges who are in the best position to determine if there is a realistic likelihood for reversal. It would also avoid duplicative consideration of the suitability of a case for appeal, first by a district judge and then by a circuit judge.

Finally, the proposed amendments would make similar changes in the law governing applications for collateral relief by Federal prisoners pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 2255 in the areas of appeal, procedural default, and time limitation.

Federal habeas corpus and collateral attack procedures are in dire need of reform. This is evidenced by the glut of habeas petitions in the Federal system and by the fact that there are over 2,600 convicted murderers sitting on death row. It is time to change the law and limit these unnecessary, frivolous appeals. Federal habeas corpus law has brought our criminal justice system into disrepute. We must pass meaningful habeas corpus reform. The Senate should consider true, tough legislation to resolve this problem.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SEC. 2. Section 2244 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(d) When a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court fails to raise a claim in State proceedings at the time or in the manner required by State rules of procedure, the claim shall not be entertained in an application for a writ of habeas corpus unless actual prejudice resulted to the applicant from the alleged denial of the Federal right asserted and—

"(1) the failure to raise the claim properly or to have it heard in State proceedings was the result of State action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States;

"(2) the Federal right asserted was newly recognized by the Supreme Court subsequent to the procedural default and is retroactively applicable; or

"(3) the factual predicate of the claim could not have been discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence prior to the procedural default.

"(e) A one-year period of limitation shall apply to an application for a writ of habeas corpus by a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court. The limitation period shall run from the latest of the following times:

"(1) the time at which State remedies are exhausted;

"(2) the time at which the impediment to filing an application created by State action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States is removed, where the applicant was prevented from filing by such State action;

"(3) the time at which the Federal right asserted was initially recognized by the Supreme Court, where the right has been newly recognized by the Court and is retroactively applicable; or

"(4) the time at which the factual predicate of the claim or claims presented could have been discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence."

SEC. 3. Section 2253 of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 2253. Appeal

"In a habeas corpus proceeding or a proceeding under section 2255 of this title before a circuit or district judge, the final order shall be subject to review, on appeal, but the court of appeals for the circuit where the proceeding is had.

"There shall be no right of appeal from such an order in a proceeding to test the validity of a warrant to remove, to another district or place for commitment or trial, a person charged with a criminal offense against the United States, or to test the validity of his detention pending removal proceedings.

"An appeal may not be taken to the court of appeals from the final order in a habeas corpus proceeding where the detention complained of arises out of process issued by a State court, or from the final order in a proceeding under section 2255 of this title, unless a circuit justice or judge issues a certificate of probable cause."

SEC. 4. Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 22 is amended to read as follows:

"RULE 22

"HABEAS CORPUS AND § 2255 PROCEEDINGS

"(a) Application for an Original Writ of Habeas Corpus. An application for a writ of habeas corpus shall be made to the appropriate district court. If application is made to a circuit judge, the application will ordinarily be transferred to the appropriate district court. If an application is made to or transferred to the district court and denied, renewal of the application before a circuit judge is not favored; the proper remedy is by appeal to the court of appeals from the order of the district court denying the writ.

"(b) Necessity of Certificate of Probable Cause for Appeal. In a habeas corpus proceeding in which the detention complained of arises out of process issued by a State court, and in a motion proceeding pursuant to section 2255 of title 28, United States Code, an appeal by the applicant or movant may not proceed unless a circuit judge issues a certificate of probable cause. If a request for a certificate of probable cause is addressed to the court of appeals, it shall be deemed addressed to the judges thereof and shall be considered by a circuit judge or judges or as the court deems appropriate. If no express request for a certificate is filed, the notice of appeal shall be deemed to constitute a request addressed to the judges of the court of appeals. If any appeal is taken by a State or the government or its representative, a certificate of probable cause is not required."

SEC. 5. Section 2254 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by redesignating subsections "(e)" and "(f)" as subsections "(f)" and "(g)", respectively, and is further amended—

(a) by amending subsection (b) to read as follows:

"(b) An application for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court shall not be granted unless it appears that the applicant has exhausted the remedies available in the courts of the State, or that there is either an absence of available State corrective process or the existence of circumstances rendering such process ineffective to protect the rights of the applicant. An application may be denied on the merits notwithstanding the failure of the applicant to exhaust the remedies available in the courts of the States."

(b) by redesignating subsection "(d)" as subsection "(e)", and amending it to read as follows:

"(e) In a proceeding instituted by an application for a writ of habeas corpus by a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court, a full and fair determination of a factual issue made in the case by a State court shall be presumed to be correct. The applicant shall have the burden of rebutting this presumption by clear and convincing evidence."

(c) by adding a new subsection (d) reading as follows:

"(d) An application for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court shall not be granted with respect to any claim that has been fully and fairly adjudicated in State proceedings."

SEC. 6. Section 2255 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by deleting the second paragraph and the penultimate paragraph thereof, and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"When a person fails to raise a claim at the time or in the manner required by Federal rules of procedure, the claim shall not be entertained in a motion under this section unless actual prejudice resulted to the movant from the alleged denial of the right asserted and—

"(1) the failure to raise the claim properly, or to have it heard, was the result of governmental action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States;

"(2) the right asserted was newly recognized by the Supreme Court subsequent to the procedural default and is retroactively applicable; or

"(3) the factual predicate of the claim could not have been discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence prior to the procedural default.

"A two-year period of limitation shall apply to a motion under this section. The limitation period shall run from the latest of the following times:

"(1) the time at which the judgment of conviction becomes final;

"(2) the time at which the impediment to making a motion created by governmental action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States is removed, where the movant was prevented from making a motion by such governmental action;

"(3) the time at which the right asserted was initially recognized by the Supreme Court, where the right has been newly recognized by the Court and is retroactively applicable; or

"(4) the time at which the factual predicate of the claim or claims presented could have been discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence."

S. 39. A bill to amend the National Wildlife Refuge Administration Act; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE ADMINISTRATION AMENDMENTS

Mr. ROTH, Mr. President, today I am introducing with 20 of my colleagues legislation that would add the coastal plain of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge [ANWR] to the national wilderness preservation system. The Arctic refuge covers over 19 million acres, 8 million of which are designated as wilderness. Part of this area, the coastal plain, is one of America's last great wildlife refuges and one of our last unprotected ecosystems. I believe it is as valuable as any of our national parks, such as the Grand Canyon or Yellowstone.

The coastal plain of the Arctic refuge also sits atop what some speculate to be the last undeveloped onshore oil field in North America. Experts have differed about the quantity of oil contained in the Arctic refuge, but one thing is clear, we face a serious decision about whether to open this land for oil exploration and drilling. Do we drill, extracting the oil that can be found? Or do we protect this land from the ravages of drilling? I believe that a vote for this bill is a vote for future generations. The decision we make will reflect our values and determine our future.

People all across this Nation are beginning to understand that environmental decisions are long-term decisions. You don't take your remaining wilderness areas—which comprise only 2 percent of all the land in the United States—to the pawn shop for a quick shot of domestic oil.

Mr. President, mark my words, Arctic oil will not make us energy independent. It will be merely a temporary palliative. I'm no antagonist to energy development. I favor a commonsense approach to our energy needs, and that means looking to a variety of sources. But drilling for oil in the Arctic refuge is neither a common sense, nor an environmentally sound solution. The truth is, Americans can conserve as much energy as we can extract from the Arctic refuge. Let's face it—conservation is a renewable energy source. We can continue to conserve energy far beyond the time when the Arctic refuge would be drained dry of oil. But we cannot, and I emphasize this, we cannot get the Arctic refuge back once we have thrown it away. I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 39

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That notwithstanding any provisions of the National Wildlife Refuge Administration Act, a portion of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska comprising approximately 1,485,581 acres, as generally depicted on a map entitled "Arctic National Wildlife—1002 Area. Alternative E—Wilderness Designation October 28, 1991, and available for inspection in the offices of the Secretary of the Interior, is hereby designated as a component of the National Wilderness Preservation System.

Mr. PELL, Mr. President, I am joining in reintroducing a bill to amend the National Wildlife Refuge Administration Act and increase our protection of the fragile Arctic coastal plain wilderness—one of the world's richest ecosystems.

The Alaska lands bill provides the limited protection that the Arctic wilderness now enjoys. As an original cosponsor of that conservation bill of the century, I wholeheartedly support this measure to strengthen the protection it affords Alaska's wilderness.

I am pleased to join the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. ROTH], the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. BAUCUS], and many of our colleagues in seeking permanent protection for the Arctic wilderness.

Our legislation would designate the Arctic coastal plain as part of the national wilderness preservation system. It would take one of our country's last great wilderness areas and put it clearly off limits to development interests.

I hope the Senate will take a commonsense approach to the Arctic coastal plain, but I am concerned that we may become embroiled in a highly emotional confrontation between wilderness preservation and energy development interests.

Such a debate is likely to obscure what I consider the most fundamental facts: Our Nation must not risk a globally irreplaceable wilderness for the long odds of finding enough oil reserves for a short-term energy fix.

Exploration for oil is a gamble and, anyone who says otherwise is not to be trusted. We should be particularly careful because the stakes we may be asked to offer are literally priceless and irreplaceable.

Let's look at the odds. The Department of the Interior has estimated there is less than 1 chance in 5 of finding an economically available supply of oil in the Arctic coastal plain.

Such long-shot odds are not justified, especially when we consider the treasure we would be surrendering.

Let's look at what's in the pot. Estimates vary widely, but the mean estimate of the recoverable oil in the Arctic coastal plain is about 3.2 billion barrels. That's about a 6-month supply of oil for the United States.

Let's look at the payoff. Oil industry experts agree it would take 7 years to see the first oil production, if any is found, and as many as 15 years to hit full production.

Let's look again at our stake. The abundance and diversity of wildlife on the Arctic coastal plain, focused in an area only slightly larger than my home State of Rhode Island, makes it one of the richest ecosystems in the world.

As one who is concerned about the need to preserve our wilderness areas in public trust, I think we would be foolish to gamble. Exploring for oil in this priceless wilderness is a sucker's bet.

Others, with the very best of motives, will argue that the risk may not be as great and the payoff may be greater.

I respect their views and understand their desire for energy reserves, but I cannot support them. We must remember the earlier assurances of safety that were exposed to the world as wishful thinking by the Erron Valdez.

Although the glaring headlines of that vast spill have faded into history, the legacy of that tragedy remains. It could have been worse and, along the Arctic coastal plain, such an ecological disaster could be even more devastating.

It is my view that, instead of risking our wilderness heritage and our children's legacy, we must work even harder to foster greater energy efficiency and to encourage the development of innovative, alternative energy sources.

We must never forget our long-range duty to protect our natural heritage and we must never sacrifice that rich heritage in a blind rush for more oil to feed our profligate energy habits.

• Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I rise to support S. 39, the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge [ANWR] Act. For the third time in as many sessions, I am an original cosponsor of the legislation offered by my colleague from Delaware, Senator ROTH. This bill would designate the Arctic coastal plain wilderness within ANWR, Alaska, as a component of the national wilderness preservation system.

For me, the question of whether the United States should look for oil in ANWR is an easy one to answer for several reasons. First, Mr. President, I believe that the last undisturbed Arctic ecosystem in North America should be preserved in perpetuity so that future generations may learn and benefit from ANWR as ours has.

Second, the best estimates project that even if oil is found in ANWR, it will only provide a temporary supply of petroleum to this country. Then what? The proponents of drilling must realize that such a policy not only places an undue burden on the coastal plain of Alaska, it also perpetuates our continued off-shore interests in the areas of California and Florida, as well as maintains our lack of very important conservation initiatives. I believe that this routine has been, and continues to be, fundamentally against this country's long-term energy and economic needs.

Third, I have very serious reservations concerning the conclusion that development in ANWR could take place in an environmentally benign manner. In the short term, opening the coastal plain would irrevocably destroy that area's pristine wilderness qualities. Moreover, the potential exists for much more severe damage to the region's fish and wildlife. As we have seen, development at Prudhoe Bay has proven to be, in many instances, extremely destructive to that environment, and I refuse to believe that the same thing would not happen at ANWR.

Finally, Mr. President, this country has made only minor commitments to developing alternative and renewable energy resources. Relatively small steps have been taken to develop alternative fuels, and even they have been in the context of clean air—not energy security.

Mr. President, energy conservation is the most crucial factor of an energy policy. For more than a decade, this country's energy policies have been running on empty. As a nation, our modus operandi has been one of unlimited consumption and importation of foreign oil and this all has been underscored with the line of thinking in Congress which has been "Don't do today something that could as easily be done tomorrow."

Well Mr. President, tomorrow has finally come.

These are among the best reasons that I know of to oppose drilling in ANWR. I believe that we all have the responsibility to ourselves, to this country, and to future generations, to work as hard as we can to develop long-term, economically sound, environmentally beneficial energy policies and to conserve oil. This is not occurring nor are we moving in that direction.

Mr. President, I am not willing to live with the ramifications of opening ANWR, and I am heartened that today that we are once again sending a clear signal that we place environmental concerns above shortsighted oil development initiatives.

I am proud to again be an original cosponsor of this important legislation and I urge my colleagues to support it as well. Thank you, Mr. President, and I yield the floor. •

S. 41. A bill granting an extension of patent to the United Daughters of the Confederacy; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EXTENSION OF PATENT TO THE UNITED DAUGHTERS OF THE CONFEDERACY

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, today, I rise to introduce legislation which will extend and renew the design patent for the insignia of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. This design patent was originally issued on November 8, 1998, and has been extended on numerous occasions since then. It was extended in 1926, 1941, 1955, and 1977. In November of last year the patent expired. In order to ensure continued protection for the insignia, Congress must pass this legislation. This is a noncontroversial bill. In fact, it twice passed the Senate by unanimous consent last Congress. Unfortunately, the House failed to act on either measure.

When I first introduced the bill last Congress, it was in response to a request by the president of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, June H. Leake. Mrs. Leake informed me that continued protection of this insignia is vital to her organization.

Mr. President, legislation extended the statutory period for design patents for emblems or badges of patriotic, fraternal, or religious organizations is recognized by Congress as being meritorious and is commonplace. The United Daughters of the Confederacy is the outgrowth of a number of memorial, monument, and Confederate home associations which were organized after the Civil War. It was officially formed in 1890. In fact, I have been informed that the United Daughters of the Confederacy, by way of its consolidation with the auxiliaries of the Confederate Veterans Association, is the oldest patriotic organization in our country. The organization's objectives are noble. Members work to educate others about the Civil War and they work to honor the memory of those who served and those who fell in the service of the Confederate States of America.

Mr. President, it is important that Congress continues to assist and promote patriotic organizations. Passage of this measure will help ensure that the United Daughters of the Confederacy continues to prosper.

For these reasons, I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 41

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That a certain design patent issued by the United States Patent Office of date November 8, 1898, being patent numbered 28,611, which is the insignia of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, which was renewed and extended for a period of fourteen years by the Act entitled "An Act granting an extension of patent to the United Daughters of the Confederacy", approved November 11, 1977 (Public Law 95-168; 91 Stat. 1349), is hereby renewed and extended for an additional period of fourteen years from and after the date of enactment of this Act, with all the rights and privileges pertaining to the same, being generally known as the insignia of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

By Mr. HELMS:

S. 43. A bill to amend title X of the Public Health Service Act to permit family planning projects to offer adoption services, and for other purposes; read the first time.

FEDERAL ADOPTION SERVICES ACT

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I am today introducing the Federal Adoption Services Act of 1991. This legislation which was originally proposed by our former colleagues from New Hampshire, Mr. Humphrey, would amend title X of the Public Health Services Act to allow family planning services to provide adoption services.

This legislation provides that family planning clinics may offer adoption services based on their understanding of the needs of the community as well as the ability of the individual clinic to provide those services.

As we have discovered during debates on title X, there is excessive attention paid in these programs to the prevention or spacing of pregnancies and the limiting of the size of the American family. But the debate should be about much more. It should be about the affirmation of life. That is why adoption should be a part of family planning—since the benefits are obvious for parents unable to care for children as well as for parents who are unable to have children.

More importantly, adoption is a better alternative than abortion in dealing with an unplanned pregnancy.

Mr. President, more than one-third of the women who use title X services are teenagers. If a young, unmarried teenager finds herself pregnant she may not be aware that adoption is an option.

The employees of the family planning clinic may be as poorly informed as well. The bill I am introducing would change that.

Let me be clear, no woman would be threatened or cajoled into giving up her child for adoption, but she would be allowed to make an informed, compassionate, judgment based on all of her available options.

This legislation is written to provide family planning clinics a new option. It is not my intent to force family planning clinics to provide adoption services which they are unable to offer. This legislation merely makes it clear that Federal policy will allow, and hopefully encourage, the use of adoption as a means of family planning.

Mr. President, adoption was called by a wise man, "the loving option." I have seen the joy that it has brought to my family and to many others. In a world where hundreds of children are murdered each day—some simply because their parents do not like the child's gender—why not give life a chance.

It is the responsibility of government to stand and protect the most innocent among us. Let us take up that responsibility.

I urge my colleagues to support this effort to ensure that adoption does not become a forgotten weapon in the war to protect our children.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 43

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Federal Adoption Services Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. ADOPTION SERVICES.

Section 1001(a) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300(a)) is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following new sentences: "Such projects may also offer adoption services. Any adoption services provided under such projects shall be non-discriminatory as to race, color, religion, or national origin."

S. 44. A bill to amend title 18, United States Code, to prohibit any person who is being compensated for lobbying the Federal Government from being paid on a contingency fee basis; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

BANNING CONTINGENCY FEES FOR LOBBYING ACTIVITIES

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, today, I am introducing a bill which would prohibit any person who is being compensated for lobbying the Federal Government from being paid on a contingency fee basis. This bill is virtually identical to a bill I introduced during the final months of the 100th Congress. This legislation takes an important step toward ensuring integrity in the administration of the Federal Government.

Congress as a great responsibility to ensure integrity in the administration of the Federal Government in all its departments. This has become even more important now that we have entered the era of the $1 trillion Federal budget. Vast sums of money are appropriated by Congress for various projects and studies. Contracts worth millions of dollars are regularly entered into by Federal agencies. The competition for these funds and contracts is intense.

It is not realistic to assume that Congress can legislate integrity. However, we can, through legislation, make efforts to remove certain incentives to use undue influence and to enter into contracts which are contrary to the fiscal and ethical interests of our Nation. Accordingly, I have introduced this legislation which will prohibit payment for lobbying on a contingency fee basis.

Mr. President, I have heard reports of certain lobbying activities which greatly disturb me. Specifically, I was informed that one lobbyist approached an institution and inquired as to how much Federal money was needed to fund a particular project. When the response was $12 million, the lobbyist responded that he would ask Congress for $14 million. If successful, he would be paid $2 million. If he was unsuccessful, only a base fee would be charged. When our Nation is bridled with such a huge debt, we certainly cannot afford to borrow more money to provide such suspect incentive payments which work to further increase the deficit.

Many lobbying firms do not operate on a contingency fee basis. Yet, other firms follow this practice. The president of the American League of Lobbyists does not oppose charging a contingency fee for lobbying efforts. Hearings on these issues would be very helpful as this legislation moves through Congress. However, even if it is determined that such arrangements are rare—I take the view that even one is too much. Such arrangements are clearly wrong, and should not be tolerated.

I firmly believe that lobbying on a contingency fee basis is wrong and should not be allowed. Congress should follow the lead of most States by enacting this legislation which would prohibit such arrangements.

Mr. President, the question of the propriety of contingency fees in lobbying activities is not a new one. Common law has held such contracts unenforceable for decades. In fact, in 1916, the Supreme Court ruled on the character of such financial arrangements in the case of Crocker versus United States. The Court, quoting from a prior case, stated:

All contracts  should be made with those  who will execute them most faithfully, and at the least expense to the Government. [Contingency fee arrangements]  tend to introduce personal solicitation, and personal influence, as elements in the procurement of contracts; and thus directly lead to inefficiency in the public service, and to unnecessary expenditures of the public funds.

Mr. President, recognizing the improper incentives contingency fees for lobbyists have injected into Government, 35 States have laws on the books which prohibit payment for lobbying on a contingent fee basis. My home State of South Carolina has prohibited this type of lobbying since 1935.

At the Federal level, contingency fee arrangements are addressed to some extent in the executive branch. Two laws covering contracts awarded by the executive departments—41 U.S.C. 254(a) and 10 U.S.C. 2306(b)—restrict the use of "commission, percentage, brokerage or contingent fee" arrangements to secure these contracts. However, the scope of these statutes is deficient in two respects. First, the violation of these provisions carries little penalty. The Government can only annul the contract secured by a contingency fee arrangement, or deduct from the contract the full amount of the contingency fee. They carry no criminal penalties. Second, these statutes only apply to the executive branch and not to activities involving Congress.

Mr. President, the legislation I am introducing would make contingency fee arrangements to influence government action a crime under Federal law. Any person who violates the provisions of this section shall be fined up to $100,000, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

Moreover, the Attorney General is empowered to bring a civil action to recover twice the proceeds obtained by that person due to such conduct. This act is prospective in nature and would only apply to contracts entered into after enactment.

Lobbyists often provide expertise and helpful information not otherwise available. I want to be clear on this point. This is an important role for lobbyists, but I am opposed to contractual arrangements which impugn the integrity and efficiency of our system. Clearly, a person should be entitled to reasonable fees for legitimate services in presenting officials of the government with information as may apprise them of the character and value of the project or service offered, and thus enable those officers to act for the best interest of the Nation. However, the law has long recognized that contingency fees are not appropriate in some areas while appropriate in others. For instance, contingency fees in tort actions provide the poor with access to the courts and are viewed favorably. In other areas, such as criminal and domestic law, such fees are inappropriate because they introduce improper incentives into the system. Similar principles should apply to contingency fees for lobbying.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support this legislation and I look forward to hearings on this important issue. The public deserves action on the part of Congress.

I ask unanimous consent that this bill be printed in its entirety following these remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 44

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That chapter 11 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) inserting between sections 219 and 223, the following new section:

"§ 220. Contingency fees in lobbying

"(a)(1) It shall be unlawful for any person to make, with intent to influence, any oral or written communication on behalf of any other person other than the United States to any department, agency, court, House of Congress, or commission of the United States, for compensation if such compensation has knowingly been made dependent—

"(A) upon any action of Congress, including but not limited to actions of either the House of Representatives or the Senate, or any committee or member thereof, or the passage or defeat of any proposed legislation;

"(B) upon the securing of an award, or upon the denial of an award of a contract or grant by establishment of the Federal Government; or

"(C) upon the securing, or upon the denial, of any Federal financial assistance or any other Federal contract or grant.

"(2) The provisions of paragraph (1) shall not apply in any case involving the collection of any amount owed on a debt or on a contract claim owed to a person by the Federal Government.

"(b) Any person who violates the provisions of this section shall be fined not more than $50,000 or imprisoned not more than two years, or both.

"(c) The Attorney General may bring a civil action in any United States district court, on behalf of the United States, against any person who engages in conduct prohibited by this section in lieu of or in addition to an action taken pursuant to subsection (b), and, upon proof of such conduct by a preponderance of the evidence, may recover twice the amount of any proceeds obtained by that person due to such conduct. Such civil action shall be barred unless the action is commenced within six years after the later of (1) the date on which the prohibited conduct occurred, or (2) the date on which the United States became or reasonably should have become aware that the prohibited conduct had occurred.";

(2) amending the table of sections by striking out the item between the item relating to section 219 and the item relating to section 224 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"220. Contingency fees in lobbying."

SEC. 2. This Act and the amendments made by this Act shall become effective on the date of enactment of this Act and shall apply to any contract entered into on or after such date of enactment.

By Mr. THURMOND:

S. 45. A bill to establish constitutional procedures for the imposition of the death penalty for terrorist murders and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PROTECTION AGAINST TERRORISM ACT

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, today I rise to introduce a measure which responds to the increased threat of terrorism against the United States and its citizens. This bill would authorize the death penalty for terrorist murders—committed either here in the United States or abroad. The measure also enhances penalties for terrorism in cases where death does not result. In addition, this bill would enhance the Government's ability to remove known terrorist aliens from the United States.

Saddam Hussein, in the first days following Desert Storm, called for the international network of terrorists to strike out against the United States and its people. Congress must respond to this threat. Acts of international terrorism against the citizens of the United States must not be permitted to go unpunished. Terrorism—the heinous, politically motivated acts carried out against the world's innocent—must be brought to an end. We must not allow these vicious murders to hide behind a veil of political struggle and spill innocent American blood without facing severe punishment.

Mr. President, this bill would amend title 18 to authorize a sentence of death for a terrorist murder committed against any person inside the United States or committed against United States nationals outside the United States. In order for the death penalty to be sought, the Attorney General would have to certify that the murder was a terrorist act intended to coerce, intimidate, or retaliate against a Government or a civilian population.

Currently, numerous Federal statutes provide that a sentence of death may be imposed if a person is found guilty. However, the reality is that the death penalty may not be imposed for these offenses because constitutional procedures for imposing such a sentence have not existed. In addition to this bill, I am also introducing a measure which would establish the necessary constitutional procedures for the implementation of a comprehensive Federal death penalty. Although I strongly believe that Congress should pass a comprehensive death penalty measure, the unique situation which confronts this Nation dictates that we move swiftly to pass a terrorism death penalty bill. Congress should ensure that those who respond to Saddam's calls for terrorism pay the ultimate price.

Mr. President, this measure also enhances the penalties for other terrorist acts. For example, the maximum penalty for those who engage in an attempted act of terrorism is increased from 20 to 35 years imprisonment. In addition, if an individual engages in physical violence with the intent to cause serious bodily injury and such injury does result, then that individual will face up to 10 years imprisonment.

Mr. President, according to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, there are numerous known operatives for international terrorist organizations currently residing in the United States. Congress must respond to this threat by ensuring that these individuals pay the ultimate price if they choose to act. Furthermore, Congress should assist the administration in its efforts to remove these aliens from our soil. I have included in this bill a measure which the FBI has requested that will amend current law to facilitate the removal of known terrorists from the United States. Under current law, the Federal Government finds it difficult to remove these terrorists from our country due to cumbersome deportation procedures. Meanwhile, these dangerous individuals are permitted to roam our streets and plan their vicious cowardly acts. This bill also includes a provision requested by the FBI which amends current law to enhance its ability to identify the subscriber to a phone company or other communications facility if he or she has been in contact with a foreign power or agent of a foreign power. In other words, it will facilitate the FBI's ability to learn the identity of individuals who have been in telephone contact with known terrorists.

Mr. President, the FBI has responded well to the threat of terrorism, both domestically and abroad. Congress must strengthen the ability of the FBI to deter terrorist activity. This bill would give those responsible for protecting America from terrorism the tools they need to remove known terrorists—those who have previously committed vicious acts in other countries—from our soil.

In summary, terrorism has plagued the world for many years. Increasingly, the United States has been the focus of such acts. For example, no one can forget the 241 U.S. military servicemen killed in Beirut by a suicide truck bomber in October 1983 or the innocent Americans killed in the December 1988 bombing of Pan Am flight 103 over Scotland. In 1991, a terrorist accidentally detonated a bomb, killing himself, on his way to plant it in a U.S. Government building in Manila. All of these incidents, combined with the Butcher of Baghdad's call to terrorism, clearly illustrate the fact that there is, indeed, an increased threat of terrorism against our people.

Mr. President, this bill will send a strong signal to those international terrorist groups that choose to make victims of innocent Americans. That message is, "If you choose to prey upon innocent Americans, you will pay the supreme price—your life." We simply cannot hesitate any longer to ensure that terrorist acts will be dealt with harshly.

In closing, Saddam Hussein has made it clear that he is unmoved by human decency and encourages acts of terrorism. His amoral acts of gassing his own people, dropping Scud missiles on Israeli civilians, and his threats during the Gulf conflict to use American POW's as human shields illustrate his barbarism. Congress must act to deter and punish those who commit terrorism and take the lives of innocent Americans. Those who are known terrorists must not be permitted to lurk among us. Instead, they must be removed from our soil. In addition, those who would commit vicious, brutal acts must pay the ultimate price. We must treat terrorists for what they are—murderers—who should face the death penalty for their heinous crimes.

For these reasons, I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 45

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Protection Against Terrorism Act of 1993".

TITLE I—"TERRORISM DEATH PENALTY ACT OF 1993".

SEC. 101. DEATH PENALTY FOR TERRORIST ACTS.

(a) OFFENSE.—Subsections 2331 (a) through (c) of title 18 of the United States Code are amended to read as follows:

"(a) HOMICIDE.—Whoever kills a person while such person is inside the United States, or kills a national of the United States, while such national is outside the United States, shall—

"(1)(A) if the killing is a first degree murder as defined in section 1111(a) of this title, be punished by death or imprisonment for any term of years or for life, or be fined under this title, or both; and

"(B) if the killing is a murder other than a first degree murder as defined in section 1111(a) of this title, be fined under this title or imprisoned for any term of years or for life, or both so fined and so imprisoned;

"(2) if the killing is a voluntary manslaughter as defined in section 1112(a) of this title, be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than thirty years, or both; and

"(3) if the killing is an involuntary manslaughter as defined in section 1112(a) of this title, be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both.

"(b) ATTEMPT OR CONSPIRACY WITH RESPECT TO HOMICIDE.—Whoever attempts to kill, or engages in a conspiracy to kill, any human being inside the United States or any national of the United States while such national is outside the United States shall—

"(1) in the case of an attempt to commit a killing that is a murder as defined in this chapter, be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than thirty-five years, or both; and

"(2) in the case of a conspiracy by two or more persons to commit a killing that is a murder as defined in section 1111(a) of this title, if one or more of such persons do any overt act to effect the object of the conspiracy, be fined under this title or imprisoned for any term of years or for life, or both so fined and so imprisoned.

"(c) OTHER CONDUCT.—Whoever engages in physical violence—

"(1) with intent to cause serious bodily injury to a person inside the United States, or a national of the United States while such national is outside the United States; or

"(2) with the result that serious bodily injury is caused to a person inside the United States, or to a national of the United States while such national is outside the United States; shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both."

(b) DEATH PENALTY.—Section 2331 of title 18 of the United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(f) DEATH PENALTY PROCEDURES.—

"(1) SENTENCE OF DEATH.—A defendant who has been found guilty of an offense described in subsection (a)(1)(A), if the defendant, as determined beyond a reasonable doubt at a hearing under paragraph 3—

"(A) intentionally killed the victim;

"(B) intentionally inflicted serious bodily injury that resulted in the death of the victim;

"(C) intentionally participated in an act, contemplating that the life of a person would be taken or intending that lethal force would be used in connection with a person, other than one of the participants in the offense, and the victim died as a direct result of the act; or

"(D) intentionally and specifically engaged in an act, knowing that the act created a grave risk of death to a person, other than one of the participants in the offense, such that participation in the act constituted a reckless disregard for human life and the victim died as a direct result of the act.

shall be sentenced to death if, after consideration of the factors set forth in paragraph (2) in the course of a hearing held pursuant to paragraph (3) it is determined that imposition of a sentence of death is justified; provided that no person may be sentenced to death who was less than sixteen years of age at the time of the offense.

"(2) FACTORS TO BE CONSIDERED IN DETERMINING WHETHER A SENTENCE OF DEATH IS JUSTIFIED—

"(A) MITIGATING FACTORS.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified, the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following mitigating factors and determine which, if any, exist:

"(i) the defendant's mental capacity was significantly impaired, although the impairment was not such as to constitute a defense to prosecution;

"(ii) the defendant was under unusual and substantial duress, although not such duress as would constitute a defense to prosecution; and

"(iii) the defendant was an accomplice and participation in the offense was relatively minor.

The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider whether any other mitigating factor exists.

"(B) AGGRAVATING FACTORS.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified, the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following aggravating factors and determine which, if any, exist:

"(i) the death, or injury resulting in death, occurred during the commission or attempted commission of, or during the immediate flight from the commission of, an offense under section 751 (prisoners in custody of institution or officer), section 794 (gathering or delivering defense information to aid foreign government), section 844(d) (transportation of explosives in interstate commerce for certain purposes), section 844(f) (destruction of Government property in interstate commerce by explosives), section 1118 (prisoners serving life term), section 1201 (kidnaping), or section 2381 (treason) of this title, or section 902 (i) or (n) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, as amended (49 U.S.C. 1472 (i) or (n)) (aircraft piracy);

"(ii) the defendant has previously been convicted of another Federal or State offense resulting in the death of a person, for which a sentence of life imprisonment or a sentence of death was authorized by statute;

"(iii) the defendant has previously been convicted of two or more Federal or State offenses, punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than one year, committed on different occasions, involving the infliction of, or attempted infliction of, serious bodily injury or death upon another person;

"(iv) the defendant, in the commission of the offense, or in escaping apprehension for the violation of the offense, knowingly created a grave risk of death to one or more persons in addition to the victim of the offense;

"(v) the defendant committed the offense in an especially heinous, cruel, or depraved manner;

"(vi) the defendant procured the commission of the offense by payment or promise of payment of anything of pecuniary value;

"(vii) the defendant committed the offense as consideration for the receipt, or in the expectation of the receipt, of anything of pecuniary value;

"(viii) the defendant committed the offense after planning and premeditation to cause the death of a person or commit an act of terrorism;

"(ix) the defendant has previously been convicted of two or more State or Federal offenses punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than one year, committed on different occasions, involving the distribution of a controlled substance;

"(x) the victim was particularly vulnerable due to old age, youth or infirmity, the defendant committed the offense against—

"(I) the President of the United States, the President-elect, the Vice President, the Vice President-elect, the Vice-President-designate, or, if there is no Vice President, the officer next in order of succession to the office of the President of the United States, or any person who is acting as President under the Constitution and laws of the United States;

"(II) a chief of state, head of government, or the political equivalent, of a foreign nation;

"(III) a foreign official listed in section 1116(b)(3)(A) of this title, if he is in the United States on official business; or

"(iv) a Federal public servant who is a judge, a law enforcement officer, or an employee of a United States penal or correctional institution—

"(aa) while he is engaged in the performance of his official duties;

"(bb) because of the performance of his official duties; or

"(cc) because of his status as a public servant.

For purposes of this subparagraph, a 'law enforcement officer' is a public servant authorized by law or by a Government agency or Congress to conduct or engage in the prevention, investigation, or prosecution of an offense.

The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, may consider whether any other aggravating factor exists.

“(3) SPECIAL HEARING TO DETERMINE WHETHER A SENTENCE OF DEATH IS JUSTIFIED.—

“(A) NOTICE BY THE GOVERNMENT.—If the attorney for the Government believes that the circumstances of the offense are such that a sentence of death is justified under this chapter, he shall, a reasonable time before the trial, or before acceptance by the court of a plea of guilty, or at such time thereafter as the court may permit upon a showing of good cause, sign and file with the court, and serve on the defendant, a notice—

“(i) stating that the Government believes that the circumstances of the offense are such that, if the defendant is convicted, a sentence of death is justified under this chapter and that the Government will seek the sentence of death; and “(ii) setting forth the aggravating factor or factors that the Government, if the defendant is convicted, proposes to prove as justifying a sentence of death.

The court may permit the attorney for the Government to amend the notice upon a showing of good cause.

“(B) HEARING BEFORE A COURT OR JURY.—If the attorney for the Government has filed a notice as required under subsection (a) and the defendant is found guilty of or pleads guilty to an offense described in paragraph (1), the judge who presided at the trial or before whom the guilty plea was entered, or another judge if that judge is unavailable, shall conduct a separate sentencing hearing to determine the punishment to be imposed. The hearing shall be conducted—

“(i) before the jury that determined the defendant's guilt;

“(ii) before a jury impaneled for the purpose of the hearing if—

“(I) the defendant was convicted upon a plea of guilty;

“(II) the defendant was convicted after a trial before the court sitting without a jury;

“(III) the jury that determined the defendant's guilt was discharged for good cause; or “(IV) after initial imposition of a sentence under this section, reconsideration of the sentence under this section is necessary; or “(iii) before the court alone, upon the motion of the defendant and with the approval of the attorney for the Government.

A jury impaneled pursuant to paragraph (3)(b)(2) shall consist of twelve members, unless, at any time before the conclusion of the hearing, the parties stipulate, with the approval of the court, that it shall consist of a lesser number.

“(C) PROOF OF MITIGATING AND AGGRAVATING FACTORS.—Notwithstanding rule 32(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, when a defendant is found guilty or pleads guilty to an offense under paragraph (1), no presentence report shall be prepared. At the sentencing hearing, information may be presented as to any matter relevant to the sentence, including any mitigating or aggravating factor permitted or required to be considered under paragraph (2). Information presented may include the trial transcript and exhibits if the hearing is held before a jury or judge not present during the trial. Any other information relevant to a mitigating or aggravating factor may be presented by either the attorney for the Government or the defendant, regardless of its admissibility under the rules governing admission of evidence at criminal trials, except that information may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of creating unfair prejudice, confusing the issues, or misleading the jury. The Government and the defendant shall be permitted to rebut any information received at the hearing, and shall be given fair opportunity to present argument as to the adequacy of the information to establish the existence of any aggravating or mitigating factor, and as to the appropriateness in the case of imposing a sentence of death. The Government shall open the argument. The defendant shall be permitted to reply. The Government shall then be permitted to reply in rebuttal. The burden of establishing the existence of any aggravating factor is on the Government, and is not satisfied unless the existence of such a factor is established beyond a reasonable doubt. The burden of establishing the existence of any mitigating factor is on the defendant, and is not satisfied unless the existence of such a factor is established by a preponderance of the information.

“(D) RETURN OF SPECIAL FINDINGS.—The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider all the information received during the hearing. It shall return a special finding as to each mitigating and aggravating factor, concerning which information is presented at the hearing, required to be considered under paragraph (2). The jury must find the existence of an aggravating factor by a unanimous vote although it is unnecessary that there be a unanimous vote on any specific aggravating factor if a majority of the jury finds the existence of such a specific factor. A finding with respect to a mitigating factor may be made by one or more members of the jury and any member of the jury who finds the existence of a mitigating factor may consider such a factor established for purposes of this section, regardless of the number of jurors who consider that the factor has been established.

“(E) RETURN OF A FINDING CONCERNING A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—If an aggravating factor required to be considered under subparagraph (2)(c) is found to exist; the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall then consider whether all the aggravating factors found to exist sufficiently outweigh all the mitigating factors found to exist to justify a sentence of death, or, in the absence of a mitigating factor, whether the aggravating factors alone are sufficient to justify a sentence of death. Based upon this consideration, the jury by unanimous vote, or if there is no jury, the court shall return a finding as to whether a sentence of death is justified.

“(F) SPECIAL PRECAUTION TO ASSURE AGAINST DISCRIMINATION.—In a hearing held before a jury, the court, prior to the return of a finding under subparagraph (E), shall instruct the jury that, in considering whether a sentence of death is justified, it shall not consider the race, color, national origin, creed, or sex of the defendant. The jury, upon return of a finding under subparagraph (E), shall also return to the court a certificate, signed by each juror, that consideration of the race, color, national origin, creed, or sex of the defendant was not involved in reaching the juror's individual decision.

“(4) IMPOSITION OF A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—Upon a finding under subparagraph (3)(E) that a sentence of death is justified, the court shall sentence the defendant to death. Upon a finding under subparagraph (3)(E) that a sentence of death is not justified, or under subparagraph (3)(E) that no aggravating factor required to be found exists, the court shall impose any sentence other than death that is authorized by law. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if the maximum term of imprisonment for the offense is life imprisonment the court may impose a sentence of life imprisonment without parole.

“(5) REVIEW OF A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—

“(A) APPEAL.—In a case in which a sentence of death is imposed, the sentence shall be subject to review by the court of appeals upon appeal by the defendant. Notice of appeal must be filed within the time specified for the filing of a notice of appeal. An appeal under this section may be consolidated with an appeal of the judgment of conviction and shall have priority over all other cases.

“(B) REVIEW.—The court of appeals shall review the entire record in the case, including—

“(i) the evidence submitted during the trial;

“(ii) the information submitted during the sentencing hearing;

“(iii) the procedures employed in the sentencing hearing; and “(iv) the special findings returned under subparagraph (3)(D).

“(C) DECISION AND DISPOSITION.—

“(i) If the court of appeals determines that—

“(I) the sentence of death was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor; and “(II) the information supports the special finding of the existence of an aggravating factor required to be considered under paragraph (2); it shall affirm the sentence.

“(ii) In any other case, the court of appeals shall remand the case for reconsideration under paragraph (3).

“(iii) The court of appeals shall state in writing the reasons for its disposition of an appeal of a sentence of death under this section.

“(6) IMPLEMENTATION OF A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—A person who has been sentenced to death pursuant to the provisions of this chapter shall be committed to the custody of the Attorney General until exhaustion of the procedures for appeal of the judgment of conviction and for review of the sentence. When the sentence is to be implemented, the Attorney General shall release the person sentenced to death to the custody of a United States marshal, who shall supervise implementation of the sentence in the manner prescribed by the law of the State in which the sentence is imposed. If the law of such State does not provide for implementation of a sentence of death, the court shall designate another State, the law of which does so provide, and the sentence shall be implemented in the latter State in the manner prescribed by such law. A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a woman while she is pregnant.

“(7) USE OF STATE FACILITIES.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—A United States marshal charged with supervising the implementation of a sentence of death may use appropriate State or local facilities for the purpose, may use the services of an appropriate State or local official or of a person such as an official employs for the purpose, and shall pay the costs thereof in an amount approved by the Attorney General.

“(B) EXCUSE OF AN EMPLOYEE ON MORAL OR RELIGIOUS GROUNDS.—No employee of any State department of corrections or the Federal Bureau of Prisons and no employee providing services to that department or bureau under contract shall be required as a condition of that employment, or contractual obligation to be in attendance at or to participate in any execution carried out under this section if such participation is contrary to the moral or religious convictions of the employee. For purposes of this subsection, the term 'participation in execution' includes personal preparation of the condemned individual and the apparatus used for execution and supervision of the activities of other personnel in carrying out such activities."

TITLE II—TERRORIST ALIEN REMOVAL

SEC. 201. This Act may be cited as the "Terrorist Alien Removal Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. The Congress finds that (a) Terrorist groups have been able to create significant infrastructures and cells in the United States among persons who are in the United States either temporarily, as students or in other capacities, or as permanent resident aliens.

(b) International terrorist groups that sponsor these infrastructures were responsible for—

(1) conspiring to bomb the Turkish Honorary Consulate in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania in 1982;

(2) hijacking Trans World Airlines Flight 847 during which a United States Navy diver was murdered in 1985;

(3) hijacking Egypt Air Flight 648 during which three Americans were killed in 1985;

(4) murdering an American citizen aboard the Achille Lauro cruise liner in 1985;

(5) hijacking Pan Am Flight 73 in Karachi, Pakistan, in which forty-four Americans were held hostage and two were killed in 1986;

(6) conspiring to bomb an Air India aircraft in New York City in 1986;

(7) attempting to bomb the Air Canada cargo facility at the Los Angeles International airport in 1986; and

(8) numerous bombings and murders in Northern Ireland over the past decade.

(c) Certain governments and organizations have directed their assets in the United States to take measures in preparation for the commission of terrorist acts in this country.

(d) Present immigration laws have not been used to any significant degree by law enforcement officials to deport alien terrorists because compliance with these laws with respect to such aliens would compromise classified intelligence sources and information. Moreover, appellate procedures routinely afforded aliens following a deportation hearing frequently extend over several years resulting in an inability to remove expeditiously aliens engaging in terrorist activity.

(e) Present immigration laws are inadequate to protect the national security of the United States from terrorist attacks by certain aliens. Therefore, new procedures are needed to remove alien terrorists from the United States and thus reduce the threat that such aliens pose to the national security and other vital interests of the United States.

SEC. 203. (a) Subsection 241(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1251(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof a new paragraph 21 as follows:

"(21) either prior or subsequent to entry is engaging in or has engaged in terrorist activity."

(b) Subsection 101(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(43) The term 'terrorist activity' means any activity which is unlawful under the laws of the place where it is committed, or which, if committed in the United States would have been unlawful under the laws of the United States or of any State and which involves—

"(A) the hijacking of an aircraft, vessel, or vehicle;

"(B) the sabotage of an aircraft, vessel, or vehicle;

"(C) the seizing or detaining and threatening to kill, injure, or continue to detain another person in order to compel a third person or governmental organization to do or abstain from doing any act as an explicit or implicit condition for the release of the person detained or seized;

"(D) a violent attack upon the person or liberty of an 'internationally protected person' as defined in 18 U.S.C. 1116(b)(4);

"(E) the use of any explosive, biological agent, chemical agent, nuclear weapon or device, or firearm with intent to endanger, directly or indirectly, the safety of people or cause substantial damage to property;

"(F) an assassination; or

"(G) any threat, attempt, or conspiracy to do any of the foregoing.

"(44) The term 'engage in a terrorist activity' means to commit an act of terrorist activity or to do an act which the actor knows, or reasonably should know, affords material support to any individual or enterprise in conducting terrorist activity at any time including, but not limited to—

"(A) the preparation and planning of terrorist activity;

"(B) the gathering of intelligence on potential targets for terrorist activity;

"(C) the providing of any type of material support including but not limited to a safe house, transportation, funds, false identification, weapon, or explosive to any individual who the actor knows or has reason to believe has committed or plans to commit an act of terrorist activity;

"(D) the soliciting of funds or other things of value for terrorist activity or for any organization which engages in or which has engaged in terrorist activity; or

"(E) the solicitation of any individual for membership in a terrorist enterprise;

The term does not include lawful speeches, writings, or attendance and participation in peaceful public assemblies; Provided, however, That evidence of any speech, writing, or participation in any public assembly may be used to show the actor's awareness of the unlawful methods of an individual or enterprise conducting terrorist activity.

"(45) The term 'individual' means a human being.

"(46) The term 'enterprise' means an organization or government."

SEC. 204. The Immigration and Nationality Act is amended by adding at the end thereof a new title V as follows:

TITLE V—REMOVAL OF ALIEN TERRORISTS

"Sec.

"501 (adds 8 U.S.C. §1601). Applicability.

"502 (adds 8 U.S.C. §1602). Special Removal Hearing.

"503 (adds 8 U.S.C. §1603). Designation of Judges.

"504 (adds 8 U.S.C. §1604). Miscellaneous Provisions.

"§ 501. Applicability

"(a) The provisions of this title may be followed in the discretion of the Department of Justice whenever the Department of Justice has information that an alien described in paragraph 21 of subsection 241(a) of this Act (8 U.S.C. 1251(a)(21)) is subject to deportation because of that paragraph.

"(b) Whenever an official of the Department of Justice files, under section 502, an application with the court established under section 503 for authorization to seek removal pursuant to the provisions of this title, the alien's rights regarding removal and expulsion shall be governed solely by the provisions of this title. Except as they are specifically referenced, no other provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Act shall be applicable. An alien subject to removal under these provisions shall have no right of discovery of information derived from electronic surveillance authorized under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act or otherwise for national security purposes, nor shall such alien have the right to seek suppression of evidence derived in such manner. Further, the Government is authorized to use, in the removal proceeding, the fruits of electronic surveillance authorized under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act without regard to subsections 106 (c), (e), (f), (g), and (h) of that Act.

"(c) This title is enacted in response to findings of Congress that aliens described in paragraph 21 of subsection 241(a) of this Act (8 U.S.C. 1251(a)(21)) represent a unique threat to the security of the United States. It is the intention of Congress that such aliens be promptly removed from the United States following—

"(1) a judicial determination of probable cause to believe that a person is such an alien; and

"(2) a judicial determination pursuant to the provisions of this title that an alien is removable on the grounds that he is an alien described in paragraph 21 of subsection 241(a) (8 U.S.C. 1251(a)(21)); and that such aliens not be given a deportation hearing and are ineligible for any discretionary relief from deportation and for relief under subsection 243(h) of the Immigration and Nationality Act.

"§ 502. Special Removal Hearing

"(a) Whenever removal of an alien is sought pursuant to the provisions of this title, a written application upon oath or affirmation shall be submitted in camera and ex parte to the court established under section 503 for an order authorizing such a procedure. Each application shall require the approval of the Attorney General, the Deputy Attorney General, or the Associate Attorney General based upon his finding that it satisfies the criteria and requirements for such application as set forth in this title. Each application shall include—

"(1) the identity of the Department of Justice attorney making the application;

"(2) the approval of the Attorney General, the Deputy Attorney General, or the Associate Attorney General for the making of the application;

"(3) the identity of the alien for whom authorization for the special removal procedure is sought; and

"(4) a statement of facts and circumstances relied on by the Department of Justice to establish that—

"(A) an alien as described in paragraph 21 of subsection 241(a) of this Act (8 U.S.C. 1251(a)(21)) is physically present in the United States, and

"(B) with respect to such alien, adherence to the provisions of title II of this Act regarding the deportation of aliens would tend to harm the national security of the United States, adversely affect foreign relations, reveal an investigative technique important to efficient law enforcement, or disclose a confidential source of information.

"(b) The application shall be filed under seal with the court established under section 503. The Attorney General may take into custody any alien with respect to whom such an application has been filed and, notwithstanding any other provision of law, may retain such an alien in custody in accordance with the procedures authorized by this title.

"(c) In accordance with the rules of the court established under section 503, the judge shall consider the application and may consider other information presented under oath or affirmation at an in camera and ex parte hearing on the application. A verbatim record shall be maintained of such a hearing. The application and any other evidence shall be considered by a single judge of that court who shall enter an ex parte order as requested if he finds, on the basis of the facts submitted in the application and any other information provided by the Department of Justice at the in camera and ex parte hearing, there is probable cause to believe that—

"(1) the alien who is the subject of the application has been correctly identified and is an alien as described in paragraph 21 of subsection 241(a) of this Act (8 U.S.C. 1251(a)); and

"(2) adherence to the provisions of title II of this Act regarding the deportation of the identified alien would tend to harm the national security of the United States, adversely affect foreign relations, reveal an investigative technique important to efficient law enforcement or disclose a confidential source of information.

"(d)(1) In any case in which the application for the order is denied, the judge shall prepare a written statement of his reasons for the denial and the Department of Justice may seek a review of the denial by the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit by notice of appeal which must be filed within twenty days. In such a case the entire record of the proceeding shall be transmitted to the Court of Appeals under seal and the Court of Appeals shall hear the matter ex parte.

"(2) If the Department of Justice does not seek review, the alien shall be released from custody unless such alien may be arrested and taken into custody pursuant to title II of this Act as an alien subject to deportation, in which case such alien shall be treated in accordance with the provisions of this Act concerning the deportation of aliens.

"(3) If the application for the order is denied because the judge has not found probable cause to believe that the alien who is the subject of the application has been correctly identified or is an alien as described in paragraph 21 of subsection 241(a) of this Act (8 U.S.C. 1251(a)) and the Department of Justice seeks review, the alien shall be released from custody unless such alien may be arrested and taken into custody pursuant to title II of this Act as an alien subject to deportation, in which case such alien shall be treated in accordance with the provisions of this Act concerning the deportation of aliens simultaneously with the application of this Title.

"(4) If the application for the order is denied because, although the judge found probable cause to believe that the alien who is the subject of the application has been correctly identified and is an alien as described in paragraph 21 of subsection 241(a) of this Act (8 U.S.C. 1251(a)), the judge has found that there is not probable cause to believe that adherence to the provisions of title II of this Act regarding the deportation of the identified alien would tend to harm the national security of the United States, adversely affect foreign relations, reveal an investigative technique important to efficient law enforcement, or disclose a confidential source of information, the judge shall release the alien from custody subject to the least restrictive condition or combination of conditions of release described in subsection 3142 (b) and (c)(1)(B)(i)-(xiv) of title 18 that will reasonably assure the appearance of the alien at any future proceeding pursuant to this title and will not endanger the safety of any other person or the community, but if the judge finds no such condition or combination of conditions the alien shall remain in custody until the completion of any appeal authorized by this title. The provisions of sections 3145-3148 of title 18 pertaining to review and appeal of a release or detention order, penalties for failure to appear, penalties for an offense committed while on release, and sanctions for violations of a release condition shall apply to an alien to whom the previous sentence applies and—

"(A) for purposes of section 3145 an appeal shall be taken to the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit; and

"(B) for purposes of section 3146 the alien shall be considered released in connection with a charge of an offense punishable by life imprisonment.

"(e)(1) In any case in which the application for the order authorizing the special procedures of this title is approved, the judge who granted the order shall consider separately each item of evidence the Department of Justice proposes to introduce in camera and ex parte at the special removal hearing. The judge shall authorize the introduction in camera and ex parte of any item of evidence for which the judge determines that the introduction other than in camera and ex parte would tend to harm the national security of the United States, adversely affect foreign relations, reveal an investigative technique important to efficient law enforcement, or disclose a confidential source of information. With respect to any evidence which the judge authorizes to be introduced in camera and ex parte, the judge shall cause to be prepared and shall sign, and the Department of Justice shall cause to be delivered to the alien, either—

"(A) a written summary which shall be sufficient to inform the alien of the general nature of the evidence that he is an alien as described in paragraph 21 of subsection 241(a) of this Act (8 U.S.C. 1251(a)(21)) and to permit the alien to marshal the facts and prepare a defense, but which shall not tend to harm the national security, adversely affect foreign relations, reveal an investigative technique important to efficient law enforcement, or disclose a confidential source; or

"(B) if necessary to prevent serious harm to the national security or death or serious bodily injury to any person, a statement informing the alien that no such summary is possible.

"(2) The Department of Justice may take an interlocutory appeal to the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit of any determination by the judge pursuant to paragraph (1)—

"(A) concerning whether an item of evidence may be introduced in camera and ex parte;

"(B) concerning the contents of any summary of evidence to be introduced in camera and ex parte prepared pursuant to subparagraph (e)(1)(A); or

"(C) ruling that no summary of evidence to be introduced in camera and ex parte is possible pursuant to subparagraph (e)(1)(B).

In any interlocutory appeal taken pursuant to this paragraph, the entire record, including any proposed order of the judge or summary of evidence, shall be transmitted to the Court of Appeals under seal which shall hear the matter ex parte. The Court of Appeals shall consider the appeal as expeditiously as possible.

"(f) In any case in which the application for the order is approved the special removal hearing authorized by this section shall be conducted for the purpose of determining if the alien to whom the order pertains should be removed from the United States on the grounds that he is an alien as described in paragraph 21 of subsection 241(a) of this Act (8 U.S.C. 1251(a)(21)). In accordance with subsection (e), the alien shall be given reasonable notice of the nature of the charges against him. The alien shall be given notice, reasonable under all the circumstances, of the time and place at which the hearing will be held. The hearing shall be held as expeditiously as possible.

"(g) The special removal hearing shall be held before the same judge who granted the order pursuant to subsection (e) unless that judge is deemed unavailable due to illness or disability by the chief judge of the court established pursuant to section 503, or has died. A decision by the chief judge pursuant to the preceding sentence shall not be subject to review by either the alien or the Department of Justice.

"(h) The hearing shall be open to the public. The alien shall have a right to be present as such hearing and to be represented by counsel. Any alien financially unable to obtain counsel shall be entitled to have counsel assigned to represent him. Such counsel shall be appointed by the judge pursuant to the plan for furnishing representation for any person financially unable to obtain adequate representation for the district in which the hearing is conducted as provided for in section 3006A of title 18, all provisions of that section shall apply, and for purposes of determining the maximum amount of compensation, the matter shall be treated as if a felony was charged. The alien may be called as a witness by the Department of Justice. The alien shall have a right to introduce evidence on his own behalf. Except as provided in subsection (j), the alien shall have a reasonable opportunity to examine the evidence against him and to cross-examine any witnesses. A verbatim record of the proceedings and of all testimony and evidence offered or produced at such a hearing shall be kept. The decision of the judge shall be based only on the evidence introduced at the hearing, including evidence introduced under subsection (j).

"(i) At any time prior to the conclusion of the hearing, either the alien or the Department of Justice may request the judge to issue a subpoena for the presence of a named witness (which subpoena may also command the person to whom it is directed to produce books, papers, documents, or other objects designated therein) upon a satisfactory showing that the presence of the witness is necessary for the determination of any material matter. Such a request may be made ex parte except that the judge shall inform the Department of Justice of any request for a subpoena by the alien for a witness or material if compliance with such a subpoena would reveal evidence or the source of evidence which has been introduced, or which the Department of Justice has received permission to introduce, in camera and ex parte pursuant to subsection (j), and the Department of Justice shall be given a reasonable opportunity to oppose the issuance of such a subpoena. If an application for a subpoena by the alien also makes a showing that the alien is financially unable to pay for the attendance of a witness so requested, the court may order the costs incurred by the process and the fees of the witness so subpoenaed to be paid for from funds appropriated for the enforcement of title II of this Act. A subpoena under this subsection may be served anywhere in the United States. A witness subpoenaed under this subsection shall receive the same fees and expenses as a witness subpoenaed in connection with a civil proceeding in a court of the United States. Nothing in this subsection is intended to allow an alien to have access to classified information.

"(j) Evidence which has either been summarized pursuant to subsection (e)(1)(A) or for which no summary has been deemed possible pursuant to subsection (e)(1)(B) shall be introduced (either in writing or through testimony) in camera and ex parte and neither the alien, nor the public shall be informed of such evidence or its source other than through reference to the summary provided pursuant to subsection (e)(1)(A) or to the explanation that no summary could be provided pursuant to subsection (e)(1)(B). Notwithstanding the previous sentence, the Department of Justice may, in its discretion, elect to introduce such evidence in open session.

"(k) Evidence introduced at the hearing, either in open session or in camera and ex parte may, in the discretion of the Department of Justice, include all or part of the information presented under subsections (a) through (c) used to obtain the order for the hearing under this section.

"(l) Following the receipt of evidence, the attorney for the Department of Justice and for the alien shall be given fair opportunity to present argument as to whether the evidence is sufficient to justify the removal of the alien. The attorney for the Department of Justice shall open the argument. The attorney for the alien shall be permitted to reply. The attorney for the Department of Justice shall then be permitted to reply in rebuttal. The judge may allow any part of the argument that refers to evidence received in camera and ex parte to be heard in camera and ex parte.

"(m) The Department of Justice has the burden of showing by clear and convincing evidence that the alien is subject to removal because he is an alien as described in paragraph 21 of subsection 241(a) of this Act (8 U.S.C. 1251(a)(21)). If the judge finds that the Department of Justice has met this burden, the judge shall order the alien removed.

"(n)(1) At the time of rendering a decision as to whether the alien shall be removed, the judge shall prepare a written order containing a statement of facts found and conclusions of law. Any portion of the order that would reveal the substance or source of evidence received in camera and ex parte pursuant to subsection (j) shall not be made available to the alien or the public.

"(2) The decision of the judge may be appealed by either the alien or the Department of Justice to the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit by notice of appeal which must be filed within twenty days, during which time such order shall not be executed. In any case appealed pursuant to this subsection, the entire record shall be transmitted to the Court of Appeals and information received pursuant to subsection (j), and any portion of the judge's order that would reveal such information or its source, shall be transmitted under seal. The Court of Appeals shall consider the case as expeditiously as possible.

"(3) In an appeal to the Court of Appeals pursuant to either subsections (d) or (e) or this subsection, the Court of Appeals shall review questions of law de novo but a prior finding on any question of fact shall not be set aside unless such finding was clearly erroneous.

"(o) If the judge decides, pursuant to subsection (n), that the alien should not be removed, the alien shall be released from custody unless such alien may be arrested and taken into custody pursuant to title II of this Act as an alien subject to deportation in which case, for purposes of detention, such alien may be treated in accordance with the provisions of this Act concerning the deportation of aliens.

"(p) Following a decision by the Court of Appeals pursuant to either subsection (d) or subsection (n), either the alien or the Department of Justice may petition the Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari. In any such case, any information transmitted to the Court of Appeals under seal shall, if such information is also submitted to the Supreme Court, be transmitted under seal.

"§ 503. Designation of Judges

"(a) The Chief Justice of the United States shall publicly designate five district court judges from five of the United States judicial circuits who shall constitute a court which shall have jurisdiction to conduct all matters and proceedings authorized by section 502. One of the judges so appointed shall be publicly designated as the presiding judge by the Chief Justice. The presiding judge shall promulgate rules to facilitate the functioning of the court and shall be responsible for assigning the consideration of cases to the various judges.

"(b) Proceedings under section 502 shall be conducted as expeditiously as possible. The Chief Justice, in consultation with the Attorney General and other appropriate Federal officials, shall, consistent with the objectives of this title, provide for the maintenance of appropriate security measures for applications for ex parte orders to conduct the special removal hearing authorized by section 502, the orders themselves, evidence received in camera and ex parte, and other matters as necessary to protect information concerning matters before the court from harming the national security of the United States, adversely affecting foreign relations, revealing investigative techniques, or disclosing confidential sources of information.

"(c) Each judge designated under this section shall serve for a term of five years and shall be eligible for redesignation except that the four associate judges first designated under subsection (a) shall be designated for terms of from one to four years so that one term expires each year.

"§ 504. Miscellaneous Provisions

"(a)(1) Following a determination pursuant to this title that an alien shall be removed, and after the conclusion of any judicial review thereof, the Attorney General may retain the alien in custody, or if the alien was released pursuant to subsection 502(o) may return the alien to custody, and shall cause the alien to be transported to any country which the alien shall designate provided such designation does not, in the Attorney General's judgment, impair any treaty (including a treaty pertaining to extradition) obligation of the United States or otherwise adversely affect the foreign policy of the United States.

"(2) If the alien refuses to choose a country to which he wishes to be transported, or if the Attorney General determines that removal of the alien to a selected country would impair a treaty obligation or adversely affect foreign policy, the Attorney General shall cause the alien to be transported to any country willing to receive such alien.

"(3) Before an alien is transported out of the United States pursuant to paragraph (1) or (2) or pursuant to an order of exclusion because such alien is excludable under paragraph 34 of subsection 212(a) of this Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(34)), he or she shall be photographed and fingerprinted, and shall be advised of the provisions of subsection 276(b) of this Act (8 U.S.C. 1326(b)).

"(4) If no country is willing to receive such an alien, the Attorney General may, notwithstanding any other provision of law, retain the alien in custody. The Attorney General shall make periodic efforts to reach agreement with other countries to accept such an alien and shall submit a written report on his efforts to obtain such an agreement to the alien at least every six months. Any alien in custody pursuant to this subsection shall be released from custody solely at the discretion of the Attorney General and subject to such conditions as the Attorney General shall deem appropriate. The actions of the Attorney General pursuant to this subsection shall not be subject to judicial review, including application for a writ of habeas corpus except for a claim that his rights under the Constitution are being violated by continued detention. Jurisdiction over any such challenge shall lie exclusively in the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

"(b)(1) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a), the Attorney General may hold in abeyance the removal of an alien who has been ordered removed pursuant to this title to allow the trial of such alien on any federal or State criminal charge and the service of any sentence of confinement resulting from such a trial.

"(2) Pending the commencement of any service of a sentence of confinement, by an alien described in paragraph (1), such an alien shall remain in the custody of the Attorney General, unless the Attorney General determines that temporary release of the alien to the custody of State authorities for confinement in a State facility is appropriate and would not endanger national security or public safety.

"(3) Following the completion of a sentence of confinement by an alien described in paragraph (1) or following the completion of State criminal proceedings which do not result in a sentence of confinement of an alien released to the custody of State authorities pursuant to paragraph (2), such an alien shall be returned to the custody of the Attorney General who shall proceed to carry out the provisions of subsection (a) concerning removal of the alien.

"(c) For the purposes of sections 751 and 752 of title 18, an alien in the custody of the Attorney General pursuant to this title shall be considered as being committed to the custody of the Attorney General by virtue of an arrest on a charge of felony.

"(d)(1) An alien in the custody of the Attorney General pursuant to this title shall be given reasonable opportunities to communicate with and receive visits from members of his or her family, and to contact, retain, and communicate with an attorney.

"(2) An alien in the custody of the Attorney General pursuant to this title shall have the right to contact an appropriate diplomatic or consular official of the alien's country, or an official of any country providing representation services for that country. The Attorney General shall notify the appropriate embassy of the alien's detention."

SEC. 205. Subsection 212(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof a new paragraph 34 as follows:

"(34) Aliens with respect to whom the consular officer or the Attorney General knows or has reasonable ground to believe are engaging in, have engaged in, or probably would, after entry, engage in terrorist activity."

SEC. 206. (a) Subsection 235(c) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1225(c)) is amended by striking out "or (29)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(29), or (34)".

(b) Section 106(b) (8 U.S.C. 1105a(b)) of the Immigration and Nationality Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following sentence: "Jurisdiction to review an order entered pursuant to the provisions of section 235(c) of this Act concerning an alien excludable under paragraph 34 of subsection 212(a) (8 U.S.C. 1182(a)) shall rest exclusively in the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit."

SEC. 207. Section 276 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1326) is amended by inserting "(a)" before the phrase "Any alien who" at the beginning thereof and by adding a new subsection (b) as follows:

"(b) Any alien who has been excluded from the United States pursuant to subsection 235(c) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1225(c)) because such alien was excludable under paragraph 34 of subsection 212(a) of said Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(34)) or has been removed from the United States pursuant to the provisions of title V of the Immigration and Nationality Act and who thereafter, without the permission of the Attorney General, enters the United States or attempts to do so shall be imprisoned for a period of ten years which sentence shall not run concurrently with any other sentence and fined in accordance with the provisions of title 18, United States Code."

SEC. 208. Subsection 106(a) (8 U.S.C. 1105a(a)) of the Immigration and Nationality Act is amended by—

- (1) striking from the end of paragraph 8 "and"; and inserting a period; and
- (2) striking paragraph (9).

TITLE III—COUNTERINTELLIGENCE ACCESS TO TELEPHONE TOLL AND TRANSACTIONAL RECORDS

SEC. 301. Section 2709 of title 18 of the United States Code is amended by—

- (1) striking out subsections (b) and (c); and
- (2) inserting the following new subsections (b) and (c):

"(b) REQUIRED CERTIFICATION.—The Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (or an individual within the Federal Bureau of Investigation designated for this purpose by the Director) may:

"(1) request any such information and records if the Director (or the Director's designee) certifies in writing to the wire or electronic communication service provider to which the request is made that—

"(A) the information sought is relevant to an authorized foreign counterintelligence investigation; and

"(B) there are specific and articulable facts giving reason to believe that the person or entity about whom information is sought or pertains is a foreign power or an agent of a foreign power as defined in section 101 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1801); and

"(2) request subscriber information regarding a person or entity if the Director certifies in writing to the wire or electronic communications service provider to which the request is made that—

"(A) the information sought is relevant to an authorized foreign counterintelligence investigation; and

"(B) that information available to the Federal Bureau of Investigation indicates there is reason to believe that communication facilities registered in the name of the person or entity have been used; through the services of such provider, in communication with a foreign power or an agent of a foreign power as defined in section 101 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1801)."

"(c) PENALTY FOR DISCLOSURE.—No wire or electronic communication service provider, or officer, employee, or agent thereof, shall disclose to any person that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has sought or obtained access to information under this section. Violators of this section shall be subject to penalty under section 3571 of this title."

By Mr. THURMOND:

S. 46. A bill to provide that a justice or judge convicted of a felony shall be suspended from office without pay; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SUSPENSION OF CONVICTED JUDGES FROM OFFICE WITHOUT PAY

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation which provides that a justice or judge convicted of a felony shall be suspended from office without pay pending the disposition of impeachment proceedings.

I believe that the citizens of the United States will agree that those who have been convicted of felonies should not be allowed to continue to occupy positions of trust and responsibility in our Government. Nevertheless, under current constitutional law it is possible for judges to continue to receive a salary and to still sit on the bench and hear cases even after being convicted of a felony. If they are unwilling to resign, the only method which may be used to remove them from the Federal payroll is impeachment.

Currently, the Congress has the power to impeach officers of the Government who have committed treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors. Even when a court has already found an official guilty of a serious crime, Congress must then essentially retry the official before he or she can be removed from the Federal payroll. The impeachment process is typically very time consuming and can occupy a great deal of the resources of Congress.

Mr. President, one way to solve this problem would be to amend the Constitution. Today, I am also introducing a Senate resolution providing for forfeiture of office by Government officials and judges convicted of felonies. While I believe that a constitutional amendment may be the best solution to the problem, I am also introducing this statutory remedy to address the current situation.

This legislation will provide that a judge convicted of a felony shall be suspended from office without pay pending the disposition of impeachment proceedings. The framers of the Constitution could not have intended convicted felons to continue to serve on the bench and to receive compensation once they have violated the law and the trust of the people.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to carefully consider this legislation and ask unanimous consent that it be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 46

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section 3 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by—

- (1) inserting "(a)" before "Whenever the";
- (2) adding at the end thereof the following:

"(b) Justices of Supreme Court shall hold office during good behavior.

