

SENATE—Thursday, January 21, 1993

(Legislative day of Tuesday, January 5, 1993)

The Senate met at 10 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. BYRD].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will be led in prayer to the Creator of life, and life eternal, by the Reverend Richard C. Halverson, Jr., of Falls Church, VA.

Mr. Halverson, please.

PRAYER

The guest chaplain, the Reverend Richard C. Halverson, Jr., offered the following prayer:

Let us pray:

Father in heaven, it is written:

Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it: except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain.—Psalm 127:1.

The Sun has risen on a new administration, and a day of hard work awaits those who serve in this Senate. In Your divine providence You have allowed to be assembled here a household of remarkably gifted public servants and staff members. You have granted them the resources and opportunity to accomplish great things. Yet, lest their striving be in vain, it is our prayer, Lord, that Your strong arm undergird the efforts of those who labor here and that Your vigilant eye keep watch over all their pursuits.

We are mindful, also, of the new elected officials and administrative staff who have joined this body and ask—just as You have caused the rain to fall upon all people, regardless of their understanding of You—that You bring a shower of blessing upon them and their families as they make the many adjustments required of this new calling. Bless also those who have moved on from here in search of new challenges.

We make this prayer in the name of Christ. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will be in order.

The majority leader is recognized.

THE AGENDA OF THE 103D CONGRESS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, and Members of the Senate, yesterday President Clinton and Vice President GORE took the oath of office. Every American has a stake in the success of the new administration, because when an American President succeeds, America succeeds.

President Clinton's goal for our future is to make America first by putting Americans first; to focus on economic expansion, job growth, and income growth. The 103d Congress agrees with that focus: We want working Americans to prosper, their families to face a brighter future. We want our children equipped for the challenges and opportunities that only America can provide.

The needs are many. We need more job creation, so everyone who wants to work can find a job; so we can end welfare dependency and restore individual pride and self-respect to every American parent and worker. We need to invest in our Nation to build the basis for economic expansion and new jobs; we must invest in our infrastructure, our cities, our technology, and our people.

We need job training to equip working people for a dynamic, expanding economy. We need education reform to equip our children to be their best, and to give every student with the will to study a chance to earn a college education.

We must restore security to family budgets by removing the single greatest uncertainty facing today's families: The fear of bankruptcy from uninsured health costs.

Our health insurance system is breaking down. When companies can unilaterally reduce coverage as soon as a worker contracts a serious illness, and when insurers can refuse to cover a preexisting condition, the premise of shared risk—the heart of any insurance system—is being abandoned. Healthy people should not be the only ones who can afford health insurance.

The underinsurance and lack of coverage is fueling a growth in public health care costs that threatens to erode our economic future. If health care costs climb at the rate they have in recent years, we will never get the deficit under control.

The investments we need in public safety, education, job creation, the investments in long-term growth to put our Nation back on the road to healthy economic expansion, depend on our success in controlling the health costs that are driving our deficit higher.

Economic recovery, job growth, health care reform and deficit reduction are different parts of a single problem. We will not correct one without correcting the others. We cannot win just one of these battles: We have to win them all.

That is the task that lies before President Clinton and the Congress. It is a tough challenge. It is going to demand serious change from most of us. It is going to ask Americans in and out of Government to look to the common good and the common future.

Soon we will receive the President's program for economic growth, job creation and investment for our future. The agenda of the 103d Congress will be focused on those goals.

Today the Senate begins legislative business with the introduction of bills for the 103d Congress. We will complete work on the agenda of reform in our electoral system, in health care research, and in the workplace.

In that category fall four of the first five bills to be introduced today: S. 1, the reauthorization for the National Institutes of Health; S. 2, the National Voter Registration Act, S. 3, the campaign finance reform legislation; and S. 5, the Family and Medical Leave Act.

The fourth bill will be a competitiveness package that builds on the work of last year. It is a package of initiatives designed to accelerate the spread of improved technologies and to strengthen capital investment for modernization and growth in mid-sized and smaller manufacturing firms.

S. 1, the NIH reauthorization, honors a commitment I made last year when it became clear that a good piece of legislation, backed by a bipartisan majority, would fail because of the insistence of a small minority of Senators on a symbolic victory over the issue of abortion.

The claim that permitting the use of fetal tissue in potentially life-saving medical research would induce women to have abortions which they otherwise would not have is a baseless claim. It is insulting to women. The NIH bill is an important commitment to focus research on women's health issues, a long-overdue realignment of our Nation's research priorities.

S. 3, the campaign finance reform bill, is crucial to the reform of our electoral system. Last year's election proved that Americans have not lost faith in their system of government. But they do not trust a system based on enormous campaign contributions. They demand reform and we owe it to them.

American elections cost too much and last too long. They are too long on symbols and too short on substance. Americans last year proved that they are interested in real debate on serious issues. We need an electoral system that is free of the insatiable funding demands, a system to discourage sound bites and to restore intelligent debate about public policy choices.

That is also the reason we need to pass S. 2, the so-called motor voter bill. Today's working families and young people deserve a chance to register to vote conveniently. Working people commute long hours. They have to deal with child care arrangements and many other chores in their free time. The Nation that invented around-the-clock supermarket shopping can cope with the innovation of letting people register when they pick up a driver's license.

The experience of many States has shown repeatedly that easier and more convenient voter registration does not increase voter fraud. It does increase voter turnout.

I might add for my colleagues that I am very proud of the fact that in the recent election, the State which had the highest level of participation by the people in the electoral process was my own State of Maine. And one of the reasons for that, an important reason for that, is Maine adopted improved voter registration a few years ago. When it was proposed in our State, we heard the same arguments that have been heard here in the Senate by our colleagues, alleging that if we permit improved voter registration procedures, there will be a massive increase in fraud. Yet, in every State in which there has been improved voter procedures, voter turnout has gone up and there has been little or no fraud. In my own State, there has not been a single case of voter fraud—not one. And yet, on the positive side, our citizens' participation has increased and is now highest in the country. That is a goal to which every American ought to aspire and to which every Senator should contribute.

S. 5, the Family and Medical Leave Act, is unfinished business whose purpose is well known. It will give men and women who work full time outside the home leave time to care for ailing parents and sick children, time to cope with childbirth or adoption.

It is a very basic recognition that working people are not just cogs in a corporate wheel; they are also parents, they are children, they are spouses, and they have family responsibilities that are very important.

The competitiveness package, S. 4, is designed to support capital investment for modernization of our manufacturing base. Despite the claims of supply-side economists, capital investment in plant and equipment has been disappointing in the past decade. In 1991, it fell to a 14-year low, just half the rate of the Japanese economy.

The efforts of our private sector to commercialize and bring to market the fruits of research and technology have not had the support they deserve. Too often, traditional lenders are unwilling to embark on what they perceive as speculative production. Too often, industry-led research produces technology that our own private sector does not exploit.

That is why the technologies for transistor radios, VCR's, and colored television were American, but the products of those technologies are not.

S. 4 is designed to change that. It will provide matching funds for industry-led efforts to develop new technologies in fields such as electronics, advanced manufacturing, materials, and bioprocessing.

The bill enlarges programs that help State governments bring advanced manufacturing technology to the companies in their States. In the same way that an earlier agricultural America learned modern farming from a network of agricultural extension services, these programs will deploy information and assistance about modern equipment and techniques to our manufacturers.

The bill will create a new technology loan program to help finance the transition from laboratory model to production. If we can shorten the product development cycle to meet new demands and anticipate emerging technologies, our economy will regain dynamic growth.

These are steps that build on the work we began last year. They are part of economic revitalization, along with the defense conversion effort now underway. This broad economic effort will also include additional manufacturing and technology initiatives, such as dual use and advanced materials, job training, and trade initiatives. With new leadership in the White House committed to the regeneration of our economy, the Senate is ready to do its part.

It is also evidence of our confidence that the economic problems we face today are a temporary roadblock, not a permanent obstacle to achieving the kind of economic growth that all Americans want.

For too long, we have tinkered with the ideas of the past. For too long Government has focused on realigning the slices of the pie, trying to make certain that everyone got an equal slice of the pie. But the future does not lie in slicing the pie into fairer segments ever smaller. The future lies in making the economic pie grow. The future lies in more pies. American industry and enterprise can create them. American Government can help. Working Americans want to be a part of the picture.

We are a nation anxious to get back to productive work. Our people want good jobs. They know they are the best workers in the world, and they know they can be even better. The competitiveness package in groundwork in that effort. The Clinton economic program will build a sound structure on it. The Nation will prosper as a result.

The first five bills introduced are often taken as symbolic, as they are to some extent. But they should not overshadow the other important work the Senate will take up.

The renewed confrontation with Iraq in the last week of the Bush administration is a sharp reminder that unfinished business abroad will not wait on our convenience.

The START II Treaty has been signed. START II will ban the weapons that have done the most to destabilize world peace for many decades—MIRV'd warheads and intercontinental ballistic missiles. It is an achievement for which President George Bush will receive and deserve the praise and thanks of future generations. I commend President Bush again publicly. I do not think we can say it too often. The negotiation of the two START Treaties is one of the great achievements of this or any other administration in the nuclear age. I intend to bring the START II Treaty to the floor for ratification as soon as possible.

It paves the way, as well, to a test ban treaty, a subject in which there is bipartisan interest and which, despite the demise of the cold war, demands action. I hope to work with Senators on both sides of the aisle on that goal this year.

The former Soviets are facing tough economic times. Tough economic times can call forth dangerous political responses. We have provided some aid. We have to face the possibility that more may be needed. There will be other calls from the international community on the generous spirit of Americans. We will not be able to heed them all, for we must tend first to our needs at home. But we should debate them with awareness of where our interests most clearly lie.

American troops in Somalia today are testing the question of whether disinterested efforts for humanity can overcome the entrenched enmities and local hatreds to which much of the human race is still held hostage.

Bosnia poses the same question in a different environment. The two are not the same. Action that may be useful in Somalia is not guaranteed to work elsewhere. That is not a reason to ignore the elsewhere.

It is an argument for more skilled diplomacy where diplomacy can help. It is an argument for more measured responses where they can help. We do not face a one-size-fits-all world. One policy will not work everywhere. World events will always demand our response. Our response must reflect our interest. The American interest must dominate our considerations in a world where the values of democracy are strengthened, because all people want freedom; a world where trade and economic growth improve the lives of all the world's people.

At home, we face a familiar and busy agenda.

Americans want reform in our public education system. The Senate will take up the Elementary and Secondary Education Act bill this year. Middle-class families cannot pay college tuition and the burden of loans imposes an unmanageable debt on many graduates.

Americans expect Government to restore public safety on our cities' streets and neighborhoods. No mother should be afraid to allow a child to play outdoors. No senior citizen should fear the walk to the neighborhood grocery store. The plague of violence must end.

Is there anything more tragic than the recent images we have all seen on television of young American children who cannot leave their home for fear that they will be shot by a stray bullet.

I will sign a letter to President Clinton urging prompt State Department Action on the U.N. Convention on Women's Rights, an international codification of the rights of one-half the human race. Senator BIDEN will introduce the Violence Against Women Act, designed to protect women against the most common hazards they face. I will reintroduce S. 25, the Freedom of Choice Act, to ratify Roe versus Wade and the guarantees it provided that women, not Government, have the right to make their own reproductive choices.

We will focus on the needs of the 29 percent of American families headed by a single parent. They are raising 20 percent of our children. Most of those single parents are mothers, not fathers. Only about a quarter of them receive child support payments. Half get no help at all.

The Commission on Interstate Child Support has reported its findings; I appointed a democratic task force to turn them into legislation. I hope that in the coming months, we will see some bipartisan interest in creating a uniform and enforceable code of law for child support. A family value that every one of us can support is the responsibility of both parents for the well-being of their children.

There is one family value that every one of us can support and that value is that it is the responsibility of both parents for the well-being of their children.

We have a full agenda of essential environmental legislation as well. The Endangered Species Act must be reauthorized. The Clean Water Act must be strengthened to give our communities the help they need to keep America's water clean. Progress on making good the promises of the Clean Air Act must be renewed.

The single most difficult, controversial, and potentially divisive issue this Congress will face is health care reform. Reform is essential, because we have a system that delivers less care for a higher price than any in the world.

Reform demands change in the behavior of health professionals, insurers, and patients. Change is often difficult. For that reason, it is often resisted.

But without serious, substantial change in our system, we cannot come to grips with the economic health of the country, because health care costs are what is driving the deficit today. If we want to reduce the Federal budget deficit, we have to restrain health costs.

If we do not restrain health costs, all the calls for restraint and reductions in the rest of the Federal budget will produce no more deficit reduction in the future than they have produced in the last dozen years.

Health care can not be permitted to devour most of our resources. Nothing is more important than the economic health on which all our futures rest. I do not expect health care reform to be easy, or swift or painless. But I do expect it to be accomplished.

Above all, we have to work for economic expansion, job creation, and health care reform for the sake of deficit control. These goals are inseparable. They depend upon one another.

Unless we reform health care, we will not be able to control the deficit. And unless we control the deficit, we won't see more jobs and higher incomes. Unless we produce a growing economy that creates more jobs, we will not produce a better life for American working families.

In his election campaign, President Clinton spoke of the people who do their duty, bring up their children, pay their taxes, and live by the rules. Those Americans are the heart and soul of the country, its backbone.

It is my intention, my goal, that those Americans will once again become the primary focus of their Government. If we succeed in placing their well-being at the center of our agenda, we will succeed and all Americans will succeed.

Throughout history men and women have struggled to define the proper purpose of government. In my view no one did it better or more consistently than one of the great and, I believe, one of the underrated men in American history. James Madison was a co-founder of the Democratic Party and the principal author of the American Constitution. Madison said that the purpose of government is the well-being of the people. In six words with conciseness and directness he summed up our purpose and our agenda. We, in this Congress, must join with the new President and the new administration to enhance the well-being of the people.

If we do that we will all have succeeded.

RECESS FROM 12:30 P.M. TO 2:15 P.M.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess today from 12:30 p.m. to 2:15 p.m. in order to accommodate a party conference luncheon.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate presently is conducting morning business under the previous order. And under the previous order Senators are permitted to speak during the transaction of morning business. This first hour is under the control of the majority leader or his designee. The second hour will be under the control of the Republican leader or his designee according to the order entered yesterday.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Connecticut.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The senior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DODD] is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I appreciate that.

COMMENDATION OF MAJORITY LEADER

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, let me commend the majority leader for a very concise and thoughtful statement this morning outlining not only the five principal pieces of legislation that will be introduced either today or very shortly, but also the other items on the agenda that this new Congress with this new administration will undertake to grapple with and hopefully enact in order to pass on to the President for his signature.

(The remarks of Mr. DODD pertaining to the introduction of S. 5 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the time consumed by the quorum call will not be charged against either side.

The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN].

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be yielded 5 minutes out of the leadership time to make a statement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BOREN. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. BOREN pertaining to the introduction of S. 3 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. Without objection, the time consumed by the call will not be charged to either side.

Mr. BURNS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Montana [Mr. BURNS].

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, is a quorum in progress?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Not yet.

Mr. BURNS. I ask unanimous consent I may have maybe 2 minutes as if in morning business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate is transacting morning business.

Mr. BURNS. Thank you, Mr. President.

THE PASSING OF RUSSELL BURNS AND ERWIN KUHLMANN

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, as we open this Congress on a very positive note, I know it is the wishes and the prayers of all who are Members of this body and are assembled here, it will remain that way till the same gavel that opened this session, closes it. We have witnessed the transfer of power from one President to another as envisioned by our forefathers and expressed in our Constitution. It was done with great dignity and ceremony and now our prayers of good will are for our new national leader and President, William Jefferson Clinton. May his judgment be keen, may his day-to-day decisions be based on his strong inner-self, that we pray, knows the difference between good and evil, right from wrong.

Mr. President, while it is time to go to work, I could not help but look up in the gallery as we were swearing in our new colleagues a couple of weeks ago and my memory wandered back to 4 years ago and my father setting up there so proudly when I took my oath. It was a very proud day in my life. But, as only time can do, at the age of 86 years, on December 11, 1992, cancer claimed my father.

Russell Burns was a farmer and a stockman, a native son of Gallatin, MO. Tough but tender, and not burdened with a great amount of formal education, he understood, with great wisdom, the true meaning of the relationship of soil and life, how sacred individual rights are, and property rights as the cornerstone of a free society. He knew and understood the difference between self-rule and government rule. He also knew and understood that the very rights granted to every American by the Constitution cannot be claimed for oneself without personal responsibility. We tend to forget that and it seems to get lost in our day-to-day living. He was my teacher and my friend. He was my link to the most dynamic period of American history and maybe in the history of mankind. As he noted, it was we, man, that went from horse back to the Moon just in his lifetime. He often reminded me that he did not fear growing old, he did fear growing too old. He did not grow too old.

Mr. President, 1992 also claimed another son of the soil. On October 21, 1992, Erwin Kuhlmann, 77 years old and a native son of North Platte, NE, passed from this life. He was, as was my father, a farmer and stockman and my wife's father. There just seems to be something special about men and women who are born of the land. They spend their whole life taking from the soil but had a way to give it all back for the next generation. Such wisdom and insight they had and I, for one, am very fortunate and grateful to have known such men.

These men slip into the past but their place in history is secure as they were a big part in building the strongest, the most secure, country and society that offers more freedoms and opportunities in the history of man. Mr. President, in a time when we see some who would destroy the values and the institutions that built this country, we can remember these builders and what they taught us. It has been said any jackass can kick down a barn but only a carpenter can build one. Russell Burns and Erwin Kuhlmann were builders.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll, and without objection the time consumed by the call will not be charged to either side.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as I understand it, under the order 1 hour is under the control of Senator MITCHELL or his designee; and 1 hour is under the control of the Republican leader, or his designee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is correct.

Mr. DOLE. All time has not been used on that side. If we could proceed, we would be happy to yield when anyone appears on the other side just to save time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Fifteen minutes fifty seconds remain under the majority leader's control. How much time would the Republican leader like to yield at this point?

Mr. DOLE. I think probably 20 minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Republican leader yields to himself 20 minutes, without objection, at this point.

TRIBUTE TO PRESIDENT BUSH

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, 51 years ago last month, the attack on Pearl Harbor brought the United States into World War II.

Within a few months, a young 17-year-old named George Bush was on his way to battle, knowing what so many of his generation knew—that there was only one place for him to be—defending freedom.

And from the missions he flew as America's youngest naval aviator, to the mission he completed yesterday, George Bush has defended and promoted freedom as few have ever done before.

As a successful businessman, he advanced the strengths of our free enterprise system, by bringing jobs and paychecks to many Texas families.

As a Congressman, he courageously fought for civil rights for all Americans.

As Ambassador to the United Nations, he fought to extend freedom, democracy, and human rights across the globe. It was a fight he would continue as our envoy to China and as Director of Central Intelligence.

And as Vice President of the United States, he helped Ronald Reagan in restarting the American economy, regaining our military strength, and in reclaiming our role as leader of the free world.

But George Bush's greatest contributions to this country and to the world were made during his term as President of the United States.

In his inaugural address 4 years ago, President Bush said he saw history "as a book with many pages, and each day we fill a page with acts of hopefulness and meaning."

I would venture to say that no one in this Chamber—and no one in this country—could have predicted just how many pages of history George Bush would help to write these past 4 years.

Under George Bush, the tide of democracy that was running high 4 years ago, became a tidal wave, as courageous men and women seized the freedoms that had been denied them for decade after decade: Poland, Bulgaria, Romania, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Nicaragua, the rollcall of nations that turned to freedom and democracy during the Bush administration goes on and on.

History will always reflect the fact that it was President George Bush who brought the cold war to a close, without a single shot being fired.

And when the cold war was won, it was the experienced hand of President

Bush that guided the United States-Soviet relationship from an era of mistrust and suspicion to one of unprecedented cooperation.

It was the leadership and vision of President Bush that brought about the START treaties—treaties which substantially diminish the threat of nuclear war.

It was President Bush who worked tirelessly to achieve the first face to face talks ever held between Israel and all of its Arab neighbors.

It was President Bush who launched and supported the efforts that led to the freeing of America's hostages in Lebanon.

It was President Bush who sponsored the first-ever drug summit with leaders of Colombia, Bolivia, and Peru.

It was President Bush who negotiated the North American Free-Trade Agreement with Mexico and Canada, creating the world's largest market.

It was President Bush who helped resolve regional conflicts in Angola, Afghanistan, Cambodia, and El Salvador—helping to put these countries on the road to peace.

It was President Bush who made the tough call and brought hope to the starving people of Somalia.

And, of course, it was President Bush who forged a historic international coalition in the Persian Gulf, a coalition that would drive the dictator Saddam Hussein out of Kuwait.

There are those who have said that the Bush administration spent too much time dealing with foreign policy.

I am willing to let history be the judge of that, but let me just say this: If someone had come to George Bush 4 years ago and given him a choice between serving for one term as President and having the cold war won, the Berlin Wall come down, the threat of nuclear holocaust ended, and the world unite against a dictator. Or, serving two terms as President and having the Iron Curtain survive, a tyrant in control of the Mideast, and the nuclear clock a little closer to midnight, then there is no doubt what his decision would have been.

But—even though the media chose to ignore it—the fact is that along with changing the world for the better, President George Bush also changed America for the better.

Under his leadership:

We have held our own during a global recession, and as the economic figures have shown over the past few weeks, the Bush economic recovery is well underway.

And the fact is that America's standard of living is the highest in the world, and our workers are the most productive in the world.

Forty-three million men and women with disabilities will have the same rights as other Americans.

The country rallied behind the national education goals and reinventing

American education became a national priority.

Working families now have tax credits to help offset the cost of child care.

A civil rights bill which opens doors to all Americans is now the law of the land.

More disadvantaged children than ever before are helped by the Head Start Program.

The air we breathe is cleaner.

Housing is more affordable than in the past 15 years.

America is once again the world's top exporter.

Farm exports are the highest level since 1981.

Drug use among young Americans has been drastically reduced.

And because of President Bush and our remarkable First Lady, a new spirit of volunteerism and neighbor helping neighbor is alive and sweeping across America.

It was no surprise, by the way, to see Barbara Bush once again on top of this year's list of the most admired women in the world. She and the entire Bush family have survived 4 years of media intrusion with good humor and good grace.

In March 1991 President Bush stood in the House Chamber to tell the Nation that the war in the gulf was over. And at the conclusion of his remarks he said that "we're coming home now—proud, confident, heads high."

And because he changed America and the world for the better—because our children are safer—George Bush had every reason to leave the White House in the same way: proud, confident, and his head held high.

On behalf of all my colleagues on this side of the aisle—and I think on the other side of the aisle, certainly—and on behalf of American people, and the men and women around the world who now live in freedom, I say, "thank you, Mr. President."

CHANGE FOR THE BETTER PREVIEW OF 103D CONGRESS

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, it will be my privilege to serve as Republican leader in the 103d Congress. I thank the voters of Kansas for again placing their trust in me this past November; and I thank my Republican colleagues for allowing me to continue to serve as their leader.

I also want to congratulate the distinguished majority leader, as he begins his fifth year in that position. Throughout our service as leaders, we have developed a relationship based on mutual trust and respect. This body could not operate in the absence of such a relationship.

For the first time, Senator MITCHELL will serve as majority leader with a President of the United States who shares his party affiliation. I know he is looking forward to this responsibility, and I look forward to working with him in these exciting and challenging times.

I listened to the majority leader's statement outlining his goals for the 103d session, and I commend him for his eloquence. His is an ambitious agenda, but the people are expecting no less. And I believe that in many of the areas he touched upon, we can find common ground.

As I said yesterday, my Republican colleagues and I stand today with the American people in wishing the best of luck to our new President as he deals with the complex challenges facing America and the world.

I believe these challenges can be met only if Democrats and Republicans work together. I have long been a great believer in the strengths of our two-party system—and those strengths can most clearly be seen when we work together to do what is right.

I know that working with Republicans is a new area for the President. As Governor of Arkansas, he dealt with a legislature which consisted almost entirely of Democrats. And though there are only 43 Republicans in the Senate, our rules provide those 43 Senators—indeed they provide every single Senator—with a great deal of power.

It is not my intention to use that power to constantly block President Clinton's proposals, or the will of the Senate. Indeed, as you have seen in the Cabinet confirmation process, we have cooperated with the majority in scheduling of confirmation hearings. And yesterday—within hours of President Clinton taking the oath of office—we confirmed the first three members of his Cabinet.

We will probably confirm an additional 10 members today without a rollcall vote. Some will indicate in the RECORD that they might object to a particular nominee. I believe, as everybody believes, that we have had the hearings, the scrutiny, and we think we have done a good job. And I commend my colleague now on the floor, the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. LOTT] for coordinating all of the different areas. We believe President Clinton is entitled to have his people in place at the earliest possible time.

But let me be clear in saying that I expect there will be times where my colleagues and I will disagree with the direction in which President Clinton is steering the ship of state.

As Republicans, we are committed to less taxes, less spending, less government, less regulation, and a strong and secure America. And when President Clinton's proposals stray from those principles, we will not be afraid to speak out—just as Senator MITCHELL and the Democrats spoke out when they disagreed with Presidents Bush and Reagan. The American people expect no less.

Earlier today, I paid tribute to the remarkable career of President Bush, but it is worth mentioning again that the Nation President Clinton inherits is much for the better because of 12 years of Republican leadership in the White House.

Some may disagree, but when the Reagan-Bush era began in January 1981, America was in danger and decline. Our economy was in shambles. Interest rates and inflation went through the roof. Abroad, Americans were held hostage, and the Soviet Empire was bristling with nuclear arms and hostile intentions.

What a difference 12 years have made. Thanks to Ronald Reagan and George Bush, America made a remarkable comeback. Presidents Reagan and Bush presided over the biggest, and longest, economic expansion in U.S. history. During that time, interest rates have been cut in half and then some, and inflation is practically nonexistent.

The economy hit some rough spots during the past years, but recent figures prove that President Bush was right. Anyone who squeezed their way through the stores this Christmas, knows that the recession is over, and the Bush recovery is well underway.

Most importantly, the cold war was finally brought to an end, as communism collapsed under the weight of its own incompetence and the steady resolve of Ronald Reagan, George Bush, and the American people.

Our allies agree that America is the only remaining undisputed military and moral superpower on the face of the Earth. And our adversaries have no doubt that America will stand up for freedom across the globe. And thanks to President Bush's vision, historic treaties have been signed which have permanently moved back the hands on the nuclear doomsday clock.

These are facts, and will be remembered in history—no matter how hard bitter partisans try to rewrite it.

It's an outstanding record, but we can do even more. Far too many Americans are jobless, and have not yet felt the effects of the economic recovery. A staggering deficit threatens the economic health of this generation, and that of our children and grandchildren. Countless Americans cannot afford even basic health care for their families. And despite the end of the cold war, the world is still a very dangerous place, full of dictators and tyrants who prey on their own citizens, as well as other nations.

President Clinton addressed these and other issues during the Presidential campaign—a campaign in which he made some very specific promises to the American people—promises such as cutting the deficit in half in 4 years, a middle-class tax cut, a total reform of the welfare system, and reform of our health care system.

As candidate Clinton became President-elect Clinton, some of these unequivocal promises were downgraded to goals and I suspect that President Clinton may now reevaluate some other campaign promises.

But the one promise which President Clinton most assuredly will not reevaluate is one that he made at every campaign stop—and one that he repeated yesterday in his inaugural address—the promise that he would be an agent of change.

Yes, the American people want change. But what remains to be seen is what type of change will be proposed. The American people don't need change for change's sake. And they most assuredly don't need, and can't afford change back to the failed big spending and big taxing policies of the past. What America needs, and what Senate Republicans support, is change for the better.

And from our perspective there are a number of areas of concern that are in dire need of change for the better, and that should be tackled during the coming session.

Topping the list of the President's agenda, Senator MITCHELL's agenda, our agenda, and the American people's agenda is the economy. We all agree that the economy is not as strong as it could be, nor is it creating as many jobs as we would like.

President Clinton has often stated that he will focus like a laser beam on the economy. It is my belief that the best prescription for America's long-term economic health, is to have President Clinton and Congress focus the laser beam of change on the deficit.

Everyone in this Chamber knows that Congress has been spending more than we can afford. For far too long, we have treated the Federal Treasury as if it were a giant shopping mall, offering an unlimited supply of merchandise on a no-money-down, no-credit-limit basis. The result is a $4½ trillion debt which we will pass on to our children's credit cards.

Secretary BENTSEN, and OMB Director-designate PANETTA talked in their confirmation hearing about sacrifice, as did the President in his inaugural address yesterday.

"Sacrifice" is a word that strikes fear in the hearts of many in Washington. It does not, however, strike fear in the hearts of Senate Republicans and many colleagues on the other side. In 1985, we put together the toughest deficit and budget cutting legislation in history—a package which froze Government outlays, deferred COLA's on entitlement programs, and cut 14 Federal programs that had outlived their usefulness. It passed by only one vote, and I might add that only one of my colleagues on the other side, one Democrat crossed party lines to vote for tough but fair medicine.

If President Clinton agrees that tough action is needed, then Republicans stand ready to help, assuming that our colleagues on the other side of the aisle are also willing to join us in telling the public what they need to know, and not just what they want to hear.

Republicans will also be proposing a series of budget reforms which we have proposed before, and which have long held the overwhelming support of the American people—a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, and line-item veto authority for the President. These are essential budget trimming tools that have been blocked by the majority party year after year.

As Governor of Arkansas, President Clinton operated under both a requirement to balance the budget and the authority to veto line items in spending bills. During the Presidential campaign, he endorsed giving the President line-item veto authority.

We hope the Senate Democrats will join us in making him feel at home by bringing these ideas to the Federal Government.

Republicans are also introducing today enhanced rescission legislation. This legislation will allow the President to slice out unnecessary spending, and send it back to Congress for a second look.

With enhanced rescission, Congress will be forced to vote up or down on any proposed rescission of spending. Today, Congress can simply ignore any rescissions, forcing the spending to take place, in spite of the President's objections.

One sure way to stifle economic growth, and recovery, is to strangle it in regulations, bureaucracy, and mandates.

I must say just in this recess period I have had an opportunity to visit a lot of businessmen and businesswomen, small business people, middle-sized, big businessmen, big businesswomen, whatever. One thing they are unanimous about, and that is that regulation has a choke hold on their business. They cannot build plants. They cannot expand. They cannot do it because of some regulation, EPA regulation, or some other Federal agency, and it does not take just months; it takes month after month after month and in some cases years. So in many cases the decision is made to move the plant somewhere else, built it in some other country, create jobs somewhere else.

So I think one thing we have to come to grips with is the stranglehold that regulations have on the American economy, the bureaucracy, and the mandates. It seems to me that we have a big opportunity but we have a big responsibility, too, to somehow preserve the environment, do all those good things we want to do but at the same time not destroy jobs and destroy the economy in the process.

Throughout the past decade, Senate Republicans have served as guardians of America's small business men and women, opposing an avalanche of mandates and red tape.

Indeed, instead of holding small business down, Government should extend a helping hand. And today, I will be joined by other Senate Republicans in introducing the Small Business Investment Act of 1993. This legislation contains a number of items which simplify—that is right, I said “simplify”—small business reporting regulations, and which ease access to capital.

Another bill we will introduce today is our version of family leave legislation. There are those who would have you believe that Republicans do not care about working families. That is simply not the case.

I listened earlier to my friend from Connecticut, Senator DODD. He introduced, I think, bill No. 5, which is the mandated family leave the Democrats propose. It does not cover very many employees.

Not only do we care about working families, but we also care enough not to saddle employers with costly mandates.

Again, as I said about regulation, this is another mandate. It is another tax on business. If we are going to mandate family leave, one size fits all. No matter what size the business, what kind of employee you may be—whether young, middle aged, whether with or without children, whatever it is—one size fits all. That is the approach my colleagues on the other side have taken and one I assume will pass the Congress and this time will not be vetoed, because President Clinton said he will sign it.

Instead, our legislation provides for refundable tax credits for businesses with fewer than 500 employees that provide for up to 12 weeks of family leave. Rather than mandating a one-size-fits-all Government mandate, we should trust employers and employees to work out the type of parental leave plan which best fits their circumstances. Some indicate different employers have different circumstances.

And, yes, we are honest enough to pay for the expense of this legislation, that we will be introducing later today, through an increase in corporate estimated tax payments.

President Clinton has said that he wants to “put people first.” One way he can do this is to ensure that Government mandates and Government bureaucrats do not run over individual citizens and individual rights.

Therefore, I will be reintroducing legislation—passed by the Senate last year—which simply requires Federal agencies to determine whether any new regulation being published would result in the taking of any private property.

This is a legislative area pursued vigorously by our departed colleague, Senator Symms from Idaho, who did an outstanding job.

So, if it does result in taking of private property, then legitimate health and safety reasons must be documented, which I think our citizens have enough, whether on the farm or small business or cities or small towns or suburbs, of some Federal bureaucracy walking in and in fact taking away your property. We hope this bill will have bipartisan support.

President Clinton has strongly committed himself to reforming America's health care system. He will suffer no shortage of advice in this mission. Last year, there were more than 30 health care reform proposals in Congress, none of which had the support necessary to pass.

Even the harshest critics of the American health care system acknowledge that the 85 percent of Americans who have insurance enjoy the highest standards of medical care in the world. Keep in mind that is 85 percent.

The United States continues to have the best doctors, the most advanced technology, and the strongest commitments to research and development in the world.

Still, the system is troubled. Health care costs are rising at dizzying rates, an estimated 35 million people are without basic health coverage, and still others are in jeopardy of losing their coverage. It is clear that our response to the health care crisis cannot be, “Take two aspirin and call us in 4 years.”

My colleagues and I on the Republican side of the aisle have worked on this issue for many years, and we have proposals and suggestions which we believe will improve the system. But we do not have all the answers.

So again, I hope this is an area in which we are going to have bipartisan cooperation. It seems to me in this area, particularly, we are going to need bipartisan cooperation working with the executive branch.

If the debate disintegrates into a political contest, then everyone loses. Therefore, as Republican leader, I am not introducing a major reform proposal today because I am hopeful we can ultimately work together and avoid the polarization that has plagued us in the past.

We simply must work together—the White House, Congress, Democrats, Republicans, providers, insurance companies, consumers, and the Government. I am convinced that reform can take place. And that it can be done without creating another Government bureaucracy, or another Government program, or relying on the old standbys of giant tax increases and Big Government mandates.

There is one health care bill which I will be introducing today—one that focuses on an issue of great concern to me—and to the President—and that is the preservation of rural health care in America.

This bill reauthorizes some provisions which have been critical to enabling rural Americans to receive health care. If they are not reauthorized—and reauthorized quickly—many of these provisions would expire. In fact, in some cases, they have already done so. If we do not act soon, then some rural hospitals will have to cancel vital outreach services, and some will be forced to close their doors forever.

One of the factors behind the high cost of health care is the crisis in our civil justice system. And a priority of Senate Republicans in this Congress—as it has been many times before—is to change our civil justice system for the better through commonsense reform of our products liability and malpractice systems.

Along with our civil justice system, it has long been apparent to Senate Republicans that our criminal justice system is also in need of change for the better.

Surveys reflect the fact that Americans believe that while the economy is the most important problem facing the country, crime is the most important problem facing their neighborhood. And no doubt about it, from one end of the country to the other, in rural as well as urban areas, Americans live in fear.

Today, as in past sessions, Senate Republicans, led by Senator HATCH, will be introducing tough, no-nonsense crime legislation. The proposals contained in this legislation—cracking down on legal loopholes for criminals, and giving law officials the clout they need to make convictions stick—have been debated over and over again by this body. Now it is time to pass them. There is no reason why a tough crime bill can not be sent to the President within a matter of months.

President Clinton has expressed support for a National Police Corps—an idea I have long advocated. I know that Senator HATCH looks forward to working with Senator BIDEN in making this idea a reality, within our budgetary constraints.

Included in our crime bill are provisions regarding violence against women. I am also introducing these provisions as a separate piece of legislation as I have done in the past 2 years.

It is estimated that a staggering 2.5 million violent crimes are committed against women each year. I believe this number is a national disgrace—a disgrace we must have the courage to recognize and the commitment to reform. The Sexual Assault Prevention Act of 1993, which will also be introduced in the House by Congresswoman SUSAN MOLINARI, is a comprehensive response to violence against women, both on the streets, and in the home.

This January, the House and Senate welcomed record numbers of new Members. And most of these Members came to Washington with a pledge to change for the better the way Congress does business.

Within a few weeks, Senate Republicans will introduce a meaningful congressional reform package. This package will include proposals to reduce the staff and spending of Congress, as well as housekeeping measures such as eliminating proxy voting and strengthening the prohibition on attaching unauthorized appropriations to appropriations bills.

Just as Congress needs reforming, so, too, does the way in which you are elected to Congress. And today, as we have done before, Senate Republicans will be introducing legislation to reform our campaign finance system. Our legislation promotes competition and our two-party system. It does not, as the Senate Democrats have continued to insist over the years, require taxpayers to pay for our campaigns.

Again, this is an area in which I think we are going to need bipartisan effort if we are going to have a meaningful campaign finance reform bill.

I listened to my distinguished colleague from Oklahoma, Senator BOREN, earlier today. I certainly know of his good intentions. But again, there are areas of disagreement, and we believe unless we do it on a bipartisan basis, the American public is going to say: Well, you are not serious about it. You want to continue to raise millions and spend millions of dollars, and get money from special interests; whatever.

So I hope that we can maybe impose some deadline—30, 60 days—for Democrats and Republicans to work out a bipartisan package. And I will be talking to the majority leader about that later.

We introduce our campaign finance reform legislation with the knowledge that, while it is an improvement over our current system, we do not have the votes to pass it.

If ever there was an issue that cried out for bipartisan cooperation, it is campaign finance. Senator BOREN of Oklahoma and Senator MCCONNELL of Kentucky are this Chamber's acknowledged campaign finance reform experts. Perhaps if Senator MITCHELL and I gave them 30 days to get together and hammer out a comprehensive reform proposal, they would succeed. I ask the distinguished majority leader to join me in doing just that.

As President Clinton said yesterday, the avalanche of freedom which swept the globe under Presidents Reagan and Bush have led to some instability. I suspect that foreign policy, which received short shrift during the Presidential campaign, will soon come to dominate many of President Clinton's days.

There are several trouble spots which will demand the President's immediate and constant attention.

Saddam Hussein evidently got the message sent by the Bush administration and is talking in softer tones, but if there is any constant in Iraqi policy, it's that Saddam cannot be trusted for 1 minute.

If there is anyone in the world who can match Saddam Hussein for deceit and brutality, it is Serbia's Slobodan Milosevic. The new State Department report on human rights practices finds that Serbian forces in Bosnia have committed atrocities against civilians on a scale unrivaled since the Nazi era.

This Senator believes that the U.S. objective should not be to slow the slaughter in Bosnia-Herzegovina, but to stop it, and to prevent its spread to Kosovo, where 2 million Albanians now live in constant fear and oppression. And the goal of the Geneva negotiations should be to reach a settlement that will restore the territorial integrity and sovereignty of Bosnia-Herzegovina, instead of ratifying its de facto dismemberment, thereby rewarding those who have brought suffering and slaughter to the Bosnian people.

In Somalia, some United States forces are coming home, but we need to get on with a master plan for restoring stability there, and turning control over to the United Nations.

Assistance to the Republics of the former Soviet Union, future relations with Vietnam, and fostering the admirable progress of democratic and economic reform in Latin America are other matters now on President Clinton's plate.

It is also my hope that the Clinton administration will place a high priority on halting the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction. Concern for nonproliferation was one of the primary motivating factors behind the Nunn-Lugar Act, which initiated some truly innovative approaches to the problem of potential proliferation in the Soviet Union.

Before I conclude, Mr. President, let me add that this institution has taken a lot of hits from the media and from some politicians these past few years—some of the criticism is deserved, some of it is not.

But no one can deny that the enduring strengths of the Senate are great—and perhaps they were best stated by the late Claude Pepper, who said:

Like democracy itself, the Senate is inefficient, unwieldy, inconsistent * * * but like democracy also, it is strong, it is sound at the core, it has survived many changes, it has saved the country many catastrophes, (and) it is a safeguard against any form of tyranny * * *

We are all privileged, indeed, Mr. President to serve in this safeguard. In closing, let me again express my desire, and the desire of Senate Republicans, to work with our new President, with the distinguished majority leader, and with the American people, to bring change for the better to America and the world.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is it the desire of the Republican leader that Members of the minority continue to be recognized under the time over which he has control, until such time as the Democratic leader or his designee appears to claim the remainder of their time?

Mr. DOLE. That is our desire, if there is no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. LOTT].

Mr. LOTT. If I may inquire of the Chair, do I need to get time yielded from the leader, or would I be recognized on my own time?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is time under the control of the Republican leader or his designee.

Under the order previously entered, the time under the control of the Republican leader was to begin at the conclusion of the time under the control of the Democratic leader. The Democratic leader has 15 minutes and 50 seconds remaining. Senator SIMPSON may ask that he be recognized for whatever amount of time he wishes.

The Republican leader has already asked consent that the sequence be broken until such time as the majority leader claims his time.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask that I be allowed to proceed for at least 15 minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator is recognized for not to exceed 15 minutes.

THIS NEW SESSION OF CONGRESS

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I would like to begin my remarks in this new session of Congress by saying that I am optimistic, and, indeed, hopeful—we have heard that word mentioned so much in the last few days—about what we can do in this new session of Congress with a new President and a lot of new Members of Congress, House and Senate. In the luncheon that we attended after the President's swearing-in yesterday I thought he said the right things. He talked about a partnership between the President and the Congress. And that is the way it should work. Surely the Congress as a whole will sometimes disagree with the President. And sometimes those of us within the Congress will disagree as to how we should proceed in working with the President. But that is the way we should all begin. We should begin with the attitude we are going to try to work together.

There certainly is a responsibility on all of us to be prepared to stand up and resist recommendations which we think are not proper and right and to the benefit of our constituents, both in our States and in our country. But I am going to start off with the attitude of trying to find ways and places that I can work with the President for the overall good of our country.

I think it is appropriate that our leaders, both the Democratic leader and the Republican leader, today stand up and begin to enumerate the first bills that we will bring up for consideration in this new session; identify our top priorities. I want to commend our distinguished leader from Kansas, Senator DOLE, for the first five bills that he has introduced. I understand his first bill will be one to prevent violence against women. Certainly, that indicates a concern on his part, and that of all Americans. Like so many crimes it is one that is just so difficult to understand. This bill would lead to a process to find out what the statistics are, what the real numbers are in this particular area of crime—violence against women. What makes it happen and how can we deal with it? How can we help women that are so abused and how can we find ways to prevent this kind of abuse? So, typically of our leader, I think it appropriate that he put a high emphasis on this area of concern of all Americans.

Republicans and Democrats wish to find a way to reform elections, to have campaign finance reform. I think most Americans agree with that. I do not think they necessarily would put that number 1 or 2 or 3 on their list of concerns, but they feel that things are not quite right.

We, perhaps, disagree between the parties as to how to do it. I certainly would prefer the McConnell bill, the one that has been introduced second among the Republican list of bills. It would put everything on the table. It would ban soft money. It would eliminate PAC's. It would improve the positions of the two political parties. It restricts gerrymandering. It includes a lot of good ideas.

On the other hand, S. 3, the bill that Senator MITCHELL referred to earlier today, would take a different approach. It would have, as I understand it, public financing of campaigns from the General Treasury. I find that objectionable. And there are other ideas that should be considered. I think we are indicating, by both parties introducing a bill high on our lists of priorities today, we are going to try to deal with it. Whether we will do it and do it properly or not remains to be seen.

Also on Senator DOLE's list is a crime bill. The Congress labored mightily over the past 2 years to produce a crime bill. We labored to produce a mountain and we did not even produce a mouse, I fear. The bill that we were considering had too much emphasis, in my opinion, on protecting criminals' rights and on the things like gun control. There are other ways we should be going. We should try to streamline the law enforcement process. We should give some consideration to good faith efforts by our law enforcement people. We should stop criminals from going back out on the streets because of technicalities, for heaven's sake. While we may want to look at how we deal with guns, to think that is going to reduce or stop crimes is just not a practical position. So I am glad that our Republican leader has a crime bill high on his list, and a real crime bill, not a "protect the criminals" bill.

We do need to have a process whereby Congress can be reviewed when it is spending—or tries to spend—money that really should not be spent. We can argue over how best to do this. President Clinton has argued for a line-item veto. He has also indicated support for enhanced rescission. We should find a way to give the President increased ability to say, things have changed, or this is too much, or I have reconsidered. Enactment of enhanced rescission or the line-item veto would be one way to do that.

I know there will be a lot of debate, and I do not want to diminish the involvement of the Congress—House and Senate—in our primary responsibility in appropriations, how they begin and how they are spent. But I do think Presidents need more ability to be involved in that process and perhaps stop unnecessary spending.

The distinguished Senator from Idaho has a family leave proposal. The Democratic list also has a family leave bill. I certainly much prefer the one that is being proposed by the Senator from Idaho, which I think he will probably speak on later. It is more voluntary. It provides an incentive for employers to provide leave through offering them a refundable tax credit. Certainly that is the way to go, rather than mandating that employers provide paid leave to employees.

But let me make this point about both lists. If you ask the American people to list the top three items they are most concerned about, I believe they would say the economy; they would say education; and they would say health care. They may not rank them in that order, but I think probably those could be the top three.

Yet if you look down this list of both parties' leaders there is not anything on any one of these three concerns, or only marginally. We have one competitiveness bill on the Democratic list, and a line-item veto enhanced rescission on the other list. There is a reason for it. Those bills addressing the economy, education, and health care are going to be big and complex bills. You cannot always present the solution right at the beginning of a session. But I, frankly, worry a little bit that we are not putting the proper emphasis on the first day on the economy, how we strengthen the economy, how we help people have jobs by creating jobs. I wish we had some sort of economic growth package proposed by both parties so we could begin the dialog. We will do that soon enough, but education and health care should also be high up on this list. I presume both parties will have proposals that will be presented very soon.

Mr. President, let me shift just one moment now to another area of concern. There have been those in the media and those in the Congress who have been critical of our new President Clinton because he has been, as they might say, breaking his promises. He said one thing in the campaign and now he seems to be saying a different thing.

Let me give my colleagues a different twist on that. When you are campaigning, when you have not been in the Congress, when you have not been in the White House, sometimes things look a little different out there on the campaign than they do when you start confronting realities. I think President Clinton, when he was campaigning, made mistakes.

When he said back in May of 1992 that he would give Haitian refugees asylum and bashed President Bush's policy in that area, he was wrong. Now as he has looked at what might happen with this influx of illegal Haitian boat people coming in to Florida. Perhaps he has realized, wait a minute now, that is not the right way to go. He has changed his position. I say he has moved in the right direction. Give him credit for realizing, perhaps, that was a mistake. He has moved in the right direction.

In the campaign he said repeatedly we were going to have a middle-class tax cut. I love that. I represent middle-income and low-income people in Mississippi. They need help. They need a break. But the realities are, when you are campaigning it is easy to say, but when you get elected you have to deal with realities. The realities are that we cannot afford it. It will add to the deficit. It will compound our problems. It will hurt the economy. So, again, he was wrong in the campaign. Now he is moving in the right direction.

He talked during the campaign, about how we should have a 25-percent reduction in the staffs of Congress and the White House. Maybe we can save some money. We should certainly try to. But a 25-percent reduction was not realistic then; it is not realistic now. It is not realistic for the Congress. It is not realistic for the White House. He was wrong then. He is right now. So at least I give him credit for moving in the right direction.

During the campaign he also promised a 50-percent reduction in the budget deficit over the next 4 years. They all say it. We all say it. Going back over the 24 years that I have been in this city, every 4 years, candidates for President, Republican and Democrat, say we are going to eliminate the deficit, we are going to cut it in half, we are going to attack this monster. And they run smack dab into reality. It was not doable under his plan back in the summer when he was talking about it. You cannot say it was based on economic assumptions that have changed or were wrong. Actually the economic numbers that were available in the fall were very close to where we are. I do commend him for focusing on it, though. He is now saying the deficit, and what it does to the economy, is one of his priorities—maybe his number 1 issue. He is right on that. If he wants to deal with it, if he wants to confront it by cutting spending and reordering priorities, he can sign me up. I will try to help.

If he starts talking about doing it by raising taxes, including gasoline taxes that would be regressive and hurt the middle-income and low-income working Americans—worst of all to raise that gas tax and but it into the black hole of the deficit—no deal. If he wants to do something in that area to help highways and collapsing bridges, airports, railroad beds—we will talk about that. But I think he goes toward attacking the deficit by saying let us just raise taxes, it will not work. It did not work in 1990. I stood on this floor and said in 1990 the budget deal was a no good deal. It was going to raise taxes; it was going to allow spending to go up; it was going to hurt the economy. And it did all of the above. Raising taxes is not the way to go. We have to have the courage to cut spending. If he is ready to do that we ought to be prepared to work with him in a bipartisan way.

Also, the President promised to introduce bills on the first day after he was sworn in, today, to address the economy and jobs. Now he is saying it may be February or March.

I do not think that is unreasonable, frankly. I think he needs a little more time to think about it. But he should not have said he would have it on the first day. I do not think he realized what would go into taking over the Office of President. But, that aside, the economy and job creation is where we all should focus quickly. The clock is running. Every day that passes and we do not address the improvement of the economy and the creation of jobs in this country is a day lost that we cannot afford.

I will sum it up by saying, yes, maybe he is due for some criticism but, in my opinion, he is now moving in the right direction. I hope he will continue to do that and he will present bills that will really accomplish what we would all like to see for our country. Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. GRASSLEY addressed the Chair. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. GRASSLEY]. How much time does the Senator wish to yield himself?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Four minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Senator is recognized for 4 minutes.

LINE-ITEM VETO

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, one of those things we can start working on right now is something President Clinton has spoken in favor of because in his State of Arkansas, he has had the tool to use as the Governor, and that is the issue of the line-item veto. I know that my friend in the Chair, the distinguished President pro tempore, has strong feelings on the other side of this issue, but I support the line-item veto. Republicans in this Chamber have led the fight to grant the President explicit line-item veto authority so that the President will have one of the strongest possible tools to establish some discipline in the Federal budget process. Unfortunately, every time we bring up the line-item veto for a vote, our proposal is defeated pretty much on a party-line vote. The refusal to grant the President the power to veto specific appropriations is a betrayal of Congress' public trust since, as any Senator who keeps in touch with his constituents knows, the overwhelming majority of the people in this country support the line-item veto.

In the past, there has seemed little hope for the passage of a statutory line-item veto so long as the majority party held steadfast in opposing it. Now, perhaps, with a new President of the Democratic Party, the picture is different. The new President, like his Republican predecessors, supports a line-item veto and has talked about making it one of his legislative priorities, and I hope he sticks to that promise.

On page 25 of his campaign book entitled "Putting People First," the President says:

To eliminate pork barrel projects and to cut Government waste, give the President the line-item veto.

Just as it took President Nixon to go to China, maybe President Clinton can get the Democrat leadership in Congress to give him and future Presidents a line-item veto. Hopefully, they will push it through as quickly as possible and support his intentions to do that. If he backs down on his pledge to secure a line-item veto, the American people I think will remember.

Line item veto power is needed along with other reforms because the Federal budget process remains in disarray despite the best efforts of policymakers in the past several years.

Although last year was an exception in that we passed appropriations bills separately, too often it is a typical practice for this Congress to bunch together all the appropriation bills into what we call continuing resolutions or omnibus spending bills. Since this trillion dollar catchall measure is amended and passed in the 11th hour of the legislative session, individual Members are less able to scrutinize each and every detail of the spending bill. This very undisciplined practice also increases the power and the opportunity for a committee or subcommittee chair to include an item that may not otherwise have passed the Congress on its own merits. Under this framework, the President is forced to accept or reject the whole bill that is passed by Congress, including a lot of irresponsible spending proposals.

I am going to put in the RECORD just a small list of those: $25,000 to study the location for a new gym for Members of the House of Representatives; $92,000 to study houses of ill repute in Peru; $12,000 on mooring docks in Pago Pago; $5 million for a parliament building in the Solomon Islands; $8 million spent on the Washington, DC, lottery and charitable games enterprise fund; $400,000 on Arctic goose management; $700,000 for the construction of a Lawrence Welk Museum in North Dakota; $225,000 to build an onion storage facility at the University of Georgia; and $1 million to refurbish a sports stadium in New Orleans.

I will say of that list that I could go on and on and on, but I will not. You can bet that your average taxpayer would say no to their hard-earned money being spent on most of these projects, and that is why a vast majority of Americans support granting the President the line-item veto.

According to the General Accounting Office, a line-item veto would save taxpayers more than $70 billion over 5 years. Let me repeat, it would save $70 billion over 5 years. But the Democrat Congress continues to say "no" to these savings while saying "yes" to increased deficits. It is time for Democrats to get behind their President and support the Republican line-item veto legislation. We must bring our budget under control.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

Mr. CRAIG. I defer to the Senator from Washington.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Washington [Mr. GORTON]. How much time does he yield himself?

Mr. GORTON. Five minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Senator is recognized for not to exceed 5 minutes.

NOMINATION OF BRUCE BABBITT TO BE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, during the years in which this Senator was privileged to serve as attorney general of the State of Washington, he served with a large number of highly outstanding and thoughtful individuals, including his close friend, the recent Senator from New Hampshire, Warren Rudman, the junior Senator from New Mexico, Mr. BINGAMAN, the junior Senator from Nevada, Mr. BRYAN, and, of course, our outstanding and eloquent colleague, the senior Senator from Missouri, Mr. DANFORTH. Even in that august company, however, Mr. President, this Senator never met or served with a person whom he admired more than he did and does the President's nominee for Secretary of the Interior, Bruce Babbitt of Arizona.

Mr. Babbitt and this Senator became close personal friends, and associates as attorneys general of our respective States. Mr. Babbitt went on to become perhaps the outstanding Governor of the State of Arizona during the course of its entire history. And so, speaking for this Senator, he can express joy and happiness at the nomination by the President of the United States of Mr. Babbitt to be Secretary of Interior of the United States.

To a certain extent, Mr. President, there is a price in making this statement. Mr. Babbitt and I disagreed occasionally during the time that we were attorneys general. We have found ourselves on the opposite sides of issues more frequently since I have been a Member of the U.S. Senate. I know that many of my constituents are concerned about his views on a number of natural resources issues which are of vital importance to them. In fact, it was less than a year ago, Mr. President, that this Senator, perhaps foolishly, agreed to engage in a debate with Mr. Babbitt on the Endangered Species Act on his own home turf in Washington, DC, at the office of the League of Conservation Voters. But even during the course of that debate, my respect for Mr. Babbitt's intellect and ability and thoughtfulness and honesty and character did nothing but grow.

So I express the deep hope and the expectation, based on his time as Governor of Arizona, that Mr. Babbitt will deal thoughtfully and objectively with the natural resources issues which are his as Secretary of the Interior. Though we may differ, we will almost certainly differ in the future on a number of those issues. I commend him to my colleagues in the Senate as perhaps the single individual here who knows him best from a personal standpoint as an outstanding individual and as one whom I believe will listen with great care to the views of others which may not be his own. He is a wonderful nominee, and he should be confirmed.

Mr. CRAIG addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Idaho [Mr. CRAIG].

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 10 minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator is recognized for not to exceed 10 minutes.

Mr. CRAIG. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. CRAIG and Mr. DOLE pertaining to the introduction of S. 10 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

NOMINATION OF ZOE BAIRD

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, the other issue I wish to discuss this morning is an important one at this time.

The Senate is deliberating on those nominees the new President has selected to serve him and, therefore, serve the people of this country.

In selecting those men and women now before us in hearing, this new President has established the highest ethics standard in the history of this country. He has said without question that those he selects to serve us, the administration and our citizens, will be without question, beyond question because their records will be exemplary.

I will have to tell you this morning I do not believe that is the case at this moment. A person who has been nominated to serve as the Attorney General of this country has had very serious question brought as to the conduct of herself and her husband. This morning I sent a letter to the Judiciary Committee members, and I also sent a letter to our President because I think it is important that he start on the right foot, that he uphold the ethics standards that he prescribed for the people who will be working under him.

Let me suggest, Mr. President, we are talking about top cop, cop No. 1, in this country, that individual who is going to be the enforcer of the laws of this country and she has now before the Judiciary Committee of this Senate admitted that she violated the law. She knowingly violated the law, at least on one and probably several other occasions, and the argument coming up from down at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue is to let us get beyond this; "let us put this aside."

No, here is a Senator who cannot do that. There is a principle here, but it goes well beyond that. There is a firm commitment by this President that there is an ethic that we cannot go beyond.

Now, the reason it is important to me is multifold. We have had hundreds of phone calls from the citizens of our State, but we have gone through a very high profile case in our State, Mr. President. A young man who was accused of similar acts has now just had his case brought to a close. He is now a felon in the eyes of the law. He has lost his rights to own a gun. He has lost his rights to vote. Up until the time the INS said you violated the law, he had not had one speeding ticket. That young man happens to be the son of a U.S. Senator. But I will tell you that it is not just the son of a U.S. Senator. It is that there are hundreds of men and women across this country today, small business people, who hire aliens and have to credentialize them within the law, have to determine whether they are legal employees. That is the responsibility of the employer.

This young man did not knowingly violate the law, made a mistake, and, when he did, he went on to pay the taxes because he thought he had done the right thing. But it cost him and his family over a quarter of a million dollars to defend his rights as an American citizen, and in the end they lost. The INS and the Justice Department, the very agency that Zoe Baird is being asked to be the top cop for, spent a half million dollars of taxpayers' money creating the computer program to ferret out the alleged illegal activities of this young man.

Now, I will tell you that is the excessive hand of government, and this young man is a felon today.

Zoe Baird said I violated the law and I know I did, and I did it intentionally.

Are we going to reward her to become the Attorney General of the United States, top cop No. 1, the person who must stand before all Americans as an example of what this country is and what it means and what it ought to be and what this new President has said it will be.

Now, I have asked our President in a letter this morning—and I will not read the text of it; it is a letter to the President from me—Mr. President, if you proceed and if you choose to argue that this individual continue as your nominee for Attorney General and she so becomes, then I am obligated to come forth and ask you to pardon young Dan Symms. And I am going to ask the President to pardon all other citizens in this country who made the mistake and got caught in the web and the tentacles of Federal regulation and paid thousands of dollars to defend their person and lost, because they made a mistake, an honest mistake, no conniving, no manipulation of the law, and not knowingly violating the law.

That is a very important issue for us, Mr. President. I hope that the Judiciary Committee and our President in the coming hours would withdraw the name of Zoe Baird and select another qualified person to serve in the capacity of the Attorney General of the United States. We must take seriously the enforcement of our laws. We must have people who serve as the kind of examples not just for the adults, not just for the young people, but for all Americans who must abide by the law of the land.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired. The time under the control of the minority leader has expired. The majority leader has 15 minutes and 50 seconds remaining.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I ask for 4 minutes from the majority leader's time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BINGAMAN] is recognized for not to exceed 4 minutes.

(The remarks of Mr. BINGAMAN pertaining to the introduction of S. 4 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I yield the floor and reserve the remainder of the majority leader's time.

Mr. MCCONNELL addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. MCCONNELL] is recognized.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes as if in morning business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Kentucky is recognized.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I thank the Chair. (The remarks of Mr. MCCONNELL pertaining to the introduction of S. 7 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Who seeks recognition? What is the will of the Senate?

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for 15 minutes as if in morning business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate is in a period for the transaction of morning business.

Is there objection to the Senator proceeding for 15 minutes?

The Chair hears no objection, and the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER] is recognized for not to exceed 15 minutes.

Mr. SPECTER. I thank the Chair.

THE INAUGURATION SPEECH AND PROPOSED LEGISLATION

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, on this date, January 21, 1993, the first day of the Senate's legislative session, I begin by complimenting the new President, President Clinton, on his inauguration speech yesterday. I thought it was well delivered with a good tone. I especially appreciated his gracious reference to President Bush.

To express one preference: I would like to have seen President Clinton direct more attention to some of the substantive issues facing America. He did speak briefly about the economy, a reference to health care, and some reference to crime control. I would have preferred to have seen more explicit statements on those subjects as well as reference to other matters of tremendous importance such as education reform, environmental protection, trade policy, and perhaps more specifically to direction as to his current thinking on his campaign commitments on deficit reduction.

But now it is up to the Congress to proceed on the matters of great urgency which face this country. And this morning I am going to introduce legislative proposals directed toward two of the subjects: health care and economic recovery.

I was disappointed to note that on the first five bills—reserved by the Democratic side were bills 1 through 5 for the majority party, and 6 through 10 for the Republican minority party—none of the bills addressed by the majority party refer to health care legislation, which in my personal judgment is a substantial oversight.

I am advised that Senate bill 1 refers to NIH reauthorization, bill 2 to voter registration, so-called motor-voter, bill 3 to campaign finance, bill 4 to defense conversion, and bill 5 to family leave.

In light of the tremendous emphasis placed upon health care reform during the great national debate of 1992, I would have thought that this would be an item to be addressed immediately. And it is my hope that legislation will be considered very promptly by the appropriate committees and very promptly by the Senate and the House with a bill to be submitted by President Clinton.

(The remarks of Mr. SPECTER pertaining to the introduction of Senate Joint Resolution 4 and Senate Joint Resolution 5 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I will today introduce legislation on comprehensive health care which deals with two objectives: First, to cover the 37 million Americans who are now not covered and, second, to reduce the cost of health care for Americans who do have health care at the present time.

My legislation contains some 8 titles, and a floor statement of some 45 pages. I will merely summarize it at the present time.

The essence of the legislation is to make specific suggestions for reducing costs by approximately $112.4 billion from the $830 billion which we currently spend. There are specific indications in the course of this prepared floor statement as to where those savings will come from.

As I note in the prepared statement itself and repeat now, it is virtually impossible to be certain as to exactly what the dollar amount will be, but these are estimates based upon the best knowledge available at the present time with the appropriate source cited. There are new programs which have been suggested in the course of this floor statement which would cost approximately $30.4 billion, leaving a net saving of approximately $82 billion, which would be sufficient to cover the Americans which would not be covered under the extensions provided for in this legislation.

The first title deals with health insurance market reforms and provides among other things for full deductibility for all the self-employed. It is an anomaly that today if the person is an employee, the employer may pay the insurance of the individual and deduct 100 percent of the cost, but if someone is self-employed and has a health plan that may not be deducted at all. It is basically unfair and to advance that deductibility would include many other Americans with a tax break to have that kind of health insurance.

The second title refers to preventative health services significantly devoted to the so-called low birth weight babies. One-pound babies are a human tragedy, to come into this world weighing a single pound, about as big as the size of my hand, and are also a financial tragedy with billions being expended. This correlates with ideas from Dr. C Everett Koop, former Surgeon General.

My legislation providing for payment to teenage pregnant women for prenatal and post-natal visits will be calculated to tremendously relieve human suffering and also enormous financial savings.

Also under this title is an extension of health education being directed in a significant matter to the toddlers age 2 until 4, when the learning habits are very important, and continuing through high school.

The third title relates to the disclosure of information to beneficiaries under Medicare and Medicaid so that beneficiaries will know what the risk factors, alternative procedures, and whether the providers have been subject to censor by the regulatory agencies or for settlement or verdicts in malpractice suits.

The fourth title relates to the patient's right to decline treatment and reduce the delivery of unwanted and unnecessary care by strengthening the Federal law regarding patient self-determination. A legitimate action by the Federal Government would be to prohibit the expenditures of Federal funds under Medicare and Medicaid when the patient has stated in writing the intention not to have those treatments.

The fifth title relates to primary care providers expanding the role of nurse practitioners and physician assistants.

The sixth title relates to managed health care where there is the opportunity to save very substantially, perhaps up to 20 percent, based upon the experience of managed health care in the Medicare Program.

The seventh title relates to cost containment on outcomes research, so that there would be a way of knowing what has been successful in the past and a better guide for the kind of treatment for the future.

Mr. President, this bill has been prepared after very, very extensive consideration and thought. It incorporates new ideas after talking to experts in a variety of fields, enumerated and coalesces a number of legislative proposals which this Senator had introduced last year, Senate bill 1995, Senate bill 3176, and Senate bill 1122, and also my co-sponsorship of the work of the Chafee task force.

Mr. President, I now address the second subject, and that is a proposal for an economic recovery which again I think is a matter of tremendous importance on a priority basis.

Again I note my disappointment that none of the first five bills under the control of the Democrats was directed toward the economic recovery. And again, similarly, I note my disappointment that the new President has not moved forward with specific legislation for an economic recovery.

And I comment, Mr. President, about the reduction of political power in this city of ours. The new President has tremendous authority. Some may already have dissipated from November 3, the election date, to January 20, the inauguration date. It is much easier to move ahead with the steam and pressure that the new President has.

The Economic Recovery Act of 1993, which I submit on behalf of myself and the distinguished Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI] builds upon a group of five proposals which have gained general acceptance and I think could be promptly enacted.

One relates to the use of the individual retirement accounts, IRA's, penalty free, so that individuals may withdraw up to $10,000 from IRA's without penalty and without tax, providing they are used for homes or for cars.

This legislation was conceived last year when we faced the problem of the impossibility of additional Federal expenditures because of the budget agreement—that is, no additional Federal expenditures without an offset—and noted that there are some $800 billion in funds in IRA's and related Keough's and 401(k) proposals. And this is separate from the $3 to $4 trillion in other retirement accounts.

Estimates have been submitted that as much as $40 to $125 billion would be injected into the economy to provide a real economic stimulus.

Notwithstanding some signs of growth, the substantial indicators show, Mr. President, that we need an impetus for the economy. The $10,000 withdrawal would not be subject to tax in 1993. But 25 percent would be subject to tax in each of the 4 succeeding years, or the taxpayer would have the alternative to repay $2,500 in each year so as to maintain savings.

A second item in this proposed legislation is a $5,000 first-time home buyer tax credit, which is calculated to produce some 415,000 new jobs.

A third item is the 15-percent investment tax allowance.

A fourth item is modification of passive losses so that there is no conclusive presumption that because a person invests in real estate that it comes in the passive loss category.

And the final, fifth, item is the modification of debt finance income rules to facilitate investment in real estate from pension funds.

Mr. President, a third legislative proposal which I am introducing now relates to a constitutional amendment for a balanced budget. We are facing increased deficits and an overwhelming national debt in excess of $4 trillion. The State of Pennsylvania, my home State, has a constitutional mandate for balancing its budget, as does each county and each city in my State. And only the Federal Government issues script and borrows money.

In the early 1980's, the Senate passed a constitutional amendment for a balanced budget by a vote of 69 to 31; and later we were one vote short, 66 to 34. The constitutional amendment for a balanced budget passed in the 101st Congress in the House, and I think that we really ought to move ahead on this important line.

The fourth and final legislative proposal which I introduce at the present time related to the line-item veto, which I consider to be very important. I cosigned a letter, drafted by Senator DOLE, last year to President Bush urging President Bush to exercise the line-item veto under his existing constitutional authority. President Bush declined to do so on the advice of counsel.

It is my legal judgment that there is sufficient authority under the Constitution at the present time. But to eliminate all doubt, Mr. President, this constitutional amendment would provide that express authority. The difference on overriding the line-item veto would be that the Congress could reinstate that item by a simple majority vote.

Mr. President, the Specter-Domenici Economic Recovery Act of 1993 and pushing ahead with the constitutional amendment for a balanced budget and the line-item veto would be substantial steps toward an economic recovery to put 10 million Americans back to work in this Nation.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I thank the Chair for the allowance of time, and noting that no other Senator is on the floor seeking recognition, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The absence of a quorum has been noted.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, is it appropriate for me to introduce a piece of legislation at this moment and speak to it for 5 minutes?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Senator may proceed for 5 minutes.

(The remarks of Mr. BIDEN pertaining to the introduction of S. 11 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Federico Peña, of Colorado, to be Secretary of Transportation.

THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

Michael Kantor, of California, to be U.S. Trade Representative, with the rank of Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF MIKE ESPY

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I wish to add a few words of support for this nomination. I do so because I believe that MIKE ESPY is the right person for the job. I believe he will strive—successfully strive—to make the U.S. Department of Agriculture the effective, efficient, and farmer friendly agency it ought to be.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR THE NEW SECRETARY

The new secretary joins an administration which is characterized by hope and optimism. The Department of Agriculture should be no exception.

This Secretary has the opportunity to foster greater cooperation between this Department and the others of the administration. Mr. ESPY has the chance to help level the playing field of international trade for agricultural commodities. He will help guide the formulation of agricultural policy to carry American agriculture into the 21st century.

Since the USDA was established in 1862, there have been 24 previous Secretaries of Agriculture. They directed a tremendous growth and diversification. Now, with over 112,000 employees, that growth is probably over but trials will still be found. In fact, with issues like budgets, trade imbalances, and environmental issues at hand, Mr. ESPY may soon envy the job of his predecessors.

CHALLENGES IN AGRICULTURE

This nominee is now poised to become the focal point for an industry which needs help. Prices which are too low. The unavailability of credit. Programs which are sometimes unfair. Trade practices which play favorites. The dictation of agricultural policy from other agencies. These are all potential difficulties you will face.

In States like Montana where agriculture is the dominant economic influence, Mr. ESPY's appointment is met with hope for tomorrow. This hope is based on the expectation of success. An effective Secretary of Agriculture can help shore up the foundation of States like Montana.

CONCLUSION

Mr. ESPY has made a favorable impression on me. He has also made a favorable impression on the committee and on the Nation. I am confident that MIKE ESPY is an excellent choice for Secretary of Agriculture. I look forward to working Mr. ESPY as he helps to create a bright future for agriculture.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF MIKE ESPY

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, it is a pleasure and an honor for me as the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture to take the floor this morning to support the nomination of MIKE ESPY as Secretary of Agriculture.

It is a special pleasure, because this is the first Democratic nominee for this position that I have presented to the Senate since I became chairman of the committee.

But as the events of recent days make clear, this is much more than a time for partisan pleasure.

This is a time for hope. A time of renewal.

MIKE ESPY represents the emotions that we all have felt so deeply in recent days.

The Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry met last week on the nomination of MIKE ESPY to be Secretary of Agriculture. All members attended the hearing, and Mr. ESPY was questioned for over 3 hours. I am pleased that Mr. ESPY has broad bipartisan support from our committee, and I think that all Senators present were both impressed and moved by Mr. ESPY's testimony and response to their questions.

After the hearing, over 100 questions were sent to and have been answered by Mr. ESPY. The responses will be included in the Agriculture Committee's published hearing record. The committee met again on Tuesday and unanimously recommended by voice vote that Mr. ESPY be confirmed as President Clinton's Secretary of Agriculture. This is indeed a great day for American agriculture and rural America.

MIKE ESPY has a strong commitment to things that I believe in—a renewed focus on rural America, support for the family farmer, and investment in nutrition programs, rural development projects, and trade and marketing programs.

We all agree that the world has changed dramatically since our agriculture policies were crafted. Abraham Lincoln's original mission for the Department of Agriculture served the Nation well, and FDR restructured the Department to deal with the problems that faced the United States during the Great Depression. Now it is time for us to make another transition and lead the U.S. Department of Agriculture into the 21st century. USDA must adapt to the new realities of American agriculture and the U.S. economy.

The Department of Agriculture must be revitalized so that it will be in a position to refocus on environmental and marketing issues—issues that are essential to the survival of American agriculture.

A revitalized Department of Agriculture will be a partner with farmers in helping to keep America a world leader in nutrition and food safety, agricultural production, marketing, conservation, and rural development. USDA can again be a driving force in agriculture—a force that when teamed with farmers, can advance American agriculture and agricultural products to the front of world markets that are growing increasingly competitive.

There are a number of key issues that face the new Secretary. The most demanding of which involve nutrition and food safety, agricultural production, conservation and the environment, rural development, trade, marketing, and congressional demands to restructure the Department. The Secretary of Agriculture must lead USDA through what will most likely prove to be a very demanding time.

The new Secretary of Agriculture will have the responsibility of overseeing an $83 billion budget and some 115,000 employees. Managing and revitalizing the Department of Agriculture is a huge undertaking—but I believe President Clinton has made a great choice in nominating MIKE ESPY to be Secretary of Agriculture.

I think that it is of great importance that President Clinton has chosen his long-time friend for this post. As such, Mr. ESPY will be in a position to bring agricultural and rural issues directly to the President—the plight of rural America will be on the Cabinet table and will not be lost in the shuffle.

Mr. ESPY has served his district of rural Mississippi extremely well. He identified their agricultural problems and set about to solve them. He formed an agricultural advisory commission to guide him, and every 2 months the 65,000 farmers in his district got a letter from their Congressman. Such efforts, along with his role in passing legislation to create a Mississippi Delta Commission stand as an example of Mr. ESPY's understanding of and commitment to rural America.

And we must be committed to rural America—it can wait no longer. As we lose our small family farms, we lose not only our rural heritage, but the economic strength of our rural communities. In my work as chairman I have tried to give a voice to our small family farmers so they have a fighting chance.

I know Mr. ESPY shares this commitment. Family farmers are the backbone of his home district in Mississippi just as they are in my home State of Vermont. I trust he will hold fast to the responsibility of helping small farmers in all of rural America.

I know that the dairy farmers in Vermont have been frustrated at the closed doors at USDA. Their suggestions for dairy reform made sense to both dairy farmers and the taxpayers, but were ignored or opposed by the Department in recent years. I was reassured by MIKE ESPY's openness to new ideas in this area when we met last week.

MIKE ESPY represents the best of rural America. He is a symbol of positive changes for the Department of Agriculture—the Department that touches each and every American. MIKE ESPY has a rural heritage that will guide him at USDA, and stands as our assurance that rural America will not be left behind.

I admire MIKE ESPY. I admire the work that he has accomplished in the House of Representatives. We broke new ground with the 1990 farm bill, and I look forward to working together with the new Secretary and with the Department.

I am confident that MIKE ESPY is the right person to lead the Department of Agriculture. MIKE ESPY will indeed be the Secretary for Agriculture.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF DONNA SHALALA

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I am pleased to support the confirmation of Donna Shalala as Secretary of Health and Human Services. I am quite impressed with Dr. Shalala and her background. She clearly has tremendous energy and dedication. And a real take-charge attitude which I think is terrific.

As an Assistant Secretary for the Department of Housing and Urban Development, she initiated creative and effective programs so that women would receive fair treatment under Federal housing policies.

As president of Hunter College and the University of Wisconsin, she again showed her talent for successfully running large institutions and making them more efficient and effective.

That is impressive. I think it is clear that she has the experience and the creativity to not only oversee, but also to improve the Department of Health and Human Services.

The new Secretary of Health and Human Services faces a difficult road ahead. Many experts believe our health care system is in crisis. Medicare and Medicaid costs are soaring; more and more working Americans are being priced out of the health care system; the United States has one of the lowest immunization rates among industrialized countries; and Americans living in rural areas have less and less access to health care.

I believe that our health system needs comprehensive reform. The new Secretary of HHS likely will play a large role in the crafting of national health reform legislation this year.

I share President Clinton's goal to reform our health care system this Congress. I also support many of the same health reform concepts.

I am a strong supporter of controlling health costs by combining managed competition and global budgeting. We are the only industrialized country that fails to budget our health care spending. And this is a major reason why we spend so much more than other countries on health care even though our health statistics are lower.

However, I have two major concerns.

First, I am concerned about how rural areas, like Montana, will fare under comprehensive health reform. I hear a lot of talk about managed competition. But what will happen in areas where there are not any doctors to compete? Or if reimbursement rates are set too low so that needed rural hospitals are forced to close?

Rural areas face unique health care problems. It is not enough to increase the number of people with health insurance. National health reform must address the delivery and access problems faced in rural areas.

National health reform can be a tremendous improvement for rural areas if it is structured correctly. I urge Dr. Shalala to pay close attention to rural health care needs as she moves forward on health reform legislation.

I am also concerned about setting up a different health insurance system for small businesses than for large businesses. If we are going to create a managed competition system, then our health reform plan should ultimately lead to everybody playing by the same rules. Large businesses should be as much as part of a managed competition system as smaller businesses.

This is the first time in decades that the Government will have a chance to enact comprehensive health reform. What I am saying is that we may not get another chance. So we should do it right this time.

But it is not just with national reform that I am concerned about the treatment of rural areas. There are many pressing problems facing rural areas right now which could be alleviated through improved public policy.

According to the General Accounting Office many rural hospitals, which are the sole health providers in their area, will face financial problems from losing money on Medicare patients.

People living in rural areas are more likely to be uninsured than urban residents. And rural areas continue to face a desperate shortage of health professionals and resources.

In Montana the statistics are truly alarming. About 20 percent of Montanans have no health insurance. Eight of our 56 counties have no physician and almost half of our counties have no physician who will deliver a baby.

Federal policy can and should be targeted to alleviate these serious problems. Dr. Shalala and I discussed elevating the Director of the Office of Rural Health Policy to the status of Deputy Secretary. I strongly support this view and urge Dr. Shalala to implement this proposal.

While we are all working together on national health reform, I will also be working on rural health care legislation to address these immediate health delivery problems in rural areas. I hope to work with Dr. Shalala on these issues in the future.

Mr. President, I am pleased that President Clinton chose Dr. Shalala to be Secretary of HHS. With her experience, energy, and creativity, I am sure she will make HHS more responsive to the needs of the American public.

I wish Dr. Shalala well and look forward to working with her in the future.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF HENRY G. CISNEROS

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I support the nomination of Henry G. Cisneros as Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. I believe President Clinton's selection of Mr. Cisneros as Secretary is an excellent choice. As the first Hispanic mayor of a major U.S. city, Mr. Cisneros demonstrated vision and innovation in addressing the problems of the city of San Antonio. He possesses a wealth of hands-on experience in urban policy and problem-solving. As chairman of the Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, I look forward to the opportunity to work closely with Mr. Cisneros to enhance the vitality of our distressed communities.

According to the 1990 census, more than half of our Nation's population lives in urban areas. Yet, today our cities face increasingly difficult problems. The policies developed by the 103d Congress will have a direct impact on the quality of life of all Americans for many years to come:

The initiatives we adopt have the potential to boost our economic prosperity. The United States spends less of its gross domestic product on infrastructure than 54 other countries. As a result, 23 percent of our bridges and 10 percent of our roads—many of which are in urban areas—are structurally deficient. Furthermore, recent studies have shown that a weak urban core drags down the economy of the entire metropolitan area. By the year 2000, minorities concentrated in inner cities will provide 57 percent of new work force entrants.

The solutions we find to the problems of our inner cities will affect the safety and quality of life for all Americans. Since 1980, violent crime increased nearly 33 percent. The risk of a teenager being murdered has doubled since 1985. And, in 1990, the leading killer of young blacks aged 15 to 25 was violence. Lack of economic opportunity is a key cause of violence. Since the mid-1970's, blacks have suffered consistent double digit unemployment and black teenage unemployment has topped 30 percent. Today, 10 percent of the work force—over 16 million people—are unemployed, underemployed, or so discouraged they've stopped looking for work. If we want to build strong and safe communities, we must ensure there are opportunities for all.

The course we navigate will determine the future for millions of American children. Thirty percent of children under the age of 6 live in poverty. One-fourth of the babies born in inner city hospitals are drug addicts at birth. Furthermore, half the children in many inner city neighborhoods are not vaccinated against serious and preventable diseases. And, between 40 and 50 percent of children in schools drop out before they graduate. If we want our children to have the opportunity to play productive roles in society, we must create an environment where they can grow and thrive.

The answers we find will impact the ability of millions of families to prosper. It is estimated that 5.1 million very low-income families pay more than half of their income for rent or live in substandard housing. In addition, three-quarters of a million people are homeless on any given day. These conditions squeeze the incomes of families so tightly they cannot afford other necessities including food, clothing, and medicine. If we want strong families, we must ensure that the hurdles to their survival are not insurmountable.

I believe Mr. Cisneros possesses the leadership to address not only the housing needs of our Nation, but the urban development component of the Department of Housing and Urban Development. The Nation needs a centralized and coherent strategy to address the challenges facing the inner cities. Programs to aid urban areas are under the jurisdiction of over 10 different agencies and departments, yet there is no mechanism to promote sharing of information and coordination of policy among these agencies. Last week, several members of the Banking Committee and I sent a letter to President-elect Clinton recommending Mr. Cisneros to lead such an effort which I ask to have printed in the RECORD.

I strongly support the nomination of Henry Cisneros. As I have stated I believe he will make an excellent Secretary of HUD and I encourage the Senate to act favorably and immediately on his nomination.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, January 14, 1993.

HON. BILL CLINTON,
President-Elect, Presidential Transition Office,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT-ELECT: We are writing to urge you to create a formal mechanism within the White House to coordinate all federal programs affecting urban areas and to develop a coherent national policy to address the problems confronting our cities.

A central theme that arose during the Senate Banking Committee's hearing on the confirmation of Henry Cisneros to serve as Secretary of Housing and Urban Development was the nation's desperate need for a unified strategy to address the challenges facing its urban centers.

An effective national urban policy must take into account the complex relationships among the various challenges facing our cities and the various federal programs designed to address those challenges. Housing and community development programs, other economic development programs, crime and drug prevention efforts, job training programs, transportation programs, programs to provide health and human services, and tax policy, all have impacts on one another and on the urban environment.

Currently, no mechanism exists to facilitate sharing information among the more than ten agencies responsible for programs with urban impact, and to ensure their effective coordination. We therefore recommend that you create such a formal coordinating structure and place it under the leadership of the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

We urge your prompt attention to this recommendation which we believe is central to developing the most effective federal response to the social and economic crisis that confronts our cities and to getting maximum impact from the national resources we are able to apply.

Sincerely,

Donald W. Riegle, Jr., Chairman; Paul S. Sarbanes; Christopher J. Dodd; Jim Sasser; John F. Kerry; Alfonse M. D'Amato; Christopher S. Bond; Robert Bennett; Richard H. Bryan; Barbara Boxer; Carol Moseley-Braun; Patty Murray; Ben Nighthorse Campbell.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF HENRY CISNEROS

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I am pleased to offer my support for the confirmation of Secretary-designate, Henry Cisneros for the Department of Housing and Urban Development. As ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, I have had the opportunity to hear Mr. Cisneros present the ideas of what the incoming administration plans to do in addressing the housing concerns of our Nation. I feel confident that by continuing bipartisan efforts, we can make a difference in our urban centers, in our rural towns, and in our suburban communities.

I would be remiss if I did not acknowledge the strong bipartisan cooperation on housing policy that we have enjoyed in the Senate with Secretary Jack Kemp. Secretary Kemp brought innovation and insight to our dialogue on housing and inner city issues facing this country. Thanks to Jack Kemp, we can never view problems facing our inner cities again without recognizing the need to provide individuals with opportunities to better themselves, own their own homes, and have a stake in their own communities. I hope that Mr. Cisneros will continue to work toward the goals set out by Secretary Kemp. I speak both of the Secretary's HOPE Program which allows residents of public housing to realize the dream of homeownership and his strident advocacy of enterprise zones.

If we are to undertake a concerted effort to rebuild the depressed areas of our cities and create sound and attractive neighborhoods, there is no question that housing will be a key component of any Enterprise Zone Program. People must not only be given incentives to work in urban areas but they must also want to live there.

This Congress will look for leadership from the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development in many areas including maintaining the health of the FHA insurance funds while balancing the desire to assist low and moderate income home buyers. The Secretary should make the elimination of drugs in federally assisted housing a top priority. Scarce resources such as CDBG dollars and elderly and handicapped housing funds must be maximized. Focus on safety and security issues, such as requiring smoke detectors in federally assisted housing, must continue. Elimination of wasteful practices, such as lump-sum relocation payments for residents of public housing, should become standard practice.

I believe that with Mr. Cisneros as Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, we can and will make a profound difference in the lives of those who live and work in our Nation's urban centers, rural towns, and suburban communities. I look forward to working closely with him and his staff in continuing bipartisan cooperation on housing policy.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF HAZEL
ROLLINS O'LEARY

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, today I am pleased to recommend to the Senate confirmation of Hazel Rollins O'Leary to be Secretary of the Department of Energy. Mrs. O'Leary is an excellent choice for Secretary of Energy. She has a strong background in the energy business, and she will bring to this position her experience in both the Federal Government and the private sector. Her experience in business in the private sector will bring a healthy and fresh perspective to the Department of Energy.

I feel confident that Hazel O'Leary is up to the task of taking on the Department of Energy. If anyone can succeed at this position—and solve the many problems facing the Department—I am certain that Hazel can.

The position of Secretary of Energy is one of the most important jobs in the Federal Government. The Department of Energy has a critical role to play in the administration's plans for economic recovery as well as its traditional role in the development and maintenance of energy supply for the future. Development of a sustained and balanced energy policy—coupled with careful utilization and management of the assets of the Department of Energy—will be critical to the administration's near-term efforts to stimulate economic growth and international competitiveness.

The position of Secretary of Energy will also be a very challenging one. It will take strong management skills and a strong will to get things done. It will take a commitment to developing a balanced energy policy that recognizes the need for both efficiency measures and a diversity of supply. It will require an ability to juggle at the same time the many issues facing the Department that are not strictly related to energy supply.

There are many daunting tasks that await the Secretary of Energy—cleanup of the nuclear weapons complex, effective management of the civilian nuclear waste program, and development of an effective partnership between the national laboratories and private enterprise, to name just a few of them. The nuclear weapons complex, civilian nuclear waste, and the national laboratories account for a significant portion of the Department of Energy's annual budget. Each of these areas will present the Secretary of Energy with a significant and unique challenge.

One of the most important tasks facing the Secretary of Energy will be managing the cleanup of the environmental problems of the Department's nuclear facilities. Estimates of the total cost of cleanup range as high as $150 billion. Annual expenditures are in the range of $5 billion. One of the most difficult challenges in this program will be to establish priorities for cleanup that will ensure that the worst environmental problems are cleaned up first. In establishing priorities, it will also be necessary to develop realistic and sensible standards for cleanup and to make decisions on the extent of cleanup and schedules for cleanup based upon the risk involved.

Equally important to success at the Department of Energy will be effective management of the civilian nuclear waste program. Mrs. O'Leary will bring a fresh perspective to this issue. She has seen first hand the problems of the nuclear waste program from the perspective of a utility customer. She has felt the frustration of the waste of money in this program and knows all too well the need for improvements in its management. With each year, this program gets more expensive and its schedule for completion gets further away. We simply must structure this program in a way that it can succeed on a timely schedule.

The Department of Energy is the Federal Government's largest employer of scientists and engineers and owns the Nation's premier laboratories and facilities for basic science. These laboratories—and the Department's role in science—have evolved over time from a primary emphasis on nuclear weapons development to a broader role in the development of technology across the full spectrum of fundamental sciences. These laboratories are on the brink of change in how they operate. Properly managed, the tremendous assets of the national laboratories can ensure the continued preeminence of American science while also making a major contribution to the administration's efforts to stimulate economic growth and competitiveness. To accomplish these goals, we must develop an effective partnership between the national laboratories and the private sector.

Competition for Federal dollars for science throughout the Federal Government will be keen over the next several years. The Department has within its purview some of the most advanced facilities and programs of the entire Federal Government. Many of these programs have the potential both to keep the United States at the forefront of science and to enhance U.S. competitiveness. As competition for Federal dollars becomes more fierce, the administration will have to develop priorities for science. The Department will need to play a key role in the development of those priorities.

Finally, the Energy Policy Act of 1992 contains major new initiatives and far-reaching provisions affecting almost every aspect of energy policy. Effective implementation of these provisions will be a challenge, and there will be severe competition for limited Federal dollars. The Secretary of Energy will need to find the right balance and level of support for these programs. The Energy Act provisions in energy efficiency, renewable energy, alternative fuels, and global climate policy, taken together with the Clean Air Act amendments, represent the most significant programmatic response by any nation to the Treaty on Climate Change signed in Rio. Success at the implementation of these provisions will be especially important.

Mr. President, I look forward to working with Mrs. O'Leary and the Clinton administration on energy issues, and I urge strongly the prompt confirmation of this nominee.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF HAZEL
O'LEARY

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I wish to add a few enthusiastic words of support for this nomination.

The new Secretary takes charge of an agency whose mission is as diverse as it is important. The Department of Energy's role as energy provider to many communities and businesses in Montana underscores the impact which that agency has on the everyday lives of millions of Americans.

The importance of the DOE to my State was underscored several weeks ago when the Bonneville Power Administration announced a temporary 25-percent cutback in energy to its direct service industry customers. In real terms, BPA's actions mean that workers are laid off and that the long hoped for economic rebound in Montana's aluminum industry will not come about in the near future.

The new Secretary of Energy will face the challenge of ensuring that States like Montana are provided with accessible and affordable power. The lack of either clearly hampers our ability to be productive and contribute to any kind of economic recovery.

Having met Ms. O'Leary, I am sure that she is up to the task. The vitality and knowledge which she brings to the position is a real benefit to the Department of Energy. I am confident that Ms. O'Leary is an excellent choice for Secretary of Energy, and I look forward to working with her.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION

Mr. WALLOP. Mr. President, I rise in support of the confirmation of Mrs. Hazel O'Leary as Secretary of Energy. In nominating her as Secretary of Energy, President Clinton has selected someone with solid qualifications.

Mrs. O'Leary brings to the Department of Energy two decades of experience as both a regulator and as the regulated. She has served within the Department as assistant administrator for Conservation and as Administrator of the Economic Regulatory Administration. In this capacity she has firsthand experience with heavy handed government price regulations that did not work. As Mrs. O'Leary observed in her statement before the Energy and Natural Resources Committee yesterday, in the private sector she was aware of the importance of a strong and resilient energy policy, one that protects the environment but which also maximizes the Nation's demand and supply-side options and sustains economic growth.

The Department of Energy is at a critical juncture in its history. With enactment of the 1992 Energy Policy Act, the 102d Congress and the Bush administration redefined DOE's charter and set it on a course to meet the challenges of the next century. Whether it gets there or not rests on the leadership of the next Secretary of Energy.

The Energy Policy Act of 1992 contains many of the necessary reforms to assure sustainable economic development. This bipartisan agreement recognizes that an expanding national and global economy requires that America rely both on energy production and increased efficiency and conservation.

From this perspective I was encouraged by Mrs. O'Leary's December 12 acceptance remarks when she stated:

Our energy policy decisions are central to creating jobs, to maintaining the health of our nation's economy, and to improving the quality of our environment. The experience that I have has taught me that balance is essential in effective public policy, and most essential in making energy policy. We've got to utilize the wide range of demand-side and supply-side options to ensure adequate supplies of energy resources at reasonable and environmentally correct costs.

She then observed:

That eventually we are going to discover that there are natural and physical limitations to efficiency, conservation and renewables. People will come to realize that you need a supply strategy as well.

This reality is reflected in the Energy Policy Act of 1992 which provides a long-term, comprehensive, and consensus-based energy policy for the United States. The act sets forth an energy strategy that will further our national security, create American jobs, help our balance of payments, and lessen our dependence on foreign energy markets and international cartels.

But the challenge does not stop there. The responsibilities of the Secretary of Energy are not limited to just the administration of a national energy policy. They extend to administration of our national laboratories, the crown jewels of our Nation's scientific research capabilities, and administration of the Federal Government's nuclear weapons production facilities.

The environmental issues associated with the operations and decontamination of these facilities are numerous. Many of these facilities are more than 45 years old. Under Admiral Watkins, significant steps were taken to bring this situation under control; however, the task of bringing them into compliance with contemporary environmental requirements will confront the Department for many years.

The role of the Secretary within the decision making process in the Clinton administration is pivotal to the success of all of these missions. During her testimony and in her answers for the record, Mrs. O'Leary demonstrated her experience in dealing with the ongoing balancing act among and between legitimate environmental interests and concerns, and legitimate energy or economic concerns.

As the Secretary of Energy, she will be called upon to be the voice of reason in many contentious debates. As we all know, some of the ideas are just plain stupid; for example, such misguided proposals as a carbon tax will have significant, adverse employment, energy, and trade competitive implications for the United States. Similarly, proposals to eliminate development of advanced, passively safe, nuclear reactor designs are shortsighted and exhibit a lack of vision for the long-term energy security and environmental well-being of the Nation.

Too often we overlook the economic, social, and energy costs of our environmental policies. By our failure to consider the cost-effectiveness of our policies we incur an unnecessary dampening of the marketplace and a loss of competitiveness internationally. A reconciliation of environmental and energy policies is needed in order to assure sustainable economic development and international competitiveness.

Mr. President, significant benefits can be derived from the United States export of new energy technologies such as clean coal technologies as well as renewable and energy efficiency technologies. The 1992 Energy Policy Act, for the first time, places significant responsibilities in the Secretary of Energy in this regard. Now priority must be given to establishment of the necessary interagency mechanisms if the United States is going to realize the full economic, employment, and trade potentials of these technologies.

Among the critical issues which will immediately face Mrs. O'Leary as Secretary will be implementation of the Uranium Enrichment Corp. statutes. The administration also needs to conclude the arrangements necessary for DOE's purchase of weapons grade uranium from Russia.

Equally important is the timely characterization of the nuclear waste site at Yucca Mountain. The Federal Government needs to fulfill its commitment to the American people to provide for the long-term disposal of nuclear waste. It is critical that evaluation of the suitability of the Yucca Mountain site proceed as expeditiously as possible.

Other critical issues of concern to me are the issues surrounding energy consumption; initiatives in the areas of energy supply and production; and technology transfer.

In addition, there are the Department's nuclear weapons programs. These programs require a special expertise that is not reflected within Mrs. O'Leary's areas of experience. It therefore is critical that she have access to the necessary expertise and advisers so that she can affectively carry out her national security duties and responsibilities.

Mr. President, I would observe that our Nation has made significant progress in the formulation of a national energy strategy since the shortages of the 1970's. We have learned that the command-and-control policies of that period did not work. The Energy Policy Act of 1992 reflects that experience. Congress and the administration must resist the temptation to again try to dictate specific human behavior.

Let me say, Mr. President, that I do not envy Mrs. O'Leary the task ahead. However, she brings to the position a wealth of experience and knowledge. As we move forward I am confident that we can do so together as partners, with candor and cooperation as our hallmark. I recommend her confirmation. She is an excellent choice.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF RICHARD RILEY

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I rise in strong and enthusiastic support of the nomination of Richard Riley of South Carolina to be the Secretary of Education. This is a nomination we should confirm with dispatch.

I will be brief in my remarks on Governor Riley's behalf. Let me say at the outset that the fact that President Clinton has chosen a friend and former colleague underscores the fact that education will be high on the new administration's agenda. It is clear that its concerns will be heard in the highest levels of our government.

Richard Riley is an individual of very considerable talents. He has served South Carolina as State representative, State senator, and for two 4-year terms, Governor. Throughout his governorship, education was a major priority. He fought hard for educational reform, and he won. He fought hard for increased education funding, and he won. He fought hard for better teacher training and improved instruction in basic skills, and he won. In short, he was truly an education governor.

On three different occasions Governor Riley was given the South Carolina Friend of Education Award. To earn such an award once is a considerable accomplishment; to have it happen three times is remarkable.

American education is at a crossroads. Either we move to make excellence the byword of education, or resign ourselves to mediocrity. Either we move to insure that American education responds to the need to keep our Nation competitive, or resign ourselves to second-class status. Either we invest in education, or resign ourselves to an underfunded and inadequate education that cannot spur this nation forward. The choice may seem to be an easy one, but we are all too painfully aware that rhetoric is not enough  that actions speak louder than words.

In President Clinton we have someone who has demonstrated his commitment to education time and time again while he was Governor of Arkansas. His friend, Richard Riley, has done the same as Governor of South Carolina. We now have the chance to team them together, and to bring to education the one-two punch it needs at the national level.

I urge my colleagues to join me in confirming Richard Riley as the next Secretary of Education.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF LEON PANETTA AND ALICE RIVLIN

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the confirmation of LEON PANETTA to be Director and ALICE RIVLIN to be Deputy Director of the Office of Management and Budget. I have known and worked with these two very capable candidates for over a decade.

I think the President has made an excellent choice in selecting the former chairman of the House Budget Committee as his OMB Director. Few bring such a strong familiarity with the scope and dangers associated with this Nation's fiscal problems. Moreover, Mr. PANETTA fully understands the complexities of our budget processes and brings unique skills to address the most serious long-term economic problem facing our country—the budget deficit.

Combined with Dr. Rivlin's skills and experience, particularly as the first Director of the Congressional Budget Office, the President has chosen an excellent team to head up OMB.

The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee was gracious enough to allow me to attend their hearings on Mr. PANETTA's and Dr. Rivlin's nominations. I was impressed with their commitment to make a major reduction in the budget deficit, particularly their recognition that we must confront mandatory spending as part of the solution.

Mr. President, none of the choices for deficit reduction are easy. This problem requires strong Presidential leadership and a bipartisan solution.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF RICHARD W. RILEY

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I rise in support of the nomination of Richard W. Riley to the Office of Secretary of Education. Governor Riley comes with high credentials and an impressive record. Beyond his documented success as a governor with a commitment to education, Mr. Riley's possesses the unique ability to work well with others which will serve him well in his new position.

As Governor, Mr. Riley gained his reputation as an ardent supporter of education. During his tenure, he initiated a comprehensive, nationally recognized education reform package for his State of South Carolina. He has had to deal with the tough issue of college desegregation and has had a strong record of education funding during his tenure as Governor.

I am anxious to work with Mr. Riley as Congress embarks on a full agenda of education reform in the upcoming session. Among those issues is the reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary Act. Clearly, his understanding of these issues will bring great insight to the proposals now being considered for education reform. Furthermore, the recommendations of the National Commission on Responsibilities for Financing Postsecondary Education will be announced on February 3. The Commission's report has proposed significant reforms for the financing and restructuring of higher education. We can expect big changes and I look forward to working closely with the Secretary-designate.

I am also pleased that Mr. Riley will be assisted by a good friend of mine, Gov. Madeline Kunin. Governor Kunin has been nominated for the post of Deputy Secretary of Education. I can think of no one more qualified than she to assist in the process of reform and change. Her record in Vermont speaks for itself and I hope we can move swiftly with her confirmation.

This is an exciting time for the education community. I can think of few individuals more qualified than those nominated by our new President to assist in the vital work of education reform.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF MICKEY KANTOR

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, I want to express concern about the nomination of Mickey Kantor for U.S. Trade Representative. In particular, I have serious reservations about his lack of experience and the potential conflict of interest between his private career as a lobbyist and this new position.

President Clinton has highlighted trade issues as central to our own renewal. As he stated in his inaugural address, we are living in a world where communications and commerce are global—we are living in a world in which we must compete for every opportunity.

I certainly agree with President Clinton's perspective, and it is for this reason that I am concerned that Mr. Kantor does not have a strong enough background in trade issues to hit the ground running. Given the challenges before us in the trade area from friend and foe alike and given the close integration between trade and our foreign and domestic policies, I believe experience is critical for this nomination.

While Mr. Kantor is clearly a very capable lawyer, it is still unclear after his hearings what his trade views are and what our trade policy will be. We cannot afford to lose time and, as President Clinton has said, opportunities, while our Trade Representative gets up to speed.

I am also very concerned that questions regarding potential conflict between his veteran lobbying career and the position of U.S. Trade Representative have not been fully answered. For example, Mr. Kantor and his firm Manatt, Phelps, Phillips & Kantor had represented Japanese firms involved in semiconductor and auto issues.

While nothing was raised during the hearing process that would have disqualified Mr. Kantor for the job, I believe the approval of this nomination places responsibility directly in the hands of the President to make clear to the American people what our trade policy will be and how we will effectively tackle the vast challenges before us in this area.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF DONNA SHALALA

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, I would like to offer my support for Donna Shalala as Secretary of Health and Human Services. Dr. Shalala is a woman of undisputed talent, with an impressive record of varied public service—both inside and outside of government.

Taking the helm of the huge and often unwieldy HHS bureaucracy will require every ounce of her much-praised abilities as a forceful and effective administrator.

Of all the challenges facing the next HHS Secretary, none is greater than the urgent need to develop comprehensive national health care reform. I and many on my side of the aisle are very interested in working with Dr. Shalala and the incoming administration in the development of a bipartisan, responsible reform program.

I was very encouraged by a statement Dr. Shalala made at the time of her nomination in which she vowed to "energize that huge HHS bureaucracy to demonstrate that Government can be sensitive, caring, and accountable." One of my own priorities in the coming session will be to pursue ways in which the vast bureaucracy at HHS can be reformed to assure better efficiency and return on taxpayer dollars.

Perhaps nowhere is the lack of Federal program coordination more starkly evident than in the area of children's services. The Federal Government spends hundreds of billions of dollars on income support, nutrition, social service, education, health, and housing programs designed to provide support to children and their families. And yet, our many different programs exist at best as an inadequate patchwork, with little coordination or integration.

A priority of mine in the coming Congress will be to try to rethink the way we provide assistance to children and their families, then create a response that makes more effective use of our resources.

I very much look forward to working with Dr. Shalala in the critical months and years ahead.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF ROBERT REICH

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, I would like to express my support today for the confirmation of Robert Reich as Secretary of Labor. I have listened to Mr. Reich's testimony before the Labor and Human Resources Committee, and believe that he has the vision and skill necessary to lead this important Department.

Over the past decade, Mr. Reich has been at the forefront of innovative ideas on job training, economic transition, and global competition. He has written extensively on these and other subjects, and I compliment him for his contribution to these areas.

Mr. President, one part of nurturing our work force is promoting economic opportunity through private sector job creation. Mr. Reich has spoken frequently about assuring that our workers are prepared to take advantage of economic opportunity by increasing their job skills. But let us remain committed to the ultimate goal—job growth. All the preparation in the world will not help our workers if no jobs are available at the end of their training. I hope that Mr. Reich is committed to this effort.

In addition, I urge Robert Reich to focus on reshaping the Department of Labor. Unfortunately, many of the programs at the Department, especially job training programs, lack focus and coordination. In 1991, we spent $16 billion on 125 job training programs at the Departments of Education and Labor. I hope that we can reorganize our Federal Government to make sense of these programs. Along with our members of the Labor Committee, I look forward to working with Mr. Reich on reshaping the Labor Department.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF RICHARD RILEY

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, I am pleased to offer my support for Gov. Richard Riley for Secretary of Education. I am genuinely looking forward to working with him. I had the pleasure of meeting with Governor Riley a few weeks ago and of talking with him further at the confirmation hearing last week. I am pleased and encouraged with what I have heard so far from him. Certainly, his record on behalf of school reform in South Carolina speaks for itself.

Governor Riley has a healthy respect for State and local control of our schools. He stated that he is committed to the decentralization of the Nation's education systems and that one of the main aspects of education reform is giving citizens a feeling of ownership of their public education system and their children's destiny. He also said that he is a strong believer in States controlling their own destiny in education.

In addition, when questioned about a Federal role in school finance equalization, he expressed reservations about the advisability of the Federal Government trying to deal with this complex State legal issue and indicated that it would be more appropriate to provide information and leadership to try to encourage States to take action themselves.

I find it reassuring that he feels a direct loan pilot is the right approach and indicated that he wanted more information about direct loans before he would consider replacing the entire student loan program with direct loans. Whether we should switch over to a full-scale direct loan program is a very serious question. Since I have grave reservations about the wisdom of adopting such a plan, the ability of Federal Government to manage such a program, and the accuracy of the cost savings, I was heartened to see that Governor Riley was not rushing into this decision.

Although I have concerns about the current national testing movement, I agree wholeheartedly with the Governor that any tests that the Federal Government helps develop or endorses should only be tests which help the student. He assured me that he is opposed to tests which are used for political purposes, to make a point, to put on a wall, or to belittle or drive students. I could not agree with him more. I also agree with Governor Riley that any national education standards that the Federal Government helps develop or endorses should be voluntary.

Finally, I share Governor Riley's view that we need collaboration and coordination across jurisdictions, agencies, and government programs. And most importantly, I share his hope that the bipartisanship that marked President Clinton's and his approach to education policy in the past will continue.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF FEDERICO PEÑA

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I wish to speak in strong support of this nomination. I believe Mr. Peña possesses the intellect, experience, and drive to make the Department of Transportation an example of Federal Government at its best.

As chairman of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, I am particularly interested in the manner in which the Department of Transportation shapes our country's surface transportation policy during the next 4 years. In my home State of Montana, surface transportation, particularly highways, is of paramount importance.

The new Secretary will face the challenge of being a strong advocate for the unique transportation needs of each and every State. Fortunately, the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act [ISTEA] of 1991 goes a long way in providing for the many different surface transportation requirements in the country.

I would encourage the new Secretary to take note of the forward looking nature of ISTEA and use it as a model for setting the surface transportation goals of the Department of Transportation. This act is literally a recipe for meeting this Nation's transportation needs in the 21st century.

I have met with Mr. Peña and am most impressed. I believe the Environment and Public Works Committee was equally impressed. I look forward to working with you, Mr. Peña, and wish you the best of luck.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF HAZEL O'LEARY

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I will vote to confirm Hazel O'Leary as Secretary of Energy. She is a woman who possesses the capabilities and the desire to manage the complex problems that will face the Department of Energy.

In her responses to questions before the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, she expressed the administration's intent to open a high-level nuclear waste repository and to assure the waste isolation pilot project is tested for suitability for long-term waste disposal of plutonium contaminated wastes. This is good news for all Idahoans and the Nation as a whole. I encourage the Department of Energy to move forward with haste on both of those proposals.

As a person familiar with the nuclear industry, she recognizes the growing problems surrounding the issue of commercial nuclear waste. Several weeks ago, the Department of Energy suggested that, due to the difficulties associated with the development of a repository and MRS's, there is a possibility that our national labs and other Federal facilities would have to begin storing commercial waste sometime in the future.

While this statement was based on a reading of the Nuclear Waste Policy Act, let me say very clearly that this is not an acceptable option. I am speaking for Idaho's congressional delegation and our Governor when I say Idaho must not become a storage site for commercial waste.

It is good to know the administration views the National Laboratories as a precious resource that will be a central element in efforts to develop new technologies to stimulate long-term economic growth. Those labs offer some of the finest science and technology that this Nation possesses. In the case of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, I have seen first hand the ability of the labs to apply basic science to solutions of complex problems in the real world. It is this type of work at the labs that must be fostered and increased in the future.

Ms. O'Leary should be confirmed by this body.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF HAZEL O'LEARY

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today in support of Hazel O'Leary to be Secretary of the Department of Energy. Ms. O'Leary will bring to this position both industry experience and knowledge of Federal Government operations.

Ms. O'Leary graduated from Fisk College and received her law degree from Rutgers University School of Law. She served in both the Carter and Ford administrations as a utility regulator at the Department of Energy and its predecessor, the Federal Energy Administration. She was vice president of an energy consulting firm in Washington, and most recently, she was to have been promoted to president of Northern States Power's Natural Gas Utility, but her nomination to Secretary of Treasury preceded this action.

The Department of Energy serves the important purpose of providing a balanced overall national energy plan. The Department must coordinate the energy functions of the Federal Government and must research and develop new energy technology to meet the growing needs of our Nation. The Department of Energy also has the important responsibility of overseeing our energy conservation policy and our nuclear weapons program.

Ms. O'Leary's background as a utility regulator and as a utility executive should assist her in addressing the needs and responsibilities of the Department of Energy. With the volatile situation in the Middle East, conservation and energy issues will continue to challenge our country. Therefore, I support Hazel O'Leary to be Secretary of Energy.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF CAROL BROWNER

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today in support of Ms. Carol Browner to be the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Ms. Browner was born and educated in Florida, and has a broad background in addressing environmental issues. Her career includes service as counsel to the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources and Secretary of the Department of Environmental Regulation. She also served as legislative director to Vice President GORE while he served in this body.

The Environmental Protection Agency is charged with the responsibility of protecting our environment under the laws of this country. As Administrator of this important agency, it will be necessary for Ms. Browner to balance Federal environmental rules with continued growth and productivity of our industries. Because it is necessary that she work with State and local governments to coordinate efforts to combat pollution, she must also ensure that Federal rules preserve our environment without unduly burdening the States and local governments.

Ms. Browner's experience should be extremely helpful to her as Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency and should assist her in being an effective advocate for a safe, healthy environment. I am pleased to support her nomination for this important position.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF MICKEY KANTOR

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise in support of the nomination of Mickey Kantor to be U.S. Trade Representative [USTR].

Mr. Kantor received his bachelor's degree from Vanderbilt University and his law degree from Georgetown University Law Center. Since the early 1970's, Mr. Kantor has been active in numerous political campaigns. He has held high positions with many Democratic campaigns, such as with former Senator Alan Cranston in 1974, with Gov. Jerry Brown in his unsuccessful bid to become President in 1976, with President Carter in 1980, with Walter Mondale in 1984, and most recently with our new President.

Since 1975, he has been a partner with the law firm of Manatt, Phelps, Phillips & Kantor in California. Further, in 1991, he served on the Independent Commission To Investigate the Los Angeles Police Department.

Once confirmed as USTR, Mr. Kantor will have the challenging job of representing the interests of the United States in negotiations in the international trade arena and will be instrumental in shaping our trade policy. Several items, like implementing the North American Free Trade Agreement, completing negotiations on the Uruguay round of the GATT, and deciding on the continuing fate of most-favorite-nation trading status for the People's Republic of China, will make this an important job over the next few years. Additionally, trying to slow the growth of the ever-increasing amount of imported textile and apparel items entering this country will make this a tough assignment. However, I hope that he will be a tough negotiator and represent the United States well.

Accordingly, I will support the nomination of Mr. Kantor for U.S. Trade Representative.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF REPRESENTATIVE LEON PANETTA

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today in support of President Clinton's nominee to be Director of the Office of Management and Budget, Representative LEON PANETTA.

Representative PANETTA was born and educated in California. He received his law degree from the University of Santa Clara, and served honorably in the U.S. Army from 1963 to 1965. He was elected to the House of Representatives in 1976, and has served in that body since that time.

Representative PANETTA will bring considerable experience to his new position as Director of the Office of Management and Budget. He was named to the House Budget Committee in 1979 and was chairman of that committee from 1989 to 1992. Representative PANETTA is well known for his commitment to reducing the deficit.

The Office of Management and Budget has the significant responsibility of supervising and controlling the administration of the Federal budget. This Office also assists the President in formulating the annual Federal budget. In his position as Director, Representative PANETTA will have great influence over policy decisions affecting the Federal budget.

I believe that Representative PANETTA is a man who possesses the qualities of integrity, good judgment, and leadership, and I am pleased to support his nomination for Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF GOVERNOR RICHARD RILEY

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today to support the nomination of Richard Riley to be Secretary of the Department of Education.

Mr. President, Governor Riley has a long and distinguished career. He is a nationally recognized leader in the areas of public education reform, nuclear waste disposal, and preventive health care. He is now a partner with the distinguished law firm of Nelson, Mullins, Riley & Scarborough, one of the oldest and largest firms in South Carolina.

Richard Wilson Riley was born and raised in my home State of South Carolina. He has a lovely wife, Tunky, and four children. After earning his undergraduate degree from Furman University, he served in the U.S. Navy as an operations officer on a minesweeper. In 1959, he received his juris doctorate from the University of South Carolina School of Law and then served as a legal counsel to the Judiciary Committee of the U.S. Senate.

From 1963 to 1977, Richard Riley served in the South Carolina State Legislature. On January 10, 1979, Richard Riley became the 81st Governor of South Carolina.

During his tenure, Governor Riley initiated many outstanding pieces of legislation. Among his most significant accomplishments was the South Carolina Education Improvement Act of 1984. This act was judged the most comprehensive educational reform measure in the country by a RAND Corp. study. The act called for increasing academic standards at all grades, improving the teaching and testing of basic skills, improving the training and evaluation of teachers and administrators, and evaluating and rewarding schools for measurable progress.

Mr. President, Governor Riley's administration was marked by conservative fiscal management of government and progress in job development and quality education. As Secretary of the Department of Education, Governor Riley will again be faced with this task. He will have to make wise use of limited resources. He will be challenged with the responsibility to redirect educational funding so that more goes into the classroom and less into bureaucracy.

Mr. President, I believe Richard Wilton Riley possesses all the virtues necessary to be the Secretary of the Department of Education. He is a leader. He is capable, intelligent, industrious, and honorable. He is a long time friend and colleague.

Accordingly, Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support Richard Riley's nomination.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF JESSE BROWN

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today to support the nomination of Jesse Brown to be Secretary of the Department of Veterans' Affairs.

Mr. President, Mr. Brown served in the U.S. Marine Corps from 1963 to 1966. While serving his country, Jesse Brown was wounded on combat duty in Vietnam and received the Purple Heart.

Mr. Brown has served as a member of the Chicago Mayor's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped. Since 1967, he has also served as an officer of the Disabled American Veterans. Mr. Brown achieved the status of executive director of the Disabled American Veterans in 1988 and continued in that capacity until January 5 of this year.

Mr. Brown has been a tireless advocate for the veterans of this Nation. I have enjoyed his articles in the DAV monthly magazine. I have also enjoyed his presentations before the Committee on Veterans' Affairs as a representative of the Disabled American Veterans.

Mr. President, I have met with Mr. Brown and we have discussed his duties as the Secretary of Veterans Affairs. I believe Mr. Brown is a man of integrity, honor, and ability. Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to support Jesse Brown's nomination.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF HENRY CISNEROS

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the nomination of Henry Cisneros by President Clinton to be Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

Mr. Cisneros is a proven individual, who will bring strength and energy to the agency as Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. As the mayor of San Antonio, the 10th largest city in the United States, he has considerable experience in urban policy and housing programs.

After graduating from Texas A&M, Mr. Cisneros received a doctorate in public administration from George Washington University and a master's degree from Harvard's John F. Kennedy School. He also was a White House fellow serving under Elliot L. Richardson, the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare during President Nixon's administration.

In 1975, Mr. Cisneros was elected to the city council in San Antonio where he served 6 years before he won his first mayoral election in 1981. Mr. Cisneros held the position of mayor of San Antonio for 8 years, and during this period he briefly was president of the National League of Cities. His ambition and innovative ideas brought economic growth to his city and in 1982, the national Jaycees selected him as one of the "10 Outstanding Young Men of America."

Mr. Cisneros later set up a successful asset management business and sat on the board of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas. He also was a member of the Los Angeles task force created to deal with the tragedies of the L.A. riots. After the election, he joined the Clinton transition team.

After confirmation, Mr. Cisneros will be forced to deal with the monumental housing problems facing our cities today that include the role of community development programs, public housing modernization and Government enterprise zones. I am confident that Mr. Cisneros recognizes the problems facing both rural and urban communities and will reclaim HUD's status as advocate for the people of America.

I urge my colleagues to support his nomination.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF REPRESENTATIVE MIKE ESPY

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the nomination of Mississippi Representative MIKE ESPY for Secretary of Agriculture. Mr. ESPY possesses ample qualifications for this position.

Mr. ESPY was born in Yazoo City, MS, and attended the local schools for his early education. In 1975, he graduated from Howard University, located here in Washington, DC. He then received his law degree from the University of Santa Clara Law School.

Mr. ESPY started his legal career with the Central Mississippi Legal Services as a managing attorney. He later worked as the assistant secretary of State, as director of the Division of Public Lands and as the assistant attorney general, as director of Consumer Protection in his home State of Mississippi.

In 1986, Mr. ESPY was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives, and he has served on the House Agriculture Committee and the House Budget Committee since his election. He was recently reelected with 78 percent of the vote.

Mr. President, Mr. ESPY will be the second Secretary of Agriculture who was not born into farming or agribusiness since Orville Freeman who served under Presidents Kennedy and Johnson. However, Mr. ESPY has worked extremely hard for the agriculture interests of his constituents. He has become active in the formulation of rural development, nutritional, crop insurance, disaster assistance, and alternative cropping programs. Further, he is given much credit with helping to develop and to promote the catfish industry in Mississippi.

Accordingly, Mr. President, I will support his confirmation to be the 25th Secretary of Agriculture.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF ROBERT REICH

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise in support of the nomination of Robert Reich to be Secretary of Labor.

Mr. President, Mr. Reich possesses excellent qualifications for the position of Secretary of Labor. He has earned degrees from Dartmouth College, Oxford University and Yale Law School. He was also a Rhodes Scholar. He is currently a lecturer on public policy at the John F. Kennedy School of Government.

The Secretary of Labor has the responsibility to organize the Department of Labor so that it will revitalize and strengthen our work force. The Secretary must create an atmosphere that will promote the creation of more permanent jobs. He must assist dislocated workers and promote competition.

As a nation, we must promote and harness the productivity of the American worker. We must assure small and large businesses that we will be careful to implement regulations which foster job growth and productivity. I believe Mr. Reich has the necessary qualifications to accomplish this.

Accordingly, Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support Robert Reich's nomination.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF FEDERICO PEÑA

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, today I rise in support of the nomination by President Clinton of Federico Peña to be Secretary of Transportation.

Mr. Peña brings to Washington experience in transportation policy, fiscal planning, economic development and management gained from his service as the mayor of Denver, CO for 8 years.

Mr. Peña received his bachelor's degree and law degree from the University of Texas at Austin. After law school, he joined his brother's law practice in Denver, CO.

In 1979, Mr. Peña began his career as a public servant when he was elected to Colorado's State Legislature. He served two terms, during which he rose to become Democratic minority leader and was voted outstanding legislator in 1981. Mr. Peña became the mayor of Denver in 1983 and held that office until 1991. He then started his own investment advisory business and was counsel for Brownstein, Hyatt, Farber & Strickland. He then served as the head of the President's team studying U.S. transportation needs.

Mr. Peña's legal background and experience with transportation issues will enable him to serve as a capable and industrious Secretary of Transportation. I urge my colleagues to support his nomination.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF DONNA SHALALA

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today to support the nomination of Ms. Donna Shalala to be Secretary of Health and Human Services.

Ms. Shalala has an extensive background in education and public services. She is a 1962 graduate of Western College for Women. After college, Ms. Shalala spent 2 years in the Peace Corps in Iran. She earned her doctorate in 1970 from Syracuse University. In 1977, she served as Assistant Secretary for Policy Development and Research at the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Since December of 1988, she has been chancellor at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Mr. President, the Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services has the responsibility to oversee the Social Security Administration, the Health Care Financing Administration, the Administration for Children and Families, and the Public Health Service.

The Secretary has the responsibility to organize the Department of Health and Human Services so that it will create and maintain an atmosphere that continues to service the health and well-being of American citizens from newborn infants to our most elderly citizens. The Secretary must constantly plan and evaluate the services provided by the Federal Government.

The incoming Secretary will be challenged with the responsibility to confront the growing crisis in our medical care system.

Medicare alone is the fourth largest item in the Federal budget. Recent reports indicate that Medicare and Medicaid are troubled by fraud and abuse. In this time of scarce Federal resources, we must streamline the bureaucracy and cut out payment policies that may encourage abuse and excessive charges.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support Ms. Shalala's nomination.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF CAROL BROWNER

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I would like to join my colleagues today in support of Carol Browner's appointment to head the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency [EPA]. Although she faces numerous challenges in managing a large Federal bureaucracy like EPA, I believe her State government experience gives her a unique perspective on what it means to be regulated by this Agency.

While Ms. Browner's duty will be to formulate and implement policy to protect our country's health and environment, she must also recognize our limited financial resources to accomplish this goal. I believe that creativity, flexibility and adequate risk assessment will be critical to the successful management of EPA.

The challenge for both Congress and the administration will be to preserve the intent and goals of our environmental laws without encouraging unnecessary regulations that strangle our Nation's businesses and local governments. As a State government official, Ms. Browner should be acutely aware of the problems that State and local governments are having in complying with the plethora of Federal regulations.

In my State of New Hampshire, and for most States, the situation is a serious and growing problem. Between Safe Drinking Water Act requirements that many towns simply cannot pay for and Superfund costs that have already put many small companies out of business, there seems to be no recognition of the economic realities that exist.

We cannot continue to pass on the burden of unfunded Federal mandates to our States and local governments without jeopardizing the livelihood of the citizens in our communities. In my view, our goal should be twofold: First, we need to create a partnership between business and Government to protect the environment and promote economic growth. And second, we need to prioritize our limited resources to achieve the greatest environmental benefit.

Ms. Browner stated during her confirmation hearing that EPA should spend more time listening to the particular concerns of businesses and communities affected by environmental problems and will seek to reform regulatory practices that unnecessarily harm economic activity without significantly aiding the environment. She also stated her support for more incentive-based programs and use of cost-benefit analysis in the regulatory review process. I hope these are not just words, but a real objective that is carried out aggressively by the new Administrator.

Mr. President, I look forward to working with Ms. Browner and EPA to meet these goals and hope we can embark on a more cooperative, common-sense approach to environmental policymaking.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF DONNA SHALALA

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I would just like to say a few words about the nomination of Donna Shalala for Secretary of Health and Human Services. My understanding is that other than myself, only one other Senator raised an objection to her confirmation. I do not wish to hold up the Senate needlessly, so I have agreed to allow a voice vote. I thank the distinguished minority leader for noting in the RECORD that I would have voted against confirming Ms. Shalala in a recorded vote.

I take the duty of giving advice and consent on Presidential nominees very seriously. However, I do believe that in general, a Senator should not object to a nomination solely on policy or political grounds, as was the case during Judge Robert Bork's failed nomination. After all, a President has a right to appoint individuals that share his ideas. That notwithstanding, I feel a Senator has a duty to object when he or she feels the nominee lacks that proper qualifications for a post, has ethical problems, or has demonstrated a lack of commitment to upholding the Constitution.

Using that standard, I feel that this nomination is objectionable. I think most in this body would agree that one of the most cherished of all rights guaranteed by the Constitution is the first amendment's right to free speech. I am alarmed that students at institutions of higher education across the Nation are finding that this precious right is being eroded by so-called speech codes. As chancellor of the University of Wisconsin, Donna Shalala gave her support to one of the most broad-reaching speech codes in the country, a code that was found unconstitutional by a U.S. district court. I feel this raises questions about the nominee's commitment to upholding the Constitution.

That much said, I will offer my cooperation to Ms. Shalala when she becomes head of the Department of Health and Human Services. Some of the Nation's most pressing challenges, such as the need for health care and welfare reform, will confront her in the years ahead. She will be helped by the talent and energy she has demonstrated throughout her career and during her confirmation hearings, but she will also need the cooperation of Republicans and Democrats alike to succeed. I wish her the best of luck.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF JESSE BROWN

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, as chairman of the Veterans Affairs Committee, I am delighted to voice my strong support for the confirmation of Jesse Brown as Secretary of Veterans Affairs. He will bring to this tremendously important position a firm grasp of the issues and a keen sensitivity to the needs of veterans. I am confident he will be an effective Secretary.

Jesse Brown's 25-year career as an advocate for veterans reflects a deep-seated commitment to ensuring that the Government fulfills its fundamental obligation to those who have defended our country in times of war and peace. He is truly a veteran's veteran—a decorated combat marine who experienced great personal hardship in Vietnam.

Following his service, he returned to devote his entire adult life to helping his fellow veterans secure adequate health care, get a fair shake from the Government, provide for their families and survivors, and overcome the physical and mental injuries that are, tragically, so often related to military service.

Mr. President, it is a long way from the Chicago regional office, where Jesse Brown first began his career of service to veterans as a DAV national service officer, to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs. Every step that Jesse Brown has taken on that road has been marked by principled hard work, unwavering commitment, and excellence. He embodies the noble concepts of which we so often speak in the Veterans' Affairs Committee—patriotism, heroism, service to country, and honoring the fundamental obligation this Nation owes to veterans. Through his distinguished career with the DAV, Mr. Brown excelled in each position he occupied and advanced to the position of executive director. He earned the reputation as an incredibly hard worker, effective and compassionate advocate, clear thinker, and dynamic and hard-working manager and leader. In addition to his strong record of accomplishment within that organization, Mr. Brown has been active in many other volunteer and public service endeavors.

Mr. President, on January 9, the committee held a hearing on the then expected nomination of Mr. Brown. He was questioned extensively by members about programmatic matters, policy issues, and how his prior employment with a veterans service organization might affect his ability to manage and lead VA. He responded directly and openly to all questions, including dozens of written questions submitted before and after the hearing, and displayed detailed understanding of various VA programs as well as a clear commitment to addressing the many problem areas that confront VA. He understands the critical nature of VA's budget and assured members that he will be deeply involved in the development of the President's budget requests and that he will not hesitate to pursue additional resources that he believes would be necessary for VA to carry out its mission. I have no doubts about his ability to function as an independent manager of the Department—he demonstrated a spirit of authority and independence during his confirmation hearing.

Mr. President, Jesse Brown's confirmation as Secretary of Veterans Affairs is the first and most important step in putting President Clinton's stamp on VA. Tomorrow our committee will have a hearing on the President's nominee to be the VA's Deputy Secretary, Hershel Gober. I anticipate prompt action on his nomination as well and I look forward to receiving nominations for the other top management positions at VA so that the full team can be assembled and we can get on with the business of meeting the needs of America's veterans, their dependents, and survivors.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF MIKE ESPY

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, today we will be voting to confirm Congressman MIKE ESPY as the next Secretary of Agriculture. I have worked with MIKE ESPY in the House of Representatives and will support his confirmation as Secretary of Agriculture.

I would like to thank the distinguished majority leader, Mr. MITCHELL and the distinguished Republican leader, Mr. DOLE, for the timely scheduling of this vote and the cooperative spirit shown by the Agriculture Committee, Chairman LEAHY and Mr. LUGAR, and all the members of the Agriculture Committee. It is essential that we have continuity at the Department of Agriculture and having the Secretary of Agriculture in position early will facilitate this.

Due to previous commitments in Idaho, I was unable to attend the confirmation hearing of Congressman ESPY. I have noted several of the comments made by Mr. ESPY at that hearing and would like to make some remarks on several issues.

I was delighted with the commitment of Mr. ESPY to have a Department of Agriculture that represents the entire country. Much of my home State of Idaho has a dry, arid climate. This dictates a unique approach to agriculture, very different from the wet, warm Mississippi agriculture. I join with other Senators in inviting the new Secretary of Agriculture to visit other parts of the country to become familiar with the diversity.

Environmental issues are daily on the minds of farmers and ranchers of this Nation. Individual rights and property rights must always be foremost in our minds as decisions are made regarding wetlands, endangered species, utilization of the natural resources of the Federal lands, and other such issues. The pledge by Mr. ESPY to defend individual farmers on such matters is reassuring.

Mr. President, it was refreshing to learn that Mr. ESPY not only considers the health of American agriculture dependent upon trade but that, no deal is better than a bad deal, regarding trade. I have serious concerns regarding the North American Free-Trade Agreement as it relates to sugar, Canadian rail subsidies, price transparency, end-use certificates, and such. I was pleased to know that Mr. ESPY was intent in working out the trade problems, specifically as related to GATT and NAFTA.

Mr. President, I was also impressed by the commitment of Mr. ESPY that he supported reorganization initiatives taken by Secretary Madigan and he pledged to move quickly to reorganize and streamline the Department of Agriculture, at all levels, in order to make it more efficient. This is a laudable goal and there is not a person in this country who has had to deal with that, or any department of government, who would not support such action. We must also keep in mind, however, that improved service must accompany any effort to increase efficiency and reduce cost.

In order for American agriculture to be able to take full advantage of the experience and expertise of MIKE ESPY, he must be surrounded with Under and Assistant Secretaries with similar commitments to improve agriculture through more efficient and responsive service, not simply reduced cost. I am anxious to see the names of those to fill the several Senate-confirmed positions that will compliment the USDA team.

There will be many tugs and pulls on the budget in the coming months and years. I would also caution Mr. ESPY that the USDA budget review be based upon the needs of agriculture first.

I look forward to working with Mr. ESPY and the others he brings together at the Department of Agriculture.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF HENRY CISNEROS

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I rise today to recommend to the Senate Henry Cisneros to be Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. As I told my colleagues when I introduced Henry to the Banking Committee at the hearing on his nomination, I have known him since he was at Texas A&M University.

Henry Cisneros has served Texas in various capacities, including city manager of my hometown of Bryan, and city councilman and later mayor of San Antonio. I know that his leadership at HUD will equal the record of service at those previous posts. Henry will bring a wealth of experience to the job of HUD Secretary, including service as president of the League of Cities and active involvement in urban programs while mayor of San Antonio.

One objective of Federal housing policy has been to transform public housing into a community asset and to promote private ownership as a way of accomplishing this goal. I believe Henry's past involvement with public housing initiatives, his experience with local government, and with one of our Nation's largest cities all qualify him to serve as President Clinton's HUD Secretary.

I am happy to support the nomination of Henry Cisneros to be Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. I hope the Senate approves his nomination unanimously.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF ROBERT REICH

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, President Clinton promised Americans change and innovation in government and through his nomination of Robert Reich to be Secretary of Labor he has delivered. Achieving the goal of renewed and continued economic growth and prosperity begins with rebuilding our economy at its foundation by investing in our workers. No one understands the importance of putting people first better than Robert Reich. He wrote the book.

The appointment of Mr. Reich, one of President Clinton's top economic advisors during the recent campaign, is significant because it speaks to the importance of American workers in the formation of the new administration's economic policy. As the American economy makes its difficult transition to the global marketplace, many painful challenges face our workers through labor-saving technologies and the permanent elimination of jobs in industries such as the defense industry. Mr. Reich understands that for the United States to successfully compete in the global economy, investment in our work force is essential. Without well-trained, well-educated, healthy workers, there is little prospect of long-term economic growth.

In Bob Reich our Nation will benefit from a Labor Secretary who will get America looking to the future again. His vision for a more competitive work force includes greater cooperation between management and labor organizations. It includes building career paths for the 75 percent of our young people who do not complete 4 years of college. Mr. Reich understands that good jobs not only mean good wages, but also proper health and child care, safe working conditions, and the eradication of all types of discrimination in the workplace.

Mr. Reich's long-established commitment to retraining and aiding workers caught in the transition to a global economy is a refreshing and badly needed change from the policies of the last 12 years. I eagerly await the progressive leadership Secretary Reich will bring to the Department of Labor.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF DONNA SHALALA

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to offer strong support for President Clinton's nomination of Dr. Donna Shalala as Secretary of Health and Human Services. Her demonstrated commitment and concern for children raises hope for the Nation that our Government will at last be responsive to the pressing needs of today's families. Moreover, Dr. Shalala's outstanding record as a manager of complex institutions—such as the Nation's fourth largest university—makes her a particularly strong candidate to run the organization that consumes 40 percent of the Federal budget.

Dr. Shalala has shown unparalleled dedication in every endeavor she has undertaken—from her beginnings as a Peace Corps volunteer, to her work at Housing and Urban Development, to her term as the youngest president in the history of Hunter College—and, finally, to Wisconsin, where she accomplished the nearly impossible task of exceeding university fundraising goals while simultaneously cutting costs. Each institution she touched is a better place for her having passed through it.

As chair of the Children's Defense Fund, Dr. Shalala recognizes, as I do, that unless we improve the lives of millions of children in this country, the future of our Nation will indeed be bleak. For it is not just a matter of family values, nor of our obvious moral obligation to protect our most vulnerable citizens—it is also a question of our ability to survive and compete as a world-class power in the global marketplace of the 21st century.

As chairman of the Labor Subcommittee on Children, Family, Drugs and Alcoholism, I would emphasize the need for HHS to address the issues confronting children and families, for they are truly our most precious resource. Government cannot substitute for the family, but we can give families the tools they need to remain strong and to nurture their children. I fully support the new administration's ideal of investing upfront in our people, in order to ensure a productive work force for the future and to reduce long-term dependency on public assistance programs.

At this time in our history, children are our poorest citizens—with one out of every five children living below the poverty level. For children in female-headed households, the rate is staggering: every other child lives in poverty. In the past 20 years, we have seen the numbers of children in poverty increase by nearly 100 percent.

Poverty brings with it all manner of related problems for children and families, which the Secretary of HHS must address. Lack of prenatal care, premature and low-birth weight infants, and limited availability of pediatric care and immunizations are just a few of the health-related issues we face. Dr. Shalala understands that urgency of these issues, stating, for example, that full funding for immunization programs will be one of her first priorities. Such support is especially critical at this time in history, when barely more than half of all U.S. children are fully immunized, and we are seeing some diseases returning that had been virtually eradicated in the past.

The health and welfare problems of U.S. families translate into a full 35 percent of kindergarteners entering school in 1991 unprepared to learn. The Head Start Program has shown marked success in improving poor children's chances of success. In 1990 I sponsored the Head Start reauthorization that, for the first time, laid a blueprint for funding levels that would permit every eligible child to participate. Yet 65 percent of the children eligible for Head Start still are not being served. President Clinton and Dr. Shalala have expressed support for fully funding Head Start, and I look forward to working with the administration to finally realize that dream.

Working parents also are struggling to make ends meet, and they often lack access to adequate, affordable child care. In 1990, the Labor Committee led the effort to enact a landmark child care law that created a new direct service grant program and a substantial expansion in Federal tax credits available to working families with children. I am confident we will be able to work with Dr. Shalala to implement a strong and coordinated administrative structure for this and other child care programs, and to correct deficiencies in the Bush administration's initial regulations.

Finally, Mr. President, no one doubts that our health care system needs reform. We need a comprehensive health care policy that preserves the quality of our current system while addressing the problems of spiraling costs and increased numbers of uninsured individuals. I am especially concerned that our health care policy meet the needs of children, who represent a disproportionate number of the uninsured. The health status of our children is declining; for example, the United States ranks 20th in the world on infant mortality. President Clinton and Dr. Shalala are committed to reforming our health care system, and I look forward to working with them toward a consensus for a comprehensive reform proposal.

In conclusion, I strongly support the nomination of this accomplished, dedicated professional to lead this powerful organization. Her creative leadership skills are sorely needed for the arduous tasks we must tackle if we are to make this country work again.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF HENRY G. CISNEROS

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today in strong support of the nomination of Henry G. Cisneros for the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

Our Nation, Mr. President, faces no greater challenge than the revitalization of our cities. Too many of our urban residents are out of work and struggling to make ends meet. Additionally, that struggle is taking place in neighborhoods with desperate problems—neighborhoods where gun battles, burned-out houses, and hungry children are a part of everyday life.

We must adopt a comprehensive strategy to deal with these problems and we need a strong and skilled Secretary of Housing and Urban Development to implement that strategy. Henry Cisneros will provide that leadership.

Henry's years of public service demonstrate an understanding of the diverse views and ideas emanating from our communities, and an ability to forge those thoughts into a coherent vision. As mayor of San Antonio, he brought community organizations, local officials, and businesses together and focused everyone on the need to create jobs and improve living conditions. That approach to urban issues will serve Henry well as he works with Congress, Governors, mayors, and citizens to fight urban decay.

And Henry will hit the ground running. During his confirmation hearing, he outlined three main goals: revitalizing our urban areas, working to expand housing opportunities, and overhauling the management systems at the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Each of these goals is critically important. As I mentioned earlier, our cities have become difficult and dangerous places to live. But there is cause for optimism. Because our urban residents have not given up hope. Instead, with the help of churches and community organizations, they are forming block patrols, operating day care centers, rehabilitating housing, and developing small businesses. They are fighting to reclaim their neighborhoods, and we must help them.

Similarly, Henry's second goal—the expansion of housing opportunities—is also fundamental. Far too many of our citizens are living in substandard housing. Additionally, it has become increasingly difficult for middle- and low-income families to purchase a home. Clearly, we must make it easier for these families to obtain quality housing.

Of course, it will be impossible to improve our cities and expand housing opportunities if the Department of Housing and Urban Development is not managed effectively. Consequently, Henry's commitment to reforming the Department is encouraging. He also stressed the need to make Federal programs work together and in coordination with local efforts. That approach will help ensure that tax dollars are used as effectively as possible.

I was also impressed by Henry's familiarity with, and concern for, the problems facing Connecticut's cities. In response to my question concerning the need to address the problems of smaller cities like Bridgeport, New Haven, Hartford, and New London, he pledged to review the formulas that HUD uses to allocate funds and to ensure that these cities would be treated fairly.

In short, Henry's skills and energy make him an ideal candidate for Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. Working with him, we can provide comprehensive help to the men, women, and children who are struggling to survive in our cities. I strongly support his nomination and I look forward to working with him in the years ahead.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF ROBERT REICH

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I am pleased today to rise in strong support of the nomination of Robert Reich to serve as Secretary of Labor.

Mr. President, as the response to the inauguration yesterday demonstrates, there is, across our great country, a feeling that our Nation today is on the brink of great change—change which will assure a quality education for all children; access to health care for all Americans; a cleaner environment; renewal in our Nation's cities; and safe, good jobs for American workers.

But achieving significant change will not be easy. Our Nation is confronted today with a host of problems from a huge Federal deficit to an anemic economy. Too many children go to school hungry and too few graduate from high school with marketable skills; 9.2 million Americans are currently looking for work; 1.3 million manufacturing jobs have been lost in the United States since 1989. In my State alone, we have lost 170,000 jobs in the last several years, many of these losses are concentrated in defense-related industries. While I have faith our economy will emerge from this recession, it will be a fundamentally different economy.

As a nation, we must develop and adopt a comprehensive strategy to help America and American workers meet the challenges of our changed economy. And I believe that Robert Reich has the unique talents to provide our Nation with the leadership to meet this challenge.

Robert Reich, born in Pennsylvania and educated at Dartmouth, Oxford, and Yale, has a distinguished record of Government service at the Federal Trade Commission during the Carter administration. He is, however, much more widely known for his academic work in the field of political economics and his brilliant observations on the American and world economy. In his most recent book, "The Work of Nations," Reich argues eloquently that Government should invest in its infrastructure and its most precious asset—its people—to improve its competitive position.

As Secretary of Labor, Reich promises to put these ideas to work and to turn the Department of Labor into the Department of the American work force. I am hopeful that we here in the Senate can start him off on the right foot with early passage of the Family and Medical Leave Act, which I introduced this morning. With close to two-thirds of women with young children working, we need a national policy to assure that workers do not have to choose between their jobs and their families. But family and medical leave is only the beginning—there is job training and education for tomorrow's economy, free trade talks, workplace safety issues and more.

Mr. President, there is much to be done and I can think of no candidate more qualified to take on this challenge than Robert Reich. I urge my colleagues to join me in support of his nomination.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF RICHARD RILEY

Mr. DODD. I rise today to express my strong support for the nomination of Gov. Richard Riley to serve as Secretary of Education.

Mr. President, I believe it would be nearly impossible to find an individual as qualified or with a record of such success in education reform as Richard Riley.

As Governor of South Carolina from 1978-1986, Richard Riley pushed through a package of visionary education reforms that today make South Carolina one of the leading States in our Nation in education reform. Governor Riley overcame the objections of State legislators and passed a $240 million educational reform package, which included higher academic standards for promotion and graduation, better assessments, improved teacher training, salaries and accountability, and upper level course work at all high schools.

Indeed, our new President Bill Clinton, well-known for his interest, expertise and involvement in education reform, called Governor Riley, his mentor in education matters. I am pleased to support his nomination and believe we are truly privileged that Governor Riley has agreed to take on this task and serve our Nation as the Secretary of Education.

And we will need Governor Riley's many talents. The challenges that we face in improving education in America are clearly great. Too many children go to school hungry and too few graduate from high school with marketable skills. Too many student loans fall into default and too few minority students seek higher education. Even in my home State of Connecticut, one out of every five children under the age of 6 lives in poverty. In 1991, over 3,000 of these young children lived in homeless shelters and 94,000 had no health insurance. Twenty-two percent of the students in Bridgeport, CT drop out of school.

Just last week, I had a letter from the New Haven Board of Education about the Clinton Avenue School—a magnet school dedicated to preparing students for the multicultural workplace of the 21st century.

No one would be surprised that a school board would write their Senator about their magnet school. But this letter says much about the conditions of schools in America today. The school board wrote asking for help—they asked, not for fiber optics or an advanced film lab for their magnet school, but instead, for help in preparing numerous leaks in the classroom ceilings, for paint for water-damaged walls, for a library, for separate bathrooms for the boys and girls, and for text books with bindings intact. Too many schools across our Nation have this same wish list.

Buildings are only part of the story—many of our Nation's children are badly in need of help. Our Nation's first educational goal states that by the year 2000, all children will start school ready to learn. Yet, in 1991, 35 percent of kindergarten students came to school unprepared to begin learning, according to a survey by the Carnegie Foundation. In some States, as many as one out of five children have to repeat first grade.

We must also renew our commitment to equity in education and equal access to a quality education for all children. It is clear that inequities exist across town lines in my State and in others across the Nation. With this trend toward growing inequality, our Nation's commitment to equity in education is being brought increasingly into question.

The dreams and hopes of so many Americans rest in our educational system. Learning is truly the ladder of economic opportunity in our Nation. But it little resembles a ladder for too many of our young people—young people who have discovered, in the decaying walls of their schools, in the classrooms plagued with violence, that the rungs on their ladder are missing.

Mr. President, I can think of no issue more critical to our Nation's future than the quality of education for our children. And I can think of no candidate more qualified to take on this challenge than Richard Riley. I urge my colleague to join me in support of his nomination.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF LEON PANETTA

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today in strong support of President

Clinton's nomination of my colleague and friend, LEON PANETTA, to head the Office of Management and Budget.

No one questions LEON's qualifications, although some may understandably question LEON's judgment in taking this job. He represents one of the most beautiful districts in the country, a chunk of California that includes Monterrey and Big Sur. I know he loves to go home on the weekends to his house in the Carmel Valley to tend his walnut trees and play his piano. Yet he is giving all that up to head an Agency that is generally less popular than the grinch that stole Christmas.

In taking the OMB job, LEON is, I know, motivated by the same deep sense of duty he has demonstrated throughout his career in public service. After graduating from law school at Santa Clara in 1963, LEON served in the Army for 2 years, and then as Legislative aide and counsel to California Senator Thomas Kuchel, where he helped craft key civil rights legislation.

In 1969, LEON was named Director of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare's Office of Civil Rights. His job was to enforce civil rights legislation and hasten the desegregation of public schools throughout the Nation.

Negotiating agreements with school boards and elected officials intractably opposed to integration was not easy work, but LEON was sustained always by his steadfast belief in the equality of all Americans. In 1970, his deep commitment to justice led him to resign his post, after it became apparent to him that others in the administration aimed to slow down faithful execution of civil rights laws.

LEON returned home to California and practiced law for several years, before running successfully for the House of Representatives in 1976. In the 16 years since then, LEON has served his constituents with distinction, and has grown to be widely respected and admired for his compassion, his knowledge, and his effectiveness.

His compassion has been evident in his work on hunger issues during his tenure in the House. He has long supported food and nutrition programs to banish hunger from America. Just last year, he pushed a children's initiative in the wake of the Los Angeles riots which included significant provisions to attack hunger among our Nation's young people.

LEON's thoughtfulness, knowledge, and hard work were on constant display during his past 4 years as chairman of the House Budget Committee. While many have sought to skirt the deficit issue, LEON has always been forthright, both about the scope of the problem, and about the tough choices that are required to get our fiscal house in order. Last year, while others sought delay and proposed half-measures, LEON PANETTA was busy offering a real plan to tackle the problem.

The challenges that face the Clinton administration are substantial, and in no case will the going be tougher than with the deficit. To do nothing is to place our children's future further at risk. But making real progress will not be easy, because it will require sacrifice that is shared fairly and equitably by all Americans.

LEON PANETTA is the right choice to help President Clinton lead the charge on this issue. He is a deeply committed public servant who understands the intricacies of budgeting and the budget process. He is a person of integrity who is dedicated to finding real solutions and making real progress. He is a warm and gifted man who recognizes that our Government must be leaner, not meaner.

LEON is an outstanding addition to the Clinton economic team. He will be a very real asset to the administration and the country in the months and years ahead. I look forward to working with him to address the deficit and other issues, and I urge my colleagues to join with me in supporting his nomination.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF MICKEY KANTOR

Mr. HOLLINGS. I am pleased today to enthusiastically support Mr. Mickey Kantor for U.S. Trade Representative. As America faces new economic and social challenges which profoundly impact our future as a world power, it is necessary that the position of U.S. Trade Representative be manned with a skilled negotiator willing to formulate a tough, new trade policy. In Mickey Kantor, we have such a candidate.

As his long and impressive resume reveals, Mr. Kantor has repeatedly achieved success in finding the elusive middle ground required to facilitate agreement and stimulate cooperation among conflicting interests. With experience that spans the fields of energy, agriculture and aviation, Mr. Kantor has proven his skills as a zealous, artful negotiator. This is exactly the kind of person we need in this job.

I had an opportunity recently to meet with Mr. Kantor. We talked at length about trade policy and I am convinced that Mr. Kantor has the resolve to create an aggressive American trade policy. He will serve this country well, as he brings his formidable bargaining skills to the international table, as U.S. Trade Representative.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF RICHARD RILEY

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I urge the Senate to approve the nomination of Richard Riley as Secretary of Education in the Clinton administration.

On Tuesday, January 12, 1993, the Labor and Human Resources Committee, of which I am Chair, held a hearing on this nomination. At the hearing he displayed a complete grasp of the difficult issues he must address as Secretary of Education. On Thursday, January 14, 1993, the committee voted unanimously to recommend Governor Riley's nomination to the Senate.

Governor Riley has a strong record in education and did a wonderful job leading the education reform efforts in South Carolina. Unafraid to tackle the difficult issues, Governor Riley was a tireless advocate for education, crisscrossing the State, explaining the need to prepare South Carolina's students for the 21st century.

The results of Governor Riley's reform effort, The South Carolina Education Improvement Act, was a multifaceted program that became nationally renowned for boosting student achievement. Among its accomplishments:

SAT scores in South Carolina increased faster than anywhere else in the country in the last 7 years.

The achievement gap between black students and white students has narrowed.

More high school graduates are going to college than ever before.

More students are taking advanced placement examinations.

Job placements for vocational education students have increased.

Teacher salaries have increased.

I asked the Congressional Research Service to report on Governor Riley's education record in South Carolina, and that report is attached to this statement.

Governor Riley understands that real change requires not a single simple solution, but a complex remaking of the whole system. He also understands that we will not get meaningful reform without greater resources, and he successfully convinced the voters of South Carolina of the need to raise the sales tax by 1 cent and to dedicate those revenues for schools.

I am confident that Governor Riley will be equally successful as Secretary Riley, and bring to the national level the same excellence and success in education that characterized his tenure in South Carolina. We look forward to working with him on transforming the Nation's schools.

I urge the Senate to approve his nomination unanimously.

I ask unanimous consent the attached Congressional Research Service Report be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the report was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CONGRESSIONAL RESEARCH SERVICE,

Washington, DC, January 4, 1993.

To: Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources, Senator Edward M. Kennedy, Chair.

From: Wayne Riddle, Specialist in Education Finance, Education and Public Welfare Division.

Subject: Education Policies in South Carolina During the Tenure of Richard Riley as Governor.

This memorandum was prepared in response to your request of December 29, 1992, for a brief review and analysis of the education policies and legislation promoted by former South Carolina Governor Richard Riley, President-elect Clinton's designee for U.S. Secretary of Education.

Mr. Riley was Governor of South Carolina from 1978-1986. While several pieces of education legislation were adopted in South Carolina during this period, the most comprehensive and noteworthy of these was the South Carolina Education Improvement Act of 1984 (EIA). The EIA was adopted in response to a proposal made by Governor Riley,¹ and was one of the earliest efforts to adopt comprehensive, statewide education reform in the period following publication of A Nation at Risk in 1983. This proposal and the subsequent legislation were organized on the basis of 7 "initiatives." These initiatives are listed below, along with the most significant of the specific provisions related to each theme:²

Raising student performance by increasing academic standards—course requirements for high school graduation were increased; passing grades in four academic courses were required for students to participate in extracurricular activities; it was specified that the school day should be 6 hours (excluding lunch); all local educational agencies (LEAs) were required to provide advanced placement (AP) courses in high school; special programs were to be provided for gifted and talented students; pupil discipline was to be enhanced through establishment of "clear rules of behavior," extra law enforcement officers to enforce drug laws in schools, and greater enforcement of school attendance requirements; higher order problem solving skills were to be emphasized in school curricula; kindergarten attendance was to become mandatory (unless a waiver is granted); African-American history and South Carolina history coursework were to be required for all pupils; job placement standards were to be established for vocational education programs; services to certain groups of disabled pupils were to be expanded; and a study was to be conducted of vocational and technical education in South Carolina.

Strengthening the teaching and testing of the basic skills—a mandatory basic skills examination was to be administered to pupils in the 10th grade, with passage of it required for high school graduation; stricter pupil promotion policies were to be established; half-day, voluntary preschool programs were to be offered to 4-year old children with "predicted significant readiness deficiencies"; State-funded compensatory and remedial instruction programs were to be provided to pupils in grades 1-6 with low achievement levels; pupil-teacher ratios were to be reduced in certain mathematics and language arts classes; the State's school finance program was to be modified to provide additional funds on the basis of pupils who are in compensatory, handicapped, or vocational programs; and alcohol and drug abuse education and treatment programs were to be established for students.

Elevating the teaching profession by strengthening teacher training, evaluation, and compensation—postsecondary student loans for prospective teachers were to be provided, with repayment canceled in return for service; conditional, temporary certification was to be authorized for individuals to teach in areas of critical need; teacher salaries were increased (to be equal to the projected average for the Southeastern States); performance incentive pay was authorized for teachers; standards for approval of teacher training programs in the State's colleges and universities were to be raised; inservice training for currently employed teachers was to be expanded, particularly at Centers of Teaching Excellence; teacher evaluation procedures were to be established; teacher recruitment efforts would be expanded; and grants to individual teachers to implement innovative techniques were authorized.

Improving leadership, management, and fiscal efficiency of schools at all levels—an Assessment Center Program was established to evaluate potential principals, as well as train and evaluate them; expansion of inservice training for school administrators; performance standards and evaluation system for school superintendents and principals were to be developed; performance incentive awards for principals were authorized; and standards for approval of administrator preparation programs at colleges and universities were to be raised.

Implementing strict quality controls and rewarding productivity—performance incentive grants for schools and LEAs were authorized, and awards to be made on the basis of such factors as achievement test score increases, improved attendance, or increased parental participation; competitive grants to LEAs for the implementation of instructional innovations were authorized; annual improvement reports were required to be prepared for each school, such reports to be focused "on factors found by research to be effective in improving schools," and to be prepared by school improvement councils that include representatives of parents, teachers, community representatives and, for high schools, students; a Public Accountability Division was established in the State education agency (SEA), to monitor implementation of the EIA and report annually to the public; a select committee of State legislators, the State superintendent of education, plus the governor and lieutenant governor was created, to make recommendations on implementation of the EIA; and intervention by the SEA in LEAs that do not meet minimum performance standards was authorized.

Create more effective partnerships among the schools, parents, community and business—parental involvement in the schools was to be increased, through such mechanisms as school improvement councils (see above), regular conferences of parents and teachers, and parenting skills instruction; business, volunteer, and civic or professional associations involvement in the schools was encouraged; and a Public Education Foundation to support exemplary or innovative programs was to be established.

Providing school buildings conducive to improved student learning—assistance would be provided for the renovation and repair of school facilities, or to subsidize the repayment of school construction revenue bonds.

The costs of implementing this legislation were to be paid by an increase in the State's general sales tax from 4 to 5 percent, which was included in the EIA. By 1988-89, this earmarked tax was raising approximately $270 million annually for EIA activities. The increased funding has been focused largely on increasing teacher salaries, remedial instruction, school construction, and gifted/talented programs.

While the EIA was quite broad and reflected many of the popular themes of school reform efforts in several States in the early and middle 1980s, certain consistent, functional themes may be identified. These themes include:

² The specific language used to describe these themes is taken from the legislation.

Increased services and resources for disadvantaged children;

Enhanced involvement of parents, business, and the community in the schools;

Extensive reporting requirements and other forms of accountability;

Increased pay, higher standards, and expanded evaluation of teachers and administrators;

A variety of financial incentives for school staff;

Higher standards for pupil achievement and behavior;

Expansion of kindergarten and prekindergarten services;

While some provisions addressed higher order skills, there was an overall emphasis on basic skills instruction and assessment for pupils; and Expanded programs for gifted and talented students.

EVIDENCE ON IMPLEMENTATION AND EFFECTS OF THE EIA

As with any single influence on educational performance, no matter how comprehensive in legislative terms, it is impossible to precisely specify the effect of the EIA on the educational system of South Carolina. Nevertheless, one of the accountability measures required under the EIA—a series of annual reports entitled What is the Penny Buying for South Carolina?, by the SEA's Division of Public Accountability—has attempted to catalog a wide variety of direct, and possible indirect, effects of the Act.³ Evidence on the effects of the EIA that is cited in these reports includes:

Increases in Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores between 1984 and 1989 that were greater than for any other State (see further discussion below);

A 7 percentage point increase in the proportion of high school graduates who directly enter college;

A doubling of the number of high school students taking advanced placement examinations;

Positive responses by teachers, students, and the public in a variety of opinion surveys;

Increased enrollment in programs for gifted and talented students;

Increased placement of vocational education graduates in jobs related to their training;

Increased percentages of 10th grade students passing the mandatory basic skills examination;

Reductions in the proportion of pupils determined to require compensatory instruction;

Increased overall scores, and reduced gap between African-American and white student averages, on the national Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills (CTBS), a national norm-referenced, standardized test given to pupils at several grade levels;

A tie with one other State for the greatest percentage increase in teacher salaries between 1981-82 and 1986-87;

Increased teacher recruitment;

A 13 percent decrease in private school enrollment between 1983-84 and 1988-89, while public school enrollment marginally increased; and

Large numbers of individual school affiliations with businesses, civic organizations, and individual volunteers;

In addition to the report described above, there are limited sources of information on educational trends in South Carolina that might indirectly reflect the impact of the EIA. It must be emphasized that all of these indicators are quite imperfect as measures of educational quality, although analyses of their specific limitations are beyond the scope of this memorandum. Further, some of these indicators—e.g., increased expenditures for public elementary and secondary education—may be viewed positively by some analysts, but negatively by others (i.e., as "unnecessary" public taxation and spending). These indicators include:

Average scores for South Carolina students on the SAT rose from a total of 780 in 1981 to 832 in 1991, an increase of 52 points, while national average scores rose from 890 to 896, an increase of only 6 points. However, the South Carolina scores are still well below the national average.

South Carolina's average per pupil expenditure for public elementary and secondary education rose from $2,183 in 1983-84, 47th among the 50 States plus the District of Columbia, to $4,088 in 1989-90, with a ranking of 39th. Thus, relative expenditures per pupil rose substantially for South Carolina, but are still well below the national average.

Average teacher salaries in South Carolina rose from $17,384 in 1983-84, 46th among the 50 States plus the District of Columbia, to $28,301 in 1990-91, with a ranking of 34th. Again, this represents a large increase in ranking, but teacher salaries remain substantially below the national average.

POSSIBLE CRITICISMS OF THE EIA

As with all education reform legislation, certain criticisms have been, or might be, made of the EIA by some observers. Several of these points reflect primarily the passage of several years since enactment of the EIA; over this time, many educational reform priorities have arisen that generally did not receive substantial attention in 1984. Please keep in mind that one observer's "negative" criticism, as listed below, may be another observer's "positive" comment on the EIA. These potential criticisms might include the following.

The EIA generally placed greater emphasis on basic skills instruction and assessment than higher order skills. In particular, there was little emphasis on making curriculum content more challenging.

The EIA relied heavily on conventional forms of pupil assessment (standardized, norm-referenced tests) that are currently widely criticized. There was little emphasis on increasing the quality of pupil assessments.

Some have expressed concern that the various financial incentives in the EIA have led to "excessive" amounts of "teaching to the test" in South Carolina, or that the incentive programs are unfairly administered.

The EIA contained no provisions regarding school choice, school based management, or regulatory flexibility.

While most EIA provisions have been implemented, funds have been inadequate to substantially implement some EIA provisions, especially a provision calling for reduced pupil-teacher ratios and grants for school facility construction and renovation.

While a variety of spending levels and achievement measures have increased significantly in South Carolina since 1984, the State still is well below the national average on most such measures.

While South Carolina is not among the States usually deemed to have the greatest disparities among localities in education funding, and some EIA provisions might have indirectly served to reduce finance disparities, the EIA did not directly provide to greater school finance equalization.

High school dropout rates have not significantly declined, according to the measure used by the South Carolina SEA.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF ROBERT REICH

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I am pleased to speak on behalf of the nomination of Robert Reich to be Secretary of Labor. I have known Mr. Reich for many years and believe that he is an excellent choice for this post.

On January 7, 1993, the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources, which I am privileged to chair, held a hearing on Mr. Reich's nomination. At this hearing, Mr. Reich displayed a superb command of the many complex issues that he must address as Secretary of Labor.

His facility with these issues stems from a distinguished career in both academe and government.

His academic background is impressive. He studied at Dartmouth College, then at Oxford University where he was a Rhodes Scholar, and finally at Yale Law School. For the last decade, he has lectured at the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University where he has been a prolific author and a popular teacher.

Mr. Reich has also had extensive experience in the Federal Government as the Director of Policy, Planning, and Evaluation at the Federal Trade Commission and as the Assistant to the Solicitor General of the United States.

Mr. President, all Members of this body know that in the last two decades we have seen great changes in the economy and in the way Americans work. We have learned that in the global economy, nations which invest in the training and the education of their work force outperform those nations that do not.

President Clinton has repeatedly said that if we are to prosper as a nation, we must invest in the education and training of our people. I know that from his confirmation hearing and from my review of his writings that Bob Reich shares this vision.

In his testimony before the Labor Committee, Mr. Reich laid out an impressive agenda for the Department. If confirmed, he pledged to ensure that the Department of Labor is the Department of the American Work Force—dedicated to nurturing our most important national asset. The overarching goal is not only more jobs for our citizens, but higher wage jobs, and business organizations which foster such jobs by continuously upgrading their work forces and providing safe and rewarding work for all their employees.

Mr. President, this is a distinguished appointment to head this vitally important agency. I look forward to working with Mr. Reich if the Senate approves his nomination and urge my colleagues to do so unanimously.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF LEON PANETTA

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, in choosing Cabinet members that look like America and that are eminently qualified to manage the Government, President Clinton could not have made a finer choice than LEON PANETTA to be the Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

The son of Italian immigrant parents, Mr. PANETTA served 2 years in the Army and later worked in the Nixon administration as Director of the Office for Civil Rights. Since 1977, Mr. PANETTA has represented his home district in the Congress. The last 4 years he has very ably served as the chairman of the House Budget Committee.

Mr. PANETTA has also been a leader in attacking the problems of hunger in this country, an issue I hope will continue to be a priority of his at OMB. He has been a leader in the fight for increased investment in the Women, Infants and Children feeding program and he introduced the House version of the Mickey Leland Hunger Relief Act. His support on the Budget Committee has also been essential in the ongoing effort to combat hunger.

During his stewardship of the Budget Committee, Mr. PANETTA has earned the respect of the Nation and his fellow Members of Congress for his detailed knowledge of the budget process and his clear vision of the fiscal challenges that face this country. The Director of the OMB, more than any job in the Cabinet, demands leadership that tells it like it is. The integrity with which Mr. PANETTA has distinguished himself as Budget Committee chairman will truly be appreciated by the American people who are tired of the smoke and mirror gimmicks of the last decade.

Mr. PANETTA will face the greatest economic obstacle this country has faced since the Great Depression: getting control of the escalating budget deficit. Last year in his fight against a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, Mr. PANETTA outlined different budget scenarios that would lead us to a balanced budget. He knows the tough choices that have to be made and that budget trickery only creates problems. He knows that cutting the fat in the Federal bureaucracy—and there is plenty—will need to be a top priority.

Getting this economy growing at a healthy rate will require a shift in Federal spending policies. Mr. PANETTA understands the need to invest in programs that will ensure better economic performance. Investing in public infrastructure, in education and job training, in preventive medicine will build the foundation for growth. This Mr. PANETTA understands.

Mr. President, to deal with the challenges of the budget deficit and the investment deficit, President Clinton has tapped the most qualified person to head the OMB.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF WARREN CHRISTOPHER

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I rise to commend President Clinton for his choice of Warren Christopher to be Secretary of State. I am pleased that he has been confirmed by the Senate.

Let us use this opportunity to demonstrate once again that partisanship has no place in foreign policy. The President has chosen well. Mr. Christopher is superbly qualified for this critical post, and I confidently anticipate that he will be an outstanding Secretary of State.

Warren Christopher began public service in 1949 as a clerk for Justice William O. Douglas at the Supreme Court. He rapidly demonstrated his excellent legal and diplomatic skills. In 1965 he was appointed as vice chairman of the McCone Commission that investigated the 1965 Watts riots in Los Angeles and he coordinated the Federal response to racial turmoil in Chicago and Detroit as Deputy Attorney General during the Johnson administration.

Mr. Christopher's adroitness and resolve while handling these racial incidents established his reputation as a troubleshooter of the first rank. Mayor Tom Bradley asked him to head the commission that examined the Los Angeles Police Department after the crisis there last year. Once again, he performed a difficult and sensitive task admirably and with consummate skill.

Mr. Christopher is best known for his distinguished service as Deputy Secretary of State during the Carter administration. Always discreet, measured, deliberate, and dignified, Mr. Christopher adeptly negotiated treaties and championed human rights abroad. His mastery of negotiation culminated with this successful diplomacy that resulted in the release of American hostages from Iran in 1981.

At his confirmation hearing, Mr. Christopher laid out his views on the basis of U.S. foreign policy under the Clinton administration. I was particularly impressed with two aspects of his policy objectives.

First, Mr. Christopher believes in diplomacy and negotiation as the preferred means of resolving international disputes. He stated that the United States "must apply new dispute resolution techniques and forms of international arbitration to the conflicts that plague the world." With Warren Christopher as our chief negotiator, I believe we will see diplomacy become the primary method of resolving international conflict.

The United Nations will continue to play a major role in deterring aggression, relieving suffering and keeping the peace. Mr. Christopher has pledged to work with the United Nations to ensure that it has the means to carry out the formidable tasks confronting it, including ensuring that the United States pays its obligations.

Second, Mr. Christopher recognizes that our foreign aid program must coordinate with other aspects of our foreign policy to reflect our commitment to the spread of democracy and human rights and to serve more effectively as an instrument of our international economic and commercial interests. To help accomplish this, Mr. Christopher has advocated an overhaul of the Agency for International Development and streamlining the State Department. As hearings in my Foreign Operations Subcommittee and in other committees have amply demonstrated, a top to bottom overhaul of foreign aid is urgently needed.

I applaud Mr. Christopher for his commitment to aligning our foreign aid program with the realities of the post-cold war era. I look forward to working with him to examine the rationale and structure of our foreign aid program so that it responds to the challenges of the 21st century.

Warren Christopher brings exemplary skills in diplomacy, negotiation, management, and problem solving to the position of Secretary of State. These skills and his philosophies on U.S. foreign policy make him the right person for this difficult job during what will certainly be challenging times.

As chairman of the Foreign Operations Subcommittee, I look forward to working with Chris as Secretary of State.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF RICHARD RILEY

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I rise to support the nomination of Mr. Riley to be the Secretary of Education. President Clinton has made an excellent choice for his Secretary of Education.

Governor Riley has the vision, background, and record to put us on the right path of progress toward reaching the national education goals. He has demonstrated his abilities in South Carolina and he is ready to break new ground at the national level as well. He has the commitment and the energy to define the problem and shape the plan. This Nation is, indeed, fortunate that Richard Riley is available to lead our educational reform effort.

Governor Riley's long fight to reform education in South Carolina is a lesson in perseverance and coalition building. This was more than just a fight to convince the State legislature to adopt his legislation. Governor Riley built support across South Carolina city by city, almost parent by parent. He worked with business leaders pointing out that illiterate labor and unskilled employees made their businesses less competitive. He worked with teachers to increase their salaries but only in return for greater accountability. And, of course, he worked with the State legislature, member by member to have his reforms adopted.

The results of Governor Riley's leadership in his State on education are impressive:

Average per pupil expenditures for public elementary and secondary students rose from $2,183 in 1983-84 to $4,088 in 1989-90;

Teachers salaries have increased and teacher recruitment has improved. Teachers salaries rose from $17,384 in 1983-84 to $28,301 in 1990-91;

South Carolina's SAT scores have increased and enrollment has increased in programs for gifted and talented students; and Placement of vocational education graduates in jobs related to their training has increased.

Mr. President, Mr. Riley has had a brilliant career both in politics and in education. He is extremely well qualified to be the Secretary of Education.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF DONNA E. SHALALA

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, President Clinton has made an excellent choice in the nomination of Donna E. Shalala to head the Department of Health and Human Services.

At Dr. Shalala's confirmation hearings, she spoke in a strong and compassionate manner about addressing the AIDS crisis, the TB epidemic, the shortfall in the immunization program, and the need to address the inequities in areas of women's health. She strongly supported the need for continued and expanded disease prevention programs and the need to improve the quality of our rural health care system. She vigorously stressed the importance of reforming the health care system to reduce the growth rate of health care costs to a rate of growth similar to the rate of general economic growth. She pledged to work vigorously to reform the Nation's welfare system and certainly not least, very high on this Senator's priorities, she focused on the need to help our Nation's children.

Donna Shalala knows what must be done and I believe she can do it.

Dr. Shalala has had a long and notable career in public service which started as a U.S. Peace Corps volunteer in 1962. She has worked at the city, State, and Federal level in government; she has served as a teacher; an academic; and a university administrator; she had been the president of Hunter College in New York City and the chancellor of the University of Wisconsin at Madison. In her last job as chancellor of the University of Wisconsin, she managed an important state university with a budget of $1 billion. Donna Shalala has published dozens of books and articles and has served on a long and impressive list of foundations, forums, task forces, and commissions.

As the Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services, Donna Shalala will manage a department with more than 126,000 employees and a budget that covers 250 different categorical programs. The Department's budget of $590 billion representing almost 40 percent of the Federal Government is the world's third largest budget, smaller only than the entire Federal budget and the budget of Japan. The budget of the Department of Health and Human Services touches the lives of every American.

Mr. President, there is no Cabinet Secretary that faces as many challenges as does Donna Shalala at the Department of Health and Human Services. While she faces a monumental and important challenge, I can think of no one else better suited to the job. Donna Shalala is a tough manager. She is a person of immense intelligence and compassion who cares greatly about the issues that she faces. We are indeed fortunate to have a person of Donna Shalala's talent to serve as Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF ROBERT REICH

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I serve on the Labor and Human Resources Committee that approved Mr. Reich's nomination for Secretary of Labor on January 19. Let me just say a few words in support of his confirmation by the full Senate.

Bob Reich has been a tireless advocate of President Clinton's program of putting people first, and has eloquently stated the need for upgrading the skills, education, and training of our work force. As a nation, if we are to compete internationally, we must not forget those in our work force who are not college bound. Bob Reich has made the point that to reverse the trend toward lower wages, we need significantly greater investment in the development of our front line work force.

Bob Reich is one of our Nation's foremost political economists and he knows what needs to be done to transform America into a high wage, high-skilled jobs economy that will raise the standard of living and help our Nation effectively compete in the global marketplace.

Mr. Reich's nomination shows that the Clinton administration will give a high priority to creating more high-wage jobs that provide a good work environment. Greater attention will be focused on the 75 percent of our young people who do not complete 4 years of college. We can expect Bob Reich to take the lead in developing apprenticeship-type programs for our youth, which will improve school-to-work transition for the non-college educated.

Bob Reich has pledged to make significant progress toward coordination and consolidation of the various vocational training programs administered through several Federal agencies, which will provide convenient one-stop shopping for clients, and improve the efficiency and effectiveness of program operations. He has the ideas, the reputation, and the support of President Clinton to make this happen.

At Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government, Bob Reich lectured widely and authored many books that recognize the importance of investing in human capital by fully developing the skills and abilities of our frontline work force. His previous government experience includes service as Assistant to the Solicitor General in the Ford administration, and as Director of the Federal Trade Commission's policy planning staff.

Mr. President attention to work force issues will undoubtedly be vital for determining the standard of living for Americans as we approach the 21st century. Senate confirmation of Robert B. Reich as Secretary of Labor will therefore be an enormously important step toward reviving the American dream.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF FEDERICO PEÑA

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I am pleased to rise in support of the nomination of Federico Peña to be Secretary of Transportation.

I met Mr. Peña when he was mayor of Denver, and he came to me seeking support for important transportation efforts in his city. As chairman of the Senate Transportation Appropriations Subcommittee, I routinely hear from officials of towns, cities, and States all over the country. They all recognize the importance of transportation to their economies, and to the future of their areas. And I work to address the transportation needs across this country, in my home State, New Jersey, and elsewhere. But, in all my dealings, no one was more determined and focused than Federico Peña.

Federico Peña's views of transportation and the role it can play in accomplishing broader goals is very consistent with mine, and with those enacted in the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991. I believe that, when it comes to environmental problems, transportation is now too often part of the problem. Transportation accounts for approximately 63 percent of all petroleum used in this country. And, in many areas, automobiles are the single largest contributor to air quality problems.

Denver in the early 1980's was a prime example of this. I've aggressively pushed greater support for Amtrak and mass transit as part of an effort to make transportation part of the solution. And, as mayor, Federico Peña worked to make transportation improvements work in coordination with environmental goals. We worked together to secure funding for the construction of high occupancy vehicle lanes, bus acquisition, and other measures to help relieve congestion and cut down on emissions. The implementation of these measures is an important part of the success of his efforts to clean up Denver's air. I'm sure that, as Secretary, Federico Peña will work to see that transportation policies are not only coordinated with environmental policies, but that they actively enhance environmental efforts.

Mr. President, the challenge facing Mr. Peña at the Department of Transportation are tremendous. Over the last two decades, our infrastructure has been neglected, and the results are clear. Thirty-nine percent of the Nation's bridges are in need of repair or replacement, and approximately two-thirds of our roads are in disrepair. Our transit systems are overburdened, as is our air traffic control network. Amtrak, after years of repeated attacks from the Reagan and Bush administrations, is playing a vital role, but needs to be expanded to serve the Nation better. Our airline industry is in turmoil, and tough decisions need to be made about competition and globalization of air carriers. The Coast Guard continues to see its mission expanded beyond its traditional marine safety role to include drug interdiction, oilspill prevention and response, and a growing presence in our national defense.

As Secretary, Federico Peña will have to deal with many critical issues in his tenure. I hope that, drawing on his experience, he'll be an advocate for increased investment in our transportation infrastructure. In the past, he's shown the ability and willingness to take on tough issues, and deal with them in an effective manner.

I am pleased to support his nomination, and look forward to working with him on the many important issues facing us in the coming months and years.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF MICKEY KANTOR

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I wish to express my strong support for this nomination. Throughout his testimony before the Finance Committee and during private meetings, Mr. Kantor has impressed me as a man of enormous integrity and ability.

The post of U.S. Trade Representative is one of the most important posts in the administration. It is also one of the most difficult.

The U.S. Trade Representative is charged with conducting literally dozens of complex international trade negotiations covering dozens of topics and involving hundreds of nations. The USTR is also charged with winning congressional approval for trade agreements and trade legislation as well as coordinating trade policy with the private sector.

And all of these tasks must be accomplished with the help of a professional staff of about 125.

Mr. Kantor is likely to log nearly tens of thousands of air miles and spend months overseas each year. Mr. Kantor and his family will be making some heavy sacrifices. But those sacrifices could open markets for billions of dollars worth of new U.S. exports and create tens of thousands of new American jobs.

If he does his job well—and I believe he will do his job very well—Mr. Kantor could create more jobs and have a greater impact on American incomes than any other Cabinet member.

I congratulate President Clinton on this superb choice. As chairman of the Finance Committee's International Trade Subcommittee, I look forward to working with Mr. Kantor and the rest of the new administration's international trade team. Working together, we can help build a better economy and quality of life for every American.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF CAROL BROWNER

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise in support of the nomination of Carol Browner to be the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. Her nomination represents a step, a giant step, in the right direction—that of greater commitment to solving some of our Nation's environmental problems. And she has the experience and knowledge to fulfill that obligation.

The election of Bill Clinton and AL GORE signaled the end of the politics of division and legislative gridlock that has blocked the solution of many of our Nation's most pressing problems. Carol Browner's nomination, also, marks the end of environmental stalemate and brings to a close an era of antiquated thinking about the environmental challenges we face.

For the last 12 years, the politics of diversion has meant that passing meaningful legislation on the environment was highly unlikely. With Carol Browner's selection, it is clear that enlightened thinking about our environmental problems, and cooperation in working to solve them, will prevail.

And, it shores up a view I have that environmental regulation is consistent with economic growth and will find a home in a Browner EPA. A healthy environment is not only consistent with, but essential for, a prosperous, sustained-growth economy. President Clinton and Vice President GORE understand this truth well, and spoke eloquently about it during the campaign.

In New Jersey, we already know that a clean environment and a growing economy go hand in hand. Our State faces some of the toughest environmental problems in the Nation, and has adopted some of the most far-reaching and innovative environmental laws. Yet, until the most recent recession, New Jersey enjoyed robust economic growth and business expansion, even in many industries regulated by tough environmental requirements. And a new report by MIT Professor Stephen M. Meyer confirms that over the past two decades, the States with the stronger environmental programs outperformed States with weaker environmental programs on all measures of economic growth.

With a new, environmentally sophisticated team in the White House, and with Carol Browner at EPA, we can move swiftly to break through the environmental logjam that prevented progress on some of our most significant environmental problems. We face many challenges—on Superfund, Clean Water, RCRA, Safe Drinking Water Act, radon and indoor air pollution. The Congress must work with the new administration to break the gridlock and legislate the solutions we need to preserve our environment and foster our economy.

The selection of a committed environmentalist with a knack for aggressively crafting creative solutions to environmental problems sends an unmistakable signal that this administration means business on the environment. Carol Browner understands that a clean environment and a prosperous economy go hand in hand. She has a reputation as a tough but fair negotiator, and a strong record of accomplishment in the short time she headed the Florida Department of Environmental Regulation.

With her experience as head of a State environmental department, and her Senate experience, Carol Browner should be well prepared to help lead our Nation in a new direction on the environment.

It's been said, and I quote, "We do not inherit the Earth from our parents, we merely borrow it from our children." I am committed to working with Carol Browner and with President Clinton and Vice President GORE, to make sure that the Earth that we borrow from our children is passed on to them in as fine a condition, and with as few environmental problems, as possible.

I urge my colleagues to support the nomination of Carol Browner to be Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF FEDERICO PEÑA

Mr. GORTON. Federico Peña has been nominated to fill a position which is critically important to all Americans—the Secretary of Transportation.

I have had the opportunity to meet briefly with Mr. Peña and begin what I hope will be a continuing open dialog about issues of concern both specific to the State of Washington and to the Nation as a whole.

Reports that I had read regarding Mr. Peña's views on the deregulation of certain transportation sectors caused me concern. I was pleased to hear that his views have been misinterpreted and that it is not his intent to be an advocate of reregulation. Indeed, he believes, as I do, that strong, healthy competition is the best regulator. We have had the opportunity to briefly discuss maritime reform, a subject that must be a priority if this Nation is going to continue to have an American flagged fleet. We have discussed the need for a healthy airline industry which is obviously so critical to consumers and to business and a special priority to me as the Senator that represents the home State of the largest aircraft manufacturer in the world. We have also discussed the need to complete the work that has begun on the auto safety regulations included in the 1991 Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act.

The State of Washington has many diverse and important transportation needs. One in six jobs in my State is dependent upon trade and healthy trade is only possible with a strong transportation component. Secretary Card was an advocate for intermodalism and our ports lead the Nation in innovative maritime, rail, highway, and air links. Mr. Peña apparently shares Secretary Card's belief in the importance of intermodalism. The last decade in the Puget Sound region has made it clear that transportation must look forward and find innovative solutions. For too many hours a day, Puget Sound residents face gridlock on the highways. The 1991 Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act recognized the diverse needs of States and properly gave the State and local governments much more of a say in how Federal transportation dollars are spent. I believe we must look toward the future in Puget Sound and emphasize increased ferry service, more HOV lanes and eventually to develop rapid transit. I look forward to working with DOT to support these projects.

If confirmed by the Senate, as I certainly expect he will be, Mr. Peña has a tremendous and important challenge in front of him. I wish him the best of success.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF RON BROWN

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, today, the Senate is voting to consider the nomination of Ron Brown to be Secretary of Commerce. He has been nominated to fill a position which is critically important to the Nation and to the Pacific Northwest in particular.

Many newspaper articles have been written about Mr. Brown's nomination. Some reporters have questioned whether his past business dealings or his representation of certain companies should disqualify him for a Cabinet post. Along with other members of the Commerce, Science, and Transportation Committee, I have carefully looked into these concerns. While Mr. Brown wouldn't have been my choice for the Secretary of Commerce, and I dare say, wouldn't have been other Republicans' choice either, it is my strong belief that Cabinet Secretaries and most other high-ranking administration officials serve at the pleasure of the President. As a consequence, I believe that a President should be given the widest possible latitude in choosing such person. Absent any evidence of wrongdoing of a nominee, a Senator should not substitute his judgment or philosophy for that of the President. I have not found any evidence of wrongdoing by Mr. Brown and it is my belief that he should be confirmed.

The issues before the Commerce Department are complex and important to everyone in the United States. I am confident that Mr. Brown understands the importance of increasing economic opportunities and jobs for Americans and will be a strong advocate for American workers. Many of these jobs, and especially those in my State, depend upon exports. The Commerce Department will play a key role in assuring that U.S. companies are in a good position to sell their products abroad. It will be critical that the new administration avoid protectionist policies which only provide an excuse for retaliatory actions against U.S. companies.

Half of the Department of Commerce's budget is spent on the activities of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. This agency, and particularly the National Marine Fisheries Agency, oversees some of the most difficult, controversial and complex problems that we face in the Northwest. Perhaps it is a good thing that Mr. Brown's background does not include experience in these fields because many of these matters are in desperate need of a new, fresh perspective. When I met with Mr. Brown, we discussed upcoming reauthorization bills including the Magnuson Act, the Endangered Species Act, and the Marine Mammal Protection Act. All of these bills are critical to the very survival of my State and they will require the patience, diligence, and study not only of this Congress, but of the new administration officials. I look forward to many more discussions about these topics with Mr. Brown. Assuming he is confirmed by the Senate, as I do, I hope he will soon accept my suggestion to visit the Northwest, meet with the people whose lives will be so dramatically affected by his decisions, and to learn more about the real day to day impact the decisions made by his Department will have upon so many of the people of the State of Washington.

ALICE RIVLIN

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I would like to say a few words of commendation regarding the nomination of Alice Rivlin to be Deputy Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

A phrase that has come into vogue in Washington in recent times has been the characterization of some individuals as "deficit hawks"—people who press for deficit-reduction as the single most important issue that we face, one that must be addressed immediately, even to the short-term detriment of some other policy goals—because no other policy goal can be ultimately met if we do not achieve this one.

Alice Rivlin has a reputation of being particularly zealous on the deficit issue, and it is my earnest hope that she will add to that reputation during her service with the new administration. During her time with the Brookings Institute, and with the Congressional Budget Office, she has repeatedly stressed the need for deficit reduction, and has been unstinting in her descriptions of the politically difficult actions that are necessary to do that. Ms. Rivlin is one of the coauthors of the "Strengthening of America" report with which I was involved this past year—that report spells out very clearly in what direction this country is going if we do not, very quickly, begin to face up to our Federal fiscal situation. I therefore applaud her appointment. She is a splendid choice and a splendid person. And I urge my colleagues to confirm as I know they will.

CONGRESSMAN PANETTA

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I would like to say a few words of commendation for the nomination of LEON PANETTA to be Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

I was particularly and personally pleased to hear of Congressman PANETTA's nomination. He is one fine person. I have always admired him greatly. Prior to the time of the nomination, there was a great amount of speculation in the media about whether the new President would seek to focus on new "investment"—that is, new Government spending—or whether he would be willing to direct a serious assault on the deficit. Selecting LEON PANETTA, someone who has been very honest "up front" and outspoken about the need to reduce the deficit, sent a powerful signal that I personally found to be very positive.

During LEON PANETTA's time here in Congress, he would frequently share information with the rest of the Congress about what kinds of difficult steps would be necessary to conscientiously and seriously address the deficit—he was never one to posture, but rather he would produce various scenarios, with examples of the kinds of programs that would have to be cut if we were to make any serious progress on the deficit.

So this fine man knows exactly what is required—indeed, he knows better than most in Washington do. After Congressman PANETTA's appointment, President Clinton said that he would give the new OMB Director a "chance to teach me some math." I sincerely hope—and I fully expect—that Congressman PANETTA will be ever forthright and truthful in his analyses of just what kinds of spending cuts will need to be made if we are to ever recapitulate control of the Federal budget.

STATEMENT OF SENATOR ALAN K. SIMPSON ON THE NOMINATION OF PEÑA

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I have cast my "aye" vote to confirm Federico Peña as Secretary of Transportation. I believe that Mr. Peña is a sound choice to serve this administration in this vital Cabinet post. I have come to know him.

I was very impressed by Mr. Peña's awareness of the issues and his attitude of cooperation during his confirmation hearings. He will do well, I am certain, in ensuring that the improvements made to our transportation infrastructure made by the Bush administration will continue.

I am also very pleased to see that the Clinton administration has "looked to the West" to fill this Cabinet position. Highways and transportation are, literally, our lifelines in the West and particularly in the Rocky Mountain States, such as my home State of Wyoming.

I look forward to observing Mr. Peña's sensitivity to Western concerns and issues as he works to implement administration policy within the Department of Transportation. I trust that he will work as openly and candidly with us in the future as he has worked with all of us during the confirmation process.

CAROL BROWNER

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, the position of EPA Administrator is a most challenging position as we all know. EPA's responsibilities have increased greatly over the years without any real increase in funding. Environmental problems have become more complex and more technical. The easy problems have been solved. Now we are dealing with the more difficult and contentious issues. I have met with Ms. Browner and learned she has had a good deal of experience in being a regulator and she will surely find this experience to be most useful in her new endeavor. Regulating is never easy. It requires the balancing of competing interests while keeping the goal of environmental protection and the state of the national economy in mind.

Among the many challenges the new EPA Administrator will face is the need to revamp the Superfund toxic waste cleanup program. Now there is a real challenge! The existing Superfund Program is simply not doing the job it was designed to do. I know Carol Browner wants to revitalize that program and Congress is going to have to pitch in and help. We need to look hard and closely at the current system of strict, joint, and several liability, among other things.

Municipal waste, funding for wastewater projects, enforcement, safe drinking water standards and testing requirements, indoor air pollution, implementation of the Clean Air Act, and many other regulatory issues will be simmering along as the new Administrator takes office. I believe Carol Browner will be able to "hit the ground running." I was impressed with her experience and credentials and I think she will take into account the different problems which different regions of the country face. I also think she understands the special needs of rural areas and small communities. EPA should not treat these areas in the same manner as the huge metropolitan areas are treated. I am also aware that she knows the importance of taking economic considerations into account and I find that most heartening. As she herself has said so well on previous occasions—the economy is the number one problem for Congress and the administration today.

I look forward to working with Ms. Browner in her new capacity as EPA Administrator.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF JESSE
BROWN

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I rise today to support the nomination of Jesse Brown to be Secretary of Veterans Affairs.

This is a memorable occasion because Mr. Brown is the first veterans advocate—one who comes from the ranks of the service organizations—and will now serve America as the Secretary of Veterans Affairs.

It will be a most challenging time for Jesse Brown as well as for Congress. We will face very difficult choices between balancing entitlement programs with an everburgeoning national debt.

We will be taking a close look at cutting the fat in some programs and increasing funding in others where needs have been genuinely demonstrated.

We must all realize that Government in general, and the Department of Veterans Affairs in particular, can not be and were never intended to be "all things to all people." I think Jesse Brown understands this concept full well.

I know Jesse Brown to be an extremely capable, qualified, dedicated and honorable person who cares about America's veterans and also about the deficit and the burgeoning debt and I do look forward to working with him as he takes over his new Cabinet position. I wish him well and urge him not to heed the keening wail of some of the professional fund raising veterans organizations who are often interested only in more, more, more. Those days are gone.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF MIKE ESPY

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I was very pleased today when the Senate voted to approve the nomination of U.S. Congressman MIKE ESPY to serve as Secretary of Agriculture.

It has been my pleasure to work as a fellow Member of the Mississippi congressional delegation with MIKE ESPY since he was elected to serve in the House to represent the Second District of Mississippi in 1986. I have worked closely with him in matters relating to agriculture, because he was selected to serve on the House Agriculture Committee. It has been my honor to serve on the Senate Agriculture Committee and the Appropriations Subcommittee for Agriculture and Related Agencies.

I have come to know him in that working relationship, and I have come to respect him and appreciate him. I have seen him work very hard and diligently to understand the various farm programs and also the rural development needs in the Mississippi River Delta and throughout the county. He has become a very conscientious, knowledgeable, and effective Congressman and our State has benefited from his service.

He was educated at Howard University and at Santa Clara Law School. After he graduated from law school he served as assistant attorney general in the State of Mississippi and as an Assistant Secretary of State.

Since this election to Congress he has become better known throughout our State. And to show you the kind of support he had in his district in the last elections last November, he was reelected to the Congress with 78 percent of the popular vote in the general election.

I also feel constrained to point out, Mr. President, that our State is very proud to have someone from within our borders selected to serve in the President's Cabinet. It has been a long time since we have had a member of the Cabinet from the State of Mississippi. As a matter of fact, the last Mississippian to serve in the Cabinet of the President of the United States was L.Q.C. Lamar, who was an outstanding U.S. Senator from our State, widely regarded as a person of great intellect and influence in the Congress. He was appointed by President Grover Cleveland in 1885. His appointment was viewed at the time as a symbol of reconciliation between the South and the rest of the United States, because he was the first Southerner appointed to serve in the Cabinet following the Civil War.

But L.Q.C. Lamar was more than a symbol. He served with great distinction as Secretary of Interior in the Cabinet of President Grover Cleveland, and he was then appointed to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court where he also served with great distinction.

Well, MIKE ESPY is more than a symbol, too. He is the first African-American to serve as Secretary of Agriculture, and he is the first Mississippian to serve in the President's Cabinet since L.Q.C. Lamar in 1888. MIKE ESPY has been good for Mississippi. I predict that he will be good for the Department of Agriculture and good for America. And it was an honor to present him to the Committee on Agriculture and to recommend his confirmation.

I want to thank Chairman LEAHY and the ranking member, Senator LUGAR, for their courtesies during the confirmation process. I am confident that MIKE ESPY will continue to reflect credit on the State of Mississippi.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF ALICE RIVLIN

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, Alice Rivlin is an excellent choice for Deputy Director of the Office of Management and Budget. As our first Director of the Congressional Budget Office, she is acutely aware of the disparate interests that influence Federal fiscal policy. I think her background gives her unique insight into how the Federal Government can and should allocate taxpayers' money.

President Clinton will benefit from a wealth of ideas Dr. Rivlin will bring to his Cabinet. Her job of helping formulate and communicate fiscal policy decisions will be one of the toughest in Washington. I have no doubts she is capable of meeting the challenge.

I look forward to working with Alice Rivlin, and LEON PANETTA as we work together to enact rational, investment-oriented budgets for the Nation's future. Mr. President, I wholeheartedly endorse this nomination and urge my colleagues to do the same.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF LEON E. PANETTA

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, President Clinton recognizes the tough economic decisions he will make in helping lead this country. None will be more difficult than fiscal policy. His choice of LEON PANETTA to head the Office of Management and Budget demonstrates this administration will tackle tough choices head on and well armed with vital facts. Few Americans know Federal programs as well as LEON. His participation in budget battles, including the 1990 budget agreement, provide him critical experience in achieving consensus necessary for meaningful budget policy.

The President yesterday said our future posterity will require near-term sacrifice. Soon he will send us a plan for long-term economic growth that features investment in education, our national manufacturing base, job training, and national security. It will also offer ideas for balanced deficit reduction. LEON PANETTA and other truly dedicated public servants are working on that plan with the President.

We in Congress look forward to contributing to and ultimately helping enact a budget for America's future. I think LEON PANETTA will play a crucial role in these deliberations.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF MICKEY KANTOR

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I rise in support of President Clinton's nomination of Mickey Kantor as U.S. Trade Representative.

Trade policy must be an important part of an integrated strategy to revitalize this Nation's economy. The global marketplace offers tremendous opportunities for U.S. businesses and workers. We must open foreign markets to U.S. manufactured goods, agricultural products, and services. But we also must vigorously enforce both the international and domestic trade laws to ensure that U.S. exports can compete fairly. The gesture of opening a foreign market is meaningless if the rules of fair trade are ignored.

I am confident that Mickey Kantor will aggressively empower our businesses and workers to compete and win in the global marketplace. His reputation as a hardworking, tough, and highly efficient negotiator and his practiced negotiation skills will make him an effective trade ambassador for U.S. interests. Before the Finance Committee on Tuesday, he demonstrated that he quickly grasped the complexities of the international trading rules and relationships. I look forward to working with Mr. Kantor to expand and defend U.S. interests in the world markets.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF CAROL M. BROWNER

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, on Tuesday the Committee on Environment and Public Works voted unanimously to recommend that the nomination of Carol M. Browner to be Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency be confirmed when it is received by the Senate.

Ms. Browner's nomination has now been received, and in behalf of the committee I recommend without reservation that the Senate confirm her nomination.

In my judgment, President Clinton made an excellent choice in naming Carol Browner to be EPA Administrator, and based on the vote by the committee, I think every other member of the committee shares this view. Ms. Browner has demonstrated that she is thoughtful, articulate, and principled in her approach to environmental policy. She has pledged to work closely with the members of this committee and other Senators and Members of Congress in addressing the most pressing environmental issues now before us, and I know that we all look forward to working with her.

Ms. Browner also has expressed her intent to make EPA a more effective government agency and her desire to forge a new era of cooperation between the EPA and American business. These goals are of paramount importance. We must move beyond the present adversarial relationships that have taken over the regulatory process. As Ms. Browner herself pointed out, the present system too often ignores the real complexities of environmental problems and creates delay. Ultimately, neither businesses, local communities, nor the environment are well served by the present system.

It is clear that Ms. Browner understands that environmental protection and economic growth must go hand in hand, and that America must have both to compete in the international marketplace. She said when named by President Clinton that she was looking forward to serving at a time "when we will finally move away from the trade-off and the debate that we have focused on for far too long between jobs and the environment, toward a sustainable economic future." In our hearing, she specifically mentioned that we must develop a stronger sense of innovation when it comes to environmental problems—that as a society we need to approach these issues as challenges to American ingenuity.

It is this sort of vision and deliberate sense of purpose that impresses me most about Carol Browner. We have reached a critical moment for the environment in the United States; there is a great deal of work ahead of us, and I feel very confident Ms. Browner will serve her country well.

Ms. Browner, a 37-year-old Miami native, received a law degree in 1979 from the University of Florida, where she also did her undergraduate work. Subsequently, she was general counsel for the Government Operations Committee of the Florida House of Representatives. In that capacity, Ms. Browner helped revise Florida's Conservation and Recreational Lands Program. From 1983 to 1986, Ms. Browner worked on environmental issues as associate editor for Citizen Action, a not-for-profit, grassroots organizing group. She was Senator Chiles' legislative assistant for environmental issues from 1986 to 1989. In that capacity, Ms. Browner helped negotiate legislation establishing the Big Cypress Natural Preserve northwest of the Everglades and Pinhook Swamp in the Osceola National Forest. She also worked on legislation that imposed a moratorium on oil drilling off the Florida Keys. Ms. Browner served briefly as a counsel on the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee in 1989. She then worked as legislative director to Senator GORE from 1989 to 1991.

In January 1991, Governor Lawton Chiles named Carol M. Browner to be Secretary of the Florida Department of Environmental Regulation [DER]. The DER is the State of Florida's principal environmental protection agency. It is responsible for regulation of activities affecting air and water quality, including wetlands, and hazardous waste activities.

As secretary of the DER, Ms. Browner has been described as a proactive administrator who is pragmatic and willing to try new solutions to problems in order to get results. Ms. Browner moved quickly to settle the Everglades lawsuit and to gain enactment of legislation implementing that settlement, under which the State is converting thousands of acres of farmland into wetlands to act as a filter to remove pollutants from water flowing into the Everglades. She worked successfully with Walt Disney World and the Nature Conservancy to fashion an agreement that will result in the preservation and restoration of 8,500 acres of environmentally sensitive land and that will minimize the environmental impact of Disney World's development over the next 20 years. Ms. Browner was the pivotal mediator in the settlement of a lawsuit in which, for the first time, States will take a systemwide approach to managing a shared ecosystem. She was the force behind passage of a new State law that significantly improves the way petroleum cleanups will be addressed and encourages greater owner/operator responsibility for cleanup and restoration costs. And Ms. Browner worked with the Florida legislature to enact legislation that creates the framework for the DER to obtain delegation from the EPA to implement the Federal Clean Air Program. The legislation also established a Small Business Technical Assistance Program to assist small businesses in achieving compliance with the new law.

In September 1992, Ms. Browner received the Nature Conservancy's President's Conservation Achievement Award, the highest honor given by that organization to public officials.

I urge my colleagues to vote to confirm Carol Browner as Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF ROGER
ALTMAN

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I am confident that Roger Altman will be an excellent Deputy Secretary of the Treasury and I look forward to working closely with him in the years ahead.

The U.S. Treasury Department has critically important responsibilities for managing the Nation's financial system and providing leadership to the entire world in the conduct of international economic affairs. The Secretary and his Deputy also have a preeminent role as economic advisers to the President.

Roger Altman is tremendously well qualified to help manage these responsibilities for the Treasury Department and I strongly support his confirmation. He has an impressive background, both in business and Government. During the Carter administration, Roger served as Assistant Secretary for Domestic Finance. He then went on to a very successful career in investment banking, first for Lehman Bros. and then for the Blackstone Group.

His keen understanding of business, investment, and the financial markets will serve him well at the Treasury Department. More importantly, those skills will serve the Nation well as Roger Altman advises President Clinton and Secretary Bentsen.

I congratulate Roger and wish him well in this new position.

STATEMENT OF THE NOMINATION OF MIKE ESPY

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I am pleased to have the opportunity today to support the confirmation of MIKE ESPY to serve as our next Secretary of Agriculture.

I know from my conversations with Congressman ESPY that he will bring a perspective to USDA that spans, to borrow a theme from our new President, what is wrong with rural America and what, with bold leadership, could be made right in that part of our Nation that still provides a home and livelihood for one in every four Americans.

MIKE ESPY's vision for rural America is shaped by his understanding that new opportunities, such as state-of-the-art telecommunications technology, could revitalize life on the farms and ranches, and in the small communities, that make up the rural landscape. He recognizes that new technology can ensure for rural Americans a fair chance to secure the high-skill, high-wage jobs of the future, and allow them to enjoy many of the educational and cultural advantages once thought available only to city dwellers.

Though Congressman ESPY's enthusiasm for the bright future that technology could bring to rural America is high, it is tempered by his deeply personal recognition that the promise of fiber optics and interactive learning is a rather distant concept to the many rural residents who do not, in the United States in the year 1993, have, as he said during his confirmation hearing, such basics as running water in their homes. He knows that too many Americans today, and especially those in rural areas, have basic needs that are unfulfilled, including access to health care, a sound diet, and the other essentials that one needs simply to live before one can begin to learn or otherwise lead a productive, self-sufficient life.

The need to maintain basic services in rural areas is particularly acute in my own State of Nebraska. Nebraska has more land in farms and ranches—92.4 percent—than any other State in the Nation. Thus, the lifeline of rural Nebraskans to the services that make rural living possible is as tenuous for them as for anyone in the country. I am confident, therefore, that Nebraskans will welcome Secretary Espy's special commitment to rural development and the need to maintain rural services.

Two other positions enunciated by Congressman ESPY during his confirmation hearing are likely to strike a particularly responsive chord among Nebraska farmers and ranchers.

First was his declaration that any reorganization and consolidation efforts implemented at USDA must include, if not begin with, reductions in the bureaucracy and redtape at the Department of Agriculture in Washington. That is the same message that I hear from virtually every farmer who has contacted me to express concerns about the proposed closing of USDA field offices at the county level. These farmers, and their new Secretary, understand and agree that sacrifice and hardship must be a shared burden.

Second, Congressman ESPY has observed that, during his service as a member of the House Budget and Agriculture Committees and during his trips to monitor the progress of the Uruguay round of GATT negotiations, he came to fully appreciate the sheer folly of the United States making unilateral reductions, for budgetary reasons, in our farm price support and export programs at the very same time that we were pressing the European Community, without success, to roll back its more costly and elaborate system of support for European agriculture. As he has said, this one-sided forfeiture of negotiating leverage has simply caused the EC to sit back and say, "Let's not agree to make any cuts, since, over time, the Americans are going to do themselves in."

To our new Secretary of Agriculture I say, among Nebraska producers, your on-the-mark observation gives new hope that this administration will break a 12-year policy drought that saw U.S. farm numbers shrivel by one-fourth—1.5 million people—during the decade of the 1980's. Nebraska producers do not expect the Secretary of Agriculture to win every battle within an administration. But they do hope that the Secretary of Agriculture will speak up for them. I believe they have in MIKE ESPY an advocate for agriculture, and that is why I will vote for him.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATIONS OF LEON
PANETTA AND ALICE RIVLIN

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I rise today to praise President Clinton in his selection of LEON PANETTA to be Director of the Office of Management and Budget and of Alice Rivlin to be Deputy Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

As chairman of the Committee on Governmental Affairs, it was my privilege to hold the nomination hearings for Congressman PANETTA and Dr. Rivlin. The committee favored both nominations, and I am very happy that the Senate has agreed to confirm these nominees. These were terrific choices for very difficult jobs, and I extend my best wishes to both of them.

As we discussed at some length at their nomination hearings, both OMB Director PANETTA and Deputy Director Rivlin have an incredible task facing them. All of us know that the time has come to make hard choices. Our national debt and our Federal budget deficit must be brought down. The economy, though coming out of a recession, is moving forward slowly. Our rate of national capital investment, already less than one-half the investment rate of Japan and lower than our other major trading partners, continues to fall. And the number of Americans without health coverage continues to rise.

For the day-in, day-out operation of Government that affects every American—the matching of policy with money resources, the monitoring of stifling over-regulation, the reduction of waste and abuse, cutting the deficit, etc.—we depend on the leadership shown by OMB. In my opinion, Congressman PANETTA and Dr. Rivlin have exactly what it takes to make the decisions—the trade-offs, the investments, the spending cuts—that will be critically important to our future.

Congressman PANETTA and Dr. Rivlin stressed that they will work to finally put the "M" back in OMB. This is more important than ever, after Comptroller General Charles Bowsher's statement at a hearing 2 weeks ago, that he could think of almost no Federal agency that was well-managed. In fact, he said that the Army was about the only agency in the entire Government which had made significant management improvements. Obviously, this state of affairs cannot be allowed to continue, and we look to Congressman PANETTA and Dr. Rivlin to oversee the changes necessary to make the executive branch work more effectively. The "M" in OMB must come to mean more than it has in the past.

There are, no doubt, some Federal programs which are poorly conceived, but many other programs are not operating effectively because of inadequate investment, and as a result, some agencies no longer have the capacity to perform their public missions. And like any undercapitalized business, the result is often failure and a waste of investment, even if the underlying ideas and objectives are good. Determining which programs should be retained and which should be eliminated are among the tough choices facing OMB.

Again, I am pleased that President Clinton selected Congressman PANETTA and Dr. Rivlin to lead OMB because I believe they understand the magnitude of our problems, as well as the urgency we face in finding solutions. I congratulate them both, and look forward to working together with them to solve the problems of our Government and our country.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF CAROL M. BROWNER

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I am pleased to support the nomination of Carol Browner to be Administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Ms. Browner brings valuable State experience to this position that will serve her well.

EPA is responsible for implementing and setting policies to protect the public health and the environment. EPA runs programs that focus on pollutants that contaminate the air, water, and soil. These are large, complex programs. In addition, many States have their own delegated programs that EPA must assure meet Federal standards. Virtually all sectors of the economy are affected by what EPA does.

The burdens are many; the resources are few. Yet the pressures on human health and the environment have never been greater. The pressure of increasing population taxes the ecosystem as never before. The demands of an increasing population threaten to overrun the progress we make in improved pollution controls, leaving the public at risk from unhealthy levels of exposure to contaminants.

To successfully negotiate these potential conflicts, the EPA Administrator needs to have a firm hand, an ability to lead, and a vision for the future. Ms. Browner has these qualities. I strongly support her nomination.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF JESSE BROWN

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I rise today to express my support for the nomination of Jesse Brown as Secretary of Veterans Affairs.

President Clinton has made an excellent choice in selecting this decorated Vietnam combat veteran to head the second largest agency in the Federal Government. Certainly Jesse Brown brings a wealth of personal and professional experience to the job.

Jesse Brown enlisted in the Marine Corps shortly after graduating from high school in Chicago. Wounded in Vietnam, he went to work for the Disabled American Veterans in 1967. In the past 24 years, he has served with distinction rising from National Service Officer in Chicago to executive director of DAV's Washington headquarters.

In the period following the announcement of his nomination, I was pleased to see a series of stories in various newspapers regarding Mr. Brown, the headlines of which described him as a "defender of the rights of veterans," a "master of regulations," a "warrior" in fighting for veterans benefits and "hard-driving." Those are valuable qualities to bring to the challenges he faces as the new Secretary.

First and foremost, he takes over a health-care system whose medical programs, operations, and expertise are wide ranging and extensive—with more than 200,000 employees, hundreds of hospitals, clinics, nursing homes, and domiciliaries and an annual budget of $15 billion.

It will take considerable effort and attention to restore the system's ability, which has been compromised over the past decade, to provide first-class medical care to America's veterans. But, I know the new Secretary will be up to the challenge in this area, as well as the others facing him.

We want him to succeed as Secretary of Veterans Affairs. For we share a common goal, to see to it that those benefits earned by veterans through their service to this country are provided them in an efficient, fair, equitable, and cost-effective manner.

I congratulate the President for his selection of Jesse Brown to be Secretary of Veterans Affairs. I urge my colleagues to support this nomination.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF RICHARD W. RILEY

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I strongly support the nomination of Richard Riley to be Secretary of Education. His successful experience as a reformer of education is matched, perhaps, only by the man who nominated him. The longstanding relationship between Governor Riley and President Clinton, much of it forged in the trenches of school restructuring, indicates education will properly assume a place at the head of the Cabinet table. Both men expended tremendous energy convincing their legislatures and citizens that educational and economic outcomes are inextricably tied.

As Governor in the early 1980's Mr. Riley led education reform at the State level. He was the first among Southern Governors to recognize his State could compete in the future for high-wage jobs only if all youngsters received better preschool educational and nutritional services. Richard Riley in 1984 forced through a comprehensive $200 million reform plan that included rigorous standards and an evaluation program for all public schools that remains in place today. He reiterated the importance of these programs as well as services for gifted students during his confirmation hearing. I look forward to working with Secretary Riley.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF HAZEL R. O'LEARY

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, the Secretary of Energy plays an important role in the security and economic prosperity of this Nation. Our Nation's dependence on foreign oil and the continuing turmoil in the Persian Gulf makes Americans painfully aware of the importance of energy to the security and future of this Nation. Moving this country away from its dependency on foreign oil, dismantling our nuclear weapons complex, managing a complex environmental clean-up program, and expanding research and development in new energy technologies requires a Secretary of Energy with broad experience in energy policy and management. The position demands a person with a keen understanding and broad experience in energy affairs and the workings of American government. I am pleased that President Clinton has selected such a person for this most important position.

With a law degree from Rutgers University, Ms. O'Leary served as a county prosecutor and an assistant attorney general for the State of New Jersey. During the Ford administration, she became Director of the Office of Consumer Affairs in the Federal Energy Administration, the forerunner of the Department of Energy. In the Carter administration, Ms. O'Leary headed the Economic Regulatory Administration of the newly created Department of Energy. In this capacity, Ms. O'Leary was responsible for overseeing a staff of more than 2,000 lawyers, accountants and engineers.

Following her service in the Federal Government, she created her own energy consulting firm. In 1989, Ms. O'Leary joined the Northern States Power Co. where she managed the environmental, human resources and law departments. Currently, she serves as the executive vice president for corporate affairs. Ms. O'Leary's experience in Government and the private sector has made her familiar with a wide range of energy issues including utility regulation and management, energy efficiency, conservation, alternate and renewable energy technologies.

As a Federal regulator and corporate vice president, Ms. O'Leary will bring experience and balance to an agency facing a crucial restructuring in the post-cold war era. I believe Ms. O'Leary will lead the Department of Energy in to a new era in which technology serves as an engine for job creation, industrial energy efficiency and environmental management. I am confident that she will make the Department of Energy integral part of this Nation's long term economic strategy. Without question, Ms. O'Leary possesses the knowledge and experience to carry out this mission. It is for this reason that I support her nomination.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF HENRY CISNEROS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, Henry Cisneros has been a leader throughout his life. Bright, articulate, and energetic, Henry has a proven track record as an effective manager and a man of great vision.

As the first Hispanic elected mayor in a major American city in 1981, Mr. Cisneros brought about remarkable change for San Antonio. It is that same spirit for change that we hope will transform the Department of Housing and Urban Development. With his broad base of knowledge about housing and community development issues, Henry Cisneros will bring hands-on experience to HUD.

Despite internal management changes at the agency to comply with the 1989 HUD Reform Act, a December 1992 GAO transition report found that many fundamental management problems remain unresolved. Those deficiencies include:

In adequate information and financial management systems, weak internal controls, and insufficient staff resources to perform necessary functions, such as monitoring and enforcing program requirements.

As HUD Secretary, I hope that Mr. Cisneros will take the corrective actions necessary to ensure that the agency operates as intended. I look forward to working with Mr. Cisneros to enable HUD to regain its key role in revitalizing American communities.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF DONNA E. SHALALA

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the nomination of Donna E. Shalala as Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services.

Ms. Shalala brings a wealth of experience to this most demanding position, having served as chair of the board of the children's defense fund, president of Hunter College, Assistant Secretary for Policy Development and Research in the Department of Housing and Urban Development during the Carter administration, and most recently, chancellor of the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Ms. Shalala faces a tremendous task. Many of the most difficult challenges facing the new administration are within the purview of the Department of Health and Human Services. The HHS budget is estimated to be about $590 billion next year, representing about 40 percent of all Federal spending—only the Government of Japan and the United States have larger total budgets.

Perhaps the greatest challenge facing Ms. Shalala in her new capacity is the reform of the Nation's health care system. President Clinton has made health care reform one of his top priorities, as it is a priority for me. We must get the rapidly escalating cost of health care under control if we are to reduce the Federal deficit. We must also address the unmet health care needs of millions of Americans without access to affordable care.

Other difficult challenges for Ms. Shalala include welfare reform and reforming our child support enforcement system. I share the President's view that welfare should not be a way of life. Clearly, we need to create jobs to ensure that families can become and remain self sufficient. We also need to ensure that single-parent families, primarily headed by women, receive sufficient child support. Both parents, not only the parent with whom children live, have a financial responsibility in raising children.

I look forward to working with Ms. Shalala on these and other issues of concern to American families.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF ROBERT REICH

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, as our economy changes, the American workplace also is changing. In a time of American renewal, there is a need for Government to work with both business and labor to promote a renewal of a progressive spirit in American labor-management relations.

Robert Reich is uniquely qualified to lead the efforts to promote this spirit. He has given thoughtful consideration to and has written extensively of his vision for the future. This vision includes providing job training for the American work force, encouraging labor-management cooperation and increasing America's technology competitiveness.

As Robert Reich has stated over and over, America's workers are one of our most important economic assets. Under Robert Reich's leadership, the Department of Labor will foster partnership between business, labor, educational institutions, States and other Federal agencies to utilize this asset to its fullest. I also anticipate policies which support child care, family and parental leave, and a safe work environment.

I look forward to working with Robert Reich in the years ahead.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF MIKE ESPY

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I rise today to express my support for the nomination of MIKE ESPY as Secretary of Agriculture.

MIKE ESPY has represented Mississippi's Second Congressional District with distinction for the past 6 years. It is a rural district, one in which agriculture is the dominant force in the economy.

As a member of the House Agriculture and Budget Committees, MIKE ESPY has been a leader in Congress on trying to fashion bipartisan, responsible and fiscally sound agriculture legislation on issues ranging from hunger prevention, rural development, and international trade. He will bring a solid background in agricultural policy to the Department based on his tenure in Congress.

As Secretary of Agriculture, MIKE ESPY will oversee a $67 billion budget and some 115,000 employees. The mandate of the Department of Agriculture in nutrition and food safety; agricultural production, marketing and trade; environmental protection; forestry and rural development makes USDA a dominant force in the economy of many States as well as the Nation.

Earlier this year, I had the opportunity to meet with the Secretary-designate with the rest of Maine's congressional delegation. We wanted to alert the incoming Secretary to several very serious problems facing our State's potato industry. I would characterize our meeting with Mr. ESPY as very positive.

I was very impressed with MIKE ESPY at that time, much beyond his obvious sensitivity to the circumstances facing many Maine farmers. He demonstrated a good grasp of the USDA disaster assistance programs we raised and he clearly understood the impact USDA disaster, lending, rural development and commodity programs have on farmers and rural America.

I believe MIKE ESPY will be an excellent Secretary of Agriculture. In fact, the more I see and learn of MIKE ESPY, the more I believe he will be a forceful advocate for agriculture, producers and consumers, and rural America within our Government and with other governments worldwide.

I very much look forward to working with Secretary ESPY in the coming months to find and fashion solutions to the many problems he will face, from reorganizing the Department's field and central office structure so that the Department will operate in an efficient, fair, equitable, and cost-effective manner to improving America's markets in international trade and maintaining our world leadership in food safety.

I congratulate the President for his selection of MIKE ESPY to be Secretary of Agriculture. I urge my colleagues to support this nomination.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF ROBERT REICH

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, these are exciting times for our Nation. We begin the year with a new President and a new Congress, and with a renewed sense of hope and great expectations for the future. Yet, these are also challenging times. As a nation, we are confronted by the legacy of a decade of debt; a decade of living for the present, seemingly without any real concern for the future; a decade of borrowing against our children's inheritance.

Clearly, the time has come to change course. We must begin to invest in the future, rather than borrow from it. We can no longer afford to live so wildly beyond our means, nor can we afford to continue to ignore the tremendous public investment needs that exist across our country. If we are serious in our concern about the future, we must act to solve both our budget and our investment deficits. To neglect either would be to fall short of the challenges before us.

It is with precisely such a concern in mind that I am so encouraged and pleased by President Clinton's nomination of Robert Reich to be the next Secretary of Labor. I believe that Mr. Reich understands not only the need to bring our budget under control, but also the critically important role that public investment plays in promoting long-term economic growth. He understands how public investment complements, rather than competes with, private investment; how public investment encourages private investment by making it more productive. He understands that public investment is a necessary part of any strategy designed to ensure that American workers remain the most productive in the world. Simply put, Robert Reich understands that public investment is essential if Americans, now and in the future, are to enjoy an ever-rising standard of living.

In testimony presented to the Senate Appropriations Committee last year, Mr. Reich explained:

 in the emerging global economy, public investment is especially important. Global capital is not yet perfectly mobile, but it is highly mobile and becoming ever more so. If Americans want to attract global capital to the United States to create jobs here, the Nation faces the same fundamental choice of methods as that faced by other nations: We can either attract global capital by promising low wages and low costs of meeting environmental, safety, and other standards; or we can lure global capital by promising a highly skilled work force and a world-class infrastructure of communications, energy, transportation, water and sewage systems—linking the work force together and with the rest of the world. Only the second method will enhance our standard of living. But a highly skilled work force and a world-class infrastructure require public investments.  Ultimately, of course, it is the American people who must decide whether their children and their children's children are to live at least as well as we do today—and how much we are willing to sacrifice in order to ensure that they do.

Mr. President, I commend Mr. Reich for the insight he has shown with respect to the challenges that confront America. I commend our new President, Bill Clinton, for the good judgment he has shown in his selection of Robert Reich to head the Department of Labor. Having risen many times on this floor to speak of the need to commit ourselves to the task of investing in America, in our infrastructure and our people, I am pleased to be able to rise today in support of the nomination of Robert Reich for Secretary of Labor, an individual who understands the positive role that Government can play—that Government must play—in promoting economic growth and prosperity.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF HAZEL O'LEARY

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I join my Senate colleagues in congratulating President Clinton for his selection of Hazel O'Leary to be the new Secretary of Energy. When confirmed, she will be the seventh Secretary of Energy since the department was first created in 1977. She is truly one of Minnesota's finest, and we are all very thrilled and optimistic about her appointment.

During the last several years, I have known and worked with Hazel and am aware of her many contributions to Minnesota and the country. In her service as executive vice president of Northern States Power Co. [NSP] in Minnesota, I have found her to be bright, competent, and insightful. I have also come to know her as an excellent leader and as someone who understands the complex nature of the energy industry.

Mr. President, Minnesota has always prided itself on being environmentally progressive and forward thinking. As such, we are fortunate to have major power utility companies that understand the need to protect the environment and make wise use of the State's natural resources. Under her watch, NSP has made significant advances and contributions to progressive environmental policies. One example is the Clean Air Act.

As one of its authors, I can personally attest to NSP's involvement in the passage and implementation of the Clean Air Act, as well as the debate on global climate change, energy conservation measures, and alternative sources of energy such as its recent proposal to implement a 100-megawatt wind energy program in southwest Minnesota.

Mr. President, as energy policy is viewed more in the context of economic growth and revitalization, a commitment of President Clinton, Hazel's strong background in both the public and private sector will prove to be a tremendous asset to the country. Hazel has always demonstrated a unique ability to interweave sound energy policy with sound economic strategy. She has a reputation for being able to reach a consensus on difficult issues, an ability that is essential to this position.

I extend my sincere congratulations to Hazel O'Leary on her nomination. The President has my strong support for his outstanding nominee and I urge my colleagues to vote to confirm her, as well. I look forward to working with her in the coming years and watching her succeed at the Department of Energy.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF CAROL M. BROWNER

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I join my Senate colleagues in congratulating President Clinton for his selection of Carol Browner to be the new Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. She will be the eighth Administrator of EPA since it was created in 1970. Her experience on the frontline of environmental policy as the head of Florida's Department of Environmental Regulation will bring a new perspective to EPA's leadership.

The framework of environmental policy in the United States is established by the National Government. But the policy is actually carried out at the State level. It is the States which issue the permits, hear the appeals and enforce the regulations. It is the State officials who work daily with the millions of businesses, local governments and private citizens who are affected by environmental law. Experience at the State level provides an invaluable perspective on our national environmental laws.

Ms. Browner reflected this experience at the hearing on her confirmation. Her principal message was a concern for those businesses, local governments and citizens who are directly affected by environmental regulations. Here is what she said:

EPA must deliver quick, consistent decisions. We must recognize the special problems of small businesses. EPA should spend more time listening to the particular concerns of businesses and communities affected by environmental problems and the EPA must recognize the value of State regulators. And the EPA should promote, encourage and develop rewards for businesses that develop pollution prevention and recycling strategies.

I am sure that message will be warmly received by business people and local government officials all across the country.

During the hearings of the Environment and Public Works Committee on her nomination and at an earlier courtesy call, I raised three issues with Ms. Browner that I would like to touch upon today. My statement to the Senate, and to Ms. Browner, comes in the way of a caution on three major themes that one hears over and over again in contemporary discussions of EPA, its missions and its operations.

The first theme is about risk. The assertion made by many is that EPA's priorities should be realigned so that they better reflect the public health risks that are actually confronting the Nation. There is a suggestion that we may be wasting billions of dollars on some problems, like cleaning up hazardous waste sites, while other more serious threats to public health receive relatively little attention. The solution sometimes put forth is to turn over the priority setting process to some quasi-scientific body that will, using the tools of risk assessment, help us better allocate our environmental budget and regulatory effort.

No one can argue with the proposition that we ought to allocate our environmental dollars as carefully as possible. And everyone would agree that decisions based on solid scientific information are better than decisions guided by hunches, superstition or bias. Congress is constantly called upon to make decisions that allocate billions of public and private dollars toward one problem or another often before the science on causes and solutions is settled. We make difficult choices that are criticized from every direction.

But there is no technical or scientific fix for our condition. There is no philosopher king or committee of Ph.D.'s who can relieve the policymakers in Congress and in the executive branch of this difficult job of setting priorities in a world of competing interests and limited knowledge. And there is no reason to believe that we have chosen incorrectly in the past.

To properly express these concerns, I should need more time than I have today. But let me just list the three main problems with the argument for comparative risk assessment. First, is the state of the science. Risk assessment is in its infancy. There is no agreed-upon methodology of risk assessment. We know a lot about some health problems, cancer for instance, but next to nothing about the environmental factors in other adverse effects like birth defects or neurological disorders or suppression of the human immune system.

Second, even if the methods reflected a solid consensus, there are questions that risk assessment cannot answer. EPA's mission covers a wide range of public values from childhood health to natural resource protection. There is not one objective, scientific yardstick on which one can rank the relative importance of healthy children in comparison to the population of migratory waterfowl. How much do you spend on children's health, before you start spending money on ducks? This is a question of preferences that in our system of government is assigned to elected officials, not appointed members of science boards. The choice between kids and ducks can be informed by science, but ultimately it can only be resolved in a democratic society by an appeal to the preferences of the public.

Third, even where one yardstick of risk can be applied, for instance, the risk of contracting fatal cancer, it does not necessarily follow that achieving the largest risk reduction is an absolute guide to policy. I believe that the public is more willing to accept small risks widely distributed, than large risks focused on the few. It is not just the absolute mortality, but also the equity, the distribution of the risk, that informs the public's sense of priorities.

The public gets incensed about hazardous waste sites or chemical spills because they are immediately devastating to their victims, even if those victims are few in number, and hundreds more could be saved by spending the same dollars addressing some other problem. Allocating public and private resources to achieve the greatest reduction in risk for each dollar spent is not the best public policy, because it fails to reflect the public's sense of equity and justice.

I am all for more science. And the Federal Government has a fundamental obligation to spend the taxpayers' money as wisely as possible. But I do not agree that these propositions call into question either the process we have used to select environmental priorities or the allocation of resources now reflected in the budget and regulations of the EPA and the other agencies we charge to protect public health and the environment.

The second theme I would touch upon goes by the shorthand phrase "market incentives". The notion here is that our current approach to environmental regulation which is called "command-and-control" by its critics is inefficient and unworkable for the environmental challenges that we face in the future.

The new conventional wisdom says that we should move to an alternative set of regulatory mechanisms including taxes, fees, trading systems and other market-based approaches to influence private behavior in a way that is favorable to the environment.

Again, there is something to be said for the use of market incentives to achieve environmental objectives. But as with comparative risk assessment, the push for market incentives has been embraced with so much uncritical enthusiasm that its limitations have been overlooked.

The acid rain provisions of the 1990 Clean Air Act Amendments are often cited as an outstanding example of market incentives replacing command and control regulations in environmental policy. It is true that the 1990 Clean Air Act Amendments include a very innovative emissions trading scheme that will help reduce the costs of acid rain controls. But people who think that command and control has had its day should go back and read the acid rain title of the Clean Air Act.

It lists every powerplant in the country by name and sets a cap on the tons of sulfur dioxide that each plant is allowed to emit each year, a different amount for each plant based on its historic emissions. That's about as "command-and-control" as you can get. The authority to trade allowances as a way to reduce costs is a second step that can only be taken because of the "command-and-control" limits that have been established for each plant. Trading in this example doesn't have any relevance as a public policy tool unless a cap on emissions has already been established by command-and-control regulations.

It's also important to keep in mind that in the case of acid rain we are dealing with a single pollutant, SO₂, from a limited universe of plants, about 600, with continuous monitoring and a long history of pollution data. We hope that trading helps reduce the cost of the acid rain control program, but I don't know that a limited use of a trading scheme like that can be translated into a clarion call to abandon traditional environmental regulations for market solutions.

There are other examples of market incentives that one can cite. For instance, in 1989 the Congress imposed a tax on the production of chlorofluorocarbons or CFC's. These are substances that deplete the ozone layer. The tax is substantial. Current revenues to the Government from this tax exceed $1 billion per year. The tax has clearly discouraged the production and use of CFC's.

But the real effort on ozone depleting chemicals is not being carried by the tax. Rather, we have a worldwide treaty called the Montreal protocol that bans the production of CFC's and other ozone depleting chemicals by the year 2000. Considering the risk that these chemicals present to human health and to the global environment, I don't think that anyone would now suggest that we replace the Montreal protocol with a mere tax or fee designed to change behavior.

There are areas where fees or taxes can be used in ways that advance our environmental objectives. There are trading schemes that can appropriately be used to bring down the cost of a command and control system regulations. But there are fundamental limitations on these mechanisms that must also be kept in mind. Efficiency is only one objective to be reflected in our regulatory system. Equity and enforceability are also essential considerations in designing environmental policy.

The third subject that I would touch upon today is called regulatory negotiation. It is a process that is sometimes used by EPA to reduce the conflict that may be associated with the promulgation of a major rule. In a regulatory negotiation, EPA calls in representatives of all the groups that may have an interest in a specific rule and they meet over a period of time to see if their views can be reconciled into one consensus regulation.

There is great value in this negotiated process. It may shorten the time it takes to put a rule in place. It may also eliminate the litigation that often occurs after a major rule is promulgated. And during the negotiations EPA may acquire information from the negotiating parties that improves the quality of the rule and assures its effectiveness.

But the process can be abused. Recently, we have seen a new motivation behind these negotiations. EPA has been using negotiations to circumvent oversight by the White House. It has been widely reported that EPA regulators and White House officials have had serious disagreements about major environmental policies. In this atmosphere some at EPA have pushed regulatory negotiations as a way to limit White House review. If all the interest groups agree to a rule before it is sent to OMB, then OMB's role will be limited.

The interest groups also see an opportunity for circumvention in these negotiations. They sometimes see it as a way to rewrite the law—to get around the clear mandates that the Congress has established. The most important example of this abuse of regulatory negotiation is the reformulated gasoline rule that was negotiated by EPA in 1991. The proposed rule that resulted from those negotiations sets aside some clear provisions of the law including a cap on emissions of nitrogen oxides and a requirement that reformulated gas achieve a 15 percent reduction in VOC emissions.

There are some benefits to negotiated rulemaking. It can make the administrative process work better and it can produce better rules.

But if the motivation at EPA and among the interest groups is to use regulatory negotiation as a way to get around the law or rewrite the law or as a way to avoid oversight by the White House and those were significant factors motivating the regulatory negotiation on reformulated gasoline—then ultimately, regulatory negotiation will not serve the country well.

The law is more than a deal reached by the special interests in a hotel ballroom under the tutelage of EPA contractors. The pledge not to sue—which is the ticket that gets a special interest into the regulatory process—is not a test of lawfulness. Even if all the interests promise to stay out of the courts, EPA still has a duty to the Congress and to the public to determine whether a rule is in compliance with the law.

As I said earlier, Mr. President, I have raised each of these issues with Ms. Browner. Based on her responses at the hearing and in our private discussion, I am satisfied with her understanding of the limitations of risk assessment, market incentives and regulatory negotiation. Each is a tool that can be used to improve environmental regulation. But our enthusiasm for new methods must not blind us to the fundamentals of policy and process in a democratic government.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF RICHARD W. RILEY

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I am pleased to rise to support the nomination of Richard W. Riley as Secretary of Education. I intend to vote to confirm the nominee and look forward to working closely with him in the months and years to come.

Mr. President, Members of the body on both sides of the aisle know of my strong personal interest in education and my commitment to work on a bipartisan basis on a wide variety of initiatives designed to encourage and support what I like to call real education reform.

Both the incoming and outgoing Presidents have correctly identified a better educated work force as an essential element in a long-term economic strategy that will keep this Nation competitive as we enter the 21st century.

President Clinton has included reforming and improving education as one of the top priorities for his new administration. I believe he has chosen an excellent Secretary of Education to help him turn those objectives into reality.

Governor Riley brings to this challenge many of the same assets that defined his predecessor—another southern Governor with recent experience in higher education—who had previously launched a major education reform initiative designed to improve quality and outcomes in his State's elementary and secondary schools.

Both Lamar Alexander and Dick Riley also became national leaders in education reform through their work in the National Governor's Association. And, both these former Governors have shared common objectives in education—and a long and positive personal relationship—with a third southern Governor who is now President of the United States.

Mr. President, this Nation was very well-served by the last Secretary of Education this body confirmed. And I cannot let this opportunity pass without saying how much I will miss Lamar Alexander, and the vision and energy and commitment he brought to his job.

But, the American people have elected a new President, and that new President has selected a new Secretary of Education whom I also believe is an excellent choice to continue the quest for excellence in education that was begun in the preceding administration.

Governor Riley and I have already had an opportunity to establish a number of points of common interest and common concern in a brief meeting in my office and during his confirmation hearing before the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

Given the kind of strong support he will need from the new President, I believe he will succeed.

I believe he will use—and, I believe he will need—the ideas and support that I and my colleagues on this side of the aisle have a duty and an obligation to help provide.

I make that observation, Mr. President, because of my strong belief that any real reform in education must be bipartisan.

Last year, for example, I joined with Senator LIEBERMAN, Senator KENNEDY, and others in a bipartisan initiative to allow Federal education improvement funds to be used to support public school choice programs, and to help start innovative new public schools—including charter schools.

And, last year, I joined the Senators SIMON, BRADLEY, KENNEDY, and others in a bipartisan initiative to design new and better ways of paying for college.

These three ideas for change—public school choice, charter schools, and new and better ways of paying for college—are all part of the Clinton education reform agenda.

In fact, one of the items I'd like to enter into the record of this confirmation, Mr. President, is the chapter on needed changes in education from the Progressive Policy Institute's new book, "Mandate for Change."

One of the three core recommendations from that chapter urges the new President to, and I quote:

Promote charter schools and other State efforts to harness choice and competition to improve our public schools.

President Clinton—

The recommendation continues: should put the resources of his Education Department behind State efforts to design and enact public school choice laws. He should further encourage the States by proposing that they be allowed to use a significant portion of Federal education aid to set up innovative public schools. Presidential leadership also is essential for setting broad, national standards of performance for all public schools, including charter schools.

Also included earlier in this same chapter, Mr. President, is a specific recommendation that the new President support the legislation that Senator LIEBERMAN and I introduced last year to allow States to use Federal education improvement grants to help set up new charter public schools.

Mr. President, I would ask that relevant portions of the education chapter of "Mandate for Change" be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

FOUR PRIORITIES FOR THE CONGRESS AND NEW PRESIDENT

Mr. DURENBURGER. During the course of his confirmation hearing, Mr. President, I identified for Governor Riley four personal priorities I have for the Senate's work on education during the course of the coming year. I believe these are all priorities that are shared by the new administration and by many members of this body—on both sides of the aisle.

Briefly, Mr. President, those priorities are:

First, the recommendation I just read from "Mandate for Change"—to authorize Federal funding of State-level public school choice initiatives and start-up funding for innovative new public schools—including charter schools.

The logical vehicle for this proposal is legislation reauthorizing the Elementary and Secondary Education Act which the Labor Committee will draft this year. In addition, Senator LIEBERMAN and I intend to reintroduce our legislation authorizing a new Federal grant program to fund start-up expenses for new charter schools.

A second priority is to authorize expanded Federal support for colocation of health and other services in and around schools.

In addition to legislation considered by the Labor Committee, I intend to author legislation in the Finance Committee to expand support for school-based health services using the Maternal and Child Health Block Grant Program.

And, I'm also exploring ways of increasing Medicaid reimbursement for otherwise eligible primary care services that are delivered in school-based settings.

A third priority for this coming year, Mr. President, is to use elements of the Simon-Durenburger IDEA proposal to help shape the income-contingent direct loan components of a Clinton national service initiative.

I am also helpful that the new administration will draw on the IDEA proposal as it implements the direct loan demonstration we included in last year's reauthorization. I have written a letter to the new President detailing my thoughts on how some elements of IDEA could be incorporated into the President's national service proposal which I would ask to be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

A fourth priority, Mr. President, is that we ensure that legislation implementing a Clinton national service proposal is considered in the context of broader education reform.

Service in the community can be a powerful force in improving teaching and learning—as well as an alternative way to help pay for college.

That's why I believe that expanded service learning opportunities should be included in this year's reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, as well as legislation reauthorizing the Commission on National and Community Service.

All four of these goals are consistent with campaign themes and priorities we have heard from the new President. But, they are not Democratic ideas or Republican ideas. They are good ideas that deserve bipartisan support in the Congress and from both consumers and providers of education all across America.

I am confident that these good ideas are also high priorities for Governor Riley. Beyond his excellent qualifications, that's one of the reasons I strongly support his nomination. I urge my colleagues to vote to confirm him, as well.

STATEMENT BY U.S. SENATOR DAVE DURENBURGER AT A HEARING CONDUCTED BY THE COMMISSION ON NATIONAL AND COMMUNITY SERVICE—DECEMBER 14, 1992, MINNEAPOLIS, MN

Let me begin by joining Senator Wellstone in welcoming the Commission—and the rest of our out-of-town guests and witnesses—to Minnesota.

We're all proud that you chose North High School for one of only two national hearings you're conducting outside of Washington. You've made a wise choice. And, I know you'll be impressed with what you hear from the witnesses . . . and from the "open mike" period later on.

I've stated many times before that most of what I've learned about this subject has come from a lot of the people in this room.

That's why I asked that Paul and I be on this side of the table this morning . . . doing more listening than talking . . . and having a chance to engage in at least some of the dialogue the Commission will be having with the students and other witnesses who are here to testify.

I've said many times before that, I came to this issue several years ago with a much narrower vision of what we've traditionally called "volunteerism".

My vision was limited by my own experience as a community volunteer . . . as president of the South St. Paul Jaycees . . . as president of the Burroughs Elementary School PTA . . . as an active participant in the Citizens League and a lot of other community projects and community organizations.

It was also defined as "volunteerism" by my years as a director of VOLUNTEER, the National Center for Voluntary Action, and by my work in the 1970's on the National Study Commission on Volunteering in America.

I did my "volunteering" out of a strong sense of "civic duty." And, I still believe that promoting what President Bush calls a "Thousand Points of Light" is an important part of what the Commission on National and Community Service is all about.

But, from people like Jim Kielsmeier and a lot of teachers and students in Minnesota, I've also learned that integrating community service into the school curriculum can be an essential element in "education reform."

And, I've learned service corps and other forms of stipended service can be an effective "education alternative" for students who aren't well-suited for more traditional schooling that's totally based on textbooks used in the classroom.

This growing awareness of these broader values of community service is one reason I became the lead Republican co-sponsor of the Commission's authorizing legislation when it first passed the Congress two years ago this fall.

Because both Paul and I serve on the committee that will draft the bill, I'm also looking forward to playing an active and positive role in the Commission's reauthorization this coming year.

And, I'm especially pleased that President-elect Clinton has placed a high priority on both changing the way we pay for college—and on creating new opportunities for youth and community service—in his campaign, and in the priorities he's now setting for the next session of Congress.

Some of what Governor Clinton is proposing sounds a lot like legislation that Senator Paul Simon and I introduced last year to create a new student loan program.

Our proposal—called IDEA—creates a new type of student loan that's available to everyone regardless of income. And, the payments on IDEA loans go up or down every year because they're based on the borrower's post-college income.

We got a pilot project to test IDEA loans included in the Higher Education Amendments that Congress passed earlier this year.

And, both Senator Simon and I would like to see an expansion of this "better way of paying for college" become part of what the Clinton Administration proposes to the Congress.

Perhaps like a lot of you, I have mixed feelings about the other half of the Clinton proposal—to make completing some period of community service a way to help pay the cost of going to college.

In fact, I've written a letter to the President-elect that identifies at least some of the issues raised by both parts of his proposal that I would ask be made a part of the record of this hearing (letter attached).

I'm looking forward to our discussion of these issues this morning and at future hearings in Washington—

Discussion about the wisdom of further complicating our already complex student aid system—

About the value of a centralized national service system or a decentralized national service program that builds on new or existing programs at the state or local level—

About whether participation in some type of service should be a requirement for high school graduation or be a condition of getting college student aid.

About the fairness of a service option or mandate to low income and non-traditional students—students who have jobs and families and less time or financial flexibility to do some period of service in exchange for helping to pay the rising cost of going to college.

These are complex issues that deserve the kind of debate we're starting here this morning.

In beginning that debate, it helps me to ask two parallel questions—

"Is community service a different and better way to teach and learn?"

"Or, is community service a different and better way to pay for college?"

Nothing could really be that simple, of course. And, it's also probably not an "either/or" question.

But, much of what we hear today—and much of what we hear in the debate to come in Washington—will revolve around those two questions about "what" we're doing and "why."

I think I've already stated my personal bias that service learning can be a powerful force to both tap the enormous energies and contributions of young people and to improve the outcomes of teaching and learning in this country.

I also believe we'd be better off building on existing initiatives in states like Minnesota, rather than creating a huge new national program that's run entirely from Washington.

Today's hearing—and future hearings—will help explore these issues further. So, I'm looking forward to listening and learning everything I can.

Thank you all for coming.

DECEMBER 14, 1992.

HON. BILL CLINTON,
Office of the Governor, Little Rock, AR.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT-ELECT: During the course of this year's campaign, I was pleased to hear your repeated calls for fundamental changes in the way we pay for college. And, you have made it clear in your initial statements since the election that you intend to place a high priority on bringing specific proposals to the Congress to implement those changes early in your new administration.

As a member of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee—and one who shares your interest in fundamental change—I want to commend you for your leadership and make this offer to play a constructive role in turning good ideas into sound legislative policy.

As you know, the concepts of direct lending, income-contingent loan repayment, and stipended national service were all given extensive debate in Congress over the past three years.

In 1990, we authorized the National and Community Services Act, which sets up the framework for a more coordinated federal role in promoting a variety of youth and community service initiatives around the country. I was pleased to be the principal Republican co-sponsor of that legislation which comes up for reauthorization in the coming session of Congress.

And, earlier this year, the Congress included a new direct loan demonstration in legislation reauthorizing the Higher Education Act. That demonstration was based in part on a proposal that Senator Paul Simon and I introduced creating a new program called "IDEA" (for Income Dependent Education Assistance). IDEA is a direct loan program, available to all borrowers regardless of income, with income-contingent repayment made through the IRS.

According to the Congressional Budget Office, the Simon-Durenberger IDEA proposal could have saved $2.7 billion dollars a year through increased efficiencies, better targeted subsidies, and substantially fewer defaults.

Senator Simon and I proposed transferring most of that savings to the Pell program. Again using CBO estimates, the savings from IDEA would have paid for a $600 increase in every eligible student's Pell Grant.

The Simon-Durenberger proposal would also have financed a new program offering $1000 bonus scholarships to up to 500,000 Pell-eligible students based on academic merit. And, it would have paid for a new $100 million grant program to states to finance early intervention programs—to better prepare at-risk high school students for college.

Principles for changes in higher education financing

It's my understanding that your advisors are now working on details for a higher education financing proposal to be transmitted to the Congress early next year. As that process goes forward, I'd like to suggest three principles for change that I believe merit your consideration, and the consideration of my colleagues in the Congress.

Principle I—Fundamental Change

The first of those principles is that we must accept your premise that fundamental change is needed if we're to guarantee access to college for present and future generations.

We do have to make our current programs work better and more efficiently. Savings from fewer defaults and less overhead should be shifted into grants. And, we must work toward funding the larger Pell grants that Congress authorized this year.

But, there is also a clear message in this year's election that we must bring down the deficit. And, there's a clear message that the American people want fundamental change.

So, even if we are able to increase grants, we still won't assure access to higher education for every American.

And, without new and better ways of paying for college, a larger and larger share of the population will simply be priced out of an opportunity they can't afford to go without.

Principle II—Fairness and Individual Responsibility

A second principle for reform must be to support your emphasis on fairness and individual responsibility.

Both those goals were what attracted me to the IDEA proposal in the first place.

IDEA recognizes the direct correlation between education and income. Generally speaking, the more education you get, the more income you will earn over a lifetime of work.

But, IDEA also acknowledges that many of today's college graduates earn less, relative to the cost of their education, than did their predecessors. That's especially true for graduates who take jobs in fields like teaching, social work, and nursing.

And, IDEA recognizes that college graduates stepping into today's uncertain economy often face periods of unemployment or underemployment—either prior to settling into a permanent job in their field—or even between jobs in what might be an up and down career.

But, even with these ups and down, a college education is still a lifetime investment that pays off.

That's why IDEA supports the notion that individuals need to take responsibility for paying for something that contributes so much to their future.

At the same time, that responsibility needs to be assigned and accepted within the realities of today's economy . . . drawing on the fairness and flexibility that an income-contingent loan program like IDEA can allow.

This notion of individual responsibility is also at the root of your proposal to give college graduates the opportunity to work off tuition or student loans through some period of national or community service.

There are a lot of policy and operational issues that will need to be addressed in creating that kind of program. Some of those issues are identified below.

But, there's also a lot of appeal to offering students the opportunity to earn some part of the cost of going to college by tapping their own time and talents in ways that benefit the larger community.

Principle III—Do Reform Carefully and Do It Right

Finally, a third principle I would offer is that, while we're doing big change, we must do it carefully, and we must do it right.

I've learned over the past several years that there are about as many ways to do income-contingent loan repayment as there are smart people and computers. And, I've also learned that how we design who pays back how much can have a big impact on whether a loan program like IDEA will actually work.

There are thousands of differences in the fine print, but, the proposals I looked at prior to introducing IDEA had at least three big differences.

First, the proposals differ on where they get their initial source of capital.

Some of the proposals draw on surpluses in the Social Security Trust Fund. But, I personally concluded it wasn't wise to take on all the special interests who oppose direct lending and all those who are counting on Social Security.