"(c) For purposes of the tenure or appointment of a justice, 'good behavior' shall not include any offense committed by a justice if the conviction of such offense is punishable by death or imprisonment for a term exceeding one year. Any justice so convicted shall be suspended from office without pay pending the disposition of impeachment proceedings.

SEC. 2. Sections 44(b) and 134(a) of title 28, United States Code, are each amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "For purposes of the tenure or appointment of a judge, 'good behavior' shall not include any offense committed by a judge if the conviction of such offense is punishable by death or imprisonment for a term exceeding one year. Any judge so convicted shall be suspended from office without pay pending the disposition of impeachment proceedings."

By Mr. THURMOND:

S. 47. A bill to amend title 28, United States Code, to provide special habeas corpus procedures in capital cases; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SPECIAL HABEAS CORPUS PROCEDURES IN CAPITAL CASES

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the legislative recommendations of the Ad Hoc Committee on Federal Habeas Corpus in Capital Cases chaired by former Associate Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell. This committee, commonly referred to as the Powell committee, was formed by Chief Justice William Rehnquist in June 1988. The Powell committee was charged with inquiring into the "necessity and desirability of legislation directed toward avoiding delay and the lack of finality" in capital cases in which the prisoner had or had been offered counsel. Pursuant to the Chief Justice's request, the Powell committee has made its recommendations and has proposed a legislative remedy to the problem of habeas corpus review in capital cases. It is these recommendations I introduce today. While I have introduced and fought for tougher reform than that recommended by the Powell committee, it is necessary that this bill be introduced so that their recommendations may be considered.

This Nation is facing a crisis in its criminal justice system. Federal habeas corpus and collateral attack procedures are in dire need of reform. This is evidenced by the glut of habeas petitions in the Federal system. The large increases in the number of habeas corpus filings, many of which are frivolous and used as a delaying tactic, require that legislation be enacted to address this problem.

Habeas petitions have grown by vast numbers in recent years. The problem of these numerous filings is compounded by the extraordinary delay in habeas corpus filings. The result is a criminal justice system which is overburdened with piecemeal and repetitious litigation and years of delay between sentencing and a final judicial resolution of the criminal matter.

Mr. President, I would like to discuss a particular case which exemplifies the problem of habeas corpus abuse. In February 1979, Ronald Woomer went on an 8 hour crime spree in South Carolina. By the time he was finished, four people were murdered. Woomer, who had never disputed his guilt, was convicted of murder and sentenced to death that summer. It took over 11 years for his execution to be carried out. His case went to the Supreme Court of the United States four times. The Woomer case is a prime example of the obstruction of justice and inordinate delay surrounding these habeas corpus cases.

Mr. President, it is appropriate that the Powell committee recommendation be before the Senate for consideration. This legislation I am introducing today proposes new statutory procedures for Federal habeas corpus review of capital sentences. The Powell committee proposal is aimed at achieving the following goal: Capital cases should be subject to one complete and fair course of collateral review in the State and Federal system, free from the time pressure of impending execution, and with the assistance of competent counsel for the defendant. Once this appropriate, fair review is completed, the criminal process should be brought to a conclusion.

This proposal allows a State to bring capital litigation by its prisoners within the new statute by providing competent counsel for inmates on State collateral review. Participation in the new procedures is optional with the States. This legislation also provides for a 6-month period within which a Federal habeas petition must be filed. This 6-month period begins to run on the appointment of counsel for the prisoner and is tolled during the pendency of all State court proceedings. In addition, this legislation provides for an automatic stay of execution, which is to remain in place until Federal habeas proceedings are completed. This provision ensures that habeas claims not be considered by a court under the time pressure of an impending execution.

In summary, this proposal attempts to balance the need for finality in death penalty cases with the requirement that a defendant have a fair examination of his claims. Thereafter, if the conviction and sentence are found to be appropriate, judicial proceedings will be at an end, absent any exceptional developments in the defendants case.

In closing, we cannot continue to delay action on legislation to correct the growing problem in habeas corpus cases. Criminal cases must be brought to a close. Endless consideration of issues that have no merit in criminal cases and are filed only for purposes of delay must be eliminated from our judicial system. The principles of justice, upon which our criminal system is based, demands that we take action to address the habeas problem.

For these reasons I urge my colleagues to carefully consider this measure.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill be printed in the RECORD immediately following my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 47

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SPECIAL HABEAS CORPUS PROCEDURES IN CAPITAL CASES

(a) Title 28, United States Code, is amended by inserting the following new chapter immediately following chapter 153:

"CHAPTER 154—SPECIAL HABEAS CORPUS PROCEDURES IN CAPITAL CASES

"Sec.

"2256. Prisoners in State custody subject to capital sentence; appointment of counsel; requirement of rule of court or statute; procedures for appointment.

"2257. Mandatory stay of execution; duration; limits on stays of execution; successive petitions.

"2258. Filing of habeas corpus petition; time requirements; tolling rules.

"2259. Evidentiary hearings; scope of Federal review; district court adjudication.

"2260. Certificate of probable cause inapplicable.

"§ 2256. Prisoners in State custody subject to capital sentence; appointment of counsel; requirement of rule of court or statute; procedures for appointment

"(a) This chapter shall apply to cases arising under section 2254 of this title brought by prisoners in State custody who are subject to a capital sentence. It shall apply only if subsections (b) and (c) are satisfied.

"(b) This chapter is applicable if a State establishes by rule of its court of last resort or by statute a mechanism for the appointment, compensation, and payment of reasonable litigation expenses of competent counsel in State post-conviction proceedings brought by indigent prisoners whose capital convictions and sentences have been upheld on direct appeal to the court of last resort in the State to have otherwise become final for State law purposes. The rule of court or statute must provide standards of competency for the appointment of such counsel.

"(c) Any mechanism for the appointment, compensation, and reimbursement of counsel as provided in subsection (b) must offer counsel to all State prisoners under capital sentence and must provide for the entry of an order by a court of record—

"(1) appointing one or more counsel to represent the prisoner upon a finding that the prisoner—

"(A) is indigent and has accepted the offer; or

"(B) is unable competently to decide whether to accept or reject the offer;

"(2) finding, after a hearing, if necessary, that the prisoner has rejected the offer of counsel and made the decision with an understanding of its legal consequences; or

"(3) denying the appointment of counsel upon a finding that the prisoner is not indigent.

"(d) No counsel appointed pursuant to subsections (b) and (c) to represent a State prisoner under capital sentence shall have previously represented the prisoner at trial or on direct appeal in the case for which the appointment is made unless the prisoner and counsel expressly request continued representation.

"(e) The ineffectiveness or incompetence of counsel during State or Federal collateral post-conviction proceedings in a capital case shall not be a ground for relief in a proceeding arising under this chapter or section 2254 of this title. This subsection shall not preclude the appointment of different counsel at any phase of State or Federal post-conviction proceedings.

"§ 2257. Mandatory stay of execution; duration; limits on stays of execution; successive petitions

"(a) Upon the entry in the appropriate State court of record of an order pursuant to section 2256(c) of this title, a warrant or order setting an execution date for a State prisoner shall be stayed upon application to any court that would have jurisdiction over any proceedings filed pursuant to section 2254 of this title. The application must recite that the State has invoked the post-conviction review procedures of this chapter and that the scheduled execution is subject to stay.

"(b) A stay of execution granted pursuant to subsection (a) shall expire if—

"(1) a State prisoner fails to file a habeas corpus petition under section 2254 of this title within the time required in section 2258 of this title; or

"(2) upon completion of district court and court of appeals review under section 2254 of this title, the petition for relief is denied and—

"(A) the time for filing a petition for certiorari has expired and no petition has been filed;

"(B) a timely petition for certiorari was filed and the Supreme Court denied the petition; or

"(C) a timely petition for certiorari was filed and upon consideration of the case, the Supreme Court disposed of it in a manner that left the capital sentence undisturbed; or

"(3) before a court of competent jurisdiction, a State prisoner under capital sentence waives the right to pursue habeas corpus review under section 2254 of this title, in the presence of counsel and after having been advised of the consequences of making the waiver.

"(c) If one of the conditions in subsection (b) has occurred, no Federal court thereafter shall have the authority to enter a stay of execution or grant relief in a capital case unless—

"(1) the basis for the stay and request for relief is a claim not previously presented in the State or Federal courts;

"(2) the failure to raise the claim—

"(A) was the result of State action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States;

"(B) was the result of a recognition by the Supreme Court of a new Federal right that is retroactively applicable; or

"(C) is due to the fact that the claim is based on facts that could not have been discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence in time to present the claim for State or Federal post-conviction review; and

"(3) the facts underlying the claim would be sufficient, if proven, to undermine the court's confidence in the jury's determination of guilt on the offense or offenses for which the death penalty was imposed.

"§ 2258. Filing of habeas corpus petition; time requirements; tolling rules

"(a) Any petition for habeas corpus relief under section 2254 of this title must be filed in the appropriate district court not later than 180 days after the filing in the appropriate State court of record of an order issued in compliance with section 2256(c) of this title. The time requirements established by this section shall be tolled—

"(1) from the date that a petition for certiorari is filed in the Supreme Court until the date of final disposition of the petition if a State prisoner seeks review of a capital sentence that has been affirmed on direct appeal by the court of last resort of the State or has otherwise become final for State law purposes;

"(2) subject to subsection (b), during any period in which a State prisoner under capital sentence has a properly filed request for post-conviction review pending before a State court of competent jurisdiction; and

"(3) during an additional period not to exceed 60 days, if counsel for the State prisoner—

"(A) moves for an extension of time in the Federal district court that would have jurisdiction over the case upon the filing of a habeas corpus petition under section 2254 of this title; and

"(B) makes a showing of good cause for counsel's inability to file the habeas corpus petition within the 180-day period established by this section.

"(b)(1) The time requirement established by subsection (a) shall be continuously tolled under paragraph (2) of that subsection from the date the State prisoner initially files for post-conviction review until the date of final disposition of the case by the highest court of the State so long as all State filing rules are timely met.

"(2) Tolling shall not occur under subsection (a)(2) during the pendency of a petition for certiorari before the Supreme Court following State post-conviction review.

"§ 2259. Evidentiary hearings; scope of Federal review; district court adjudication

"(a) When a State prisoner under a capital sentence files a petition for habeas corpus relief to which this chapter applies, the district court shall—

"(1) determine the sufficiency of the evidentiary record for habeas corpus review based on the claims actually presented and litigated in the State courts, unless the prisoner shows that the failure to raise or develop a claim in the State courts—

"(A) was the result of State action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States;

"(B) was the result of a recognition by the Supreme Court of a new Federal right that is retroactively applicable; or

"(C) is due to the fact that the claim is based on facts that could not have been discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence in time to present the claim for State post-conviction review; and

"(2) conduct any requested evidentiary hearing necessary to complete the record for habeas corpus review.

"(b) Upon the development of a complete evidentiary record, the district court shall rule on the merits of the claims properly before it.

"§ 2260. Certificate of probable cause inapplicable

"The requirement of a certificate of probable cause in order to appeal from the district court to the court of appeals does not apply to habeas corpus cases subject to this chapter except when a second or successive petition is filed."

S. 48. A bill to protect the lives of unborn human beings, and for other purposes; read the first time.

UNBORN CHILDREN'S CIVIL RIGHTS ACT

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I am again introducing a bill which I have introduced in the three prior Congresses. It is entitled the Unborn Children's Civil Rights Act. If enacted, this bill would take a first step in overcoming the Roe versus Wade decision.

Specifically, this bill would accomplish four things.

First, it would put Congress clearly on record as finding that abortion takes the life of an unborn child, that the Constitution sanctions no right to abortion and that Roe versus Wade was erroneously decided.

Second, it would prohibit congressional appropriations from being used to pay for or to promote abortion. In this regard, it permanently defunds abortion, thereby relieving Congress of annual fights over abortion restrictions in appropriations bills.

Third, it would end certain indirect funding for abortion by prohibiting discrimination, at federally funded institutions, against individuals who object in conscience to abortion and by curtailing attorneys' fees in abortion-related cases.

Fourth, it would provide for appeals to the Supreme Court as a right if a Federal court declares State restrictions on abortion unconstitutional. As a practical matter, this provision will assure Supreme Court reconsideration of the abortion issue in the future.

Mr. President, there's the old adage, "Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it." All of us have heard those words, but many in our Government have refused to heed them. Only 45 years after hundreds of thousands of European Jews and other civilians died at the hands of Hitler's Nazis, we have forgotten the critical lesson of that atrocity—that all human life is sacred regardless of color, race, religion, or physical, or mental capabilities of that human being.

We are today reliving the Holocaust. We know it by a different name. It is called abortion. Yet, the same fate that was met by millions of Jews is being met by millions of unborn children right here in this country. At latest count, over 22 million unborn children—the most innocent of human life—have been murdered.

Abortion has become a tool of convenience, Mr. President. We have slipped so far down the slippery slope that now children are being aborted because they do not have the desired hair color, sex, physical attributes, or mental capabilities. The same excuses for murdering countless Jews are now being used to justify the murder of the most innocent and helpless members of humanity.

Mr. President, Roe versus Wade was, simply put, an unconstitutional decision. It has no foundation whatsoever in the text or history of the Constitution. It was invented out of whole cloth. As Justice White said in his dissent, Roe was an exercise in raw judicial power.

How has it endured for 17 long years? Why do we permit some 4,000 unborn babies to perish every day through legalized abortion?

The answer is woefully simple, Mr. President. Even though Roe versus Wade is an unconstitutional decision, Congress has been unwilling to right the wrong—to exercise its powers to check and balance a usurping Supreme Court which has destroyed the right to life of the most defenseless among us. The powers exist, but Congress has nonetheless permitted Roe to stand because many Members of Congress are apparently committed to legalized abortion. These Members share the same antihistorical, secularized, liberal view of law and public order as the activist justices who gave us Roe versus Wade in the first place.

In their view—with which I disagree—the Ten Commandments are not the eternal rules of Almighty God and the source of authority for human law, but the transitory precepts of a bygone age in need of periodic updating by wiser heads here on Earth. Of course, human nature being what it is, there is never any shortage of wiser heads.

Mr. President, for these reasons, Roe versus Wade still stands and the holocaust continues. It is not the Constitution or our system of government which is at fault. Ample means exist within them, even apart from a constitutional amendment, to overturn Roe. The fault, on the part of Members of Congress, lies in a failure of intellect to perceive the true nature of abortion and a failure of will to do something about it. These are the ingredients which perpetuate the travesty of Roe versus Wade.

But, Mr. President, this Senator from North Carolina is ever hopeful that, with God's help and human effort, hearts and minds—even in Congress—will change. Enactment of the Unborn Children's Civil Rights Act, certainly would be a step in the right direction. I urge Senators to seek its early enactment.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD immediately after my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 48

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Unborn Children's Civil Rights Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) scientific evidence demonstrates that abortion takes the life of an unborn child who is a living human being;

(2) a right to abortion is not secured by the Constitution; and

(3) in the cases of Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113 (1973) and Doe v. Bolton, 410 U.S. 179 (1973) the Supreme Court erred in not recognizing the humanity of the unborn child and the compelling interest of the States in protecting the life of each person before birth.

SEC. 3. PROHIBITION ON USE OF FUNDS FOR ABORTION.

No funds appropriated by Congress shall be used to take the life of an unborn child, except that such funds may be used only for those medical procedures required to prevent the death of either the pregnant woman or her unborn child so long as every reasonable effort is made to preserve the life of each.

SEC. 4. PROHIBITION ON USE OF FUNDS TO ENCOURAGE OR PROMOTE ABORTION.

No funds appropriated by Congress shall be used to promote, encourage, counsel for, refer for, pay for (including travel expenses), or do research on, any procedure to take the life of an unborn child, except that such funds may be used in connection with only those medical procedures required to prevent the death of either the pregnant woman or her unborn child so long as every reasonable effort is made to preserve the life of each.

SEC. 5. PROHIBITION ON ENTERING INTO CERTAIN INSURANCE CONTRACTS.

Neither the United States, nor any agency or department thereof shall enter into any contract for insurance that provides for payment or reimbursement for any procedure to take the life of an unborn child, except that the United States, or an agency or department thereof may enter into contracts for payment or reimbursement for only those medical procedures required to prevent the death of either the pregnant woman or her unborn child so long as every reasonable effort is made to preserve the life of each.

SEC. 6. LIMITATIONS ON RECIPIENTS OF FEDERAL FUNDS.

No institution, organization, or other entity receiving Federal financial assistance shall—

(1) discriminate against any employee, applicant for employment, student, or applicant for admission as a student on the basis of such person's opposition to procedures to take the life of an unborn child or to counseling for or assisting in such procedures;

(2) require any employee or student to participate, directly or indirectly, in a health insurance program which includes procedures to take the life of an unborn child or which provides counseling or referral for such procedures; or

(3) require any employee or student to participate, directly or indirectly, in procedures to take the life of an unborn child or in counseling, referral, or any other administrative arrangements for such procedures.

SEC. 7. LIMITATION ON CERTAIN ATTORNEYS' FEES.

Notwithstanding any other provision of Federal law, attorneys' fees shall not be allowable in any civil action in Federal court involving, directly or indirectly, a law, ordinance, regulation, or rule prohibiting or restricting procedures to take the life of an unborn child.

SEC. 8. APPEALS OF CERTAIN CASES.

Between the first and second paragraphs of section 1252 of title 28, United States Code, insert the following new paragraph:

"Notwithstanding the absence of the United States as a party, if any State or any subdivision of any State enforces or enacts a law, ordinance, regulation, or rule prohibiting procedures to take the life of an unborn child, and such law, ordinance, regulation, or rule is declared unconstitutional in an interlocutory or final judgment, decree, or order of any court of the United States, any party in such a case may appeal such case to the Supreme Court, notwithstanding any other provision of law."

By Mr. THURMOND (for himself and Mr. DECONCINI):

S. 49. A bill to establish constitutional procedures for the imposition of the sentence of death; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

FEDERAL DEATH PENALTY ACT

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, as the 103d Congress convenes, I am introducing a bill that establishes constitutional procedures for the imposition of the death penalty and provides the death penalty for certain Federal offenses. The death penalty is not a new issue for the Senate. Last Congress, as part of the Biden-Thurmond Violent Crime Control Act of 1991, legislation similar to this measure passed the Senate and passed the House. Yet, the Congress failed to send this tough proposal to the President. The need for a comprehensive Federal death penalty is clear in light of the serious violent crime problem our Nation faces. In 1988, legislation was enacted which provides constitutional procedures for the implementation of the death penalty in limited cases involving certain drug related murders and killing of law enforcement officers.

Regarding constitutional procedures, this bill provides procedures similar to those put in place by the death penalty included in the drug bill. Currently, numerous Federal statutes provide that a sentence of death may be imposed if a person is found guilty. However, the reality is that the death penalty cannot be imposed because constitutional procedures for imposing such a sentence have not existed. The 1972 Supreme Court decision of Furman versus Georgia rendered the Federal death penalty procedures unconstitutional. Subsequently, in a series of landmark decisions handed down in 1976, the Supreme Court determined that the death penalty was constitutional when imposed under certain procedures specifically designed to guard against the jury using its unfettered discretion. The Supreme Court has subsequently handed down numerous decisions clarifying the circumstances and means by which the death penalty may be implemented.

In the past, I have undertaken numerous efforts in the Senate to establish procedures which satisfy the constitutional standards set by the Supreme Court. The bill I am offering today comports with the constitutional requirements outlined by the Supreme Court and establishes the procedures for the imposition of the death penalty for the numerous Federal crimes that currently authorize a sentence of death.

Briefly, I will discuss these procedures. The bill mandates a bifurcated process which the factfinder must follow when determining whether a sentence of death is justified. This process consists of a first hearing to determine the guilt or innocence of the defendant and a second hearing to determine whether the death penalty should be imposed if the defendant is found guilty.

Additionally, this bill requires that in order to seek a sentence of death, the Government must give notice to the defendant within a reasonable time before the trial is initiated. The Government must also identify in that notice the statutory aggravating factors it intends to prove. As well, the sentencing hearing would be held before the same jury which determined the guilt of the defendant, unless the defendant requests and the Government agrees to have the hearing before the trial judge alone.

The factfinder, whether the jury or judge, in its deliberation following the sentencing hearing, would have to make a series of determinations before a sentence of death could be imposed. First, depending upon the crime involved, the factfinder must determine that special threshold requirements exist, such as the defendant intentionally killed the victim or the defendant intentionally engaged in conduct which the defendant knew would create a grave risk of death to a person. If none are found to exist, a sentence other than death would have to be imposed. Second, if the required threshold factors are found to exist, the factfinder would have to make a special finding as to the existence of a statutory aggravating factor presented at the sentencing hearing. All members of the jury must find the existence of at least one aggravating factor, although they need not agree upon the same one, in order to move onto a final weighing process. If any one member of the jury fails to find the existence of an aggravating factor, a sentence other than death would have to be imposed. Only those aggravating factors found to exist by a majority of the jury may be considered in the final weighing process.

Finally, the deliberation moves to the third step, the final weighing process. Here the jury or judge will weigh all of the aggravating factors against all the mitigating factors to determine whether the aggravating factors sufficiently outweigh the mitigating factors. During this final process, any member of the jury who finds the existence of a mitigating factor may consider such factor established for purposes of the final weighing as to whether the death penalty should be applied, regardless of the number of jurors who believe the factor has been established. If the jury or judge does in fact determine that the aggravating factors sufficiently outweigh the mitigating factors, a death sentence could then be appropriately imposed.

As well as applying these constitutional procedures to crimes where the death penalty is already authorized, this bill authorizes the death penalty for the following offenses: First, certain attempts to assassinate the President; second, murder by a Federal prisoner serving a life term in a Federal correctional institution; third, hostage taking situations where death results to the hostage, or to a person attempting to rescue a hostage or apprehend the hostage takers; fourth, murder for hire and murder in aid of racketeering activity; and fifth, genocide where death results.

In closing, the death penalty is a familiar issue to the Senate. The last two Congresses have witnessed the Senate and the House each pass comprehensive death penalty proposals only to see them gutted by liberal death penalty opponents during conference. We should not hesitate any longer. The law abiding citizens—the good people of America—demand action and they demand it now. I urge my colleagues to taken action on this bill.

Mr. President, I ask that the full text of this bill be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 49

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Federal Death Penalty Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. CONSTITUTIONAL PROCEDURES FOR THE IMPOSITION OF THE SENTENCE OF DEATH.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part II of title 18 of the United States Code is amended by adding the following new chapter after chapter 227:

"CHAPTER 228—DEATH SENTENCE

"Sec.

"3591. Sentence of death.

"3592. Factors to be considered in determining whether a sentence of death is justified.

"3593. Special hearing to determine whether a sentence of death is justified.

"3594. Imposition of a sentence of death.

"3595. Review of a sentence of death.

"3596. Implementation of a sentence of death.

"3597. Use of State facilities.

"§ 3591. Sentence of death

"A defendant who has been found guilty of—

"(a) an offense described in section 794 or section 2381 of this title;

"(b) an offense described in section 1751(c) of this title, if the offense, as determined beyond a reasonable doubt at the hearing under section 3593, constitutes an attempt to kill the President of the United States and results in bodily injury to the President or comes dangerously close to causing the death of the President; or

"(c) any other offense for which a sentence of death is provided, if the defendant, as determined beyond a reasonable doubt at the hearing under section 3593—

"(1) intentionally killed the victim;

"(2) intentionally inflicted serious bodily injury that resulted in the death of the victim;

"(3) intentionally participated in an act, contemplating that the life of a person would be taken or intending that lethal force would be used in connection with a person, other than one of the participants in the offense, and the victim died as a direct result of the act; or

"(4) intentionally and specifically engaged in an act, knowing that the act created a grave risk of death to a person, other than one of the participants in the offense, such that participation in the act constituted a reckless disregard for human life and the victim died as a direct result of the act, shall be sentenced to death if, after consideration of the factors set forth in section 3592 in the course of a hearing held pursuant to section 3593, it is determined that imposition of a sentence of death is justified; provided that no person may be sentenced to death who was less than 16 years of age at the time of the offense.

"§ 3592. Factors to be considered in determining whether a sentence of death is justified

"(a) MITIGATING FACTORS.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified for any offense, the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following mitigating factors and determine which, if any, exist:

"(1) the defendant's mental capacity was significantly impaired, although the impairment was not such as to constitute a defense to prosecution;

"(2) the defendant was under unusual and substantial duress, although not such duress as would constitute a defense to prosecution; and

"(3) the defendant was an accomplice whose participation in the offense was relatively minor.

The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider whether any other mitigating factor exists.

"(b) AGGRAVATING FACTORS FOR ESPIONAGE AND TREASON.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified for an offense described in section 3591(a), the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following aggravating factors and determine which, if any, exist:

"(1) the defendant has previously been convicted of another offense involving espionage or treason for which either a sentence of life imprisonment or death was authorized by statute;

"(2) in the commission of the offense the defendant knowingly created a grave risk of substantial danger to the national security; and

"(3) in the commission of the offense the defendant knowingly created a grave risk of death to another person.

The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, may consider whether any other aggravating factor exists.

"(c) AGGRAVATING FACTORS FOR HOMICIDE AND FOR ATTEMPTED MURDER OF THE PRESIDENT.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified for an offense described in section 3591(b) or (c), the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following aggravating factors and determine which, if any, exist:

"(1) the death, or injury resulting in death, occurred during the commission or attempted commission of, or during the immediate flight from the commission of, an offense under section 751 (prisoners in custody of institution or officer), section 794 (gathering or delivering defense information to aid foreign government), section 844(d) (transportation of explosives in interstate commerce for certain purposes), section 844(f) (destruction of Government property in interstate commerce by explosives), section 1118 (prisoners serving life term), section 1201 (kidnaping), or section 2381 (treason) of this title, or section 902 (i) or (n) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, as amended (49 U.S.C. 1472 (i) or (n)) (aircraft piracy);

"(2) the defendant has previously been convicted of another Federal or State offense resulting in the death of a person, for which a sentence of life imprisonment or a sentence of death was authorized by statute;

"(3) the defendant has previously been convicted of two or more Federal or State offenses, punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than one year, committed on different occasions, involving the infliction of, or attempted infliction of, serious bodily injury or death upon another person;

"(4) the defendant, in the commission of the offense, or in escaping apprehension for the violation of the offense, knowingly created a grave risk of death to one or more persons in addition to the victim of the offense;

"(5) the defendant committed the offense in an especially heinous, cruel, or depraved manner;

"(6) the defendant procured the commission of the offense by payment, or promise of payment, of anything of pecuniary value;

"(7) the defendant committed the offense as consideration for the receipt, or in the expectation of the receipt, of anything of pecuniary value;

"(8) the defendant committed the offense after planning and premeditation to cause the death of a person or commit an act of terrorism;

"(9) the defendant has previously been convicted of two or more State or Federal offenses punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than one year, committed on different occasions, involving the distribution of a controlled substance;

"(10) the victim was particularly vulnerable due to old age, youth, or infirmity;

"(11) the defendant had previously been convicted of violating title II or title III of the Controlled Substances Act for which a sentence of 5 or more years may be imposed or had previously been convicted of engaging in a continuing criminal enterprise;

"(12) the defendant committed the offense against—

"(A) the President of the United States, the President-elect, the Vice President, the Vice-President-elect, the Vice-President-designate, or, if there is no Vice President, the officer next in order of succession to the office of the President of the United States, or any person who is acting as President under the Constitution and laws of the United States;

"(B) a chief of state, head of government, or the political equivalent, of a foreign nation;

"(C) a foreign official listed in section 1116(b)(3)(A) of this title, if he is in the United States on official business; or

"(D) a Federal public servant who is a judge, a law enforcement officer, or an employee of a United States penal or correctional institution—

"(i) while he is engaged in the performance of his official duties;

"(ii) because of the performance of his official duties; or

"(iii) because of his status as a public servant.

For purposes of this subparagraph, a 'law enforcement officer' is a public servant authorized by law or by a Government agency or Congress to conduct or engage in the prevention, investigation, or prosecution of an offense.

The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, may consider whether any other aggravating factor exists.

§ 3593. Special hearing to determine whether a sentence of death is justified

"(a) NOTICE BY THE GOVERNMENT.—If, in a case involving an offense described in section 3591, the attorney for the government believes that the circumstances of the offense are such that a sentence of death is justified under this chapter, he shall, a reasonable time before the trial, or before acceptance by the court of a plea of guilty, or at such time thereafter as the court may permit upon a showing of good cause, sign and file with the court, and serve on the defendant, a notice—

"(1) stating that the government believes that the circumstances of the offense are such that, if the defendant is convicted, a sentence of death is justified under this chapter and that the government will seek the sentence of death; and

"(2) setting forth the aggravating factor or factors that the government, if the defendant is convicted, proposes to prove as justifying a sentence of death.

The court may permit the attorney for the government to amend the notice upon a showing of good cause.

"(b) HEARING BEFORE A COURT OR JURY.—If the attorney for the government has filed a notice as required under subsection (a) and the defendant is found guilty of or pleads guilty to an offense described in section 3591, the judge who presided at the trial or before whom the guilty plea was entered, or another judge if that judge is unavailable, shall conduct a separate sentencing hearing to determine the punishment to be imposed. The hearing shall be conducted—

"(1) before the jury that determined the defendant's guilt;

"(2) before a jury impaneled for the purpose of the hearing if—

"(A) the defendant was convicted upon a plea of guilty;

"(B) the defendant was convicted after a trial before the court sitting without a jury;

"(C) the jury that determined the defendant's guilt was discharged for good cause; or

"(D) after initial imposition of a sentence under this section, reconsideration of the sentence under this section is necessary; or

"(3) before the court alone, upon the motion of the defendant and with the approval of the attorney for the government.

A jury impaneled pursuant to paragraph (2) shall consist of twelve members, unless, at any time before the conclusion of the hearing, the parties stipulate, with the approval of the court, that it shall consist of a lesser number.

"(c) PROOF OF MITIGATING AND AGGRAVATING FACTORS.—Notwithstanding rule 32(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, when a defendant is found guilty or pleads guilty to an offense under section 3591, no presentence report shall be prepared. At the sentencing hearing, information may be presented as to any matter relevant to the sentence, including any mitigating or aggravating factor permitted or required to be considered under section 3592. Information presented may include the trial transcript and exhibits if the hearing is held before a jury or judge not present during the trial. Any other information relevant to a mitigating or aggravating factor may be presented by either the attorney for the government or the defendant, regardless of its admissibility under the rules governing admission of evidence at criminal trials, except that information may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of creating unfair prejudice, confusing the issues, or misleading the jury. The government and the defendant shall be permitted to rebut any information received at the hearing, and shall be given fair opportunity to present argument as to the adequacy of the information to establish the existence of any aggravating or mitigating factor, and as to the appropriateness in the case of imposing a sentence of death. The government shall open the argument. The defendant shall be permitted to reply. The government shall then be permitted to reply in rebuttal. The burden of establishing the existence of any aggravating factor is on the government, and is not satisfied unless the existence of such a factor is established beyond a reasonable doubt. The burden of establishing the existence of any mitigating factor is on the defendant, and is not satisfied unless the existence of such a factor is established by a preponderance of the information.

"(d) RETURN OF SPECIAL FINDINGS.—The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider all the information received during the hearing. It shall return a special finding as to each mitigating and aggravating factor, concerning which information is presented at the hearing, required to be considered under section 3592. The jury must find the existence of an aggravating factor by a unanimous vote, although it is unnecessary that there be a unanimous vote on any specific or aggravating factor if a majority of the jury finds the existence of such a specific factor. A finding with respect to a mitigating factor may be made by one or more members of the jury and any member of the jury who finds the existence of a mitigating factor may consider such a factor established for purposes of this section, regardless of the number of jurors who consider that the factor has been established.

"(e) RETURN OF A FINDING CONCERNING A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—If, in the case of—

"(1) an offense described in section 3591(a), an aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592(b) is found to exist; or

"(2) an offense described in section 3591 (b) or (c), an aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592(c) is found to exist;

the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall then consider whether all the aggravating factors found to exist sufficiently outweigh all the mitigating factors found to exist to justify a sentence of death, or, in the absence of a mitigating factor, whether the aggravating factors alone are sufficient to justify a sentence of death. Based upon this consideration, the jury by unanimous vote, or if there is no jury, the court, shall return a finding as to whether a sentence of death is justified.

"(f) SPECIAL PRECAUTION TO ASSURE AGAINST DISCRIMINATION.—In a hearing held before a jury, the court, prior to the return of a finding under subsection (e), shall instruct the jury that, in considering whether a sentence of death is justified, it shall not consider the race, color, national origin, creed, or sex of the defendant. The jury, upon return of a finding under subsection (e), shall also return to the court a certificate, signed by each juror, that consideration of the race, color, national origin, creed, or sex of the defendant was not involved in reaching the juror's individual decision.

§ 3594. Imposition of a sentence of death

"Upon a finding under section 3593(e) that a sentence of death is justified, the court shall sentence the defendant to death. Upon a finding under section 3593(e) that a sentence of death is not justified, or under section 3593(d) that no aggravating factor required to be found exists, the court shall impose any sentence other than death that is authorized by law. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if the maximum term of imprisonment for the offense is life imprisonment, the court may impose a sentence of life imprisonment without parole.

§ 3595. Review of a sentence of death

"(a) APPEAL.—In a case in which a sentence of death is imposed, the sentence shall be subject to review by the court of appeals upon appeal by the defendant. Notice of appeal must be filed within the time specified for the filing of a notice of appeal. An appeal under this section may be consolidated with an appeal of the judgment of conviction and shall have priority over all other cases.

"(b) REVIEW.—The court of appeals shall review the entire record in the case, including—

"(1) the evidence submitted during the trial;

"(2) the information submitted during the sentencing hearing;

"(3) the procedures employed in the sentencing hearing; and

"(4) the special findings returned under section 3593(d).

"(c) DECISION AND DISPOSITION.—

"(1) If the court of appeals determines that—

"(A) the sentence of death was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor; and

"(B) the information supports the special finding of the existence of an aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592;

it shall affirm the sentence.

"(2) In any other case, the court of appeals shall remand the case for reconsideration under section 3593.

"(3) The court of appeals shall state in writing the reasons for its disposition of an appeal of a sentence of death under this section.

§ 3596. Implementation of a sentence of death

"A person who has been sentenced to death pursuant to the provisions of this chapter shall be committed to the custody of the Attorney General until exhaustion of the procedures for appeal of the judgment of conviction and for review of the sentence. When the sentence is to be implemented, the Attorney General shall release the person sentenced to death to the custody of a United States marshal, who shall supervise implementation of the sentence in the manner prescribed by the law of the State in which the sentence is imposed. If the law of such State does not provide for implementation of a sentence of death, the court shall designate another State, the law of which does so provide, and the sentence shall be implemented in the latter State in the manner prescribed by such law. A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a woman while she is pregnant."

§ 3597. Use of State facilities

"(a) IN GENERAL.—A United States marshal charged with supervising the implementation of a sentence of death may use appropriate State or local facilities for the purpose, may use the services of an appropriate State or local official or of a person such an official employs for the purpose, and shall pay the costs thereof in an amount approved by the Attorney General.

"(b) EXCUSE OF AN EMPLOYEE ON MORAL OR RELIGIOUS GROUNDS.—No employee of any State department of corrections or the Federal Bureau of Prisons and no employee providing services to that department or bureau under contract shall be required as a condition of that employment, or contractual obligation to be in attendance at or to participate in any execution carried out under this section if such participation is contrary to the moral or religious convictions of the employee. For purposes of this subsection, the term 'participation in executions' includes personal preparation of the condemned individual and the apparatus used for execution and supervision of the activities of other personnel in carrying out such activities."

(b) REPEAL.—Sections 3566 and 3567 of title 18, United States Code, are hereby repealed.

(c) AMENDMENTS TO CHAPTER ANALYSIS.—(1) The chapter analysis of part II of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding the following new item after the item relating to chapter 227:

"228. Death sentence 3591".

(2) The section analysis of chapter 227 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by amending the items relating to sections 3566 and 3567 to read as follows:

"3566. Repealed.

"3567. Repealed."

SEC. 3. CONFORMING CHANGES IN TITLE 18.

(a) AIRCRAFTS AND MOTOR VEHICLES.—Section 34 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking the comma after "imprisonment for life" and inserting a period and striking the remainder of the section.

(b) ESPIONAGE.—Section 794(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking the period at the end of the section and inserting "except that the sentence of death shall not be imposed unless the jury or, if there is no jury, the court, further finds that the offense directly concerned nuclear weaponry, military spacecraft or satellites, early warning systems, or other means of defense or retaliation against large-scale attack; war plans; communications intelligence of cryptographic information; or any other major weapons system or major element of defense strategy."

(c) EXPLOSIVE MATERIALS.—(1) Section 844(d) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "as provided in section 34 of this title".

(2) Section 844(f) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "as provided in section 34 of this title".

(3) Section 844(i) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking the words "as provided in section 34 of this title".

(d) MURDER.—(1) The second undesignated paragraph of section 1111(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"Whoever is guilty of murder in the first degree shall be punished by death or by imprisonment for life;"

(2) Section 1116(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "any such person who is found guilty of murder in the first degree shall be sentenced to imprisonment for life, and".

(e) KIDNAPPING.—Section 1201(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after "or for life" the following: "and, if the death of any person results, shall be punished by death or life imprisonment".

(f) NONMAILABLE INJURIOUS ARTICLES.—The last paragraph of section 1716 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking the comma after "imprisonment for life" and inserting a period and striking the remainder of the paragraph.

(g) PRESIDENTIAL ASSASSINATIONS.—Subsection (c) of section 1751 of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) Whoever attempts to kill or kidnap any individual designated in subsection (a) of this section shall be punished (1) by imprisonment for any term of years or for life, or (2) by death or imprisonment for any term of years or for life, if the conduct constitutes an attempt to kill the President of the United States and results in bodily injury to the President or otherwise comes dangerously close to causing the death of the President."

(h) WRECKING TRAINS.—The second to the last undesignated paragraph of section 1992 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking the comma after "imprisonment for life" and inserting a period and striking the remainder of the section.

(i) BANK ROBBERY.—Section 2113(e) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "or punished by death if the verdict of the jury shall so direct" and inserting "or if death results shall be punished by death or life imprisonment".

(j) HOSTAGE TAKING. Section 1203(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after "or for life" the following: "and, if the death of any person results, shall be punished by death or life imprisonment".

(k) RACKETEERING.—(1) Section 1952A(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "and if death results, shall be subject to imprisonment for any term of years or for life, or shall be fined not more than $50,000, or both" and inserting "and if death results, shall be punished by death or life imprisonment, or shall be fined not more than $250,000, or both".

(2) Section 1952B(a)(1) of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(1) for murder, by death or life imprisonment, or a fine of not more than $250,000, or both; and for kidnapping, by imprisonment for any term of years or for life, or a fine of not more than $250,000, or both;"

(l) GENOCIDE.—Section 1091(b)(1) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "a fine of not more than $1,000,000 or imprisonment for life," and inserting "where death results, a fine of not more than

$1,000,000, or imprisonment for life or a sentence of death."

SEC. 4. CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO FEDERAL AVIATION ACT OF 1954.

Section 903 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, as amended (49 U.S.C. 1473), is amended by striking subsection (c).

SEC. 5. CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES ACT.

Section 408 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 848) is amended by striking subsections (g) through (r).

SEC. 6. APPLICABILITY TO UNIFORM CODE OF MILITARY JUSTICE.

The provisions of chapter 228 of title 18, United States Code, as added by this Act, shall not apply to prosecutions under the Uniform Code of Military Justice (10 U.S.C. 801).

SEC. 7. MURDER BY A FEDERAL PRISONER.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 51 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"§ 1118. Murder by a Federal prisoner

"(a) Whoever, while confined in a Federal correctional institution under a sentence for a term of life imprisonment, murders another shall be punished by death or by life imprisonment without the possibility of parole.

"(b) For the purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'Federal correctional institution' means any Federal prison, Federal correctional facility, Federal community program center, or Federal halfway house;

"(2) the term 'term of life imprisonment' means a sentence for the term of natural life, a sentence commuted to natural life, an indeterminate term of a minimum of at least fifteen years and a maximum of life, or an unexecuted sentence of death; and

"(3) the term 'murders' means committing first degree or second degree murder as defined by section 1111 of this title."

(b) AMENDMENT TO CHAPTER ANALYSIS.—The chapter analysis for chapter 51 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"1118. Murder by a Federal prisoner."

S. 50. A bill to require the Secretary of the Treasury to mint coins in commemoration of the 250th anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

JEFFERSON COMMEMORATIVE COIN ACT OF 1993

● Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to mint coins in commemoration of the 250th anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson.

Last Congress, I introduced legislation to authorize the creation of a Federal commission to assist in the planning of the celebration commemorating Jefferson's birth. This bill was signed into law by President Bush on August 17, 1992. The Jefferson Commemorative Coin Act of 1993 will serve as an accompaniment to this effort.

Passage of this bill would allow citizens the opportunity to honor Thomas Jefferson by purchasing a commemorative coin, the design of which will be emblematic of a Jefferson profile and frontal view of his home, Monticello.

It is important to realize the continued great popularity of Jefferson and Monticello not only in our country but throughout the world. In the past 3 years alone, Monticello has been visited by 10 heads of state. As the President of Bulgaria, stated "Jefferson is the father of the democratic movement." And of course just this past Sunday, President Clinton began his trip to Washington with a visit and tour of Monticello.

The proceeds from the sale of the coin would be dedicated to the restoration and preservation of Jefferson's homes at both Monticello and Poplar Forest, and for the educational programs of the International Center for Jefferson Studies. Poplar Forest, located in Bedford, VA, is one of the two homes designed and built by Jefferson for his own use. Privately owned since Jefferson created it, Poplar Forest became endangered in 1984. The nonprofit Corporation for Jefferson's Poplar Forest was created after a small group of private citizens raised adequate funds to purchase the threatened landmark. The Corporation is now endeavoring to raise additional funds to restore and maintain the home. The sales from this commemorative coin would greatly aid in the mission to restore Poplar Forest to its former glory.

The International Center for Jefferson Studies is planned as a hub of scholarship and teaching in all areas that were of interest to Thomas Jefferson during his extraordinary life, including architecture, archaeology, horticulture, law, and political philosophy. The center will be a permanent expression of the commemorative celebrations of 1993—celebrations designed to promulgate his legacy both nationally and internationally.

I believe no other American is more deserving of being honored with a commemorative coin than Thomas Jefferson: the third President of the United States, Vice President to John Adams; the first Secretary of State; Commissioner to France; author of the Declaration of Independence, Governor of Virginia; and author of the preamble to the Virginia Constitution for Religious Freedom.

I respectfully ask each of my colleagues to cosponsor this worthwhile legislation. •

By Mr. FEINGOLD:

S. 51. A bill to consolidate overseas broadcasting services of the U.S. Government, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

OVERSEAS BROADCASTING CONSOLIDATION AND DEFICIT REDUCTION ACT

• Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I am today introducing S. 51, the Overseas Broadcasting Consolidation and Deficit Reduction Act, legislation designed to bring about a consolidation of certain overseas broadcasting activities funded by the United States and termination of several overseas broadcasting projects.

This legislation is based upon a proposal for reducing Federal expenditures in overseas broadcasting services which was outlined by the Congressional Budget Office in its February 1992 report on options for reducing the Federal deficit. Several of the provisions in this measure were also recommended by a nonpartisan commission, the U.S. Advisory Commission on Public Diplomacy, in a report released in August 1992, calling for major changes in U.S. international broadcasting.

The Overseas Broadcasting Consolidation and Deficit Reduction Act, as I will discuss in detail in a moment, does three things: First, it provides for the consolidation of United States overseas broadcasting activities now conducted through two separate agencies, the independent Board for International Broadcasting which administers Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty, and the Bureau of Broadcasting within the U.S. Information Agency [USIA] which oversees the operation of the Voice of America and various television broadcasting services funded by the Federal Government; second, it terminates authority for USIA to operate two television services, WORLDNET and TV Marti; and third, it provides for termination of further expenditures on a radio transmitting facility in Israel.

The purpose of this measure is simple. The United States cannot afford to continue to operate its overseas broadcasting services without regard to the fiscal constraint facing this Nation. Just as every American family must review its annual expenditures to determine where savings can be achieved, Congress must do the same. The changes I am proposing were estimated by the Congressional Budget Office to save the American taxpayers approximately $1 billion over the next 5 years. They are also changes which experts have recommended should be done to reflect the changing political environment throughout the world and the reduced need for separate broadcasting services in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union. Duplication and overlapping services that might have somehow been justifiable in the past simply cannot be sustained in light of today's fiscal and political realities.

CONSOLIDATION OF BROADCASTING SERVICES

Mr. President, I want to discuss briefly some of the history behind the overseas broadcasting services currently being funded by the U.S. Government and some of the factors which have increasingly led to recommendations for consolidation and restructuring of these services.

The Voice of America [VOA] is, of course, the principal overseas broadcasting service carrying news and U.S. related information to audiences worldwide. VOA celebrated its 50th anniversary last year of carrying America's voice to the world. VOA currently offers newscasts in 47 languages worldwide with an annual operating budget for fiscal year 1993 of $226 million.

In addition to VOA, the Federal Government has appropriated for 1993 an almost identical amount, $220 million, to operate two radio systems, Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty. Unlike the VOA which is broadcast worldwide, Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty are aimed exclusively at Eastern Europe and the former Soviet republics. These two radio services, originally supported by funding through the CIA, were established in 1949 and 1953. They are currently operated out of an independent Federal agency, the Board for International Broadcasting. Nearly $2 million goes annually for the administrative costs of operating the Board for International Broadcasting.

Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty were originally designed to serve a different function from that of VOA. While VOA transmits news and information from the United States throughout the world, Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty were established to provide surrogate broadcasting services; that is, providing local news in countries where no domestic free press existed. Both stations, headquartered in Munich, Germany, were designed to transmit behind the Iron Curtain. Both played a tremendous role in providing a critical source of news and information to people in Communist countries and helped set in motion the forces which have changed the course of history.

The leaders of the new democratic governments in Eastern Europe are uniform in their praise, rightly so, of the role that Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty played in bringing about the dramatic changes in Eastern Europe.

Vaclav Havel noted that Radio Free Europe straightened up the backbone of the trod down and doubting people, it strengthened their national self-consciousness and gave them hope for the future. Lech Walesa, writing to President Bush, said that along with Solidarity, Radio Free Europe "played a vital role in overthrowing communism and creating the democratic system in Poland and the neighboring countries." And nominating them for the Nobel Peace Prize, Estonian Foreign Minister Lennar Meri said that Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty helped the rebirth of democracy.

But Mr. President, changes has taken place. With the help of Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty, the Iron Curtain has fallen. The question we must face in 1993 is whether the status quo can be justified given the realities of the world, and Eastern Europe in particular.

The Chicago Tribune, in a September 21, 1992, editorial, observed that it is difficult to justify the continued operation of these two radio services at a cost of over $200 million per year, as it would be to sustain American troops and weaponry in Europe at the cold war levels. Even a New York Times editorial, published on September 8, 1992, which labeled calls for termination of Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty as premature, observed that while the stations ought not be abandoned in the next year or two, their payrolls and programming can be trimmed now. I ask unanimous consent that both editorials be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks along with a August 8, 1992, editorial from the Boston Globe which also supported a reordering of resources in overseas broadcasting services.

Mr. President, it is clear that just as we are reassessing the need to maintain American military forces in this region of the world, we must reassess in a realistic way the continuing need for three separate radio broadcasting services in Eastern Europe and two administrative agencies in Washington to oversee these services.

That was the unanimous conclusion also reached by the U.S. Advisory Commission on Public Diplomacy in a report it issued last August. This commission concluded that Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty have served the Nation well, but the duplication of services is no longer justifiable. It recommended an orderly phaseout, not overnight, but beginning now.

Mr. President, the legislation that I am introducing today does not terminate authority to operate Radio Free Europe or Radio Liberty. It simply transfers authority to operate these services into the Bureau of Broadcasting within USIA and abolishes the separate administrative entity, the Board for International Broadcasting, which now costs the U.S. taxpayers some $2 million a year. Whatever arguments there may be for maintaining certain functions provided by these radio services can hardly be made for maintaining a separate administrative structure here in Washington.

Consolidation of planning and programming for all of the federally funded broadcasting services in one central agency makes sense in a number of ways. A recent report by the Congressional Research Service, U.S. International Broadcasting: An Assessment for Reform, noted the frustrations that already exist over the lack of coordination and overall strategy in our activities in this area. For example, in one case described, VOA placed high priority on the construction of a new relay facility in Morocco to improve its short-wave broadcasts into Eastern Europe, while 375 miles away, Radio Free Europe/Liberty was also constructing new transmitters for broadcast into the same Eastern European areas. Moreover, the report noted, while both radio services were increasing their short-wave capacity in Europe, where the short-wave audience is declining, capability in Africa, which has one of the largest short-wave audiences in the world, was declining.

Others have pointed out the need to increase services in Asia, particularly in China. I know that there is strong support for some form of Radio China, and there certainly is a compelling argument to enhance our efforts in that area of the world. Consolidation of radio services in one agency will allow for more realistic allocation of scarce resources, as well as reduce unnecessary expenditures.

Mr. President, in order to facilitate this process, my legislation requires USIA develop a plan for the orderly consolidation of the overseas broadcasting services and phasing out of duplicative and redundant services over a 3-year period. The plan is to be submitted to the appropriate committees of Congress within 9 months of the date of enactment of the legislation. The bill provides for termination of the Board for International Broadcasting and transfer of authority to operate Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty to the Bureau of Broadcasting within USIA 3 months after submission of this plan. A number of critical issues regarding exactly how these services should be consolidated and how the distinct features of each of the radio services, particularly the research capacities of the surrogate services, will be maintained should be addressed in the development of this plan.

I recognize that there are concerns about the fragile hold that democracy has in Eastern Europe and concerns that termination of these specialized radio services may be premature. But these radio services were not intended to support struggling democracies. They were intended, frankly, to undermine totalitarian regimes that exercised complete control over the flow of information. Those regimes are gone for now and if they reappear, Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty can be reinvigorated under the auspices of the Voice of America which would continue to operate in Europe under my proposal.

But the status quo of overlapping and redundant broadcasting services cannot continue. We need to begin now to plan carefully for implementation of significant changes in our activities and expenditures in this area.

Mr. President, while there is broad support for reordering our priorities and expenditures in the area of international broadcasting, there are some who will fight strenuously against any changes. I have already heard arguments against any consolidation of broadcasting activities in Europe ranging from concerns about the cost of paying unemployment benefits to foreign nationals working in Munich to claims that maintaining duplicative services is necessary in the event of equipment failures. Some of these arguments may have some merit. Indeed, there is undoubtedly an argument that can be made for every item in the Federal budget and some groups who will argue strenuously to maintain the status quo for every line item.

But the simple reality is that we cannot afford to continue with the status quo. Just as every American family is forced to establish budget priorities, the Federal Government must do the same. Maintaining a duplicative and redundant overseas broadcasting structure is no longer a luxury America can afford.

TERMINATION OF ISRAEL RELAY STATION

Mr. President, let me move to the second part of the Overseas Broadcasting Consolidation and Deficit Reduction Act, the termination of the Israel relay station for Voice of America, Radio Free Europe, and Radio Liberty.

This massive, 16 transmitter, 2,000-acre relay station was originally proposed as a way to overcome jamming in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. With the end of the cold war, though, the former Soviet bloc countries no longer jam our radio signals, and the need for such a project has disappeared.

Beyond the price we pay to sustain this cold war dinosaur during a time of enormous budget imbalance, there are other costs as well. As a November 27 1992, article in the New York Times pointed out, environmentalists have argued against the project. Sitting astride one of the major flyways linking Europe and Asia to Africa, the relay station could have a detrimental effect on bird life. Further, because constructing the relay station will necessitate moving an air force training zone to a tract of Negev Desert wilderness, environmentalists fear possible damage to animal and plant life.

The New York Times article also quotes local residents who have concerns about the unknown effects the massive electromagnetic radiation coming from the relay station will have on them, and quotes a former Israeli Government official as saying that neither the Israeli nor American Governments are interested in the project any more, but that it continues to run on bureaucratic inertia.

I ask unanimous consent that the November 27 New York Times article be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

Mr. President, the U.S. Advisory Commission on Public Diplomacy, in its August 1992 report, recommend that we terminate the Israel relay station. The Commission noted that a less costly, possibly more effective and politically sensitive alternative is now supported by Voice of America. A site in Kuwait has been developed that broadcasts more clearly over water, and will be able to reach Africa and the old Soviet bloc countries with both short-wave and AM broadcasts, a critical advantage at a time when, according to the Advisory Commission report, shortwave listenership is plummeting.

The Congressional Budget Office similarly identified this relay station as a candidate for termination in its 1992 proposal for cutting back spending in the overseas broadcasting field.

Mr. President, by terminating the troublesome relay station in Israel and pursuing the Kuwait alternative, we save the taxpayers money, let the Voice of America do its job better, and avoid possible damage to the environment. Alone, any of those reasons might be sufficient to terminate the relay station; taken together, they are a compelling justification.

TERMINATION OF WORLDNET AND TV MARTI

Mr. President, let me touch on the final provision of the Overseas Broadcasting Consolidation and Deficit Reduction Act, namely the termination of authority for USIA to operate two television services, WORLDNET and TV Marti. The Federal Government will spend $24 million in fiscal year 1993 for WORLDNET and close to $20 million for TV Marti.

Though the impact on the Federal budget may be smaller than other sections of this act, the elimination of these two television services has a significance more important than the millions of dollars of tax revenue it will save. Terminating these two programs will demonstrate our willingness to end Government programs that are not getting the job done.

And, Mr. President, WORLDNET and TV Marti are not getting the job done.

My good friend and distinguished colleague, the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. WOFFORD], has been one of the principal advocates for eliminating WORLDNET, the program conceived as the television network of the U.S. Government. Two years ago, he offered an amendment, which received substantial support, to terminate WORLDNET's authorization. As Senator WOFFORD so forcefully argued, WORLDNET is a costly governmental experiment that has never worked, but has been impossible to eliminate.

WORLDNET has neither viewers to receive our Government's message, nor, apparently, willing and enthusiastic messengers to deliver it.

In response to the obviously inflated claims of total WORLDNET viewers, Congress mandated an independent survey that revealed fewer than one actual viewer for every 100 claimed. In some areas, the survey failed to unearth even a single viewer during certain time slots.

But the apathy of the viewership is matched by those who are responsible for articulating official U.S. policy. As Senator WOFFORD noted in July 1991 during the floor debate on his amendment to eliminate WORLDNET, then

Secretary of State James A. Baker III had failed to appear on the Government network, and instead chose to speak to the rest of the world on CNN and other private television networks when he wanted to communicate our Government's policy. Though Baker has since appeared on WORLDNET, his perfunctory appearance does not alter the clear preference State Department officials and others have exhibited for CNN and other networks over WORLDNET.

This preference is reasonable. People watch CNN; they do not watch WORLDNET.

Mr. President, we should be reasonable as well and eliminate this ineffective program.

Mr. President, let us also put an end to TV Marti.

TV Marti was intended to broadcast news, commentary, and other information into Cuba to promote the cause of freedom. That noble mission has been thwarted in part because of the fragile nature of the broadcasting systems, in part because of restrictions imposed by international broadcasting law, and in part by Castro's jamming of TV Marti programming.

That the Cuban dictator feels compelled to block this programming exposes the underlying weakness of his rule. However, as the GAO observed, U.S. diplomats in Havana reported that the jamming of TV Marti has effectively limited viewership to between 50,000 and 70,000.

Beyond Castro's mischief, TV Marti is seriously limited by bad weather. On at least one occasion, the giant blimp that reflects the beamed television signal into Cuba has broken loose of its tether. A spokesman for TV Marti was quoted in the January 18, 1991, edition of the Washington Post conceding that bad weather prevents TV Marti's transmitter from operating about 20 percent of the time. No firm I know could do business if they were down 1 day in every 5. Certainly no radio or television operation could hope to develop a loyal following under such conditions.

I ask unanimous consent that the January 18, 1991, edition of the Washington Post article be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

Mr. President, many others with far more experience in the field of international broadcasting have called for an end to TV Marti. In their December 1991 report, the President's Task Force on U.S. Government International Broadcasting called for the termination of TV Marti unless its hours of transmission could be expanded and improved—unlikely given the Castro regime's actions. The United States Advisory Commission on Public Diplomacy, in its report released in August 1992, also recommended that TV Marti be terminated, noting that unlike Radio Marti with its significant Cuban audience, its television cousin was simply not cost-effective.

Mr. President, the goal of opening up communications with the people of Cuba is commendable, but let us pursue more productive alternatives. In a February 1990 editorial, the Chicago Tribune listed several, including working toward a television news program exchange and facilitating computer and fax links. There are certainly others.

Let us pursue those more cost-effective approaches rather than blindly adhering to an expensive program that has failed to accomplish the mission for which it was created.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, during my campaign for the Senate, I presented an 82-point plan for deficit reduction, based upon options such as those outlined by the Congressional Budget Office in its February 1992 report to Congress on ways to cut the Federal deficit. Many of those proposals involve relatively small annual reductions. In the case of the overseas broadcasting, the savings amount to several hundred million dollars per year—a tiny amount in a trillion dollar budget. But over a 5-year period, these changes would result in roughly $1 billion in savings to the Federal taxpayers.

If we are going to reduce the Federal deficit, we must begin now. My introduction of this measure today as the first bill I have introduced in the U.S. Senate is part of my commitment to work steadily to achieve significant deficit reduction. Enactment of this bill will allow us to eliminate duplicative and redundant services and make more effective use of scarce resources. I plan to work hard to achieve these goals in this and other areas of the Federal budget.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed at the conclusion of my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 51

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Overseas Broadcasting Consolidation and Deficit Reduction Act of 1993".

TITLE I—REDUCTION IN GOVERNMENT-FUNDED RADIO AND TELEVISION BROADCASTING OVERSEAS

SEC. 101. PROHIBITION ON USE OF FUNDS FOR ISRAEL RADIO TRANSMITTER FACILITY.

None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available under any provision of law may be used for the design, construction, or operation of a radio transmitter facility in Israel.

SEC. 102. TERMINATION OF USIA TELEVISION MARTI PROGRAM.

(a) REPEAL.—Part D of title II of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1990 and 1991 (Public Law 101-246), relating to television broadcasting to Cuba, is repealed.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 5 of the Radio Broadcasting to Cuba Act (22 U.S.C. 1465c) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking "Advisory Board for Cuba Broadcasting" and inserting "Advisory Board for Radio Broadcasting to Cuba";

(2) in subsection (b), by striking "the Television Broadcasting to Cuba Act"; and

(3) by amending subsection (d) to read as follows:

"(d) The head of the Cuba Service shall serve, ex officio, as a member of the Board."

(c) REFERENCES.—A reference in any provision of law to the "Advisory Board for Cuba Broadcasting" shall be considered to be a reference to the "Advisory Board for Radio Broadcasting to Cuba".

SEC. 103. TERMINATION OF AUTHORITY OF USIA SATELLITE AND TELEVISION.

(a) REPEAL.—Section 505 of the United States Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948 (22 U.S.C. 1464a) is repealed.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 506 of such Act is redesignated as section 505 of such Act.

TITLE II—TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS AND SAVINGS PROVISIONS

SEC. 201. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this title, unless otherwise provided or indicated by the context—

(1) the term "Federal agency" has the meaning given to the term "agency" by section 551(1) of title 5, United States Code;

(2) the term "function" means any duty, obligation, power, authority, responsibility, right, privilege, activity, or program;

(3) the term "transferee agency" means the United States Information Agency (acting through the Bureau for Broadcasting); and

(4) the term "transferor agency" means the Board for International Broadcasting.

SEC. 202. TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS.

There are transferred to the transferee agency all functions which the head of the transferor agency exercised before the effective date of this title (including all related functions of any officer or employee of the transferor agency).

SEC. 203. DETERMINATIONS OF CERTAIN FUNCTIONS BY THE OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET.

If necessary, the Office of Management and Budget shall make any determination of the functions that are transferred under section 202.

SEC. 204. PERSONNEL PROVISIONS.

(a) APPOINTMENTS.—The head of the transferee agency may appoint and fix the compensation of such officers and employees as may be necessary to carry out the respective functions transferred under this title. Except as otherwise provided by law, such officers and employees shall be appointed in accordance with the civil service laws and their compensation fixed in accordance with title 5, United States Code.

(b) EXPERTS AND CONSULTANTS.—The head of the transferee agency may obtain the services of experts and consultants in accordance with section 3109 of title 5, United States Code, and compensate such experts and consultants for each day (including travel time) at rates not in excess of the rate of pay for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of such title. The head of the transferee agency may pay experts and consultants who are serving away from their homes or regular place of business travel expenses and per diem in lieu of subsistence at rates authorized by sections 5702 and 5703 of such title for persons in Government service employed intermittently.

SEC. 205. DELEGATION AND ASSIGNMENT.

Except where otherwise expressly prohibited by law or otherwise provided by this title, the head of the transferee agency may delegate any of the functions transferred to the head of the transferee agency by this title and any function transferred or granted to such head of the transferee agency after the effective date of this title to such officers and employees of the transferee agency as the head of the transferee agency may designate, and may authorize successive re-delegations of such functions as may be necessary or appropriate. No delegation of functions by the head of the transferee agency under this section or under any other provision of this title shall relieve such head of the transferee agency of responsibility for the administration of such functions.

SEC. 206. REORGANIZATION.

The head of the transferee agency is authorized to allocate or reallocate any function transferred under section 202 among the officers of the transferee agency, and to establish, consolidate, alter, or discontinue such organizational entities in the transferee agency as may be necessary or appropriate.

SEC. 207. RULES.

The head of the transferee agency is authorized to prescribe, in accordance with the provisions of chapters 5 and 6 of title 5, United States Code, such rules and regulations as the head of the transferee agency determines necessary or appropriate to administer and manage the functions of the transferee agency.

SEC. 208. TRANSFER AND ALLOCATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS AND PERSONNEL.

Except as otherwise provided in this title, the personnel employed in connection with, and the assets, liabilities, contracts, property, records, and unexpended balances of appropriations, authorizations, allocations, and other funds employed, used, held, arising from, available to, or to be made available in connection with the functions transferred by this title, subject to section 1531 of title 31, United States Code, shall be transferred to the transferee agency. Unexpended funds transferred pursuant to this section shall be used only for the purposes for which the funds were originally authorized and appropriated.

SEC. 209. INCIDENTAL TRANSFERS.

The Director of the Office of Management and Budget, at such time or times as the Director shall provide, is authorized to make such determinations as may be necessary with regard to the functions transferred by this title, and to make such additional incidental dispositions of personnel, assets, liabilities, grants, contracts, property, records, and unexpended balances of appropriations, authorizations, allocations, and other funds held, used, arising from, available to, or to be made available in connection with such functions, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this title. The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall provide for the termination of the affairs of all entities terminated by this title and for such further measures and dispositions as may be necessary to effectuate the purposes of this title.

SEC. 210. EFFECT ON PERSONNEL.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided by this title, the transfer pursuant to this title of full-time personnel (except special Government employees) and part-time personnel holding permanent positions shall not cause any such employee to be separated or reduced in grade or compensation for one year after the date of transfer of such employee under this title.

(b) EXECUTIVE SCHEDULE POSITIONS.—Except as otherwise provided in this title, any person who, on the day preceding the effective date of this title, held a position compensated in accordance with the Executive Schedule prescribed in chapter 53 of title 5, United States Code, and who, without a break in service, is appointed in the transferee agency to a position having duties comparable to the duties performed immediately preceding such appointment shall continue to be compensated in such new position at not less than the rate provided for such previous position, for the duration of the service of such person in such new position.

SEC. 211. SAVINGS PROVISIONS.

(a) CONTINUING EFFECT OF LEGAL DOCUMENTS.—All orders, determinations, rules, regulations, permits, agreements, grants, contracts, certificates, licenses, registrations, privileges, and other administrative actions—

(1) which have been issued, made, granted, or allowed to become effective by the President, any Federal agency or official thereof, or by a court of competent jurisdiction, in the performance of functions which are transferred under this title, and

(2) which are in effect at the time this title takes effect, or were final before the effective date of this title and are to become effective on or after the effective date of this title, shall continue in effect according to their terms until modified, terminated, superseded, set aside, or revoked in accordance with law by the President, the head of the transferee agency or other authorized official, a court of competent jurisdiction, or by operation of law.

(b) PROCEEDINGS NOT AFFECTED.—The provisions of this title shall not affect any proceedings, including notices of proposed rule-making, or any application for any license, permit, certificate, or financial assistance pending before the transferor agency at the time this title takes effect, with respect to functions transferred by this title but such proceedings and applications shall be continued. Orders shall be issued in such proceedings, appeals shall be taken therefrom, and payments shall be made pursuant to such orders, as if this title had not been enacted, and orders issued in any such proceedings shall continue in effect until modified, terminated, superseded, or revoked by a duly authorized official, by a court of competent jurisdiction, or by operation of law. Nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to prohibit the discontinuance or modification of any such proceeding under the same terms and conditions and to the same extent that such proceeding could have been discontinued or modified if this title had not been enacted.

(c) SUITS NOT AFFECTED.—The provisions of this title shall not affect suits commenced before the effective date of this title, and in all such suits, proceedings shall be had, appeals taken, and judgments rendered in the same manner and with the same effect as if this title had not been enacted.

(d) NONABATEMENT OF ACTIONS.—No suit, action, or other proceeding commenced by or against the transferor agency, or by or against any individual in the official capacity of such individual as an officer of the transferor agency, shall abate by reason of the enactment of this title.

(e) ADMINISTRATIVE ACTIONS RELATING TO PROMULGATION OF REGULATIONS.—Any administrative action relating to the preparation or promulgation of a regulation by the transferor agency relating to a function transferred under this title may be continued by the transferee agency with the same effect as if this title had not been enacted.

SEC. 212. SEPARABILITY.

If a provision of this title or its application to any person or circumstance is held invalid, neither the remainder of this title nor the application of the provision to other persons or circumstances shall be affected.

SEC. 213. TRANSITION.

The head of the transferee agency is authorized to utilize—

(1) the services of such officers, employees, and other personnel of the transferor agency with respect to functions transferred to the transferee agency by this title; and

(2) funds appropriated to such functions for such period of time as may reasonably be needed to facilitate the orderly implementation of this title.

SEC. 214. REFERENCES.

Reference in any other Federal law, Executive order, rule, regulation, or delegation of authority, or any document of or relating to—

(1) the head of the transferor agency with regard to functions transferred under section 202, shall be deemed to refer to the head of the transferee agency; and

(2) the transferor agency with regard to functions transferred under section 202, shall be deemed to refer to the transferee agency.

SEC. 215. DEVELOPMENT OF CONSOLIDATION PLAN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 9 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the United States Information Agency, after consultation with the appropriate congressional committees, shall submit to those committees a plan for the consolidation of the functions transferred under section 202 with the existing broadcasting activities carried out by the Bureau for Broadcasting.

(b) CONTENTS OF PLAN.—Such plan shall include—

(1) a proposal for the reduction of broadcasting activities by RFE/RL, Inc., during the 36-month period which begins on the date of submission of the plan; and

(2) any recommendations for legislative changes as may be necessary.

SEC. 216. REPEAL.

The Board for International Broadcasting Act of 1973 (22 U.S.C. 2871 et seq.) is repealed.

SEC. 217. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This title shall take effect 12 months after its date of enactment. *

RADIO FREE EUROPE'S JOB IS DONE

A bright idea can become a feeble one when it has outlived its usefulness. The Cold War broadcasting system known as Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty is becoming just such an anachronism, and it's time for Congress to start programming a signoff.

The U.S.-operated network, which beams to nations of eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union in their native languages, kept hope and news of freedom alive during the postwar decades of communist rule. The radio operations won a share of the credit when the Iron Curtain finally fell.

Now, however, it is as difficult to justify their continued operation, which this year cost U.S. taxpayers $207 million, as it would be to sustain American troops and weaponry at Cold War levels.

The shortwave radio broadcasts compete increasingly with independent homegrown and international media, with more popular technologies such as television and AM-FM radio, and with the United States' own Voice of America, which offers newscasts in 47 languages worldwide on its own $210 million budget.

A presidential commission has twice recommended the phaseout of Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty, as well as an end to the absurdly unproductive TV Marti broadcasts to Cuba. Congress has yet to listen.

Of course, these decisions are being rendered in the arena of politics, and practical considerations are not much in play. Rather, Congress has ordered new VOA broadcasts that even the agency deems unnecessary, and it is now considering a "Radio Free China/Radio Free Asia" that would duplicate VOA service.

There are several reasons to scale back on overseas broadcasts. The first is, obviously, the end of the Cold War and the necessary examination of the relevance and cost of the forces that once helped to fight it.

Also, with a new political landscape and the development of independent media in ex-communist countries, credibility is a vital issue for the U.S. voice abroad. Such credibility would be enhanced by consolidating broadcasts under the VOA umbrella. That's because the VOA's charter allows it at least a degree of independence, while Radio Free Europe has often been used as a propaganda device. And while Radio Free Europe has put more emphasis on targeted "local" news to east European nations, there's no reason why VOA can't take on more of this role.

Still, the most wasteful use of government broadcast dollars has to be TV Marti, which spends $25 million to broadcast to Cuba for two hours in the middle of the night. TV Marti has few viewers and has only prompted Fidel Castro to jam the more effective broadcasts of its less costly radio equivalent.

The United States can offer a vital example to the emerging independent media of newly free nations. This role is not served by propping up outdated propaganda machines.

SIGN-OFF FOR COLD WAR RELICS

With communism in Eastern Europe going the way of the dodo, it makes little sense to continue US subsidies for Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty, those warhorses of the '50s. An advisory committee has wisely recommended that they be scrapped, along with the silly effort to relay TV broadcasts to Cuba, and that the money be invested in improving the Voice of America.

A foreign broadcast service is a worthwhile investment for the United States because of its involvement in all regions of the world. But since the fall of the Soviet Union, the $207 million for special stations aimed exclusively at Eastern Europe has been wasted. Voice of America, which broadcasts all over the world, needs the extra funds to respond quickly to new demands for service. Congress recently ordered it to broadcast in Kurdish, Croatian and Tibetan, for a total of 47 languages.

Malcolm Forbes Jr., chairman of the board that supervises Radio Free Europe, says, "No other media organization in the world provides these countries with as much information." Perhaps this is true, but in a fast-changing world, why should Romania or Poland get special consideration over Burma or Zaire?

As for TV Marti, it transmits its telecasts to Cuba from 3 a.m. to 6 a.m., hardly prime time, especially when so much of the island is crippled by electricity blackouts. The chief function of the service is to enrage Fidel Castro, who must keep irregular hours. Better to invest the $25 million in additional radio broadcasts to Cuba at more convenient times of day.

The advisory committee also recommended against inauguration of a special service to China equivalent to Radio Free Europe—a proposal that is gaining support in Congress. There is no need to annoy the Beijing leadership, which can be just as touchy as Castro, when beefed-up service by the Voice of America will do just as well.

WHY RUSH TO SILENCE DEMOCRACY?

Fifty years ago, the U.S. became a global radio power. "This is a voice speaking from America," promised the Voice of America's first broadcast in February 1942. "The news may be good or bad—we shall tell you the truth."

The V.O.A., originating in Washington and operated by the U.S. Information Agency, now broadcasts in 47 languages. Along the way, it helped spawn Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty. These are administratively distinct "surrogate stations" based in Munich and covering Eastern Europe and the former Soviet republics.

But does America still need a global radio voice now that global cold wars are over? A bipartisan commission created by Congress offers a provocative answer: Phase out the Munich stations and cut back the V.O.A. language services. The proposal rests on the argument that radio programming has less impact than television, which should claim budgetary priority.

With the fall of the Soviet empire, that may seem a sensible conclusion. But it's dangerously premature. New forms of tyranny and violence provide strong arguments for using all these voices, at least for a while.

For one thing, television is easily jammed, as Cuba has shown in blocking TV Marti, the Florida-based station established three years ago by the U.S.I.A. The Advisory Commission on Public Diplomacy would shut TV Marti because it is "not cost-effective"—unlike nine-year-old Radio Marti, which the report praises. Elsewhere, however, the commission feels the future lies with TV satellite transmissions and imported TV crews.

This markedly underrates the reach and influence of radio. Foreign broadcasts can bring stunned people together in times of crisis. For example, Boris Yeltsin's statements on Radio Liberty helped rally public opposition to the attempted coup in Moscow last year.

Even so, some argue that the Munich services can be safely abandoned as long as the V.O.A. remains on the job. The argument overlooks two important points.

The first is that the Voice provides world coverage, while Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty report local news within the listeners' own country. The two stations have spent years developing sources and archives for close-in coverage that the Voice simply does not attempt.

The second point is that democracy's victory is not yet final, despite the collapse of the Iron Curtain. For example, Vladimir Meciar, the separatist leader in Slovakia, now threatens to silence broadcasts and muzzle publications he judges as hostile. There is still no independent press in post-liberation Afghanistan, which Radio Liberty serves.

In these circumstances, a skilled external news operation can give post-Communist nations a yardstick for judging their own press. Emotional issues like anti-Semitism and minority rights are often treated more fully in Munich than by local media. That is the routine justification for the stations; in extraordinary circumstances—wars, coups—their silence could be calamitous.

Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty could, of course, be eliminated eventually, when press freedom is accepted from the Baltics to the Balkans. Payrolls and programming can be trimmed now.

But the stations ought not to be abandoned in the next year or two, as the Public Diplomacy Commission seems to feel. Leaders like Mr. Meciar, of course, wouldn't mind at all if they were. But leaders in Congress would do well to ignore the too-hasty recommendations in this too-simple report and keep these Voices alive.

TV MARTI OFF THE AIR AFTER BLIMP BREAKS LOOSE

(By Laura Parker)

MIAMI, January 17.—TV Marti, the controversial government-funded television station that beams baseball, films, soap operas and news from the United States to Cuba, has been blown off the air—not by Fidel Castro but by gusting winds.

The broadcasts stopped early Wednesday after the Air Force blimp containing TV Marti's transmitter broke loose from its tether over the Florida Keys and drifted into the Everglades.

Officials are trying to determine how best to extract the deflated blimp and its cargo of high-technology equipment from a dense mangrove forest at the southwest edge of Everglades National Park.

The broadcasts to Cuba began last March amid congressional criticism that TV Marti was an unnecessary expense, that its equipment frequently would be out of commission because of bad weather and that jamming by the Cuban government would prevent many Cubans from receiving the broadcasts.

Backers argued that TV Marti, named for Cuban patriot Jose Marti, and its sister station, Radio Marti, were essential to ensure a free flow of information about the United States to Cuban citizens. But critics maintained that Cubans already could tune into various radio and television programs originating on Caribbean islands.

This week, the Air Force blimp, known as "Fat Albert," broke free from its tether off Cudhoe Key as it was being lowered from maintenance, according to a spokesman at TV Marti's Washington headquarters. Normally, the blimp is raised to 10,000 feet to transmit broadcasts 100 miles to Cuba.

"TV Marti had just gone off the air for the day," said Joe O'Connell, the spokesman. "The balloon began to drift toward the Everglades National Park."

Officials chased Fat Albert to a southwestern corner of the park by helicopter and deflated it so it could be lowered.

O'Connell said it appears that sophisticated electronic equipment in the blimp was not seriously damaged and that TV Marti may be back on the air soon. He said bad weather prevents TV Marti's transmitter from operating about 20 percent of the time.

TV Marti went on the air as a $7.5 million experiment last March 27. In August, based on the results of four months of test broadcasts, President Bush signed legislation making TV Marti permanent. It is funded at $16 million for 1991.

The General Accounting Office criticized two surveys that estimated viewership at between 1 million and 7 million Cubans. The GAO observed that U.S. diplomats in Havana reported that TV Marti was effectively jammed and estimated viewership at between 50,000 and 70,000.

LOUD "NO" TO VOICE IN THE WILDERNESS

(By Joel Greenberg)

HATZEVA, ISRAEL.—When evening settles over the desolate Arava valley, Yaacov Ravitz savors the lingering sunset as it casts a rosy glow over the desert. The last thing he wants is a forest of radio antennas looming over the silent wilderness.

"I don't need a giant monster spewing radiation near my house," said Mr. Ravitz, who grows fruits and vegetables in this moshav, an agricultural collective, in the Negev.

The giant in question is a bitterly debated project of the United States Government for a 2,000-acre relay station for the Voice of America, Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty.

The dispute began a few years ago, focusing on environmental concerns like loss of wilderness areas, possibly harmful radiation and the effect on migrating birds. But it has taken on new dimensions since the collapse of the Soviet empire.

REMEMBER THE COLD WAR?

To opponents like Mr. Ravitz, the station is another cold-war dinosaur. It was conceived during the Reagan Administration to overcome jamming of shortwave broadcasts to Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. Now that the jamming has stopped, there is no need for the station, say its opponents, who include at least half the members of Parliament. They hope to prevail under the Clinton Administration.

Supporters argue that even in the post-cold-war era, it would be an important service to broadcast messages of democracy to former Soviet republics in central Asia, to Iran and to other Islamic countries.

Environmental risks are minimal, they say, adding that the project would create jobs and strengthen the Israeli-American alliance. Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin has pressed for speedy construction.

Although the United States and Israel signed an agreement in 1987 to build the $300 million station, Israeli planned authorities have yet to give their required approval and Congress still has a final say.

But efforts to promote the project have run into stiff resistance.

Among other things, the station would require the relocation of an air force training zone to a large tract of Negev wilderness. Environmentalists say the shift would harm animal and plant life.

"Eighty percent of the Negev is already taken up by army firing zones," said Yoav Sagi, chairman of the Society for the Protection of Nature in Israel. "Israel is one of the most densely populated countries in the world, and we have to leave some breathing room."

Another issue is electromagnetic radiation. Planners say the expected levels meet strict international safety standards. But residents are troubled by studies that suggest a link between certain types of radiation and cancer, especially in children.

BIRDS CAN'T BE BOUGHT

"The data isn't unequivocal, but it's still a relatively new area of research, the way smoking and asbestos were years ago," said Mr. Ravitz, the farmer. "I'm not prepared to be a guinea pig."

Local residents have rejected a United States offer of $11 million for local development. They are also left cold by arguments that the project would create jobs, noting that fewer than 200 people would be employed once construction was finished.

Then there are the birds, the 150 million of them that migrate each year through the Arava valley along one of the major flyways linking Europe and Asia to Africa.

A study commissioned by the Government found that the station would cause the birds little harm, but environmental groups say that many could collide with the station's towers and antenna grids.

Yossi Leshem, an ornithologist and executive director of the nature society, warns of potentially "irreversible damage" to bird populations that could also be affected by heat radiation and electromagnetic waves.

WHO, EXACTLY, WANTS IT?

As objections pile up in Israel, doubts have also surfaced in Washington. In August, a Presidential commission recommended that the station be scrapped and the funds switched to other broadcasting needs, like a V.O.A. relay station in Kuwait.

Uri Marinov, until recently director-general of the Environment Ministry, says that the project is running on bureaucratic inertia.

"Israelis said, 'We don't want it but the Americans do,'" Mr. Marinov recalled. "Americans said, 'We're not interested but the Israelis are.' Someone has to get up and say we don't need it. The emperor has no clothes."

By Mr. FEINGOLD:

S. 52. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to establish a program to provide information and technical assistance and incentive grants to encourage the development of services that facilitate the return to home and community of individuals awaiting discharge from hospitals or acute care facilities who require long-term care, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

HOSPITAL TO HOME- AND COMMUNITY-CARE LINKAGE DEVELOPMENT AND INCENTIVE GRANT PROGRAM

• Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, today I am introducing S. 52, the Hospital to Home- and Community-Care Linkage Development and Incentive Grant Program, legislation designed to establish, enhance, and expand on efforts, already developed in some communities, to discharge individuals, needing managed long-term care, from hospitals and other acute care facilities directly back to their homes and other community-based settings.

Mr. President, our country is facing a health care crisis. Although there is disagreement on precisely how we should proceed, with over 35 million Americans lacking health care coverage, and the cost of care exploding, the need for comprehensive acute care reform is widely acknowledged.

What must be more clearly recognized, however, is the critical need for long-term care reform at the national level.

Although it is true that some health care reform proposals include long-term care reform, others leave the matter largely untouched. Such neglect will prove to be a serious error as long-term care reform must be part and parcel of reform of the entire health care system.

The demographic imperatives of health care are most strikingly felt in the area of long-term care. The elderly are the fastest growing segment of the population, and those over age 85—individuals most in need of long-term care—are the fastest growing segment of the elderly. Failure to reform our current long-term care system will mean a growing population of long-term care consumers served by a shrinking set of alternatives, all of them increasingly costly.

Mr. President, it is my intention to introduce legislation later in this session that addresses the larger issue of long-term care reform, legislation that will emphasize community- and home-based flexible services that respond to individual consumer choice and preference, and that will relieve pressure on the Federal deficit and on families, who are often forced to spend their life savings to pay for the long-term care of a loved one.

The bill I am introducing today dovetails with that larger reform package, not only as a specific effort to solve a major problem within our long-term care system, but as a model for that larger reform that stresses individual consumer choice and preference.

The bill also highlights another important feature I feel should be incorporated in an overall long-term reform package; namely, a State-based approach within a universal system.

Mr. President, at the State and local level we have seen some of the most exciting and productive work on long-term care. This legislation encourages public and private non-profit agencies to draw upon the work done in these State laboratories and implement the approaches developed from those practical experiences.

Much has been done to stimulate innovations at the State and local level. Dozens of pilot projects have been enacted, many providing useful, even exciting results. But too often we fail to take the next steps—building on those results by replicating individual successes, then integrating reforms supported by multiple successes into the existing structure.

This legislation seeks to take that second step—replicating experiences as a prelude to larger structural reform.

Mr. President, this bill targets the problem of overcoming systemic barriers that prevent individuals, who need managed long-term care and who are about to be discharged from hospitals and other acute-care facilities, from going back to their home or into other community-based settings. These individuals all too often end up being discharged into a nursing home, thus placing a financial burden on families and taxpayers, and limiting consumer choice of long-term care services.

As Chair of the Aging Committee in the Wisconsin State Senate for the past 10 years, I have worked to provide long-term care consumers with the opportunity to remain in their own homes and communities when they choose to do so.

The long-term care structure that has evolved since Medicaid began in the mid-1960's has strong systemic incentives for institutional care, often to the exclusion of community-based alternatives. Services for long-term care consumers who wish to remain in their homes represent only a fraction of the total long-term care budget, and waiting lists for those services are the norm. In Wisconsin, it is not unusual to find people waiting for 2 years for home- and community-based services.

One feature of this structural bias is most visible in trying to discharge patients from hospitals back to their homes when they need some managed long-term care.

The hospital discharge is a critical point of entry into the long-term care system, and as such, has posed a significant problem for those individuals who wish to return to their own homes.

The population most in need of long-term care uses the hospital and acute care facility at a disproportionate rate. In my own State, according to the 1990 Health Care Data Report, "Annual Report: Hospital Utilization and Charges in Wisconsin: Jan.-Dec. 1990," published by the Wisconsin Department of Health and Social Services, Office of Health Care Information, patients age 65 and older account for nearly one-third of all discharges from hospitals. Indeed, a large number of people over 65 spend some time in a hospital—nearly 32 people in every 100 over age 65 were discharged from a hospital. Looking at older groups, the discharge rate grows to even more dramatic levels. For those age 75 to 85, the rate was nearly 38 of every 100, and for those over age 85, the biggest users of long-term care services, the rate was 45 of every 100.

Once their acute care needs are met, these long-term care consumers all too often are sent to nursing homes.

A recent survey done in Milwaukee County showed that more than 70 percent of the older adults discharged from hospitals never return home. Rather, those individuals in need of managed long-term care all too frequently end up in a nursing home.

The single greatest source of admissions into nursing homes is often the hospital.

In Wisconsin, according to a 1990 report, "Wisconsin Nursing Home Utilization, 1990," published by the Wisconsin Department of Health and Social Services, Division of Health, Center for Health Statistics, 70 percent of all nursing home admissions are from the hospital—four times the number of nursing home admissions from private homes.

The reasons for this lopsided statistic are straightforward.

As I mentioned earlier, grossly inadequate funding for community- and home-based long-term care alternatives have resulted in long waiting lists. Even individuals fortunate enough not to be languishing on a waiting list must often wait for some days or weeks before overburdened community care case managers are able to perform the necessary screening, assessment, and case planning.

The Medicare DRG and prospective payment system have put substantial pressures on hospitals to discharge more quickly, keeping the hospital stay as short as possible. The uncertainty of community- and home-based services, especially when contrasted with the easy alternative of an accessible nursing home bed that may be available, makes the choice for the discharge planner easy.

In addition, hospitals and the local agencies administering the community- and home-based long-term care programs each have their own sets of rules and procedures. Because community long-term care alternatives are relatively new, there has been little time for those two different systems to interact and become familiar with each other. Discharge planners often find it difficult to identify patients who might be well served by community care programs, and thus frequently fail to give enough lead time for local community care agencies to react effectively in providing community- and home-based services in a timely fashion.

By contrast, nursing homes and hospitals have learned to interact well with each other. There are few, if any, bureaucratic barriers to discharging a patient from a hospital into a nursing home.

As Chair of the Wisconsin State Senate Committee on Aging, I became aware of this problem through a series of hearings I held in 1988. I authored a provision that was included in the State budget initiating a pilot program to explore ways to enhance linkages between hospitals and community care agencies. This pilot program has proven to be a success.

The primary goal of decreasing nursing home placements from hospital discharges was achieved. On top of those expected results, though, the pilot program also produced some unexpected additional benefits as the average inpatient costs to participating hospitals dropped as did the average length of stay. For one hospital participating in the program, there was a 23-percent drop in the discharge rate to nursing homes, while the average inpatient costs dropped by an average of nearly $2,250. At the same time, the average length of stay for the patient population participating in the pilot dropped by over 2 days. The hospital also reported improvements in the quality of discharge planning for its most complicated and problematic cases.

There are many examples chronicling the success of the Wisconsin project. Here are two examples from the narrative report of the project.

A 65-year-old woman had a medical history that included diabetes mellitus, hypertension, Bell's palsy, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, congestive heart failure, hypertensive heart disease, atherosclerosis, obesity, cerebral vascular accident, and degenerative dementia. A life-long shy introvert, she had dementia that compounded her problems and caused her to fear people with whom she was not familiar.

As a participant in the Wisconsin Hospital Link Program, she was discharged from the hospital back to her home, and is now cared for by her spouse and grown children, supported by one person who was hired to help with her care.

A 92-year-old widowed woman named Daisy was hospitalized for a large, deep decubitus ulcer on her lower back. Grieving the death of her son a year before, she was receiving less daily contact, and spent long lengths of time lying in bed. Her grandson and his wife opted to move in with her to act as caregivers, but they each worked full time and their young daughters attended school. Needing assistance for dressing changes toward wound care, plus hygiene, ambulating, and transfers, she was discharged with home health aide support Monday through Friday while her family works. Several pieces of durable medical equipment were delivered to her home, most notably an alternating pressure pad positional bed. An RN makes regular assessment of her wound's slow healing process. The family has adapted with great comfort to the aides assigned and Daisy describes herself as doing well.

Every party involved in the program—State and county government, hospitals, and patients—benefited. As discharge planners noted, a particularly valuable benefit was the ability of the case managers to monitor the discharge plan in the patient's home. Often, patients, older patients especially, looked different at home than they did in the hospital. Having a case manager who can monitor changing conditions and needs is a critical asset for planners.

By every measure, this pilot program was beneficial.

Mr. President, we now need to take the next step—to replicate the hospital discharge-community link program by allowing States and local agencies to establish, enhance, and expand on this pilot program.

In light of our massive Federal deficit, we need to move carefully when considering any new services. This program, however, has been demonstrated to save money, both by reducing the length of hospital stays and placing individuals in less costly home- and community-based settings. I think whenever we can provide better and more appropriate services and reduce expenditures, we should do so. The fiscal success of the pilot hospital link program in Wisconsin, as well as the human success, has led to its continued support at a time when every spending program, at the State or Federal level, is subject to exacting scrutiny. I want to see our limited revenues devoted to replicating an existing, successful innovation in the area of long-term care, such as the Wisconsin Hospital Link Program.

SUMMARY OF LEGISLATION

Mr. President, the bill I am introducing today has two basic components.

First, it requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to establish an information and technical assistance program and actively promote the exchange of information among agencies that have had experience with facilitating the discharge of long-term care consumers from hospitals and acute care facilities back to their homes and communities. This provision is designed to encourage various entities to embark on a variety of approaches to the hospital discharge program, building upon the experiences that others have had in the area.

Mr. President, I want to make it very clear that under this legislation the Secretary is expected to do more than simply provide a clearinghouse on programs aimed at dealing with the hospital discharge program that I have described. To achieve the desired discussion and interaction between those States and entities that have had experience dealing with the discharge problem, the Secretary is expected to play an active role in facilitating as much meaningful communication and sharing of experiences between those entities which already have experience in this field and those who want to develop these programs.

I am convinced that the experiences of entities who have already created and explored innovative techniques to address this matter are valuable resources that ought to be shared and disseminated in a way that can have timely and practical results. In too many cases, the real experts are in the field running pilot programs and we ought to be doing a great deal more to put their experience to work in helping replicate similar programs. I know in my own work in aging issues, I have learned a great deal from visiting demonstration programs not only in Wisconsin, but in other States as well.

Second, Mr. President, the legislation authorizes a modest incentive grant program to provide seed money to enable States to establish or expand hospital link programs. Under this legislation, States would be eligible to apply for funds to assist local entities to establish, enhance, or expand on programs to facilitate the discharge of individuals who need managed long-term care, from a hospital or other acute care facility directly back to their home or other community-based setting. If a State did not elect to apply for this program, other eligible entities in a local community could apply.

The legislation requires that an application for a grant under this program contain assurances that adequate community- and home-based managed care services are available for the acute care patients being discharged under the program for which funds are being made available. If an adequate supply of these services is not available, no case management program can function adequately. Other than case management, this program is not designed to provide direct services; rather, its purpose is to link patients being discharged from acute care facilities with home- or community-based services instead of institutional care.

The legislation also provides that grants be made available to those applicants who wish to expand on existing programs, to further establish a network of innovative hospital discharge methods, and to refine and enhance those methods.

Recognizing that waiting lists for community care programs represent one of the most difficult barriers to coordination between community care and hospital discharge planning, this proposal directs the Secretary to give expedited consideration of any waiver application that is necessary under title XIX of the Social Security Act for an applying agency to ensure that adequate home- and community-based long-term care services are available to those individuals being discharged from hospitals. Doing so will help assure that the efforts of applying entities are not thwarted by inadequate community service slots.

Mr. President, mindful of the pressure any expenditure puts on the Federal deficit, even one such as this which will save more revenue over time than is initially appropriated, and similarly cognizant of the danger that local entities can be tempted to look to Federal taxpayers as a permanent funding source for programs, this legislation not only limits funding for 3 fiscal years, it also permits the Secretary to require applicants to describe how these programs will be administered after the Federal startup funding ends. Thus, applicants must demonstrate an ability to continue the program once the Federal seed money is terminated, protecting against both an ongoing dependence on Federal revenue and continuing pressure on the deficit. This should also help focus attention on those applications that are most likely to succeed in the long run, and that will attract alternative funding sources.

Though grants are generally limited to $300,000 per year, with the Secretary empowered to waive even that limitation, this legislation envisions smaller grants for many applicants, particularly those applicants seeking to establish an initial discharge program. Larger grants would be appropriate for those applicants with a proven record in the area, seeking to expand on successful systems.

An annual grant of $300,000 can provide more than enough funding for an effective program. In Wisconsin, a biennial appropriation of $150,000 produced striking results. Administrative costs were entirely absorbed by the State agency directing the program, and the bulk of the funds allocated by the legislature were used for case management services. I expect a similar experience under this legislation.

Mr. President, this legislation will help, at least in a modest way, lay the foundation for the larger matter of long-term care reform.

We need to bring a new attitude to health care reform generally, and long-term reform in particular. The consumer of long-term care services must be seen more as a customer than a patient. The long-term care system we adopt should be flexible enough to respond to the individual preferences of the customer, from the initial assessment right on through to ongoing services. This means that case managers and others need to consult regularly with the customer, as well as family members, to be sure their needs are met in a satisfying manner.

It also means that the quality assurance, and, more importantly, the quality improvement programs instituted by States should be customer oriented.

Mr. President, this legislation is both consistent with those principles, and will help usher in that new approach to long-term care as we move toward the needed larger structural reform. I believe that, given the Wisconsin experience, it is a program that will reduce health care costs while providing better services for individuals in need of long-term health care.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 52

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Hospital to Home- and Community-Care Linkage Development and Incentive Grant Program".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) demonstration programs and projects have been developed to offer care management to hospitalized individuals awaiting discharge who are in need of long-term health care services that meet individual needs and preferences in home- and community-based settings as an alternative to long-term nursing home care or institutional placement; and

(2) there is a need to disseminate information and technical assistance to hospitals and State and local community organizations regarding such programs and projects and to provide incentive grants to State and local public and private agencies, including area agencies on aging, to establish and expand programs that offer care management to individuals awaiting discharge from acute care hospitals who are in need of long-term care so that services to meet individual needs and preferences can be arranged in home- and community-based settings as an alternative to long-term placement in nursing homes or other institutional settings.

SEC. 3. DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION, TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE AND INCENTIVE GRANTS TO ASSIST IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF HOSPITAL LINKAGE PROGRAMS.

Part C of title III of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 248 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 327B. DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION, TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE AND INCENTIVE GRANTS TO ASSIST IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF HOSPITAL LINKAGE PROGRAMS.

"(a) DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION.—The Secretary shall compile, evaluate, publish and disseminate to appropriate State and local officials and to private organizations and agencies that provide services to individuals in need of long-term health care services, such information and materials as may assist such entities in replicating successful programs that are aimed at offering care management to hospitalized individuals who are in need of long-term care so that services to meet individual needs and preferences can be arranged in home- and community-based settings as an alternative to long-term nursing home placement. The Secretary may provide technical assistance to entities seeking to replicate such programs.

"(b) INCENTIVE GRANTS TO ASSIST IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF HOSPITAL LINKAGE PROGRAMS.—The Secretary shall establish a program under which incentive grants may be awarded to assist private and public agencies, including area agencies on aging, and organizations in developing and expanding programs and projects that facilitate the discharge of individuals in hospitals or other acute care facilities who are in need of long-term care services and placement of such individuals into home- and community-based settings.

"(c) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—

"(1) ELIGIBLE ENTITIES.—To be eligible to receive a grant under subsection (b) an entity shall be—

"(A)(i) a State agency as defined in section 102(43) of the Older Americans Act of 1965; or

"(ii) a State agency responsible for administering home and community care programs under title XIX of the Social Security Act; or

"(B) if no State agency described in subparagraph (A) applies with respect to a particular State, a public or nonprofit private entity.

"(2) APPLICATIONS.—To be eligible to receive an incentive grant under subsection (b), an entity shall prepare and submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such manner and containing such information as the Secretary may require, including—

"(A) an assessment of the need within the community to be served for the establishment or expansion of a program to facilitate the discharge of individuals in need of long-term care who are in hospitals or other acute care facilities into home- and community-care programs that provide individually planned, flexible services that reflect individual choice or preference rather than nursing home or institutional settings;

"(B) a plan for establishing or expanding a program for identifying individuals in hospital or acute care facilities who are in need of individualized long-term care provided in home- and community-based settings rather than nursing homes or other institutional settings and undertaking the planning and management of individualized care plans to facilitate discharge into such settings;

"(C) assurances that nongovernmental case management agencies funded under grants awarded under this section are not direct providers of home- and community-based services;

"(D) satisfactory assurances that adequate home- and community-based long term care services are available, or will be made available, within the community to be served so that individuals being discharged from hospitals or acute care facilities under the proposed program can be served in such home- and community-based settings, with flexible, individualized care which reflects individual choice and preference;

"(E) a description of the manner in which the program to be administered with amounts received under the grant will be continued after the termination of the grant for which such application is submitted; and

"(F) a description of any waivers or approvals necessary to expand the number of individuals served in federally funded home- and community-based long term care programs in order to provide satisfactory assurances that adequate home- and community-based long term care services are available in the community to be served.

"(3) AWARDING OF GRANTS.—

"(A) PREFERENCES.—In awarding grants under subsection (b), the Secretary shall give preference to entities submitting applications that—

"(i) demonstrate an ability to coordinate activities funded using amounts received under the grant with programs providing individualized home- and community-based case management and services to individuals in need of long term care with hospital discharge planning programs; and

"(ii) demonstrate that adequate home- and community-based long term care management and services are available, or will be made available to individuals being served under the program funded with amounts received under subsection (b).

"(B) DISTRIBUTION.—In awarding grants under subsection (b), the Secretary shall ensure that such grants—

"(i) are equitably distributed on a geographic basis;

"(ii) include projects operating in urban areas and projects operating in rural areas; and

"(iii) are awarded for the expansion of existing hospital linkage programs as well as the establishment of new programs.

"(C) EXPEDITED CONSIDERATION.—The Secretary shall provide for the expedited consideration of any waiver application that is necessary under title XIX of the Social Security Act to enable an applicant for a grant under subsection (b) to satisfy the assurance required under paragraph (1)(D).

"(4) USE OF GRANTS.—An entity that receives amounts under a grant under subsection (b) may use such amounts for planning, development and evaluation services and to provide reimbursements for the costs of one or more case managers to be located in or assigned to selected hospitals who would—

“(A) identify patients in need of individualized care in home- and community-based long-term care;

“(B) assess and develop care plans in cooperation with the hospital discharge planning staff; and

“(C) arrange for the provision of community care either immediately upon discharge from the hospital or after any short term nursing-home stay that is needed for recuperation or rehabilitation;

“(5) DIRECT SERVICES SUBJECT TO REIMBURSEMENTS.—None of the amounts provided under a grant under this section may be used to provide direct services, other than case management, for which reimbursements are otherwise available under title XVIII or XIX of the Social Security Act.

“(6) LIMITATIONS.—

“(A) TERM.—Grants awarded under this section shall be for terms of less than 3 years.

“(B) AMOUNT.—Grants awarded to an entity under this section shall not exceed $300,000 per year. The Secretary may waive the limitation under this subparagraph where an applicant demonstrates that the number of hospitals or individuals to be served under the grant justifies such increased amounts.

“(C) SUPPLANTING OF FUNDS.—Amounts awarded under a grant under this section may not be used to supplant existing State funds that are provided to support hospital link programs.

“(d) EVALUATION AND REPORTS.—

“(1) BY GRANTEEES.—An entity that receives a grant under this section shall evaluate the effectiveness of the services provided under the grant in facilitating the placement of individuals being discharged from hospitals or acute care facilities into home- and community-based long term care settings rather than nursing homes. Such entity shall prepare and submit to the Secretary a report containing such information and data concerning the activities funded under the grant as the Secretary determines appropriate.

“(2) BY SECRETARY.—Not later than the end of the third fiscal year for which funds are appropriated under subsection (e), the Secretary shall prepare and submit to the appropriate committees of Congress, a report concerning the results of the evaluations and reports conducted and prepared under paragraph (1).

“(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, $5,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1994 through 1996.”

S. 55. A bill to amend the National Labor Relations Act and the Railway Labor Act to prevent discrimination based on participation in labor disputes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

WORKPLACE FAIRNESS ACT OF 1993

• Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I rise to introduce the Workplace Fairness Act. This legislation prohibits the hiring of permanent striker replacements. Without this bill, the right to strike is no more than a right to lose one's job.

Yesterday the Clinton administration took office with a mandate from the American people to revitalize the American workplace, increase productivity, and expand opportunity. These are great and important goals, but without an effective labor movement they cannot be achieved. And without the right to strike, there can be no labor movement.

We need a healthy relationship between labor and management, built on trust, in order to ensure U.S. competitiveness into the next century. But the balance of power has shifted too far in management's direction. Without this bill, we will face strife, not serenity; we will have distrust and dissension, not cooperation and coordination. How can we hope to compete if those who labor cannot work with those who manage? The fabric of our industrial relations is frayed, and we must mend it.

By its terms, this legislation prohibits the hiring of permanent striker replacements. But just as importantly, this legislation will restore balance to our Nation's labor laws, and ensure that the American labor movement can continue to contribute to our national growth.

I regret that this bill is not yet law. We should have enacted it 3 years ago, when I first introduced it. We should have enacted it in the last Congress, when the House passed the bill by a 65-vote margin. A majority of the Members of this body supported the bill in the last Congress, but we were prevented from voting on it last year by a filibuster. Fifty-seven Members of this body voted to close off the debate, but that was not enough to defeat the filibuster.

By now, the Members of this body are familiar with the basic issue addressed by the Workplace Fairness Act. But let me briefly describe the problem, so that we may not lose sight of the urgent need for a solution.

Fifty-eight years ago, Congress recognized that labor disputes were taking a terrible toll on the economic and social fabric of this country. By enacting the NLRA in 1935, Congress sought to promote collective bargaining as the preferred method of resolving labor-management disputes and preserving economic stability.

Collective bargaining allows labor and management to seek a peaceful resolution of labor disputes through negotiation. Where negotiation fails to resolve a dispute, each side is permitted to exercise peaceful self-help options. To succeed, this system depends upon a balance of economic power between the parties.

For labor, the right to strike is essential because it provides economic leverage. That is why the National Labor Relations Act has expressly protected that right for 58 years.

Although the right to strike is labor's most effective weapon, workers are loathe to exercise it. Striking means foregoing wages, walking the picket line, and exhausting the family's life savings. So it is no surprise that workers choose to strike in less than 1 percent of all bargaining negotiations. But even if the right to strike is seldom exercised, it brings the employer to the table.

Nevertheless, under a 1938 Supreme Court decision called Mackay Radio, employers in certain circumstances may hire permanent replacements for their striking workers. That ruling left us with a bizarre contradiction: An employer cannot discharge or discipline employees for striking, but it can permanently replace them.

For decades, the Mackay case had little practical effect. American employers valued their workers and counted on their returning after a strike. When faced with a strike, employers hired temporary replacements, subcontracted or transferred the struck work, operated with management personnel or even ceased operations entirely for the duration of the strike.

But since 1980, a new breed of employer has emerged, one that does not hesitate to replace its union work force. Employers now hire or threaten to hire permanent replacements in one out of every three strikes. Tens of thousands of workers have suffered the economic death penalty of permanent replacement for exercising what they thought was a federally protected right. And hundreds of thousands more have refrained from exercising that right because of the threat of permanent replacement.

Different factors are cited as reasons for this alarming increase. Some cite President Reagan's harsh treatment of 12,000 air traffic controllers, which signalled to a new generation of American managers that it was acceptable to fire strikers. Some blame the so-called new breed of fast-buck takeover artists that do not hesitate to replace a union work force. And still others cite gradual changes in our labor laws that eliminated many forms of peaceful secondary activity and made it more difficult for unions to obtain commitments of strike solidarity. These changes have tilted the balance of power between labor and management, and in effect encouraged employers to play the permanent replacement card.

The right to strike, the worker's principal economic weapon, has become nothing more than a hollow promise. Without it, workers lose the ability to bargain effectively—how can they back up their bargaining demands with economic leverage if exercising their principal self-help weapon means losing their jobs?

The resulting imbalance of power jeopardizes the continued existence of the American labor movement. More and more, employers use the permanent replacement threat to attack the very concept of collective action. During organizing campaigns, employers warn their workers that a vote for the union could mean a strike and the loss of their jobs. Even if a union is certified, employers often make that victory meaningless by refusing to agree to a contract, and by threatening to replace workers if they strike.

Even if a contract is signed, the parties may never establish a stable collective bargaining relationship. To succeed, cooperative efforts must be based on mutual trust; that trust may not be possible given the current imbalance of economic power between labor and management. Finally, in many instances employers have sought to rid themselves altogether of unions by demanding substantial givebacks, precipitating a strike, replacing the striking workers, and seeking to decertify the union.

Without an effective labor movement, our Federal labor policy—favoring the peaceful resolution of labor disputes through collective bargaining—cannot be fulfilled. That would mean a return to the disruptive labor strife that characterized the American workplace in the years prior to enactment of the NLRA.

Of course, it's not just the 16 percent of American workers that belong to labor organizations that need this legislation. Millions of nonunion workers have benefited from the minimum standards of wages, benefits, and working conditions achieved by organized labor. It is no accident that as union membership has declined in the past decade, the real wages of most American workers have declined by nearly 10 percent. And the labor movement has repeatedly fought for and won legislation—such as social security, Head Start, and unemployment insurance—that has improved the lives of all Americans.

A strong labor movement is also critical to improving our ability to compete successfully in the global marketplace. If you need proof, just look around at our most successful competitor nations. Virtually all of them have strong labor movements and have banned the hiring of permanent striker replacements. As labor Secretary-designate Robert Reich stated at his confirmation hearing 2 weeks ago:

If America is to be competitive in the world economy, government must stand ready to encourage the private sector as a whole to treat their work force as their most precious asset. * * * Business must be ready to collaborate, to become a true partner. Labor has to join the partnership.

Recent studies have confirmed the negative impact that the hiring of permanent replacements can have on our productivity. The use of permanent replacements triggers longer and more bitterly divisive struggles, by transforming a dispute from one about wages or benefits into one about the future of every striker's job. In a 1989 study of 56 strikes, University of Alabama Professor Cynthia Gramm found that the strikes lasted substantially longer when permanent replacements were hired, a mean duration of 363 days, than when temporary replacements were hired, 72 days, or when no replacements were hired, 64 days.

In a 1992 report, three City University of New York researchers studied seven major U.S. strikes in which permanent replacements were hired. They concluded that hiring permanent replacements imposed high costs on the employer, the workers, and the community. "In today's highly competitive economic environment," the study concluded, "The losses associated with union busting exact a high toll on the entire country, at a time when we all depend on an economy able to meet aggressive foreign competition." It is no wonder that our principal competitors—including Germany, Canada, France, and Japan—have long recognized that using permanent replacements is unwise as a matter of both public policy and good business.

The Workplace Fairness Act would simply restore the balance to labor-management relations, and reaffirm that the right to strike must mean more than the right to lose your job. The act prohibits the hiring of permanent replacements where a union engages in a lawful economic strike. In addition, the act prohibits employers from otherwise discriminating against employees who lawfully strike. I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the bill be printed in the RECORD in full.

The legislation is identical to the bill reported by the Labor and Human Resources Committee in 1991. It provides a reasonable and responsible solution to what has become a major anomaly in our Federal labor law.

The American public overwhelmingly supports a ban on the hiring of permanent replacements. In a Roper Organization poll conducted in April of last year, 72 percent—nearly three-quarters of the 1,009 individuals contacted in a telephone survey—supported a ban on the hiring of permanent replacements. Only 14 percent said workers should not have the right to strike without fear of losing their jobs. Similar results were obtained in a November, 1991 poll and in two 1990 polls.

President Clinton has also repeatedly expressed his support for the Workplace Fairness Act. Last April, he visited striking Caterpillar workers, who had been forced by the company to choose between their right to strike and their jobs. He told them that the use of permanent replacements would have a devastating effect, not only on the employees and their families, but on the whole fabric of worker-management relations all over this country. The need to prohibit the hiring of permanent replacements has similarly been recognized by State governments, civil rights groups, labor law scholars, newspaper editorial boards, and the religious community.

In closing, there is much at stake here. First, the future of the American labor movement depends on restoring the right to strike as an effective economic weapon. In turn, a healthy labor movement will restore balance to labor-management relations, facilitate greater labor peace, and contribute much towards ensuring U.S. competitiveness in world markets.

Second, for America's hardworking men and women, whose hours are growing longer and whose paycheck is growing smaller, this is an issue of basic fairness. Simply put, American workers should not have to choose between their jobs and their right to take collective action.

Many of my colleagues have joined me today as original co-sponsors of this legislation. I urge the remainder of my colleagues to add their names as supporters of the Workplace Fairness Act.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 55

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. PREVENTION OF DISCRIMINATION DURING AND AT THE CONCLUSION OF LABOR DISPUTES.

Section 8(a) of the National Labor Relations Act (29 U.S.C. 158(a)) is amended—

(1) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting "; or"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) to promise, to threaten, or take other action—

"(i) to hire a permanent replacement for an employee who—

"(A) at the commencement of a labor dispute was an employee of the employer in a bargaining unit in which a labor organization was the certified or recognized exclusive representative or, on the basis of written authorizations by a majority of the unit employees, was seeking to be so certified or recognized; and

"(B) in connection with that dispute has engaged in concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection through that labor organization; or

"(ii) to withhold or deny any other employment right or privilege to an employee, who meets the criteria of subparagraph (A) and (B) of clause (1) and who is working for or has unconditionally offered to return to work for the employer, out of a preference for any other individual that is based on the fact that the individual is performing, has performed or has indicated a willingness to perform bargaining unit work for the employer during the labor dispute."

SEC. 2. PREVENTION OF DISCRIMINATION DURING AND AT THE CONCLUSION OF RAILWAY LABOR DISPUTES.

Paragraph Fourth of section 2 of the Railway Labor Act (45 U.S.C. 152) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a)" after "Fourth."; and
(2) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(b) No carrier, or officer or agent of the carrier, shall promise, threaten or take other action—

"(1) to hire a permanent replacement for an employee who—

"(A) at the commencement of a dispute was an employee of the carrier in a craft or class in which a labor organization was the designated or authorized representative or, on the basis of written authorizations by a majority of the craft or class, was seeking to be so designated or authorized; and

"(B) in connection with that dispute has exercised the right to join, to organize, to assist in organizing, or to bargain collectively through that labor organization; or

"(2) to withhold or deny any other employment right or privilege to an employee, who meets the criteria of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) and who is working for or has unconditionally offered to return to work for the carrier, out of a preference for any other individual that is based on the fact that the individual is employed, was employed, or indicated a willingness to be employed during the dispute."*

* Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I am please to join my distinguished colleague, Senator METZENBAUM, in introducing legislation to restore a measure of equality to Federal labor law by guaranteeing workers the right to strike without the fear of being permanently replaced.

The abusive use of replacement workers by employers during labor disputes has a long history in Wisconsin, and it is an issue about which I have been deeply concerned. In fact, I was the author of the Wisconsin striker replacement bill, and testified several years ago at a hearing before the House of Representatives on this issue. I am proud to now add my name in the effort to pass a national striker protection law.

The use of permanent replacements is a many faceted issue. At the core, however, is the question, "Should workers have the right to use the strike as an economic voice during times when negotiations with their employers break down?" The National Labor Relations Act of 1935 clearly guarantees the right to workers to organize and engage in concerted activities. Included in this is the right to strike.

When I was growing up in Janesville, WI, a United Auto Workers labor town, this country was enjoying a long period of prosperity. There seemed to be a balance, then, between labor and management.

However, the economic declines of the 1970's and increased competition from abroad laid the groundwork for a dramatic shift from cooperative to hostile management labor relations.

In 1938, the Supreme Court in the McCay decision allowed the hiring of permanent replacement workers. However, the use of permanent replacements was never put into widespread practice until the 1980's when President Ronald Reagan led by example in firing 12,000 striking air traffic control workers.

Until that time, workers and management had shared relatively equally in the risks and hardships of a strike. Workers lost income, their families, and often whole communities, faced economic insecurity and the threat of losing their homes and their savings.

At the same time a clear incentive existed for management to come to an agreement, as they struggled to maintain production, productivity and market-share with a limited workforce.

Strikes were to be avoided by both sides if possible, which was the force driving collective bargaining and peaceful negotiation. For many years, even during strikes, labor and management were able to cooperate and come to an agreement.

It should be no surprise that in the merger and acquisition frenzy of the 1980's management found it had a new tool and used it frequently. Management now often advertise for permanent replacements the moment a strike begins, and the threat of permanently lost jobs casts a pall over the entire bargaining process.

The power behind the use of permanent replacements is quite clear. Whether used as they were in Wisconsin prior to the passage of National Labor Relations Act during the Northern Paper Co. strike of 1921 or during the International Paper Co. strike of 1987, permanent replacements produced the same result—the overwhelming defeat of labor.

As the power of the strike becomes more and more tenuous, the voice of the laborer in negotiations over his or her employment weakens considerably. Knowing that workers are very unlikely to strike, employers are free to make greater, sometimes excessive, demands.

If the use of permanent replacements is allowed to continue, the voice of the working sector of this country could be silenced for good.

My efforts and those of other States to pass legislation to correct this enormous flaw in Federal labor law have been thwarted by court interpretations such as the ruling on the Illinois Strikebreakers Act. The Federal court held that "the general subject of conditions for replacement strikers, or locked-out employees, in an industry affecting interstate commerce, is a matter which has been delegated to the National Labor Relations Board by Federal law." Many State laws have been struck down or vetoed due to this interpretation making expeditious Federal action on this issue even more critical.

During disputes between employer and employee, government should act to ensure that both sides are playing on a level playing field. At times, such actions have taken the form of police protection for strikers and nonstrikers, at others, the form of court proceedings. The time has come for that action to take yet another form, that of an amendment to the National Labor Relations Act to prohibit the use of permanent replacements. I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.*

By Mr. THURMOND:

S. 56. A bill to redefine "extortion" for purposes of the Hobbs Act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EXTORTION REDEFINITION

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President; today, I am introducing legislation to amend the Hobbs Anti-Racketeering Act to reverse the Supreme Court's decision in United States versus Enmons, and to address a serious, long-term, festering problem under our Nation's labor laws. The United States regulates labor relations on a national basis and our labor management policies are national policies. These policies and regulations are enforced by laws such as the National Labor Relations Act that Congress designed to preempt comparable State laws.

Although labor violence is a widespread problem in labor management relations today, our Government appears unwilling to deal with it. What might be the most obvious example of this Government's reluctance is what the Supreme Court did when it rendered its decision in the case of United States versus Enmons in 1973. It is this decision's unfortunate result which this bill is intended to rectify.

The Enmons decision involved the Hobbs Anti-Racketeering Act which is intended to prohibit extortion by labor unions. It provides that: "Whoever in any way * * * obstructs, delays, or affects commerce in the movement of any article or commodity in commerce, by robbery or extortion or attempts or conspires to do so or commits or threatens physical violence to any person or property * * *" commits a criminal act. This language is very clear. It outlaws extortion by labor unions. It outlaws violence by labor unions.

Although this language is very clear, the Supreme Court in Enmons created an exemption to the law which says that as long as a labor union commits extortion and violence in furtherance of legitimate collective bargaining objectives, no violation of the Act will be found. Simply put, the Court held that if the ends are correct, the means to that end, no matter how horrible or reprehensible, will not result in a violation of the act.

The Enmons decision is wrong. This bill will make it clear that the Hobbs Act is intended to punish the actual or threatened use of force or violence to obtain property irrespective of the legitimacy of the extortionist's claim to such property and irrespective of the existence of a labor-management dispute.

Let me discuss the Enmons case.

In that case, the defendants were indicted for firing high-powered rifles at property, causing extensive damage to the property, owned by a utility company—all done in an effort to obtain higher wages and other benefits from the company for striking employees. The indictment was, however, dismissed by the district court on the theory that the Hobbs Act did not prohibit the use of violence in obtaining legitimate union objectives. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed.

The Supreme Court held that the Hobbs Act does not proscribe violence committed during a lawful strike for the purpose of achieving legitimate collective bargaining objectives, like higher wages. By its focus upon the motives and objectives of the property claimant, who uses violence or force to achieve his goals, the Enmons decision has had several unfortunate results. It has deprived the Federal Government of the ability to punish significant acts of extortionate violence when they occur in a labor management context. Although other Federal statutes prohibit the use of specific devices or the use of channels of commerce in accomplishing the underlying act of extortionate violence, only the Hobbs Act proscribes a localized act of extortionate violence whose economic effect is to disrupt the channels of commerce. Other Federal statutes are not adequate to address the full effect of the Enmons decision.

The Enmons decision affords parties to labor-management disputes an exemption from the statute's broad proscription against violence which is not available to any other group in society. This bill would make it clear that the Hobbs Act punishes the actual or threatened use of force and violence which is calculated to obtain property without regard to whether the extortionist has a colorable claim to such property, and without regard to his status as a labor representative, businessman, or private citizen.

Mr. President, attempts to rectify the injustice of the Enmons decision have been before the Senate on several occasions. Shortly after the decision was handed down, a bill was introduced which was intended to repudiate the decision. Over the next several years, attempts were made to come up with language which was acceptable to organized labor and at the same time restored the original intent of the Hobbs Act.

In 1978, S. 1437, a bill which was substantially the same as the bill I am introducing today, passed the Senate; however, the bill died in the House. It is time for the Senate to reexamine this issue and to restate its opposition to violence in labor disputes. Encouraged by their special exemption from prosecution for acts of violence committed in pursuit of legitimate union objectives, union officials who are corrupt routinely use terror tactics to achieve their goals.

Mr. President, violence has no place in our society, regardless of the setting. Our national labor policy has always been directed toward the peaceful resolution of labor disputes. It is ironic that the Hobbs Act, which was enacted in large part to accomplish this worthy goal, has been virtually emasculated. The time has come to change that. I think that my colleagues on both sides of the aisle share a common concern that violence in labor disputes, whatever the source, should be eliminated. Government has been unwilling to deal with this problem for too long. It is time for this Congress to act.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of this bill be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 56

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. DEFINITION OF EXTORTION UNDER HOBBS ACT.

Paragraph (2) of section 151(b) of title 18, United States Code (commonly known as the "Hobbs Act"), is amended to read as follows:

"(2)(A) The term 'extortion' means the obtaining of property of another—

"(i) by threatening or placing another person in fear that any person will be subjected to bodily injury or kidnapping or that any property will be damaged; or

"(ii) under color of official right.

"(B) In a prosecution under subparagraph (A)(i) in which the threat or fear is based on conduct by an agent or member of a labor organization consisting of an act of bodily injury to a person or damage to property, the pendency, at the time of such conduct, of a labor dispute (as defined in section 2(9) of the National Labor Relations Act (29 U.S.C. 152(9))) the outcome of which could result in the obtaining of employment benefits by the actor, does not constitute prima facie evidence that property was obtained 'by' such conduct."

By Mr. DECONCINI:

S. 62. A bill to amend the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 to provide for a voluntary system of spending limits and partial public financing of Senate general election campaigns, to limit contributions by multicandidate political committees, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce today a bill that will reform our system of financing Senate campaigns. Since I arrived in the Senate in 1977, I have vigorously pursued campaign finance reform. The bill I am introducing today is tougher than any bill that I have introduced in the past.

Throughout my career in Congress, I have cosponsored numerous pieces of legislation to reform Senate elections, including bills to provide public financing and to limit spending, to increase disclosure of PAC activity, limit PAC contributions, reverse Buckley versus Valeo, end the practice of converting leftover campaign funds to private use, combat negative advertising, enhance voter registration, and the list goes on. Many of my colleagues and I have spoken repeatedly on the Senate floor on these same issues. We have voted again and again to pass solid, responsible reform legislation.

In 1992, the 102d Congress passed a comprehensive campaign finance reform bill only to be vetoed by the Bush administration. Today we have a new President, a President committed to changing our current system. On November 3, Americans voted loudly and clearly for change. They are disillusioned by the inordinate amount of time candidates must spend raising money, and they are disenchanted by the evolution of political campaigns into catchy 30-second sound bites. Let us act now. We have waited far too long to institute effective campaign finance reform. The time has come to put the brakes on campaign spending and to restore the public's faith in the electoral process.

The bill that I am introducing today varies in some important aspects from the campaign finance reform legislation that was sent to the President last year. It embodies a tough and solid approach to this pressing issue. Some may say that it is too tough. I would argue that these changes, including spending limits, partial public financing of Senate campaigns, an emphasis on small grassroots contributions, reduction of incumbent advantage, and reducing the high media costs that have made political campaigns a multi-million dollar endeavor, are essential to true reform. I expect intense debate on all aspects of campaign financing before the Senate passes a bill in the 103d Congress. I am not unalterably committed to every provision in my bill, but we must pass tough effective reform legislation.

First, and most importantly, this bill sets voluntary limits on total campaign spending through a formula based on the voting age population [VAP] of a candidate's State. For a general Senate election, the limit would be $400,000 plus 18 cents for each voter up to 4 million, plus 18 cents for each voter over 4 million, with a minimum limit of $900,000 and a maximum limit of $5.5 million. The spending limit for primary elections would be 50 percent of the general limit. My bill has lower spending limits than previous proposals.

Since I ran for office in 1976, the aggregate cost of Senate campaigns has risen by nearly four times. In 1990, the average amount spent by Senate incumbents in reelection campaigns was close to $4 million. In 1992, Federal candidates spent 25 percent more than they did in 1990. These outrageous costs must be controlled.

Under my bill, fully half of the Senate races would be kept below $1.5 million. In Arizona it would limit the amount a Senate candidate running could spend to $1.46 million—half a million dollars less than the bill that was passed by the 102d Congress last spring. I have prepared a table that shows the key numbers for every State under this bill—spending limits, PAC limits, qualifying thresholds, and the amount of funding grants. I ask unanimous consent that it be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

Second, this bill levels the political playing field for challengers by reducing PAC contributions and prohibiting bundling and soft-money expenditures. The dollar figures speak for themselves. In 1992, Senate candidates raised almost $160 million. Incumbents received $83 million while their challengers received only $45 million.

Over the past 10 years, PAC contributions have almost doubled. According to October FEC figures, PAC's contributed $37 million to 1992 elections, with 70 percent going to incumbents. This bill would drastically cut PAC contributions by 80 percent, limiting them to $1,000 per election, as opposed to the $5,000 allowable under current law. Additionally, candidates would have to limit their aggregate acceptance of PAC contributions to 10 percent of their total cycle spending limit. These limits provide ample opportunity for people to contribute to political action committees promoting the causes they feel are important while preventing PAC's from overshadowing small individual contributors. These limits would force candidates to focus on the small contributor and help restore public trust in the political system.

My legislation also contains a variety of mechanisms for reducing costs of Senate campaigns. First, it restricts the campaign period to the period beginning 6 months prior to the primary election. With this limitation, costs will immediately be reduced simply by virtue of not having to purchase as much media time. Limiting the campaign period also restores grassroots interest and participation in the election. Long, drawn out campaigns result in voter burnout and apathy at the polls.

Second, participating candidates would receive both preferred mail rates and the lowest unit broadcast rates based on the lowest rate over the past 12-month period.

One of the most significant provisions of this legislation is the implementation of partial public financing of Senate races. This would most effectively reduce the amount of time a candidate is forced to spend on fundraising and would return the focus of a campaign to substantive issues. In order to qualify for this and other benefits, a candidate would have to garner broad grassroots support, by raising a threshold of funds made up of small contributions primarily from in-state sources. Upon reaching the threshold and agreeing to comply with the various campaign financing limitations, the candidate would receive a flat grant of one-third of the remaining general election spending limit amount. For the remaining two-thirds of the amount above the threshold, the candidate would be eligible to receive matching grants for small contributions of $250 or less, and grants equal to $250 for contributions between $251 and $1,000. No matching funds would be made for PAC contributions in any amount.

This financing mechanism accomplishes several goals. It eases the candidate's fundraising burden without putting the entire burden on the Federal Government, and it encourages the candidate to focus on small contributions—the kind made by individuals. This is by no means the highest level of public financing I would consider. A greater level of public financing would do even more to level the playing field between incumbents and challengers and to eliminate the perception that money influences the outcome of Senate elections. I am open to proposals of higher levels of public funding, but the plan I am proposing today is a fair and responsible start.

This bill would do a few other things that warrant mention. It would prohibit franked mass mailings of over 250 pieces during the period beginning 6 months prior to the primary election through the general election, including newsletters, notices of town meetings, and opinion surveys. The limit on franked mailings is simply one more step in assuring that Senate races are not biased in favor of incumbents.

And finally, this legislation abolishes all member PAC's.

Mr. President, it is time to restore public confidence in our election process. Let us quickly to institute changes that the Congress truly needs and the American people most desperately want. This bill does just that.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 62

"(14) the term 'voting age population' means the resident population, 18 years of age or older, as certified for a State pursuant to section 315(e).

"SEC. 502. ELIGIBILITY TO RECEIVE BENEFITS.

"(a) To be eligible to receive benefits under this title, a candidate shall make the filings required by subsections (b) and (c).

"(b) To become an eligible candidate, a candidate shall, on the day that the candidate files as a candidate for the primary election, file with the Commission a declaration whether—

"(1) the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees agree to make expenditures for the primary election in an amount greater than the lesser of—

"(A) 50 percent of the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b); or

"(B) $2,750,000;

"(2) the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees agree to make expenditures for a runoff election, in an amount equal to no more than 20 percent of the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b); and

"(3) the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees agree to make expenditures for the general election in an amount equal to no more than the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b).

"(c) To become an eligible candidate, a candidate shall, not later than 7 days after qualifying for the general election ballot under State law or, if the candidate's State is one that has a primary election to qualify for the general election ballot after September 1, not later than 7 days after the date such candidate wins in such primary, whichever occurs first, file a certification with the Commission under penalty of perjury stating that—

"(1) during the period beginning on January 1 of the calendar year preceding the year of the general election, or in the case of a special election for the seat of a United States Senator, during the period beginning on the day on which the seat was vacated, and ending on the day the certification is made, the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees have received contributions in an amount at least equal to the lesser of—

"(A) $650,000; or

"(B) the greater of—

"(i) $150,000; or

"(ii) 10 cents multiplied by the voting age population of the State;

"(2) all contributions received for purposes of paragraph (1) have come from individuals, and no contribution received from an individual, when added to all contributions to or for the benefit of the candidate from the individual, was taken into account to the extent that the contributions from that individual exceed $250;

"(3) the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees have not expended for the primary election more than the amount described in subsection (b)(1);

"(4) the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees have not expended for any runoff election more than the amount described in subsection (b)(2);

"(5) at least 80 percent of the amount of contributions received for purposes of paragraph (1) have come from individuals residing in the candidate's State;

"(6) at least one other candidate has qualified for the same general election ballot under State law;

"(7) the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees—

"(A) have not made and will not make expenditures for the general election that exceed the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b), unless permitted to do so under section 504(a)(2);

"(B) will not accept any contributions in violation of section 315;

"(C) will not accept any contribution for the general election except to the extent that the contribution is necessary to defray expenditures for the general election that in the aggregate do not exceed the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b), unless permitted to do so under section 504(a)(2);

"(D) will deposit all payments received under this section in an account insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation from which funds may be withdrawn by check or similar means of payment to third parties;

"(E) will furnish campaign records, evidence of contributions, and other appropriate information to the Commission;

"(F) will cooperate in any audit and examination conducted by the Commission pursuant to section 507; and

"(G) will not make any expenditures until the date that is 6 months before the date of the primary election, or use payments received under this section for expenses incurred prior to such date for media advertising, direct mail, and telephone banks unless such expenses for mail or telephones are directly related to raising funds or recruiting volunteers for that election;

"(8) the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees will not use a broadcast station, pursuant to section 315 of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 315), for a political advertisement or broadcast communication on a television broadcast station until the date that is 6 months before the date of the primary election in which such candidate is involved; and

"(9) the candidate intends to make use of the benefits provided in section 504.

"(d) For the purposes of subsection (c)(1) and section 504(a)(2)(B), in determining the amount of contributions received by a candidate and the candidate's authorized committees—

"(1) no contribution other than a gift of money made by a written instrument that identifies the person making the contribution shall be taken into account;

"(2) no contribution made through an intermediary or conduit referred to in section 315(a)(8) shall be taken into account;

"(3) no contribution received from a person other than an individual shall be taken into account, and no contribution received from an individual shall be taken into account to the extent such contribution exceeds $250 when added to all other contributions made by that individual to or for the benefit of such candidate since the date specified in paragraph (4); and

"(4) no contribution received prior to January 1 of the calendar year preceding the year in which the general election is held or received after the date on which the general election is held shall be taken into account, and in the case of a special election, no contribution received prior to the date on which the seat was vacated or received after the date on which the general election is held shall be taken into account.

"SEC. 503. LIMITATIONS ON EXPENDITURES.

"(a) No candidate shall—

"(1) make expenditures from the personal funds of the candidate or the funds of a member of the immediate family of the candidate; or

"(2) incur personal debt, in excess of $100,000 in connection with the candidate's campaign for the Senate during an election cycle.

"(b) No candidate may make expenditures for a general election in excess of the lesser of—

"(A) $5,500,000; or

"(B) the greater of—

"(i) $900,000; or

"(ii) $400,000 plus 21 cents multiplied by the voting age population of 4,000,000 or less, plus 18 cents multiplied by the voting age population over 4,000,000, plus any amount permitted under section 504 (b) and (c).

"(c) No candidate who is otherwise eligible to receive benefits under this title for use in a general election may receive such benefits if the candidate makes expenditures for the primary election in excess of the lesser of—

"(1) $2,750,000; or

"(2) the amount equal to 50 percent of the limitation on expenditures for the general election determined under subsection (b).

"(d) No candidate who is otherwise eligible to receive benefits under this title for use in a general election may receive such benefits if the candidate makes expenditures for a runoff election in excess of an amount equal to 20 percent of the limitation on expenditures for the general election determined under subsection (b).

"(e)(1) The limitation stated in subsection (b) shall not apply to expenditures by a candidate or the candidate's authorized committees from a compliance fund established to defray the costs of legal and accounting services provided solely to insure compliance with this Act, if—

"(A) the compliance fund contains only contributions (including contributions received in excess of any amount necessary to defray qualified campaign expenditures pursuant to section 313) received in accordance with the limitations, prohibitions, and reporting requirements of this Act, and does not contain any funds received by the candidate pursuant to section 504(a);

"(B) the amount of contributions to and expenditures from the compliance fund do not exceed 10 percent of the limitation on expenditures for the general election determined under subsection (b); and

"(C) no transfers are made from the compliance fund to any other accounts of the candidate's authorized committees.

"(2) If, after a general election, a candidate determines that the costs of necessary and continuing legal and accounting services require contributions to and expenditures from a compliance fund in excess of the limitation stated in paragraph (1), the candidate may petition the Commission for a waiver of such limitation up to any additional amount that the Commission may authorize, the determination of which shall be subject to Federal review under section 508.

"(3) Any money remaining in a compliance fund when a candidate decides to terminate or dissolve the compliance fund shall be—

"(A) contributed to the United States Treasury to reduce the budget deficit; or

"(B) transferred to any fund of a subsequent campaign of that candidate.

"(f) If during a primary election period or runoff election period preceding a general election, independent expenditures aggregating more than $10,000 are made or obligated to be made in opposition to a candidate or for the opponent of a candidate, the limitations stated in subsections (c) and (d), as they apply to such candidate, shall be deemed to be increased for that primary or runoff election in an amount equal to the amount of such independent expenditures made during the primary election period or runoff election period.

"(g) No candidate who receives a benefit under this title for use in a general election campaign shall receive any such benefits if the candidate makes any expenditure before the date that is 6 months before the date of the primary election in which the candidate is a candidate.

"(h) No candidate who receives a benefit under this title shall make any expenditure, directly or indirectly, for any political advertisement or broadcast communication on a television broadcast until after the date that is 6 months before the date of the primary election in which such candidate is a candidate.

"SEC. 504. ENTITLEMENT OF ELIGIBLE CANDIDATES TO BENEFITS.

"(a) An eligible candidate shall be entitled to—

"(1) the broadcast media rates provided under subsections (b) and (d)(3) of section 315 of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 315);

"(2) mailing rates provided in section 3629 of title 39, United States Code; and

"(3) a payment equal to the greater of—

"(A) $250,000; or

"(B) one-third of the difference between—

"(i) the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b); and

"(ii) the threshold amount applicable to the candidate under section 502(b)(1), to the extent that such payment will not result in the candidate's having received contributions and payments under this subparagraph and subparagraph (C) aggregating an amount in excess of the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b);

"(C) payments equal to the sum of—

"(i) all contributions that the candidate has received from contributors (excluding multicandidate political committees) who have made contributions for the general election aggregating no more than $250 each; and

"(ii) $250 times the number of contributors (excluding multicandidate political committees) from whom the candidate has received contributions for the general election aggregating more than $250, to the extent that such payment will not result in the candidate's having received contributions and payments under this subparagraph and subparagraph (B) aggregating an amount in excess of the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b); and

"(D) payments under section 506 equal to the total amount of independent expenditures made or obligated to be made in the general election by any person in opposition to, or on behalf of an opponent of, the eligible candidate, as such expenditures are reported by such person or determined by the Commission under section 304(f);

"(4) if an eligible candidate's opponent who is not an eligible candidate either raises aggregate contributions or makes or becomes obligated to make aggregate expenditures for the general election that exceed the general election spending limit applicable to the eligible candidate under section 503(b)—

"(A) in the case of an eligible candidate who is a major party candidate a payment under section 506 (in addition to payments to which the candidate is entitled under paragraph (1)) in an amount equal to—

"(i) two-thirds of the amount of the general election spending limit applicable to the eligible candidate under section 503(b) in a case in which the opponent either raises aggregate contributions or makes or becomes obligated to make aggregate expenditures for the general election that exceed 100 percent of the applicable general election spending limit; and

"(ii) one-third of the amount of the general election spending limit applicable to the eligible candidate under section 503(b) in a case in which the opponent either raises aggregate contributions or makes or becomes obligated to make aggregate expenditures for the general election that exceed 133 1/3 percent of the applicable general election spending limit; and

"(B) in the case of an eligible candidate who is not a major party candidate matching payments under section 506 (in addition to payments to which the candidate is entitled under paragraph (1)) equal to the amount of each contribution received by such eligible candidate and the candidate's authorized committees, provided that in determining the amount of each such contribution—

"(i) section 502(b) shall apply; and

"(ii) threshold contributions required to be raised under section 502(b)(1) shall not be matched, to the extent that aggregate payments to a candidate under this subparagraph do not exceed 50 percent of the amount of the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b).

"(b) An eligible candidate who receives payments under paragraph (1)(C) or (2) of subsection (a) may spend such funds to defray expenditures in the general election without regard to the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b).

"(c)(1) An eligible candidate who receives benefits under this section may make expenditures for the general election without regard to subparagraph (A) of section 502(a)(7) or subsection (a) or (b) of section 503 if any one of the eligible candidate's opponent who is not an eligible candidate either raises aggregate contributions or makes or becomes obligated to make aggregate expenditures for the general election that exceed 133 1/3 percent of the general election spending limit applicable under section 503(b).

"(2) A candidate who receives benefits under this section may receive contributions for the general election without regard to subparagraph (C) of section 502(a)(7) if a major party candidate in the same general election is not an eligible candidate, or if any other candidate in the same general election who is not an eligible candidate raises aggregate contributions or makes or becomes obligated to make aggregate expenditures for the general election that exceed 75 percent of the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b).

"(d) Benefits received by a candidate under this section shall be used to defray expenditures incurred with respect to the general election period for the candidate. Such benefits shall not be used—

"(1) to make any payments, directly or indirectly, to such candidate or to any member of the immediate family of such candidate;

"(2) to make any expenditure other than expenditures to further the general election of such candidate,

"(3) to make any expenditures which constitute a violation of any law of the United States or of the State in which the expenditure is made; or

"(4) to repay any loan to any person except to the extent the proceeds of such loan were used to further the general election of such candidate.

"SEC. 505. CERTIFICATION BY COMMISSION.

"(a) No later than 48 hours after an eligible candidate files a request with the Commission to receive benefits under section 506 the Commission shall certify such eligibility to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment in full of the amount to which such candidate is entitled, unless the provisions of section 506(c) apply. Such request shall contain—

"(1) such information and be made in accordance with such procedures, as the Commission may provide by regulation;

"(2) a certification that the candidate has raised contributions in the applicable threshold amount states in section 502(b)(1) and has met all other requirements to become an eligible candidate; and

"(3) a verification signed by the candidate and the treasurer of the principal campaign committee of such candidate stating that the information furnished in support of the request, to the best of their knowledge, is correct and fully satisfies the requirements of this title.

"(b) Certifications by the Commission under subsection (a) and all determinations made by the Commission under this title shall be final and conclusive, except to the extent that they are subject to examination and audit by the Commission under section 507 and judicial review under section 508.

"SEC. 508. ESTABLISHMENT OF FUND; PAYMENTS TO ELIGIBLE CANDIDATES.

"(a)(1) The Secretary shall maintain in the Presidential Election Campaign Fund (referred to as the 'Fund') established by section 9006(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, in addition to any other accounts maintained under such section, a separate account to be known as the 'Senate Account'. The Secretary shall deposit into the Senate Account, for use by eligible candidates, the amounts available after the Secretary determines that the amounts in the fund, plus the amounts of revenue the Secretary projects will accrue to the fund during the remainder of the period ending on December 31 of the year of the next Presidential election, equal 110 percent of the amount the Secretary projects will be necessary for payments under subtitle H of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 during such remainder of such period. The monies designated for the Senate Fund shall remain available without fiscal year limitation.