I also couldn't buy into Bill Bradley's proposal to use a 10 percent surcharge on millionaires to launch a new student loan program. Last year at least, such a suggestion always triggered partisan gridlock.

So, Senator Simon and I relied on the upfront sale of government bonds to help launch IDEA. The bonds would be put in a revolving fund and paid back by loan payments . . . then loaned out again and again over time.

A second big difference in the various income-contingent loan plans is who does the collection.

I concluded it makes sense to do loan collection through the IRS because of its efficiency and because it is well equipped to make annual calculations of loan payments that are based on income.

But, I also learned that the IRS will need to become a whole lot more comfortable about taking on that new responsibility. And, beyond administrative concerns, some of my colleagues on the Finance and Ways and Means Committees also argued that getting the IRS involved in student loan collection would increase the current rate of tax fraud and tax avoidance—driving up the deficit.

My initial reaction to that concern was pretty simple. It's against the law to cheat on your taxes. And, if more people do it—in this case to avoid repaying their student loans—we need to make sure they get caught!

The reality, of course, is that without real experience with IRS collection of student loans, it's hard to know what impact something like IDEA might actually have on the ability of the IRS to perform its traditional job and on the level of tax fraud and tax avoidance. That's one big reason we agreed to test the IDEA concept with a demonstration program run at a limited number of schools.

Finally, a third big difference in these proposals—and probably the most important—is exactly how the size of loan payments gets tied to income.

There's a lot of fine print in these different proposals, but the issue really comes down to two inter-related questions:

First, should the student loan program also become an income transfer program, with higher income college graduates subsidizing student borrowers who end up earning less?

And, second, if some students think they might have higher than average incomes, will they then decide not to participate, and—in the process—deny revenues to the program that are needed to help subsidize others?

In the health insurance business, of course, that's known as "the problem of adverse selection." Too many sick people—or too few healthy people—make a health insurance plan actuarially unsound.

The best advice I got was to design a plan under which nobody pays back more than they borrow, plus interest. IDEA does anticipate some losses from people who die or never generate enough income—even over 25 years—to pay back their loan.

But, the plan is set up to cover those losses out of the difference between what the government pays in interest on the bonds it sells and the interest the government charges to the student borrowers who end up taking out loans.

And, borrowers who end up with high incomes—and who don't need the full term of the loan—can pay off their loan early without having to pay a pre-payment penalty.

Same complexities need addressing on national service proposal

There are a lot of the same kinds of complexities on the other side of your higher education agenda—using national service as a way of paying tuition or working off student loans.

And, I personally believe there's a lot to be learned from people in Minnesota and other states about how to deal with those complexities. Some of the issues include:

How to make sure that non-profit agencies and state and local governments decide what community problems could benefit the most from an infusion of young volunteers.

How to make sure that a volunteer experience is also a learning experience—by linking community service to schools or colleges or some other source of more formal education.

How to make sure that volunteers don't displace people who are already employed.

In designing a new program for national service, you and your advisors will also have to decide how to build off a number of existing initiatives like:

Programs all around the country that are just getting started with grants from the new Commission on National Service.

All the existing programs that use loan forgiveness to encourage young people to take jobs in fields like teaching and medicine.

The service corps programs now being run by dozens of states and local governments all over the country.

The incentives now in place that encourage young people to serve in programs like the Peace Corps or the military.

As you stated in your first post-election news conference, integrating a national service option with our already complex system of student financial aid is also no simple task.

Deciding how large a stipend to offer, for example, and, deciding whether family income or the cost of instruction should make any difference in the size of the award will have a major impact on cost and on the level of interest the program will generate among students who qualify for other types of grants or scholarships.

There will also be the need to respond to some very serious questions about equity in using national service to finance higher education.

As you know, some supporters of stipended service would make a period of service a requirement for getting student aid.

But, that kind of mandate would immediately divide students into two classes—those who had to do service and those who could afford not to.

A service mandate—or even making national service a more attractive way of financing college—could also be less feasible for non-traditional students who are older, or who are working full or part-time . . . students who have family and other responsibilities and who can't take time off to do one or two years of service to their country or their community.

Finally, I, and others who strongly support non-stipended service learning initiatives at the K-12 and post-secondary levels, will need to be assured that a major new stipended national service program won't draw needed attention and resources away from those (largely local) initiatives.

Four quick suggestions for getting started

By raising all these issues and concerns, I'm certainly not intending to throw sand in the gears of your proposal to change the way we pay for college.

I support the general ideas for change that you have put forward. And, I welcome the leadership you seem prepared to offer those ideas as you and your advisors give them more depth.

Within that constructive spirit, I have four quick suggestions on initial steps to implement your ideas that could be taken early in the next session of Congress.

First, I would ask the Congress to accelerate and expand the direct loan demonstration we passed this year.

I would move up the starting date by twelve months—to the 1993-94 school year. And, I would increase the number of schools involved—especially the number of schools that offer income-contingent loan repayment.

Second, for all the reasons I've stated previously, I believe it would be wise to use the major features in the Simon-Durenberger IDEA proposal in those schools in the demonstration that offer income-contingent loan repayment.

All that would take is a directive to the Secretary of Education, who has the authority to decide how the size of the payments gets determined and who does the collection.

Third, I believe the best place to expand the role of community service in paying for college is to expand on the National and Community Service Act as it comes up for reauthorization next year.

There are sound models for testing a variety of stipended service options already being funded. We just need to evaluate those models carefully, and, where they work, make sure they get expanded and replicated elsewhere around the country.

And, finally, I believe you would be wise to keep national service as an option, not a mandate, and to use existing federal legislation to expand the links between community service and education that are being established in states like Minnesota.

The National and Community Service Act envisions a highly decentralized system of promoting and supporting service opportunities ranging from service learning projects in the K-12 and post-secondary education systems to full and part-time stipended service. I believe that current policy direction should not be replaced by a single national program run from Washington.

It's also important to note that both the Higher Education Act and Elementary and Secondary Education Act include opportunities to expand the link between community service and education. Several such provisions were expanded this year in the Higher Education Amendments of 1992. And, it may be that next year's reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act represents another forum for firming up this link.

To summarize, I strongly agree with you that we need a new and better way of paying for college. And, I agree with your emphasis on individual responsibility and fiscal reality. But, I also believe we must do big change carefully, so we get the job done right.

I look forward to working closely with you, your advisors, and my colleagues in the Congress to implement the good ideas you have put forward in ways that work to the benefit of all Americans.

Sincerely,

DAVE DURENBERGER,
U.S. Senator.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF MIKE ESPY

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the nomination of MIKE ESPY to serve as Secretary of Agriculture.

I have visited with Mr. ESPY both personally and as a member of the Agriculture Committee reviewing his credentials and qualifications to serve as Secretary, and have explored in some detail his views on rural development, nutrition and reform of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Mr. ESPY has good credentials in these areas and is in a position to well serve rural America. Further, with regard to an area important to me—the restructuring and revitalization of USDA—I believe that Mr. ESPY will not be content to sit atop the heap at the U.S. Department of Agriculture and dabble in a handful of pet projects while the 42 nearly autonomous agencies beneath him continue on disparate courses, apparently oblivious to the Secretary and the larger mission of the Department.

The restructuring of USDA is a very important issue for U.S. agriculture and taxpayers in general and is one that I hope will become a priority for the new Secretary. Mr. ESPY seems to be interested. In his nomination hearing before the committee, he indicated that it will indeed be one of his priorities.

As many of you know, when I first started this streamlining effort, the Department could not even tell me how many regional, State and local USDA offices there were in the country or precisely where they were, quite apart from how many people were served or the dollar sums involved. Over the course of 1992 the beginnings of a near revolution in management at the Department of Agriculture—a revolution that has resulted the beginning of a top to bottom review of the mission and mechanisms of USDA. With that beginning, I hope that when the next Secretary's tenure at the Department ends, the USDA should have fewer offices, fewer employees, and should offer better service to farmers and consumers at much less expense to all taxpayers.

I hope that upon confirmation, Mr. ESPY, will actively involve himself in the business of managing the diverse facets of USDA. It will not be an easy task, nor one without controversy. Strong pressures will be brought to bear in attempts to deter or delay the departmental streamlining we all know must occur if U.S. agriculture is to remain strong.

Many other important issues will confront the new Secretary. During his confirmation hearing Mr. ESPY indicated a concern about the level of the Federal deficit and acknowledged the handicap that such a deficit placed on the effectiveness of government. Unfortunately it is that deficit that will produce one of the first problems for the new Secretary. The bumper crop of the last growing season has translated into new cost projections for USDA commodity programs, increasing 1993 projected costs to $17.1 billion from the $9.7 billion of last year.

In addition, the Secretary will have enormous responsibilities as manager of U.S. commodity and export programs. Sales to the former Soviet Union, concerns about the United States marketing order system, multi-lateral trading treaties are issues that are reaching critical stages.

Mr. President, in terms of the health of U.S. agriculture, there is simply no substitute for increasing exports of American farm goods. Even though some U.S. commodities do not fare as well as others under an export-oriented farm and trade policy, the fact is that 40 percent of our farm products are exported each year.

We have an occasional tendency to focus inordinately upon a few supposed problems associated with export-oriented farm policy, such as occasional price instability. But the alternative to exporting more is the acceptance of fewer total jobs and a dramatic reduction in farm population. Every Member of this body wants to keep as many farmers as possible actively employed on the farm, but in order to do this, we must have growing export markets.

I make this point because as an incoming Secretary of Agriculture in a new administration, Mr. ESPY will come under pressure to depart from export-oriented farm policy. The 1985 and 1990 farm bills were truly a product of bipartisan cooperation, and have resulted in record net income for American farmers. I believe that Congress legislated the correct farm policy directives in those two bills, and I would urge that that direction be continued. I urge that the Secretary resist arguments to alter the current programming and instead focus on those areas where reform is truly in order. Policy changes that result in reduced exports such as higher loan rates, the abandonment of meaningful GATT discussions, or failure to ratify NAFTA would in my opinion be a grave error.

Wetlands and environmental policy will also be at the forefront of important issues for U.S. farmers. As is the case with all of the aforementioned, I hope that the new Secretary actively and forcefully carries the banner for sound farm policy. U.S. agriculture is an industry that is too important to compromise.

Mr. President, I look forward to working with Mr. ESPY. I hope that his tenure will be one of unprecedented reform of USDA and of continued prosperity for American agriculture.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF MIKE ESPY

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I rise today to congratulate MIKE ESPY on his confirmation as Secretary of Agriculture. My State of Minnesota is the seventh largest agriculture State and I look forward to working closely with him in the months and years ahead.

Secretary ESPY's record on the Agriculture Committee in the House of Representatives reflects his dedication to the protection of our Nation's family farmers. Minnesota is a diverse agricultural State, and I know that MIKE ESPY has the knowledge and concern to represent them well. We are the No. 1 producer of sugar beets; No. 2 producer of turkeys; No. 3 producer of soybeans, spring wheat, sunflowers, green peas, hogs, and mink; and No. 4 producer of corn, oats, barley, hay, and dairy. Minnesota also has significant honey, beef, and chicken operations.

I look forward to working with Secretary ESPY to reform the Federal milk marketing order system and the Federal crop insurance program. I will shortly reintroduce my legislation, the Midwest Dairy Equity Act and the Federal Crop Insurance Fairness Act, to accomplish these goals.

I also look forward to working with Secretary ESPY as well as Ambassador Kantor to negotiate a side agreement that will strengthen the provisions related to sugar in the North American Free-Trade Agreement.

Mr. President, the next 4 years will be critical to the future of American agriculture. The 1995 Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act will have to provide a visionary framework to carry American agriculture into the 21st century. I am confident that Secretary ESPY will provide the leadership during this important period.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF MIKE ESPY

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise in support of MIKE ESPY, Secretary-designate for the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

At first glance, the Mississippi Delta that Secretary-designate ESPY represents could not be more different from my home State of Iowa. Constituencies, program crops and even the weather, give our respective districts very different priorities, problems and outlooks when it comes to agriculture.

But on deeper examination, we indeed have much in common.

For both of our regions, the past decade was not kind. In Iowa alone, the number of farms dropped by 15,000 between 1980 and 1990. During that same time period, Iowa's farm population declined by 135,000. I know Mississippi experienced a similar exodus. Whether it be Yazoo County, MS, or my own home county of Butler in Iowa we find fathers and mothers unable to pass the family farm on to their children because the barriers to entry are simply too high. We find small towns with large elderly populations and dwindling tax bases struggling to provide the barest of municipal services. We find family farms—long the backbone of this country's food production—constantly facing new threats.

Reflecting on these strong commonalities that transcend our few differences, I take solace in this nomination. I take solace in this nomination after receiving assurances in person that he will fight on behalf of the American farmer. Indeed, on his watch, there will be many battles here and abroad. Overseas, he recognizes that in light of flat domestic demand for agricultural exports, we need to fight for new markets, and for freer and fairer existing markets. Toward that end, he knows that he will have to ensure that American farmers have a seat at the table in all trade negotiations; that trade barriers must be removed and illegal subsidies curtailed. He cannot, and will not—in my view—lose sight of the fact that agriculture is, and always was, the linchpin to a successful conclusion of the Uruguay Round. He recognizes the enormous potential markets in a North American Free-Trade Agreement. His forceful advocacy on behalf of the catfish farmers in the lower Mississippi River Delta demonstrates that he understands that value-added products create not only domestic demand of agricultural products, but also jobs in agriculture, processing and transportation.

But the battles at home are just as formidable as those abroad. From the Office of Management and Budget, he will have to fight the mounting pressure to balance the budget on the backs of the farmers. With the Environmental Protection Agency, he will have to be a forceful advocate for the interests of the farmers. And with the Secretary of State, he will have to argue that the United States should play hardball with our trading partners who have also been our traditional allies.

Mr. President, these are not tasks to be taken lightly, and I have received every assurance from Secretary-designate ESPY that he will champion the cause of the farmer.

MIKE ESPY once described America as a great chain of States, and stressed that like any chain, it is only as strong as its weakest link. Sadly, despite being the production envy of the agricultural world, many of our country's weakest links are found in rural America.

I know he shares my concern for the future of the family farm and the conditions in our rural communities. And I know he recognizes that expanded markets—domestic and abroad—are the lifeblood of rural America.

I look forward to working with Mr. ESPY and urge my colleagues to pass favorably on his nomination.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF FEDERICO PEÑA

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the nomination of Federico Peña to be Secretary of the Department of Transportation. Having worked with Mr. Peña on a variety of issues during consideration of the Clean Air Act, I personally believe he will be an excellent Secretary and I urge my colleagues in the Senate to confirm him.

Mr. Peña brings experience, enthusiasm, and intelligence to this demanding position. As the former mayor of Denver, he has taken a leadership role and worked closely with State and Federal transportation authorities on numerous major projects. As a former Colorado State house minority leader, he understands that competing priorities need to be balanced and minority views taken into consideration as well as the desires of the majority. And as the recent leader of President Clinton's transition transportation policy team, he has had the opportunity to become familiar with the many varied transportation issues of national importance.

Mr. Peña is a strong supporter of the 1991 Intermodal Surface Transportation Act and has promised to make implementation of ISTEA one of his top priorities. He realizes that transportation policy involves not just modes of transportation, but a myriad of interconnected issues, including economics, environmental concerns, safety, quality of life, mobility, and technological innovation.

I believe Mr. Peña will be a superior Transportation Secretary, and I look forward to working with him on improving and modernizing our Nation's transportation infrastructure.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF RONALD H. BROWN

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I would like to express my strong support for the confirmation of Ronald H. Brown to be Secretary of Commerce. I have known and worked closely with Ron for years, and I am not aware of a more qualified nominee to lead the Department of Commerce into the 21st century.

Our Nation's prosperity relies upon an integrated and coordinated economic strategy to bolster the competitiveness of U.S. businesses in the global marketplace. The Department of Commerce must serve a central role in both formulating and coordinating policies to revitalize our economy. It must play a leadership role in strengthening Federal support for civilian technology and manufacturing. The Nation's industrial competitiveness relies on investment in the development of modern technology and the dissemination of current technologies to America's 350,000 small and medium-sized firms.

Also, in the years leading to the year 2000, issues concerning the prudent management and conservation of the Earth's sealife will demand the careful attention of our Secretary of Commerce.

I have known Ron through his many years of public service and I am confident that he has the experience, the qualifications and the knowledge necessary to address these critical issues. Ron Brown brings unique and diverse experience to the job of Secretary of Commerce. His experience ranges from social worker and civil rights advocate to international trade. Ron has wide knowledge and experience in the workings of Congress which will foster a sense of partnership between the Department of Commerce and the Congress in the development of our country's business and trade.

Clearly, President Clinton has made a great choice for Secretary of Commerce. I look forward to working with Ron in the years to come.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF RICHARD RILEY

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I want to express my strong support for Gov. Richard Riley who was confirmed by the Senate earlier today as Secretary of Education. Governor Riley is a leader in education who will bring fresh ideas and proven effectiveness to the job of revitalizing our educational system.

As Governor of South Carolina, Richard Riley paid special attention to education issues. He fought for a series of reforms in his State's schools. His efforts led to an increase in high school graduates, higher overall SAT scores and greater numbers of students passing basic skills tests.

Secretary Riley brings these successes and many more to the demanding job of overseeing national education reform. I am particularly pleased that he will have a strong and most capable Deputy Secretary in Madeline Kunin, Vermont's former Governor and my close friend.

Mr. President, I congratulate Governor Riley on his confirmation and look forward to working with him to improve our schools and build a stronger, more educated America.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF DR. DONNA E. SHALALA

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, the mission President Clinton has laid out for the Department of Health and Human Services [HHS] is formidable. Meeting it will require vision, leadership, and innovative thinking. I support President Clinton's selection of Donna Shalala who was confirmed by the Senate earlier today as Secretary of HHS.

With experience as a teacher, an urban policy analyst, a leader of two higher education institutions, and a public servant at the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Secretary Shalala has an acute understanding of a number of health and human service issues.

Foremost in her activities will be working to reform our health care system. President Clinton plans to introduce his landmark health care reform bill later this year and HHS will be called on to provide its input and expertise in developing it. Dr. Shalala has expressed her commitment to this important goal, and I look forward to working with her on it. I am further encouraged that Dr. Shalala believes strongly in helping rural communities shape health care delivery systems that meet their special needs. This is something that I care deeply about, and I believe it must be an important part of the debate on health care reform.

I also look forward to working with Secretary Shalala on strengthening our AIDS programs, giving women's health care the attention it deserves, strengthening our commitment to the Head Start Program, and immunizing our children against preventable diseases.

From health care reform to welfare reform, HHS faces many ambitious undertakings in the years ahead. I congratulate Secretary Shalala on her confirmation and wish her well in this challenging new role.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF JESSE BROWN

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I am pleased to support the confirmation of Jesse Brown as Secretary of Veterans Affairs.

I have spent some time with Mr. Brown recently and have been very impressed with his concern for our Nation's veterans. Specifically, we discussed a situation veterans are facing in Miles City, MT. Mr. Brown promised to review this situation and to make this review one of his first priorities upon confirmation.

The situation in Miles City is grave. The VA recently announced plans to downgrade the Miles City VA Medical Center. This decision, however, directly contradicts the recommendations from a recent comprehensive review by a VA clinical team. The VA's own internal report specifically states that, "A serious threat to the region's veterans would result from downgrading this surgical service."

Although the VA's press release announcing this decision claims it was made for quality of care reasons, the VA's internal report found no problems with the quality of care at the Miles City VAMC. In fact, the report states that, "the potential clearly exists for developing a sorely needed, good quality, primary surgical mission at VAMC Miles City."

The Miles City VAMC is desperately needed since it is the only VA surgical facility serving eastern Montana, the western half of the Dakotas, and northern Wyoming. This medical center serves an area of 77,000 square miles and includes 45,000 veterans. The average Miles City veteran travels 330 miles one way to reach that facility. Requiring that they travel even further, and often at their own expense, is unworkable and unacceptable. Many of the veterans that would be required to make such a trip lack the physical capability to drive their own vehicles, and the remainder could not endure a trip of that magnitude.

Mr. President, eastern Montana's veterans have served their country with honor and dignity. I believe that Jesse Brown will see that veterans are treated with the respect they have earned. I fully support this confirmation.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF CAROL M. BROWNER

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, it is a pleasure to support the confirmation of Carol M. Browner as Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. Ms. Browner's experience as the Commissioner of Florida's Department of Environmental Regulation, her experience here in the Senate as an aide to Vice President GORE and Senator Lawton Chiles, and her lifelong dedication to the cause of environmental protection are a solid foundation for success in her new endeavor.

Last week the Environment and Public Works Committee held its hearing on this nomination. Members of the committee asked questions across a broad spectrum of environmental issues. We were especially pleased that Governor Chiles of Florida, formerly a Member of this body, came to that hearing to introduce and speak for Ms. Browner in the confirmation process. Everything that the committee has learned indicates that Ms. Browner will be a fine Administrator of EPA.

I am especially impressed with her experience in the area of wetlands protection. It is one of the most difficult issues now facing EPA. I am sure that her success in resolving disputes related to the Florida Everglades will provide a useful model for many of the wetlands and natural resource questions occurring in other parts of the Nation.

So, I congratulate President Clinton on his choice of Carol Browner to head EPA. As Ms. Browner enters this new job, we also say farewell to Bill Reilly who has been the EPA Administrator for the last 4 years. Bill Reilly has done an excellent job. We are proud of his efforts and grateful for his public service.

He shaped the clean air bill that President Bush sent to Congress. The allowance trading system for sulfur dioxide emissions in that bill was truly innovative and broke the long deadlock on acid rain here in the Congress. Mr. Reilly continued U.S. leadership in the world community on the issue of ozone depletion. He pushed the administration to play a full role in the Rio summit and moved the United States along the road to international environmental cooperation.

As we make this transition, I have heard some disparage the environmental accomplishments of the last 12 years. Well, I believe that it has been a period of real accomplishment. Since 1981 when President Reagan took office, we have enacted several major pieces of environmental legislation. The Clean Air Act, Superfund, the Solid Waste Disposal Act, and the Safe Drinking Water Act have all been reauthorized and strengthened. We passed a coastal barriers protection law and reauthorized it during this period. The Clean Water Act was extended on two occasions. We passed an oilspill bill and legislation to protect children from lead, asbestos, and radon. We revamped the highway law so that it is more friendly to the environment and open to other modes of transportation. The world joined in the Montreal protocol to protect the ozone layer and strengthened the protocol with the London accord.

This is a very substantial record that we as a nation can be proud of. We wish the new administration every success. But we surely also say, "Well done," to those who have contributed much over the past 12 years.

Finally, Mr. President I want to pay tribute to all the hard-working folks in the trenches at EPA who served Mr. Reilly and his predecessors and who will be there tomorrow and in the days ahead as Ms. Browner leads the Agency. The permanent staff of the Environmental Protection Agency is an extraordinarily dedicated and highly talented group of people. Carrying out the environmental laws enacted by the Congress is not an easy duty. Expectations are high, resources are small, time pressures are great, and public rewards are few. The ability and dedication of these public servants who serve the American people at EPA is the most important ingredient for a successful EPA.

Mr. President, we extend to Carol Browner our best wishes for success as she enters into her new duties as Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF CONGRESSMAN LEON PANETTA

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I would like to congratulate Congressman LEON PANETTA on his designation by President Clinton to be the new Director of the Office of Management and Budget. As the chairman of the House Budget Committee during the 101st and 102d Congress, LEON PANETTA will bring to OMB a wealth of knowledge about the budget, and about the kinds of difficult choices we will have to make if we are to reduce, and then eliminate the deficit.

Congressman PANETTA has also shown a real interest in the organization and management of the executive branch. This is vital, because how the Government is structured and operates will determine whether it spends money efficiently and effectively. These issues comprise the types of fundamental reforms that have come to be known as reinventing government.

Unfortunately, while management is named first in OMB's title, it is often thought of last. This is because in the Federal Government, it is generally seen as largely unrelated to the budget. But well-run governments elsewhere more properly view management and budget as two sides of the same coin. Management's program performance goals are incorporated into the budget, showing what results each budgeted amount is to achieve.

Good management is fundamental to deficit reduction, because it will help us do more with less. Also, program performance goals will help us better shape our budget debates. When we ask how much we should spend on a program, we should also ask what that money will achieve.

This is why I introduced S. 20—the Government Performance and Results Act—2 years ago. It would require agencies to specify goals and report results. When enacted and fully implemented, it will enable us to develop a performance-based budget. This legislation passed the Senate in October, and I will be reintroducing it today.

From what I know of Congressman PANETTA's interest in improving management—and of President Clinton's interest in reinventing government—I believe the new administration might find this proposal very appealing. During his confirmation hearing, Congressman PANETTA stated his support for establishing program goals and the reporting of actual results: "You have got to have a system of being able to determine whether or not an agency is doing the job." I look forward to working with him and the new administration to enact program performance goals and budgeting based on actual results.

With respect to government reorganization, I note that both Congressman PANETTA and I introduced legislation creating commissions to accomplish this. During his confirmation hearing, I was pleased to hear him reaffirm his conviction that Federal agencies should be streamlined, downsized, and refocused, and that this needs to be done wholesale, and not just with a little tinkering here and there. And if I read the tea leaves right, President Clinton may be of like mind. He has a history of preferring the commission approach to achieving a consensus in addressing these kinds of issues.

I hope the new administration will consider a commission with a broad scope, to cover not only structural reforms, but also operational issues like civil service reform and greater managerial flexibility. My own commission bill, which I will be reintroducing today as S. 15, provides for a broad mandate. These issues are central to reinventing government, and maximizing performance for the tax dollar.

As the future Director of OMB, Congressman PANETTA understands OMB's central role in making the executive branch work rationally, effectively, and efficiently through its review of regulations. OMB is the hub of the wheel of government. It alone can undertake the ongoing function of unifying various government directives into a coherent whole. It alone can insure that the President's team is executing his policies. It alone can insure that well-intended regulations in one area do not have unintended consequences in another. In a Government as large as ours, this function is indispensable. The problem is that it is not authorized by law. Special interests, who believe that they can control their relevant agency, do not want it authorized.

Ultimately, my concern in this area is that Government regulations will continue to strangle the creation of new small businesses, the true engine of job growth in our economy. If the new administration is going to succeed in their top priority to create new jobs, they must understand the difficulty new businesses face in setting up shop. In response to a question from Senator COHEN regarding the burdens placed on business by the lack of a responsible timeframe in formulating Government regulations, the Director-designate responded:

I just want to assure you that the President-elect has this at the top of his agenda, because from the State level, he has experienced the kind of regulations and requirements that the Federal Government has handed down, and he has said that there has to be a better way to expedite these things.

Yet, it requires more than expediting regulations. It requires that the social or environmental goals we have enacted are properly balanced against the economic progress we must seek to achieve in order to remain competitive. I hope the new administration understands this and I am interested in working with the new OMB Director to achieve this goal through statute.

Turning to the budget, during the campaign, the American people were presented with putting people first, President Clinton's plan for the economy and budget. As we consider our economic future, we must examine whether the current recovery can afford $150 billion in new taxes as the President has proposed. Can our Nation afford $220 billion in new spending at a time when we have these tremendous deficits as far as the eye can see? From looking at the numbers, it seems this is simple more tax and spend.

Today, on his first full day in office, President Clinton faces his first true test on deficit reduction. The 1990 budget agreement provides that on January 21, 1993, the President shall decide whether to adjust the maximum deficit amounts allowable under the law. This may appear to be a technical matter, but it sends a very important message. The decision on whether to adjust the maximum deficit amounts for 1994 and 1995 provides President Clinton with his first opportunity to demonstrate his commitment to deficit reduction. He will have to decide: between higher targets and lower targets, that is, between higher deficits and lower deficits. Today, the American people and the financial markets will see how serious this new administration will be about the deficit.

The new President's second test on deficit reduction will come soon: whether to combine his short-term economic package with a long-term deficit reduction package. At the 2-day economic summit in Little Rock, Congressman PANETTA stated something that all of us in this Chamber know to be true:

If you do a stimulus package, let me assure you, Congress loves to pass the sugar, but hates to deal with the vinegar, which is the deficit part of it. So it does have to be locked into a single package if you're going to be able to get it through.

In response to a question during his confirmation hearing, he reaffirmed this belief:

You have got to have both working in conjunction. Obviously you may want to move some of the investments up front, but you have to show the American public that it is tied to a long term, credible deficit reduction plan. Because if you simply throw money out there, I think it could do incredible harm in terms of the markets and people's trust in our ability to again get the deficit down. So the two have to be tied together.

I hope President Clinton will take this advice. Without a long-term deficit reduction package, the financial markets will respond to a short-term economic package with an increase in long-term interest rates. This will make it more expensive for businesses to invest in long-term projects, as well as swell the Government's cost of borrowing money long term—directly adverse to our mutual goal of reducing the deficit.

During the past 2 weeks, there has been much discussion, including major stories in the Washington Post and the New York Times, as to whether President Clinton will abide by his pledge that his budget plan will reduce the Federal deficit in half.

Some have suggested that the budget numbers released by the OMB 2 weeks ago present a budget situation unforeseen. But one only has to look at the CBO baseline numbers presented last August, during the height of the campaign, to realize that the latest OMB projections are really no surprise. Congressman PANETTA acknowledged that he was aware of the CBO deficit projections last August, and that those numbers, taken alone, are not a reason to do away with the pledge to meet the deficit reduction proposed.

What exactly is the President's pledge? That his plan would reduce the deficit in half in 4 years. In 1992, the budget deficit reached a record high $290 billion. To reduce the deficit in half, the budget deficit in 1996 would have to be less than $145 billion. During his confirmation hearing, Congressman PANETTA went even further, telling the committee that "we need to grind this deficit down, and we need to try to get it below 1 percent of GDP." This would result in a deficit of less than $60 billion, and if that is the administration's new goal, it is definitely worth striving toward.

During his confirmation hearing, Congressman PANETTA expressed his strong preference for deficit reduction goals rather than fixed deficit targets. While there may not appear to be any difference between the two, there is, in fact, a subtle, yet critical difference between them.

A deficit reduction goal commits one to a series of changes designed to achieve a specific amount of deficit reduction, such as the 1990 budget agreement which purported to save $500 billion. A fixed deficit target, on the other hand, commits one to a specific deficit amount at the end of a year, such as zero by a 1997.

The difference is fundamental in terms of the approach one takes toward deficit reduction. Even with a deficit reduction goal, the actual deficit can continue to rise. In fact, that is what has happened during the past 2 years. Even with the 1990 budget agreement and its $500 billion deficit reduction, the 1991 and 1992 budget deficits reached all time records. And that is because spending cuts do not reflect actual reductions in spending, but simply reductions in projected spending levels in the future.

Only in Washington does a budget cut result in an increase in spending. With our family budgets, if we reduce spending for a certain expense, we mean an actual reduction. But within the Federal budget, so-called budget cuts occur from an inflated baseline. Before spending cuts occur, current year spending is adjusted upward based on inflation projections. From these inflated numbers flow any cuts that are agreed upon by the Congress and the President. Thus, a program funded at $100 million in 1992 could be funded at $101 million the following year, yet under the budget rules by which we play, receive a 2-percent cut. Thus, spending continues to rise despite the cuts which are made.

Congressman PANETTA made a commitment to practice truth in budgeting. I urge him to have the resolve to meet this commitment. I am concerned that the baseline budget will be inflated during the next round of budget forecasts. Not only will this offer another excuse for moving away from the President's promise because the projected deficit will appear even larger, but inflating the baseline will make it easier for the new administration to claim that their deficit reduction goal of $145 billion has been met.

There is a tremendous amount of difference between reducing projected deficits by $145 billion in 1996, and getting the deficit down to $145 billion in that year. According to the Director-designate, everything is on the table: this includes defense spending, domestic discretionary spending, international aid, entitlements, and new taxes. I am concerned that the new administration is going to feel much more comfortable raising taxes relative to reducing spending. I am concerned that we will end up with a package of phantom cuts and real tax increases.

Throughout his confirmation hearing, Congressman PANETTA reiterated his belief that increased taxes had to be part of the solution. At one point, he stated:

You have to look at revenues  you cannot fashion a package, a credible package on deficit reduction, and take revenues off the table. You just can't.

Yet, that was the theory of the 1990 budget agreement—that there would be a certain amount of revenue raising and a certain amount of budget cutting. But what did it do? It simply helped worsen the recession, which of course had a very negative impact on the deficit.

During the confirmation hearing, Congressman PANETTA and I discussed legislation he introduced last year which included an automatic tax increase in the event Congress failed to enact new taxes to meet the goals that it had previously established. I must say, Mr. President, this concerns me greatly. Surely we must focus first on the bloated Federal budget before seeking to raise $150 billion in new taxes. Federal revenues have more than doubled since 1980. The problem is, Federal spending has grown even faster. We do not need automatic tax increases. What we need is a serious effort to hold down levels of spending.

Which brings me to my last area of concern. Throughout the campaign, President Clinton stressed time and again that one can not achieve real deficit reduction without getting a handle on health care expenses. This was reiterated by Congressman PANETTA. At the same time, President Clinton has promised to improve access to affordable health care to the tens of million of Americans currently without health insurance. How does the administration plan to trim health care expenses to reduce the deficit, yet increase access for 35 million more Americans? Congressman PANETTA responded that this would be one of the new administration's greatest challenges. Indeed, it will be. He stated that at the very least, any health care reform should be deficit neutral. If that is that case, then other entitlement programs are going to have to take major cuts to meet the President's deficit reduction goals.

Four years from now, what will matter will be President Clinton's promises and the results that have been achieved. LEON PANETTA understands the tough choices that face the new administration. I would like to end with a quote from him from the confirmation hearing:

Are there constituencies out there that will take it out on us? You bet there are. Are there people who will say you don't have to do this kind of pain? You bet there are. But in the end, if we do the job, and we take the steps, and we put this country on the right track, then I think all of us, at least from an historical point of view, will be regarded as having been good public servants. That is, I think, the challenge that confronts us.

I am confident that Congressman PANETTA is fully aware of the tough choices ahead. I am not so confident that any single adviser, no matter how wise, can control the appetites whetted for greater spending by the last election. But I hope he can.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF ROGER
ALTMAN

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I am very pleased to vote in favor of the confirmation of Roger Altman as Deputy Treasury Secretary of the United States. Mr. Altman's prior experience at the Treasury, as well as his long and distinguished career as an investment banker, testify to his readiness for the responsibilities that await him.

Those responsibilities will be heavy. The economic revitalization of this country has finally made it to the very top of our Government's agenda. We have seen a lot of speeches and reports on competitiveness, economic decline, the budget and trade deficits, and the like. Secretary Bentsen and Mr. Altman will provide the Treasury Department leadership required to take action.

To put America back on the road to healthy, long-term economic growth, we need to address some simple but large problems. We have all seen the statistics. Our national savings rate is half that of Japan. Investment lags by almost as much.

As a result, productivity growth has hovered at one-quarter the Japanese rate for more than three decades. This is what lies behind stagnating living standards and the dimming of America's future.

Tackling this problem means the formulation of a long-term strategy to increase savings and investment in the American economy. We have heard plenty about the direct problem already. The Federal budget deficit effectively lowers our national savings rate by several percentage points of GDP. We cannot tolerate that any longer.

The tax policy reflected in the Internal Revenue Code results in incentives that reward consumption and penalize savings and investment. It is time to shift those priorities. There are a number of proposals on the table. Right now I wish only to point out that the United States is the only OECD country without a broad-based national consumption tax.

I am encouraged by what I hear from the new administration. I think they are taking a hard look at what we need to do to get our House in order, and I look forward to supporting Secretary Bentsen, Mr. Altman, and the rest of the economic team over the coming months and years.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF DR. ALICE RIVLIN

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I would like to congratulate Dr. Alice Rivlin on her designation by President Clinton to be the new Deputy Director of OMB. As the first Director of the Congressional Budget Office and currently a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution, she will bring to OMB a wealth of knowledge about the budget and the kinds of difficult choices we will have to make if we are to reduce, and then eliminate the deficit.

Dr. Rivlin's recent book, "Reviving the American Dream," presents three different scenarios for the future of our Nation—"The Eighties Continued," which means a continuation of the status quo and large budget deficits, "Back to the Sixties," which includes a return to a very activist Federal Government, or "Dividing the Job," which suggests that the Federal Government return to the States the central authority for many programs currently performed at the Federal level.

Reading over the President's program, Putting People First, there is reason for concern that the Nation is headed toward scenario No. 2. Writing before the recent Presidential election, Dr. Rivlin described the second of her three scenarios:

With the energy of a Franklin D. Roosevelt or a Lyndon B. Johnson, the new President puts together an aggressive program of Federal spending and tax increases and steers it through Congress. The Federal Government launches major new grants to both State and local governments—to improve skills, subsidize low- and middle-income housing, modernize infrastructure, and reform the schools.

I hope that the new administration will take a good look at Dr. Rivlin's new book and the concerns that she raises with the Federal Government assuming more responsibilities.

One of the strongest arguments for clarifying the role of the Federal Government versus State and local governments is that it fixes accountability for performance. If all levels of Government are responsible for solving a particular problem, then no level of Government is ultimately accountable when the problem remains. The public does not really know who to hold accountable. To me, this raises several questions: Doesn't the inclination for the Federal Government to solve every societal problem result in a never-ending drain on the Federal Treasury? Don't we need to better define the limits on the Federal Government's responsibility?

Whether or not we are able to better define the limits of Federal responsibility, we need another step to strengthen the accountability of the Federal Government. We must do a much better job of focusing on the performance of Federal programs. And to do that, we have to begin defining what each program is supposed to accomplish, by requiring agencies to state specific, measurable performance goals.

This is key to improving the management side—the often overlooked "M" in OMB. But it is also key to improving the budget process—because it then allows us to develop a performance-based budget. This is the incorporation of program management goals into a program's budget—something that would tell us and the American people a lot more about what the money is supposed to buy. Directly linking program resources with program performance is a commonsense reform, long overdue in the Federal Government.

During the campaign, the American people were presented with putting people first, President Clinton's plan for the economy and budget. As we consider our economic future, we must examine whether the current recovery can afford $150 billion in new taxes. Can our Nation afford $220 billion in new spending at a time when we have these tremendous deficits as far as the eye can see?

Today, the new President will face his first true test on deficit reduction. The decision on whether to adjust the maximum deficit amounts for 1994 and 1995 provides President Clinton with his first opportunity to demonstrate his commitment to deficit reduction. He will have to decide between higher targets and lower targets, that is, between higher deficits and lower deficits. Today, the American people and the financial markets will see how serious this new administration will be about the deficit.

I am confident that both Dr. Rivlin and LEON PANETTA, President Clinton's pick to lead the Office of Management and Budget, understand the difficult choices which confront our Nation. But as I stated to Congressman PANETTA, I am not so confident that any single adviser, or any two for that matter, no matter how wise, can control the appetites whetted for greater spending by the last election. But working as a team, I hope that Dr. Rivlin and Congressman PANETTA can meet the challenges ahead.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF POSITION ON A VOTE—
DONNA SHALALA TO BE SECRETARY OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, on the voice vote just taken on the nomination of Donna Shalala to be Secretary of Health and Human Services, Senators HELMS and SMITH have requested that they be recorded as having voted in the negative.

Mr. President, I just say additionally I am pleased to cooperate with the majority leader and the incoming administration. We think we have done a good job in scrutinizing the nominees. We believe they have met the test. As I have said many times before, I believe we should act as quickly as possible and we have done that. And we will be following that policy from here on wherever we can.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader.

Mr. MITCHELL. I wish to thank the distinguished Republican leader for his cooperation in this matter. We have worked closely on these and he has been fully cooperative and supportive. And I believe that the President and members of his administration will be pleased at the prompt action taken by the Senate with respect to these many nominations.

Others remain outstanding. As all Senators know, the hearings on the Attorney General designee are continuing in the Judiciary Committee today.

The hearings have been completed on the nomination for the Secretary of Commerce, Ronald Brown. I inquire of the Republican leader whether, in his view, it will be possible to reach an agreement to take up and dispose of that matter later in the day today?

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I say in response to the majority leader's question, I hope that can be done. I understand the majority has a policy meeting. Following that meeting, we hope to be in a position to approve that nomination. There may be requests for a rollcall. If that happens, we will have a rollcall. Otherwise, there will be statements made. I hope we can clear the nomination for action.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I thank my colleague. I say, of course, we will be pleased to have such time for debate as any Senator wishes and, if a rollcall is requested, to accommodate that request as well, of course.

Mr. President, I thank my colleague.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate returns to legislative session.

REGARDING THE FINAL REPORT OF THE SENATE SELECT COMMITTEE ON POW/MIA AFFAIRS: CYNICISM, CREDIBILITY, AND CONCLUSIONS

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, one of the central problems which faced the Senate Select Committee on POW/MIA Affairs, and one of the central problems which faces this country, is how to overcome the cynicism which surrounds almost any statement made by Government.

When I was growing up, in an earlier and perhaps more innocent age, people took comfort from Government: The fireside chats gave us hope; the Truman walks gave us confidence; the Eisenhower smile gave us a peaceful feeling.

But those feelings have faded. The credibility gap created in the Johnson administration became a chasm under Nixon; the malaise of Carter surrendered briefly to the charm of Reagan but reappeared as deficits mounted, arms and money were diverted, and divided Government flourished; and while the Bush administration strengthened our standing in the world, last year's campaign enshrined running against Washington as a major part of our political liturgy.

It is in that more cynical environment which this committee operated. And in that environment, conspiracy theories—even if they are based on minimal and marginal evidence—flourish. From the space aliens which the Government is keeping in deep storage somewhere out West to the CIA's role in killing Elvis—if you have a conspiracy theory which involves the Government, someone will believe it.

But this committee, Mr. President, did not operate in a realm of speculation and fantasy. In this case, conspiracy theories—while dubious and incomplete—at least have some substance to them.

As I evaluated the testimony presented to us and looked at the records made available to us, I concluded that when our Government said that all American POW's had returned, it had reason to believe that was not the case. That is not to say that our Government "lied"; it is to say that it did not tell us the whole truth. I am making more than a semantic distinction here: "lying" implies some intention to deceive; "not telling the whole truth" suggests that a statement does not fully describe a complex reality.

Whatever the difference in actual meaning, it is clear that our Government did not reveal everything that was known and was less than truthful when it talked publicly about POW's and MIA's at the end of the Vietnam war. As a result, when people charge that there was "a Government conspiracy to hide the truth from the American people," there is at least some factual basis for their belief.

The problem that creates is obvious. This committee, as a part of the Government, is asking people to believe that we are telling the truth. But it is the very Government which the committee represents which did not give its citizens all the facts in the beginning. Based on the overall credibility of Government, why should people believe we are telling the truth now about how we misled people in the past?

There are, in my judgment, several reasons. But, Mr. President, the most important is simply this: We are making virtually all the information upon which we relied available to the American people. They do not have to believe us: they can read the same records we did, evaluate the same testimony we heard, go through the same investigation and evaluation that we are engaged in—and they can reach their own conclusions. We are not asking anyone to take anything on faith; we are giving everything we received to every one and allowing them to draw their own conclusions.

But the issue here, Mr. President, is broader than the credibility of the committee's work. In truth, I feel no need to defend the committee and no sympathy for those who doubt the sincerity of our efforts. Personally, I believe that Chairman KERRY and Vice Chairman SMITH, along with the other members of the committee and the superb staff they assembled, have done a magnificent job. They have been fair. They have been thorough. And they have been able to disagree about what conclusions the evidence supports without in any way demeaning each other's intelligence or patriotism or dedication to finding out every thing that we can.

The issue is not the credibility of the committee. But an issue of credibility is at the heart of the POW issue. Indeed, it is at the very heart of a Government's moral right to ask men and women to risk their lives for our country.

Our military might is based on our ability to persuade young men and women to risk their lives for this country. That willingness to face death is based on many factors: love of country, courage, comradeship. But perhaps most importantly, service is based on a belief in, and trust of, their Government: That it will train them well, equip them superbly, and do everything it reasonably can to protect them and care for them.

It is the credibility of those promises which the POW/MIA issue strains. For if, after all, the Government does not keep its promises, then why should our soldiers honor their pledge to follow orders even at the risk of their own lives?

This report demonstrates that the Government has not kept its promises to those who served in Vietnam. Even more disturbing is the evidence which suggests—strongly suggests—that the Government failed to keep its promises to those who served in World War II, the Korean war, and the cold war as well.

This trail of failure suggests that Vietnam may not have been a unique situation. It was not just the nature of that dirty war which led the Government to act in less than full faith. The continuing controversy about the fate of POW's and MIA's could have raged after other conflicts—but in the less cynical environment of those times, even the suspicion that the Government would do anything less than everything possible was so incredible that it was not entertained.

The saving grace in all of this is that the American people now know more of the facts. Knowing the facts can help us establish more of the truth. And that can prevent us from repeating the mistakes of the past.

The committee report contains suggestions to help the families of our POW's and MIA's—structural reforms which should make more information and more help available to them. Even with those reforms, however, we have to recognize that the fog of war makes it impossible to provide exact answers to every question. We cannot account for every MIA, we may never be able to know the exact fate of those who once were held as POW's. Even under the best of circumstances—and these are far from the best of circumstances—"truth," in any absolute sense, is difficult to come by. Some level of uncertainty is inherent to the human condition.

The report also makes suggestions for ways to minimize the forces which lead to uncertainty about the fate of POW's and MIA's in the future. Without impugning the integrity or efforts or motives of anyone, the report makes it clear that if we had done some things differently during negotiations to end the Vietnam war, some of the problems and questions we now face would have been resolved then. The report does not simply point out those mistakes: It makes specific suggestions for changes in negotiating strategy and tactics which should be adopted in the future. In that sense, the report attempts to help prevent the past from being repeated in the future.

The report does not answer every question. In many ways, our investigation simply opened the door to further inquiry. And that inquiry will be made. The executive and legislative branches of our Government cannot turn back now. We have come so far and done so much in terms of declassifying information and becoming more open, that it will be impossible to return to the days when top secret was used as a way to extinguish legitimate criticism and questions.

I would like to add one final word of a more personal nature. Service on this committee has been difficult. I have seen my colleagues struggle to resolve doubts and differences; I have been touched by the bravery, the love, the loneliness, and the frustration of the POW and MIA families I have met, many from my own State; I have been appalled by what I have learned about our own Government's behavior. But at the same time, I have experienced a sense of liberation as the ghosts of the past have been exposed. The willingness of the committee—and ultimately of the executive branch—to uncover the mistakes that were made and bring them to light has vindicated the validity of the democratic process. Though some may believe that our Government tried to create a form of Orwell's "Newspeak," this report proves that in a free society such distortions cannot be sustained. We have dug through the mud and muck; we have had our hands in the dirt of distortion; and we have emerged cleaner, and healthier, and freer for the effort.

STATEMENT ON THE REPORT OF THE SENATE SELECT COMMITTEE ON POW/MIA AFFAIRS

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, the work of the Senate Select Committee on America's prisoners and missing from the war in Vietnam is finished. In the beginning I was deeply skeptical of the value of this effort; in the end I was convinced—thanks in particular to the work of Senator JOHN KERRY—the committee had measurably advanced the cause of knowing more about the tragedy of this war's ending.

In the end we reached a conclusion which is supported by exhaustive investigation: There is no compelling evidence to reach a judgment of proof that American prisoners are being held against their will in Vietnam or any other foreign locations.

There is compelling evidence that our Federal Government did not do all it should have done to make certain we did not leave our men behind. We expect and are not disappointed when Vietnam's Government lies to us, but we cannot excuse and should not be surprised when the lies of our Government anger those who have the greatest right to know—the families of the missing. For there is compelling evidence that our Government withheld information from family members which had the perverse effect of increasing their pain and suffering.

Further, there is compelling evidence that much more needs to be done before we are through with this issue. This report makes it clear that the failure to obtain evidence sufficient to stand the tests and burdens of proof does not mean we have eliminated all doubt and ambiguity. This report makes clear our belief that much more work must be done by the American and the Vietnamese Government before we have removed this stain from our consciences.

In the beginning, I was concerned about the work of this committee because I have grown weary with the self-indulgent moaning which often accompany Vietnam post mortems. In spite of having wounds which provide a daily reminder of how the war changed me; in spite of the uncontrollable sadness and longing which builds inside when I stand at the Vietnam Memorial and consider what might have been; in spite of the anger I feel toward policymakers who were too blind or too frightened to see and tell the truth; in spite of the heart-breaking passion I feel for those veterans whose spirits were shattered in the war. In spite of all of the negatives, I still feel I was lucky to have had the experience.

Money could not buy the lessons I learned in service to my country. In short, the debt is still on my side. That I consider it important to make this declaration reinforces the uniqueness of the Vietnam war in American history. Having served on this committee, and having faced the angry accusations of my fellow citizens, I am reminded again how terribly divisive and destructive this war was. Thus, I know it is unlikely this report will heal the wounds of Vietnam.

However, the fate of missing Americans and the larger questions arising from America's participation in the war dictate that we risk the emotional fire arising from legitimate differences of opinion. As I have listened to testimony and reviewed documents over the past year, my feelings about the war and about our efforts to account for POW/MIA's have shifted between anger and sadness. Despite the disagreements that have sometimes arisen, I believe, in the end, the committee has always managed to retain its focus on the most important objective: Obtaining the fullest possible accounting for missing Americans.

Over the past year, the committee has examined information from every available source, from refugee live-sighting reports to satellite imagery, in the hope that some Americans might still be found alive. In addition, the committee has been able to draw on substantial resources on the ground in Vietnam, Laos, and the republics of the former Soviet Union to investigate reports and gather information.

Our conclusion does not change our commitment to achieving the fullest possible accounting for missing Americans. The United States has expanded its presence on the ground in Vietnam and as a result of the recent cooperation by the Vietnamese Government has considerable opportunity to pursue information relating to missing Americans. Coordination between the Federal agencies that are responsible for accounting for POW/MIA's has improved and more resources have been devoted to intelligence analysis. Finally, with the ongoing declassification process, all the information that the committee has reviewed will be available to the American people to decide the quality of the evidence for themselves. After too many years, the U.S. Government finally seems to be pursuing POW/MIA issues as a matter of the "highest national priority."

The movement toward resolving this issue will affect the present direction of United States policy toward Vietnam. Some in the United States seem to believe that we can achieve the goal of obtaining a full accounting in isolation of the goals of political and economic freedom for the people of Vietnam. I believe the issue of accounting for missing Americans is inseparable from the larger context of American objectives in the war and relations with Vietnam today.

At its best, the Vietnam war was a struggle against communism for the principles of self-determination and political freedom for the people of Vietnam. At worst, the war was a misguided exercise in balance of power politics. For myself and many other Americans who went to Vietnam, and who believed that we were fighting for democracy and for freedom, the reality of the war and its outcome were profoundly disillusioning experiences.

I believe that sometime during the war we lost our resolve. Reading the too heavily classified documents of the negotiations over the Paris peace accords and Operation Homecoming, this loss of resolve to fight for the principles that were at the heart of its most noble aspirations for the people of Vietnam is painfully clear. Vietnam had become a political liability to be shed like an old set of clothes. We, as a nation, wanted out of a continuing war that was threatening our society and our economy, and we were willing to accept what was expedient to accomplish that purpose. Rather than self-determination for the people of Vietnam, or even "peace with honor," we got a decent interval between our withdrawal and the fall of Saigon. Rather than pursue every means that we might have to resolve POW/MIA questions, we settled for less.

The record of the negotiation and implementation of the Paris peace accords makes it clear that the principles of self-determination for the South Vietnamese and obtaining a full accounting for missing Americans were subordinated to the dominant American concern: to end United States involvement in the war. The compromises in the Paris peace accords set the stage for the failure of the United States to secure either freedom for the South Vietnamese or a full accounting for missing Americans.

We are all familiar with the outcome. Two years after the Paris peace accords, the North Vietnamese made a mockery of the agreement by invading South Vietnam and imposing a totalitarian Communist government. The North Vietnamese were not cooperative in returning United States prisoners and after 20 years there has still not been a satisfactory accounting for missing Americans. Americans lost sight of the principles that were the basis for our involvement in Vietnam and we were willing to make compromises for what was expedient at the time. We must not make the same mistake again.

For 20 years the United States has maintained a trade embargo and refused to establish diplomatic relations with the Socialist Republic of Vietnam. This policy is consistent with the United States treatment of other hardline Communist states, notably North Korea and Cuba. Current United States policy toward Vietnam is based on two considerations: Cooperation in accounting for missing Americans; and the removal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia. The United States has established a road map that matches progress by the Vietnamese in these areas with improved trade and diplomatic relations with the United States.

The most noticeable aspect of the current road map is the conspicuous absence of mention of human rights or political freedom for the people of Vietnam. For North Korea, progress in human rights is one of the central conditions for improving relations. It must also be for Vietnam. The United States was willing to fight for political freedom and human rights for the people of Vietnam; 58,183 Americans died there, countless billions were spent, and since that time the United States has refused to establish relations in part because of the repressive nature of the Vietnamese regime.

It is ironic that after 20 years we appear willing to sacrifice these principles for the people of Vietnam just as democracy is triumphing around the world, and perhaps once again subjugate, this time probably forever, the question of a full accounting for those missing in Vietnam. One of the key factors in the democratic revolution in the former Soviet Union and throughout Eastern Europe was the hard line that the United States took against the repressive Communist regimes that dominated those societies. Today the leaders of those nations thank us for our tough stand, even though that stand meant economic hardship and isolation for their people.

What is missing our discussions today is a vision of 70 million Vietnamese with the freedoms for which we fought and for which our Nation stands—freedom of religion, speech, travel, due process under the law, and the right to protest the policies of their government. God help us if we come back to Vietnam just to make a little money.

A free Vietnam is the best way to honor the sacrifice of Americans and to help the Vietnamese people. We do not need to go to war to win this battle, nor do we need to stop moving toward normal relations. We need to believe it is desirable and we need to believe it is possible. We need at least to say the words.

The United States should be willing to take a stand for the people of Southeast Asia. Obtaining a full accounting for our missing soldiers will never happen as long as Vietnam remains a closed society. Before opening the door to Vietnam, the United States should demonstrate its support for democracy and human rights by raising these issues with the Vietnamese Government.

AMBASSADOR ARMITAGE AND HIS STAFF

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I rise to commend Ambassador Richard L. Armitage, his chief associate—Frederic Hof and Richard Nelson—and the rest of his staff for an outstanding job working directly for Secretary Eagleburger coordinating United States assistance to the 12 new independent States of the former Soviet Union.

Rich Armitage has accomplished in the past year what no one believed could be done: he conceived and spearheaded a multifaceted program of technical and humanitarian assistance that got a show of concern and a message of hope through to the people of Russia, Ukraine, Armenia, and the other new independent states. This effort started last January with a massive airlift of humanitarian aid to 11 of the 12 new states—organized on two weeks notice, with a borrowed staff of five, delivering 2,000 tons of food and 490 tons of medicine in 16 days to 24 locations in the former Soviet Union.

Rich Armitage and his staff continued through the rest of the year generating and learning the administration's efforts to reprogram existing funds, push through the Freedom Support Act, and organize and coordinate the assistance activities of over 15 Government departments and agencies. In addition, he followed up on Secretary Baker's initiative to host the first of three international conferences to coordinate the assistance efforts of all donor nations and organizations.

He and his staff guided the process through the follow-on meetings in Lisbon and Tokyo, firmly establishing the United States as the world's leader in organizing and delivering assistance to the peoples of the 12 nations of the former Soviet Union. This has been a gargantuan effort that could only have been done by someone with the energy, experience, personality, ability to cut across interagency turf, and leadership of a Rich Armitage. The Nation owes him a debt of thanks.

His staff, gathered mostly from—and in some cases dispersed back to—various agencies and the private sector, deserves recognition and thanks as well. They are Kevin Aanstad, Heather Bomberger, Theodor Bradtrud, Elizabeth Cheney, Katherine Devera, John Donohue, Fred Fox, Keith Gilgore, David Hatcher, Nina Haulst, Brenda Heaster, Ann Hogan, James Johnson, Zana Kizzee, Harry Klein, Janice Langley, Charles Lawson, James Leahy, Tara Mayo, Andrew Messing, Cheryl, McCain, Thomas McKay, Thomas Michaels, Gerald Oberndorfer, John Post, Daniel Puzon, Priscilla Rabb-Ayers, Christina Rufenacht, Barbra Shupe, Charles Slagel, Julia Taft, William Taylor, Jerry Tighe, Karen Volker, Robert Watters, and Deatrice Womack.

ROBERT H. ATWELL: HIGHER EDUCATION'S TOP LOBBYIST

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the Washington Post recently carried a profile of Robert H. Atwell, the president of the American Council on Education [ACE].

As all of the Members of this body know, postsecondary education in the United States is incredibly diverse. There are thousands of institutions, each with a slightly different set of interests and needs. While there are many interest groups representing various segments of the postsecondary education universe, there is only one organization—the American Council on Education—that represents all of these institutions.

Robert Atwell has been president of ACE for the last 7 years. By all accounts, this has been a turbulent time for higher education. Throughout this period, Mr. Atwell has provided steady, thoughtful leadership on a wide variety of complex issues—from athletics to college prices to increasing minority participation in higher education. The members of the Labor Committee have learned that Bob Atwell's insight and judgment on higher education issues is superb.

One area where I have benefited from Bob's leadership is on the issues surrounding college athletics. Even before he assumed the presidency at ACE, he was a champion of reform and improvement in college athletics. Largely through his herculean efforts, the higher education community began—however tentatively—an effort to reform some of the abuses in intercollegiate athletics long before the public became aware of the extent of the problems. Last year, the Labor Committee worked closely with him as we wrote the Student Right to Know and Campus Security Act. With Bob's help, we wrote a law that, I believe, assures that students and their families have easy access to vitally important consumer information without creating an excessive paperwork burden on the institutions.

Thanks to Bob Atwell's leadership, higher education is well represented in Washington. Given the wide range of complex public policy issues facing higher education these days, America's colleges and universities are fortunate to have him in this position. I hope that, as a result of the Post article, the vitally important role that he plays will be more widely appreciated.

Mr. President, I would like to have a copy of this article printed in the RECORD so that all of my colleagues will be sure to see it.

TRIBUTE TO ROD FASONE

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, on behalf of Mr. COATS and myself, we inform the Senate that a truly remarkable young man who served Hoosiers in so many ways passed away on December 10, 1992. Rod Fasone was only 21 years old, but he accomplished more in his lifetime than many people two and three times his age. To honor Rod, we submit our eulogy for the RECORD.

In high school and college, Rod excelled both academically and in competitive sports. At North Central High School, he was captain of his swim team, served in student government, and captured first-place honors in the 1984 Indiana Spanish competition. Rod graduated from Indiana University earlier this year. While studying criminal justice and Spanish in Bloomington, Rod was both a participant and coach in the renowned "Little 500" annual bicycle race. He also served on the student athletic board and was chairman of the Beta Theta Pi Philanthropy.

Rod spent his young adult life participating in community and philanthropic activities. He worked diligently on behalf of the United Way and the Arthritis Foundation. He served actively as a youth deacon at the First Meridian Heights Presbyterian Church. His strong faith and desire to help others led Rod to work with many young people in other States and in Mexico.

While maintaining his studies and serving his community, Rod also found time to hold positions of responsibility in both the public and private sector. We are sure that everyone who had the pleasure to work with him will attest to his dedicated work ethic and desire to give everything of himself to the tasks at hand.

Rod completed an internship in Senator LUGAR's Capitol Hill office 2 years ago, and, earlier this year, joined our joint constituent services staff in Indianapolis. He was assigned the task of assisting constituents who came to our office for help with income and health care problems. Despite facing tremendous personal adversity, Rod always put aside his personal situation and vigorously helped those in need of assistance. He truly embodied the spirit and commitment of public service.

Rod's many personal and professional achievements will serve as lasting tributes to his meaningful and rewarding life. His leadership, his sense of humor, and his inner strength touched so many lives in positive and constructive ways. Those of us who had the honor of knowing him are much richer because of it.

Rod was the kind of son all parents strive to rear. He was loving, caring, filled with happiness, and above all else, optimistic. His family should be so proud of him for everything he was. Our hearts and prayers go out to his parents, brothers, sisters, and grandparents. They suffered emotionally with him, and yet they remained strong, persevered, and provided the comfort and love that carried him through his ordeal.

All of us who knew Rod owe his family a great debt of gratitude for making it possible for him to share his life with us and for serving his fellow man so honorably. Their support and guidance allowed him to live his life to its fullest and to improve the lives of others less fortunate than him.

Rod's absence creates a void that no one will ever fill; however, we must remember that his legacy of love, leadership, and service will live on. We celebrate his memory as a reminder of how well a life can be lived. May God's blessings be upon his family.

(At the request of Mr. MITCHELL the following statement of former Senator Lloyd Bentsen was ordered to be printed in the RECORD at this point:)

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, 22 years ago on this date, near this very hour, I swore my first oath of office as a U.S. Senator. So I find an interesting symmetry in resigning from the Senate at this day and hour to join America's new President in his Cabinet.

After 22 years, there are not adequate words to relate my feeling for this Chamber, for the honor of serving here, and for the privilege of having two decades of distinguished Members as colleagues. So rather than try my own words, I fall back on those I read long ago.

I remember them from a letter a young career soldier had written, one I'm sure he thought wouldn't be opened for years. His final words were: "I wish you could have known my life and how much I enjoyed living it."

That is what I wish to say about my 22 years in this Chamber. May each of you know the satisfactions I have known. And I particularly hope that is the case for my friend who follows me in this Chamber and the distinguished friend who succeeds me as chairman of the Finance Committee.

My service here has given me an immense respect for the uniqueness of the Government our Founders created.

You and I have seen our government act quickly in crisis, just as we have seen our balance of powers, our system of checks and balances, sometimes spread delays. Those delays assure America a measured response to change. They avoid the whiplash and backlash of systems bound by party discipline or the iron whims of factions or strongmen.

A trend doesn't have to bring dislocation in America. We can renew ourselves as a nation because we need not continually re-erect our Government. We can be a vibrant country and a stable republic at the same time.

In spite of America's problems—and I don't downplay them—our system works.

It works because the diversity of the American people and the American economy are represented in this Capitol. In larger part, it works because the elected have reason to react when constituents relate their ideas, their concerns, and their problems—especially their problems with agencies of Government. The American people can petition their representatives to remedy the shortcomings of their government: That is a grand right, one that deserves to be more noticed and remarked on more often.

The quality of America's legislators also should be remarked on more often. For I have known them—the vast, overwhelming majority of them—as able colleagues committed to making a difference.

The rewards of public service are many and gratifying. Descriptions of Congress as removed, distant, and divorced from concerns of everyday Americans are astonishingly off the beam. The relationship between Congressman and constituent can be personal, sometimes almost intimate. Ask anyone who's received a thank-you from a teenager bound for West Point or Annapolis or a letter from a retiree whose Social Security check has been found.

The rewards of public service are high, but the price also can be high—often far higher than for careers offering more money, more privacy, more personal and family life. We who serve accept that price willingly, and from time to time we should be willing to remind those who demand we pay it.

As one who knows the satisfactions and sacrifices, I close my Senate career by sharing with you a remark from a newcomer to public service. He said this:

I've seen America's hay fields and corn fields, so I know our Nation will grow. I've seen the skyline in Seattle and Chicago and New York, and I know our country will stand. I've seen the Capitol dome, brilliant and dazzling at midnight, and I know it's lighted so people with integrity and purpose can find their way to it.

Thank you, Mr. President. Thank you.

SALUTE TO BILL FARMER

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I join Senator MITCHELL in congratulating Bill Farmer on his retirement from the Senate family after 28 years of distinguished service, including more than 21 years at the rostrum in the Senate Chamber.

Many people may only recognize his Kentucky-bred voice, but anyone who has served in this body in the past two decades knows the man well, and respects him tremendously for his dedication. No doubt about it, there is no such thing as 9 to 5 around this place. Bill may have served 38 years, but if you added up the hours it might come out to 48—that is based on official Senate time. In his more than 12 years as chief legislative clerk, Bill has also probably read more legislation than he cares to remember, especially those enjoyable filibusters.

Bill, thanks for your years of hard work. It is much appreciated. I know all my colleagues join me in wishing Bill all the best in his retirement and in extending our thanks and appreciation for his service to the U.S. Senate.

OPENING OF THE 103D CONGRESS

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, today as we begin anew in the 103d Congress, I plan to address the needs, cries and, and yes the hopes of the American people. I come here today representing a State that chose its new leaders with a spirit of bipartisan cooperation in mind. New Yorkers, independently minded as they are, chose Bill Clinton as their President and AL D'AMATO as their U.S. Senator. Together they believe our cooperation can make a difference in their lives. Mr. President, I intend to honor my commitment to make that happen.

President Clinton and I agree, without a doubt, that the growth of the economy and the preservation and creation of jobs for Americans are the most important issues facing our country today. Consumer confidence has turned around reflecting a positive feeling toward the economy. It is imperative that we build upon this momentum and move forward to strengthen that confidence which has been instilled in the American people.

I say this to our new President, I will stand shoulder to shoulder with you on your pledges to revive the economy, cap Federal spending, reduce the deficit and lower taxes. We must face up to these tasks in order to keep working, middle-class citizens from being forced to carry an increasingly heavier burden. It is not just about getting control of the current tax and spend policies for today. It is about providing a productive, stable environment for our children and grandchildren and creating a foundation for economic growth into the future.

Mr. President, today I join my colleague Senator MACK in introducing a legislative package that incorporates the key pledges made by President Clinton. They include President Clinton's promise to control spending and invigorate the economy. Beginning with a line-item veto, a capital gains tax cut, a lifting of the limits on the Social Security earnings test down to the creation of enterprise zones and the President's commitment to workfare, not welfare.

We, as public officials, must keep our commitments and pledges to the American people. As we work to meet these goals, we will restore the people's faith in the economy and in our commitment to public service. I look forward to working with President Clinton to accomplish these goals through swift action on his key campaign pledges.

A NEW BEGINNING

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, today we undertake a new beginning. With a new Congress and a new administration we are going to make America a better place for our children and our children's children.

I wish today to introduce a number of bills on many subjects including civil rights, the environment, business competitiveness, child safety, labor fairness, and others. My plan is to see them all enacted during the 103d Congress.

Yesterday, President Clinton took office with a mandate to bring Government back to the people.

Last summer, the Supreme Court handed down a decision denying an important right of citizens—to sue their Government when it refuses to enforce provisions of the Endangered Species Act.

In that decision, the court said citizens could no longer challenge the Government's policy of funding projects overseas that threaten endangered species and their habitats.

Today, I am introducing legislation to restore the original intent of Congress, which was to ensure that the people have the right to bring suit against their Government pursuant to the Endangered Species Act.

President Clinton also has a mandate to revitalize the American workplace, to increase productivity, and to expand opportunities for growth. These are important goals, but without an independent labor movement they cannot be achieved and without the right to strike there can be no labor movement.

Accordingly, I am today introducing the Workplace Fairness Act.

This legislation, which passed the House and received 57 votes in the Senate last year, prohibits the hiring of permanent striker replacements.

The American people support this bill, President Clinton supports it. This year we are going to get it enacted.

I am also introducing legislation to close serious loopholes that exist in the Child Labor Act enacted 50 years ago.

Recent child labor law violations against Burger King and Food Lion have shown that exploitative labor practices involving children still occur.

The bill will permit imprisonment for child labor law violators, and will bar willful and repeat offenders from receiving Federal grants, loans, or contracts.

I believe it is an appropriate step against unscrupulous companies that exploit children.

Fourth, I am reintroducing my bill from last year to overturn the Pentagon's ban on homosexuals serving in the military.

The time has come to overturn this last bastion of government sponsored discrimination.

President Clinton agrees. He is committed to overturning the ban, and may do so as early as today.

Nothing would please me more than seeing this issue resolved without the need for legislation.

Eight in 10 Americans believe homosexuals should have the right to serve in the military. With this bill, we show our solidarity with those Americans and with our new President on this important civil rights matter.

Fifth, I am reintroducing legislation granting the Food and Drug Administration explicit jurisdiction over health claims companies make in food advertising.

In 1990, Congress enacted the Nutrition Labeling and Education Act, the most extensive food labeling reform in this country's history.

Unfortunately, the intent of this landmark bill—to reduce coronary heart disease and death through better information about diet and nutrition—is being thwarted because the Federal Trade Commission is failing to take enforcement action against companies that continue to mislead consumers through advertising.

This legislation gives the Food and Drug Administration authority to go after companies that engage in such false and/or misleading food advertising.

Sixth, I am reintroducing the International Fair Competition Act of 1993.

Mr. President, our antitrust laws do not protect American consumers or companies from the devastating effects of foreign cartels—closed business organizations that compete successfully here in the United States because they fix prices and engage in other monopoly practices at home.

This bill will safeguard our free markets by permitting lawsuits against foreign manufacturers that sell goods here at below cost who then turn around and prevent our products from being sold in their markets.

This bill will keep American workers on the job, and American companies competing on an even playing field.

The measure enjoyed wide, bipartisan support last year, and was reported by the Judiciary Committee unanimously.

Once again, Mr. President, I am introducing legislation to amend the McCarran-Ferguson Act to prohibit anticompetitive conduct by the insurance industry.

This bill would repeal the insurance industry's blanket exemption from the Federal antitrust laws. Very simply, the McCarran-Ferguson antitrust exemption has outlived any useful purpose that it may once have had.

Eighth, I am reintroducing legislation, to provide low cost banking services to the general public. This bill represents a very careful compromise worked out during the last session of Congress between the American Association of Retired Persons and the Independent Bankers Association of America.

It requires banks to offer low-income and elderly Americans low-cost checking accounts or Government check cashing services. Neither service would be free.

It is an extremely reasonable bill. If not for the intransigence of the big banks and the Bush administration, we would have enacted it long ago.

In the area of environment, I am reintroducing my Great Lakes water quality legislation from last year.

This bill would enable the Government to protect Great Lakes water by better managing the disposal of sediments dredged from the bottom of the lakes. I am confident that we will be able to enact the bill this year.

On another subject, Mr. President, it has been 12 long years since the 11,400 FAA air traffic controllers walked off the job and were summarily fired by President Reagan.

Since that time, there has been no redemption and no forgiveness. Many of these controllers found work with the military and our allies during Desert Shield and Desert Storm. Many were commended, yet the Government still prohibits them from returning to their old jobs.

Enough is enough. It is a fact that violent criminals are punished less severely than these controllers have been.

My bill would enable these men and women back on the job, provided they are still qualified. It is the fair and decent thing to do.

Finally, Mr. President, I am reintroducing legislation encouraging the use of bicycle helmets by children.

In 1990, 400 children died as a result of head injuries caused in bicycle accidents. Two-thirds of all bicycle-related head injuries occurred among children under age 14.

This bill passed the Senate last year. This year, I intend to see it enacted into law.

That is it for now, Mr. President. During the weeks ahead, I am sure I will have additional bills, including the 7-day waiting period for gun purchases legislation, and a bill on the subject of the major league baseball antitrust exemption.

I yield the floor.

TRIBUTE TO MUHAMMAD ALI

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I wish to pay tribute to a great athlete and American who is being recognized tomorrow evening in Atlantic City as the "Legend of Boxing."

Certainly all of my colleagues would agree that the "Legend of Boxing" is none other but Muhammad Ali. In recognition of this event, I ask that the Senate join me in this tribute that I am presenting to the "Champ."

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following tribute be placed in the RECORD.

The tribute follows:

RESOLUTION

Whereas the World Boxing Association will honor Muhammad Ali as a "Legend of Boxing" on January 22, 1993, at a dinner at Resorts International in Atlantic City, and

Whereas Muhammad Ali has been a great heavyweight boxing champion who brought excitement, flamboyance and enormous skill to an always difficult and often dangerous profession; and

Whereas Muhammad Ali showed great courage outside the ring in refusing to sacrifice principle for pelf and in adhering to his beliefs in the face of considerable public opprobrium; and

Whereas Muhammad Ali displayed wit, charm and bonhomie in his world travels, ingratiating himself with young and old, rich and poor, persons of all races, religions and ethnic origins; and

Whereas Muhammad Ali, despite his precision, prowess and power inside the ring which wrought havoc on his opponents, has given evidence of gentleness, altruism and love of his fellow man in his daily living; and

Whereas Muhammad Ali has truly been a "Legend of Boxing," one whom many experts believe may have been the greatest heavyweight boxing champion of all time, a pugilist who combined speed with power and who could take a punch with the best of all time: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That all lovers of prize fighting take note of this honor bestowed upon Muhammad Ali, truly a singular man, congratulate him for his great boxing career, and thank him for the innumerable thrills he has brought to boxing fans around the world.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF LES ASPIN

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I wish to express my congratulations to Representative Aspin on his confirmation as Secretary of Defense. President Clinton could not have selected a stronger candidate.

Les Aspin has few peers when it comes to defense policy. It is hard to think of more than a handful of individuals in Government, whether serving in Congress, the military or the executive branch, who can match Les Aspin's knowledge of our national defense. His entire public career has prepared him for this prestigious position. He and I have not always agreed on what our policy should be on defense affairs, but I honestly cannot think of anyone who I respect more for his understanding of our Armed Forces and the inner workings of the Pentagon. I will remember our first meeting at then-Congressman Don Riegle's home 18 years ago when I was a Senator-elect and how impressed I was by Secretary Aspin.

Since President Clinton is taking away such an impressive legislator, many comments have been made about the future leadership of the House Armed Services Committee. RON DELLUMS and I have worked closely together on defense and arms control issues in the past. I have the utmost confidence that his critics will soon be silenced by his impressive stewardship of the Committee.

Mr. President, I once again voice my strong support for Les Aspin as Secretary of Defense and I congratulate RON DELLUMS on his new position as chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF WARREN CHRISTOPHER

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I rise to commend President Clinton for his choice of Warren Christopher to be Secretary of State, and am pleased that he was confirmed by unanimous vote of the Senate. Let us use this opportunity to demonstrate once again that partisanship has no place in foreign policy. The President has chosen well. Mr. Christopher is superbly qualified for this critical post, and I confidently anticipate that he will be an outstanding Secretary of State.

Warren Christopher began public service in 1949 as a clerk for Justice William O. Douglas at the Supreme Court. He rapidly demonstrated his excellent legal and diplomatic skills. In 1965 he was appointed as vice chairman of the McCone Commission that investigated the 1965 Watts riots in Los Angeles and he coordinated the Federal response to racial turmoil in Chicago and Detroit as Deputy Attorney General during the Johnson administration.

Mr. Christopher's adroitness and resolve while handling these racial incidents established his reputation as a troubleshooter of the first rank. Mayor Tom Bradley asked him to head the commission that examined the Los Angeles Police Department after the crisis there last year. Once again, he performed a difficult and sensitive task admirably and with consummate skill.

Mr. Christopher is best known for his distinguished service as Deputy Secretary of State during the Carter administration. Always discreet, measured, deliberate, and dignified, Mr. Christopher adeptly negotiated treaties and championed human rights abroad. His mastery of negotiation culminated with his successful diplomacy that resulted in the release of American hostages from Iran in 1981.

At his confirmation hearing, Mr. Christopher laid out his views on the basis of U.S. foreign policy under the Clinton administration. I was particularly impressed with two aspects of his policy objectives:

First, Mr. Christopher believes in diplomacy and negotiation as the preferred means of resolving international disputes. He stated that the United States "must apply new dispute resolution techniques and forms of international arbitration to the conflicts that plague the world." With Warren Christopher as our chief negotiator, I believe we will see diplomacy become the primary method of resolving international conflict.

The United Nations will continue to play a major role in deterring aggression, relieving suffering and keeping the peace. Mr. Christopher has pledged to work with the United Nations to ensure that it has the means to carry out the formidable tasks confronting it, including ensuring that the United States pays its obligations.

Second, Mr. Christopher recognizes that our foreign aid program must coordinate with other aspects of our foreign policy to reflect our commitment to the spread of democracy and human rights and to serve more effectively as an instrument of our international economic and commercial interests. To help accomplish this, Mr. Christopher has advocated an overhaul of the Agency for International Development and streamlining the State Department. As hearings in my Foreign Operations Subcommittee and in other committees have amply demonstrated, a top-to-bottom overhaul of foreign aid is urgently needed.

I applaud Mr. Christopher for his commitment to aligning our foreign aid program with the realities of the post-cold-war era. I look forward to working with him to examine the rationale and structure of our foreign aid program so that it responds to the challenges of the 21st century.

Warren Christopher brings exemplary skills in diplomacy, negotiation, management, and problem solving to the position of Secretary of State. These skills and his philosophies on U.S. foreign policy make him the right person for this difficult job during what will certainly be challenging times.

As chairman of the Foreign Operations Subcommittee, I look forward to working with him as Secretary of State.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF LLOYD BENTSEN

Mr. LEAHY. In selecting Senator Bentsen for his Treasury Secretary, President Clinton has tapped one of the most esteemed and distinguished Members of the U.S. Senate. The Nation is gaining a statesman with great vision in the area of economic policy. This vision will be sorely missed in the Senate.

As chairman of the Finance Committee, Senator Bentsen has been a leader and innovator in tax policy, health care reform, and trade issues. Senator Bentsen receives praise from both sides of the aisle for his efforts to form coalitions that result in action. He was the driving force behind the United States-Canada Free-Trade Agreement which has been so important to Vermont and the Nation, and the Trade and Competitiveness Act of 1988. Acting as a moderating influence, he played a major role in crafting the 1990 budget compromise. On the complex issue of health care reform, I have worked with Senator Bentsen. He has worked tirelessly to form a consensus on this issue so that all Americans have access to affordable health care.

Facing the colossal problems of a $4 trillion Federal debt and anemic economic growth, Secretary Bentsen will have to call on his most masterful coalition-building skills. Certainly no one is more experienced at shepherding controversial legislation through the minefield of Congress than Senator Bentsen.

Senator Bentsen understands how to get the American economy going again. He understands the necessity of rebuilding America through investment in people and infrastructure. He understands the need for Americans to improve their savings habits and abilities. He understands the importance of opening foreign markets for American goods and of coordinating monetary policy with other industrialized nations. I am confident in his leadership to steer us away from the regressive tax policies of the last 12 years.

I want to thank my friend Lloyd Bentsen for his superior service in this body and for the people of Texas. I look forward to working with him in his new capacity as Treasury Secretary and also to the results of that labor.

IRRESPONSIBLE CONGRESS? HERE'S TODAY'S BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, about 11 months ago, February 25, 1992, I called the Senate's attention to the fact that on February 21, 1992, the U.S. Federal debt stood at $3,823,909,309,474.57.

Every day the Senate has been in session since, I have presented updated boxscores of the exact Federal debt, down to the penny. A great many citizens have been astonished to learn of the enormity of the debt which Congress has run up, and which is a burden to be passed along to their children, and their grandchildren. There was a period last summer when Senator CRAIG made this daily report on my behalf during my absence.

I intend to continue these reports into the 103d Congress—and longer, as may be necessary, until our Nation's debt is brought under control.

Mr. President, during the past 11 months since February 25, 1992, the Federal debt has increased by $363,897,300,894.59 to its present total of $4,187,806,610,369.16 as of Tuesday, January 19, 1993.

All of us know that anyone familiar with the U.S. Constitution is aware that no President can spend a dime that has not first been authorized and appropriated by the Congress of the United States.

During the past fiscal year, it cost the American taxpayers $286,022,000,000 just to pay the interest on Federal spending approved by Congress—spending over and above what the Federal Government collected in taxes and other income. Averaged out, this amounts to $5.5 billion every week, or $785 million every day, just to pay the interest on the existing Federal debt.

On a per capita basis, every man, woman, and child in America owes $16,303.91—thanks to the big spenders in Congress for the past half century. Paying the interest on this massive debt, averaged out, amounts to $1,127.85 per year for each man, woman, and child in America—or, to look at it another way, for each family of four, the tab—to pay the interest alone—comes to $4,511.40 per year.

Which brings up the question: What would America be like today if there had been a Congress that had the courage and the integrity to operate on a balanced budget?

TRIBUTE TO BOB STRAUSS

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, on December 11, 1992, in Tucson, AZ, Robert A. Strauss was honored by his friends and colleagues at the Tucson Unified School District [TUSD] for his 8 years of leadership and service to the students of this school district. I want to take a moment of the Senate's time to join Tucsonans in recognizing Bob's achievements during his tenure as a member of TUSD's board.

Bob was first elected to the board in 1984 and was reelected again in 1988. While on the board, he served in a variety of positions including board president. The one thing that characterized his service on the board is his concern for the student, first and foremost. This is demonstrated by his efforts to secure the passage of bond issues in both 1985 and 1989. As a leader in the Tucson community, he was able to use his extensive contacts to mobilize support for these bond issues. It has been recently said of Bob's efforts concerning the 1989 bond issue:

The passage of the bonds in 1989 has already funded dozens of badly needed renovations and transformed learning environments for thousands of children. These upgrades have made possible new and enhanced libraries, science labs, classrooms, fine arts studios and many other facilities serving students. This broad array of citywide improvements will always be remembered as part of the Strauss legacy.

Mr. President, TUSD has almost 58,000 students and 8,000 employees. In order to govern an enterprise this large and diverse, one must devote themselves to learning all aspects of it. Bob did just that. He traveled extensively throughout the district participating in many programs. For example, he spent a great deal of time reading to elementary schoolchildren during the "love of reading" week. Bob also made extraordinary efforts to attend graduation ceremonies and other events to recognize the achievements of the district's students.

Bob was also extensively involved in expanding programs to increase graduation rates among distressed students, promoting fine arts, math, and science programs at the Tucson high magnet school and creating opportunities for the involvement of parents.

But, probably the crowning achievement of Bob's service on the board is his efforts to reduce the extracurricular participation fees in order to make it more affordable for all students to participate in these activities. In leading this effort, he recognized the importance of these programs to the total development of the student. His efforts enabled many students to participate in sports and arts programs who had otherwise been prevented from doing so. As the Tucson Citizen stated:

If Bob Strauss is remembered for nothing else during his tenure as a school board member, he will be remembered—and quite fondly—for the pressure he applied to have the extracurricular participation fees slashed in the Tucson Unified School District.

Mr. President, in addition to his service on the TUSD board, Bob is active in many other civic activities, too numerous to name, that primarily focus on the young people in southern Arizona. He recognizes the importance of ensuring that our young people are given the necessary tools and foundation so that they may become the leaders of tomorrow.

I know Bob's service on the TUSD board will be sorely missed, but I am sure he will remain involved. This Senator is honored to consider Bob Strauss a friend and I ask that my colleagues join me in saluting him.

HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS IN UZBEKISTAN

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, as Chairman of the Helsinki Commission, I would like to speak out about the deteriorating situation for human rights and democratic reform in the newly independent country of Uzbekistan. I visited Uzbekistan last April and had great hopes for the new country. I supported that country's right to come out from under the clutches of Moscow and welcomed it into the community of independent nations. I was especially heartened by Uzbekistan's membership in the CSCE process, which I felt would be an excellent guide, as the country embarked on the difficult road to democratization. In April, Uzbek officials, including the Foreign Minister Ubaidulla Abdurazzakov, assured me of their government's commitment to the implementation of Helsinki principles in Uzbekistan and to developing a respect for human rights that was so sorely lacking during the long years of Russian colonization and Soviet domination.

I regret to report that recent events have made a folly of the Foreign Minister's pledge. It has become increasingly clear that the Uzbek Government apparently has no intention of respecting human rights and implementing democratic reforms in that country. Though 1992 began hopefully with a presidential election in which for the first time in Uzbek history there were two candidates for the office, the ensuing months provide that the government of President Islam Karimov has no regard for democracy or human rights. The Helsinki Commission began to receive reports of harassment of opposition members, which included arbitrary arrests and detentions, the ransacking of homes and offices, the unexplained closure of meeting halls, and the confiscation of all publications which did not support the government. The actions against opposition groups culminated in the harsh attack on June 30 against Abdurrahim Pulatov, chairman of Birlik, which is the largest opposition group in Uzbekistan. Mr. Pulatov and his colleague, Miralim Adylov, were brutally beaten with steel rods and barely escaped with their lives. In a gross display of cruelty, Uzbek doctors, under government threat, refused to treat the two men, who were forced to seek treatment in Moscow.

Unfortunately, Mr. President, the brutal crackdown on all those who speak out against the government has continued to this very day. Just last month, several human rights and democratic activists from Uzbekistan were detained and prevented from attending a groundbreaking human rights conference for the Central Asian countries held in neighboring Kyrgyzstan. And in the most flagrant disregard for all standards of justice, on the day after the conference ended, one of its chief organizers, Abdumannob Pulatov, an Uzbek and brother to the Birlik chairman who was so brutally attacked in June, was abducted from Kyrgyzstan by Uzbek KGB agents and forcibly returned to Tashkent where he is in prison. Uzbek authorities have refused to allow representatives of the United States Embassy, and international human rights groups, to see Mr. Pulatov and his whereabouts, and even the state of his health, are unknown.

Mr. Pulatov, and other Uzbeks who did manage to attend the conference, are charged with the crimes of insulting the dignity and honor of the president and attending an unauthorized meeting. In fact, the Kyrgyzstan conference, which was attended by a staffer from the Helsinki Commission, was a courageous first step of democratic and human rights activists from all the Central Asian countries on behalf of freedom and democracy. I, myself, met with Abdumannob Pulatov last April in Tashkent and was impressed with his thoughtful and genuine commitment to peaceful democratic reform in his country.

I hereby call on the Uzbek authorities to release Abdumannob Pulatov immediately and to cease all its brutal actions against groups in Uzbekistan whose only crime is to hold opinions which are different from the government's. I call on President Karimov to respect the principles of democracy and human rights as embodied in the Helsinki Final Act, which he, himself, signed in Helsinki in February 1992. I say to President Karimov, the goal of political stability to which you claim to adhere, does not justify the brutal repression of other human beings.

Mr. President, the events in Uzbekistan provoke both outrage and sadness. During my visit there last April, I visited the beautiful city of Samarkand, and it became clear the extent to which the rich and remarkable culture of the Uzbek people had been smothered for so many years under Soviet repression and the lies of Soviet ideology. I understand very well that Uzbekistan, a brand new country, now faces many economic, social and political hardships as it gropes its way out of the darkness of colonization and repression. Unfortunately, the repressive practices of the current leaders of Uzbekistan have shown that Uzbek leaders intend not to bring in the light to democracy, but to continue those dark days of totalitarian repression.

S. 1, NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH REVITALIZATION

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I deeply regret that I am unable to cosponsor the NIH reauthorization bill (S. 1) today due to my continuing concerns regarding its fetal tissue research provisions. It is regrettable that these provisions are included in this bill, particularly since President Clinton has made it clear that he will override the fetal tissue moratorium. In all probability, by the time the bill is marked up in committee next week, it will be a fait accompli.

I am gratified, however, that the bill does not repeal the fetal tissue banks that were begun last year. I am firmly convinced that if these research banks are allowed to flourish they will provide an alternative source of fetal tissue than that from induced abortions.

With a few exceptions, I believe the bill's provisions merit support. In particular, I wish to emphasize my continuing support for the concept of reforming the NIH AIDS research program.

I have long supported AIDS research. Few areas or demographic groups have been left untouched by this tragic disease. This NIH bill contains a provision for essential AIDS vaccine trials for women and children that I requested be included.

The AIDS research program has grown over the years and through the tireless effort of those like Anthony Fauci, M.D., has been successful. The AIDS research budget is spread out across the 13 institutes, and the tiny office of AIDS research has struggled in its attempt to coordinate the far flung research efforts. The current AIDS research budget is over $1 billion—larger than many institutes. There is unnecessary duplication and the program is without focus.

The provisions contained in this bill, while not perfect, provide AIDS research with the leadership, strategic planning, and coordination that are so essential into other life-threatening diseases. Specifically, I support the concept of a unified program focus through the development of a strategic plan and budget for AIDS research and the authority for the allocation of the research funds to the Office of AIDS Research. Moreover, the proposed changes will not cost additional monetary or personnel resources.

I believe that it is imperative to enhance the position of Director of the Office of AIDS Research to that of a full-time, Presidential appointee who will: First, report directly to the Director of the NIH; and second, sit on relevant executive branch AIDS task forces.

It is my sincere hope that these provisions will be included in the NIH reauthorization bill (S. 1). I believe them to be a critical component of our continuing search for treatments and, ultimately, a cure for AIDS and HIV disease. I remain committed to working with the distinguished chairman and ranking member of the Labor and Human Resources Committee to further refine these provisions as this bill moves forward.

THE SELECT COMMITTEE ON POW/MIA'S

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, the Senate Select Committee on POW/MIA Affairs has culminated its work with the release of its report, which provides a very extensive review of the issue.

I would like to join my colleagues in commending the chairman, Senator JOHN KERRY for his leadership on this committee. Senator KERRY, despite the committee's differences on various aspects of this issue, kept the committee nonpartisan and kept our eye on the central fact that we were all working for the families. In this same regard, Senator BOB SMITH, our vice chairman also deserves our commendation.

The members of this committee started with a wide range of views on this issue, but every Member shared the determination to find answers and provide recommendations on how our Government could better serve the families whose sons and daughters had made the greatest sacrifice for our Nation. It was this shared spirit that the chairman and the vice chairman tapped and were successfully able to mold into a productive force.

As someone who had not had an extensive knowledge of this issue when this process began, I have come to know firsthand the pain this tragedy has caused for countless families. This experience has only served to reinforce my own commitment to ensuring that our Government is responsive to its citizenry, particularly in areas as important as this one.

In my view, the most important accomplishment for the committee has been the release of an unprecedented amount of information that will help ultimately resolve the questions about U.S. servicemen still unaccounted for in Southeast Asia. While the committee was not able to resolve all of the questions surrounding this issue, its main success was to put in place a process in which questions can be answered about missing Americans and that over time this process will provide additional answers.

This process includes the most rapid and extensive declassification of public files and documents on a single issue in American history. The release of these documents, combined with our hearing record and with this report will now provide an unprecedented amount of resources which can help resolve this issue.

The report is a unanimous report supported by all 12 members of the committee. It is a very honest and direct report. Where there are differences among the members, these differences are noted. While it provides a review of the background of this issue, including an analysis of the Paris peace accords, it would be beyond the scope of this report to give a complete history of the more than 20 years covered. What we tried to do was highlight those areas and factors over the years which had an important impact on this issue. I believe the result of this effort is the most comprehensive review of the POW/MIA issue that has ever been provided.

The committee's main conclusion was that there is no compelling evidence that any American POW's are alive today in Southeast Asia. Nevertheless, the committee also determined that despite official statements to the contrary, our Government expected over 100 more Americans home at Operation Homecoming. While we do not believe that American officials had certain knowledge that any specific prisoner or prisoners were left behind after Operation Homecoming, the fact that these individuals were not accounted for began the 20 year agony on this issue.

Ultimately we are still dependent on the Southeast Asian countries, particularly Vietnam and Laos, for cooperation on this issue. But, a more effective and responsive policy on the part of our Government can help heal the wounds and answer remaining questions.

It is in this regard, that I would strongly recommend the implementation of the committee's recommendations for the executive branch on how to improve its handling of the POW/MIA issue.

By far the greatest obstacle to a successful accounting effort over the years has been the refusal of the foreign governments involved, until recently, to allow the United States access to key files or to carry out in-country, onsite investigations. But, I would like to underscore the committee's conclusion that the U.S. Government's process for accounting for Americans missing in Southeast Asia has been flawed by a lack of resources, organizational clarity, coordination and consistency. These problems had their roots during the war and worsened after the war as frustration about the ability to gain access and answers from Southeast Asian governments increased.

The committee's recommendations include encouraging the executive branch to establish a process of live sighting response, investigation and evaluation that is more extensive and professional than ever before. They also include:

Accounting for missing Americans from the war in Southeast Asia should continue to be treated as a matter of highest national priority by our diplomats, by those participating in the accounting process, by all elements of our intelligence community and by the Nation, as a whole.

Continued, best efforts should be made to investigate the remaining, unresolved discrepancy cases in Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia.

The United States should make a continuing effort, at a high level, to arrange regular tripartite meetings with the Governments of Laos and Vietnam to seek information on the possible control and movement of unaccounted for United States personnel by Pathet Lao and North Vietnamese forces in Laos during the Southeast Asia war.

The President and Secretary of Defense should order regular, independent reviews of the efficiency and professionalism of the DOD's POW/MIA accounting process for Americans still listed as missing from the war in Southeast Asia.

A clear hierarchy of responsibility for handling POW/MIA related issues that may regrettably arise as a result of future conflicts must be established. This requires full and rapid coordination between and among the intelligence agencies involved and the military services. It requires the integration of missing civilians and suspected deserters into the overall accounting process. It requires a clear liaison between those responsible for the accounting—and related intelligence—and those responsible for negotiating with our adversaries about the terms for peace. It requires procedures for the full, honest, and prompt disclosure of information to next of kin, at the time of incident and as other information becomes available. And it requires, above all, the designation within the executive branch of an individual who is clearly responsible and fully accountable for making certain that the process works as it should.

In the future, clear categories should be established and consistently maintained in accounting for Americans missing during time of war. At one end of the listings should be Americans known with certainty to have been taken prisoner; at the other should be Americans known dead with bodies not recovered. The categories should be carefully separated in official summaries and discussions of the accounting process and should be applied consistently and uniformly.

Present law needs to be reviewed to minimize distortions in the status determination process that may result from the financial considerations of the families involved.

Wartime search and rescue [SAR] missions have an urgent operational value, but they are also crucial for the purposes of accounting for POW/MIA's. The records concerning many Vietnam era SAR missions have been lost or destroyed. In the future, all information obtained during any unsuccessful or partially successful military search and rescue mission should be shared with the agency responsible for accounting for POW/MIA's from that conflict and should be retained by that agency.

If these reforms are implemented, we will be even further along in answering the outstanding questions. It is important to emphasize that the release of this report is not the end of our concern here in the Senate or in the Government. One of the committee's most significant conclusions is that we must keep the door open on this issue until it is ultimately resolved.

GOODBYE, CHRIS STREET

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I rise today to say goodbye to a young man who left this world too soon.

History tells us that on the day John F. Kennedy died, a tailor in New York put a sign on the door that read, "Closed Due to a Death in the Family." Mr. President, that's how Iowa feels today—we've had a death in the family. And that's what makes this so hard.

Two days ago, on a lonely stretch of highway just north of Iowa City, a young man named Chris Street died when the car he was driving collided with a snowplow. It was a tragic and senseless death that rocked Iowa to the very core.

The reason Chris felt like part of the family was because every week during the winter he entered the homes and visited the family rooms of Iowans all over the State. You see, Chris was a starting forward for the University of Iowa basketball team.

Just last Saturday, he set a school record by making his 33d and 34th straight free throws. Last year, as a sophomore, he earned honorable mention in the Big Ten Conference. This year, he was a star on a team ranked No. 14 in the Nation.

None of this came as any surprise to those of us who watched him grow up. I used to represent the congressional district he was from. While at Indianola High School, Chris was an all-State basketball player—not to mention the fact that in his senior year, USA Today named him an all-American quarterback. But it was as a Hawkeye where we really grew to love him.

In Iowa, we don't have any major league sports teams. The Iowa Hawkeyes and the Iowa State Cyclones are our major league athletes. And over the last few years, Chris Street had become a household name to Iowans and a hero to thousand of kids.

It was a title he wore well. In addition to being one of the best players on one of the best teams in the country, he was also the most quotable, the most emotional, and the most friendly player out there.

No wonder it rained in Iowa City for 2 days following his death. The family, friends, and fans of Chris Street cried the rain down.

My thoughts and prayers go out to his friends and family today, as they say their last goodbyes to a truly wonderful young man.

To paraphrase what a philosopher once said when Gandhi died, "In his lifetime, this young man managed to become enshrined in millions and millions of hearts, so that all of us became somewhat of the stuff he was made of." Chris Street may be gone, but his inspiration lives inside each and every one of us. We will miss him, but we will never forget him.

RECESS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I now ask that the Senate stand in recess as under the previous order.

Thereupon, at 12:50 p.m., the Senate recessed until 2:15 p.m.; whereupon the Senate reassembled when called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. BYRD].

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS].

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the able Senator from Oklahoma wishes to make some remarks, and I ask unanimous consent that it be in order for him to make those remarks and then the floor will be mine again.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would state that the Senate is in a period for the transaction of morning business, and under the order previously entered, Senators may speak therein. Does the Chair understand that the Senator from North Carolina wishes to seek recognition?

Mr. HELMS. I wish to be recognized and yield to the Senator from Oklahoma briefly.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HELMS. I thank the Chair.

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from North Carolina. I make an inquiry of the Chair if the introduction of bills is also in order at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is correct.

Mr. BOREN. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. BOREN pertaining to the introduction of legislation are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I again thank my colleague from North Carolina for allowing me to proceed.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. In accordance with the unanimous-consent request previously granted, the senior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS] retains the floor.

Mr. HELMS. I thank the Chair.

ROBERT E. LEE—THE NOBLEST AMERICAN

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, Tuesday, January 19, marked the 186th anniversary of the birth of Robert E. Lee, the man whom Winston Churchill correctly, in my view, called "the noblest American who ever lived and one of the greatest captains known to the annals of war."

In an age when revisionist academics spend their careers tearing the lives of those who do not fit their politically tainted agendas, Robert E. Lee still stands as one of the most inspiring and beloved men in the history of this country. But beyond the mythical general who struck with a thunderbolt on the battlefield and led the Army of Northern Virginia into legend, there was a gentle man of simplicity and perseverance who met each crisis and task with unquestioned faith in his Creator and unfailing devotion to his duty. For our times, Robert E. Lee the man is more the measure than the marble symbols of Lee the warrior which adorn so many shrines.

All of us, I suppose, have done some reading about Robert E. Lee, and in my case, looking at his life, I am reminded that at each turn, from his refusal to take command of the Union Army in 1861 to his heartwrenching decision to ask Grant for surrender terms in 1865, Robert E. Lee asked himself the same question over and over, "What is my duty as a Christian and a gentleman?" As his foremost biographer, Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, noted, "he answered by the sure criterion of right and wrong and, having answered, acted."

Robert E. Lee's religious conviction was clearly expressed in his sense of honor and duty. He revealed this in a note he wrote to himself: "There is a true glory and a true honor: the glory of duty done—the honor of the integrity of principle."

As Dr. Freeman records, Lee's creed was no more sorely tested than in those dark hours when he faced the decision of whether to surrender his ragged but still defiant army. Robert E. Lee told his subordinates, "If it is right, then I will take the responsibility." Lee subjected his decision to the belief that his God's desire would work out for the benefit of all, including himself. Because of this he endured, despite facing insurmountable odds and even when he knew that the cause for which he fought was doomed.

Despite being born to greatness, Robert E. Lee was a man of simple humility. His sense of self-denial and basic decency prepared him for the terror of war and its equally devastating aftermath. He could have easily rode to victory at the head of Lincoln's armies, but he denied himself a chance at glory.

Rather than surrender, he could have led his men into a guerrilla war which would have probably ended any chance for restoration of the Union. Instead of continuing the battle he chose to fight for tranquility. After Appomattox he dedicated his life to restoring peace to his country by imbuing southern youth with a sense of obligation and self-sacrifice, not vengeance and acrimony. He refused to get rich by letting others use his name. There were no speaking tours or self-serving memoirs blaming other men for the South's defeat.

He was satisfied to fill out his life with the presidency of a small Virginia college. Again he denied himself in order to be an example to us.

In one of his last public acts, he took a young child from his mother's arms and in lifting him up said softly, "Teach him he must deny himself." There is no greater testament to the man.

Mr. President, as we honor Robert E. Lee this week, I close with a passage from a distinguished southern essayist, Benjamin Harvey Hill:

He was a foe without hate, a friend without treachery, a soldier without cruelty, and a victim without murmuring. He was a public officer without vices, a private citizen without wrong, a neighbor without reproach, a Christian without hypocrisy, and a man without guile. He was a Caesar without his ambition, a Frederick without his tyranny, a Napoleon without his selfishness, and a Washington without his reward.

INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, today I introduce a four-pronged package of legislation to: No. 1, restore the rights of 1.5 million unborn Americans slaughtered each year; No. 2, to restore the right of our children to voluntarily pray in schools; No. 3, to restore the supremacy of the individual over State-imposed quotas; and No. 4, to treat AIDS as a public health issue rather than one of civil or political rights.

Needless to say, I will say more later about each of these proposals. For the present I will talk about the need to change the direction of the country, it being fashionable to talk about change these days.

Amid all of the cheers being raised as we enter a new Congress and a new administration, there is growing trouble across our land. Our traditions, our children, and the institutions which have made this Nation the light of the world, are all under assault.

We are not threatened in a military or material sense. We are—despite reports to the contrary—the globe's military and economic colossus. America's armed might stand unchallenged. The evil empire is a thing of the past. Our economy is twice the size of our nearest competitor—Japan.

Why then is our great country in danger? Mr. President, I believe we are in a war—in the sense that we are engaged in a struggle for the soul of America.

The residue of the 1960's—the dream decade of the left—continues to wreak havoc. Free sex translated into wave after wave of sexual diseases, the most recent manifestation, AIDS, having turned the public health agenda of this country on its head.

Illegitimacy is rampant. The Department of Health and Human Services reports that 9 of every 10 children in the District of Columbia are born to unwed teenage mothers. According to the Wall Street Journal, in the Nation's Capital, two-thirds of 10th grade boys and one-fifth of 10th grade girls report that they have already had at least four sexual partners.

Pornography is taken for granted. Unnatural lifestyles have been elevated to the level of legitimacy. At the Democratic Convention several speakers called AIDS a Reagan-Bush disease. Forget the fact that the Centers for Disease Control claim that the average male AIDS carrier has had over 500 sexual partners, and far more Federal dollars have been spent on AIDS than on heart disease and cancer combined.

Not one speaker at last year's Democratic Convention dared mention that there is a moral factor missing in this debate. To have done so, the speakers probably would have had to reject the so-called progressive creed that every person must be liberated from traditional values—in other words if it feels good, do it. In this bizarre world there are no universal standards, and like the Orwellian nightmare of "1984," right becomes wrong, bad becomes good, and the lie becomes the truth.

Tolerance of the drug culture in the popular media and the breakup of the traditional family have combined to give us three generations of a professional criminal class—the power of which raised its ugly head on the streets of Los Angeles a few months ago.

When a spokesman for former President Bush said that many of our social problems stem from the failed policies of the secular welfare state, he was hooted down and pilloried by the talking heads in the media and the political opposition.

So I think it is a significant question, a relevant question to ask, "Where are we headed?" Quo vadis, America?

What can be said in a Nation where the highest Court in the land declares that the display of the Ten Commandments and the recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance in a public school is illegal while the very same public school hands out condoms to sixth graders and preaches the equality of perverted sexual lifestyles?

Mr. President, we are losing a spiritual war and it is eating away at our national security from within. As the remarkable French statesman Alexis de Tocqueville noted in the 1850's, the source of American virtue will never be found in the Government or Government programs. The source of American virtue, he said, will always be found in the churches and synagogues of America.

Los Angeles political commentator Dennis Prager recently noted that religious Americans have not only conceded the Government and the media to left wing activists, we are now allowing those forces to define a new creed for America. The trinity of Christianity—Father, Son, and Holy Ghost—and the trinity of Judaism—God, the Torah, and Israel—have been replaced by a new creed—race, gender, and class.

In this new religion we can no longer judge people in terms of good or evil—only in the context of black versus white, male versus female, and rich versus poor. Rather than proclaim the responsibilities and duties of citizenship, the cult of victimhood is enshrined as gospel. The liberals always blame someone or something else—Reagan, Bush, lack of gun control, not enough condoms for children, et cetera, et cetera.

On the academic campus and in enlightened circles, the new religion has spawned a fashionable word: multiculturalism. Multiculturalism does not stand for the celebration of Greek-American culture, Italian-American culture, or African-American culture. Multiculturalism means multimorality—the denial of the universal truths embodied in the Judeo-Christian ethic.

Under the multicultural banner, a rock music producer—who happens to be chairman of the Southern California ACLU—in defending a particularly offensive rap singer declared with a straight face that, "What is vile to a Mormon family in Utah is not vile to a black family in south central Los Angeles." The Los Angeles Times sneered that the espousal of traditional values is simply a right wing euphemism for an oppressive organization where a white father heads a family. In other words, a married man and woman, living together with children is not a universal value—certainly not one to be encouraged and nurtured by all Americans.

I do not buy that and I do not believe many people do.

Mr. President, America has reached a point in popular culture where morality is nothing more than a matter of personal preference—like choosing where to shop, or what movie to see.

Values become simply a matter of how you look at them—no Ten Commandments, no psalms, no beatitudes, no “We hold these Truths to be self-evident, that all Men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights”—you know the rest.

But I say, Mr. President, and I do not claim even better than average wisdom, but I say that if America is to survive, there must be an American reawakening. We cannot continue down this destructive path or we will duplicate the fall of Rome and all other beaten civilizations in history. Before it is too late, we must have the courage and the decency to stand up for life, the family, and all of the other principles that made this Nation great in the first place.

SCHOOL PRAYER CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I am today introducing a resolution proposing an amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which, according to recent polls, is supported by 75 percent of the American people. Specifically, the proposed constitutional amendment restores the right of voluntary prayer in the public schools, including the offering of prayers at public school graduation ceremonies and sports events, such as football and basketball games.

Mr. President, in line with the comments that were just made, this proposed constitutional amendment focuses on the survival of our Nation.

During the recent Presidential campaign, the news media cited ad nauseam a sign posted in the Clinton campaign headquarters which reportedly said, “It’s the economy, stupid.” But what the media lost sight of—indeed, probably never recognized—is that at the core of the free enterprise system is a moral society, and unless the fact that the Lord governs in the affairs of mankind is recognized, no economy can ever be strong.

Unlike the media, the American people recognize the moral—and practical—imperatives of returning voluntary prayer to our schools. “Reader’s Digest” commissioned the Wirthlin Group to conduct a poll on the issue and reported the results this past November. They found that 80 percent of the American people disapprove of the Supreme Court’s recent ruling that it is unconstitutional for prayers to be offered at high school graduations and that 75 percent of Americans generally favor prayer in public schools. As “Reader’s Digest” pointed out, these opinions in favor of prayer “were expressed by Democrats, Republicans, blacks and whites, rich and poor, high-school dropouts and college graduates—reflecting a profound disparity between the citizenry and the Court.”

What this demonstrates, Mr. President, is that the vast majority of Americans intuitively, and properly, understand that the moral collapse in our schools, and our country, is in great part due to the Supreme Court’s deemphasizing moral principles that deserve to survive—indeed, must survive if this Nation is to survive.

Mr. President, Justice Potter Stewart, dissenting in one of the Supreme Court’s earliest cases outlawing school prayer, made this profound observation:

A compulsory state educational system so structures a child’s life that if religious exercises are held to be an impermissible activity in schools, religion is placed at an artificial and state-created disadvantage. Viewed in this light, permission of such exercises for those who want them is necessary if the schools are truly to be neutral in the matter of religion. And a refusal to permit religious exercises thus is seen, not as the realization of state neutrality, but rather as the establishment of a religion of secularism.

Justice Stewart’s words accurately predicted that governmental intolerance of religion would be the natural and precise effect of the Court’s decision banning school prayer. The effect of those decisions has been to outlaw, for all practical purposes, any manifestation of religious faith on public school property.

Mr. President, consider the havoc wrought by implications far beyond the schools themselves: Rising crime rates, increased illegitimate births, abortion, incest, poverty, teen-age suicide, AIDS, pornography masquerading as art, and a tragic erosion of the American citizen’s love and concern for his fellow man into a cold indifference. All have a common thread: A massive collapse of morals in America.

Repeated statistics show that the public schools have been going downhill morally and academically since the Supreme Court outlawed school prayer in the 1960’s. I have a book of graphs based on statistics from the Federal Government and other widely respected institutions which illustrate the moral and academic decline in the schools since that time. The statistics make all too clear the importance of restoring the right of voluntary prayer and Bible reading in the public schools and at public school events.

Senators may recall that on January 23d last year, I offered a Senate resolution urging the Supreme Court to use the then upcoming Weisman versus Lee school prayer case to restore to America’s children the right of voluntary prayer and/or Bible reading in the public schools. While the Senate’s rejection of that simple resolution by a vote of 38 to 55 did not surprise me, the Supreme Court’s subsequent decision last June 24 in the Weisman case did. In that decision, the Court shamefully adhered to its historically insupportable view that the Constitution somehow forbids any and all religious expression in the public schools. In Weisman, the Court took such faulty logic yet another step forward in order to outlaw voluntary prayers during public school graduation ceremonies—based on the insane notion that an individual’s mere presence during the offering of a prayer constitutes forcing that individual to participate in the prayer.

Most Senators no doubt heard from the new media and hundreds of constituents this past fall, as I have, that the ACLU and other liberal extremists have used the ruling in the Weisman case to force school boards all over the country to ban public prayers at high school football and basketball games.

But this time, Mr. President, ordinary Americans have been fighting back. In many cities and towns, school officials are providing a moment of silence in lieu of a public prayer—and the people are grasping the opportunity to spontaneously recite the Lord’s Prayer in unison. But such spontaneous acts of prayer has been too much for antireligious bigots in some cities and with the ACLU’s help they have gone back to the Federal courts to try and block even moments of silence before ball games.

It is my firm belief that the Founding Fathers would be horrified at such a twisted interpretation of the first amendment’s establishment and free exercise clauses. Has the Court forgotten that there are two parts to the first amendment’s clause dealing with religion? The amendment prohibits government from interfering with the “free exercise of religion” just as strongly as it prohibits the government from establishing a religion. The words are, “Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.”

Is the Supreme Court blind to the second half of that sentence?

Mr. President, how ironic it is that while we in the Senate deem it helpful and necessary to begin our day’s activities by corporately and publicly asking God’s blessing on our efforts, the Supreme Court denies this same right and privilege to millions of schoolchildren across this Nation.

It is also ironic, Mr. President, that instead of engendering official attitudes of neutrality toward religion in the schools—as the Supreme Court initially assured us they would in the early 1960’s—the school prayer decisions have in fact fueled government intolerance of, and active assaults on, any vestige of Christianity in the public schools.

In North Carolina alone, within the last several years, such government-induced intolerance toward religion has produced the following results:

First, a teacher in Lexington, NC, Ronald Chapman, resigned his job because he refused to end his 23-year tradition of reading the Bible and praying with his special education students. His efforts throughout the 32 years had the enthusiastic approval of every student and every one of their parents;

Second, just a few miles down the road in the same county, in Thomasville, NC, the school superintendent banned the decades-old tradition of permitting a public prayer for the safety and protection of football players before high school football games;

Third, the Federal courts prohibited a State judge in Charlotte from opening his court sessions with a prayer for wisdom and guidance from God; and Fourth, a school teacher in Charlotte was prohibited by the local school board from reading her Bible during her lunch hour.

Mr. President, similar governmental restraints on religious freedom in public have taken place all over the Nation.

In the State of Florida, a school principal felt personally compelled by the Supreme Court decisions to use his scissors to remove pictures of the Bible Club from all copies of the high school annual.

In various States, students have been prohibited from praying in their cars in the school parking lot—or even bringing their personal Bibles onto school property.

In Colorado, a Denver school tried to have all copies of the Bible removed from the school library on the grounds that their presence on the shelves was an infringement of the Supreme Court's decisions on school prayer.

In Schuylerville, NY, a Federal judge ordered the removal of a former student's painting of Jesus' crucifixion that had hung on a school wall for 25 years. The judge stated that the painting conveyed a message of "government endorsement of Christianity." Yet the Federal courts have been strangely silent on the message of "government intolerance of Christianity" conveyed by National Endowment for the Arts' use of Federal funds to subsidize an artist who put a crucifix in a glass vat of urine and claimed it was art.

Three separate studies, Mr. President, have noted that textbooks in the public schools systematically shun the role of religion in molding the Nation and motivating our leaders because publishers believe the Supreme Court decisions require such censorship.

Perhaps most absurd, Mr. President, is the insistence of the American Civil Liberties Union in California that the "teaching that monogamous, heterosexual sexual intercourse within marriage as a traditional American value is an unconstitutional establishment of a religious doctrine in the public schools." No wonder the teenage pregnancy rate is going through the roof when such absurdities as this are entertained seriously in the Federal courts.

Mr. President, can the situation get further out of hand? Such ludicrous episodes clearly demonstrate the duplicity of the Supreme Court's empty assurances in 1962 in Abington School District versus Schemp that despite their decision banning school prayer:

The State may not establish a "religion of secularism" in the sense of affirmatively opposing or showing hostility to a religion, thus preferring those who believe in no religion over those who do.

But that is exactly what has happened. Time magazine acknowledged in its December 9, 1991, edition that Angela Davis can walk into any public school in the country and sing the praises of dogmatic Marxist atheism. Yet the students themselves cannot so much as read the Ten Commandments in rebuttal.

Mr. President, perhaps the irony of ironies in the whole situation are the recent news reports about the spiritual resurgence in the Republics of the former Soviet Union. I have here a 3-week-old article from the January 4 edition of "Newsweek" magazine detailing how those Republics are allowing prayer and religious instruction in the public schools. Let me quote from that article:

[T]here is a religious revival in Russia, and educators—pressured, at times, by parents—are searching for ways to give students an ethic to live by. In a change as radical as its embrace of democracy, Russia—like several other former Soviet Republics—has embarked on a massive effort to bring the teaching of religion back into its 160,000 schools.

As Aleksandr Asmolov, the deputy minister of education explains, the dream is to provide Russian students with enough information about the history of spiritual culture to allow them "to freely choose any religion they want."

Even Evgenia Tikhona, a Soviet teacher for 40 years—and an atheist—understands the need for religious foundations in order to maintain her country's social fabric. In a comment about the social problems besetting the Russian schools she said:

Now that belief [in Lenin] is gone and that is why we have to turn to Jesus. Either the children will learn from his example, or they will turn to crime, drugs, and alcohol.

Mr. President, I could not agree with her more. Without freedom of religion in the schools, American students have indeed turned to crime, drugs, and alcohol as the statistics I have here at my desk demonstrate.

The former Soviet Republics have obviously learned the hard way that devoid of the underpinnings of religion, no society—or economy—can survive, much less prosper. Unfortunately, it appears that the cultural and media elite in this country are determined to force us to learn the very same lesson the hard way, with or without the consent of a majority of Americans.

Mr. President, freedom of religion, guaranteed to us by the Founding Fathers in the first amendment to the U.S. Constitution, is fundamental to our democracy. This has been recognized as a fact from the Nation's very inception. Religious liberty, and recognition of the part played by Almighty God in creation of our country, have been foundation stones in our national existence.

One of the earliest official acts undertaken by a leader of the new Nation in 1789 acknowledged as much. President George Washington's first inaugural address, delivered in New York City on April 30, 1789, declared that:

 it would be peculiarly improper (for me) to omit, in this first official act, my fervent supplications to that Almighty Being who rules over the universe, who presides in the councils of nations, and whose providential aids can supply every human defect, that his benediction may consecrate to the liberties and happiness of the people of the United States a government instituted by themselves  In tendering this homage to the great Author of every public and private good, I assure myself that it expresses your sentiments not less than my own; not less those of my fellow-citizens at large ***

The Senate to this day—following George Washington's example—continues the tradition of holding a morning prayer to invoke God's blessings in our daily decisions. If we can do it in the Senate, then why are the Federal courts prohibiting a State judge in North Carolina from doing it in his courtroom every day? More importantly, why do the Federal courts prevent our children from saying such a prayer at school?

Mr. President, could George Washington have imagined that the day would come when the Supreme Court would outlaw the exercise of religion anywhere in the United States of America? Could any of those great men who led us from colonial servitude to the status of a proud new Nation—with the world's first guarantee of liberty to its people—could any of them have had the merest suspicion that 180 years into the future the Court would contravene the plain meaning and intent of the first amendment?

We know that some of those Founding Fathers harbored reservations about the role of the Supreme Court in the new Government. But surely no Founding Father could remotely have envisioned a court that could cancel a child's right to offer voluntary prayers in the company of those of like beliefs in his or her public school.

Mr. President, I am not alone in believing that this is not what the Founding Fathers intended. Prof. Charles Rice of Notre Dame Law School explains that it has been:

 incorrectly asserted, by the Supreme Court and others, that the establishment clause ordained a government abstention from all matters of religion, a neutrality between those who believe in God and those who do not. An examination of the history of Clause, however, will not sustain that analysis. Its end was neutrality, but only of a sort. It commanded impartiality on the part of government as among the various sects of theistic religions, that is, religions that profess a belief in God. But as between theistic religions and those non-theistic creeds that do not acknowledge God, the precept of neutrality under the establishment did not obtain. Government, under the establishment clause, could generate an affirmative atmosphere of hospitality toward theistic religion, so long as not substantial partiality was shown toward any particular theistic sect or combination of sects.

Mr. President, the Founding Fathers' sole intent in the Constitution's establishment clause was to prohibit the establishment of a national church; all remaining issues concerning church-state relations were left strictly with the States. And the pending amendment simply calls on the Supreme Court to restore the original intent of the Constitution's Framers in this regard.

Michael Novak of the American Enterprise Institute astutely pointed out that:

There is no issue in American life in which the public will is so clear and the political establishment is so heedless. The cultural and political elites have simply ignored the overwhelming support of the American people for voluntary school prayer—indeed for the role of religion and faith in the nation's life.

Mr. Novak hit the nail on the head. There are few more pressing duties facing Congress than to restore the true spirit of the first amendment regarding religion. Restoring balance and freedom to the public schools regarding the role of religion in our public—as well as our private affairs—is imperative if we really want to see an improvement in our schools in both academics and discipline. If we are really interested in the welfare of our Nation's children, as many of us espouse, we will restore to them a most fundamental right—the right to seek guidance and help from the Almighty each and every day at school, if and when they want to.

Earlier I quoted George Washington's first address to the Nation as President, so in closing I will recite his final counsel—and warning—to the Nation as he left office. It is as applicable today—perhaps more so—as it was more than 200 years ago. He cautioned the Nation that:

Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion, and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the resolution be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the joint resolution was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S.J. RES. 3

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following article is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution if ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States within seven years from the date of its submission to the States by the Congress:

“ARTICLE—

“Nothing in this Constitution shall be construed to prohibit voluntary individual or group prayer in public schools or other public institutions, or to prohibit prayer at public school baccalaureate services, athletic events, or other extracurricular activities. No person shall be required by the United States or by any State to participate in prayer or to be present during any prayer. Neither the United States nor any State shall compose the words of any prayer to be said in public schools or other public institutions, or at events sponsored by public schools or other public institutions.”

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I send the joint resolution to the desk and I ask that it be given first reading.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Clerk will read the joint resolution for the first time.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution (S.J. Res. 3) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States restoring the right of Americans to pray in public institutions, including public schools, at graduation ceremonies and athletic events.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I ask for second reading of the bill.

Mr. LEVIN. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard. Second reading will go over to the next legislative day.