"(2) On May 15 of each year following the year during which a regularly scheduled biennial Senate election has occurred, the Secretary shall determine the amount in the Senate Fund, and determine whether that amount, plus the amount of revenue the Secretary projects will accrue to the Senate Account (based on the computation made by the Secretary with respect to the fund, as provided in paragraph (1)) during the period beginning on such date and ending on December 31 of the year of the next regularly scheduled biennial election, exceeds 110 percent of the total estimated expenditures of the Senate Account during that period. If the Secretary determines that an excess amount exists, the Secretary shall transfer the excess to the general fund of the Treasury of the United States.

"(b) Upon receipt of a certification from the Commission under section 505, the Secretary shall promptly pay to the candidate named in the certification, out of the Senate Account, the amount certified by the Commission.

"SEC. 507. EXAMINATION AND AUDITS; REPAYMENTS.

"(a)(1) After each general election, the Commission shall conduct an examination and audit of the campaign accounts of 10 percent of the eligible candidates of each major party and 10 percent of all other eligible candidates, as designated by the Commission through the use of an appropriate statistical method of random selection to determine, among other things, whether such candidates have complied with the expenditure limits and other conditions of eligibility and requirements of this title.

"(2) After each special election, the Commission shall conduct an examination and audit of the campaign accounts of each eligible candidate in such election to determine whether such candidates have complied with the expenditure limits and other conditions of eligibility and requirements under this title.

"(3) The Commission may conduct an examination and audit of the campaign accounts of any eligible candidate in a general election if the Commission, by an affirmative vote of four members, determines that there exists reason to believe that the candidate has violated any provision of this title.

"(b) If the Commission determines that any portion of the payments made to a candidate under this title was in excess of the aggregate payments to which such candidate was entitled, the Commission shall so notify the candidate, and the candidate shall pay to the Secretary an amount equal to the excess.

"(c) If the Commission determines that any part of a payment benefit made to a candidate under this title was not used as required by this title, the Commission shall so notify the candidate and the candidate shall pay to the Secretary an amount equal to 200 percent of the amount of the benefit that was used otherwise than as permitted by this title.

"(d) If the Commission determines that a candidate who has received benefits under this title has made expenditures which in the aggregate exceed by 5 percent or less the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b), the Commission shall so notify the candidate, and the candidate shall pay to the Secretary an amount equal to the amount of the excess expenditure.

"(e) If the Commission determines that a candidate who has received benefits under this title has made expenditures which in the aggregate exceed by more than 5 percent general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under the limitation set forth in section 503(b), the Commission shall so notify the candidate, and the candidate shall pay the Secretary an amount equal to three times the amount of the excess expenditure.

"(f) Any amount received by an eligible candidate under this title may be retained for no more than 60 days after the date of the general election for the liquidation of all obligations to pay general election campaign expenses incurred during the general election period. At the end of 60 days any unexpended funds received under this title shall be promptly repaid to the Secretary.

"(g) No notification shall be made by the Commission under this section with respect to an election more than 3 years after the date of such election.

"(h) All payments received under this section shall be deposited in the Senate Account.

"SEC. 507A. CRIMINAL PENALTIES.

"(a) No candidate shall knowingly or willfully accept benefits under this title in excess of the aggregate benefits to which the candidate is entitled or knowingly or willfully use such benefits for any purpose other than one permitted by this title or knowingly or willfully make expenditures from the candidate's personal funds, or the personal funds of the candidate's immediate family, in excess of the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b).

"(b) A person who violates subsection (a) shall be fined not more than $25,000, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both. Any officer or member of any political committee who knowingly consents to the making of an expenditure in violation of subsection (a) shall be fined not more than $25,000, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(c)(1) It is unlawful for any person who receives any benefit under this title, or to whom any portion of any such benefit is transferred, knowingly and willfully to use, or authorize the use of, such benefit or such portion except as provided in section 504(d).

"(2) Any person who violates paragraph (1) shall be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(d)(1) It is unlawful for any person knowingly and willfully—

"(A) to furnish any false, fictitious, or fraudulent evidence, books, or information (including any certification, verification, notice, or report) to the Commission under this title, or to include in any evidence, books, or information so furnished any misrepresentation of a material fact, or to falsify or conceal any evidence, books, or information relevant to a certification by the Commission or an examination and audit by the Commission under this title; or

"(B) to fail to furnish to the Commission any records, books, or information requested by it for purposes of this title.

"(2) Any person who violates paragraph (1) shall be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(e)(1) It is unlawful for any person knowingly and willfully to give or accept any kickback or any illegal payment in connection with any benefits received by a candidate, or an authorized committee of a candidate who receives benefits under this title.

"(2) Any person who violates paragraph (1) shall be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(3) In addition to the penalty provided by paragraph (2), any person who accepts any kickback or illegal benefit in connection with any benefits received by a candidate or an authorized committee of a candidate pursuant to the provisions of this title shall pay to the Secretary for deposit in the fund, an amount equal to 125 percent of the kickback or benefit received.

"SEC. 508. JUDICIAL REVIEW.

"(a) Any action by the Commission made under this title shall be subject to review by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit upon petition filed in that court not later than 30 days after the Commission action for which review is sought. It shall be the duty of the Court of Appeals, ahead of all matters not filed under this title, to advance on the docket and expeditiously take action on all petitions filed pursuant to this title.

"(b) Chapter 7 of title 5, United States Code, applies to judicial review of any agency action, as defined in section 551(13) of title 5, United States Code, by the Commission.

"SEC. 509. PARTICIPATION BY COMMISSION IN JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

"(a) The Commission may appear in and defend against any action instituted under this section and under section 508 either by attorneys employed in its office or by counsel whom it may appoint without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and whose compensation it may fix without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title.

"(b) The Commission may, through attorneys and counsel described in subsection (a), institute actions in the district courts of the United States to seek recovery of any amounts determined under section 507 to be payable to the Secretary.

"(c) The Commission may, through attorneys and counsel described in subsection (a), petition the courts of the United States for such injunctive relief as is appropriate in order to implement any provision of this title.

"(d) The Commission is authorized on behalf of the United States to appeal from, and to petition the Supreme Court for certiorari to review, judgments or decrees entered with respect to actions in which it appears pursuant to this section.

"SEC. 510. REPORTS TO CONGRESS; REGULATIONS.

"(a) The Commission shall, as soon as practicable after each election, submit a full report to the Senate setting forth—

"(1) the expenditures (shown in such detail as the Commission deems appropriate) made by each eligible candidate and the authorized committees of that candidate;

"(2) the amounts certified by the Commission under section 505 for payment to each eligible candidate;

"(3) the amount of repayments, if any, required under section 507, and the reasons for each such repayment; and

"(4) the balance in the fund, the Senate Account and any other account maintained in the fund.

Each report submitted pursuant to this section shall be printed as a Senate document.

"(b) The Commission may prescribe such rules and regulations in accordance with subsection (c), conduct such examinations and investigations, and require the keeping and submission of such books, records, and information, as it deems necessary to carry out its functions and duties under this title.

"(c) Thirty days before prescribing any rules or regulation under subsection (b), the Commission shall transmit to the Senate a statement setting forth the proposed rule or regulation and containing a detailed explanation and justification of such rule or regulation.

"SEC. 511. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"There are authorized to be appropriated to the Commission such sums as are necessary for the purpose of carrying out the Commission's functions and duties under this title."

SEC. 3. SENATE ACCOUNT.

Section 6096(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended—

(1) by striking "$1" each place it appears in that subsection and inserting "$2"; and

(2) by striking "$2" each place it appears in that subsection and inserting "$4".

SEC. 4. BROADCAST RATES.

Section 315 of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 315) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a) by striking "section" and inserting "subsection";

(2) by redesignating subsections (b), (c), and (d) as subsections (d), (e), and (f), respectively;

(3) by inserting immediately after subsection (a) the following new subsections:

"(b)(1) If any licensee permits a person to utilize a broadcasting station to broadcast material which either endorses a legally qualified candidate for any Federal elective office or opposes a legally qualified candidate for that office, such licensee shall, within a reasonable period of time, provide to any eligible candidate opposing the candidate endorsed (or to an authorized committee of such eligible candidate), or to any eligible candidate who was so opposed (or to an authorized committee of such eligible candidate), the opportunity to utilize, without charge, the same amount of time on such broadcasting station, during the same period of the day, as was utilized by such person.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'person' includes an individual, partnership, committee, association, corporation, or any other organization or group of persons, but such term does not include a legally qualified candidate for any Federal elective office or an authorized committee of any such candidate.

"(c) A licensee shall not preempt the use, during any period specified in subsection (d)(1), of a broadcasting station by a legally qualified candidate for Federal office who has purchased such use pursuant to such subsection (d)(1)."

(4) by amending subsection (d)(1), as redesignated by paragraph (2), to read as follows:

"(1) during the 6 months preceding the date of a primary, runoff, general, or special election in which such person is a candidate, the lowest unit charge of the station over the preceding 12-month period for the same class and amount of time for the same period, except that in the case of candidates for the United States Senate in a general election, as such term is defined in section 501(5) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, this provision shall apply only if such candidate has been certified by the Federal Election Commission as eligible to receive benefits under title V of that Act;" and

(5) by amending subsection (e), as redesignated by paragraph (2) to read as follows:

"(e) For purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'authorized committee' means, with respect to any candidate for nomination for election, or election, to any Federal elective office, any committee, club, association, or other group of persons which receives contributions or makes expenditures during a calendar year in an aggregate amount exceeding $1,000 and which is authorized by such candidate to accept contributions or make expenditures on behalf of such candidate to further the nomination or election of such candidate;

"(2) the term 'broadcasting station' includes a community antenna television system; and

"(3) the terms 'licensee' and 'station licensee', when used with respect to a community antenna system, mean the operator of such system."

SEC. 5. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—Section 304 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 434) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(d)(1) Not later than the day after the date on which a candidate for the United States Senate qualifies for the ballot for a general election, as that term is defined in section 501(5), or, if such candidate is a candidate in a State which has a primary election to qualify for such ballot after September 1, within 7 days after the date such candidate wins in such primary, whichever occurs first, each such candidate in such election shall file with the Commission a declaration whether the candidate intends to make expenditures in excess of the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b).

"(2) A declaration filed pursuant to paragraph (1) may be amended or changed at any time within 7 days after the filing of the declaration, and may not be further amended or changed.

"(e)(1) A candidate for the United States Senate who qualifies for the ballot for a general election, as that term is defined in section 501(5)—

"(A) who is not eligible to receive benefits under section 502; and

"(B) who either raises aggregate contributions or makes or becomes obligated to make aggregate expenditures for the general election that exceed 75 percent of the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b) for such Senate election.

shall file a report with the Commission not later than 24 hours after such contributions have been raised or such expenditures have been made or obligated to be made, or not later than 24 hours after the date of qualification for the general election ballot, whichever is later, setting forth the candidate's total contributions and total expenditures for such election. Thereafter such candidate shall file additional reports with the Commission not later than 24 hours after each time additional contributions are raised or expenditures are made, or are obligated to be made, which aggregate an additional 5 percent of such limit. A candidate shall continue to file such reports until the candidate has raised aggregate contributions or made or has become obligated to make aggregate expenditures equal to 133½ percent of the general election spending limit applicable to the candidate under section 503(b).

"(2) The Commission, not later than 24 hours after such a report has been filed, shall notify each candidate in an election who is eligible to receive benefits pursuant to this title of the filing of such report, and after an opposing candidate has raised aggregate contributions or made or has become obligated to make aggregate expenditures in excess of the applicable general election spending limit, the Commission shall certify, pursuant to subsection (1), such eligibility to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment of any amount to which such eligible candidate is entitled.

"(3) Notwithstanding the reporting requirement established in this subsection, the Commission may make its own determination that a candidate in a general election, as such term is defined in section 501(5), who is not eligible to receive benefits under section 504, has raised aggregate contributions or has made or has become obligated to make aggregate expenditures for such election that exceed general election spending limit applicable to a candidate under section 503(b). The Commission, not later than 24 hours after making such determination, shall notify each candidate in the general election involved who is eligible to receive benefits under section 504 about the making of such determination, and shall certify, pursuant to subsection (1), such eligibility to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment of any amount to which any such candidate is entitled.

"(f)(1) All independent expenditures, if any (including those described in subsection (b)(6)(B)(iii)), made by any person after the date of the last Federal election with regard to a general election, as such term is defined in section 501(5), and all obligations to make such expenditures incurred by any person during such period, if any, shall be reported by such person to the Commission as provided in paragraph (2), if such expenditure or obligation is described in such paragraph.

"(2) Independent expenditures by any person referred to in paragraph (1) shall be reported not later than 24 hours after the aggregate amount of such expenditures incurred or obligated exceeds $10,000. Thereafter, independent expenditures referred to in paragraph (1), made by the same person in the same election, shall be reported not later than 24 hours after each time the aggregate amount of such expenditures incurred or obligated, not yet reported under this subparagraph, exceeds $5,000.

"(3) Each report under this subsection shall be filed with the Commission and the Secretary of State for the State of the election involved and shall contain—

"(A) the information required by subsection (b)(6)(B)(iii); and

"(B) a statement filed under penalty of perjury by the person making the independent expenditures, or by the person incurring the obligation to make such expenditures, as the case may be, that identifies the candidate whom the independent expenditures are actually intended to help elect or defeat. The Commission shall, not later than 24 hours after such report is made, notify each candidate in the election involved who is eligible to receive benefits pursuant to section 504(a)(1)(C), about the making of each such report, and shall certify such eligibility to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment in full of any amount to which any such candidate is entitled.

"(4)(A) Notwithstanding the reporting requirements established in this subsection, the Commission may make its own determination that a person has made independent expenditures, or has incurred an obligation to make such expenditures, as the case may be, with regard to a general election, as defined in section 501(5), that in the aggregate total more than the applicable amount specified in paragraph (2).

"(B) The Commission shall, not later than 24 hours after such determination is made, notify each candidate in the election involved who is eligible to receive benefits under section 504(a)(1)(C) about the making of each determination under subparagraph (A), and shall certify, pursuant to subsection (i), such eligibility to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment in full of any amount to which such candidate is entitled.

"(g)(1) When two or more persons make an expenditure or expenditures in coordination, consultation, or concert (as described in paragraph (2) or otherwise) for the purpose of promoting the election or defeat of a clearly identified candidate, each such person shall report to the Commission, under subsection (f), the amount of such expenditure or expenditures made by such person in coordination, consultation, or concert with such other person or persons when the total amount of all expenditures made by such persons in coordination, consultation, or concert with each other exceeds the applicable amount provided in this subsection.

"(2) An expenditure by a person shall constitute an expenditure in coordination, consultation, or concert with another person when—

"(A) there is any arrangement, coordination, or direction with respect to the expenditure between the persons making the expenditures, including any officer, director, employee or agent of such person;

"(B) in the same 2-year election cycle, 1 of the persons making the expenditures (including any officer, director, employee or agent of such person) is or has been, with respect to such expenditures—

"(i) authorized by such other person to raise or expend funds on behalf of such other person; or

"(ii) receiving any form of compensation or reimbursement from such other person or an agent of such other person;

"(C) one of the persons making expenditures (including any officer, director, employee or agent of such person) has communicated with, advised, or counseled such other person in connection with such expenditure; or

"(D) one of the persons making expenditures and such other person making expenditures each retain the professional services of the same individual or person in connection with such expenditures.

"(h)(1) Every political committee, as defined in section 301(4), active in non-Federal elections and maintaining separate accounts for this purpose shall file with the Commission reports of funds received into and disbursements made from such accounts for activities which may influence an election to any Federal office. For purposes of this section, activities that may influence an election to any Federal office include—

"(A) voter registration and get-out-the-vote drives directed to the general public in connection with any election in which Federal candidates appear on the ballot;

"(B) general public political advertising that includes references, however incidental, to clearly identify Federal and non-Federal candidates for public office, or that does not clearly identify Federal candidates but urges support for or opposition to all the candidates of a political party or other candidates in a classification or context which includes Federal candidates; and

"(C) any other activities that require an allocation of costs between a political committee's Federal and non-Federal accounts reflecting the impact on Federal elections in accordance with regulations prescribed or Advisory Opinions rendered by the Commission.

"(2) Reports required to be filed by this subsection shall be filed for the same time periods required for political committees under section 304(a), and shall include:

"(A) a separate statement, for each of the activities in connection with which a report is required under paragraph (1), of the aggregate total of disbursements from the non-Federal accounts; and

"(B) supporting schedules, providing an identification of each donor (except donors whose aggregate donations do not exceed $200 in a calendar year) together with the amount and date of each donation with regard to the receipts of the non-Federal account that comprise disbursements reported under subparagraph (A).

"(3) Reports required to be filed by this subsection need not include donations made to or on behalf of non-Federal candidates or political organizations in accordance with the financing and reporting requirements of State laws, or other disbursements from the non-Federal accounts in support of exclusively non-Federal election activities, if such donations or disbursements are governed solely by such State laws and not subject to paragraph (1).

"(i) The certifications required by this section shall be made by the Commission on the basis of reports filed with such Commission in accordance with the provisions of this Act, or on the basis of such Commission's own investigation or determination, notwithstanding section 505(a).

"(j) Not later than 15 days after a candidate for the Senate qualifies for the primary ballot under applicable State law, such candidate shall file with the Commission a declaration stating whether or not such candidate agrees to expend from the candidate's personal funds, or the funds of the candidate's immediate family, or incur personal loans, in connection with the candidate's campaign for such office, in the aggregate of $100,000 or more, for the election cycle.

"(k)(1) A candidate for the United States Senate who expends from the candidate's personal funds or the funds of the candidate's immediate family, or incurs personal loans, in connection with the candidate's campaign for such office, in the aggregate in excess of $100,000, for the election cycle, shall file a report with the Commission not later than 24 hours after such expenditures have been made or loans incurred. Thereafter the expenditures referred to in this paragraph shall be reported not later than 24 hours after each time the aggregate of additional expenditures or loans exceeds $10,000.

"(2) Not later than 24 hours after a report has been filed under paragraph (1), the Commission shall notify each candidate in the election who is eligible to receive payments under section 504 of the filing of each such report.

"(3) Notwithstanding the reporting requirements in this subsection, the Commission may make its own determination that a candidate for the United States Senate has made expenditures from the personal funds of such candidate or the funds of any member of a candidate's immediate family or incurred personal loans in connection with the candidate's campaign aggregating in excess of $100,000, or thereafter in increments of $10,000 during the election cycle. Not later than 24 hours after making such determination, the Commission shall notify each candidate in the general election who is eligible to receive benefits under section 504 of the making of each such determination."

(b) DEFINITIONS.—Section 301 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (4) by adding at the end the following:

"Whether a committee, club, association, or other group of persons has received contributions within the meaning of this paragraph shall be determined by the Commission on the basis of facts and circumstances, in any combination, demonstrating a purpose of influencing any election for Federal office, including, but not limited to, the representations made by any person soliciting funds about their intended uses; the identification by name of individuals who are candidates for Federal office, as defined in paragraph (2) of this section, or of any political party, in general public political advertising; and the proximity to any primary, run-off, or general election of general public political advertising designed or reasonably calculated to influence voter choice in that election."; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(20) The term 'election cycle' means—
"(A) in the case of a candidate or an authorized committee of a candidate, the period beginning on the day after the date of the most recent election for the seat that the candidate seeks and ending on the date of the next general election; or

"(B) in the case of other persons, the period beginning on the first day following the date of the most recent general election and ending on the date of the next election."

SEC. 6. LIMITS ON CONTRIBUTIONS BY MULTICANDIDATE POLITICAL COMMITTEES AND SEPARATE SEGREGATED FUNDS.

(a) DOLLAR LIMITS.—Section 315(a)(2) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(2)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A) by striking "$5,000" and inserting "$1,000";

(2) by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (B);

(3) in subparagraph (C)—

(A) by striking "$5,000" and inserting "$1,000"; and

(B) by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

(4) by adding at the end the following new subparagraphs:

"(D) to any candidate for the office of Member of, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the House of Representatives and the authorized political committees of such candidate with respect to—

"(i) a general or special election for the office of Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the Congress (including any primary election, convention, or caucus relating to such general or special election) which exceed $100,000 (or $125,000 if at least two candidates qualify for the ballot in the general or special election and at least two candidates qualify for the ballot in a primary election relating to such general or special election), when added to the total of contributions previously made by multicandidate political committees and separate segregated funds, other than multicandidate committees of a political party, to such candidate and the candidate's authorized political committees with respect to such general or special election (including any primary election, convention, or caucus relating to such general or special election); or

"(ii) a runoff election for the office of Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the Congress which exceed $25,000 when added to the total of contributions previously made by multicandidate political committees and separate segregated funds, other than multicandidate committees of a political party, to such candidate and the candidate's authorized political committees with respect to such runoff election;

"(E) to any candidate for the office of Senator and the authorized political committees of such candidate with respect to—

"(i) a general or special election for such office (including any primary election, convention, or caucus relating to such general or special election) which, when added to the total of contributions previously made by multicandidate political committees and separate segregated funds, other than multicandidate committees of a political party, to such candidate and the candidate's authorized political committees with respect to such general or special election (including any primary election, convention, or caucus relating to such general or special election) exceeds an amount equal to 10 percent of the amount provided in section 315(i); or

"(ii) a runoff election for the office of United States Senator which exceeds, when added to the total of contributions previously made by multicandidate political committees and separate segregated funds, other than multicandidate committees of a political party, to such candidate and his authorized political committees with respect to such runoff election, an amount equal to 10 percent of the limitation on expenditures provided in section 315(j) for runoff elections; or

"(F) to any State committee of a political party, including any subordinate committee of a State committee, which, when added to the total of contributions previously made by multicandidate political committees and separate segregated funds, other than multicandidate committees of a political party, to such State committee exceeds the greater of—

"(i) 2 cents multiplied by the voting age population of the State of such State committee; or

"(ii) $25,000.

The limitation of subparagraph (F) shall apply separately with respect to each two-year Federal election cycle, covering a period from the day following the date of the last Federal general election held in that State through the date of the next regularly scheduled Federal general election."

(b) SENATE ELECTIONS.—(1) Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(i) For purposes of subsection (a)(2)(E)(i), such limitation for the election cycle shall be an amount equal to the lesser of—

"(1) $5,500,000; or

"(2) the greater of—

"(A) $900,000; or

"(B) 50 percent of the sum of—

"(i) $400,000; and

"(ii) 21 cents multiplied by the voting age population of 4,000,000 or less, plus 18 cents multiplied by the voting age population over 4,000,000.

"(j) For purposes of subsection (a)(2)(E)(ii), such limitation for the election cycle shall be an amount equal to the lesser of—

"(1) $5,500,000; or

"(2) the greater of—

"(A) $900,000; or

"(B) 20 percent of the sum of—

"(i) $400,000; and

"(ii) 25 cents multiplied by the voting age population of 4,000,000 or less, plus 20 cents multiplied by the voting age population over 4,000,000."

(2) Section 315(c) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(c)) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (1) by striking "subsection (b) and subsection (d)" and inserting "subsections (b), (d), (i), and (j)"; and

(B) in paragraph (2)(B) by inserting before the period at the end "as applied in subsections (b) and (d), and the term 'base period' means the calendar year of the first election after the date of enactment of the Senate Election Reform Act of 1993, as applied in subsections (i) and (j)".

(c) CONGRESSIONAL CAMPAIGN COMMITTEES.—Section 315(d) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(d)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking "(2) and (3)" and inserting "(2), (3), (4), and (5)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(4) No congressional campaign committee may accept contributions from multicandidate political committees and separate segregated funds, during two-year election cycle, which, in the aggregate, exceed 30 percent of the total expenditures that may be made during such election cycle by that campaign committee on behalf of candidates for Senator, Representative, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner pursuant to paragraph (3).

"(5) No national committee of a political party may accept contributions from multicandidate political committees and separate segregated funds, during two-year election cycle, which, in the aggregate, are in excess of an amount equal to 2 cents multiplied by the voting age population of the United States.

"(6) The limitations contained in paragraphs (2) and (3) shall apply to any expenditure through general public political advertising, whenever made, which—

"(A) clearly identifies by name an individual who is, or is seeking nomination to be, a candidate in the general election for the Federal office of President, Senator or Representative; and

"(B) does not constitute a direct mail communication designed primarily for fundraising purposes that makes only incidental reference to a Federal candidate."

SEC. 7. INTERMEDIARY OR CONDUIT.

Section 315(a)(8) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(8)) is amended to read as follows:

"(8)(A) For purposes of this subsection—

"(i) contributions made by a person, either directly or indirectly, to or on behalf of a particular candidate, including contributions which are in any way earmarked or otherwise directed through an intermediary or conduit to such candidate; shall be treated as contributions from such person to such candidate; and

"(ii) contributions made by a person either directly or indirectly, to or on behalf of a particular candidate, through an intermediary or conduit, including all contributions delivered or arranged to be delivered by such intermediary or conduit, shall also be treated as contributions from the intermediary or conduit, if—

"(I)(aa) the contributions made through the intermediary or conduit are in the form of a check or other negotiable instrument made payable to the conduit or intermediary rather than the intended recipient; or

"(bb) the conduit or intermediary is a political committee, other than an authorized committee of a candidate, within the meaning of section 301(4), or an officer, employee or other agent of such a political committee, or an officer, employee or other agent of a connected organization, within the meaning of section 301(7), acting in its behalf; and

"(II) the conduit or intermediary is required to register as a lobbyist or lobby organization as defined under the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act (2 U.S.C. 266), or an officer, employee or other agent of such an organization.

"(B) The limitations imposed by this subsection shall not apply to—

"(i) bona fide joint fundraising efforts conducted solely for the purpose of sponsorship of a fundraising reception, dinner, or other event in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Commission by—

"(I) two or more candidates;

"(II) two or more national, State, or local committees of a political party within the meaning of section 301(4) acting on their own behalf; or

"(III) a special committee formed by either two or more candidates or one or more candidates and one or more national, State, or local committees of a political party acting on their own behalf; or

"(ii) fundraising efforts for the benefit of a candidate which are conducted by another candidate within the meaning of section 301(2).

In all cases where contributions are made by a person either directly or indirectly to or on behalf of a particular candidate through an intermediary or conduit, the intermediary or conduit shall report the original source and the intended recipient of such contribution to the Commission and to the intended recipient."

SEC. 8. INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURES.

Section 301(17) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(17)) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "An expenditure shall constitute an expenditure in coordination, consultation, or concert with a candidate when—

"(A) there is any arrangement, coordination, or direction with respect to the expenditure between the candidate or the candidate's agent and the person (including any officer, director, employee or agent of such person) making the expenditure;

"(B) in the same election cycle, the person making the expenditure (including any officer, director, employee or agent of such person) is or has been—

"(i) authorized to raise or expend funds on behalf of the candidate or the candidate's authorized committees;

"(ii) serving as an officer of the candidate's authorized committees; or

"(iii) receiving any form of compensation or reimbursement from the candidate, the candidate's authorized committees, or the candidate's agent;

"(C) the person making the expenditure (including any officer, director, employee or agent of such person) has communicated with, advised, or counseled the candidate or the candidate's agents at any time on the candidate's plans, projects, or needs relating to the candidate's pursuit of nomination for election, or election to Federal office, in the same election cycle, including any advice relating to the candidate's decision to seek Federal office;

"(D) the person making the expenditure retains the professional services of any individual or other person also providing those services to the candidate in connection with the candidate's pursuit of nomination for election, or election to Federal office, in the same election cycle, including any services relating to the candidate's decision to seek Federal office;

"(E) the person making the expenditure (including any officer, director, employee or agent of such person) has communicated or consulted at any time during the same election cycle about the candidate's plans, projects, or needs relating to the candidate's pursuit of election to Federal office, with—

"(i) any officer, director, employee or agent of a party committee that has made or intends to make expenditures or contributions, pursuant to subsections (a), (d), or (h) of section 315 in connection with the candidate's campaign; or

"(ii) any person whose professional services have been retained by a political party committee that has made or intends to make expenditures or contributions pursuant to subsections (a), (d), or (h) of section 315 in connection with the candidate's campaign; or

"(F) the expenditure is based on information provided to the person making the expenditure directly or indirectly by the candidate or the candidate's agents about the candidate's plans, projects, or needs, if the candidate or the candidate's agent is aware that the other person has made or is planning to make expenditures expressly advocating the candidate's election."

SEC. 9. INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURE BROADCAST DISCLOSURE.

Section 318(a)(3) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441d(a)(3)) is amended by striking the period at the end and inserting the following: "; except that when a person makes an independent expenditure through a broadcast communication on any television station, the broadcast communication shall include a statement clearly readable to the viewer that appears continuously during the entire length of such communication setting forth the name of such person and, in the case of a political committee, the name of any connected or affiliated organization, and when a person makes an independent expenditure through a newspaper, magazine, outdoor advertising facility, direct mailing or other type of general public political advertising, the communication shall include, in addition to the other information required by this subsection—

"(A) the following sentence: 'The cost of presenting this communication is not subject to any campaign contribution limits.'; and

"(B) a statement setting forth the name of the person who paid for the communication and, in the case of a political committee, the name of any connected or affiliated organization and the name of the president or treasurer of such organization."

SEC. 10. REFERRAL TO THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

Section 309(a)(5)(C) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(5)(C)) is amended by striking "may refer" and inserting "shall refer".

SEC. 11. EXTENSION OF CREDIT.

Section 301(8)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)(A)) is amended—

(1) by striking "or" at the end of clause (i);

(2) by striking the period at the end of clause (ii) and inserting "; or"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(iii) with respect to a candidate for the office of United States Senator and the candidate's authorized political committees, any extension of credit for goods or services relating to advertising on broadcasting stations, in newspapers or magazines, by direct mail (including direct mail fund solicitations) or other similar types of general public political advertising, if such extension of credit is—

"(I) in an amount of more than $1,000; and

"(II) for a period of more than 60 days after the date on which such goods or services are furnished, which date in the case of advertising by direct mail (including a direct mail solicitation) shall be the date of the mailing."

SEC. 12. PREFERENTIAL RATES FOR MAIL.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter II of chapter 36 of title 39, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 3629. Reduced rates for certain Senate candidates

"The rates of postage for matter mailed with respect to a campaign by an eligible candidate (as defined in section 501 of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971) shall be—

"(1) in the case of first-class mail matter, one-fourth of the rate currently in effect; and

"(2) in the case of third-class mail matter, 2 cents per piece less than mail matter mailed pursuant to paragraph (1), subject to the condition that the total paid by such candidate for all mail matter at the rates provided by paragraphs (1) and (2) shall not exceed 5 percent of the general election spending limit applicable to such candidate under section 503(b) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 36 of title 39, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 3628 the following new item:

"3629. Reduced rates for certain Senate candidates."

SEC. 13. DISCLOSURE.

Section 318(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441d) is amended—

(1) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (3) and inserting "; and"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) if paid for or authorized by a general election candidate for the Senate, or the authorized committee of such candidate who has NOT agreed to abide by the expenditure limits in section 503, such advertisement or announcement shall contain the following sentence: 'This candidate has NOT agreed to abide by the spending limits for this Senate election campaign set forth in the Federal Election Campaign Act.'"

SEC. 14. EXCESS CAMPAIGN FUNDS.

Section 313 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 439a) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a)" after the section designation;

(2) by striking "political party;" through the end of the paragraph and inserting "political party."; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(b) The authorized committee of a Senator or Representative in, Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, or candidate for, the Congress, may not make any contribution, either directly or indirectly, to any other Senator or Representative in, Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the Congress, or, to any State or local elected official or any candidate (or any authorized committee for the candidate) for such office, including contributions that are in any way earmarked or otherwise directed through an intermediary or conduit (including any political committee) to the Senator, Representative, Delegate, Resident Commissioner, or candidate."

SEC. 15. POLITICAL COMMITTEE POSTAL RATES.

Subsection (e) of section 3626 of title 39, United States Code, is repealed.

SEC. 16. SOFT MONEY.

(a) PROHIBITION.—Section 315(d) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(d)), as amended by section 6(c), is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) A State committee of a political party, including any subordinate committee of a political party, may not make any expenditure in connection with the general election campaign of any candidate for President of the United States who is affiliated with such party."

(b) DEFINITIONS.—Section 301 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431) is amended by repealing clauses (x) and (xii) of paragraph (8)(B) and clauses (viii) and (ix) of paragraph (9)(B).

(c) APPLICATION OF FECA TO COMMITTEES OF POLITICAL PARTIES.—Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a), as amended by section 6(b), is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(k)(1) Any amount solicited, received or spent by a national, State, or local committee of a political party, directly or indirectly, shall be subject to the provisions of this Act, if such amount is solicited, received or spent in connection with a Federal election. No part of such amount may be allocated to a non-Federal account or otherwise maintained in, or paid from, an account that is not subject to this Act. This section shall not apply to amounts described in section 301(b)(9)(B)(viii).

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'in connection with a Federal election' includes any activity that may affect a Federal election including but not limited to the following:

"(A) voter registration and get out the vote activities;

"(B) generic activities, including but not limited to any broadcasting, newspaper, magazine, billboard, mail, or similar type of communication or public advertising; and

"(C) campaign materials which identify a federal candidate, regardless of any other candidate who may also be identified."

SEC. 17. FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION REFORM.

(a) MEMBERSHIP.—Section 306(a)(1) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437e(a)(1)) is amended—

(1) by striking "6 members" and inserting "7 members"; and

(2) by amending the last sentence to read as follows: "No more than 4 members of the Commission appointed under this paragraph may be affiliated with the same political party, and such appointments shall be made in a manner to assure that the same political party shall not have 4 or more members affiliated with such party on such Commission for two succeeding years."

(b) TERMS.—Section 306(a)(2) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437c(a)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2)(A) Members of the Commission shall serve for terms of 7 years, except that of the members appointed after April 30, 1993—

"(i) one of the two members appointed for the term beginning May 1, 1995, shall be appointed for a term of 6 years;

"(ii) one of the two members appointed for the term beginning May 1, 1997, shall be appointed for a term of 6 years; and

"(iii) one of the two members appointed for the term beginning May 1, 1999, shall be appointed for a term of 6 years.

"(B) One additional member of the Commission shall be appointed for a term beginning May 1, 1993, and shall be appointed for a term of 5 years."

SEC. 18. FRANKED MAIL.

(a) TITLE 39, UNITED STATES CODE.—Section 3210(a)(6) of title 39, United States Code is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking "60 days" each place it appears and inserting "6 months";

(2) in subparagraph (C), by striking "60 days" and inserting "6 months"; and

(3) in subparagraph (E), by—

(A) inserting "town meeting notices, opinion surveys," after "news-letters"; and

(B) striking "five hundred" and inserting "250".

(b) SENATE RULES.—Paragraph 1 of Rule 40 of the Standing Rules of the Senate is amended by striking "sixty days" and inserting "6 months".

SEC. 19. ONE CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE ALLOWED.

(a) DEFINITION.—Section 301(6) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(6)) is amended by inserting "other than a candidate for the office of Senator or Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the Congress," after "a candidate".

(b) ORGANIZATION OF COMMITTEES.—Section 302 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 432(e)) is amended—

(1) in subsection (e)(1) by inserting "other than a candidate for the office of Senator or Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the Congress," after "A candidate"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(j) Notwithstanding any other law, no candidate for the office of Senator or Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to the Congress shall have any authorized committee or campaign committee other than one committee which shall be the principal campaign committee for such individual."

SEC. 20. SEVERABILITY.

If any provision of this Act or any amendment made by this Act, or the application of any such provision to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of any other such provision and the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 21. EFFECTIVE DATE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (b), this Act and the amendments made by this Act shall become effective for any election held in 1994 or thereafter.

(b) IMMEDIATE EFFECTIVENESS.—The amendments made by sections 3, 7, 8, and 9 shall become effective on the date of enactment of this Act.

By Mr. NICKLES:

S. 65. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to impose a fee on the importation of crude oil and refined petroleum products; to the Committee on Finance.

DOMESTIC PETROLEUM SECURITY ACT

• Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Domestic Petroleum Security Act of 1993. This bill imposes a variable tariff on imported oil that phases out once the landed price reaches $25 a barrel. This will have the effect of establishing a price floor on imported crude of $25 per barrel. The purpose of the measure, which is similar to bills I introduced in the past three Congresses, is to stimulate and maintain a reasonable level of investment in domestic oil production.

It is the uncertainty of long-term price of crude oil—with the specter that it could drop into the mid or even low teens again—that has kept producers and financiers from making investment decisions in domestic exploration and production. During the 1980's, the oil and gas industry and lending institutions learned the hard way about the imprudence of making exploration and production decisions based on escalating projections on the price of crude. The most devastating of the oil drops culminated in August 1986, when domestic crude sold for less than $10 a barrel. However, even in July 1990, crude dipped as low as $15 a barrel.

Since the mid-1980's, we in the oil patch have been reluctant witnesses to the tragedies of friends losing productive jobs, banks failing, expertise and capital equipment permanently disappearing, and marginal wells prematurely shut-in and the remaining oil forever lost.

Last year, Oklahoma produced 278,000 barrels a day, a 34-percent drop in production since 1985. In 1981, there were 698 rigs operating in Oklahoma as compared to 129 on January 16, 1993. Stripper well production in Oklahoma accounts for 80 percent of Oklahoma oil production even though average production from stripper wells is 2.9 barrels a day. These wells are being plugged and abandoned at an alarming rate because they are no longer economic to operate.

As a nation, too, we have suffered dearly for this cheap oil. Since 1985, domestic production—excluding Alaska—has dropped by 24 percent or, on average, 1.7 million barrels per day which is the equivalent of 630 million barrels a year. The rig count has fallen from 3,974 in 1981 to 838 nationwide. In June last year, the national rig count dropped to 596, the lowest number ever recorded since we began keeping records in the 1940's. Currently, domestic production equals, on average, 7.4 million barrels per day resulting in the lowest level of production since 1950. This loss in production since 1985 has cost Americans approximately $11 billion in 1992 alone. This loss essentially negates the positive trade balance that we had from all our agricultural exports of corn, wheat, and cotton in 1991. Every barrel of lost domestic production must be made up by spending more money for foreign oil—which is already over half of our trade deficit. And, today we are all too aware of the national security implications of heavy reliance on Middle East oil.

Congress can do something about this perilous decline in domestic oil production and rapid increase in oil imports. We can dampen the risks associated with world oil price declines that are orchestrated at will by foreign governments by stopping the world oil price slides at $25 per barrel. There are plenty of risks inherent in finding oil in the ground without continuing to subject U.S. business and banks to the risks of more foreign price manipulation.

Moreover, the money raised by the tariff imposed when world prices fall below $25 would go into the Federal Treasury, as would increased revenues from Federal oil royalties and lease bonuses. This new revenue could be used for deficit reduction.

The bill I introduce today would impose a tariff on imported crude oil and products that is calculated by the Secretary of the Treasury to be the difference between $25 and the average international price of crude oil during the preceding 4 weeks. If the 4-week average international price of crude oil is $25 or more, then the tariff would be zero. The tariff would be adjusted each week to reflect changes in the average international price during the preceding 4 weeks.

For imported petroleum products, the bill adds an additional $3 per barrel to the tariff calculated by the Secretary. This surcharge to the crude oil tariff will ensure that the imposition of the tariff will not inadvertently encourage importation of petroleum products by making them proportionately less expensive than importing and refining crude oil. The bill also provides that the tariff would not apply to crude oil or refined products that are subsequently exported.

I first introduced this floor price tariff approach in September 1986. If the Congress had passed that measure we would have prevented much of the economic hardships and increases in petroleum imports that we have seen in the last 2 years. The first bill and the one I introduced at the beginning of the 100th Congress both set a floor price of $20 per barrel. However, I introduce today's measure with a floor price target of $25 per barrel to address the undeniable need for this Nation to rebuild as strong a domestic oil producing industry as possible.

One of the best investments we can make in the energy sector of this country is by placing a floor price on domestic crude oil. With a floor price, we will maintain energy conservation and oil production during periods of world oil overproduction, yet not add to the burdens on the American consumer when world prices climb above $25 per barrel.

I hope that now with drilling at one of its lowest points in history and with the concurrent loss of over 400,000 jobs in the oil and gas industry alone, that Congress will have the courage to pass a measure that will contribute to the long-term vitality of our domestic petroleum industry as well as contribute to our national security.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be included in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 65

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Domestic Petroleum Security Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. FEE ON IMPORTED CRUDE OIL OR REFINED PETROLEUM PRODUCTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subtitle E of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to alcohol, tobacco, and certain other excise taxes) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new chapter:

"CHAPTER 55—IMPORTED CRUDE OIL OR REFINED PETROLEUM PRODUCTS

"Sec. 5891. Imposition of tax.

"Sec. 5892. Definitions.

"Sec. 5893. Registration.

"Sec. 5894. Procedures, returns; penalties.

"SEC. 5891. IMPOSITION OF TAX.

"(a) IMPOSITION OF TAX.—In addition to any other tax imposed under this title, an excise tax is hereby imposed on—

"(1) the first sale within the United States of each barrel (or its equivalent) of—

"(A) any crude oil, or

"(B) any refined petroleum product, that has been imported into the United States, and

"(2) the use within the United States of each barrel (or its equivalent) of—

"(A) any crude oil, or

"(B) any refined petroleum product, that has been imported into the United States if no tax has been imposed with respect to such crude oil or refined petroleum product prior to such use.

"(b) RATE OF TAX.—

"(1) CRUDE OIL.—For purposes of paragraphs (1)(A) and (2)(A) of subsection (a) the rate of tax on any barrel (or its equivalent) shall be the excess, if any, of—

"(A) $25, over

"(B) the energy policy price per barrel of crude oil.

"(2) REFINED PETROLEUM PRODUCT.—For purposes of paragraphs (1)(B) and (2)(B) of subsection (a), the rate of tax on any barrel (or its equivalent) shall be equal to—

"(A) $3, plus

"(B) the tax determined under paragraph (1) of this subsection.

"(3) FRACTIONAL PARTS OF BARRELS.—In the case of a fraction of a barrel, the tax imposed by subsection (a) shall be the same fraction of the amount of such tax imposed on the whole barrel.

"(c) DETERMINATION OF ENERGY POLICY PRICE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the energy policy price with respect to any week during which the tax under subsection (a) is imposed shall be determined by the Secretary and published in the Federal Register on the first day of such week.

"(2) BASIS OF DETERMINATION.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the energy policy price for any week is the weighted average international price of a barrel of crude oil for the preceding 4 weeks as determined by the Secretary, after consultation with the Administrator of the Energy Information Administration of the Department of Energy, pursuant to the formula for determining such international price as used in publishing the Weekly Petroleum Status Report and as in effect on the date of the enactment of this section.

"(d) LIABILITY FOR PAYMENT OF TAX.—

"(1) SALES.—The taxes imposed by subsection (a)(1) shall be paid by the first person who sells the crude oil or refined petroleum product within the United States.

"(2) USE.—The taxes imposed by subsection (a)(2) shall be paid by the person who uses the crude oil or refined petroleum product.

"(3) TAX-FREE EXPORTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, no tax shall be imposed under this chapter on the sale of crude oil or refined petroleum products for export or for resale by the purchaser to a second purchaser for export.

"(B) PROOF OF EXPORT.—Where any crude oil or refined petroleum product has been sold free of tax under subparagraph (A), such subparagraph shall cease to apply with respect to the sale of such crude oil or refined petroleum product, unless, within the 6-month period which begins on the date of the sale, the seller receives proof that the crude oil or refined petroleum product, has been exported.

"SEC. 5892. DEFINITIONS.

"For purposes of this chapter—

"(1) CRUDE OIL.—The term 'crude oil' means crude oil other than crude oil produced from a well located in the United States (within the meaning of section 638(2)) or a possession of the United States.

"(2) BARREL.—The term 'barrel' means 42 United States gallons.

"(3) REFINED PETROLEUM PRODUCT.—The term 'refined petroleum product' shall have the same meaning given to such term by section 3(5) of the Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act of 1973 (15 U.S.C. 752(5)).

"(4) EXPORT.—The term 'export' includes shipment to a possession of the United States; and the term 'exported' includes shipment to a possession of the United States.

"SEC. 5893. REGISTRATION.

"Every person subject to tax under section 5891 shall, before incurring any liability for tax under such section, register with the Secretary.

"SEC. 5894. PROCEDURES; RETURNS; PENALTIES.

"For purposes of this title, the tax imposed by section 5891 shall be treated in the same manner as the tax imposed by section 4986 (as in effect before its repeal)."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of chapters for subtitle E is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Chapter 55. Imported crude oil or refined petroleum products."

(c) DEDUCTIBILITY OF IMPORTED OIL TAX.—The first sentence of section 164(a) (relating to deductions for taxes) is amended by inserting after paragraph (5) the following new paragraph:

"(6) The imported oil taxes imposed by section 5891."

SEC. 3. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by this Act shall apply with respect to sales and use of imported crude oil or imported refined petroleum products on or after the date of enactment.

By Mr. NICKLES (for himself, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. SMITH, Mr. COHEN, Mr. HELMS, Mr. BOREN, and Mr. D'AMATO):

S. 66. A bill to amend title IV of the Social Security Act to enhance educational opportunity, increase school attendance, and promote self-sufficiency among welfare recipients; to the Committee on Finance.

CHILDREN'S EDUCATION OPPORTUNITY ACT

• Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, today I, along with Senators GRASSLEY, SMITH, HELMS, COHEN, D'AMATO, and BOREN am introducing legislation that will give States greater flexibility in enacting laws that link school attendance to welfare benefits. These innovative State initiatives are known as Learnfare.

State governments all over the Nation are looking for new ways to reduce the prevalence of welfare dependency and lower high school dropout rates. Learnfare calls on adults to be held accountable for their actions, and holds parents on public assistance accountable for the education of their children. This is just plain common sense.

Most policymakers agree that education is the best way to break the cycle of generational poverty that plagues our Nation's poor. Children who drop out of high school are more likely to be unemployed, more likely to turn to a life of crime, and more likely to end up on welfare than their peers who remain in school. We must take every measure possible to insure that every child in the country benefits from our Nation's educational systems.

Pioneered in Wisconsin, Learnfare is the linkage of AFDC dollars to school attendance. Interest in these programs has been voiced from Massachusetts to California and from Washington to Florida. Currently, States are able to enact these measures by obtaining a waiver from the Department of Health and Human Services to expand their mandated Job Opportunities and Basic Skills [JOBS] Programs to include school age dependents of AFDC recipients. Unfortunately, States seeking to gain this waiver have met with Federal, bureaucratic stonewalling.

My legislation will remove this Federal stumbling block by amending the State programs section of the Social Security Code's AFDC regulations to allow States the option of implementing learnfare programs. Doing away with the necessity for a Federal waiver will encourage States to implement innovative ways of keeping at-risk youths in school. Knowing the importance of educational opportunities, the Nation's Governors adopted a 90-percent graduation rate as one of the national education goals. Learnfare will help assure attainment of this goal.

I truly hope this will be the first step toward reestablishing the once commonplace notion that individuals are answerable for their actions. Requiring responsible actions of welfare recipients will create a two-way obligation between the States and those on welfare. States are obliged to assist recipients in getting off the welfare rolls and recipients, in turn, are encouraged to use their benefits to better their situation.

In the September 10 issue of the Black Chronicle, a weekly newspaper in Oklahoma, an editorial writer wrote:

Mr. Nickles' justification for this is that the proposal offers a way for welfare recipients to eventually free themselves from the shackles of dependence on welfare and the senator said he anticipates, that, at some point, through education, etc., a generation of families may be able to break the cycle of welfare dependence.

This truly sums up what I believe this legislation is all about. We must challenge all Americans to take a stake in our Nation's education systems. We must reignite the thirst for knowledge that we all shared as children. As the debate on welfare and education reform unfolds, I challenge my colleagues to support this legislation. It will give the States the opportunity to enact programs that insure every school age child in America the educational opportunity they deserve. •

• Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise today to join Senator NICKLES in sponsoring the Children's Education Opportunities Act. This bill relieves the necessity for States to obtain a waiver under Social Security regulations allowing them the option to implement Learnfare programs for children of families receiving welfare. This legislation is an important step in ending welfare dependence through the education of children that might ordinarily be left in the vicious cycle of dependence that has gone on for far too long.

Welfare was never intended to become a way of life, but unfortunately, it has. Therefore, it is our duty to provide children and teenagers on AFDC the minimum level of education needed to become productive citizens and wage earners. These children must grow to become part of the mainstream, not be doomed to live outside of it.

President Clinton supports welfare reform, changing the current welfare system from a way of life to providing people with a second chance. I see no reason why we cannot join him in this effort. Congress, therefore, must act. That is why this legislation can provide hope for an end to the cycle of poverty in which children of welfare recipients have become trapped. I commend my colleague Mr. NICKLES for this worthy start at welfare reform. I also urge my colleagues to join us in cosponsoring this legislation. •

By Mrs. KASSEBAUM (for herself, Mr. DOLE, Mr. MCCAIN, Mr. DANFORTH, and Mr. SMITH):

S. 67. A bill to regulate interstate commerce by providing for uniform standards of liability arising out of general aviation accidents; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

GENERAL AVIATION ACCIDENT LIABILITY STANDARDS

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the General Aviation Accident Liability Standards Act of 1993. This legislation would replace the current patchwork of unpredictable and inconsistent State general aviation liability laws with uniform, fair, and reasonable Federal standards of liability.

America has always dominated the world in all aspects of aviation—military, commercial, and general aviation. Today, however, U.S. dominance in the general aviation field is being threatened by foreign competition. Under our country's current product liability system, it is unclear whether or not U.S. manufacturers can survive the foreign challenge. Since 1979 unit sales of new, domestically produced aircraft have plummeted nearly 95 percent, and employment is down 70 percent.

The advantage foreign companies have in manufacturing general aviation aircraft is that, unlike most American companies, they do not have to build high-product liability costs into the selling price of their airplanes. Because the foreign companies are not liable for a huge fleet of very old aircraft still in operation in the United States, they are not adversely affected by those States which do not have a statute of repose. Moreover, a majority of the foreign planes are sold in Europe where there is a 10-year statute of repose.

American manufacturers, on the other hand, are responsible for a fleet of over 200,000 general aviation planes that is, on average, over 22 years old. In those States that do not have a statute of repose, domestic manufacturers are still liable for every plane they have ever produced—including the ones built in the 1920's, 1930's, and 1940's. Manufacturers have no choice but to build the cost of this liability exposure into the price of every new airplane they produce.

Mr. President, it does not make sense for us to allow unpredictable and often conflicting State liability laws to destroy an industry that is completely regulated by the Federal Government. Every aspect of the general aviation industry—everything from airplane design to pilot licensing and airplane maintenance—is controlled by Federal law. Nevertheless, when a general aviation accident occurs it is State, rather than Federal, liability standards that apply.

This is the fifth consecutive term of Congress in which I have introduced the General Aviation Accident Liability Standards Act. Throughout this period, sales of domestically produced general aviation aircrafts have consistently fallen while foreign manufacturers have increased their share of the U.S. market. In order to save the domestic general aviation industry, and the jobs that go with it, it is essential that we enact uniform, fair, and reasonable Federal standards of liability.

Obviously, innocent victims should not pay the price for defective aircraft, and no Federal law should change that. However, manufacturers should not pay for defective maintenance, defective servicing, or defective operation. These are things that are beyond the manufacturer's control. Moreover, at some point, manufacturers should cease to be liable for planes that were neither built, nor warranted, to last forever.

The legislation I am introducing today is not only supported by the manufacturers of general aviation aircraft, it is also supported by consumers. The Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association—which represents the very people who buy and fly general aviation airplanes—have again joined with the General Aviation Manufacturers Association, the National Business Aircraft Association, the Experimental Aircraft Association, and National Air Transport Association in endorsing this bill.

Mr. President, the general aviation industry is dying, and 30,000 workers have already lost their jobs. Unless uniform Federal liability standards are passed, domestic manufacturers will continue to be at a competitive disadvantage with foreign companies, and the United States will unnecessarily lose jobs and technology. In order to save this important industry, I urge the Senate to give prompt and careful consideration to the General Aviation Accident Liability Standards Act of 1993.

By Mr. METZENBAUM:

S. 68. A bill to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act to prevent misleading advertising of the health benefits of foods; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

FDA ADMINISTRATION NUTRITION ADVERTISING ACT

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, the Food and Drug Administration Nutrition Advertising Act of 1993, amends the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act to grant the Food and Drug Administration [FDA] expanded jurisdiction to prevent false and misleading nutrition and health claims in food advertising. The FDA already has the authority to control the use of false and misleading claims in food labeling. The purpose of this bill is to ensure that consumers receive consistent and reliable nutritional information from food labeling as well as food advertising.

In 1990, Congress overwhelmingly approved the Nutrition Labeling and Education Act [NLEA], the most extensive food labeling reform in this country's history. According to the FDA, the improved nutrition information required by this landmark bill will prevent at a minimum, 39,000 cases of coronary heart disease and 12,000 deaths in the next 20 years by enabling consumers to change to more healthy diets that are lower in fat, cholesterol, sodium and calories. By 1994, consumers will finally see accurate nutrition labels on almost all of the products in their supermarket.

Despite this tremendous progress for consumer rights, a critical and inappropriate gap in food labeling coverage still exists. The Federal Trade Commission [FTC], which as a result of a 1954 agreement between the FTC and FDA has sole jurisdiction over food advertising, has not followed the FDA's lead. While the FTC repeatedly states that it is working closely with the FDA to harmonize advertising and labeling policies, several recent FTC enforcement actions indicate otherwise. The bottom line is that the FTC allows food companies to make nutrition and health claims in ADS that the FDA believes are misleading.

The FTC has failed to take enforcement action against numerous companies that are currently misusing such well-defined terms as "low sodium" or "lean" in food advertising. In addition, the FTC has not indicated that it will prevent companies from using nutrient terms not permitted under the NLEA. The use of an endless number of other nutrient terms, limited only by the creativity of Madison Avenue advertising executives, will only serve to mislead health conscience consumers.

Legislation granting the FDA explicit jurisdiction over health and nutrition claims in advertising is necessary to remedy these problems. S. 2968 would do just that. FDA scientists, nutritionists and other experts are clearly qualified to evaluate the validity of nutrition and health claims in advertising.

The FTC's policies on food advertising must not be permitted to undermine important health and consumer benefits. The Nutrition Advertising Coordination Act of 1993, will help ensure that the benefits of nutrition labeling are enhanced and not diminished.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 68

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Food and Drug Administration Nutrition Advertising Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. MISLEADING FOOD ADVERTISEMENTS.

(a) REQUIREMENTS.—Section 403 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 343) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(s) Except as provided in clauses (A) through (C) of paragraph (r)(5), if it is a food intended for human consumption that is offered for sale, and the advertising for the food—

"(1) makes a claim, expressly or by implication, of the type described in paragraph (r)(1)(A), unless the claim is in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Secretary that are consistent with regulations issued by the Secretary to implement paragraph (r)(2);

"(2) makes a claim, expressly or by implication, of the type described in paragraph (r)(1)(B), unless the claim is in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Secretary that are consistent with regulations issued by the Secretary to implement subparagraph (3) or (5)(D) of paragraph (r);

"(3) makes a claim, expressly or by implication, of the type described in clause (A) or (B) of paragraph (r)(1), unless the claim is in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Secretary that are consistent with regulations issued by the Secretary to implement subparagraph (1) or (2) of paragraph (q); or

"(4) fails to include clearly and conspicuously the following statement: 'See product label for complete nutrition information.'"

(b) REGULATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—

(A) PROPOSED REGULATIONS.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall issue proposed regulations to implement section 403(s) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

(B) FINAL REGULATIONS.—Not later than 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall issue final regulations to implement section 403(s) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

(2) PROPOSED REGULATIONS CONSIDERED TO BE FINAL.—If the Secretary of Health and Human Services fails to issue final regulations under paragraph (1)(B) upon the expiration of 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the proposed regulations issued in accordance with paragraph (1)(A) shall be considered to be the final regulations upon the expiration of such 12 months. The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall promptly publish in the Federal Register notice of the new status of the proposed regulations.

SEC. 3. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendment made by section 2(a) shall take effect 15 month after the date of enactment of this Act.

S. 69. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to repeal the luxury tax on boats; to the Committee on Finance.

REPEAL OF LUXURY TAX ON BOATS

• Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, my colleagues, I rise this afternoon to reintroduce legislation that my distinguished colleague, Senator CHAFEE of Rhode Island, and I introduced, along with a large number of cosponsors, in the last Congress. That legislation was to repeal the so-called luxury tax on boats and vessels which was, I think, a very serious mistake in this Congress, levying this so-called 10-percent luxury tax in the first place.

What we have done with this tax, which is now in place, is not to raise revenues for the Government to reduce the deficit; but what we have done is to discourage the creation of jobs in a very important segment of our Nation's business and industry. Fewer boats are being bought as a result of this tax. Therefore, fewer sales occur, less money is generated, and literally thousands of Americans have lost their jobs because companies are not able to continue production of a product that Americans were actually purchasing before the tax was put into place.

Senator CHAFEE and I, and all of our colleagues who joined in this, passed this bill twice in the House and in the Senate on two separate occasions. Unfortunately, the legislation that it was part of was vetoed twice by the administration. We were never able to get it adopted. It is a clear sense of what is appropriate and proper.

Congress wants this legislation to be repealed. The American public thinks it was a mistake, and Congress is responding to that by repealing it on two separate occasions. I am hopeful that with the introduction of the Breaux-Chafee bill, with about 20 cosponsors this time, that we will be able to get it moving.

The Secretary of Treasury, our former colleague, Senator BENTSEN, has been one of our strongest supporters of this effort. I am hopeful that he will be in the position to convince this administration—and, hopefully, they will—to support this legislation when Congress passes it again in this Congress, and that President Clinton will be able to affix his signature, thereby repealing this onerous tax, which is not accomplishing the purpose for which it was intended.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 69

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. REPEAL OF LUXURY TAX ON BOATS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subpart A of part I of subchapter A of chapter 31 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to retail excise taxes) is amended by striking section 4002 and by redesignating sections 4003 and 4004 as sections 4002 and 4003, respectively.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Paragraph (2) of section 4003(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as redesignated by subsection (a), is amended—

(A) by striking "vehicle, boat," in subparagraph (A)(iii) and inserting "vehicle"; and

(B) by striking "vehicle, $100,000 in the case of a boat," in subparagraph (B) and inserting "vehicle".

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 4011(c) of such Code is amended—

(A) by striking "vehicle, boat," in subparagraph (A) and inserting "vehicle";

(B) by striking "a boat or" in subparagraph (B)(i);

(C) by striking "section 4004(c)" in subparagraph (C)(iii) and inserting "section 4003(c)", and

(D) by striking "VEHICLES, BOATS," in the heading thereof and inserting "VEHICLES".

(3) Subsection (c) of section 4221 of such Code is amended by striking "4002(b), 4003(c), 4004(a)" and inserting "4002(c), 4003(a)".

(4) Subsection (d) of section 4222 of such Code is amended by striking "4002(b), 4003(c), 4004(a)" and inserting "4002(c), 4003(a)".

(5) The table of sections for subpart A of part I of subchapter A of chapter 31 of such Code is amended—

(A) by striking the item relating to section 4002, and

(B) by striking "4003" and "4004" and inserting "4002" and "4003", respectively.

(6) The heading for subpart A of part I of subchapter A of chapter 31 of such Code is amended by striking "Vehicles, Boats," and inserting "Vehicles".

(7) The table of subparts for part I of subchapter A of chapter 31 of such Code is amended by striking "vehicles, boats," in the item relating to subpart A and inserting "vehicles".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to sales after December 31, 1991. •

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my colleague from Louisiana, Senator BREAUX, in offering this legislation to repeal the luxury tax on recreational boats.

I am deeply concerned about the condition of the boat building and related industries in my State of Maine. Since enactment of the new luxury tax, I have heard from many representatives of and workers in the boating industry, both in my State and across the country, on the serious toll that this new tax is taking on their industry. The pleasure boat industry has experienced declining sales over the past 2 years due to the economic recession, and this new tax is sharply exacerbating the industry's decline.

A report prepared by the staff of the Joint Economic Committee confirms that the luxury boat tax will result in massive job losses nationwide in boat manufacturing and related industries. This report estimated that, even using conservative estimates, over 7,600 jobs will have been lost in 1991 directly because of the 10-percent excise tax on boats. Boat builders and employers in boat related industries in my State of Maine are already feeling the devastating effects of lost boat sales, in large part due to the new excise tax. The Hinckley Company in Southwest Harbor, ME, for example, has been forced to lay off at least 10 percent of its work force. As the second largest employer in Hancock County, reductions at Hinckley have taken a great toll on this part of my State.

This case is certainly not unique: every Maine boat builder has reported worker layoffs and significant slowdowns in production due to this tax. Customers are backing out of contracts once they realize that a tax is being applied to their boat purchases, thus affecting even those sales that were generated before the tax went into effect.

These job losses in my State are particularly difficult to bear since the workers who lose their job due to the slowdown often have no transferable skills and are unable to find other jobs in the State. The demise of the boating industry will quickly have a wide ripple effect on other parts of the Maine economy, from the State government which depends upon revenues from new and used boat sales, to the hotels, restaurants, marinas, and other Maine industries that rely on a thriving recreational boat industry for their survival.

The staff report of the Joint Economic Committee also provides important evidence to support a concern that boat builders, their workers, and I have shared for some time, namely, that the luxury tax will not yield the $3 million in revenues that were estimated to be gained by the tax when it was included in the Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990. In fact, this report estimated that the luxury tax on boats will actually cost the Government $18.2 million in lost income taxes, employer and employee FICA contributions, and unemployment outlays in fiscal year 1991. In other words, this tax will cost the Government over six times the amount of money that it was supposed to raise.

To me, this is convincing evidence that the luxury tax on boats is costing far more than it is worth, and should be repealed.

I would further point out that this tax is not meeting the other goal for which it was intended, that is, to impose a greater portion of the tax burden on high-income taxpayers. It is abundantly clear that this tax will not be borne solely by wealthy taxpayers. These people often have the financial means to pay the 10-percent tax, but choose to spend their money on some other item that is not taxed. Instead, the real burden of this tax falls on the hardworking men and women of the boating industry who are losing their jobs.

Mr. President, I recognize that some may misconstrue efforts to repeal this tax as an attempt to help rich taxpayers. Nothing could be further from the truth. Those that have been hurt by the tax are the working people in Maine and other boat-building States, not the rich. Furthermore, I should point out that I am not opposed to higher taxes on the wealthiest taxpayers if these taxes are part of a comprehensive deficit-reduction package that includes serious spending reform.

The many comments of concern that I have received from my constituents in these industries, the recent staff report of the Joint Economic Committee, and the compelling testimony of industry representatives at hearings before the Senate Finance Committee have more than convinced me that the luxury tax on boats must be repealed. I regret that we were unable to repeal this tax in the 102d Congress. I am confident, however, that we will be successful in this regard early in this Congress.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, once again I join my distinguished colleague from Louisiana in introducing legislation repealing the luxury tax on boats. Since its enactment as part of the budget agreement in 1990, Senator BREAUX and I, along with several others, have argued that this tax has done far more harm than good. Instead of helping to fill the Federal coffers with revenue, as was anticipated, it has forced many profitable boatbuilders out of business. That, in turn, has led to the loss of thousands of jobs in the industry.

The boatbuilding industry certainly was not the target when this tax was originally proposed. Instead, it was viewed as a clever way to get the wealthy to bear a greater share of the tax burden. What Senator BREAUX and I tried to explain at the time, and have continuously argued over the past 2 years, is that the luxury tax is the easiest of all taxes to avoid. By simply choosing not to buy a boat, the tax need not be paid.

That is exactly what has happened to the boatbuilding industry. Potential boat purchasers are avoiding the tax by either buying other luxury items which are not subject to the tax or they are taking their business overseas.

What was not recognized in 1990 was who would bear the brunt of the luxury tax. It has not been the wealthy who were so much of the focus during the debate over the 1990 budget agreement. Instead, workers in the boatbuilding industry paid the tax in the form of lost jobs. As boat sales plummeted, boatbuilding jobs were eliminated. Nineteen thousand jobs have been lost across this country as a result of the ill-conceived luxury tax. This is on top of the estimated 100,000 jobs lost as a result of the recession. Many of these jobs were in my home State of Rhode Island, where the boatbuilding industry once thrived.

For the boatbuilding industry to have any chance for survival, the luxury tax must be repealed within the next few months. The industry is heading into its prime buying season, but sales will not materialize as long as the tax continues. Rather than pay the Federal surcharge, buyers will continue to take their business elsewhere.

The legislation Senator BREAUX and I are introducing today makes repeal of the luxury tax effective January 1, 1992. As my colleagues are well aware, there is near unanimous agreement that this tax has been a failure. Three times last year the Senate expressed its desire to repeal the tax. Repeal was included in both tax bills passed by Congress last year, and on September 10 the Senate unanimously voted in support of Senate Resolution 339 expressing its desire to have the tax repealed effective January 1, 1992.

When the luxury tax was enacted, no one in Congress had as his or her objective the loss of jobs by American workers. Unfortunately, that is what has happened. It is time for Congress to correct this flagrant error. I urge my colleagues to support Senator BREAUX and me in repealing the luxury tax early this year, retroactive to January 1, 1992.*

* Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I am pleased to join Senator BREAUX in introducing legislation to repeal the luxury excise tax on boats over $100,000. This tax was enacted in 1990 with two objectives: to raise revenue and to tax the wealthy. The reality is that it has failed to accomplish either goal. Instead this tax, in tandem with the economie downturn, is simply crippling the boatbuilding industry in our country.

Rhode Island is one of our Nation's leading producers of recreational boats, with a proud heritage of the great names in American yachting history. That industry in Rhode Island has now been devastated by bankruptcy, plant closings, and layoffs.

The complaints about this tax are not coming from the wealthy yachtsman. The desperate cries for the repeal of the luxury tax are instead coming from those in the industry who face the challenge of selling motor and sailing yachts to the wealthy, the owners of boatyards and marinas, shipwrights, sailmakers, marine architects, skilled workers in wood and fiberglass, and engineers. The men and women who hold these jobs have produced some of the world's greatest and most admired sailing vessels, and now many are either jobless or fear they soon will be.

In truth, the luxury tax on boats is not taxing the wealthy who can easily avoid this tax. An affluent sailor can buy a yacht in another country and continue to pursue his recreation without paying the luxury tax. Or a well-off individual can simply decide to invest in a hobby that does not come with a hefty 10 percent tax.

Although there is consensus that the luxury tax should be repealed, it continues to remain in place. Both Republicans and Democrats agree that this tax is not working. Both the Senate and the House of Representatives have passed legislation to repeal it. Unfortunately, President Bush vetoed the bill which included repeal of the luxury tax for reasons unrelated to that tax. It is no wonder that the people of this Nation are frustrated with the way Washington works and have called for a change. One of the first changes I think we need to make is the repeal of the luxury tax on boats. It is not adding to our Nation's coffers. What it is adding to is the number of skilled American workers standing in the unemployment line. We must move quickly to sink this tax before it sinks us.*

By Mr. COCHRAN:

S. 70. A bill to reauthorize the National Writing Project, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

NATIONAL WRITING PROJECT

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce important legislation today to reauthorize the National Writing Project, the only Federal program to improve the teaching of writing in the Nation's classrooms.

The National Writing Project is a national network of university-based teacher training programs designed to improve the teaching of writing and student achievement in writing. Since its inception 20 years ago, the National Writing Project has distinguished itself by gradually building a broad network of teacher training workshops which successfully address the need for improved writing skills among elementary, secondary, and college-level students. The National Writing Project has become a national model for teacher training programs and has been emulated by training programs developed by other disciplines. It continues to receive national awards and live up to the National Endowment for the Humanities [NEH] assessment of it when the project was funded for an unprecedented 10th year. A spokesman from NEH said at that time,

I have no hesitation in saying that the National Writing Project has been by far the most effective and cost-effective project in the history of the Endowment's support for elementary and secondary education programs.

The National Writing Project began as the Bay Area Writing Project 1973 because students were required to do less writing in the classroom and were losing the skill:

An increasing number of American students were entering the Nation's universities unprepared to do the writing demanded of them;

The great majority of America's classroom teachers, elementary school through university, had not been trained to teach writing;

Little writing of any length or substance was being asked of American students, in the classroom or in homework; and

There were new developments in the teaching of writing but no systemic or effective way to inform teachers of these developments.

In short, attention to writing and the teaching of writing, though fundamental to student learning, was neglected in America's classrooms, and schools, and universities. In addition to problems in writing, little attention was being paid to professional development programs and the need for the continuing education of the classroom teacher. Unfortunately, this remains a problem today, but the National Writing Project has begun to make a difference.

Since 1973, the National Writing Project has grown into an international network of university school projects based upon the model of teachers teaching teachers to make writing and thinking an integral part of the learning process.

Federal support for the National Writing Project began in 1991, and has allowed the project to expand to reach more students and teachers. Modest Federal support has had remarkable results:

For every Federal dollar spent, the National Writing Project garnered five additional dollars from State, university, school district, and other local sources of support;

Last year 106,423 teachers participated in National Writing Project summer and school year programs. This brings the total number of teachers who have participated in the National Writing Project to nearly 1 million;

In the past year 7,506,500 students, or 19 percent of the Nation's K-12 public school students, benefited from Federal funding at a cost of 26 cents per student;

Through Federal matching dollars, 11 new sites were added to the National Writing Project and 2 sites were restored to activity, bringing the total number of sites to 150 in 47 States;

Local National Writing Project sites in 16 States, Alabama, Alaska, California, Connecticut, Hawaii, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Nevada, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Utah, Virginia, Washington, and West Virginia, now receive State matching funds.

In Mississippi, National Writing Project sites have contributed to a remarkable improvement in the quality of teaching and student achievement. Program participants include not only English teachers, but math, reading, science, and elementary school teachers. The result has been a rekindling of teachers' enthusiasm, confidence, and morale while student test scores are rising.

Many teachers totally transform the way they teach after participating in a Writing Project Program. I would like to cite the experience of a Mississippi high school English teacher who attended a Writing Project summer institute. She said:

One of the things I learned in the writing project was that writing can be used to help students learn and think. I began to ask my students to keep logs while they read the stories and books we were studying together. I asked them to write about what they made of the literature, what they understood about it from their own experience, what they thought of the characters and the ways they solve their problems. Would the students solve these problems in the same way? For the first time, my students came to class eager to talk about what they read and eager to read on. They were able to analyze and evaluate and understand in a rich, personally meaningful manner.

Continued Federal support for the National Writing Project will carry forward the work begun to improve the teaching of writing at all levels of instruction and emphasize student writing as a way to improve learning in all disciplines in classrooms nationwide.

Continued Federal support will improve staff development programs for teachers and provide a model for the continuing education of our national teachers corps.

It will support the development of the National Writing Project into a network of 250 sites that will serve teachers and students in all States and regions of the country.

The matching funds requirement will stimulate and generate local and State support for the national effort to improve writing in America's schools.

It will support needed programs in writing and literacy for America's disadvantaged students.

It will provide grants to teachers to promote improvement in classroom instruction, teacher research projects, the publication of exemplary student writing, and other programs not currently possible in most schools.

It will create an informed corps of teacher-scholars in the elementary and secondary schools to help all teachers use writing more effectively in the classroom.

And most important, it will continue to improve the performance of all of America's students in the key basic skills of writing, reading, thinking, and learning.

When this bill was first introduced in 1990, it was cosponsored by 40 Senators from both sides of the aisle. I hope it will receive support equal to or greater in the 103d Congress. In the Senate, we rarely use Federal dollars so effectively. I urge other Senators to join me in sponsoring this legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that an article which recently appeared in the Wall Street Journal highlighting the National Writing Project be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

READING, 'RITING AND MORE 'RITING: AFTER YEARS OF NEGLECT, SCHOOLS ARE PUTTING MORE EMPHASIS ON THE WRITTEN WORD

(By Gary Putka)

Amid overflowing bookshelves in a Texas classroom, Tricia Shaughnessy's second-graders are giving proof of their studies on Christopher Columbus. But there isn't a test in sight.

Sitting on the floor, discussing dialogue and narration, the students collectively, and noisily, write a biographical play. Names and dates spew forth—Isabella, 1492, the West Indies—but also a discourse. Coral is defined; "drop ankle" is giddily corrected to "drop anchor" in the script. But what to call the people on the beach?

"Native Americans!" several students shout. Ms. Shaughnessy finds a raised hand. "Bobby?"

"I think we should call them Indians because Columbus was trying to find the Indies and he called them Indians."

A vote is taken. Bobby's view prevails, but not without an argument. Another line is added to a fast-lengthening script.

WRITING REVIVED

This pint-sized playwrights' exercise, conducted at Nathaniel Hawthorne Elementary School in San Antonio this past school year, is part of a renaissance in the uses of writing in U.S. schools. Urged on by teachers employing a variety of new instructional approaches, students are writing more in and out of school, behaving somewhat contrary to conventional wisdom about literacy and the images of an electronic age.

Students are increasing their in-school output of essays, stories, poems and letters, and are doing even more writing at home, according to a survey released by the federally funded National Assessment of Education Progress, or NAEP, last November. In the 1990 survey, 47% of eighth-graders reported that they write letters to friends or relatives at least once a week, a huge gain from the 37% who reported similar activity in 1984.

The writing boom has been fed by a coterie of educators ever since researchers began bemoaning the paucity of time spent in composition in the 1970s. Many of these advocates now argue that more writing also leads to better reading comprehension and to better understanding of other subjects, including mathematics and science.

"Writing simply makes people smarter," says Nancie Atwell, author of a popular writing-instruction textbook and operator of a private school in Boothbay Harbor, Maine. "It allows kids to think, things they never would have thought otherwise. If we want them to learn content, if we want them to think big thoughts—there's simply no better vehicle."

THE VIRTUES OF WRITING

Convinced that the creation of written words compels a depth of reflection and understanding unattainable through other exercises, teachers like Ms. Shaughnessy are throwing out work sheets, casting aside textbooks, cutting back on formalized phonics and grammar instruction, and demanding more extended writing.

"Writing is a higher level of learning," says Wendy Howk, another San Antonio teacher, who keeps her first-graders writing 40% of the time. "Seeing the kids writing, I'm sometimes floored by what they can do."

Disciples of the popular "whole language" method of reading instruction urge students to write from a tender age, even if they have to invent spelling, and to keep a journal—fast becoming as ubiquitous as the lunch box in the primary grades. Other elements of the whole-language approach include teaching whole words instead of phonic sounds, and assigning whole stories for reading instead of the abridged textbook version.

Curricular standards developed by the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics urge more writing as a key to greater student numeracy. Collecting and judging writing portfolios, meanwhile, is the hottest thing in the field of educational assessment. Even the College Board, which administers the Scholastic Aptitude Test, is adding a full-scale writing test as an optional supplement to the multiple-choice SAT in 1994.

DOES MORE MEAN BETTER?

But all this activity has raised some troubling issues. Many parents remain unconvinced that the best way to introduce students to the written language is to teach them to invent spelling. Some reading experts charge that whole language is not improving reading comprehension and may even be hampering it for some students who need more phonics. Indeed, NAEP reading scores during the 1980s were flat. And although students may be writing more, there is little empirical evidence on a national scale that they are writing better.

Between 1984 and 1990, the NAEP showed that eighth-grade students had slipped in writing proficiency and that students in grades four and 11 had made no progress. The 11th-graders, with an average score of 212 on a 400-point scale, barely exceeded the level that the NAEP defines as "minimal" and were far from the 300 score needed to be considered "adequate."

Students typically get 15 minutes for their NAEP essays. Eager to size up writing produced when students had more time, the NAEP followed up by asking English teachers of fourth- and eighth-graders who took the 1990 test for a sample of the students' best school writing. Marks improved slightly, but they were still dismal.

Although it was supposed to be students' best work, none of the 2,200 writing samples rated a top score of six on a scoring scale of one to six. The stories were short (a 140-word average for eighth-graders), replete with grammar and spelling errors, and undeveloped. Judges found that only about a quarter of eighth-graders' narrative work contained more than one anecdotal episode, a clear sequence of events, and detailed description of setting and characters.

Claudia Gentile, an Educational Testing Service analyst who wrote the NAEP portfolio report, says the NAEP results make her dubious about the benefits of changed writing instruction. "If students are indeed doing more writing than they were 20 years ago, why hasn't the writing improved?" she asks. Some educators involved in the national assessments say teachers have been so eager to get reluctant students to write that they are accepting bad work.

LESS HARD WORK?

According to a commentary on the NAEP findings by Mark Musick, president of the state-funded Southern Regional Education Board in Atlanta, "teacher grading [has] changed—with more interest in the way feelings are expressed and less attention to marking mistakes. Students now write more stories, but no more reports or analytic essays. Overall . . . there appears to be less demand for hard work."

Some writing advocates, however, insist that there is more good writing in the schools. They say that the NAEP's scoring system is flawed and isn't capturing the gains in initiative, creativity and understanding of other subject areas that students are receiving from writing more.

Worried about the high numbers of freshmen being placed in remedial writing courses in 1973, the University of California at Berkeley helped fund a program that instructed schoolteachers in the Bay Area on how to teach writing. The program, which has evolved into the National Writing Project, now has federal financing, 160 local outposts, and a booming roster of classes. Last year, it reached 114,000 teachers, double the number of five years ago.

THE PROCESS APPROACH

James Gray, director of the project, says the NAEP is inadequate to capture what he calls the "high quality of writing now being produced by students in our nation's classrooms." According to Mr. Gray, several research studies—but nothing on a national level—have shown benefits to students of teachers who have gone through Writing Project classes. The Writing Project uses the so-called process approach to writing, which employs different methods from those of the whole-language advocates. The process approach stresses repeated efforts to get it right—drafts, revisions and redrafts of the same piece. In one 1983 study, conducted in the Ferguson Florissant School District in Missouri, junior-high-school students with Writing Project teachers scored 30% higher on writing tests than those without such teachers.

Ronald Adams, a seventh-grade teacher, says that Writing Project methods have transformed his classes at Broad Meadows Middle School in Quincy, Mass. Students are writing much more, taking more initiative, showing more imagination, and doing more in-depth research in history and social studies, he says.

LEARNING FIVE STEPS

Under the process method, students follow a strictly prescribed five-step format—brainstorming, first draft, conferences with peers or teacher, editing, and final draft. But they are typically allowed more freedom to choose their own topics, and are urged to start by writing from experience.

Because the process is "student-directed instead of teacher-directed," Mr. Adams says, his students are more enthusiastic. He adds that before he learned how to use process approaches at a Boston Writing Project workshop in 1985, he was lucky to get three pieces of writing from his students during a 10-week term. Now they write 30. And because the entire Quincy system has accepted this approach, Mr. Adams says, his students come to him more capable.

The gains go well beyond writing, Mr. Adams believes. Students are required to write him letters assessing their progress in mathematics, leading to much faster overcoming of learning roadblocks.

One of the great dividends has come in the area of citizenship. Mr. Adams teaches his students that "letter writing is the underutilized cornerstone of democracy." When they come to him with problems, he urges them to write letters—sometimes to great effect.

WINNIE THE WELDERS

Assigned to write about local history last year, one student chose the women who worked in Quincy's shipyards during World War II. When the student discovered that the subject had been ignored in the local library, she wrote to city hall, and Mr. Adams's class turned up the gas. They interviewed 40 of the surviving women, made a videotape, and inspired Quincy to stage a "Winnie the Welders" day in their honor.

Students rode on the bus with the former workers and a local TV crew, and were assigned to recount the experience in writing. "The women welders were so proud you could see it in their eyes," wrote Sandy Buonopone, one of the seventh graders. "The end of the ceremony came. The women were all happy. It was a special moment for all of them. Then they started singing 'America the Beautiful' and started laughing and hugging." There were, Sandy surmised, "a lot of proud and probably everlasting memories."

[In a given week, this percentage of students wrote at least one paper for English class]

By Mr. METZENBAUM (for himself, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. KERRY, Mr. CAMPBELL, and Mr. WELLSTONE):

S. 71. A bill to prohibit discrimination by the Armed Forces on the basis of sexual orientation; to the Committee on Armed Services.

PROHIBITING DISCRIMINATION BY ARMED FORCES

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, on behalf of myself, and Senators MURRAY, KERRY of Massachusetts, CAMPBELL, and WELLSTONE, I am today introducing legislation to overturn the Pentagon's ban on homosexuals serving in the military.

This bill is identical to the legislation I introduced on the subject last year, and it is the same as the bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Congresswoman SCHROEDER a few weeks ago.

The time has come to overturn one of the last bastions of government-sponsored discrimination in this country.

The Pentagon's prohibition of gay men and lesbians serving in the military is completely outdated. It is senseless and it is cruel.

It is a policy based on fear and ignorance.

It is discrimination against a distinct group of individuals who repeatedly and throughout history have shown that they are every bit as capable, hardworking, brave, and patriotic as their heterosexual counterparts.

It is a fact that the job performance of homosexuals in the military has been superb.

I know that to be true because every time a gay man or lesbian is discharged from the service for reason of being a homosexual, his or her service record becomes part of the official investigative process.

In nearly every instance, the job performance of these individuals is above average.

Mr. President, I am delighted that our new President—Bill Clinton—is committed to overturning the ban on homosexuals serving in the military.

He promised to do it during his campaign, and he has never wavered from that commitment. He knows it is the right thing to do.

Despite the President's strong commitment, however, I believe it is important that this legislation be reintroduced in the Senate.

It is important that our military leaders—who are engaged in a full-court press to change President Clinton's mind on this—understand that there is broad national support for what the President wants to do.

Eight in 10 Americans believe gays should have the right to serve in the military.

Most Americans believe homosexuals should receive due process under the law and basic civil rights protection. Most Americans are concerned about arbitrary restrictions against homosexuals in employment, housing, and other walks of life. Most Americans care about fair play.

Mr. President, the Pentagon rationale for the ban is that homosexuality is a threat to morale and discipline.

The directive states that homosexuality is "incompatible with military service." And that homosexuals "seriously impair the accomplishment of the military mission."

But the Pentagon admits there is no empirical evidence to back this up.

The General Accounting Office stated that the policy is "not based on scientific or empirical data," and further stated the existing scientific studies disagree that homosexuality is in any way incompatible with military service.

There is another part of the Pentagon's rationale—as it seems to be continually evolving—that disturbs me greatly.

Military leaders are now talking publicly about the likelihood of increased acts of violence against homosexuals that choose to come out if the ban is lifted—as if the military were powerless to discipline and educate its own troops.

Instead of wringing their hands about this, the Joint Chiefs should be stating publicly and clearly for everyone to hear that the military will not tolerate violence in the ranks directed against any distinct group, including homosexuals.

If Tailhook taught the military a lesson, it was that commanders can no longer look the other way—as leaders, they are responsible for communicating the essential truth to the troops. In the case of Tailhook, the truth was that it is wrong for servicemen to sexually harass their female colleagues-in-arms.

With respect to homosexuals, the truth is: They are as good soldiers as anyone else.

Let us not forget that between 5 and 10 percent of the men and women that serve in the military right now are homosexual. I am not aware of a morale problem as a result of it.

Nothing is better for moral than a military that knows how to get the job done. What is important when the bullets are flying is whether the soldier or sailor or officer is brave, smart, and well trained. Heroes come from every race, gender, and sexual orientation.

I commend President Clinton for wanting to do the right thing.

It is time to put an end once and for all to the discrimination against gay men and lesbians in the military.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 71

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. PROHIBITION ON DISCRIMINATION IN THE MILITARY ON THE BASIS OF SEXUAL ORIENTATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—No member of the Armed Forces, or person seeking to become a member of the Armed Forces, may be discriminated against by the Armed Forces on the basis of sexual orientation.

(b) PRESERVATION OF RULES AND POLICIES REGARDING SEXUAL MISCONDUCT.—Nothing in subsection (a) may be construed as requiring the Armed Forces to modify any rule or policy regarding sexual misconduct or otherwise to sanction or condone sexual misconduct, but such rules and policies may not be applied in a manner that discriminates on the basis of sexual orientation.

By Mr. MOYNIHAN (for himself and Mr. SIMON):

S. 72. A bill to amend section 481(c) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE ACT AMENDMENTS

• Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise today to reintroduce legislation which seeks to address a most serious problem in the foreign relations of the United States: an international perception that the United States is a lawless state which supports the practice of kidnapping. I would hope, in particular, that this legislation would help to repair the rift over this issue between the United States and our neighbors, Mexico and Canada.

Mr. President, I know that my colleagues are well aware of the decision by the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency to arrange for the kidnapping of a Mexican citizen to stand trial in the United States for allegedly participating in the torture and murder of a DEA agent. The United States did not even attempt to use the extradition treaty in effect between the United States and Mexico to obtain the trial of this person. Nonetheless, when the kidnapping was challenged by both Mexico and Canada as a violation of the United States-Mexico extradition treaty, the United Nations Charter, the charter of the Organization of American States and customary international law, the prior administration—indeed the Attorney General—choose to defend the kidnapping. The judge overseeing the trial of this Mexican citizen has acquitted him of all charges. He has been released and returned to Mexico.

The Supreme Court found that this kidnapping did not violate the literal terms of the United States-Mexico extradition treaty. I have already discussed this decision—which was denounced in a stinging dissent written by Justice Stevens as "monstrous"—at some length on the Senate floor and will not repeat my comments now.

I wish to bring to my colleagues' attention some of the international reaction to this decision, particularly in Canada. Mr. President, the United States has a 3,000-mile-long border with Canada. Our relations with our neighbor to the north area absolutely extraordinary in their degree of comity and cooperation. There is not a longer undefended international border in the world. It is imperative, Mr. President, to appreciate the significance of that fact. The United States simply cannot prevent persons from fleeing the United States into Canada. We perforce must rely upon the good offices and friendship of the Government of Canada in arresting and returning criminals to the United States. It will, therefore, come as no surprise that approximately 50 percent of all United States requests for extradition are directed to Canada. There were 74 such requests in 1991 alone.

Mr. President, it is not surprising that the Government of Mexico would strongly disagree with the Supreme Court's decision. It denounced the decision as "invalid and unacceptable", demanded immediate renegotiation of the extradition treaty and temporarily suspended cooperation on antidrug efforts. In response, the State Department issued a demonstrably false statement that: "[We] have the utmost respect for Mexican sovereignty. * * * I have been critical of the Mexican judiciary, but others accused in this heinous murder have been successfully prosecuted there and long prison terms meted out. Yet, the United States did not even attempt to use the extradition treaty in this case."

Outrage from Mexico might, therefore, be expected. What is not fully appreciated, however, is the uproar that this decision has caused in Canada and other nations of the world. Justice Stevens wrote: "I suspect most courts throughout the civilized world * * * will be deeply disturbed by the 'monstrous' decision the Court announces today." He has been proven correct. Canadian parliamentarians have denounced the decision, arguing that it "makes a mockery of extradition treaties which have been signed by the U.S." The Department of State has been candid about the enormous outrage that this abduction and Supreme Court decision have caused in Canada and elsewhere. Deputy Legal Advisor Alan Kreczko testified on July 24 before the Civil and Constitutional Rights Subcommittee of the House Committee on the Judiciary that:

Many governments have expressed outrage that the United States believes it has the right to decide unilaterally to enter their territory and abduct one of their nationals. Governments have informed us that they would regard such action as a breach of international law. They have also informed us that they would protect their nationals from such action, that such action would violate their domestic law, that they would vigorously prosecute such violations.

Significantly, Mr. Kreczko reported that: "[s]ome have indicated that the decision could affect their parliaments' review of pending law enforcement agreements with the United States."

This testimony strongly supports the wise testimony of Michael Abell, a Justice Department official in the Carter and Reagan administrations and an expert on extradition law, who testified at the same hearing that: "[n]ot only is the position of the administration and of the Supreme Court legally and morally wrong, but, ironically it is also antithetical to the long-term law enforcement interests of the United States." That statement bears repeating: "ironically it is * * * antithetical to the long-term law enforcement interests of the United States." Mr. President, it cannot be emphasized too strongly that the decision to embrace kidnapping is harmful to law enforcement, not helpful. It will not assist the United States in combating crime. On the contrary, it will diminish the very international cooperation against crime which is essential to success against drug traffickers and other criminals.

The United States has now unequivocally pledged in a letter from President Bush to President Salinas that the United States will "neither conduct, encourage nor condone" abductions from Mexico. Thus, we will not use this tool in Mexico again. In the meantime, however, we have jeopardized cooperation on extradition matters with nations around the world.

Mr. President, the legislation I offer today will provide governments around the world which wish to cooperate with the United States the assurance that the United States will not take unilateral actions which violate our solemn treaty commitments and customary international law. It reserves to the United States the right to act where there is no effective sovereignty over a particular region and reserves the right to act against a state with which we are at war. It does no more than enact President Bush's pledge to Mexico and merely extends the substance of the Mansfield amendment—a provision which has been a part of United States law for 16 years—outside the narcotics control area. It leaves the United States with many tools against terrorists and other criminals, such as those steps we are now taking at the United Nations to obtain the criminals who are alleged to have bombed Pan Am flight 103.

Finally, I would note with great satisfaction that at his confirmation hearing, our distinguished Secretary of State Warren Christopher, an outstanding lawyer, described the kidnapping and the Supreme Court decision as bad policy and bad law respectively.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of this legislation, which I send to the desk, be printed in the RECORD at this point, and I yield the floor.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 72

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(a) In 1976 the Congress adopted the International Security Assistance and Arms Export Control Act which amended Section 481(c) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 to prohibit U.S. officials from participating in any direct arrest in a foreign country with respect to narcotics control efforts;

(b) In adopting this provision, known as the Mansfield Amendment, the Committee on Foreign Affairs stated that its purpose was "to insure that U.S. personnel [in foreign states] do not * * * adversely affect U.S. relations with that country";

(c) Close cooperation between the United States and other nations, including the extradition of criminals to the United States, is essential to combat international crime;

(d) The abduction of a Mexican citizen by persons acting at the direction of the United States Drug Enforcement Agency and the decision of the United States Supreme Court holding that this abduction did not violate an existing extradition treaty between the United States and Mexico cast doubt on the meaning of this and other extradition treaties ratified by the United States and threaten to disrupt cooperation between the United States and Mexico, Canada and the 101 other nations with which the United States has extradition treaties;

(e) The Government of Mexico vigorously protested the abduction and the Supreme Court's decision, threatened to suspend cooperation with the United States on drug enforcement matters and announced that it will no longer accept United States foreign assistance intended to prevent drugs from entering the United States;

(f) The Department of External Affairs of the Government of Canada, which receives approximately 50% of all United States extradition requests, vigorously protested the abduction and the Supreme Court's decision;

(g) In the past, persons have been abducted from the United States to stand trial abroad and the United States vigorously protested such actions; and

(h) This abduction and subsequent Supreme Court decision have placed American citizens at risk by creating a precedent for the kidnapping of Americans.

SEC. 2. AMENDMENT TO SECTION 481(C) OF THE FOREIGN ASSISTANCE ACT.

Section 481(c)(1) of the Foreign Assistance Act is amended to read as follows: "(1) Prohibition on direct arrest and abduction—(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no officer, agent or employee of the United States may directly effect an arrest in any foreign country as part of any foreign police action; and (b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no officer, agent or employee of the United States government may, directly or indirectly, authorize, carry out or assist in the abduction of any person within the territory of any foreign state exercising effective sovereignty over such territory without the express consent of such state."

SEC. 3. VIOLATIONS OF THE LAWS OF WAR.

Section 481(c) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new provision: "(7) This subsection does not prohibit the capture of any official, agent or employee of a state during armed hostilities for purpose of bringing such person to trial for violations of the internationally recognized laws of war."

SEC. 4. SANCTION FOR VIOLATION.

Section 481(c) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new provision: "(8) A person brought to the United States in violation of subsection (1)(b) hereof shall not be prosecuted by the United States government if the state in which such abduction occurred objects and in the event of such an objection such person shall be promptly returned to the state in which the abduction occurred." ●

By Mr. METZENBAUM (for himself and Mr. LAUTENBERG):

S. 73. A bill to provide for the rehiring by the Federal Aviation Administration of certain former air traffic controllers; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

FAIR TREATMENT OF FORMER AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLERS ACT

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I rise to introduce legislation which I believe rights an egregious wrong perpetrated against thousands of Government air traffic controllers who were fired by President Reagan back in 1981. The bill I am offering today would enable these men and women to get their FAA jobs back provided they are qualified. This is the fair and decent thing to do.

It was August 3, 1981, when 11,400 members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization [PATCO] walked off their jobs as part of a nationwide strike for better working conditions, modernized equipment and better pay. President Reagan fired these workers shortly thereafter arguing that they violated a "no strike" oath required by Federal law. Although they were subsequently allowed to apply for other Federal jobs, they have never been allowed to return to work as air traffic controllers.

It has been 12 long years since these men and women were allowed to work in their chosen field of employment. Criminals who commit heinous crimes receive shorter sentences.

Let's put an end to this punishment. The bill I am introducing today would reverse the Reagan directive to the Office of Personnel Management [OPM] deeming the air traffic controllers who were terminated due to the 1981 strike unsuitable for employment with the Federal Aviation Administration. As a group, these controllers will no longer be considered unsuitable and OPM shall decide on appointment or reinstatement on a case by case basis. The bill also waives age limitations which might otherwise apply to these determinations.

Mr. President, a lifting of the ban on rehiring has the support of the new air traffic controllers union as well as the Airline Pilots Association.

A Cleveland Plain Dealer article from December 29, 1992, suggests that as many as 5,000 of these fired air traffic controllers may be interested in returning to their jobs. The article goes on to state that many of these individuals are pinning their hopes on President Clinton to lift the ban on rehiring.

While this may seem to be a minor matter, it is no small matter to the thousands of air traffic controllers who have been barred from returning to their jobs. I urge the new President to give his utmost consideration to lifting the ban either by Executive order or through the legislative process. I stand willing to help.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of my legislation be printed in the RECORD upon the conclusion of my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 73

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Fair Treatment of Former Air Traffic Controllers Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. SUITABILITY OF AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLERS WHO PARTICIPATED IN THE 1981 STRIKE.

(a) AUTHORITY TO APPOINT OR REINSTATE CERTAIN FORMER AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Air traffic controllers whose appointment was terminated due to the strike of air traffic controllers which began on or about August 3, 1981, shall not, as a class, be considered unsuitable for appointment or reinstatement in the Federal Aviation Administration.

(2) DETERMINATIONS OF SUITABILITY.—Determinations of suitability for appointment or reinstatement to any position referred to paragraph (1) shall be made on a case-by-case basis by the Office of Personnel Management in accordance with part 731 of title 5 of the Code of Federal Regulations (as in effect on June 1, 1986).

(b) LIMITATION ON CLAIMS AGAINST UNITED STATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), no claim may lie against the Government of the United States, or any officer, employee, of agency thereof, based on a failure to appoint or reinstate a particular individual as a result of the enactment of this Act.

(2) CLAIMS BASED ON DISCRIMINATION.—Nothing in this subsection shall preclude a claim based on discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.

(c) NONAPPLICABILITY OF AGE LIMITATION.—Nothing in section 3307(b) of title 5, United States Code, or in any rule or regulation prescribed thereunder, shall apply with respect to appointment made as a result of the enactment of this Act.

(d) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of Transportation may prescribe regulations to carry out this section (excluding the second sentence of subsection (a)).

(e) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, the term "air traffic controller" has the same meaning as in section 2109 of title 5, United States Code.

By Mr. METZENBAUM:

S. 74. A bill to amend the Endangered Species Act of 1973 to clarify citizen suit provisions, and for other purposes, to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

ENDANGERED SPECIES ACT AMENDMENTS

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I rise to reintroduce legislation which reverses a Supreme Court decision handed down last summer which makes it harder to sue to enforce environmental laws. This measure is identical to a bill I introduced on the matter during the last session of Congress.

When Congress passed the Endangered Species Act, it authorized private citizens to file lawsuits in instances when the Government failed to comply with the act's requirements. The rationale for this provision was simple: Every citizen has an interest in ensuring compliance with laws aimed at protecting the environment. When the Government violates those laws, the public should be allowed to take action to ensure compliance with the law.

Last summer, the Supreme Court handed down a decision which said, in effect, that private citizens could not challenge the Bush administration's policy of funding Government projects abroad that threatened endangered species and their habitats.

In the Lujan versus Defenders of Wildlife case, several environmental groups were trying to challenge the Bush administration's failure to apply provisions of the Endangered Species Act to United States-funded development projects in Egypt and Sri Lanka. The Supreme Court refused to hear the case. The Court ruled that the environmental groups lacked standing to sue.

Congress specifically enacted a provision in the Endangered Species Act designed to give citizens the right to sue to enforce other provisions of the act. The Supreme Court ignored that directive.

Mr. President, the Supreme Court's decision is judicial activism in its most pernicious form. It threatens to undermine the opportunity of those concerned about the environment to have their day in court.

It's no wonder that Justice Harry A. Blackmun, in a dissenting opinion, called the decision a slash-and-burn expedition to keep environmental plaintiffs out of court.

Congress simply cannot stand by and allow the Supreme Court to trample citizens' rights to protect it.

In Lujan versus Defenders of Wildlife, the Supreme Court said the individuals bringing suit against the Government did not meet the Court's narrow interpretation of standing. My bill would amend the Endangered Species Act's citizen suit provisions to ensure standing in this case. And it would also spell out that the Endangered Species Act applied to Government-backed projects overseas.

The legislation has the support of environmental and conservation groups, including the Defenders of Wildlife, the Environmental Defense Fund, the Sierra Club, the Natural Resources Defense Council, the Humane Society, the National Wildlife Federation, National Audubon, the Wilderness Society, the World Wildlife Fund, Greenpeace, the Center for Marine Conservation and the Performing Animal Welfare Society.

Mr. President, I hope that the new Clinton administration will give favorable consideration to applying the provisions of the Endangered Species Act to federally funded projects overseas.

In addition, I believe the Clinton administration should also work with Congress to reverse the limitations on citizens' rights to sue imposed by the Supreme Court decisions in Lujan.

I wish to underscore that my legislation might not be the best way to reverse the Supreme Court decision. A better solution may be borne out of testimony at an appropriate congressional hearing. Whatever the case, I will do my best to see that citizens are not stripped of their rights to challenge the Government on environmental matters.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD in its entirety at the conclusion of my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 74

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Endangered Species Act Amendments of 1993".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Section 2 of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531) is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (4);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end of the following new paragraphs:

"(6) an action by the Federal Government, the government of a State or political subdivision of a State, or a private party that adversely affects an endangered or threatened species or the habitat of an endangered or threatened species injures each person with a demonstrated, aesthetic, ecological, educational, historical, professional, recreational, or scientific interest in the endangered or threatened species or the habitat of the endangered or threatened species; and

"(7) compliance with this Act (including the regulations promulgated under this Act) will deter or prevent any action by the Federal Government, the government of a State or political subdivision of a State, or a private party that may adversely affect an endangered or threatened species or result in the destruction or adverse modification of the habitat of the species."

SEC. 3. INTERAGENCY COOPERATION.

Section 7(a) of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1536(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) The provisions of this section shall apply to any agency action with respect to any species listed under this Act as an endangered or threatened species carried out, in whole or in part, in the United States, in a foreign country, or on the high seas."

SEC. 4. CITIZENS SUITS.

Section 11(g) of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1540(g)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (1) through (5) as paragraphs (2) through (6);

(2) by inserting after "(g) CITIZEN SUITS,—" the following new paragraph:

"(1)(A) A person who has by studying, visiting, or other means demonstrated an aesthetic, ecological, educational, historical, professional, recreational, or scientific interest in an endangered or threatened species shall be deemed to suffer a direct and particularized injury in any instance in which any person, including the United States and any other governmental instrumentality or agency, takes action that may harm or adversely affect any threatened or endangered species, or result in the destruction or adverse modification of the critical habitat of the species. A reasonable likelihood of action or a proposal to act shall be considered a sufficient threat to constitute an injury under this paragraph.

"(B) Each person described in subparagraph (A) who suffers an injury described in subparagraph (A) (or who has a reasonable expectation of an injury) may commence a civil suit pursuant to paragraph (2) to prevent and redress any injury to an endangered or threatened species and to otherwise compel the implementation of any provisions of this Act (including any regulation promulgated under this Act).";

(3) in paragraph (2), as redesignated by paragraph (1) of this section, in the matter preceding subparagraph (A), by striking "Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection any person may" and inserting "Except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection, any person described in paragraph (1), or who is otherwise injured, may";

(4) in paragraph (3), as redesignated by paragraph (1) of this section—

(A) in subparagraph (A), by striking "subparagraph (1)(A)" and inserting "paragraph (2)(A)";

(B) in subparagraph (B), by striking "subparagraph (1)(B)" and inserting "paragraph (2)(B)"; and

(C) in subparagraph (C), by striking "subparagraph (1)(C)" and inserting "paragraph (2)(C)"; and

(5) in paragraph (5), as redesignated by paragraph (1) of this section, by striking "paragraph (1)" and inserting "paragraph (2)".

By Mr. METZENBAUM (for himself, Mr. GLENN, and Mr. LEVIN):
S. 75. A bill to amend the River and Harbor Act of 1970 to improve Great Lakes Water Pollution Control, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

GREAT LAKES SEDIMENT CONTROL ACT

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I rise to introduce the Great Lakes Sediment Control Act of 1993. The bill I am introducing today is similar to legislation I worked on last year. Its purpose is to better manage the sediment which is currently clogging the Great Lakes. Senators GLENN and LEVIN join me in cosponsoring this important legislation.

This bill complements the sediment management language approved last year as part of the Water Resources Development Act. That language improved the way contaminated dredged spoils will be disposed of along the marine and gulf coasts, but it did not cover the Great Lakes. My bill fills in this gap and helps attack some of the sediment problems in the Great Lakes.

Mr. President, the Great Lakes deserve the attention. They are an unparalleled recreational and fishing resource and the source of drinking water for millions of Americans. Yet many of the lakes' shorelines and even the open waters have contaminated sediments present.

Industrial and sewage discharges, pesticide-laden runoff from farms, and even the grease and oil washing off our city streets have badly polluted the mud lining the Great Lakes. As a result, fish consumption bans, restricted swimming, and reduced and degraded fish and wildlife habitat are not uncommon.

The threat to human health is very real. Polluted sediments are poisoning the foodchain, accumulating first in fish and winding up on the dinner table. A National Research Council report cited neuromuscular impairment, small birth weight, and smaller head size in infants born to mothers who ate toxic-laden Lake Michigan fish only twice a month.

And contaminated sediments threaten commerce as well. Navigational dredging efforts—which are critical to shipping—can be postponed, curtailed, or prevented because of concerns about resuspending contaminated sediments in the water.

Part of the problem is that disposal of dredged sediments has not always been handled in an environmentally sound manner. And not enough attention has been paid to reducing sediment loadings into the lakes in the first place. My legislation will change that.

First, the open lake dumping of contaminated sediments would be halted once and for all. Contaminated sediments dredged from harbors and channels would be disposed of in confined disposal facilities which themselves would be more tightly regulated to ensure that such facilities do not leak or cause environmental degradation. Second, EPA, in consultation with the corps, would develop environmentally sensitive guidelines for open lake disposal of clean sediments. Once these guidelines were developed, no open lake disposal of clean sediments could occur unless such guidelines were met.

The final piece of my legislation addresses the issue of reducing the loading of sediments into the lakes in the first place. It would measure sediment coming from the rivers and river systems into the lakes. And it would create a grants program run by the Corps of Engineers to minimize sedimentation. This sediment reduction language was worked out with my friend and colleague, Senator GLENN, who introduced a separate bill on the matter during the last session of Congress.

I look forward to working with my colleagues on the Senate Environment Committee to move this measure out of committee and to bring it to the floor for a prompt vote.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 75

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Great Lakes Sediment Control Act of 1993".

SECTION 2. SEDIMENT MANAGEMENT.

(a) AMENDMENT TO HEADING.—The heading of section 123 of the River and Harbor Act of 1970 (33 U.S.C. 1293a) is amended to read as follows:

"CONFINED SPOIL DISPOSAL FACILITIES".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 123 of the River and Harbor Act of 1970 (33 U.S.C. 1293a) is amended by striking "contained spoil disposal facilities" each place it appears and inserting "confined spoil disposal facilities".

(c) REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO CONSTRUCTION, OPERATION, AND MAINTENANCE.—Section 123(a) of the River and Harbor Act of 1970 (33 U.S.C. 1293a(a)) is amended—

(1) by striking "(a)" and inserting "(a) PUBLIC INFORMATION.—(1)";

(2) by striking "of section 21 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, and"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(2) After December 31, 1994, it shall be unlawful to dump or otherwise dispose of dredge spoil at any location in the waters of the Great Lakes other than at a confined spoil disposal facility unless—

"(A)(i) the Administrator has concurred in writing with the decision of the Secretary of the Army to allow the disposal (either with or without conditions), if the concurrence is based on a determination that the proposed disposal is consistent with the guidelines developed pursuant to paragraph (3); or

"(ii) a 45-day period (or a 90-day period in a case in which the Administrator has requested an extension from the Secretary of the Army in writing) beginning on the date on which the Administrator receives from the Secretary all material necessary to evaluate the proposed disposal has expired and the Administrator has not—

"(I) concurred with (either with or without conditions) the Secretary; or

"(II) declined concurrence with the decision of the Secretary; and

"(B) the Secretary of the Army has found that the disposal is consistent with the guidelines developed pursuant to paragraph (3).

"(3)(A) Not later than December 31, 1994, the Administrator shall, in consultation with the Secretary and the Director of the Fish and Wildlife Service, develop specific guidelines for the disposal of sediment material in the open waters of the Great Lakes. In developing the guidelines, the Administrator shall provide notice and opportunity for public comment. At a minimum, the guidelines shall ensure that the disposal will—

"(i) not degrade the aquatic environment, including the chemical, physical, and biological characteristics of the substrate, or endanger human health or welfare;

"(ii) be managed in a manner that is consistent with an approved coastal zone management plan for the State or States with an approved plan, bordering the lake in which the disposal occurs; and

"(iii) be managed in a manner that protects—

"(I) municipal and private water supply intake zones;

"(II) recognized commercial or recreational fishing grounds and the spawning, nursery, food supply or migration areas on which fish depend for their life processes; and

"(III) against persistent resuspension or the spread of material to areas outside the disposal area;

"(iv) allow for the protection and propagation of a balanced, indigenous population of fish, shellfish, and wildlife in the area; and

"(v) not cause a violation of any water quality standard adopted pursuant to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1251 et seq).

"(B) The guidelines developed under this paragraph shall take into consideration alternative reuse and disposal methods.

"(C) After providing notice and opportunity for public comment, the Administrator shall, as appropriate, revise the guidelines to incorporate any Federal guideline, criterion, or restriction related to sediment disposal in the Great Lakes that takes effect after the date of development of the initial guidelines.

"(4)(A) Any person found to be in violation of this subsection shall be subject to—

"(i) a civil penalty in an amount not to exceed the amount provided under section 309(d) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1319(d)), with respect to a civil penalty assessed by a court; or

"(ii) an amount provided under section 309(g) of such Act (33 U.S.C. 1319(g)) with respect to a civil penalty assessed by the Administrator.

"(B) The assessment of a civil penalty under this paragraph shall be conducted in the same manner as is provided for the assessment of a civil penalty under section 309 of such Act (33 U.S.C. 1319).".

(d) CONSIDERATION OF AREA NEEDS.—Section 123(b) of the River and Harbor Act of 1970 (33 U.S.C. 1293a(b)) is amended—

(1) by striking "(b)" and inserting "(b) CONSIDERATION OF AREA NEEDS.—(1)"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(2) Beginning on April 1, 1993, the Secretary of the Army may not establish any confined spoil disposal facility in the waters of the Great Lakes unless—

"(A)(i) the Administrator has concurred in writing with the decision of the Secretary to establish the facility, and the concurrence is based on—

"(I) a consideration of the environmental and economic benefits of using a confined spoil disposal facility to remove contaminated sediment from the aquatic habitat; and

"(II) a determination that the facility will not affect the area surrounding the facility in a manner that is inconsistent with the guidelines established pursuant to paragraph (3); or

"(ii) a 45-day period beginning on the date on which the Administrator receives from the Secretary all material necessary to evaluate the proposed facility (or a 90-day period in the case in which the Administrator has requested an extension from the Secretary in writing) has expired, and the Administrator has not—

"(I) concurred with the decision of the Secretary; or

"(II) declined concurrence with the decision of the Secretary; and

"(B) the Secretary has—

"(I) provided an opportunity for public review and comment; and

"(II) determined that the facility will not affect the area surrounding the facility in a manner that is inconsistent with the guidelines established pursuant to paragraph (3).

"(3)(A) Not later than December 31, 1994, the Administrator shall, with respect to each confined spoil disposal facility located in the waters of the Great Lakes—

"(i) evaluate the present and projected integrity of the facility; and

"(ii) assess the environmental consequences of the facility.

"(B) Not later than December 31, 1994, the Administrator, in consultation with the Secretary of the Army, shall identify any confined spoil disposal facility located in the waters of the Great Lakes that is affecting, or projected to affect, the area surrounding the facility in a manner that is inconsistent with the guidelines established pursuant to paragraph (3).

"(4) Not later than December 31, 1994, the Administrator in conjunction with the Secretary of the Army and Director of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, shall develop and implement a management plan for each confined spoil disposal facility located in the waters of the Great Lakes. In developing a plan, the Administrator shall provide opportunity for public comment. Each plan shall include the following:

"(A) A baseline assessment of conditions at the site.

"(B) A program for monitoring the site.

"(C) Any special management conditions or practices that are necessary for protection of human health, wildlife, and the environment.

"(D) A consideration of the quantity of the material to be disposed of at the site, and the presence, nature and bioavailability of contaminants in the material.

"(E) A consideration of the anticipated use of the site over the long term including the anticipated closure date for the site, if applicable, and any need for management of the site after its closure.

"(F) Any restrictions on public access to confined spoil disposal facilities that are necessary for environmental, safety, and health reasons.

"(G) A schedule for review and revision of the plan, which shall be reviewed and revised not later than 10 years after the date of adoption, and every 10 years thereafter.

"(5)(A)(i) Not later than December 31, 1996, the Secretary of the Army shall, in consultation with the Director of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service and the host State and local sponsors—

"(I) develop a confined spoil disposal facility remediation plan for each confined spoil disposal facility identified in paragraph (3)(B); and

"(II) submit each remediation plan referred to in subclause (I) to the Administrator.

"(ii) The remediation plan referred to in clause (i)(I) shall include a schedule of engineered improvements, closure, or restrictions of the facility or other measures to ensure that the facility will not affect the surrounding area in a manner that is inconsistent with the guidelines developed pursuant to paragraph (3).

"(B) Any confined spoil disposal facility remediation plan that recommends restriction or closure of the confined spoil disposal facility shall—

"(i) identify appropriate alternative disposal options, including the estimated costs of the alternatives; and

"(ii) include a schedule for initiating the alternatives, if applicable.

"(C) The Administrator, in consultation with the Director of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service and the host State and local sponsors, shall not later than 90 days after receipt of a confined spoil disposal facility remediation plan, make a determination whether to approve the plan.

"(6)(A) The Secretary of the Army is authorized to design, engineer, and construct components of any confined spoil disposal facility remediation plan in a manner consistent with this section.

"(B) If, by January 1, 1999, a confined spoil disposal facility remediation plan has not been undertaken for a confined spoil disposal facility identified under paragraph (3)(B), the Administrator shall terminate the continued use of the confined spoil disposal facility.

"(7) On and after the date of enactment of this paragraph, the Secretary of the Army shall continue dredging and disposal operations in the Great Lakes basin to maintain current navigational channels in a manner that is consistent with this section.

"(8) Nothing in this section is intended to prohibit the Administrator from considering other relevant environmental laws (including regulations), or such other criteria as the Administrator determines to be appropriate, in making concurrence decisions based on the guidelines developed pursuant to paragraph (3)."

(e) GENERAL AMENDMENTS.—Section 123 of the River and Harbor Act of 1970 (33 U.S.C. 1293a) is amended—

(1) in subsection (c), by striking "(c)" and inserting "(c) WRITTEN AGREEMENT.—";

(2) in subsection (d), by striking "(d)" and inserting "(d) WAIVER OF CONSTRUCTION COSTS.—";

(3) in subsection (e), by striking "(e)" and inserting "(e) FEDERAL PAYMENT OF COSTS.—";

(4) in subsection (f), by striking "(f)" and inserting "(f) PROPERTY INTERESTS.—";

(5) in subsection (g), by striking "(g)" and inserting "(g) FEDERAL LICENSES OR PERMITS.—";

(6) in subsections (c) and (f), by inserting "and the Administrator" after "Secretary of the Army" each place it appears;

(7) by redesignating subsections (h) through (k) as subsections (i) through (l), respectively;

(8) in subsection (i), as redesignated by paragraph (7)—

(A) by striking "(i)" the first place it appears and inserting "(i) PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO GREAT LAKES.—"; and

(B) striking "other than subsection (i)" and inserting "other than subsection (j)";

(9) in subsection (j), as redesignated by paragraph (7), by striking "(j)" and inserting "(j) RESEARCH, STUDY AND EXPERIMENTATION PROGRAM.—";

(10) in subsection (k), as redesignated by paragraph (7), by striking "The Secretary" and inserting "Except as provided in subsection (b)(6)(B), the Secretary";

(11) by inserting after subsection (g) the following new subsection:

"(h) PERMIT REQUIREMENTS.—(1) Beginning on December 31, 1994, any person who disposes of dredge spoil at a confined spoil disposal facility shall obtain from the Secretary of the Army, with the concurrence of the Administrator, a permit that specifies conditions for the disposal. The permit shall be in the form, and under the conditions, described in subsection (a)(2).

"(2) A permit issued pursuant to this subsection shall specify such conditions as are necessary to ensure that disposal at the confined spoil disposal facility will be consistent with the management plan for the confined spoil disposal facility that is the subject of the permit.

"(3) A permit issued pursuant to this subsection shall be issued for the term of the disposal activity specified pursuant to paragraph (1), except that no permit shall be issued for a period of more than 7 years.

"(4) A permit issued pursuant to this subsection shall include such conditions concerning monitoring and assessment as are necessary to determine compliance with the permit."; and

(12) by adding at the end of the section the following new subsections:

"(m) GREAT LAKES TRIBUTARY SEDIMENT TRANSPORT MODELS.—(1) For each major river system or set of major river systems that flows into a Great Lakes federally authorized commercial harbor, channel maintenance project site, or area of concern, the Secretary of the Army, in cooperation and coordination with the Administrator, and in consultation and coordination with the Great Lakes States, the heads of the Soil Conservation Service of the Department of Agriculture, the Geological Survey and the United States Fish and Wildlife Service of the Department of the Interior, shall develop a tributary sediment transport model.

"(2) Each model referred to in paragraph (1) shall—

"(A) measure stream discharge rates, total suspended solids loadings, and bedload transport;

"(B) measure additional parameters, such as nitrates, phosphates, persistent toxic substances, and heavy metals, on a river-by-river basis in accordance with any agreement between the Secretary of the Army, the Administrator, the host State and any other relevant non-Federal entity;

"(C) estimate the percentage of total sediment loadings into the harbors, channels and areas of concern originating from each sub-watershed of river system; and

"(D) characterize the physical nature of the sediment materials.

"(3) In developing a tributary sediment transport model under this subsection, the Secretary of the Army shall—

"(A) coordinate tributary sediment transport modeling efforts with the efforts of the Administrator to produce comprehensive Lakewide Management Plans, Remedial Action Plans, and mass balance models;

"(B) build upon data and monitoring infrastructure generated in earlier studies and programs; and

"(C) complete models for an additional 30 river systems within the 5-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this subsection.

"(n) SEDIMENT LOAD REDUCTION.—(1)(A) Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this subsection, the Secretary of the Army, with the concurrence of the Administrator, and in consultation and coordination with the Great Lakes States, the heads of the Soil Conservation Service of the Department of Agriculture, the United States Geological Survey of the Department of the Interior, and the heads of such other Federal agencies as the Administrator determines to be appropriate, shall—

"(i) develop an analytical method to project the effectiveness and efficiency of sediment source reduction approaches and scenarios in reducing upstream sediment loadings into specific Great Lakes federally authorized commercial harbors, channel maintenance project sites, and areas of concern of the Great Lakes;

"(ii) for each model developed under subsection (m), use the method described in clause (i) to conduct sediment load reduction analyses to estimate the potential effectiveness and efficiency of upstream sediment source reduction approaches and scenarios to reduce sedimentation in Great Lakes federally authorized commercial harbors, channel maintenance sites, and areas of concern of the Great Lakes; and

"(iii) provide sediment load reduction analysis information to the Administrator appropriate States upon request regarding river systems within their jurisdictions.

"(B) In developing and using the analytical method described in subparagraph (A)(i), the Secretary of the Army shall consider only those sediment reduction approaches and scenarios that are consistent with—

"(i) the guidance issued pursuant to section 6217(g) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (16 U.S.C. 1455b(g)) where applicable;

"(ii) relevant State nonpoint source pollution control programs that have been approved in a manner consistent with section 319 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1329); and

"(iii) recommendations of any relevant Remedial Action Plans and programs and measures contained in Annex 3 of the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement and the supplement to the Annex.

"(2)(A) The Secretary of the Army shall in cooperation with the Administrator, and within three months of the date of appropriations transfer funds appropriated pursuant to subsection (o)(1) of this Act to the Environmental Protection Agency for the purpose of making grants to States pursuant to section 319 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1329) for specific projects to reduce the erosion that contributes to the sedimentation of federally authorized commercial harbors, channel maintenance project sites, and areas of concern.

"(B) A State or a group of States, on the initiative of the State or group of States or at the request of a remedial action planning committee, local government, port authority, or any other governmental, public, or private entity, may submit a proposal for funding for a project pursuant to this paragraph.

"(C) A grant from funds made available pursuant to this paragraph shall be—

"(i) awarded only for a project conducted by a State (or a group of States) that is incorporated in the nonpoint source pollution control program of the State (or, with respect to a project conducted by each recipient State (under applicable provisions of section 319 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1329)));

"(ii) in conformity with the guidance issued pursuant to section 6217(g) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (16 U.S.C. 1455b(g));

"(iii) consistent with the recommendations of any relevant Remedial Action Plans and Lakewide Management Plans;

"(iv) administered by agencies designated in the nonpoint source management program of the State;

"(v) improve water quality; and

"(vi) have the potential to reduce projected dredging costs, including environmental dredging, in an amount comparable to the cost of the erosion control project, within the lifetime of the dredging project.

"(3) To carry out a project under this subsection, a State may award grants from funds made available under this subsection for the implementation of an erosion control measure. The amount of each grant under this paragraph may not exceed 75 percent of the cost erosion control measure.

"(4)(A) Each grant under this section shall be in such amount and subject to such conditions as the Secretary of the Army, with the concurrence of the Administrator, shall determine.

"(B) The Federal share of a grant made under this subsection shall be an amount equal to 75 percent of the cost of the project funded by the grant.

"(C) The State share of a grant made under this subsection shall be provided from non-Federal sources.

"(c) AUTHORIZATIONS.—(1) There are authorized to be appropriated, to the Department of the Army, to carry out subsections (m) and (n), $15,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1994 through 1999. Not less than 50 percent of the amounts authorized in this paragraph shall be reserved for the implementation of subsection (n)(2).

"(2) In addition to the amounts authorized to be appropriated under paragraph (1), there are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of the Army and the Environmental Protection Agency such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section relating to the management and remediation of confined spoil disposal facilities and the issuance of permits for the facilities.

"(p) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

"(1) The term 'Administrator' means the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

"(2) The term 'area of concern' has the meaning given the term under section 118(a)(3)(F) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1268(a)(3)(F)).

"(3) The term 'Great Lakes States' has the meaning given the term under section 118(a)(3)(G) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1268(a)(3)(G)).

"(4) The term 'Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement' has the meaning given the term under section 118(a)(3)(H) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1268(a)(3)(H)).

S. 76. A bill to establish a grant program under the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration for the purpose of promoting the use of bicycle helmets by individuals under the age of 16; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

CHILDREN'S BICYCLE HELMET SAFETY ACT

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I rise to introduce legislation encouraging the use of bicycle helmets by children. The Senate passed this legislation last year. Unfortunately, however, the House did not take up the measure in the closing hours of the 102d Congress.

The need for this legislation is real. Children and young people have more head injuries than any other group. In fact, according to the organization national safe kids campaign two-thirds of all bicycle-related head injuries occurred among American children under age 14. In 1990, 400 children died as a result of head injuries caused by bicycle accidents.

Deaths and injuries from bicycle accidents cost society billions of dollars annually. One child suffering from a head injury, on average, will cost society $4.5 million over the child's lifetime.

Bicycle helmets work. Their proper use has been shown to reduce the risk of head injury by 85 percent. That's why States and localities have begun to adopt laws requiring or encouraging bicycle helmet use by children. Congress should help foster these efforts.

The legislation I am introducing today will do just that. My bill will make available a total of $9 million in grant money to States, localities and non-profit organizations that require or encourage individuals under the age of 16 to wear bicycle helmets. The money can be used to set up a bicycle helmet bank for underprivileged children, for enforcement purposes or to educate children and their families about the benefits of helmets.

The legislation will also require the Consumer Product Safety Commission to issue uniform safety standards for adult- and child-size bicycle helmets. It makes sense to ensure that if children are wearing helmets that these helmets be made of solid, safe construction. Bicycle helmets sold in the United States today do not have to meet any safety standards. Voluntary bicycle helmet standards exist but they are not uniform and are based on inadequate testing.

Mr. President, only 5 percent of the children in this country who ride bicycles wear helmets. For safety's sake, we can and must do better. I urge colleagues to support me in this endeavor.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 76

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Children's Bicycle Helmet Safety Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) 90 million Americans ride bicycles and 20 million ride a bicycle more than once a week;

(2) between 1984 and 1988, 2,985 bicyclists in the United States died from head injuries and 905,752 suffered head injuries that were treated in hospital emergency rooms;

(3) 41 percent of bicycle-related head injury deaths and 76 percent of bicycle-related head injuries occurred among American children under age 15;

(4) deaths and injuries from bicycle accidents cost society $7.6 billion annually; and a child suffering from a head injury, on average, will cost society $4.5 million over the child's lifetime;

(5) universal use of bicycle helmets in the United States would have prevented 2,600 deaths from head injuries and 757,000 injuries; and

(6) only 5 percent of children in the Nation who ride bicycles wear helmets.

SEC. 3. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.

The Administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration may, in accordance with section 4, make grants to States and State political subdivisions for programs that require or encourage individuals under the age of 16 to wear approved bicycle helmets. In making those grants, the Administrator shall allow grantees to use wide discretion in designing programs that effectively promote increased bicycle helmet use.

SEC. 4. PURPOSES FOR GRANTS.

A grant made under section 3 may be used by a grantee to—

(1) enforce a law that requires individuals under the age of 16 to wear approved bicycle helmets on their heads while riding on bicycles;

(2) assist individuals under the age of 16 to acquire approved bicycle helmets;

(3) develop and administer a program to educate individuals under the age of 16 and their families on the importance of wearing such helmets in order to improve bicycle safety; or

(4) carry out any combination of the activities described in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3).

SEC. 5. STANDARDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Bicycle helmets manufactured 9 months or more after the date of the enactment of this Act shall conform to—

(1) any interim standard described under subsection (b), pending the establishment of a final standard pursuant to subsection (c); and

(2) the final standard, once it has been established under subsection (c).

(b) INTERIM STANDARDS.—The interim standards are as follows:

(1) The American National Standards Institute standard designated as "Z90.4-1984".

(2) The Snell Memorial Foundation standard designated as "B-90".

(3) Any other standard that the Consumer Product Safety Commission determines is appropriate.

(c) FINAL STANDARD.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Consumer Product Safety Commission shall begin a proceeding under section 553 of title 5, United States Code, to—

(1) review the requirements of the interim standards set forth in subsection (a) and establish a final standard based on such requirements;

(2) include in the final standard a provision to protect against the risk of helmets coming off the heads of bicycle riders;

(3) include in the final standard provisions that address the risk of injury to children; and

(4) include additional provisions as appropriate.

Sections 7 and 9 of the Consumer Product Safety Act (15 U.S.C. 2056 and 2058) shall not apply to the proceeding under this subsection and section 11 of such Act (15 U.S.C. 2060) shall not apply with respect to any standard issued under such proceeding. The final standard shall take effect 1 year from the date it is issued.

(d) FAILURE TO MEET STANDARDS.—

(1) FAILURE TO MEET INTERIM STANDARD.—Until the final standard takes effect, a bicycle helmet that does not conform to an interim standard as required under subsection (a)(1) shall be considered in violation of a consumer product safety standard promulgated under the Consumer Product Safety Act.

(2) STATUS OF FINAL STANDARD.—The final standard developed under subsection (c) shall be considered a consumer product safety standard promulgated under the Consumer Product Safety Act.

SEC. 6. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

For the National Highway Safety Administration to carry out the grant program authorized by this Act, there are authorized to be appropriated $2,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, $3,000,000 for fiscal year 1995, and $4,000,000 for fiscal year 1996.

SEC. 7. DEFINITION.

In this Act, the term "approved bicycle helmet" means a bicycle helmet that meets—

(1) any interim standard described in section 5(b), pending establishment of a final standard under section 5(c); and

(2) the final standard, once it is established under section 5(c).

By Mr. THURMOND (for himself and Mr. DECONCINI):

S. 77. A bill to amend title 18 to limit the application of the exclusionary rule; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EXCLUSIONARY RULE LIMITATION ACT

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, today, I rise to introduce a bill which would codify the good faith exception to the exclusionary rule that has been recognized by the Supreme Court.

The legislation that I am offering today is similar to measures I have introduced in the last four Congresses and to a proposal which passed the Senate by a vote of 63-24 in 1984. Although the House of Representatives passed similar legislation during the last three Congresses, the Senate failed to pass this proposal.

The exclusionary rule is a judicially created remedy for violations by law enforcement officers of the fourth amendment prohibition against illegal searches and seizures. More simply, if evidence is obtained by a law enforcement officer in violation of the fourth amendment, then that evidence will be excluded in a criminal trial. The exclusionary rule is an important principle since it helps to insure that law enforcement officers not be allowed to randomly enter our homes or private places and search without just cause.

However, since the creation of the exclusionary rule remedy in 1914, in Weeks versus California, the Supreme Court has recognized exceptions when the exclusionary rule should not apply. This measure addresses one of those exceptions. This legislation codifies the Court's holding in United States versus Leon to provide that evidence obtained pursuant to a warrant which is later found to be defective will not be excluded if the law enforcement officer acted in objective good faith. Objective good faith would be established if the circumstance surrounding the search justify an objectively reasonable belief that it was in conformity with the fourth amendment. This bill also extends this exception to warrantless searches.

Mr. President, the bill that I am introducing today neither authorizes nor encourages law enforcement officers to disregard the fourth amendment and randomly search a person's home. What it does is address the legal loophole that often allows a criminal to go free, irrespective of guilt or innocence, when evidence crucial to a criminal proceeding is suppressed. The goal of the exclusionary rule is to deter law enforcement conduct that violates the fourth amendment. Therefore, if a law enforcement officer's conduct is executing a search in conformance with the fourth amendment, applying the exclusionary rules does not serve as a deterrent. It should be noted that the determination as to whether the officer conducted the search in objective good faith would be made by the Court based on the circumstances surrounding the search. Of course if the officer's conduct did not exhibit objective good faith, the evidence would not be allowed. This amendment is a reasonable extension of the exception currently recognized by the Supreme Court.

We are well aware of the fact that the exclusion of evidence most often results in the release of the accused. This is a high price to pay for nonconstitutional violations. Therefore, I think it wise to preclude the use of the exclusionary rule in these situations unless Congress so provides. This legislation will aid in the apprehension and prosecution of criminals without sacrificing the principles of the fourth amendment.

In an effort to work toward a bipartisan comprehensive crime bill last Congress, I agreed to not pursue passage of this measure. However, efforts failed to produce a true, tough crime bill that would punish vicious criminals. This Congress, I plan to strongly pursue this, and other, vital criminal law reform measures which will ensure that vicious criminals are appropriately punished. I strongly urge my colleagues to support this vital measure and hope that we will act without delay.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of this bill be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 77

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Exclusionary Rule Limitation Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. (a) Chapter 223 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding the following two sections:

"§ 3508. Limitation of the fourth amendment exclusionary rule

"Evidence which is obtained as a result of a search or seizure shall not be excluded in a proceeding in a court of the United States on the ground that the search or seizure was in violation of the fourth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, if the search or seizure was undertaken in an objectively reasonable belief that it was in conformity with the fourth amendment. A showing that evidence was obtained pursuant to and within the scope of a warrant constitutes prima facie evidence of such a reasonable belief, unless the warrant was obtained through intentional and material misrepresentation.

"§ 3509. General limitation of the exclusionary rule

"Except as specifically provided by statute or rule of procedure, evidence which is otherwise admissible shall not be excluded in a proceeding in a court of the United States on the ground that the evidence was obtained in violation of a statute or rule of procedure, or of a regulation issued pursuant thereto."

(b) The table of sections of chapter 223 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof:

"3508. Limitation of the fourth amendment exclusionary rule.

"3509. General limitation of the exclusionary rule."

By Mr. THURMOND (for himself and Mr. DECONCINI):

S. 78. A bill to amend title 28 of the United States Code to clarify the remedial jurisdiction of inferior Federal courts; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

JUDICIAL TAXATION PROHIBITION ACT

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation to prohibit Federal judges from ordering new taxes or ordering increases in existing tax rates as a judicial remedy.

In 1990, the Supreme Court decided in Missouri versus Jenkins to allow Federal judges to order new taxes or tax increases as a judicial remedy. It is my firm belief that this narrow 5-4 decision permits Federal judges to exceed their proper boundaries of jurisdiction and authority under the Constitution.

Mr. President, this ruling and congressional response raises two constitutional issues which warrant discussion. One I mentioned earlier is whether Federal courts have authority under the Constitution to inject themselves into the legislative area of taxation. The second constitutional issue arises in light of the Judicial Taxation Prohibition Act which I am now introducing to restrict the remedial jurisdiction of the Federal courts. This narrowly drafted legislation would prohibit Federal judges from ordering new taxes or ordering increases in existing tax rates. I believe it is clear under article III that the Congress has the authority to restrict the remedial jurisdiction of the Federal courts in this fashion.

First, I want to speak on the issue of judicial taxation. Not since Great Britain's ministry of George Greenville in 1765 have the American people faced the assault of taxation without representation as now authorized in the Jenkins decision.

As part of his imperial reforms to tighten British control in the Colonies, Grenville pushed the Stamp Act through the Parliament in 1765. This Act required excise duties to be paid by the colonists in the form of revenue stamps affixed to a variety of legal documents. This action came at a time when the Colonies were in an uproar over the Sugar Act of 1764 which levied duties on certain imports such as sugar, indigo, coffee, linens and other items.

The ensuing firestorm of debate in America centered on the power of Britain to tax the Colonies. James Otis, a young Boston attorney, echoed the opinion of most colonists stating that the Parliament did not have power to tax the Colonies because Americans had no representation in that body. Mr. Otis had been attributed in 1761 with the statement that "taxation without representation is tyranny."

In October 1765, delegates from nine States were sent to New York as part of the Stamp Act Congress to protest the new law. It was during this time that John Adams wrote in opposition to the Stamp Act, "We have always understood it to be a grand and fundamental principle * * * that no freeman shall be subject to any tax to which he has not given his own consent, in person or by proxy." A number of resolutions were adopted by the Stamp Act Congress protesting the acts of Parliament. One resolution stated, "It is inseparably essential to the freedom of a people * * * that no taxes be imposed on them, but with their own consent, given personally or by their representatives." The resolutions concluded that the Stamp Act had a "manifest tendency to subvert the rights and liberties of the colonists."

Opposition to the Stamp Act was vehemently continued through the Colonies in pamphlet form. These pamphlets asserted that the basic premise of a free government included taxation of the people by themselves or through their representatives.

Other Americans reacted to the Stamp Act by rioting, intimidating tax collectors, and boycotts directed against England. While Grenville's successor was determined to repeal the law, the social, economic and political climate in the Colonies brought on the American Revolution. The principles expressed during the earlier crisis against taxation without representation became firmly imbedded in our Federal Constitution of 1787.

Yet, the Supreme Court has overlooked this fundamental lesson in American history. The Jenkins decision extends the power of the judiciary into an area which has traditionally been reserved as a legislative function within the Federal, State, and local governments. In the Federalist No. 48, James Madison explained that in our democratic system, "the legislative branch alone has access to the pockets of the people."

This idea has remained steadfast in America for over 200 years. Elected officials with authority to tax are directly accountable to the people who give their consent to taxation through the ballot box. The shield of accountability against unwarranted taxes has been removed now that the Supreme Court has sanctioned judicially imposed taxes. The American citizenry lacks adequate protection when they are subject to taxation by unelected, life tenured Federal judges.

There are many programs and projects competing for a finite number of tax dollars. The public debate surrounding taxation is always intense. Sensitive discussions are held by elected officials and their constituents concerning increases and expenditures of scarce tax dollars. To allow Federal judges to impose taxes is to discount valuable public debate concerning priorities for expenditures of a limited public resource.

Mr. President, the dispositive issue presented by the Jenkins decision is whether the American people want, as a matter of national policy, to be exposed to taxation without their consent by an independent and insulated judiciary. I most assuredly believe they do not.

This brings us to the second constitutional issue which we must address in light of the Jenkins decision. That issue is congressional authority under the Constitution to limit the remedial jurisdiction of lower Federal courts established by the Congress. Article III, section 1, of the Constitution provides jurisdiction to the lower Federal courts as the "Congress may from time to time ordain and establish." There is no mandate in the Constitution to confer equity jurisdiction to the inferior Federal courts. Congress has the flexibility under article III to "ordain and establish" the lower Federal courts as it deems appropriate. This basic premise has been upheld by the Supreme Court in a number of cases including Lockerty versus Phillips, Lauf versus E.G. Skinner and Co., Kline versus Burke Construction Co., and Sheldon versus Sill.

This legislation would preclude the lower Federal courts from issuing any order or decree requiring imposition of "any new tax or to increase any existing tax or tax rate." I firmly believe that this language is wholly consistent with congressional authority under article III, section 1 of the Constitution.

There is nothing in this legislation which would restrict the power of the Federal courts from hearing constitutional claims. It accords due respect to all the provisions of the Constitution and merely limits the availability of a particular judicial remedy which has traditionally been a legislative function. The objective of this legislation is straightforward, to prohibit Federal courts from increasing taxes. The language in this bill applies to the inferior Federal courts and does not deny claimants judicial access to seek redress of any Federal constitutional right.

Mr. President, how long will it be before a Federal judge orders tax increases to build new highways or prisons? I do not believe the Founding Fathers had this type of activism in mind when they established the judicial branch of government. The role of the judiciary is to interpret the law. The power to tax is an exclusive legislative right belonging to the Congress and the individual States. We are accountable to the citizens and must justify any new taxes. The American people deserve a timely response to the Jenkins decision and we must provide protection against the imposition of taxes by an independent judiciary.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this proposal be printed in the RECORD following my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 78

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Judicial Taxation Prohibition Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds and declares that—

(1) a variety of effective and appropriate judicial remedies are available for the full redress of legal and constitutional violations under existing law, and that the imposition or increase of taxes by courts is neither necessary nor appropriate for the full and effective exercise of Federal court jurisdiction;

(2) the imposition or increase of taxes by judicial order constitutes an unauthorized and inappropriate exercise of the judicial power under the Constitution of the United States and is incompatible with traditional principles of American law and government and the basic American principle that taxation without representation is tyranny;

(3) Federal courts exceed the proper boundaries of their limited jurisdiction and authority under the Constitution of the United States, and impermissibly intrude on the legislative function in a democratic system of government, when they issue orders requiring the imposition of new taxes or the increase of existing taxes; and

(4) the Congress retains the authority under article III, sections 1 and 2 of the Constitution of the United States to limit and regulate the jurisdiction of the inferior Federal courts which it has seen fit to establish, and such authority includes the power to limit the remedial authority of inferior Federal courts.

SEC. 3. AMENDMENT TO TITLE 28.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 85 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding between sections 1341 and 1342, the following new section:

"§ 1341A. Prohibition of judicial imposition or increase of taxes.

"(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no inferior court established by Congress shall have jurisdiction to issue any remedy, order, injunction, writ, judgment, or other judicial decree requiring the Federal Government or any State or local government to impose any new tax or to increase any existing tax or tax rate.

"(b) Nothing in this section shall prohibit inferior Federal courts from ordering duly authorized remedies, otherwise within their jurisdiction, which may require expenditures by Federal, State, or local government where such expenditures are necessary to effectuate such remedies.

"(c) For purposes of this section, the term 'tax' includes—

- "(1) personal income taxes;
- "(2) real and personal property taxes;
- "(3) sales and transfer taxes;
- "(4) estate and gift taxes;
- "(5) excise taxes;
- "(6) user taxes;
- "(7) corporate and business income taxes;

and

"(8) licensing fees or taxes."

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 85 is amended by inserting between the item relating to section 1341 and the item relating to section 1342, the following new item:

"1341A. Prohibition of judicial imposition or increase of taxes."

SEC. 4. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act and the amendments made by this Act shall take effect on the date of enactment.