CIVIL RIGHTS RESTORATION ACT
OF 1993

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, on June 25, 1991, I offered an amendment to the omnibus crime bill which would have done away with quotas in the workplace by amending title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. According to the August 12, 1991 edition of the New Republic, that amendment caused a great deal of agitation within the Senate because it forced those Senators who say they oppose quotas to take a stand on outlawing the practice of racial quotas.

The New Republic went on to say that in order to force a showdown on preferences in hiring and promotion, this Senator—meaning JESSE HELMS of North Carolina—should accept a modification of the original amendment as offered by the distinguished Republican leader, Mr. DOLE. As Senators may recall the Republican leader proposed, during the debate in June 1991, that the Helms amendment contain language which would permit special recruitment of minorities and women for the employer's applicant pool—the broadly acceptable form of affirmative action. At that time, I agreed that Senator DOLE's modification was an important addition to my amendment. However, because of objection on the other side, I was prevented from modifying the text of the amendment.

Mr. President, the legislation introduced today—The Civil Rights Restoration Act of 1993—offers Senators the opportunity to pick up the gauntlet laid down 2 years ago by this Senator and Senator DOLE.

The Helms legislation is very simple. It prevents Federal agencies and the Federal courts from interpreting title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to permit an employer to grant preferential treatment in employment to any group or individual on account of race. The Helms proposal prohibits the use of racial quotas in employment once and for all.

In the last 2 years, almost every Member of the Senate and every candidate for President has proclaimed that he or she looks with disfavor on quotas. This measure will give Senators an opportunity to reinforce their statements with a clear-cut vote against quotas.

I am not here on behalf of business—large, medium, or small. I am here on behalf of working people of all races, ethnic groups, and gender in North Carolina and around the country. They don't have 500 organizations trying to protect their civil rights. They are not organized into Washington pressure groups. They simply want to work for a living free of discrimination.

Unfortunately, government-imposed and government-encouraged quotas are a fact of life. According to the June 3, 1991, edition of Newsweek magazine, a substantial number of Fortune 500 companies have very clear minority hiring goals which they treat as quotas. In a survey of CEO's of Fortune 500 companies, 72 percent acknowledged that they use some form of quota hiring system. Only 14 percent of those CEO's claim that they hire solely on merit.

I note with interest that Business Roundtable favored the so-called Civil Rights Act passed in the last Congress. Mr. President, for whom does the Business Roundtable speak? Surely not for the little man. As the Newsweek article suggests, there are very big businesses who regularly engage in reverse discrimination. They are interested in public relations, not the civil rights of the individual worker.

Mr. President, all the Helms legislation says is that from here on out, employers will hire on a race neutral basis. They can reach out into the community to the disadvantaged—something all Senators support—and they can even have businesses with 90, 90 percent minority work forces as long as the motivating factor in employment is not race.

The Helms legislation clarifies section 703(j) of title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to make it consistent with the intent of its authors, Hubert Humphrey and Everett Dirksen. Let me read it:

It shall be an unlawful employment practice for any employer, employment agency, labor organization, or joint labor committee that is subject to this title to grant preferential treatment, with respect to selection, compensation, terms, condition, or privileges of employment or union membership, to any individual or to any group of individuals on account of the race, color, religion, sex, or national origin of such individual or group for any purpose, except as provided in subsection (e) of this section.

It shall not be an unlawful employment practice for any person described in paragraph (1) to establish an affirmative action program designed to recruit qualified minorities and women to expand the applicant pool of the person.

Why is this proposal necessary? It is necessary because in the 29 years since the passage of the Civil Rights Act, the Federal Government and the courts have corrupted the spirit of the act and created a tolerance for the very evil which Hubert Humphrey and Everett Dirksen fought so strongly against: the racial quota.

This legislation simply makes part (j) of section 703 of the 1964 Civil Rights Act consistent with subsections (a) and (d) of that section. It contains the identical language used in those sections to make preferential treatment on the basis of race—that is, quotas—an unlawful employment practice.

This legislation will prevent the Federal Government from ever again terrorizing the small businesses of this country with threats and fines for not meeting some bureaucrat's vision of a proportionalized and racially correct society.

Perhaps Senators are familiar with the Daniel Lamp Co., a small Chicago lamp factory recently visited by the investigators of the Equal Employment Opportunity [EEOC]. On March 24, 1991, the CBS News Program, "60 Minutes"—a program not known for a conservative bias—blew the cover off to EEOC's attempt to impose its quota mentality on one defenseless businessman.

As Morley Safer put it, the Daniel Lamp Co. "is guilty of not playing the numbers game." You see, the EEOC found the owner of the Daniel Lamp Co. to be a practitioner of racial discrimination and leveled a fine of $148,000 against him. What was interesting about the charges was the fact that of the company's 28 employees the only two who were not black or Hispanic were the owner and his father—who, by the way, is a survivor of Auschwitz. There were 18 Hispanics and 8 blacks on the payroll when 60 Minutes began its investigation.

The trouble began when a disgruntled job applicant filed an EEOC racial discrimination complaint against the Daniel Lamp Co. The EEOC demanded the records of the company. The owner, who hired only minorities, was proud of his work force and happy to allow the Federal Government to inspect the ledger. He thought he might be commended for providing jobs for minorities. How wrong he was.

In its investigation CBS found that the only information the EEOC was using against the Daniel Lamp Co. was the agency's computerized quota numbers. The EEOC's computer told the agency that based on the employment statistics of Chicago businesses with over 100 employees—a fascinating comparison since the Lamp company never had more than 3 workers—the Daniel Lamp Co. had to employ exactly 8.45 blacks. That sounds like a quota to me, and it even sounded like a quota to Morley Safer who was puzzled as to why the agency was disobeying the law which as Mr. Safer put it "says the EEOC can't set quotas."

Despite the denials by the EEOC, Mr. Safer concluded that, " * * * it [the EEOC] did set numbers by telling Mike [the owner of the company] that based on other larger companies' personnel, Daniel Lamp should employ 8.45 blacks." When the Daniel Lamp Co. stood up to the intimidation of the EEOC, the agency tightened the noose. Not only did the company have to meet the quota and pay a huge fine, it also had to spend $10,000 to advertise in newspapers to tell other job applicants that they might have been discriminated against and to please contact the Daniel Lamp Co. for a potential financial windfall.

Mr. President, do you see what is going here? The Daniel Lamp Co. isn't one of those Fortune 500 companies that can afford a bunch of lawyers and can placate the various special groups by hiring according to quotas. The Daniel Lamp Co. is a small, struggling enterprise which can afford to pay its few employees a scant $4 an hour. This company hired only minorities. But that was not good enough for the quota bureaucrats in Washington. They said the company did not hire enough of the right minorities.

This bill will put an end to this disgraceful power play by the quota crowd in the Federal bureaucracy.

Mr. President, do we want a nation where privilege and employment are handed out on the basis of group identity rather than merit? Already police and firemen in our major cities are clashing over who can be classified as black or Hispanic to ensure they receive job preference because of their minority status. Check the newspapers in San Francisco, Chicago, and Boston to see if I'm correct.

The Helms legislation protects the Daniel Lamp Co. and the firemen and the policemen, of whatever race, who are out there working hard at their jobs in the belief that they will be rewarded for their hard work—not judged on the color of their skin.

This proposal also includes an important safeguard which will protect those businesses and institutions whose special needs require personnel qualified for the job on the basis of religion, sex, or national origin. Like the other sections of title VII, this amendment protects the religious school or institution which grants preferences in hiring or admission to those of its own religion. It protects those ethnic-based enterprises which require special language skills and familiarity with particular customs.

Mr. President, there will be many Senators who will say the Helms legislation destroys affirmative action and outreach programs. Let me knock that strawman down.

If you equate affirmative action with goals otherwise known as hiring by the numbers, then the critics are correct: This bill does away with that practice.

If you support race conscious programs, if you support race norming tests, you lose under this legislation and you should vote against it.

If you equate affirmative action with outreach programs then you have nothing to worry about. Using language supplied by the distinguished Republican leader, a company can recruit and hire in the inner city, prefer people who are disadvantaged, create literacy programs, recruit in the schools, establish day care programs, and expand its labor pool in the poorest sections of the community. In other words expansion of the employee pool—what Senator DOLE calls good affirmative action—is provided for under this act.

Mr. President, America was founded on the philosophy of individual rights, not group entitlement. With that understanding, the distinguished former mayor of the city of New York, Ed Koch recently addressed the issue of numbers oriented affirmative action. In a letter to me, Mayor Koch made the following observation:

As to the already existing social problems caused by preferential affirmative action programs, several scholars, including the noted professor and sociologist Thomas Sowell, have observed that racial quotas and discriminatory affirmative action programs have not helped the intended beneficiaries. Those who are often preferred are the very ones who could have competed with the best.

If we are to uphold our commitment to civil rights—as we should—we must set in motion programs to ensure that all deprived persons—without regard to race, color, religion, sex or national origin—have the opportunity to achieve their full potential.

We should focus our attention on assisting minorities who have suffered from unequal opportunity * * * never excluding from programs others equally poor or deprived simply because they are white. The solution is not to place unqualified minority workers, or others of different national origin, in jobs for which they are not adequately trained as a Band-Aid to end discrimination. If anything that is the way to destroy the self-esteem of many workers, heightening anger and discrimination among fellow employees when some members of the work force are unable to carry their fair share of the load * * * such practices unfairly reflect upon many minority members who were hired because they were qualified and are better than other applicants. They unfairly become judged, not as individuals, but as members of a protected class, not able to compete with others.

As usual Mayor Koch cuts to the heart of the matter.

It makes absolutely no sense to this Senator that we can tolerate programs that discriminate against the poor Asian from San Francisco, or the poor white from western North Carolina because they do not fall into the class of protected minorities.

Mr. President, a few days ago I came across a scholarly paper titled "Equality and the American Creed: Understanding the Affirmative Action Debate," by Seymour Lipset. By the way, this paper was sponsored by the Democratic Leadership Council. The central thesis of this paper was summed up in this fashion:

Affirmative action policies, hiring or promoting people by the numbers or group identity challenge the basic American tenet that rights to equal treatment should be guaranteed to individuals, and that remedial preferences should not be given to groups. And given the strength of individualism in the American tradition, it is not surprising that most Americans, including a considerable majority of women and a plurality of blacks, have continued to reject applying emphasis on protected rights to groups.

It is crucial that civil rights leaders, liberals, and Democrats rethink the politics of special preference. The American Left from Jefferson to Humphrey stood for making equality of opportunity a reality.

Mr. President, those sentiments are right on the mark. I applaud the DLC for its foresight and hope its members join the fight to eliminate the use of quotas in our society.

The Helms proposition puts America back on the course that Thomas Jefferson, Hubert Humphrey, and Sam Ervin envisioned. It offers Senators an opportunity to back up their speeches and press statements against quotas. It gives Senators an opportunity to vote against quotas.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 37

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Civil Rights Restoration Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. PREFERENTIAL TREATMENT.

(a) UNLAWFUL EMPLOYMENT PRACTICE.—Section 703(j) of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000e-2(j)) is amended to read as follows:

"(j)(1) It shall be an unlawful employment practice for any entity that is an employer, employment agency, labor organization, or joint labor-management committee subject to this title to grant preferential treatment to any individual or group with respect to selection for, discharge from, compensation for, or the terms, conditions, or privileges of, employment or union membership, on the basis of the race, color, religion, sex, or national origin of such individual or group, for any purpose, except as provided in subsection (e) or paragraph (2).

"(2) It shall not be an unlawful employment practice for an entity described in paragraph (1) to undertake affirmative action designed to recruit individuals of an underrepresented race, color, religion, sex, or national origin, to expand the applicant pool of the individuals seeking employment or union membership with this entity."

(b) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this amendment made by subsection (a) shall be construed to affect the authority of courts to remedy intentional discrimination under section 706(g) of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000e-5(g)).

Mr. HELMS. I now send the bill to the desk and ask it be read for the first time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will read the bill for the first time.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 37) to amend the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to make preferential treatment an unlawful employment practice, and for other purposes.

Mr. HELMS. I ask for the second reading.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to second reading?

Mr. LEVIN. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard. The bill will go over to the next legislative day.

GENDER SELECTIVE ABORTIONS

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, in 1989, our distinguished former colleague from New Hampshire, Mr. Humphrey, brought to the attention of the Senate a new and particularly brutal form of discrimination in America, at least that is the way he saw it and certainly that is the way I see it to this day.

On Christmas Day 1988, the New York Times detailed what Senator Humphrey was talking about. For the most part, the comments by Senator Humphrey were just like a ship passing in the night. The media totally ignored what Senator Humphrey was saying.

The New York Times article was headed "Fetal Sex Test Used as Step to Abortion." That article stated that:

In a major change in medical attitudes and practices, many doctors are providing prenatal diagnoses to pregnant women who want to abort a fetus on the basis of the gender of the unborn child.

Geneticists say that the reasons for this change in attitude are an increased availability of diagnostic technologies, a growing disinclination of doctors to be paternalistic, deciding for patients what is best, and an increasing tendency for patients to ask for the tests. Many geneticists and ethicists say they are disturbed by the trend.

That was the New York Times.

Prof. George Annas of the Boston University School of medicine is quoted in the article as saying:

I think the [medical] profession should set limits and I think most people would be outraged and properly so at the notion that you would have an abortion because you don't want a boy or you don't want a girl. If you are worried about a woman's right to an abortion, the easiest way to lose it is not set any limits on this technology.

Mr. President, the focus of this legislation addresses Professor Annas' argument—setting a limit on discriminatory abortion. Sex selection abortion is as cruel and inhuman a practice as can be imagined. I do not think anybody can imagine anything worse than that. Every year in this Chamber the cries go out for equal rights for one group or another, no matter how offensive those groups may be. But what about equal rights for these children who are killed solely for being a gender which their parents don't happen to prefer?

Then, Mr. President, there was an article published in USA Today on February 2, 1989 which ought to be referred to in this discussion. Let me quote it.

In a break with past medical attitudes more geneticists are open to identifying gender for parents early—so they can decide whether to abort.

The change has ethicists debating where a parent's right to information ends and the rights of the unborn begin.

A recent national survey of 212 medical geneticists found 20 percent approved of performing prenatal testing for sex selection; in a 1973 survey, only 1 percent approved.

Probably 99 percent of nonmedical requests for prenatal diagnosis are made because people want a boy, says Dr. Mark Evans, an obstetrician and geneticist at Wayne State University, Detroit. Some experts are concerned about the social impact.

Evans turns down nonmedical sex selection requests. "Being female," he says "is not a disease."

Mr. President, it is astonishing that the radical feminist movement in this country has not lifted one finger to halt the wanton destruction of female infants. We simply cannot follow the path of India where a survey in Bombay disclosed that of 8,000 abortions, 7,999 were female. You see, in India it is considered a liability to have female children.

Mr. President, I have always been opposed to the senseless slaughter of unborn babies. Others may try to dodge the issue, and squirm, and flip-flop—but not this Senator. Somewhere along the line, I want someone to try to explain how it can be justified to destroy millions of little lives when millions of Americans are standing in line to adopt babies.

And while they're at it let them explain why they favor destroying little babies because they happen to be the wrong sex.

The American people know that I am speaking from a deeply held conviction. In one of the most noble documents ever created by the mind of man, our Founding Fathers wrote about certain truths that were self-evident—that we are endowed by our Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

I take that to mean that little babies in the womb were endowed—by their Creator—with the right to life, so that they can love and be loved. It is that simple.

Mr. President, there are many parts of the abortion, antilife agenda which the American people reject. Among these are abortion as a means of birth control, or when a pregnancy would cause a strain on the job or hinder a career. But on no issue are the people clearer than when they are asked about abortion when the parents want a boy instead of a girl or a girl instead of a boy.

According to a March 1989 Boston Globe poll, 93 percent of the American people reject the taking of life as a means of gender selection. Let me repeat those numbers from a news organization not noted for its adherence to conservative principles—93 percent consider gender selective abortion to be immoral.

Even a Newsweek/Gallup poll taken in April 1989 shows that four out of every five Americans oppose abortion simply because a parent wants a child of a different sex.

Mr. President, when NOW and the other antifamily groups invaded Capitol Hill several years ago, Molly Yard said that when it came to abortion on demand "its time for Congress to understand we are the majority." Molly had better take another look at the American people.

Fortunately, the people are once again ahead of their so-called leaders.

This legislation amends title 42 of the United States Code, the law which governs civil rights. Anyone who administers an abortion for the sake of choosing the gender of the infant will be subject to the same laws which protect any other citizen who is a victim of discrimination.

I urge my colleagues to speak out for the unborn.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 40

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Civil Rights of Infants Act".

SEC. 2. DEPRIVING PERSONS OF THE EQUAL PROTECTION OF LAWS BEFORE BIRTH.

Section 1979 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1983) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a)" before "Every person"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) For purposes of subsection (a), and for purposes of other provisions of law, it shall be a deprivation of a 'right' secured by the laws of the United States for an individual to perform an abortion with the knowledge that the pregnant woman is seeking the abortion solely because of the gender of the fetus. No pregnant woman who seeks to obtain an abortion solely on the basis of the gender of the fetus shall be liable in any manner under this section."

Mr. HELMS. I send to the desk a bill and I ask for its first reading, please.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will state the title for the first time.

The legislative clerk read as follows.

A bill (S. 40) to make it a violation of the rights secured by the Constitution and laws of the United States to perform an abortion with knowledge that such abortion is being performed solely because of the gender of the fetus, and for other purposes.

Mr. HELMS. I ask for second reading of the bill.

Mr. LEVIN. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard. The bill will go over to the next legislative day for its second reading.

AIDS CONTROL ACT OF 1993

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I am today introducing the AIDS Control Act of 1993 which is a comprehensive bill designed to treat AIDS as the public health issue it is rather than the civil rights issue it has become. I have no doubt that if we take this vital step, we will curb the spread of this lethal disease.

Mr. President, the AIDS Control Act of 1993 is similar, but not identical to, a bill I introduced on January 14, 1991.

Let me first speak about the distorted priorities which guided AIDS legislation in the last Congress. The Labor/HHS appropriations bill alone contained over $2 billion in AIDS research, education, and treatment programs. In fact, AIDS spending is so out of control that it is the only disease which had its own chapter in the committee report. The report states that the number of AIDS cases in America rose only 9 percent over last year, yet the AIDS budget has grown 37 percent in 1 year.

In 1990, 731,000 people died of heart disease, and we spent $219 million on research. Also that year, 494,000 people died from cancer; we spent $1.24 billion research.

Now let's look at funding for AIDS. During 1990, AIDS was responsible for 22,000 deaths, less than half of the number of American who died of diabetes and less than one-third of the number who die of flu.

Yet we spent more on AIDS related research than we spent on research for heart disease and cancer combined.

In 1990, 36.2 percent of the Federal health research, education, and prevention budget was spent on AIDS. Yet AIDS accounts for only 1.3 percent of all deaths in America.

Mr. President, the AIDS lobby says such out of control and unfair spending is warranted because of the greed and indifference of our society. The AIDS lobby also argues that we have to take into account the years of lost productivity as justification for such spending.

Well let's examine that argument for a moment. In 1988, cancer caused 24,052 deaths among people under 45; prenatal conditions caused 18,527 deaths; heart disease, 17,520 deaths; and AIDS?—12,912 deaths.

Mr. President, in this country, approximately 39,000 children die before the age of 1 each year. That is 64 years of lost productivity from the most helpless, most innocent segments of society.

The National Commission on AIDS say that the disease deserves more funding because it is contagious while diabetes, cancer, and heart disease are not. In fact, AIDS is contagious through behavior. A change in behavior among two high-risk populations, homosexual men and IV drug users, would reduce the spread of this disease without one more dime of Federal money or the discovery of a cure.

In fact Mr. President, AIDS is such an isolated disease that a homosexual male who lives outside of such areas as New York, Los Angeles, and San Francisco, has less a chance of getting AIDS than he does of dying of cancer or heart disease.

The unwarranted concentration of Federal resources on AIDS has created problems for other diseases such as Alzheimers, the cruel, devastating killer of senior citizens, which afflicts 4 million Americans and takes more lives in 10 months than AIDS has taken in 10 years.

The American people are often accused of being indifferent to the suffering of the AIDS community. A look at this appropriations bill says otherwise. We are spending more money on AIDS education than we are spending on Alzheimers. As the Washington Times said on June 28, 1990, "It is past time for AIDS activities to acknowledge that greed and indifference—such as they are—do not kill, but irresponsible behavior does."

Unfortunately, Mr. President, our efforts to treat AIDS as a public health concern have been thwarted by a vocal, militant minority which has used the AIDS issue to promote a political agenda it has failed to achieve in its own right. Of course, I am referring to the homosexual lobby. Members of this militant movement have masterfully manipulated the American public. By feeding on America's compassion, they have turned the AIDS epidemic to their political advantage by using it to promote something they have never achieved before—homosexual rights.

Mr. President, just listen to a quote from an article entitled, "The Overhauling of Straight America," which appeared in the November 1987 issue of Guide magazine:

In any campaign to win over the public, gays must be cast as victims in need of protection so that straights will be inclined by reflex to assume the role of protector. If gays are presented, instead, as a strong and prideful tribe promoting a rigidly nonconformist and deviant lifestyle, they are more likely to be seen as a public menace that justifies resistance and oppression. For that reason, we must forego the temptation to strut our gay pride publicly when it conflicts with the Gay Victim image.

I commend some members of this movement for one thing, Mr. President. At least some admit they are using the AIDS issue to convert straight America. In an August 2, 1985, Washington Post article, Gary McDonald, executive director of the AIDS Action Council summed it up this way:

We have to wear down the old stereotypes, and it is a burning irony that it will take AIDS to do that * * *. But after thousands of men like Rock Hudson, men you thought you knew, go on TV, it's going to get harder to tell those old faggot jokes about swishy limp-wristed men. I'm sorry it's going to take so many dead men to make that point.

If anyone doubts the power of this movement, they should read the Hate Crimes Statistics Act and the American Disabilities Act to determine just how fast the homosexual lobby is moving.

Mr. President, if someone even suggests that traditional public health measures should be taken, such as testing and contact tracing, there are outcries of "homophobia."

Mr. President, for the sake of our children and grandchildren, we must begin treating AIDS as the public health concern it is. While some are using the AIDS issue to promote political and societal acceptance of an anti-Christian lifestyle, thousands of innocent Americans are dying.

My bill, Mr. President, will move us in the right direction. It addresses five major areas: AIDS education; testing and contact tracing; record-keeping on the prevalence of the HIV infection; protection of the organ, semen and blood supply; AIDS testing in the military, in prisons and federally operated hospitals.

Mr. President, let me now review in detail the provisions of the legislation.

Section 2 would simply require the Centers for Disease Control [CDC] to keep records of those individuals infected with the human immunodeficiency virus. Currently the CDC records only individuals with AIDS.

Mr. President, by keeping records only of those individuals with AIDS and ignoring the numbers of those infected, we will never be able to grasp the magnitude of this epidemic. The Centers for Disease Control keeps track of all stages of syphilis. It should certainly do so for all stages of AIDS as well.

Section 3 requires all blood banks to test individuals for the AIDS virus. Mr. President, although I am sure that most blood banks are testing for the AIDS virus, it is not a condition of licensing. This section will simply ensure the highest standard of safety in our blood supply.

Mr. President, section 4 changes the rules for blood banks. All collectors and distributors of blood must be federally licensed. Under this provision, in order to obtain a license, the entity must provide the patient with the option of using his or her own blood for elective surgery and also provide the patient with the option of using a designated donor's blood.

Despite assurances from experts that the public has nothing to fear, Mr. President, many medical professionals are skeptical about the safety of the blood supply. In a survey of 4,000 doctors, nearly half—45 percent—of the doctors in private practice who responded to the survey said that if a family member were about to have elective surgery, they would shun publicly donated blood and would make arrangements to have their own blood or that of other family members used instead.

Mr. President, some blood banks and blood suppliers are openly opposed to autologous and directed blood donations. However, in high-risk areas, such as San Francisco and New York City, some blood suppliers have bowed to public pressure and are now allowing autologous and directed blood donations. In San Francisco, the rate of individuals wanting autologous blood donations reached 17.5 percent in 1988. In Chicago, 12 percent of the elective surgery patients in 1988 chose to reserve a supply of their own blood. In New York City, officials at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center reported that the number of patients who asked to store their own blood jumped 50 percent in a few short years.

In areas where the AIDS epidemic has not reached the proportions found in San Francisco or New York City, autologous or directed blood donations are much more difficult to obtain.

The earlier opposition to autologous donations is now waning. The AMA and NIH have recently endorsed autologous blood donations. At a July 1986 symposium sponsored by NIH, an expert panel concluded that autologous blood is the safest form of transfusion therapy. Blood banks and blood centers should make this option available to all qualified healthy people. The panel did not take a position on directed blood donations.

The opposition to directed donations has deteriorated as well. In many institutions, however, directed donations are not encouraged and, in some cases, discouraged. Some State legislatures have legislatively counteracted this opposition. California, for instance, has enacted a bill mandating that all blood banks within California allow directed blood donations.

Unfortunately, Mr. President, it is my understanding that some blood banks still refuse to allow directed donations. I find it alarming that a person going into a hospital for elective surgery may not be able to take his wife's compatible blood, or his child's or his neighbor's. Individuals should have the freedom to choose whose blood they will receive and should not be held hostage by the blood banks.

Section 4, modeled after the California law, will allow patients to receive blood from a compatible donor of his or her choice.

Section 5 of the bill amends title X of the Public Health Service Act—the so-called family planning program—to require grantees of the title X program to notify clients about the risk of contracting AIDS and that contraceptives—including condoms—will not provide full protection against the AIDS infection.

As of November 1990, Mr. President, 2,627 children under the age of 13 had been reported as having AIDS and 585 children between the ages of 13 and 20 have been reported to have AIDS. Obviously, this is the tip of the iceberg since these figures represent children who have developed full-blown AIDS, not children who are infected with the AIDS virus.

It is a fact, Mr. President, over one-third of the title X clientele are sexually promiscuous teenagers. It is imperative that if the Federal Government is going to be involved in what some have called the "safe sex business," we owe it to the recipients of these services to tell them the truth about how safe certain measures are.

Section 6 of the bill would require States who want to participate in the Federal venereal disease program or other programs for AIDS prevention, treatment, or counseling to take legislative or administrative action to require reporting of all cases of HIV infection to the State health officials.

Mr. President, in order to contain the spread of the HIV virus, it is imperative for States to treat HIV infection in the same manner that they treated the syphilis epidemic of the 1930's. At that time, because of public health concerns, States enacted laws to contain the spread of the disease including mandatory reporting of cases to the State public health departments and premarital testing.

The majority of States have mechanisms in place to require reporting of other venereal diseases and almost one half the States still require premarital testing for syphilis or rubella, both with adequate confidentiality laws. In light of the fatal nature and rapid spread of the AIDS virus, it is imperative that States take similar precautions with respect to AIDS.

The States can then send these figures to the Centers for Disease Control, giving the Federal Government better statistics on the growth of the epidemic.

Mr. President, section 7 would require that those States receiving monies for AIDS education and prevention take legislative or administrative steps to ensure that spouses of individuals infected with the AIDS virus are promptly notified.

Mr. President, this section should sound familiar to most Senators. The language is similar to, but not identical, to language I proposed to be added to the fiscal year 1989 Labor/HHS appropriations bill. As Senators will recall, that amendment failed by one vote.

Senators will recall the reason I proposed this amendment. During the summer of 1987 I received a call from a young woman whose mother wanted to come by and thank me for what I have done on the AIDS issue. As is the case with all Senators, I meet dozens of people each day, but the face to face meeting with that lovely lady and her daughter is something I will never forget as long as I live.

The meeting did not last long. After the usual amenities, the three of us began to discuss why this lady had come to see me. Tears began to well up in the woman's eyes as she began her painful story. She told me that she had AIDS and was dying. Her bisexual husband had infected her with the AIDS virus. He had not told her he was infected and State law prohibited his doctor from telling her.

Mr. President, we hear so much about protecting the confidentiality of the AIDS-infected patient. Yet, we hear nothing about the fatal consequences of iron-clad confidentiality laws. We see the homosexuals march in Washington for their rights. Yet, we are blind to the rights of this woman and the thousands like her who through no fault of their own have become infected with the deadly AIDS virus.

As one Senator, I hear the cries of that woman and the thousands like her. She deserves to live. She has a right to know that she is exposing herself to the deadly AIDS virus.

Section 7 does not require States to initiate a spousal notification program. It simply says that if a State wants hard-earned tax dollars to combat the AIDS virus, that State must make a serious effort to protect a spouse from exposing himself or herself to the AIDS virus.

Section 8 would simply require States receiving Federal moneys to combat AIDS to close all homosexual bathhouses.

Mr. President, traditionally, this country's Federal and State health authorities have taken action to eliminate sources of contagion. Public health authorities routinely inspect restaurants, hotels, public swimming pools, beauty salons, barbershops and other facilities to make sure they are safe for public use. If they are found to be spreading a disease or there is evidence that they pose a serious health threat to patrons, they are shut down.

Mr. President, I agree with this traditional health measure. The health and safety of our Nation is paramount. Facilities which pose a health threat to patrons should be closed.

Closing bathhouses makes good sense, Mr. President. As of November 1990 there were 149,498 cases of AIDS in this country. Almost 65 percent of those cases are among homosexual or bisexual men—another 25-30 percent are IV drug users.

Many communities have closed bathhouses because of the health threat, but the sessions of the last World AIDS Conference in San Francisco determined that the baths are slowly working their way back as a breeding ground for AIDS.

This section will turn off the spigot, so to speak, Mr. President. Just as public health officials are quick to close other facilities which pose a health threat to the American people, we should not provide an exception for homosexual bathhouses.

Section 9 would prohibit Federal dollars from being used for so-called needle exchange programs.

Yet, Mr. President, when we talk about the AIDS epidemic, the mood seems to change. Some in this Chamber believed—and still do—that distributing clean needles in exchange for dirty ones is a good thing, despite the hard facts that such programs have not significantly reduced the spread of the AIDS virus.

Mr. President, this section would ensure that hard-earned tax dollars are not used to fund illegal and deadly behavior.

Section 10 would prohibit Federal dollars from being used to distribute condoms or pay for printed, visual, or audio advertising recommending condom use.

Mr. President, despite what the self-proclaimed experts want you to believe, not a single study shows that condom use will prevent AIDS transmission. While condom use may reduce your chances of contracting the virus, it certainly is not 100-percent effective.

Mr. President, the condom's dismal record as a contraceptive should give the American public some cause for alarm. According to most studies condoms fail to prevent pregnancy 10 percent of the time. A woman can conceive a child only a few days each month. In contrast, a person can contract the AIDS virus every minute of every day of every month. This fact suggests that condom failure is even higher in preventing the spread of the AIDS virus.

Advocating condom use has accomplished one thing, Mr. President. It has put this Government's stamp of approval on the anti-Christian ideals of the sexual revolution, a revolution that can be credited with family breakups, rising abortions, rising out-of-wedlock births, rising VD rates, and rising school dropout rates.

This section would prevent further Federal funding of this misdirected approach to the AIDS problem.

Section 11 would prohibit any Federal moneys from being used to promote homosexuality and would require that all AIDS education emphasize abstinence from sexual activity outside a monogamous marriage.

Mr. President, despite what the homosexual lobby wants you to believe, there is absolutely no credible evidence showing that explicit, pornographic AIDS education has reduced the spread of the AIDS virus. Just like the condom campaign, the AIDS education campaign has pointed this Nation down the improper path of discarding a moral ethic in public health policy. Until we return to that ethic, we will never solve the AIDS epidemic.

Section 12 would require States receiving Federal monies for AIDS education and treatment to take administrative or legislative action to require premarital testing.

Mr. President, despite all the hemming and hawing to the contrary, mandatory premarital testing for a contagious disease is a good idea. Traditionally, States have required premarital testing for syphilis, rubella, tuberculosis, and so forth, especially during epidemic periods. About one half the States still require testing for these diseases despite the fact that these diseases are no longer epidemics and there are now known cures. If we can test for these diseases, I see no reason why we shouldn't test for AIDS, a disease which is far deadlier for parents and for unborn children than any disease in history.

Section 13 addresses the problem of AIDS transmission through tainted organs, semen, and blood. It would codify a 1985 recommendation by the Public Health Service that individuals who have AIDS or who are at high risk of contracting it should refrain from donating blood, semen, or organs. My bill would simply ensure compliance with this recommendation by imposing a fine of $10,000, a term of 10 years, or both for those at high risk or those with AIDS who donate or attempt to donate blood, semen, and organs.

Section 14 of my bill would impose mandatory testing in Federal prisons.

As more AIDS prone populations enter Federal penitentiaries, the virus will certainly spread. A study of homosexual activity and sexual assault in Federal prisons revealed that overall, 12 percent of those surveyed had engaged in homosexual activity while in prison. In penitentiaries, where more dangerous offenders have longer incarceration periods, 20 percent of the penitentiary inmates stated they had had a homosexual experience in their current Federal institution. In response to the question, "Have you had a homosexual experience in a prison as an adult?" 30 percent responded, "yes."

The study also showed that some Federal inmates were victims of sexual assault. Nine percent responded positively when asked if anyone had forced or attempted to force the inmate to perform sex against his will while in a prison. Two percent of the Federal inmates were targets in a Federal institution; 0.6 percent of Federal inmates were forced to perform an undesired sex act in Federal prison; 0.3 percent of Federal inmates were sodomized in a Federal institution.

Section 15 of the bill would impose mandatory testing of members of the Armed Forces. Specifically, this provision would require testing prior to entrance and annual testing thereafter.

Mr. President, since I first proposed annual testing in the military, the Navy and the Marine Corps have begun yearly testing. The Army and the Air Force, unfortunately, test only every 2 years.

Mr. President, for the health and well-being of our Armed Forces, I believe it is imperative for all military personnel to be tested annually for infection with human immunodeficiency virus.

I am also concerned about blood transfusions in times of crisis. In those situations, soldiers are assigned a blood partner and blood is not tested prior to transfusions. In cases where the member of the military is unaware that he is infected with the virus, he may be the recipient of blood tainted with the lethal AIDS virus.

Mr. President, we owe it to our soldiers, who risk their lives to protect our freedom, to protect them from the deadly AIDS virus.

Section 16 would require routine testing of all veterans under the age of 40 seeking inpatient treatment in VA hospitals.

Unfortunately, Mr. President, the numbers of AIDS patients in the VA system have skyrocketed. As of November 1990, over 8,000 people have been diagnosed with AIDS and cared for in our 172 VA medical centers. Of course, this probably represents only the tip of the iceberg since these are people with AIDS rather than people infected with the AIDS virus.

AIDS testing is necessary. It will ensure an accurate diagnosis. It gives the veteran an opportunity to obtain the most up-to-date care in AIDS treatment, and it will provide a valuable opportunity to educate the veteran about AIDS, whether or not he decides to be tested for the disease.

Mr. President, the AIDS test will ensure optimum care for the veteran infected with the AIDS virus. Research suggests that early detection and treatment of individuals infected with the AIDS virus or those with AIDS-related complex [ARC] reap more favorable results than treatment of patients with full-blown AIDS.

Routinely testing during an epidemic is nothing new, Mr. President. We did it during the syphilis epidemic and we should do it today with a disease which is far more lethal and spreading far more rapidly than the syphilis epidemic of the 1930's.

Furthermore, this bill would also require officials of the Veterans Administration to notify all spouses and sexual partners discovered during counseling about their potential AIDS infection.

Section 17 would require routine testing of individuals seeking treatment for tuberculosis at federally funded tuberculosis centers.

Tuberculosis, Mr. President, is the latest of the known diseases associated with the AIDS epidemic. Unlike other opportunistic infections, however, it is an air-borne virus and, as far as current research shows, is far more easily contracted than the other opportunistic infections associated with AIDS.

Make no mistake about it, Mr. President. Cases of TB have increased at alarming rates. In New York City tuberculosis incidence rates have increased 60 percent since 1980.

According to some research, AIDS is largely to blame for the rise in TB. According to an April 1987 study by Dr. Arthur E. Pitcheik:

Tuberculosis-infected patients who develop T-cell immunodeficiency are at increased risk of contracting tuberculosis, and this disease appears to occur with increased frequency among patients with acquired immunodeficiency syndrome.

Numerous other studies have found a direct correlation between AIDS and tuberculosis.

AIDS testing of patients suspected of having TB is wise health policy, Mr. President. It will guarantee an accurate diagnosis. A number of doctors, including the Public Health Service, have recommended dual testing because immunosuppression can result in a false negative test result.

Mr. President, routine AIDS testing for those infected with the tuberculin virus will ensure an accurate diagnosis and proper treatment for an individual infected with the tuberculin virus.

Section 18 requires routine testing in federally funded drug treatment centers.

Mr. President, intravenous drug use is the primary transporter of the AIDS virus into the heterosexual community.

Section 19 would require federally funded sexually transmitted disease centers to routinely test incoming patients for the AIDS virus.

Mr. President, it is no secret in public health circles that an alarming percentage of men and women attending STD clinics are also infected with the AIDS virus.

In a January 1988 article which appeared in the New England Journal of Medicine, researchers concluded:

In particular, we are concerned by the equal rates of HIV infection in young heterosexual men and women, and the close association of HIV infection with sexually transmitted diseases such as syphilis, genital herpes, and genital warts.

Researchers are also finding that clinic attendees who are infected with the virus are not at high risk of contracting AIDS. In a report released by the National Institute for Allergies and Infectious Diseases, researchers stated:

Among the most significant of the study's findings was that one-third of the infected men and one half of all the infected women were either unaware of or did not acknowledge behavior considered to be at high-risk for HIV exposure.

Realizing the strong correlation between an STD infection and infection with the AIDS virus, the Centers for Disease Control have recommended AIDS testing in STD centers. This section would require AIDS testing in all those centers receiving Federal dollars.

Section 20 would return the United States to a sound public health-based immigration policy.

On June 2, 1987, the U.S. Senate voted 96 to 0 to protect the health of the American people by adding the human immunodeficiency virus to the list of dangerous contagious diseases for which an immigrant can be excluded from entry into this Nation.

In 1987, the Senate unanimously approved my AIDS immigration amendment because it was, and is, good public health policy. In fact, I offered my amendment on the recommendation of the then Surgeon General, Dr. Koop, and other officials of the Public Health Service. I agreed with General Koop, as did every one of my colleagues, liberal and conservative, Democrat and Republican, that the public health of this Nation will be at risk if the United States continued to allow immigrants with AIDS into this country.

Incredibly, Mr. President, it has come to my attention that officials at the Department of Health and Human Services will now remove the AIDS immigration prohibition as well as the prohibitions now placed on all people with sexually transmitted diseases who attempt to enter this country.

I had assumed that every possible political concession had been made to the AIDS lobby, and to the homosexual rights movement which fuels it, but what is now going on at HHS is beyond belief.

It is not enough that the public health agenda of America has been torn apart by the AIDS movement, and that innocent children—like Ryan White—continue to die because the lobby and its allies promote civil rights rather than public safety? Apparently not, because some in the administration are bowing to the incessant cries of the homosexual rights movement to throw open the floodgates which our sensible immigration restrictions have previously kept shut.

The administration at first attempted to appease the homosexual rights fanatics by creating a special immigration waiver policy. Under this policy people with HIV may enter the country for up to 30 days to attend medical conferences, receive medical treatment, or visit family members. In order to gain this waiver, however, the infected individuals must answer questions about their medical condition, including whether or not they are infected with HIV.

Of course, the homosexuals were not happy—and they will never be until homosexuality is elevated to the civil rights equivalent of race and religion—they cried "discrimination." They claimed that America is stigmatizing homosexuals and that everyone should be allowed to come into the country without disclosing his or her medical condition.

At the behest of the President's Commission on AIDS and HHS Secretary

Louis Sullivan, legislation was introduced in the House to allow HHS to remove the HIV immigration restriction. In addition, on April 13, 1990, the administration issued a special 10-day visa to allow anyone who wants to attend so-called medical conferences, such as the AIDS conference in San Francisco last year, to come into the country.

What is the logic in treating HIV differently from other dangerous diseases when the great difference between AIDS and the others is that AIDS kills every time?

Mr. President, the Department of Health and Human Services is not promoting a health agenda. It is promoting an agenda skewed to placate the appetite of a radical and repugnant political movement. Once again the politics of AIDS is given priority over common sense and the public good.

Let's once and for all set the record straight: The Helms amendment, as my colleagues affirmed in 1987, is sound policy. And it works.

In late 1989 the house of delegates of the American Medical Association made it perfectly clear that the AIDS immigration policy makes medical sense. The AMA resolution said:

Immigrants have historically undergone a health assessment before admission into the citizenship process. To exclude HIV infection from the health assessment of those seeking United States citizenship would be a change in long standing U.S. policy and difficult to justify on medical, scientific, or economic grounds.

Although the delegates opposed mandatory testing of all visitors, it is important to note that the Immigration and Naturalization Service does not require AIDS testing for nonimmigrants. Rather, it asks visitors if they have any of the diseases which are on the list of dangerous contagious diseases.

An Article in the August 25, 1989 issue of Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Reports [MMWR], a publication of the Centers for Disease Control, documents cases of HIV-2 infection which have been discovered by public health authorities as a result of the Helms amendment. For the information of Senators, HIV-2, according to the CDC, is rare in the United States, but it is prevalent outside of our borders. In fact the CDC credits the mandatory medical screening process for the detection of the HIV-2 cases.

In other words the Helms amendment works.

Mr. President, let no one assume that the AIDS lobbyists will stop here. Each day they grow more strident. Each day they clamor for more special rights and more and more money to be funneled to AIDS programs. There is not a corresponding call for a measured and sensible public health response to this disease.

Congress should put the Department of Health and Human Services, and the AID lobby, on notice. The existing immigration law works for the good of all the American people; it must not be treated like a special interest football to be kicked around at the whim of any militant group and its apologists in government. I intend to do everything I can to see that the AIDS immigration prohibition remains in place. If I lose, the American people will lose also.

Section 21 and 22 should be familiar to Senators. In fact both provisions passed this body overwhelmingly in 1991.

Section 21 would protect the health care workers of America by allowing all health professionals who perform exposure-prone invasive medical procedures—as defined by the CDC—to determine if their patients carry the virus which causes AIDS. This measure passed the Senate 55 to 44 on July 30, 1991. Unfortunately it was dropped in conference.

Section 22 protects the patients of America from those health care professionals who recklessly expose their patients to HIV. I introduced this measure on July 18, 1991, in honor of the late Kimberly Bergalis, the brave young Florida woman who contracted HIV from her dentist. This section requires the health worker to notify the patient if he or she has HIV or full-blown AIDS prior to the performance of an exposure-prone invasive medical procedure. This section passed the Senate by a vote of 91 to 18 only to feel the pressure of the professional AIDS lobby in conference.

As I stated at the outset of my remarks, Mr. President, I believe the AIDS issue should be addressed as a public health problem, not as a civil rights one. Strides have been made in the right direction but a long journey lies ahead. Research to discover more about the virus and how it spreads is mandatory if we are ever going to discover a vaccine. Education and counseling are laudable efforts but more needs to be done. The Government, State and Federal, should not be afraid to take steps to contain the AIDS virus. This bill serves as a vital first step.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the AIDS Control Act of 1993 be placed in the RECORD at the conclusion of these remarks.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 42

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "AIDS Control Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. RECORDKEEPING.

Part B of title III of the Public Health Service Act is amended by inserting after section 318A (42 U.S.C. 247c-1) the following new section:

"SEC. 318B. RECORDKEEPING OF CASES OF ACQUIRED IMMUNE DEFICIENCY SYNDROME, ACQUIRED IMMUNE DEFICIENCY RELATED COMPLEX, AND HUMAN IMMUNODEFICIENCY VIRUS INFECTIONS.

"The Director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention shall keep records of cases of individuals who are infected with the human immunodeficiency virus."

SEC. 3. TESTING OF BLOOD.

Section 351(d) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 262(d)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of the AIDS Control Act of 1993, the Secretary shall promulgate regulations to require that, as a condition of receiving a license under this section, any entity that collects or distributes blood or blood components or derivatives shall test all donors of such blood for the presence of the human immunodeficiency virus prior to accepting a contribution of such blood."

SEC. 4. PERMITTING DIRECTED AND AUTOLOGOUS BLOOD DONATIONS.

Section 351(d) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 262(d)) (as amended by section 3) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(4) Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of the AIDS Control Act of 1993, the Secretary shall promulgate regulations to require that, as a condition of receiving a license under this section, any entity that collects or distributes blood or blood components or derivatives—

"(A) permit blood donations made by a donor to be used directly for blood transfusions for such donor or for an individual designated by the donor;

"(B) permit a donor of blood to direct that any blood donated by such donor be used in a blood transfusion for such donor or for an individual designated by such donor if the blood type of such donated blood is compatible with the blood type of such donor or the blood type of the designated individual, as the case may be, and the use of such donated blood is not contraindicated, as determined by the physician of such donor or such designated individual, as the case may be; and

"(C) permit blood donated in accordance with subparagraphs (A) or (B) to be used for an individual other than the donor or an individual designated by a donor, as the case may be, if—

"(i) the physician of such donor or such designated individual determines that there is a more immediate need for such blood; or

"(ii) the donor consents to the use of such blood for an individual other than the donor or such designated individual.

"(5) Regulations promulgated by the Secretary to carry out paragraph (4) shall provide that any entity to which such paragraph applies is only required to permit the donations of blood described in such paragraph during the normal business hours of such entity."

SEC. 5. REQUIREMENTS FOR RECIPIENT OF SERVICES AUTHORIZED UNDER TITLE X OF THE PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE ACT.

Section 1006 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300a-4) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) A grant may be made or a contract entered into under this title only after the intended recipient provides assurances satisfactory to the Secretary that such recipient of the grant or contract will, prior to providing to any individual any services with amounts appropriated under this title, inform the individual—

"(1) of the effectiveness of the particular contraceptive method provided to the individual by the recipient as a method to prevent infection with the human immunodeficiency virus and a comparison of such effectiveness with the effectiveness of sexual abstinence;

"(2) that many individuals who are infected with the human immunodeficiency virus will develop acquired immunodeficiency syndrome, which is a fatal disease; and

"(3) that the most effective way to avoid becoming infected with the human immunodeficiency virus is to abstain from homosexual relations, from heterosexual relations outside of a monogamous marriage, and from the sharing of needles used to administer intravenous drugs."

SEC. 6. CONDITIONS ON GRANTS FOR THE PREVENTION, TREATMENT, AND CONTROL OF ACQUIRED IMMUNE DEFICIENCY SYNDROME.

Title XXV of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300ee et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new part:

"PART C—PROHIBITION ON AWARDED OF GRANTS

"SEC. 2531. PROHIBITION ON AWARDED OF GRANTS.

"The Secretary may not make a grant under this title to any State or political subdivision of any State to support a project for education, testing, or counseling concerning acquired immune deficiency syndrome unless the State has taken administrative or legislative action to require that—

"(1) any physician practicing in the State report to the appropriate State public health authorities the name and address of any individual residing in the State who is treated by such physician and known by such physician to be infected with the human immunodeficiency virus;

"(2) any physician or medical technician who analyzes the results of clinical tests performed in the State report to the appropriate State public health authorities the name and address of any individual residing in the State who is determined as a result of an analysis conducted by such physician or medical technician to be infected with the human immunodeficiency virus; and

"(3) reporting under the laws described in paragraphs (1) and (2) to be carried out in accordance with State laws regulating the confidentiality of records maintained by the State or individuals with sexually transmitted diseases."

SEC. 7. SPOUSAL NOTIFICATION.

Part C of title XXV of the Public Health Service Act (as added by section 6) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 2532. SPOUSAL NOTIFICATION.

"(a) PROHIBITION ON USE OF FUNDS.—The Secretary may not make a grant under this title to any State or political subdivision of any State, nor shall any other funds made available under this Act, be obligated or expended in any State unless such State takes administrative or legislative action to require that, within 30 days of diagnosis, a good faith effort shall be made to notify a spouse of an AIDS-infected patient that such AIDS-infected patient is infected with the human immunodeficiency virus.

"(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Subsection (a) shall take effect with respect to a State on January 1 of the calendar year following the first regular session of the legislative body of such State that is convened following the date of enactment of this section.

"(c) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

"(1) AIDS-INFECTED PATIENT.—The term 'AIDS-infected patient' means any person who has been diagnosed by a physician or surgeon practicing medicine in such State to be infected with the human immunodeficiency virus.

"(2) GOOD FAITH EFFORT.—A 'good faith' effort includes, but is not limited to, a certified letter sent to the last known address of the spouse.

"(3) STATE.—The term 'State' means a State, the District of Columbia, or any territory of the United States.

"(4) SPOUSE.—The term 'spouse' means a person who is or at any time since December 31, 1976, has been the marriage partner of a person diagnosed as an AIDS-infected patient."

SEC. 8. BATHHOUSES.

Part C of title XXV of the Public Health Service Act (as added by section 6 and amended by section 7) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 2533. BATHHOUSES.

"(a) PROHIBITION.—None of the funds made available under this title shall be obligated or expended in any State if such State does not close all bathhouses where a pattern of continuous homosexual sexual activity or continuous illegal intravenous drug use occurs.

"(b) HOMOSEXUAL ACTIVITY.—The homosexual activity described in subsection (a) means any sexual activity between two or more males as described in section 2256(2)(A) of title 18, United States Code.

"(c) ILLEGAL DRUGS.—The illegal drug use described in subsection (a) means and includes any controlled substance as defined in section 102(6) of the Controlled Substance Act (21 U.S.C. 802(6)).

"(d) BATHHOUSE.—The term 'bathhouse' means any business that charges a fee for admission and for that fee offers the use of one or more of the following—

- "(1) a swimming pool;
- "(2) a spa or whirlpool; or
- "(3) a communal bath.

"(e) STATE.—The term 'State' means any State, the District of Columbia, or territory of the United States.

"(f) FAILURE TO ACT.—If on January 1 of the calendar year following the first regular session that is convened following the date of enactment of this Act, such State fails to take the action as described in subsection (a), it shall refund to the Federal Government by that date such sums as it received in accordance with this section."

SEC. 9. PROHIBITION ON USE OF FUNDS FOR NEEDLES AND SYRINGES.

Part C of title XXV of the Public Health Service Act (as added by section 6 and amended by sections 7 and 8) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 2534. PROHIBITION ON USE OF FUNDS FOR NEEDLES AND SYRINGES.

"None of the funds made available under this title shall be used to provide individuals with hypodermic needles or syringes so that such individuals may use illegal drugs, or to distribute bleach for the purpose of cleansing needles for such use."

SEC. 10. PROHIBITION ON USE OF FUNDS FOR CONDOMS.

Part C of title XXV of the Public Health Service Act (as added by section 6 and amended by sections 7, 8, and 9), is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 2535. PROHIBITION ON USE OF FUNDS FOR CONDOMS.

"None of the funds made available under this title shall be used in any manner to provide persons with condoms. Furthermore, none of the funds made available under this title shall be used to promote condoms as a method to prevent the spread of AIDS."

SEC. 11. PROHIBITION ON PROMOTION OF HOMOSEXUAL ACTIVITY.

Part C of title XXV of the Public Health Service Act (as added by section 6 and amended by sections 7, 8, 9, and 10) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 2536. PROHIBITION ON PROMOTION OF HOMOSEXUAL ACTIVITY.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—None of the funds made available under this title shall be used to provide AIDS education, information, or prevention materials and activities that promote or encourage, directly or indirectly, homosexual sexual activities.

"(b) REQUIREMENT.—Education information, and prevention activities and materials paid for with funds appropriated under this Act shall emphasize—

"(1) abstinence from sexual activity outside a sexually monogamous marriage (including abstinence from homosexual sexual activities); and

"(2) abstinence from the use of illegal intravenous drugs.

"(c) HOMOSEXUAL ACTIVITY.—The homosexual activity referred to in subsection (b) includes any sexual activity between two or more males as described in section 2256(2)(A) of title 18, United States Code.

"(d) ILLEGAL SUBSTANCES.—The illegal drugs referred to in subsections (a) and (b) includes any controlled substance as defined in section 102(6) of the Controlled Substance Act (21 U.S.C. 802(6)).

"(e) FAILURE TO COMPLY.—If the Secretary of Health and Human Services finds that a recipient of funds under this Act has failed to comply with this section, the Secretary shall notify the recipient, if the funds are paid directly to the recipient, or notify the State if the recipient receives the funds from the State, of such finding and that—

"(1) no further funds shall be provided to the recipient;

"(2) no further funds shall be provided to the State with respect to noncompliance by the individual recipient;

"(3) further payment shall be limited to those recipients not participating in such noncompliance; and

"(4) the recipient shall repay to the United States, amounts found not to have been expended in accordance with this section."

SEC. 12. HIV TEST AND NOTIFICATION AS A CONDITION OF MARRIAGE LICENSES.

Part C of title XXV of the Public Health Service Act (as added by section 6 and amended by sections 7, 8, 9, and 10) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 2537. HIV TESTING AND NOTIFICATION AS A CONDITION OF MARRIAGE LICENSES.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—None of the funds made available under this title shall be available for use in any State, the District of Columbia, or any territory of the United States unless such State, District or territory requires, as a condition for the granting of a marriage license, a test to determine whether the individuals applying for such a license are infected with the human immunodeficiency virus and that both individuals seeking such license shall be notified of each test result.

"(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Subsection (a) shall take effect with respect to a State, District, or territory on January 1 of the calendar year following the first regular session of the legislative body of the State, District, or territory that is convened following the date of enactment of this Act."

SEC. 13. PROTECTING THE NATION'S BLOOD AND TISSUE SUPPLY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part I of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 89 the following new chapter:

"CHAPTER 90—PUBLIC HEALTH PRESERVATION

"Sec.

"1831. Contamination of blood and tissue supply.

"§ 1831. Contamination of blood and tissue supply

"(a) It shall be unlawful for any individual to knowingly donate, or to knowingly attempt to donate blood, semen, or organs, if such individual—

"(1) knows, on the basis of clinical or laboratory evidence, that such individual is infected with the human immunodeficiency virus;

"(2) is a male individual who has had sexual intercourse with another male individual at any time on or after January 1, 1977;

"(3) is an individual who, on or after January 1, 1977, is or has been a user of any intravenous drug the sale, distribution, or use of which is prohibited under Federal or State law at the time the individual injected the drug;

"(4) is an individual who has emigrated to the United States from Haiti, the Central African Republic, Zaire, Rwanda, Burundi, the Congo, Chad, or Uganda on or after January 1, 1977;

"(5) is an individual who has hemophilia and has received a clotting factor concentrate on or after January 1, 1977;

"(6) is an individual who has engaged in prostitution on or after January 1, 1977;

"(7) is an individual who has had sexual intercourse with an individual described in paragraph (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), (6), (8), or (9);

"(8) is an individual who has used a needle for an intravenous drug injection that the individual knows has previously been used for an intravenous drug injection by an individual described in paragraph (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), (6), (7), or (9);

"(9) knows such individual is at high risk of contracting acquired immune deficiency syndrome (as defined by the Director of the Centers for Disease Control); or

"(10) is an individual who has engaged in an activity that such individual knows places such individual at a high risk of contracting such syndrome (as defined by such Director).

"(b) Any person who violates the provisions of subsection (a) shall be subject to a fine of $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(c) For purposes of this section, the term 'sexual intercourse' includes the acts described in section 2255(2)(A) of this title."

(b) CHAPTER ANALYSIS.—The chapter analysis at the beginning of part I of title 18 is amended by inserting after the item for chapter 89 the following:

"90. Public Health Preservation 1831".

SEC. 14. TESTING OF FEDERAL PRISONERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 305 of part III of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§ 4087. AIDS testing

"(a) The Director of the Bureau of Prisons shall test each person incarcerated in a Federal penal or correctional institution for infection with the human immunodeficiency virus—

"(1) on the date such person enters a Federal penal or correctional institution;

"(2) every 12 months after the date described in paragraph (1); and

"(3) at such other times as the Director determines are appropriate.

"(b) The Director of the Bureau of Prisons shall report to the Director of Centers for Disease Control the incidence of each individual who tests positively for infection with the human immunodeficiency virus.

"(c) Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of the AIDS Control Act of 1993, the Director of the Bureau of Prisons shall promulgate regulations requiring that each individual tested under this section who tests positively for infection with the human immunodeficiency virus—

"(1) be placed in separate residential facilities in a penal or correctional institution, if possible; and

"(2) be restricted from holding any employment in a penal or correctional institution which involves duties that may increase the transmission of the human immunodeficiency virus, such as assignments in blood services, the barber shop, or medical and dental services in any capacity."

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections for chapter 305 of part III of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"4087. AIDS testing."

SEC. 15. DISQUALIFICATION OF PERSONS FOR INDUCTION OR RETENTION IN THE ARMED FORCES ON THE BASIS OF INFECTION WITH THE HUMAN IMMUNODEFICIENCY VIRUS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 49 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 983. Disqualification of persons for induction or retention on the basis of infection with the human immunodeficiency virus

"(a) Except as provided in subsection (d)(2), no person may be inducted into or retained in the armed forces (other than in a retired status) if it is determined, on the basis of a test or tests administered to such person under subsection (b), that such person is infected with the human immunodeficiency virus.

"(b) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary concerned—

"(1) each person examined for induction and re-enlistment into the armed forces shall be tested for infection with the human immunodeficiency virus before induction,

"(2) each member of the armed forces shall be tested for infection with the human immunodeficiency virus at least once each year;

"(3) each time a member of the armed forces is admitted to any medical facility of the uniformed services or of the Veterans' Administration in order to receive in-patient care in such facility, such member shall be tested for infection with the human immunodeficiency virus; and

"(4) each member of the armed forces shall be tested for infection with the human immunodeficiency virus at such times (other than the times specified in paragraphs (2) and (3) of this subsection) as the Secretary concerned considers appropriate."

(b) TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 49 of such title is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"9830. Disqualification of persons for induction or retention on the basis of infection with the human immunodeficiency virus."

SEC. 16. VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION.

(a) TESTING.—Section 124(b) of Veterans' Benefits and Services Act of 1988 (38 U.S.C. 4133 note) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) TESTING.—(1) The Administrator shall provide for a program under which the Veterans' Administration routinely tests each patient to whom the Veterans' Administration is furnishing health care or services, as described in paragraph (2), for the human immunodeficiency virus to determine whether such patient is infected with the virus.

"(2) Patients referred to in paragraph (1) are—"(A) patients who are receiving treatment for intravenous drug abuse;

"(B) patients who are receiving treatment for a disease associated with the human immunodeficiency virus;

"(C) patients who are receiving treatment for a sexually transmitted disease;

"(D) patients who are otherwise at high risk for infection with such virus; and

"(E) patients seeking in-patient treatment who are 40 and under.

"(3) The Administration shall provide pre- and post-test counseling to each patient described in paragraph (2)."

(b) DISCLOSURE TO SPOUSE OR SEXUAL PARTNERS.—Section 4132 of title 38, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (f) as subsection (g); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (e) the following new subsection (f):

"(f)(1) Notwithstanding subsection (a), and subject to paragraph (2) of this subsection, a physician or a professional counselor shall disclose information or records indicating that a patient or subject is infected with the human immunodeficiency virus if the disclosure is made to—

"(A) the current spouse of the patient;

"(B) any other person who at any time since December 31, 1976 has been the marriage partner of the patient; or

"(C) to any individual whom the patient or subject has, during the process of professional counseling or of testing to determine whether the patient or subject is infected with such virus, identified as being a sexual partner of such patient or subject.

"(2) A disclosure under paragraph (1) may be made by a physician or counselor other than the physician or counselor referred to in paragraph (1)(A) if such physician or counselor is unavailable to make the disclosure by reason of absence or termination of employment."

SEC. 17. USE OF PREVENTIVE HEALTH SERVICES APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall promulgate regulations requiring the recipient of moneys appropriated under section 317 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247b) to—

(1) routinely test each person receiving treatment for tuberculosis to determine if such person is infected with the human immunodeficiency virus; and

(2) provide pre- and post-test counseling on acquired immunodeficiency syndrome to each such person.

(b) CONFIDENTIALITY.—In promulgating regulations under subsection (a), the Secretary shall ensure that confidentiality shall be provided to those tested under such regulations in accordance with section 552(a) of title 5 of the United States Code.

SEC. 18. REQUIREMENT OF TESTING BY BLOCK GRANT RECIPIENTS.

(a) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall promulgate regulations requiring the recipient of grant moneys under subpart I of part B of title XIX of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300x et seq.) to—

(1) routinely test each person receiving treatment for substance abuse through funds provided under such subpart for substance abuse to determine if such person is infected with the human immunodeficiency virus; and

(2) provide pre- and post-test counseling on acquired immunodeficiency syndrome to each such patient.

(b) CONFIDENTIALITY.—In promulgating regulations under subsection (a), the Secretary shall ensure that confidentiality shall be provided to those tested in accordance with section 552(a) of title 5 of the United States Code.

SEC. 19. PROGRAMS FOR THE PREVENTION OF THE SPREAD OF AIDS.

(a) REGULATIONS.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall promulgate regulations requiring the recipient of grant moneys appropriated under section 318 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247c) to—

(1) routinely test each person receiving treatment for a sexually transmitted disease from the recipient to determine if such person is infected with the human immunodeficiency virus; and

(2) provide pre- and post-test counseling on acquired immunodeficiency syndrome to each such person.

(b) CONFIDENTIALITY.—In promulgating regulations under subsection (a), the Secretary shall ensure that confidentiality shall be provided to those tested under such regulations in accordance with section 552(a) of title 5 of the United States Code.

SEC. 20. IMMIGRATION REFORM.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law or any decision of the Secretary of Health and Human Services or any other Federal official, the President shall, pursuant to section 212(a)(6) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, add infection with the human immunodeficiency virus and syphilis to the list of dangerous contagious diseases contained in title 42 of the Code of Federal Regulations.

SEC. 21. HEALTH CARE WORKERS PROTECTION ACT.

(a) EXPOSURE PRONE INVASIVE PROCEDURES.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a State shall, not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, certify to the Secretary of Health and Human Services that such State has in effect regulations, or has enacted legislation, to protect licensed health care professionals from contracting the human immunodeficiency virus and the hepatitis B virus during the performance of exposure prone invasive procedures.

(b) TESTING.—The regulations or legislation referred to in subsection (a) shall permit health care professionals to require that, prior to the commencement of or during the conduct of an exposure prone invasive procedure, a patient may be tested for the etiologic agent for the human immunodeficiency virus. Such regulations or legislation shall not apply in emergency situations when the patient's life is in danger.

(c) CONFIDENTIALITY OF RESULTS AND ENFORCEMENT.—

(1) RESULTS.—The result of tests conducted under subsection (b) shall be confidential and shall not be released to any other party without the prior written consent of the patient.

(2) ENFORCEMENT.—The regulations or legislation referred to in subsection (a) shall contain enforcement provisions that subject an individual who violates the provisions of paragraph (1) to a $10,000 fine or a prison term of not more than one year for each such violation.

(d) FAILURE TO PROVIDE CERTIFICATION.—Except as provided in subsection (e), if a State does not provide the certification required under subsection (a) within the 1-year period described in such subsection, such State shall be ineligible to receive assistance under the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 301 et seq.) until such certification is provided.

(e) EXCEPTION.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall extend the time period described in subsection (a) for a State, if—

(1) the State has determined not to promulgate regulations to adopt the guidelines referred to in subsection (a); and

(2) the State legislature of such State meets on a biennial basis and has not met within the 1-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act.

(f) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term "exposure prone invasive procedure" means such procedures as listed in guidelines promulgated by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention concerning recommendations for preventing the transmission by health care professionals, of the human immunodeficiency virus and the hepatitis B virus to patients during exposure prone invasive procedures.

SEC. 22. DELIBERATE TRANSMISSION OF THE AIDS VIRUS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Whoever, being a registered physician, dentist, nurse, or other health care provider, knowing that he or she is infected with the human immunodeficiency virus, intentionally provides medical or dental treatment to another individual, without prior notification to such individual of such infection, shall be fined not more than $10,000, or imprisoned not less than 10 years, or both.

(b) APPLICABILITY.—The provisions of this section shall not be applicable in the case of a medical emergency in which alternative medical treatment is not reasonably available.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section the term "treatment" means the performance of any medical diagnosis or procedure that involves an invasive physical contact between the patient being treated and the physician or health professional administering the procedure.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I send said bill to the desk and ask it be given first reading.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will read the bill for the first time.

The legislative clerk read as follows:
A bill (S. 42) to control the spread of AIDS and for other purposes.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I would like to ask for a second reading.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. LEVIN. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard. The bill will go over until the next legislative day for the second reading.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS] is recognized.

FEDERAL ADOPTION SERVICES ACT OF 1991

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I am today introducing the Federal Adoption Services Act of 1991. This legislation which was originally proposed by our former colleague from New Hampshire, Mr. Humphrey, would amend title X of the Public Health Services Act to allow family planning services to provide adoption services.

This legislation provides that family planning clinics may offer adoption services based on their understanding of the needs of the community as well as the ability of the individual clinic to provide those services.

As we have discovered during debates on title X, there is excessive attention paid in these programs to the prevention or spacing of pregnancies and the limiting of the size of the American family. But the debate should be about much more. It should be about the affirmation of life. That is why adoption should be a part of family planning—since the benefits are obvious for parents unable to care for children as well as for parents who are unable to have children.

More importantly, adoption is a better alternative than abortion in dealing with an unplanned pregnancy.

Mr. President, more than one-third of the women who use title X services are teenagers. If a young, unmarried teenager finds herself pregnant she may not be aware that adoption is an option. The employees of the family planning clinic may be as poorly informed as well. The bill I am introducing would change that.

Let me be clear, no woman would be threatened or cajoled into giving up her child for adoption, but she would be allowed to make an informed, compassionate, judgment based on all of her available options.

This legislation is written to provide family planning clinics a new option. It is not my intent to force family planning clinics to provide adoption services which they are unable to offer. This legislation merely makes it clear that Federal policy will allow, and hopefully encourage, the use of adoption as a means of family planning.

Mr. President, adoption was called by a wise man, "the loving option." I have seen the joy that it has brought to my family and to many others. In a world where hundreds of children are murdered each day—some simply because their parents do not like the child's gender—why not give life a chance.

It is the responsibility of Government to stand and protect the most innocent among us. Let us take up that responsibility.

I urge my colleagues to support this effort to ensure that adoption does not become a forgotten weapon in the war to protect our children.

Now, Mr. President, I send to the desk a bill and I ask for first reading.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will read the bill for the first time.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill to amend title X of the Public Health Service Act to permit family planning projects to offer adoption services and for other purposes.

Mr. HELMS. I ask for second reading, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the second reading of the bill?

Mr. LEVIN. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard. The bill will go over to the next legislative day for its second reading.

Mr. HELMS. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from North Carolina seek recognition again?

Mr. HELMS. Yes, I do indeed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Carolina, Mr. HELMS, is recognized.

UNBORN CHILDREN'S CIVIL RIGHTS ACT

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I am again introducing a bill which I have introduced in the three prior Congresses. It is entitled, the "Unborn Children's Civil Rights Act." If enacted, this bill would take a first step in overcoming the Roe versus Wade decision.

Specifically, this bill would accomplish four things.

First, it would put Congress clearly on record as finding that abortion takes the life of an unborn child, that the Constitution sanctions no right to abortion and that Roe versus Wade was erroneously decided.

Second, it would prohibit congressional appropriations from being used to pay for or to promote abortion. In this regard, it permanently defunds abortion, thereby relieving Congress of annual fights over abortion restrictions in appropriations bills.

Third, it would end certain indirect funding for abortion by prohibiting discrimination, at federally funded institutions, against individuals who object in conscience to abortion and by curtailing attorney's fees in abortion-related cases.

Fourth, it would provide for appeals to the Supreme Court as a right if a Federal court declares State restrictions on abortion unconstitutional. As a practical matter, this provision will assure Supreme Court reconsideration of the abortion issue in the future.

Mr. President, there's the old adage, "Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it." All of us have heard those words, but many in our government have refused to heed them. Only 45 years after hundreds of thousands of European Jews and other civilians died at the hands of Hitler's Nazis, we have forgotten the critical lesson of that atrocity—that all human life is sacred regardless of color, race, religion, or physical, or mental capabilities of that human being.

We are today reliving the Holocaust. We know it by a different name. It is called abortion. Yet, the same fate that was met by millions of Jews is being met by millions of unborn children right here in this country. At latest count, over 22 million unborn children—the most innocent of human life—have been murdered.

Abortion has become a tool of convenience, Mr. President. We have slipped so far down the slippery slope that now children are being aborted because they do not have the desired hair color, sex, physical attributes, or mental capabilities. The same excuses for murdering countless Jews are now being used to justify the murder of the most innocent and helpless members of humanity.

Mr. President, Roe versus Wade was, simply put, an unconstitutional decision. It has no foundation whatsoever in the text or history of the Constitution. It was invented out of whole cloth. As Justice White said in his dissent, Roe was an exercise in raw judicial power.

How has it endured for 17 long years? Why do we permit some 4,000 unborn babies to perish every day through legalized abortion?

The answer is woefully simple, Mr. President. Even though Roe versus Wade is an unconstitutional decision, Congress has been unwilling to right the wrong—to exercise its powers to check and balance a usurping Supreme Court which has destroyed the right to life of the most defenseless among us. The powers exist, but Congress has nonetheless permitted Roe to stand because many Members of Congress are apparently committed to legalized abortion. These Members share the same antihistorical, secularized, liberal view of law and public order as the activist justices who gave us Roe versus Wade in the first place.

In their view—with which I disagree—the Ten Commandments are not the eternal rules of Almighty God and the source of authority for human law, but the transitory precepts of a bygone age in need of periodic updating by wiser heads here on Earth. Of course, human nature being what it is, there is never any shortage of wiser heads.

Mr. President, for these reasons, Roe versus Wade still stands and the Holocaust continues. It is not the Constitution or our system of Government which is at fault. Ample means exist within them, even apart from a constitutional amendment, to overturn Roe. The fault, on the part of Members of Congress, lies in a failure of intellect to perceive the true nature of abortion and a failure of will to do something about it. These are the ingredients which perpetuate the travesty of Roe versus Wade.

But, Mr. President, this Senator from North Carolina is ever hopeful that, with God's help and human effort, hearts and minds—even in Congress—will change. Enactment of the Unborn Children's Civil Rights Act, certainly would be a step in the right direction. I urge Senators to seek its early enactment.

Mr. President, I send this bill to the desk and ask it be given first reading.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will read the bill for the first time.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill to protect the lives of unborn human beings and for other purposes.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I ask for a second reading.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request the bill be given a second reading?

Mr. LEVIN. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is heard. The bill will go over until the next legislative day for a second reading.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, one final item of business?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Carolina is recognized.

Mr. HELMS. I thank the Chair. In order to save time of the Senate I wish to submit en bloc all of the bills that I have just offered. But this time I want them, each of them, to be referred to committee.

I ask unanimous consent that the Chair approve that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator has the right to introduce the bills over again.

Mr. HELMS. I understand that but I wanted the Chair to understand what I am doing.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection the Senator's request is granted. The bills will be appropriately received and appropriately referred.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the Chair has as always been patient with me. I thank the Chair and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Michigan [Mr. LEVIN].

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. HELMS pertaining to the introduction of S. 24 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

WELCOMING THE VICE PRESIDENT

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, following up on Senator LEVIN's comments, in behalf of all Members of the Senate, I would like to take official notice of the fact that the Vice President of the United States, an important part of whose duties includes presiding over the Senate, is now presiding over the Senate for the first time and we welcome him. I ask my colleagues to join in welcoming him at this time.

[Applause, Senators rising.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. I am told demonstrations are not allowed.

[Laughter.]

LETTER OF RESIGNATION

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the letter of resignation of Senator Lloyd Bentsen of Texas.

Without objection, the letter is deemed read and spread upon the Journal.

The document, ordered to be printed in the RECORD, is as follows:

U.S. SENATE,

Washington, DC, January 20, 1993.

Hon. ALBERT GORE,

Office of the Vice President of the United States, S-212, Washington, DC.

Mr. VICE PRESIDENT: I hereby tender my resignation effective today as United States Senator from Texas.

I depart the Senate with profound respect for the Chamber we both have served. I have been honored to call its members colleagues and to share in its history for twenty-two years. It will be my continuing privilege to work with them and with you as we advance an agenda of growth for our Nation.

Respectfully submitted.

LLOYD BENTSEN.

CERTIFICATE OF APPOINTMENT

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the certificate of appointment of Senator designate ROBERT C. KRUEGER of the State of Texas.

Without objection, the certificate of appointment will be deemed to have been read and spread upon the Journal.

The document, ordered to be printed in the RECORD, is as follows:

CERTIFICATE OF APPOINTMENT

To the President of the Senate of the United States:

This is to certify that, pursuant to the power vested in me by the Constitution of the United States and the laws of the State of Texas, I, Ann Richards, the Governor of said State, do hereby appoint Robert C. Krueger a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States until the vacancy therein, caused by the resignation of Lloyd Bentsen, is filled by election as provided by law.

Witness: Her excellency our Governor Ann Richards, and our seal hereto affixed this 21st day of January, in the year of our Lord 1993.

ANN RICHARDS,

Governor of Texas.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATH OF OFFICE

The VICE PRESIDENT. If the Senator designate will present himself at the desk, the Chair will administer the oath of office as required by the Constitution and prescribed by law.

[Applause.]

The Senator designate, escorted by Mr. Bentsen, advanced to the desk of the Vice President; the oath prescribed by law was administered to him by the Vice President; and he subscribed to the oath in the official oath book.

[Applause, Senators rising.]

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further proceedings under the quorum call be dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period for morning business with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. DECONCINI] is recognized.

(The remarks of Mr. DECONCINI pertaining to the introduction of legislation are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, it is with great sadness that I note the recent passing of the famous songwriter, Sammy Cahn. Mr. Cahn, who died Friday, January 15, at the age of 79, was known universally as a talented, witty, and wisecracking lyricist whose passion for music spanned more than seven decades. He was a high-school dropout who went on to write hundreds of popular songs for radio, television, Broadway, and Hollywood. His memorable songs include "Three Coins in the Fountain," "Call Me Irresponsible," "Ring-a-Ding Ding," and "Only the Lonely."

As a tribute to his enduring and catchy lyrics, Mr. Cahn was awarded four Oscars and a special Emmy, for "Love and Marriage." He worked closely with such renowned composers as James Van Heusen, Saul Chaplin, and Jule Styne. Many of his songs were written specifically for the legendary singer, Frank Sinatra. One of these, "High Hopes," was revised and used as a theme song for John F. Kennedy's 1960 Presidential campaign.

Having known Sammy, I can attest to the fact that his genius and sense of humor will be greatly missed. Sammy Cahn wrote a special song about me when I was recently honored in New York. His lyrics were great, as always, and gave me a tremendous amount of enjoyment and entertainment, just as he has millions of others throughout the years. We are fortunate that his music will live on forever, for he was truly one of a kind.

Mr. HOLLINGS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. HOLLINGS].

THE NOMINATION OF FEDERICO PEÑA TO BE SECRETARY OF THE DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, earlier today we confirmed the nomination of Mr. Federico Peña from Colorado as the Secretary of Transportation. He is an outstanding individual. He headed up the transitional team in transportation as the mayor of Denver. And in his other activities, he shows a deep knowledge, awareness, and sensitivity of motor transport, the railroads, the airlines, and the different problems we have there. He was very responsive to our committee.

I believe that through his experience heading the transportation transition team for President Clinton and as mayor of Denver, he is cognizant of the many challenges that will face him as Secretary of Transportation.

With respect to transportation, Government has a vital role in fostering an economic climate in which U.S. companies can thrive, and the traveling and shipping public can receive responsive, efficient and cost-effective service. The Secretary of Transportation has a key role in fostering such a climate being an advocate for our transportation industries. He will have an opportunity to shape the future of the Nation's transportation system—a critical job given the importance of transportation to our economy and our ability to compete in world markets.

At his confirmation hearing before the Commerce Committee 2 weeks ago, Mr. Peña proved that he is well aware of the divergent transportation issues and views. He reviewed with the committee in both oral and written questions many pressing transportation issues, including the declining state of the airline and aircraft manufacturing industries; a shrinking U.S. merchant marine; the impact of our economy on the motor carrier industry; the need to maintain our vital rail system; the development of high speed rail transportation; and the need to ensure improved safety in our transportation network. He exhibited an open mind in looking at the problems, an understanding of the urgency of these issues, and a resolve to bring the parties together to find appropriate solutions. His task will not be an easy one, and I am pleased he is prepared to take on the challenge. I look forward to working with him to act quickly and decisively to address these urgent problems.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator

COVERDELL be recognized to address the Senate for up to 5 minutes; that at the conclusion of his remarks, Senator KASSEBAUM be recognized to address the Senate for up to 5 minutes; and that at the conclusion of her remarks, the Senate proceed to executive session to consider the nomination of Ronald H. Brown to be the Secretary of the Department of Commerce, a nomination reported earlier today by the Commerce Committee; that there be 1 hour of debate on the nomination equally divided and controlled between Senators HOLLINGS and DANFORTH or their designees; that at the conclusion or yielding back of time on the nomination, the Senate proceed to vote without any intervening action or debate on the disposition of the nomination; that the President be immediately notified of the Senate's action; and that the Senate then return to legislative session.

Mr. President, before the Chair acts on the request, I am authorized to state that I have discussed this with Senator DOLE. He has no objection to this request.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request?

The Chair hears no objection. That will be the order.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I have also discussed with Senator DOLE and with our colleagues the manner of voting on the Brown nomination. We have no request for a recorded rollcall vote at this time. We do not anticipate such a request. Therefore, in the event no request is forthcoming, it is my expectation that the vote will occur by voice vote.

I thank my colleagues. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Georgia [Mr. COVERDELL].

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to be added as an original cosponsor of Senate bill 9 introduced earlier today by Senator MCCAIN of Arizona.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the order previously entered, the Chair recognizes the junior Senator from Kansas [Mrs. KASSEBAUM] for not to exceed 5 minutes.

AUDREY HEPBURN

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, yesterday the world lost one of its caring and dedicated unofficial ambassadors. On January 20, Audrey Hepburn died at her home in Switzerland.

Born in 1929 in Belgium to a Dutch mother and English father, Ms. Hepburn grew up in Europe during the Second World War. As a teenager, she and her mother were caught in Holland when the Nazis invaded. They suffered much during the conflict. Her experiences as a frightened and hungry little girl caught in the midst the war would lead her to give so much of herself in later life to the children of the world.

I first met Ms. Hepburn several years ago after her return from the Horn of Africa. In front of the Foreign Relations Committee, she spoke with eloquence and passion about the children starving in Africa and the need for international action to help them.

AS UNICEF goodwill ambassador, she traveled extensively to Africa and Latin America to draw attention to the plight of the children caught in famines and civil wars in those regions. Most recently, Ms. Hepburn traveled to Somalia to publicize the tragic situation in that country.

Audrey Hepburn's tireless efforts on behalf of the children of the world will not be forgotten. Her dignity and quiet passion saved the lives of thousands of destitute children. She will be missed by all of us—but particularly by the world's children.

I would just like to comment that I got to know Ms. Hepburn as the UNICEF goodwill ambassador, particularly in regard to her work on behalf of the children of Africa. I think it was her trip in September to Somalia that really did raise the public's consciousness to the tragedy that was befalling the children in Somalia.

So for her dedication, her thoughtfulness, her dignity and quiet passion, she not only will be missed by all of us around the world, but particularly by the children.

(The remarks of Mrs. KASSEBAUM pertaining to the introduction of legislation are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, on behalf of the majority leader—which has been cleared—I ask unanimous consent that upon the disposition of Mr. Brown's nomination, the approval or disapproval vote, upon the return to legislative session that the Senator from Massachusetts, Senator JOHN KERRY, be recognized to speak in morning business for up to 15 minutes; and all other speeches thereafter be limited to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the order previously entered, the Senate now will proceed to executive session to consider the nomination of Mr. Ronald H. Brown to be Secretary of the Department of Commerce.

The Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The nomination will be stated.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Ronald H. Brown, of the District of Columbia, to be Secretary of Commerce.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is a time limitation of 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. HOLLINGS] and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. DANFORTH].

Upon the conclusion of the hour, or upon the yielding back thereof or enforcement thereof, the Senate will immediately proceed without further debate to the vote on the nomination.

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. HOLLINGS].

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, the first step that is to be taken to revive the American economy is to revitalize the Department of Commerce and forge a new relationship between business and government to meet the challenges of a vastly competitive national economy.

In Ron Brown, American industry and American workers are getting a man prepared for this task.

Mr. President, the first step that must be taken to revive the American economy is to revitalize the Department of Commerce and forge a new relationship between business and government to meet the challenges of a fiercely competitive international economy. In Ron Brown, American industry and American workers are getting a man prepared for this task—a man with the drive, the intelligence, and the commitment that they deserve. As a civil rights leader, a public servant, a lawyer, a businessman, and a party leader, Mr. Brown has distinguished himself in facing successfully many important challenges. His job as Secretary of Commerce will likewise be a challenge but one for which he is ready.

Several issues concerning Mr. Brown's distinguished career as an attorney and businessman have been raised. The Committee carefully examined each issue and has found no conflicts. In addition, the OGE (Office of Government Ethics) and the general counsel of the Department of Commerce have reviewed Mr. Brown's circumstances and concluded that he is in compliance with applicable laws and regulations regarding conflicts of interest. We are satisfied that Mr. Brown has complied with the highest ethical standards. In fact, Mr. Brown is making a tremendous personal and financial sacrifice in order to serve the American people.

In Mr. Brown's appearance before the Commerce Committee, he displayed a deep understanding of the economic challenges that must be met if we are going to restore American competitiveness. As Secretary of Commerce, his next task will be to turn one of the largest and most diverse government agencies, with its important responsibilities for oceans and atmosphere and trade and technology, into a forceful agency that will be a strong advocate for the interests of American business and the American worker.

Given years of neglect, this is a formidable assignment. Some think that it does not matter if the United States manufactures computer chips or potato chips. This hands-off trade and economic policy has resulted in the loss of two million manufacturing jobs, a 12 percent decline in hourly wages, and steadily eroding market shares in important industries from basic manufacturing, like textiles and automobiles, to high-technology products, like aircraft and computers.

Our competitors in Europe and Asia have not shared the past administration's zeal for a free-market approach to international trade. While our government remained indifferent, governments in Europe and Asia protected their home markets and targeted specific industries. The Europeans poured $26 billion into the development of Airbus and then captured 30 percent of the market for civil aviation. The Japanese targeted semiconductors and the machine tool industry and promptly captured a major share of the market. While in recent years the United States was writing off the textile and steel industries, the European Community was providing its steel industry with billions in subsidies and its textile industry with $500 million in subsidies that enabled that industry to modernize its manufacturing facilities. The Germans and the Japanese have out invested the United States by 2 to 1, at the same time that American industries' ability to attract capital has been hampered by government indifference—once an industry has been targeted by foreign competition, capital disappears.

That was the past, but, as President John Kennedy once said, our task is not to fix the blame for the past, but to set the course for the future. The new Commerce Secretary must be part of this new course at the forefront of an economic policy that promotes America's economic interests with the same fervor and the same commitment which led to our triumph in the cold war. As the new Secretary, Mr. Brown will be responsible not only for promoting our exports, and developing and fostering new technologies, but also for enforcing vigorously the Nation's trade laws to ensure that these investments in future technologies are not overwhelmed by the kind of unfair trade practices that drove American companies out of the consumer electronics industry and almost drove them out of the semiconductor industry.

If the United States is to stay competitive, industry and government must be allies in promoting the development of high technology industries and the so-called mature industries, which provide many jobs in our manufacturing sector. The Department of Commerce will have to take the lead in developing a coordinated strategy that uses our leverage both to open markets abroad and to preserve American jobs. In an era in which national power is increasingly dependent upon economic strength, Mr. Brown's primary job responsibility will be to preserve the American dream so that the next generation of Americans will have economic opportunity, rather than a declining standard of living.

His background suits him well.

I enthusiastically urge that my colleagues support his nomination.

Now, Mr. President, as we are waiting the approach of the handlers of the bill on the other side, let me acknowledge certain things.

To be specific, as of yesterday, for example, the tempest that media had worked itself into culminated in an article by the distinguished writer Hobart Rowan.

Mr. Rowan said and I quote:

That is the package that Clinton has to deliver, or see Ross Perot push him out of the White House in 1997. Nothing else counts. It is the economy, stupid. But, you ask, "Wasn't Brown insensitive to proper ethical procedure? Answer, yes, he was."

I take exception to that very strongly. The fact of the matter is that the Office of Government Ethics and the general counsel in the Department of Commerce has stated time and again that Mr. Brown is in total compliance with all the applicable conflict of interest regulations.

First they said we were ramrodding Mr. Brown through, Mr. President. The fact of the matter is that the last time we had a change of administration from Democratic to Republican back in 1981, we held hearings for the distinguished Secretary of Commerce nominee, Mr. Malcolm Baldrige, on January 6.

Your Commerce Committee also held, some 2 weeks ago, the confirmation hearing on January 6 of this year for Mr. Brown. So there was no ramrodding.

In fact we held the record open for additional questions for 2 weeks after the hearing.

Questions were raised regarding his recusals.

Mr. Brown has agreed to recuse himself from his former clients 1 year, similar to actions taken by other nominees. He has also, in correspondence to this Senator, the committee, and others said that he will not meet with members of his firm for a 4-year period, and that his son, who is an associate of Global U.S.A., will not appear before him.

Questions were also raised about awarding Chemfix a sludge contract and its connection to the selection of New York City for the Democratic National Convention. Of course, no contract was awarded and the convention was selected by a 50-member site selection committee of the Democratic Party and had no relation whatsoever to Chemfix.

Questions were raised about his association with the Capital Pepsco. Mr. Brown has totally diversified his interest in that particular venture. Questions were raised about his severance from his law partnership. He was treated just like any other partner who resigned from the firm. A lump-sum settlement is what the firm agreed to as of yesterday, January 20.

So he is totally severed as of yesterday. This lump-sum settlement is in actuality a financial penalty to him. But we wanted to make absolutely clear that everything was answered and handled in an ethical fashion.

The firm has asserted—that is Patton, Boggs & Blow—that there is no understanding as to future employment, and Mr. Brown has asserted that as well. So he has no agreement to go back.

The Office of Government Ethics, as I said, has approved these. And in addition thereto he has taken the 5-year Clinton pledge not to lobby the Department of Commerce for 5 years after he leaves that post as Secretary.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Who yields time?

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent I might proceed 1 minute as in morning business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate is in executive session.

Is there objection to the request that the Senator proceed as in legislative session for 1 minute?

There is no objection. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. BOND. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. BOND pertaining to the introduction of S. 3 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate is in executive session. Who yields time?

Mr. LOTT. Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LOTT. I understand the time on this side, perhaps, is controlled by the distinguished Republican leader?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. By Mr. Danforth.

Mr. LOTT. It is by Mr. DANFORTH.

Mr. President, I am a member of the committee and I ask unanimous consent I be able to proceed on this time designated for the executive session on the nomination of Ron Brown to be Secretary of Commerce.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. How much time does the Senator request?

Mr. LOTT. I think 10 minutes, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the Senator as the designee of Mr. DANFORTH, and he yields himself 10 minutes on the nomination?

Mr. LOTT. That is correct.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is so recognized.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent a series of letters, correspondence that I have had with the nominee, from him and from his law firm, be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
January 20, 1993.

Hon. TRENT LOTT,
Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR LOTT: In follow-up to our telephone conversation this morning, let me further clarify the statement in my letter to you dated January 18, 1993, that "for the duration of my term as Secretary of Commerce, I will not engage in any personal professional contact with any member or employee of my former law firm on any issue before the Department of Commerce." (I have enclosed a copy of my January 18 letter for your ease in reference.)

As I assured you this morning, I will not communicate with or discuss with any partner, associate or other employee of Patton, Boggs and Blow any matter which is before the Department of Commerce during my entire tenure as Secretary of Commerce. Further, I will not communicate with or discuss with any partner, associate or other employee of Patton, Boggs and Blow any matter likely to come before the Department of Commerce during my entire tenure as Secretary of Commerce.

You received today under separate cover a letter from Timothy J. May which concisely sets forth the position of Patton, Boggs and Blow as to my future involvement with Patton, Boggs and Blow (I have attached a copy of Mr. May's letter). I can assure you that my resignation from Patton, Boggs and Blow, which became effective today, is final and permanent. There have been no discussions concerning my possible return to the firm and there is no understanding of any nature about my return to Patton, Boggs and Blow at any time in the future.

I hope this provides complete clarification as to your questions. I look forward to working with you and the other senators of the Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation in the months and years to come.

Sincerely,

RONAND H. BROWN,
Commerce Secretary-Designee.

PATTON, BOGGS & BLOW,
Washington, DC, January 20, 1993.

Senator TRENT LOTT, Senate Russell Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR LOTT: I have previously delivered to the Committee a copy of the provisions in the Patton, Boggs and Blow partnership agreement relevant to the departure of a partner from the law firm. You have inquired whether Mr. Brown's resignation is permanent and, in any event, whether there are any understandings, express or implied, written or unwritten, respecting Mr. Brown's return to this law firm after government service. I want to state categorically there is no understanding of any nature with Mr. Brown about a possible return to this law firm. Mr. Brown's resignation, effective today, is final. From this day forward he has no connection whatsoever with this law firm, nor have there been any discussions concerning a possible return to this firm. Should Mr. Brown in the future seek to return to this law firm he would have to be voted into partnership by two-thirds vote of the partners, as is the case with any person unrelated to this law firm who seeks admission as a partner. In sum, there is no provision in the partnership agreement for Mr. Brown's return; there are no understandings express or implied for his return; nor have there been any discussions with respect to that possibility.

Please let me know if you wish any further clarification on this point.

Sincerely yours,

TIMOTHY J. MAY,
Managing Partner.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
January 18, 1993.

Hon. TRENT LOTT,
Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR LOTT: I am writing in response to your two letters of January 8 and your subsequent letter dated January 14. Attached to and made a part of my response is a copy of a letter (with enclosures) to Senator Danforth (identical letters were sent to Chairman Hollings) from Timothy J. May, Managing Partner of Patton, Boggs and Blow which sets forth in detail the basis upon which I will receive any and all payments from Patton, Boggs and Blow following my resignation from the firm. (Appendix 1) As Mr. May states in his letter, termination of my financial interests in Patton, Boggs and Blow will be in accordance with paragraph 4.05 of the partnership Agreement to which I referred during my confirmation hearing on January 6, 1993. (Transcript at page 30). Specifically, as a departing equity Partner, I will receive the same treatment as any other equity Partner "who dies, resigns, retires or is expelled":

(a) My capital account balance on the date of departure;

(b) My percentage interest in the accounts receivable of the firm; and

(c) The already-earned interest on partner's capital account.

Paragraph 4.05(e) of the Partnership Agreement allows for a lump sum liquidation payment to be made, which payment will be contiguous with my departure from the firm. Additionally, the record of my hearing testimony reflects my representation to the Committee that I would provide the Committee with a copy of the Partnership Agreement on the condition that the firm was "willing to share the partnership agreement". (Transcript at page 30). As reflected in Mr. May's letter, I have discussed providing the full partnership Agreement to the Committee in response to your request. Mr. May has provided those provisions which may be deemed relevant. However, Mr. May declined, on behalf of the Patton, Boggs and Blow partners, to provide the full Partnership Agreement in that the agreement is regarded as highly confidential. It is important to note however that Mr. May's letter fully details the financial terms of my departure from the firm.

As concerns any pension benefits associated with Patton, Boggs and Blow, there are none. However, as disclosed on my financial disclosure report which was provided to the Committee, I have a retirement account invested in a number of securities. These securities will be divested and will be re-invested in a broadly diversified mutual fund or other non-conflicting interests.

My response to Section D(4) of the United States Senate Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation Questionnaire Submitted for Completion by Presidential Nominees was my response to questions concerning my lobbying activities rather than to client representations in the broader context. Certainly, I provided services as a member of my firm to many clients over the course of the past 10 years. Obviously my resignation from the firm terminates my involvement with the firm and any of its clients. I would like to emphasize that for the duration of my term as Secretary of Commerce, I will not engage in any personal professional contact with any member or employee of my former law firm on any issue before the Commerce Department.

In response to your questions concerning my various business holdings and the waivers which I will seek upon the advice of the Office of Government Ethics and the Office of the General Counsel of the U.S. Department of Commerce, you should know that both offices spent considerable time and effort formulating their opinions before issuing the certification as to potential conflicts of interest. Further, it is important for me to point out that my actions regarding potential conflicts of interest or appearance of conflict exceed OGE standards as well as interpretation of those standards by the ethics office at the Department of Commerce. Before addressing your specific questions to the companies for which waivers will be sought, I would like to inform you that I am terminating my personal business relationship with Public Employee Benefit Service Corp. (formerly PEBSCO Municipal Securities Corp.) and Kellee Communications. Therefore, I will not be seeking a waiver as to either of these entities.

Boston Bank of Commerce, a single bank holding company located in Boston, MA, is 100% minority owned. I am a passive investor in the holding company with ownership of less than 10% of the outstanding and issued stock. Having resigned as a Director, I have no operational or management involvement in the activities of the company. Harmon International is an equipment leasing company of which I am the sole shareholder. I have served in the past as President of the company, a position from which I have resigned. As to the companies discussed in this paragraph, I intend to seek a waiver, as authorized under conflict of interest laws, for my financial interests. My interest in each of these companies is less than 10% of my net worth and is not substantial. Thus, I am eligible for a waiver under the applicable conflict of interest statute, 18 (U.S.C.) 208(b)(1). If the waiver is issued, I will disqualify myself from matters which are likely to have a specific or differential effect on the companies. Given the business activities of these companies, it is unlikely such a matter would be pending at Commerce, in any event. I would be able to participate in matters which may have an incidental effect on any of the companies as a member of any industry sector, however. For example, I will be able to participate in trade issues concerning banking services which are likely to affect the entire banking industry.

As to your inquiry concerning contributions to the Democratic National Committee or Democratic candidates, I have no financial interests in such contributors and will not be influenced by their past political contributions.

You expressed concern about my recusal regarding members of my family. I am unclear as to your meaning relative to the term "involved". However, as provided in Federal ethics regulations, I will not participate in any matter in which a member of my household has a financial interest. Regarding my adult children and other close relatives who are not members of my household, also, as provided in Federal ethics rules, I will not participate in any matter in which they are a party or serve as a representative.

You also inquired as to my ownership of Capitol PEBSO and Public Employee Benefit Services Corporation. I am, I'm sure you are now aware, divesting of all my interest in these entities.

Finally, neither I nor any of my staff had contact or communications with Special prosecutor Walsh, his assistants or any member of his staff concerning the Weinberger indictment and the timing of its announcement.

I hope that these are satisfactory responses to your questions. If further information is required, I will be pleased to provide it.

Sincerely,

RONALD H. BROWN,
Commerce Secretary-Designee.

APPENDIX 1—LETTER FROM TIMOTHY J. MAY TO SENATOR JOHN C. DANFORTH, DATED
JANUARY 15, 1993

PATTON, BOGGS & BLOW,
Washington, DC, January 15, 1993.

HON. JOHN C. DANFORTH,
Ranking Member, Commerce, Science, and Transportation Committee, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR DANFORTH: This letter responds to your request to Ron Brown that the Committee be supplied with information about Mr. Brown's partnership rights and obligations upon his resignation from Patton, Boggs & Blow, effective January 20, 1993. I have enclosed a copy of those provisions of the Partnership Agreement ("Agreement") which relate to distributions to former partners, specifically paragraph 4.05 of that Agreement.

I would particularly draw your attention to paragraph 4.05(b) dealing with equity partners, which Mr. Brown has been. You will note that paragraph provides that an equity partner "who dies, resigns, retires or is expelled" will receive distributions in accordance with this paragraph. I point this out to emphasize the fact that Mr. Brown will receive neither more nor less than he would have received if he had been expelled from the firm or if he were to have died. The suggestion in the press, as well as comments made during Mr. Brown's confirmation hearing, relating to a "golden handshake" from this law firm, are entirely false and without any foundation whatsoever. Mr. Brown will be paid only that which he presently owns. That is why he will receive no more than would a partner who died; that partner's estate would also receive that which he or she presently owns. As the partnership provisions make clear, what Mr. Brown, or any other departing equity partner owns, is the following:

(a) His or her capital account balance on the date of departure (the amounts the partner has been required to invest in the firm);

(b) His or her percentage interest in the accounts receivable of the firm, which will not be distributed to that partner until and unless those receivables are collected; and the partner's percentage interest in work in process, that is, work already performed but not yet billed; distributions for that will be made only if and when that work is billed and collected; and

(c) The already-earned interest on the partner's capital account.

We have had experience in the past with equity partners who have both died or resigned from the firm. In each instance it has taken a number of years for the full distributions to which these partners are entitled to be paid to them; this is so for the simple reason that, in the normal course of events, it takes several years for all of the receivables and the work in process to be collected.

It is important to point out that, unlike many so-called legal partnerships, Patton, Boggs & Blow is a true partnership. Each equity partner has a fixed percentage of the profits, losses, and expenses of this law firm for each year the law firm operates. That percentage changes from year to year, based upon a complicated formula that weighs the amount of work performed by the partner, the amount of business originated by the partner, and the seniority of the partner. Each equity partner's percentage is fixed in advance for the year based upon the performance of that partner, relative to the performance of all other equity partners, in the preceding year.

Once that percentage is fixed, then that partner is charged, on a daily basis, with that partner's share of all expenses of the firm for that year; that partner is credited on the positive side only when the work done in that year has been billed and collected. To be specific, if a partner had a 2% interest for 1992, then that partner has been charged (that partner's capital account has been charged) with 2% of every expense the law firm incurred during 1992. That partner is credited with 2% of the fees collected for work done in 1992 only when those fees are actually collected. Consequently, at the conclusion of 1992, each equity partner has already been charged with, and has had to pay for, his or her percentage share of the expenses of operating the law firm in 1992. It is for that reason that each partner owns his or her percentage share of the fees that will be realized from that work when those fees are collected. Thus, the equity partners own their share of the receivables; they own their share of the work in process not yet billed; and nothing that the law firm wishes to do can defeat that partner's ownership rights. It is for that reason, even if we were to expel a partner, that partner would have the same entitlement as Ron Brown has as a resigned partner. In both cases those partners own their right to receive payments.

You will note that paragraph 4.05(e) of the Agreement provides for an exception which would allow the former partner and the firm to agree upon a lump sum liquidation payment in satisfaction of the former partner's rights and obligations where that partner has accepted a position in government. We are informed that the Office of Government Ethics requires payment now in full liquidation of our obligation to Mr. Brown. We have agreed to do that. Such a lump sum settlement will require us to make an evaluation of the probability of the collection of receivable and work-in-process. In making that evaluation, it is our firm intention that Mr. Brown be treated, as he is entitled to under his contractual partnership rights, the same exact way as any other partner that departs this firm, whether that departure is occasioned through a resignation, retirement, expulsion, or death. Our accounting firm is making the calculations necessary to determine the proper settlement payment, and that final payment will be made to Mr. Brown before January 20, 1993.

Because we have had partners who have departed this firm under various circumstances, including death, we have an established track record to document what happens upon the departure of a partner; it is a track record against which our treatment of Mr. Brown can be compared so that the proper authorities can be assured that Mr. Brown is treated in no more favorable fashion than would be the case with any other partner that departs this law firm, under whatever circumstances.

It is also important for the Committee and the public to understand that there is no possible way we can vary what Mr. Brown is legally entitled to whatever Mr. Brown's future attitude towards or dealings with the law firm may be in his official capacity in the government.

I want to assure you we will cooperate in every way to provide all the information that the Committee needs to fulfill its obligation.

Please let me know if the materials supplied herewith are adequate for your needs, or if you need additional information about the Partnership Agreement.

Sincerely yours,

TIMOTHY J. MAY,
Managing Partner.

4.05. Distributions to Former Partners.

(a) Non-Equity Partners and Lateral Partners. A Non-Equity Partner or a Lateral Partner who dies, resigns, retires or is expelled during a taxable year shall receive at the end of the month of such death, resignation, retirement or expulsion a pro-rated portion of such Former Partner's compensation for that month. Within sixty (60) days of such death, resignation, retirement or expulsion, the balance of such Former Partner's capital account shall be paid to such Former Partner. If such Former Partner is entitled to any additional compensation (such as interest pursuant to Section 3.02(b)) for such taxable year, it shall be paid to such Former Partner at the same time as it would have been paid if such Former Partner had remained a Partner.

(b) Equity Partners. An Equity Partner who dies, resigns, retires or is expelled shall not be entitled to monthly draws following the date of such death, resignation, retirement, or expulsion. Within ninety (90) days from the date of death, resignation, retirement or expulsion, the Partnership shall distribute to the Former Partner an amount equal to such Partner's capital account balance as of the date of death, resignation, retirement or expulsion, plus interest thereon to the date of payment. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the Former Partner's capital account balance shall be an amount—

(i) determined pursuant to the rules of Section 3.02 as if the taxable year had ended on the date of death, resignation, retirement or expulsion (and as if Section 3.06 did not apply),

(ii) reduced by the Former Partner's share of the net interest expense accrued, but not paid, on the capital accounts of all other Partners up to the date of death, resignation, retirement or expulsion, and

(iii) adjusted by debiting all sums owed by the Former Partner to the Partnership and crediting all sums owed by the Partnership to the Former Partner (other than death payments pursuant to Section 8.03).

Such balance will be estimated by the Managing Partner with the assistance of the Partnership's accountants. If such balance is negative, it shall be deducted from future payments owed to the Former Partner or collected from the Former Partner as provided below. The amount of interest on the Former Partner's capital account and the amount of interest expense accrued on the capital accounts of other Partners shall be estimated in general accordance with Section 3.02(b).

(c) Future Adjustments for Equity Partners.

(i) Within thirty (30) days after the Partnership's accountants distribute to Partners the tax return for the taxable year of the death, resignation, retirement or expulsion of a Former Partner, the Partnership shall pay to such Former Partner the positive capital account balance, if any, shown on the return. If the capital account balance is negative, the Former Partner shall owe such amount to the Partnership. Such amount shall be paid by being debited from future payments owed to the Former Partner by the Partnership, unless the Managing Partner determines that the future payments will be insufficient to cover the deficit, in which case, the deficit will be payable upon demand of the Partnership.

(ii) Following the accounting described in clause (i), such Former Partner shall be entitled to receive amounts equal to the amounts by which such Former Partner's distributive share of items of income or gain (such as Clause (i) Allocations) exceeds such Former Partner's distributive share of items of deduction or loss (such as Clause (ii) Items). Computations and distributions of such excess amounts shall be made in conjunction with distributions under Section 4.03.

(d) Adjustments for Equity Partners. If the adjustments taken into account under Section 3.05(d) in determining the Formula Percentage of an Equity Partner do not operate as intended to recapture prior distributions because of the resignation, retirement or expulsion of an Equity Partner, the Executive Committee shall make appropriate reductions in such Former Partner's future distributions to recapture the distributions which such Partner received in a prior taxable year.

(e) Lump Sum Liquidations. Except in the case of a Former Partner who accepts a position in government and whom the Executive Committee concludes shall receive a lump sum liquidation payment in satisfaction of such Former Partner's rights and obligation under this Section 4.05, no Former Partner shall have a right to receive a lump sum liquidation payment in lieu of the payments described in Section 4.05 (a), (b) and (c), but the Partnership may by the affirmative vote of the Partners holding a majority of Voting Percentages make a lump sum payment to a Former Partner in satisfaction of such Former Partner's rights and obligations under this Section 4.05. Such lump sum shall reflect the estimated present value of amounts that the Partner would otherwise receive under this Section 4.05.

(f) Payments in Cash. All payments pursuant to this Section 4.05 shall be made in cash, except that the Partnership may elect to set aside and deliver to a resigning Partner (but not a disabled Partner or the estate of a deceased Partner) such Partner's pro rata share of the Partnership's capital assets in lieu of cash. In the event that the Partnership sets aside property for this purpose, it shall have discretion as to what items to set aside, all items being valued for the purpose of partition, either by agreement between the Partnership and the resigning Partner or by an independent appraisal, at current market prices.

U.S. SENATE,

Washington, DC, January 14, 1993.

Hon. RON BROWN,

Secretary Designate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. BROWN: After reviewing the documents you submitted to the committee, I have some further questions. You indicated that you will seek a conflict of interest waiver to allow you to continue your ownership of Capitol PEBSCO and your participation in PEBSCO Municipal Securities Corporation.

Could you please provide me with a list of the officers of this corporation? Who are the owners of this corporation? How much money is managed by the corporation? From what sources does the money come? Are any pension funds handled by the corporation? What municipalities, local, State, university, or corporate pension funds, if any, are invested by the corporation? Who make the actual investment decisions for the corporation? Are they registered investment advisors?

Thank you for your help in answering these questions, and I look forward to your answers to these and other questions.

Sincerely yours,

TRENT LOTT.

U.S. SENATE,

Washington, DC, January 8, 1993.

Secretary Designate, RON BROWN,

Democratic National Committee, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. BROWN: I would like to thank you for your thoughtful responses to the many questions during your Senate nomination hearing on January 6, 1993. And as I stated during that exchange there would be additional follow-up questions. This one focuses on your service as the Chairman of the Democratic National Committee (DNC). Specifically, your involvement in the recently completed presidential campaign as it relates to the indictment of Mr. Weinberger on October 30, 1992.

The timing of this event just days before the election causes one to wonder and worry. In fact, the media felt at best there was an awkward coincidence and at worst a collusion between the Democratic Party and the Office of the Special Prosecutor. It was further highlighted by the press reporting there were campaign contributions of certain members of Mr. Walsh's staff to the Democratic Party, and subsequent dropping of the indictment following the election.

I would like to give you an opportunity to clear away all of these suspicions by carefully responding to the following question:

Did you, anyone on your staff, or employed/contracted by the DNC have any contact or communications formal or informal with Special Prosecutor Walsh, his assistants (Mr. Brosnahan or Mr. Gillen), or any other members of his staff concerning the Weinberger indictment and the timing of its announcement?

I appreciate your careful attention and considered response to this question.

Sincerely yours,

TRENT LOTT.

U.S. SENATE,

Washington, DC, January 8, 1993.

Mr. RON BROWN,

Secretary Designate, Democratic National Committee, Washington, DC.

DEAR RON: I appreciate your willingness to respond to our additional questions. As you will recall I requested a copy of your separation agreement with Patton, Boggs, and Blow. This is particularly critical because of your very narrow recusal policy and the limited duration for which you plan to recuse yourself.

Specifically, Senators need to know whether your separation agreement is to be made as a fixed payment, a lump sum, or a payout schedule. If it is on payout schedule, what is that schedule? Are there any specific pension benefits which are a part of this agreement? How and when are they to be paid? Without the full written separation agreement there is no way to be confident that your narrow recusal policy vis a vis Patton, Boggs, and Blow clients will be sufficient to remove any conflict of interest problems or the appearance of any conflict of interest problems.

The review of your list of clients from your 10 year association with Patton, Boggs, and Blow, the list which you say will serve as the basis of your one year recusal policy, lists only six clients. Did you not participate as a member of the firm in providing services to any other clients, if so, what representations were made by you or the firm regarding your future involvement with those clients or their interests?

In the letter from Barbara Frederick regarding your plans to avoid any conflict of interest, a request for a waiver was mentioned. Would you please supply more specific information on these holdings, your past involvement in these businesses, and specifically in what types of matters you will continue to participate under this waiver?

The possible relationships from your other recent employment also interest me. As chairman of the Democratic National Committee did you ever participate in efforts to raise so-called soft corporate contributions? If so, from what corporations that might have dealings with the Commerce Department? What will be your recusal policy regarding any of these companies and their dealings with the Department of Commerce?

Finally, what will be your recusal policy regarding any case in which by employment or association a member of your family may be involved?

Sincerely Yours,

TRENT LOTT.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
OFFICE OF THE GENERAL COUNSEL,
Washington, DC, January 4, 1993.

Hon. JOHN C. DANFORTH,

Ranking Minority Member, Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR DANFORTH: President-elect Clinton has announced his intention to nominate Mr. Ronald H. Brown for the position of Secretary of Commerce.

By letter to Stephen D. Potts of the Office of Government Ethics, my office certified that Mr. Brown's financial disclosure report is complete and does not disclose any financial interest or outside activity that violates or appears to violate applicable conflict of interest laws or regulations.

The mission of the Department of Commerce is to foster, promote, and develop the foreign and domestic commerce of the United States. This encompasses the broad responsibility to serve and promote the nation's economic development and technological advancement.

Mr. Brown is currently chairman of the Democratic National Committee. He also is a partner with a law firm, Patton, Boggs & Blow. Mr. Brown serves on several corporate and educational and public policy non-profit boards of directors. In addition Mr. Brown has stock holdings in companies in several industry sectors, as well as holdings in money market funds, accounts in financial institutions, and real estate holdings, including several residential real estate limited partnerships. Additionally, Mr. Brown has financial interests in banking, communications, consulting, pension plan record-keeping, telephone installation, television equipment leasing, and waste management business entities. Also, Mr. Brown's wife receives a salary from a communications company.

Mr. Brown is taking a number of actions to avoid a conflict between his private interests and any responsibilities he would have as Secretary. He will resign from his position as chairman of the Democratic National Committee and from all director and officer positions with outside business and non-profit entities.

Mr. Brown also will terminate his relationship with Patton, Boggs & Blow and terminate his financial interest in the firm. Mr. Brown will also convert his independently managed, defined contribution plan into a diversified investment fund or other non-conflicting interest.

Mr. Brown will convert his interests in a Prudential Securities Managed Account, as well as any other stock in a widely-traded company, into a diversified investment fund or other non-conflicting interest.

Mr. Brown will disqualify himself from participating in any matter likely to have a direct and predictable effect on Albimar Communications, Capital PEBSO, First International Communications, Huntcliff Associates Limited Partnership, Potomac Housing Fund Limited Partnership, residential property in Davis, West Virginia, Rollingbrook Associates Limited Partnership, and Willow Springs Associates Limited Partnership.

Because one of the companies in which Mr. Brown has a financial interest has significant contractual dealings with the District of Columbia, Mr. Brown will also disqualify himself from participating in any particular matter likely to have a specific and differential effect on the District of Columbia.

Although he will retain no financial interest in the Democratic National Committee and Patton, Boggs & Blow, to avoid any potential appearance of a conflict of interest, he will disqualify himself from participating in any matter likely to have a specific and differential effect on those entities for one year following his appointment. Similarly, he will disqualify himself for one year from participating in any particular matter in which he or his firm provided legal services to one of his current clients. Current clients include all entities Mr. Brown brought to the firm or personally provided legal services during the past year.

Mr. Brown will seek a conflict of interest waiver which will allow him to participate in matters likely to have a direct and predictable effect on Boston Bank of Commerce, Harmon International, Kellee Communications, and PEBSO Municipal Securities Corp. Until such a waiver is granted, he will not participate in any matter likely to have a direct and predictable effect on those entities. Following issuance of the waiver, he will continue to disqualify himself from participating in matters likely to have a specific and differential effect on those entities. In the event a waiver is not granted, Mr. Brown will either divest the financial interests or continue to disqualify himself from matters likely to have a direct and predictable effect on those companies.

Programs and policies of the Department are unlikely to have a direct and predictable effect on Mr. Brown's interests which are outside the coverage of the actions described in this letter. Mr. Brown's actions as Secretary are not likely to influence significantly, or be influenced by, those interests. If a particular matter arises which would have a direct and predictable effect on such interests, he could disqualify himself from participating in that matter or seek a conflict of interest waiver for interests which are insubstantial.

In light of Mr. Brown's plans to terminate certain interests, resign positions, issue a disqualification statement, and seek a waiver, his financial holdings should present no impediment under 18 U.S.C. §208 and related regulations to the execution of his duties as Secretary. I am not aware of any other potential conflict of interest or appearance of a conflict or any other legal impediment to Mr. Brown serving as Secretary of Commerce.

Sincerely,

BARBARA S. FREDERICKS,
Assistant General Counsel for Administration.

STATEMENT ON THE CONFIRMATION OF RONALD
H. BROWN

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, the next Secretary of Commerce will play an important role in the future of the United States. Critical policy decisions facing our Nation must be resolved involving international trade, new and advanced technology development, American competitiveness, and our oceans and atmosphere.

New missions and structures will be needed if the Department and administration are to effectively promote U.S. exports, expand our economy and create new jobs and opportunity.

So, this is a very important position and we need the best possible person to serve as the Secretary of this Department.

In that context, the Senate is charged with the constitutional responsibility of advice and consent on the nomination and confirmation of Ron Brown to be Secretary of Commerce.

The confirmation process ensures the nominee's qualifications, his or her public record, policy views, and character are fully considered. The process provides important information not only for the Senate but also for the public.

If possible conflicts of interest exist, it is essential to know how those issues will be handled. It is a process which affords every nominee an opportunity to address such questions and issues for the record. In the end, I hope it is a process which instills public confidence in our Nation's leaders and decisions.

This becomes increasingly important when we consider the credibility of our governing institutions and leaders. The American people must have confidence that their officials have an interest only in the common good.

It is in that light that as a member of the Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee chaired by the distinguished Senator from South Carolina, that I did ask a number of questions when the committee had hearings of the designee, Ron Brown.

I thought he answered those questions straightforwardly and honestly, but additional questions needed to be pursued. That is why I did correspond and discuss with him potential problems.

I have to say at this point that he made a number of changes that helped address those questions. He has done everything I think we could reasonably expect of him and I have enjoyed working with him in this area. I think it will help remove clouds that might have been hovering over his stewardship at Commerce if these changes had not been made.

The Clinton administration must start by demonstrating that it is truly committed to the overall common good and not to special interests. There cannot and should not be any question lingering.

If it does do this then I believe a very needed step can be made in building public trust and confidence.

I would like to point out a number of the questions that were raised during the hearing and how he has addressed them.

We did raise questions about representation of foreign clients: who they were; what his relationship with them had been in the firm; were there other foreign clients.

That is a matter of record. There is no question that when he practiced law with a very successful law firm that he did represent the Duvalier regime or Government of Haiti.

The firm, I think, maybe did some other foreign work. But I have the impression he was not directly involved with that.

There were a number of municipal contracts which were awarded to firms and companies with which the nominee had an interest, or was associated, some of them under controversial circumstances. But there was not any evidence that came to the record or that I was able to find that he did anything illegal or unethical in those relationships.

So I did not address those particular areas in my questions to him.

Mr. Brown has taken steps to address these questions. I did not raise questions about the party that was going to be sponsored in his honor, for a variety of reasons. I understood it had been planned for a long time. But the point is there was one that was going to be sponsored by corporate sponsors. He made the right decision to cancel it and I think he should get credit for that.

Here are the points I asked him about where he made changes.

He significantly broadened his recusal policy in relation to his former law firm, Patton, Boggs & Blow, from 1 year to the duration of his term as Secretary of Commerce.

He said:

I will not communicate with or discuss with any partner, associate or other employee of Patton, Boggs, and Blow, any matter before, or likely to come before, the Department of Commerce during my entire tenure as Secretary of Commerce.

That is a very broad recusal policy and probably he did not necessarily have to go that far, but he did. Now that question has been removed.

Second, he assured the committee and the Senate that his separation from the firm is final and permanent. There are no reentry provisions or continuing financial interests.

That was not clear during the committee meeting. He has further clarified that. He said in his letter:

I can assure you that my resignation from the firm is final and permanent.

Third, he made available to the committee portions of his separation agreement and the firm's policy on distributions to departing partners. This disclosure addresses and removes the perception of a "golden handshake."

He said:

I will receive the same treatment as any other equity partner who dies, resigns or is expelled.

To this extent:

(A) My capital account balance on the date of departure;

(B) My percentage interest in the accounts receivable of the firm; and

(C) The already-earned interest on partner's capital account.

Four, in other areas the nominee withdrew waiver requests—which he had asked for in his request to the committee and which he reiterated when we had the hearing—that waivers be granted on, I believe, a bank and two corporations. He has now withdrawn those waiver requests and has said that he will sell all of his interest in the Pebco Municipal Securities Corp. and Kellee Communications.

Again, this is going the extra mile. In a way, it is very hard for these nominees to give up some of their investments and the benefits of their life's work. But if you are dealing not only with ethical problems but the appearances, sometimes you have to do it and he has agreed to not ask for the waivers.

In addressing the allegations surrounding the Weinburger indictment prior to the November election, he stated that neither he, nor anyone on his staff, had at any time at the Democratic National Headquarters had anything to do with the Walsh investigation. He stated emphatically he did not have any contact and there had been no contact in any way by him or his staff with that office.

Finally, he recused himself from any matter where a family member would be representing a client before the Department.

I believe these actions are good and necessary steps in the right direction to remove any appearance of conflicts of interest. I am satisfied that Mr. Brown has done everything possible at this time to avoid potential problems.

In a larger sense I think it is important that the nominee has had the opportunity to establish the record so that the people will be able to look at it and know what he has agreed to do.

So, Mr. President, I think it was important that I rise today, because the questions had been raised and these matters needed to be clarified. The American people need to know that he has taken the proper steps.

I think that has been done. Therefore, I have withdrawn my reservations about him and any effort to hold up the nomination. I think he is qualified by education and by experience to do this job. He was selected by the President of the United States for this job and after he has taken these actions, I do think he should be confirmed.

I yield the floor.

Mr. HOLLINGS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. HOLLINGS].

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I am pleased to work with the distinguished Senator from Mississippi. His points are well taken. As he stated, it is above and beyond the requirements legally and ethically taken by Mr. Brown and is a compliment to this particular nominee because he came as a chairman of a political party and the media invariably had a heyday: "Wait a minute. Here is a chairman of a political party making money representing clients."

If that is to be controlled barring any statutory provisions that we may provide, it is up to the party itself. We found out Republican and Democratic Party chairmen all had clients, established new law firms, expanded their law practice. That is a question that concerns the distinguished Senator but it was not Mr. Brown's fault. When he complies with the ethics and provisions of the community in which he practices, he is to be complimented and not have aspersion against him with respect to unethical conduct. Otherwise, with respect to foreign corporate or foreign entity representation, I more or less yield to the view expressed by Pat Choate in his book "Agents of Influence" whereby he listed the Washington merry-go-round or representing all these folks. I had long since, years back, taken the position of restricting the Special Trade Representative from representation of any of the clients or affairs before the Government later as clients.

I tried as a rider on the appropriations for the Special Trade Representative measure a 5-year bar. It was knocked off in conference each time as a matter of veto bait. More recently, however, we finally got a compromise this past year not to apply it to the present occupant of the Office of Special Trade Representative, but to ensuing ones, namely to Mr. Mickey Kantor. And we got a 3-year provision that bars him from having any interest or activity with respect to anybody that has been before the Government and his particular role as Special Trade Representative.