By Mr. DECONCINI:

S. 79. A bill to restore public confidence in the performance and merits of elected officials and Federal employees; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

RESTORING CONFIDENCE IN ELECTED OFFICIALS AND FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, Americans spoke loudly and clearly in the November election. They let it be known that their No. 1 concern was getting their country moving in the right direction again. Equal to America's concern about the economy is their overwhelming interest in ensuring that their Government and its officials be above reproach.

Our country's Founders conceived of a government "of the people, by the people and for the people." Sadly, there has been a loss of public confidence in both the executive and legislative branches of government as the media report scandal after scandal. We have a picture of a government whose officials and employees are more dedicated to personal gain than to public service. I am introducing legislation today that I hope will restore public confidence in government by guaranteeing that no one uses his or her elected office or term of public service for personal advancement or the advancement of a special interest, particularly a foreign government or interest abroad.

My bill will permanently ban former top executive department and legislative officials, including former Presidents, Vice-Presidents, Members of Congress, trade negotiators, and other top political appointees from becoming a foreign agent or lobbyist for a foreign corporation not certified or registered in the United States after their period of public service ends. In order to ensure responsible public service throughout the Federal Government, all appointees or employees below this level would not be able to act as a foreign agent or lobbyist for a foreign corporation for 2 years immediately following their Government employment.

Also fundamental to restoring confidence in our Government is ensuring that the public is provided appropriate information concerning any potential conflicts of interest by Government employees and officials. My bill would require that those people in the executive and legislative branches of the Government or in the military who are in a position to influence legislation, executive rulemaking or military decisions, file financial disclosure forms which would be available to the public.

In his inaugural address, President Clinton pledged to renew and revitalize our democracy. Certainly, ending the revolving door between Government and special interests is vital to that pursuit. In order to accomplish that goal, my bill would lengthen the period of time from 1 to 5 years during which all former government office holders and employees are prohibited from lobbying the office in which he or she served while in government. The bill also closes loopholes in the Foreign Agents Registration Act by broadening the Act to cover all actions not precisely limited to legitimate first amendment rights or actual legal representation.

Persons who knowingly and willingly violate the provisions of the bill would be forced to forfeit their pension and other benefits accrued during their public service. Those who misuse public service for personal gain should not be permitted to reap the benefits he or she accrued while a public servant. In addition to this legislation, I also intend to look further into the issue of lobbying by former government officials and employees on matters with which they were substantially involved while in government service.

This bill addresses an interest fundamental to all Americans—ensuring the integrity of our constitutional democracy. It is my hope that hearings will be held by the Senate in the near future so that these issues can be thoroughly examined. I am hopeful that this, along with other proposals designed to eliminate the revolving door, will be quickly enacted. Government officials and public employees must not trade their service for future private gain; they must serve the public's interests, not special interests. Only if we take action on these issues can we begin to restore the public's trust in government.

By Mr. NICKLES (for himself,
Mr. REID, Mr. SHELBY, Mr.

MCCAIN, Mr. BOND, Mr. MCCONNELL, and Mr. HELMS):

S. 81. A bill to require analysis and estimates of the likely impact of Federal legislation and regulations upon the private sector and State and local governments, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

ECONOMIC AND EMPLOYMENT IMPACT ACT

• Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, today Senator REID and I along with several of my colleagues, are reintroducing legislation first introduced last Congress, the Economic and Employment Impact Act which will require a full disclosure of all costs associated with legislation considered by Congress as well as any regulations promulgated by a Federal agency.

According to one of the latest studies published in 1991, the total annual cost of Federal regulation was upward of $562 billion dollars and is projected to be as much as $688 billion by the year 2000. While the American taxpayer is aware of the costs of Government that show up in the Federal budget, we are less sensitive to the hidden cost of troublesome legislative and regulatory burdens. According to the 1991 report on the cost of regulation done by Thomas Hopkins at the Rochester Institute of Technology, total regulatory cost per household in 1992 will be $4,272 and will rise to $4,647 in the year 2000.

Often, Congress fails to consider how much a new law or regulation increases the cost of products and services to consumers or the loss in jobs when businesses have to cut back in response to growing Federal demands. The Economic and Employment Impact Act will make Congress and the administration aware of the impact, positive and negative, that legislation has on the private sector, individuals, and State and local governments.

The act would require that all legislation considered by Congress be accompanied by an economic and employment impact statement. The statements will contain the positive and negative effects on employment, Gross Domestic Product, the ability of U.S. industries to compete internationally, and the cost to consumers. Further, it would require that final regulations and proposed regulations promulgated by executive branch agencies also be accompanied by such a statement.

To prevent an unwarranted delay in the legislative and regulatory process, a detailed assessment will not be required if a preliminary analysis indicates that the aggregate effect of the legislation is less than $100 million or results in reduced employment of less than 10,000 jobs. Congress may also waive the provisions regarding the impact statement by a three-fifths vote of either House.

Similar legislation was unanimously agreed to in the form of an amendment I authored during the 100th Congress.

With that, Congress has sent a signal to our Nation's citizens that it cares about out-of-control Federal mandates and is ready to take steps to rectify its excessive regulation.

I do not believe economic forecasts are perfect and economists are not oracles. However, economists have tools which governments and industries around the world use every day. But today Congress is not getting the best available economic advice on how a new law or regulation will affect the vast and varied American economy until after the fact. Congress is not applying these economic tools to the vast number of pressing issues that face the Nation.

Some will say the purpose of this legislation is to hinder the regulatory and legislative process—not so. The intent of this legislation is to establish a process to ensure better and more efficient regulation. The process this legislation establishes does not pass judgment on whether a bill or regulation is good or bad but simply completes the formula as Congress considers legislation and the executive branch promulgates regulation.

Mr. Hopkins sums it up best in his paper, the "Cost of Regulation":

The point here is simply that enough evidence exists, however incomplete it may be, to suggest that regulatory costs are substantial and growing. The magnitudes are large enough to warrant a more vigorous effort to firm up these cost estimates and to examine regulatory benefits with greater care in the interests of more rational public policy.

While there are many seemingly good ideas out there in the form of new legislation, our economy simply cannot absorb every good idea coming down the pike. We must send the American people a positive signal by showing them we will only support good ideas that make sense to the economy and employment.*

By Mr. INOUE:

S. 82. A bill to establish a higher education recruitment and retention initiative and a leadership for human survival initiative; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

HIGHER EDUCATION RECRUITMENT AND RETENTION INITIATIVE

Mr. INOUE. Mr. President, today I am introducing a bill to amend the National Science Foundation Act, to provide for the development and establishment of a higher education recruitment and retention initiative and of the leadership for human survival initiative.

First, this amendment will permit institutions with a specific interest in serving students from the Pacific Islands to expand their efforts to recruit and retain students from underprivileged backgrounds. Native Hawaiian, Native American Samoan, Micronesian, and Filipino students have little access to higher education both because of poor preparation and lack of resources. But, even when they are admitted into higher education, they almost always perform poorly and drop out before they complete their college degree. There are virtually no universities that provide the support services sensitive to the cultural and language diversity of these Pacific Islanders. In the State of Hawaii, the University of Hawaii at Hilo has developed innovative strategies in addressing the unique educational needs of Pacific Island students. They are committed in ensuring that more Native Hawaiian, Native American Samoan, Micronesian, and Filipino students are recruited and retained in college.

Students from these Pacific Islands bring with them a myriad of untapped resources that can enrich the institutions they attend and thus enhance our own education standards. We in turn can provide an immeasurable service to the people of these Pacific Island nations, for these students will return home to make important contributions to their communities.

The amendment that I have proposed would fund both the necessary recruiting efforts and the remedial programs needed to retain the students admitted into college. The University of Hawaii at Hilo has demonstrated undeniable expertise in the designing and implementation of such programs geared toward the nurturing of culturally diverse students with disadvantaged educational backgrounds. To assure the effectiveness of the proposed expenditure, the funds would be reserved for institutions that have already displayed a commitment to diversity by admitting significant numbers of students from these Pacific Islands. Such schools have already gained the experience necessary to appropriately serve Pacific Island students and can make the most effective use of our limited funds.

Second, this amendment will also provide for the development and establishment of the leadership for human survival initiative through science education. This innovative program will enhance the quality of life and the environment and ensure the survival of future generations. This rigorous college preparatory curriculum combines research in science and technology and research in history and culture. The program is designed to begin to develop high school students as future leaders of society. Students involved in this program will explore such areas as astronomy, oceanography, meteorology, aquaculture and agriculture, energy development, land and ocean resource management, engineering, conservation, etc. Such a program will prepare students for and encourage students to attend and graduate from college and to study math, science, and engineering. This is an extraordinary and a visionary project which combines the expertise of traditional native Hawaiian navigators and modern-day astronauts from NASA.

Funds will be provided to allow high school students to examine closely the relationships among natural resources, technology, and population to determine optimum carrying capacities and quality of life in a given environment, using Hawaii as a microcosm of the globe. It will develop a vision of how human beings can create a high quality of living using science and technology without destroying the limited resources on which human survival depends.

I am proposing that we appropriate $2 million for each of 3 years to fund a higher education recruitment and retention initiative to provide underprivileged Pacific Island students access to higher education and to fund the development and establishment of the leadership for human survival initiative. One million dollars shall be provided for each program respectively.

Several years ago, I supported the establishment of the same type of recruitment and retention program at the University of Hawaii John A. Burns School of Medicine, to train more Native Hawaiian and Pacific Island health professionals. When the program first began, there were only a handful of Native Hawaiian and Pacific Island students. Now, a large number of these students have graduated and returned to their communities and are making substantial contributions to the lives of their own people. The program has proven a success and we can use the same concept in providing for other professional degrees.

The proposed amendment expresses my faith that our education system is one of our Nation's most valuable resources, and that expanding access to our schools to Pacific Islanders is an important method of strengthening our education system, while aiding Pacific Island nations that are not presently prepared to provide their young citizens with higher education.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of my bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 82

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

(a) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this section to develop, establish, and operate—

(1) a program to recruit for enrollment in an institution of higher education and graduate Native Hawaiian, Native American Samoan, Micronesian, and Filipino students; and

(2) a leadership for human survival initiative that encourages secondary school students to become future leaders by teaching such students through a curriculum developed by the Hokule'a and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

(b) HIGHER EDUCATION RECRUITMENT AND RETENTION INITIATIVE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the National Science Foundation shall award a grant to an institution of higher education to enable such institution to develop, establish, and operate a program to encourage Native Hawaiian, Native American Samoan, Micronesian, and Filipino students to enroll in a program of higher education. Such program shall—

(A) provide recruitment and enrollment assistance for such students to encourage such students to attend an institution of higher education;

(B) provide such students with assistance related to remaining in school and successfully completing their course of study; and

(C) encourage such students to study mathematics, science and engineering.

LIMITATION.—Grant under this subsection only shall be made to an institution of higher education with a strong record of recruiting and retaining at such institution Native Hawaiian, Native American Samoan, Micronesian, and Filipino students.

(c) LEADERSHIP FOR HUMAN SURVIVAL INITIATIVE.—The Director of the National Science Foundation shall award a grant to the Polynesian Voyaging Society to enable such organization, in consultation with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, to develop, establish, and operate a program to encourage secondary school students to become future leaders by training such students in human survival techniques and studying traditional conservation methods of populations indigenous to the Pacific Islands. Such program shall—

(1) train secondary school students to implement research on how modern science might solve a current human survival problem by analyzing how issues such as housing, food or energy production were addressed by populations indigenous to the Pacific Islands; and

(2) enable secondary students to explore topics such as alternative and renewable energy sources, fisheries and ocean resource development and management (reef or off-shore), aquaculture and fishpond management, land resource development and management (forestry, agriculture, or land use planning), low-cost housing, alternative transportation (wind and solar driven land or sea transportation), pollution control and recycling.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—For the purpose of this section—

(1) the term "institution of higher education" has the same meaning given to such term by section 1201(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965; and

(2) the term "secondary school" has the same meaning given to such term by section 1471(21) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $2,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1994, 1995, and 1996 to carry out this Act, of which—

(1) $1,000,000 shall be available in each such fiscal year to carry out subsection (b); and

(2) $1,000,000 shall be available in each such fiscal year to carry out subsection (c).

S. 83. A bill to ensure the preservation of the Gulf of Mexico by establishing a Gulf of Mexico Program; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

GULF OF MEXICO PRESERVATION ACT

• Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce with Senators COCHRAN, LOTT, and SHELBY the Gulf of Mexico Preservation Act of 1993.

With 1,631 miles of coastline stretching from the Florida Everglades to Brownsville, TX, the Gulf of Mexico provides jobs and recreation to millions of Americans. The gulf supports over a third of the marine recreational fishing activities in the continental United States. It accounts for nearly 40 percent of domestic fishery landings and yields over 2.5 billion pounds of seafood each year. The gulf provides 83 percent of the oil and 97 percent of the natural gas produced offshore in the United States.

As anyone representing a Gulf State can tell you, the gulf's capacity to provide freely from its resources has been strained. Two-thirds of the waterways in the continental United States drain into the Gulf of Mexico, and increasing pollution from runoff and discharges has caused a loss of natural habitats for fish and wildlife. A dead zone of 3,000 square miles of oxygen-deficient bottom waters has been documented off the Louisiana and Texas coast, and pollution has caused the permanent or conditional closure of fisheries and shellfish growing areas. Garbage dumping by ships and other nations has choked the Texas coast with tons of plastic and other debris. In September 1991, the last year for which figures are available, volunteers cleaned up nearly 1 million pounds of marine trash from gulf beaches in just 1 day.

The Gulf of Mexico Preservation Act will establish a Gulf of Mexico Program within the Environmental Protection Agency similar to the existing Chesapeake Bay and Great Lakes programs. The Gulf Program will coordinate the efforts of Federal agencies, State and local authorities, and private interests to maintain the health and vitality of America's sea, the Gulf of Mexico.

The bill will require the program to create a comprehensive, multiyear plan for environmental protection in the gulf which recognizes the gulf's importance to the regional and national economy. The bill also creates a grant program which will enable the States to fund scientific research that will increase our base of knowledge for tackling the problems of the Gulf of Mexico and other marine areas. Finally, the bill authorizes the appropriation of substantial sums to the Gulf Program, bringing efforts there in line with existing efforts to protect other major water bodies.

It is my hope that my colleagues from around the country will recognize the Gulf of Mexico's importance to the entire Nation and join me in passing this vital legislation. •

By Mr. METZENBAUM (for himself, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. BIDEN, and Mr. SIMON):

S. 84. A bill to modify the antitrust exemption applicable to the business of insurance; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

INSURANCE COMPETITIVE PRICING ACT

• Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, today, I am introducing legislation to amend the McCarran-Ferguson Act to prohibit anticompetitive conduct by insurance companies. The bill repeals the industry's blanket exemption from the Federal antitrust laws. I am pleased to be joined in this effort by Senators BIDEN, KENNEDY, and SIMON in this effort.

This legislation has three goals: First, to recognize the current authority of the States to regulate insurance, second, to promote free competition in the sale of insurance by banning the most egregious forms of anticompetitive conduct, and third, to provide a safe harbor for certain joint activities by insurers, such as pooling historical loss data, which are essential to the business of insurance and which benefit consumers.

The McCarran-Ferguson antitrust exemption clearly has outlived any useful purpose that it might have had. Today, the case for repealing the insurance industry's blanket antitrust exemption is compelling. Insurance is vital to the Nation and no one can be secure without it. However, because insurance companies do not have to comply with our national policy of free competition, rates are higher than they should be and the availability of certain types of insurance is excessively limited.

The bill I introduce today strikes an appropriate balance between the pressing need for unfettered competition among insurers and the need for continued protection for certain procompetitive activities that benefit consumers. However, the bill does not seek to alter the application of the State action doctrine to insurers. In its 1992 decision in FTC versus Ticor Title Ins. Co., the Supreme Court provided further guidance on how State action immunity applies to the insurance industry. The bill does not affect the State action requirements articulated by the court.

Likewise, the bill does not prevent insurers from sharing information for the benefit of consumers. It contains designated safe harbors to permit insurers to engage in joint data collection. Essentially, the bill affirms what the courts have recognized; joint activities among the members of an industry that promote competition do not run afoul of the antitrust laws. Therefore, both the bill and prevailing antitrust law protect such procompetitive conduct.

However, the bill will permit appropriate challenges to blatantly anticompetitive conduct by insurers that is now immune from attack. Back room conspiracies to fix prices or sell worthless insurance will no longer be shielded from suit. Instead, the same standards of free and fair competition that apply to other industries will apply to insurance companies.

The insurance industry is too big and too important to American consumers to remain exempt from our Nation's antitrust laws. Access to insurance at affordable rates continues to be a critical program for individuals, small businesses, large companies, and even government agencies. Requiring insurance companies to abide by the rules of free competition will make an important contribution to resolving these problems. I urge my colleagues to support the bill.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 84

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Insurance Competitive Pricing Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. AMENDMENTS.

Section 2 of the Act of March 9, 1945 (59 Stat. 34; 15 U.S.C. 1012), commonly known as the McCarran-Ferguson Act, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)—

(A) by striking "Provided, That after June 30, 1948; and inserting "except that";

(B) by inserting "section 5 of" after "Clayton Act, and";

(C) by inserting "as such section 5 relates to monopolies, attempts or conspiracies to monopolize, and unlawful restraints of trade," after "Commission Act, as amended," and

(D) by striking "that such Business" and all that follows through "law," and inserting the following:

"that—

"(1) such business is not regulated by State law; or

"(2) the conduct of a person engaged in such business involves—

"(A) price fixing;

"(B) allocation with a competitor a geographical area in which, or persons to whom, insurance will be offered for sale;

"(C) unlawful tying the sale or purchase of—

"(i) one type of insurance to the sale or purchase of another type of insurance; or

"(ii) any type of insurance to the sale or purchase of any other service or product; or

"(D) monopolizing, or attempting to monopolize, any part of the business of insurance," and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(c) The conduct referred to in subsection (b)(2) shall not include making a contract, or engaging in a combination or conspiracy—

"(1) to collect, compile, or disseminate historical loss data;

"(2) to determine a loss development factor applicable to historical loss data; or

"(3) to perform actuarial services if such contract, combination, or conspiracy does not involve a restraint of trade.

"(d) For purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'historical loss data' means information respecting claims paid, or reserves held for claims reported, by any person engaged in the business of insurance; and

"(2) the term 'loss development factor' means an adjustment to be made to reserves held for losses incurred for claims reported by any person engaged in the business of insurance, for the purpose of bringing such reserves to an ultimate paid basis."

SEC. 3. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act shall take effect 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act. •

By Mr. METZENBAUM:

S. 85. A bill to provide for basic financial services; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

FINANCIAL SERVICES ACCESS ACT

• Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I rise to reintroduce legislation to provide low-cost banking services to the general public. It is high time we moved to enact legislation to provide affordable banking services to low-income and elderly Americans.

The bill I am introducing today reflects a compromise worked out during the last session of Congress between the American Association of Retired Persons and the smaller banks represented by the Independent Bankers Association of America. This legislation would require banks and savings and loans to offer consumers the choice of either a low-cost checking account or a Government check cashing service. Neither service would be free. The financial institutions could charge what is reasonable to cover the costs of providing the services plus earn a 10-percent profit.

There are safeguards built into the measure to guard against fraud. Proper identification would have to be provided to open an account. Changes were also made to respond to concerns that earlier versions of the legislation created too much redtape. For instance, under this bill financial institutions could simply self-certify that they have undertaken efforts to provide these low-cost accounts.

Mr. President, this legislation is extremely reasonable. But for the intransigence of the big banks—and the opposition of the Bush administration—we could have enacted it long ago.

Indeed, there's quite a long history with this issue.

Back in 1987, the Senate actually approved a measure I offered providing for the free cashing of Government checks. That language died in conference.

On at least two other occasions, the Senate Banking Committee included basic banking and Government check cashing provisions in their own banking reform packages.

Last session, for example, the Senate Banking Committee included the legislation worked out between AARP and the small banks in a measure funding the bank insurance fund. That's the language I am offering today. But even that effort failed to sway the big banks or the Bush administration.

They marshaled their forces and defeated this very modest proposal on the Senate floor.

But, Mr. President, hope springs eternal. There is a new administration and a new chance to do the right thing in providing low-income and elderly Americans access to basic banking services.

Make no mistake, the need for this legislation is very real.

Today's financial market offers a wide array of customer services but they've become a luxury many Americans simply can't afford. Large deposit requirements and huge transaction fees have made banking accounts far too expensive for many families. According to GAO, one in five families has no relationship with a bank.

In fact, Mr. President, many low-income and elderly persons cannot even find financial institutions to cash their Social Security, welfare, or veterans' benefit checks. Many of these institutions simply refuse to cash such checks for noncustomers at any price.

The American Association of Retired Persons has conducted surveys on this issue. They have found that 9 out of 10 financial institutions in metropolitan areas refuse to cash Government checks for nonaccount holders. Many individuals have no choice but to cash Government benefit checks at outlets charging exorbitant fees. It's a disgrace.

Mr. President, I am encouraged by the new administration's interest in increasing citizen access to financial institutions and President Clinton's public statements about community banks. I hope we can work together on the bill I am proposing today and on other measures to address the banking needs of low-income and elderly Americans who have been driven from the banking system.

I ask unanimous consent that my bill be printed in the RECORD in its entirety upon the conclusion of my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

For the purposes of this Act, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) APPROPRIATE FEDERAL BANKING AGENCY.—The term "appropriate Federal banking agency" has the same meaning as in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

(2) BOARD.—The term "Board" means the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

(3) DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—The term "depository institution" means any federally insured depository institution described in clauses (i) through (vi) of section 19(b)(1)(A) of the Federal Reserve Act.

(4) GOVERNMENT CHECK.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "government check" means any check that is issued by—
(i) the United States or any agency of the United States;

(ii) any State or any agency of any State, and that is presented for cashing purposes within the State in which the check was issued; or

(iii) any unit of local government or any agency of any unit of local government, including local government public assistance payments, and that is presented for cashing purposes within the unit of local government in which the check was issued.

(B) EXCEPTIONS.—The term "government check" does not include—

(i) State-issued payment warrants; or
(ii) checks issued by local government special purpose districts or units.

(5) GOVERNMENT CHECK CASHING RELATIONSHIP.—The term "government check cashing relationship" means an account relationship between an individual and a depository institution under which a government check cashing services account is provided pursuant to section 6.

(6) STATE.—The term "State" has the same meaning as in section 3(a) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

(7) TRANSACTION ACCOUNT.—The term "transaction account" has the same meaning as in section 19(b)(1)(C) of the Federal Reserve Act.

SEC. 3. BASIC FINANCIAL SERVICES ACCOUNTS REQUIRED.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each depository institution shall offer a basic financial services account which, at the election of the account holder, may be used to obtain—

(1) basic transaction account services; or
(2) government check cashing account services.

(b) REQUIREMENTS FOR BASIC FINANCIAL SERVICES ACCOUNTS.—A basic financial services account shall meet the requirements of this Act. A basic financial services account does not meet the requirements of this Act if it—

(1) requires the holder of such account to maintain any other relationship with the depository institution, except as provided in section 8;

(2) allows a depository institution to discriminate against low-income individuals on the basis of race, color, national origin, sex, age, marital status, receipt of public assistance, source of income, exercise of any rights under consumer protection statutes, employment status, or access to credit in order to use such basic financial services account; or

(3) requires the account holder exclusively to use direct deposit services, automated teller machines, or other nonteller services for such basic financial services account.

(c) EXEMPTION FOR CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS.—A depository institution is not required to provide a basic financial services account to any individual who—

(1) has a deposit account relationship at the depository institution or any other depository institution; or

(2) has a government check cashing relationship at the depository institution or any other depository institution.

(d) EXEMPTION FROM BASIC TRANSACTION SERVICES REQUIREMENTS.—Any depository institution that offers basic transaction services on the effective date of this Act that are, from an account holder's perspective, comparable to or more favorable than those services prescribed in section 5, shall be exempt from the provisions of section 5 for as long as the institution continues to offer comparable or more favorable basic transaction services.

(e) EXEMPTION FROM CHECK CASHING SERVICES REQUIREMENTS.—Any depository institution that offers government check cashing services on the effective date of this Act that, from an account holder's perspective, are comparable to or more favorable than those services prescribed in section 6, shall be exempt from the provisions of section 6 for as long as the institution continues to offer comparable or more favorable government check cashing services.

SEC. 4. ACCOUNT APPLICATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Board shall develop a model application form for the use of depository institutions in offering a basic financial services account.

(b) MINIMUM REQUIREMENTS.—The application form developed by the Board, or a comparable form developed by a depository institution in lieu thereof, shall—

(1) be available at all deposit taking offices of the depository institution—

(A) at which new accounts may be opened; and

(B) that are staffed by individuals employed by the depository institution; and

(2) contain the name, address, date of birth, handwritten signature, and the taxpayer identification number or other identification number of the applicant, as well as other information the Board reasonably determines to be necessary to the provision of basic transaction account services and government check cashing account services pursuant to this section.

(c) IDENTIFICATION OF APPLICANT.—At the time of application for a basic financial services account, an applicant may be required to present 2 forms of identification, 1 of which includes the signature of the applicant and 1 of which either includes a photograph or is the birth certificate of the applicant.

(d) OTHER SERVICES.—At the time of application for a basic financial services account, an applicant may be required by the depository institution to sign a document in which the applicant states whether he or she has, or has applied for, any other basic transaction services or government check cashing services.

(e) COPY PROVIDED.—The depository institution shall provide to the applicant a copy of the completed application form demonstrating the fact that the application has been received and filed with the depository institution not later than 15 calendar days after filing.

(f) REJECTION FOR FRAUD OR INTENTIONAL MATERIAL MISREPRESENTATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If, after review in good faith of the application, a depository institution has reason to believe that an applicant has committed or attempted to commit fraud against a depository institution, has made an intentional material misrepresentation in applying for a basic financial services account, has a record of writing checks for insufficient funds, or has had an account closed pursuant to section 5(a)(10), the depository institution may deny a basic financial services account to the applicant.

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—A depository institution which denies a basic financial services account to an applicant shall—

(A) provide the applicant with timely written notice setting forth the reasons supporting the depository institution's denial of a basic financial services account and the procedures available to the applicant for filing a complaint, as provided in section 11; and

(B) maintain records and files with regard to each denial made pursuant to this subsection for a minimum period of 1 year from the date of denial.

(3) FORM.—The Board shall develop a model form for the use of depository institutions in notifying applicants of a denial of a basic financial services account pursuant to this subsection.

(g) INITIAL WAITING PERIOD.—The depository institution may impose a waiting period of not more than 15 calendar days from the date of application before providing an applicant with a basic transaction services account or a government check cashing services account.

(h) IDENTIFICATION CARD.—If a depository institution issues an identification card to approved applicants, it may assess a reasonable, cost-based charge for replacement of a lost or stolen card.

SEC. 5. BASIC TRANSACTION SERVICES ACCOUNT REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—An account is a basic transaction services account for the purpose of section 3 if it is a transaction account that—

(1) is available to all account holders who maintain an average balance of $750 or more during each monthly period;

(2) does not require a minimum initial deposit or minimum balance requirement of more than $25;

(3) does not provide for the imposition of fees other than—

(A) a monthly maintenance fee or service charge that does not exceed the real, direct, and demonstrable costs of providing the account (including fraud losses and deposit insurance premiums) plus a modest profit not to exceed 10 percent of such costs;

(B) a reasonable, cost-based fee for check printing;

(C) a reasonable, cost-based fee for processing checks returned for lack of sufficient funds; and

(D) a reasonable, cost-based fee for transactions in excess of the minimum number of allowable transactions described in paragraph (5), if the depository institution permits transactions in excess of the minimum;

(4) permits checks, share drafts, electronic, or other debit instruments to be drawn on the account for purposes of making payments or other transfers to third parties;

(5) permits at least 10 withdrawals per month, including withdrawals described in paragraph (4), whether by check, share draft, in person, proprietary automatic teller machines, or other means;

(6) provides the account holder with—

(A) a detailed periodic statement listing all transactions for the period involved; or

(B) a passbook in which the depository institution enters all transactions for such account;

(7) does not require the depository institution to pay interest on deposited funds;

(8) at the election of the account holder, allows regularly recurring payments to the account holder to be made by a payor directly to the depository institution for direct deposit into the account of the account holder, if the depository institution offers direct deposit services to account holders;

(9) allows the depository institution—

(A) to market direct deposit services aggressively;

(B) to offer cost-based discounts to account holders who elect to rely wholly or partially on direct deposit or automatic teller machines in conjunction with the account; and

(C) to structure the account so as to require the use of direct deposit or automatic teller machines if—

(i) at the time of establishing the account, the account holder receives a clear and conspicuous written notice, through a disclosure form developed by the Board, stating that the account holder may decline to use direct deposit or automatic teller machines; and

(ii) the account holder does not decline to use direct deposit or automatic teller machines; and

(10) is subject to closure upon notice to the account holder due to—

(A) overdrafts, returned checks, or rejected electronic debits with respect to an account on 3 distinct occasions in any 6-month period; or

(B) fraudulent activity involving the account of such individual.

(b) COST ANALYSIS.—For the purpose of subsection (a)(3)(A), the depository institution shall base the monthly maintenance fee or service charge on functional cost analysis (actual time and actual net processing cost) studies of various types of depository institutions performed by the Board. The Board shall perform such studies in each of its regions, with, at a minimum, 1 cost study per major population area and 1 in a rural area in each region.

SEC. 6. GOVERNMENT CHECK CASHING SERVICES ACCOUNT REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—An account is a government check cashing services account for the purpose of section 3 if it—

(1) permits the account holder immediately to cash government checks in amounts of as much as $1,500, if—

(A) the account holder presents the check and is the person to whom the check has been issued; and

(B) the individual has applied to the depository institution for government check cashing services pursuant to section 4;

(2) does not require the account holder to pay a monthly service charge or maintenance fee for check cashing services;

(3) does not require the account holder to wait for receipt of funds before cashing a government check or to be subject to the institution's funds availability policy;

(4) does not require the account holder to pay a fee for the establishment of a check cashing account;

(5) does not have check cashing fees that exceed the real, direct, and demonstrable costs of providing check cashing account services (including fraud losses) plus a modest profit not to exceed 10 percent of such costs;

(6) allows the account holder to designate not less than 3 offices of the depository institution at which to cash government checks, if such offices—

(A) take deposits;

(B) open new accounts; and

(C) are staffed by individuals employed by such depository institution;

unless the depository institution has fewer than 3 offices which meet the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C); and

(7) permits the depository institution to require, prior to cashing any government check, the account holder to present—

(A) any identification described in section 4(c) or section 4(h); and

(B) the account holder's government check cashing services account number.

(b) COST ANALYSIS.—For the purpose of subsection (a)(5), the depository institution shall base such check cashing fees on functional analysis (actual time and actual net processing cost) studies of various types of depository institutions performed by the Board. The Board shall perform such studies in each of its regions, with, at a minimum, 1 cost study per major population area and 1 in a rural area in each region.

SEC. 7. INFORMATION ON ACCOUNTS.

(a) DISPLAY.—A depository institution shall conspicuously display in its lobby and other public areas of the institution brochures, pamphlets, or other written information that inform account holders and potential account holders that basic financial services accounts are available from the institution.

(b) INFORMATION.—Such brochures, pamphlets, or other written information shall—

(1) clearly explain the material features and limitations of basic transaction and government check cashing services;

(2) state that further information concerning such services is available from the depository institution upon request; and

(3) include information concerning an account holder's right to complain regarding noncompliance with this Act.

(c) AVAILABILITY.—A depository institution shall provide the information described in subsection (b) to any individual upon request.

SEC. 8. SPECIAL RULES FOR CREDIT UNIONS.

(a) BASIC TRANSACTION SERVICES.—Any credit union which, in the ordinary course of business, offers share draft accounts to its own members shall provide basic transaction services in accordance with this Act to any individual who is or becomes a member of such credit union if the individual complies with the requirements of this Act.

(b) GOVERNMENT CHECK CASHING SERVICES.—Any credit union which, in the ordinary course of business, cashes share drafts or government checks for its own members shall provide government check cashing services pursuant to this Act to any individual who is or becomes a member of such credit union if the individual complies with the requirements of this Act.

SEC. 9. SPECIAL RULES FOR CERTAIN DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.

(a) INSTITUTIONS WHICH DO NOT OFFER TRANSACTION ACCOUNTS.—A depository institution, other than a credit union, which does not, in the ordinary course of business, offer transaction accounts to the general public, is not required to provide basic transaction services.

(b) INSTITUTIONS WHICH DO NOT CASH CHECKS.—A depository institution which does not cash checks in the ordinary course of business is not required to provide government check cashing services.

SEC. 10. PREVENTION OF FRAUD LOSSES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Board may, upon petition by any individual depository institution, suspend, by regulation or order, any government check cashing services account requirement under this Act if the Board determines that the depository institution is experiencing an unacceptable level of losses due to check-related fraud in providing such account services.

(b) SUSPENSION OF REQUIREMENTS.—The Board may, by regulation or order, suspend any government check cashing services account requirement imposed by this Act for any class of checks if the Board determines that—

(1) depository institutions are experiencing an unacceptable level of losses due to check-related fraud with respect to such class of checks; or

(2) there is reasonable cause to believe that such class of checks is being used in a scheme to defraud.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 10 days after issuing any order or prescribing any regulation under subsection (a) or (b), the Board shall submit a report to the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate, explaining the reason for the order or regulation and the evidence considered in making the determination to issue an order or prescribe a regulation.

(d) EXEMPTIONS.—This Act does not apply with respect to any government check presented for cashing to a depository institution if the depository institution has reason to believe that—

(1) such check is fraudulent, is being fraudulently presented, or has been altered or forged;

(2) the individual presenting the check is misrepresenting or has misrepresented his or her identity;

(3) any form of identification that is presented in connection with cashing such check has been altered or forged; or

(4) the check will not be honored by the check-issuing governmental authority.

(e) REASONABLE BELIEF.—For purposes of subsection (d), a reasonable belief requires the existence of facts which would give rise to a well-grounded belief in the mind of a reasonable person.

SEC. 11. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Compliance with the requirements imposed under this Act shall be enforced under—

(1) section 8 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act—

(A) by the Comptroller of the Currency with respect to national banks, and Federal branches and Federal agencies of foreign banks;

(B) by the Board with respect to member banks of the Federal Reserve System (other than national banks), and offices, branches, and agencies of foreign banks located in the United States (other than Federal branches, Federal agencies, and insured State branches of foreign banks);

(C) by the Board of Directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation with respect to banks the deposits of which are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (other than banks described in subparagraph (A) and members of the Federal Reserve System) and insured State branches of foreign banks; and

(D) by the Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision with respect to Federal savings associations and Federal savings banks; and

(2) section 206 of the Federal Credit Union Act, by the National Credit Union Administration Board, with respect to any insured credit union.

(b) DEFINITION.—The terms used in paragraph subsection (a)(1) that are not defined in this Act or otherwise defined in section 3(s) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1813(s)) shall have the meaning given to them in section 1(b) of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3101).

(c) ADDITIONAL ENFORCEMENT POWERS.—

(1) VIOLATION OF THIS ACT TREATED AS VIOLATION OF OTHER ACTS.—For purposes of the exercise by the appropriate Federal banking agency of any such agency's powers under any Act referred to in subsection (a), a violation of a requirement imposed under this Act shall be deemed to be a violation of a requirement imposed under that Act.

(2) ENFORCEMENT AUTHORITY UNDER OTHER ACTS.—In addition to the appropriate Federal banking agency's powers under any provision of law referred to in subsection (a), each such agency may exercise, for purposes of enforcing this Act, any other authority conferred on such agency by any other law.

(d) FINING AUTHORITY.—No administrative monetary penalty shall be imposed pursuant to this Act.

(e) COMPLAINTS BY INDIVIDUALS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board shall develop a complaint form for individuals to use to report possible violations of this Act. Each appropriate Federal banking agency that receives a complaint shall conduct an investigation as such agency deems necessary. If such complaint is verified by an investigation, the agency shall carry out proper enforcement actions according to the authority conferred by this Act. The agency shall provide the results of such investigation and any enforcement actions in writing to the complainant and the depository institution that was investigated.

(2) TIME LIMIT ON FILING OF CERTAIN COMPLAINTS.—An agency shall not consider any complaint that alleges the denial of an application for a basic financial services account in violation of this Act, if the complaint is filed more than 1 year after the institution's denial of the application.

SEC. 12. CIVIL LIABILITY.

This Act does not create or imply any private cause of action for damages, including individual or class action causes of action.

SEC. 13. STUDY AND REPORT ON INCIDENCE OF FRAUD IN CONNECTION WITH GOVERNMENT CHECK CASHING.

(a) STUDY REQUIRED.—After the end of the 1-year period beginning on the effective date of this Act, the Board shall conduct a study of the check cashing services provided pursuant to this Act to determine whether, in any case, losses due to fraud in connection with providing such services are causing the costs incurred by various types of depository institutions to exceed revenues from the service fees collected or other income earned in connection with providing such services.

(b) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 6 months after commencing the study required by subsection (a), the Board shall submit a report to the Congress containing the findings and conclusions of the Board with respect to the study, along with such recommendations for legislative and administrative action as the Board determines to be appropriate.

SEC. 14. STUDY AND REPORT ON THE STAGGERING OF FEDERAL RECURRING PAYMENTS.

(a) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Secretary of the Treasury, in consultation with affected agencies and the public, shall conduct a study to examine the feasibility and desirability of staggering payment of Social Security and other Federal recurring government benefit and payroll payments, on the basis of birth date or other appropriate methods, so that such payments do not all occur on the 1st and 15th days of the month.

(b) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Treasury shall submit a report to the Congress regarding the results of the study described in subsection (a), along with any recommendations for legislative and administrative actions, including—

- (1) assessments of any administrative impact;
- (2) costs to the government;
- (3) any impact on depository institutions and beneficiaries (including any potential lost or increased interest earnings);
- (4) convenience to beneficiaries and the government;
- (5) methods of implementation; and
- (6) transition mechanisms that should be taken.

(c) CONSULTATION.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall consult with the public in preparing the report required under subsection (b).

SEC. 15. STUDY AND REPORT ON UTILIZING THE UNITED STATES POSTAL SERVICE AS A SUPPLEMENTAL PROVIDER OF GOVERNMENT CHECK CASHING SERVICES.

(a) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study examining current fees and practices of check cashing outlets and the potential for enhancing the access of low income individuals to government check cashing services through the United States Postal Service.

(b) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit a report to the Congress regarding the results of the study described in subsection (a), along with any recommendations for Federal or State legislative or administrative action.

SEC. 16. STUDY AND REPORT ON DIRECT DEPOSIT PROGRAM FOR FEDERAL RECURRING PAYMENTS.

(a) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study to assess the benefits and costs to the Federal Government of utilizing direct deposit versus paper checks to accomplish government payments. In conducting the study, the Comptroller General shall—

- (1) consider the administrative cost savings, if any, to be accomplished through the utilization of direct deposit, such as reduced paperwork and personnel involvement, streamlined and cost-effective operations, and reduced postage expenses;
- (2) consider the loss in interest earnings to the Federal Government as the result of the earlier relinquishment by the Government of directly deposited funds, using data on major beneficiary programs that utilize recurring Federal benefits payments;
- (3) compare the relative costs and benefits to the Federal Government of direct deposit versus paper check payments of Government benefits; and
- (4) identify societal costs and benefits of direct deposit with respect to safety, risk of loss to the individual and the Government, convenience, reliability, and timeliness of payments.

(b) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit a report to the Congress containing the results of the study described in subsection (a), along with any recommendations for legislative and administrative action that should be taken.

SEC. 17. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act shall become effective 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, except that sections 4 through 7 shall become effective on the date of enactment of this Act.

By Mr. METZENBAUM (for himself, Mr. KENNEDY, and Mr. DODD):

S. 86. A bill to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 to improve enforcement of the child labor provisions of such act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

CHILD LABOR AMENDMENTS OF 1993

• Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I rise to introduce the Child Labor Amendments of 1993. Fifty years ago, Congress passed a historic law that promised to end oppressive child labor in this country. But tragically, the disgrace of illegal child labor continues to haunt our Nation. Frankly, it is almost unbelievable to me how, in 1993, hundreds of thousands of children in this great country are being exploited: They work at too young an age, for too many hours, and in unsafe environments. This exploitation robs children of their education, the limbs, and even their lives.

For example, Food Lion, the fastest growing supermarket chain in the Nation, was recently the subject of the largest child labor complaint involving hazardous working conditions for minors ever brought against an employer by the Department of Labor. At least 1,200 alleged violations by Food Lion involve teenagers working with hazardous and prohibited equipment such as meat slicers and paper bailers.

In another similarly outrageous case, this past November, the Department reached a $500,000 tentative settlement of over 1,500 child labor violation charges against the Burger King Corp. The fast food chain is accused of illegally requiring teens to work later and for more hours than is allowed at almost every 1 of the 800 stores that the parent company operates. Although a fine of $500,000 would be the largest child labor fine ever paid by a single employer, clearly this amount is only a drop in the bucket for this multi-million dollar corporation.

These examples highlight the explosion of child labor violations during the last decade. A recent GAO report further documents the extent of the problem. That report found that between 1983 and 1990, the annual number of detected child labor violations increased from 9,679 to 42,696. GAO estimates that in 1988, 18 percent of all working 15-year-olds were illegally employed. Clearly this is a problem that has gotten out of hand.

One reason for this sorry trend is that the average assessment by the Department for a child labor violation was only $428. Fines such as these are grossly inadequate to punish willful and repeat violators of child labor laws who expose minors to serious injuries or death.

Today, along with my distinguished colleagues, Senators DODD and KENNEDY, I am introducing legislation that will close loopholes in enforcement by allowing for imprisonment on the first criminal conviction for willful violations—a recommendation originally made by former Secretary Elizabeth Dole—and by barring willful and repeated violators from receiving Federal grants, loans, and contracts. Those who willfully and repeatedly put our children's future in jeopardy should face time in jail and not be subsidized by Government aid. The bill also requires the publication of the names of violators and the nature of their violations in the appropriate school districts. This provision will help to ensure that the people most affected by illegal child labor—minors and their parents—are made aware of the law and those who violate it. These increased penalties will also help to ensure that willful and repeat violators do not consider child labor penalties just another cost of doing business.

Both the Food Lion and Burger King cases indicate that a major reason for the steady increase in the number of seriousness of child labor violations during the last decade is that the public has no knowledge about even the most basic child labor laws. This legislation will help educate children, parents, and employers about Federal child labor laws by providing that employers may hire minors under the age of 18 who do not have a high school diploma, only if those minors have obtained a valid certificate of employment. Our legislation utilizes the existing certificate systems in 43 States and the District of Columbia and thereby avoids duplication or burdensome paperwork. Under our bill, the State-issued certificate must indicate restrictions on the times of day and maximum number of hours the minor may be employed, and on the employment of minors in federally identified hazardous occupations. Moreover, as part of the certification process, materials describing Federal child labor laws will be made available to the minor.

Recent GAO reports stress the need for reliable data about the number of children working in our Nation and about any loss of life or limb that they may be suffering. Labor, child welfare, and consumer advocates all maintain that the numerous child labor violations found at Burger King and Food Lion indicate that illegal child labor is widespread. In addition, because no comprehensive work-related injury and illness data exist for minors, child labor studies underestimate the true magnitude of workplace injuries. Accordingly, the bill requires employers to provide the State with written notice of a minor employee's death or injury on the job resulting in lost work time of more than 3 working days. This information must be provided no later than 10 days after the employer obtains knowledge of the minor's death or injury. As with the certificate provisions, these reporting requirements reflect reporting systems already in place for death and serious injuries to adult workers in the 50 States and the District of Columbia. Indeed, the Federal requirements in the bill are met or exceeded by 45 of the 50 States under existing State workers compensation laws.

Department of Labor regulations already declare both pesticide handling and processing—which includes filleting of fish and dressing poultry—to be hazardous and therefore prohibited occupations for 14- and 15-year-olds. Given the dangers these jobs entail, this bill prohibits 16- and 17-year-olds from performing poultry, fish, and seafood processing and pesticide handling. The bill does not prohibit minors from performing all types of work in the poultry and fishing industries and in agriculture. The bill only seeks to protect teenagers from performing dangerous processing activities.

Another problem this legislation seeks to correct is the terrible exploitation of children under age 14 who work as migrant and seasonal farmworkers. Children ages 12, 10, 8, and even 6 years old are working with hazardous pesticides and/or performing back-breaking stoop labor in the fields. These children must be protected.

Let me make clear that I fully understand the political, social, and economic reasons for providing an exemption from child labor laws for children working on family farms. Our bill will not affect that existing exemption in any way. However, these reasons do not apply to children outside the family farm, who are under age 14 and work as migrant and seasonal farmworkers. These children come from a population that, regrettably, has been among our most vulnerable and most exploited in recent decades. They deserve the basic protections guaranteed under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Finally, the Child Labor Amendments of 1993 do not seek to put an end to all child labor. Indeed, I applaud our young people who work because of economic necessity or the learning experience or both. Education, however, should be every child's first priority. I believe that this legislation will help children and their parents to establish, maintain, and live to enjoy the results of such a priority.

I urge all my colleagues to support this legislation. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be included in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 86

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Child Labor Amendments of 1993".

TITLE I—CHILD LABOR PROVISIONS

SEC. 101. NO PRIOR OFFENSE PREREQUISITE FOR CHILD LABOR VIOLATION.

The second sentence of section 16(a) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 216(a)) is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: "except that this sentence shall not apply to a violation of section 12".

SEC. 102. CIVIL PENALTIES FOR CHILD LABOR VIOLATIONS.

Section 16(e) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 216(e)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraph (1)(2), and (3) as subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C), respectively;

(2) by inserting "(1)" after the subsection designation;

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(2) Any person who willfully violates the provisions of section 12, relating to child labor, or any regulation issued under such section, on more than one occasion, shall, on such additional violation, be ineligible—

"(A) for any grant, contract, or loan provided by an agency of the United States or by appropriated funds of the United States, for 3 years after the date of such additional violations; or

"(B) to pay the training wage authorized by section 6 of Fair Labor Standards Amendments of 1989 (29 U.S.C. 206 note), unless the Secretary otherwise recommends, because of unusual circumstances.

"(3) The Secretary shall make available to affected school districts for posting and distribution the name of each employer who violates the provisions of section 12, relating to child labor, or any regulation issued under such section, together with a description of the location and nature of the violation."

SEC. 103. CERTIFICATES OF EMPLOYMENT.

Section 12 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 212) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e)(1) As used in this subsection:

"(A) The term 'minor' means an individual who is under the age of 18 and who has not received a high school diploma or its equivalent.

"(B) The term 'parent' means a biological parent of a minor or other individual standing in place of the parent to a minor.

"(2) No employer shall employ a minor unless the minor possesses a valid certificate of employment issued in accordance with this subsection.

"(3) The Governor of a State shall designate a State agency to issue certificates of employment to minors in the State. The agency shall make available, on request, a form for the application described in paragraph (4) and shall make available, as part of the certification process, materials describing applicable Federal requirements governing the employment of minors.

"(4) To be eligible to receive a certificate of employment, a minor must submit to the appropriate State agency an application that contains—

"(A) the name and address of the minor;

"(B) the name and address of the employer;
 "(C) proof of age of the minor; and
 "(D) if the minor is under the age of 16—
 "(i) a written statement by a parent of the minor that the parent grants consent for employment of the minor; and

"(ii) written verification from the minor's school that the minor is meeting any applicable minimum school attendance requirements established under State law.

"(5) On receipt of an application under paragraph (4), a State agency shall issue to the minor—

"(A) a certificate of employment, if the requirements of paragraph (4) are met; or

"(B) a statement of the denial of a certificate of employment (including the reasons for the denial), if the requirements of paragraph (4) are not met.

"(6) A certificate of employment issued to a minor under this subsection shall be valid during the period in which the minor is employed by the employer listed on the certificate.

"(7) A certificate of employment issued to a minor under this subsection shall indicate—

"(A) the name, address, and date of birth of the minor;

"(B) the name and address of the employer;

"(C) restrictions on the times of day and maximum number of hours the minor may be employed and on the employment of the minor in hazardous occupations; and

"(D) the name, address, and telephone number of the State agency that may be contacted for additional information concerning applicable Federal requirements governing the employment of minors.

"(8) The State agency shall provide a copy of a certificate of employment issued to a minor under the age of 16 to the parent of the minor who granted consent pursuant to paragraph (4).

"(9) A State agency shall report annually to the Secretary concerning certificates of employment issued under this subsection. The agency shall include such information as the Secretary requires (including information on the number of deaths and injuries of minors reported pursuant to subsection (f))."

SEC. 104. INFORMATION ON DEATHS AND INJURIES INVOLVING MINORS; INFORMATION DESCRIBING PROVISIONS OF FEDERAL CHILD LABOR LAW.

Section 12 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 212) (as amended by section 103 of this Act) is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(f) If a minor in the course of employment suffers death, or an injury resulting in lost work time of more than 3 working days, not later than 10 days after the employer of the minor obtains knowledge of the death or injury, such employer shall provide to the State agency a written description of the death or injury.

"(g) The Secretary shall prepare and distribute to State employment agencies written materials (suitable for posting and mass distribution) that describe the provisions of Federal law and regulations governing the employment of minors."

SEC. 105. HAZARDOUS CHILD LABOR OCCUPATIONS.

Section 3(l) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(l)) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "The Secretary shall find and by order declare that poultry processing, fish and seafood processing, and pesticide handling (among other occupations declared by the Secretary) are occupations that are particularly hazardous for the employment of children between the ages of 16 and 18 for purposes of this subsection."

SEC. 106. PROTECTION OF MINORS WHO ARE MIGRANT OR SEASONAL AGRICULTURAL WORKERS.

(a) DEFINITION OF OPPRESSIVE CHILD LABOR.—The first sentence of section 3(l) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(l)) is amended—

(1) by striking "or" before "(2)"; and

(2) by inserting before the semicolon the following: ", or (3) any employee under the age of 14 years is employed in agriculture, except where such employee is employed by a parent of the employee, or by a person standing in the place of a parent of the employee, on a farm owned or operated by such parent or person";

(b) EXEMPTIONS.—Section 13(c) of such Act (29 U.S.C. 213(c)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking "(2) or (4)" and inserting "(2)"; and

(B) by striking "employed, if such employee—" and all that follows through the end and inserting "employed, if such employee is 14 years of age or older."; and (2) by striking paragraph (4).

SEC. 107. REPORTS.

Not later than 1, 2, and 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Labor shall provide to the Committee on Education and Labor of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate a report on actions taken to carry out, and the effect of, this title and the amendments made by this title, including national and State-by-State information on—

(1) certificates of employment issued to minors under section 12(e) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (as added by section 103 of this Act); and

(2) deaths and injuries of minors occurring in the course of employment that are reported under section 12(f) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (as added by section 104 of this Act).

TITLE II—MISCELLANEOUS

SEC. 201. REGULATIONS.

The Secretary of Labor shall issue such regulations as are necessary to carry out this Act and the amendments made by this Act.

SEC. 202. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act shall become effective 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act. •

• Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to join once again with my colleague, Senator METZENBAUM, in introducing legislation to better protect young people in the workplace. Many American youth are engaged in laudable work efforts that enable them to gain valuable work experience, save for an education, and, in many cases, help their families make ends meet. The Child Labor Amendments of 1993 simply reflect our deep concern that young people making their way into the world of work do so without risking their health, their success in school, and their futures.

I want to commend my colleague from Ohio for his determination to ensure fairness and safety for all workers. I am particularly pleased to join with him today in proposing legislation that would help ensure such safeguards for a special group of American workers—our youth.

Thankfully, most teenagers do well in their part-time and summer jobs. It's an American tradition we can be proud of. But there's another, more troubling, part of the story. The picture of children in sweatshops or operating hazardous equipment or falling asleep in school may seem merely an image of a bygone era. Yet for many children, it is a reality that still persists in 1993.

Child labor is indeed a modern-day problem. Child labor violations virtually exploded in the past decade, increasing from 9,679 in 1983 to 42,696 in 1990—a fourfold increase in just 7 years. During that same time period, the annual number of illegally employed children who sustained serious injuries increased by 100 percent.

At a 1991 hearing conducted by the Subcommittee on Children, Family, Drugs and Alcoholism and the Subcommittee on Labor, witnesses gave sometimes harrowing testimony that brought home the plight of the 100,000 American children injured on the job every year. Clearly our current law and current enforcement don't provide the necessary protection. In the previous administration, the Department of Labor turned greater attention to child labor, but opposed new legislation.

Mr. President, we need to do more to protect our young people, and I am hopeful that President Clinton will work with us to ensure that adequate safeguards are in place. Here is how our bill would strengthen the law on child labor.

First, it would toughen penalties for violation of child labor laws. Current sanctions for violators amount to a slap on the wrist—the average fine is $170, easily absorbed as a routine cost of doing business. Several years ago, we succeeded in raising the maximum civil penalty from $1,000 to $10,000. In this bill we seek to deter employers from breaking the law through criminal penalties for extreme violations and through new penalties of debarment from Federal grants and from the benefit of the youth subminimum wage.

Second, the bill would increase public awareness of child labor laws through more extensive use of employment certificates. One of the problems in this area is that many parents, children, educators, and even employers simply aren't aware of the law. They don't know the age limitations for different types of work the hours limitations, and the hazardous occupations that are completely off limits. I believe these provisions for greater public education will help avoid injuries and illegal employment.

Third, the bill would better protect farmworker children in migrant agriculture. Migrant and seasonal agriculture places children at particularly high risk, due to exposure to toxic pesticides and disruption of school attendance. Yet current law has multiple exemptions that permit young children to work in this setting. This legislation would apply the same prohibition against work for children under 14 years of age that now applies in nonagricultural settings. I should add that the prohibition would not apply to the family farm.

Entering the work force is a true crossroads in a young person's life. Successful entry into the world of work enhances the child's chances for success as a productive member of society. But if the child is among the 100,000 minors injured on the job every year, or if the child works so many hours that school performance plummets, that child's chances for success may be severely diminished. When one-fifth of children fail to complete high school on time, we must do everything possible to help teenagers strike the right balance between work and school. I believe this measure helps to strike that balance, and I urge my colleagues to support this legislation. ♦

By Mr. KERRY (for himself, Mr. BIDEN, and Mr. BRADLEY):

S. 87. A bill to amend the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 to provide for a voluntary system of spending limits and partial public financing of Senate primary and general election campaigns, to limit contributions by multicandidate political committees, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

CONGRESSIONAL CAMPAIGN SPENDING LIMIT AND ELECTION REFORM ACT OF 1993

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I have joined together with Senators BRADLEY and BIDEN in filing comprehensive campaign finance reform legislation. Today, we once again are introducing on the first day of the session a broad and sweeping campaign finance reform bill.

We have heard much rhetoric in recent years regarding the pollution of American politics, the corruption, as some have referred to it. We have to be measured in making our assessments about corruption and what is real or not, but what is clear, what is real, is the fact that money has come to distort the American political process, perhaps more than any other single ingredient.

The Chair knows this well, because he has served here longer than perhaps all but one other Member of Congress, and he has seen and heard it all by now. He has warned us about the new hue and cry for term limits. He has warned us that term limits are not the solution to the problem that we face in the Congress or in this country. Term limits is an example of a reaction that comes from people's bitter frustration at not being able to be in touch with their system. And the reason people are not able to be in touch with it is because of money.

We have term limits today. All of us serve under a 6-year term limit. It is 2 years in the House of Representatives. Supposedly, anyone can challenge us. Supposedly, the system is open. But, in reality, all of us know it is not really that open. The American electorate has a sense of separation between us and them, between their Government, and their concerns. And I believe very, very deeply that more than anything, that separation and that perception comes from the money chase that we have to set on to run for office.

If more people were able to challenge and take part in the democracy of this country, there would be less frustration and less demand for term limits, because more people would feel, when the 6-year term or 2-year term is up, that they have legitimate access to the system and that the system is clean and neutral between challengers and incumbents. But when it takes millions of dollars to run and when an incumbent has the clear advantage by virtue of the voting process, in accruing those millions of dollars, it is far harder for the average citizen to respond to some perception of the moment that needs to be fleshed out in a campaign and to take it to the electorate. That is wrong. We all know it is wrong. There is a natural tendency to want to hang on to the job, to feel that once we are here, somehow we are different and we are not going to be subjected to the same distortions that somehow tear the process apart. But we all know that we are human, and that just is not so.

There is not anybody who does not understand that the folks who were here in the last few days wearing blue badges, and many of them being driven around in limousines, those folks will have greater access without campaign finance reform than with it. That is a reality.

I have learned in my years here, as I perhaps grow in wisdom and judgment, that the system is not per se for sale. I am not saying that. I am not suggesting that this is an institution full of people who go around bartering for votes. But all of us know that no matter how pure we want to be, how much we withstand the pressures, the realities of the process are such that even if you do not get the legislation you want, you often succeed in stopping anything from happening.

Gridlock does not just come from a President of one party at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue and a Congress of the other party here. It comes often from the power of competing interests tied to that money to work their will. When you have the insurance industry poised against the banking industry or any other industry here, pouring money into campaigns, clearly evidencing their grassroots presence by virtue of the dollar, that has an impact on people. That distorts the process.

We have heard a lot about a new era of change in American politics. Senator BRADLEY, Senator BIDEN, and I—and I might add nearly a majority of the U.S. Senate in last year's vote—believe very deeply that we need to go further than the legislation that we passed last year, that we need to have a voluntary—I underscore voluntary—system much like the Presidential system of public funding that allows us to maximize our freedom from the fundraising effort. What our legislation seeks to do is create a fund much like the Presidential fund that is not a requirement that any taxpayer in America ante up; only those who want to take part in this system would be asked to do so, but we are confident that Americans, if given the opportunity to do so, if encouraged by our Government to do so, would take advantage of the ability to liberate their legislators from fundraising and indeed would be happy to give $3, or $6 of their tax bill in order to fund an election and legitimately liberate the U.S. Congress from fundraising.

A system in which politicians depend on Washington lawyers, lobbyists, insiders, and political action committees to raise endless sums for their political campaigns is a system in which the needs of the ordinary citizen too often get lost. The endless money chase has given the appearance of corrupting government. Too many who hold political office are seen by the public as having gone to Washington to become full-time fundraisers and only part-time legislators.

Many Americans were seduced by Ross Perot's political campaign not only because he promised change, but also because by virtue of his immense wealth he had become the only candidate who was capable of financing an entire Presidential campaign out of his own pocket. Ross Perot thus was able to tell Americans he could represent real change because he and he alone was free of obligation to any large contributor.

At a time to which the President has referred as an American renewal, we have the opportunity to return the Government to the people by freeing the process of so much special interest money. We need to consolidate the gains we made last year with the passage of a comprehensive campaign finance bill that contained spending limits, but which was vetoed by President Bush. This year, we should go further, and move towards full public funding in a system similar to the system we have had in place for Presidential campaigns for two decades, and which has been supported by President Clinton.

While Senator BIDEN, Senator BRADLEY, and I have supported the legislation offered by the majority leader, together with Senators BOREN and FORD in the past, and will again do so this year, we also have long believed that complete reform is not possible without a very substantial replacement of private funding for elections with public funds.

Public funding is an investment in clean Government that would more than pay for itself in the money saved in the reduction of the influence of special interests in the legislative process. Accordingly, the legislation we are filing today contains not merely spending limits for Senate races, similar to the bill being introduced today by the majority leader, but a system of voluntary public funding essentially to eliminate the impact of large contributions from private individuals for general election campaigns.

Voluntary public funding provides a powerful incentive to candidates to agree to spending limits. Such limits would for the first time put all serious candidates on an equal and fair footing in the general election, prevent soaring campaign costs from favoring persons of personal wealth over those without such wealth, and ensure that candidates have equal access in getting their message before the public.

This bill meets all the tests of reform.

This legislation recognizes that the sources and amounts of money are the problem that we must address. Our bill goes the greatest distance possible to reduce them.

A system of voluntary public funding would dramatically reduce the degree to which we leave ourselves open to charges of conflicts of interest between our responsibilities to the public at large and our acceptance of contributions from special interests.

It is the approach which most frees up our time from fund-raising and which requires us to raise the least money.

It is the approach which most cleans up the problems of perception, which most distances us from large donations, PAC's, and which most encourages small contributions.

Likewise, the combination of spending limits and a system for voluntary public funding stops the mindless arms race of fundraising in any contested election and helps to diminish some causes of legislative gridlock on certain issues.

The cost for full voluntary public spending funding of Senate elections would be approximately $200 million for each election cycle, or an average of $100 million a year, if all candidates participated in the voluntary public funding system. That is only one-half of the funds the United States previously allocated to subsidize campaign contributions under the tax laws prior to 1986. This expenditure would only take place if citizens decided they wanted to pay for it. Unlike all other Federal spending, this public funding would be truly voluntary. The system would be funded either through an earmark of taxes paid by citizens, or through a positive check-off, but in no case other than through voluntary participation by citizens. Its cost to the Federal budget would be fully offset by eliminating the deductibility of business lobbying expenses and five cents out of every dollar of business meals currently deducted.

The major aspects of this bill are easily summarized.

First, spending caps, a concept a majority of the Members of this body have now supported for a number of years. Without spending caps, there will always be a constant drive to find new ways to raise ever greater sums of money for campaigns. The drive to raise dollars has caused all kinds of damage to this institution—and is directly related to the loss of public trust in us. Without spending caps, we will remain forever engaged in an ever escalating campaign arms race. This legislation instead calls for parity, at low levels.

Second, voluntary public funding under a system modeled on the Presidential system. This means full public funding for general elections, just as in the Presidential system, once a major party candidate is on the ballot and has raised a threshold level of contributions of 10 percent of the overall spending limit. And it includes, as does the Presidential system, matching funds for primaries and run-offs, after candidates raise the threshold level of contributions.

This voluntary public funding plan means no more reliance on big money and PAC's to finance campaigns. Instead, campaigns will be funded for general elections and with matching funds for primaries through a voluntary tax check off as are the Presidential elections. Citizens will choose to share in the cost of elections—rather than permit high-dollar donors and special interests to claim special access.

If our citizens decide not to pay for it, then candidates would not take funds from the Treasury. Instead, candidate would be notified by the FEC that they have to go back to the current system of raising the funds from individuals to the extent that the funds are not available from the checkoff.

Public funding to clean up Federal elections was first proposed by Republican President Teddy Roosevelt. It has been supported in the past by such prominent Republicans as Henry Cabot Lodge, who once held the seat I hold today.

Indeed, four Members of the minority serving in this body in the past voted for public funding for Senate elections. So this is a concept that has had bipartisan support over the decades.

The combination of spending caps and public funding means more democracy. Today about half of all Senate races have not been real contests, because one party or the other has not been able to field a candidate who can raise enough money to be competitive.

This bill helps challengers by providing them with public funds so long as they reach reasonable, achievable thresholds of support from contributors. The bill in effect guarantees that both parties will have fully funded nominees in almost every race in the country. That means two candidates, with two messages, to give the voters a real choice in every race. This is democracy. This is real reform.

The bill also contains significant restrictions on PAC contributions—reducing permissible PAC contributions from $5,000 to $1,000 per election, and to a maximum of 20 percent of a candidate's total contributions per primary. Some Senators may support banning PAC's altogether. Indeed, I have never accepted PAC money in my Senate races because of concerns about the perception that PAC money represents special interest funding. But there are substantial doubts among constitutional scholars as to whether the Supreme Court would view such an approach to violate the Constitution, on the ground that it impairs the right to associate for political purposes. As a practical matter, however, PAC's would play a far smaller role in the process under this bill than they do today, as the bill instead contains every incentive for candidates to raise funds from small individual contributors for primaries that will be matched by public funds, and eliminates contributions to major party candidates to general elections who are participating in the voluntary system for general elections from all private sources.

The bill deals with soft money by turning it into hard money. Everything is disclosed. Nothing is under the table. And everything becomes hard dollars, kept within hard dollar limits.

The bill eliminates bundling as a means of circumventing contributions limits.

And the bill takes steps to prevent circumvention of spending and contributions caps by candidates through their relationships with outside groups, by defining any expenditures by such groups to be cooperative expenditures which will be counted toward the individual caps of the candidates they support.

There is no area we have left out—no area of contributions or expenditures is left outside the system.

For real reform, we need to endorse the basic principle of a democracy—that a race should not be determined by how much money a candidate can raise and spend, but by the quality of his message and candidacy. We should create a system of campaign finance based on the principle that an elected official should represent the voters who put him in office and not those people with the largest checkbooks.

Our bill does that. It ensures fairness to incumbents and challengers alike, to Republicans and Democrats and minor parties alike. And the bill provides a constitutionally proper approach to campaign finance reform. As the seminal campaign finance case of Buckley versus Valeo states:

Congress may engage in public financing of election campaigns and may conditions acceptance of public funds on an agreement by the candidate to abide by specified expenditure limitations. Just as a candidate may voluntarily limit the size of the contributions he chooses to accept, he may decide to forgo private fundraising and accept public funding. Buckley at 57, n. 65.

That is precisely how this legislation is structured. Moreover, the legislation contains explicit congressional findings about how the current system has led to a perception of corruption. These findings demonstrate that without controls on expenditures, as well as contributions, that perception cannot be prevented.

Last year, we passed a bill, which though not perfect, would have created real reform. I personally had concerns about the constitutionality of certain aspects of that bill, which I have sought to correct in the bill filed today. I am not certain that the complete elimination of PAC's, as contemplated by last year's bill, would have survived Supreme Court scrutiny, especially in the absence of explicit findings about PAC's corruptive influence.

In any case, last year's reforms died when the President vetoed the bill that contained them. This year, in a time of renewed hope for change, and at the start of a new Presidency, I hope that partisan political concerns will not derail the real reforms that are critical to finally free the Congress from the money chase, and to restore the public trust in this often criticized public institution.

Mr. President, I send to the desk this bill and ask the President for its appropriate referral to committee and ask that a summary of its contents and the full text of the bill be printed at the conclusion of my statement.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 87

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND DECLARATIONS OF THE SENATE.

(a) NECESSITY FOR SPENDING LIMITS.—The Senate finds and declares that—

(1) the current system of campaign finance has led to public perceptions that political contributions and their solicitation have unduly influenced the official conduct of elected officials;

(2) permitting candidates for Federal office to raise and spend unlimited amounts of money constitutes a fundamental flaw in the current system of campaign finance, and has undermined public respect for the Senate as an institution;

(3) the failure to limit campaign expenditures has caused individuals elected to the Senate to spend an increasing proportion of their time in office as elected officials raising funds, interfering with the ability of the Senate to carry out its constitutional responsibilities;

(4) the failure to limit campaign expenditures has damaged the Senate as an institution, due to the time lost to raising funds for campaigns; and

(5) to prevent the appearance of corruption and to restore public trust in the Senate as an institution, it is necessary to limit campaign expenditures, through a system which provides public benefits to candidates who agree to limit campaign expenditures.

(b) NECESSITY FOR LIMITS ON POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES.—The Senate finds and declares that—

(1) contributions by political action committees to individual candidates have created the perception that candidates are beholden to special interests, and leave candidates open to charges of corruption;

(2) unconstrained contributions by political action committees to individual candidates have undermined public confidence in the Senate as an institution; and

(3) to prevent the appearance of corruption and to restore public trust in the Senate as an institution, it is necessary to limit contributions by political action committees, while allowing such committees to continue to participate in the political process through other means, such as through independent expenditures.

(c) NECESSITY FOR ATTRIBUTING COOPERATIVE EXPENDITURES TO CANDIDATES.—The Senate finds and declares that—

(1) public confidence and trust in the system of campaign finance would be undermined should any candidate be able to circumvent a system of caps on expenditures through cooperative expenditures with outside individuals, groups, or organizations;

(2) cooperative expenditures by candidates with outside individuals, groups, or organizations would severely undermine the effectiveness of caps on campaign expenditures, unless they are included within such caps; and

(3) to maintain the integrity of the system of campaign finance, expenditures by any individual, group, or organization that have been made in cooperation with any candidate, authorized committee, or agent of any candidate must be attributed to that candidate's cap on campaign expenditures.

TITLE I—CONTROL OF CONGRESSIONAL CAMPAIGN SPENDING

Subtitle A—Senate Election Campaign Spending Limits and Benefits

SEC. 101. SENATE SPENDING LIMITS AND BENEFITS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—FECA is amended by adding at the end the following new title:

"TITLE V—SPENDING LIMITS AND BENEFITS FOR SENATE ELECTION CAMPAIGNS

"SEC. 501. CANDIDATES ELIGIBLE TO RECEIVE BENEFITS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this title, a candidate is an eligible Senate candidate if the candidate—

"(1) meets the primary and general election filing requirements of subsections (b) and (c);

"(2) meets the primary and runoff election expenditure limits of subsection (d); and

"(3) meets the threshold contribution requirements of subsection (e).