So I take a similar view and concern. It worried me at the time when it came up and I did make that comment, which I reiterate, that I had represented clients. I represented murderers, and I have been elected, fortunately, Mr. President, six times to this distinguished body. I do not favor murder and I am confident that Mr. Brown does not favor any of the activity of Baby Doc Duvalier of Haiti. Mr. Brown answered on top of the table that he was working with Members of Congress and the State Department on the political situation down in Haiti trying to get them additional aid and help from this Government, which is an ethical practice, as the distinguished Senator from Mississippi has pointed out. There is nothing illegal or nothing unethical.

So I think we have cleared the air. I am indebted to the distinguished Senator from Mississippi for pursuing these questions, making the record and entering it into the official record of the confirmation process.

The distinguished Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ROCKEFELLER] was approaching the floor. I am of the school of thought of the senior Senator from West Virginia, our distinguished President pro tempore, that we have to move things along. I am ready. Unless he appears, I certainly will ask consent that his statement be printed in the RECORD as if delivered on the floor. I ask unanimous consent now that the statement of the junior Senator from West Virginia be printed in the RECORD as if delivered on the floor.

Mr. President, thereupon, I ask the Senator from Mississippi, on behalf of the Senator from Missouri, my ranking member, are we ready to yield back time?

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I do believe we have at least one more speaker. I believe the Republican leader wanted 10 minutes. If we could at this moment put in a quorum call and get him to come over and do that.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I think the distinguished Senator from Washington could use the time and we will not object.

Mr. GORTON. Will the Senator defer?

Mr. LOTT. I certainly will and we will get in contact with him right now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Washington. Who yields time?

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, on the basis that no other Member wishes to use time on the nomination, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 8 minutes as in morning business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Senate is in executive session. Is there objection to the request that the Senator proceed for not to exceed 8 minutes as in legislative session and as in morning business? The Chair hears no objection. Does the Senator ask that the time not be charged against the time controlled? Mr. GORTON. He does.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NOMINATION OF ZOE BAIRD

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, Zoe Baird's nomination to the post of Attorney General presents the Clinton administration with a dilemma. The President can stand beside his nominee or withdraw her name. I believe that it is in the interest of President Clinton's administration and of the country as a whole that her nomination be withdrawn.

Ms. Baird's professional qualifications are outstanding. She is eminently qualified for the position, but her credibility as a member of the Clinton Cabinet has been mortally wounded. In choosing to hire illegal aliens to care for her child, she knowingly circumvented some of the very laws she would be sworn to uphold as America's highest law enforcement officer.

This situation is truly regrettable. Were it not for her single set of unfortunate but clear transgressions, Ms. Baird would certainly have received my full and enthusiastic support.

To begin with, Zoe Baird is a fellow Washingtonian, having been raised and educated in Puget Sound country, not too far from my own home. And while a shared heritage may provide little basis for confirmation to the President's Cabinet, it is a point of pride. The people of Washington State, including this Senator, continue to hold great respect for Ms. Baird's accomplishments.

Second, Ms. Baird has been a champion of tort reform; I had hoped that she would continue her efforts in that arena as Attorney General. Tort reform must and will be achieved as an integral component of more encompassing reforms to our Nation's legal system. Ms. Baird's leadership from the Office of the Attorney General would have proven invaluable.

Third, it is my conviction that any President of the United States—Republican or Democrat—has the right—both practically and constitutionally—to select his or her Cabinet members. In the absence of an important infraction of propriety or law, this body should not impede the President from choosing to advise him those whom he most trusts and respects.

For these reasons I am, only with great reluctance, forced to conclude that the seriousness of Ms. Baird's lapse should not be overlooked by the President, regardless of the larger contribution her presence on his Cabinet might provide.

And finally, I sympathize with Zoe Baird in regard to the situation that faced her 3 years ago: Possessed of a brilliant mind and at the peak of her intellectual powers, she wanted to continue her extraordinary career, and she wanted the best possible care for her child. I have two married daughters. Both have young children, and I have listened to and understand their frustrations with the supreme difficulty women face in juggling career and family obligations. I also understand that society has been slow to come forward to meet their needs. I know of the wrenching decisions made by my daughters, by women on my staff, and by other women friends as they have struggled to combine motherhood with careers outside the home.

But while I sympathize with Zoe Baird and while I admire her professional qualifications I still conclude that President Clinton should withdraw her name.

I have listened to those who seek to exonerate her. One defense I have heard often is that "everyone does it." No, everyone does not do it. As Senator BIDEN pointed out Tuesday during Ms. Baird's confirmation hearings, there are millions of American citizens who have but a fraction of the income of Zoe Baird and her husband, but who do not break the law to solve their child care problems.

Second, and more importantly, Zoe Baird is not everyone. Zoe Baird has been nominated to be the highest legal officer in this Nation. The Office of Attorney General is different from every other Cabinet position. The Attorney General is ultimately responsible for the prosecution of all violations of U.S. immigration laws. The person who enforces these laws cannot credibly be a person who has knowingly and intentionally broken those very laws for years. In many cases involving issues of ethics in Government the issues are gray or cloudy. Sometimes the law is unclear and it is unclear exactly who did what and whether those laws were broken. This case is neither gray nor cloudy. Ms. Baird knew exactly the laws she was breaking.

I urge President Clinton not to overlook this legal and ethical breach of judgment at the beginning of his administration. I do not wish for Ms. Baird or President Clinton the embarrassment of further Senate scrutiny and, in my opinion, likely rejection. Her nomination should simply be withdrawn. The price to a new administration for which the American people have such high hopes is simply too great to warrant any other course of action.

Whatever Zoe Baird's destiny turns out to be—and, given her talent and ability, I have no doubt it will be significant—it should not be as Attorney General of the United States of America.

If the election just past taught us anything, it taught us that Americans wanted change. The most fundamental change demanded by the electorate was in the behavior of those elected and re-elected to wield the power of Government. Americans sent a clear signal that public officials must not hold themselves above the laws they create and administer, and that the President and Members of Congress must not turn a blind eye when clear transgressions occur. The American people, Mr. President, wanted a change in business as usual, and they elected Bill Clinton to implement that change.

In his eloquent inaugural remarks yesterday to an America ready to listen, President Clinton spoke of that change. He offered the gift of hope to Americans, and they responded with cheers and trust.

But cheers are fleeting, and hope is fragile. And trust is purchased with deeds, not words.

For the sake of his new administration and for America, I urge President Clinton to withdraw the name of Zoe Baird from nomination to the post of Attorney General.

NOMINATION OF RONALD H. BROWN

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate resumes consideration of the nomination of Mr. Ronald H. Brown, of the District of Columbia, to be Secretary of Commerce. Who yields time?

Mr. ROCKEFELLER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ROCKEFELLER].

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I would just like to speak for about 3 minutes on the nomination.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I yield to the Senator.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. I thank my distinguished colleague from South Carolina. I feel so strongly about the confirmation of Ron Brown. One of the things that President Clinton made very clear throughout this campaign was that he was going to make restructuring and the competitiveness of our economy matters of great importance.

Essential to that theme is that the Department of Commerce, long a languishing backwater Department, is going to become central to that purpose. You must have a strong export policy. You must be sure of enforcing our trade laws in this country. You must be sure of making exports possible for small business people in States like the distinguished Presiding Officer and my own State of West Virginia, where there are many small business people who would like to be doing export business with other parts of the world but do not have the opportunities or the financing.

In Ron Brown, for the first time as long as I can remember in my public life, we have a real champion. I think he has a passion to succeed in this position like few I have seen in any job. I watched him as the chief fund raiser for the Democratic National Committee take a party which was torn asunder in every single way and bring it together. I do not mention that for political purposes, but I said to him once that I felt if he could bring the Democratic Party together, he could sure do a lot for strengthening the economy of our country.

Ron Brown is so smart, and so shrewd, and so tough, and he knows business so well that the prospect of his being Secretary of Commerce is I think one of the truly bright spots of the new Clinton Presidency.

So I support him strongly, Mr. President, and look forward to his serving in that position.

Mr. EXON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The senior Senator from Nebraska.

Who yields time?

Mr. HOLLINGS. I yield whatever time is necessary.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. How much time does the Senator require?

Mr. EXON. Three minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is 3 minutes yielded?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Yes.

Mr. EXON. I thank the Chair and I thank the distinguished chairman of the committee of jurisdiction.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is yielded 3 minutes.

Mr. EXON. When Ron Brown was first mentioned as a possible nominee for the position for which he has been approved in the Commerce Committee, I was very much impressed because I have known Ron Brown for a long, long time. I had a long conversation with him in my office prior to his appearing before the Commerce Committee. I was further impressed, Mr. President, with his keen knowledge, his keen insight, the fact he has been a success in everything that Ron Brown has ever touched. I am simply delighted the President of the United States has seen fit to nominate a man with Ron Brown's intellect, with Ron Brown's experience, with Ron Brown's knowledge of the workings of the U.S. Senate and the Congress as a whole, a man who I think after 4 years very likely will set a record that will be looked back on as a standard for those who have served in that position and those who will serve that position in the future.

So I simply congratulate Senator HOLLINGS, the chairman of the committee, for the expeditious action that has been taken after a thorough process, after visitation I think with all members of the committee on both sides of the aisle, after a rather lengthy hearing process where everything I believe was aired very fully, after answering in detail by mail not only the original questions submitted to him by the committee but also several follow-up questions that were asked of him after the hearing, and as it was explained earlier today when we confirmed and recommended that he be approved. He has gone beyond the call of duty to be very, very forthright, and I am very pleased to soundly endorse my friend Ron Brown and a friend of the American people for Secretary of Commerce. I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Louisiana.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BREAUX] is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. BREAUX. I thank my chairman for yielding me the 3 minutes.

Mr. President, I think Ron Brown is the right person for the right job at the right time. In our hearings, which I think were really very good hearings, I think the minority, the Republican members, really handled this nomination with the appropriate and proper procedures incumbent upon their role. The committee, under the leadership of our distinguished chairman, had some good hearings.

We are in a period of time with a new sense of ethics in Government. President Clinton has set out a very strong sense of what officers in this Government are going to be able to do when they serve and during their tenure in office as well as what they do after they leave the Government. The American people have the right to feel we are starting this new administration off in the right direction and with the proper degree of concern for ethics in Government.

With Ron Brown's nomination and the hearing processes, we have really set a standard which will do us proud. I think he will be outstanding in the position of Secretary of Commerce, and I think this Senate has done itself proud by conducting the hearings in such fine fashion. I commend our chairman for heading up those hearings.

I yield back my time.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I thank our distinguished colleague from Louisiana.

I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, that a column in yesterday's Washington Post by the distinguished writer William Raspberry be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WHY DID RON BROWN BECOME A TARGET?

(By William Raspberry)

Ron Brown is my friend. That explains why I have steered clear of both the controversies and the successes in which he has been involved, as chairman of the Democratic National Committee and, lately, as Bill Clinton's nominee for secretary of commerce.

I didn't write about his expert handling of the party chairmanship or the clockwork smoothness with which he ran the party convention, and I didn't write about the political contretemps in which he sometimes found himself. Praising a friend seemed somehow incestuous, and siding with him on controversies would have demanded some sort of disclosure.

Besides, he was doing awfully well—in the media and in fact—without me.

Now I'm hearing about a stranger called Ron Brown: a man of poor judgment and questionable ethics who, if he isn't watched, will sell the government to the highest corporate bidder.

What are they doing to my friend? I read as editorialists hold him to unwritten and constantly changing ethical standards. I watch as media critics "force" him to cancel a pre-inaugural celebration because it was sponsored by corporate figures with whom he might, as commerce secretary, have to do business. I listen—incredulously—as celebrated talk-show journalists pooch-pooch Zoe Baird's knowing violation of immigration rules (the nominee for attorney general hired a couple of illegal workers and failed to make Social Security payments on their behalf) but scorch Brown for—for what?

I'm not really sure. Some of it is in the normal course of journalism—for instance, the attempts, when he decided to seek the Democratic chairmanship, to figure out what sort of man he was, where he got his money, where his loyalties lay. Some of it was a cynical assumption that behind every successful politician there must be a few skeletons. Some of it was dirt planted by enemies.

But was some of it more sinister than that? I watched with relief as my friend sailed through his confirmation hearings, hardly breaking a sweat. (Republican leaders had hinted that they were ready to pounce on him for various possible conflicts of interest, partly because there were real questions of conflict and partly to get even for the rough treatment Democrats had given the late John Tower, Bush's original nominee for defense secretary.)

Then two things happened. The Wall Street Journal and the New York Times chastised Sen. Trent Lott (R-Miss.) for his "softball" treatment of Brown, and it was learned from Brown's financial disclosure documents that Brown had earned some $750,000 last year.

Since then, there's been, in effect, contest to see who can make the nastiest insinuations about the nominee's "riches." Contracts landed by firms in which Brown had an interest have been discussed as though they were tainted (though there has been no contention that the work was poorly performed or overpaid). Brokerage fees have been written about as though they were the next thing to under-the-table bribes. And when the word circulated that Brown might leave his law firm with a "million-dollar handshake," the "aha!" was almost audible.

Granted, $750,000 is a lot of money. But two questions come to mind. First, if Brown could make that kind of money while George Bush was in the White House, didn't he stand to make a heck of a lot more under Bill Clinton, whose election he helped engineer? In other words, if money is what principally motivates him, he'd be far better off staying with his law firm and choosing among the fat-cat clients who would inevitably throw business his way. The second question is simpler: Why do the media watchdogs who scent corruption at Brown's $750,000 smell nothing unsavory about the money the widely admired Bob Strauss made—and makes.

Can any part of what is going on have something to do with race—an uneasiness with "black leaders" from other than a civil rights background, an unwillingness on the part of some whites to believe that a black guy can dramatically out-earn them without being a crook?

I don't know, and there's more than a little irony in the question. Ron Brown and I are most likely to be kidded as naive by other members of our social group for our insistence on looking always for the nonracial explanation when things go wrong.

We come to our attitude by slightly different paths. For Brown, it is the "integrated" experience. He has gone to school with, worked with, lived among and enjoyed the friendship of whites all his life. He has dear friends (and committed enemies) of all colors, and a predisposition to see people as individuals, not as racial abstractions.

For me, it's largely a question of pragmatics. I have spent an adulthood urging young blacks to look first for explanations over which they have some control: exertion, dedication, cooperation, loyalty, personality, working at being necessary. These may in fact be the real explanations. And even if they are not working at them can go a long way toward overcoming racism. In either case, working at the things we can control is likely to bring us nearer our goals.

So what will I tell these young people now? That working hard, playing by the rules, overcoming barriers of all sorts and winning earns you the chance to stand up and declare like some besieged Richard Nixon: "I am not a crook"?

Mr. HOLLINGS. I yield now to my distinguished friend from Mississippi.

Is the Senator ready to yield back time?

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, if I could say to the distinguished Senator from South Carolina, we do understand that our leader would like to be here and present his statement, and if we have a request for more time we could go ahead with that. If necessary, I would suggest the absence of a quorum but I will desist at this time.

Mr. BREAUX addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. BREAUX. I ask unanimous consent with this understanding that I be allowed to speak for 3 minutes as if in morning business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without the time being charged.

Mr. BREAUX. Without the time being charged.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

The Chair hears no objection.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BREAUX] is recognized for 3 minutes as in legislative session.

Mr. BREAUX. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. BREAUX pertaining to the introduction of legislation are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

EXECUTIVE SESSION

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate is in executive session.

Who yields time?

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Republican leader.

How much time does the Republican leader yield to himself?

Mr. DOLE. Two minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is recognized for 2 minutes.

STATEMENT ON THE NOMINATION OF RON BROWN

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I rise in support of the nomination of Ron Brown to be the next Secretary of Commerce.

As we all know, this nomination has not been without controversy. There have been concerns over Mr. Brown's ties with his former law firm and with his extensive lobbying activities.

Many of us on my side of the aisle—including myself—also find ourselves in the situation of not having agreed with a thing Ron Brown said the past 4 years, during his service as chairman of the Democrat National Committee.

While I may not agree with Ron Brown at all times, I do admire his intelligence and his eloquence. I believe he can be an effective advocate for American commerce. I believe the nominee has been most cooperative with the Commerce Committee and its members during the confirmation process.

Mr. Brown has personally assured me that he will act in a strictly non-partisan manner in the fulfillment of his new responsibilities. And if he is as successful at the Department of Commerce as he was the DNC, then America will be very well served.

I also believe that Mr. Brown has answered the questions pertaining to his past lobbying experience, and I am confident he will do everything possible to avoid even the appearance of impropriety.

Certainly, President Clinton has pledged to ensure the highest standard of conduct for his administration. Indeed, his first act as President was to sign an Executive order pertaining to ethical behavior.

Let me also thank and congratulate the distinguished Senator from Mississippi, Senator TRENT LOTT, for his yeoman work in serving as the Republican point man on President Clinton's Cabinet nominations.

With little time and the demands of a new Congress, Senator LOTT made sure that those issues that needed to be addressed were addressed—in a fair and nonpartisan manner.

I further want to commend Senator LOTT for his interest and his insistence on getting the facts. We have an obligation in this body to make certain that anyone who is confirmed by the Senate is qualified.

Obviously, it is important that the President have the right to select his own people to serve in the Cabinet. I think because of the diligence of the Senator from Mississippi, we can be assured that Mr. Brown has passed all appropriate tests.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I ask that the RECORD reflect my view that there should be a rollcall vote on this nomination. However, inasmuch as a number of Senators on both sides of the aisle are necessarily absent, and inasmuch as this nominee would be confirmed even if a rollcall vote were demanded, out of deference to my absent colleagues, I will not request a rollcall. However, if a rollcall were to be called, I would vote in the negative.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I want to take a moment to address the nomination of Ronald H. Brown to serve as Secretary of Commerce. Today, I joined my colleagues on the Commerce Committee to recommend unanimously that the Senate confirm Mr. Brown. I support his nomination. I look forward to his tenure as Commerce Secretary.

During his confirmation hearing, I raised several questions regarding Mr. Brown's severance arrangement with his former law firm, Patton, Boggs and Blow. My specific concern was with his receiving a payment for his partnership interest valued at $1 million. The prospect of a Secretary of Commerce with continuing financial ties to a prominent Washington-based lobbying firm would have placed the Commerce Department under an ethical cloud. Mr. Brown has worked diligently to lift this cloud.

In response to additional questions that I and other members of the committee raised about potential conflicts of interest, Mr. Brown has made clear that his termination with his former firm is final and permanent. Mr. Brown also has made additional changes in his recusal policy, as first described to the committee. He now promises that, throughout his term as Secretary, he will not discuss any matter which is before the Commerce Department with any partner, associate or employee of Patton, Boggs, and Blow. Mr. Brown's pledge should ensure that his former firm and its clients have no special access or direct line to the office of Secretary of Commerce.

The Department of Commerce has a key role to play in revitalizing our economy, modernizing our Nation's infrastructure, and expanding international markets for U.S. exports. Mr. Brown shares my concerns about expanding export opportunities for small business, encouraging economic development in rural areas, and coordinating Federal high-tech research and development efforts. I look forward to working with him. I wish him the very best of success.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the nomination of Ronald H. Brown by President Clinton to be Secretary of Commerce.

Mr. Brown is a distinguished individual, who is well qualified to be Secretary of Commerce. His political leadership roles and his experience with various businesses in his role as partner in Patton, Boggs and Blow law firm lend him the knowledge needed for efficiency as Secretary.

Regarding his formal education, Mr. Brown received his bachelor of arts degree from Middlebury College in Middlebury, VT in 1962. After graduation, he joined the Army where he rose to the level of captain. Mr. Brown then went to law school at St. John's University and graduated in 1970.

Mr. Brown began his career in public service in 1971 when he became general counsel for the National Urban League. Two years later he became the national spokesperson for that organization, and in 1974 he became the executive national director for another 2 years. He later became the vice president of Washington operations for the National Urban League.

In 1979, Mr. Brown began his political career as the deputy national campaign manager for Senator EDWARD KENNEDY's 1980 Presidential campaign. He then became a staff member and later chief counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee. After 1 year as chief counsel, Mr. Brown joined Senator EDWARD KENNEDY's staff as general counsel and staff director. In 1981 he joined the law firm of Patton, Boggs, and Blow.

Throughout his career, Mr. Brown has participated in various leadership and executive roles. He was a member of UNESCO for 2 years, the legislative chairman of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights for 2 years and was a member of the advisory counsel for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. He also served as Democratic Convention manager for Jesse Jackson, and senior political advisor to the Dukakis-Bentsen campaign.

Mr. Brown held several positions in the Democratic National Committee throughout the 1980's and has served as a skillful chairman of that committee since 1989.

I am sure that Mr. Brown will be diligent in his attempts to deal with the trade issues that face this great Nation and will prove his capabilities as Secretary of Commerce. I strongly urge my colleagues to support his nomination.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the nomination of Ron Brown to be Secretary of Commerce.

Mr. President, today our economy is undergoing dramatic structural change. Declines in defense spending, the rapid rise in world trade and the breathtaking development of new technologies present overwhelming challenges for American companies and the working men and women they employ.

In the State of Connecticut, unfortunately, this change has been accompanied by an element of pain: we have lost roughly 25 percent of our jobs in durable manufacturing during the last decade.

In this era of change, America's industries need someone to stand for them. They need a Secretary of Commerce who will be an unflinching advocate for American business. They need a Secretary of Commerce who will help to develop an industrial policy that promotes the growth of manufacturing and new technologies. They need a Secretary of Commerce who understands the challenges small businesses face in this increasingly competitive world.

Most of all, Mr. President, our Nation's industries need someone with a proven track record of success—someone who knows how to be an advocate and who knows how to be a leader.

Mr. President, Ron Brown meets that test. After a successful stint with the Urban League that started in 1968, Ron Brown rose quickly through the ranks to become the chief counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee in 1980. He then became the first African-American partner at the law firm of Patton, Boggs and Blow.

In 1989, he became the first African-American ever to serve as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, a job he held with distinction and obvious success.

Mr. President, I have had the pleasure of knowing Ron Brown personally for several years. I know him to be an outspoken and aggressive individual who understands the needs of private industry and never backs down from a fight. In my view, that is exactly the type of advocate American businesses need—and exactly the type of advocate they will get if Ron Brown's nomination is confirmed.

Mr. President, I urge the confirmation of this nomination.

Mr. DOLE. I yield the remainder of my time.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I yield the remainder of my time, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. All time has been yielded.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Ronald H. Brown, from the District of Columbia, to be Secretary of the Department of Commerce?

So the nomination was confirmed.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the nomination was confirmed.

Mr. KERRY. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the order that was entered, the President will be immediately notified of the confirmation of the nominee.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, on the vote just taken on the nomination of Ron Brown to be Secretary of Commerce, the Senator from North Carolina, Senator FAIRCLOTH, has requested he be reported as having voted in the negative.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will return to legislative session.

Under the order previously entered, Mr. KERRY of Massachusetts is recognized for not to exceed 15 minutes in morning business.

(The remarks of Mr. KERRY pertaining to the introduction of legislation are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate continues its period for the transaction of morning business with time limitation thereon and with Senators permitted to speak therein for not to exceed 10 minutes.

The senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI].

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, let me first talk about a bill which I am introducing. Needless to say this is the day when many bills are being introduced with reference to campaign reform.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. DOMENICI. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. DOMENICI pertaining to the introduction of legislation are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

INCREASE IN THE MAXIMUM DEFICIT AMOUNT

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, let me give you one other quick one before I return to an economic issue.

Again I say to fellow Senators, there is much talk about the maximum deficit amount that is in the 5-year budget agreement and the President of the United States has the sole authority to alter that and alter it by tonight at midnight, where now there would be a major sequester in 1994 and 1995, half from defense and half from domestic unless we reach those agreed-upon, now enforceable Gramm-Rudman-Hollings limitations.

The President can agree to change them. This is a statement urging the President not do that. It is saying, even if they are tough, we ought to leave them in and take the whole year to work out a deficit plan. That would be the time to ask Congress to change them. Leave them there so there will be some discipline built in as the budget plans come down.

It seemed to me, in his message to the American people, our President was suggesting that we do not want to ease up on deficit reduction, we do not want to ease up on sacrifice and treating everybody the same and trying to get an equitable plan. I think he was saying we should do that with more vigor. I submit the way to make it less vigorous is to change these maximum deficit numbers now in advance of the discipline of a multiyear approach.

In his inaugural address yesterday, President Clinton asked us to "demand more responsibility from all." He also told us that: "We know we have to face hard truths and take strong steps." Today, we have an opportunity to do just that. Today, President Clinton can set the tone and display his resolve in combating our burgeoning Federal deficit. And, I believe I can safely say, Republicans stand ready to work with President Clinton in reducing deficit spending and putting our Nation on a sound fiscal footing.

Today, President Clinton must notify the Congress today whether he will weaken the discipline in Gramm-Rudman. By preliminary estimates, if he chooses to take the teeth out of Gramm-Rudman and adjust the deficit targets upward, he will increase the deficit by $72.2 billion.

The President will clearly be within his rights in the law on this decision. The 1990 Budget Enforcement Act required President Bush to adjust these targets for deposit insurance, economic, and technical changes for 1991 through 1993. The Bush administration always supported fixed deficit targets and supported the return to fixed deficit targets as contemplated in the law for 1994 and 1995.

The law continues to require President Clinton to make adjustments for deposit insurance, but it gives the new President the option as to whether he wants to stick to fixed deficit targets or allow them to continue to float for economic and technical adjustments.

The law also provides a $6.4 billion dividend in additional spending authority for the Appropriations Committee. If the President adjusts the deficit targets, he must also adjust the spending caps upward for budget authority by an estimated $3.5 billion in 1994 and $2.9 billion in 1995. The outlays associated with this adjustment amount to a total of $3.6 billion for the 2 years.

While I understand the problems with Gramm-Rudman's fixed deficit targets, if nothing else, they serve as an action forcing mechanism. It will force us to work together and confront the deficit and our debt problems this year.

I think the President makes a mistake if he chooses to adjust these deficit targets upward. The American people realize the dangers of a $350 billion deficit and a debt accelerating toward $5 trillion. The budget deficit represents the most serious long-term economic problem facing this country.

While I will not agree with the President if he chooses to make this adjustment, it will not affect my strong desire to work with this administration to meet the President's pledge to cut the deficit in half, down to $141 billion in 1996.

I ask unanimous consent that a table relating to maximum deficit amounts be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MAXIMUM DEFICIT AMOUNTS (MDA)
(In billions of dollars)

	1994	1995
October 23, 1992 MDA's	307.8	302.5
Mandatory adjustment for deposit insurance	+27.1	+1
New MDA's	334.9	302.6
Optional adjustment for economic and technicals	+22.4	+42.8
Optional adjustment for discretionary caps	+1.4	+2.2
Subtotal optional adjustments	+25.5	+46.7
Adjusted MDA's	360.4	349.4

Note.—Based on OMB estimates. The actual adjustments will depend on the assumptions in President Clinton's fiscal year 1994 budget submission. The maximum deficit amount calculations do not include the receipts and disbursements of off-budget programs, such as Social Security.

SENATE REPUBLICAN ECONOMIC POLICY TASK FORCE

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, today is the first day of the 103d Congress when Senators may introduce bills they hope may someday become law. In truth, another law—the law of averages—suggests that few of the bills introduced will actually become law. In the previous Congress, of the nearly 3,400 Senate bills introduced, only 131, or less than 4 percent, were signed into law.

A number of the proposals introduced today are also aimed at signaling a Senator's area of legislative focus he or she intends to pursue in the new Congress. Today there will be numerous bills introduced, by Members on both sides of the aisle, which have one basic theme: The economy and deficit reduction. These measures reflect what is unquestionably emerging as the major congressional debate of 1993—how to simultaneously foster economic growth while achieving long-term deficit reduction and increased job growth.

Clearly, the national economy has improved significantly in the last 6 months. Indeed the economy grew 3.4 percent in the last quarter, the strongest level of growth since 1988. But, as CBO Director Reischauer has astutely observed, this has been a nonpartisan recovery: It was 6 months too late for President Bush's reelection, and it is 6 months too early for President Clinton to claim the credit. So it is a nonpartisan recovery.

I am certain President Clinton, congressional Democrats, and Republicans all want to sustain our recent economic growth. But I believe we all want to see this growth occur within the overall context of creating more jobs and reducing the Federal deficit.

Yes, the deficit has grown these last 12 years, facts do not lie—in truth, increasing deficit spending has been a trend in this country for the past 30 years. But it is blatantly unfair to attribute the increase in the deficit solely to Republican control of the White House during the past 12 years. We in Congress control appropriations. We control changing the entitlements to agree with Presidents or not agree. So there is plenty of blame to go around.

We Republicans join in wishing President Clinton well as he crafts his policies, outlined in yesterday's inaugural address to: "invest more in our people, in their jobs, and in their future, and"—and I emphasize this—"at the same time cut our massive debt." We heartily endorse his goal of cutting the deficit in half in 4 years. But in the words of our new President: "It will not be easy, it will require sacrifice."

And I might add to this my own thought that it will require a lot of change in what we are used to paying for and what we are used to letting go unattended in terms of spiraling costs.

As ranking Republican on the Senate Budget Committee, I pledge my support to work with the new administration and the majority here in the Congress to reach this goal. I do not believe, however, that it can be achieved on a partisan basis. It is going to take hard work and an honest dialog with each other, and with the American people. Together we all have produced these deficits. Only together can we reduce them.

We Senate Republicans have many ideas. The Senate Republican leadership has established an Economic Policy Task Force to help define and refine our ideas and suggestions for addressing the economic issues that confront this country. I, along with Senator PACKWOOD, the ranking member on the Finance Committee, will chair the task force. A core group of Senators will report to the Republican leadership on our suggestions. I am honored that the core group includes Senators ROTH, MACK, DANFORTH, MCCONNELL, D'AMATO, and two freshmen Republican Senators: BENNETT and FAIRCLOTH. Other Republican task forces will be looking at other issues such as health care and the environment.

The Economic Policy Task Force will meet regularly. Our first meeting will be next Tuesday morning. But our staffs have been meeting and already some consensus is clear.

While we Republicans have many ideas and suggestions that we think can help the new administration achieve its goals, we also have some basic principles that we strongly believe in and cannot be compromised. We believe that reducing Federal deficit spending should be the highest domestic economic priority. We believe that deficit spending erodes U.S. competitiveness and limits future economic growth by absorbing national savings and raising the cost of capital. We believe in the private sector as the real engine of economic growth. We believe in as low taxation as possible. Some of these ideas have taken the form of legislation already introduced today.

Amongst ourselves, we obviously have different approaches. Some proposals we have will sound very familiar. Some will sound new. Indeed, some of the policies the new President presented in the campaign we Republicans can support. In the near term, the Task Force on Economics will review and formulate legislative initiatives in the following areas:

One, small business incentives that foster growth among the businesses that generate the majority of jobs in this country.

Two, reduction of unnecessary regulations, mandates, litigation, and other overhead costs that stifle the entrepreneurial spirit and job creation.

And while I am on that No. 2, let me suggest that those talking about stimulating the American economy are saying, simultaneously, so it will create more jobs. I am not sure we need significantly more growth; 3.4 percent is pretty good. If this President could maintain that for his 4 years, it would be rather healthy and sound and probably very positive.

But the issue is why, with that growth, are we not producing more jobs? I think there are two reasons that cry out for our attention. One, productivity is increasing, especially in our service industries. With increased productivity, you get more done with less people. So we have simultaneously a craving for more productivity and the need for less jobs if you want to stay in the marketplace. That has to be looked at from the standpoint not of getting rid of productivity increases, but how do we solve more jobs that are needed in the economy. What do we do with the private sector to help with that mission?

Second, the overhead cost of putting on a new employee, man or woman, in America is getting so prohibitive that businesses are using part-time workers and overtime in abundance, because, even at its expense, it is cheaper than putting on new people, because of the enormous cost of health care and related expenses to business people.

Continuing on to make my third point—we are interested in: Investment and savings incentives that reduce the cost of capital and raise its returns; increasing the access to credit, especially among small businesses; and expanding global markets by striving for free and fair trade by all nations.

Let us work together to take the best of these ideas and more. The country's economic future should transcend politics.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The distinguished Senator from Vermont

[Mr. LEAHY] is recognized for not to exceed 10 minutes.

Mr. LEAHY. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. LEAHY pertaining to the introduction of legislation are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I see the distinguished senior Senator from New Mexico back on his feet, and so I yield back whatever time I have.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBB). The Chair recognizes the Senator from New Mexico, Senator DOMENICI.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent I be permitted to speak for 3 minutes as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized accordingly.

Mr. DOMENICI. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. DOMENICI pertaining to the introduction of legislation are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. DOMENICI. I thank the Chair and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. DOMENICI. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Republican leader is recognized.

PRESIDENTIAL INAUGURAL: SENATE MEDIA GALLERIES, A BEHIND-THE-SCENES SUCCESS STORY—PRINT, RADIO/TV, PERIODICALS, AND PHOTOGRAPHERS GALLERIES GET THE JOB DONE ONCE AGAIN

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as the world watched Bill Clinton take the oath of office yesterday, a behind-the-scenes success story came to a close without much recognition.

That is why I want to publicly salute today the four Senate media galleries, whose superintendents and staffs—along with their House counterparts—did such a fantastic job in handling the huge challenge of the Presidential Inaugural.

No doubt about it, it was not just a 1-day task for these dedicated Senate employees. Planning and organizing took months of hard work as the enormity of the event, and the demands of the media worldwide must have looked like a tidal wave.

But, as usual, the galleries were more than up to the challenge. Thousands of reporters, photographers, and camera crews from all over the world were issued credentials, and finally took their places in their convenient observation posts yesterday to witness and report the changing of the guard at the White House.

It was the professionalism and dedication of our galleries that made it all happen. It was not easy, given the fact that approximately 2,000 print reporters, 2,500 radio and television correspondents and technicians, 300 still photographers, and 230 periodical journalists covered yesterday's inauguration. But looking at all the TV, radio, and print coverage the world is viewing today, it is clear the media were once again well served.

I would like to salute superintendents Bob Petersen of the press gallery, Larry Janeczko of the radio/TV gallery, Louise Curran of the periodical gallery, and Maurice Johnson of the press photographers' gallery for their great work. We might sometimes take their work for granted, but yesterday's success story reminds us just how good they are, and how invaluable they are to our constitutional ideals of an open and free press.

I also want to salute their excellent staffs, too, because they are absolutely essential to gallery operations. It is lots of late hours, and probably not a whole lot of thank you's, but let me tell you, we appreciate your efforts.

RETIREMENT OF KATHLENE E. LUTHER

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, on February 4, 1993, Kathlene Elizabeth Luther, a trusted and valued member of my staff, is retiring after 19 years of service to the Senate. She will be deeply missed.

Kay began her career with the Senate in 1974 as a legislative secretary for Senator Warren Magnuson, whom she served as office secretary until January 1981. His loss was certainly my gain as Kay joined my staff shortly thereafter. Since then, Kay has been my legislative secretary, office manager, and friend.

As is the case in all busy congressional offices, she has had to handle a wide range of duties and responsibilities. I could always count on Kay to get the job done. Whether it was setting up meetings, rooms, and services for a large group of visiting constituents, scheduling, maintaining voting records, and floor statements, or managing the mountain of paperwork that makes a Senate office run, Kay was always on top of things. I have known few people who are more graceful and cheerful, regardless of the circumstances.

No doubt about it, some of the best people come from North Carolina—and I should know. To be sure, Kay Luther is one of the finest from that great State, or anywhere for that matter.

Over the past 19 years, Kay has earned the complete respect of the Senate and everyone who has had the privilege to work with her. I will miss her. And I know that everyone here will join me in extending a most heartfelt thank you and our very best wishes to Kay Luther.

THANKS TO MAUREEN P. WEST

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I rise to commend Maureen West who has served me as legislative assistant for disabilities issues for the past 4 years. Over that time, and throughout her career, Mo has worked tirelessly to assist those with disabilities in becoming equal and productive members of society. She has fought tenaciously to tear down the barriers, both social and physical, that have hampered those with disabilities.

Perhaps no one worked harder or with more dedication than Mo West to make the Americans with Disabilities Act a reality. And 43 million Americans who will now have the chance they deserve owe her a debt of gratitude.

Over the past 4 years, Mo has become well known to the many organizations that have supported the cause of the disabled. She has given of her time freely and generously and she was always there to hear their concerns, work to get them a voice in the Congress, and ultimately achieve fairness and opportunity.

As Mo leaves my staff in February to pursue her career in Seattle, WA, she can be proud of the job she has done. She has left an indelible mark. She has made a difference. Mo West is an outstanding example of what public service is all about.

I know my colleagues will join me in wishing Maureen P. West all the best in her future endeavors and extend to her a most heartfelt thank you. The Senate will miss Mo, and so will I.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SALUTE TO BILL FARMER

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I join Senator MITCHELL in congratulating Bill Farmer on his retirement from the Senate family after 28 years of distinguished service, including more than 21 years at the rostrum in the Senate Chamber.

Many people may only recognize his Kentucky-bred voice, but anyone who has served in this body in the past two decades knows the man well, and respects him tremendously for his dedication. No doubt about it, there is no such thing as 9 to 5 around this place. Bill may have served 28 years, but if you added up the hours it might come out to 48—that is based on official Senate time. In his more than 12 years as chief legislative clerk, Bill has also probably read more legislation than he cares to remember, especially those enjoyable filibusters.

Bill, thanks for your years of hard work. It is much appreciated.

I know all my colleagues join me in wishing Bill all the best in his retirement and in extending our thanks and appreciation for his service to the Senate.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum has been suggested. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed into executive session to consider the nomination of Bruce Babbitt to be Secretary of the Interior, reported earlier today by the Energy and Natural Resources Committee; that the nomination be confirmed; that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; that the President be immediately notified of the Senate's action, and that the Senate then return to legislative session, and that any statements with respect to the nomination appear in the RECORD as if read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

So the nomination was confirmed.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the nomination of Bruce Babbitt, of Arizona, to serve as Secretary of the Interior in the Clinton administration.

Mr. Babbitt is the former Governor of Arizona, having served in that position from 1978 to 1987. Prior to that time, Mr. Babbitt was the attorney general for Arizona. Most recently, Mr. Babbitt has served as the president of the League of Conservation Voters. He is very familiar with the public land, Indian, water, mineral, and other issues that are at the core of the Interior Department's mission.

As chairman of the Interior and Related Agencies Subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee, I look forward to working with Governor Babbitt as he attempts to lead the Department at a time of tight budgets and growing conflicts over the programs for which he has been nominated to be the Nation's steward. Governor Babbitt comes to this job with a reputation as an aggressive supporter of land conservation and environmental protection, tempered with the realism necessary to secure compromise and get the job done.

I encourage Governor Babbitt to work closely with the authorizing committees of the Congress to begin addressing some of the policy issues affecting public lands today. For the last several years, fierce debates over matters that are properly the jurisdiction of the authorizing committee have occurred during consideration of the Interior appropriation bill. These debates have consumed a great deal of time in the Senate, as well as in conference. The debate is much the same year after year. I hope that the new Secretary and the Congress will be able to resolve these policy issues in the proper forum.

The contentiousness of the public lands issues that Governor Babbitt will have to deal with as Secretary of the Interior cannot be overstated. With a number of the States having over one-third of their land base owned by the Federal Government, the policies of the Interior Department affect the everyday lives of citizens residing in the surrounding communities. West Virginia is fortunate in that the Federal Government owns just 14 percent of our State, as compared to 50, 60, 70, or even 80 percent in other States. But the potential significance of Federal action on local communities is no different if the town is Payson, AZ, or Hot Springs, AR, or Roseburg, OR, or Glen Jean, WV. I encourage Governor Babbitt to be sensitive to these needs as he contemplates policy decisions on matters such as grazing fees, mining law reforms, timber harvesting, endangered species, wetlands protection, park development, and oil and gas activity.

Mr. President, Governor Babbitt brings a keen sense of the need to protect our environment for future generations to the job of Secretary of the Interior. I urge my colleagues to support his nomination.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise in support of Bruce Babbitt to be Secretary of the Interior.

Governor Babbitt was born in Los Angeles and currently makes his home in Phoenix, AZ. He graduated from the University of Notre Dame, received his masters from the University of Newcastle in England, and received his law degree from Harvard Law School in 1965. Governor Babbitt was attorney general for the State of Arizona from 1975 to 1978, and he served as Governor from 1978 to 1987. He has been in private legal practice since leaving public office.

Governor Babbitt has an extensive background in environmental matters. During his term as Governor, he pushed a comprehensive water management bill through the Arizona Legislature. In his recent private practice, he has become involved in national environmental and natural resource issues. He served as president of the League of Conservation Voters, and his nomination has been well received by various environmental groups.

The Department of the Interior serves as our country's primary conservation agency, and oversees most of our nationally owned public lands and natural resources. The incoming Secretary will have the responsibility of ensuring that our lands, wildlife, and water resources are protected and are properly maintained and utilized. Further, the Secretary must preserve our valuable parks and historic sites to enable the public to continue to enjoy their benefits.

Mr. President, Bruce Babbitt has considerable experience which should assist him in carrying out his new duties. I am pleased to support his nomination and look forward to working with him in the future.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I rise in support of the nomination of Bruce Babbitt. Through the years, I have come to know and respect this able man. In the course of our careers, Bruce and I have disagreed strongly on some matters and agreed—just as strongly—on other matters.

He is a very fair and kind man. I met him in 1979 when we were both involved in the after-accident investigation of the nuclear incident at Three Mile Island. I trust that as Secretary of the Interior he will demonstrate what I believe to be his appreciation for the sound policy of multiple use of our public lands. Bruce Babbitt has never equated multiple use with massive abuse, as some in the more extreme ranks of the environmentalist community assert. With sound and balanced management, we can preserve and protect our precious natural resources and still enjoy the fruits of the land and the benefits these resources provide to the American people.

I will continue to do all I can to work with my fine senior colleague, MALCOLM WALLOP, to ensure a cooperative and mutually respectful relationship with the Department of the Interior. I trust that Secretary Babbitt will remain objective and open minded as public land issues generally, and specifically those which affect Wyoming, are dealt with at the Department of the Interior. I am optimistic that he will demonstrate how very important water development and domestic mineral production is to the West; to our national security; and to our standard of living. We must develop our resources to their maximum potential while, at the same time, maintaining the quality of the environment. Coal, uranium, oil and gas, hard rock mining, trona, and all of the other commodity resources beneath our Federal lands are so crucial to the national and States' well being in terms of jobs and local economies.

Mr. WALLOP. Mr. President, I rise in support of Governor Babbitt to be Secretary of the Interior. I do so with some reservations, but it is my belief that in the absence of any question of morality or illegal conduct, a President deserves to have Cabinet officers of his own choosing.

My reservations center around the ability of Governor Babbitt to administer the programs within his responsibility in a balanced manner. As Governor of Arizona, he showed a degree of creativity, integrity, and balance which was commendable. However, as President of the League of Conservation voters, he advocated extreme environmental positions with which I strongly disagree and don't believe represent constructive approaches to resource decisions.

During the 2 days of hearings on Governor Babbitt's nomination held by the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, Governor Babbitt assuaged some of my concerns in the responses to members' questions and in his statement that upon taking the post at Interior he will take off his advocacy hat and put back on his public service hat. I take him at his word and look forward to working with him to craft policies and solutions to natural resource problems which are sensible and reflect the balanced stewardship which the law requires.

In closing, I want to note the speed by which the Energy and Natural Resources Committee acted on this nomination. My colleagues may recall the lengthy and excruciatingly painful hearings that two of my friends from Wyoming, Stan Hathaway and Jim Watt, endured at the hands of the Democrats in this body. We would have been justified to hold Governor Babbitt to that new level of scrutiny, but instead chose to cooperate with the Clinton administration and move forward.

The lives and livelihood of so many of my constituents, citizens in the other Western States, as well as the rest of the Nation depend on the policies and interpretations which Governor Babbitt will make. If President Clinton's promise that economic growth and protection of the environment are not incompatible is to be upheld, then Governor Babbitt will have to demonstrate the balance he pledged to the committee. I look forward to working with him and wish him well in his new endeavor.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I rise in support of President Clinton's nomination of Bruce Babbitt of Arizona to be Secretary of the Interior. The Committee on Energy and Natural Resources has conducted 2 days of hearings on this nomination and has voted 20 to 0 in favor of Mr. Babbitt's confirmation.

Mr. President, in the past 25 years, the role of the Secretary of the Interior has changed dramatically. The Secretary is no longer the guardian of narrow Western regional interests.

Now, under laws enacted by Congress, the Secretary is the steward, for all Americans, of much of our national land heritage, including our national parks, wildlife refuges, and public lands.

The Secretary is manager of nationwide programs for outdoor recreation, restoration of lands affected by coal mining, historic preservation, and mineral and water resources. His decisions on energy and environmental matters affect the interests of every American. The old days of few users and little or no constraints on the Secretary's decisions are gone forever. This is particularly true with respect to use of the Federal lands.

The Secretary of the Interior and the entire Department are challenged to provide for needed development without sacrificing vital environmental interests. This effort will require a high degree of competence, careful planning, constant effort to achieve a balance between development and preservation, and complete integrity in the decision making process.

In this regard, I believe that there are certain principles established by Congress which should guide the Secretary.

First, decisions should be based on comprehensive planning and professional judgment with ample public participation.

Second, maximum protection of the environment should be one of the highest priorities.

Third, the Federal Government should receive fair market value for private use of public resources.

And, fourth, the Secretary should cooperate to the maximum extent possible with State and local governments, and local citizens.

Many of the recent complaints from traditional users about Federal resource management stem not so much from new rules of the management game, but from the fact that there are many new players. Increasing scarcity of basic commodities, a rapid shift of the urbanized population center of the Nation to the West and South, and a growing appreciation for environmental values have increased pressures for such competing purposes as energy production, urban growth, recreation, and wilderness preservation. As a result, there are new definitions of public interest, new constituencies to be served, and new claims on the resources of the Federal lands.

Mr. President, Bruce Babbitt is well qualified to fill this challenging assignment. I commend President Clinton for choosing Mr. Babbitt, and look forward to working with him as Secretary of the Interior.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will now return to legislative session.

NOTICE OF ADJUSTMENT OF THE MAXIMUM DEFICIT AMOUNT—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 2

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which, pursuant to the order of August 4, 1977, was referred jointly to the Committee on the Budget and the Committee on Governmental Affairs:

To the Congress of the United States:

Pursuant to section 254(c) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, as amended ("Act") (2 U.S.C. 904(c)), notification is hereby provided of my decision that the adjustment of the maximum deficit amount, as allowed under section 253(g)(1)(B) of the Act (2 U.S.C. 903(g)(1)(B)), shall be made.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, January 21, 1993.

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE RECEIVED DURING RECESS

Under the authority of the order of the Senate of January 5, 1993, the Secretary of the Senate, on January 21, 1993, during the recess of the Senate, received a message from the House of Representatives announcing that the House has passed the joint resolution (S.J. Res. 1) to ensure that the compensation and other emoluments attached to the office of the Secretary of the Treasury are those which were in effect on January 1, 1989; without amendment.

The message also announced that pursuant to the provisions of section 4(a) of the Technology Assessment Act of 1972 (2 U.S.C. 473(a)), the Speaker appoints as members of the Technology Assessment Board, the following Members on the part of the House: Representatives BROWN of California and DINGELL.

The message further announced that pursuant to the provisions of Senate Concurrent Resolution 2, 103d Congress, the Speaker reappoints as members of the Joint Committee To Make the Necessary Arrangements for the Inauguration of the President-Elect and the Vice President-Elect of the United States on the 20th day of January, 1993, the following Members of the House: Mr. FOLEY, Mr. GEPHARDT, and Mr. MICHEL.

The message also announced that pursuant to the provisions of section 161(a) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2211) and upon the recommendation of the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, the Speaker selects the following members of that committee to be accredited by the President as official advisers on the part of the House to the U.S. delegations to international conferences, meetings, and negotiation sessions relating to trade agreements during the first session of the 103d Congress: Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI, Mr. GIBBONS, Mr. MATSUI, Mr. ARCHER, and Mr. CRANE.

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

The following communications were laid before the Senate, together with accompanying papers, reports, and documents, which were referred as indicated:

EC-423. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on the status of efforts to obtain Iraq's compliance with the resolutions adopted by the U.N. Security Council; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following executive reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. HOLLINGS, from the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation:

Ronald H. Brown, of the District of Columbia, to be Secretary of Commerce.

Federico Pena, of Colorado, to be Secretary of Transportation.

(The above nominations were reported with the recommendation that they be confirmed, subject to the nominee's commitment to respond to requests to appear and testify before any duly constituted committee of the Senate.)

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, for the Committee on Labor and Human Resources, I report favorably three nomination lists in the Public Health Service which were printed in full in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORDS of January 5 and 6, 1993, and ask, to save the cost of reprinting on the Executive Calendar, that these nominations lie at the Secretary's desk for the information of Senators.

By Mr. JOHNSTON, from the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources:

Bruce Babbitt, of Arizona, to be Secretary of the Interior.

(The nomination was reported with the recommendation that it be confirmed, subject to the nominee's commitment to respond to requests to appear and testify before any duly constituted committee of the Senate.)

A concurrent resolution to provide that each committee of the Congress that reports employee benefit legislation shall secure an objective analysis of the impact of such legislation on employment and international competitiveness, and include such analysis in the committee report; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. KENNEDY (for himself, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. WELLSTONE, Mr. DODD, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. PELL, Mr. SIMON, Mr. WOFFORD, Mr. INOUE, Mr. SARBANES, Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. RIEGLE, Mr. DURENBERGER, Mr. METZENBAUM

S. 1. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to revise and extend the programs of the National Institutes of Health, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH REVITALIZATION ACT

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, We stand at a unique point in medical history: As we have gained control over the past plagues of humanity, such as smallpox, diphtheria, and polio, we are confronted with newer and greater medical challenges from cancers, aging, AIDS, and other serious diseases. We seek not only means to control death, but to live with dignity and autonomy in the extra years that science has now granted. The reauthorization of the National Institutes of Health will guarantee Americans' health and American leadership in biomedical research through the end of this century.

I am today introducing the National Institutes of Health Reauthorization Act of 1993. The NIH is the best known biomedical research institute in the world—and with good reason. For a generation, its landmark discoveries have been the hallmark of modern medicine, and we must do all we can to maintain this high standard.

This year's bill is an improved version of the NIH conference agreement that passed the Senate on June 4 by a vote of 85-12, and was vetoed by President Bush. The House of Representatives failed by 14 votes to override the veto.

The most controversial issue continues to be fetal tissue transplantation research. It lifts the administration ban on such research. The bill contains all the safeguards in last year's bill to prevent abuses, including a clear separation between a woman's decision to have an abortion and her decision to donate the tissue for research.

The women's health provisions of this bill are critical to promote first rate health care for women. This legislation establishes permanent statutory authority for the Office of Research on Women's Health to oversee new plans and policies for addressing women's health concerns in each of the Institutes. It specifically requires women to be included in research projects supported or conducted by the NIH. In addition, the National Cancer Institute will develop a comprehensive plan to expand, intensify, and coordinate all research efforts emphasizing prevention, early detection and treatment of breast cancer. The bill authorizes an additional $325 million to expand breast cancer research activities and an additional $75 million for ovarian, cervical, and other cancers of women's reproductive systems.

The bill also authorizes $40 million to intensify basic, clinical, and behavioral research on osteoporosis and related bone disorders, and to establish an information clearinghouse to enhance the understanding of bone disorders by health professionals and the public.

Major initiatives in children's health are also addressed, including:

A separate children's vaccine initiative to develop affordable new and improved vaccines for the prevention of other infectious diseases.

A study of the safety and effectiveness of HIV vaccines for treatment and prevention of HIV infection in infants, children, and their mothers.

A child health research center program to speed the transfer of knowledge from basic research to clinical applications that will benefit the health of children.

Centers for basic and clinical research on cardiovascular disease in children.

A Juvenile Arthritis Program to expand research into the cause, diagnosis, early detection, control, treatment, and rehabilitation of children suffering from arthritis and related diseases.

Prostate cancer has reached epidemic levels. The bill expands and strengthens prostate cancer research at the NIH.

The AIDS research provision in S. 1 have the potential of putting AIDS research at the NIH on track at last. AIDS research has been plagued for years by a lack of coordination, strategic planning, and evaluation. The reforms in S. 1 will provide for the substantial strengthening of the Office of Aids Research including budget authority across Institute lines, and mandate the office to create and implement a budget for AIDS research throughout the NIH, supported by a detailed, scientifically justified strategic plan. The proposals, which are based in part on a major study of the AIDS research effort completed by the Institute of Medicine in 1991, have received widespread support from, among others, major AIDS advocacy organizations, many research scientists, and the National Commission on AIDS. We look forward to the increased focus and sound management practices the proposals may bring to the NIH AIDS research effort.

The bill will also ensure the validity and future of the taxpayers' investment in research by improving the biomedical research infrastructure through:

Funding to provide a program to increase the competitiveness of research proposals in States whose facilities have experienced low success rates in obtaining research awards from the NIH.

A peer reviewed matching grant program for extramural facilities construction to repair the crumbling national biomedical infrastructure.

A National Research Service Award Program of training grants to scholars to assure a continuing supply of scientists.

New Federal policies on scientific misconduct, conflicts of interest, and prevention of retaliation against whistleblowers in connection with NIH research.

The NIH continues to produce significant advances in the health of people everywhere. Over the past 2 years, we have witnessed tremendous growth in our understanding of disease. NIH-supported research has resulted in numerous practical applications that bring the benefits of research to the bedside of the patient as rapidly as possible.

The National Institutes of Health Reauthorization Act is comprehensive and important legislation that will advance our knowledge of medical science. Its goal is to save lives and improve the health status of all Americans. There are few better investments in our future than the investment we make in biomedical research. This legislation will continue a long tradition of research excellence, and I urge the Senate to act on it as soon as possible.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "National Institutes of Health Revitalization Act of 1993".

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents for this Act is as follows:

Sec. 1. Short title; table of contents.

TITLE I—GENERAL PROVISIONS REGARDING TITLE IV OF PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE ACT

Subtitle A—Research Freedom

PART I—REVIEW OF PROPOSALS FOR BIOMEDICAL AND BEHAVIORAL RESEARCH

Sec. 101. Establishment of certain provisions regarding research conducted or supported by National Institutes of Health.

PART II—RESEARCH ON TRANSPLANTATION OF FETAL TISSUE

Sec. 111. Establishment of authorities.

Sec. 112. Purchase of human fetal tissue; solicitation or acceptance of tissue as directed donation for use in transplantation.

Sec. 113. Nullification of moratorium.

Sec. 114. Report by General Accounting Office on adequacy of requirements.

PART III—MISCELLANEOUS REPEALS

Sec. 121. Repeals.

Subtitle B—Clinical Research Equity Regarding Women and Minorities

PART I—WOMEN AND MINORITIES AS SUBJECTS IN CLINICAL RESEARCH

Sec. 131. Requirement of inclusion in research.

Sec. 132. Peer review.

Sec. 133. Applicability to current projects.

PART II—OFFICE OF RESEARCH ON WOMEN'S HEALTH

Sec. 141. Establishment.

PART III—OFFICE OF RESEARCH ON MINORITY HEALTH

Sec. 151. Establishment.

Subtitle C—Scientific Integrity

Sec. 161. Establishment of Office of Scientific Integrity.

Sec. 162. Commission on Scientific Integrity.

Sec. 163. Protection of whistleblowers.

Sec. 164. Requirement of regulations regarding protection against financial conflicts of interest in certain projects of research.

Sec. 165. Effective dates.

TITLE II—NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH IN GENERAL

Sec. 201. Health promotion research dissemination.

Sec. 202. Programs for increased support regarding certain States and researchers.

Sec. 203. Children's vaccine initiative.

Sec. 204. Plan for use of animals in research.

Sec. 205. Increased participation of women and members of underrepresented minorities in fields of biomedical and behavioral research.

Sec. 206. Requirements regarding surveys of sexual behavior.

Sec. 207. Discretionary fund of Director of National Institutes of Health.

Sec. 208. Miscellaneous provisions.

TITLE III—GENERAL PROVISIONS RESPECTING NATIONAL RESEARCH INSTITUTES

Sec. 301. Appointment and authority of Directors of national research institutes.

Sec. 302. Program of research on osteoporosis, Paget's disease, and related disorders.

Sec. 303. Establishment of interagency program for trauma research.

TITLE IV—NATIONAL CANCER INSTITUTE

Sec. 401. Expansion and intensification of activities regarding breast cancer.

Sec. 402. Expansion and intensification of activities regarding prostate cancer.

Sec. 403. Authorization of appropriations.

TITLE V—NATIONAL HEART, LUNG, AND BLOOD INSTITUTE

Sec. 501. Education and training.

Sec. 502. Centers for the study of pediatric cardiovascular diseases.

Sec. 503. National Center on Sleep Disorders.

Sec. 504. Authorization of appropriations.

TITLE VI—NATIONAL INSTITUTE ON DIABETES AND DIGESTIVE AND KIDNEY DISEASES

Sec. 601. Provisions regarding nutritional disorders.

TITLE VII—NATIONAL INSTITUTE ON ARTHRITIS AND MUSCULOSKELETAL AND SKIN DISEASES

Sec. 701. Juvenile arthritis.

TITLE VIII—NATIONAL INSTITUTE ON AGING

- Sec. 801. Alzheimer's disease registry.
- Sec. 802. Aging processes regarding women.
- Sec. 803. Authorization of appropriations.
- Sec. 804. Conforming amendment.

TITLE IX—NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF ALLERGY AND INFECTIOUS DISEASES

- Sec. 901. Tropical diseases.
- Sec. 902. Chronic fatigue syndrome.

TITLE X—NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF CHILD HEALTH AND HUMAN DEVELOPMENT

Subtitle A—Research Centers With Respect to Contraception and Research Centers With Respect to Infertility

- Sec. 1001. Grants and contracts for research centers.
- Sec. 1002. Loan repayment program for research with respect to contraception and infertility.

Subtitle B—Program Regarding Obstetrics and Gynecology

- Sec. 1011. Establishment of program.

Subtitle C—Child Health Research Centers

- Sec. 1021. Establishment of centers.

Subtitle D—Study Regarding Adolescent Health.

- Sec. 1031. Prospective longitudinal study.

TITLE XI—NATIONAL EYE INSTITUTE

- Sec. 1101. Clinical research on diabetes eye care.

TITLE XII—NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF NEUROLOGICAL DISORDERS AND STROKE

- Sec. 1201. Research on multiple sclerosis.

TITLE XIII—NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF ENVIRONMENTAL HEALTH SCIENCES

- Sec. 1301. Applied Toxicological Research and Testing Program.

TITLE XIV—NATIONAL LIBRARY OF MEDICINE

Subtitle A—General Provisions

- Sec. 1401. Additional authorities.
- Sec. 1402. Authorization of appropriations.

Subtitle B—Financial Assistance

- Sec. 1411. Establishment of program of grants for development of education technologies.

Subtitle C—National Information Center on Health Services Research and Health Care Technology

- Sec. 1421. Establishment of Center.
- Sec. 1422. Conforming provisions.

TITLE XV—OTHER AGENCIES OF NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH

Subtitle A—Division of Research Resources

- Sec. 1501. Redesignation of Division as National Center for Research Resources.
- Sec. 1502. Biomedical and behavioral research facilities.
- Sec. 1503. Construction program for national primate research center.

Subtitle B—National Center for Nursing Research

- Sec. 1511. Redesignation of National Center for Nursing Research as National Institute of Nursing Research.
- Sec. 1512. Study on adequacy of number of nurses.

Subtitle C—National Center for Human Genome Research

- Sec. 1521. Purpose of Center.

TITLE XVI—AWARDS AND TRAINING

Subtitle A—National Research Service Awards

- Sec. 1601. Requirement regarding women and individuals from disadvantaged backgrounds.
- Sec. 1602. Service payback requirements.

Subtitle B—Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome

- Sec. 1611. Loan repayment program.

Subtitle C—Loan Repayment for Research Generally

- Sec. 1621. Establishment of program.

Subtitle D—Scholarship and Loan Repayment Programs Regarding Professional Skills Needed by National Institutes of Health

- Sec. 1631. Establishment of programs.
- Sec. 1632. Funding.

Subtitle E—Funding for Awards and Training Generally

- Sec. 1641. Authorization of appropriations.

TITLE XVII—NATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR BIOMEDICAL RESEARCH

- Sec. 1701. Establishment of Foundation.

TITLE XVIII—RESEARCH WITH RESPECT TO ACQUIRED IMMUNE DEFICIENCY SYNDROME

- Sec. 1801. Revision and extension of various programs.

TITLE XIX—STUDIES

- Sec. 1901. Acquired immune deficiency syndrome.
- Sec. 1902. Malnutrition in the elderly.
- Sec. 1903. Research activities on chronic fatigue syndrome.
- Sec. 1904. Report on medical uses of biological agents in development of defenses against biological warfare.
- Sec. 1905. Personnel study of recruitment, retention and turnover.
- Sec. 1906. Procurement.
- Sec. 1907. Report concerning leading causes of death.
- Sec. 1908. Relationship between the consumption of legal and illegal drugs.

TITLE XX—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

- Sec. 2001. Designation of Senior Biomedical Research Service in honor of Silvio Conte, and limitation on number of members.
- Sec. 2002. Technical corrections.
- Sec. 2003. Biennial report on carcinogens.
- Sec. 2004. Master plan for physical infrastructure for research.
- Sec. 2005. Transfer of provisions of title xxvii.
- Sec. 2006. Certain authorization of appropriations.
- Sec. 2007. Prohibition against SHARP adult sex survey and the American teenage sex survey.
- Sec. 2008. Support for bioengineering research.

TITLE XXI—EFFECTIVE DATES

- Sec. 2101. Effective dates.

TITLE I—GENERAL PROVISIONS REGARDING TITLE IV OF PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE ACT

Subtitle A—Research Freedom

PART I—REVIEW OF PROPOSALS FOR BIOMEDICAL AND BEHAVIORAL RESEARCH

SEC. 101. ESTABLISHMENT OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS REGARDING RESEARCH CONDUCTED OR SUPPORTED BY NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH.

Part G of title IV of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 289 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 492 the following new section:

"CERTAIN PROVISIONS REGARDING REVIEW AND APPROVAL OF PROPOSALS FOR RESEARCH

"SEC. 492A. (a) REVIEW AS PRECONDITION TO RESEARCH.—

"(1) PROTECTION OF HUMAN RESEARCH SUBJECTS.—

"(A) In the case of any application submitted to the Secretary for financial assistance to conduct research, the Secretary may not approve or fund any application that is subject to review under section 491(a) by an Institutional Review Board unless the application has undergone review in accordance with such section and has been recommended for approval by a majority of the members of the Board conducting such review.

"(B) In the case of research that is subject to review under procedures established by the Secretary for the protection of human subjects in clinical research conducted by the National Institutes of Health, the Secretary may not authorize the conduct of the research unless the research has, pursuant to such procedures, been recommended for approval.

"(2) PEER REVIEW.—In the case of any application submitted to the Secretary for financial assistance to conduct research, the Secretary may not approve or fund any application that is subject to technical and scientific peer review under section 492(a) unless the application has undergone peer review in accordance with such section and has been recommended for approval by a majority of the members of the entity conducting such review.

"(b) ETHICAL REVIEW OF RESEARCH.—

"(1) PROCEDURES REGARDING WITHHOLDING OF FUNDS.—If research has been recommended for approval for purposes of subsection (a), the Secretary may not withhold funding for the research on ethical grounds unless—

"(A) the Secretary convenes an advisory board in accordance with paragraph (4) to study the ethical implications of the research; and

"(B) the majority of the advisory board recommends that, on ethical grounds, the Secretary withhold funds for the research.

"(2) APPLICABILITY.—The limitation established in paragraph (1) regarding the authority to withhold funds on ethical grounds shall apply without regard to whether the withholding of funds is characterized as a disapproval, a moratorium, a prohibition, or other description.

"(3) PRELIMINARY MATTERS REGARDING USE OF PROCEDURES.—

"(A) If the Secretary makes a determination that an advisory board should be convened for purposes of paragraph (1), the Secretary shall, through a statement published in the Federal Register, announce the intention of the Secretary to convene such a board.

"(B) A statement issued under subparagraph (A) shall include a request that interested individuals submit to the Secretary recommendations specifying the particular individuals who should be appointed to the advisory board involved. The Secretary shall consider such recommendations in making appointments to the board.

"(C) The Secretary may not make appointments to an advisory board under paragraph (1) until the expiration of the 30-day period beginning on the date on which the statement required in subparagraph (A) is made with respect to the board.

"(4) ETHICS ADVISORY BOARDS.—

"(A) Any advisory board convened for purposes of paragraph (1) shall be known as an ethics advisory board (hereafter in this paragraph referred to as an 'ethics board')."

"(B)(i) An ethics board shall advise, consult with, and make recommendations to the Secretary regarding the ethics of the project of biomedical or behavioral research with respect to which the board has been convened."

"(ii) Not later than 180 days after the date on which the statement required in paragraph (3)(A) is made with respect to an ethics board, the board shall submit to the Secretary, and to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, a report describing the findings of the board regarding the project of research involved and making a recommendation under clause (i) of whether the Secretary should or should not withhold funds for the project. The report shall include the information considered in making the findings."

"(C) An ethics board shall be composed of no fewer than 14, and no more than 20, individuals who are not officers or employees of the United States. The Secretary shall make appointments to the board from among individuals with special qualifications and competence to provide advice and recommendations regarding ethical matters in biomedical and behavioral research. Of the members of the board—

"(i) no fewer than 1 shall be an attorney;

"(ii) no fewer than 1 shall be an ethicist;

"(iii) no fewer than 1 shall be a practicing physician;

"(iv) no fewer than 1 shall be a theologian; and

"(v) no fewer than one-third, and no more than one-half, shall be scientists with substantial accomplishments in biomedical or behavioral research."

"(D) The term of service as a member of an ethics board shall be for the life of the board. If such a member does not serve the full term of such service, the individual appointed to fill the resulting vacancy shall be appointed for the remainder of the term of the predecessor of the individual."

"(E) A member of an ethics board shall be subject to removal from the board by the Secretary for neglect of duty or malfeasance or for other good cause shown."

"(F) The Secretary shall designate an individual from among the members of an ethics board to serve as the chair of the board."

"(G) In carrying out subparagraph (B)(i) with respect to a project of research, an ethics board shall conduct inquiries and hold public hearings."

"(H) With respect to information relevant to the duties described in subparagraph (B)(i), an ethics board shall have access to all such information possessed by the Department of Health and Human Services, or available to the Secretary from other agencies."

"(I) Members of an ethics board shall receive compensation for each day engaged in carrying out the duties of the board, including time engaged in traveling for purposes of such duties. Such compensation may not be provided in an amount in excess of the maximum rate of basic pay payable for GS-18 of the General Schedule."

"(J) The Secretary, acting through the Director of the National Institutes of Health, shall provide to each ethics board such staff and other assistance as may be necessary to carry out the duties of the board."

"(K) An ethics board shall terminate 30 days after the date on which the report required in subparagraph (B)(ii) is submitted to the Secretary and the congressional committees specified in such subparagraph."

PART II—RESEARCH ON TRANSPLANTATION OF FETAL TISSUE

SEC. 111. ESTABLISHMENT OF AUTHORITIES.

Part G of title IV of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 289 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 498 the following new section:

"RESEARCH ON TRANSPLANTATION OF FETAL TISSUE

"SEC. 498A. (a) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may conduct or support research on the transplantation of human fetal tissue for therapeutic purposes."

"(2) SOURCE OF TISSUE.—Human fetal tissue may be used in research carried out under paragraph (1) regardless of whether the tissue is obtained pursuant to a spontaneous or induced abortion or pursuant to a stillbirth."

"(b) INFORMED CONSENT OF DONOR.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In research carried out under subsection (a), human fetal tissue may be used only if the woman providing the tissue makes a statement, made in writing and signed by the woman, declaring that—

"(A) the woman donates the fetal tissue for use in research described in subsection (a);

"(B) the donation is made without any restriction regarding the identity of individuals who may be the recipients of transplantations of the tissue; and

"(C) the woman has not been informed of the identity of any such individuals."

"(2) ADDITIONAL STATEMENT.—In research carried out under subsection (a), human fetal tissue may be used only if the attending physician with respect to obtaining the tissue from the woman involved makes a statement, made in writing and signed by the physician, declaring that—

"(A) in the case of tissue obtained pursuant to an induced abortion—

"(i) the consent of the woman for the abortion was obtained prior to requesting or obtaining consent for the tissue to be used in such research; and

"(ii) no alteration of the timing, method, or procedures used to terminate the pregnancy was made solely for the purposes of obtaining the tissue;

"(B) the tissue has been donated by the woman in accordance with paragraph (1); and

"(C) full disclosure has been provided to the woman with regard to—

"(i) such physician's interest, if any, in the research to be conducted with the tissue; and

"(ii) any known medical risks to the woman or risks to her privacy that might be associated with the donation of the tissue and that are in addition to risks of such type that are associated with the woman's medical care."

"(c) INFORMED CONSENT OF RESEARCHER AND DONEE.—In research carried out under subsection (a), human fetal tissue may be used only if the individual with the principal responsibility for conducting the research involved makes a statement, made in writing and signed by the individual, declaring that the individual—

"(1) is aware that—

"(A) the tissue is human fetal tissue;

"(B) the tissue may have been obtained pursuant to a spontaneous or induced abortion or subsequent to a stillbirth; and

"(C) the tissue was donated for research purposes;

"(2) has provided such information to other individuals with responsibilities regarding the research;

"(3) will require, prior to obtaining the consent of an individual to be a recipient of a transplantation of the tissue, written acknowledgment of receipt of such information by such recipient; and

"(4) has had no part in any decisions as to the timing, method, or procedures used to terminate the pregnancy made solely for the purposes of the research."

"(d) AVAILABILITY OF STATEMENTS FOR AUDIT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In research carried out under subsection (a), human fetal tissue may be used only if the head of the agency or other entity conducting the research involved certifies to the Secretary that the statements required under subsections (a)(3), (b)(2), and (c) will be available for audit by the Secretary."

"(2) CONFIDENTIALITY OF AUDIT.—Any audit conducted by the Secretary pursuant to paragraph (1) shall be conducted in a confidential manner to protect the privacy rights of the individuals and entities involved in such research, including such individuals and entities involved in the donation, transfer, receipt, or transplantation of human fetal tissue. With respect to any material or information obtained pursuant to such audit, the Secretary shall—

"(A) use such material or information only for the purposes of verifying compliance with the requirements of this section;

"(B) not disclose or publish such material or information, except where required by Federal law, in which case such material or information shall be coded in a manner such that the identities of such individuals and entities are protected; and

"(C) not maintain such material or information after completion of such audit, except where necessary for the purposes of such audit."

"(e) APPLICABILITY OF STATE AND LOCAL LAW.—

"(1) RESEARCH CONDUCTED BY RECIPIENTS OF ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary may not provide support for research under subsection (a) conduct the research in accordance with applicable State and local law."

"(2) RESEARCH CONDUCTED BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary may conduct research under subsection (a) only in accordance with applicable State and local law."

"(f) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, the term 'human fetal tissue' means tissue or cells obtained from a dead human embryo or fetus after a spontaneous or induced abortion, or after a stillbirth."

SEC. 112. PURCHASE OF HUMAN FETAL TISSUE; SOLICITATION OR ACCEPTANCE OF TISSUE AS DIRECTED DONATION FOR USE IN TRANSPLANTATION.

Part G of title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by section 111 of this Act, is amended by inserting after section 498A the following new section:

"PROHIBITIONS REGARDING HUMAN FETAL TISSUE

"SEC. 498B. (a) PURCHASE OF TISSUE.—It shall be unlawful for any person to knowingly acquire, receive, or otherwise transfer any human fetal tissue for valuable consideration if the transfer affects interstate commerce."

"(b) SOLICITATION OR ACCEPTANCE OF TISSUE AS DIRECTED DONATION FOR USE IN TRANSPLANTATION.—It shall be unlawful for any person to solicit or knowingly acquire, receive, or accept a donation of human fetal tissue for the purpose of transplantation of such tissue into another person if the donation affects interstate commerce, the tissue will be or is obtained pursuant to an induced abortion, and—

"(1) the donation will be or is made pursuant to a promise to the donating individual that the donated tissue will be transplanted into a recipient specified by such individual;

"(2) the donated tissue will be transplanted into a relative of the donating individual; or

"(3) the person who solicits or knowingly acquires, receives, or accepts the donation has provided valuable consideration for the costs associated with such abortion.

"(c) CRIMINAL PENALTIES FOR VIOLATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Any person who violates subsection (a) or (b) shall be fined in accordance with title 18, United States Code, subject to paragraph (2), or imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(2) PENALTIES APPLICABLE TO PERSONS RECEIVING CONSIDERATION.—With respect to the imposition of a fine under paragraph (1), if the person involved violates subsection (a) or (b)(3), a fine shall be imposed in an amount not less than twice the amount of the valuable consideration received.

"(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

"(1) The term 'human fetal tissue' has the meaning given such term in section 498A(f).

"(2) The term 'interstate commerce' has the meaning given such term in section 201(b) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

"(3) The term 'valuable consideration' does not include reasonable payments associated with the transportation, implantation, processing, preservation, quality control, or storage of human fetal tissue."

SEC. 113. NULLIFICATION OF MORATORIUM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (c), no official of the executive branch may impose a policy that the Department of Health and Human Services is prohibited from conducting or supporting any research on the transplantation of human fetal tissue for therapeutic purposes. Such research shall be carried out in accordance with section 498A of the Public Health Service Act (as added by section 111 of this Act), without regard to any such policy that may have been in effect prior to the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) PROHIBITION AGAINST WITHHOLDING OF FUNDS IN CASES OF TECHNICAL AND SCIENTIFIC MERIT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any proposal for research on the transplantation of human fetal tissue for therapeutic purposes, the Secretary of Health and Human Services may not withhold funds for the research if—

(A) the research has been approved for purposes of section 492A(a) of the Public Health Service Act (as added by section 101 of this Act);

(B) the research will be carried out in accordance with section 498A of such Act (as added by section 111 of this Act); and

(C) there are reasonable assurances that the research will not utilize any human fetal tissue that has been obtained in violation of section 498B(a) of such Act (as added by section 112 of this Act).

(2) STANDING APPROVAL REGARDING ETHICAL STATUS.—In the case of any proposal for research on the transplantation of human fetal tissue for therapeutic purposes, the issuance in December 1988 of the Report of the Human Fetal Tissue Transplantation Research Panel shall be deemed to be a report—

(A) issued by an ethics advisory board pursuant to section 492A(b)(4)(B)(ii) of the Public Health Service Act (as added by section 101 of this Act); and

(B) finding, on a basis that is neither arbitrary nor capricious, that there are no ethical grounds for withholding funds for the research.

(c) AUTHORITY FOR WITHHOLDING FUNDS FROM RESEARCH.—In the case of any research on the transplantation of human fetal tissue for therapeutic purposes, the Secretary of Health and Human Services may withhold funds for the research if any of the conditions specified in any of subparagraphs (A) through (C) of subsection (b)(1) are not met with respect to the research.

(d) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, the term "human fetal tissue" has the meaning given such term in section 498A(f) of the Public Health Service Act (as added by section 111 of this Act).

SEC. 114. REPORT BY GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE ON ADEQUACY OF REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—With respect to research on the transplantation of human fetal tissue for therapeutic purposes, the Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct an audit for the purpose of determining—

(1) whether and to what extent such research conducted or supported by the Secretary of Health and Human Services has been conducted in accordance with section 498A of the Public Health Service Act (as added by section 111 of this Act); and

(2) whether and to what extent there have been violations of section 498B of such Act (as added by section 112 of this Act).

(b) REPORT.—Not later than May 19, 1995, the Comptroller General of the United States shall complete the audit required in subsection (a) and submit to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, a report describing the findings made pursuant to the audit.

PART III—MISCELLANEOUS REPEALS

SEC. 121. REPEALS.

(a) CERTAIN BIOMEDICAL ETHICS BOARD.—Title III of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 241 et seq.) is amended by striking part J.

(b) OTHER REPEALS.—Part G of title IV of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 289 et seq.) is amended—

(1) in section 498, by striking subsection (c); and

(2) by striking section 499; and

(3) by redesignating section 499A as section 499.

(c) NULLIFICATION OF CERTAIN REGULATION.—The provisions of section 204(d) of part 46 of title 45 of the Code of Federal Regulations (45 CFR 46.204(d)) shall not have any legal effect.

Subtitle B—Clinical Research Equity Regarding Women and Minorities

PART I—WOMEN AND MINORITIES AS SUBJECTS IN CLINICAL RESEARCH

SEC. 131. REQUIREMENT OF INCLUSION IN RESEARCH.

Part G of title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by section 101 of this Act, is amended by inserting after section 492A the following new section:

"INCLUSION OF WOMEN AND MINORITIES IN CLINICAL RESEARCH

"SEC. 492B. (a) In conducting or supporting clinical research for purposes of this title, the Director of NIH shall, subject to subsection (b), ensure that—

"(1) women are included as subjects in each project of such research; and

"(2) members of minority groups are included as subjects in such research.

"(b) The requirement established in subsection (a) regarding women and members of minority groups shall not apply to a project of clinical research if the inclusion, as subjects in the project, of women and members of minority groups, respectively—

"(1) is inappropriate with respect to the health of the subjects;

"(2) is inappropriate with respect to the purpose of the research; or

"(3) is inappropriate under such other circumstances as the Director of NIH may designate.

"(c) In the case of any project of clinical research in which women or members of minority groups will under subsection (a) be included as subjects in the research, the Director of NIH shall ensure that the project is designed and carried out in a manner sufficient to provide for a valid analysis of whether the variables being tested in the research affect women or members of minority groups, as the case may be, differently than other subjects in the research.

"(d)(1) The Director of NIH, in consultation with the Director of the Office of Research on Women's Health, shall establish guidelines regarding—

"(A) the circumstances under which the inclusion of women and minorities in projects of clinical research is inappropriate for purposes of subsection (b);

"(B) the manner in which such projects are required to be designed and carried out for purposes of subsection (c), including a specification of the circumstances in which the requirement of such subsection does not apply on the basis of impracticability; and

"(C) the conduct of outreach programs for the recruitment of women and members of minority groups as subjects in such research.

"(2) With respect to the circumstances under which the inclusion of women or members of minority groups (as the case may be) as subjects in clinical research is inappropriate for purposes of subsection (b), the guidelines established under paragraph (1)(A)—

"(A) shall provide that the costs of such inclusion in a project of clinical research is not a permissible consideration in determining whether such inclusion is inappropriate unless the data of comparable quality regarding women or members of minority groups, respectively, that would be obtained in such project in the event that such inclusion were required will be obtained through other means; and

"(B) may provide that such inclusion in a project of clinical research is not required if there is substantial scientific data demonstrating that there is no significant difference between—

"(i) the effects that the variables to be studied in the project have on women or members of minority groups, respectively; and

"(ii) the effects that the variables have on the individuals who would serve as subjects in the project in the event that such inclusion were not required.

"(3) The guidelines required in paragraph (1) shall be established and published in the Federal Register not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of the National Institutes of Health Revitalization Act of 1993.

"(4) For fiscal year 1994 and subsequent fiscal years, the Director of NIH may not approve any proposal of clinical research to be conducted or supported by any agency of the National Institutes of Health unless the proposal specifies the manner in which the research will comply with subsection (a).

"(e) The advisory council of each national research institute shall annually submit to the Director of NIH and the Director of the institute involved a report describing the manner in which the agency has complied with subsection (a)."

SEC. 132. PEER REVIEW.

Section 492 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 289a) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c)(1) In technical and scientific peer review under this section of proposals for clinical research, the consideration of any such proposal (including the initial consideration) shall, except as provided in paragraph (2), include an evaluation of the technical and scientific merit of the proposal regarding compliance with section 492B(a).

"(2) Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any proposal for clinical research that, pursuant to subsection (b) of section 492B, is not subject to the requirement of subsection (a) of such section regarding the inclusion of women and members of minority groups as subjects in clinical research."

SEC. 133. APPLICABILITY TO CURRENT PROJECTS.

Section 492B of the Public Health Service Act, as added by section 131 of this Act, shall not apply with respect to projects of clinical research for which initial funding was provided prior to the date of the enactment of this Act. With respect to the inclusion of women and minorities as subjects in clinical research conducted or supported by the National Institutes of Health, any policies of the Secretary of Health and Human Services regarding such inclusion that are in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act shall continue to apply to the projects referred to in the preceding sentence.

PART II—OFFICE OF RESEARCH ON WOMEN'S HEALTHSEC. 141. ESTABLISHMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by section 2 of Public Law 101-613, is amended—

(1) by redesignating section 486 as section 485A;

(2) by redesignating parts F through H as parts G through I, respectively; and

(3) by inserting after part E the following new part:

"PART F—RESEARCH ON WOMEN'S HEALTH"SEC. 486. OFFICE OF RESEARCH ON WOMEN'S HEALTH.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established within the Office of the Director of NIH an office to be known as the Office of Research on Women's Health (in this part referred to as the 'Office'). The Office shall be headed by a director, who shall be appointed by the Director of NIH.

"(b) PURPOSE.—The Director of the Office shall—

"(1) identify projects of research on women's health that should be conducted or supported by the national research institutes;

"(2) identify multidisciplinary research relating to research on women's health that should be so conducted or supported;

"(3) carry out paragraphs (1) and (2) with respect to the aging process in women, with priority given to menopause;

"(4) promote coordination and collaboration among entities conducting research identified under any of paragraphs (1) through (3);

"(5) encourage the conduct of such research by entities receiving funds from the national research institutes;

"(6) recommend an agenda for conducting and supporting such research;

"(7) promote the sufficient allocation of the resources of the national research institutes for conducting and supporting such research;

"(8) assist in the administration of section 492B with respect to the inclusion of women as subjects in clinical research; and

"(9) prepare the report required in section 486B.

"(c) COORDINATING COMMITTEE.—

"(1) In carrying out subsection (b), the Director of the Office shall establish a committee to be known as the Coordinating Committee on Research on Women's Health (hereafter in this subsection referred to as the 'Coordinating Committee').

"(2) The Coordinating Committee shall be composed of the Directors of the national research institutes (or the designees of the Directors).

"(3) The Director of the Office shall serve as the chair of the Coordinating Committee.

"(4) With respect to research on women's health, the Coordinating Committee shall assist the Director of the Office in—

"(A) identifying the need for such research, and making an estimate each fiscal year of the funds needed to adequately support the research;

"(B) identifying needs regarding the coordination of research activities, including intramural and extramural multidisciplinary activities;

"(C) supporting the development of methodologies to determine the circumstances in which obtaining data specific to women (including data relating to the age of women and the membership of women in ethnic or racial groups) is an appropriate function of clinical trials of treatments and therapies;

"(D) supporting the development and expansion of clinical trials of treatments and therapies for which obtaining such data has been determined to be an appropriate function; and

"(E) encouraging the national research institutes to conduct and support such research, including such clinical trials.

"(d) ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—

"(1) In carrying out subsection (b), the Director of the Office shall establish an advisory committee to be known as the Advisory Committee on Research on Women's Health (hereafter in this subsection referred to as the 'Advisory Committee').

"(2)(A) The Advisory Committee shall be composed of no fewer than 12, and not more than 18 individuals, who are not officers or employees of the Federal Government. The Director of the Office shall make appointments to the Advisory Committee from among physicians, practitioners, scientists, and other health professionals, whose clinical practice, research specialization, or professional expertise includes a significant focus on research on women's health. A majority of the members of the Advisory Committee shall be women.

"(B) Members of the Advisory Committee shall receive compensation for each day engaged in carrying out the duties of the Committee, including time engaged in traveling for purposes of such duties. Such compensation may not be provided in an amount in excess of the maximum rate of basic pay payable for GS-18 of the General Schedule.

"(3) The Director of the Office shall serve as the chair of the Advisory Committee.

"(4) The Advisory Committee shall—

"(A) advise the Director of the Office on appropriate research activities to be undertaken by the national research institutes with respect to—

"(i) research on women's health;

"(ii) research on gender differences in clinical drug trials, including responses to pharmacological drugs;

"(iii) research on gender differences in disease etiology, course, and treatment;

"(iv) research on obstetrical and gynecological health conditions, diseases, and treatments; and

"(v) research on women's health conditions which require a multidisciplinary approach;

"(B) report to the Director of the Office on such research;

"(C) provide recommendations to such Director regarding activities of the Office (including recommendations on the development of the methodologies described in subsection (c)(4)(C) and recommendations on priorities in carrying out research described in subparagraph (A)); and

"(D) assist in monitoring compliance with section 492B regarding the inclusion of women in clinical research.

"(5)(A) The Advisory Committee shall prepare a biennial report describing the activities of the Committee, including findings made by the Committee regarding—

"(i) compliance with section 492B;

"(ii) the extent of expenditures made for research on women's health by the agencies of the National Institutes of Health; and

"(iii) the level of funding needed for such research.

"(B) The report required in subparagraph (A) shall be submitted to the Director of NIH for inclusion in the report required in section 403.

"(e) REPRESENTATION OF WOMEN AMONG RESEARCHERS.—The Secretary, acting through the Assistant Secretary for Personnel and in collaboration with the Director of the Office, shall determine the extent to which women are represented among senior physicians and scientists of the national research institutes and among physicians and scientists conducting research with funds provided by such institutes, and as appropriate, carry out activities to increase the extent of such representation.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this part:

"(1) The term 'women's health conditions', with respect to women of all age, ethnic, and racial groups, means all diseases, disorders, and conditions (including with respect to mental health)—

"(A) unique to, more serious, or more prevalent in women;

"(B) for which the factors of medical risk or types of medical intervention are different for women, or for which it is unknown whether such factors or types are different for women; or

"(C) with respect to which there has been insufficient clinical research involving women as subjects or insufficient clinical data on women.

"(2) The term 'research on women's health' means research on women's health conditions, including research on preventing such conditions.

"SEC. 486A. NATIONAL DATA SYSTEM AND CLEARINGHOUSE ON RESEARCH ON WOMEN'S HEALTH.

"(a) DATA SYSTEM.—

"(1) The Director of NIH, in consultation with the Director of the Office, shall establish a data system for the collection, storage, analysis, retrieval, and dissemination of information regarding research on women's health that is conducted or supported by the national research institutes. Information from the data system shall be available through information systems available to health care professionals and providers, researchers, and members of the public.

"(2) The data system established under paragraph (1) shall include a registry of clinical trials of experimental treatments that have been developed for research on women's health. Such registry shall include information on subject eligibility criteria, sex, age, ethnicity or race, and the location of the trial site or sites. Principal investigators of such clinical trials shall provide this information to the registry within 30 days after it is available. Once a trial has been completed, the principal investigator shall provide the registry with information pertaining to the results, including potential toxicities or adverse effects associated with the experimental treatment or treatments evaluated.

"(b) CLEARINGHOUSE.—The Director of NIH, in consultation with the Director of the Office and with the National Library of Medicine, shall establish, maintain, and operate a program to provide information on research and prevention activities of the national research institutes that relate to research on women's health.

"SEC. 486B. BIENNIAL REPORT.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—With respect to research on women's health, the Director of the Office shall, not later than February 1, 1994, and biennially thereafter, prepare a report—

"(1) describing and evaluating the progress made during the preceding 2 fiscal years in research and treatment conducted or supported by the National Institutes of Health;

"(2) describing and analyzing the professional status of women physicians and scientists of such Institutes, including the identification of problems and barriers regarding advancements;

"(3) summarizing and analyzing expenditures made by the agencies of such Institutes (and by such Office) during the preceding 2 fiscal years; and

"(4) making such recommendations for legislative and administrative initiatives as the Director of the Office determines to be appropriate.

"(b) INCLUSION IN BIENNIAL REPORT OF DIRECTOR OF NIH.—The Director of the Office shall submit each report prepared under subsection (a) to the Director of NIH for inclusion in the report submitted to the President and the Congress under section 403."

(b) REQUIREMENT OF SUFFICIENT ALLOCATION OF RESOURCES OF INSTITUTES.—Section 402(b) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 282(b)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (10), by striking "and" after the semicolon at the end;

(2) in paragraph (11), by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (11) the following new paragraph:

"(12) after consultation with the Director of the Office of Research on Women's Health, shall ensure that resources of the National Institutes of Health are sufficiently allocated for projects of research on women's health that are identified under section 486(b)."

PART III—OFFICE OF RESEARCH ON MINORITY HEALTH

SEC. 151. ESTABLISHMENT.

Part A of title IV of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 281 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"OFFICE OF RESEARCH ON MINORITY HEALTH

"SEC. 403A. (a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established within the Office of the Director of NIH an office to be known as the Office of Research on Minority Health (in this section referred to as the 'Office'). The Office shall be headed by a director, who shall be appointed by the Director of NIH.

"(b) PURPOSE.—The Director of the Office shall—

"(1) identify projects of research on minority health that should be conducted or supported by the national research institutes;

"(2) identify multidisciplinary research relating to research on minority health that should be so conducted or supported;

"(3) promote coordination and collaboration among entities conducting research identified under paragraph (1) or (2);

"(4) encourage the conduct of such research by entities receiving funds from the national research institutes;

"(5) recommend an agenda for conducting and supporting such research;

"(6) promote the sufficient allocation of the resources of the national research institutes for conducting and supporting such research; and

"(7) assist in the administration of section 492B with respect to the inclusion of members of minority groups as subjects in clinical research."

Subtitle C—Scientific Integrity

SEC. 161. ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE OF SCIENTIFIC INTEGRITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 493 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 289b) is amended to read as follows:

"OFFICE OF SCIENTIFIC INTEGRITY

"SEC. 493. (a) ESTABLISHMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall establish an office to be known as the Office of Scientific Integrity (hereafter referred to in this section as the 'Office'), which shall be established as an independent entity in the Department of Health and Human Services.

"(2) DIRECTOR.—The Office shall be headed by a Director, who shall be appointed by the Secretary, be experienced and specially trained in the conduct of research, and have experience in the conduct of investigations of scientific misconduct. The Secretary shall carry out this section acting through the Director of the Office. The Director shall report to the Secretary.

"(b) EXISTENCE OF ADMINISTRATIVE PROCESSES AS CONDITION OF FUNDING FOR RESEARCH.—The Secretary shall by regulation require that each entity that applies for a grant, contract, or cooperative agreement under this Act for any project or program that involves the conduct of biomedical or behavioral research submit in or with its application for such grant, contract, or cooperative agreement assurances satisfactory to the Secretary that such entity—

"(1) has established (in accordance with regulations which the Secretary shall prescribe) an administrative process to review reports of scientific misconduct in connection with biomedical and behavioral research conducted at or sponsored by such entity; and

"(2) will report to the Director any investigation of alleged scientific misconduct in connection with projects for which funds have been made available under this Act that appears substantial.

"(c) PROCESS FOR RESPONSE OF DIRECTOR.—The Secretary shall establish by regulation a process to be followed by the Director for the prompt and appropriate—

"(1) response to information provided to the Director respecting scientific misconduct in connection with projects for which funds have been made available under this Act;

"(2) receipt of reports by the Director of such information from recipients of funds under this Act;

"(3) conduct of investigations, when appropriate; and

"(4) taking of other actions, including appropriate remedies, with respect to such misconduct.

"(d) MONITORING BY DIRECTOR.—The Secretary shall by regulation establish procedures for the Director to monitor administrative processes and investigations that have been established or carried out under this section.

"(e) EFFECT ON PRESENT INVESTIGATIONS.—Nothing in this section shall affect investigations which have been or will be commenced prior to the promulgation of final regulations under this section."

(b) ESTABLISHMENT OF DEFINITION OF SCIENTIFIC MISCONDUCT.—Not later than 90 days after the date on which the report required under section 152(d) is submitted to the Secretary of Health and Human Services, such Secretary shall by regulation establish a definition for the term "scientific misconduct" for purposes of section 493 of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by subsection (a) of this section.

SEC. 162. COMMISSION ON SCIENTIFIC INTEGRITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall establish a commission to be known as the Commission on Scientific Integrity (in this section referred to as the "Commission").

(b) DUTIES.—The Commission shall develop recommendations for the Secretary of Health and Human Services on the administration of section 493 of the Public Health Service Act (as amended and added by section 161 of this Act).

(c) COMPOSITION.—The Commission shall be composed of 12 members to be appointed by the Secretary of Health and Human Services from among individuals who are not officers or employees of the United States. Of the members appointed to the Commission—

(1) three shall be scientists with substantial accomplishments in biomedical or behavioral research;

(2) three shall be individuals with experience in investigating allegations of misconduct with respect to scientific research;

(3) three shall be representatives of institutions of higher education at which biomedical or behavioral research is conducted; and

(4) three shall be individuals who are not described in paragraphs (1), (2), or (3), at least one of whom shall be an attorney and at least one of whom shall be an ethicist.

(d) COMPENSATION.—Members of the Commission shall receive compensation for each day engaged in carrying out the duties of the Commission, including time engaged in traveling for purposes of such duties. Such compensation may not be provided in an amount in excess of the maximum rate of basic pay payable for GS-18 of the General Schedule.

(e) REPORT.—Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Commission shall prepare and submit to the Secretary of Health and Human Services, the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, a report containing the recommendations developed under subsection (b).

SEC. 163. PROTECTION OF WHISTLEBLOWERS.

Section 493 of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by section 161 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(f) PROTECTION OF WHISTLEBLOWERS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any entity required to establish administrative processes under subsection (b), the Secretary shall by regulation establish standards for preventing, and for responding to the occurrence of retaliation by such entity, its officials or agents, against an employee in the terms and conditions of employment in response to the employee having in good faith—

"(A) made an allegation that the entity, its officials or agents, has engaged in or failed to adequately respond to an allegation of scientific misconduct; or

"(B) cooperated with an investigation of such an allegation.

"(2) MONITORING BY SECRETARY.—The Secretary shall establish by regulation procedures for the Director to monitor the implementation of the standards established by an entity under paragraph (1) for the purpose of determining whether the procedures have been established, and are being utilized, in accordance with the standards established under such paragraph.

"(3) NONCOMPLIANCE.—The Secretary shall by regulation establish remedies for non-compliance by an entity, its officials or agents, which has engaged in retaliation in violation of the standards established under paragraph (1). Such remedies may include termination of funding provided by the Secretary for such project or recovery of funding being provided by the Secretary for such project, or other actions as appropriate.

"(4) FINAL RULE FOR REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue a final rule for the regulations required in paragraph (1) not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of the National Institutes of Health Revitalization Act of 1993.

"(5) REQUIRED AGREEMENTS.—For any fiscal year beginning after the date on which the regulations required in paragraph (1) are issued, the Secretary may not provide a grant, cooperative agreement, or contract under this Act for biomedical or behavioral research unless the entity seeking such financial assistance agrees that the entity—

"(A) will maintain the procedures described in the regulations; and

"(B) will otherwise be subject to the regulations."

SEC. 164. REQUIREMENT OF REGULATIONS REGARDING PROTECTION AGAINST FINANCIAL CONFLICTS OF INTEREST IN CERTAIN PROJECTS OF RESEARCH.

Part H of title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as redesignated by section 141(a)(2) of this Act, is amended by inserting after section 493 the following new section:

"PROTECTION AGAINST FINANCIAL CONFLICTS OF INTEREST IN CERTAIN PROJECTS OF RESEARCH

"SEC. 493A. (a) ISSUANCE OF REGULATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall define by regulation, the specific circumstances that constitute the existence of a financial interest in a project on the part of an entity or individual that will, or may be reasonably expected to, create a bias in favor of obtaining results in such project that are consistent with such financial interest. Such definition shall apply uniformly to each entity or individual conducting a research project under this Act. In the case of any entity or individual receiving assistance from the Secretary for a project of research described in paragraph (2), the Secretary shall by regulation establish standards for responding to, including managing, reducing, or eliminating, the existence of such a financial interest. The entity may adopt individualized procedures for implementing the standards.

"(2) RELEVANT PROJECTS.—A project of research referred to in paragraph (1) is a project of clinical research whose purpose is to evaluate the safety or effectiveness of a drug, medical device, or treatment and for which such entity is receiving assistance from the Secretary.

"(3) IDENTIFYING AND REPORTING TO THE DIRECTOR.—The Secretary shall ensure that the standards established under paragraph (1) specify that as a condition of receiving assistance from the Secretary for the project involved, an entity described in such subsection is required—

"(A) to have in effect at the time the entity applies for the assistance and throughout the period during which the assistance is received, a process for identifying such financial interests as defined in paragraph (1) that exist regarding the project; and

"(B) to report to the Director such financial interest as defined in paragraph (1) identified by the entity and how any such financial interest identified by the entity will be managed or eliminated such that the project in question will be protected from bias that may stem from such financial interest.

"(4) MONITORING OF PROCESS.—The Secretary shall monitor the establishment and conduct of the process established by an entity pursuant to paragraph (1).

"(5) RESPONSE.—In any case in which the Secretary determines that an entity has failed to comply with paragraph (3) regarding a project of research described in paragraph (1), the Secretary—

"(A) shall require that, as a condition of receiving assistance, the entity disclose the existence of a financial interest as defined in paragraph (1) in each public presentation of the results of such project; and

"(B) may take such other actions as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(6) DEFINITION.—As used in this section:

"(A) The term 'financial interest' includes the receipt of consulting fees or honoraria and the ownership of stock or equity.

"(B) The term 'assistance', with respect to conducting a project of research, means a grant, contract, or cooperative agreement.

"(b) FINAL RULE FOR REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue a final rule for the regulations required in subsection (a) not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of the National Institutes of Health Revitalization Act of 1993."

SEC. 165. EFFECTIVE DATES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this subtitle shall become effective on the date that occurs 180 days after the date on which the final rule required under section 493(f)(4) of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by sections 161 and 163, is published in the Federal Register.

(b) AGREEMENTS AS A CONDITION OF FUNDING.—The requirements of subsection (f)(5) of section 493 of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by sections 161 and 163, with respect to agreements as a condition of funding shall not be effective in the case of projects of research for which initial funding under the Public Health Service Act was provided prior to the effective date described in subsection (a).

TITLE II—NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH IN GENERAL

SEC. 201. HEALTH PROMOTION RESEARCH DISSEMINATION.

Section 402(f) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 282(f)) is amended by striking "other public and private entities." and all that follows through the end and inserting "other public and private entities, including elementary, secondary, and post-secondary schools. The Associate Director shall—

"(1) annually review the efficacy of existing policies and techniques used by the national research institutes to disseminate the results of disease prevention and behavioral research programs;

"(2) recommend, coordinate, and oversee the modification or reconstruction of such policies and techniques to ensure maximum dissemination, using advanced technologies to the maximum extent practicable, of research results to such entities; and

"(3) annually prepare and submit to the Director of NIH a report concerning the prevention and dissemination activities undertaken by the Associate Director, including—

"(A) a summary of the Associate Director's review of existing dissemination policies and techniques together with a detailed statement concerning any modification or restructuring, or recommendations for modification or restructuring, of such policies and techniques; and

"(B) a detailed statement of the expenditures made for the prevention and dissemination activities reported on and the personnel used in connection with such activities."

SEC. 202. PROGRAMS FOR INCREASED SUPPORT REGARDING CERTAIN STATES AND RESEARCHERS.

Section 402 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 282) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(g)(1)(A) In the case of entities described in subparagraph (B), the Director of NIH, acting through the Director of the National Center for Research Resources, shall establish a program to enhance the competitiveness of such entities in obtaining funds from the national research institutes for conducting biomedical and behavioral research.

"(B) The entities referred to in subparagraph (A) are entities that conduct biomedical and behavioral research and are located in a State in which the aggregate success rate for applications to the national research institutes for assistance for such research by the entities in the State has historically constituted a low success rate of obtaining such funds, relative to such aggregate rate for such entities in other States.

"(C) With respect to enhancing competitiveness for purposes of subparagraph (A), the Director of NIH, in carrying out the program established under such subparagraph, may—

"(i) provide technical assistance to the entities involved, including technical assistance in the preparation of applications for obtaining funds from the national research institutes;

"(ii) assist the entities in developing a plan for biomedical or behavioral research proposals; and

"(iii) assist the entities in implementing such plan.

"(2) The Director of NIH shall establish a program of supporting projects of biomedical or behavioral research whose principal researchers are individuals who have not previously served as the principal researchers of such projects supported by the Director."

SEC. 203. CHILDREN'S VACCINE INITIATIVE.

Part A of title IV of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 281 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"CHILDREN'S VACCINE INITIATIVE

"SEC. 404. (a) DEVELOPMENT OF NEW VACCINES.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Director of the National Vaccine Program under title XXI and acting through the Directors of the National Institute for Allergy and Infectious Diseases, the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development, the National Institute for Aging, and other public and private programs, shall carry out activities, which shall be consistent with the global Children's Vaccine Initiative, to develop affordable new and improved vaccines to be used in the United States and in the developing world that will increase the efficacy and efficiency of the prevention of infectious diseases. In carrying out such activities, the Secretary shall, to the extent practicable, develop and make available vaccines that require fewer contacts to deliver, that can be given early in life, that provide long lasting protection, that obviate refrigeration, needles and syringes, and that protect against a larger number of diseases.

"(b) REPORT.—In the report required in section 2104, the Secretary, acting through the Director of the National Vaccine Program under title XXI, shall include information with respect to activities and the progress made in implementing the provisions of this section and achieving its goals.

"(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—In addition to any other amounts authorized to be appropriated for activities of the type described in this section, there are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 and 1996."

SEC. 204. PLAN FOR USE OF ANIMALS IN RESEARCH.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part A of title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by section 203 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"PLAN FOR USE OF ANIMALS IN RESEARCH

"SEC. 404A. (a) The Director of NIH, after consultation with the committee established under subsection (e), shall prepare a plan—

"(1) for the National Institutes of Health to conduct or support research into—

"(A) methods of biomedical research and experimentation that do not require the use of animals;

"(B) methods of such research and experimentation that reduce the number of animals used in such research; and

"(C) methods of such research and experimentation that produce less pain and distress in such animals;

"(2) for establishing the validity and reliability of the methods described in paragraph (1);

"(3) for encouraging the acceptance by the scientific community of such methods that have been found to be valid and reliable; and

"(4) for training scientists in the use of such methods that have been found to be valid and reliable.

"(b) Not later than October 1, 1993, the Director of NIH shall submit to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, the plan required in subsection (a) and shall begin implementation of the plan.

"(c) The Director of NIH shall periodically review, and as appropriate, make revisions in the plan required under subsection (a). A description of any revision made in the plan shall be included in the first biennial report under section 403 that is submitted after the revision is made.

"(d) The Director of NIH shall take such actions as may be appropriate to convey to scientists and others who use animals in biomedical or behavioral research or experimentation information respecting the methods found to be valid and reliable under subsection (a)(2).

"(e)(1) The Director of NIH shall establish within the National Institutes of Health a committee to be known as the Interagency Coordinating Committee on the Use of Animals in Research (hereafter in this subsection referred to as the 'Committee').

"(2) The Committee shall provide advice to the Director of NIH on the preparation of the plan required in subsection (a).

"(3) The Committee shall be composed of—

"(A) the Directors of each of the national research institutes and the Director of the Center for Research Resources (or the designees of such Directors); and

"(B) representatives of the Environmental Protection Agency, the Food and Drug Administration, the Consumer Product Safety Commission, the National Science Foundation, and such additional agencies as the Director of NIH determines to be appropriate."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 4 of the Health Research Extension Act of 1985 (Public Law 99-158; 99 Stat. 880) is repealed.

SEC. 205. INCREASED PARTICIPATION OF WOMEN AND MEMBERS OF UNDERREPRESENTED MINORITIES IN FIELDS OF BIOMEDICAL AND BEHAVIORAL RESEARCH.

Section 402 of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by section 202 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(h) The Secretary, acting through the Director of NIH and the Directors of the agencies of the National Institutes of Health, may conduct and support programs for research, research training, recruitment, and other activities to provide for an increase in the number of women and members of underrepresented minority groups in the fields of biomedical and behavioral research."

SEC. 206. REQUIREMENTS REGARDING SURVEYS OF SEXUAL BEHAVIOR.

Part A of title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by section 204 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"REQUIREMENTS REGARDING SURVEYS OF SEXUAL BEHAVIOR

"SEC. 404B. With respect to any survey of human sexual behavior proposed to be conducted or supported through the National Institutes of Health, the survey may not be carried out unless—

"(1) the proposal has undergone review in accordance with any applicable requirements of sections 491 and 492; and

"(2) the Secretary, in accordance with section 492A, makes a determination that the information expected to be obtained through the survey will assist—

"(A) in reducing the incidence of sexually transmitted diseases, the incidence of infection with the human immunodeficiency virus, or the incidence of any other infectious disease; or

"(B) in improving reproductive health or other conditions of health."

SEC. 207. DISCRETIONARY FUND OF DIRECTOR OF NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH.

Section 402 of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by section 205 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(1)(1) There is established a fund, consisting of amounts appropriated under paragraph (3) and made available for the fund, for use by the Director of NIH to carry out the activities authorized in this Act for the National Institutes of Health. The purposes for which such fund may be expended include—

"(A) providing for research on matters that have not received significant funding relative to other matters, responding to new issues and scientific emergencies, and acting on research opportunities of high priority;

"(B) supporting research that is not exclusively within the authority of any single agency of such Institutes; and

"(C) purchasing or renting equipment and quarters for activities of such Institutes.

"(2) Not later than February 10 of each fiscal year, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, a report describing the activities undertaken and expenditures made under this section during the preceding fiscal year. The report may contain such comments of the Secretary regarding this section as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(3) For the purpose of carrying out this subsection, there are authorized to be appropriated $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 and 1996."

SEC. 208. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

(b) LITERACY REQUIREMENTS.—Section 402(e) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 282(e)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (3), by striking "and" at the end;

(2) in paragraph (4), by striking the period and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) ensure that, after January 1, 1994, at least one-half of all new or revised health education and promotion materials developed or funded by the National Institutes of Health is in a form that does not exceed a level of functional literacy, as defined in the National Literacy Act of 1991 (Public Law 102-73)."

(c) DAY CARE REGARDING CHILDREN OF EMPLOYEES.—Section 402 of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by section 207 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(1)(1) The Director of NIH may establish a program to provide day care service for the employees of the National Institutes of Health similar to those services provided by other Federal agencies (including the availability of day care service on a 24-hour-a-day basis).

"(2) Any day care provider at the National Institutes of Health shall establish a sliding scale of fees that takes into consideration the income and needs of the employee.

"(3) For purposes regarding the provision of day care service, the Director of NIH may enter into rental or lease purchase agreements."

TITLE III—GENERAL PROVISIONS RESPECTING NATIONAL RESEARCH INSTITUTES

SEC. 301. APPOINTMENT AND AUTHORITY OF DIRECTORS OF NATIONAL RESEARCH INSTITUTES.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF GENERAL AUTHORITY REGARDING DIRECT FUNDING.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 405(b)(2) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 284(b)(2)) is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (A), by striking "and" after the semicolon at the end;

(B) in subparagraph (B), by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(C) shall receive from the President and the Office of Management and Budget directly all funds appropriated by the Congress for obligation and expenditure by the Institute."

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 413(b)(9) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 285a-2(b)(9)) is amended—

(A) by striking "(A)" after "(9)"; and
(B) by striking "advisory council;" and all that follows and inserting "advisory council."

(b) APPOINTMENT AND DURATION OF TECHNICAL AND SCIENTIFIC PEER REVIEW GROUPS.—Section 405(c) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 284(c)) is amended—

(1) by amending paragraph (3) to read as follows:

"(3) may, in consultation with the advisory council for the Institute and with the approval of the Director of NIH—

"(A) establish technical and scientific peer review groups in addition to those appointed under section 402(b)(6); and

"(B) appoint the members of peer review groups established under subparagraph (A); and"; and

(2) by adding after and below paragraph (4) the following:

"The Federal Advisory Committee Act shall not apply to the duration of a peer review group appointed under paragraph (3)."

SEC. 302. PROGRAM OF RESEARCH ON OSTEOPOROSIS, PAGET'S DISEASE, AND RELATED BONE DISORDERS.

Part B of title IV of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 284 et seq.), as amended by section 121(b) of Public Law 102-321 (106 Stat. 358), is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"RESEARCH ON OSTEOPOROSIS, PAGET'S DISEASE, AND RELATED BONE DISORDERS

"SEC. 410. (a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Directors of the National Institute of Arthritis and Musculoskeletal and Skin Diseases, the National Institute on Aging, and the National Institute of Diabetes, Digestive and Kidney Diseases, shall expand and intensify the programs of such Institutes with respect to research and related activities concerning osteoporosis, Paget's disease, and related bone disorders.

"(b) COORDINATION.—The Directors referred to in subsection (a) shall jointly coordinate the programs referred to in such subsection and consult with the Arthritis and Musculoskeletal Diseases Interagency Coordinating Committee and the Interagency Task Force on Aging Research.

"(c) INFORMATION CLEARINGHOUSE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In order to assist in carrying out the purpose described in subsection (a), the Director of NIH shall provide for the establishment of an information clearinghouse on osteoporosis and related bone disorders to facilitate and enhance knowledge and understanding on the part of health professionals, patients, and the public through the effective dissemination of information.

"(2) ESTABLISHMENT THROUGH GRANT OR CONTRACT.—For the purpose of carrying out paragraph (1), the Director of NIH shall enter into a grant, cooperative agreement, or contract with a nonprofit private entity involved in activities regarding the prevention and control of osteoporosis and related bone disorders.

"(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For the purpose of carrying out this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 and 1996."

SEC. 303. ESTABLISHMENT OF INTERAGENCY PROGRAM FOR TRAUMA RESEARCH.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title XII of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300d et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following part:

"PART E—INTERAGENCY PROGRAM FOR TRAUMA RESEARCH

"SEC. 1251. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, acting through the Director of the National Institutes of Health (hereafter in this section referred to as the 'Director'), shall establish a comprehensive program of conducting basic and clinical research on trauma (hereafter in this section referred to as the 'Program'). The Program shall include research regarding the diagnosis, treatment, rehabilitation, and general management of trauma.

"(b) PLAN FOR PROGRAM.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Director, in consultation with the Trauma Research Interagency Coordinating Committee established under subsection (g), shall establish and implement a plan for carrying out the activities of the Program, including the activities described in subsection (d). All such activities shall be carried out in accordance with the plan. The plan shall be periodically reviewed, and revised as appropriate.

"(2) SUBMISSION TO CONGRESS.—Not later than June 1, 1993, the Director shall submit the plan required in paragraph (1) to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, together with an estimate of the funds needed for each of the fiscal years 1994 through 1996 to implement the plan.

"(c) PARTICIPATING AGENCIES; COORDINATION AND COLLABORATION.—The Director—

"(1) shall provide for the conduct of activities under the Program by the Directors of the agencies of the National Institutes of Health involved in research with respect to trauma;

"(2) shall ensure that the activities of the Program are coordinated among such agencies; and

"(3) shall, as appropriate, provide for collaboration among such agencies in carrying out such activities.

"(d) CERTAIN ACTIVITIES OF PROGRAM.—The Program shall include—

"(1) studies with respect to all phases of trauma care, including prehospital, resuscitation, surgical intervention, critical care, infection control, wound healing, nutritional care and support, and medical rehabilitation care;

"(2) basic and clinical research regarding the response of the body to trauma and the acute treatment and medical rehabilitation of individuals who are the victims of trauma; and

"(3) basic and clinical research regarding trauma care for pediatric and geriatric patients.

"(e) MECHANISMS OF SUPPORT.—In carrying out the Program, the Director, acting through the Directors of the agencies referred to in subsection (c)(1), may make grants to public and nonprofit entities, including designated trauma centers.

"(f) RESOURCES.—The Director shall assure the availability of appropriate resources to carry out the Program, including the plan established under subsection (b) (including the activities described in subsection (d)).

"(g) COORDINATING COMMITTEE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—There shall be established a Trauma Research Interagency Coordinating Committee (hereafter in this section referred to as the 'Coordinating Committee').

"(2) DUTIES.—The Coordinating Committee shall make recommendations regarding—

"(A) the activities of the Program to be carried out by each of the agencies represented on the Committee and the amount of funds needed by each of the agencies for such activities; and

"(B) effective collaboration among the agencies in carrying out the activities.

"(3) COMPOSITION.—The Coordinating Committee shall be composed of the Directors of each of the agencies that, under subsection (c), have responsibilities under the Program, and any other individuals who are practitioners in the trauma field as designated by the Director of the National Institutes of Health.

"(h) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

"(1) The term 'designated trauma center' has the meaning given such term in section 1231(l).

"(2) The term 'Director' means the Director of the National Institutes of Health.

"(3) The term 'trauma' means any serious injury that could result in loss of life or in significant disability and that would meet pre-hospital triage criteria for transport to a designated trauma center."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 402 of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by section 208(c) of this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(k) The Director of NIH shall carry out the program established in part E of title XII (relating to interagency research on trauma)."

TITLE IV—NATIONAL CANCER INSTITUTE

SEC. 401. EXPANSION AND INTENSIFICATION OF ACTIVITIES REGARDING BREAST CANCER.

Subpart 1 of part C of title IV of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 285 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"BREAST AND GYNECOLOGICAL CANCERS

"SEC. 417. (a) EXPANSION AND COORDINATION OF ACTIVITIES.—The Director of the Institute, in consultation with the National Cancer Advisory Board, shall expand, intensify, and coordinate the activities of the Institute with respect to research on breast cancer, ovarian cancer, and other cancers of the reproductive system of women.

"(b) COORDINATION WITH OTHER INSTITUTES.—The Director of the Institute shall coordinate the activities of the Director under subsection (a) with similar activities conducted by other national research institutes and agencies of the National Institutes of Health to the extent that such Institutes and agencies have responsibilities that are related to breast cancer and other cancers of the reproductive system of women.

"(c) PROGRAMS FOR BREAST CANCER.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In carrying out subsection (a), the Director of the Institute shall conduct or support research to expand the understanding of the cause of, and to find a cure for, breast cancer. Activities under such subsection shall provide for an expansion and intensification of the conduct and support of—

"(A) basic research concerning the etiology and causes of breast cancer;

"(B) clinical research and related activities concerning the causes, prevention, detection and treatment of breast cancer;

"(C) control programs with respect to breast cancer in accordance with section 412;

"(D) information and education programs with respect to breast cancer in accordance with section 413; and

"(E) research and demonstration centers with respect to breast cancer in accordance with section 414, including the development and operation of centers for breast cancer research to bring together basic and clinical, biomedical and behavioral scientists to conduct basic, clinical, epidemiological, psychosocial, prevention and treatment research and related activities on breast cancer.

Not less than six centers shall be operated under subparagraph (E). Activities of such centers should include supporting new and innovative research and training programs for new researchers. Such centers shall give priority to expediting the transfer of research advances to clinical applications.

"(2) IMPLEMENTATION OF PLAN FOR PROGRAMS.—

"(A) The Director of the Institute shall ensure that the research programs described in paragraph (1) are implemented in accordance with a plan for the programs. Such plan shall include comments and recommendations that the Director of the Institute considers appropriate, with due consideration provided to the professional judgment needs of the Institute as expressed in the annual budget estimate prepared in accordance with section 413(9). The Director of the Institute, in consultation with the National Cancer Advisory Board, shall periodically review and revise such plan.

"(B) Not later than May 1, 1993, the Director of the Institute shall submit a copy of the plan to the President's Cancer Panel, the Secretary and the Director of NIH.

"(C) The Director of the Institute shall submit any revisions of the plan to the President's Cancer Panel, the Secretary, and the Director of NIH.

"(D) The Secretary shall provide a copy of the plan submitted under subparagraph (A), and any revisions submitted under subparagraph (C), to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate.

"(d) OTHER CANCERS.—In carrying out subsection (a), the Director of the Institute shall conduct or support research on ovarian cancer and other cancers of the reproductive system of women. Activities under such subsection shall provide for the conduct and support of—

"(1) basic research concerning the etiology and causes of ovarian cancer and other cancers of the reproductive system of women;

"(2) clinical research and related activities into the causes, prevention, detection and treatment of ovarian cancer and other cancers of the reproductive system of women;

"(3) control programs with respect to ovarian cancer and other cancers of the reproductive system of women in accordance with section 412;

"(4) information and education programs with respect to ovarian cancer and other cancers of the reproductive system of women in accordance with section 413; and

"(5) research and demonstration centers with respect to ovarian cancer and cancers of the reproductive system in accordance with section 414.

"(e) REPORT.—The Director of the Institute shall prepare, for inclusion in the biennial report submitted under section 407, a report that describes the activities of the National Cancer Institute under the research programs referred to in subsection (a), that shall include—

"(1) a description of the research plan with respect to breast cancer prepared under subsection (c);

"(2) an assessment of the development, revision, and implementation of such plan;

"(3) a description and evaluation of the progress made, during the period for which such report is prepared, in the research programs on breast cancer and cancers of the reproductive system of women;

"(4) a summary and analysis of expenditures made, during the period for which such report is made, for activities with respect to breast cancer and cancers of the reproductive system of women conducted and supported by the National Institutes of Health; and

"(5) such comments and recommendations as the Director considers appropriate."

SEC. 402. EXPANSION AND INTENSIFICATION OF ACTIVITIES REGARDING PROSTATE CANCER.

Subpart 1 of part C of title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by section 401 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"PROSTATE CANCER

"SEC. 417A. (a) EXPANSION AND COORDINATION OF ACTIVITIES.—The Director of the Institute, in consultation with the National Cancer Advisory Board, shall expand, intensify, and coordinate the activities of the Institute with respect to research on prostate cancer.

"(b) COORDINATION WITH OTHER INSTITUTES.—The Director of the Institute shall coordinate the activities of the Director under subsection (a) with similar activities conducted by other national research institutes and agencies of the National Institutes of Health to the extent that such Institutes and agencies have responsibilities that are related to prostate cancer.

"(c) PROGRAMS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In carrying out subsection (a), the Director of the Institute shall conduct or support research to expand the understanding of the cause of, and to find a cure for, prostate cancer. Activities under such subsection shall provide for an expansion and intensification of the conduct and support of—

"(A) basic research concerning the etiology and causes of prostate cancer;

"(B) clinical research and related activities concerning the causes, prevention, detection and treatment of prostate cancer;

"(C) prevention and control and early detection programs with respect to prostate cancer in accordance with section 412, particularly as it relates to intensifying research on the role of prostate specific antigen for the screening and early detection of prostate cancer;

"(D) an Inter-Institute Task Force, under the direction of the Director of the Institute, to provide coordination between relevant National Institutes of Health components of research efforts on prostate cancer;

"(E) control programs with respect to prostate cancer in accordance with section 412;

"(F) information and education programs with respect to prostate cancer in accordance with section 413; and

"(G) research and demonstration centers with respect to prostate cancer in accordance with section 414, including the development and operation of centers for prostate cancer research to bring together basic and clinical, biomedical and behavioral scientists to conduct basic, clinical, epidemiological, psychosocial, prevention and treatment research and related activities on prostate cancer.

Not less than six centers shall be operated under subparagraph (G). Activities of such centers should include supporting new and innovative research and training programs for new researchers. Such centers shall give priority to expediting the transfer of research advances to clinical applications.

"(2) IMPLEMENTATION OF PLAN FOR PROGRAMS.—

"(A) The Director of the Institute shall ensure that the research programs described in paragraph (1) are implemented in accordance with a plan for the programs. Such plan shall include comments and recommendations that the Director of the Institute considers appropriate, with due consideration provided to the professional judgment needs of the Institute as expressed in the annual budget estimate prepared in accordance with section 413(9). The Director of the Institute, in consultation with the National Cancer Advisory Board, shall periodically review and revise such plan.

"(B) Not later than May 1, 1993, the Director of the Institute shall submit a copy of the plan to the President's Cancer Panel, the Secretary and the Director of NIH.

"(C) The Director of the Institute shall submit any revisions of the plan to the President's Cancer Panel, the Secretary, and the Director of NIH.

"(D) The Secretary shall provide a copy of the plan submitted under subparagraph (A), and any revisions submitted under subparagraph (C), to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate."

SEC. 403. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subpart 1 of part C of title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by section 402 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

"SEC. 417B. (a) ACTIVITIES GENERALLY.—For the purpose of carrying out this subpart, there are authorized to be appropriated $2,200,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 and 1996.

"(b) BREAST CANCER AND GYNECOLOGICAL CANCERS.—

"(1) BREAST CANCER.—

"(A) For the purpose of carrying out subparagraph (A) of section 417(c)(1), there are authorized to be appropriated $225,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 and 1996. Such authorizations of appropriations are in addition to the authorizations of appropriations established in subsection (a) with respect to such purpose.

"(B) For the purpose of carrying out subparagraphs (B) through (E) of section 417(c)(1), there are authorized to be appropriated $100,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 and 1996. Such authorizations of appropriations are in addition to the authorizations of appropriations established in subsection (a) with respect to such purpose.

"(2) OTHER CANCERS.—For the purpose of carrying out subsection (d) of section 417, there are authorized to be appropriated $75,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as are necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 and 1996. Such authorizations of appropriations are in addition to the authorizations of appropriations established in subsection (a) with respect to such purpose.

"(c) PROSTATE CANCER.—For the purpose of carrying out section 417A, there are authorized to be appropriated $72,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 and 1996. Such authorizations of appropriations are in addition to the authorizations of appropriations established in subsection (a) with respect to such purpose.

"(d) ALLOCATION REGARDING CANCER CONTROL.—Of the amounts appropriated for the National Cancer Institute for a fiscal year, the Director of the Institute shall make available not less than 10 percent for carrying out the cancer control activities authorized in section 412 and for which budget estimates are made under section 413(b)(9) for the fiscal year."

(b) SPECIAL RULE REGARDING FUNDS FOR SECTION 412 FOR FISCAL YEAR 1994.—Notwithstanding section 417(b) of the Public Health Service Act, as added by subsection (a) of this section, the amount made available under such section for fiscal year 1994 for carrying out section 412 of such Act shall be an amount not less than an amount equal to 75 percent of the amount specified for activities under such section 412 in the budget estimate made under section 413(b)(9) of such Act for such fiscal year.

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 408 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 284c) is amended—

(A) by striking subsection (a);

(B) by redesignating subsection (b) as subsection (a);

(C) by redesignating paragraph (5) of subsection (a) (as so redesignated) as subsection (b); and

(D) by amending the heading for the section to read as follows:

"CERTAIN USES OF FUNDS".

"(A) The Board shall provide advice to the Director of the Center and the advisory council established under section 480 (hereafter in this section referred to as the 'Advisory Council') on carrying out this section.

"(B) In carrying out subparagraph (A), the Board shall make a determination of the merit of each application submitted for a grant under subsection (a), after consideration of the requirements established in subsection (c), and shall report the results of the determination to the Director of the Center and the Advisory Council. Such determinations shall be conducted in a manner consistent with procedures established under section 492.

"(C) In carrying out subparagraph (A), the Board shall, in the case of applications recommended for approval, make recommendations to the Director and the Advisory Council on the amount that should be provided in the grant.

"(D) In carrying out subparagraph (A), the Board shall prepare an annual report for the Director of the Center and the Advisory Council describing the activities of the Board in the fiscal year for which the report is made. Each such report shall be available to the public, and shall—

"(i) summarize and analyze expenditures made under this section;

"(ii) provide a summary of the types, numbers, and amounts of applications that were recommended for grants under subsection (a) but that were not approved by the Director of the Center; and

"(iii) contain the recommendations of the Board for any changes in the administration of this section.

"(3) MEMBERSHIP.—

"(A) Subject to subparagraph (B), the Board shall be composed of such appointed and ex officio members as the Director of the Center may determine.

"(B) Not more than 3 individuals who are officers or employees of the Federal Government may serve as members of the Board.

"(C) Of the members of the Board—

"(i) 12 shall be appointed by the Director of the Center (without regard to the civil service laws); and

"(ii) 1 shall be an official of the National Science Foundation designated by the National Science Board.

"(4) CERTAIN REQUIREMENTS REGARDING MEMBERSHIP.—In selecting individuals for membership on the Board, the Director of the Center shall ensure that the members are individuals who, by the virtue of their training or experience, are eminently qualified to perform peer review functions. In selecting such individuals for such membership, the Director of the Center shall ensure that the members of the Board collectively—

"(A) are experienced in the planning, construction, financing, and administration of entities that conduct biomedical or behavioral research sciences;

"(B) are knowledgeable in making determinations of the need of entities for biomedical or behavioral research facilities, including such facilities for the dentistry, nursing, pharmacy, and allied health professions;

"(C) are knowledgeable in evaluating the relative priorities for applications for grants under subsection (a) in view of the overall research needs of the United States; and

"(D) are experienced with emerging centers of excellence, as described in subsection (c)(3).

“(5) CERTAIN AUTHORITIES.—

“(A) In carrying out paragraph (2), the Board may establish subcommittees, convene workshops and conferences, and collect data as the Board considers appropriate.

“(B) In carrying out paragraph (2), the Board may establish subcommittees within the Board. Such subcommittees may hold meetings as determined necessary to enable the subcommittee to carry out its duties.

“(6) TERMS.—

“(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), each appointed member of the Board shall hold office for a term of 4 years. Any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring prior to the expiration of the term for which such member's predecessor was appointed shall be appointed for the remainder of the term of the predecessor.

“(B) Of the initial members appointed to the Board (as specified by the Director of the Center when making the appointments)—

“(i) 3 shall hold office for a term of 3 years;

“(ii) 3 shall hold office for a term of 2 years; and “(iii) 3 shall hold office for a term of 1 year.

“(C) No member is eligible for reappointment to the Board until 1 year has elapsed after the end of the most recent term of the member.

“(7) COMPENSATION.—Members of board who are not officers or employees of the United States shall receive compensation for each day engaged in carrying out the duties of the board, including time engaged in traveling for purposes of such duties. Such compensation may not be provided in an amount in excess of the maximum rate of basic pay payable for GS-18 of the General Schedule.

“(c) REQUIREMENTS FOR GRANTS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Center may make a grant under subsection (a) only if the applicant for the grant meets the following conditions:

“(A) The applicant is determined by such Director to be competent to engage in the type of research for which the proposed facility is to be constructed.

“(B) The applicant provides assurances satisfactory to the Director that—“(i) for not less than 20 years after completion of the construction, the facility will be used for the purposes of research for which it is to be constructed;

“(ii) sufficient funds will be available to meet the non-Federal share of the cost of constructing the facility;

“(iii) sufficient funds will be available, when construction is completed, for the effective use of the facility for the research for which it is being constructed; and “(iv) the proposed construction will expand the applicant's capacity for research, or is necessary to improve or maintain the quality of the applicant's research.

“(C) The applicant meets reasonable qualifications established by the Director with respect to—

“(i) the relative scientific and technical merit of the applications, and the relative effectiveness of the proposed facilities, in expanding the capacity for biomedical or behavioral research and in improving the quality of such research;

“(ii) the quality of the research or training, or both, to be carried out in the facilities involved;

“(iii) the need of the applicant for such facilities in order to maintain or expand the applicant's research and training mission;

“(iv) the congruence of the research activities to be carried out within the facility with the research and investigator manpower needs of the United States; and “(v) the age and condition of existing research facilities and equipment.

“(D) The applicant has demonstrated a commitment to enhancing and expanding the research productivity of the applicant.

“(2) CONSIDERATION OF CERTAIN FACTORS.—In making grants under subsection (a), the Director of the Center may, in addition to the requirements established in paragraph (1), consider the following factors:

“(A) To what extent the applicant has the capacity to broaden the scope of research and research training programs of the applicant by promoting—

“(i) interdisciplinary research;

“(ii) research on emerging technologies, including those involving novel analytical techniques or computational methods; or

“(iii) other novel research mechanisms or programs.

“(B) To what extent the applicant has broadened the scope of research and research training programs of qualified institutions by promoting genomic research with an emphasis on interdisciplinary research, including research related to pediatric investigations.

“(3) INSTITUTIONS OF EMERGING EXCELLENCE.—Of the amounts appropriated under subsection (1) for a fiscal year, the Director of the Center shall make available 25 percent for grants under subsection (a) to applicants that, in addition to meeting the requirements established in paragraph (1), have demonstrated emerging excellence in biomedical or behavioral research, as follows:

“(A) The applicant has a plan for research or training advancement and possesses the ability to carry out the plan.

“(B) The applicant carries out research and research training programs that have a special relevance to a problem, concern, or unmet health need of the United States.

“(C) The applicant has been productive in research or research development and training.

“(D) The applicant—

“(i) has been designated as a center of excellence under section 739;

“(ii) is located in a geographic area a significant percentage of whose population has a health-status deficit, and the applicant provides health services to such population; or

“(iii) is located in a geographic area in which a deficit in health care technology, services, or research resources may adversely affect health status of the population of the area in the future, and the applicant is carrying out activities with respect to protecting the health status of such population.

“(d) REQUIREMENT OF APPLICATION.—The Director of the Center may make a grant under subsection (a) only if an application for the grant is submitted to the Director and the application is in such form, is made in such manner, and contains such agreements, assurances, and information as the Director determines to be necessary to carry out this section.

“(e) AMOUNT OF GRANT; PAYMENTS.—

“(1) AMOUNT.—The amount of any grant awarded under subsection (a) shall be determined by the Director of the Center, except that such amount shall not exceed—

“(A) 50 percent of the necessary cost of the construction of a proposed facility as determined by the Director; or

“(B) in the case of a multipurpose facility, 40 percent of that part of the necessary cost of construction that the Director determines to be proportionate to the contemplated use of the facility.

“(2) RESERVATION OF AMOUNTS.—On approval of any application for a grant under subsection (a), the Director of the Center shall reserve, from any appropriation available therefore, the amount of such grant, and shall pay such amount, in advance or by way of reimbursement, and in such installments consistent with the construction progress, as the Director may determine appropriate. The reservation of the Director of any amount by the Director under this paragraph may be amended by the Director, either on the approval of an amendment of the application or on the revision of the estimated cost of construction of the facility.

“(3) EXCLUSION OF CERTAIN COSTS.—In determining the amount of any grant under this subsection (a), there shall be excluded from the cost of construction an amount equal to the sum of—

“(A) the amount of any other Federal grant that the applicant has obtained, or is assured of obtaining, with respect to construction that is to be financed in part by a grant authorized under this section; and

“(B) the amount of any non-Federal funds required to be expended as a condition of such other Federal grant.

“(4) WAIVER OF LIMITATIONS.—The limitations imposed by paragraph (1) may be waived at the discretion of the Director for applicants meeting the conditions described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (c).

“(f) RECAPTURE OF PAYMENTS.—If, not later than 20 years after the completion of construction for which a grant has been awarded under subsection (a)—

“(1) the applicant or other owner of the facility shall cease to be a public or nonprofit private entity; or

“(2) the facility shall cease to be used for the research purposes for which it was constructed (unless the Director determines, in accordance with regulations, that there is good cause for releasing the applicant or other owner from obligation to do so);

the United States shall be entitled to recover from the applicant or other owner of the facility the amount bearing the same ratio to the current value (as determined by an agreement between the parties or by action brought in the United States District Court for the district in which such facility is situated) of the facility as the amount of the Federal participation bore to the cost of the construction of such facility.

“(g) NONINTERFERENCE WITH ADMINISTRATION OF ENTITIES.—Except as otherwise specifically provided in this section, nothing contained in this part shall be construed as authorizing any department, agency, officer, or employee of the United States to exercise any direction, supervision, or control over, or impose any requirement or condition with respect to the administration of any entity funded under this part.

“(h) GUIDELINES.—Not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this section, the Director of the Center, after consultation with the Advisory Council, shall issue guidelines with respect to grants under subsection (a).

“(i) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For the purpose of carrying out this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $150,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 and 1996.”

SEC. 1503. CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM FOR NATIONAL PRIMATE RESEARCH CENTER.

Subpart 1 of part E of title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by section 1502 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"CONSTRUCTION OF REGIONAL CENTERS FOR RESEARCH ON PRIMATES"

"SEC. 481B. (a) With respect to activities carried out by the National Center for Research Resources to support regional centers for research on primates, the Director of NIH shall, for each of the fiscal years 1994 through 1996, reserve from the amounts appropriated under section 481A(1) $7,000,000 for the purpose of making awards of grants and contracts to public or nonprofit private entities to construct, renovate, or otherwise improve such regional centers. The reservation of such amounts for any fiscal year is subject to the availability of qualified applicants for such awards.

"(b) The Director of NIH may not make a grant or enter into a contract under subsection (a) unless the applicant for such assistance agrees, with respect to the costs to be incurred by the applicant in carrying out the purpose described in such subsection, to make available (directly or through donations from public or private entities) non-Federal contributions in cash toward such costs in an amount equal to not less than $1 for each $4 of Federal funds provided in such assistance."

Subtitle B—National Center for Nursing Research

SEC. 1511. REDESIGNATION OF NATIONAL CENTER FOR NURSING RESEARCH AS NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF NURSING RESEARCH.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subpart 3 of part E of title IV of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 287c et seq.) is amended—

(1) in section 483—

(A) in the heading for the section, by striking "CENTER" and inserting "INSTITUTE"; and

(B) by striking "The general purpose" and all that follows through "is" and inserting the following: "The general purpose of the National Institute of Nursing Research (hereafter in this subpart referred to as the 'Institute') is";

(2) in section 484, by striking "Center" each place such term appears and inserting "Institute";

(3) in section 485—

(A) in subsection (a), in each of paragraphs (1) through (3), by striking "Center" each place such term appears and inserting "Institute";

(B) in subsection (b)—

(i) in paragraph (2)(A), by striking "Center" and inserting "Institute"; and

(ii) in paragraph (3)(A), in the first sentence, by striking "Center" and inserting "Institute"; and

(C) in subsections (d) through (g), by striking "Center" each place such term appears and inserting "Institute"; and

(4) in section 485A (as redesignated by section 141(a)(1) of this Act), by striking "Center" each place such term appears and inserting "Institute".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) ORGANIZATION OF NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH.—Section 401(b) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 281(b)) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (1), by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(Q) The National Institute of Nursing Research."; and

(B) in paragraph (2), by striking subparagraph (D).

(2) TRANSFER OF STATUTORY PROVISIONS.—Sections 483 through 485A of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by subsection (a) of this section—

(A) are transferred to part C of title IV of such Act;

(B) are redesignated as sections 464V through 464Y of such part; and

(C) are inserted, in the appropriate sequence, at the end of such part.

(3) HEADING FOR NEW SUBPART.—Title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by the preceding provisions of this section, is amended—

(A) in part C, by inserting before section 464V the following new heading:

"Subpart 17—National Institute of Nursing Research"; and

(B) by striking the heading for subpart 3 of part E.

(4) CROSS-REFERENCES.—Title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by the preceding provisions of this section, is amended in subpart 17 of part C—

(A) in section 464W, by striking "section 483" and inserting "section 464V";

(B) in section 464X(g), by striking "section 486" and inserting "section 464Y"; and

(C) in section 464Y, in the last sentence, by striking "section 485(g)" and inserting "section 464X(g)".

SEC. 1512. STUDY ON ADEQUACY OF NUMBER OF NURSES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services, acting through the Director of the National Institute of Nursing Research, shall enter into a contract with a public or nonprofit private entity to conduct a study for the purpose of determining whether and to what extent there is a need for an increase in the number of nurses in hospitals and nursing homes in order to promote the quality of patient care and reduce the incidence among nurses of work-related injuries and stress.

(b) NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES.—The Secretary shall request the National Academy of Sciences to enter into the contract under subsection (a) to conduct the study described in such subsection. If such Institute declines to conduct the study, the Secretary shall carry out such subsection through another public or nonprofit private entity.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

(1) The term "nurse" means a registered nurse, a licensed practical nurse, a licensed vocational nurse, and a nurse assistant.

(2) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

(d) REPORT.—The Secretary shall ensure that, not later than October 1, 1994, the study required in subsection (a) is completed and a report describing the findings made as a result of the study is submitted to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate.

Subtitle C—National Center for Human Genome Research

SEC. 1521. PURPOSE OF CENTER.

Title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as amended by sections 141(a)(1) and 1611(b)(1)(B) of this Act, is amended—

(1) in section 401(b)(2), by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) The National Center for Human Genome Research."; and

(2) in part E, by adding at the end the following new subpart:

"Subpart 4—National Center for Human Genome Research

"PURPOSE OF THE CENTER

"SEC. 485B. (a) The general purpose of the National Center for Human Genome Research (hereafter in this subpart referred to as the 'Center') is to characterize the structure and function of the human genome, including the mapping and sequencing of individual genes. Such purpose includes—

"(1) planning and coordinating the research goal of the genome project;

"(2) reviewing and funding research proposals;

"(3) developing training programs;

"(4) coordinating international genome research;

"(5) communicating advances in genome science to the public; and

"(6) reviewing and funding proposals to address the ethical issues associated with the genome project.

"(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), of the amounts appropriated to carry out subsection (a) for a fiscal year, the Director of the Center shall make available not less than 5 percent for carrying out paragraph (6) of such subsection.

"(2) With respect to providing funds under subsection (a)(6) for proposals to address the ethical issues associated with the genome project, paragraph (1) shall not apply for a fiscal year if the Director of the Center certifies to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, that the Director has determined that an insufficient number of such proposals meet the applicable requirements of sections 491 and 492."

TITLE XVI—AWARDS AND TRAINING

Subtitle A—National Research Service Awards

SEC. 1601. REQUIREMENT REGARDING WOMEN AND INDIVIDUALS FROM DISADVANTAGED BACKGROUNDS.

Section 487(a) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 288(a)(4)) is amended by adding at the end the following paragraph:

"(4) The Secretary shall carry out paragraph (1) in a manner that will result in the recruitment of women, and members from underrepresented minority groups, into fields of biomedical or behavioral research and in the provision of research training to women and such individuals."

SEC. 1602. SERVICE PAYBACK REQUIREMENTS.

Paragraph (2) of section 487(c) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 288(c)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2)(A) For the initial year for which an individual receives a National Research Service Award for the conduct of postdoctoral training or research, such individual shall engage in one year of health research or teaching or any combination thereof which is in accordance with the usual patterns of academic employment, or complete a second year of training or research under such Award.

"(B) Service obligations for National Research Service Awards that are less than 12 months may be satisfied—

"(i) by the conduct of health research or teaching or any combination thereof which is in accordance with the usual patterns of academic employment for a period of time equal to the amount of time under the Award; or

"(ii) by reimbursing the Federal government for the amounts provided to such individual under the Award.

Subtitle B—Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome

SEC. 1611. LOAN REPAYMENT PROGRAM.

Section 487A of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 288-1) is amended to read as follows:

"LOAN REPAYMENT PROGRAM FOR RESEARCH WITH RESPECT TO ACQUIRED IMMUNE DEFICIENCY SYNDROME

"SEC. 487A. (a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) AUTHORITY FOR PROGRAM.—Subject to paragraph (2), the Secretary shall carry out a program of entering into agreements with appropriately qualified health professionals under which such health professionals agree to conduct, as employees of the National Institutes of Health, research with respect to acquired immune deficiency syndrome in consideration of the Federal Government agreeing to repay, for each year of such service, not more than $20,000 of the principal and interest of the educational loans of such health professionals.

"(2) LIMITATION.—The Secretary may not enter into an agreement with a health professional pursuant to paragraph (1) unless such professional—

"(A) has a substantial amount of educational loans relative to income; and

"(B)(i) was not employed at the National Institutes of Health during the 1-year period preceding the date of the enactment of the Health Professions Reauthorization Act of 1988; or

"(ii) agrees to serve as an employee of such Institutes for purposes of paragraph (1) for a period of not less than 3 years."

"(b) APPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS.—With respect to the National Health Service Corps Loan Repayment Program established in subpart III of part D of title III, the provisions of such subpart shall, except as inconsistent with subsection (a) of this section, apply to the program established in such subsection (a) in the same manner and to the same extent as such provisions apply to the National Health Service Corps Loan Repayment Program established in such subpart.

"(c) FUNDING; REIMBURSABLE TRANSFERS.—

"(1) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For the purpose of carrying out this section, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1994 through 1996.

"(2) TRANSFERS FOR RELATED PROGRAM.—The Commissioner of Food and Drugs may carry out for the Food and Drug Administration a program similar to the program established in subsection (a), which program shall be carried out with respect to the review of applications concerning acquired immune deficiency syndrome that are submitted to such Commissioner. From the amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) for a fiscal year, the Secretary may transfer amounts to the Commissioner for the purpose of carrying out such program. The Commissioner shall provide a reimbursement to the Secretary for the amount so transferred, and the reimbursement shall be available only for the program established in subsection (a). Any transfer and reimbursement made for purposes of this paragraph for a fiscal year shall be completed by April 1 of such year."

Subtitle C—Loan Repayment for Research Generally

SEC. 1621. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.

Part G of title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as redesignated by section 141(a)(2) of this Act and as amended by section 1002 of this Act, is amended by inserting after section 487B the following new section:

"LOAN REPAYMENT PROGRAM FOR RESEARCH GENERALLY

"SEC. 487C. (a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) AUTHORITY FOR PROGRAM.—Subject to paragraph (2), the Secretary shall carry out a program of entering into agreements with appropriately qualified health professionals under which such health professionals agree to conduct research, as employees of the National Institutes of Health, in consideration of the Federal Government agreeing to repay, for each year of such service, not more than $20,000 of the principal and interest of the educational loans of such health professionals.

"(2) LIMITATION.—The Secretary may not enter into an agreement with a health professional pursuant to paragraph (1) unless such professional—

"(A) has a substantial amount of educational loans relative to income; and

"(B)(i) was not employed at the National Institutes of Health during the 1-year period preceding the date of the enactment of the Health Professions Reauthorization Act of 1988; or

"(ii) agrees to serve as an employee of such Institutes for purposes of paragraph (1) for a period of not less than 3 years.

"(b) APPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS.—With respect to the National Health Service Corps Loan Repayment Program established in subpart III of part D of title III, the provisions of such subpart shall, except as inconsistent with subsection (a) of this section, apply to the program established in such subsection (a) in the same manner and to the same extent as such provisions apply to the National Health Service Corps Loan Repayment Program established in such subpart.

"(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For the purpose of carrying out this section other than with respect to acquired immune deficiency syndrome, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1994 through 1996."

Subtitle D—Scholarship and Loan Repayment Programs Regarding Professional Skills Needed by Certain Agencies

SEC. 1631. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAMS FOR NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH.

Part G of title IV of the Public Health Service Act, as redesignated by section 141(a)(2) of this Act and as amended by section 1621 of this Act, is amended by inserting after section 487C the following new sections:

"UNDERGRADUATE SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM REGARDING PROFESSIONS NEEDED BY NATIONAL RESEARCH INSTITUTES

"SEC. 487D. (a) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to section 487(a)(1)(C), the Secretary, acting through the Director of NIH, may carry out a program of entering into contracts with individuals described in paragraph (2) under which—

"(A) the Director of NIH agrees to provide to the individuals scholarships for pursuing, as undergraduates at accredited institutions of higher education, academic programs appropriate for careers in professions needed by the National Institutes of Health; and

"(B) the individuals agree to serve as employees of the National Institutes of Health, for the period described in subsection (c), in positions that are needed by the National Institutes of Health and for which the individuals are qualified.

"(2) INDIVIDUALS FROM DISADVANTAGED BACKGROUNDS.—The individuals referred to in paragraph (1) are individuals who—

"(A) are enrolled or accepted for enrollment as full-time undergraduates at accredited institutions of higher education; and

"(B) are from minority groups that are underrepresented in the fields of biomedical or behavioral research.

"(b) FACILITATION OF INTEREST OF STUDENTS IN CAREERS AT NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH.—In providing employment to individuals pursuant to contracts under subsection (a)(1), the Director of NIH shall carry out activities to facilitate the interest of the individuals in pursuing careers as employees of the National Institutes of Health.

"(c) PERIOD OF OBLIGATED SERVICE.—

"(1) DURATION OF SERVICE.—For purposes of subparagraph (B) of subsection (a)(1), the period of service for which an individual is obligated to serve as an employee of the National Institutes of Health is 12 months for each academic year for which the scholarship under such subsection is provided.

"(2) SCHEDULE FOR SERVICE.—

"(A) Subject to subparagraph (B), the Director of NIH may not provide a scholarship under subsection (a) unless the individual applying for the scholarship agrees that—

"(i) the individual will serve as an employee of the National Institutes of Health full-time for not less than 10 consecutive weeks of each year during which the individual is attending the educational institution involved and receiving such a scholarship;

"(ii) the period of service as such an employee that the individual is obligated to provide under clause (i) is in addition to the period of service as such an employee that the individual is obligated to provide under subsection (a)(1)(B); and

"(iii) not later than 60 days after obtaining the educational degree involved, the individual will begin serving full-time as such an employee in satisfaction of the period of service that the individual is obligated to provide under subsection (a)(1)(B).

"(B) The Director of NIH may defer the obligation of an individual to provide a period of service under subsection (a)(1)(B), if the Director determines that such a deferral is appropriate.

"(3) APPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS RELATING TO APPOINTMENT AND COMPENSATION.—For any period in which an individual provides service as an employee of the National Institutes of Health in satisfaction of the obligation of the individual under subsection (a)(1)(B) or paragraph (2)(A)(i), the individual may be appointed as such an employee without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, relating to appointment and compensation.

"(d) PROVISIONS REGARDING SCHOLARSHIP.—

"(1) APPROVAL OF ACADEMIC PROGRAM.—The Director of NIH may not provide a scholarship under subsection (a) for an academic year unless—

"(A) the individual applying for the scholarship has submitted to the Director a proposed academic program for the year and the Director has approved the program; and

"(B) the individual agrees that the program will not be altered without the approval of the Director.

"(2) ACADEMIC STANDING.—The Director of NIH may not provide a scholarship under subsection (a) for an academic year unless the individual applying for the scholarship agrees to maintain an acceptable level of academic standing, as determined by the educational institution involved in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary.

"(3) LIMITATION ON AMOUNT.—The Director of NIH may not provide a scholarship under subsection (a) for an academic year in an amount exceeding $20,000.

"(4) AUTHORIZED USES.—A scholarship provided under subsection (a) may be expended only for tuition expenses, other reasonable educational expenses, and reasonable living expenses incurred in attending the school involved.

"(5) CONTRACT REGARDING DIRECT PAYMENTS TO INSTITUTION.—In the case of an institution of higher education with respect to which a scholarship under subsection (a) is provided, the Director of NIH may enter into a contract with the institution under which the amounts provided in the scholarship for tuition and other educational expenses are paid directly to the institution. Payments to the institution under the contract may be made without regard to section 3324 of title 31, United States Code.

"(e) PENALTIES FOR BREACH OF SCHOLARSHIP CONTRACT.—The provisions of section 338E shall apply to the program established in subsection (a) to the same extent and in the same manner as such provisions apply to the National Health Service Corps Loan Repayment Program established in section 338B.

"(f) REQUIREMENT OF APPLICATION.—The Director of NIH may not provide a scholarship under subsection (a) unless an application for the scholarship is submitted to the Director and the application is in such form, is made in such manner, and contains such agreements, assurances, and information as the Director determines to be necessary to carry out this section.

"(g) AVAILABILITY OF AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Amounts appropriated for a fiscal year for scholarships under this section shall remain available until the expiration of the second fiscal year beginning after the fiscal year for which the amounts were appropriated.

"LOAN REPAYMENT PROGRAM REGARDING CLINICAL RESEARCHERS FROM DISADVANTAGED BACKGROUNDS

"SEC. 487E. (a) IMPLEMENTATION OF PROGRAM.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to section 487(a)(1)(C), the Secretary, acting through the Director of NIH may, subject to paragraph (2), carry out a program of entering into contracts with appropriately qualified health professionals who are from disadvantaged backgrounds under which such health professionals agree to conduct clinical research as employees of the National Institutes of Health in consideration of the Federal Government agreeing to pay, for each year of such service, not more than $20,000 of the principal and interest of the educational loans of the health professionals.

"(2) LIMITATION.—The Director of NIH may not enter into a contract with a health professional pursuant to paragraph (1) unless such professional has a substantial amount of education loans relative to income.

"(3) APPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN PROVISIONS REGARDING OBLIGATED SERVICE.—Except to the extent inconsistent with this section, the provisions of sections 338C and 338E shall apply to the program established in paragraph (1) to the same extent and in the same manner as such provisions apply to the National Health Service Corps Loan Repayment Program established in section 338B.

"(b) AVAILABILITY OF AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Amounts appropriated for a fiscal year for contracts under subsection (a) shall remain available until the expiration of the second fiscal year beginning after the fiscal year for which the amounts were appropriated."

SEC. 1632. FUNDING.

Section 487(a)(1) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 288(a)(1)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking "and" after the semicolon at the end;

(2) in subparagraph (B), by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(C) provide contracts for scholarships and loan repayments in accordance with sections 487D and 487E, subject to providing not more than an aggregate 50 such contracts during the fiscal years 1994 through 1996."

Subtitle D—Funding

SEC. 1641. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 487(d) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 288(d)) is amended—

(1) in the first sentence, by amending the sentence to read as follows: "For the purpose of carrying out this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $400,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 and 1996."; and

(2) in paragraph (3)—

(A) by striking "one-half of one percent" each place such term appears and inserting "1 percent"; and

(B) by striking "780, 784, or 786" and inserting "747, 748, or 749".

TITLE XVII—NATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR BIOMEDICAL RESEARCH

SEC. 1701. ESTABLISHMENT OF FOUNDATION.

Section 499 of the Public Health Service Act, as redesignated by section 121(b), is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 499A. ESTABLISHMENT AND DUTIES OF FOUNDATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish a nonprofit corporation to be known as the National Foundation for Biomedical Research (hereafter in this section referred to as the 'Foundation'). The Foundation shall not, except for the purposes of the Ethics in Government Act and the Technology Transfer Act, be an agency or instrumentality of the United States Government.

"(b) PURPOSE OF FOUNDATION.—The purpose of the Foundation shall be to conduct and support research with respect to any particular disease or groups of diseases or any other aspect of human health.

"(c) ENDOWMENT FUND.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In carrying out subsection (b), the Foundation shall establish a fund whose primary purpose shall be to provide endowments for positions at the National Institutes of Health to conduct biomedical research, and dedicated to the purpose described in such subsection. Such positions may be held by scientists without regard to whether the scientists are employees of the Federal Government. Subject to subsection (g)(1)(B), the fund shall consist of such donations as may be provided by non-Federal entities and such non-Federal assets of the Foundation (including earnings of the Foundation and the fund) as the Foundation may elect to transfer to the fund.

"(2) AUTHORIZED EXPENDITURES OF FUND.—The provision of endowments under paragraph (1) shall be the primary function of the fund established under such paragraph. Such endowments may be expended only for the compensation of individuals holding the positions, for staff, equipment, quarters, travel, and other expenditures that are appropriate in supporting the positions, and for recruiting individuals to hold the positions endowed by the fund.

"(d) CERTAIN ACTIVITIES OF FOUNDATION.—In carrying out subsection (b), and subject to subsection (c), the Foundation may provide for the following with respect to the purpose described in such subsection:

"(1) Endowed chairs for distinguished senior investigators.

"(2) Positions for support of visiting scientists in mid-career who participate in the National Institutes of Health Scholars program.

"(3) Studies, projects, and research conducted by scientists under paragraphs (1) and (2).

"(4) Forums for the exchange of information between scientists. Participants in such forums may include institutions of higher education and appropriate private and public organizations.

"(5) Meetings, conferences, courses, and training workshops.

"(6) Programs to improve the collection and analysis of data.

"(7) Programs for writing, editing, printing, and publishing of books and other materials.

"(8) Other activities to carry out the purpose described in subsection (b).

"(e) POWERS.—In carrying out subsection (b), the Foundation shall—

"(1) operate under the direction of its Board;

"(2) adopt, alter, and use a corporate seal, which shall be judicially noticed;

"(3) provide for 1 or more officers, employees, and agents, as may be necessary, define their duties, and require surety bonds or make other provisions against losses occasioned by acts of such persons;

"(4) hire, promote, compensate, and discharge officers and employees of the Foundation;

"(5) prescribe by its Board its bylaws, as described in subsection (g)(1)(A);

"(6) with the consent of any executive department or independent agency, use the information, services, staff, and facilities of such in carrying out this section;

"(7) sue and be sued in its corporate name, and complain and defend in courts of competent jurisdiction;

"(8) modify or consent to the modification of any contract or agreement to which it is a party or in which it has an interest under this subtitle;

"(9) establish a mechanism for the selection of candidates, subject to the approval of the Director of the National Institutes of Health for the endowed scientific positions within the organizational structure of the intramural research programs of the National Institutes of Health and candidates for participation in the National Institutes of Health Scholars program;

"(10) enter into contracts with public and private organizations for the writing, editing, printing, and publishing of books and other material;

"(11) take such action as may be necessary to obtain patents and licenses for devices and procedures developed by the Foundation and its employees;

"(12) accept, hold, administer, invest, and spend any gift, devise, or bequest of real or personal property made to the Foundation;

"(13) enter into such other contracts, leases, cooperative agreements, and other transactions as the Executive Director considers appropriate to conduct the activities of the Foundation;

"(14) appoint other groups of advisors as may be determined necessary from time to time to carry out the functions of the Foundation; and

"(15) exercise other powers as set forth in this section, and such other incidental powers as are necessary to carry out its powers, duties, and functions in accordance with this subtitle.

"(f) GENERAL STRUCTURE OF FOUNDATION; NONPROFIT STATUS.—

"(1) BOARD OF DIRECTORS.—The Foundation shall have a board of directors (in this part referred to as the 'Board'), which shall be established and conducted in accordance with subsection (g). The Board shall establish the general policies of the Foundation for carrying out subsection (b), including the establishment of the bylaws of the Foundation.

"(2) EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR.—The Foundation shall have an executive director (in this part referred to as the 'Director'), who shall be appointed by the Board, who shall serve at the pleasure of the Board, and for whom the Board shall establish the rate of compensation. Subject to compliance with the policies and bylaws established by the Board pursuant to paragraph (1), the Director shall be responsible for the daily operations of the Foundation in carrying out subsection (b).

"(3) NONPROFIT STATUS.—In carrying out subsection (b), the Board shall establish such policies and bylaws under paragraph (1), and the Director shall carry out such activities under paragraph (2), as may be necessary to ensure that the Foundation maintains status as an organization that—

"(A) is described in subsection (c)(3) of section 501 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; and

"(B) is, under subsection (a) of such section, exempt from taxation.

"(4) LIAISON.—The Director of the National Institutes of Health shall serve as the liaison representative of the National Institutes of Health to the Board and the Foundation.

"(g) BOARD OF DIRECTORS.—

"(1) CERTAIN BYLAWS.—

"(A) In establishing bylaws under subsection (f)(1), the Board shall ensure that the bylaws of the Foundation include bylaws for the following:

"(i) Policies for the selection of the officers, employees, agents, and contractors of the Foundation.

"(ii) Policies for the acquisition, holding, and transfer of property.

"(iii) Policies, including ethical standards, for the acceptance and disposition of donations to the Foundation and for the disposition of the assets of the Foundation.

"(iv) Policies for the conduct of the general operations of the Foundation.

"(v) Policies for writing, editing, printing, and publishing of books and other materials, and the acquisition of patents and licenses for devices and procedures developed by the Foundation.

"(B) In establishing bylaws under subsection (f)(1), the Board shall ensure that the bylaws of the Foundation (and activities carried out under the bylaws) do not—

"(i) reflect unfavorably upon the ability of the Foundation, or the National Institutes of Health, to carry out its responsibilities or official duties in a fair and objective manner; or

"(ii) compromise, or appear to compromise, the integrity of any governmental program or any officer or employee involved in such program.

"(2) COMPOSITION.—

"(A) The Foundation shall have a Board of Directors (hereafter referred to in this section as the 'Board'), which shall initially be composed of ex officio and appointed members in accordance with this subsection until such time as all the appointed members, including the Chairperson, are fully appointed by the Board under paragraph (4).

"(B) The ex officio members of the Council shall be—

"(i) the Chairperson and ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Health and the Environment (Committee on Energy and Commerce) or their designees, in the case of the House of Representatives;

"(ii) the Chairperson and ranking minority member of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources or their designees, in the case of the Senate; and

"(iii) the Director of the National Institutes of Health.

"(C) The ex officio members of the Board under subparagraph (B) shall appoint to the Council 9 individuals. Of such appointed members—

"(i) 2 shall be representative of the general biomedical field;

"(ii) 2 shall be representatives of the general biobehavioral field; and

"(iii) 3 shall be representatives of the general public.

"(3) CHAIRPERSON.—The ex officio members of the Board under paragraph (2)(B) shall designate an appointed member of the Board to serve as the first Chairperson of the Board. Subsequently, the Chairperson of the Board shall be chosen by the Board according to its bylaws.

"(4) APPOINTMENTS, VACANCIES, AND TERMS.—The following shall apply to the Board:

"(A) Any vacancy in the membership of the Board shall be filled by appointment by the Board, after consideration of suggestions made by the Chairperson and the Director regarding the appointments. Any such vacancy shall be filled not later than the expiration of the 180-day period beginning on the date on which the vacancy occurs.

"(B) The term of office of each member of the Board appointed under subparagraph (A) shall be 5 years, except that the terms of office for the initial appointed members of the Board shall expire as determined by the Chairperson of the Board, in consultation with the Director of the National Institutes of Health.

"(C) A vacancy in the membership of the Board shall not affect the power of the Board to carry out the duties of the Board. If a member of the Board does not serve the full term applicable under subparagraph (B), the individual appointed to fill the resulting vacancy shall be appointed for the remainder of the term of the predecessor of the individual.

"(5) COMPENSATION.—Members of the Board may not receive compensation for service on the Board. Such members may be reimbursed for travel, subsistence, and other necessary expenses incurred in carrying out the duties of the Board, as set forth in the bylaws issued by the Board.

"(h) INCORPORATION.—The initial members of the Board shall serve as incorporators and shall take whatever actions necessary to incorporate the Foundation.

"(i) GENERAL PROVISIONS.—

"(1) ADMINISTRATIVE CONTROL.—No officer, employee, or member of the Board of the Foundation may exercise any administrative or managerial control over any Federal employee.

"(2) APPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN STANDARDS TO NON-FEDERAL EMPLOYEES.—In the case of any individual who is not an employee of the Federal Government and who serves with financial support from the Foundation, the Foundation shall negotiate a memorandum of understanding with the individual and the Director of the National Institutes of Health specifying that the individual—

"(A) shall be subject to the ethical and procedural standards regulating Federal employment, scientific investigation, and research findings (including publications and patents) that are required of individuals employed by the National Institutes of Health, including standards under this Act, the Ethics in Government Act, and the Technology Transfer Act; and

"(B) shall be subject to such ethical and procedural standards under chapter 11 of title 18, United States Code (relating to conflicts of interest), as the Director of the National Institutes of Health determines is appropriate, except such memorandum may not provide that the individual shall be subject to the standards of section 209 of such chapter.

"(3) FINANCIAL CONFLICTS OF INTEREST.—Any individual who is an officer, employee, or member of the Board of the Foundation may not directly or indirectly participate in the consideration or determination by the Foundation of any question affecting—

"(A) any direct or indirect financial interest of the individual; or

"(B) any direct or indirect financial interest of any business organization or other entity of which the individual is an officer or employee or in which the individual has a direct or indirect financial interest.

"(4) AUDITS; AVAILABILITY OF RECORDS.—The Foundation shall—

"(A) provide for biennial audits of the financial condition of the Foundation; and

"(B) make such audits, and all other records, documents, and other papers of the Foundation, available to the Secretary and the Comptroller General of the United States for examination or audit.

"(5) REPORTS.—

"(A) Not later than February 1 of each fiscal year, the Foundation shall publish a report describing the activities of the Foundation during the preceding fiscal year. Each such report shall include for the fiscal year involved a comprehensive statement of the operations, activities, financial condition, and accomplishments of the Foundation.

"(B) With respect to the financial condition of the Foundation, each report under subparagraph (A) shall include the source, and a description of, all gifts to the Foundation of real or personal property, and the source and amount of all gifts to the Foundation of money. Each such report shall include a specification of any restrictions on the purposes for which gifts to the Foundation may be used.

"(C) The Foundation shall make copies of each report submitted under subparagraph (A) available for public inspection, and shall upon request provide a copy of the report to any individual for a charge not exceeding the cost of providing the copy.

"(j) FEDERAL FUNDING.—

"(1) AUTHORITY FOR ANNUAL GRANTS.—

"(A) The Secretary, acting through the Director of the National Institutes of Health, shall for each of the fiscal years 1994 through 1996, make a grant to the Foundation.

"(B) A grant under subparagraph (A) may be expended only for the purpose of the administrative expenses of the Foundation.

"(C) A grant under subparagraph (A) may not be expended to provide amounts for the fund established under subsection (c).

"(2) FUNDING FOR GRANTS.—

"(A) For the purpose of grants under paragraph (1), there is authorized to be appropriated $500,000 for each of the fiscal years 1994 through 1996.

"(B) For the purpose of grants under paragraph (1), the Secretary may for each fiscal year make available not more than $500,000 from the amounts appropriated for the fiscal year for the programs of the National Institutes of Health. Such amounts may be made available without regard to whether amounts have been appropriated under subparagraph (A)."

TITLE XVIII—RESEARCH WITH RESPECT TO ACQUIRED IMMUNE DEFICIENCY SYNDROME

SEC. 1801. REVISION AND EXTENSION OF VARIOUS PROGRAMS.

Title XXIII of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300cc et seq.) is amended—

(1) in section 2304(c)(1)—
(A) in the matter preceding subparagraph (A), by inserting after "Director of such Institute" the following: "(and may provide advice to the Directors of other agencies of the National Institutes of Health, as appropriate)"; and

(B) in subparagraph (A), by inserting before the semicolon the following: ", including recommendations on the projects of research with respect to diagnosing immune deficiency and with respect to predicting, diagnosing, preventing, and treating opportunistic cancers and infectious diseases";

(2) in section 2311(a)(1), by inserting before the semicolon the following: ", including evaluations of methods of diagnosing immune deficiency and evaluations of methods of predicting, diagnosing, preventing, and treating opportunistic cancers and infectious diseases";

(3) in section 2315—
(A) in subsection (a)(2), by striking "international research" and all that follows and inserting "international research and training concerning the natural history and pathogenesis of the human immunodeficiency virus and the development and evaluation of vaccines and treatments for acquired immune deficiency syndrome and opportunistic infections."; and

(B) in subsection (f), by striking "and 1991" and inserting "through 1996";

(4) in section 2318—
(A) in subsection (a)(1)—

(i) by inserting after "The Secretary" the following: ", acting through the Director of the National Institutes of Health and after consultation with the Administrator for Health Care Policy and Research."; and

(ii) by striking "syndrome" and inserting "syndrome, including treatment and prevention of HIV infection and related conditions among women"; and

(B) in subsection (e), by striking "1991." and inserting the following: "1991, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1994 through 1996.";

(5) in section 2320(b)(1)(A), by striking "syndrome" and inserting "syndrome and the natural history of such infection";

(6) in the part heading for part D, by striking "DIRECTOR OF THE NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH" and inserting "OFFICE OF AIDS RESEARCH";

(7) in section 2351—
(A) by redesignating subsections (a), (b) and (c) as subsections (b), (d) and (e), respectively;

(B) by striking subsection (a) and inserting the following new subsection:

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In carrying out research with respect to acquired immune deficiency syndrome, the Secretary, acting through the Director of the National Institutes of Health—

"(1) shall establish an office to be known as the Office of AIDS Research, which Office shall be headed by a Director who shall be—

"(A) appointed by the Secretary;
"(B) determined by the Secretary to be an individual who is an outstanding scientist and a highly skilled administrator; and

"(C) the primary Federal official responsible for the conduct of AIDS-related research at the National Institutes of Health; and

"(2) shall provide administrative support and support services to the Director of such Office.";

(C) in subsection (b) (as so redesignated)—
(i) by striking the subsection designation and all that follows through paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(b) ACTIVITIES OF THE OFFICE OF AIDS RESEARCH.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, acting through the director of the Office of AIDS Research, shall ensure that AIDS research activities are coordinated across and throughout the institutes, centers, and divisions of the National Institutes of Health.

"(2) GENERAL DUTIES.—The Director of the Office of AIDS Research shall, based upon a strategic plan as defined in paragraph (3), develop and implement a budget for AIDS-related research at the National Institutes of Health and coordinate all AIDS-related research activities conducted at the institutes, centers, and divisions of the National Institutes of Health, and conduct evaluations on all such programs.

"(3) STRATEGIC PLAN.—

"(A) DEVELOPMENT.—The Director of the Office of AIDS Research shall, with the advice of the directors of the institutes, centers, and divisions of the National Institutes of Health, and in consultation with the advisory council established in paragraph (5) and the coordinating groups established in subparagraph (B), develop and implement a comprehensive, long-range plan for the conduct and support of such research by the National Institutes of Health. Such plan shall be updated annually, and shall—

"(i) determine and prioritize among critical scientific AIDS-related questions;

"(ii) based upon such determinations, specify the range of objectives to be achieved, the date the objectives are expected to be achieved, and provide an estimate of the resources needed to achieve the objectives by such date;

"(iii) evaluate the sufficiency of existing AIDS research programs to meet such objectives, and establish standard evaluation criteria, timelines and objectives for future program evaluation activities; and

"(iv) make recommendations for changes and necessary resource allocation in and among such programs.

"(B) COORDINATING GROUPS.—The Director of the Office of AIDS Research shall establish AIDS coordinating groups for each research discipline within the AIDS research program, composed of representatives of relevant agencies of the National Institutes of Health and qualified extramural scientists, to evaluate and assess the efforts of the AIDS Research Program at the National Institutes of Health, to advise on the development of the strategic plan described in subparagraph (A), and to determine the extent to which such efforts are in accordance with such strategic plan.

"(4) COORDINATION.—The Director of the Office of AIDS Research shall act as the primary Federal official with responsibility for overseeing all AIDS-related research efforts undertaken by the National Institutes of Health, and

"(A) shall serve to represent the National Institutes of Health AIDS Research Program at all relevant Executive branch task forces and committees; and

"(B) shall maintain communications with all relevant Public Health Service agencies and with various other departments of the Federal Government, to ensure the timely transmission of information concerning advances in AIDS-related research and the clinical treatment of AIDS and its related conditions, to these various agencies for dissemination to affected communities and health care providers.

"(5) ADVISORY COUNCIL.—

"(A) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Director of the Office of AIDS Research shall establish an advisory council to be known as the Office of AIDS Research Advisory Council (hereafter referred to as the "Council"), which shall serve to replace the AIDS Program Advisory Committee which is operating on the date of enactment of this subsection.

"(B) COMPOSITION.—The Council shall be composed of biomedical, behavioral, and social scientists, and representatives of diverse HIV affected communities, and shall be appointed by the Director.

"(C) AUTHORITY.—The Council shall, consistent with section 406—

"(i) advise the Director of the Office of AIDS Research and make recommendations concerning the development of the AIDS-related research budget, and the development and implementation of the strategic plan for AIDS-related research at the National Institutes of Health;

"(ii) provide the second level of peer review for awards made directly to the Office of AIDS Research from the discretionary fund described in paragraph (7); and

"(iii) carry out such other activities determined appropriate by the Director of the Office of AIDS Research.

"(6) BUDGETARY AUTHORITY.—The Director of the Office of AIDS Research shall—

"(A) in consultation with the advisory council established under paragraph (5) and based upon budget requests and additional advice from the directors of the institutes, centers, and divisions of the National Institutes of Health, prepare and submit, directly to the President for review and transmittal to Congress, an annual budget estimate for the AIDS-related research program conducted within the agencies of the National Institutes of Health, after reasonable opportunity for comment (but without change) by the Secretary and the Director of the National Institutes of Health;

"(B) receive from the President and the Office of Management and Budget directly all AIDS-related research funds appropriated by Congress for obligation and expenditure by the agencies of the National Institutes of Health in accordance with the strategic plan developed under paragraph (3)(A); and

"(C) distribute AIDS research funding to the various institutes, centers, and divisions of the National Institutes of Health in accordance with the strategic plan.

"(7) DISCRETIONARY FUND.—

"(A) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—The Secretary shall ensure that not to exceed 25 percent of the funds available in excess of the amount of baseline AIDS research spending during the previous fiscal year, but in no event less than $50,000,000 each fiscal year, be made available to the Director of the Office of AIDS Research for the establishment of an AIDS research discretionary fund.

"(B) USE.—The Director of the Office of AIDS Research, in consultation with the advisory council established under paragraph (5), shall use amounts in the AIDS research discretionary fund to—

"(i) fund emergency AIDS research programs;

"(ii) fund programs for the conduct of research aimed at filling gaps that exist in existing research programs;

"(iii) conduct conferences, convene committees, hold meetings or carry out other activities determined appropriate by the Director.

"(C) REDUCTION IN ADMINISTRATIVE IMPEDIMENTS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, with respect to the number of full-time equivalent individuals employed, the Director of the Office of AIDS Research shall be permitted to authorize the employment of such full-time equivalent individuals to perform AIDS-related research through the agencies of the National Institutes of Health.

"(c) OTHER DUTIES.—The director of the office—"; and

(ii) by redesignating paragraphs (2) through (8) (as such paragraphs existed one day prior to the date of enactment of this Act) as paragraphs (1) through (7), respectively; and

(C) in subsection (c) (as added by the amendment made by subparagraph (B)) by striking "for the appropriate national research institute of the National Institutes of Health" in paragraph (4) (as so designated by the amendments made by subparagraph (B));

(8) in section 2361, by striking "For purposes" and all that follows and inserting the following:

"For purposes of this title:

"(1) The term 'infection', with respect to the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, includes opportunistic cancers and infectious diseases and any other conditions arising from infection with such etiologic agent.

"(2) The term 'treatment', with respect to the etiologic agent for acquired immune deficiency syndrome, includes primary and secondary prophylaxis."

(9) in section 2315(f), by striking "there are authorized" and all that follows and inserting "there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for each fiscal year.";

(10) in section 2320(e)(1), by striking "there are authorized" and all that follows and inserting "there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for each fiscal year.";

(11) in section 2341(d), by striking "there are authorized" and all that follows and inserting "there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for each fiscal year."

TITLE XIX—STUDIES

SEC. 1901. ACQUIRED IMMUNE DEFICIENCY SYNDROME.

(a) CERTAIN DRUG-RELEASE MECHANISMS.—

(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, subject to paragraph (2), enter into a contract with a public or nonprofit private entity to conduct a study for the purpose of determining, with respect to acquired immune deficiency syndrome, the impact of parallel-track drug-release mechanisms on public and private clinical research, and on the activities of the Commissioner of Food and Drugs regarding the approval of drugs.

(2) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall request the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences to enter into the contract under paragraph (1) to conduct the study described in such paragraph. If such Institute declines to conduct the study, the Secretary shall carry out paragraph (1) through another public or nonprofit private entity.

(b) THIRD-PARTY PAYMENTS REGARDING CERTAIN CLINICAL TRIALS.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall conduct a study for the purpose of—

(1) determining the policies of third-party payors regarding the payment of the costs of appropriate health services that are provided incident to the participation of individuals as subjects in clinical trials conducted in the development of drugs with respect to acquired immune deficiency syndrome; and

(2) developing recommendations regarding such policies.

(c) ADVISORY COMMITTEES.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services, acting through the Director of the National Institutes of Health, shall conduct a study for the purpose of determining—

(1) whether the activities of the various advisory committees established in the National Institutes of Health regarding acquired immune deficiency syndrome are being coordinated sufficiently; and

(2) whether the functions of any of such advisory committees should be modified in order to achieve greater efficiency.

(d) VACCINES FOR HUMAN IMMUNODEFICIENCY VIRUS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services, acting through the National Institutes of Health, shall develop a plan for the appropriate inclusion of HIV-infected women, including pregnant women, HIV-infected infants, and HIV-infected children in studies conducted by or through the National Institutes of Health concerning the safety and efficacy of HIV vaccines for the treatment and prevention of HIV infection. Such plan shall ensure the full participation of other Federal agencies currently conducting HIV vaccine studies and require that such studies conform fully to the requirements of part 46 of title 45, Code of Federal Regulations.

(2) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall prepare and submit to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, a report concerning the plan developed under paragraph (1).

(3) IMPLEMENTATION.—Not later than 12 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall implement the plan developed under paragraph (1), including measures for the full participation of other Federal agencies currently conducting HIV vaccine studies.

(4) For the purpose of carrying out this subsection, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1994 through 1996.

SEC. 1902. MALNUTRITION IN THE ELDERLY.

(a) STUDY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services (referred to in this section as the "Secretary"), acting through the National Institute on Aging, coordinating with the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research and, to the degree possible, in consultation with the head of the National Nutrition Monitoring System established under section 1428 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3178), shall conduct a 3-year nutrition screening and intervention activities study of the elderly.

(2) EFFICACY AND COST-EFFECTIVENESS OF NUTRITION SCREENING AND INTERVENTION ACTIVITIES.—In conducting the study, the Secretary shall determine the efficacy and cost-effectiveness of nutrition screening and intervention activities conducted in the elderly health and long-term care continuum, and of a program that would institutionalize nutrition screening and intervention activities. In evaluating such a program, the Secretary shall determine—

(A) if health or quality of life is measurably improved for elderly individuals who receive routine nutritional screening and treatment;

(B) if federally subsidized home or institutional care is reduced because of increased independence of elderly individuals resulting from improved nutritional status;

(C) if a multidisciplinary approach to nutritional care is effective in addressing the nutritional needs of elderly individuals; and

(D) if reimbursement for nutrition screening and intervention activities is a cost-effective approach to improving the health status of elderly individuals.

(3) POPULATIONS.—The populations of elderly individuals in which the study will be conducted shall include populations of elderly individuals who are—

(A) living independently, including—

(i) individuals who receive home and community-based services or family support;

(ii) individuals who do not receive additional services and support;

(iii) individuals with low incomes; and

(iv) individuals who are minorities;

(B) hospitalized, including individuals admitted from home and from institutions; and

(C) institutionalized in residential facilities such as nursing homes and adult homes.

(b) MALNUTRITION STUDY.—The Secretary, acting through the National Institute on Aging, shall conduct a 3-year study to determine the extent of malnutrition in elderly individuals in hospitals and long-term care facilities and in elderly individuals who are living independently.

(c) REPORT.—The Secretary shall submit a report to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives containing the findings resulting from the studies described in subsections (a) and (b), including a determination regarding whether a program that would institutionalize nutrition screening and intervention activities should be adopted, and the rationale for the determination.

(d) ADVISORY PANEL.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary, acting through the Director of the National Institute on Aging, shall establish an advisory panel that shall oversee the design, implementation, and evaluation of the studies described in subsections (a) and (b).

(2) COMPOSITION.—The advisory panel shall include representatives appointed for the life of the panel by the Secretary from the Health Care Financing Administration, the Social Security Administration, the National Center for Health Statistics, the Administration on Aging, the National Council on the Aging, the American Dietetic Association, the American Academy of Family Physicians, and such other agencies or organizations as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

(3) COMPENSATION AND EXPENSES.—

(A) COMPENSATION.—Each member of the advisory panel who is not an employee of the Federal Government shall receive compensation for each day engaged in carrying out the duties of the panel, including time engaged in traveling for purposes of such duties. Such compensation may not be provided in an amount in excess of the maximum rate of basic pay payable for GS-18 of the General Schedule.

(B) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—Each member of the advisory panel shall receive travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under subchapter I of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code, for each day the member is engaged in the performance of duties away from the home or regular place of business of the member.

(4) DETAIL OF FEDERAL EMPLOYEES.—On the request of the advisory panel, the head of any Federal agency shall detail, without reimbursement, any of the personnel of the agency to the advisory panel to assist the advisory panel in carrying out its duties. Any detail shall not interrupt or otherwise affect the civil service status or privileges of the Federal employee.

(5) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—On the request of the advisory panel, the head of a Federal agency shall provide such technical assistance to the advisory panel as the advisory panel determines to be necessary to carry out its duties.

(6) TERMINATION.—Notwithstanding section 15 of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.), the advisory panel shall terminate 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1903. RESEARCH ACTIVITIES ON CHRONIC FATIGUE SYNDROME.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, not later than May 1, 1993, and annually thereafter for the next 3 years, prepare and submit to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, a report that summarizes the research activities conducted or supported by the National Institutes of Health concerning chronic fatigue syndrome. Such report should include information concerning grants made, cooperative agreements or contracts entered into, intramural activities, research priorities and needs, and a plan to address such priorities and needs.

SEC. 1904. REPORT ON MEDICAL USES OF BIOLOGICAL AGENTS IN DEVELOPMENT OF DEFENSES AGAINST BIOLOGICAL WARFARE.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services, in consultation with other appropriate executive agencies, shall report to the House Energy and Commerce Committee and the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee on the appropriateness and impact of the National Institutes of Health assuming responsibility for the conduct of all Federal research, development, testing, and evaluation functions relating to medical countermeasures against biowarfare threat agents. In preparing the report, the Secretary shall identify the extent to which such activities are carried out by agencies other than the National Institutes of Health, and assess the impact (positive and negative) of the National Institutes of Health assuming responsibility for such activities, including the impact under the Budget Enforcement Act and the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 on existing National Institutes of Health research programs as well as other programs within the category of domestic discretionary spending. The Secretary shall submit the report not later than 12 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1905. PERSONNEL STUDY OF RECRUITMENT, RETENTION AND TURNOVER.

(a) STUDY OF PERSONNEL SYSTEM.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, acting through the Director of the National Institutes of Health, shall conduct a study to review the retention, recruitment, vacancy and turnover rates of support staff, including firefighters, law enforcement, procurement officers, technicians, nurses and clerical employees, to ensure that the National Institutes of Health is adequately supporting the conduct of efficient, effective and high quality research for the American public. The Director of NIH shall work in conjunction with appropriate employee organizations and representatives in developing such a study.

(b) SUBMISSION TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall prepare and submit to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, a report containing the study conducted under subsection (a) together with the recommendations of the Secretary concerning the enactment of legislation to implement the results of such study.

SEC. 1906. PROCUREMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the National Institutes of Health and the Administrator of the General Services Administration shall jointly conduct a study to develop a streamlined procurement system for the National Institutes of Health that complies with the requirements of Federal law.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than March 1, 1994, the officials specified in subsection (a) shall complete the study required in such subsection and shall submit to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, a report describing the findings made as a result of the study.

SEC. 1907. REPORT CONCERNING LEADING CAUSES OF DEATH.

(a) REPORT.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, not later than February 1, 1993, prepare a report that lists—

(1) the 20 illnesses that, in terms of mortality, number of years of expected life lost, and of number of preventable years of life lost, are the leading causes of death in the United States and the number of deaths from each such cause, the age-specific and age-adjusted death rates for each such cause, the death rate per 100,000 population for each such cause, the percentage of change in cause specific death rates for each age group, and the percentage of total deaths for each such cause;

(2) the amount expended by the Department of Health and Human Services for research, prevention, and education with respect to each of the 20 illnesses described in paragraph (1) for the most recent year for which the actual expenditures are known;

(3) an estimate by the Secretary of the amount to be expended on research, prevention, and education with respect to each of the 20 illnesses described in paragraph (1) for the year for which the report is prepared; and

(4) with respect to the years specified in paragraphs (2) and (3), the percentage of the total of the annual expenditures for research, prevention, and education on the 20 illnesses described in paragraph (1) that are attributable to each illness.

(b) SUBMISSION TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall submit the report required under subsection (a), together with relevant budget information, to the Committee on Energy and Commerce and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate.

SEC. 1908. RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE CONSUMPTION OF LEGAL AND ILLEGAL DRUGS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services, acting through the Commissioner of Food and Drugs, shall review and consider all existing relevant data and research concerning whether there is a relationship between an individual's receptivity to use or consume legal drugs and the consumption or abuse by the individual of illegal drugs. On the basis of such review, the Secretary shall determine whether additional research is necessary. If the Secretary determines additional research is required, the Secretary shall conduct a study of those subjects where the Secretary's review indicates additional research is needed, including, if necessary, a review of—

(1) the effect of advertising and marketing campaigns that promote the use of legal drugs on the public;

(2) the correlation of legal drug abuse with illegal drug abuse; and

(3) other matters that the Secretary determines appropriate.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall prepare and submit, to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, a report containing the results of the review conducted under subsection (b). If the Secretary determines additional research is required, no later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall prepare and submit, to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, a report containing the results of the additional research conducted under subsection (b).

TITLE XX—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

SEC. 2001. DESIGNATION OF SENIOR BIOMEDICAL RESEARCH SERVICE IN HONOR OF SILVIO O. CONTE, AND LIMITATION ON NUMBER OF MEMBERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 228(a) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 237(a)), as added by section 304 of Public Law 101-509, is amended to read as follows:

“(a)(1) There shall be in the Public Health Service a Silvio O. Conte Senior Biomedical Research Service, not to exceed 750 members.

“(2) The authority established in paragraph (1) regarding the number of members in the Silvio O. Conte Senior Biomedical Research Service is in addition to any authority established regarding the number of members in the commissioned Regular Corps, in the Reserve Corps, and in the Senior Executive Service. Such paragraph may not be construed to require that the number of members in the commissioned Regular Corps, in the Reserve Corps, or in the Senior Executive Service be reduced to offset the number of members serving in the Silvio O. Conte Senior Biomedical Research Service (hereafter in this section referred to as the ‘Service’).”

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 228 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 237), as added by section 304 of Public Law 101-509, is amended in the heading for the section by amending the heading to read as follows:

“SILVIO O. CONTE SENIOR BIOMEDICAL RESEARCH SERVICE”.

SEC. 2002. TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS.

(a) TITLE III.—Subsection (c) of section 316 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247a(c)) is repealed.

(b) TITLE IV.—Title IV of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 281 et seq.) is amended—

(1) in section 406—

(A) in subsection (b)(2)(A), by striking “Veterans’ Administration” each place such term appears and inserting “Department of Veterans Affairs”; and

(B) in subsection (h)(2)(A)(v), by striking "Veterans' Administration" and inserting "Department of Veterans Affairs";

(2) in section 408, in subsection (b) (as redesignated by section 501(c)(1)(C) of this Act), by striking "Veterans' Administration" and inserting "Department of Veterans Affairs";

(3) in section 421(b)(1), by inserting a comma after "may";

(4) in section 428(b), in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by striking "the the" and inserting "the";

(5) in section 430(b)(2)(A)(i), by striking "Veterans' Administration" and inserting "Department of Veterans Affairs";

(6) in section 439(b), by striking "Veterans' Administration" and inserting "Department of Veterans Affairs";

(7) in section 442(b)(2)(A), by striking "Veterans' Administration" and inserting "Department of Veterans Affairs";

(8) in section 464D(b)(2)(A), by striking "Veterans' Administration" and inserting "Department of Veterans Affairs";

(9) in section 464E—

(A) in subsection (d), in the first sentence, by inserting "Coordinating" before "Committee"; and

(B) in subsection (e), by inserting "Coordinating" before "Committee" the first place such term appears;

(10) in section 464P(b)(6) (as added by section 123 of Public Law 102-321 (106 Stat. 362)), by striking "Administration" and inserting "Institute";

(11) in section 466(a)(1)(B), by striking "Veterans' Administration" and inserting "Department of Veterans Affairs";

(12) in section 480(b)(2)(A), by striking "Veterans' Administration" and inserting "Department of Veterans Affairs";

(13) in section 485(b)(2)(A), by striking "Veterans' Administration" and inserting "Department of Veterans Affairs";

(14) in section 487(d)(3), by striking "section 304(a)(3)" and inserting "section 304(a)"; and

(15) in section 496(a), by striking "Such appropriations," and inserting the following: "Appropriations to carry out the purposes of this title,".

(c) TITLE XXIII.—Part A of title XXIII of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300cc et seq.) is amended—

(1) in section 2304—

(A) in the heading for the section, by striking "clinical research review committee" and inserting "research advisory committee"; and

(B) in subsection (a), by striking "AIDS Clinical Research Review Committee" and inserting "AIDS Research Advisory Committee";

(2) in section 2312(a)(2)(A), by striking "AIDS Clinical Research Review Committee" and inserting "AIDS Research Advisory Committee";

(3) in section 2314(a)(1), in the matter preceding subparagraph (A), by striking "Clinical Research Review Committee" and inserting "AIDS Research Advisory Committee";

(4) in section 2317(d)(1), by striking "Clinical Research Review Committee" and inserting "AIDS Research Advisory Committee established under section 2304"; and

(5) in section 2318(b)(3), by striking "Clinical Research Review Committee" and inserting "AIDS Research Advisory Committee".

(d) SECRETARY.—Section 2(c) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 201(c)) is amended by striking "Health, Education, and Welfare" and inserting "Health and Human Services".

(e) DEPARTMENT.—Section 201 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 202) is amended—

(1) by striking "Health, Education, and Welfare" and inserting "Health and Human Services"; and

(2) by striking "Surgeon General" and inserting "Assistant Secretary for Health".

(f) DEPARTMENT.—Section 202 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 203) is amended—

(1) by striking "Health, Education, and Welfare" and inserting "Health and Human Services";

(2) by striking "Surgeon General" the second and subsequent times that such term appears and inserting "Secretary"; and

(3) by inserting ", and the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research" before the first period.

(g) VOLUNTEER SERVICES.—Section 223 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 217b) is amended by striking "Health, Education, and Welfare" and inserting "Health and Human Services".

SEC. 2003. BIENNIAL REPORT ON CARCINOGENS.

Section 301(b)(4) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 241(b)(4)) is amended by striking "an annual" and inserting in lieu thereof "a biennial".

SEC. 2004. MASTER PLAN FOR PHYSICAL INFRASTRUCTURE FOR RESEARCH.

Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, acting through the Director of the National Institutes of Health, shall present to the Congress a master plan to provide for the replacement or refurbishment of less than adequate buildings, utility equipment and distribution systems (including the resources that provide electrical and other utilities, chilled water, air handling, and other services that the Secretary, acting through the Director, deems necessary), roads, walkways, parking areas, and grounds that underpin the laboratory and clinical facilities of the National Institutes of Health. Such plan may make recommendations for the undertaking of new projects that are consistent with the objectives of this section, such as encircling the National Institutes of Health Federal enclave with an adequate chilled water conduit.

SEC. 2005. TRANSFER OF PROVISIONS OF TITLE XXVII.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 201 et seq.), as amended by section 101 of Public Law 101-381 and section 304 of Public Law 101-509, is amended—

(1) by transferring sections 2701 through 2714 to title II;

(2) by redesignating such sections as sections 231 through 244, respectively;

(3) by inserting such sections, in the appropriate sequence, after section 228;

(4) by inserting before section 201 the following new heading:

"PART A—ADMINISTRATION"; and

(5) by inserting before section 231 (as redesignated by paragraph (2) of this subsection) the following new heading:

"Part B—Miscellaneous Provisions".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—The Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 201 et seq.) is amended—

(1) in the heading for title II, by inserting "AND MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS" after "ADMINISTRATION";

(2) in section 406(a)(2), by striking "2701" and inserting "231";

(3) in section 465(f), by striking "2701" and inserting "231";

(4) in section 480(a)(2), by striking "2701" and inserting "231";

(5) in section 485(a)(2), by striking "2701" and inserting "231";

(6) in section 497, by striking "2701" and inserting "231";

(7) in section 505(a)(2), by striking "2701" and inserting "231";

(8) in section 926(b), by striking "2711" each place such term appears and inserting "241"; and

(9) in title XXVII, by striking the heading for such title.

SEC. 2006. CERTAIN AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 399L(a) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 280e-4(a)), as added by Public Law 102-515 (106 Stat. 3376), is amended—

(1) in the first sentence, by striking "the Secretary" and all that follows and inserting the following: "there are authorized to be appropriated $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1995 through 1997."; and

(2) in the second sentence, by striking "Out of any amounts used" and inserting "Of the amounts appropriated under the preceding sentence".

SEC. 2007. PROHIBITION AGAINST SHARP ADULT SEX SURVEY AND THE AMERICAN TEENAGE SEX SURVEY.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services may not during fiscal year 1993 or any subsequent fiscal year conduct or support the SHARP survey of adult sexual behavior or the American Teenage Study of adolescent sexual behavior. This section becomes effective April 15, 1993.

SEC. 2008. SUPPORT FOR BIOENGINEERING RESEARCH.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services, acting through the Director of the National Institutes of Health, shall conduct a study for the purpose of—

(1) determining the sources and amounts of public and private funding devoted to basic research in bioengineering and biomaterials sciences;

(2) evaluating whether that commitment is sufficient to maintain the innovative edge that the United States has in these technologies; and

(3) evaluating the need to modify the structure of the National Institutes of Health or any other Federal agency to achieve a greater commitment to innovation in bioengineering, and evaluating the need for better coordination and collaboration among Federal agencies and between the public and private sectors.

In conducting such study, the Director shall work in conjunction with appropriate organizations and representatives including academics, industry leaders, bioengineering societies, and public agencies (such as the National Science Foundation, Veterans Administration, Department of Defense, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy).

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall prepare and submit to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate, and the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives, a report containing the findings of the study conducted under subsection (a) together with recommendations concerning the enactment of legislation to implement the results of such study.

SEC. 2101. EFFECTIVE DATES.

Subject to section 155, this Act and the amendments made by this Act take effect upon the date of the enactment of this Act.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I am pleased to join in introducing S. 1, the National Institutes of Health Reauthorization Act of 1993. This important legislation, which will reauthorize certain programs at NIH and provide congressional guidance for others, enjoyed very strong support in the 102d Congress but was vetoed by President Bush. True to his word and keeping faith with the millions of Americans whose lives depend on federally supported biomedical research, the majority leader allow the NIH bill to be introduced as the first bill of this new Congress.

As a member of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, I have followed the progress of this bill with care, concern, and until today, disappointment. This bill contains important and needed changes in policy that, in my view, have hindered the progress of scientific research in this Nation and throughout the world. Today I am invigorated by the bill's prospects in this Congress and the promise that the Clinton-Gore administration holds for biomedical research specifically, and for science in general.

Mr. President, I am most pleased with the legislation that is pending before us today. It will revitalize many programs at NIH, including research on breast and prostate cancer, AIDS, and women's health needs. It also recognizes and addresses a disease of growing importance to many Rhode Islanders and others across this Nation, chronic fatigue syndrome [CFS], also known as chronic fatigue immunodeficiency syndrome [CFIDS].

I strongly support the provisions in this bill that provide additional support to the National Cancer Institute, and in particular, to its research and cancer control programs. As the author of the legislation that created the NCI's International Cancer Research Data Bank [ICRDB], which assists in the exchange of information on the diagnosis and treatment of cancer between clinicians here and abroad, I urge the NCI to explore further ways to serve the ICRDB's services and needs.

Mr. President, I am particularly pleased that the legislation before us today will overturn the Bush administration's ban on fetal tissue transplantation research. Last year, 77 Senators agreed that the Federal Government should resume funding this vital research that holds great promise for victims of many debilitating and painful diseases, including Parkinson's disease. President Clinton has made it clear that he also opposes this ban and is expected to overturn it by Executive order. In my view, it makes sense for Congress not only to codify the President's decision in this regard, but also to establish legislatively the very sensible safeguards that have been recommended.

I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation and hope that the President will act expeditiously to sign it.

• Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I am pleased today to join my distinguished colleague from Massachusetts in introducing S. 1, The Reauthorization of the National Institutes of Health.

Mr. President, I have stated many times in this chamber how much respect I have for the National Institutes of Health. NIH is a national treasure. The work of its scientists and the research that it supports in universities form the cornerstone of our contributions to the reduction of suffering and disease in America and throughout the world.

I might add, too, that I have enormous respect for the Director of NIH, Dr. Bernadine Healy, who has exhibited impressive leadership in biomedical research.

Mr. President, this reauthorization has been a long time coming. The Senate twice passed bills in the last Congress to reauthorize the NIH. However, these bills were vetoed by the President.

I strongly support this bill, particularly the efforts to coordinate research on women's health. I am also pleased that the bill contains provisions for a new study on the status of basic biomedical engineering research. I have asked NIH to study this problem and report to Congress on its findings. I request permission to include a brief statement on this problem into the RECORD.

I have been a strong supporter of AIDS research and enhancing our commitment to find a cure for this dread disease. This bill, in its present form, includes some expansion of authority to address this issue.

I believe that it is important that we coordinate all our efforts in this area, so that the research can proceed efficiently and with dispatch. However, I have some reservations about how the institutional arrangements have been drafted. In particular, I hope we can avoid fragmentation of the general NIH research effort, prevent increased bureaucracy, and allow for the orderly research processes at NIH. I am assured by the chairman of the Labor and Human Resources Committee that my concerns and those of my colleagues about this provision can be accommodated before final passage of the bill.

I urge my colleagues to support the passage of S. 1 so that the important work of the NIH can proceed, and I ask unanimous consent that a factsheet on the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the factsheet was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FACTSHEET ON EMERGING TECHNOLOGIES IN BIOMEDICAL ENGINEERING

WHAT IS BIOENGINEERING?

Biomedical engineering uses principles of science and engineering to solve problems in biology and medicine. It is a relatively new field, and one that is highly innovative and rapidly growing. Bioengineering contributes to basic health sciences in the following ways:

Biomaterials and biocompatibility.—Studies of materials that are used in implantable devices and their compatibility with the human body. Heart valves and hip and joint replacements are just two examples. We need major breakthroughs in materials science to realize the enormous potential of this field.

Biomechanics.—Dynamics of human motion leading to development of prosthetic devices and robotic systems to help handicapped people, especially disabled veterans.

Membrane technology and artificial organs.—Research includes filtering and separating molecules and engineering cells and tissues to carry out certain biochemical functions. On the horizon are artificial livers, nerve grafts for victims of Parkinson's disease and Alzheimer's disease.

Medical devices and instrumentation.—Designing and developing instruments for research and clinical use such as biosensors that convert biological information into electronic signals used for diagnosis and therapy. There are potential breakthroughs in osteoporosis, and other degenerative diseases.

Imaging and modeling technologies.—Studying physical and biochemical properties of body tissues, organs, and cells through tools such as CT scans, PET scans, ultrasonography, and MRI. These technologies may allow us to see metabolic dysfunctions to diagnose diseases such as cancer and cardiovascular problems far earlier than we can now.

WHY IS BASIC RESEARCH ESSENTIAL?

Basic research in this field is essential to innovation in medicine. As medical device products proliferate, basic scientific understanding is critical to adequate evaluation of their safety and efficacy. Bioengineering research can make major contributions to decreasing the costs of health care and to improving the quality of care, particularly in the area of restoration of body functions.

Basic research will enhance the U.S. leadership role in the development of medical devices. This field is central to our economic growth and international competitiveness, particularly when global competitors are developing R&D strategies to enter the medical devices field.

WHY HAS RESEARCH SUPPORT BEEN OVERLOOKED?

Due to the interdisciplinary nature of biomaterials, biomedical imaging and biomedical engineering research, the development of a national infrastructure is necessary to support basic research. While we have a strong tradition of government support for basic science through the NIH, bioengineering has not received comparable support. Total support for all bioengineering projects at NIH totalled $40.07 million out of a budget of $8 billion.

WHAT CAN WE DO ABOUT IT?

An NIH sponsored study is necessary to determine the status of bioengineering research, the levels of present funding and support, and to offer proposals to Congress for improving the present funding policies. The reauthorization of the National Institutes of Health provides an opportunity to ask NIH to conduct this vital study.

Attached is proposed language to include in the Reauthorization Bill.●

● Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I support the National Institutes of Health Reauthorization Act because the health of our citizens is a priority that has not received adequate attention.

It is time to declare war on heart disease, cancer, AIDS, osteoporosis, and Alzheimer's disease—the real enemies we face today. We are a nation rich in resources; we must dedicate these resources to fighting these diseases.

I am especially proud to be an original cosponsor of this bill because it will begin to rectify the gender imbalance in health research. This bill would permanently establish the Office for Research on Women's Health, mandate the inclusion of women in clinical trials, establish contraception and infertility research centers, and authorize critically needed funds for research on breast cancer, ovarian, and other reproductive cancers.

Mr. President, it is time to listen to the people. I urge my colleagues to support this important bill.●

By Mr. FORD: (for himself, Mr. HATFIELD, Mr. MITCHELL, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. WELLSTONE, Mr. SARBANES, Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN, Mr. CONRAD, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. PELL, Mr. MOYNIHAN, and Mr. RIEGLE

S. 2. A bill to establish national voter registration procedures for Federal elections, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

NATIONAL VOTER REGISTRATION ACT OF 1993

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, today, I am introducing the National Voter Registration Act of 1993. This bill, commonly referred to as the motor-voter bill, will establish universal voter registration procedures for Federal elections. I am pleased to be joined in this effort by the distinguished senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. HATFIELD].

The bill which Senator HATFIELD and I are introducing is the same bill which passed both Houses of Congress in the 102d Congress. It is the same bill which was introduced in the House of Representatives earlier this month. And, it is the same bill which has the endorsement of President Clinton.

Mr. President, the motor-voter bill is the culmination of long term effort to reform the burdensome and confusing registration practices that exist in the States. Throughout our Nation's history, through constitutional amendment and various other laws, the Congress has sought to expand the franchise to more and more citizens. Because of those efforts, there are no more poll taxes or literacy tests. Women are no longer prohibited from voting. The right to vote has been expanded to include those who are 18 years of age and older. And it is required that the polling place be accessible to disabled and elderly citizens.

Unfortunately, despite these historic efforts to secure the right to vote for all Americans, there remains one final roadblock to full citizen participation. And that is the confusing array of registration practices. It is these registration practices that are frustrating people from getting to the ballot box.

The reform of archaic and antiquated voter registration practices is long overdue. That is what the motor-voter bill is all about.

Mr. President, I think we are all encouraged by the fact that in the 1992 election, 55 percent of the eligible voters in this country went to the polls. This represents an increase of 4 percentage points from the 1988 Presidential election. But the reality is that almost 70 million Americans are unable to vote because they are not registered.

Mr. President, the right to vote is the fundamental right of every eligible citizen in this country. Yet, too many people are being denied that right because they have not successfully maneuvered the confusing maze of registration practices that continue to exist. If the right to vote is a fundamental right, why is the burden to register placed upon the citizen? It should be the role of government to see that every eligible citizen is offered the change to register in the most convenient and accessible manner possible. And that is what the motor-voter bill is all about.

Motor-voter creates an active voter registration program that is in tune with our ever mobile and busy Nation. It seeks to create a program of voter registration that will reach almost all of the eligible voters.

What does the motor-voter bill do exactly?

It establishes national voter registration procedures for elections to Federal office.

States will be required to establish voter registration procedures: First, simultaneously with an application for a driver's license; second, by uniform mail application; and third, by application in person, either at an appropriate registration office, or at a Federal, State or private sector location, the so-called agency based registration.

The bill prohibits purging for nonvoting and requires that the name of a registered voter may only be removed from the list of eligible voters at the request of the voter; by reason of death; by a change of residence; or for criminal conviction or mental incapacity, as provided by State law.

Further, the bill provides that any State program or activity to protect the integrity of the electoral process by ensuring an accurate and current voter registration roll must be uniform, nondiscriminatory, and in compliance with the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

States must conduct a general program that makes a reasonable effort to remove the name of ineligible voters by reason of death or a change of residence. The State must complete such a program at least 90 days before a Federal election.

No State may remove the name of a voter from the rolls due to a possible change of address unless the registrant confirms in writing or has failed to respond to a mail notice and has not appeared to vote in two Federal general elections following the date of the notice.

Mr. President, the motor-voter bill creates a balanced three-tier approach to voter registration. It expands the opportunities for eligible citizens to vote while protecting the integrity of the voter rolls with proven and effective safeguards against fraud. It clearly establishes that fraud in voting and voter registration is a Federal crime. And it applies the same Federal criminal penalties as in the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Mr. President, motor-voter exists in some form in 28 States, including the District of Columbia. Mail registration exists in 28 States and the District of Columbia. Their experiences have proven that active voter registration programs are effective in increasing the rolls of eligible voters. And these programs have also proven effective in safeguarding the integrity of our voter rolls.

Mr. President, in the 102d Congress, the motor-voter bill received widespread support. There were several editorials in newspapers across the country calling on the Congress and then-President Bush to sign this legislation. One editorial in particular, which appeared in the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, summarized in a very clear manner the reasons for this legislation:

This increasingly mobile nation has left too much to chance in enrolling people in the democratic process. In an era of fast food, instant gratification and see-it-now TV, it's appalling that government requires people to jump through hoops and scale ladders to register to vote. What the United States needs is an active voter registration policy, one that is bent on including people rather than leaving certain ones out.

Mr. President, both Senator HATFIELD and I have said that we cannot guarantee an increase in voter turnout with this bill. But, I am encouraged by the fact that registered voters do vote.

Last fall, an article appeared in the Brookings Review by Ruy Teixeira, pronounced Roy Tess-era, entitled "Voter Turnout in America: Ten Myths." The author dispels 10 myths about low voter turnout with 10 realities. The 10th myth, according to the author, is that "there is nothing we can do to increase voter turnout, given the current sorry state of American politics." But the author explains in his reality that "there are quite a few things we could do to increase voter turnout, some of which are virtually certain to work."

Among those things that are certain to work, Mr. Teixeira says that:

Simply making it easier to vote, by reforming the personal registration system, would probably result in increased levels of voter turnout.  My estimate is an increase of about 8 percentage points, which translates into adding about 15 million voters to the electorate—a substantial expansion of citizen participation by any reasonable standard.

Motor-voter is not the cure to reverse the trend of low voter turnout. But we strongly believe that is one step in the right direction toward increasing the chances of higher voter participation.

By ensuring that almost every eligible citizen will be registered to vote, we can ensure that every eligible citizen will have the opportunity to go to the polls on election day. No one will have to stay home simply because they are not registered. Mr. President, democracy is not a spectator sport. It requires the participation of all citizens, in order to make our Nation work better. Motor-voter is the season ticket to participate in our democratic system. You may not always want to participate or become involved in an election; however, ensuring that you are registered to vote guarantees that when you do want to make your voice heard, you will have that opportunity.

Mr. President, the vitality of our Republic depends on the strength of our participation. The National Voter Registration Act strengthens democracy by making voter registration an automatic right of citizenship.

With the support of our new President, I am more confident than ever before that motor-voter will become law.

I urge my colleagues to join Senator HATFIELD and myself in supporting this legislation. As the New York Times has noted in the past, "support democracy by supporting motor-voter."

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill and a summary be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "National Voter Registration Act of 1993".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—
(1) the right of citizens of the United States to vote is a fundamental right;
(2) it is the duty of the Federal, State, and local governments to promote the exercise of that right; and

(3) discriminatory and unfair registration laws and procedures can have a direct and damaging effect on voter participation in elections for Federal office and disproportionately harm voter participation by various groups, including racial minorities.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this Act are—

(1) to establish procedures that will increase the number of eligible citizens who register to vote in elections for Federal office;

(2) to make it possible for Federal, State, and local governments to implement this Act in a manner that enhances the participation of eligible citizens as voters in elections for Federal office;

(3) to protect the integrity of the electoral process; and

(4) to ensure that accurate and current voter registration rolls are maintained.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this Act—

(1) the term "election" has the meaning stated in section 301(1) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 431(1));

(2) the term "Federal office" has the meaning stated in section 301(3) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 431(3));

(3) the term "motor vehicle driver's license" includes any personal identification document issued by a State motor vehicle authority;

(4) the term "State" means a State of the United States and the District of Columbia; and

(5) the term "voter registration agency" means an office designated under section 7(a)(1) to perform voter registration activities.

SEC. 4. NATIONAL PROCEDURES FOR VOTER REGISTRATION FOR ELECTIONS FOR FEDERAL OFFICE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (b), notwithstanding any other Federal or State law, in addition to any other method of voter registration provided for under State law, each State shall establish procedures to register to vote in elections for Federal office—

(1) by application made simultaneously with an application for a motor vehicle driver's license pursuant to section 5;

(2) by mail application pursuant to section 6; and

(3) by application in person—

(A) at the appropriate registration site designated with respect to the residence of the applicant in accordance with State law; and

(B) at a Federal, State, or nongovernmental office designated under section 7.

(b) NONAPPLICABILITY TO CERTAIN STATES.—This Act does not apply to a State described in either or both of the following paragraphs:

(1) A State in which there is no voter registration requirement for any voter in the State with respect to an election for Federal office.

(2) A State in which all voters in the State may register to vote at the polling place at the time of voting in a general election for Federal office.

SEC. 5. SIMULTANEOUS APPLICATION FOR VOTER REGISTRATION AND APPLICATION FOR MOTOR VEHICLE DRIVER'S LICENSE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Except as provided in subsection (b), each State motor vehicle driver's license application (including any renewal application) submitted to the appropriate State motor vehicle authority under State law shall serve as an application for voter registration with respect to elections for Federal office.

(2) An application for voter registration submitted under paragraph (1) shall be considered as updating any previous voter registration by the applicant.

(b) DECLINATION TO REGISTER.—(1) An applicant for a State motor vehicle driver's license may decline in writing to be registered by means of the motor vehicle driver's license application.

(2) No information relating to a declination pursuant to paragraph (1) may be used for any purpose other than voter registration.

(c) FORMS AND PROCEDURES.—(1) Each State shall include a voter registration application form for elections for Federal office as part of an application for a State motor vehicle driver's license.

(2) The voter registration application portion of an application for a State motor vehicle driver's license—

(A) may not require any information that duplicates information required in the driver's license portion of the form (other than a second signature or other information necessary under subparagraph (C));

(B) shall include a means by which an applicant may decline to register to vote pursuant to subsection (b);

(C) may require only the minimum amount of information necessary to—

(i) prevent duplicate voter registrations; and

(ii) enable State election officials to assess the eligibility of the applicant and to administer voter registration and other parts of the election process;

(D) shall include a statement that—

(i) states each eligibility requirement (including citizenship);

(ii) contains an attestation that the applicant meets each such requirement; and

(iii) requires the signature of the applicant, under penalty of perjury; and

(E) shall be made available (as submitted by the applicant, or in machine readable or other format) to the appropriate State election official as provided by State law.

(d) CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—Any change of address form submitted in accordance with State law for purposes of a State motor vehicle driver's license shall serve as notification of change of address for voter registration with respect to elections for Federal office for the registrant involved unless the registrant states on the form that the change of address is not for voter registration purposes.

SEC. 6. MAIL REGISTRATION.

(a) FORM.—(1) Each State shall accept and use the mail voter registration application form prescribed by the Federal Election Commission pursuant to section 9(a)(2) for the registration of voters in elections for Federal office.

(2) In addition to accepting and using the form described in paragraph (1), a State may develop and use a mail voter registration form that meets all of the criteria stated in section 9(b) for the registration of voters in elections for Federal office.

(3) A form described in paragraph (1) or (2) shall be accepted and used for notification of a registrant's change of address.

(b) AVAILABILITY OF FORMS.—The chief State election official of a State shall make the forms described in subsection (a) available for distribution through governmental and private entities, with particular emphasis on making them available for organized voter registration programs.

(c) FIRST-TIME VOTERS.—(1) Subject to paragraph (2), a State may by law require a person to vote in person if—

(A) the person was registered to vote in a jurisdiction by mail; and

(B) the person has not previously voted in that jurisdiction.

(2) Paragraph (1) does not apply in the case of a person—

(A) who is entitled to vote by absentee ballot under the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (42 U.S.C. 1973ff-1 et seq.);

(B) who is provided the right to vote otherwise than in person under section 3(b)(2)(B)(ii) of the Voting Accessibility for the Elderly and Handicapped Act (42 U.S.C. 1973ee-1(b)(2)(B)(ii)); or

(C) who is entitled to vote otherwise than in person under any other Federal law.

SEC. 7. VOTER REGISTRATION AGENCIES.

(a) DESIGNATION.—(1) Each State shall designate agencies for the registration of voters in elections for Federal office.

(2) Each State shall designate as voter registration agencies—

(A) all offices in the State that provide public assistance, unemployment compensation, or related services; and

(B) all offices in the State that provide State-funded programs primarily engaged in providing services to persons with disabilities.

(3)(A) In addition to voter registration agencies designated under paragraph (2), each State shall designate other offices within the State as voter registration agencies.

(B) Voter registration agencies designated under subparagraph (A) may include—

(i) State or local government offices such as public libraries, public schools, offices of city and county clerks (including marriage license bureaus), fishing and hunting license bureaus, government revenue offices, and offices not described in paragraph (2)(B) that provide services to persons with disabilities; and

(ii) Federal and nongovernmental offices, with the agreement of such offices.

(4)(A) At each voter registration agency, the following services shall be made available:

(i) Distribution of mail voter registration application forms in accordance with paragraph (6).

(ii) Assistance to applicants in completing voter registration application forms.

(iii) Acceptance of completed voter registration application forms for transmittal to the appropriate State election official.

(B) If a voter registration agency designated under paragraph (2)(B) provides services to a person with a disability at the person's home, the agency shall provide the services described in subparagraph (A) at the person's home.

(5) A person who provides service described in paragraph (4) shall not—

(A) seek to influence an applicant's political preference or party registration;

(B) display any such political preference or party allegiance; or

(C) make any statement to an applicant or take any action the purpose or effect of which is to discourage the applicant from registering to vote.

(6) A voter registration agency that is an office that provides service or assistance in addition to conducting voter registration shall—

(A) distribute with each application for such service or assistance, and with each recertification, renewal, or change of address form relating to such service or assistance—

(i) the mail voter registration application form described in section 9(a)(2); or

(ii) the office's own form if it is substantially equivalent to the form described in section 9(a)(2).

unless the applicant, in writing, declines to register to vote;

(B) to the greatest extent practicable, incorporate in application forms and other forms used at those offices for purposes other than voter registration a means by which a person who completes the form may decline, in writing, to register to vote in elections for Federal office; and

(C) provide to each applicant who does not decline to register to vote the same degree of assistance with regard to the completion of the registration application form as is provided by the office with regard to the completion of its own forms.

(7) No information relating to a declaration to register to vote in connection with an application made at an office described in paragraph (6) may be used for any purpose other than voter registration.

(b) FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND PRIVATE SECTOR COOPERATION.—All departments, agencies, and other entities of the executive branch of the Federal Government shall, to the greatest extent practicable, cooperate with the States in carrying out subsection (a), and all nongovernmental entities are encouraged to do so.

(c) TRANSMITTAL DEADLINE.—(1) Subject to paragraph (2), a completed registration application accepted at a voter registration agency shall be transmitted to the appropriate State election official not later than 10 days after the date of acceptance.

(2) If a registration application is accepted within 5 days before the last day for registration to vote in an election, the application shall be transmitted to the appropriate State election official not later than 5 days after the date of acceptance.

SEC. 8. REQUIREMENTS WITH RESPECT TO ADMINISTRATION OF VOTER REGISTRATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—In the administration of voter registration for elections for Federal office, each State shall—

(1) ensure that any eligible applicant is registered to vote in an election—

(A) in the case of registration with a motor vehicle application under section 5, if the valid voter registration form of the applicant is submitted to the appropriate State motor vehicle authority not later than the lesser of 30 days, or the period provided by State law, before the date of the election;

(B) in the case of registration by mail under section 6, if the valid voter registration form of the applicant is postmarked not later than the lesser of 30 days, or the period provided by State law, before the date of the election;

(C) in the case of registration at a voter registration agency, if the valid voter registration form of the applicant is accepted at the voter registration agency not later than the lesser of 30 days, or the period provided by State law, before the date of the election; and

(D) in any other case, if the valid voter registration form of the applicant is received by the appropriate State election official not later than the lesser of 30 days, or the period provided by State law, before the date of the election;

(2) require the appropriate State election official to send notice to each applicant of the disposition of the application;

(3) provide that the name of a registrant may not be removed from the official list of eligible voters except—

(A) at the request of the registrant;

(B) as provided by State law, by reason of criminal conviction or mental incapacity; or

(C) as provided under paragraph (4);

(4) conduct a general program that makes a reasonable effort to remove the names of ineligible voters from the official lists of eligible voters by reason of—

(A) the death of the registrant; or

(B) a change in the residence of the registrant, in accordance with subsections (b), (c), and (d);

(5) inform applicants under sections 5, 6, and 7 of—

(A) voter eligibility requirements; and

(B) penalties provided by law for submission of a false voter registration application; and

(6) ensure that the identity of the voter registration agency through which any particular voter is registered is not disclosed to the public.

(b) CONFIRMATION OF VOTER REGISTRATION.—Any State program or activity to protect the integrity of the electoral process by ensuring the maintenance of an accurate and current voter registration roll for elections for Federal office—

(1) shall be uniform, nondiscriminatory, and in compliance with the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 1973 et seq.); and

(2) shall not result in the removal of the name of any person from the official list of voters registered to vote in an election for Federal office by reason of the person's failure to vote.

(c) VOTER REMOVAL PROGRAMS.—(1) A State may meet the requirement of subsection (a)(4) by establishing a program under which—

(A) change-of-address information supplied by the Postal Service through its licensees is used to identify registrants whose addresses may have changed; and

(B) if it appears from information provided by the Postal Service that—

(i) a registrant has moved to a different residence address in the same registrar's jurisdiction in which the registrant is currently registered, the registrar changes the registration records to show the new address and sends the registrant a notice of the change by forwardable mail and a postage prepaid pre-addressed return form by which the registrant may verify or correct the address information; or

(ii) the registrant has moved to a different residence address not in the same registrar's jurisdiction, the registrar uses the notice procedure described in subsection (d)(2) to confirm the change of address.

(2)(A) A State shall complete, not later than 90 days prior to the date of a primary or general election for Federal office, any program the purpose of which is to systematically remove the names of ineligible voters from the official lists of eligible voters.

(B) Subparagraph (A) shall not be construed to preclude—

(i) the removal of names from official lists of voters on a basis described in paragraph (3) (A) or (B) or (4)(A) of subsection (a); or

(ii) correction of registration records pursuant to this Act.

(d) REMOVAL OF NAMES FROM VOTING ROLLS.—(1) A State shall not remove the name of a registrant from the official list of eligible voters in elections for Federal office on the ground that the registrant has changed residence unless the registrant—

(A) confirms in writing that the registrant has changed residence to a place outside the registrar's jurisdiction in which the registrant is registered; or

(B)(i) has failed to respond to a notice described in paragraph (2); and

(ii) has not voted or appeared to vote (and, if necessary, correct the registrar's record of the registrant's address) in an election during the period beginning on the date of the notice and ending on the day after the date of the second general election for Federal office that occurs after the date of the notice.

(2) A notice is described in this paragraph if it is a postage prepaid and pre-addressed return card, sent by forwardable mail, on which the registrant may state his or her current address, together with a notice to the following effect:

(A) If the registrant did not change his or her residence, or changed residence but remained in the registrar's jurisdiction, the registrant should return the card not later than the time provided for mail registration under subsection (a)(1)(B). If the card is not returned, affirmation or confirmation of the registrant's address may be required before the registrant is permitted to vote in a Federal election during the period beginning on the date of the notice and ending on the day after the date of the second general election for Federal office that occurs after the date of the notice, and if the registrant does not vote in an election during that period the registrant's name will be removed from the list of eligible voters.

(B) If the registrant has changed residence to a place outside the registrar's jurisdiction in which the registrant is registered, information concerning how the registrant can continue to be eligible to vote.

(3) A voting registrar shall correct an official list of eligible voters in elections for Federal office in accordance with change of residence information obtained in conformance with this subsection.

(e) PROCEDURE FOR VOTING FOLLOWING FAILURE TO RETURN CARD.—(1) A registrant who has moved from an address in the area covered by a polling place to an address in the same area shall, notwithstanding failure to notify the registrar of the change of address prior to the date of an election, be permitted to vote at that polling place upon oral or written affirmation by the registrant of the change of address before an election official at that polling place.

(2)(A) A registrant who has moved from an address in the area covered by one polling place to an address in an area covered by a second polling place within the same registrar's jurisdiction and the same congressional district and who has failed to notify the registrar of the change of address prior to the date of an election, at the option of the registrant—

(i) shall be permitted to correct the voting records and vote at the registrant's former polling place, upon oral or written affirmation by the registrant of the new address before an election official at that polling place; or

(ii)(I) shall be permitted to correct the voting records and vote at a central location within the same registrar's jurisdiction designated by the registrar where a list of eligible voters is maintained, upon written affirmation by the registrant of the new address on a standard form provided by the registrar at the central location; or

(II) shall be permitted to correct the voting records for purposes of voting in future elections at the appropriate polling place for the current address and, if permitted by State law, shall be permitted to vote in the present election, upon confirmation by the registrant of the new address by such means as are required by law.

(B) If State law permits the registrant to vote in the current election upon oral or written affirmation by the registrant of the new address at a polling place described in subparagraph (A)(ii)(II), voting at the former polling place as described in subparagraph

(A)(i) and at a central location as described in subparagraph (A)(ii)(I) need not be provided as alternative options.

(3) If the registration records indicate that a registrant has moved from an address in the area covered by a polling place, the registrant shall, upon oral or written affirmation by the registrant before an election official at that polling place that the registrant continues to reside at the address previously made known to the registrar, be permitted to vote at that polling place.

(f) CHANGE OF VOTING ADDRESS WITHIN A JURISDICTION.—In the case of a change of address, for voting purposes, of a registrant to another address within the same registrar's jurisdiction, the registrar shall correct the voting registration list accordingly, and the registrant's name may not be removed from the official list of eligible voters by reason of such a change of address except as provided in subsection (d).

(g) CONVICTION IN FEDERAL COURT.—(1) On the conviction of a person of a felony in a district court of the United States, the United States attorney shall give written notice of the conviction to the chief State election official designated under section 10 of the State of the person's residence.

(2) A notice given pursuant to paragraph (1) shall include—

- (A) the name of the offender;
- (B) the offender's age and residence address;
- (C) the date of entry of the judgment;
- (D) a description of the offenses of which the offender was convicted; and
- (E) the sentence imposed by the court.

(3) On request of the chief State election official of a State or other State official with responsibility for determining the effect that a conviction may have on an offender's qualification to vote, the United States attorney shall provide such additional information as the United States attorney may have concerning the offender and the offense of which the offender was convicted.

(4) If a conviction of which notice was given pursuant to paragraph (1) is overturned, the United States attorney shall give the official to whom the notice was given written notice of the vacation of the judgment.

(5) The chief State election official shall notify the voter registration officials of the local jurisdiction in which an offender resides of the information received under this subsection.

(h) REDUCED POSTAL RATES.—(1) Subchapter II of chapter 36 of title 39, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§3629. Reduced rates for voter registration purposes

"The Postal Service shall make available to a State or local voting registration official the rate for any class of mail that is available to a qualified nonprofit organization under section 3626 for the purpose of making a mailing that the official certifies is required or authorized by the National Voter Registration Act of 1992."

(2) Section 2401(c) of title 39, United States Code, is amended by striking "and 3626(a)-(h)" and inserting "3626(a)-(h), and 3629".

(3) Section 3627 of title 39, United States Code, is amended by striking "or 3626 of this title," and inserting "3626, or 3629 of this title".

(4) The table of sections for chapter 36 of title 39, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 3628 the following new item:

"3629. Reduced rates for voter registration purposes."

(i) PUBLIC DISCLOSURE OF VOTER REGISTRATION ACTIVITIES.—(1) Each State shall maintain for at least 2 years and shall make available for public inspection and, where available, photocopying at a reasonable cost, all records concerning the implementation of programs and activities conducted for the purpose of ensuring the accuracy and currency of official lists of eligible voters, except to the extent that such records relate to a declination to register to vote or to the identity of a voter registration agency through which any particular voter is registered.

(2) The records maintained pursuant to paragraph (1) shall include lists of the names and addresses of all persons to whom notices described in subsection (d)(2) are sent, and information concerning whether or not each such person has responded to the notice as of the date that inspection of the records is made.

(j) DEFINITION.—For the purposes of this section, the term "registrar's jurisdiction" means—

(1) an incorporated city, town, borough, or other form of municipality;

(2) if voter registration is maintained by a county, parish, or other unit of government that governs a larger geographic area than a municipality, the geographic area governed by that unit of government; or

(3) if voter registration is maintained on a consolidated basis for more than one municipality or other unit of government by an office that performs all of the functions of a voting registrar, the geographic area of the consolidated municipalities or other geographic units.

SEC. 9. FEDERAL COORDINATION AND REGULATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Federal Election Commission—

(1) in consultation with the chief election officers of the States, the heads of the departments, agencies, and other entities of the executive branch of the Federal Government, and representatives of nongovernmental entities, shall prescribe such regulations as are necessary to carry out this Act;

(2) in consultation with the chief election officers of the States, shall develop a mail voter registration application form for elections for Federal office;

(3) not later than June 30 of each odd-numbered year, shall submit to the Congress a report assessing the impact of this Act on the administration of elections for Federal office during the preceding 2-year period and including recommendations for improvements in Federal and State procedures, forms, and other matters affected by this Act; and

(4) shall provide information to the States with respect to the responsibilities of the States under this Act.

(b) CONTENTS OF MAIL VOTER REGISTRATION FORM.—The mail voter registration form developed under subsection (a)(2)—

(1) may require only such identifying information (including the signature of the applicant) and other information (including data relating to previous registration by the applicant), as is necessary to enable the appropriate State election official to assess the eligibility of the applicant and to administer voter registration and other parts of the election process;

(2) shall include a statement that—

(A) specifies each eligibility requirement (including citizenship);

(B) contains an attestation that the applicant meets each such requirement; and

(C) requires the signature of the applicant, under penalty of perjury; and

(3) may not include any requirement for notarization or other formal authentication.

SEC. 10. DESIGNATION OF CHIEF STATE ELECTION OFFICIAL.

Each State shall designate a State officer or employee as the chief State election official to be responsible for coordination of State responsibilities under this Act.

SEC. 11. CIVIL ENFORCEMENT AND PRIVATE RIGHT OF ACTION.

(a) ATTORNEY GENERAL.—The Attorney General may bring a civil action in an appropriate district court for such declaratory or injunctive relief as is necessary to carry out this Act.

(b) PRIVATE RIGHT OF ACTION.—(1) A person who is aggrieved by a violation of this Act may provide written notice of the violation to the chief election official of the State involved.

(2) If the violation is not corrected within 90 days after receipt of a notice under paragraph (1), or within 20 days after receipt of the notice if the violation occurred within 120 days before the date of an election for Federal office, the aggrieved person may bring a civil action in an appropriate district court for declaratory or injunctive relief with respect to the violation.

(3) If the violation occurred within 30 days before the date of an election for Federal office, the aggrieved person need not provide notice to the chief election official of the State under paragraph (1) before bringing a civil action under paragraph (2).

(c) ATTORNEY'S FEES.—In a civil action under this section, the court may allow the prevailing party (other than the United States) reasonable attorney fees, including litigation expenses, and costs.

(d) RELATION TO OTHER LAWS.—(1) The rights and remedies established by this section are in addition to all other rights and remedies provided by law, and neither the rights and remedies established by this section nor any other provision of this Act shall supersede, restrict, or limit the application of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 1973 et seq.).

(2) Nothing in this Act authorizes or requires conduct that is prohibited by the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 1973 et seq.).

SEC. 12. CRIMINAL PENALTIES.

A person, including an election official, who in any election for Federal office—

(1) knowingly and willfully intimidates, threatens, or coerces, or attempts to intimidate, threaten, or coerce, any person for—

(A) registering to vote, or voting, or attempting to register or vote;

(B) urging or aiding any person to register to vote, to vote, or to attempt to register or vote; or

(C) exercising any right under this Act; or

(2) knowingly and willfully deprives, defrauds, or attempts to deprive or defraud the residents of a State of a fair and impartially conducted election process, by—

(A) the procurement or submission of voter registration applications that are known by the person to be materially false, fictitious, or fraudulent under the laws of the State in which the election is held; or shall be fined in accordance with title 18, United States Code, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

(B) the procurement, casting, or tabulation of ballots that are known by the person to be materially false, fictitious, or fraudulent under the laws of the State in which the election is held.

SEC. 13. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act shall take effect—

(1) with respect to a State that on the date of enactment of this Act has a provision in the constitution of the State that would preclude compliance with this Act unless the State maintained separate Federal and State official lists of eligible voters, on January 1, 1996; and

(2) with respect to any State not described in paragraph (1), on January 1, 1995.

SUMMARY OF THE NATIONAL VOTER REGISTRATION ACT OF 1993

To establish national voter registration procedures for elections for Federal office, and for other purposes.

States shall establish procedures to permit voter registration: i. Simultaneously with application for a driver's license; ii. by uniform mail application; iii. by application in person, either at an appropriate registration office, or at a Federal, State or private sector location—agency registration.

The Act does not apply to States with either or both of the following: in a State in which there is no voter registration requirement for any voter in the State with respect to elections for Federal office or to a State in which all voters may register to vote at the polling place at the time of voting in a general election for Federal office; the term "State" means a State of the United States and the District of Columbia.

DRIVER'S LICENSE APPLICATION REGISTRATION

1. Unless a person declines in writing, an application for or the renewal of a driver's license shall serve as an application for voter registration.

2. The voter registration application shall be part of the driver's license application; shall not require information which duplicates the license portion of the form except such information as shall be required to prevent duplicate registration and to make an assessment of eligibility; shall include a means by which an applicant may decline to register in writing; shall include a statement that specifies each eligibility requirement, contains attestation clause that applicant meets each requirement and requires signature of applicant under penalty of perjury; and shall be made available to appropriate state election officials.

3. A driver's license change of address notice may serve as a voter registration change of address unless the driver declines.

MAIL REGISTRATION

1. Each State shall accept and use a mail voter registration application form promulgated by the FEC. In addition, a State may develop and use its own form which meets the criteria of the FEC form. Notarization or other formal authentication is not allowed. Forms shall be readily available for public and private distribution, and especially for organized registration programs.

2. A State may, by law, require a personal appearance to vote if the person was registered to vote in a local jurisdiction by mail and the person has not previously voted in that jurisdiction. Individuals who are entitled to vote by absentee ballot under the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act and those provided the right to vote other than in person by the Voting Accessibility for the Elderly and Handicapped Act are exempt.

AGENCY REGISTRATION

1. State, Federal and private sector locations shall be designated for the distribution and processing of voter registration applications. All offices providing public assistance, unemployment compensation, and related services, and all offices which provide State-funded programs primarily engaged in providing services to persons with disabilities, shall be included in the designated locations and shall provide same assistance in completion of registration application as is provided with regard to that agency's forms. States shall designate other agencies, such as libraries, schools, fishing/hunting license bureaus, marriage license offices, and any offices that provide services to persons with disabilities that are not included in the mandatory section, etc. to provide forms, assistance and processing of applications.

2. The Federal Government shall cooperate in this program.

3. An applicant for services may decline in writing to be registered to vote and no information relating to a declination may be used for any other purpose.

4. If a voter registration office designated by a State provides services to a person with disabilities at the person's home, the office shall provide the voting registration services at the person's home.

OTHER REQUIREMENTS

1. Registration cut-off is 30 days before election or such lesser period as State may provide.

2. State election official will notify each applicant of the disposition of his or her registration application.

3. A voter's name may be removed from voter rolls only: (1) at the request of the voter; or (2) as provided by State law, by reason of criminal conviction or mental incapacity. The States shall conduct a general program that makes a reasonable effort to remove the names of ineligible voters by reason of (1) death; or (2) by reason of a change of residence of the voter. A voter's name may not be removed for non-voting.

4. Any State program or activity designed to ensure the maintenance of an accurate and current voter registration roll shall be uniform, nondiscriminatory, and in compliance with the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

5. A State must complete a systematic procedure to confirm voting lists at least 90 days before a Federal election.

6. A State may use the National Change of Address (NCOA) program and be in full compliance with the requirements of the Act and may make the change of address on the registration rolls with a notification to the voter of such change.

7. No State may remove the name of a voter from the rolls due to possible change of address unless the registrant confirms in writing having moved out of voting jurisdiction, or the voter fails to respond to a notice and does not appear to vote and correct the record during period between date of notice and second general election for Federal office. Where the change of address is to an address covered by the same polling place, the voter shall be permitted to vote upon oral or written affirmation of the change of address. If a registrant has moved to a residence in a new polling place within the jurisdiction of the same voting registrar and the same congressional district, the registrant shall be permitted to vote in one of the following manners, at the option of the registrant: (1) with oral or written affirmation of the new address at the old polling place or, (2) upon written affirmation of the change of address at a designated central location where a list of eligible voters is maintained. Such a registrant may also appear at the appropriate polling place for the new address for the purposes of correcting the registration record, and shall vote, if permitted by State law. If State law permits voting at the new polling place with oral or written affirmation, voting at the former polling place or a designated central location need not be provided as options. If registration records indicate that a registrant has moved, the voter may vote upon oral or written affirmation that the voter continues to reside at the same address.

8. The FEC will promulgate regulations, prescribe the mail registration application form for use by all States, and report to Congress its assessment of the Act's impact and its recommendations following each general Federal election.

9. Civil enforcement through injunction or declaratory relief may be brought by U.S. Attorney General, or a person with notice to the chief election official of the State. The rights and remedies established by the Act are in addition to any other rights and remedies provided by law and no provision shall supersede, restrict, or limit the application of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Nothing in this Act authorizes or requires conduct that is prohibited by the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

10. Federal criminal penalties will apply for registration offenses which are knowing and willful.

11. State and local voting registration officials would be able to receive reduced postal rates for the purpose of making any mailing which is required or authorized by the Act. This reduced rate would be funded through a revenue foregone appropriation.

12. Each State is required to maintain and make available for public inspection and copying upon payment of reasonable costs, all records concerning the implementation of programs and activities designed to ensure the accuracy of the voting rolls. These records shall include lists of the names and addresses of those individuals sent notices and information regarding whether or not these individuals have responded. The identity of the voter registration agency through which any particular voter is registered shall not be disclosed to the public.

13. The effective date of the Act is January 1, 1995 for all States; except those States that have constitutional obstacles to conforming state requirements of the Act, in which case, the effective date would be January 1, 1996.

Mr. HATFIELD. I am pleased to join my colleague from Kentucky, Senator FORD, in introducing today the National Voter Registration Act of 1993, commonly known as the motor-voter bill. This is the same legislation which has passed this body before and its mission remains identical—to increase access to the voting system in America. The difference this year is that the time for this legislation has now arrived. Citizens across the Nation are calling for electoral reform covering everything from campaign financing to term limits. Overhauling our electoral process must begin by addressing the most fundamental feature of our democracy—registering to vote.

Yesterday, the Republican leader, Senator DOLE, noted that we are all Americans first, not Democrats or Republicans. I ask my colleagues today to consider this legislation in light of our common heritage in the American democracy. We can work together, in a bipartisan fashion, to make sure this legislation protects our electoral process from fraud and abuse and that it works to ease access for our citizens, rather than restrict participation in the process with its complications.

Voter participation in our most recent election improved significantly. Fifty-five percent of the registered voters in America voted in the 1992 election, approximately 13 million more people voting than in 1988. Our citizens, coming out in droves in November, recognized and enhanced their power as voters. Each voter speaks not as a lone voice, but as part of a community of voices. Americans voted this year because they felt power of this community.

But, while this last election made clear to us the vast numbers of people who voted, it also brought to light the vast numbers of people who did not. Why did millions of people stay home on November 3? We may never know the answer. One possibility, however, is that these people felt so far removed from the political process that they believed that one vote would make little difference in their lives. They believed that their vote would not count for much, that their voice would not be heard by anyone who would want to listen.

Mr. President, their concern is reflected in the core of the motor-voter proposal. This legislation is about spreading the word that every vote counts. Each American has a role to play and ultimately, a responsibility to exercise their power as a citizen of this country. We as policymakers have an obligation to make the system as accessible and uncomplicated as we can while still ensuring the integrity of each individual's vote. This pure purpose is not about party affiliation, or struggles for power, it is about letting our democracy work.

The concept of motor-voter is a simple one. All Americans will be able to register to vote at the same facility in which they obtain their driver's license. Voting registration will be transformed from the patchwork of State regulations which exist today to a uniform procedure for voter registration. The concept is straightforward and fair. This bill contains safeguards against the possibility of voter fraud and provisions for assisting States with potential initial costs. While I have worked to improve the bill's antifraud provisions over the past few years, I remain committed to working with Members of the Senate to continue to improve the ideas contained in this legislation.

My home State of Oregon has had motor-voter registration for 2 years. It has been successful for our State and has the full support of our Governor, Barbara Roberts. I stand here today as a witness to the effectiveness and convenience of motor-voter registration. I believe my colleagues in the other 10 States with similar laws can do the same. Motor-voter, while not flawless, has proven to streamline voter registration and ultimately increase voter participation.

But 10 States are not enough. Voting registration can be made easier for the entire Nation and I believe we, as Federal policymakers, have an obligation to examine the means we have to make it happen.

Mr. President, in this last election a furious wave swept the Nation as voters cried out for change in Government. Over and over we heard about "the powers that be in Washington * * *" who, many people felt, gave no thought at all to "the folks back home." No voter should feel so removed from the very Government they helped to create. Americans are waiting for Washington to listen. What better answer can be given than our assurance that we want to hear?

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the National Voter Registration Act. Its time has come. Its has the support of our new President and of many in Congress. To see its passage this year would make the long wait worthwhile.

By Mr. BOREN (for himself, Mr. MITCHELL, Mr. FORD, Mr. BYRD, Mr. BRYAN, Mr. DECONCINI, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. REID, Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. PELL, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. LEAHY, and Mr. RIEGLE):

S. 3. A bill entitled (Congressional Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act of 1993); to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

CONGRESSIONAL CAMPAIGN SPENDING LIMIT AND ELECTION REFORM ACT OF 1993

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, it is with pride that I join our distinguished majority leader, the distinguished Presiding Officer, the President pro tempore of the Senate, the chairman of the Rules Committee, Senator FORD, Senators BRYAN, DECONCINI, and LAUTENBERG in, once again, introducing campaign finance reform. It is significant that this bill will be one of the first three bills introduced this year. It will be designated as Senate bill 3. It underlines the desire on the part of all of us offering this legislation that real reform be accomplished this year.

Yesterday, the President in his eloquent inaugural address called upon all of us to do everything that we can to make sure that the American people understand that this Capitol belongs to them, not to special interests, but to the people themselves. And we are doing exactly that in introducing this piece of legislation.

This year, as we look at the figures for the elections which have just occurred, we find that 93 percent of the incumbents running for office were re-elected. Senate incumbents were able to outspend challengers by a ratio of 2 to 1. House incumbents apparently were able to outspend their challengers by a ratio of 3 to 1. When we track where the money came from, we find that those special interests, political action committees gave to incumbents on the Senate side a ratio of $4 for every $1 they gave to challengers. In the House, political action committees gave to incumbents by a ratio of $9 to incumbents for every $1 given to challengers. Over $160 million was poured into the process by political action committees this year, and well over half the Members of Congress elected to this great institution received more than half of their campaign funds not from the people back home but from the special interest groups, the political action committees, many of them with relatively little or no connection to the home districts or home States of those to whom they make contributions.

The money chase has gone on, as not only has special interest been giving to campaigns but total campaign spending has again set new records. The average cost of winning a contested Senate seat was well over $3.6 million, and that figure may go higher when the final reports are in and there has been an opportunity to analyze them.

And so, Mr. President, as the American people view this institution which is at the heart of our democratic process, which is at the cornerstone of our constitutional system, this place where the people are to be represented themselves, their hopes, their dreams, their aspirations for this country, they receive an impression that this institution and this Capitol no longer belongs to them because they see more and more money being poured into the political process, they see that those with the most money are generally winning the elections and they see more and more of that money coming from those who have a special interest in a particular outcome on a particular piece of legislation.

There is no more significant act that we could take to restore the confidence of the American people in this institution than to pass meaningful campaign finance reform which will stop runaway campaign spending, which will stop the money chase, which will allow the Members of Congress to concentrate on solving the serious problems of this Nation instead of having to spend their time raising $15,000 or $20,000 every single week of a 6-year term in order to raise the average amount of money that it takes to get reelected, with more and more of that money not coming from the voters back home but from the special interest groups here.

And so, Mr. President, the time has come. During his election campaign, this President said that if we could pass the campaign finance reform bill similar to the bill we passed last year, he would sign it. This is the greatest opportunity that we have had, those of us who have struggled in this effort for now a decade, including the distinguished Presiding Officer, to see real reform enacted and signed into law by the President of the United States and to help in a very meaningful way to restore the confidence of the American people in this great institution.

The bill which we are introducing today is essentially the same bill that was passed by this body last year. It is introduced really in the spirit of offering it as a starting point for the legislative process this year. We realize it is not perfect.

We understand that changes will have to be made in this bill as it works its way through the legislative process. As we try to make an even stronger bill, as we consult with the new administration—and certainly over the next few days and weeks we will be consulting with our new President to receive his suggestions as to how we can improve this bill—as we consult with those on the other side of the aisle in an effort to make this truly an American bipartisan piece of legislation, we will be considering whether or not we should place limits on the amount of campaign contributions that can be carried over; we will be seeking ways in which we can tighten up even further the restrictions on the use of soft money in American politics, on the use of a system called bundling, to put together individual contributions to have special interest influence; we will be looking at the possibility of adding lobbying reform including the reform of the process in a way that would prevent former Members of Congress and those serving the executive branch to act on behalf of foreign governments.

I will be introducing a separate piece of legislation on that subject today. Hopefully, it may end up being a part of the campaign finance reform package.

We will be looking at ways we can strengthen the Federal Election Commission provisions of this bill so that we can have true and effective enforcement of its provisions.

So there are many areas in which we will be making an examination to see how we can improve this legislation. We introduce the bill today not in the spirit of saying this is the last word, this is exactly the bill that should be enacted into law but, rather, as a starting point for real legislative effort that hopefully will unite all of the Members of this body and the other body on the other side of the Capitol in a bipartisan effort to do something important for the political process and something that the American people have been demanding for a long time.