"(b) PRIMARY FILING REQUIREMENTS.—(1) The requirements of this subsection are met if the candidate files with the Secretary of the Senate a declaration that—

"(A) the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees—

"(i) will meet the primary and runoff election expenditure limits of subsection (d); and

"(ii) will only accept contributions for the primary and runoff elections which do not exceed such limits; and

"(ii)(I) will meet the primary and runoff election multicandidate political committee contribution limits of subsection (f); and

"(II) will only accept contributions for the primary and runoff elections from multicandidate political committees which do not exceed such limits;

"(B) the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees will meet the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b); and

"(C) the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees will meet the limitation on expenditures from personal funds under section 502(a).

"(2) The declaration under paragraph (1) shall be filed not later than the date the candidate files as a candidate for the primary election.

"(c) GENERAL ELECTION FILING REQUIREMENTS.—(1) The requirements of this subsection are met if the candidate files a certification with the Secretary of the Senate under penalty of perjury that—

"(A) the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees—

"(i) met the primary and runoff election expenditure limits under subsection (d); and

"(ii) did not accept contributions for the primary or runoff election in excess of the primary or runoff expenditure limit under subsection (d), whichever is applicable, reduced by any amounts transferred to this election cycle from a preceding election cycle; and

"(ii)(I) met the multicandidate political committee contribution limits under subsection (f); and

"(II) did not accept contributions for the primary or runoff election in excess of the multicandidate political committee contribution limits under subsection (f);

"(B) the candidate met the threshold contribution requirement under subsection (e), and that only allowable contributions were taken into account in meeting such requirement;

"(C) at least one other candidate has qualified for the same general election ballot under the law of the State involved;

"(D) such candidate and the authorized committees of such candidate—

"(i) except as otherwise provided by this title, will not make expenditures which exceed the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b);

"(ii) will not accept any contributions in violation of section 315;

"(iii) except as otherwise provided by this title, will not accept any contribution for the general election involved to the extent that such contribution would cause the aggregate amount of such contributions to exceed the sum of the amount of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b) and the amounts described in subsections (c) and (d) of section 502, reduced by—

"(I) the amount of voter communication vouchers issued to the candidate; and

"(II) any amounts transferred to this election cycle from a previous election cycle and not taken into account under subparagraph (A)(ii);

"(iv) will deposit all payments received under this title in an account insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation from which funds may be withdrawn by check or similar means of payment to third parties;

"(v) will furnish campaign records, evidence of contributions, and other appropriate information to the Commission; and

"(vi) will cooperate in the case of any audit and examination by the Commission under section 506; and

"(E) the candidate intends to make use of the benefits provided under section 503.

"(2) The declaration under paragraph (1) shall be filed not later than 7 days after the earlier of—

"(A) the date the candidate qualifies for the general election ballot under State law; or

"(B) if, under State law, a primary or runoff election to qualify for the general election ballot occurs after September 1, the date the candidate wins the primary or runoff election.

"(d) PRIMARY AND RUNOFF EXPENDITURE LIMITS.—(1) The requirements of this subsection are met if:

"(A) The candidate or the candidate's authorized committees did not make expenditures for the primary election in excess of the lesser of—

"(i) 67 percent of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b); or

"(ii) $2,750,000.

"(B) The candidate and the candidate's authorized committees did not make expenditures for any runoff election in excess of 20 percent of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b).

"(2) The limitations under subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) with respect to any candidate shall be increased by the aggregate amount of independent expenditures in opposition to, or on behalf of any opponent of, such candidate during the primary or runoff election period, whichever is applicable, which are required to be reported to the Secretary of the Senate with respect to such period under section 304(c).

"(3)(A) If the contributions received by the candidate or the candidate's authorized committees for the primary election or runoff election exceed the expenditures for either such election, such excess contributions shall be treated as contributions for the general election and expenditures for the general election may be made from such excess contributions.

"(B) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to the extent that such treatment of excess contributions—

"(i) would result in the violation of any limitation under section 315; or

"(ii) would cause the aggregate contributions received for the general election to exceed the limits under subsection (c)(1)(D)(iii).

"(e) THRESHOLD CONTRIBUTION REQUIREMENTS.—(1) The requirements of this subsection are met if the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees have received allowable contributions during the applicable period in an amount at least equal to the lesser of—

"(A) 10 percent of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b); or

"(B) $250,000.

"(2) For purposes of this section and section 503(b)—

"(A) The term 'allowable contributions' means contributions which are made as gifts of money by an individual pursuant to a written instrument identifying such individual as the contributor.

"(B) The term 'allowable contributions' shall not include—

"(i) contributions made directly or indirectly through an intermediary or conduit which are treated as made by such intermediary or conduit under section 315(a)(8)(B);

"(ii) contributions from any individual during the applicable period to the extent such contributions exceed $250; or

"(iii) contributions from individuals residing outside the candidate's State to the extent such contributions exceed 50 percent of the aggregate allowable contributions (without regard to this clause) received by the candidate during the applicable period.

Clauses (ii) and (iii) shall not apply for purposes of section 503(b).

"(3) For purposes of this subsection and section 503(b), the term 'applicable period' means—

"(A) the period beginning on January 1 of the calendar year preceding the calendar year of the general election involved and ending on—

"(i) the date on which the certification under subsection (c) is filed by the candidate; or

"(ii) for purposes of section 503(b), the date of such general election; or

"(B) in the case of a special election for the office of United States Senator, the period beginning on the date the vacancy in such office occurs and ending on the date of the general election involved.

"(f) MULTICANDIDATE POLITICAL COMMITTEE CONTRIBUTION LIMITS.—The requirements of this subsection are met if the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees have accepted contributions from multicandidate political committees contributions that do not exceed—

"(1) during the primary election period, an amount equal to 20 percent of the primary election spending limit under subsection (d)(1)(A); and

"(2) during the runoff election period, an amount equal to 20 percent of the runoff election spending limit under subsection (d)(1)(B).

"(g) INDEXING.—The $2,750,000 amount under subsection (d)(1) shall be increased as of the beginning of each calendar year based on the increase in the price index determined under section 315(c), except that, for purposes of subsection (d)(1), the base period shall be calendar year 1992.

"SEC. 502. LIMITATIONS ON EXPENDITURES.

"(a) LIMITATION ON USE OF PERSONAL FUNDS.—(1) The aggregate amount of expenditures which may be made during an election cycle by an eligible Senate candidate or such candidate's authorized committees from the sources described in paragraph (2) shall not exceed the lesser of—

“(A) 10 percent of the general election expenditure limit under subsection (b); or

“(B) $250,000.

“(2) A source is described in this paragraph if it is—

“(A) personal funds of the candidate and members of the candidate's immediate family; or “(B) personal debt incurred by the candidate and members of the candidate's immediate family.

“(b) GENERAL ELECTION EXPENDITURE LIMIT.—(1) Except as otherwise provided in this title, the aggregate amount of expenditures for a general election by an eligible Senate candidate and the candidate's authorized committees shall not exceed the lesser of—

“(A) $5,500,000; or

“(B) the greater of—

“(i) $950,000; or

“(ii) $400,000; plus

“(I) 30 cents multiplied by the voting age population not in excess of 4,000,000; and “(II) 25 cents multiplied by the voting age population in excess of 4,000,000.

“(2) In the case of an eligible Senate candidate in a State which has no more than 1 transmitter for a commercial Very High Frequency (VHF) television station licensed to operate in that State, paragraph (1)(B)(ii) shall be applied by substituting—

“(A) ‘80 cents’ for ‘30 cents’ in subclause (I); and “(B) ‘70 cents’ for ‘25 cents’ in subclause (II).

“(3) The amount otherwise determined under paragraph (1) for any calendar year shall be increased by the same percentage as the percentage increase for such calendar year under section 501(f) (relating to indexing).

“(c) LEGAL AND ACCOUNTING COMPLIANCE FUND.—(1) The limitation under subsection (b) shall not apply to qualified legal and accounting expenditures made by a candidate or the candidate's authorized committees or a Federal officeholder from a legal and accounting compliance fund meeting the requirements of paragraph (2).

“(2) A legal and accounting compliance fund meets the requirements of this paragraph if—

“(A) the only amounts transferred to the fund are amounts received in accordance with the limitations, prohibitions, and reporting requirements of this Act;

“(B) the aggregate amounts transferred to, and expenditures made from, the fund do not exceed the sum of—

“(i) the lesser of—

“(I) 15 percent of the general election expenditure limit under subsection (b) for the general election for which the fund was established; or

“(II) $300,000; plus

“(ii) the amount determined under paragraph (4); and

“(C) no funds received by the candidate pursuant to section 503(a)(3) may be transferred to the fund.

“(3) For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘qualified legal and accounting expenditures’ means the following:

“(A) Any expenditures for costs of legal and accounting services provided in connection with—

“(i) any administrative or court proceeding initiated pursuant to this Act during the election cycle for such general election; or “(ii) the preparation of any documents or reports required by this Act or the Commission.

“(B) Any expenditures for legal and accounting services provided in connection with the general election for which the legal and accounting compliance fund was established to ensure compliance with this Act with respect to the election cycle for such general election.

“(4)(A) If, after a general election, a candidate determines that the qualified legal and accounting expenditures will exceed the limitation under paragraph (2)(B)(i), the candidate may petition the Commission by filing with the Secretary of the Senate a request for an increase in such limitation. The Commission shall authorize an increase in such limitation in the amount (if any) by which the Commission determines the qualified legal and accounting expenditures exceed such limitation. Such determination shall be subject to judicial review under section 506.

“(B) Except as provided in section 315, any contribution received or expenditure made pursuant to this paragraph shall not be taken into account for any contribution or expenditure limit applicable to the candidate under this title.

“(5) Any funds in a legal and accounting compliance fund shall be treated for purposes of this Act as a separate segregated fund, except that any portion of the fund not used to pay qualified legal and accounting expenditures, and not transferred to a legal and accounting compliance fund for the election cycle for the next general election, shall be treated in the same manner as other campaign funds.

“(d) PAYMENT OF TAXES.—The limitation under subsection (b) shall not apply to any expenditure for Federal, State, or local taxes with respect to a candidate's authorized committees.

“(e) EXPENDITURES.—For purposes of this title, the term ‘expenditure’ has the meaning given such term by section 301(9), except that in determining any expenditures made by, or on behalf of, a candidate or a candidate's authorized committees, section 301(9)(B) shall be applied without regard to clause (ii) or (vi) thereof.

“SEC. 503. BENEFITS ELIGIBLE CANDIDATE ENTITLED TO RECEIVE.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—An eligible Senate candidate shall be entitled to—

“(1) the broadcast media rates provided under section 315(b) of the Communications Act of 1934;

“(2) the mailing rates provided in section 3626(e) of title 39, United States Code;

“(3) payments in the amounts determined under subsection (b); and “(4) voter communication vouchers in the amount determined under subsection (c).

“(b) AMOUNT OF PAYMENTS.—(1) For purposes of subsection (a)(3), the amounts determined under this subsection are—

“(A) the public financing amount;

“(B) the independent expenditure amount; and

“(C) in the case of an eligible Senate candidate who has an opponent in the general election who receives contributions, or makes (or obligates to make) expenditures, for such election in excess of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b), the excess expenditure amount.

“(2) For purposes of paragraph (1), the public financing amount is—

“(A) in the case of an eligible candidate who is a major party candidate and who has met the threshold requirement of section 501(e)—

“(i) during the primary election period, an amount equal to the amount of contributions received during that period from individuals residing in the candidate's State in the aggregate amount of $250 or less, up to 50 percent of the primary election spending limit under section 501(d)(1)(A), reduced by the threshold requirement under section 501(e);

“(ii) during the runoff election period, an amount equal to the amount of contributions received during that period from individuals residing in the candidate's State in the aggregate amount of $250 or less, up to 10 percent of the general election spending limit under section 501(d)(1)(B); and

“(iii) during the general election period, an amount equal to the general election expenditure limit applicable to the candidate under section 502(b) (without regard to paragraph (4) thereof) reduced by the amount of voter communication vouchers issued to the eligible candidate; and

“(B) in the case of an eligible candidate who is not a major party candidate and who has met the threshold requirement of section 501(e)—

“(i) during the primary election period, an amount equal to the amount of contributions received during that period from individuals residing in the candidate's State in the aggregate amount of $250 or less, up to 50 percent of the primary election spending limit under section 501(d)(1)(A), reduced by the threshold requirement under section 501(e);

“(ii) during the runoff election period, an amount equal to the amount of contributions received during that period from individuals residing in the candidate's State in the aggregate amount of $250 or less, up to 10 percent of the general election spending limit under section 501(d)(1)(B); and

“(iii) during the general election period, an amount equal to the amount of contributions received during that period from individuals residing in the candidate's State in the aggregate amount of $250 or less, up to 50 percent of the general election spending limit under section 502(b).

“(3) For purposes of paragraph (1), the independent expenditure amount is the total amount of independent expenditures made, or obligated to be made, during the general election period by 1 or more persons in opposition to, or on behalf of an opponent of, an eligible Senate candidate which are required to be reported by such persons under section 304(c) with respect to the general election period and are certified by the Commission under section 304(c).

“(4) For purposes of paragraph (1), the excess expenditure amount is the amount determined as follows:

“(A) In the case of a major party candidate, an amount equal to the sum of—

“(i) if the excess described in paragraph (1)(c) is not greater than 133⅓ percent of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b), an amount equal to one-third of such limit applicable to the eligible Senate candidate for the election; plus

“(ii) if such excess equals or exceeds 133⅓ percent but is less than 166⅔ percent of such limit, an amount equal to one-third of such limit; plus

“(iii) if such excess equals or exceeds 166⅔ percent of such limit, an amount equal to one-third of such limit.

“(B) In the case of an eligible Senate candidate who is not a major party candidate, an amount equal to the amount of contributions received during that period from individuals residing in the candidate's State in the aggregate amount of $250 or less, up to 50 percent of the general election spending limit under section 502(b).

"(c) VOTER COMMUNICATION VOUCHERS.—(1) The aggregate amount of voter communication vouchers issued to an eligible Senate candidate during a general election period shall be equal to 50 percent of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b) (25 percent of such limit if such candidate is not a major party candidate).

"(2) Voter communication vouchers shall be used by an eligible Senate candidate to purchase broadcast time during the general election period in the same manner as other broadcast time may be purchased by the candidate.

"(d) WAIVER OF EXPENDITURE AND CONTRIBUTION LIMITS.—(1) An eligible Senate candidate who receives payments under subsection (a)(3) which are allocable to the independent expenditure or excess expenditure amounts described in paragraphs (3) and (4) of subsection (b) may make expenditures from such payments to defray expenditures for the general election without regard to the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b).

"(2)(A) An eligible Senate candidate who receives benefits under this section may make expenditures for the general election without regard to clause (i) of section 501(c)(1)(D) or subsection (a) or (b) of section 502 if any one of the eligible Senate candidate's opponents who is not an eligible Senate candidate either raises aggregate contributions, or makes or becomes obligated to make aggregate expenditures, for the general election that exceed 200 percent of the general election expenditure limit applicable to the eligible Senate candidate under section 502(b).

"(B) The amount of the expenditures which may be made by reason of subparagraph (A) shall not exceed 100 percent of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b).

"(3)(A) A candidate who receives benefits under this section may receive contributions for the general election without regard to clause (iii) of section 501(c)(1)(D) if—

"(i) a major party candidate in the same general election is not an eligible Senate candidate; or

"(ii) any other candidate in the same general election who is not an eligible Senate candidate raises aggregate contributions, or makes or becomes obligated to make aggregate expenditures, for the general election that exceed 75 percent of the general election expenditure limit applicable to such other candidate under section 502(b).

"(B) The amount of contributions which may be received by reason of subparagraph (A) shall not exceed 100 percent of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b).

"(e) USE OF PAYMENTS.—Payments received by a candidate under subsection (a)(3) shall be used to defray expenditures incurred with respect to the general election period for the candidate. Such payments shall not be used—

"(1) except as provided in paragraph (4), to make any payments, directly or indirectly, to such candidate or to any member of the immediate family of such candidate;

"(2) to make any expenditure other than expenditures to further the general election of such candidate;

"(3) to make any expenditures which constitute a violation of any law of the United States or of the State in which the expenditure is made; or

"(4) subject to the provisions of section 315(k), to repay any loan to any person except to the extent the proceeds of such loan were used to further the general election of such candidate.

"SEC. 504. CERTIFICATION BY COMMISSION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Commission shall certify to any candidate meeting the requirements of section 501 that such candidate is an eligible Senate candidate entitled to benefits under this title. The Commission shall revoke such certification if it determines a candidate fails to continue to meet such requirements.

"(2) No later than 48 hours after an eligible Senate candidate files a request with the Secretary of the Senate to receive benefits under section 501, the Commission shall issue a certification stating whether such candidate is eligible for payments under this title or to receive voter communication vouchers and the amount of such payments or vouchers to which such candidate is entitled. The request referred to in the preceding sentence shall contain—

"(A) such information and be made in accordance with such procedures as the Commission may provide by regulation; and

"(B) a verification signed by the candidate and the treasurer of the principal campaign committee of such candidate stating that the information furnished in support of the request, to the best of their knowledge, is correct and fully satisfies the requirements of this title.

"(b) DETERMINATIONS BY COMMISSION.—All determinations (including certifications under subsection (a)) made by the Commission under this title shall be final and conclusive, except to the extent that they are subject to examination and audit by the Commission under section 505 and judicial review under section 506.

"SEC. 505. EXAMINATION AND AUDITS; REPAYMENTS; CIVIL PENALTIES.

"(a) EXAMINATION AND AUDITS.—(1) After each general election, the Commission shall conduct an examination and audit of the campaign accounts of 10 percent of all candidates for the office of United States Senator to determine, among other things, whether such candidates have complied with the expenditure limits and conditions of eligibility of this title, and other requirements of this Act. Such candidates shall be designated by the Commission through the use of an appropriate statistical method of random selection. If the Commission selects a candidate, the Commission shall examine and audit the campaign accounts of all other candidates in the general election for the office the selected candidate is seeking.

"(2) The Commission may conduct an examination and audit of the campaign accounts of any candidate in a general election for the office of United States Senator if the Commission determines that there exists reason to believe that such candidate may have violated any provision of this title.

"(b) EXCESS PAYMENTS; REVOCATION OF STATUS.—(1) If the Commission determines that payments or vouchers were made to an eligible Senate candidate under this title in excess of the aggregate amounts to which such candidate was entitled, the Commission shall so notify such candidate, and such candidate shall pay an amount equal to the excess.

"(2) If the Commission revokes the certification of a candidate as an eligible Senate candidate under section 504(a)(1), the Commission shall notify the candidate, and the candidate shall pay an amount equal to the payments and vouchers received under this title.

"(c) MISUSE OF BENEFITS.—If the Commission determines that any amount of any benefit made available to an eligible Senate candidate under this title was not used as provided for in this title, the Commission shall so notify such candidate and such candidate shall pay the amount of such benefit.

"(d) EXCESS EXPENDITURES.—If the Commission determines that any eligible Senate candidate who has received benefits under this title has made expenditures which in the aggregate exceed—

"(1) the primary or runoff expenditure limit under section 501(d); or

"(2) the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b), the Commission shall so notify such candidate and such candidate shall pay an amount equal to the amount of the excess expenditures.

"(e) CIVIL PENALTIES FOR EXCESS EXPENDITURES AND CONTRIBUTIONS.—(1) If the Commission determines that a candidate has committed a violation described in subsection (c), the Commission may assess a civil penalty against such candidate in an amount not greater than 200 percent of the amount involved.

"(2)(A) LOW AMOUNT OF EXCESS EXPENDITURES.—Any eligible Senate candidate who makes expenditures that exceed any limitation described in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (d) by 2.5 percent or less shall pay an amount equal to the amount of the excess expenditures.

"(B) MEDIUM AMOUNT OF EXCESS EXPENDITURES.—Any eligible Senate candidate who makes expenditures that exceed any limitation described in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (d) by more than 2.5 percent and less than 5 percent shall pay an amount equal to three times the amount of the excess expenditures.

"(C) LARGE AMOUNT OF EXCESS EXPENDITURES.—Any eligible Senate candidate who makes expenditures that exceed any limitation described in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (d) by 5 percent or more shall pay an amount equal to three times the amount of the excess expenditures plus a civil penalty in an amount determined by the Commission.

"(f) UNEXPENDED FUNDS.—Any amount received by an eligible Senate candidate under this title may be retained for a period not exceeding 120 days after the date of the general election for the liquidation of all obligations to pay expenditures for the general election incurred during the general election period. At the end of such 120-day period, any unexpended funds received under this title shall be promptly repaid.

"(g) LIMIT ON PERIOD FOR NOTIFICATION.—No notification shall be made by the Commission under this section with respect to an election more than three years after the date of such election.

"(h) DEPOSITS.—The Secretary shall deposit all payments received under this section into the Senate Election Campaign Fund.

"SEC. 506. JUDICIAL REVIEW.

"(a) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—Any agency action by the Commission made under the provisions of this title shall be subject to review by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit upon petition filed in such court within thirty days after the agency action by the Commission for which review is sought. It shall be the duty of the Court of Appeals, ahead of all matters not filed under this title, to advance on the docket and expeditiously take action on all petitions filed pursuant to this title.

"(b) APPLICATION OF TITLE 5.—The provisions of chapter 7 of title 5, United States Code, shall apply to judicial review of any agency action by the Commission.

"(c) AGENCY ACTION.—For purposes of this section, the term 'agency action' has the meaning given such term by section 551(13) of title 5, United States Code.

"SEC. 507. PARTICIPATION BY COMMISSION IN JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

"(a) APPEARANCES.—The Commission is authorized to appear in and defend against any action instituted under this section and under section 506 either by attorneys employed in its office or by counsel whom it may appoint without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and whose compensation it may fix without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title.

"(b) INSTITUTION OF ACTIONS.—The Commission is authorized, through attorneys and counsel described in subsection (a), to institute actions in the district courts of the United States to seek recovery of any amounts determined under this title to be payable to the Secretary.

"(c) INJUNCTIVE RELIEF.—The Commission is authorized, through attorneys and counsel described in subsection (a), to petition the courts of the United States for such injunctive relief as is appropriate in order to implement any provision of this title.

"(d) APPEALS.—The Commission is authorized on behalf of the United States to appeal from, and to petition the Supreme Court for certiorari to review, judgments or decrees entered with respect to actions in which it appears pursuant to the authority provided in this section.

"SEC. 508. REPORTS TO CONGRESS; REGULATIONS.

"(a) REPORTS.—The Commission shall, as soon as practicable after each election, submit a full report to the Senate setting forth—

"(1) the expenditures (shown in such detail as the Commission determines appropriate) made by each eligible Senate candidate and the authorized committees of such candidate;

"(2) the amounts certified by the Commission under section 504 as benefits available to each eligible Senate candidate;

"(3) the amount of repayments, if any, required under section 505 and the reasons for each repayment required; and

"(4) the balance in the Senate Election Campaign Fund, and the balance in any account maintained the Fund.

Each report submitted pursuant to this section shall be printed as a Senate document.

"(b) RULES AND REGULATIONS.—The Commission is authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations, in accordance with the provisions of subsection (c), to conduct such examinations and investigations, and to require the keeping and submission of such books, records, and information, as it deems necessary to carry out the functions and duties imposed on it by this title.

"(c) STATEMENT TO SENATE.—Thirty days before prescribing any rules or regulation under subsection (b), the Commission shall transmit to the Senate a statement setting forth the proposed rule or regulation and containing a detailed explanation and justification of such rule or regulation.

"SEC. 509. PAYMENTS RELATING TO ELIGIBLE CANDIDATES.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF CAMPAIGN FUND.—(1) There is established on the books of the Treasury of the United States a special fund to be known as the 'Senate Election Campaign Fund'.

"(2)(A) There are appropriated to the Fund for each fiscal year, out of amounts in the general fund of the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, amounts equal to—

"(i) any contributions by persons which are specifically designated as being made to the Fund;

"(ii) amounts collected under section 505(h); and

"(iii) any other amounts that may be appropriated to or deposited into the Fund under this title.

"(B) The Secretary of the Treasury shall, from time to time, transfer to the Fund an amount not in excess of the amounts described in subparagraph (A).

"(C) Amounts in the Fund shall remain available without fiscal year limitation.

"(3) Amounts in the Fund shall be available only for the purposes of—

"(A) making payments required under this title; and

"(B) making expenditures in connection with the administration of the Fund.

"(4) The Secretary shall maintain such accounts in the Fund as may be required by this title or which the Secretary determines to be necessary to carry out the provisions of this title.

"(b) PAYMENTS UPON CERTIFICATION.—Upon receipt of a certification from the Commission under section 504, except as provided in subsection (d), the Secretary shall promptly pay the amount certified by the Commission to the candidate out of the Senate Election Campaign Fund.

"(c) VOUCHERS.—(1) Upon receipt of a certification from the Commission under section 504, except as provided in subsection (d), the Secretary of the Treasury shall issue to an eligible candidate the amount of voter communication vouchers specified in such certification.

"(2) Upon receipt of a voter communication voucher from a licensee providing broadcast time to an eligible candidate, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to such licensee from the Senate Election Campaign Fund the face value of such voucher.

"(d) REDUCTIONS IN PAYMENTS IF FUNDS INSUFFICIENT.—(1) If, at the time of a certification by the Commission under section 504 for payment, or issuance of a voucher, to an eligible candidate, the Secretary determines that the monies in the Senate Election Campaign Fund are not, or may not be, sufficient to satisfy the full entitlement of all eligible candidates, the Secretary shall withhold from the amount of such payment or voucher such amount as the Secretary determines to be necessary to assure that each eligible candidate will receive the same pro rata share of such candidate's full entitlement.

"(2) Amounts and vouchers withheld under subparagraph (A) shall be paid when the Secretary determines that there are sufficient monies in the Fund to pay all, or a portion thereof, to all eligible candidates from whom amounts have been withheld, except that if only a portion is to be paid, it shall be paid in such manner that each eligible candidate receives an equal pro rata share of such portion.

"(3)(A) Not later than December 31 of any calendar year preceding a calendar year in which there is a regularly scheduled general election, the Secretary, after consultation with the Commission, shall make an estimate of—

"(i) the amount of monies in the fund which will be available to make payments required by this title in the succeeding calendar year; and

"(ii) the amount of payments which will be required under this title in such calendar year.

"(B) If the Secretary determines that there will be insufficient monies in the fund to make the payments required by this title for any calendar year, the Secretary shall notify each candidate on January 1 of such calendar year (or, if later, the date on which an individual becomes a candidate) of the amount which the Secretary estimates will be the pro rata reduction in each eligible candidate's payments (including vouchers) under this subsection. Such notice shall be by registered mail.

"(C) The amount of the eligible candidate's contribution limit under section 501(c)(1)(D)(iii) shall be increased by the amount of the estimated pro rata reduction.

"(4) The Secretary shall notify the Commission and each eligible candidate by registered mail of any actual reduction in the amount of any payment by reason of this subsection. If the amount of the reduction exceeds the amount estimated under paragraph (3), the candidate's contribution limit under section 501(c)(1)(D)(iii) shall be increased by the amount of such excess."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATES.—(1) Except as provided in this subsection, the amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to elections occurring after December 31, 1993.

(2) For purposes of any expenditure or contribution limit imposed by the amendment made by subsection (a)—

(A) no expenditure made before January 1, 1994, shall be taken into account, except that there shall be taken into account any such expenditure for goods or services to be provided after such date; and

(B) all cash, cash items, and Government securities on hand as of January 1, 1994, shall be taken into account in determining whether the contribution limit is met, except that there shall not be taken into account amounts used during the 60-day period beginning on January 1, 1994, to pay for expenditures which were incurred (but unpaid) before such date.

(c) EFFECT OF INVALIDITY ON OTHER PROVISIONS OF ACT.—If section 501, 502, or 503 of title V of FECA (as added by this section), or any part thereof, is held to be invalid, all provisions of, and amendments made by, this Act shall be treated as invalid.

SEC. 102. RESTRICTIONS ON ACTIVITIES OF POLITICAL ACTION AND CANDIDATE COMMITTEES IN FEDERAL ELECTIONS.

(a) CONTRIBUTIONS.—Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(1) CONTRIBUTIONS BY POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES TO SENATE CANDIDATES.—(1) In the case of a candidate for election, or nomination for election, to the United States Senate (and such candidate's authorized committees), subsection (a)(2)(A) shall be applied by substituting "$1,000" for "$5,000".

"(2) It shall be unlawful for a multicandidate political committee to make a contribution to a candidate for election, or nomination for election, to the United States Senate (or an authorized committee) to the extent that the making of the contribution will cause the amount of contributions received by the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees from multicandidate political committees to exceed the lesser of—

"(A) $825,000; or

"(B) the greater of—

"(i) $375,000; or

"(ii) 20 percent of the sum of the general election spending limit under section 502(b)

plus the primary election spending limit under section 501(d)(1)(A) (without regard to whether the candidate is an eligible Senate candidate).

"(3) In the case of an election cycle in which there is a runoff election, the limit determined under paragraph (2) shall be increased by an amount equal to 20 percent of the runoff election expenditure limit under section 501(d)(1)(B) (without regard to whether the candidate is such an eligible Senate candidate).

"(4) The $825,000 and $375,000 amounts in paragraph (2) shall be increased as of the beginning of each calendar year based on the increase in the price index determined under section 315(c), except that for purposes of paragraph (2), the base period shall be calendar year 1992.

"(5) A candidate or authorized committee that receives a contribution from a multicandidate political committee in excess of the amount allowed under paragraph (2) shall return the amount of such excess contribution to the contributor."

SEC. 103. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

Title III of FECA is amended by adding after section 304 the following new section:

"REPORTING REQUIREMENTS FOR SENATE CANDIDATES

"SEC. 304A. (a) CANDIDATE OTHER THAN ELIGIBLE SENATE CANDIDATE.—(1) Each candidate for the office of United States Senator who does not file a certification with the Secretary of the Senate under section 501(c) shall file with the Secretary of the Senate a declaration as to whether such candidate intends to make expenditures for the general election in excess of the general election expenditure limit applicable to an eligible Senate candidate under section 502(b). Such declaration shall be filed at the time provided in section 501(c)(2).

"(2) Any candidate for the United States Senate who qualifies for the ballot for a general election—

"(A) who is not an eligible Senate candidate under section 501; and

"(B) who either raises aggregate contributions, or makes or obligates to make aggregate expenditures, for the general election which exceed 75 percent of the general election expenditure limit applicable to an eligible Senate candidate under section 502(b), shall file a report with the Secretary of the Senate within 24 hours after such contributions have been raised or such expenditures have been made or obligated to be made (or, if later, within 24 hours after the date of qualification for the general election ballot), setting forth the candidate's total contributions and total expenditures for such election as of such date. Thereafter, such candidate shall file additional reports (until such contributions or expenditures exceed 200 percent of such limit) with the Secretary of the Senate within 24 hours after each time additional contributions are raised, or expenditures are made or are obligated to be made, which in the aggregate exceed an amount equal to 10 percent of such limit and after the total contributions or expenditures exceed 133%, 166%, and 200 percent of such limit.

"(3) The Commission—

"(A) shall, within 24 hours of receipt of a declaration or report under paragraph (1) or (2), notify each eligible Senate candidate in the election involved about such declaration or report; and

"(B) if an opposing candidate has raised aggregate contributions, or made or has obligated to make aggregate expenditures, in excess of the applicable general election expenditure limit under section 502(b), shall certify, pursuant to the provisions of subsection (d), such eligibility for payment of any amount to which such eligible Senate candidate is entitled under section 503(a).

"(4) Notwithstanding the reporting requirements under this subsection, the Commission may make its own determination that a candidate in a general election who is not an eligible Senate candidate has raised aggregate contributions, or made or has obligated to make aggregate expenditures, in the amounts which would require a report under paragraph (2). The Commission shall, within 24 hours after making each such determination, notify each eligible Senate candidate in the general election involved about such determination, and shall, when such contributions or expenditures exceed the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b), certify (pursuant to the provisions of subsection (d)) such candidate's eligibility for payment of any amount under section 503(a).

"(b) REPORTS ON PERSONAL FUNDS.—(1) Any candidate for the United States Senate who during the election cycle expends more than the limitation under section 502(a) during the election cycle from his personal funds, the funds of his immediate family, and personal loans incurred by the candidate and the candidate's immediate family shall file a report with the Secretary of the Senate within 24 hours after such expenditures have been made or loans incurred.

"(2) The Commission within 24 hours after a report has been filed under paragraph (1) shall notify each eligible Senate candidate in the election involved about each such report.

"(3) Notwithstanding the reporting requirements under this subsection, the Commission may make its own determination that a candidate for the United States Senate has made expenditures in excess of the amount under paragraph (1). The Commission within 24 hours after making such determination shall notify each eligible Senate candidate in the general election involved about each such determination.

"(c) CANDIDATES FOR OTHER OFFICES.—(1) Each individual—

"(A) who becomes a candidate for the office of United States Senator;

"(B) who, during the election cycle for such office, held any other Federal, State, or local office or was a candidate for such other office; and

"(C) who expended any amount during such election cycle before becoming a candidate for the office of United States Senator which would have been treated as an expenditure if such individual had been such a candidate, including amounts for activities to promote the image or name recognition of such individual, shall, within 7 days of becoming a candidate for the office of United States Senator, report to the Secretary of the Senate the amount and nature of such expenditures.

"(2) Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any expenditures in connection with a Federal, State, or local election which has been held before the individual becomes a candidate for the office of United States Senator.

"(3) The Commission shall, as soon as practicable, make a determination as to whether the amounts included in the report under paragraph (1) were made for purposes of influencing the election of the individual to the office of United States Senator.

"(d) CERTIFICATIONS.—Notwithstanding section 505(a), the certification required by this section shall be made by the Commission on the basis of reports filed in accordance with the provisions of this Act, or on the basis of such Commission's own investigation or determination.

"(e) COPIES OF REPORTS AND PUBLIC INSPECTION.—The Secretary of the Senate shall transmit a copy of any report or filing received under this section or of title V (when a 24-hour response is required of the Commission) as soon as possible (but no later than 4 working hours of the Commission) after receipt of such report or filing, and shall make such report or filing available for public inspection and copying in the same manner as the Commission under section 311(a)(4), and shall preserve such reports and filings in the same manner as the Commission under section 311(a)(5).

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, any term used in this section which is used in title V shall have the same meaning as when used in title V."

SEC. 104. DISCLOSURE BY NONELIGIBLE CANDIDATES.

Section 318 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441d), as amended by section 133, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(e) If a broadcast, cablecast, or other communication is paid for or authorized by a candidate in the general election for the office of United States Senator who is not an eligible Senate candidate, or the authorized committee of such candidate, such communication shall contain the following sentence: 'This candidate has not agreed to voluntary campaign spending limits.'"

Subtitle B—General Provisions

SEC. 131. BROADCAST RATES AND PREEMPTION.

(a) BROADCAST RATES.—Section 315(b) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 315(b)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking out "forty-five" and inserting in lieu thereof "30";

(B) by striking out "sixty" and inserting in lieu thereof "45"; and

(C) by striking out "lowest unit charge of the station for the same class and amount of time for the same period" and insert "lowest charge of the station for the same amount of time for the same period on the same date"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new sentence:

"In the case of an eligible Senate candidate (as defined in section 301(19) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971), the charges during the general election period (as defined in section 301(21) of such Act) shall not exceed 50 percent of the lowest charge described in paragraph (1)."

(b) PREEMPTION; ACCESS.—Section 315 of such Act (47 U.S.C. 315) is amended by redesignating subsections (c) and (d) as subsections (e) and (f), respectively, and by inserting immediately after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), a licensee shall not preempt the use, during any period specified in subsection (b)(1), of a broadcasting station by a legally qualified candidate for public office who has purchased and paid for such use pursuant to the provisions of subsection (b)(1).

"(2) If a program to be broadcast by a broadcasting station is preempted because of circumstances beyond the control of the broadcasting station, any candidate advertising spot scheduled to be broadcast during that program may also be preempted.

"(d) In the case of a legally qualified candidate for the United States Senate, a licensee shall provide broadcast time without regard to the rates charged for the time."

SEC. 132. EXTENSION OF REDUCED THIRD-CLASS MAILING RATES TO ELIGIBLE SENATE CANDIDATES.

Section 3626(e) of title 39, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2)(A)—

(A) by striking out "and the National" and inserting in lieu thereof "the National"; and

(B) by striking out "Committee;" and inserting in lieu thereof "Committee, and, subject to paragraph (3), the principal campaign committee of an eligible House of Representatives or Senate candidate;"

(2) in paragraph (2)(B), by striking out "and" after the semicolon;

(3) in paragraph (2)(C), by striking out the period and inserting in lieu thereof "; and";

(4) by adding after paragraph (2)(C) the following new subparagraph:

"(D) The terms 'eligible Senate candidate' and 'principal campaign committee' have the meanings given those terms in section 301 of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971;"

(5) by adding after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

"(3) The rate made available under this subsection with respect to an eligible Senate candidate shall apply only to—

"(A) the general election period (as defined in section 301 of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971); and

"(B) that number of pieces of mail equal to the number of individuals in the voting age population (as certified under section 315(e) of such Act) of the congressional district or State, whichever is applicable."

SEC. 133. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS FOR CERTAIN INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURES.

Section 304(c) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 434(c)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2), by striking out the undesignated matter after subparagraph (C);

(2) by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (5); and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (2), as amended by paragraph (1), the following new paragraphs:

"(3)(A) Any independent expenditure (including those described in subsection (b)(6)(B)(iii) of this section) aggregating $1,000 or more made after the 20th day, but more than 24 hours, before any election shall be reported within 24 hours after such independent expenditure is made.

"(B) Any independent expenditure aggregating $10,000 or more made at any time up to and including the 20th day before any election shall be reported within 48 hours after such independent expenditure is made. An additional statement shall be filed each time independent expenditures aggregating $10,000 are made with respect to the same election as the initial statement filed under this section.

"(C) Such statement shall be filed with the Secretary of the Senate and the Secretary of State of the State involved and shall contain the information required by subsection (b)(6)(B)(iii) of this section, including whether the independent expenditure is in support of, or in opposition to, the candidate involved. The Secretary of the Senate shall as soon as possible (but not later than 4 working hours of the Commission) after receipt of a statement transmit it to the Commission. Not later than 48 hours after the Commission receives a report, the Commission shall transmit a copy of the report to each candidate seeking nomination or election to that office.

"(D) For purposes of this section, the term 'made' includes any action taken to incur an obligation for payment.

"(4)(A) If any person intends to make independent expenditures totaling $5,000 during the 20 days before an election, such person shall file a statement no later than the 20th day before the election.

"(B) Such statement shall be filed with the Secretary of the Senate and the Secretary of State of the State involved, and shall identify each candidate whom the expenditure will support or oppose. The Secretary of the Senate shall as soon as possible (but not later than 4 working hours of the Commission) after receipt of a statement transmit it to the Commission. Not later than 48 hours after the Commission receives a statement under this paragraph, the Commission shall transmit a copy of the statement to each candidate identified.

"(5) The Commission may make its own determination that a person has made, or has incurred obligations to make, independent expenditures with respect to any Federal election which in the aggregate exceed the applicable amounts under paragraph (3) or (4). The Commission shall notify each candidate in such election of such determination within 24 hours of making it.

"(6) At the same time as a candidate is notified under paragraph (3), (4), or (5) with respect to expenditures during a general election period, the Commission shall certify eligibility to receive benefits under section 504(a) or section 604(b).

"(7) The Secretary of the Senate shall make any statement received under this subsection available for public inspection and copying in the same manner as the Commission under section 311(a)(4), and shall preserve such statements in the same manner as the Commission under section 311(a)(5)."

SEC. 134. CAMPAIGN ADVERTISING AMENDMENTS.

Section 318 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 411d) is amended—

(1) in the matter before paragraph (1) of subsection (a), by striking "an expenditure" and inserting "a disbursement";

(2) in the matter before paragraph (1) of subsection (a), by striking "direct";

(3) in paragraph (3) of subsection (a), by inserting after "name" the following "and permanent street address"; and

(4) by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(c) Any printed communication described in subsection (a) shall be—

"(1) of sufficient type size to be clearly readable by the recipient of the communication;

"(2) contained in a printed box set apart from the other contents of the communication; and

"(3) consist of a reasonable degree of color contrast between the background and the printed statement.

"(d)(1) Any broadcast or cablecast communication described in subsection (a)(1) or subsection (a)(2) shall include, in addition to the requirements of those subsections an audio statement by the candidate that identifies the candidate and states that the candidate has approved the communication.

"(2) If a broadcast or cablecast communication described in paragraph (1) is broadcast or cablecast by means of television, the statement required by paragraph (1) shall—

"(A) appear in a clearly readable manner with a reasonable degree of color contrast between the background and the printed statement, for a period of at least 4 seconds; and

"(B) be accompanied by a clearly identifiable photographic or similar image of the candidate.

"(e) Any broadcast or cablecast communication described in subsection (a)(3) shall include, in addition to the requirements of those subsections, in a clearly spoken manner, the following statement—

"I am responsible for the content of this advertisement."

with the blank to be filled in with the name of the political committee or other person paying for the communication and the name of any connected organization of the payor; and, if broadcast or cablecast by means of television, shall also appear in a clearly readable manner with a reasonable degree of color contrast between the background and the printed statement, for a period of at least 4 seconds."

SEC. 135. DEFINITIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 301 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431) is amended by striking paragraph (19) and inserting the following new paragraphs:

"(19) The term 'eligible Senate candidate' means a candidate who is eligible under section 502 to receive benefits under title V.

"(20) The term 'general election' means any election which will directly result in the election of a person to a Federal office, but does not include an open primary election.

"(21) The term 'general election period' means, with respect to any candidate, the period beginning on the day after the date of the primary or runoff election for the specific office the candidate is seeking, whichever is later, and ending on the earlier of—

"(A) the date of such general election; or

"(B) the date on which the candidate withdraws from the campaign or otherwise ceases actively to seek election.

"(22) The term 'immediate family' means—

"(A) a candidate's spouse;

"(B) a child, stepchild, parent, grandparent, brother, half-brother, sister or half-sister of the candidate or the candidate's spouse; and

"(C) the spouse of any person described in subparagraph (B).

"(23) The term 'major party' has the meaning given such term in section 9002(6) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, except that if a candidate qualified under State law for the ballot in a general election in an open primary in which all the candidates for the office participated and which resulted in the candidate and at least one other candidate qualifying for the ballot in the general election, such candidate shall be treated as a candidate of a major party for purposes of title V.

"(24) The term 'primary election' means an election which may result in the selection of a candidate for the ballot in a general election for a Federal office.

"(25) The term 'primary election period' means, with respect to any candidate, the period beginning on the day following the date of the last election for the specific office the candidate is seeking and ending on the earlier of—

"(A) the date of the first primary election for that office following the last general election for that office; or

"(B) the date on which the candidate withdraws from the election or otherwise ceases actively to seek election.

"(26) The term 'runoff election' means an election held after a primary election which is prescribed by applicable State law as the means for deciding which candidate will be on the ballot in the general election for a Federal office.

"(27) The term 'runoff election period' means, with respect to any candidate, the period beginning on the day following the date of the last primary election for the specific office such candidate is seeking and ending on the date of the runoff election for such office.

"(28) The term 'voting age population' means the resident population, 18 years of age or older, as certified pursuant to section 315(e).

"(29) The term 'election cycle' means—

"(A) in the case of a candidate or the authorized committees of a candidate, the term beginning on the day after the date of the most recent general election for the specific office or seat which such candidate seeks and ending on the date of the next general election for such office or seat; or

"(B) for all other persons, the term beginning on the first day following the date of the last general election and ending on the date of the next general election.

"(30) The terms 'Senate Election Campaign Fund' and 'Fund' mean the Senate Election Campaign Fund established under section 509.

"(31) The term 'lobbyist' means—

"(A) a person required to register under section 308 of the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act (2 U.S.C. 267) or the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938 (22 U.S.C. 611 et seq.); and

"(B) a person who receives compensation in return for having contact with Congress on any legislative matter."

(b) IDENTIFICATION.—Section 301(13) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(13)) is amended by striking "mailing address" and inserting "permanent residence address".

SEC. 136. PROVISIONS RELATING TO FRANKED MASS MAILINGS.

(a) MASS MAILINGS OF SENATORS.—Section 3210(a)(6) of title 39, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking "It is the intent of Congress that a Member of, or a Member-elect to, Congress" and inserting "A Member of, or Member-elect to, the House"; and

(2) in subparagraph (C)—

(A) by striking "if such mass mailing is postmarked fewer than 60 days immediately before the date" and inserting "if such mass mailing is postmarked during the calendar year"; and

(B) by inserting "or reelection" immediately before the period.

(b) MASS MAILINGS OF HOUSE MEMBERS.—Section 3210 of title 39, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(7) by striking ", except that—" and all that follows through the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting a period; and

(2) in subsection (d)(1) by striking "delivery—" and all that follows through the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting "delivery within that area constituting the congressional district or State from which the Member was elected."

(c) PROHIBITION ON USE OF OFFICIAL FUNDS.—The Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives may not approve any payment, nor may a Member of the House of Representatives make any expenditure from, any allowance of the House of Representatives or any other official funds if any portion of the payment or expenditure is for any cost related to a mass mailing by a Member of the House of Representatives outside the congressional district of the Member.

TITLE II—INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURES

SEC. 201. CLARIFICATION OF DEFINITIONS RELATING TO INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURES.

(a) INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURE DEFINITION AMENDMENT.—Section 301 of FECA (2 U.S.C.

431) is amended by striking paragraphs (17) and (18) and inserting the following:

"(17)(A) The term 'independent expenditure' means an expenditure for an advertisement or other communication that—"(i) contains express advocacy; and

"(ii) is made without the participation or cooperation of a candidate or a candidate's representative.

"(B) The following shall not be considered an independent expenditure:

"(i) An expenditure made by a political committee of a political party.

"(ii) An expenditure made by a person who, during the election cycle, has communicated with or received information from a candidate or a representative of that candidate regarding activities that have the purpose of influencing that candidate's election to Federal office, where the expenditure is in support of that candidate or in opposition to another candidate for that office.

"(iii) An expenditure if there is any arrangement, coordination, or direction with respect to the expenditure between the candidate or the candidate's agent and the person making the expenditure.

"(iv) An expenditure if, in the same election cycle, the person making the expenditure is or has been—

"(I) authorized to raise or expend funds on behalf of the candidate or the candidate's authorized committees; or

"(II) serving as a member, employee, or agent of the candidate's authorized committees in an executive or policymaking position.

"(v) An expenditure if the person making the expenditure has advised or counseled the candidate or the candidate's agents at any time on the candidate's plans, projects, or needs relating to the candidate's pursuit of nomination for election, or election, to Federal office, in the same election cycle, including any advice relating to the candidate's decision to seek Federal office.

"(vi) An expenditure if the person making the expenditure retains the professional services of any individual or other person also providing those services in the same election cycle to the candidate in connection with the candidate's pursuit of nomination for election, or election, to Federal office, including any services relating to the candidate's decision to seek Federal office.

"(vii) An expenditure if the person making the expenditure has consulted at any time during the same election cycle about the candidate's plans, projects, or needs relating to the candidate's pursuit of nomination for election, or election, to Federal office, with—

"(I) any officer, director, employee or agent of a party committee that has made or intends to make expenditures or contributions, pursuant to subsections (a), (d), or (h) of section 315 in connection with the candidate's campaign; or

"(II) any person whose professional services have been retained by a political party committee that has made or intends to make expenditures or contributions pursuant to subsections (a), (d), or (h) of section 315 in connection with the candidate's campaign.

For purposes of this subparagraph, the person making the expenditure shall include any officer, director, employee, or agent of such person.

"(18) The term 'express advocacy' means, when a communication is taken as a whole, an expression of support for or opposition to a specific candidate, to a specific group of candidates, or to candidates of a particular political party, or a suggestion to take action with respect to an election, such as to vote for or against, make contributions to, or participate in campaign activity."

(b) CONTRIBUTION DEFINITION AMENDMENT.—Section 301(8)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)(A)) is amended—

(1) in clause (i), by striking "or" after the semicolon at the end;

(2) in clause (ii), by striking the period at the end and inserting "; or"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(iii) any payment or other transaction referred to in paragraph (17)(A)(i) that does not qualify as an independent expenditure under paragraph (17)(A)(ii)."

TITLE III—EXPENDITURES

Subtitle A—Personal Loans; Credit

SEC. 301. PERSONAL CONTRIBUTIONS AND LOANS.

Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a), as amended by section 122, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(k) LIMITATIONS ON PAYMENTS TO CANDIDATES.—(1) If a candidate or a member of the candidate's immediate family made any loans to the candidate or to the candidate's authorized committees during any election cycle, no contributions after the date of the general election for such election cycle may be used to repay such loans.

"(2) No contribution by a candidate or member of the candidate's immediate family may be returned to the candidate or member other than as part of a pro rata distribution of excess contributions to all contributors."

SEC. 302. EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT.

Section 301(8)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)(A)), as amended by section 201(b), is amended—

(1) by striking "or" at the end of clause (ii);

(2) by striking the period at the end of clause (iii) and inserting "; or"; and

(3) by inserting at the end the following new clause:

"(iv) with respect to a candidate and the candidate's authorized committees, any extension of credit for goods or services relating to advertising on broadcasting stations, in newspapers or magazines, or by mailings, or relating to other similar types of general public political advertising, if such extension of credit is—

"(I) in an amount of more than $1,000; and

"(II) for a period greater than the period, not in excess of 60 days, for which credit is generally extended in the normal course of business after the date on which such goods or services are furnished or the date of the mailing in the case of advertising by a mailing."

Subtitle B—Provisions Relating to Soft Money of Political Parties

SEC. 311. CONTRIBUTIONS TO POLITICAL PARTY COMMITTEES.

(a) INDIVIDUAL CONTRIBUTIONS TO STATE PARTY.—Paragraph (1) of section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(1)) is amended by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (B), by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (D), and by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) to political committees established and maintained by a State committee of a political party in any calendar year which, in the aggregate, exceed $10,000; or"

(b) MULTICANDIDATE COMMITTEE CONTRIBUTIONS TO STATE PARTY.—Paragraph (2) of section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(2)) is amended by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (B), by redesignating subpara-graph (C) as subparagraph (D), and by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) To political committees established and maintained by a State committee of a political party in any calendar year which, in the aggregate, exceed $10,000; or".

(c) INCREASE IN OVERALL LIMIT.—Paragraph (3) of section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(3)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The limitation under this paragraph shall be increased (but not by more than $5,000) by the amount of contributions made by an individual during a calendar year to political committees which are taken into account for purposes of paragraph (1)(C)".

SEC. 312. PROVISIONS RELATING TO NATIONAL, STATE, AND LOCAL PARTY COMMITTEES.

(a) EXPENDITURES BY STATE COMMITTEES IN CONNECTION WITH PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGNS.—Section 315(d) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(d)) is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) A State committee of a political party, including subordinate committees of that State committee, shall not make expenditures in connection with the general election campaign of a candidate for President of the United States who is affiliated with such party which, in the aggregate, exceed an amount equal to 4 cents multiplied by the voting age population of the State, as certified under subsection (e). This paragraph shall not authorize a committee to make expenditures for audio broadcasts (including television broadcasts) in excess of the amount which could have been made without regard to this paragraph."

(b) CONTRIBUTION AND EXPENDITURE EXCEPTIONS.—(1) Section 301(8)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)(B)) is amended—

(A) in clause (xi), by striking "direct mail" and inserting "mail"; and

(B) by repealing clauses (x) and (xii).

(2) Section 301(9)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(9)(B)) is amended by repealing clauses (viii) and (ix).

(c) SOFT MONEY OF COMMITTEES OF POLITICAL PARTIES.—(1) Title III of FECA is amended by inserting after section 323 the following new section:

"POLITICAL PARTY COMMITTEES

"SEC. 324. (a) Any amount solicited, received, or expended directly or indirectly by a national, State, district, or local committee of a political party (including any subordinate committee) with respect to an activity which, in whole or in part, is in connection with an election to Federal office shall be subject in its entirety to the limitations, prohibitions, and reporting requirements of this Act.

"(b) For purposes of subsection (a)—

"(1) Any activity which is solely for the purpose of influencing an election for Federal office is in connection with an election for Federal office.

"(2) Except as provided in paragraph (3), any of the following activities during a Federal election period shall be treated as in connection with an election for Federal office:

"(A) Voter registration and get-out-the-vote activities.

"(B) Campaign activities, including broadcasting, newspaper, magazine, billboard, mass mail, and newsletter communications, and similar kinds of communications or public advertising that—"(i) are generic campaign activities; or

"(ii) identify a Federal candidate regardless of whether a State or local candidate is also identified.

"(C) The preparation and dissemination of campaign materials that are part of a generic campaign activity or that identify a Federal candidate, regardless of whether a State or local candidate is also identified.

"(D) Development and maintenance of voter files.

"(E) Any other activity affecting (in whole or in part) an election for Federal office.

"(3) The following shall not be treated as in connection with a Federal election:

"(A) Any amount described in section 301(8)(B)(viii).

"(B) Any amount contributed to a candidate for other than Federal office.

"(C) Any amount received or expended in connection with a State or local political convention.

"(D) Campaign activities, including broadcasting, newspaper, magazine, billboard, mass mail, and newsletter communications, and similar kinds of communications or public advertising that are exclusively on behalf of State or local candidates and are not activities described in paragraph (2)(A).

"(E) Administrative expenses of a State or local committee of a political party, including expenses for—

"(i) overhead;

"(ii) staff (other than individuals devoting a substantial portion of their activities to elections for Federal office); and

"(iii) conducting party elections or caucuses.

"(F) Research pertaining solely to State and local candidates and issues.

"(G) Development and maintenance of voter files other than during a Federal election period.

"(H) Activities described in paragraph (2)(A) which are conducted other than during a Federal election period.

"(I) Any other activity which is solely for the purpose of influencing, and which solely affects, an election for non-Federal office.

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'Federal election period' means the period—

"(A) beginning on June 1, of any even-numbered calendar year (April 1 if an election to the office of President occurs in such year), and

"(B) ending on the date during such year on which regularly scheduled general elections for Federal office occur.

In the case of a special election, the Federal election period shall include at least the 60-day period ending on the date of the election.

"(c) SOLICITATION OF COMMITTEES.—A national committee of a political party may not solicit or accept contributions not subject to the limitations, prohibitions, and reporting requirements of this Act.

"(d) AMOUNTS RECEIVED FROM STATE AND LOCAL CANDIDATE COMMITTEES.—(1) For purposes of subsection (a), any amount received by a national, State, district, or local committee of a political party (including any subordinate committee) from a State or local candidate committee shall be treated as meeting the requirements of subsection (a) and section 304(d) if—

"(A) such amount is derived from funds which meet the requirements of this Act with respect to any limitation or prohibition as to source or dollar amount, and

"(B) the State or local candidate committee—

"(i) maintains, in the account from which payment is made, records of the sources and amounts of funds for purposes of determining whether such requirements are met, and

"(ii) certifies to the other committee that such requirements were met.

"(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (1), any committee receiving any contribution described in paragraph (1) from a State or local candidate committee shall be required to meet the reporting requirements of this Act with respect to receipt of the contribution from such candidate committee.

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, a State or local candidate committee is a committee established, financed, maintained, or controlled by a candidate for other than Federal office."

(2) Section 315(d) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(d)), as amended by subsection (a), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5)(A) The national committee of a political party, the congressional campaign committees of a political party, and a State or local committee of a political party, including a subordinate committee of any of the preceding committees, shall not make expenditures during any calendar year for activities described in section 324(b)(2) with respect to such State which, in the aggregate, exceed an amount equal to 30 cents multiplied by the voting age population of the State (as certified under subsection (e)).

"(B) Expenditures authorized under this paragraph shall be in addition to other expenditures allowed under this subsection, except that this paragraph shall not authorize a committee to make expenditures to which paragraph (3) or (4) applies in excess of the limit applicable to such expenditures under paragraph (3) or (4).

"(C) No adjustment to the limitation under this paragraph shall be made under subsection (c) before 1992 and the base period for purposes of any such adjustment shall be 1990.

"(D) For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) a local committee of a political party shall only include a committee that is a political committee (as defined in section 301(4)); and

"(ii) a State committee shall not be required to record or report under this Act the expenditures of any other committee which are made independently from the State committee."

(3) Section 301(4) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(4)) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence:

"For purposes of subparagraph (C), any payments for get-out-the-vote activities on behalf of candidates for office other than Federal office shall be treated as payments exempted from the definition of expenditure under paragraph (9) of this section."

(4) Section 301(8)(B)(viii) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)(B)(viii)) is amended by striking "defray" and inserting "pay indebtedness incurred prior to January 1, 1993, for the purpose of defraying".

(d) GENERIC ACTIVITIES.—Section 301 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431), as amended by section 135, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(31) The term 'generic campaign activity' means a campaign activity the preponderant purpose or effect of which is to promote a political party rather than any particular Federal or non-Federal candidate."

SEC. 313. RESTRICTIONS ON FUNDRAISING BY CANDIDATES AND OFFICEHOLDERS.

(a) STATE FUNDRAISING ACTIVITIES.—Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a), as amended by section 301, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(1) LIMITATIONS ON FUNDRAISING ACTIVITIES OF FEDERAL CANDIDATES AND OFFICEHOLDERS AND CERTAIN POLITICAL COMMITTEES.—(1) For purposes of this Act, a candidate for Federal office (or an individual holding Federal office) may not solicit funds to, or receive funds on behalf of, any Federal or non-Federal candidate or political committee—

"(A) which are to be expended in connection with any election for Federal office unless such funds are subject to the limitations, prohibitions, and requirements of this Act; or

"(B) which are to be expended in connection with any election for other than Federal office unless such funds are not in excess of amounts permitted with respect to Federal candidates and political committees under this Act, and are not from sources prohibited by this Act with respect to elections to Federal office.

"(2)(A) The aggregate amount which a person described in subparagraph (B) may solicit from a multicandidate political committee for State committees described in subsection (a)(1)(C) (including subordinate committees) for any calendar year shall not exceed the dollar amount in effect under subsection (a)(2)(B) for the calendar year.

"(B) A person is described in this subparagraph if such person is a candidate for Federal office, an individual holding Federal office, or any national, State, district, or local committee of a political party (including subordinate committees).

"(3) The appearance or participation by a candidate or individual in any activity (including fundraising) conducted by a committee of a political party or a candidate for other than Federal office shall not be treated as a solicitation for purposes of paragraph (1) if—

"(A) such appearance or participation is otherwise permitted by law; and

"(B) such candidate or individual does not solicit or receive, or make expenditures from, any funds resulting from such activity.

"(4) Paragraph (1) shall not apply to the solicitation or receipt of funds, or disbursements, by an individual who is a candidate for other than Federal office if such activity is permitted under State law.

"(5) For purposes of this subsection, an individual shall be treated as holding Federal office if such individual is described in section 101(f) of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978."

(b) TAX-EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS.—Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a), as amended by subsection (a), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(m) TAX-EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS.—(1) If during any period an individual is a candidate for, or holds, Federal office, such individual may not during such period solicit contributions to, or on behalf of, any organization which is described in section 501(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 if a significant portion of the activities of such organization include voter registration or get-out-the-vote campaigns.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, an individual shall be treated as holding Federal office if such individual is described in section 101(f) of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978."

SEC. 314. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—Section 304 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 434) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) POLITICAL COMMITTEES.—(1) The national committee of a political party and any congressional campaign committee, and any subordinate committee of either, shall report all receipts and disbursements during the reporting period, whether or not in connection with an election for Federal office.

"(2) A political committee (not described in paragraph (1)) to which section 324 applies shall report all receipts and disbursements in connection with a Federal election (as determined under section 324).

"(3) Any political committee to which section 324 applies shall include in its report under paragraph (1) or (2) the amount of any transfer described in section 324(c) and the reason for the transfer.

"(4) Any political committee to which paragraph (1) or (2) does not apply shall report any receipts or disbursements which are used in connection with a Federal election.

"(5) If any receipt or disbursement to which this subsection applies exceeds $200, the political committee shall include identification of the person from whom, or to whom, such receipt or disbursement was made.

"(6) Reports required to be filed by this subsection shall be filed for the same time periods required for political committees under subsection (a)."

(b) REPORT OF EXEMPT CONTRIBUTIONS.—Section 301(8) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 431(8)) is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following:

"(C) The exclusions provided in clauses (v) and (viii) of subparagraph (B) shall not apply for purposes of any requirement to report contributions under this Act, and all such contributions in excess of $200 shall be reported."

(c) REPORTING OF EXEMPT EXPENDITURES.—Section 301(9) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 431(9)) is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following:

"(C) The exclusions provided in clause (iv) of subparagraph (B) shall not apply for purposes of any requirement to report expenditures under this Act, and all such expenditures in excess of $200 shall be reported."

(d) CONTRIBUTIONS AND EXPENDITURES OF POLITICAL COMMITTEES.—Section 301(4) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(4)) is amended by adding at the end the following: "For purposes of this paragraph, the receipt of contributions or the making of, or obligating to make, expenditures shall be determined by the Commission on the basis of facts and circumstances, in whatever combination, demonstrating a purpose of influencing any election for Federal office, including, but not limited to, the representations made by any person soliciting funds about their intended uses; the identification by name of individuals who are candidates for Federal office or of any political party, in general public political advertising; and the proximity to any primary, runoff, or general election of general public political advertising designed or reasonably calculated to influence voter choice in that election."

(e) REPORTS BY STATE COMMITTEES.—Section 304 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 434), as amended by subsection (a), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) FILING OF STATE REPORTS.—In lieu of any report required to be filed by this Act, the Commission may allow a State committee of a political party to file with the Commission a report required to be filed under State law if the Commission determines such reports contain substantially the same information."

TITLE IV—CONTRIBUTIONS

SEC. 401. CONTRIBUTIONS THROUGH INTERMEDIARIES AND CONDUITS.

Section 315(a)(8) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(8)) is amended to read as follows:

"(8) For the purposes of this subsection:

"(A) Contributions made by a person, either directly or indirectly, to or on behalf of a particular candidate, including contributions that are in any way earmarked or otherwise directed through an intermediary or conduit to a candidate, shall be treated as contributions from the person to the candidate.

"(B) Contributions made directly or indirectly by a person to or on behalf of a particular candidate through an intermediary or conduit, including contributions made or arranged to be made by an intermediary or conduit, shall be treated as contributions from the intermediary or conduit to the candidate if—

"(i) the contributions made through the intermediary or conduit are in the form of a check or other negotiable instrument made payable to the intermediary or conduit rather than the intended recipient; or

"(ii) the intermediary or conduit is—

"(I) a political committee;

"(II) an officer, employee, or agent of such a political committee;

"(III) a political party;

"(IV) a partnership or sole proprietorship;

"(V) a lobbyist; or

"(VI) an organization prohibited from making contributions under section 316, or an officer, employee, or agent of such an organization acting on the organization's behalf.

"(C)(i) Except as specified in section 315(a)(8)(B)(ii)(V), the term 'intermediary or conduit' does not include—

"(I) a candidate or representative of a candidate receiving contributions to the candidate's principal campaign committee or authorized committee;

"(II) a professional fundraiser compensated for fundraising services at the usual and customary rate;

"(III) a volunteer hosting a fundraising event at the volunteer's home, in accordance with section 301(8)(B); or

"(IV) an individual who transmits a contribution from the individual's spouse.

"(ii) The term 'representative' means an individual who is expressly authorized by the candidate to engage in fundraising, and who occupies a significant position within the candidate's campaign organization, provided that the individual is not described in subparagraph (B)(ii).

"(iii) The term 'contributions made or arranged to be made' includes—

"(I) contributions delivered to a particular candidate or the candidate's authorized committee or agent; and

"(II) contributions directly or indirectly arranged to be made to a particular candidate or the candidate's authorized committee or agent, in a manner that identifies directly or indirectly to the candidate or authorized committee or agent the person who arranged the making of the contributions or the person on whose behalf such person was acting.

"(iv) The term 'acting on the organization's behalf' includes the following activities by an officer, employee or agent of a person described in subparagraph (B)(ii)(IV):

"(I) Soliciting or directly or indirectly arranging the making of a contribution to a particular candidate in the name of, or by using the name of, such a person.

"(II) Soliciting or directly or indirectly arranging the making of a contribution to a particular candidate using other than incidental resources of such a person.

"(III) Soliciting contributions for a particular candidate by substantially directing the solicitations to other officers, employees, or agents of such a person.

"(D) Nothing in this paragraph shall prohibit—

"(i) bona fide joint fundraising efforts conducted solely for the purpose of sponsorship of a fundraising reception, dinner, or other similar event, in accordance with rules prescribed by the Commission, by—

"(I) 2 or more candidates;

"(II) 2 or more national, State, or local committees of a political party within the meaning of section 301(4) acting on their own behalf; or

"(III) a special committee formed by 2 or more candidates, or a candidate and a national, State, or local committee of a political party acting on their own behalf; or

"(ii) fundraising efforts for the benefit of a candidate that are conducted by another candidate.

"(iii) bona fide fundraising efforts conducted by and solely on behalf of an individual other than a lobbyist for the purpose of sponsorship of a fundraising reception, dinner, or other similar event, but only if all contributions are made directly to a candidate or a representative of a candidate.

When a contribution is made to a candidate through an intermediary or conduit, the intermediary or conduit shall report the original source and the intended recipient of the contribution to the Commission and to the intended recipient."

SEC. 402. CONTRIBUTIONS BY DEPENDENTS NOT OF VOTING AGE.

Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a), as amended by section 313(b), is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(n) For purposes of this section, any contribution by an individual who—

"(1) is a dependent of another individual; and

"(2) has not, as of the time of such contribution, attained the legal age for voting for elections to Federal office in the State in which such individual resides, shall be treated as having been made by such other individual. If such individual is the dependent of another individual and such other individual's spouse, the contribution shall be allocated among such individuals in the manner determined by them."

SEC. 403. CONTRIBUTIONS TO CANDIDATES FROM STATE AND LOCAL COMMITTEES OF POLITICAL PARTIES TO BE AGGREGATED.

Section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(9) A candidate for Federal office may not accept, with respect to an election, any contribution from a State or local committee of a political party (including any subordinate committee of such committee), if such contribution, when added to the total of contributions previously accepted from all such committees of that political party, exceeds a limitation on contributions to a candidate under this section."

SEC. 404. LIMITED EXCLUSION OF ADVANCES BY CAMPAIGN WORKERS FROM THE DEFINITION OF THE TERM "CONTRIBUTION".

Section 301(8)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)(B)) is amended—

(1) in clause (xiii), by striking "and" after the semicolon at the end;

(2) in clause (xiv), by striking the period at the end and inserting: "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(xv) any advance voluntarily made on behalf of an authorized committee of a candidate by an individual in the normal course of such individual's responsibilities as a volunteer for, or employee of, the committee, if the advance is reimbursed by the committee within 10 days after the date on which the advance is made, and the value of advances on behalf of a committee does not exceed $500 with respect to an election."

TITLE V—REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

SEC. 501. CHANGE IN CERTAIN REPORTING FROM A CALENDAR YEAR BASIS TO AN ELECTION CYCLE BASIS.

Paragraphs (2) through (7) of section 304(b) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 434(b)(2)–(7)) are amended by inserting after "calendar year" each place it appears the following: "(election cycle, in the case of an authorized committee of a candidate for Federal office)".

SEC. 502. PERSONAL AND CONSULTING SERVICES.

Section 304(b)(5)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 434(b)(5)(A)) is amended by adding before the semicolon at the end the following: ", except that if a person to whom an expenditure is made is merely providing personal or consulting services and is in turn making expenditures to other persons (not including employees) who provide goods or services to the candidate or his or her authorized committees, the name and address of such other person, together with the date, amount and purpose of such expenditure shall also be disclosed".

SEC. 503. REDUCTION IN THRESHOLD FOR REPORTING OF CERTAIN INFORMATION BY PERSONS OTHER THAN POLITICAL COMMITTEES.

Section 304(b)(3)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 434(b)(3)(A)) is amended by striking "$200" and inserting "$50".

"(5) In the event of a vacancy in the office of general counsel, the next highest ranking enforcement official in the general counsel's office shall serve as acting general counsel with full powers of the general counsel until a successor is appointed."

(b) PAY OF THE GENERAL COUNSEL.—Section 306(f)(1) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437c(f)(1)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "and the general counsel" after "staff director" in the second sentence; and

(2) by striking the third sentence.