If there is any message that we should have received from the last election, it is that the American people are fed up with politics as usual. The American people have had enough of special interest influence. The American people have had enough of our having to spend our time raising campaign funds instead of solving the Nation's problems. The American people, indeed, want control of their Government back in their own hands at the grassroots where it belongs. And we can take a major step in this direction by dedicating ourselves to the proposition that Senate bill 3, which is being introduced today, will indeed become law. It can be one of the greatest contributions of the new administration, one of the greatest contributions of this new Congress. We must not rest until it is accomplished. We must not let the people down. We must keep faith with them. We must act as the trustees of this institution which is so important to the political process.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TITLE I—CONTROL OF CONGRESSIONAL CAMPAIGN SPENDING

Subtitle A—Senate Election Campaign Spending Limits and Benefits

SEC. 101. SENATE SPENDING LIMITS AND BENEFITS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—FECA is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new title:

"TITLE V—SPENDING LIMITS AND BENEFITS FOR SENATE ELECTION CAMPAIGNS

"SEC. 501. CANDIDATES ELIGIBLE TO RECEIVE BENEFITS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this title, a candidate is an eligible Senate candidate if the candidate—

"(1) meets the primary and general election filing requirements of subsections (b) and (c);

"(2) meets the primary and runoff election expenditure limits of subsection (d); and

"(3) meets the threshold contribution requirements of subsection (e).

"(b) PRIMARY FILING REQUIREMENTS.—(1) The requirements of this subsection are met if the candidate files with the Secretary of the Senate a declaration that—

"(A) the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees—

"(i) will meet the primary and runoff election expenditure limits of subsection (d); and

"(ii) will only accept contributions for the primary and runoff elections which do not exceed such limits;

"(B) the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees will meet the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b); and

"(C) the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees will meet the limitation on expenditures from personal funds under section 502(a).

"(2) The declaration under paragraph (1) shall be filed not later than the date the candidate files as a candidate for the primary election.

"(c) GENERAL ELECTION FILING REQUIREMENTS.—(1) The requirements of this subsection are met if the candidate files a certification with the Secretary of the Senate under penalty of perjury that—

"(A) the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees—

"(i) met the primary and runoff election expenditure limits under subsection (d); and

"(ii) did not accept contributions for the primary or runoff election in excess of the primary or runoff expenditure limit under subsection (d), whichever is applicable, reduced by any amounts transferred to this election cycle from a preceding election cycle;

"(B) the candidate met the threshold contribution requirement under subsection (e), and that only allowable contributions were taken into account in meeting such requirement;

"(C) at least one other candidate has qualified for the same general election ballot under the law of the State involved;

"(D) such candidate and the authorized committees of such candidate—

"(i) except as otherwise provided by this title, will not make expenditures which exceed the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b);

"(ii) will not accept any contributions in violation of section 315;

"(iii) except as otherwise provided by this title, will not accept any contribution for the general election involved to the extent that such contribution would cause the aggregate amount of such contributions to exceed the sum of the amount of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b) and the amounts described in subsections (c) and (d) of section 502, reduced by—

"(I) the amount of voter communication vouchers issued to the candidate; and

"(II) any amounts transferred to this election cycle from a previous election cycle and not taken into account under subparagraph (A)(ii);

"(iv) will deposit all payments received under this title in an account insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation from which funds may be withdrawn by check or similar means of payment to third parties;

"(v) will furnish campaign records, evidence of contributions, and other appropriate information to the Commission; and

"(vi) will cooperate in the case of any audit and examination by the Commission under section 506; and

"(E) the candidate intends to make use of the benefits provided under section 503.

"(2) The declaration under paragraph (1) shall be filed not later than 7 days after the earlier of—

"(A) the date the candidate qualifies for the general election ballot under State law; or

"(B) if, under State law, a primary or runoff election to qualify for the general election ballot occurs after September 1, the date the candidate wins the primary or runoff election.

"(d) PRIMARY AND RUNOFF EXPENDITURE LIMITS.—(1) The requirements of this subsection are met if:

"(A) The candidate or the candidate's authorized committees did not make expenditures for the primary election in excess of the lesser of—

"(i) 67 percent of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b); or

"(ii) $2,750,000.

"(B) The candidate and the candidate's authorized committees did not make expenditures for any runoff election in excess of 20 percent of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b).

"(2) The limitations under subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) with respect to any candidate shall be increased by the aggregate amount of independent expenditures in opposition to, or on behalf of any opponent of, such candidate during the primary or runoff election period, whichever is applicable, which are required to be reported to the Secretary of the Senate with respect to such period under section 304(c).

"(3)(A) If the contributions received by the candidate or the candidate's authorized committees for the primary election or runoff election exceed the expenditures for either such election, such excess contributions shall be treated as contributions for the general election and expenditures for the general election may be made from such excess contributions.

"(B) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to the extent that such treatment of excess contributions—

"(i) would result in the violation of any limitation under section 315; or

"(ii) would cause the aggregate contributions received for the general election to exceed the limits under subsection (c)(1)(D)(iii).

"(e) THRESHOLD CONTRIBUTION REQUIREMENTS.—(1) The requirements of this subsection are met if the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees have received allowable contributions during the applicable period in an amount at least equal to the lesser of—

"(A) 10 percent of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b); or

"(B) $250,000.

"(2) For purposes of this section and section 503(b)—

"(A) The term 'allowable contributions' means contributions which are made as gifts of money by an individual pursuant to a written instrument identifying such individual as the contributor.

"(B) The term 'allowable contributions' shall not include—

"(i) contributions made directly or indirectly through an intermediary or conduit which are treated as made by such intermediary or conduit under section 315(a)(8)(B);

"(ii) contributions from any individual during the applicable period to the extent such contributions exceed $250; or

"(iii) contributions from individuals residing outside the candidate's State to the extent such contributions exceed 50 percent of the aggregate allowable contributions (without regard to this clause) received by the candidate during the applicable period.

Clauses (ii) and (iii) shall not apply for purposes of section 503(b).

"(3) For purposes of this subsection and section 503(b), the term 'applicable period' means—

"(A) the period beginning on January 1 of the calendar year preceding the calendar year of the general election involved and ending on—

"(i) the date on which the certification under subsection (c) is filed by the candidate; or

"(ii) for purposes of section 503(b), the date of such general election; or

"(B) in the case of a special election for the office of United States Senator, the period beginning on the date the vacancy in such office occurs and ending on the date of the general election involved.

"(f) INDEXING.—The $2,750,000 amount under subsection (d)(1) shall be increased as of the beginning of each calendar year based on the increase in the price index determined under section 315(c), except that, for purposes of subsection (d)(1), the base period shall be calendar year 1992.

"SEC. 502. LIMITATIONS ON EXPENDITURES.

"(a) LIMITATION ON USE OF PERSONAL FUNDS.—(1) The aggregate amount of expenditures which may be made during an election cycle by an eligible Senate candidate or such candidate's authorized committees from the sources described in paragraph (2) shall not exceed the lesser of—

"(A) 10 percent of the general election expenditure limit under subsection (b); or

"(B) $250,000.

"(2) A source is described in this paragraph if it is—

"(A) personal funds of the candidate and members of the candidate's immediate family; or

"(B) personal debt incurred by the candidate and members of the candidate's immediate family.

"(b) GENERAL ELECTION EXPENDITURE LIMIT.—(1) Except as otherwise provided in this title, the aggregate amount of expenditures for a general election by an eligible Senate candidate and the candidate's authorized committees shall not exceed the lesser of—

"(A) $5,500,000; or

"(B) the greater of—

"(i) $950,000; or

"(ii) $400,000; plus

"(I) 30 cents multiplied by the voting age population not in excess of 4,000,000; and

"(II) 25 cents multiplied by the voting age population in excess of 4,000,000.

"(2) In the case of an eligible Senate candidate in a State which has no more than 1 transmitter for a commercial Very High Frequency (VHF) television station licensed to operate in that State, paragraph (1)(B)(ii) shall be applied by substituting—

"(A) '80 cents' for '30 cents' in subclause (I); and

"(B) '70 cents' for '25 cents' in subclause (II).

"(3) The amount otherwise determined under paragraph (1) for any calendar year shall be increased by the same percentage as the percentage increase for such calendar year under section 501(f) (relating to indexing).

"(c) LEGAL AND ACCOUNTING COMPLIANCE FUND.—(1) The limitation under subsection (b) shall not apply to qualified legal and accounting expenditures made by a candidate or the candidate's authorized committees or a Federal officeholder from a legal and accounting compliance fund meeting the requirements of paragraph (2).

"(2) A legal and accounting compliance fund meets the requirements of this paragraph if—

"(A) the only amounts transferred to the fund are amounts received in accordance with the limitations, prohibitions, and reporting requirements of this Act;

"(B) the aggregate amounts transferred to, and expenditures made from, the fund do not exceed the sum of—

"(i) the lesser of—

"(I) 15 percent of the general election expenditure limit under subsection (b) for the general election for which the fund was established; or

"(II) $300,000; plus

"(ii) the amount determined under paragraph (4); and

"(C) no funds received by the candidate pursuant to section 503(a)(3) may be transferred to the fund.

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualified legal and accounting expenditures' means the following:

"(A) Any expenditures for costs of legal and accounting services provided in connection with—

"(i) any administrative or court proceeding initiated pursuant to this Act during the election cycle for such general election; or

"(ii) the preparation of any documents or reports required by this Act or the Commission.

"(B) Any expenditures for legal and accounting services provided in connection with the general election for which the legal and accounting compliance fund was established to ensure compliance with this Act with respect to the election cycle for such general election.

"(4)(A) If, after a general election, a candidate determines that the qualified legal and accounting expenditures will exceed the limitation under paragraph (2)(B)(i), the candidate may petition the Commission by filing with the Secretary of the Senate a request for an increase in such limitation. The Commission shall authorize an increase in such limitation in the amount (if any) by which the Commission determines the qualified legal and accounting expenditures exceed such limitation. Such determination shall be subject to judicial review under section 506.

"(B) Except as provided in section 315, any contribution received or expenditure made pursuant to this paragraph shall not be taken into account for any contribution or expenditure limit applicable to the candidate under this title.

"(5) Any funds in a legal and accounting compliance fund shall be treated for purposes of this Act as a separate segregated fund, except that any portion of the fund not used to pay qualified legal and accounting expenditures, and not transferred to a legal and accounting compliance fund for the election cycle for the next general election, shall be treated in the same manner as other campaign funds.

"(d) PAYMENT OF TAXES.—The limitation under subsection (b) shall not apply to any expenditure for Federal, State, or local taxes with respect to a candidate's authorized committees.

"(e) EXPENDITURES.—For purposes of this title, the term 'expenditure' has the meaning given such term by section 301(9), except that in determining any expenditures made by, or on behalf of, a candidate or a candidate's authorized committees, section 301(9)(B) shall be applied without regard to clause (ii) or (vi) thereof.

"SEC. 503. BENEFITS ELIGIBLE CANDIDATE ENTITLED TO RECEIVE.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—An eligible Senate candidate shall be entitled to—

"(1) the broadcast media rates provided under section 315(b) of the Communications Act of 1934;

"(2) the mailing rates provided in section 3625(e) of title 39, United States Code;

"(3) payments in the amounts determined under subsection (b); and

"(4) voter communication vouchers in the amount determined under subsection (c).

"(b) AMOUNT OF PAYMENTS.—(1) For purposes of subsection (a)(3), the amounts determined under this subsection are—

"(A) the independent expenditure amount; and

"(B) in the case of an eligible Senate candidate who has an opponent in the general election who receives contributions, or makes (or obligates to make) expenditures, for such election in excess of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b), the excess expenditure amount.

"(2) For purposes of paragraph (1), the independent expenditure amount is the total amount of independent expenditures made, or obligated to be made, during the general election period by 1 or more persons in opposition to, or on behalf of an opponent of, an eligible Senate candidate which are required to be reported by such persons under section 304(c) with respect to the general election period and are certified by the Commission under section 304(c).

"(3) For purposes of paragraph (1), the excess expenditure amount is the amount determined as follows:

"(A) In the case of a major party candidate, an amount equal to the sum of—

"(i) if the excess described in paragraph (1)(B) is not greater than 133 1/3 percent of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b), an amount equal to one-third of such limit applicable to the eligible Senate candidate for the election; plus

"(ii) if such excess equals or exceeds 133 1/3 percent but is less than 166 2/3 percent of such limit, an amount equal to one-third of such limit; plus

"(iii) if such excess equals or exceeds 166 2/3 percent of such limit, an amount equal to one-third of such limit.

"(B) In the case of an eligible Senate candidate who is not a major party candidate, an amount equal to the lesser of—

"(i) the allowable contributions of the eligible Senate candidate during the applicable period in excess of the threshold contribution requirement under section 501(e); or

"(ii) 50 percent of the general election expenditure limit applicable to the eligible Senate candidate under section 502(b).

"(c) VOTER COMMUNICATION VOUCHERS.—(1) The aggregate amount of voter communication vouchers issued to an eligible Senate candidate shall be equal to 20 percent of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b) (10 percent of such limit if such candidate is not a major party candidate).

"(2) Voter communication vouchers shall be used by an eligible Senate candidate to purchase broadcast time during the general election period in the same manner as other broadcast time may be purchased by the candidate.

"(d) WAIVER OF EXPENDITURE AND CONTRIBUTION LIMITS.—(1) An eligible Senate candidate who receives payments under subsection (a)(3) which are allocable to the independent expenditure or excess expenditure amounts described in paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (b) may make expenditures from such payments to defray expenditures for the general election without regard to the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b).

"(2)(A) An eligible Senate candidate who receives benefits under this section may make expenditures for the general election without regard to clause (i) of section 501(c)(1)(D) or subsection (a) or (b) of section 502 if any one of the eligible Senate candidate's opponents who is not an eligible Senate candidate either raises aggregate contributions, or makes or becomes obligated to make aggregate expenditures, for the general election that exceed 200 percent of the general election expenditure limit applicable to the eligible Senate candidate under section 502(b).

"(B) The amount of the expenditures which may be made by reason of subparagraph (A) shall not exceed 100 percent of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b).

"(3)(A) A candidate who receives benefits under this section may receive contributions for the general election without regard to clause (iii) of section 501(c)(1)(D) if—

"(i) a major party candidate in the same general election is not an eligible Senate candidate; or

"(ii) any other candidate in the same general election who is not an eligible Senate candidate raises aggregate contributions, or makes or becomes obligated to make aggregate expenditures, for the general election that exceed 75 percent of the general election expenditure limit applicable to such other candidate under section 502(b).

"(B) The amount of contributions which may be received by reason of subparagraph (A) shall not exceed 100 percent of the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b).

"(e) USE OF PAYMENTS.—Payments received by a candidate under subsection (a)(3) shall be used to defray expenditures incurred with respect to the general election period for the candidate. Such payments shall not be used—

"(1) except as provided in paragraph (4), to make any payments, directly or indirectly, to such candidate or to any member of the immediate family of such candidate;

"(2) to make any expenditure other than expenditures to further the general election of such candidate;

"(3) to make any expenditures which constitute a violation of any law of the United States or of the State in which the expenditure is made; or

"(4) subject to the provisions of section 315(k), to repay any loan to any person except to the extent the proceeds of such loan were used to further the general election of such candidate.

"SEC. 504. CERTIFICATION BY COMMISSION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Commission shall certify to any candidate meeting the requirements of section 502 that such candidate is an eligible Senate candidate entitled to benefits under this title. The Commission shall revoke such certification if it determines a candidate fails to continue to meet such requirements.

"(2) No later than 48 hours after an eligible Senate candidate files a request with the Secretary of the Senate to receive benefits under section 505, the Commission shall issue a certification stating whether such candidate is eligible for payments under this title or to receive voter communication vouchers and the amount of such payments or vouchers to which such candidate is entitled. The request referred to in the preceding sentence shall contain—

"(A) such information and be made in accordance with such procedures as the Commission may provide by regulation; and

"(B) a verification signed by the candidate and the treasurer of the principal campaign committee of such candidate stating that the information furnished in support of the request, to the best of their knowledge, is correct and fully satisfies the requirements of this title.

"(b) DETERMINATIONS BY COMMISSION.—All determinations (including certifications under subsection (a)) made by the Commission under this title shall be final and conclusive, except to the extent that they are subject to examination and audit by the Commission under section 505 and judicial review under section 506.

"SEC. 505. EXAMINATION AND AUDITS; REPAYMENTS; CIVIL PENALTIES.

"(a) EXAMINATION AND AUDITS.—(1) After each general election, the Commission shall conduct an examination and audit of the campaign accounts of 10 percent of all candidates for the office of United States Senator to determine, among other things, whether such candidates have complied with the expenditure limits and conditions of eligibility of this title, and other requirements of this Act. Such candidates shall be designated by the Commission through the use of an appropriate statistical method of random selection. If the Commission selects a candidate, the Commission shall examine and audit the campaign accounts of all other candidates in the general election for the office the selected candidate is seeking.

"(2) The Commission may conduct an examination and audit of the campaign accounts of any candidate in a general election for the office of United States Senator if the Commission determines that there exists reason to believe that such candidate may have violated any provision of this title.

"(b) EXCESS PAYMENTS; REVOCATION OF STATUS.—(1) If the Commission determines that payments or vouchers were made to an eligible Senate candidate under this title in excess of the aggregate amounts to which such candidate was entitled, the Commission shall so notify such candidate, and such candidate shall pay an amount equal to the excess.

"(2) If the Commission revokes the certification of a candidate as an eligible Senate candidate under section 504(a)(1), the Commission shall notify the candidate, and the candidate shall pay an amount equal to the payments and vouchers received under this title.

"(c) MISUSE OF BENEFITS.—If the Commission determines that any amount of any benefit made available to an eligible Senate candidate under this title was not used as provided for in this title, the Commission shall so notify such candidate and such candidate shall pay the amount of such benefit.

"(d) EXCESS EXPENDITURES.—If the Commission determines that any eligible Senate candidate who has received benefits under this title has made expenditures which in the aggregate exceed—

"(1) the primary or runoff expenditure limit under section 501(d); or

"(2) the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b), the Commission shall so notify such candidate and such candidate shall pay an amount equal to the amount of the excess expenditures.

"(e) CIVIL PENALTIES FOR EXCESS EXPENDITURES AND CONTRIBUTIONS.—(1) If the Commission determines that a candidate has committed a violation described in subsection (c), the Commission may assess a civil penalty against such candidate in an amount not greater than 200 percent of the amount involved.

"(2)(A) LOW AMOUNT OF EXCESS EXPENDITURES.—Any eligible Senate candidate who makes expenditures that exceed any limitation described in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (d) by 2.5 percent or less shall pay an amount equal to the amount of the excess expenditures.

"(B) MEDIUM AMOUNT OF EXCESS EXPENDITURES.—Any eligible Senate candidate who makes expenditures that exceed any limitation described in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (d) by more than 2.5 percent and less than 5 percent shall pay an amount equal to three times the amount of the excess expenditures.

"(C) LARGE AMOUNT OF EXCESS EXPENDITURES.—Any eligible Senate candidate who makes expenditures that exceed any limitation described in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (d) by 5 percent or more shall pay an amount equal to three times the amount of the excess expenditures plus a civil penalty in an amount determined by the Commission.

"(f) UNEXPENDED FUNDS.—Any amount received by an eligible Senate candidate under this title may be retained for a period not exceeding 120 days after the date of the general election for the liquidation of all obligations to pay expenditures for the general election incurred during the general election period. At the end of such 120-day period, any unexpended funds received under this title shall be promptly repaid.

"(g) LIMIT ON PERIOD FOR NOTIFICATION.—No notification shall be made by the Commission under this section with respect to an election more than three years after the date of such election.

"SEC. 506. JUDICIAL REVIEW.

"(a) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—Any agency action by the Commission made under the provisions of this title shall be subject to review by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit upon petition filed in such court within thirty days after the agency action by the Commission for which review is sought. It shall be the duty of the Court of Appeals, ahead of all matters not filed under this title, to advance on the docket and expeditiously take action on all petitions filed pursuant to this title.

"(b) APPLICATION OF TITLE 5.—The provisions of chapter 7 of title 5, United States Code, shall apply to judicial review of any agency action by the Commission.

"(c) AGENCY ACTION.—For purposes of this section, the term 'agency action' has the meaning given such term by section 551(13) of title 5, United States Code.

"SEC. 507. PARTICIPATION BY COMMISSION IN JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

"(a) APPEARANCES.—The Commission is authorized to appear in and defend against any action instituted under this section and under section 506 either by attorneys employed in its office or by counsel whom it may appoint without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and whose compensation it may fix without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title.

"(b) INSTITUTION OF ACTIONS.—The Commission is authorized, through attorneys and counsel described in subsection (a), to institute actions in the district courts of the United States to seek recovery of any amounts determined under this title to be payable to the Secretary.

"(c) INJUNCTIVE RELIEF.—The Commission is authorized, through attorneys and counsel described in subsection (a), to petition the courts of the United States for such injunctive relief as is appropriate in order to implement any provision of this title.

"(d) APPEALS.—The Commission is authorized on behalf of the United States to appeal from, and to petition the Supreme Court for certiorari to review, judgments or decrees entered with respect to actions in which it appears pursuant to the authority provided in this section.

"SEC. 508. REPORTS TO CONGRESS; REGULATIONS.

"(a) REPORTS.—The Commission shall, as soon as practicable after each election, submit a full report to the Senate setting forth—

"(1) the expenditures (shown in such detail as the Commission determines appropriate) made by each eligible Senate candidate and the authorized committees of such candidate;

"(2) the amounts certified by the Commission under section 504 as benefits available to each eligible Senate candidate; and

"(3) the amount of repayments, if any, required under section 505 and the reasons for each repayment required.

Each report submitted pursuant to this section shall be printed as a Senate document.

"(b) RULES AND REGULATIONS.—The Commission is authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations, in accordance with the provisions of subsection (c), to conduct such examinations and investigations, and to require the keeping and submission of such books, records, and information, as it deems necessary to carry out the functions and duties imposed on it by this title.

"(c) STATEMENT TO SENATE.—Thirty days before prescribing any rules or regulation under subsection (b), the Commission shall transmit to the Senate a statement setting forth the proposed rule or regulation and containing a detailed explanation and justification of such rule or regulation.

"SEC. 509. CLOSED CAPTIONING REQUIREMENT FOR TELEVISION COMMERCIALS OF ELIGIBLE SENATE CANDIDATES.

"No eligible Senate candidate may receive amounts under section 503(a)(3) unless such candidate has certified that any television commercial prepared or distributed by the candidate will be prepared in a manner that contains, is accompanied by, or otherwise readily permits closed captioning of the oral content of the commercial to be broadcast by way of line 21 of the vertical blanking interval, or by way of comparable successor technologies."

"(b) EFFECTIVE DATES.—(1) Except as provided in this subsection, the amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to elections occurring after December 31, 1994.

(2) For purposes of any expenditure or contribution limit imposed by the amendment made by subsection (a)—

(A) no expenditure made before January 1, 1994, shall be taken into account, except that there shall be taken into account any such expenditure for goods or services to be provided after such date; and

(B) all cash, cash items, and Government securities on hand as of January 1, 1994, shall be taken into account in determining whether the contribution limit is met, except that there shall not be taken into account amounts used during the 60-day period beginning on January 1, 1994, to pay for expenditures which were incurred (but unpaid) before such date.

"(c) EFFECT OF INVALIDITY ON OTHER PROVISIONS OF ACT.—If section 501, 502, or 503 of title V of FECA (as added by this section), or any part thereof, is held to be invalid, all provisions of, and amendments made by, this Act shall be treated as invalid.

SEC. 102. RESTRICTIONS ON ACTIVITIES OF POLITICAL ACTION AND CANDIDATE COMMITTEES IN FEDERAL ELECTIONS.

"(a) CONTRIBUTIONS.—Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(i) CONTRIBUTIONS BY POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES TO SENATE CANDIDATES.—(1) In the case of a candidate for election, or nomination for election, to the United States Senate (and such candidate's authorized committees), subsection (a)(2)(A) shall be applied by substituting "$2,500" for "$5,000".

"(2) It shall be unlawful for a multicandidate political committee to make a contribution to a candidate for election, or nomination for election, to the United States Senate (or an authorized committee) to the extent that the making of the contribution will cause the amount of contributions received by the candidate and the candidate's authorized committees from multicandidate political committees to exceed the lesser of—

"(A) $825,000; or

"(B) the greater of—

"(i) $375,000; or

"(ii) 20 percent of the sum of the general election spending limit under section 502(b) plus the primary election spending limit under section 501(d)(1)(A) (without regard to whether the candidate is an eligible Senate candidate).

"(3) In the case of an election cycle in which there is a runoff election, the limit determined under paragraph (2) shall be increased by an amount equal to 20 percent of the runoff election expenditure limit under section 501(d)(1)(B) (without regard to whether the candidate is such an eligible Senate candidate).

"(4) The $825,000 and $375,000 amounts in paragraph (2) shall be increased as of the beginning of each calendar year based on the increase in the price index determined under section 315(c), except that for purposes of paragraph (2), the base period shall be calendar year 1992.

"(5) A candidate or authorized committee that receives a contribution from a multicandidate political committee in excess of the amount allowed under paragraph (2) shall return the amount of such excess contribution to the contributor."

SEC. 103. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

Title III of FECA is amended by adding after section 304 the following new section:

"REPORTING REQUIREMENTS FOR SENATE CANDIDATES

"SEC. 304A. (a) CANDIDATE OTHER THAN ELIGIBLE SENATE CANDIDATE.—(1) Each candidate for the office of United States Senator who does not file a certification with the Secretary of the Senate under section 501(c) shall file with the Secretary of the Senate a declaration as to whether such candidate intends to make expenditures for the general election in excess of the general election expenditure limit applicable to an eligible Senate candidate under section 502(b). Such declaration shall be filed at the time provided in section 501(c)(2).

"(2) Any candidate for the United States Senate who qualifies for the ballot for a general election—

"(A) who is not an eligible Senate candidate under section 501; and

"(B) who either raises aggregate contributions, or makes or obligates to make aggregate expenditures, for the general election which exceed 75 percent of the general election expenditure limit applicable to an eligible Senate candidate under section 502(b), shall file a report with the Secretary of the Senate within 24 hours after such contributions have been raised or such expenditures have been made or obligated to be made (or, if later, within 24 hours after the date of qualification for the general election ballot), setting forth the candidate's total contributions and total expenditures for such election as of such date. Thereafter, such candidate shall file additional reports (until such contributions or expenditures exceed 200 percent of such limit) with the Secretary of the Senate within 24 hours after each time additional contributions are raised, or expenditures are made or are obligated to be made, which in the aggregate exceed an amount equal to 10 percent of such limit and after the total contributions or expenditures exceed 133 $\frac{1}{3}$, 166 $\frac{2}{3}$, and 200 percent of such limit.

"(3) The Commission—

"(A) shall, within 24 hours of receipt of a declaration or report under paragraph (1) or (2), notify each eligible Senate candidate in the election involved about such declaration or report; and

"(B) if an opposing candidate has raised aggregate contributions, or made or has obligated to make aggregate expenditures, in excess of the applicable general election expenditure limit under section 502(b), shall certify, pursuant to the provisions of subsection (d), such eligibility for payment of any amount to which such eligible Senate candidate is entitled under section 503(a).

"(4) Notwithstanding the reporting requirements under this subsection, the Commission may make its own determination that a candidate in a general election who is not an eligible Senate candidate has raised aggregate contributions, or made or has obligated to make aggregate expenditures, in the amounts which would require a report under paragraph (2). The Commission shall, within 24 hours after making each such determination, notify each eligible Senate candidate in the general election involved about such determination, and shall, when such contributions or expenditures exceed the general election expenditure limit under section 502(b), certify (pursuant to the provisions of subsection (d)) such candidate's eligibility for payment of any amount under section 503(a).

"(b) REPORTS ON PERSONAL FUNDS.—(1) Any candidate for the United States Senate who during the election cycle expends more than the limitation under section 502(a) during the election cycle from his personal funds, the funds of his immediate family, and personal loans incurred by the candidate and the candidate's immediate family shall file a report with the Secretary of the Senate within 24 hours after such expenditures have been made or loans incurred.

"(2) The Commission within 24 hours after a report has been filed under paragraph (1) shall notify each eligible Senate candidate in the election involved about each such report.

"(3) Notwithstanding the reporting requirements under this subsection, the Commission may make its own determination that a candidate for the United States Senate has made expenditures in excess of the amount under paragraph (1). The Commission within 24 hours after making such determination shall notify each eligible Senate candidate in the general election involved about each such determination.

"(c) CANDIDATES FOR OTHER OFFICES.—(1) Each individual—

"(A) who becomes a candidate for the office of United States Senator;

"(B) who, during the election cycle for such office, held any other Federal, State, or local office or was a candidate for such other office; and

"(C) who expended any amount during such election cycle before becoming a candidate for the office of United States Senator which would have been treated as an expenditure if such individual had been such a candidate, including amounts for activities to promote the image or name recognition of such individual, shall, within 7 days of becoming a candidate for the office of United States Senator, report to the Secretary of the Senate the amount and nature of such expenditures.

"(2) Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any expenditures in connection with a Federal, State, or local election which has been held before the individual becomes a candidate for the office of United States Senator.

"(3) The Commission shall, as soon as practicable, make a determination as to whether the amounts included in the report under paragraph (1) were made for purposes of influencing the election of the individual to the office of United States Senator.

"(d) CERTIFICATIONS.—Notwithstanding section 505(a), the certification required by this section shall be made by the Commission on the basis of reports filed in accordance with the provisions of this Act, or on the basis of such Commission's own investigation or determination.

"(e) COPIES OF REPORTS AND PUBLIC INSPECTION.—The Secretary of the Senate shall transmit a copy of any report or filing received under this section or of title V (whenever a 24-hour response is required of the Commission) as soon as possible (but no later than 4 working hours of the Commission) after receipt of such report or filing, and shall make such report or filing available for public inspection and copying in the same manner as the Commission under section 311(a)(4), and shall preserve such reports and filings in the same manner as the Commission under section 311(a)(5).

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, any term used in this section which is used in title V shall have the same meaning as when used in title V."

SEC. 104. DISCLOSURE BY NONELIGIBLE CANDIDATES.

Section 318 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441d), as amended by section 133, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(e) If a broadcast, cablecast, or other communication is paid for or authorized by a candidate in the general election for the office of United States Senator who is not an eligible Senate candidate, or the authorized committee of such candidate, such communication shall contain the following sentence: 'This candidate has not agreed to voluntary campaign spending limits.'"

Subtitle B—Expenditure Limitations, Contribution Limitations, and Matching Funds for Eligible House of Representatives Candidates

SEC. 121. PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO ELIGIBLE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES CANDIDATES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—FECA, as amended by section 101(a), is amended by adding at the end the following new title:

"TITLE VI—EXPENDITURE LIMITATIONS, CONTRIBUTION LIMITATIONS, AND MATCHING FUNDS FOR ELIGIBLE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES CANDIDATES

"SEC. 601. EXPENDITURE LIMITATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—An eligible House of Representatives candidate may not, in an election cycle, make expenditures aggregating more than $600,000, of which not more than $500,000 may be expended in the general election period.

"(b) RUNOFF ELECTION AND SPECIAL ELECTION AMOUNTS.—

"(1) RUNOFF ELECTION AMOUNT.—In addition to the expenditures under subsection (a), an eligible House of Representatives candidate who is a candidate in a runoff election may make expenditures aggregating not more than 20 percent of the general election period limit under subsection (a).

"(2) SPECIAL ELECTION AMOUNT.—An eligible House of Representatives candidate who is a candidate in a special election may make expenditures aggregating not more than $500,000 with respect to the special election.

"(c) CLOSELY CONTESTED PRIMARY.—If, as determined by the Commission, an eligible House of Representatives candidate in a contested primary election wins that primary election by a margin of 10 percentage points or less, subject to the general election period limitation in subsection (a), the candidate may make additional expenditures of not more than $150,000 in the general election period. The additional expenditures shall be from contributions described in section 603(h) and payments described in section 604(f).

"(d) NONPARTICIPATING OPPONENT PROVISIONS.—

"(1) LIMITATION EXCEPTION.—The limitations imposed by subsections (a) and (b) do not apply in the case of an eligible House of Representatives candidate if any other candidate seeking nomination or election to that office—

"(A) is not an eligible House of Representatives candidate; and

"(B) makes expenditures in excess of 80 percent of the general election period limitation specified in subsection (a).

"(2) CONTINUED ELIGIBILITY AND ADDITIONAL MATCHING FUNDS.—An eligible House of Representatives candidate referred to in paragraph (1)—

"(A) shall continue to be eligible for all benefits under this title; and

"(B) shall receive matching funds without regard to the ceiling under section 604(a).

"(3) REPORTING REQUIREMENT.—A candidate for the office of Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the Congress—

"(A) who is not an eligible House of Representatives candidate; and

"(B) who—

"(i) receives contributions in excess of 50 percent of the general election period limitation specified in subsection (a)(1); or shall report that the threshold has been reached to the Clerk of the House of Representatives not later than 48 hours after reaching the threshold. The Clerk shall transmit a report received under this paragraph to the Commission as soon as possible (but no later than 4 working hours of the Commission) after such receipt, and the Commission shall transmit a copy to each other candidate in the election within 48 hours of receipt.

"(ii) makes expenditures in excess of 80 percent of such limit;

"(e) EXEMPTION FOR CERTAIN COSTS AND TAXES.—Payments for legal and accounting compliance costs, and Federal, State, or local taxes with respect to a candidate's authorized committees, shall not be considered in the computation of amounts subject to limitation under this section.

"(f) EXEMPTION FOR FUNDRAISING COSTS.—

"(1) Any costs incurred by an eligible House of Representatives candidate or his or her authorized committee in connection with the solicitation of contributions on behalf of such candidate shall not be considered in the computation of amounts subject to limitation under this section to the extent that the aggregate of such costs does not exceed 5 percent of the limitation under subsection (a) or subsection (b).

"(2) An amount equal to 5 percent of salaries and overhead expenditures of an eligible House of Representatives candidate's campaign headquarters and offices shall not be considered in the computation of amounts subject to limitation under this section. Any amount excluded under this paragraph shall be applied against the fundraising expenditure exemption under paragraph (1).

"(g) CIVIL PENALTIES.—

"(1) LOW AMOUNT OF EXCESS EXPENDITURES.—Any eligible House of Representatives candidate who makes expenditures that exceed a limitation under subsection (a) or subsection (b) by 2.5 percent or less shall pay to the Commission an amount equal to the amount of the excess expenditures.

"(2) MEDIUM AMOUNT OF EXCESS EXPENDITURES.—Any eligible House of Representatives candidate who makes expenditures that exceed a limitation under subsection (a) or subsection (b) by more than 2.5 percent and less than 5 percent shall pay to the Commission an amount equal to three times the amount of the excess expenditures.

"(3) LARGE AMOUNT OF EXCESS EXPENDITURES.—Any eligible House of Representatives candidate who makes expenditures that exceed a limitation under subsection (a) or subsection (b) by 5 percent or more shall pay to the Commission an amount equal to three times the amount of the excess expenditures plus a civil penalty in an amount determined by the Commission.

"(h) INDEXING.—The dollar amounts specified in subsections (a), (b), (c), and (e) shall be adjusted at the beginning of each calendar year based on the increase in the price index determined under section 315(c), except that, for the purposes of such adjustment, the base period shall be calendar year 1992.

"SEC. 602. STATEMENT OF PARTICIPATION; CONTINUING ELIGIBILITY.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Commission shall determine whether a candidate is in compliance with this title and, by reason of such compliance, is eligible to receive benefits under this title. Such determination shall—

"(1) in the case of an initial determination, be based on a statement of participation submitted by the candidate; and

"(2) in the case of a determination of continuing eligibility, be based on relevant additional information submitted in such form and manner as the Commission may require.

"(b) FILING.—The statement of participation referred to in subsection (a) shall be filed with the Clerk of the House of Representatives not later than January 31 of the election year or on the date on which the candidate files a statement of candidacy, whichever is later. The Clerk of the House of Representatives shall transmit a statement received under this section to the Commission as soon as possible.

"SEC. 603. CONTRIBUTION LIMITATIONS.

"(a) ELIGIBLE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES CANDIDATE LIMITATION.—An eligible House of Representatives candidate may not, with respect to an election cycle, accept contributions aggregating in excess of $600,000.

"(b) NONPARTICIPATING OPPONENT PROVISIONS.—The limitations imposed by subsection (a) do not apply in the case of an eligible House of Representatives candidate if any other candidate seeking nomination or election to that office—

"(1) is not an eligible House of Representatives candidate; and

"(2) receives contributions in excess of 50 percent of the general election period limitation specified in section 601(a).

"(c) TRANSFER PROVISIONS.—

"(1) If an eligible House of Representatives candidate transfers any amount from an election cycle to a later election cycle, the limitation with respect to the candidate under subsection (a) for the later cycle shall be an amount equal to the difference between the amount specified in that subsection and the amount transferred.

"(2) If an eligible House of Representatives candidate transfers any amount from an election cycle to a later election cycle, each limitation with respect to the candidate under section 315(j) for the later cycle shall be one-third of the difference between the applicable amount specified in subsection (a) and the amount transferred.

"(d) RUNOFF AMOUNT.—In addition to the contributions under subsection (a), an eligible House of Representatives candidate who is a candidate in a runoff election may accept contributions aggregating not more than 20 percent of the general election expenditure limit under section 601(a) in the general election period. Of such contributions, one-half may be from political committees and one-half may be from persons referred to in section 315(j)(2).

"(e) PERSONAL CONTRIBUTIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An eligible House of Representatives candidate may not, with respect to an election cycle, make contributions to his or her own campaign totaling more than $50,000 from the personal funds of the candidate. The amount that the candidate may accept from persons referred to in section 315(j)(2) shall be reduced by the amount of contributions made under the preceding sentence. Contributions from the personal funds of a candidate may not be matched under section 604.

"(2) LIMITATION EXCEPTION.—The limitation imposed by paragraph (1) does not apply in the case of an eligible House of Representatives candidate if any other candidate—

"(A) is not an eligible House of Representatives candidate; and

"(B) receives contributions in excess of 50 percent of the general election period limitation specified in section 601(a).

"(3) TRIPLE MATCH.—An eligible House of Representatives candidate, whose opponent makes contributions to his or her own campaign in excess of 50 percent of the general election period limitation specified in section 601(a), shall receive $3 in matching funds for each $1 certified by the Commission as matchable for the eligible candidate.

"(f) CIVIL PENALTIES.—

"(1) LOW AMOUNT OF EXCESS CONTRIBUTIONS.—Any eligible House of Representatives candidate who accepts contributions that exceed the limitation under subsection (a) by 2.5 percent or less shall refund the excess contributions to the persons who made the contributions.

"(2) MEDIUM AMOUNT OF EXCESS CONTRIBUTIONS.—Any eligible House of Representatives candidate who accepts contributions that exceed a limitation under subsection (a) by more than 2.5 percent and less than 5 percent shall pay to the Commission an amount equal to three times the amount of the excess contributions.

"(3) LARGE AMOUNT OF EXCESS CONTRIBUTIONS.—Any eligible House of Representatives candidate who accepts contributions that exceed a limitation under subsection (a) by 5 percent or more shall pay to the Commission an amount equal to three times the amount of the excess contributions plus a civil penalty in an amount determined by the Commission.

"(g) EXEMPTION FOR CERTAIN COSTS.—(1) Any amount—

"(A) accepted by a candidate for the office of Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to the Congress; and

"(B) used for legal and accounting compliance costs, or used to pay Federal, State, or local taxes with respect to a candidate's authorized committees shall not be considered in the computation of amounts subject to limitation under subsection (a).

"(2) The balance of funds maintained for legal and accounting compliance costs by the authorized committees of an eligible House of Representatives candidate shall not exceed 20 percent of the limit under subsection (a) at any time.

"(3) No funds received by a candidate under section 604 may be transferred to a separate legal and accounting compliance fund.

"(h) CLOSELY CONTESTED PRIMARY.—If, as determined by the Commission, an eligible House of Representatives candidate in a contested primary election wins that primary election by a margin of 10 percentage points or less, notwithstanding the limitation in subsection (a), the candidate may, in the general election period, accept additional contributions of not more than $150,000, consisting of—

"(1) not more than $50,000 from political committees; and

"(2) not more than $50,000 from individuals referred to in section 315(j)(2).

"(i) INDEXING.—The dollar amounts specified in subsections (a), (d), (e), and (h) shall be adjusted at the beginning of the calendar year based on the increase in the price index determined under section 315(c), except that, for the purposes of such adjustment, the base period shall be calendar year 1992.

"SEC. 604. MATCHING FUNDS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—An eligible House of Representatives candidate shall be entitled to receive, with respect to the general election, an amount equal to the amount of contributions from individuals received by the candidate, but not more than $200,000, and not to the extent that contributions from any individual during the election cycle exceed $250 in the aggregate.

"(b) INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURE PROVISION.—If, with respect to a general election involving an eligible House of Representatives candidate, independent expenditures totaling $10,000 are made against the eligible House of Representatives candidate or in favor of another candidate, the eligible House of Representatives candidate shall be entitled, in addition to any amount received under subsection (a), to a matching payment of $10,000 and additional matching payments equal to the amount of such independent expenditures above $10,000, and expenditures may be made from such payments without regard to the limitations in section 601.

"(c) SPECIFIC REQUIREMENTS.—A candidate for the office of Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the Congress may receive matching funds under subsection (a) only if the candidate—

"(1) in an election cycle, has received $60,000 in contributions from individuals, with not more than $250 to be taken into account per individual;

"(2) qualifies for the general election ballot;

"(3) has an opponent on the general election ballot; and

"(4) files a statement of participation in which the candidate agrees to—

"(A) comply with the limitations under sections 601 and 603;

"(B) cooperate in the case of any audit by the Commission by furnishing such campaign records and other information as the Commission may require; and

"(C) comply with any repayment requirement under section 605.

"(d) WRITTEN INSTRUMENT REQUIREMENT.—No contribution in any form other than a gift of money made by a written instrument that identifies the individual making the contribution may be used as a basis for any matching payment under this section.

"(e) CERTIFICATION AND PAYMENT.—

"(1) CERTIFICATION.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), not later than 5 days after receiving a request for payment, the Commission shall certify for payment the amount requested under subsection (a) or (b).

"(2) PAYMENTS.—The initial payment under subsection (a) to an eligible candidate shall be $60,000. All payments shall be—

"(A) made not later than 48 hours after certification under paragraph (1); and

"(B) subject to proportional reduction in the case of insufficient funds.

"(3) INCORRECT REQUEST.—If the Commission determines that any portion of a request is incorrect, the Commission shall withhold the certification for that portion only and inform the candidate as to how the candidate may correct the request.

"(f) CLOSELY CONTESTED PRIMARY.—If, as determined by the Commission, an eligible House of Representatives candidate in a contested primary election wins that primary election by a margin of 10 percentage points or less, the candidate shall be entitled to matching funds totaling not more than $50,000, in addition to any other amount received under this section.

"(g) CONVERSIONS TO PERSONAL USE.—A candidate may not convert any amount received under this section to personal use other than for reimbursement of verifiable prior campaign expenditures.

"(h) INDEXING.—The dollar amounts specified in subsections (a), (b), (c) (other than the amount in subsection (c) to be taken into account per individual), and (f) shall be adjusted at the beginning of the calendar year based on the increase in the price index determined under section 315(c), except that, for the purposes of such adjustment, the base period shall be calendar year 1992.

"SEC. 605. EXAMINATION AND AUDITS; REPAYMENTS.

"(a) GENERAL ELECTION.—After each general election, the Commission shall conduct an examination and audit of the campaign accounts of 10 percent of the eligible House of Representatives candidates, as designated by the Commission through the use of an appropriate statistical method of random selection, to determine whether such candidates have complied with the conditions of eligibility and other requirements of this title. No other factors shall be considered in carrying out such an examination and audit. In selecting the accounts to be examined and audited, the Commission shall select all eligible candidates from a congressional district where any eligible candidate is selected for examination and audit.

"(b) SPECIAL ELECTION.—After each special election, the Commission shall conduct an examination and audit of the campaign accounts of all eligible candidates in the election to determine whether the candidates have complied with the conditions of eligibility and other requirements of this title.

"(c) AFFIRMATIVE VOTE.—The Commission may conduct an examination and audit of the campaign accounts of any eligible House of Representatives candidate in a general election if the Commission, by an affirmative vote of 4 members, determines that there exists reason to believe that such candidate may have violated any provision of this title.

"(d) PAYMENTS.—If the Commission determines that any amount of a payment to a candidate under this title was in excess of the aggregate payments to which such candidate was entitled, the Commission shall so notify the candidate, and the candidate shall pay an amount equal to the excess.

"SEC. 606. JUDICIAL REVIEW.

"(a) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—Any agency action by the Commission made under the provisions of this title shall be subject to review by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit upon petition filed in such court within 30 days after the agency action by the Commission for which review is sought. It shall be the duty of the Court of Appeals, ahead of all matters not filed under this title, to advance on the docket and expeditiously take action on all petitions filed pursuant to this title.

"(b) APPLICATION OF TITLE 5.—The provisions of chapter 7 of title 5, United States Code, shall apply to judicial review of any agency action by the Commission.

"(c) AGENCY ACTION.—For purposes of this section, the term 'agency action' has the meaning given such term by section 551(13) of title 5, United States Code.

"SEC. 607. PARTICIPATION BY COMMISSION IN JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

"(a) APPEARANCES.—The Commission is authorized to appear in and defend against any action instituted under this section and under section 606 either by attorneys employed in its office or by counsel whom it may appoint without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and whose compensation it may fix without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title.

"(b) INSTITUTION OF ACTIONS.—The Commission is authorized, through attorneys and counsel described in subsection (a), to institute actions in the district courts of the United States to seek recovery of any amounts determined under this title to be payable to the Secretary.

"(c) INJUNCTIVE RELIEF.—The Commission is authorized, through attorneys and counsel described in subsection (a), to petition the courts of the United States for such injunctive relief as is appropriate in order to implement any provision of this title.

"(d) APPEALS.—The Commission is authorized on behalf of the United States to appeal from, and to petition the Supreme Court for certiorari to review, judgments or decrees entered with respect to actions in which it appears pursuant to the authority provided in this section.

"SEC. 608. REPORTS TO CONGRESS; CERTIFICATIONS; REGULATIONS.

"(a) REPORTS.—The Commission shall, as soon as practicable after each election, submit a full report to the House of Representatives setting forth—

"(1) the expenditures (shown in such detail as the Commission determines appropriate) made by each eligible candidate and the authorized committees of such candidate;

"(2) the aggregate amount of matching fund payments certified by the Commission under section 604 for each eligible candidate; and

"(3) the amount of repayments, if any, required under section 605, and the reasons for each repayment required.

Each report submitted pursuant to this section shall be printed as a House document.

"(b) DETERMINATIONS BY COMMISSION.—All determinations (including certifications under section 604) made by the Commission under this title shall be final and conclusive, except to the extent that they are subject to examination and audit by the Commission under section 605 or judicial review under section 606.

"(c) RULES AND REGULATIONS.—The Commission is authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations, in accordance with the provisions of subsection (d), to conduct such audits, examinations and investigations, and to require the keeping and submission of such books, records, and information, as it deems necessary to carry out the functions and duties imposed on it by this title.

"(d) REPORT OF PROPOSED REGULATIONS.—The Commission shall submit to the House of Representatives a report containing a detailed explanation and justification of each rule, regulation, and form of the Commission under this title. No such rule, regulation, or form may take effect until a period of 30 legislative days has elapsed after the report is received. As used in this subsection—

"(1) the term 'legislative day' means any calendar day on which the House of Representatives is in session; and

"(2) the terms 'rule' and 'regulation' mean a provision or series of interrelated provisions stating a single, separable rule of law.

"SEC. 609. CLOSED CAPTIONING REQUIREMENT FOR TELEVISION COMMERCIALS OF ELIGIBLE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES CANDIDATES.

"No eligible House of Representatives candidate may receive amounts under section 604 unless such candidate has certified that any television commercial prepared or distributed by the candidate will be prepared in a manner that contains, is accompanied by, or otherwise readily permits closed captioning of the oral content of the commercial to be broadcast by way of line 21 of the vertical blanking interval, or by way of comparable successor technologies."

"(b) EFFECT OF INVALIDITY ON OTHER PROVISIONS OF ACT.—If title VI of FECA (as added by this section), or any part thereof, is held to be invalid, all provisions of, and amendments made by, this Act, shall be treated as invalid.

SEC. 122. LIMITATIONS ON POLITICAL COMMITTEE AND LARGE DONOR CONTRIBUTIONS THAT MAY BE ACCEPTED BY HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES CANDIDATES.

Section 315 of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441a), as amended by section 102, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(j)(1) A candidate for the office of Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the Congress may not, with respect to an election cycle, accept contributions from political committees aggregating in excess of $200,000.

"(2) A candidate for the office of Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the Congress may not, with respect to an election cycle, accept contributions aggregating in excess of $200,000 from persons other than political committees whose contributions total more than $250.

"(3) In addition to the contributions under paragraphs (1) and (2), a House of Representatives candidate who is a candidate in a runoff election may accept contributions aggregating not more than $100,000 with respect to the runoff election. Of such contributions, one-half may be from political committees and one-half may be from persons referred to in paragraph (2).

"(4) Any amount—

"(A) accepted by a candidate for the office of Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to the Congress; and

"(B) used for legal and accounting compliance costs, Federal, State, and local taxes, shall not be considered in the computation of amounts subject to limitation under paragraphs (1), (2), and (3), but shall be subject to the other limitations of this Act.

"(5) In addition to any other contributions under this subsection, if, as determined by the Commission, an eligible House of Representatives candidate in a contested primary election wins that primary election by a margin of 10 percentage points or less, the candidate may, in the general election period, accept contributions of not more than $150,000, consisting of—

"(A) not more than $50,000 from political committees; and

"(B) not more than $50,000 from persons referred to in paragraph (2).

"(6) The dollar amounts specified in paragraphs (1), (2), (3), and (5) (other than the amounts in paragraphs (2) and (5) relating to contribution totals) shall be adjusted in the manner provided in section 315(c), except that, for the purposes of such adjustment, the base period shall be calendar year 1992."

SEC. 123. EXCESS FUNDS OF INCUMBENTS WHO ARE CANDIDATES FOR THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

An individual who—

(1) is a candidate for the office of Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the Congress in an election cycle to which title VI of FECA (as enacted by section 121 of this Act) applies;

(2) is an incumbent of that office; and

(3) as of the date of the first statement of participation submitted by the individual under section 502 of FECA, has campaign accounts containing in excess of $600,000; shall deposit such excess in a separate account subject to the provision of section 304 of FECA. The amount so deposited shall be available for any lawful purpose other than use, with respect to the individual, for an election for the office of Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the Congress.

Subtitle C—General Provisions

SEC. 131. BROADCAST RATES AND PREEMPTION.

(a) BROADCAST RATES.—Section 315(b) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 315(b)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking out “forty-five” and inserting in lieu thereof “30”;

(B) by striking out “sixty” and inserting in lieu thereof “45”; and

(C) by striking out “lowest unit charge of the station for the same class and amount of time for the same period” and insert “lowest charge of the station for the same amount of time for the same period on the same date”; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new sentence:

“In the case of an eligible Senate candidate (as defined in section 301(19) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971), the charges during the general election period (as defined in section 301(21) of such Act) shall not exceed 50 percent of the lowest charge described in paragraph (1).”

(b) PREEMPTION; ACCESS.—Section 315 of such Act (47 U.S.C. 315) is amended by redesignating subsections (c) and (d) as subsections (e) and (f), respectively, and by inserting immediately after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

“(c)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), a licensee shall not preempt the use, during any period specified in subsection (b)(1), of a broadcasting station by a legally qualified candidate for public office who has purchased and paid for such use pursuant to the provisions of subsection (b)(1).

“(2) If a program to be broadcast by a broadcasting station is preempted because of circumstances beyond the control of the broadcasting station, any candidate advertising spot scheduled to be broadcast during that program may also be preempted.

“(d) In the case of a legally qualified candidate for the United States Senate, a licensee shall provide broadcast time without regard to the rates charged for the time.”

SEC. 132. EXTENSION OF REDUCED THIRD-CLASS MAILING RATES TO ELIGIBLE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES AND SENATE CANDIDATES.

Section 3626(e) of title 39, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2)(A)—

(A) by striking out “and the National” and inserting in lieu thereof “the National”; and

(B) by striking out “Committee” and inserting in lieu thereof “Committee, and, subject to paragraph (3), the principal campaign committee of an eligible House of Representatives or Senate candidate.”;

(2) in paragraph (2)(B), by striking out “and” after the semicolon;

(3) in paragraph (2)(C), by striking out the period and inserting in lieu thereof “; and”;

(4) by adding after paragraph (2)(C) the following new subparagraph:

“(D) the terms ‘eligible House of Representatives candidate’, ‘eligible Senate candidate’, and ‘principal campaign committee’ have the meanings given those terms in section 301 of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971.”; and

(5) by adding after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

“(3) The rate made available under this subsection with respect to an eligible House of Representatives or Senate candidate shall apply only to—

“(A) the general election period (as defined in section 301 of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971); and

“(B) that number of pieces of mail equal to the number of individuals in the voting age population (as certified under section 315(e) of such Act) of the congressional district or State, whichever is applicable.”

SEC. 133. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS FOR CERTAIN INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURES.

Section 304(c) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 434(c)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2), by striking out the undesignated matter after subparagraph (C);

(2) by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (5); and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (2), as amended by paragraph (1), the following new paragraphs:

“(3)(A) Any independent expenditure (including those described in subsection (b)(6)(B)(iii) of this section) aggregating $1,000 or more made after the 20th day, but more than 24 hours, before any election shall be reported within 24 hours after such independent expenditure is made.

“(B) Any independent expenditure aggregating $10,000 or more made at any time up to and including the 20th day before any election shall be reported within 48 hours after such independent expenditure is made. An additional statement shall be filed each time independent expenditures aggregating $10,000 are made with respect to the same election as the initial statement filed under this section.

“(C) Such statement shall be filed with the Clerk of the House of Representatives or the Secretary of the Senate, whichever is applicable, and the Secretary of State of the State involved and shall contain the information required by subsection (b)(6)(B)(iii) of this section, including whether the independent expenditure is in support of, or in opposition to, the candidate involved. The Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate shall as soon as possible (but not later than 4 working hours of the Commission) after receipt of a statement transmit it to the Commission. Not later than 48 hours after the Commission receives a report, the Commission shall transmit a copy of the report to each candidate seeking nomination or election to that office.

“(D) For purposes of this section, the term ‘made’ includes any action taken to incur an obligation for payment.

“(4)(A) If any person intends to make independent expenditures totaling $5,000 during the 20 days before an election, such person shall file a statement no later than the 20th day before the election.

“(B) Such statement shall be filed with the Clerk of the House of Representatives or the Secretary of the Senate, whichever is applicable, and the Secretary of State of the State involved, and shall identify each candidate whom the expenditure will support or oppose. The Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate shall as soon as possible (but not later than 4 working hours of the Commission) after receipt of a statement transmit it to the Commission. Not later than 48 hours after the Commission receives a statement under this paragraph, the Commission shall transmit a copy of the statement to each candidate identified.

“(5) The Commission may make its own determination that a person has made, or has incurred obligations to make, independent expenditures with respect to any Federal election which in the aggregate exceed the applicable amounts under paragraph (3) or (4). The Commission shall notify each candidate in such election of such determination within 24 hours of making it.

“(6) At the same time as a candidate is notified under paragraph (3), (4), or (5) with respect to expenditures during a general election period, the Commission shall certify eligibility to receive benefits under section 504(a) or section 604(b).

“(7) The Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate shall make any statement received under this subsection available for public inspection and copying in the same manner as the Commission under section 311(a)(4), and shall preserve such statements in the same manner as the Commission under section 311(a)(5).”

SEC. 134. CAMPAIGN ADVERTISING AMENDMENTS.

Section 318 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441d) is amended—

(1) in the matter before paragraph (1) of subsection (a), by striking “an expenditure” and inserting “a disbursement”;

(2) in the matter before paragraph (1) of subsection (a), by striking “direct”;

(3) in paragraph (3) of subsection (a), by inserting after “name” the following “and permanent street address”; and

(4) by adding at the end the following new subsections:

“(c) Any printed communication described in subsection (a) shall be—

“(1) of sufficient type size to be clearly readable by the recipient of the communication;

“(2) contained in a printed box set apart from the other contents of the communication; and

“(3) consist of a reasonable degree of color contrast between the background and the printed statement.

“(d)(1) Any broadcast or cablecast communication described in subsection (a)(1) or subsection (a)(2) shall include, in addition to the requirements of those subsections an audio statement by the candidate that identifies the candidate and states that the candidate has approved the communication.

“(2) If a broadcast or cablecast communication described in paragraph (1) is broadcast or cablecast by means of television, the statement required by paragraph (1) shall—

“(A) appear in a clearly readable manner with a reasonable degree of color contrast between the background and the printed statement, for a period of at least 4 seconds; and

“(B) be accompanied by a clearly identifiable photographic or similar image of the candidate.

“(e) Any broadcast or cablecast communication described in subsection (a)(3) shall include, in addition to the requirements of those subsections, in a clearly spoken manner, the following statement—

“is responsible for the content of this advertisement.”

with the blank to be filled in with the name of the political committee or other person paying for the communication and the name of any connected organization of the payor; and, if broadcast or cablecast by means of television, shall also appear in a clearly readable manner with a reasonable degree of color contrast between the background and the printed statement, for a period of at least 4 seconds."

SEC. 135. DEFINITIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 301 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431) is amended by striking paragraph (19) and inserting the following new paragraphs:

"(19) The term 'eligible Senate candidate' means a candidate who is eligible under section 502 to receive benefits under title V.

"(20) The term 'general election' means any election which will directly result in the election of a person to a Federal office, but does not include an open primary election.

"(21) The term 'general election period' means, with respect to any candidate, the period beginning on the day after the date of the primary or runoff election for the specific office the candidate is seeking, whichever is later, and ending on the earlier of—

"(A) the date of such general election; or

"(B) the date on which the candidate withdraws from the campaign or otherwise ceases actively to seek election.

"(22) The term 'immediate family' means—

"(A) a candidate's spouse;

"(B) a child, stepchild, parent, grandparent, brother, half-brother, sister or half-sister of the candidate or the candidate's spouse; and

"(C) the spouse of any person described in subparagraph (B).

"(23) The term 'major party' has the meaning given such term in section 9002(6) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, except that if a candidate qualified under State law for the ballot in a general election in an open primary in which all the candidates for the office participated and which resulted in the candidate and at least one other candidate qualifying for the ballot in the general election, such candidate shall be treated as a candidate of a major party for purposes of title V.

"(24) The term 'primary election' means an election which may result in the selection of a candidate for the ballot in a general election for a Federal office.

"(25) The term 'primary election period' means, with respect to any candidate, the period beginning on the day following the date of the last election for the specific office the candidate is seeking and ending on the earlier of—

"(A) the date of the first primary election for that office following the last general election for that office; or

"(B) the date on which the candidate withdraws from the election or otherwise ceases actively to seek election.

"(26) The term 'runoff election' means an election held after a primary election which is prescribed by applicable State law as the means for deciding which candidate will be on the ballot in the general election for a Federal office.

"(27) The term 'runoff election period' means, with respect to any candidate, the period beginning on the day following the date of the last primary election for the specific office such candidate is seeking and ending on the date of the runoff election for such office.

"(28) The term 'voting age population' means the resident population, 18 years of age or older, as certified pursuant to section 315(e).

"(29) The term 'eligible House of Representatives candidate' means a candidate for election to the office of Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the Congress, who, as determined by the Commission under section 602, is eligible to receive matching payments and other benefits under title VI by reason of filing a statement of participation and complying with the continuing eligibility requirements under section 602.

"(30) The term 'election cycle' means—

"(A) in the case of a candidate or the authorized committees of a candidate, the term beginning on the day after the date of the most recent general election for the specific office or seat which such candidate seeks and ending on the date of the next general election for such office or seat; or

"(B) for all other persons, the term beginning on the first day following the date of the last general election and ending on the date of the next general election."

(b) IDENTIFICATION.—Section 301(13) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(13)) is amended by striking "mailing address" and inserting "permanent residence address".

SEC. 136. PROVISIONS RELATING TO FRANKED MASS MAILINGS.

(a) MASS MAILINGS OF SENATORS.—Section 3210(a)(6) of title 39, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking "It is the intent of Congress that a Member of, or a Member-elect to, Congress" and inserting "A Member of, or Member-elect to, the House"; and

(2) in subparagraph (C)—

(A) by striking "if such mass mailing is postmarked fewer than 60 days immediately before the date" and inserting "if such mass mailing is postmarked during the calendar year"; and

(B) by inserting "or reelection" immediately before the period.

(b) MASS MAILINGS OF HOUSE MEMBERS.—Section 3210 of title 39, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(7), by striking "except that—" and all that follows through the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting a period; and

(2) in subsection (d)(1), by striking "delivery—" and all that follows through the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting "delivery within that area constituting the congressional district or State from which the Member was elected."

(c) PROHIBITION ON USE OF OFFICIAL FUNDS.—The Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives may not approve any payment, nor may a Member of the House of Representatives make any expenditure from, any allowance of the House of Representatives or any other official funds if any portion of the payment or expenditure is for any cost related to a mass mailing by a Member of the House of Representatives outside the congressional district of the Member.

TITLE II—INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURES

SEC. 201. CLARIFICATION OF DEFINITIONS RELATING TO INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURES.

(a) INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURE DEFINITION AMENDMENT.—Section 301 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431) is amended by striking paragraphs (17) and (18) and inserting the following:

"(17)(A) The term 'independent expenditure' means an expenditure for an advertisement or other communication that—"(i) contains express advocacy; and

"(ii) is made without the participation or cooperation of a candidate or a candidate's representative.

"(B) The following shall not be considered an independent expenditure:

"(i) An expenditure made by a political committee of a political party.

"(ii) An expenditure made by a person who, during the election cycle, has communicated with or received information from a candidate or a representative of that candidate regarding activities that have the purpose of influencing that candidate's election to Federal office, where the expenditure is in support of that candidate or in opposition to another candidate for that office.

"(iii) An expenditure if there is any arrangement, coordination, or direction with respect to the expenditure between the candidate or the candidate's agent and the person making the expenditure.

"(iv) An expenditure if, in the same election cycle, the person making the expenditure is or has been—

"(I) authorized to raise or expend funds on behalf of the candidate or the candidate's authorized committees; or

"(II) serving as a member, employee, or agent of the candidate's authorized committees in an executive or policymaking position.

"(v) An expenditure if the person making the expenditure has advised or counseled the candidate or the candidate's agents at any time on the candidate's plans, projects, or needs relating to the candidate's pursuit of nomination for election, or election, to Federal office, in the same election cycle, including any advice relating to the candidate's decision to seek Federal office.

"(vi) An expenditure if the person making the expenditure retains the professional services of any individual or other person also providing those services in the same election cycle to the candidate in connection with the candidate's pursuit of nomination for election, or election, to Federal office, including any services relating to the candidate's decision to seek Federal office.

"(vii) An expenditure if the person making the expenditure has consulted at any time during the same election cycle about the candidate's plans, projects, or needs relating to the candidate's pursuit of nomination for election, or election, to Federal office, with—

"(I) any officer, director, employee or agent of a party committee that has made or intends to make expenditures or contributions, pursuant to subsections (a), (d), or (h) of section 315 in connection with the candidate's campaign; or

"(II) any person whose professional services have been retained by a political party committee that has made or intends to make expenditures or contributions pursuant to subsections (a), (d), or (h) of section 315 in connection with the candidate's campaign.

For purposes of this subparagraph, the person making the expenditure shall include any officer, director, employee, or agent of such person.

"(18) The term 'express advocacy' means, when a communication is taken as a whole, an expression of support for or opposition to a specific candidate, to a specific group of candidates, or to candidates of a particular political party, or a suggestion to take action with respect to an election, such as to vote for or against, make contributions to, or participate in campaign activity."

(b) CONTRIBUTION DEFINITION AMENDMENT.—Section 301(8)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)(A)) is amended—

(1) in clause (i), by striking "or" after the semicolon at the end;

(2) in clause (ii), by striking the period at the end and inserting "or"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(iii) any payment or other transaction referred to in paragraph (17)(A)(i) that does not qualify as an independent expenditure under paragraph (17)(A)(ii)."

TITLE III—EXPENDITURES

Subtitle A—Personal Loans; Credit

SEC. 301. PERSONAL CONTRIBUTIONS AND LOANS.

Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a), as amended by section 122, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(k) LIMITATIONS ON PAYMENTS TO CANDIDATES.—(1) If a candidate or a member of the candidate's immediate family made any loans to the candidate or to the candidate's authorized committees during any election cycle, no contributions after the date of the general election for such election cycle may be used to repay such loans.

"(2) No contribution by a candidate or member of the candidate's immediate family may be returned to the candidate or member other than as part of a pro rata distribution of excess contributions to all contributors."

SEC. 302. EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT.

Section 301(8)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)(A)), as amended by section 201(b), is amended—

(1) by striking "or" at the end of clause (ii);

(2) by striking the period at the end of clause (iii) and inserting "; or"; and

(3) by inserting at the end the following new clause:

"(iv) with respect to a candidate and the candidate's authorized committees, any extension of credit for goods or services relating to advertising on broadcasting stations, in newspapers or magazines, or by mailings, or relating to other similar types of general public political advertising, if such extension of credit is—

"(I) in an amount of more than $1,000; and

"(II) for a period greater than the period, not in excess of 60 days, for which credit is generally extended in the normal course of business after the date on which such goods or services are furnished or the date of the mailing in the case of advertising by a mailing."

Subtitle B—Provisions Relating to Soft Money of Political Parties

SEC. 311. CONTRIBUTIONS TO POLITICAL PARTY COMMITTEES.

(a) INDIVIDUAL CONTRIBUTIONS TO STATE PARTY.—Paragraph (1) of section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(1)) is amended by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (B), by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (D), and by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) to political committees established and maintained by a State committee of a political party in any calendar year which, in the aggregate, exceed $10,000; or"

(b) MULTICANDIDATE COMMITTEE CONTRIBUTIONS TO STATE PARTY.—Paragraph (2) of section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(2)) is amended by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (B), by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (D), and by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) to political committees established and maintained by a State committee of a political party in any calendar year which, in the aggregate, exceed $10,000; or"

(c) INCREASE IN OVERALL LIMIT.—Paragraph (3) of section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(3)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The limitation under this paragraph shall be increased (but not by more than $5,000) by the amount of contributions made by an individual during a calendar year to political committees which are taken into account for purposes of paragraph (1)(C)."

SEC. 312. PROVISIONS RELATING TO NATIONAL, STATE, AND LOCAL PARTY COMMITTEES.

(a) EXPENDITURES BY STATE COMMITTEES IN CONNECTION WITH PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGNS.—Section 315(d) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(d)) is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) A State committee of a political party, including subordinate committees of that State committee, shall not make expenditures in connection with the general election campaign of a candidate for President of the United States who is affiliated with such party which, in the aggregate, exceed an amount equal to 4 cents multiplied by the voting age population of the State, as certified under subsection (e). This paragraph shall not authorize a committee to make expenditures for audio broadcasts (including television broadcasts) in excess of the amount which could have been made without regard to this paragraph."

(b) CONTRIBUTION AND EXPENDITURE EXCEPTIONS.—(1) Section 301(8)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)(B)) is amended—

(A) in clause (xi), by striking "direct mail" and inserting "mail"; and

(B) by repealing clauses (x) and (xii).

(2) Section 301(9)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(9)(B)) is amended by repealing clauses (viii) and (ix).

(c) SOFT MONEY OF COMMITTEES OF POLITICAL PARTIES.—(1) Title III of FECA is amended by inserting after section 323 the following new section:

"POLITICAL PARTY COMMITTEES

"SEC. 324. (a) Any amount solicited, received, or expended directly or indirectly by a national, State, district, or local committee of a political party (including any subordinate committee) with respect to an activity which, in whole or in part, is in connection with an election to Federal office shall be subject in its entirety to the limitations, prohibitions, and reporting requirements of this Act.

"(b) For purposes of subsection (a)—

"(1) Any activity which is solely for the purpose of influencing an election for Federal office is in connection with an election for Federal office.

"(2) Except as provided in paragraph (3), any of the following activities during a Federal election period shall be treated as in connection with an election for Federal office:

"(A) Voter registration and get-out-the-vote activities.

"(B) Campaign activities, including broadcasting, newspaper, magazine, billboard, mass mail, and newsletter communications, and similar kinds of communications or public advertising that—"(i) are generic campaign activities; or

"(ii) identify a Federal candidate regardless of whether a State or local candidate is also identified.

"(C) The preparation and dissemination of campaign materials that are part of a generic campaign activity or that identify a Federal candidate, regardless of whether a State or local candidate is also identified.

"(D) Development and maintenance of voter files.

"(E) Any other activity affecting (in whole or in part) an election for Federal office.

"(3) The following shall not be treated as in connection with a Federal election:

"(A) Any amount described in section 301(8)(B)(viii).

"(B) Any amount contributed to a candidate for other than Federal office.

"(C) Any amount received or expended in connection with a State or local political convention.

"(D) Campaign activities, including broadcasting, newspaper, magazine, billboard, mass mail, and newsletter communications, and similar kinds of communications or public advertising that are exclusively on behalf of State or local candidates and are not activities described in paragraph (2)(A).

"(E) Administrative expenses of a State or local committee of a political party, including expenses for—

"(i) overhead;

"(ii) staff (other than individuals devoting a substantial portion of their activities to elections for Federal office);

"(iii) meetings; and

"(iv) conducting party elections or caucuses.

"(F) Research pertaining solely to State and local candidates and issues.

"(G) Development and maintenance of voter files other than during a Federal election period.

"(H) Activities described in paragraph (2)(A) which are conducted other than during a Federal election period.

"(I) Any other activity which is solely for the purpose of influencing, and which solely affects, an election for non-Federal office.

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'Federal election period' means the period—

"(A) beginning on June 1, of any even-numbered calendar year (April 1 if an election to the office of President occurs in such year), and

"(B) ending on the date during such year on which regularly scheduled general elections for Federal office occur.

In the case of a special election, the Federal election period shall include at least the 60-day period ending on the date of the election.

"(c) SOLICITATION OF COMMITTEES.—(1) A national committee of a political party may not solicit or accept contributions not subject to the limitations, prohibitions, and reporting requirements of this Act.

"(2) Paragraph (1) shall not apply to contributions that—

"(A) are to be transferred to a State committee of a political party for use directly for activities described in subsection (b)(3); or

"(B) are to be used by the committee primarily to support such activities.

"(d) AMOUNTS RECEIVED FROM STATE AND LOCAL CANDIDATE COMMITTEES.—(1) For purposes of subsection (a), any amount received by a national, State, district, or local committee of a political party (including any subordinate committee) from a State or local candidate committee shall be treated as meeting the requirements of subsection (a) and section 304(d) if—

"(A) such amount is derived from funds which meet the requirements of this Act with respect to any limitation or prohibition as to source or dollar amount, and

"(B) the State or local candidate committee—

"(i) maintains, in the account from which payment is made, records of the sources and amounts of funds for purposes of determining whether such requirements are met, and

"(ii) certifies to the other committee that such requirements were met.

"(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (1), any committee receiving any contribution described in paragraph (1) from a State or local candidate committee shall be required to meet the reporting requirements of this Act with respect to receipt of the contribution from such candidate committee.

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, a State or local candidate committee is a committee established, financed, maintained, or controlled by a candidate for other than Federal office."

(2) Section 315(d) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(d)), as amended by subsection (a), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5)(A) The national committee of a political party, the congressional campaign committees of a political party, and a State or local committee of a political party, including a subordinate committee of any of the preceding committees, shall not make expenditures during any calendar year for activities described in section 324(b)(2) with respect to such State which, in the aggregate, exceed an amount equal to 30 cents multiplied by the voting age population of the State (as certified under subsection (e)).

"(B) Expenditures authorized under this paragraph shall be in addition to other expenditures allowed under this subsection, except that this paragraph shall not authorize a committee to make expenditures to which paragraph (3) or (4) applies in excess of the limit applicable to such expenditures under paragraph (3) or (4).

"(C) No adjustment to the limitation under this paragraph shall be made under subsection (c) before 1992 and the base period for purposes of any such adjustment shall be 1990.

"(D) For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) a local committee of a political party shall only include a committee that is a political committee (as defined in section 301(4)); and

"(ii) a State committee shall not be required to record or report under this Act the expenditures of any other committee which are made independently from the State committee."

(3) Section 301(4) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(4)) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence:

"For purposes of subparagraph (C), any payments for get-out-the-vote activities on behalf of candidates for office other than Federal office shall be treated as payments exempted from the definition of expenditure under paragraph (9) of this section."

(d) GENERIC ACTIVITIES.—Section 301 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431), as amended by section 135, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(31) The term 'generic campaign activity' means a campaign activity the preponderant purpose or effect of which is to promote a political party rather than any particular Federal or non-Federal candidate."

SEC. 313. RESTRICTIONS ON FUNDRAISING BY CANDIDATES AND OFFICEHOLDERS.

(a) STATE FUNDRAISING ACTIVITIES.—Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a), as amended by section 301, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(1) LIMITATIONS ON FUNDRAISING ACTIVITIES OF FEDERAL CANDIDATES AND OFFICEHOLDERS AND CERTAIN POLITICAL COMMITTEES.—(1) For purposes of this Act, a candidate for Federal office (or an individual holding Federal office) may not solicit funds to, or receive funds on behalf of, any Federal or non-Federal candidate or political committee—

"(A) which are to be expended in connection with any election for Federal office unless such funds are subject to the limitations, prohibitions, and requirements of this Act; or

"(B) which are to be expended in connection with any election for other than Federal office unless such funds are not in excess of amounts permitted with respect to Federal candidates and political committees under this Act, and are not from sources prohibited by this Act with respect to elections to Federal office.

"(2)(A) The aggregate amount which a person described in subparagraph (B) may solicit from a multicandidate political committee for State committees described in subsection (a)(1)(C) (including subordinate committees) for any calendar year shall not exceed the dollar amount in effect under subsection (a)(2)(B) for the calendar year.

"(B) A person is described in this subparagraph if such person is a candidate for Federal office, an individual holding Federal office, or any national, State, district, or local committee of a political party (including subordinate committees).

"(3) The appearance or participation by a candidate or individual in any activity (including fundraising) conducted by a committee of a political party or a candidate for other than Federal office shall not be treated as a solicitation for purposes of paragraph (1) if—

"(A) such appearance or participation is otherwise permitted by law; and

"(B) such candidate or individual does not solicit or receive, or make expenditures from, any funds resulting from such activity.

"(4) Paragraph (1) shall not apply to the solicitation or receipt of funds, or disbursements, by an individual who is a candidate for other than Federal office if such activity is permitted under State law.

"(5) For purposes of this subsection, an individual shall be treated as holding Federal office if such individual is described in section 101(f) of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978."

(b) TAX-EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS.—Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a), as amended by subsection (a), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(m) TAX-EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS.—(1) If during any period an individual is a candidate for, or holds, Federal office, such individual may not during such period solicit contributions to, or on behalf of, any organization which is described in section 501(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 if a significant portion of the activities of such organization include voter registration or get-out-the-vote campaigns.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, an individual shall be treated as holding Federal office if such individual is described in section 101(f) of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978."

SEC. 314. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—Section 304 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 434) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) POLITICAL COMMITTEES.—(1) The national committee of a political party and any congressional campaign committee, and any subordinate committee of either, shall report all receipts and disbursements during the reporting period, whether or not in connection with an election for Federal office.

"(2) A political committee (not described in paragraph (1)) to which section 324 applies shall report all receipts and disbursements in connection with a Federal election (as determined under section 324).

"(3) Any political committee to which section 324 applies shall include in its report under paragraph (1) or (2) the amount of any transfer described in section 324(c) and the reason for the transfer.

"(4) Any political committee to which paragraph (1) or (2) does not apply shall report any receipts or disbursements which are used in connection with a Federal election.

"(5) If any receipt or disbursement to which this subsection applies exceeds $200, the political committee shall include identification of the person from whom, or to whom, such receipt or disbursement was made.

"(6) Reports required to be filed by this subsection shall be filed for the same time periods required for political committees under subsection (a)."

(b) REPORT OF EXEMPT CONTRIBUTIONS.—Section 301(8) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 431(8)) is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following:

"(C) The exclusions provided in clauses (v) and (viii) of subparagraph (B) shall not apply for purposes of any requirement to report contributions under this Act, and all such contributions in excess of $200 shall be reported."

(c) REPORTING OF EXEMPT EXPENDITURES.—Section 301(9) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 431(9)) is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following:

"(C) The exclusions provided in clause (iv) of subparagraph (B) shall not apply for purposes of any requirement to report expenditures under this Act, and all such expenditures in excess of $200 shall be reported."

(d) CONTRIBUTIONS AND EXPENDITURES OF POLITICAL COMMITTEES.—Section 301(4) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(4)) is amended by adding at the end the following: "For purposes of this paragraph, the receipt of contributions or the making of, or obligating to make, expenditures shall be determined by the Commission on the basis of facts and circumstances, in whatever combination, demonstrating a purpose of influencing any election for Federal office, including, but not limited to, the representations made by any person soliciting funds about their intended uses; the identification by name of individuals who are candidates for Federal office or of any political party, in general public political advertising; and the proximity to any primary, runoff, or general election of general public political advertising designed or reasonably calculated to influence voter choice in that election."

(e) REPORTS BY STATE COMMITTEES.—Section 304 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 434), as amended by subsection (a), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) FILING OF STATE REPORTS.—In lieu of any report required to be filed by this Act, the Commission may allow a State committee of a political party to file with the Commission a report required to be filed under State law if the Commission determines such reports contain substantially the same information."

TITLE IV—CONTRIBUTIONS

SEC. 401. CONTRIBUTIONS THROUGH INTERMEDIARIES AND CONDUITS.

Section 315(a)(8) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(8)) is amended to read as follows:

"(8) For the purposes of this subsection:

"(A) Contributions made by a person, either directly or indirectly, to or on behalf of a particular candidate, including contributions that are in any way earmarked or otherwise directed through an intermediary or conduit to a candidate, shall be treated as contributions from the person to the candidate.

"(B) Contributions made directly or indirectly by a person to or on behalf of a partitular candidate through an intermediary or conduit, including contributions made or arranged to be made by an intermediary or conduit, shall be treated as contributions from the intermediary or conduit to the candidate if—

"(i) the contributions made through the intermediary or conduit are in the form of a check or other negotiable instrument made payable to the intermediary or conduit rather than the intended recipient; or

"(ii) the intermediary or conduit is—

"(I) a political committee with a connected organization;

"(II) an officer, employee, or agent of such a political committee;

"(III) a political party;

"(IV) a partnership or sole proprietorship;

"(V) a person required to register under section 308 of the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act (2 U.S.C. 267) or the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938 (22 U.S.C. 611 et seq.); or

"(VI) an organization prohibited from making contributions under section 316, or an officer, employee, or agent of such an organization acting on the organization's behalf.

"(C)(i) The term 'intermediary or conduit' does not include—

"(I) a candidate or representative of a candidate receiving contributions to the candidate's principal campaign committee or authorized committee;

"(II) a professional fundraiser compensated for fundraising services at the usual and customary rate;

"(III) a volunteer hosting a fundraising event at the volunteer's home, in accordance with section 301(8)(B); or

"(IV) an individual who transmits a contribution from the individual's spouse.

"(ii) The term 'representative' means an individual who is expressly authorized by the candidate to engage in fundraising, and who occupies a significant position within the candidate's campaign organization, provided that the individual is not described in subparagraph (B)(i).

"(iii) The term 'contributions made or arranged to be made' includes—

"(I) contributions delivered to a particular candidate or the candidate's authorized committee or agent; and

"(II) contributions directly or indirectly arranged to be made to a particular candidate or the candidate's authorized committee or agent, in a manner that identifies directly or indirectly to the candidate or authorized committee or agent the person who arranged the making of the contributions or the person on whose behalf such person was acting.

"(iv) The term 'acting on the organization's behalf' includes the following activities by an officer, employee or agent of a person described in subparagraph (B)(ii)(IV):

"(I) Soliciting or directly or indirectly arranging the making of a contribution to a particular candidate in the name of, or by using the name of, such a person.

"(II) Soliciting or directly or indirectly arranging the making of a contribution to a particular candidate using other than incidental resources of such a person.

"(III) Soliciting contributions for a particular candidate by substantially directing the solicitations to other officers, employees, or agents of such a person.

"(D) Nothing in this paragraph shall prohibit—

"(i) bona fide joint fundraising efforts conducted solely for the purpose of sponsorship of a fundraising reception, dinner, or other similar event, in accordance with rules prescribed by the Commission, by—

"(I) 2 or more candidates;

"(II) 2 or more national, State, or local committees of a political party within the meaning of section 301(4) acting on their own behalf; or

"(III) a special committee formed by 2 or more candidates, or a candidate and a national, State, or local committee of a political party acting on their own behalf; or

"(ii) fundraising efforts for the benefit of a candidate that are conducted by another candidate.

"(iii) bona fide fundraising efforts conducted by and solely on behalf of an individual for the purpose of sponsorship of a fundraising reception, dinner, or other similar event, but only if all contributions are made directly to a candidate or a representative of a candidate.

When a contribution is made to a candidate through an intermediary or conduit, the intermediary or conduit shall report the original source and the intended recipient of the contribution to the Commission and to the intended recipient."

SEC. 402. CONTRIBUTIONS BY DEPENDENTS NOT OF VOTING AGE.

Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a), as amended by section 313(b), is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(n) For purposes of this section, any contribution by an individual who—

"(1) is a dependent of another individual; and

"(2) has not, as of the time of such contribution, attained the legal age for voting for elections to Federal office in the State in which such individual resides, shall be treated as having been made by such other individual. If such individual is the dependent of another individual and such other individual's spouse, the contribution shall be allocated among such individuals in the manner determined by them."

SEC. 403. CONTRIBUTIONS TO CANDIDATES FROM STATE AND LOCAL COMMITTEES OF POLITICAL PARTIES TO BE AGGREGATED.

Section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(9) A candidate for Federal office may not accept, with respect to an election, any contribution from a State or local committee of a political party (including any subordinate committee of such committee), if such contribution, when added to the total of contributions previously accepted from all such committees of that political party, exceeds a limitation on contributions to a candidate under this section."

SEC. 404. LIMITED EXCLUSION OF ADVANCES BY CAMPAIGN WORKERS FROM THE DEFINITION OF THE TERM "CONTRIBUTION".

Section 301(8)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)(B)) is amended—

"(xvi) a ballot initiative contribution."

SEC. 703. AMENDMENT TO DEFINITION OF EXPENDITURE.

Section 301(9)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(9)(B)) is amended—

(1) in clause (ix)(3), by striking "and" after the semicolon;

(2) in clause (x), by striking the period and inserting "and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(xi) a ballot initiative expenditure."

SEC. 704. ORGANIZATION OF BALLOT INITIATIVE COMMITTEES.

Title III of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 302 (2 U.S.C. 432) the following new section:

"ORGANIZATION OF BALLOT INITIATIVE COMMITTEES"

"SEC. 302A. (a) Every ballot initiative political committee shall have a treasurer. No ballot initiative contribution shall be accepted or ballot initiative expenditure shall be made by or on behalf of a ballot initiative political committee during any period in which the office of treasurer is vacant.

"(b)(1) Every person who receives a ballot initiative contribution for a ballot initiative political committee shall—

"(A) if the amount is $50 or less, forward to the treasurer such contribution no later than 30 days after receiving the contribution; and

"(B) if the amount of the ballot initiative contribution is in excess of $50, forward to the treasurer such contribution, the name, address, and occupation of the person making such contribution, and the date of receiving such contribution, no later than 10 days after receiving such contribution.

"(2) All funds of a ballot initiative political committee shall be segregated from, and may not be commingled with, the personal funds of any individual.

"(3) The treasurer of a ballot initiative political committee shall keep an account for—

"(A) all ballot initiative contributions received by or on behalf of such ballot initiative political committee;

"(B) the name and address of any person who makes a ballot initiative contribution in excess of $50, together with the date and amount of such ballot initiative contribution by any person;

"(C) the identification of any person who makes a ballot initiative contribution or ballot initiative contributions aggregating more than $200 during a calendar year, together with the date and amount of any such contribution;

"(D) the identification of any political committee or ballot initiative political committee which makes a ballot initiative contribution, together with the date and amount of any such contribution; and

"(E) the name and address of every person to whom any ballot initiative expenditure is made, the date, amount and purpose of such ballot initiative expenditure, and the name of the ballot initiative(s) to which the ballot initiative expenditure pertained.

"(c) The treasurer shall preserve all records required to be kept by this section 3 years after the report is filed."

SEC. 705. BALLOT INITIATIVE COMMITTEE REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

Title III of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431 et seq.), as amended by section 103, is amended by inserting after section 30A (2 U.S.C. 434) the following new section:

"BALLOT INITIATIVE COMMITTEE REPORTING REQUIREMENTS"

"SEC. 304B. (a)(1) Each treasurer of a ballot initiative political committee shall file reports of receipts and disbursements in accordance with the provisions of this subsection. The treasurer shall sign each such report.

"(2) All ballot initiative political committees shall file either—

"(A)(i) quarterly reports in each calendar year when a ballot initiative is slated regarding which the ballot initiative committee plans to make or makes a ballot initiative expenditure or plans to receive or receives a ballot initiative contribution, which shall be filed no later than the 15th day after the last day of each calendar quarter; except that the report for the quarter ending on December 31 of such calendar year shall be filed no later than January 31 of the following calendar year; and

"(ii) preballot initiative reports, which shall be filed 5 days before the occurrence of each ballot initiative in which the ballot initiative committee plans to make or has made a ballot initiative expenditure or plans to receive or has received a ballot initiative contribution; or

"(B) monthly reports in all calendar years which shall be filed no later than the 15th day after the last day of the month and shall be complete as of the last day of the month.

"(3) If a designation, report, or statement filed pursuant to this section (other than under paragraph (2)(A)(ii)) is sent by registered or certified mail, the United States postmark shall be considered the date of filing of the designation, report, or statement.

"(4) The reports required to be filed by this section shall be cumulative during the calendar year to which they relate, but where there has been no change in an item reported in a previous report during each year, only the amount need be carried forward.

"(b) Each report under this section shall disclose—

"(1) the amount of cash on hand at the beginning of the reporting period;

"(2) for the reporting period and the calendar year, the total amount of all receipts, and the total amount of all receipts in the following categories:

"(A) ballot initiative contributions from persons other than political committees;

"(B) ballot initiative contributions from political party committees;

"(C) ballot initiative contributions from other political committees and ballot initiative political committees;

"(D) transfers from affiliated political committees;

"(E) loans;

"(F) rebates, refunds, and other offsets to operating expenditures; and

"(G) dividends, interest, and other forms of receipts;

"(3) the identification of each—

"(A) person (other than a political committee or ballot initiative political committee) who makes a ballot initiative contribution to the reporting committee during the reporting period, whose ballot initiative contribution or ballot initiative contributions have an aggregate amount or value in excess of $50 within the calendar year, or in any lesser amount if the reporting committee should so elect, together with the date and amount of any such contribution and the address and occupation (if an individual) of the person;

"(B) political committee or ballot initiative political committee which makes a ballot initiative contribution to the reporting committee during the reporting period, together with the date and amount of any such contribution;

"(C) affiliated political committee or affiliated ballot initiative political committee which makes a transfer to the reporting committee during the reporting period;

"(D) person who makes a loan to the reporting committee during the reporting period, together with the identification of any endorser or guarantor of such loan, and the date and amount or value of such loan and the address and occupation (if an individual) of the person;

"(E) person who provides a rebate, refund, or other offset to operating expenditures to the reporting committee in an aggregate amount or value in excess of $200 within the calendar year, together with the date and amount of such receipt and the address and occupation (if an individual) of the person; and

"(F) person who provides any dividend, interest, or other receipt to the reporting committee in an aggregate value or amount in excess of $200 within the calendar year, together with the date and amount of any such receipt and the address and occupation (if an individual) of the person;

"(4) for the reporting period and the calendar year, the total amount of disbursements, and all disbursements in the following categories:

"(A) ballot initiative expenditures;

"(B) transfers to affiliated political committees or ballot initiative political committees;

"(C) ballot initiative contribution refunds and other offsets to ballot initiative contributions;

"(D) loans made by the reporting committee and the name of the person receiving the loan together with the date of the loan and the address and occupation (if an individual) of the person; and

"(E) independent expenditures; and

"(5) the total sum of all ballot initiative contributions to such ballot initiative political committee."

SEC. 706. ENFORCEMENT AMENDMENT.

Section 309 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) The civil penalties of this Act shall apply to the organization, recordkeeping, and reporting requirements of a ballot initiative political committee under section 302A or 304B, insofar as such committee conducts activities solely for the purpose of influencing a ballot initiative and not for the purpose of influencing any election for Federal office."

SEC. 707. PROHIBITION OF CONTRIBUTIONS IN THE NAME OF ANOTHER.

Section 320 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441f) is amended to read as follows:

"PROHIBITION OF CONTRIBUTIONS IN THE NAME OF ANOTHER"

"SEC. 320. No person shall make a contribution or ballot initiative contribution in the name of another person or knowingly permit his name to be used to effect such a contribution or ballot initiative contribution, and no person shall knowingly accept a contribution or ballot initiative contribution made by one person in the name of another person."

SEC. 708. LIMITATION ON CONTRIBUTION OF CURRENCY.

Section 321 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441g) is amended to read as follows:

"LIMITATION ON CONTRIBUTION OF CURRENCY"

"SEC. 321. No person shall make contributions or ballot initiative contributions of currency of the United States or currency of any foreign country which in the aggregate, exceed $100, to or for the benefit of—

"(1) any candidate for nomination for election, or for election, to Federal office;

"(2) any political committee (other than a ballot initiative political committee) for the purpose of influencing an election for Federal office; or

"(3) any ballot initiative political committee for the purpose of influencing a ballot initiative."

TITLE VIII—MISCELLANEOUS

SEC. 801. PROHIBITION OF LEADERSHIP COMMITTEES.

Section 302(e) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 432(e)) is amended—

(1) by amending paragraph (3) to read as follows:

"(3) No political committee that supports or has supported more than one candidate may be designated as an authorized committee, except that—

"(A) a candidate for the office of President nominated by a political party may designate the national committee of such political party as the candidate's principal campaign committee, but only if that national committee maintains separate books of account with respect to its functions as a principal campaign committee; and

"(B) a candidate may designate a political committee established solely for the purpose of joint fundraising by such candidates as an authorized committee.";

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(6)(A) A candidate for Federal office or any individual holding Federal office may not establish, maintain, or control any political committee other than a principal campaign committee of the candidate, authorized committee, party committee, or other political committee designated in accordance with paragraph (3). A candidate for more than one Federal office may designate a separate principal campaign committee for each Federal office.

"(B) For one year after the effective date of this paragraph, any such political committee may continue to make contributions. At the end of that period such political committee shall disburse all funds by one or more of the following means: making contributions to an entity qualified under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; making a contribution to the Treasury of the United States; contributing to the national, State or local committees of a political party; or making contributions not to exceed $1,000 to candidates for elective office."

SEC. 802. POLLING DATA CONTRIBUTED TO CANDIDATES.

Section 301(8) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)), as amended by section 314(b), is amended by inserting at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) A contribution of polling data to a candidate shall be valued at the fair market value of the data on the date the poll was completed, depreciated at a rate not more than 1 percent per day from such date to the date on which the contribution was made."

SEC. 803. DEBATES BY GENERAL ELECTION CANDIDATES WHO RECEIVE AMOUNTS FROM THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION CAMPAIGN FUND.

Section 315(b) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(b)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3)(A) The candidates of a political party for the offices of President and Vice President who are eligible under section 9003 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to receive payments from the Secretary of the Treasury shall not receive such payments unless both of such candidates agree in writing—

"(i) that the candidate for the office of President will participate in at least 4 debates, sponsored by a nonpartisan or bipartisan organization, with all other candidates for that office who are eligible under that section; and

"(ii) that the candidate of the party for the office of Vice President will participate in at least 1 debate, sponsored by a nonpartisan or bipartisan organization, with all other candidates for that office who are eligible under that section.

"(B) If the Commission determines that either of the candidates of a political party failed to participate in a debate under subparagraph (A) and was responsible at least in part for such failure, the candidate of the party involved shall—

"(i) be ineligible to receive payments under section 9006 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; and

"(ii) pay to the Secretary of the Treasury an amount equal to the amount of the payments made to the candidate under that section."

SEC. 804. PROHIBITION OF CERTAIN ELECTION-RELATED ACTIVITIES OF FOREIGN NATIONALS.

Section 319 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441e) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(c) A foreign national shall not directly or indirectly direct, control, influence or participate in any person's election-related activities, such as the making of contributions or expenditures in connection with elections for any local, State, or Federal office or the administration of a political committee.

"(d) A nonconnected political committee or the separate segregated fund established in accordance with section 316(b)(2)(C) or any other organization or committee involved in the making of contributions or expenditures in connection with elections for any Federal, State, or local office shall include the following statement on all printed materials produced for the purpose of soliciting contributions:

"It is unlawful for a foreign national to make any contribution of money or other thing of value to a political committee."

SEC. 805. AMENDMENT TO FECA SECTION 316.

Section 316(b) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441b(b)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(A)" at the beginning of paragraph (2) and redesignating subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) as clauses (i), (ii), and (iii), respectively;

(2) at the beginning of the first sentence in subparagraph (A), by inserting the following: "Except as provided in subparagraph (B),";

(3) by adding at the end of paragraph (2) the following:

"(B) Expenditures by a corporation or labor organization for candidate appearances, candidate debates and voter guides directed to the general public shall be considered contributions unless—

"(i) in the case of a candidate appearance, the appearance takes place on corporate or labor organization premises or at a meeting or convention of the corporation or labor organization, and all candidates for election to that office are notified that they may make an appearance under the same or similar conditions;

"(ii) in the case of a candidate debate, the organization staging the debate is either an organization described in section 301 whose broadcasts or publications are supported by commercial advertising, subscriptions or sales to the public, including a noncommercial educational broadcaster, or a nonprofit organization exempt from Federal taxation under section 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 that does not endorse, support, oppose candidates or political parties; and

"(iii) in the case of a voter guide, the guide is prepared and distributed by a corporation or labor organization and consists of questions posed to at least two candidates for election to that office, except that no communication made by a corporation or labor organization in connection with the candidate appearance, candidate debate or voter guide contains express advocacy, or that no candidate is favored through the structure or format of the candidate appearance, candidate debate or voter guide."

SEC. 806. TELEPHONE VOTING BY PERSONS WITH DISABILITIES.

(a) STUDY OF SYSTEMS TO PERMIT PERSONS WITH DISABILITIES TO VOTE BY TELEPHONE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Federal Election Commission shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of developing a system or systems by which persons with disabilities may be permitted to vote by telephone.

(2) CONSULTATION.—The Federal Election Commission shall conduct the study described in paragraph (1) in consultation with State and local election officials, representatives of the telecommunications industry, representatives of persons with disabilities, and other concerned members of the public.

(3) CRITERIA.—The system or systems developed pursuant to paragraph (1) shall—

(A) propose a description of the kinds of disabilities that impose such difficulty in travel to polling places that a person with a disability who may desire to vote is discouraged from undertaking such travel;

(B) propose procedures to identify persons who are so disabled; and

(C) describe procedures and equipment that may be used to ensure that—

(i) only those persons who are entitled to use the system are permitted to use it;

(ii) the votes of persons who use the system are recorded accurately and remain secret;

(iii) the system minimizes the possibility of vote fraud; and

(iv) the system minimizes the financial costs that State and local governments would incur in establishing and operating the system.

(4) REQUESTS FOR PROPOSALS.—In developing a system described in paragraph (1), the Federal Election Commission may request proposals from private contractors for the design of procedures and equipment to be used in the system.

(5) PHYSICAL ACCESS.—Nothing in this section is intended to supersede or supplant efforts by State and local governments to make polling places physically accessible to persons with disabilities.

(6) DEADLINE.—The Federal Election Commission shall submit to Congress the study required by this section not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 807. PROHIBITION OF USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT IN CONNECTION WITH ELECTIONS FOR FEDERAL OFFICE.

Title III of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431 et seq.), as amended by section 312(c) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"PROHIBITION OF USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT IN CONNECTION WITH ELECTIONS FOR FEDERAL OFFICE

"SEC. 325. (a) No aircraft that is owned or operated by the Government (including any aircraft that is owned or operated by the Department of Defense) may be used in connection with an election for Federal office.

"(b)(1) Subsection (a) shall not apply to travel provided to the President or Vice President.

"(2) The portion of the cost of any travel provided to the President or Vice President that is allocable to activities in connection with an election for Federal office shall be paid by the authorized committee of the President. Such portion shall be paid within 10 days of the travel. For purposes of this section, travel which is in any part related to campaign activity, shall be treated as in connection with an election for Federal office, and the payment for such travel shall be sufficient to reflect that portion which is campaign-related.

"(3) The actual costs and payment for costs of any travel provided to the President and Vice President shall be disclosed in accordance with section 304."

SEC. 808. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.

The Congress should consider legislation that would provide for an amendment to the Constitution to set reasonable limits on campaign expenditures in Federal elections.

TITLE IX—EFFECTIVE DATES; AUTHORIZATIONS

SEC. 901. EFFECTIVE DATE.

Except as otherwise provided in this Act, the amendments made by, and the provisions of, this Act shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act but shall not apply with respect to activities in connection with any election occurring before January 1, 1995.

SEC. 902. BUDGET NEUTRALITY.

(a) DELAYED EFFECTIVENESS.—The provisions of this Act (other than this section) shall not be effective until the estimated costs under section 252 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 have been offset by the enactment of subsequent legislation effectuating this Act.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of the Congress that subsequent legislation effectuating this Act shall not provide for general revenue increases, reduce expenditures for any existing Federal program, or increase the Federal budget deficit.

SEC. 903. SEVERABILITY.

Except as provided in sections 101(c) and 121(b), if any provision of this Act (including any amendment made by this Act), or the application of any such provision to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the validity of any other provision of this Act, or the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 904. EXPEDITED REVIEW OF CONSTITUTIONAL ISSUES.

(a) DIRECT APPEAL TO SUPREME COURT.—An appeal may be taken directly to the Supreme Court of the United States from any interlocutory order or final judgment, decree, or order issued by any court ruling on the constitutionality of any provision of this Act or amendment made by this Act.

(b) ACCEPTANCE AND EXPEDITION.—The Supreme Court shall, if it has not previously ruled on the question addressed in the ruling below, accept jurisdiction over, advance on the docket, and expedite the appeal to the greatest extent possible.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, today I am joining Senators BOREN and FORD in the reintroduction of campaign finance reform legislation. The bill is identical to the conference report that passed Congress last year except that the effective date has been changed. This marks the third Congress that Senators BOREN, FORD and I have introduced this legislation to reform the campaign finance system. But this year we face entirely different prospects for enactment. For this year, we have a President who is strongly committed to the cause of campaign finance reform.

President Clinton has endorsed the basic provisions of this legislation including voluntary spending limits on congressional campaigns, limitations on the activities of political action committees, prohibitions on the use of soft money to affect Federal elections, and reductions in the cost of broadcast time. These changes will help restore public confidence in our election finance system by reducing the role of money in the election process and by making elections more competitive.

We have introduced the conference report to last year's bill to serve as a starting point. This is not where we expect to end up because we believe there are many modifications that can be made in that legislation; not to change the basic thrust of the bill but to respond to suggestions for improvement.

That will include discussions with the new President. He has a lot of good ideas that should be reflected in any final legislation. I also continue to hold out the hope of gaining the support of Republican Members of Congress. The conference report approved last year was endorsed by many Republicans, including 17 former Members of Congress. It was also endorsed by 32 Republicans who have run for Congress against incumbents. These current and former candidates for Federal office understand how the election finance system works and they support this legislation.

Yet the bill last year was strongly opposed by most Republican Members of Congress. While I recognize a substantial body of Republicans are philosophically opposed to spending limits, I also know that there are many others who are prepared to accept such a voluntary system. They are as fed up with the current money chase as are Democrats. Now that they no longer have a President strongly opposed to spending limits, I hope they will reconsider their support for this legislation.

At every turn we have endeavored to make this legislation balanced so that it neither favors Republicans nor Democrats. I believe it does provide a more level playing field for challengers. Today I ask Republican Senators to take a fresh look at this issue; review our bill, and let us know where we can make improvements to make this a bipartisan effort.

Since completion of the conference report we have received input from many different individuals who have suggested modifications to the bill; areas that need clarification or tighter language to prevent abuse. We are reviewing those suggestions and I hope many can be included in the final bill. We are also reviewing the legislative recommendations of the Federal Election Commission to respond to need changes in the presidential system and to improve some of the disclosure and reporting rules.

Additionally, one area where I believe last year's bill was deficient was in dealing with the problem of enforcement. Public trust in our election laws requires confidence that the law will be enforced. A system of spending limits puts an even higher premium on effective enforcement. Yet, the structure of the FEC frequently results in a deadlocked 3 to 3 vote of Commissioners that prevents enforcement of the law. Occasionally, this sends the signal that the law can be ignored with impunity. This is a dangerous situation that could severely undermine our proposed voluntary spending limit system.

For that reason, I believe it is important to include provisions in this bill to encourage better compliance with the law and to give the FEC better tools for enforcing the law. In that connection, I have named Senator FOWLER to a position at the FEC as an ex officio member and I have asked him to review these issues and report to me. I invite others as well to review this important issue and recommend needed changes.

Yesterday in his inaugural address, our new President called upon us to "reform our politics, so that power and privilege no longer shout down the voice of the people." "To renew America", he said, "we must revitalize our democracy."

I fully agree with President Clinton and I intend to honor his commitment with prompt congressional approval of campaign finance reform legislation.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, today, I join the distinguished majority leader, Mr. MITCHELL, and the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN], in introducing the Congressional Campaign Spending Limit and Election Reform Act of 1993.

The legislation which we are introducing today is the same bill which passed by the 102d Congress.

Last year, the Congress took an historic step towards the long awaited and necessary reform of our campaign finance laws. The passage of campaign finance reform was the first time since the 1979 amendments to the Federal Election Campaign Act that both houses of Congress were able to agree to a bill. Despite that historic effort, that bill did not become law.

Mr. President, the introduction of the very same bill which was passed by the Congress last year is the appropriate starting point for us to begin this process of enacting real and effective reform of the campaign finance system. In the next few months, Members will have the opportunity to debate this bill. Every issue is on the table. Every issue is subject to debate before the Rules Committee and the full Senate in the months ahead.

There are a number of issues that we must address in this debate. We must examine closely the role of political action committees. We need to examine the problems of bundling, soft money, and independent expenditures. In addition, there are a number of other issues to examine, including legislative recommendations that the Federal Election Commission recently issued. And above all, we need to examine a real means of reducing or limiting spending.

Mr. President, in past debates, I have said that there can be no real reform without meaningful spending limits. I believe that the terms of these spending limits remain negotiable. But the issue of whether to establish spending limits is not.

In postelection disclosure reports filed with the Federal Election Commission, general election candidates raised $498 million and spent $504 million. This represents an increase of $113 million during the same period in the 1990 election cycle.

In the Senate, general election candidates spent $190 million. Political action committees contributed $44 million to Senate candidates.

Mr. President, winning Senate campaigns now cost an average of $4 million. How many consecutive increases in the cost of running our Senate campaigns will it take before we are willing to impose meaningful spending limits?

Mr. President, if there was one clear message from the American people during the 1992 election, it was that they are demanding change in the way our system of elections works. They are cynical about how Members of Congress are elected. They are concerned how we work to stay here, and how we spend our time once we are here. And the American people have grown tired of the perception that the general interest is being held hostage to the special interest.

As a Member who has been here for 18 years, I feel very deeply that something must be done to improve the public attitude toward this institution.

President Clinton shares that concern as well. In his inaugural address, our new President said that we must renew America by reforming our politics. Campaign finance reform must end the perception that the general interest is held hostage to the special interest. Real reform must put an end to the money chase so that we, as representatives of the people, can do the people's business.

True and meaningful campaign finance reform must not only curb the excessive influence of special interests and control the money chase. It must also create a system that is fair to all—incumbents and challengers, Democrats and Republicans.

President Clinton has made it clear that campaign finance reform is an important element of his legislative program. There is no question that if the Congress is able to enact campaign finance reform, it will become law.

Mr. President, it is my hope that we can move this legislation as quickly as possible. As chairman of the Committee on Rules and Administration, I plan to schedule hearings on the campaign finance legislation in March and to proceed to mark up of this bill promptly upon conclusion of the hearings.

This is an issue where every Member of the Senate is an expert, and I urge my colleagues to join with me and others in drafting a fair solution in the months ahead.

• Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I introduce a bill to provide free broadcast time for the use of candidates for the U.S. Senate.

As a cosponsor of S.3, the Senate Election Ethics Act, I am deeply committed to continuing modification and reform of our election campaign process. The bill which I am introducing today has some special features which I believe recommend it for consideration in the context of comprehensive campaign reform: It does not involve public financing; it can help reduce the costs of campaigning; and it directly deals with the problem of negative advertising.

The purpose of this legislation is simple and straightforward. It attacks one of the principal sources of the spiraling costs of Federal political campaigns. It would make available at no cost a major element in the cost spiral, and that is media broadcast time.

I should note at the outset that my bill provides an alternative to the provision of S. 3 which would give eligible candidates vouchers for broadcast time which would be redeemed by the Federal treasury. My approach differs in that broadcasters would be required to provide limited time for political campaigns as a public service, without reimbursement from public funds.

My bill requires TV stations—as a condition of their license to use public air waves—to provide time for campaign use to the national committees of the political parties, which would in turn allocate the time to eligible candidates for the Senate. Minor parties showing support of at least 5% of the electorate would also be eligible to participate.

Committees receiving free broadcast time may use up to 15 minutes per day up to a limit of three hours on any one station during the 60 day period immediately preceding a general or special election. The bill does not apply to primaries.

All time is to be provided during the so-called prime time access period, from 7:30 to 8 p.m. local time, each weekday evening. This is a time period which local stations are supposed to use for community-oriented programming, but which in practice is not always well used.

The free time must be used in a manner which promotes a rational discussion and debate of issues pertinent to the election involved. At least 75 percent of the time must be taken up by a candidate's own remarks. In this way, I believe the bill provides a positive alternative to negative campaign ads without in any way imposing limits on present practices.

While my bill would place an administrative burden on the parties, I suggest that it is a burden they should be glad to accept. The plan of the bill permits the party organizations to decide which of their candidates—particularly in metropolitan areas where Senate candidates from more than one state may be competing for time—can best benefit from the media exposure offered by the bill.

This bill is no way restrictive of present campaign practices. Any candidate, whether or not a recipient of free time under this bill, is still at liberty to go out and purchase as much additional media time as he or she can afford and needs. Hopefully, however, the substantial infusion of free time provided by the bill will reduce substantially campaign expenditures for media purchases.

I would emphasize that this is a no-cost bill in terms of the value of the media time that would be given to the political process. The basic commodity of the bill is an existing public resource—namely, the airwaves—which the Congress can properly require to be used for political debate.

The idea is by no means a new one. I introduced it in the 99th Congress as S. 2837, in the 100th Congress as S. 593, in the 101st Congress as S. 751 and in the 102d Congress as S. 2076. And the idea has been espoused, quite independent of my own efforts, by scholars and commentators as diverse as Charles Krauthammer, Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr. and Larry J. Sabato. So there has been ample opportunity for the concept to be absorbed into the fabric of campaign reform.

I am especially pleased to note that the basic concept of this bill was included among the recommendations of a recent bipartisan campaign finance reform panel appointed by the Senate Majority and Minority Leaders. In its report of March 6, 1990, the panel specifically recommended that broadcasters be required, as a condition of license renewal, to make free time available to political parties for campaign use. There are some differences in the distribution formula, but essentially my bill matches the panel's recommendation.

Finally, I would note that this concept has particular relevance at this time when Congress as an institution is under attack, and when so much uncritical attention is being given to panaceas such as mandatory limitations on the number of terms a member can serve.

The best alternative to mandatory term limitations, in my view, is to assure that the existing system of term limitation—namely the right of the electorate to throw out an incumbent every time he runs for reelection—is as competitive as it can be. This bill would help assure that objective.

So the time seems ripe to translate this idea into action.

Mr. President, studies of recent elections have shown that as much as 40% of all political campaign expenditures—and up to 75% in some media markets—are spent on media advertising. If we are truly concerned about curbing the cost of campaigning, it makes sense to use an available public resource to substitute for this major category of expenditure.

I share the optimism of the distinguished senator from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN], that this year will be a watershed time of accomplishment in the area of campaign reform. With the commitment of the new administration, we should be able to enact many of the progressive concepts which have been held captive to the ideological differences of the past decade. I hope that the solid core of reform in S. 3 can be a vehicle for other worthy concepts for making political campaigns less susceptible to financial abuse. I offer this bill at this time for consideration in that context. •

By Mr. HOLLINGS (for himself, Mr. MITCHELL, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. RIEGLE, Mr. ROBB, Mr. WOFFORD, Mr. KERRY, Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN, and Mr. LEAHY):

S. 4. A bill to promote the industrial competitiveness and economic growth of the United States by strengthening and expanding the civilian technology programs of the Department of Commerce, amending the Stevenson-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1980 to enhance the development and nationwide deployment of manufacturing technologies, and authorizing appropriations for the Technology Administration of the Department of Commerce, including the National Institute of Standards and Technology, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

NATIONAL COMPETITIVENESS ACT

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, on behalf of myself, the distinguished majority leader, Mr. MITCHELL, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. RIEGLE, Mr. ROBB, Mr. WOFFORD, Mr. KERRY, Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN, Mr. LEAHY, and others, I send to the desk the National Competitiveness Act of 1993. I ask that it be appropriately referred.

Seeing others on the floor now waiting to be recognized, let me just say that in addition to the particular provisions that we have in the Competitiveness Act reauthorizing our Advanced Technology Program, our National Institute of Standards and Technology, the manufacturing centers, and a new outreach program, we have also included in the bill the 1992 computer legislation provided by then-Senator GORE, now Vice President GORE, for that "information highways" and communications, legislation which I had the opportunity of cosponsoring as chairman of the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. President, I am very pleased today to join the distinguished Majority Leader and a number of our colleagues in introducing S. 4, the National Competitiveness Act of 1993. This landmark bill will expand significantly Federal support for industry's efforts to restore U.S. leadership in technology and manufacturing. More to the point, it will help to create and preserve good jobs for our citizens.

For years, several of us in Congress have watched other governments actively support their companies, their workers, and their national prosperity while our Government has stood on the sidelines, blinded by a simplistic, indifferent economic ideology that ignored the global economic challenge facing us. The results have been clear and often devastating. Entire United States industries have been lost, and now the Department of Commerce [DOC] estimates that the United States is losing, or losing badly, to Japan and Europe in many of the key emerging technologies of the future. Overall, we have seen a steady, debilitating decline in real wages and our Nation's living standards.

It is time to return to the true American fundamentals. The budget deficit is a cancer on our economy and Government's ability to meet the Nation's needs. Unfair trade practices, particularly dumping and closed markets, are used by our competitors as a strategic weapon to weaken our industries and take our jobs. Education and training levels in America still lag other countries, and our children and workers suffer as a result. Companies and countries which lead in technology and manufacturing will lead in the quest for markets, jobs, and wealth. In all of these areas, Government has a responsibility to work with business and labor to build prosperity.

These are not great secrets. Anyone who has served as a governor, as I have, knows that real prosperity cannot be won without Government leadership and investment to support private initiative. Industry-government-labor partnerships work at the State level; it is time to bring them onto the national stage.

My colleagues have heard me speak often regarding budgets, trade, and education. I will continue to speak out on these issues. Today, however, my focus is on technology and manufacturing.

When this country chose to promote agriculture, it created a Department of Agriculture with strong research and extension arms. When we decided to lead the world in aviation, the old National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics, later part of NASA, was created. When war forced us to create nuclear weapons, we created the Manhattan Project. Later, to beat the Soviets in advanced technology we created the Advanced Research Projects Agency.

Today, when our greatest challenge is economic, the United States must maintain a true civilian technology agency, one dedicated to supporting industry's efforts to lead the world in key technologies of the 21st century. We need to fund that agency adequately, making it viable and effective.

In my view, we do not need to waste time and effort creating some new organization. We already have a civilian technology agency, and in fact we have had it since 1901. It is the Commerce Department's National Institute of Standards and Technology [NIST], formerly the old National Bureau of Standards. For decades, it has labored quietly, effectively, and with little fanfare and little money to help industry improve manufacturing, reduce costs, and improve quality.

In 1988, I authored legislation to expand this agency's services to industry. We expanded its laboratory work in support of new basic technologies, particularly in manufacturing. We created the advanced technology program, to support industry-led projects to overcome the technical problems that slow business' efforts to commercialize important new inventions. Following the example of agriculture, we created Manufacturing Technology Centers to help small and medium-sized manufacturers across the Nation to modernize their equipment and business practices so that they could boost profits and save jobs.

These programs are working, and they are helping real companies solve real problems and save real jobs. Now we are in a position to expand these proven programs and invest enough money to make them effective on the national level.

S. 4, the National Competitiveness Act, would strengthen and expand NIST's technology and manufacturing programs, and is based on legislation from last year introduced by myself, Congressman GEORGE BROWN, and others. We were not successful in enacting the legislation last year, but this year we are back and, I am pleased to say, with more support than ever.

Mr. President, the bill we are introducing today has four main provisions. First, it authorizes expanded support for that most critical and, unfortunately, often most neglected part of our economy—manufacturing. The bill would expand NIST support for both industry-led manufacturing technology projects and for State-led efforts to help small manufacturers. It would do so at a time when the Japanese are pursuing a $1 billion project to create a new generation of manufacturing technology—what they call intelligent manufacturing systems—and when the Japanese have some 170 centers to help Japan's small and medium-sized manufacturers. Specifically, the bill creates a new 21st-century manufacturing infrastructure program at NIST, with two parts: First, an industry-led advanced manufacturing technology development program, managed through NIST's existing advanced technology program; and second, a national manufacturing outreach program combining NIST support of State-run manufacturing outreach centers, an increase in the number of NIST manufacturing technology centers, and an enhanced State technology extension program that will ensure that all interested States can develop manufacturing extension services. The bill also contains an industry-led Manufacturing Advisory Committee, a work force quality initiative authored by Congressman TIM VALENTINE, and several new National Science Foundation [NSF] manufacturing activities. If the new administration decides to proceed for a full inter-agency advanced manufacturing initiative, as I hope they will, this legislation will ensure that DOC and NSF can play strong and effective roles in that effort.

Second, the bill authorizes a significant expansion in both the overall advanced technology program and NIST's important in-house laboratory services to American industry. It also proposes three pilot programs to stimulate additional private investment in cutting-edge technology companies. If there is one lesson that we must learn in this new world economy, it is that victory goes not to those who invent first but to those who commercialize first and produce with the highest level of quality and the lowest possible cost. Speed, quality, and cost are everything. NIST specializes in working with industry in these critical areas. Providing the agency's technology programs with adequate funding will help give the United States a fighting chance to succeed in fast-paced world markets.

Third, the legislation creates a new Office of Technology Monitoring and Competitive Assessment within DOC's Technology Administration. U.S. Government and industry alike must better understand the technological capabilities of our major trading partners.

Fourth, S. 4 contains the provisions of last year's S. 2937, a bill to encourage industry-government cooperation in developing a new information and computer infrastructure for the Nation and to ensure that American companies, not others, lead the world in developing lucrative and useful computer applications in such areas as education and health. S. 2937 was written by our former colleague, Vice President GORE.

Mr. President, this is a good bill—a set of concrete steps based on proven programs. I hope that it will lead to a broad discussion, and I welcome suggestions from industry, State officials, the new administration, and our colleagues. Some of the issues, such as stimulating additional private investment in technology firms, need more debate than we have been able to give them so far, and I look forward to hearing people's views.

Mr. President, I cannot conclude this statement without expressing my application for the support of colleagues and groups which have worked with me long and hard on these issues. I have enjoyed working with my Commerce Committee colleagues on these issues. More recently, I worked with Senator LIEBERMAN, Senator BINGAMAN, and other members of the Economic Leadership Strategy Group. That group has helped to put together a broad plan which includes important complementary initiatives from the Armed Services, Banking, and Labor Committees, and I will continue to work with these colleagues. I also look forward to continuing to work with Chairman BROWN and the members of the House Science Committee.

Several groups have provided us with invaluable advice and suggestions. I particularly thank the National Coalition for Advanced Manufacturing, the National Association of Manufacturers, the American Electronics Association, the Industrial Union Department [AFL-CIO], the National Center for Manufacturing Sciences, and the Modernization Forum and its friends. I look forward to continuing to work with these groups and others to shape the final bill.

Mr. President, just as the best welfare program is a job, so the best Government investments are those that boost employment and increase national wealth. In an age of high technology and tough global competition, supporting industry's efforts in technology and manufacturing is one of the smartest investments we can make.

I thank the majority leader and our colleagues for joining me today in introducing the National Competitiveness Act, and I look forward to working with the new administration to refine the bill and ensure its speedy enactment.

I ask unanimous consent that a fact sheet on the bill and the text of the bill itself be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 4

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SEC. 102. FINDINGS.

Congress finds and declares the following:

(1) In an increasingly competitive world economy, the companies and nations which lead in the rapid development, commercialization, and application of new technologies, and in the low-priced, high-quality manufacture of products based on those technologies, will lead in economic growth, employment, and high living standards.

(2) While the United States remains the world leader in science and invention, it has not done as well as it should in commercializing and manufacturing new inventions. This lag and the unprecedented competitive challenge that the Nation has faced from abroad have contributed to a drop in real wages and living standards.

(3) While the private sector must take the lead in the development, application, and manufacture of new technologies, the Federal Government should—

(A) assist industry in the development of high-risk, long-term precommercial technologies which promise large economic benefits for the Nation;

(B) support industry-led efforts to develop and refine advanced manufacturing technologies;

(C) work with States, the private sector, and worker organizations to help small and medium-sized manufacturers throughout the Nation to adopt best current manufacturing technologies and practices, to improve worker skills, and prepare, as appropriate, to adopt the advanced computer-controlled manufacturing technologies of the 21st century; and

(D) cooperate with industry and academia to help create an advanced information infrastructure for the United States.

(4) In working with industry to promote the technological leadership and economic growth of the United States, the Federal Government also has a responsibility to consult with business leaders on industry's long-term technological needs, to monitor technological trends and technology targeting efforts in other nations, and generally to ensure that Federal technology programs help United States to remain competitive and create good domestic jobs.