SEC. 604. ENFORCEMENT.

(a) BASIS FOR ENFORCEMENT PROCEEDING.—Section 309(a)(2) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(2)) is amended by striking "it has reason to believe that a person has committed, or is about to commit" and inserting "facts have been alleged or ascertained that, if true, give reason to believe that a person may have committed, or may be about to commit".

(b) AUTHORITY TO SEEK INJUNCTION.—(1) Section 309(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(13)(A) If, at any time in a proceeding described in paragraph (1), (2), (3), or (4), the Commission believes that—

"(i) there is a substantial likelihood that a violation of this Act or of chapter 95 or chapter 96 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is occurring or is about to occur;

"(ii) the failure to act expeditiously will result in irreparable harm to a party affected by the potential violation;

"(iii) expeditious action will not cause undue harm or prejudice to the interests of others; and

"(iv) the public interest would be best served by the issuance of an injunction, the Commission may initiate a civil action for a temporary restraining order or a temporary injunction pending the outcome of the proceedings described in paragraphs (1), (2), (3), and (4).

"(B) An action under subparagraph (A) shall be brought in the United States district court for the district in which the defendant resides, transacts business, or may be found."

(2) Section 309(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (7) by striking "(5) or (6)" and inserting "(5), (6), or (13)"; and

(B) in paragraph (11) by striking "(6)" and inserting "(6) or (13)".

SEC. 605. PENALTIES.

(a) PENALTIES PRESCRIBED IN CONCILIATION AGREEMENTS.—(1) Section 309(a)(5)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(5)(A)) is amended by striking "which does not exceed the greater of $5,000 or an amount equal to any contribution or expenditure involved in such violation" and inserting "which is—

"(i) not less than 50 percent of all contributions and expenditures involved in the violation (or such lesser amount as the Commission provides if necessary to ensure that the penalty is not unjustly disproportionate to the violation); and

"(ii) not greater than all contributions and expenditures involved in the violation".

(2) Section 309(a)(5)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(5)(B)) is amended by striking "which does not exceed the greater of $10,000 or an amount equal to 200 percent of any contribution or expenditure involved in such violation" and inserting "which is—

"(i) not less than all contributions and expenditures involved in the violation; and

"(ii) not greater than 150 percent of all contributions and expenditures involved in the violation".

(b) PENALTIES WHEN VIOLATIONS ARE ADJUDICATED IN COURT.—(1) Section 309(a)(6)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(6)(A)) is amended by striking all that follows "appropriate order" and inserting ", including an order for a civil penalty in the amount determined under subparagraph (A) or (B) in the district court of the United States for the district in which the defendant resides, transacts business, or may be found."

(2) Section 309(a)(6)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(6)(B)) is amended by striking all that follows "other order" and inserting ", including an order for a civil penalty which is—

"(i) not less than all contributions and expenditures involved in the violation; and

"(ii) not greater than 200 percent of all contributions and expenditures involved in the violation, upon a proper showing that the person involved has committed, or is about to commit (if the relief sought is a permanent or temporary injunction or a restraining order), a violation of this Act or chapter 95 of chapter 96 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986."

(3) Section 309(a)(6)(C) of FECA (29 U.S.C. 437g(6)(C)) is amended by striking "a civil penalty" and all that follows and inserting "a civil penalty which is—

"(i) not less than 200 percent of all contributions and expenditures involved in the violation; and

"(ii) not greater than 250 percent of all contributions and expenditures involved in the violation."

SEC. 606. RANDOM AUDITS.

Section 311(b) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 438(b)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" before "The Commission"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (1), the Commission may from time to time conduct random audits and investigations to ensure voluntary compliance with this Act. The subjects of such audits and investigations shall be selected on the basis of criteria established by vote of at least 4 members of the Commission to ensure impartiality in the selection process. This paragraph does not apply to an authorized committee of an eligible Senate candidate subject to audit under section 505(a) or an authorized committee of an eligible House of Representatives candidate subject to audit under section 605(a)."

SEC. 607. PROHIBITION OF FALSE REPRESENTATION TO SOLICIT CONTRIBUTIONS.

Section 322 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441h) is amended—

(1) by inserting after "SEC. 322." the following: "(a)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(b) No person shall solicit contributions by falsely representing himself as a candidate or as a representative of a candidate, a political committee, or a political party."

SEC. 608. REGULATIONS RELATING TO USE OF NON-FEDERAL MONEY.

Section 306 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437c) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(g) The Commission shall promulgate rules to prohibit devices or arrangements which have the purpose or effect of undermining or evading the provisions of this Act restricting the use of non-Federal money to affect Federal elections."

TITLE VII—MISCELLANEOUS

SEC. 701. PROHIBITION OF LEADERSHIP COMMITTEES.

Section 302(e) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 432(e)) is amended—

(1) by amending paragraph (3) to read as follows:

"(3) No political committee that supports or has supported more than one candidate may be designated as an authorized committee, except that—

"(A) a candidate for the office of President nominated by a political party may designate the national committee of such political party as the candidate's principal campaign committee, but only if that national committee maintains separate books of account with respect to its functions as a principal campaign committee; and

"(B) a candidate may designate a political committee established solely for the purpose of joint fundraising by such candidates as an authorized committee."; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(6)(A) A candidate for Federal office or any individual holding Federal office may not establish, maintain, or control any political committee other than a principal campaign committee of the candidate, authorized committee, party committee, or other political committee designated in accordance with paragraph (3). A candidate for more than one Federal office may designate a separate principal campaign committee for each Federal office.

"(B) For one year after the effective date of this paragraph, any such political committee may continue to make contributions. At the end of that period such political committee shall disburse all funds by one or more of the following means: making contributions to an entity qualified under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; making a contribution to the treasury of the United States; contributing to the national, State or local committees of a political party; or making contributions not to exceed $1,000 to candidates for elective office."

SEC. 702. POLLING DATA CONTRIBUTED TO CANDIDATES.

Section 301(8) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)), as amended by section 314(b), is amended by inserting at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) A contribution of polling data to a candidate shall be valued at the fair market value of the data on the date the poll was completed, depreciated at a rate not more than 1 percent per day from such date to the date on which the contribution was made."

TITLE VIII—EFFECTIVE DATES; AUTHORIZATIONS

SEC. 801. EFFECTIVE DATE.

Except as otherwise provided in this Act, the amendments made by, and the provisions of, this Act shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act but shall not apply with respect to activities in connection with any election occurring before January 1, 1995.

SEC. 802. SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING FUNDING OF SENATE ELECTION CAMPAIGN FUND.

It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the current Presidential checkoff should be increased to $5.00, its designation changed to the "Federal Election Campaign Checkoff", and individuals should be permitted to contribute an additional $5.00 to the fund in additional taxes if they so desire;

(2) the Internal Revenue Service and the Federal Election Commission should be required to develop and implement a plan to publicize the fund and the checkoff to increase citizen participation; and

(3) funds to pay for the increase in the checkoff to $5.00 should come from the repeal of the tax deduction for business lobbying activity and the elimination of newsletter franking by the Congress.

SEC. 803. SEVERABILITY.

Except as provided in sections 101(c) and 121(b), if any provision of this Act (including any amendment made by this Act), or the application of any such provision to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the validity of any other provision of this Act, or the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 804. EXPEDITED REVIEW OF CONSTITUTIONAL ISSUES.

(a) DIRECT APPEAL TO SUPREME COURT.—An appeal may be taken directly to the Supreme Court of the United States from any interlocutory order or final judgment, decree, or order issued by any court ruling on the constitutionality of any provision of this Act or amendment made by this Act.

(b) ACCEPTANCE AND EXPEDITION.—The Supreme Court shall, if it has not previously ruled on the question addressed in the ruling below, accept jurisdiction over, advance on the docket, and expedite the appeal to the greatest extent possible.

SUMMARY OF CAMPAIGN FINANCE BILL

This legislation is based on S. 3, the campaign finance bill passed by the Senate in the 102nd Congress, as modified in the final version of the bill vetoed by President Bush. Its provisions regarding spending limits, political action committees, bundling, soft-money and other matters are based on that legislation, apart from provisions designed to replace private sources of funding with public funding, and other minor modifications intended to strengthen last year's bill by eliminating possible loop-holes that might undermine the goal of spending limits.

PUBLIC FUNDING PROVISIONS

The bill would establish a public funding system similar to that of the Presidential system, under which candidates would receive matching funds for primary elections and full funding for general elections, once they had reached a threshold of contributions from individuals (10 percent of the general election limit) in amounts of $250 or less, half of which is from in-state. Of the general election amount, half of the total would be in the form of communication vouchers, to be used for purchases of broadcast media during the general election.

TREATMENT OF POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES (PAC'S)

This bill would reduce the limits on permissible contributions by PACs to individual candidates from the current limit of $5,000 to a maximum of $1,000 per election, and 20 percent of the total spending limit in an election by a candidate. Given the system of full public funding established for general elections, PACs would in practice be able to contribute up to 20 percent of the total spending limit for a candidate in primaries and run-offs.

ANTI-BUNDLING PROVISIONS

The bill is based on S. 3, but eliminates the loophole that would have permitted the bundling for non-connected political organizations. This bill would preclude any political organization from evading the contribution limits in the legislation through bundling. This change is designed to prevent organizations from establishing "non-connected" affiliates which could be used to circumvent the anti-bundling intent and provisions of reform.

SOFT-MONEY PROVISIONS

The bill is based on S. 3, but toughens soft-money provisions in a few areas. First, it would phase-out the exemption from federal election law for national party building funds, apart from servicing existing mortgages for these funds. These funds have in the past not been subject to any form of reporting, and hence have been viewed by some critics of the current system as inherently subject to abuse.

SPECIAL RESTRICTIONS ON LOBBYISTS

The bill contains S. 3's restrictions on bundling by lobbyists, but eliminates an exemption that would permit lobbyists to continue to raise funds for candidates through hosting political fundraisers, thus allowing them to circumvent provisions designed to limit special-interest access as a result of political fundraising activity. The bill specifies that those who receive payment in return for lobbying Congress may not engage in this activity.

RECOMMENDED MECHANISM TO MAKE LAW BUDGET-NEUTRAL

This bill contains a Sense of the Senate concerning financing for public funding, which would make it budget-neutral through off-setting the public funding through repeal of the deductibility of business lobbying expenses, and through reduction of the deductibility of business meals from 80 percent, as under current law, to 75 percent. The total amount available for all candidates in each election cycle under the public funding system would depend on the actual amount authorized by taxpayers through a voluntary checkoff system, which would be increased to $5 per individual, and in the event that voluntary earmarks were insufficient for funding the system, candidates would be permitted to raise funds subject to federal election limits from individuals.

By Mr. LUGAR (for himself, Mr. DOLE, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. SIMON, Mr. MCCAIN, and Mr. ROTH):

S. 88. A bill to amend the National School Lunch Act to remove the requirement that schools participating in the school lunch program offer students specific types of fluid milk, and for other purposes.

NATIONAL SCHOOL LUNCH ACT AMENDMENTS

• Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, today I am pleased to introduce legislation to help our Nation's children develop healthier eating habits.

Joining as original cosponsors of this bill today are Senators DOLE, KENNEDY, COCHRAN, SIMON, MCCAIN, and ROTH.

This legislation is identical to a measure that I had sponsored in the 102d Congress which would allow local school lunch professionals to choose the type or types of milk to serve children in the school lunch program. Current law mandates that both whole milk and unflavored lowfat milk be offered to the 25 million students that eat a federally subsidized school lunch each day.

We now know that there is a connection between diet and good health. High fat intake is associated with higher obesity rates and greater incidence of heart disease, and could be linked to higher risk of certain types of cancer.

The Dietary Guidelines for Americans, published jointly by the Departments of Agriculture and Health and Human Services, confirms that many American diets contain too many calories and too much fat (especially saturated fat), cholesterol, and sodium. Because of this, the Dietary Guidelines recommend that people over age two drink skim or lowfat milk. In addition, the 1988 Surgeon General's Report on Nutrition and Health identified excessive fat consumption as the biggest problem in the American diet.

My legislation would encourage local professionals to help students choose foods that are lower in fat. An easy way to reduce fat in the diet is to encourage consumption of lowfat and skim milk rather than whole milk. Eating habits developed in childhood tend to continue throughout life. Starting healthful eating patterns early in life will help prevent diet-related health problems later on and will help ease our Nation's skyrocketing health care expenses.

The Federal mandate to serve various types of milk also is an administrative headache for those individuals who manage the school lunch program locally. I firmly believe that local school food service professionals are more qualified to determine what type of milk to serve children in their school lunches than is Congress.

Contrary to what some have claimed, my bill does not preclude local professionals from serving whole milk, but leaves the decision in their hands. There may be some children that local professionals determine need whole milk. Nor is it my intention, through this bill, to denigrate the wholesomeness or nutritional value of milk. This bill would encourage consumption of the lower fat varieties of milk which generally speaking provide the same nutrients as whole milk but without as much fat.

Eliminating the whole milk requirement is supported by a number of organizations including the American School Food Service Association, Public Voice for Food and Health Policy, the American Heart Association, the American Dietetic Association, the Society for Nutrition Education, the Food Research and Action Center, and the Center for Science in the Public Interest.

I strongly urge my colleagues to join as cosponsors of this important measure to encourage local school lunch professionals to serve lower fat lunches to students.

By Mr. DOLE:

S. 89. A bill to amend 2 U.S.C. 437c.

FEDERAL ELECTION CAMPAIGN COMMISSION AMENDMENTS

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I am today introducing a bill to improve the operations of the Federal Election Commission. My bill would restructure the Federal Election Commission so that the Commission is composed of the Secretary of the Senate, the Secretary for the Minority, the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Minority Clerk of the House of Representatives, or their designees, ex officio and without the right to vote, and six Members appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

This would give the minority the same representation on this bipartisan Commission as is presently enjoyed by the majority.

This was the original intent of the legislation when it was first passed, and I am sure that it was by inadvertence that this principle was deviated from in later amendments to the act.

I ask that the bill together with a section-by-section analysis be printed in the RECORD, and the bill be appropriately referred.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

The bill provides that the Secretary for the Minority of the Senate and the Minority Clerk of the House of Representatives or their designees, shall be members ex officio and without the right to vote of the FEC.

S. 89

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, 2 U.S.C. 437c is amended by striking:

"437c. Federal Election Commission

"(a)(1) There is established a commission to be known as the Federal Election Commission. The Commission is composed of the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives or their designees, ex officio and without the right to vote, and 6 members appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate."

And inserting in lieu thereof,

"437c. Federal Election Commission

(a)(1) There is established a commission to be known as the Federal Election Commission. The Commission is composed of the Secretary of the Senate, the Secretary for the Minority, to be paid at the same rate and from the same account, the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Minority Clerk of the House of Representatives, to be paid the same amount and from the same account or their designees, ex officio and without the right to vote, and 6 members appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate."

By Mr. HOLLINGS:

S. 90. A bill to improve the enforcement of the trade laws of the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

TRADE ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 1993

• Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, today, we begin a new era, an era in which our Government and industry will work together to revitalize the American economy. Gone are the days when Government officials smugly proclaim that it doesn't matter whether we manufacture computer chips or potato chips. A decade of Government indifference produced a 12-percent decline in real wages and a steady erosion of market shares in important industries from basic manufacturing like textiles, steel, and automobiles to high technology products like aircraft and computers.

For decades, governments in Europe and Asia used a variety of policy measures including protection for infant industries, massive subsidies to develop critical technologies, and aggressive use of antidumping and voluntary restraint agreements to create economic powerhouses and export super powers. In the past we answered these policies not with tough action or vigorous enforcement of our trade laws, but with stern lectures on the magic of free markets. Now, however, a new administration, a new economic team has taken power—a team which understands that our Nation's ability to sustain its leadership position in the world rests upon our economic strength, and our economic strength can be revitalized by an activist trade policy with the Government acting as an ally rather than a foe.

The bill which I introduce today is designed to give the administration the power to combat the unfair trade practices that have crippled important sectors of our manufacturing base.

Specifically, this bill will strengthen our antidumping and countervailing duty laws, our first line of defense against predatory trade practices that have devastated such vital industries as consumer electronics, steel, and semiconductors. In addition, this legislation strengthens our ability to take unilateral action to open markets by reinstating Super 301. By tightening enforcement of our bilateral textile agreements, it will end the decade-long deluge of textile imports that has cost 500,000 Americans their jobs. A number of studies show that the American worker is the most productive worker in the world. The most productive worker in the world should not be forced to compete against imports that are the products of the exploitation of children or the work of slave labor. This bill gives the new administration the authority to keep these imports from competing against the products of American labor.

To coordinate a new trade and economic policy, it gives a statutory mandate to President Clinton's new National Economic Council. This idea is an important step in recognizing that the foundation of our leadership is our economic strength and that rebuilding the American economy will require the same commitment to economic security that we gave during the cold war to national security.

Finally, to restore faith in the integrity of our trade officials, this legislation will shut the revolving door and ensure that our negotiators are cutting the best deal for our interest rather than their own interests.

I look forward to working with the new administration to forge a trade policy that protects the interests of American industry and the American workers. •

By Mr. THURMOND:

S. 91. A bill to authorize the conveyance to the Columbia Hospital for Women of certain parcels of land in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

LAND AUTHORIZATION ACT

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill to authorize the sale of property located in Washington, DC, from the Federal Government to the Columbia Hospital for Women. This property will be used for the construction of a facility to house the National Women's Health Resource Center [NWHRC]. I would also like to note that this legislation was introduced by Representative TRAFICANT on Wednesday, January 20, 1993. In the last Congress, similar legislation passed the House of Representatives.

The NWHRC is dedicated to the improvement of women's health. The NWHRC was established in 1988 as a nonprofit subsidiary of the Columbia Hospital for Women Foundation. The hospital is the only women's hospital in the country to have a Federal charter. The mission of the NWHRC is to provide information to professionals and consumers about women's health issues, including menopause, hormone replacement therapy, breast cancer, cardiovascular disease, osteoporosis, and domestic violence. When constructed, the NWHRC will be a multidisciplinary facility, emphasizing educational and clinical research facilities, and including space for specialty clinical services such as the Betty Ford Comprehensive Breast Center and the Incontinence Center. This will be the only center in the Nation dedicated solely to women's health services.

Under the provisions of the bill, Columbia Hospital for Women will purchase the property for $12.8 million. Previously, the property was appraised at $18 million; however, the General Services Administration agreed that the $12.8 million purchase price reflects existing zoning restrictions and a changing economic environment. Columbia Women's Hospital will pay the purchase price in full upon conveyance of the property. As further compensation for the property, Columbia Women's Hospital will establish and operate three satellite health centers in Washington, DC, at no cost to the Federal Government. These women and infant centers will focus on prenatal care, social services, substance abuse, nutrition, and education.

Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce this important legislation to address the critical need for greater research of women's health concerns, and I encourage my colleagues to support this important legislation. I ask that a copy of this legislation be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 91

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. CONVEYANCE OF LAND.

(a) ADMINISTRATOR OF GENERAL SERVICES.—Subject to sections 2 and 4, the Administrator of General Services (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the "Administrator") shall convey, for $12,800,000 to be paid in accordance with the terms set forth in subsection (d)(2) and other consideration required by this Act, to the Columbia Hospital for Women (formerly Columbia Hospital for Women and Lying-in Asylum; hereinafter in this Act referred to as "Columbia Hospital"), located in Washington, District of Columbia, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to those pieces or parcels of land in the District of Columbia, described in subsection (b), together with all improvements thereon and appurtenances thereto. The purpose of the conveyance is to provide a site for the construction by Columbia Hospital of a facility to house the National Women's Health Resource Center (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the "Resource Center"), as described in the Certificate of Need issued for the Resource Center in conformance with District of Columbia law and in effect on the date of conveyance.

(b) PROPERTY DESCRIPTION.—The land referred to in subsection (a) was conveyed to the United States of America by deed dated May 2, 1888, from David Fergusson, widower, recorded in liber 1314, folio 102, of the land records of the District of Columbia, and is that portion of square numbered 25 in the city of Washington in the District of Columbia which was not previously conveyed to such hospital by the Act of June 28, 1952 (Public Law 82-423). Such property is more particularly described as square 25, lot 803, or as follows: all that piece or parcel of land situated and lying in the city of Washington in the District of Columbia and known as part of square numbered 25, as laid down and distinguished on the plat or plan of said city as follows: beginning for the same at the northeast corner of the square being the corner formed by the intersection of the west line of Twenty-fourth Street Northwest, with the south line of north M Street Northwest and running thence south with the line of said Twenty-fourth Street Northwest for the distance of two hundred and thirty-one feet ten inches, thence running west and parallel with said M Street Northwest for the distance of two hundred and thirty feet six inches and running thence north and parallel with the line of said Twenty-fourth Street Northwest for the distance of two hundred and thirty-one feet ten inches to the line of said M Street Northwest and running thence east with the line of said M Street Northwest to the place of beginning two hundred and thirty feet and six inches together with all the improvements, ways, easements, rights, privileges, and appurtenances to the same belonging or in anywise appertaining.

(c) DATE OF CONVEYANCE.—

(1) DATE.—The date of the conveyance of property required under subsection (a) shall be the date which is 1 year after the date of receipt by the Administrator of written notification from Columbia Hospital that the hospital needs such property for use as a site to provide housing for the Resource Center.

(2) DEADLINE FOR SUBMISSION OF NOTIFICATION.—A written notification of need from Columbia Hospital shall not be effective for purposes of subsection (a) and paragraph (1) unless the notification is received by the Administrator before the date which is 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(d) CONVEYANCE TERMS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The conveyance of property required under subsection (a) shall be subject to such terms and conditions as may be determined by the Administrator to be necessary to safeguard the interests of the United States. Such terms and conditions shall be consistent with the terms and conditions set forth in this Act.

(2) PAYMENT OF PURCHASE PRICE.—Columbia Hospital shall pay the $12,800,000 purchase price in full by not later than the date of conveyance under subsection (c).

(3) QUITCLAIM DEED.—Any conveyance of property to Columbia Hospital under this Act shall be by quitclaim deed.

(e) TREATMENT OF AMOUNTS RECEIVED.—Amounts received by the United States as payment under this Act shall be paid into, administered, and expended as part of the fund established by section 210(f) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 490(f)).

SEC. 2. LIMITATION ON CONVEYANCE.

No part of any land conveyed under section 1 may be used, during the 30-year period beginning on the date of conveyance under section 1(c)(1), for any purpose other than to provide a site for a facility to house the Resource Center and any necessary related appurtenances to that facility.

SEC. 3. SATELLITE HEALTH CENTERS.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 4 years after the date of the conveyance under section 1, Columbia Hospital, after consultation with the District of Columbia Commission of Public Health and the District of Columbia State Health Planning and Development Agency, shall establish, maintain, and operate 3 satellite health centers.

(2) PERSONS TO BE SERVED.—One of the satellite health centers shall provide comprehensive health and counseling services exclusively for teenage women and their children. The other 2 satellite health centers shall provide comprehensive health and counseling services for women (including teenage women) and their children.

(3) LOCATION.—The satellite health centers shall be located in areas of the District of Columbia in which the District of Columbia Department of Public Health has determined that the need for comprehensive health and counseling services provided by the centers is the greatest. In locating such centers, special consideration shall be given to the areas of the District with the highest rates of infant death and births by teenagers.

(b) COMPREHENSIVE HEALTH AND COUNSELING SERVICES.—In subsection (a), comprehensive health and counseling services include—

- (1) examination of women;
- (2) medical treatment and counseling of women, including prenatal and postnatal services;
- (3) treatment and counseling of substance abusers and those who are at risk of substance abuse;
- (4) health promotion and disease prevention services;
- (5) physician and hospital referral services; and
- (6) extended and flexible hours of service.

(c) REQUIRED CONSIDERATION.—The establishment, operation, and maintenance of satellite health centers by Columbia Hospital in accordance with this section shall be part of the consideration required by this Act for the conveyance under section 1.

SEC. 4. REVERSIONARY INTEREST.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The property conveyed under section 1 shall revert to the United States—

(1) on the date which is 4 years after the date of such conveyance if Columbia Hospital is not operating the Resource Center on such property; and

(2) on any date in the 30-year period beginning on the date of such conveyance, on which the property is used for a purpose other than that referred to in section 2.

(b) REPAYMENT.—If property reverts to the United States under subsection (a), the Administrator shall pay to Columbia Hospital, from amounts otherwise appropriated from the fund established by section 210(f) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 490(f)), an amount equal to all sums received by the United States as payments for the conveyance under section 1, without interest on such amount.

(c) ENFORCING REVERSION.—The Administrator shall perform all acts necessary to enforce any reversion of property to the United States under this section.

(d) INVENTORY OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS SERVICE.—Property that reverts to the United States under this section—

(1) shall be under the control of the General Services Administration; and

(2) shall be assigned by the Administrator to the inventory of the Public Buildings Service.

SEC. 5. DAMAGES.

(a) DAMAGES.—Subject to subsection (b), for each year in the 26-year period beginning on the date which is 4 years after the date of conveyance under section 1(c)(1), in which Columbia Hospital does not operate 3 satellite health centers in accordance with section 3 for a period of more than 60 days, the Columbia Hospital shall be liable to the United States for damages in an amount equal to $200,000, except that this subsection shall not apply after the date of any reversion of property under section 4.

(b) LIMITATION IN DAMAGES.—The maximum amount of damages for which Columbia Hospital may be liable under this section shall be $3,000,000.

(c) ADJUSTMENTS FOR INFLATION.—The amount of damages specified in subsection (a) and the maximum amount of damages specified in subsection (b) shall be adjusted biennially to reflect changes in the consumer price index that have occurred since the date of the enactment of this Act.

(d) ASSESSMENT AND WAIVER.—For any failure by Columbia Hospital to operate a satellite health center in accordance with section 3, the Administrator may—

(1) seek to recover damages under this section; or

(2) waive all or any part of damages recoverable under this section for that failure, if the Administrator—

(A) determines the failure is caused by exceptional circumstances; and

(B) submits a statement to the District of Columbia Commission of Public Health and the Congress, that sets forth the reasons for the determination.

(e) CONVEYANCE DOCUMENTS.—The Administrator shall include in the documents for any conveyance under this Act appropriate provisions to—

(1) ensure that payment of damages under this section is a contractual obligation of Columbia Hospital; and

(2) require the Administrator to provide to Columbia Hospital notice and an opportunity to respond before the Administrator seeks to recover such damages.

SEC. 6. REPORTS.

During the 5-year period beginning one year after the date of the conveyance under section 1, Columbia Hospital shall submit to the Administrator, the appropriate committees of the Congress, and the Comptroller General of the United States annual reports on the establishment, maintenance, and operation of the Resource Center and the satellite health centers.

By Mr. HOLLINGS (for himself,
Mr. HEFLIN, Mr. BIDEN, and Mr.
ROBB):

S. 92. A bill to create a legislative line-item veto by requiring separate enrollment of items in appropriations bills; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

LEGISLATIVE LINE-ITEM VETO SEPARATE ENROLLMENT AUTHORITY

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation which enables the President to control wasteful and unnecessary appropriations and thereby reduce the Federal deficit. This bill, a statutory, separate enrollment line-item veto, is identical to a measure previously considered by the 99th Congress as well as legislation reported favorably by a bipartisan vote out of the Senate Budget Committee on July 25, 1990.

Currently, 43 States have, in one form or another, a line-item veto allowing the chief executive to limit legislative spending. As a former Governor who inherited a budget deficit in a poor State, I can testify that a line-item veto is invaluable in imposing fiscal restraint.

The fiscal problems of our Nation have been painfully documented. Our Government currently faces annual deficits well over $400 billion and a total debt eclipsing $4 trillion. For years now, we have been toying with freezes, asset sales and sham summits, but the deficit and debt continue to grow.

The American taxpayer, as well as the Congress, have grown weary of the smoke and mirrors and are past ready for a serious deficit reduction package. If ever there was a problem that needed to be attacked from every possible angle, it is this deficit. Over the past few months President Clinton has repeatedly stressed his resolve to attack the burgeoning deficit monster. In order to hold him to that commitment, we should send him into battle well armed. By restoring accountability and responsibility throughout the appropriations process, the line-item veto would force Members of Congress and the President to stop fixing the blame and to start fixing the problem.

This legislation provides that each item shall be enrolled as a separate bill and sent to the President for his approval. Therefore, each item of an appropriations bill would be subject to veto or approval, just like any other bill, and the override provisions found in article I of the Constitution would apply in the case of a veto. Item is defined as any numbered section and any unnumbered paragraph of an appropriations bill. The enrolling clerk would merely break an appropriations bill down into its component parts and send each separately enrolled provision to the President.

Finally, this legislation also contains a 2-year sunset provision allowing for a reasonable testing period and requiring an evaluation of the line-item veto's success. I have no question but that it will be demonstrated to be a modest, but effective, method of restraining fiscal profligacy. I hope that Senators will join me in this effort, and I ask that the full text of the bill be printed in the RECORD at this time.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 92

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That (a) the Impoundment Control Act of 1974 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new title:

TITLE XI—LEGISLATIVE LINE ITEM VETO SEPARATE ENROLLMENT AUTHORITY LEGISLATIVE LINE ITEM VETO

"SEC. 1101. (a)(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, when any general or special appropriation bill or any bill or joint resolution making supplemental, deficiency, or continuing appropriations passes both Houses of the Congress in the same form, the Secretary of the Senate (in the case of a bill or joint resolution originating in the Senate) or the Clerk of the House of Representatives (in the case of a bill or joint resolution originating in the House of Representatives) shall cause the enrolling clerk of such House to enroll each item of such bill or joint resolution as a separate bill or joint resolution, as the case may be.

"(2) A bill or joint resolution that is required to be enrolled pursuant to paragraph (1)—

"(A) shall be enrolled without substantive revision;

"(B) shall conform in style and form to the applicable provision of chapter 2 of title 1, United States Code (as such provisions are in effect on the date of the enactment of this title); and

"(C) shall bear the designation of the measure of which it was an item prior to such enrollment, together with such other designation as may be necessary to distinguish such bill or joint resolution from other bills or joint resolutions enrolled pursuant to paragraph (1) with respect to the same measure.

"(b) A bill or joint resolution enrolled pursuant to subsection (a)(1) with respect to an item shall be deemed to be a bill under clauses 2 and 3 of section 7 of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States and shall be signed by the presiding officers of both Houses of the Congress and presented to the President for approval or disapproval (and otherwise treated for all purposes) in the manner provided for bills and joint resolutions generally.

"(c) For purposes of this concurrent resolution, the term 'item' means any numbered section and any unnumbered paragraph of—

"(1) any general or special appropriation bill; and

"(2) any bill or joint resolution making supplemental, deficiency, or continuing appropriations."

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to bills and joint resolutions agreed to by the Congress during the two-calendar-year period beginning with the date of the enactment of this Act.

By Mr. HARKIN (for himself, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. INOUE, Mr. CONRAD, and Mr. DASCHLE):

S. 93. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to establish the National Center for Nursing Research as a National Institute, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF NURSING RESEARCH ACT

• Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I rise today to reintroduce, on behalf of myself, Senator KENNEDY, Senator INOUE, and Senator CONRAD, the National Institute for Nursing Research Act. This important legislation would appropriately elevate the status of the successful National Center for Nursing Research [NCNR] at the National Institutes of Health to that of an institute—the National Institute for Nursing Research.

The legislation we are reintroducing today is simple and straightforward. It redesignates the National Center for Nursing Research as the National Institute for Nursing Research, a change which appropriately reflects the fact the NCNR's existing structure and range of activities is in line with other institutes at NIH. Our bill has the support of a large number of national organizations as well as a bipartisan coalition in Congress. The text of the bill was included in the NIH Reauthorization bill passed by Congress and vetoed by President Bush last year. I am pleased to say that it will be incorporated into the new NIH Reauthorization bill being introduced today. I want to thank and commend Senator KENNEDY for his leadership and assistance in making this happen.

Mr. President, as I said in introducing this legislation last Congress, it is not only appropriate that Congress take the important step of elevating the status of the Nursing Center to that of an Institute, it is a step that is overdue. America's nearly 2 million nurses have for too long been denied the recognition and status they deserve within our health care system. Throughout our Nation's history, nurses have been at the core of our health care system, providing high-quality, cost-effective care. Yet, the role and accomplishments of nurses within the health care system have too often not been given appropriate equal recognition. And so it has been in the area of research. While NCNR has proven itself as a major force within NIH and despite a structure and list of activities which put it on par with other Institutes, it has not been recognized as such by being given the designation as an Institute.

In 7 years since its establishment, the National Center for Nursing Research has established itself as the world's leader in nursing research. NCNR supports a broad range of research to better our ability to prevent and treat the numerous diseases and disabilities confronting Americans. Its research focuses on how people of all ages respond to disease and its treatment, physiologically and psychologically, and on the promotion of improved health and the prevention of disease and disability. This emphasis on preventive health is most appropriate as nurses have long been at the forefront of health promotion and disease and disability prevention. As aptly noted by NCNR, because of nurses' close proximity to patients and their families, they are ideally situated to carry out these kinds of research and to translate findings directly into nursing practice and better health care outcomes.

Mr. President, the National Center for Nursing Research has been tremendously successful in its short history. Through its Division of Extramural Programs and Division of Intramural Research, NCNR has produced critical research findings that are already resulting in more affordable, higher quality health care for many Americans. For example, through a grant from NCNR, nurse researchers at the University of Iowa are developing cost effective ways of reducing the incidence of falls among frail older Americans. The results of this research will greatly improve the quality of life for many older Americans, while lowering long-term care costs for themselves and their families by reducing the incidence of broken hips, a leading cause of nursing home admissions.

Another notable NCNR supported study, by researchers at the University of Wisconsin School of Nursing, resulted in improved care and reduced costs for prematurely born babies. As recently reported in the New York Times, by creating a less stressful hospital environment for premature babies, project directors were able to demonstrate an improvement in their breathing and eating, a reduction in complications, improved neurological development and shorter hospital stays. The cost of care for the infants in the study was significantly reduced, by an average of $12,250 per baby.

Mr. President, I have been pleased, as chairman of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee that funds the National Institutes of Health, to have been able to preside over a significant expansion of support for NCNR. In my 4 years as chairman, we have been able to increase funding for nursing research by nearly 50 percent, from $33 million in fiscal year 1990 to $48.2 million this fiscal year. And I am convinced that this investment is among the wisest and most cost effective we have made. I have been particularly pleased with the investment NCNR has in turn made in critical areas such as women's health, long-term care for the elderly and disabled, and the special health care needs of rural America.

The elevation of NCNR to institute status will help further build on nursing research's impressive beginning at NIH.

Mr. President, I again want to thank the members of my Nurses Advisory Committee for their input and assistance on this proposal. I formed this organization, which is made up of nurse leaders from across Iowa, in 1985 to study health care issues and to give me advice and recommendations for reform. They have been of invaluable assistance to me over the past 8 years, providing me with expert advice and ideas that have turned into legislative action here in the Senate. I met with leaders of the group last month and will be looking to their advice as we tackle the difficult issue of health care reform this year. Their work is valued and trusted and I would recommend to my colleagues the formation of similar nurse advisory groups.

Mr. President, in closing I simply would urge my colleagues to join us in supporting this legislation and hope that it gains swift approval so that nursing research can take its rightful position at the NIH.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of this bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 93

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "National Institute of Nursing Research Act".

SEC. 2. REDESIGNATION OF NATIONAL CENTER FOR NURSING RESEARCH AS NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF NURSING RESEARCH.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subpart 3 of part E of title IV of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 287c et seq.) is amended—

(1) in section 483—

(A) in the heading for the section, by striking "center" and inserting "institute"; and

(B) by striking "The general purpose" and all that follows through "is" and inserting the following: "The general purpose of the National Institute of Nursing Research (hereafter in this subpart referred to as the 'Institute') is";

(2) in section 484 by striking "Center" each place such term appears and inserting "Institute";

(3) in section 485—

(A) in subsection (a), in each of paragraphs (1) through (3), by striking "Center" each place such term appears and inserting "Institution";

(B) in subsection (b)—

(i) in paragraph (2)(A), by striking "Center" and inserting "Institute";

(ii) in paragraph (3)(A), in the first sentence, by striking "Center" and inserting "Institute"; and

(C) in subsections (d) through (g), by striking "Center" each place such term appears and inserting "Institute".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) ORGANIZATION OF NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF HEALTH.—Section 401(b) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 281(b)) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (1) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(N) The National Institute of Nursing Research."; and

(B) in paragraph (2), by striking subparagraph (D).

(2) TRANSFER OF STATUTORY PROVISIONS.—Sections 483 through 485A of the Health Service Act, as amended by subsection (a) of this section—

(A) are transferred to part C of title IV of such Act;

(B) are redesignated as sections 464L through 464O of such part; and

(C) are inserted, in the appropriate sequence, after section 464F of such part.

(3) HEADING FOR NEW SUBPART.—Title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by the preceding provisions of this section, is amended—

(A) in part C, by inserting before section 464L the following new heading:

"Subpart 14—National Institute of Nursing Research"; and

(B) by striking the heading for subpart 3 of part E.

(4) CROSS-REFERENCES.—Title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by the preceding provisions of this section, is amended in subpart 14 of part C—

(A) in section 464M, by striking "section 483" and inserting "section 464L";

(B) in section 464N(g), by striking "section 486" and inserting "section 464O"; and

(C) in section 464O, in the last sentence, by striking "section 485(g)" and inserting "section 464N(g)".

By Mr. DOMENICI:

S. 94. A bill to provide a comprehensive congressional campaign financing reform to encourage grassroots campaign giving, lessen the role of special economic interests, prohibit the use of soft money, discourage candidate expenditures of personal wealth, and otherwise restore greater competitive balance to the congressional electoral process; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

GRASSROOTS CAMPAIGNING AND ELECTION REFORM ACT OF 1993

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I am going to send a bill to the desk on campaign reform and I am going to say very boldly, if you want a bill that is real reform, that will restrain the amount of money raised, and that will rid political fundraising of the image that it consumes all of our time and leaves Senators and Representatives beholden to all kinds of national groups, you should give this bill serious consideration.

I believe before we are finished more than just Senators are going to catch onto its simplicity and its effectiveness.

Mr. President, this bill restricts the acceptance of campaign contributions so that you only can receive contributions for your campaign from people who reside in your State. The limits on those contributions remain the same as current law, a maximum of $1,000 per individual per election, primary and general.

Second, political action committees can continue to contribute, but only $500, and they must be located within your State or you cannot accept contributions from them.

Third, there was a renewed vigor in the last cycle of candidates funding their campaigns with their own wealth. I did not know that until I read a flow-sheet of all the new Members and their wealth and how much they contributed for their campaigns.

This Senator is not trying to limit the right, recognized by the Supreme Court, to contribute to one's own campaign. What I am doing in this bill, very simply I call it millionaires' equity. It merely says those who are going to fund campaigns with their own money must certify if they are going to spend over $100,000 for a House seat or over $250,000 for a Senate seat. And they must do that early in the campaign. Then 90 days before the election, candidates can no longer use their own fortune to pump up their campaign right at the end. In that intermediate time they can spend all they want. But the limitations are removed from the candidate who is not using his own money and instead of $1,000 they can raise $10,000 per citizen. It seems to me that makes it a bit more equitable.

Inherent in this approach is the fact that you will greatly reduce the amount of money spent, you will greatly reduce the time spent away from your constituents if you adopt this grassroots funding approach. And if a Senator or House Member wants to run using their own fortune, then the candidate running against him in either party is given an extra advantage of raising money to try to equalize the disparity.

Frankly, all soft money is abolished. Under this legislation, corporations and labor unions would be out of the business of indirectly funding Senate and House campaigns. You raise it all from your constituents as I have just stated.

Mr. President, the bill I send to the desk I believe has already added—and will continue to add—constructively to the Senate's debate over the importance of campaign finance reform. My colleagues will note that I have cosponsored other legislation introduced today dealing with this issue. The bill I now send to the desk should be an important component of the Senate's consideration as to how Federal campaigns are financed.

This legislation is identical to legislation I introduced in the 102d Congress, S. 91, and is very similar to legislation I introduced in the 101st Congress, S. 2265, both of which I believe added constructively to the Senate's debate over this important issue.

The need for reform is obvious. For example, spending has increased dramatically over the past 2 years, a reported 41 percent from 1990 for House races alone. As important, I have come to the conclusion that possibly the greatest failure of our current system is that it has damaged the faith our constituents have in us to represent their interests. It is time to offer real reform—reform that takes back to those we represent—our own State or district voters.

For far too long, Members of Congress have been forced to rely on special interest groups, PAC's, and big spenders to fund their campaigns. If we don't rely on our own constituents, how can we expect them to rely on us?

I hope that the 103d Congress offers us an opportunity that simply wasn't available in previous Congresses—an opportunity to restore the faith of the American people in the way their elected representatives are chosen. That will require more than simply further regulating the current system. Today I introduce legislation that I think addresses the real problem.

My bill makes four very straightforward and specific changes in the law, each of which I believe the American people will support with enthusiasm.

First, this legislation imposes a flat out prohibition on House and Senate candidates raising money outside their home State;

Second, my bill abolishes PAC's as we know them.

Third, this bill creates a strong disincentive to super wealthy candidates throwing masses of family money into a campaign; and

My bill eliminates "soft money" so often used to get around controls on fundraising.

With the outline, let me describe the specifics of this legislation.

TITLE

Section 1 of this legislation is the short title, and a most accurate one: The Grassroots Campaigning and Election Reform Act of 1993.

IN-STATE GIVING

Section 2 is the heart and soul of this omnibus approach to campaign reform.

First of all, section 2 leaves in place the existing $1,000 limit on individual donations, and then places new, restrictive guidelines on those donations.

Section 2 says that, as of the date of enactment of this act, no candidate for the Congress—either the Senate or the House of Representatives—may raise any funds from outside the State in which that candidate is running.

If you are a candidate for the U.S. Senate in New Mexico, you must henceforth raise your money from contributors who live in Albuquerque, Farmington, Las Cruces, and Roswell. You can no longer raise funds from persons or organizations in New York, Los Angeles, or Dallas.

Obviously, such an out-of-State prohibition—or even a sharp limitation—would make it far tougher to raise large sums of campaign money. Therefore, this section will inherently reduce spending, which is the goal of so many in this Chamber.

This section restrains campaign spending not with some arbitrary, partisan, federally imposed ceiling—one giving incumbents a great advantage. Nor does my approach use tax dollars to underwrite our campaigns.

Section 2 simply requires that we Members of the Congress return to our own constituents for our full support.

To this Senator, this represents a fair and reasonable approach.

PAC'S

Section 3 of the bill is also vitally important. It essentially eliminates PAC's. My view is that if individuals want to give, let them give directly to their home-State candidate.

When the American people are asked about campaign financing, there is no doubt that they state their strongest concerns over the role of PAC's, political action committees.

We must listen to the American people.

I have voted in the past to prohibit PAC's. Section 3 prohibits PAC's established by banks, businesses, and labor unions. That is a flat-out prohibition.

And because of the constitutional problems involving other types of PAC's, my bill reduces to $500, from $5,000, the amount that any other PAC can give to a candidate. I believe that will render such contributions relatively ineffective, particularly in conjunction with section 2 of the bill, which says a PAC must be headquartered in the candidate's State in order to give a legal contribution.

So section 3, in combination with section 2, eliminates PAC's as a player in the political effort to elect Members of the House and Senate. That is a wise course for the Congress to take. It is one the American people will applaud.

WEALTHY CANDIDATES

A growing problem in congressional politics, we know, is the specter of the super-wealthy candidate "buying" a seat in this body. There is no doubt that the danger of such a "buy" would be magnified under the contribution constraints of section 2.

So I have included section 4 to ensure fairness when a wealthy candidate runs against a candidate of more modest means.

As my colleagues may recall, I have worked to reduce the ability of a wealthy candidate to buy a seat for some time. I introduced S. 597 and S. 2265 during the 101st Congress and then included similar provisions in S. 91, my campaign finance reform bill last year.

We all know the tremendous advantages available to the very wealthy candidate, when that candidate decides to spend large sums of his or her own money on the campaign.

Under the provisions of section 4, the current dollar limits on contribution—$1,000, plus the in-State limit—remain in effect and unchanged, so long as all candidates in a race restrain personal spending to certain limits: $250,000 when running for the Senate or $100,000 for a House campaign, totals that include personal loans to the campaign.

But should a wealthy candidate unleash the family treasury section 4 gives the opponent a chance to compete. In that case, section 4 eliminates the in-State requirements of section 2 in this bill, and it raises the individual giving limit for that specific race to $10,000.

These limits would be loosened for the opponent or opponents of the wealthy candidate, not the wealthy candidate.

Thus a wealthy candidate would cross that big-spending threshold at his or her great peril. But that is his or her choice.

But let me reiterate: if all candidates hold to the family contribution limits I have cited, all other contribution limits will be maintained, and this section would have no impact whatsoever on that race.

Section 4 also deals with the problem of a last-minute deluge of money. It prohibits personal contributions or loans by any candidate or the candidate's family during the final 90 days before any election, regardless of whether the candidate has breached the personal limitations prior to that date.

Thus, the wealthy candidate must make his or her strategy known by early August at the latest, giving the opposition time to compete in the political money markets.

Under this approach, every candidate can be assured that he or she will never confront a last minute avalanche of family money—money the poorer opponent could never offset with last-minute contributions.

SOFT MONEY

Section 5 controls another very pervasive problem in our political system, what has come to be called soft money—contributions for voter registration drives and other forms of spending designed to assist one party or one candidate.

We all know that huge sums of money are spent outside the regular process, but in full coordination with many candidates. That is money the public never hears about, but it is spending that often shows up in far larger chunks than anything an individual or a PAC can otherwise contribute.

This is money that truly distorts the system, and we need to bring it into the open, so it either disappears or becomes a contribution directly to the candidate, and reported to the public. Let the public judge to whom a candidate might stand beholden.

Section 5 says that banks, businesses, and labor unions no longer can distort the system with soft money. They won't like that, but the American people will.

Mr. President, campaign reform is an issue that we must resolve, once and for all. Our constituents expect it, and they deserve it.

I am convinced that this legislation represents an effective way to reform campaign financing, rebuilding the link between candidates for Congress and constituents.

I send that bill to the desk and my in-depth analysis regarding it, and ask it be referred appropriately.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be received and appropriately referred.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 94

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act shall be known as the "Grassroots Campaigning and Election Reform Act of 1993".

RELiance ON IN-STATE CONTRIBUTIONS

SEC. 2. (a) Chapter 2, section 441 of title 2, United States Code, is amended by inserting a new subsection (h), and relettering subsequent sections appropriately:

"(h)(1) It shall be unlawful for any candidate for the Senate of the United States or the House of Representatives of the United States to solicit or accept any funds for the purposes of election to the Senate or the House of Representatives from any individual, organization, or political action committee that does not reside or have its headquarters within the State from which such candidate seeks election.

"(2) Each contributor to a candidate under the terms of paragraph (1) of this subsection shall provide evidence of the State of residence of such contributor, pursuant to limits described in paragraph (3) of this subsection.

"(3)(A) For the purposes of determining the accuracy of any declaration of residence by a contributor, each candidate for the Congress of the United States shall maintain records of the home State of each contributor.

"(B) It shall be presumed that a contributor is a resident of the candidate's State if the contribution is made in the form of a check drawn on a bank within such State, and if the contribution is physically presented to the candidate or his agent in such State or mailed in an envelope postmarked in such State.

"(C) For any contribution in cash in excess of $99, such name and address shall be accompanied by a notarized statement attesting to the accuracy of such name and address.

"(D) Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (B) of this subsection, any contribution in excess of $499 shall be accompanied by a notarized statement attesting to the accuracy of the name and address of the contributor.

"(E) Any contribution from a political party to a candidate shall be accompanied by a notarized statement as to the residence of the contributors of such funds.

"(4) Any contribution that fails to meet the criteria described in paragraph (3) of this subsection shall, within ten days of receipt, be returned to the contributor, if known, or given to a nonpolitical health or educational charitable organization of the candidate's choice within the candidate's State.

"(5) Each violation of this section shall subject the candidate to a civil penalty of $1,000."

(b)(1) As of January 31, 1993, each Member of the Senate of the United States elected in 1992 and each Member of the House of Representatives of the United States shall rebate to each Member's contributors, on a pro rata basis, all campaign funds retained as of January 1, 1993, or donate such funds to a nonpolitical health or educational charitable organization of the Member's choice within the Member's State.

(2) As of January 31, 1993, each Member of the Senate of the United States who was not a candidate for election in 1992 shall rebate to each Member's contributors, on a pro rata basis, all campaign funds raised as of such date, or donate such funds to a nonpolitical health or educational charitable organization of the Member's choice within the Member's State.

(3) Any funds not rebated or contributed pursuant to this subsection shall subject the Member to a civil penalty equal to twice the sums involved.

LIMITATIONS ON POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES

SEC. 3. (a) Chapter 2, section 441b of title 2, United States Code, is amended by deleting all of the text following subsection (b)(2)(B).

(b) Chapter 2, section 441a(a)(2) of title 2, United States Code, is amended by striking out "5,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "500" in subsection (A), and by placing a period after the word "committee" and striking all that follows in subsection (C).

(c) Chapter 2, section 441b of title 2, United States Code, is amended by inserting the following as a new subparagraph "(c)":

"(c) It is unlawful for any bank, labor organization, or corporation referred to in subparagraph (a) of this section to make any contribution or expenditure for the establishment, administration, or solicitation of contributions to any political committee."

USE OF PERSONAL WEALTH FOR CAMPAIGN PURPOSES

SEC. 4. Chapter 2, section 441 of title 2, United States Code, is amended by inserting a new subsection (i), and relettering subsequent sections appropriately:

"(i)(1)(A) Within fifteen days after a candidate qualifies for the ballot, under applicable State law, such candidate shall file with the Commission, a declaration stating whether or not such candidate intends to expend, in the aggregate:

"(i) At least $250,000, if a candidate for the Senate of the United States, or

"(ii) At least $100,000 if a candidate for the House of Representatives of the United States, from his personal funds, and the funds of his immediate family, and incur personal loans in excess of such amount, in connection with his campaign for such office.

"(B) For purposes of this subsection, 'immediate family' means a candidate's spouse, and any child, stepchild, parent, grandparent, brother, sister, half-brother, or half-sister of the candidate, and the spouse of any such person and any child, stepchild, parent, grandparent, brother, half-brother, sister, or half-sister of the candidate's spouse, and the spouse of any such person.

"(C) The statement required by this subsection shall be in such form, and shall contain such information, as the Commission may, by regulation, require.

"(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in any election in which a candidate declares that he intends to expend more than the limits described in subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1), or does expend and incur loans in excess of such limits, or fails to file the declaration required by this subsection, the limitations on contributions in subsection (h) of this section, as they apply to all other candidates in such election in such State, shall be waived and the limitations on contributions in subsection (a) of this section, as they apply to all other individuals running for such office, shall be increased for such election as follows:

"(A) The limitations provided in subsection (a)(1)(A) shall be increased to an amount equal to 1000 per centum of such limitation, and

"(B) The limitations provided in subsection (a)(3) shall be increased to an amount equal to 150 per centum of such limitation, but only to the extent that contributions above such limitation are made to candidates affected by the increased levels provided in subparagraph (A).

"(3) If the limitations described in paragraph (2) of this subsection are increased pursuant to paragraph (2) for a convention or a primary election, as they relate to an individual candidate, and such individual candidate is not a candidate in any subsequent election in such campaign, including the general election, the provisions of paragraph (2) shall no longer apply.

"(4) Any candidate who—

"(A) declares, pursuant to subparagraph (1) of this paragraph that he does not intend to expend, in the aggregate, more than the limit described in subparagraph (1)(A); and

"(B) subsequently does expend and incur loans in excess of such amounts, or intends to expend and incur loans in excess of such amounts, such candidate shall notify and file an amended declaration with the Commission and shall notify all other candidates for such office within twenty-four hours after changing such declaration or exceeding such limits, whichever first occurs, by sending such notice by certified mail, return receipt requested. Failure to so notify and so file shall subject such candidate to a civil penalty equal to twice the funds so expended.

"(5) Any candidate who incurs personal loans in connection with his campaign under this Act shall not repay, either directly or indirectly, such loans from any contributions made to such candidate or any authorized committee of such candidate, if such contribution was made following the date of such election.

"(6) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no candidate under this title may make expenditures from his personal funds or the personal funds of his immediate family, or incur personal loans in connection with his campaign for election to such office at any time after ninety days before the date of such election, or twenty-four hours after the primary election for such office, whichever date shall later occur. The provisions of this paragraph shall apply to all candidates regardless of whether such candidate has reached the limits provided in paragraph (1) of this subsection. Violation of this paragraph shall subject such violator to a civil penalty three times the funds so expended.

"(7) The Commission shall take such action as it deems necessary under the enforcement provisions of this Act to assure compliance with the provisions of this subsection."

SOFT MONEY

"SEC. 5. (a) At the appropriate place in Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441), insert the following new section:

"(A) Any amount solicited, received or spent by a national, State, or local committee of a political party, directly or indirectly, shall be subject to the provisions of this Act, if such amount is solicited, received, or spent in connection with a Federal election. No part of such amount may be allocated to a non-Federal account or otherwise maintained in, or paid from, an account that is not subject to this Act. This section shall not apply to amounts described in section 431 (b)(B)(viii) of title 2.

"(B) For purposes of this section, the term 'in connection with a Federal election' includes any activity that may affect a Federal election, including but not limited to the following:

"(1) Voter registration and get-out-the-vote activities;

"(2) Generic activities, including but not limited to any broadcasting, newspaper, magazine, billboard, mail, or similar type of communication or public advertising;

"(3) Campaign materials which identify a Federal candidate, regardless of any other candidate who may also be identified."

SEVERABILITY

SEC. 6. If any provision of this Act, or any amendment made by this Act, or the application of any such provision to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of any other such provision, and the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

By Mr. HARKIN (for himself, Mr. PACKWOOD, Mr. HATFIELD, and Mr. LIEBERMAN):

S. 95. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide for the development and operation of centers to conduct research with respect to contraception and centers to conduct research with respect to infertility, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

CONTRACEPTIVE AND INFERTILITY RESEARCH CENTERS ACT OF 1993

Mr. HARKIN. I rise today on behalf of myself and Senators PACKWOOD, HATFIELD, and LIEBERMAN to introduce the Contraceptive and Infertility Research Centers Act of 1993. A companion measure is being introduced in the other body today by Congresswomen SCHROEDER and SNOWE.

Mr. President, the United States is without question the world leader in biomedical research. Yet when it comes to research and development in the areas of contraception and infertility, we have lagged behind a number of industrialized nations and even some in the developing world.

Infertility and contraception are central concerns of millions of Americans of child-bearing age. Nearly 2½ million couples desiring to have children struggle with the heartbreak and frustration of infertility. And each year about 3 million American women become pregnant who do not wish to do so.

Their anguish is great. All of these individuals can benefit from intensified research on these basic family planning issues.

We can all agree that abortion is no one's first choice for avoiding unintended births. Yet, of the 3 million women who become pregnant unintentionally each year, about half will terminate their pregnancies. It is disturbing that nearly half of all pregnancies that occur each year are among women who have become pregnant unintentionally because the contraceptive method they were using failed.

The fact is that there are only a limited number of safe and effective methods of preventing pregnancy. More research is needed in improved contraceptive methods that will reduce unintended pregnancies, and the less often such pregnancies occur, the fewer the number of abortions. That is the result we can all embrace—regardless of our political or religious beliefs.

In addition to reducing unwanted pregnancies, we must also explore ways in which sexually transmitted diseases, such as gonorrhea, syphilis, and HIV infection can be more effectively prevented. These research centers will explore new methods to prevent the transmission of these sexually transmitted diseases through the development of safe, effective, and low-cost contraception methods.

And just as those who are not prepared to bear children should have access to safe and effective contraceptive methods, those who want to become parents should have access to safe and effective methods to help them conceive and bear children.

The causes of infertility are not always easy to diagnose, nor are they uniformly treatable. Treatments are often expensive, costing Americans approximately $1 billion in 1987. Yet even with such a large expenditure of funds, the success rate for treated couples is still generally low. Clearly, more research is needed into the causes of, and better treatments for, infertility in both men and women.

The need is clear. We simply must do more to encourage quality research in this country on contraception and infertility, and that is what this bill does. This bill gives specific authorization for the establishment of three research centers focused on developing improved methods of contraception and two research centers focused on developing better diagnosis and treatment of infertility through the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development.

The centers authorized in this bill will conduct clinical and applied research; train physicians, scientists, and other allied health professionals; develop model continuing education programs for such professionals; and disseminate information to them. The bill also provides for a loan repayment program for individuals involved in contraceptive or infertility research, in order to address the shortage of researchers in these fields.

Mr. President, this bill was introduced last Congress and was approved by the Congress as a component of the bill reauthorizing programs at the National Institutes of Health. However, much to my disappointment, the NIH bill was vetoed by President Bush. I am pleased to say that we were able to provide $3 million in the fiscal year 1991 National Institutes of Health appropriation to begin the process of establishing these critically important research centers, and support for the centers has grown somewhat since then. However, in order to assure that these centers are maintained and allowed to grow, as they need to, passage of this legislation is imperative.

I am pleased that the provisions of this bill will be included in the NIH reauthorization bill, which has been appropriately designated as S. 1. I am very hopeful that this vital legislation will be swiftly approved and signed into law.

Mr. President, as we mark the anniversary tomorrow of the Roe versus Wade decision protecting women's right to choose, I think it is most appropriate that we act on this common-sense, common ground legislation. Whatever positions we take on the question of abortion, if we are committed to helping couples have children who want them, and to reducing the incidence of abortion in the case of those who do not, this bill is a step in the right direction. I urge my colleagues to examine and to support it.

I ask unanimous consent that a summary and copy of the bill be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 95

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Contraceptive and Infertility Research Centers Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. CONTRACEPTIVE AND INFERTILITY RESEARCH CENTERS.

(a) RESEARCH CENTERS.—Subpart 7 of part C of title IV of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 285g et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 452A. RESEARCH CENTERS WITH RESPECT TO CONTRACEPTION AND INFERTILITY.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Institute, after consultation with the advisory council for the Institute, shall make grants to, or enter into contracts with, public or nonprofit private entities for the development and operation of centers to conduct activities for the purpose of improving methods of contraception and centers to conduct activities for the purpose of diagnosing and treating infertility.

"(b) NUMBER OF CENTERS.—In carrying out subsection (a), the Director of the Institute shall, subject to the extent of amounts made available in appropriations Acts, provide for the establishment of three centers with respect to contraception and for two centers with respect to infertility.

"(c) DUTIES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Each center assisted under this section shall, in carrying out the purpose of the center involved—

"(A) conduct clinical and other applied research, including—

"(i) for centers with respect to contraception, clinical trials of new or improved drugs and devices for use by males and by females (including barrier methods); and

"(ii) for centers with respect to infertility, clinical trials of new or improved drugs and devices for the diagnosis and treatment of infertility in both males and females;

"(B) develop protocols for training physicians, scientists, nurses, and other health and allied health professionals;

"(C) conduct training programs for such individuals;

"(D) develop model continuing education programs for such professionals; and

"(E) disseminate information to such professionals.

"(2) STIPENDS AND FEES.—A center may use funds provided under subsection (a) to provide stipends for health and allied health professionals enrolled in programs described in subparagraph (C) of paragraph (1), and to provide fees to individuals serving as subjects in clinical trials conducted under such paragraph.

"(d) COORDINATION OF INFORMATION.—The Director of the Institute shall, as appropriate, provide for the coordination of information among the centers assisted under this section.

"(e) CONSORTIUM.—Each center assisted under this section shall use the facilities of a single institution, or be formed from a consortium of cooperating institutions, meeting such requirements as may be prescribed by the Secretary, after consultation with the Director of the Institute.

"(f) TERM OF SUPPORT AND PEER REVIEW.—Support of a center under subsection (a) may be for a period of not to exceed 5 years. Such period may be extended for one or more additional periods of not to exceed 5 years if the operations of such center have been reviewed by an appropriate technical and scientific peer review group established by the Director and if such group has recommended to the Director that such period should be extended.

"(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—To carry out this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal years 1995 through 1998."

"(b) LOAN REPAYMENT PROGRAM FOR RESEARCH WITH RESPECT TO CONTRACEPTION AND INFERTILITY.—Part F of title IV of such Act (42 U.S.C. 288 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 487A the following new section:

"SEC. 487B. LOAN REPAYMENT PROGRAM FOR RESEARCH WITH RESPECT TO CONTRACEPTION AND INFERTILITY.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary, after consultation with the Director of the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, shall establish a program to enter into agreements with appropriately qualified health professionals (including graduate students) under which such health professionals shall agree to conduct research with respect to contraception, or with respect to infertility, in consideration of the Secretary agreeing to repay, for each year of such service, not to exceed $20,000 of the principal and interest of the educational loans incurred by such health professionals..

"(b) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—With respect to the National Health Service Corps Loan Repayment Program established in subpart III of part D of title III, the provisions of such subpart shall, except as inconsistent with subsection (a), apply to the program established in such subsection to the same extent and in the same manner as such provisions apply to the National Health Service Loan Repayment Program.

"(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—To carry out this section, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1994 through 1996.

"(2) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—Amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) for a fiscal year shall remain available until the expiration of the second fiscal year beginning after the fiscal year for which the amounts were appropriated."

"(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall become effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

By Mr. KENNEDY (for himself and Mr. KERRY):

S. 96. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to clarify the employment status of certain fishermen; to the Committee on Finance.

EMPLOYMENT STATUS OF CERTAIN FISHERMEN

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation that is of great importance to the economy of southeastern Massachusetts and the fishing port of New Bedford. I am pleased to be joined in this effort by my colleague, Senator KERRY. Identical legislation is being introduced today in the House by Congressmen NEAL and FRANK.

This measure is identical to a provision that was enacted by the Congress twice last session, as part of the tax bills passed in March and in October, and which unfortunately fell victim to the Presidential vetoes of those larger tax packages. It is my strong hope that Congress will approve this provision again at the earliest possible opportunity, and that the legislation will be signed into law this time.

The legislation is designed to correct a problem that has plagued hundreds of small family fishing businesses in New Bedford—the backbone of the southeastern Massachusetts economy. Since 1988, the Internal Revenue Service has been attempting to impose a controversial new interpretation of the withholding rules for fishing crews and to impose it retroactively to January 1, 1985. The IRS decided to make New Bedford a test case, and has threatened to seize the boats of the fishing fleet to collect back taxes. I understand that the Service has also begun enforcement proceedings in other coastal communities as well.

The Service's interpretation of the Tax Code was neither predictable nor logical. Our legislation will set the record straight with respect to the withholding rules. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a summary of the legal issues involved here be entered in the RECORD following my brief remarks.

In short, I urge my colleagues to approve this legislation once again, so that we may finally lift the unjustified cloud that has hung for too long over the hard-working fishing families of Massachusetts.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SUMMARY—TAX STATUS OF FISHING CREWS

In 1988, the IRS modified its interpretation of section 3121(b)(20) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. The agency adopted a new interpretation as to whether service performed by individuals on certain small fishing vessels constituted "employment" for purposes of that section of the Code.

The IRS imposed this new interpretation retroactively, insisting that the boat owners should have been withholding taxes for their crew all along, and claiming that the owners owe more than $11,000,000 in back taxes, interest, and penalties. Serious questions exist as to notice and fairness, since some boat owners state that IRS personnel had earlier advised them that it was appropriate to treat crew members as self-employed. Each boat owner properly prepared and filed information returns with the IRS, reporting the gross payments to each crew member and further demonstrating their good faith in meeting the agency's requirements as they understood them at the time.

The IRS is pursuing enforcement actions against the boat owners on two grounds:

1. "Pers"—According to industry tradition dating back to the whaling days in New Bedford, a few crew members—the cook, the engineer, and the mate—are given a small payment above their share of the catch (about $25 per fishing trip), in recognition of their extra duties while at sea. Both the crew and the owner share the responsibility and cost of these small payments. Section 3121(b)(20)(B) of the Code specifies that service as a fisherman can only be excluded from the definition of employment if the individual performing the services is compensated only by receiving a share of the catch (i.e., not a fixed salary). In 1988, the IRS began taking the position that "pers" payments had the effect of treating the individual receiving them as being engaged in "employment," notwithstanding that the extra payments are de minimis and involve an industry tradition not considered by Congress when it enacted the original statute.

2. "Normally fewer than 10"—Section 3121(b)(20) of the Code requires that a fishing vessel have a operating crew of "normally fewer than 10" individuals in order for service on that vessel to be excluded from the definition of employment. For years, the industry has assumed that "normally" means over the course of a year, to account for seasonal fluctuations in crew size; the IRS implicitly endorsed this common-sense view, and raised no objections during tax audits. In 1988, however, the IRS began taking the position that "normally" must be evaluated quarter by quarter, not annually; i.e., a boat must meet the "normally fewer than 10" test in each quarter. This onerous requirement was never Congress' intent, since it ignores the variance in hiring practices on fishing vessels from peak season to slow season.

SUMMARY—PROPOSAL

Present Law—Service performed on fishing vessels may be excluded from the definition of "employment" for purposes of income and Social Security tax withholding. For the exclusion to apply, the service must be performed on a fishing vessel, the operating crew of which is normally made up of fewer than 10 individuals. In addition, the crewmembers may not receive compensation for services other than a share of the boat's catch and the amount of the individual's share must depend on the boat's catch.

Proposal—The proposal would make two modifications to section 3121(b)(20), to clarify the application of the section to fishermen in New Bedford and other ports in the country:

(a) The term "normally" would be defined in the statute to mean the average size of the operating crew on trips during the 4 preceding calendar quarters.

(b) The proposal would permit additional payments to be made to individuals on the vessel performing extra duties (such as mate, engineer or cook), if the payments were contingent on a minimum catch and did not exceed $100 per trip.

Effective Date—The proposal would generally be effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1984, unless the payor of remuneration treated the wages paid as subject to income and Social Security taxes when paid.

Revenue Estimate—The Joint Tax Committee estimated in October 1990 that the cost of the proposal would be $10 million in the first year and $1 million for each year thereafter.

By Mr. HARKIN (for himself and Mr. CONRAD)

S. 97. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act and title III of the Public Health Service Act to protect and improve the availability and quality of health care in rural areas; to the Committee on Finance.

RURAL HEALTH CARE PROTECTION AND IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1993

• Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President. I rise to reintroduce legislation I introduced last March that I believe is critical to the protection and improvement of access to health care in rural America. My bill, the Rural Health Care Protection and Improvement Act of 1993, will extend and expand three important and successful rural health programs. I am very pleased to be joined in this effort by my colleague from North Dakota, Senator KENT CONRAD.

The Rural Health Care Protection and Improvement Act of 1993 would do three things:

Extend the special Medicare-dependent small rural hospital payment provisions for 3 years, when the Medicare urban-rural hospital payment differential should be fully phased out.

Authorize an expansion of the Rural Health Outreach Grant Program that was created in the fiscal year 1991 Labor, Health and Human Services appropriations bill; and,

Keep the expiring Rural Health Transition Grant Program alive by extending its authorization for 5 more years and increasing its authorization level from $25 to $30 million a year.

Extensions of both the Medicare Dependent Hospital and Rural Health Transition Grant Programs were passed by Congress as a part of H.R. 11 last year. Unfortunately, the legislation was vetoed by President Bush. Quick action this year is essential. However, passage of this legislation is only a first step. There are many other improvements needed to assure that the special needs of rural America are met as we work this year on comprehensive health care reform legislation. As the new Democratic cochair of the Senate rural health caucus, I will be working actively to assure that these improvements are realized.

Mr. President, nowhere is our Nation's health care crisis more acute than in rural America. A particular problem for rural Americans has been the steady decline in the number of hospitals open to serve them. Between 1980 and 1990, 330 rural hospitals were forced to close their doors, in large part because of inequities in Medicare reimbursement. In 1989, Congress wisely acted to help redress these inequities by establishing the Medicare Dependent Small Rural Hospital [MDH] Program as a part of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act. The MDH Program allows rural hospitals under 100 beds to qualify for somewhat higher reimbursement if over 60 percent of their patient days went to caring for Medicare patients. While even with this additional assistance most of these small rural hospitals are still losing money treating Medicare patients, the MDH Program has provided the needed margin for survival for many. Its termination, which has already hit some hospitals, could force hundreds of hospitals to shut their doors or significantly scale back their operations, jeopardizing access to care for thousands of rural Americans.

It is, therefore, essential that this critical program be extended. Our bill takes the modest step of extending it until hospital reporting periods ending March 31, 1996, when the differential in what Medicare pays rural and urban hospitals hopefully will be fully phased out.

Mr. President, the end of the MDH Program is already having a profound