(5) The Department of Commerce, and particularly its Technology Administration and National Institute of Standards and Technology, is and should remain the civilian government agency which helps commercial industry to speed the development and commercialization of new technologies, improve manufacturing, and ensure a growing and healthy national industrial base and good manufacturing jobs. To promote the long-term economic growth of the Nation, these Department of Commerce programs should be strengthened and expanded.

SEC. 103. PURPOSES.

The purposes of this Act are to—

(1) strengthen and expand the ability of Federal technology programs, particularly those of the Department of Commerce, to support industry-led efforts to improve the technological capabilities, manufacturing performance, information infrastructure, and employment opportunities of the United States;

(2) promote and facilitate, particularly through the Advanced Technology Program of the Department of Commerce the creation, development, and adoption of technologies that will contribute significantly to United States economic competitiveness, employment, and prosperity;

(3) develop a nationwide network of sources of technological advice for manufacturers, particularly small and medium-sized firms, and to provide high quality, current information to that network;

(4) encourage the development and rapid application of advanced manufacturing technologies and processes;

(5) create pilot programs to stimulate and supplement the flow of capital to business concerns engaged principally in development or utilization of critical civilian and other advanced technologies;

(6) ensure the widest possible application of high-performance computing and high-speed networking and to aid United States industry to develop an advanced national information infrastructure; and

(7) enhance and expand the core programs of the National Institute of Standards and Technology.

SEC. 104. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this Act—

(1) the term "advanced manufacturing technology" includes—

(A) numerically controlled machine tools, robots, automated process control equipment, computerized flexible manufacturing systems, associated computer software, and other technology for improving manufacturing and industrial production which advance the state-of-the-art; and

(B) novel techniques and processes designed to improve manufacturing quality, productivity, and practice, and to promote sustainable development, including engineering design, quality assurance, concurrent engineering, continuous process production technology, energy efficiency, waste minimization, design for recyclability or parts reuse, inventory management, upgraded worker skills, and communications with customers and suppliers;

(2) the term "Director" means the Director of the Institute;

(3) the term "Institute" means the National Institute of Standards and Technology;

(4) the term "modern technology" means the best available proven technology, techniques, and processes appropriate to enhancing the productivity of manufacturers;

(5) the term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Commerce; and

(6) the term "Under Secretary" means the Under Secretary of Commerce for Technology.

TITLE II—MANUFACTURING

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Manufacturing Technology and Extension Act of 1993".

SUBTITLE A—MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY AND EXTENSION

SEC. 211. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds and declares the following:

(1) United States manufacturers, especially small businesses, require the adoption and implementation of both modern (that, appropriate and currently available) technologies and advanced manufacturing and process technologies to meet the challenge of foreign competition.

(2) The development and deployment of modern and advanced manufacturing technologies are vital to the economic growth, environmental sustainability, standard of living, competitiveness in world markets, and national security of the United States.

(3) New developments in flexible, computer-integrated manufacturing, electronic manufacturing communications networks, and other new technologies make possible dramatic improvements across all industrial sectors in productivity, quality, and the speed with which manufacturers can respond to changing market opportunities.

(4) The Department of Commerce's Technology Administration can continue to play an important role in assisting United States industry to develop, test, and deploy modern and advanced manufacturing technologies.

(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this subtitle to help ensure the continued leadership of the United States in manufacturing by enhancing the Department of Commerce's technology programs to—

(1) provide domestic manufacturers, especially small and medium-sized companies, with ready access to high quality Federal advice and assistance in the development, deployment, and improvement of modern manufacturing technology, and in solving their specific technology-based problems; and

(2) encourage, facilitate, and promote the development and adoption of advanced manufacturing technologies by the private sector.

SEC. 212. MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY AND EXTENSION AMENDMENTS TO THE STEVENSON-WYDLER ACT.

The Stevenson-Wylder Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3701 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new title:

"TITLE III—MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY

"SEC. 301. STATEMENT OF POLICY.

"Congress declares that it is the policy of the United States that—

"(1) Federal agencies, particularly the Department of Commerce, shall work with industry and labor to ensure that within 10 years of the date of enactment of this Act the United States is second to no other nation in the development, deployment, and use of advanced manufacturing technology;

"(2) all the major Federal research and development agencies shall place a high priority on the development and deployment of advanced manufacturing technologies, and shall work closely with United States industry and with the Nation's universities to develop and test those technologies; and

"(3) other Federal departments and agencies which work with civilian industry and labor shall be encouraged, as appropriate and consistent with applicable statutes and duties, to work with and through the programs of the Department of Commerce.

"SEC. 302. ROLE OF THE DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE.

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Department of Commerce shall, consistent with the policies and purposes of section 301, work with United States commercial industry and labor to—

"(1) help develop new generic advanced manufacturing technologies, including advanced flexible computer-integrated manufacturing systems and electronic communications networks; and

"(2) assist the States and the private sector to help United States manufacturers, especially small and medium-sized manufacturing enterprises, to adopt best current manufacturing technologies and practices and, as appropriate, new advanced manufacturing equipment and techniques.

"(b) TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY MANUFACTURING INFRASTRUCTURE PROGRAM.—(1) As one important step to carry out the responsibilities of the Department of Commerce under subsection (a) of this section, there is established within the Institute a Twenty-First Century Manufacturing Infrastructure Program, which shall include—

“(A) the Advanced Manufacturing Technology Development Program established under section 303 of this title; and

“(B) the National Manufacturing Outreach Program established under section 304 of this title and the associated programs established under sections 25 and 26 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C. 278k-1).

“(2) The Secretary, through the Under Secretary and the Director, may accept the transfer of funds from any other Federal agency and may use those funds to implement the Twenty-First Century Manufacturing Infrastructure Program and support its activities.

“SEC. 303. ADVANCED MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.

“(a) PROGRAM DIRECTION.—The Secretary, through the Under Secretary and the Director, shall establish an Advanced Manufacturing Technology Development Program which shall include advanced manufacturing systems and networking projects.

“(b) PROGRAM GOAL.—The goal of the Advanced Manufacturing Technology Development Program is to create collaborative multiyear technology development programs involving United States industry and, as appropriate, other Federal agencies, the States, worker organizations, universities, and other interested persons, in order to develop, refine, test, and transfer design and manufacturing technologies and associated applications, including advanced computer integration and electronic networks.

“(c) PROGRAM COMPONENTS.—The Advanced Manufacturing Technology Development Program shall include—

“(1) the advanced manufacturing research and development activities at the Institute; and

“(2) one or more technology development testbeds within the United States, selected in accordance with procedures, including cost sharing, established for the Advanced Technology Program under section 28 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C. 278n), whose purpose shall be to develop, refine, test, and transfer advanced manufacturing and networking technologies and associated applications through a direct manufacturing process.

“(d) ACTIVITIES.—The Advanced Manufacturing Technology Development Program, under the coordination of the Secretary, through the Director, shall—

“(1) test and, as appropriate, develop the equipment, computer software, and systems integration necessary for the successful operation within the United States of advanced design and manufacturing systems and associated electronic networks;

“(2) establish at the Institute and the technology development testbed or testbeds—

“(A) prototype advanced computer-integrated manufacturing systems; and “(B) prototype electronic networks linking manufacturing systems;

“(3) assist industry to develop, and implement voluntary consensus standards relevant to advanced computer-integrated manufacturing operations, including standards for networks, electronic data interchange, and digital product data specifications;

“(4) help to make high-performance computing and networking technologies an integral part of design and production processes where appropriate;

“(5) conduct research to identify and overcome technical barriers to the successful and cost-effective operation of advanced manufacturing systems and networks;

“(6) facilitate industry efforts to develop and test new applications for manufacturing systems and networks;

“(7) involve in the Advanced Manufacturing Technology Development Program, to the maximum extent practicable, both those United States companies which make manufacturing and computer equipment and a broad range of company personnel from those companies which buy the equipment;

“(8) identify training needs, as appropriate, for company managers, engineers, and employees in the operation and applications of advanced manufacturing technologies and networks, with a particular emphasis on training for production workers in the effective use of new technologies;

“(9) work with private industry, universities, and other interested parties to develop standards for the use of advanced computer-based training systems, including multi-media and interactive learning technologies;

“(10) involve small- and medium-sized manufacturers in its activities; and “(11) exchange information and personnel, as appropriate, between the technology development testbeds and the electronic network created under section 303.

“(e) TESTBED AWARDS.—(1) In selecting applicants to receive awards under subsection (c)(2) of this section, the Secretary shall give particular consideration to applicants that have existing computer expertise in the management of business, product, and process information such as digital data product and process technologies and customer-supplier information systems, and the ability to diffuse such expertise into industry, and that, in the case of joint research and development ventures, include both suppliers and users of advanced manufacturing equipment.

“(2) An industry-led joint research and development venture applying for an award under subsection (c)(2) of this section may include one or more State research organizations, universities, independent research organizations, or Regional Centers for the Transfer of Manufacturing Technology (as created under section 25 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act) and other organizations as the Secretary considers appropriate.

“(f) ADVICE AND ASSISTANCE.—(1) Within 6 months after the date of enactment of this title, and before any request for proposals is issued, the Secretary shall hold one or more workshops to solicit advice from United States industry and from other Federal agencies, particularly the Department of Defense, regarding the specific missions and activities of the testbeds.

“(2) The Secretary shall, to the greatest extent possible, coordinate activities under this section with activities of other Federal agencies and initiatives relating to Computer-Aided Acquisition and Logistics Support, electronic data interchange, flexible computer-integrated manufacturing, and enterprise integration.

“(3) The Secretary may request and accept funds, facilities, equipment, or personnel from other Federal agencies in order to carry out responsibilities under this section.

“(g) APPLICATION OF ANTITRUST LAWS.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to create any immunity to any civil or criminal action under any Federal or State antitrust law, or to alter or restrict in any manner the applicability of any Federal or State antitrust law.

“SEC. 304. NATIONAL MANUFACTURING OUTREACH PROGRAM.

“(a) ESTABLISHMENT AND PURPOSE.—There is hereby established a National Manufacturing Outreach Program (hereafter in this section referred to as the ‘Outreach Program’). The Secretary, acting through the Under Secretary and the Director, shall implement and coordinate the Outreach Program in accordance with an initial plan to be prepared and submitted to Congress within 6 months after the date of enactment of this title and a 5-year plan for the Outreach Program to be submitted to the Congress within a year after the date of enactment of this title and to be updated annually. The purpose of the Outreach Program is to link and strengthen the Nation’s manufacturing extension centers and activities in order to assist United States manufacturers, especially small- and medium-sized firms, to expand and accelerate the use of modern manufacturing practices, and to accelerate the development and use of advanced manufacturing technology.

“(b) COMPONENTS.—The Outreach Program shall be a partnership of the Department of Commerce, the States, the private sector, and, as appropriate, other Federal agencies to provide a national system of manufacturing extension centers and technical services to United States companies, particularly small and medium-sized manufacturers. The Outreach Program shall include the following components—

“(1) Manufacturing Outreach Centers, as provided for under subsection (c) of this section;

“(2) Regional Centers for the Transfer of Manufacturing Technology, as established under section 25 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act, and the State Technology Extension Program, as established under section 26 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act;

“(3) an organization, coordinated and funded by the Institute, which links and supports Manufacturing Outreach Centers and Regional Centers for the Transfer of Manufacturing Technology, and which operates the Technology Extension Network and Clearinghouse established under subsection (d) of this section; and “(4) such technology and manufacturing extension centers supported by other Federal departments and agencies as the Secretary may deem appropriate for inclusion in the Outreach Network.

“(c) MANUFACTURING OUTREACH CENTERS.—

(1) Government and private sector organizations, actively engaged in technology or manufacturing extension activities, may apply to the Secretary to be designated as Manufacturing Outreach Centers. Eligible organizations may include State and local government agencies, their extension programs, and their laboratories; small business development centers; and appropriate programs run by professional societies, worker organizations, industrial organizations, for-profit or nonprofit organizations, universities, community colleges, and technical schools and colleges, including, where appropriate, vendor-supported demonstrations of production applications.

(2) The Secretary shall establish terms and conditions of participation and may provide financial assistance, on a cost-shared basis and through competitive, merit-based review processes to nonprofit or government participants throughout the United States to enable them to—

“(A) join the Outreach Program and disseminate its technical and information services to United States manufacturing firms, particularly small and medium-sized firms; and

turers to expand and accelerate the use of modern and advanced manufacturing practices.

"(3) Each Manufacturing Outreach Center shall have the option of affiliating or not affiliating with one or more Regional Centers for the Transfer of Manufacturing Technology. If such a Manufacturing Outreach Center chooses to make such an affiliation, the Secretary, through the Director, shall take such steps as appropriate to ensure a productive working partnership between such center and the Regional Center or Centers with which it affiliates.

"(d) TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION COMMUNICATIONS NETWORK.—The Department of Commerce shall provide for an instantaneous, interactive communications network to serve the Outreach Program to facilitate interaction among Manufacturing Outreach Centers, Regional Centers for the Transfer of Manufacturing Technology and Federal agencies and to permit the collection and dissemination in electronic form, in a timely and accurate manner, of information described in subsection (e). Such communications infrastructure shall, wherever practicable, make use of existing computer networks, data bases, and electronic bulletin boards. Communications infrastructure arrangements, including user fees and appropriate electronic access for public and private information suppliers and users shall be addressed in the 5-year plan prepared under subsection (a) of this section.

"(e) CLEARINGHOUSE.—(1) The Secretary shall develop a clearinghouse system, using the National Institute of Standards and Technology, the National Technical Information Service, and private sector information providers and carriers where appropriate, to—

"(A) identify expertise and acquire information, appropriate to the purpose of the Outreach Program stated in subsection (a), from all available Federal sources, and where appropriate from other sources, providing assistance where necessary in making such information electronically available and compatible with the electronic network;

"(B) ensure ready access by United States manufacturers and other interested private sector parties to the most recent relevant available such information and expertise; and

"(C) to the extent practicable, inform such manufacturers of the availability of such information.

"(2) The clearinghouse shall include information available electronically on—

"(A) activities of Manufacturing Outreach Centers, Regional Centers for the Transfer of Manufacturing Technology, the State Technology Extension Program, and the users of the electronic network;

"(B) domestic and international standards from the Institute and private sector organizations and other export promotion information, including conformity assessment requirements and procedures;

"(C) the Malcolm Baldrige Quality program, and quality principles and standards;

"(D) manufacturing processes minimizing waste and negative environmental impact;

"(E) federally-funded technology development and transfer programs;

"(F) responsibilities assigned to the Clearinghouse for State and Local Initiatives on Productivity, Technology, and Innovation under section 102 of this Act;

"(G) how to access data bases and services; and

"(H) other subjects relevant to the ability of companies to manufacture and sell competitive products throughout the world.

"(e) PRINCIPLES.—In carrying out this section, the Department of Commerce shall take into consideration the following principles:

"(1) The Outreach Program and the electronic network shall be established and operated through cooperation and co-funding among Federal, State, and local governments, other public and private contributors and end users.

"(2) The Outreach Program and the electronic network shall utilize and leverage, to the extent practicable, existing organizations, data bases, electronic networks, facilities, and capabilities, and shall be designed to complement rather than supplant State and local programs.

"(3) The Outreach Program should, to the extent practicable, involve key stakeholders at all levels in the planning and governance of modernization strategies; concentrate on assisting local clusters of firms; promote collaborative learning and cooperative action among small and large manufacturers; link industrial modernization programs tightly to existing and future Federal training initiatives, including those for youth apprenticeship programs; encourage small firms to seek modernization services by working with major manufacturers to strengthen and coordinate their supplier assessment, certification, and development programs; identify and honor best practices by firms and the programs that support them; provide funding based on performance and ensure rigorous evaluation of extension services; as appropriate, coordinate Federal programs that support manufacturing modernization; and work with Federal, State, and private organizations so that Outreach Centers and Regional Centers for the Transfer of Manufacturing Technology can provide referrals to other important business services, such as assistance with financing, training, and exporting.

"(4) The Outreach Program and the electronic network and communications infrastructure provided for under subsection (d), shall be subject to all applicable provisions of law for the protection of trade secrets and business confidential information.

"(5) Local or regional needs should determine the management structure and staffing of the Manufacturing Outreach Centers. The Outreach Program shall strive for geographical balance with the ultimate goal of access for all United States manufacturers.

"(6) Manufacturing Outreach Centers should have the capability to deliver outreach services directly to manufacturers; actively work with, rather than supplant, the private sector; and to the extent practicable, maximize the exposure of manufacturers to demonstrations of modern technologies in use.

"(7) Manufacturing Outreach Centers shall focus, where possible, on the development and deployment of flexible manufacturing practices applicable to both defense and commercial applications.

"(8) The Department of Commerce shall develop mechanisms for—

(A) soliciting the perspectives of manufacturers using the services of the Manufacturing Outreach Centers and Regional Centers for the Transfer of Manufacturing Technology; and

(B) evaluating the effectiveness of the Manufacturing Outreach Centers.

"SEC. 305. INDUSTRY-LED MANUFACTURING ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy, after consultation with the Secretary of Commerce and other appropriate Federal officials, shall establish within that office a Manufacturing Advisory Committee (hereafter in this section referred to as the 'Committee'), led by industry officials, to provide advice and, as appropriate, guidance to Federal manufacturing programs.

"(b) FUNCTIONS.—The Committee shall—

"(1) collect and analyze information on the range of factors which determine the success of United States-based manufacturing industries, and particularly factors regarding the development and deployment of advanced manufacturing technologies and the application of best manufacturing practices;

"(2) identify areas where appropriate cooperation between the Federal Government and the private sector, including Government support for industry-led joint research and development ventures and for manufacturing extension activities, would enhance United States industrial competitiveness, and provide advice and guidance for such cooperative efforts;

"(3) provide guidance on what Federal policies and practices are necessary to strengthen United States-based manufacturing, particularly Federal policies and practices regarding research budgets, interagency coordination and initiatives, technology transfer, regulation, and procurement; and

"(4) generally develop recommendations for guiding Federal agency and interagency activities related to United States-based manufacturing.

"(c) MEMBERSHIP AND PROCEDURES.—(1)(A) The Committee shall be composed of 13 members, 7 of whom shall constitute a quorum.

"(B) The director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy, the Secretary, the Secretary of Defense, and the Director of the National Science Foundation, or their designees, shall serve as members of the Committee.

"(C) The President, acting through the Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy, shall within 120 days of the date of enactment of this Act appoint 9 additional members from the private manufacturing industry, worker organizations, State technology agencies, and academia. At least 1 such member shall be from small business.

(2) The Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy or the Director's designee shall chair the Board.

(3) The chairman shall call the first meeting of the Board within 30 days after the appointment of members is completed.

(4) The Board may use such personnel detailed from Federal agencies as may be necessary to enable it to perform its functions.

(5) Members of the Board, other than full-time employees of the Federal Government, while attending meetings of the Board or otherwise performing duties of the Board while away from their homes or regular places of business, shall be allowed travel expenses in accordance with subchapter I of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code.

(6) The Board shall submit a report of its activities once every year after its establishment to the President, the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section such sums as may be necessary for the fiscal years 1994 and 1995."

SEC. 213. MISCELLANEOUS AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—Section 4 of the Stevenson-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3703) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(14) 'Director' means the Director of the National Institute of Standards and Technology.

"(15) 'Institute' means the National Institute of Standards and Technology.

"(16) 'Assistant Secretary' means the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Technology Policy.

"(17) 'Advanced manufacturing technology' includes—

"(A) numerically-controlled machine tools, robots, automated process control equipment, computerized flexible manufacturing systems, associated computer software, and other technology for improving manufacturing and industrial production which advance the state-of-the-art; and

"(B) novel techniques and processes designed to improve manufacturing quality, productivity, and practices, and to promote sustainable development, including engineering design, quality assurance, concurrent engineering, continuous process production technology, energy efficiency, waste minimization, design for recyclability or parts reuse, inventory management, upgraded worker skills, and communications with customers and suppliers.

"(18) 'Modern technology' means the best available proven technology, techniques, and processes appropriate to enhancing the productivity of manufacturers."

(b) REDESIGNATIONS.—The Stevenson-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3701 et seq.) is amended—

(1) by inserting immediately after section 4 the following new title heading:

"TITLE I—DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND RELATED PROGRAMS";

(2) by redesignating sections 5 through 10 as sections 101 through 106, respectively;

(3) by striking section 21;

(4) by redesignating sections 16 through 20, and 22, as sections 107 through 112, respectively;

(5) by inserting immediately after section 112 (as redesignated by paragraph (4) of this subsection) the following new title heading:

"TITLE II—FEDERAL TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER";

(6) by redesignating sections 11 through 15 as sections 201 through 205, respectively;

(7) by redesignating section 23 as section 206;

(8) in section 4—

(A) by striking "section 5" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "section 101";

(B) in paragraphs (4) and (6), by striking "section 6" and "section 8" each place they appear and inserting in lieu thereof "section 102" and "section 104", respectively; and

(C) in paragraph (13), by striking "section 6" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 102";

(9) in section 105 (as redesignated by paragraph (2) of this subsection) by striking "section 6" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "section 102";

(10) in section 106(d) (as redesignated by paragraph (2) of this subsection) by striking "7, 9, 11, 15, 17, or 20" and inserting in lieu thereof "103, 105, 108, 111, 201, or 205";

(11) in section 202(b) (as redesignated by paragraph (6) of this subsection) by striking "section 14" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 204";

(12) in section 204(a)(1) (as redesignated by paragraph (6) of this subsection) by striking "section 12" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 202";

(13) in section 112 (as redesignated by paragraph (4) of this subsection) by striking "sections 11, 12, and 13" and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 201, 202, and 203";

(14) in section 206 (as redesignated by paragraph (7) of this subsection)—

(A) by striking "section 11(b)" in subsection (a)(2) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 201(b)"; and

(B) by striking "section 6(d)" in subsection (b) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 102(d)"; and

(15) by adding at the end of section 201 (as redesignated by paragraph (6) of this subsection) the following new subsection:

"(j) ADDITIONAL TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER MECHANISMS.—In addition to the technology transfer mechanisms set forth in this section and section 202 of this Act, the heads of Federal departments and agencies also may transfer technologies through the technology transfer, extension, and deployment programs of the Department of Commerce and the Department of Defense."

SEC. 214. MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY CENTERS.

Section 25 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C. 278k) is amended—

(1) by amending the section heading to read as follows: "MANUFACTURING TECHNOLOGY CENTERS";

(2) in subsection (c)(5), by striking "which are designed" and all that follows through "operation of a Center" and inserting in lieu thereof "to a maximum of one-third Federal funding. Each Center which receives financial assistance under this section shall be evaluated during its sixth year of operation, and at such subsequent times as the Secretary considers appropriate, by an evaluation panel appointed by the Secretary in the same manner as was the evaluation panel previously appointed. The Secretary shall not provide funding for additional years of the Center's operation unless the evaluation is positive and the Secretary finds that continuation of funding furthers the goals of the Department. Such additional Federal funding shall not exceed one-third of the cost of the Center's operations";

(3) by striking subsection (d); and

(4) by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(d) If a Center receives a positive evaluation during its third year of operation, the Director may, any time after that evaluation, contract with the Center to provide additional technology extension or transfer services above and beyond the baseline activities of the Center. Such additional services may include, but are not necessarily limited to, the development and operation of the following:

"(1) Services focused on the testing, development, and application of manufacturing and process technologies within specific technical fields such as advanced materials or electronics fabrication for the purpose of assisting United States companies, both large and small and both within the Center's original service region and in other regions, to improve manufacturing, product design, workforce training, and production in those specific technical fields.

"(2) Industrial service facilities which provide tools to help companies with the low-cost, low-volume, rapid prototyping of a range of new products and the refinement of the manufacturing and process technologies necessary to make these products.

"(3) Programs to assist small- and medium-sized manufacturers and their employees in the Center's region to learn and apply the technologies, techniques, and processes associated with systems management technology, electric commerce, or improving manufacturing productivity.

"(4) Industry-led demonstration programs that explore the value of innovative non-profit manufacturing technology consortia to provide ongoing research, technology transfer, and worker training assistance for industrial members. An award under this paragraph shall be for no more than $500,000 per year, and shall be subject to renewal after a 1-year demonstration period."

SEC. 215. STATE TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION PROGRAM.

(a) Section 26(a) of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C. 278l(a)) is amended—

(A) by inserting immediately after "(a)" the following new sentence: "There is established within the Institute a State Technology Extension Program."; and

(B) by inserting "through that Program" immediately after "technical assistance".

(b) Section 26 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C. 278l) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c) In addition to the general authorities listed in subsection (b) of this section, the State Technology Extension Program also shall, through merit-based competitive review processes and as authorizations and appropriations permit—

"(1) make awards to States and conduct workshops, pursuant to section 5121(b) of the Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act of 1988, in order to help States improve their planning and coordination of technology activities;

"(2) assist States, particularly States which historically have had no manufacturing or technology extension programs or only small programs, to plan, develop, and coordinate such programs and to help bring those State programs to a level of performance where they can apply successfully for awards to establish Manufacturing Outreach Centers, Regional Centers for the Transfer of Manufacturing Technology, or both.

"(3) support industrial modernization demonstration projects to help States create networks among small manufacturers for the purpose of facilitating technical assistance, group services, and improve productivity and competitiveness;

"(4) support State efforts to develop and test innovative ways to help small and medium-sized manufacturers improve their technical capabilities;

"(5) support State efforts designed to help small manufacturers in rural as well as urban areas improve and modernize their technical capabilities, including, as appropriate, interstate efforts to achieve such end;

"(6) support State efforts to assist interested small defense manufacturing firms to convert their production to nondefense or dual-use purposes;

"(7) support worker technology education programs in the States at institutions such as research universities, community colleges, labor education centers, labor-management committees, and worker organizations in production technologies critical to the Nation's future, with an emphasis on high-performance work systems, the skills necessary to use advanced manufacturing systems well, and best production practice; and

"(8) help States develop programs to train personnel who in turn can provide technical skills to managers and workers of manufacturing firms."

SEC. 216. AMERICAN WORKFORCE QUALITY PARTNERSHIPS.

(a) PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.—(1) The Secretary, after consultation with the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of Education, may make awards to eligible applicants to establish and operate American workforce quality partnerships in accordance with the provisions of this section. The purpose of these partnerships is to provide training to industrial employees, particularly in order to enable them to utilize best current manufacturing technologies and practices, including total quality management techniques.

(2) An American workforce quality partnership shall be a collaboration between—

(A) one or more technology-based or manufacturing sector firms, in conjunction with a labor organization when appropriate or worker representatives or employee representatives; and

(B) a local community or technical college, other appropriate institution higher education, a vocational training institution, a Regional Center for the Transfer of Manufacturing Technology, a Manufacturing Outreach Center, or a consortium of such institutions, to train the employees of the participating industrial firms through both workplace-based and classroom-based training programs.

(b) AWARDS.—(1) Awards made under this section may be for a period of 5 years. The Federal share of the cost of an American workforce quality partnership may not exceed 50 percent of the total cost of the partnership. The non-Federal share of such costs may be provided in-cash or in-kind, fairly valued.

(2) The Secretary shall make awards under this section on a competitive basis.

(c) USE OF FUNDS.—(1) An American workplace quality partnership may use Federal funds for—

(A) the direct costs of workplace-based and classroom-based training in advanced technical, technological, and industrial management, skills, and training for the implementation of total quality management strategies, or other competitiveness strategies, contained in the plan;

(B) the purchase or lease of equipment or other materials for the purpose of instruction to aid in training;

(C) the development of in-house curricula or coursework or other training-related programs, including the training of teachers and other eligible participants to utilize such curricula or coursework; and

(D) reasonable administrative expenses and other indirect costs of operating the partnership which may not exceed 10 percent of the total cost of the program.

(2) Federal funds may not be used for non-training related costs of adopting new competitive strategies including the replacement of manufacturing equipment, product redesign and manufacturing facility construction costs, or salary compensation of the partners' employees. Grants shall not be made under this section for programs that will impair any existing program, contract, or agreement without the written concurrence of the parties to such program, contract, or agreement.

(d) ADVISORY BOARDS.—Each partnership receiving assistance under this section shall establish an advisory board, which shall—

(1) include representatives from participating firms, labor organizations or worker representatives, and the education partners; and

(2) advise the partnership on the direction, policies, and activities of the partnership, including training, instruction, and related issues.

SEC. 217. REPORT ON OPTIONS FOR ACCELERATING THE ADOPTION OF NEW MANUFACTURING EQUIPMENT.

Within one year of the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on—

(1) the degree to which both small and large manufacturing enterprises in the United States have difficulty obtaining financing for the purpose of purchasing new equipment and modernizing operations;

(2) the policies and practices followed in other industrialized countries to help manufacturing firms obtain financing for modernization;

(3) the advantages, disadvantages, and costs of major options by which the Federal Government might help stimulate the flow of capital to manufacturers and thus accelerate industrial modernization, including—

(A) creation of a Government-sponsored enterprise to stimulate the flow of capital to manufacturing;

(B) increasing technical advice to banks and other financial institutions, perhaps through the National Manufacturing Outreach Program, in order to increase their ability to judge whether or not individual manufacturers have sound modernization plans; and

(C) tax incentives.

SUBTITLE B—NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION MANUFACTURING PROGRAMS

SEC. 221. NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION MANUFACTURING ACTIVITIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the National Science Foundation, after, as appropriate, consultation with the Secretary, the Under Secretary, and the Director, shall—

(1) work with United States industry to identify areas of research in manufacturing technologies and practices that offer the potential to improve United States productivity, competitiveness, and employment;

(2) support research at United States universities to improve manufacturing technologies and practices; and

(3) work with the Technology Administration and the Institute and, as appropriate, other Federal agencies to accelerate the transfer to United States industry of manufacturing research and innovations developed at universities.

(b) ENGINEERING RESEARCH CENTERS AND INDUSTRY/UNIVERSITY COOPERATIVE RESEARCH CENTERS.—The Director of the National Science Foundation shall strengthen and expand the number of Engineering Research Centers and strengthen and expand the Industry/University Cooperative Research Centers Program with the goals of increasing the engineering talent base versed in technologies critical to the Nation's future, with emphasis on advanced manufacturing, and of advancing fundamental engineering knowledge in these technologies. At least one Engineering Research Center shall have a research and education focus on the concerns of traditional manufacturers, including small and medium-sized firms * * * on supporting individuals who not only have expertise and practicable experience in manufacturing but who also will work to foster cooperation between 2-year colleges and nearby manufacturing firms.

(c) PROGRAMS TO TEACH TOTAL QUALITY MANAGEMENT.—The Director of the National Science Foundation, in consultation with the Secretary, the Under Secretary, and the Director, may establish a program to develop innovative curricula, courses, and materials for use by institutions of higher education for instruction in total quality management and related management practices, in order to help improve the productivity of United States industry.

TITLE III—CRITICAL TECHNOLOGIES

SEC. 301. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) the rapid, effective use of advanced technologies in the design and production of products is a key determinant of economic competitiveness;

(2) investment in the development and adoption of advanced technology contributes significantly to long-term economic growth and employment;

(3) the governments of our most successful competitor nations in the global marketplace have created supportive structures and programs that have been effective in helping their domestic industries increase their global market shares;

(4) agriculture and aerospace are two examples of industries that have achieved commercial success with strong support from the United States Government; and

(5) the United States Government must promote and facilitate the creation, development, and adoption of advanced technologies to ensure long-term economic prosperity for the United States.

SUBTITLE ADVANCED TECHNOLOGY PROGRAM AND RELATED

SEC. 311. DEVELOPMENT OF PLAN FOR THE ADVANCED TECHNOLOGY PROGRAM.

The Secretary, acting through the Under Secretary and the Director, shall, within 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, submit to the Congress a plan for the expansion of the Advanced Technology Program established under section 28 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C. 278n), with specific consideration given to

(1) closer coordination and cooperation with the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency and other Federal research and development agencies as appropriate;

(2) establishment of staff positions that can be filled by industrial or technical experts for a period of one to two years;

(3) broadening of the scope of the program to include as many critical technologies as is appropriate;

(4) changes that may be needed when annual funds available for grants under the Program reach levels of $200,000,000 and $500,000,000; and

(5) administrative steps necessary for Program support of large-scale industry-led consortia similar to, or possibly eventually including, the Semi-conductor Manufacturing Technology Institute.

SEC. 312. ADVANCED TECHNOLOGY PROGRAM SUPPORT OF LARGE-SCALE JOINT VENTURES.

Section 28 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C. 278n) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(k) In addition to the general authority under this section to provide financial assistance to joint ventures, the Secretary, through the Director, also may, as permitted by levels of authorizations and appropriations, provide financial support to large-scale joint ventures requesting $20 million or more a year in Department funds. Any such support shall be subject to the matching funds requirements of in subsection (b)(1)(B)(ii) of this section, except that the Secretary may provide assistance to such large-scale joint ventures for up to 7 years. The Secretary may work with industrial groups to develop such proposed large-scale joint ventures and shall give preference to proposals which represent a broad spectrum of companies for a given industry and which focus on either speeding the commercialization of important new technologies or in accelerating the development, testing, and deployment of valuable new process technologies. The Secretary and Director, as appropriate, shall obtain independent technical reviews of industry proposals submitted under this subsection."

SEC. 313. TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.

Section 28 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C. 278n) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)(1)(B)(ii), by striking "provision of a minority, share of the cost of such joint ventures for up to 5 years" and inserting in lieu thereof "the option of provision of either—

"(I) a minority share of the cost of such joint ventures for up to 5 years; or

"(II) only direct costs, and not indirect costs, profits, or management fees, for up to 5 years"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(k) Notwithstanding Subsections (b)(1)(B)(ii) and (d)(3), the Director may grant an extension of not to exceed 6 months beyond the deadlines of not to exceed 6 months beyond the deadlines established under those subsections for joint venture and single applicant awardees to expend Federal funds to complete their projects, if such extension may be granted with no additional cost to the Federal Government."

SEC. 314. TECHNOLOGY MONITORING AND COMPETITIVE ASSESSMENTS.

Section 101(e) of the Stevenson-Wylder Technology Innovation Act of 1980, as redesignated by section 213(b)(2) of this Act, is amended to read as follows:

"(e) OFFICE OF TECHNOLOGY MONITORING AND COMPETITIVE ASSESSMENT.—(1) The Secretary, through the Under Secretary, shall establish within the Technology Administration an Office of Technology Monitoring and Competitive Assessment, to collect, evaluate, assess, and disseminate information on—

"(A) foreign science and technology, specifically information assessing foreign capabilities relative to the United States; and

"(B) policies and programs used by foreign governments and industries to develop and apply economically important critical technologies, how these policies and programs compare with public and private activities in the United States, and the effects that these foreign policies and programs have on the competitiveness of United States industry; and

"(C) the ways in which the economic competitiveness of United States industry can be enhanced through Federal programs, including Department of Commerce programs, and evaluations of the effectiveness of Federal technology programs in helping to promote United States industrial competitiveness and economic growth.

"(2) Based on the information gathered under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the President, with the assistance of the Secretary, shall submit to Congress an annual report on United States technology and competitiveness analyzing the condition of United States technology relative to major trading partners, key trends in foreign technology and competitiveness policies and targeting, and the degree to which Federal programs are helping the United States to stay competitive with other countries.

"(3) The Office of Technology Monitoring and Competitive Assessment is authorized to—

"(A) act as a focal point within the Federal Government for the collection and dissemination, including electronic dissemination, of information on foreign process and product technologies, including information collected under the Japanese Technical Literature Program;

"(B) coordinate the extensive foreign technology monitoring and assessment activities already underway in the Federal Government;

"(C) act as an electronic clearinghouse for this information or otherwise provide for this function;

"(D) direct and fund the collection of additional information;

"(E) direct and fund analysis of foreign research and development activities and technical capabilities, particularly in those technical areas where the United States is considered to be at par or lagging foreign capabilities;

"(F) establish a program to identify technical areas needing a full-scale technical evaluation, and provide grants, on a cost-shared basis, to private sector or government-industry joint ventures, to conduct the evaluation;

"(G) establish and administer a fellowship program to support Technology Fellows in those countries that are major competitors of the United States in critical technologies to collect and provide initial analysis of information on foreign science and technology capabilities; and

"(H) work with the Department of State to place technical experts from the institute and other Federal laboratories into United States embassies to serve as technology attachés and counselors.

SEC. 315. COMMERCE TECHNOLOGY ADVISORY BOARD.

Title I of the Stevenson-Wylder Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (as amended by title II of this Act) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 113. COMMERCE TECHNOLOGY ADVISORY BOARD.

"(A) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established a Commerce Technology Advisory Board (hereafter in this section referred to as the 'Advisory Board'), the purpose of which is to advise the Secretary, Under Secretary, and Director regarding ways in which to—

"(1) promote the development and rapid application of advanced commercial technologies, including advanced manufacturing technologies;

"(2) strengthen the programs of the Technology Administration; and

"(3) generally improve the global competitiveness of industries within the United States.

(b) COMPOSITION.—The Advisory Board shall be composed of at least 17 members, appointed by the Under Secretary from among individuals who, because of their experience and accomplishments in technology development, business development, or finance are exceptionally qualified to analyze and formulate policy that would improve the global competitiveness of industries in the United States. The Under Secretary shall designate 1 member to serve as chairman. Membership of the Advisory Board shall be composed of—

(1) representatives of—

(A) United States small business;

(B) other United States manufactures;

(C) research universities and independent research institutes;

(D) State and local government agencies involved in industrial extension;

(E) national laboratories;

(F) industrial, worker, and professional organizations; and

(G) financial organizations; and

(2) other individuals that possess important insight to issues of national competitiveness.

(c) MEETINGS.—(1) The chairman shall call the first meeting of the Advisory Board not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) The Advisory Board shall meet at least once every 6 months, and at the call of the Under Secretary.

(d) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—Members of the Advisory Board, other than full-time employees of the United States, shall be allowed travel expenses in accordance with subchapter I of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code, while engaged in the business of the Advisory Board.

(e) CONSULTATION.—In carrying out this section, the Under Secretary shall consult with other agencies, as appropriate.

(f) TERMINATION.—Section 14 of the Federal Advisory Committee Act shall not apply to the Advisory Board."

SEC. 316. STUDY OF SEMICONDUCTOR LITHOGRAPHY TECHNOLOGIES.

Within 9 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Critical Technologies Institute established under section 822 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (in this section referred to as the "Institute") shall, after consultation with the private sector and appropriate officials from other Federal agencies, submit to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives a report on advanced lithography technologies for the production of semiconductor devices. The report shall include the Institute's evaluation of the likely technical and economic advantages and disadvantages of each such technology, an analysis of current private and Government research to develop each such technology, and any recommendations the Institute may have regarding future Federal support for research and development in advanced lithography.

SUBTITLE B—TECHNOLOGY FINANCING PILOT PROGRAMS

SEC. 321. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds and declares the following:

(1) In recent years, financing from venture capitalists and banks appears to have become more difficult for technology firms in the United States to obtain.

(2) While tax incentives are often the preferred method to help firms accelerate the development, commercialization, and production of advanced technology products, these incentives are of limited value to those firms, including start-up firms, which have limited revenues but nonetheless provide much of the Nation's innovation and new employment.

(3) Difficulties in obtaining financing particularly hurts those technology firms which face foreign competitors which have received substantial direct or indirect financial help from their governments.

(4) The Nation would benefit from pilot programs which involve government-industry partnerships to develop and test innovative industry-led methods to increase the amount of financing available to United States technology firms.

(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of Congress in this subtitle to establish, under the Department of Commerce is Technology Administration, three experimental technology financing pilot programs.

SEC. 322. CIVILIAN TECHNOLOGY LOAN PROGRAM.

(a) AUTHORITY TO MAKE LOANS.—The Secretary of Commerce may make loans—

(1) acting through the Under Secretary of Commerce for Technology, to small and medium sized businesses eligible for assistance under section 28 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C. 278n), to the extent provided in section 504(b) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974; or

(2) acting through critical technologies development companies licensed under section 323 of this title, to small and medium sized businesses.

(b) PURPOSE.—Loans under this section shall be for growth, modernization, and expansion of small and medium sized businesses engaged in research, development, demonstration, or exploitation of advanced technologies and products, including those in fields such as automation, electronics, advanced materials, biotechnology, and optical technologies.

(c) INTEREST RATE, TERMS, AND CONDITIONS.—Loans under this section shall be made at an interest rate equal to the Government borrowing rate plus an insurance surcharge of up to 2 percent, and shall be subject to such terms and conditions as the secretary may prescribe.

SEC. 323. ASSISTANCE TO CRITICAL TECHNOLOGY INVESTMENT COMPANIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Secretary, through the Under Secretary, is authorized to provide financial assistance to critical technology investment companies licensed under this section, for the purpose of stimulating and expanding the flow of private capital to qualified joint ventures and qualified individual firms in order to help them finance the development and commercialization of critical civilian technologies.

(2) Each critical technology investment company licensed under this section may provide venture capital to qualified joint ventures and qualified individual firms, in such manner and under such terms as the licensee may fix in accordance with the regulations of the Secretary. Venture capital provided to incorporated qualified joint ventures and individual firms may be provided directly or in cooperation with other investors, incorporated or unincorporated, through agreements to participate on an immediate basis.

(3) Each licensee may make loans, directly or in cooperation with other lenders, incorporated or unincorporated, through agreements to participate on an immediate or deferred basis, to qualified joint ventures and qualified individual firms to provide such ventures and firms with funds needed for sound financing related to development or utilization of critical civilian technologies.

(4) This section shall be carried out in a manner that will ensure the maximum participation of private financial sources and ensure prudent diversification and sound management of operations.

(b) REQUIREMENTS AND AUTHORITIES.—Except as provided in subsections (c) and (d) of this section, the Secretary shall, in providing financial assistance to licensees under the provisions of this section, follow the statutory requirements and use the statutory authorities which apply to the Small Business Administration's Small Business Investment Program, as set forth in subchapter 14B of title 15, United States Code (15 U.S.C. 681 et seq.). Any amendments to subchapter 14B enacted after the date of enactment of this title shall not apply to this section unless explicitly provided for in statute.

(c) ADDITIONAL AUTHORITIES.—In addition to the authorities provided to the Secretary under subsection (b) of this section, the Secretary is authorized to—

(1) purchase nonparticipating preferred securities from licensed critical technology investment companies as one way to provide financial assistance to those companies;

(2) issue trust certificates representing ownership of all or a fractional part of preferred securities issued by licensees and guaranteed by the Secretary under this section, with such trust certificates based on and backed by a trust or pool approved by the Secretary and composed of preferred securities and such other contractual obligations as the Secretary may undertake to facilitate the sale of such trust certificates;

(3) guarantee, upon such terms and conditions as are deemed appropriate, the timely payment of the principal of and interest on trust certificates issued by the Secretary or the Secretary's agent for purposes of this section, provided that such guarantee shall be limited to the extent of the redemption price of and dividends on the preferred securities, plus any related contractual obligations, which compose the trust or pool; and

(4) issue its own rules and regulations concerning how it will carry out this section under the applicable requirements and authorities.

(d) OTHER PROVISIONS.—(1) Amounts received by the Secretary from the payment of dividends and the redemption of preferred securities pursuant to this section, and fees paid to the United States by a licensee pursuant to this section, shall be deposited in an account established by the Secretary and shall be available solely for carrying out this section, to the extent provided in advance in appropriations Acts.

(2) Nothing in this section or in any other provision of law imposes any liability on the United States or the Secretary with respect to any obligations entered into, or stocks issued, or commitments made by any licensee operating under this section.

SEC. 324. ASSISTANCE TO STATE TECHNOLOGY DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary through the Under Secretary, may provide financial, technical, and business assistance to programs run by or chartered by State governments for the purpose of accelerating the development and commercialization of critical civilian technologies, including technologies developed by universities and colleges within the States. Such State technology development programs may—

(1) directly fund critical civilian technology development projects at qualified joint ventures and qualified individuals firms; and

(2) when appropriate, assist intermediary organizations, including universities, to develop new critical civilian technologies to the point where qualified joint ventures and qualified individual firms will invest in their further development and commercialization.

(b) FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—(1) The Secretary may make awards for up to three years to any State technology development program which meets the eligibility requirements of paragraph (2). State programs which win awards may reapply if they still meet eligibility requirements. Any financial assistance from the Secretary to State technology development programs shall be made only through a competitive, merit-reviewed process.

(2) A State technology development program must meet the following requirements before it shall be eligible to apply for and receive assistance under this section:

(A) at least one-third of the cost of the proposal to which such assistance applies must be provided by such State program; and

(B) the State program must demonstrate that any technology or intellectual property developed under the program shall be made available only to joint ventures and individual firms which legally commit to manufacture substantially in the United States any products resulting from any project funded in whole or in part by Federal funds provided under this section.

TITLE VI—ADDITIONAL COMMERCE DEPARTMENT PROVISIONS

SEC. 401. INTERNATIONAL STANDARDIZATION.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) private sector consensus standards are essential to the timely development of competitive products;

(2) Federal Government contribution of resources, more active participation in the voluntary standards process in the United States, and assistance, where appropriate, through government to government negotiations, can increase the quality of United States standards, increase their compatibility with the standards of other countries, and ease access of United States-made products to foreign markets; and

(3) the Federal Government, working in cooperation with private sector organizations including trade associations, engineering societies, and technical bodies, can effectively promote United States Government use of United States consensus standards and, where appropriate, the adoption and United States Government use of international standards.

(b) STANDARD PILOT PROGRAM.—Section 104(e) of the American Technology Preeminence Act of 1991 is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" before "Pursuant to the"; and

(2) by adding at the end of the following new paragraph:

"(2) As necessary and appropriate, the Institute shall expand the program established under section 112 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1989 (15 U.S.C. 272 note) by extending the existing program and by entering into additional contracts with non-Federal organizations representing United States companies, as such term is defined in section 28(d)(9)(B) of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act (15 U.S.C. 278n(d)(9)(B)). Such contracts shall require cost sharing between Federal and non-Federal sources for such purposes. In awarding such contracts, the Institute shall seek to promote and support the dissemination of United States technical standards to additional foreign countries, in cooperation with governmental bodies, private organizations including standards setting organizations and industry, and multinational institutions that promote economic development. The organizations receiving such contracts may establish training programs to bring to the United States foreign standards experts for the purpose of receiving in-depth training in the United States standards system".

(c) REPORT ON GLOBAL STANDARDS.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Institute and the Commerce Technology Advisory Board established under section 204 of this Act, shall submit to the Congress a report describing the appropriate roles of the Department of Commerce in aid to United States companies in achieving conformity assessment and accreditation and otherwise qualifying their products in foreign markets, and in the development and promulgation of domestic and global product and quality standards, including a discussion of the extent to which each of the policy options provided in such Office of Technology Assessment report contributes to meeting the goals of—

(1) increasing the international adoption of standards beneficial to United States industries; and

(2) improving the coordination of United States representation to international standards setting bodies.

(d) FEDERAL GOVERNMENT ROLE.—Section 508(a) of the American Technology Preeminence Act of 1991 is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(6) The appropriate role of the Federal Government in aid to United States companies in achieving conformity assessment and accreditation and otherwise qualifying their products in foreign markets, and in the development and promulgation of domestic and global product and quality standards, including a discussion of the extent to which each of the policy options provided in the Office of Technology Assessment report on global standards contributes to meeting the goal of improving the coordination of United States representation to international standards-setting bodies.

SEC. 402. MALCOLM BALDRIGE AWARD AMENDMENTS.

(a) Section 108(c)(3) of the Stevenson-Wylder Technology Innovation Act of 1980, as so redesignated by section 206(b)(4) of this Act, is amended to read as follows:

"(3) No award shall be made within any category or subcategory if there are no qualifying enterprises in that category or subcategory."

(b)(1) Section 108(c)(1) of the Stevenson-Wylder Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3711a(c)(1)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) Educational institutions."

(2)(A) Within 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report containing—

(i) criteria for qualification for a Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award by various classes of educational institutions;

(ii) criteria for the evaluation of applications for such awards under section 108(d)(1) of the Stevenson-Wylder Technology Innovation Act of 1980; and

(iii) a plan for funding awards described in clause (i).

(B) In preparing the report required under subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall consult with the National Science Foundation and other public and private entities with appropriate expertise, and shall provide for public notice and comment.

(C) The Secretary shall not accept applications for awards described in subparagraph (A)(i) until after the report required under subparagraph (A) is submitted to the Congress.

SEC. 403. COOPERATIVE RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT AGREEMENTS.

Section 202(d)(1) of the Stevenson-Wylder Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3710a(d)(1)), as redesignated by section 206(b)(6) of this Act, is amended by inserting "(including both real and personal property)" after "or other resources" both places it appears.

SEC. 404. CLEARINGHOUSE ON STATE AND LOCAL INITIATIVES.

Section 102(a) of the Stevenson-Wylder Technology Innovation Act of 1980, as so redesignated by section 206(b)(2) of this Act, is amended by striking "Office of Productivity, Technology, and Innovation" and inserting in lieu thereof "Institute".

SEC. 405. USE OF DOMESTIC PRODUCTS.

(a) PROHIBITION AGAINST FRAUDULENT USE OF "MADE IN AMERICA" LABELS.—(1) A person shall not intentionally affix a label bearing the inscription of "Made in America", or any inscription with that meaning, to any product sold in or shipped to the United States, if that product is not a domestic product.

(2) A person who violates paragraph (1) shall not be eligible for any contract for a procurement carried out with amounts authorized under this Act and the amendments made by this Act, including any subcontract under such a contract pursuant to the debarment, suspension, and ineligibility procedures in subpart 9.4 of chapter 1 of title 48, Code of Federal Regulations, or any successor procedures thereto.

(b) COMPLIANCE WITH BUY AMERICAN ACT.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the head of each agency which conducts procurements shall ensure that such procurements are conducted in compliance with sections 2 through 4 of the Act of March 3, 1933 (41 U.S.C. 10a through 10c, popularly known as the "Buy American Act").

(2) This subsection shall apply only to procurements made for which—

(A) amounts are authorized by this Act, and the amendments made by this Act, to be made available; and

(B) solicitations for bids are issued after the date of enactment of this Act.

(C) The Secretary, before January 1, 1994, shall report to the Congress on procurements covered under this subsection of products that are not domestic products.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this section, the term "domestic product" means a product—

(1) that is manufactured or produced in the United States; and

(2) at least 50 percent of the cost of the articles, materials, or supplies of which are mined, produced, or manufactured in the United States.

SEC. 406. SEVERABILITY.

If any provision of this Act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of this Act and the application thereof to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 407. WIND ENGINEERING RESEARCH PROGRAM.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the "Wind Engineering Program Act of 1992".

(b) FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.—Congress finds the following:

(1) Hurricanes and tornadoes kill more Americans and destroy more property than any other natural disaster.

(2) Each year, in the United States, extreme winds cause billions of dollars of damage to homes, schools, and other buildings, roads and bridges, electrical power distribution networks, and communications networks.

(3) Research on wind and wind engineering has resulted in improved methods for making buildings and other structures less vulnerable to extreme winds, but additional research funding is needed to develop new, improved, and more cost-effective methods of wind-resistant construction.

(4) Federal funding for wind engineering research has decreased drastically over the last 20 years.

(5) Wind research has been hampered by a lack of data on near-surface wind speed and distribution during hurricanes, tornadoes, and other severe storms.

(6) Many existing methods for wind-resistant construction are inexpensive and easy to implement but often they are not applied because the construction industry and the general public are unaware of such methods.

(7) Various Federal agencies have important roles to play in wind engineering research, but at present there is little inter-agency cooperation in this area.

(8) Establishment of a Federal Wind Engineering Program would result in new technologies for wind-resistant construction, and ultimately decreased loss of life and property due to extreme winds.

(c) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this Act is to create a Wind Engineering Program within the National Institute of Standards and Technology, which would—

(1) provide for wind engineering research;

(2) serve as a clearinghouse for information on wind engineering; and

(3) improve interagency coordination on wind engineering research between the National Institute of Standards and Technology, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the National Science Foundation, the Federal Aviation Administration, and other appropriate agencies.

(d) ESTABLISHMENT.—Within the National Institute of Standards and Technology, there shall be established a Wind Engineering Program which shall—

(1) conduct research and development, in cooperation with the private sector and academia, on new methods for mitigating wind damage due to tornadoes, hurricanes, and other severe storms;

(2) fund construction and maintenance of wind tunnels and other research facilities needed for wind engineering research;

(3) promote the application of existing methods for, and research results on, reducing wind damage to buildings that are usually incompletely- or non-engineered, such as single family dwellings, mobile homes, light industrial buildings, and small commercial structures;

(4) transfer technology developed in wind engineering research to the private sector so that it may be applied in building codes, design practice, and construction;

(5) conduct, in conjunction with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, post-disaster research following hurricanes, tornadoes, and other severe storms to evaluate the vulnerability of different types of buildings to extreme winds;

(6) serve as a point of contact for dissemination of research information on wind engineering and work with the private sector to develop education and training programs on construction techniques, developed from research results, for reducing wind damage;

(7) work with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the Federal Aviation Administration, and other agencies as is appropriate, on meteorology programs to collect and disseminate more data on extreme wind events; and

(8) work with the National Science Foundation to support and expand basic research on wind engineering.

TITLE V—AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 501. TECHNOLOGY ADMINISTRATION.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary, to carry out the activities of the Under Secretary and the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Technology Policy—

(1) for the Office of the Under Secretary, $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $8,000,000 for fiscal year 1995;

(2) for Technology Policy $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $6,000,000 for fiscal year 1995;

(3) for Japanese Technical Literature, $2,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $3,000,000 for fiscal year 1995; and

(4) for the Office of Technology Monitoring and Competitive Assessment, $1,500,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $2,500,000 for fiscal year 1995.

(b) TRANSFERS.—(1) Funds may be transferred among the line items listed in subsection (a), so long as—

(A) the net funds transferred to or from any line item do not exceed 10 percent of the amount authorized for that line item in such subsection;

(B) the aggregate amount authorized under subsection (a) is not changed; and

(C) the Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives are notified in advance of any such transfer.

(2) The Secretary may propose transfers to or from any line item listed in subsection (a) exceeding 10 percent of the amount authorized for such line item, but such proposed transfer may not be made unless—

(A) a full and complete explanation of any such proposed transfer and the reason therefore are transmitted in writing to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the President of the Senate, and the appropriate authorizing Committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate; and

(B) 30 days have passed following the transmission of such written explanation.

(c) NATIONAL TECHNICAL INFORMATION SERVICE FACILITIES STUDY.—As part of its modernization effort and before signing a new facility lease, the National Technical Information Service, in consultation with the General Service Administration, shall study and report to Congress on the feasibility of accomplishing all or part of its modernization by signing a long-term lease with an organization that agrees to supply a facility and supply and periodically upgrade modern equipment which permits the National Technical Information Service to receive, store, manipulate, and print electronically created documents and reports and to carry out the other functions assigned to the National Technical Information Service.

SEC. 502. NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF STANDARDS AND TECHNOLOGY.

(a) INTRAMURAL SCIENTIFIC AND TECHNICAL RESEARCH AND SERVICES.—(1) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary, to carry out the intramural scientific and technical research and services activities of the Institute, $250,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $300,000,000 for fiscal year 1995.

(2) Of the amount authorized under paragraph (1)—

(A) $1,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $1,000,000 for fiscal year 1995 are authorized only for the evaluation of nonenergy-related inventions;

(B) $9,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1995 are authorized only for the technical competence fund; and

(C) $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $5,000,000 for fiscal year 1995 are authorized only for the standards pilot project established under section 104(e) of the American Technology Preeminence Act of 1991.

(b) FACILITIES.—In addition to the amounts authorized under subsection (a), there are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary $105,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1994 and 1995, for the renovation and upgrading of the Institute's facilities. The Institute may enter into a contract for the design work for such purposes only if Federal Government payments under the contract are limited to amounts provided in advance in appropriations Acts.

(c) EXTRAMURAL INDUSTRIAL TECHNOLOGY SERVICES.—In addition to the amounts authorized under subsections (a) and (b), there are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary, to carry out the extramural industrial technology services activities of the Institute—

(1) for the National Manufacturing Outreach Program, $150,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $280,000,000 for fiscal year 1995, of which—

(A) $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $80,000,000 for fiscal year 1995 are authorized only for the support of Regional Centers for the Transfer of Manufacturing Technology;

(B) $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $100,000,000 for fiscal year 1995 are authorized only for the support of Manufacturing Outreach Centers;

(C) $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $70,000,000 for fiscal year 1995 are authorized only for the State Technology Extension Program;

(D) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1995 are authorized only for the Institute activities in support of the Outreach Program, including support of the Technology Extension Communications Network and the associated Clearinghouse; and

(2) for the Advanced Technology Program, $210,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $420,000,000 for fiscal year 1995, of which $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1995 are authorized only for support of the Advanced Manufacturing Technology Development Program established under section 303 of the Stevenson-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1980.

(d) WIND ENGINEERING.—(1) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Institute for the purposes of title V of this Act, $1,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $3,000,000 for fiscal year 1995.

(2) Of the amounts appropriated under paragraph (1), no less than 50 percent shall be used for cooperative agreements with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the National Science Foundation, and Federal Aviation Administration, or other agencies, for wind engineering research, development of improved practices for structures, and the collection and dissemination of meteorological data needed for wind engineering.

SEC. 503. ADDITIONAL ACTIVITIES OF THE TECHNOLOGY ADMINISTRATION.

In addition to the amounts authorized under sections 601 and 602, there are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary—

(1) for the Civilian Technology Loan Program established under section 322 of this Act, $60,000,000 for the period encompassing fiscal years 1994 and 1995;

(2) for the Civilian Technologies Venture Capital Program established under section 323 of this Act, $105,000,000 for the period encompassing fiscal years 1994 and 1995;

(3) for assistance to State Technology Assistance programs, as provided under section 324 of this Act, $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1995; and

(4) for carrying out the American workforce quality partnership program established under section 216 of this Act, $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1995.

Amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) or (2) shall remain available for expenditure through September 30, 1996. Of the amounts made available under paragraph (1) for a fiscal year, not more than $2,000,000 or 10 percent, whichever is greater, shall be available for administrative expenses. Of the amounts made available under paragraph (2) for a fiscal year, not more than $5,000,000 or 10 percent, whichever is greater, shall be available for administrative expenses. The Secretary, through the Under Secretary and the Director, may accept the transfer of funding appropriated to any other agency for purposes similar or related to those of the programs established and carried out under title III of the Stevenson-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1980, or the programs established and carried out under sections 25 and 26 of the National Institute of Standards and Technology Act, and to use those funds to implement such programs as provided in those statutory provisions.

SEC. 504. NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION.

In addition to such other sums as may be authorized by other Acts to be appropriated to the Director of the National Science Foundation, there are authorized to be appropriated to that Director, to carry out the provisions of section 221 of this Act, $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and $75,000,000 for fiscal year 1995.

SEC. 505. AVAILABILITY OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Appropriations made under the authority provided in this title shall remain available for obligation, for expenditure, or for obligation and expenditure for period specified in the Acts making such appropriations.

TITLE VI—INFORMATION INFRASTRUCTURE AND TECHNOLOGY

SEC. 601. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Information Infrastructure and Technology Act of 1992".

SEC. 602. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) High-performance computing and high-speed networks have proven to be powerful tools for improving America's national security, industrial competitiveness, and research capabilities.

(2) Federal programs, like the High-Performance Computing Program established by Congress in 1991, have played a key role in maintaining United States leadership in high-performance computing, especially in the defense and research sectors.

(3) High-performance computing and high-speed networking have the potential to revolutionize many fields, including education, libraries, health care, and manufacturing, if adequate resources are invested in developing the technology needed to do so.

(4) The Federal Government should ensure that the technology developed under research and development programs like the High-Performance Computing Program can be widely applied for the benefit of all Americans.

(5) A coordinated, interagency program is needed to identify and promote development of applications of high-performance computing and high-speed networking which will provide large economic and social benefits to the Nation. These so-called "Grand Applications" should include tools for teaching, digital libraries of electronic information, computer systems to improve the delivery of health care, and computer and networking technology to promote the United States competitiveness.

(6) The Office of Science and Technology Policy is the appropriate office to coordinate such a program.

(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this Act to help ensure the widest possible application of high-performance computing and high-speed networking. This requires that the United States Government—

(1) expand Federal support for research and development on applications of high-performance computing and high-speed networks for—

(A) improving education at all levels, from preschool to adult education, by developing new educational technology;

(B) building digital libraries of electronic information accessible over computer networks like the National Research and Education Network;

(C) improving the provision of health care by furnishing health care providers and their patients with better, more accurate, and more timely information; and

(D) increasing the productivity of the Nation's workers, especially in the manufacturing sector; and

(2) improve coordination of Federal efforts to deploy these technologies in cooperation with the private sector as part of an advanced, national information infrastructure.

SEC. 603. INFORMATION INFRASTRUCTURE DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.

The National Science and Technology Policy, Organization, and Priorities Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 6601 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new title:

"TITLE VII—INFORMATION INFRASTRUCTURE DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

"SEC. 701. The Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy, through the Federal Coordinating Council for Science, Engineering, and Technology (hereafter in this title referred to as the 'Council'), shall, in accordance with this title—

"(1) establish an Information Infrastructure Development Program (hereafter in this title referred to as the 'Program') that shall provide for a coordinated interagency effort to develop technologies needed to apply high-performance computing and high-speed networking in education, libraries, health care, manufacturing, and other appropriate fields; and

"(2) develop an Information Infrastructure Development Plan (hereafter in this title referred to as the 'Plan') describing the goals and proposed activities of the Program.

"SEC. 702. (a) The Plan shall contain recommendations for a five-year national effort and shall be submitted to the Congress within one year after the date of enactment of this title. The Plan shall be resubmitted upon revision at least once every two years thereafter.

"(b) The Plan shall—

"(1) establish the goals and priorities for the Program for the fiscal year in which the Plan (or revised Plan) is submitted and the succeeding four fiscal years;

"(2) set forth the role of each Federal agency and department in implementing the Plan;

"(3) describe the levels of Federal funding for each agency and department, and specific activities, required to achieve the goals and priorities established under paragraph (1); and

"(4) assign particular agencies primary responsibility for developing particular Grand Applications of high-performance computing and high-speed networks.

"(c) Accompanying the Plan shall be—

"(1) a summary of the achievements of Federal efforts during the preceding fiscal year to develop technologies needed for deployment of an advanced information infrastructure;

"(2) an evaluation of the progress made toward achieving the goals and objectives of the Plan;

"(3) a summary of problems encountered in implementing the Plan; and

"(4) any recommendations regarding additional action or legislation which may be required to assist in achieving the purposes of this title.

"(d) The Plan shall address, where appropriate, the relevant programs and activities of the following Federal agencies and departments:

"(1) The National Science Foundation.

"(2) The Department of Commerce, particularly the National Institute of Standards and Technology, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and the National Telecommunications and Information Administration.

"(3) The National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"(4) The Department of Defense, particularly the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency.

"(5) The Department of Energy.

"(6) The Department of Health and Human Services, particularly the National Institutes of Health and the National Library of Medicine.

"(7) The Department of the Interior, particularly the United States Geological Survey.

"(8) The Department of Education.

"(9) The Department of Agriculture, particularly the National Agricultural Library.

"(10) Such other agencies and departments as the President or the Chairman of the Council considers appropriate.

"(e) In addition, the Plan shall take into consideration the present and planned activities of the Library of Congress, as deemed appropriate by the Librarian of Congress.

"(f) The Council shall—

"(1) serve as lead entity responsible for development of the Plan and interagency coordination of the Program;

"(2) coordinate the high-performance computing research and development activities of Federal agencies and departments undertaken pursuant to the Plan and report at least annually to the President, through the Chairman of the Council, on any recommended changes in agency or departmental roles that are needed to better implement the Plan;

"(3) review, prior to the President's submission to the Congress of the annual budget estimate, each agency and departmental budget estimate in the context of the Plan and make the results of that review available to the appropriate elements of the Executive Office of the President, particularly the Office of Management and Budget; and

"(4) consult and ensure communication between Federal agencies and research, educational, and industry groups and State agencies conducting research and development on and using high-performance computing.

"(g) The Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy shall establish an advisory committee on high-performance computing and high-speed networking and their applications, consisting of prominent representatives from industry and academia who are specially qualified to provide the Council with advice and information on uses of high-performance computing and high-speed networking. The advisory committee shall provide the Council with an independent assessment of—

"(1) progress made in implementing the Plan;

"(2) the need to revise the Plan;

"(3) the balance between the components of the Plan;

"(4) whether the research and development funded under the Plan is helping to maintain United States leadership in the application of computing technology;

"(5) ways to ensure government-industry cooperation in implementing the Plan; and

"(6) other issues identified by the Director.

"(h)(1) Each Federal agency and department involved in the Program shall, as part of its annual request for appropriations to the Office of Management and Budget, submit a report to that Office identifying each element of its high-performance computing activities, which—

"(A) specifies whether each such element (i) contributes primarily to the implementation of the Plan or (ii) contributes primarily to the achievement of other objectives but aids Plan implementation in important ways; and

"(B) states the portion of its request for appropriations that is allocated to each element.

"(2) The Office of Management and Budget shall review each such report in light of the goals, priorities, and agency and departmental responsibilities set forth in the Plan, and shall include, in the President's annual budget estimate, a statement of the portion of each appropriate agency or department's annual budget estimate that is allocated to efforts to develop applications of high-performance computing.

"SEC. 703. In this title, the following definitions apply:

"(1) The term 'Grand Application' means an application of high-performance computing and high-speed networking that will provide large economic and social benefits to a broad segment of the Nation's populace.

"(2) The term 'information infrastructure' means a network of communications systems and computer systems designed to exchange information among all citizens and residents of the United States."

SEC. 604. APPLICATIONS FOR EDUCATION.

(a) RESPONSIBILITIES OF NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION AND OTHER AGENCIES.—In accordance with the Plan developed under section 701 of the National Science and Technology Policy, Organization, and Priorities Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 6601 et seq.), as added by section 3 of this Act, the National Science Foundation and other appropriate agencies shall provide for the development of high-performance computing and high-speed networking technology for use in education at all levels. Such applications shall include but not be limited to the following:

(1) Pilot projects that connect primary and secondary schools to the Internet and the National Research and Education Network to aid in development of the software, hardware, and training material needed to enable students and teachers to use networks to—

(A) communicate with their peers around the country;

(B) communicate with educators and students in colleges and universities;

(C) access databases of electronic information; and

(D) access other computing resources.

(2) Development of computer software, computer systems, and networks for teacher training.

(3) Development of advanced educational software.

(b) COOPERATION.—In carrying out this section, the National Science Foundation shall work with the computer and communications industry, authors and publishers educational materials, State education departments, local school districts, and the Department of Education, as appropriate.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the National Science Foundation for the purposes of this section, $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and $60,000,000 for fiscal year 1995.

SEC. 605. APPLICATIONS FOR MANUFACTURING

(a) ADVANCED MANUFACTURING SYSTEMS AND NETWORKING PROJECTS.—In accordance with the Plan developed under section 701 of the National Science and Technology Policy, Organization, and Priorities Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 6601 et seq.), as added by section 3 of this Act, the National Institute of Standards and Technology (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Institute") shall, as provided under section 303 of the Stevenson-Wylder Technology Innovation Act (as amended by title II of this Act) establish an Advanced Manufacturing Program, including advanced manufacturing systems and networking projects. Activities under the Advance Manufacturing Program shall, as appropriate, be coordinated with activities of the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, the National Science Foundation, other Federal agencies, and the States to develop, refine, test, and transfer advanced computer-integrated electronically-networked manufacturing technologies and associated applications.

(b) SUPPORT FROM OTHER FEDERAL DEPARTMENTS AND AGENCIES.—The Director of the Institute may request and accept funds, facilities, equipment, or personnel from other Federal departments and agencies in order to carry out responsibilities under this section.

SEC. 606. APPLICATIONS FOR HEALTH CARE.

(a) DEVELOPMENT OF TECHNOLOGIES BY NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH.—In accordance with the Plan developed under section 701 of the National Science and Technology Policy, Organization, and Priorities Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 6601 et seq.), as added by section 3 of this Act, the National Institutes of Health, and particularly the National Library of Medicine, in cooperation with the National Science Foundation and other appropriate agencies, shall develop technologies for applications of high-performance computing and high-speed networking in the health care sector. Such applications shall include but not be limited to the following:

(1) Testbed networks for linking hospitals, clinics, doctor's offices, medical schools, medical libraries, and universities to enable health care providers and researchers to share medical data and imagery.

(2) Software and visualization technology for visualizing the human anatomy and analyzing imagery from X-rays, CAT scans, PET scans, and other diagnostic tools.

(3) Virtual reality technology for simulating operations and other medical procedures.

(4) Collaborative technology to allow several health care providers in remote locations to provide real-time treatment to patients.

(5) Database technology to provide health care providers with access to relevant medical information and literature.

(6) Database technology for storing, accessing, and transmitting patients' medical records while protecting the accuracy and privacy of those records.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the National Library of Medicine for the purposes of this section, $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and $60,000,000 for fiscal year 1995.

SEC. 607. APPLICATIONS FOR LIBRARIES.

(a) DIGITAL LIBRARIES.—In accordance with the Plan developed under section 701 of the National Science and Technology Policy, Organization, and Priorities Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 6601 et seq.), as added by section 3 of this Act, the National Science Foundation, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, and other appropriate agencies shall develop technologies for "digital libraries" of electronic information. Development of digital libraries shall include the following:

(1) Development of advanced data storage systems capable of storing hundreds of trillions of bits of data and giving thousands of users nearly instantaneous access to that information.

(2) Development of high-speed, highly accurate systems for converting printed text, page images, graphics, and photographic images into electronic form.

(3) Development of database software capable of quickly searching, filtering, and summarizing large volumes of text, imagery, data, and sound.

(4) Encouragement of development and adoption of standards for electronic data.

(5) Development of computer technology to categorize and organize electronic information in a variety of formats.

(6) Training of database users and librarians in the use of and development of electronic databases.

(7) Development of technology for simplifying the utilization of networked databases distributed around the Nation and around the world.

(8) Development of visualization technology for quickly browsing large volumes of imagery.

(b) DEVELOPMENT OF PROTOTYPES.—The National Science Foundation, working with the supercomputer centers it supports, shall develop prototype digital libraries of scientific data available over the Internet and the National Research and Education Network.

(c) DEVELOPMENT OF DATABASES OF REMOTE-SENSING IMAGES.—The National Aeronautics and Space Administration shall develop databases of software and remote-sensing images to be made available over computer networks like the Internet.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—(1) There are authorized to be appropriated to the National Science Foundation for the purposes of this section, $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1995, $40,000,000 for fiscal year 1996, and $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1997.

(2) There are authorized to be appropriated to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for the purposes of this section $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and $30,000,000 for fiscal year 1995.

SEC. 608. ACCESS TO SCIENTIFIC AND TECHNICAL INFORMATION.

(A) ASSOCIATE DIRECTORS.—Section 203 of the National Science and Technology Policy, Organization, and Priorities Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 6612) is amended—

(1) by striking "four" in the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "five"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new sentence: "Among other duties, one Associate Director shall oversee Federal efforts to disseminate scientific and technical information."

(b) FUNCTIONS OF DIRECTOR.—Section 204(b) of the National Science and Technology Policy, Organization, and Priorities Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 6613(b)) is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (3);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (4) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(3) by inserting immediately after paragraph (4) the following new paragraph:

"(5) assist the President in disseminating scientific and technical information."

FACT SHEET ON S. 4, THE NATIONAL COMPETITIVENESS ACT OF 1993

PURPOSE

To promote United States economic growth, industrial competitiveness, and jobs by strengthening Federal support for civilian technology and manufacturing—specifically through expanded support for both industry-led technology development projects and State-led efforts to help small and medium-sized manufacturers. In particular, the bill expands the programs of the Technology Administration and its National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) within the Department of Commerce (DOC).

BACKGROUND

The legislation is based on two technology and manufacturing bills from 1991–92, S. 1330 and H.R. 5231, and has been updated to reflect the Clinton-Gore campaign statements supporting an expansion of manufacturing and technology programs. The bill also includes the provisions of 1992's S. 2937, the Information Infrastructure and Technology Act (a follow-on bill to 1991's High-Performance Computing Act). The key provisions of the new bill are part of the Senate Democratic Economic Leadership Strategy.

MAIN PROVISIONS

The bill has six titles:

Title I—General Provisions

States the bill's title ("National Competitiveness Act of 1993") and its findings, purposes, and definitions. One major purpose is to strengthen the ability of Federal technology programs, particularly those at DOC, to support industry-led efforts to improve the technological capabilities, manufacturing performance, information infrastructure, and employment opportunities of the United States. A second major purpose is to develop a nationwide network of technological advice for manufacturers, particularly small and medium-sized firms.

Title II—Manufacturing

Sets a goal that within 10 years the United States will be second to no other nation in the development, deployment, and use of advanced manufacturing technology.

Subtitle A—DOC manufacturing programs

Amends the Stevenson-Wylder Technology Innovation Act of 1980 to create a DOC 21st Century Manufacturing Infrastructure Program, which consists of two parts: (1) a new Advanced Manufacturing Technology Development Program, which will support industry-led efforts to develop, refine, and test advanced computer-controlled manufacturing systems; and (2) a new National Manufacturing Outreach Program, which will create a nationwide manufacturing extension system linking State-run Manufacturing Outreach Centers, NIST Manufacturing Technology Centers, and new efforts by NIST's State Technology Extension Program (STEP) to help those States currently without manufacturing extension programs to develop such programs. Also creates an industry-led Manufacturing Advisory Committee, and expands DOC's efforts to work industry to improve the quality of the manufacturing workforce.

Subtitle B—NSF manufacturing programs

Expands the manufacturing research and training programs of the National Science Foundation (NSF).

Title III—Critical Technologies

States that investment in the development and adoption of advanced technology contributes significantly to long-term economic growth and employment.

Subtitle A—Advanced Technology Program

Requires DOC to submit a long-term plan for NIST's Advanced Technology Program (ATP), the Government's principal civilian program for supporting industry-led projects to overcome the technical obstacles which slow the commercialization of important new technologies. Also creates a new DOC Office of Technology Monitoring and Competitive Assessment, to provide better information on the technological capabilities and industrial targeting practices of America's major trading partners; and establishes a Commerce Technology Advisory Board to provide high-level industry and labor input to DOC technology programs.

Subtitle B—Stimulating investment

Authorizes three experimental programs to stimulate the flow of investment capital to technology firms: (1) a small DOC loan program; (2) a pilot program to assist venture capital firms, modeled on the proven Small Business Investment Company Program; and (3) a program to assist State technology development programs.

Title IV—Additional Commerce Department Provisions

Includes provisions regarding: (1) international standardization, a subject which has major implications for U.S. exports; (2) the extension of the Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award to educational institutions; (3) cooperative research and development agreements between Federal laboratories and research partners; (4) DOC's Clearinghouse on State and Local Initiatives; (5) the use of domestic U.S.-made products; (6) a severability clause; and (7) creation of a new NIST research program in "wind engineering" to help the construction industry build structures which can better withstand hurricanes and tornadoes.

Title V—Authorizations of Appropriations

Provides fiscal year (FY) 1994 and 1995 authorizations for DOC technology and manufacturing programs and the new NSF manufacturing programs. The attached table provides details.

Title VI—Information Infrastructure and Technology

Builds on the existing Federal high-performance computing and communications program by establishing a coordinated, interagency program to identify and promote the development of computing applications in education, manufacturing (including NIST's programs), health care, and libraries. The aim is for government and industry to work together to develop new computer applications that will benefit both users and the overall U.S. economy. Title VI contains computer authorizations (exclusive of the DOC manufacturing research projects) which total $60M for FY 1993, $120M for FY 1994, and $180M for FY 1995.

¹ Possibly will be supplemented by up to $70M in fiscal year 1993 defense conversion funds.

² Fiscal year 1994 and fiscal year 1995 levels include funds for the ATP-managed portion of the Advanced Manufacturing Technology Development Program.

³ Authorization is technically $240M over the two-year period (fiscal year 1994–95).

⁴ Information infrastructure title contains a fiscal year 1993 authorization of $60M, but no fiscal year 1993 funds have been appropriated.

Mr. KERRY. I thank the President.

Mr. President, I rise for two purposes.

One, I wish to join in support of the legislation introduced earlier by the distinguished chairman of the Commerce Committee. I am pleased to be a cosponsor of the National Competitiveness Act of 1993, an important piece of legislation, which he has worked on in the Commerce Committee for some period of time.

I think in view of the nomination that we have just approved, it is especially appropriate on this day and at this moment to talk for a moment about this bill.

I also rise to introduce legislation, and will shortly send to the desk a broad, sweeping campaign finance reform bill on behalf of myself, Senator BIDEN, and Senator BRADLEY. I will talk about that in a few moments.

But I would like to say a few things, if I may, about the legislation introduced by the distinguished chairman of the Commerce Committee.

The legislation that I join Senator HOLLINGS in supporting, the National Competitiveness Act of 1993, is an effort to expand the manufacturing and technology programs of the Department of Commerce. Now that the cold war is behind us, we can begin finally to focus resources on the Nation's economic security, reversing the decline in living standards of the last decade.

As the recent Presidential campaign illustrated, we need to focus our Nation's resources much more intensely on creating jobs. And President Clinton has made it very clear that this is one of his top priorities: How we are going to increase investment—public and private—in the tools that are needed by our industries to succeed, export, and create high-wage jobs.

We need especially to help our small- and medium-sized manufacturers which create the majority of jobs and which supply more and more of the components for our larger, exporting companies. These companies need assistance to learn about the manufacturing processes of the nineties—about automation, work organizations, new materials, worker training, flexible manufacturing, environmental technologies, and so on—so that they can compete against foreign competitors in quality and price and so that they can help their U.S. customers compete against their foreign competitors as well. More than anything, these small- and medium-sized companies need access to information.

Japan has a system of 170 manufacturing extension centers which give smaller Japanese companies the information they need. So does the United States in the agricultural sphere. We need a similar extension program for industry. The Department of Commerce has matched local funding to create seven manufacturing technology centers, known as the Hollings Centers, for their creator, and many of the States have established manufacturing extension centers of their own.

The State programs need to be expanded and strengthened and they need a national infrastructure to ensure that good ideas are cross-pollinated and quality kept high. By providing matching funds for local centers, standards for evaluation, training for extension workers, and a computer network to connect centers to each other and to other economic development services, the Department of Commerce will play a crucial role in creating a national manufacturing extension system. This system is sorely needed and will be greatly appreciated by our Nation's smaller manufacturers who form the backbone of our economy.

One of the ways in which the extension centers can be especially useful to smaller manufacturers is in providing them information about environmental technologies, especially in the area of pollution prevention. Pollution prevention will be the environmental issue of the 1990's. Like preventive medicine, it aims to stop waste before it happens. Since eliminating waste-producing manufacturing processes means lowering costs to producers by improving the process and reducing the use of toxic chemicals, pollution prevention will improve American competitiveness. The extension centers, as part of their mission to deploy technology, should offer environmental assessment services as well as help companies realize the cost savings inherent in purchasing environmental technologies. I hope to work with Senator HOLLINGS on this issue.

In addition to deploying technologies, the Department of Commerce has a special role in formulating and implementing a technology policy which will allow U.S. companies to commercialize the state-of-the-art research performed in this country. There is a list of critical manufacturing technologies that industry, labor, and government—both here and abroad—agree are necessary for advance manufacturing in the twenty-first century. And the United States, despite its lead in basic research, is behind in these technologies. The Department of Commerce can help to right this by working with the other relevant agencies—such as the Department of Defense, the Department of Energy, and others—to develop a coordinated strategy to encourage the development of technology. In order to accomplish this, we need to expand its Advanced Technology Program administered by the National Institute of Standards and Technology. NIST has already shown evidence that it knows how to run these programs well.

Since any technology policy must include environmental technologies among its targets, environmental technologies must be an integral feature of the ATP and we must ensure that the Department of Commerce works closely with EPA to develop this crucial industry.

I am especially excited about the provision in this legislation which builds on the existing Federal high-performance computing and communications program by establishing an interagency program to begin developing true applications for an information infrastructure in education, manufacturing, health care, and libraries. It is time that we started to reap some of the benefits of our Nation's extraordinary computer technology base and I can think of no better way to do so than the improve the functioning of a select group of crucial industries.

The legislation which Senator HOLLINGS introduces today will bring the process of reversing our investment deficit by leveraging public funds to improve the manufacturing and technology base of American industry. I look forward to working with him, the other members of the committee who have an interest in these issues as well as our new Commerce Secretary to ensure that this is only the beginning of a government-industry partnership to improve the competitiveness of U.S. industry and U.S. workers.

• Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, pop psychologists of the 1970's urged Americans to think that, "Today is the first day of the rest of your life." Well, Mr. President, that may have become a cliché for many people, but today nonetheless is an important first day in at least one respect. Today is the first day for a national technology competitiveness policy, thanks to the Clinton administration's determination to restore our manufacturing and technology base.

This is particularly gratifying for those of us in the Senate who worked so hard last year to develop the Democratic economic leadership strategy that addresses precisely this issue. That initial effort, which was largely successful, focused primarily on reori-enting Government spending priorities in favor of more support for research, development, and commercialization of critical technologies. But it takes time to achieve our technology goals, and there are many more battles that need to be fought before we can say not only that we have a policy but also that we are implementing it effectively.

There is no question that we face a significant challenge in that regard. Part of it is macroeconomic. According to the Competitiveness Policy Council, average real wages are lower now than they were 20 years ago; aggregate productivity has grown only 1 percent per year for the past decade; and the U.S. share of developed country [OECD] manufacturing export has declined from 22 percent in 1962—and 18 percent in 1980—to 15 percent in 1990.

The latter is a particularly important number because it is the best measure of how we are doing in manufacturing compared to our competitors. That, in turn, is important because it directly demonstrates our competitiveness and our ability to be an effective trader. Manufacturing has consistently been the most important element of our trade balance. If we lose our manufacturing base, we lose our ability to increase our exports and to compete on a global basis.

Unfortunately, that process of erosion is already well underway. According to "Regaining U.S. Manufacturing Leadership," by Robert B. Costello of the Hudson Institute, and a Defense Department official in the Reagan administration, for the 1980's as a whole, growth of manufacturing output averaged 3.6 percent, an improvement over the 2.9 percent of the 1970's. However, some 30 percent of that growth is due to a single sector—computers and office equipment, whose output was much smaller in preceding years. Without that sector the annual growth rate was only 2.5 percent, worse than the 1970's. More important, the good news in this data was in the early 1980's. In 1989 U.S. manufacturing output per hour increased only 2 percent, a 60-percent drop from 1983-84.

The job picture is even gloomier. The rate of employment growth in the 1980's was 1.7 percent per year compared to 2.25 percent in the 1970's. The rate of growth of manufacturing hours worked actually declined 0.3 percent per year in the 1980's, compared to a 0.4-percent increase in the 1970's. It is also important to keep in mind the fact that the growth of the work force will slow in the 1990's, and to sustain even the GNP growth of the 1980's will require nearly doubling labor productivity—a very difficult accomplishment.

Important though these numbers are, Mr. President, the fact is that in global competitiveness the real battleground is microeconomic, not macroeconomic. How we are doing in critical technology areas will define our ability to compete in the 21st century.

In that regard, the Council on Competitiveness concludes we are losing badly or have lost in the following critical technologies: structural ceramics, electronic ceramics, electronic packaging materials, gallium arsenide, silicon, display materials, integrate circuit fabrication and test equipment, robotics and automated equipment, memory chips, multichip packaging systems, printed circuit board technology, display technologies, optical information storage.

We are weak in such things as advanced metals, scientific instruments, manufacturing design, flexible manufacturing, high-speed machining, precision bearings, precision machining and forming, lasers, photonics.

A report of the National Science Board, which is affiliated with the National Science Foundation, that was issued last August comes to a very clear conclusion about where we stand on research and development:

The real rate of growth in U.S. industrial R&D spending has declined since the late 1970's and early 1980's. In addition, the Nation's position has deteriorated relative to that of its major international competitors whose investment in nondefense R&D has been growing at a faster pace than U.S. non-defense R&D since the mid-1980's.

Domestic industrial R&D expenditures slowed from an average annual growth rate of 7.5 percent (constant dollars) during 1980-85 to only 0.4 percent during 1985-91. The federally supported portion of these expenditures dropped from a growth rate of 8.1 percent to -1.7 percent over these two periods * * *. The United States now trails Japan and (West) Germany, its strongest competitors, in nondefense R&D spending as a percentage of gross domestic product (GDP).

The report goes on to observe that we spend too little on process-oriented R&D, put insufficient emphasis on emerging technologies, risk losing our lead in pioneering discoveries and inventions, and fail to make decisions based on strategic technological considerations. These are all precisely the failures the initial national economic leadership strategy that Senate Democrats announced last July 1 was intended to correct.

That strategy consisted of 30 specific proposals, some reoriented spending, some new legislation, to get our industrial and technology base back on the right track. Those of us who worked so hard on that effort, particularly Senators LIEBERMAN, BINGAMAN, and myself, were pleased that we substantially achieved our objectives on 23 of those items.

The proposals deferred for action until this year, along with the need to address fiscal year 1994 funding priorities and move forward on the President's campaign commitments create a new agenda for action for the 103d Congress. And it is a major part of that new economic leadership strategy that we introduce today.

Other Senators will describe in detail the provisions of this bill. I would like to make a few comments about the context of this effort. Most important, we are not trying to solve all our manufacturing problems in one bill. Some issues are not ready for final congressional action and need further hearings. Other issues, such as defense technology funding, trade, tax, and worker training issues, are deferred for separate legislation to avoid jurisdictional complications. It is, however, important to state that it is our intent that these other matters be addressed this year—in the regular annual defense authorization, anticipated trade and tax legislation, and revision of JTPA and trade adjustment assistance programs, either on their own or in the context of NAFTA implementing legislation.

Therefore, this bill consists primarily of matters within the jurisdiction of the Commerce Committee, namely those that relate to civilian technology research, development, and commercialization. I am particularly pleased to note the presence of proposals based on two ideas I have promoted for some time—a loan program for technology commercialization and a pilot program to supplement the private venture capital market's investment in new technologies. These provisions differ in some significant details from my own proposals, including the Advanced Technologies Capital Consortium bill, S. 2286 in the last Congress, which I will be reintroducing shortly, but they are an important step forward and a good basis for initial action. Obviously, I will have more to say about them during the process of committee consideration. These proposals will be particularly important for West Virginia and other States with active technology companies that are often overlooked by the conventional venture capital market.

The result of the past administration's long opposition to efforts to increase Federal technology research and development activity is a continuing serious lack of venture capital for critical technology firms at critical stages in their development. More and more such firms find themselves with no choice but to sell themselves and their technology to foreign investors, primarily Japanese, if they want to continue their work, with the resulting transfer of technology and future profits overseas.

I am also particularly pleased that this bill will also implement an important Clinton campaign promise by significantly expanding the Government's two major manufacturing technology extension and diffusion programs—the Hollings Manufacturing Technology Centers and the State Technology Extension Program [STEP], which have been badly underfunded and have had little support from the administration.

Mr. President, this bill is an important step toward addressing the real competitiveness problems that our country faces—restoring our manufacturing base, improving our productivity, and creating jobs. President Clinton understands that and has committed himself to these same goals. With the introduction of this bill, we join in that commitment. I hope we can now move on to fulfill our commitment with prompt action.

Mr. President, I ask that a factsheet describing the National Competitiveness Act of 1993 be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FACT SHEET ON S. 4, THE NATIONAL COMPETITIVENESS ACT OF 1993

PURPOSE

To promote United States economic growth, industrial competitiveness, and jobs by strengthening Federal support for civilian technology and manufacturing—specifically through expanded support for both industry-led technology development projects and State-led efforts to help small and medium-sized manufacturers. In particular, the bill expands the programs of the Commerce Department's Technology Administration and its National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST).

BACKGROUND

The legislation is based on two 1992 technology and manufacturing bills, S. 1330 and H.R. 5231, and has been updated to reflect the Clinton-Gore campaign statements supporting an expansion of manufacturing and technology programs. The bill also includes the provisions of 1992's S. 2937, the Information Infrastructure and Technology Act (a follow-on bill to 1991's High-Performance Computing Act).

MAIN PROVISIONS

The bill has six titles:

Title I—General Provisions

States the bill's title ("National Competitiveness Act of 1993") and its findings, purposes, and definitions. One major purpose is to strengthen the ability of Federal technology programs, particularly those of the Department of Commerce (DOC), to support industry-led efforts to improve the technological capabilities, manufacturing performance, information infrastructure, and employment opportunities of the United States. A second major purpose is to develop a nationwide network of technological advice for manufacturers, particularly small and medium-sized firms.

Title II—Manufacturing

Sets a goal that within 10 years the United States will be second to no other nation in the development, deployment, and use of advanced manufacturing technology.

Subtitle A—DOC manufacturing programs

Amends the Stevenson-Wylder Technology Innovation Act of 1980 to create a DOC 21st Century Manufacturing Infrastructure Program, which consists of two parts: (1) a new Advanced Manufacturing Technology Development Program, which will support industry-led efforts to develop, refine, and test advanced computer-controlled manufacturing systems; and (2) a new National Manufacturing Outreach Program, which will create a nationwide manufacturing extension system linking State-run Manufacturing Outreach Centers, NIST Manufacturing Technology

Centers, and new efforts by NIST's State Technology Extension Program (STEP) to help those States currently without manufacturing extension programs to develop such programs. Also creates an industry-led Manufacturing Advisory Committee, and expands DOC's efforts to work with industry to improve the quality of the manufacturing workforce.

Subtitle B—NSF manufacturing programs

Expands the manufacturing research and training programs of the National Science Foundation (NSF).

Title III—Critical Technologies

States that investment in the development and adoption of advanced technology contributes significantly to long-term economic growth and employment.

Subtitle A—Advanced Technology Program

Requires DOC to submit a long-term plan for NIST's Advanced Technology Program (ATP), the Government's principal civilian program for supporting industry-led projects to overcome the technical obstacles which slow the commercialization of important new technologies. Also creates a new DOC Office of Technology Monitoring and Competitive Assessment, to provide better information on the technological capabilities and industrial targeting practices of America's major trading partners; and establishes a Commerce Technology Advisory Board to provide high-level industry and labor input to DOC technology programs.

Subtitle B—Stimulating investment

Authorizes three experimental programs to stimulate the flow of investment capital to technology firms: (1) a small DOC loan program; (2) a pilot program to assist venture capital firms, modeled on the proven Small Business Investment Company Program; and (3) a program to assist State technology development programs.

Title IV—Additional Commerce Department Provisions

Includes provisions regarding: (1) international standardization, a subject which has major implications for U.S. exports; (2) the extension of the Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award to educational institutions; (3) cooperative research and development agreements between Federal laboratories and research partners; (4) DOC's Clearinghouse on State and Local Initiatives; (5) the use of domestic U.S.-made products; (6) a severability clause; and (7) creation of a new NIST research program in "wind engineering" to help the construction industry build structures which can better withstand hurricanes and tornadoes.

Title V—Authorizations of Appropriations

Provides fiscal year (FY) 1994 and 1995 authorizations for DOC technology and manufacturing programs and the new NSF manufacturing programs. The attached table provides details.

Title IV—Information Infrastructure and Technology

Builds on the existing Federal high-performance computing and communications program by establishing a coordinated, interagency program to identify and promote the development of computing application in education, manufacturing (including NIST's programs), health care, and libraries. The aim is for government and industry to work together to develop new computer applications that will benefit both users and the overall U.S. economy. Authorizations (exclusive of the DOC manufacturing research projects) total $60M for FY93, $120M for FY 94, and $180M for FY95.

• Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I am pleased to rise today as an original cosponsor of Senator Hollings bill, S. 4, the National Competitiveness Act of 1993. The heart of this bill is S. 1330, which Senator Hollings introduced in the last Congress as part of a series of bills on technology and manufacturing policy introduced by Senators NUNN, HOLLINGS, GORE, MITCHELL, and myself. These bills represented an unprecedented display of cooperation between the Armed Services and Commerce Committees aimed at harnessing a larger share of the Federal R&D enterprise to meeting the needs of the industrial sector.

In introducing these bills, we noted that technologies critical to our national security and technologies critical to our industrial competitiveness were fast becoming one and the same. Just as we were cooperating across committees with defense and civilian jurisdictions in the Congress, the executive branch agencies, defense and non-defense, needed to begin to work closer together in cooperation with industry to target a larger share of the $75 billion Federal R&D enterprise to industry's needs. We felt the executive branch needed a comprehensive set of strategic roadmaps in these critical technologies aimed at insuring continued leadership by American industry in these sectors. We felt that the Federal Government as a whole needed to sort out what it could do to strengthen American industry, building on the comparative advantages of each of the mission agencies, just as the Government has done under former Senator GORE's leadership in the case of high-performance computing.

In the last Congress we were able to enact the provisions of S. 1327 and S. 1328 as part of the fiscal year 1992 and 1993 Defense Authorization Acts. We were not able to see S. 1330 all the way to enactment despite heroic efforts by Senator HOLLINGS and his House counterpart Congressman GEORGE BROWN.

With a new and supportive administration in place I hope now that we will be able to see S. 4, which aims to strengthen the Commerce Department's and the National Science Foundation's technology and manufacturing programs, enacted early on.

I also see this bill as part of a much broader strategy we outlined back in June of 1991, a strategy that must involve all of the Federal mission agencies under strong leadership from the White House. I serve on the Labor, Energy, and Armed Services Committees. In the Labor Committee we have been supportive of Bernadine Healy's efforts to tie the $10 billion National Institutes of Health research and development enterprise to the economic competitiveness of this country. Dr. Healy appropriately made this one of the four key goals in the NIH strategic plan. I have spoken with Secretary of Health and Human Services-designate Donna Shalala about continuing this thrust and have received a very strong commitment to do so.

In the Energy Committee under Senator Johnston's leadership, we have moved to better connect the DOE labs to the needs of the industrial sector and have rapidly increased funding for such technology partnerships to at least $141 million in fiscal year 1993. There is more that needs to be done here both legislatively and administratively to streamline the industrial sector's interactions with the DOE labs. The Council on Competitiveness in a recent report entitled "Industry as Customer of the Federal Laboratories" has proposed giving authority to enter such partnerships to the lab directors, something I originally proposed in 1989, but which was deleted from the National Competitiveness Technology Transfer Act of 1989 before enactment because of administration opposition. I hope to win the Clinton-Gore administration's and my colleagues in the Congress' support for this change as part of broader Federal labs initiative. I was delighted to see Secretary of Energy-designate O'Leary state during her confirmation hearing her strong support for the DOE labs playing an important role in the Clinton-Gore technology policy.

Finally, on the Armed Services Committee, under Senator Nunn's and now Defense Secretary Aspin's leadership, we have already moved in the past 2 years to strengthen the dual-use technology and manufacturing programs of the Department of Defense, to strengthen the ability of the Office of Science and Technology Policy to coordinate Federal R&D programs, in particular by creating the Critical Technologies Institute, and to foster a commercial-military integration strategy within the defense acquisition system. There is much we can do to build on those programs. If this morning's newspaper is correct that the President and Secretary Aspin have chosen Bill Perry as Deputy Secretary of Defense, they have chosen the ideal person to build on our past efforts in technology and manufacturing policy, for he was the key mentor of many of us on these issues over the past decade.

So, I am proud to cosponsor S. 4. I commend Senator Hollings for his continued leadership in this area. I hope this bill becomes the first of many pieces of legislation aimed at the long-term health of our economy which the Clinton-Gore administration will ask this Congress to enact. We can and must better connect the entire Federal R&D enterprise to the needs of the industrial sector in partnership with industry and State governments. This new partnership will, I am sure, be one of the cornerstones of our economic policy in the years ahead.

• Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to speak in support of legislation, S. 4, that is being introduced today by the distinguished chairman of the Commerce Committee, the gentleman from South Carolina. Earlier today the majority leader announced it as one of his top legislative priorities. This legislation, when enacted, will help recharge American manufacturing, which has been seriously harmed by a decade of neglect and ideological bickering.

The state of U.S. manufacturing has clearly been in decline and indicators of that decline are acutely visible. The U.S. merchandise trade deficit remains stubbornly high, despite a significant downward change in the value of the dollar. Growth in productivity continues to be sluggish as compared to our major competitors. And, U.S. manufacturers, including defense manufacturers, are becoming increasingly dependent on foreign companies for an ever-increasing range of machinery, machine tools, and manufactured components.

In the debate over the state of American manufacturing and industrial competitiveness, we routinely address issues such as the high cost of capital; our low rate of savings and investment; chronic trade and budget deficits; and the failure of our educational system to prepare our workers for the jobs we need done, but we rarely address the fundamental issue of technological advancement, which is among the most important.

Technological advancement can drive an economy by creating new goods, services, industries, jobs, and capital. Technological advancement, when applied to existing systems, can improve productivity and the quality of products. And, Mr. President, technological advancement can help compensate for competitive disadvantages U.S. firms must face including comparatively higher costs of capital and labor.

While the United States remains the undisputed world leader in basic research and in many areas of applied research—largely due to direct Federal support—we must understand that research alone does not lead to improved productivity and economic growth. Research and development is merely the first step. It is commercialization—the process of moving products from our laboratories to our factories—that leads to increased productivity, continued economic growth, and the ultimate rise in our standard of living. But, Mr. President, this is also where we fail. We must, as our competitors do, aggressively support emerging technologies, so they can be transformed into commercially viable products for the international marketplace.

Our chief economic competitors are not afraid to do just that. According to the private sector funded Council on Competitiveness, in 1988 the United States spent 0.2 percent of the total Federal Government R&D budget on industrial development—compared to 4.8 percent in Japan and 14.5 percent in Germany. Additionally, the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) is the most celebrated example of how the Japanese economic miracle came into being. We may not want to create an American MITI, but we certainly ought to be thinking about long term blueprints for keeping America ahead of the high technology curve. This legislation, like other groundbreaking legislation introduced by the gentleman from South Carolina, will go a long way toward reaching that goal.

This initiative includes provisions for coordinated planning and management of Federal manufacturing activities; increased federal support for the development of industry-led advanced manufacturing technology; programs for manufacturing extension activities, particularly for small and medium sized firms; and expanded technological education programs.

Mr. President, there are those who take issue with this legislation because they believe it is just another example of the Federal Government business picking winners and losers. But what these critics forget is that the Government is and always has been deeply involved in the economy. The Government helped to build our railroads. Government support also helped to build our highways. That's also how the American aerospace industry and American agriculture have become the standards for American excellence—the Government has been an ally of economic development. In fact, the aerospace industry produces a larger trade surplus for the United States than any other manufacturing industry and agriculture is a big contributor to trade surpluses as well.

Even Adam Smith, the author of laissez-faire, understood that the free market is not always perfect or ideal. He suggested that there is a legitimate role for government to play in the market, particularly in caring for the indigent and needy, in building public infrastructure, in education, in public health, in providing for the national defense, and in preventing firms from conspiring against the public good.

This bill, of course, does not purport to replace the free market. Nothing could be further from the case. What the provisions of this legislation say is that there is also a constructive supporting role for the government to play in technology policy.

Evaluate the case of the aerospace industry. According to the Office of Technology Assessment, the first Federal contract for a military aircraft was let in 1907, and in 1911 Congress appropriated $25,000 to purchase the first airplane for the Navy. The Europeans, however, were the first to establish aeronautical research centers and between 1907 and 1915 the Europeans made landmark advances in aerospace technology. During this period, the United States felt itself falling far behind the curve in aerospace advancement, and finally, in 1915, Theodore Roosevelt endorsed and Congress supported the concept of a National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, which was a Government organization designed specifically to advance the science and technology associated with aerospace.

Since that time, the Federal Government has aggressively supported aerospace research, development, commercialization, and production—albeit primarily for military functions. Many would argue, however, that this support—which has led to a variety of dual-use technologies—is what made the U.S. commercial aerospace industry what it is today. I cannot help but note that almost 90 years later the greatest challenge to U.S. civilian aerospace predominance is coming from Airbus—a firm which is wholly supported and which has received billions of dollars in R&D and working capital from a coalition of four European countries.

Mr. President, in 1991, the President's National Critical Technologies Panel, which was part of the Office of Science and Technology Policy, prepared a list of 22 key technologies along with a report which stresses the need for increased cooperation between government and corporations. In that report, the National Critical Technologies Panel stated:

The failure to maintain world class manufacturing capabilities would compromise the nation's ability to compete in domestic and international markets, and would threaten our ability to obtain access to the full range of components and equipment required for a strong national defense.

If maintaining a world class manufacturing capability, as the report suggests, is critical to both our national defense and economic security, then we should not be debating whether or not the Federal Government should be supporting technological advancement; rather, we should be asking what is the best way for us to do so? How can we put the resources and leverage capacity of the Federal Government directly behind American industrial technologies to improve our industrial competitiveness over the long term? By recognizing that this bill is an important step in the direction of answering these questions, then passing it and fully funding it.

Mr. President, the gentleman from South Carolina has long been a leader in bringing together business and government for the good of the American economy, particularly our manufacturing sector. Through his efforts, he created the National Institute for Standards and Technology and its new programs. I applaud his hard work and foresight and pledge to help him secure the passage of this bill.

It is also my hope that other related legislation will be enacted. A group of Senators with the effective support of the majority leader have for the last year been working on something we call the economic leadership strategy. Last year, we helped secure the passage of, and $1.6 billion in reallocated funding for, a variety of programs from improving education and job training programs to programs that will help defense firms begin to make products for the commercial market.

We hope to be even more successful this year in our efforts to fund the program that comprise the economic leadership strategy and the five critical areas that it covers: First, keeping the United States on the cutting edge of high technology and applied research; second, commercializing inventions to create quality U.S. jobs and products; third, improving manufacturing technology and extending those technologies to businesses across the United States; fourth, improving education and job training to ensure a highly skilled U.S. work force; and fifth, strengthening trade tools to open markets abroad.

The economic leadership strategy, including the legislation that Senator HOLLINGS is introducing today, can provide the foundation for increased economic growth for our Nation in years to come. The programs the legislation and the strategy support are the type of programs that can help American companies compete in a highly competitive global economy.

America must regain its lead in the civilian high tech industry. What is at stake here in both the national and economic security of our Nation, and the standard of living of our people. Government initiatives should not be dismissed as interference. They should be viewed as support for American competitiveness and a strong economy. By passing this legislation and other bills like it, we can better secure our Nation's economic future.●

● Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I am pleased to rise in support of S. 4, the National Competitiveness Act of 1993. This bill is an important step forward in strengthening the technological foundation upon which our Nation's international competitiveness is built. The provisions contained in this bill are especially important to reinvigorating our manufacturing base.

Manufacturing is the heart of our economy, it keeps the lifeblood of the economy flowing. Manufacturing is the key to maintaining middle-class jobs that are the backbone of our Nation—jobs that pay middle-class incomes with health care protection and pension benefits. These are the jobs we are losing. The number of manufacturing jobs, after growing on a fairly steady basis since the end of World War II, peaked in 1979. Since then, we have lost almost 3 million manufacturing jobs. In 1990, only 18 percent of the U.S. workforce was in manufacturing. In Japan, 24.1 percent work in manufacturing; in Germany the number is 31.5 percent.

This loss of jobs has resulted in a decline in earnings for working Americans. In 1989, the number of jobs in retail trade surpassed those in manufacturing. In retail trade, the average weekly gross earning is about $200. In manufacturing, it is about $470. The average real weekly earnings for production or non-supervisory workers peaked in 1972. By 1991, it had dropped by almost 20 percent, reaching the low-level since the 1950's.

The result of this trend in wages is frightening. After declining steadily since World War II, we are now seeing a dramatic increase in the proportion of full-time workers working for wages that put them below the poverty line. According to the Census Bureau, in 1990 14.4 million American workers with full-time jobs—18 percent of all full time workers—made less than $12,195.

To reverse this trend, we must increase manufacturing productivity. We need to increase the value-added of American production. Better products, produced more quickly and at lower cost is way of adding higher value. That means it's not just the number of cars per hour we produce that's important—it's how well those cars are as well. To move to this higher value-added production requires increasing the skills and knowledge of our workers. It also requires providing them with the best equipment and infrastructure possible. In essence, it means a shift to a strategy of creating high-skill, high-wage jobs rather than competing with low-skill, low-wage production.

Mr. President, this bill is a strong starting point for taking action to strengthen our Nation's technology and manufacturing base. Parts of this bill dealing with technology financing issues are of particular interest to the Banking Committee, which I chair. I look forward to working constructively with the sponsor of this bill with regard to these sections.

The creation of high-skill, high-wage jobs must be the central goal that drives our economic strategy for the future. High wage jobs increase the standard of living and increase investment, which in turn generates a new round of economic growth and even more jobs. This is the cycle of growth we need to restart. By addressing the critical areas of technology and manufacturing, this bill, the National Competitiveness Act of 1993, is an important step toward our economic renewal.●

S. 5. A bill to grant family and temporary medical leave under certain circumstances; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce S. 5, the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993. I have been joined in sponsoring this measure by Senators KENNEDY, MITCHELL, JEFFORDS, BOND, PACKWOOD, COATS, and more than three dozen other Senators.

Yesterday at noon, the 42nd President of the United States was sworn into office just a few steps from where we now gather in the Chamber. Today, we begin to illustrate the real meaning of this historic event as we embark on what promises to be the final chapter in a 7-year effort to establish a national leave policy for millions of working families. This is a time of great opportunity—to show the American people both in our words and our deeds—that Government can be a positive force in their lives.

Over the next few weeks, we will have the opportunity to respond in a tangible way to a real problem that real people face all over this Nation—the daily struggle to balance work and family responsibilities. We will have the opportunity to symbolize with concrete action the end of Government gridlock, and that Republicans and Democrats can work together for the common good. We will have the opportunity to show that as we begin to tackle the economic challenges of the 21st century, Government and business can invest in a real partnership to help make our citizens productive workers and good parents at the same time without being in conflict.

Mr. President, S. 5 embodies a simple and but critically important idea: short-term job security for working people in times of family or medical emergency. The bill we are introducing today is virtually identical to the conference report that was vetoed last year, with minor technical changes to facilitate administration and enforcement of the new law. S. 5 provides up to 12 weeks of unpaid, job-protected leave per year—with health insurance coverage—for the birth or adoption of a child, or the serious illness of an employee or an immediate family member. The bill exempts small businesses and covers only employers with 50 or more employees. In order to be eligible for leave, employees must have worked in excess of 1,200 hours over the previous 12 months and at least for 1 year for that employer. And medical certifications are required to prove that an employee must take leave in order to deal with a serious health condition.

Through 7 years of scrutiny, including passage twice I might add, by Congress in the last 3 years, we have amassed strong and convincing evidence that family leave is not only good for working families but, just as importantly, it makes good business sense as well. A 1991 study by the Small Business Administration concluded that "the net cost to employers of placing workers on leave is always substantially smaller than the cost of terminating an employee." A revised analysis of this study last year concluded that more than 300,000 people have lost their jobs since a similar bill was vetoed in 1990 because they had no job-guaranteed medical leave. This 1992 study also found that mid-size and large businesses would have saved nearly $500 million in unnecessary hiring and training costs for new workers had this legislation become law 3 years ago.

Let me emphasize, Mr. President: Those are not my calculations; those are calculations done by objective studies—one of them by the Small Business Administration, under the previous administration of President Bush—concluding that this legislation made good business sense, that people would have held on to jobs and business dollars would have been saved.

Individual companies report tremendous savings with leave policies already in place. The Aetna Life and Cas-uality Co. of my home State of Connecticut estimated last year that its family leave program saves them $2 million annually in reduced employee turnover and lower hiring and training costs.

AT&T has reported that the leave policy it established on itself saved it $15 million each year in replacement costs alone.

That is testimony from two rather large companies in this country that have adopted leave policies that have saved them millions of dollars.

So when the arguments are raised—as they surely will be—that this legislation is costly to business, I would urge my colleagues and others who may be interested in following this legislation to remember what business has said, businesses who have adopted leave policies, that this is a program that saves them dollars.

Mr. President, in many ways, the Family and Medical Leave Act embodies our commitment to tackle a critical set of challenges facing the American people and the new Congress that convenes today. It is a sound family policy that enables working people to deal with family emergencies without losing their jobs in the process.

It is a sound health care policy that guarantees insurance protection just when families need it the very most—during a family medical crisis. To lose your job and to lose health care coverage when your child is sick or your spouse is ill or a parent you are caring for is in trouble, to lose a job and lose the health care coverage, what more cruel set of facts could strike a family? So this legislation will do an awful lot just to save and protect good people who are trying to hold body and soul and family together at a time when they need it most.

It's a sound welfare policy that enables low-income single parents to raise their children and be productive, working members of society. It's a sound family planning policy that promotes adoption and provides real alternatives to abortion for women who must work and raise children at the same time. Perhaps most important, it's a sound economic policy that recognizes Government and business must work together to invest in both a productive work force and strong families as we move into the 21st century.

Mr. President, the Family and Medical Leave Act establishes a basic standard of human decency. That is what this 7-year-long struggle has been about, human decency—that is all this is—that every other industrialized nation in the world provides for its citizenry.

It represents a rare opportunity to fulfill both national goals and individual needs; a prudent expense today that is also a sound investment for tomorrow. The Family and Medical Leave Act is truly an idea, Mr. President, whose time has come.

Mr. President, I hope that our colleagues will provide the same strong sense of support they have in the past when this legislation reaches the floor of this body, that the other body will also move expeditiously, and that very shortly we can present to our new President, President Clinton, a Family and Medical Leave Act which he will be proud to sign into law.

It has been 7 long years. I do not think it was wasted time. We have learned a lot. We produced a good bill, Mr. President, because we have worked on it together, both sides of the aisle here, and I am confident that before the next few weeks or few months pass, we will have for the first time in this country family and medical leave legislation recognizing that working families today need to be able to be with their families during a time of crisis without losing their jobs. Holding onto the job you need and the family you love should not be in conflict unnecessarily, and we intend to correct that wrong with this legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of these remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 5

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993".

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents is as follows:

Sec. 1. Short title; table of contents.

Sec. 2. Findings and purposes.

TITLE I—GENERAL REQUIREMENTS FOR LEAVE

Sec. 101. Definitions.

Sec. 102. Leave requirement.

Sec. 103. Certification.

Sec. 104. Employment and benefits protection.

Sec. 105. Prohibited acts.

Sec. 106. Investigative authority.

Sec. 107. Enforcement.

Sec. 108. Special rules concerning employees of local educational agencies.

Sec. 109. Notice.

TITLE II—LEAVE FOR CIVIL SERVICE EMPLOYEES

Sec. 201. Leave requirement.

TITLE III—COMMISSION ON LEAVE

Sec. 301. Establishment.

Sec. 302. Duties.

Sec. 303. Membership.

Sec. 304. Compensation.

Sec. 305. Powers.

Sec. 306. Termination.

TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Sec. 401. Effect on other laws.

Sec. 402. Effect on existing employment benefits.

Sec. 403. Encouragement of more generous leave policies.

Sec. 404. Regulations.

Sec. 405. Effective dates.

TITLE V—COVERAGE OF CONGRESSIONAL EMPLOYEES

Sec. 501. Leave for certain Senate employees.

Sec. 502. Leave for certain congressional employees.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) the number of single-parent households and two-parent households in which the single parent or both parents work is increasing significantly;

(2) it is important for the development of children and the family unit that fathers and mothers be able to participate in early childrearing and the care of family members who have serious health conditions;

(3) the lack of employment policies to accommodate working parents can force individuals to choose between job security and parenting;

(4) there is inadequate job security for employees who have serious health conditions that prevent them from working for temporary periods;

(5) due to the nature of the roles of men and women in our society, the primary responsibility for family caretaking often falls on women, and such responsibility affects the working lives of women more than it affects the working lives of men; and

(6) employment standards that apply to one gender only have serious potential for encouraging employers to discriminate against employees and applicants for employment who are of that gender.

(b) PURPOSES.—It is the purpose of this Act—

(1) to balance the demands of the workplace with the needs of families, to promote the stability and economic security of families, and to promote national interests in preserving family integrity;

(2) to entitle employees to take reasonable leave for medical reasons, for the birth or adoption of a child, and for the care of a child, spouse, or parent who has a serious health condition;

(3) to accomplish the purposes described in paragraphs (1) and (2) in a manner that accommodates the legitimate interests of employers;

(4) to accomplish the purposes described in paragraphs (1) and (2) in a manner that, consistent with the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, minimizes the potential for employment discrimination on the basis of sex by ensuring generally that leave is available for eligible medical reasons (including maternity-related disability) and for compelling family reasons, on a gender-neutral basis; and

(5) to promote the goal of equal employment opportunity for women and men, pursuant to such clause.

TITLE I—GENERAL REQUIREMENTS FOR LEAVE

SEC. 101. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this title:

(1) COMMERCE.—The terms "commerce" and "industry or activity affecting commerce" mean any activity, business, or industry in commerce or in which a labor dispute would hinder or obstruct commerce or the free flow of commerce, and include "commerce" and any "industry affecting commerce", as defined in paragraphs (1) and (3) of section 501 of the Labor Management Relations Act, 1947 (29 U.S.C. 142 (1) and (3)).

(2) ELIGIBLE EMPLOYEE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "eligible employee" means an employee who has been employed—

(i) for at least 12 months by the employer with respect to whom leave is requested under section 102; and

(ii) for at least 1,250 hours of service with such employer during the previous 12-month period.

(B) EXCLUSIONS.—The term "eligible employee" does not include—

(i) any Federal officer or employee covered under subchapter V of chapter 63 of title 5, United States Code (as added by title II of this Act); or

(ii) any employee of an employer who is employed at a worksite at which such employer employs less than 50 employees if the total number of employees employed by that employer within 75 miles of that worksite is less than 50.

(C) DETERMINATION.—For purposes of determining whether an employee meets the hours of service requirement specified in subparagraph (A)(ii), the legal standards established under section 7 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 207) shall apply.

(3) EMPLOY; EMPLOYEE; STATE.—The terms "employ", "employee", and "State" have the same meanings given such terms in subsections (c), (e), and (g) of section 3 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203 (c), (e), and (g)).

(4) EMPLOYER.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "employer"—

(i) means any person engaged in commerce or in any industry or activity affecting commerce who employs 50 or more employees for each working day during each of 20 or more calendar workweeks in the current or preceding calendar year;

(ii) includes—

(i) any person who acts, directly or indirectly, in the interest of an employer to any of the employees of such employer; and

(ii) any successor in interest of an employer; and

(iii) includes any "public agency", as defined in section 3(x) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(x)).

(B) PUBLIC AGENCY.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)(iii), a public agency shall be considered to be a person engaged in commerce or in an industry or activity affecting commerce.

(5) EMPLOYMENT BENEFITS.—The term "employment benefits" means all benefits provided or made available to employees by an employer, including group life insurance, health insurance, disability insurance, sick leave, annual leave, educational benefits, and pensions, regardless of whether such benefits are provided by a practice or written policy of an employer or through an "employee benefit plan", as defined in section 3(3) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1002(3)).

(6) HEALTH CARE PROVIDER.—The term "health care provider" means—

(A) a doctor of medicine or osteopathy who is authorized to practice medicine or surgery (as appropriate) by the State in which the doctor practices; or

(B) any other person determined by the Secretary to be capable of providing health care services.

(7) PARENT.—The term "parent" means the biological parent of an employee or an individual who stood in loco parentis to an employee when the employee was a son or daughter.

(8) PERSON.—The term "person" has the same meaning given such term in section 3(a) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 203(a)).

(9) REDUCED LEAVE SCHEDULE.—The term "reduced leave schedule" means a leave schedule that reduces the usual number of hours per workweek, or hours per workday, of an employee.

(10) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Labor.

(11) SERIOUS HEALTH CONDITION.—The term "serious health condition" means an illness, injury, impairment, or physical or mental condition that involves—

(A) inpatient care in a hospital, hospice, or residential medical care facility; or

(B) continuing treatment by a health care provider.

(12) SON OR DAUGHTER.—The term "son or daughter" means a biological, adopted, or foster child, a stepchild, a legal ward, or a child of a person standing in loco parentis, who is—

(A) under 18 years of age; or

(B) 18 years of age or older and incapable of self-care because of a mental or physical disability.

SEC. 102. LEAVE REQUIREMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) ENTITLEMENT TO LEAVE.—Subject to section 103, an eligible employee shall be entitled to a total of 12 workweeks of leave during any 12-month period for one or more of the following:

(A) Because of the birth of a son or daughter of the employee and in order to care for such son or daughter.

(B) Because of the placement of a son or daughter with the employee for adoption or foster care.

(C) In order to care for the spouse, or a son, daughter, or parent, of the employee, if such spouse, son, daughter, or parent has a serious health condition.

(D) Because of a serious health condition that makes the employee unable to perform the functions of the position of such employee.

(2) EXPIRATION OF ENTITLEMENT.—The entitlement to leave under subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) for a birth or placement of a son or daughter shall expire at the end of the 12-month period beginning on the date of such birth or placement.

(b) LEAVE TAKEN INTERMITTENTLY OR ON A REDUCED LEAVE SCHEDULE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Leave under subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (1) shall not be taken by an employee intermittently or on a reduced leave schedule unless the employee and the employer of the employee agree otherwise. Subject to subparagraph (B), subsection (e)(2), and section 103(b)(5), leave under subparagraph (C) or (D) of paragraph (1) may be taken intermittently or on a reduced leave schedule when medically necessary. The taking of leave intermittently or on a reduced leave schedule pursuant to this paragraph shall not result in a reduction in the total amount of leave to which the employee is entitled under subsection (a) beyond the amount of leave actually taken.

(2) ALTERNATIVE POSITION.—If an employee requests intermittent leave, or leave on a reduced leave schedule, under subparagraph (C) or (D) of paragraph (1), that is foreseeable based on planned medical treatment, the employer may require such employee to transfer temporarily to an available alternative position offered by the employer for which the employee is qualified and that—

(A) has equivalent pay and benefits; and

(B) better accommodates recurring periods of leave than the regular employment position of the employee.

(c) UNPAID LEAVE PERMITTED.—Except as provided in subsection (d), leave granted under subsection (a) may consist of unpaid leave. Where an employee is otherwise exempt under regulations issued by the Secretary pursuant to section 13(a)(1) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C.

213(a)(1)), the compliance of an employer with this title by providing unpaid leave shall not affect the exempt status of the employee under such section.

(d) RELATIONSHIP TO PAID LEAVE.—

(1) UNPAID LEAVE.—If an employer provides paid leave for fewer than 12 workweeks, the additional weeks of leave necessary to attain the 12 workweeks of leave required under this title may be provided without compensation.

(2) SUBSTITUTION OF PAID LEAVE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—An eligible employee may elect, or an employer may require the employee, to substitute any of the accrued paid vacation leave, personal leave, or family leave of the employee for leave provided under subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) of subsection (a)(1) for any part of the 12-week period of such leave under such subsection.

(B) SERIOUS HEALTH CONDITION.—An eligible employee may elect, or an employer may require the employee, to substitute any of the accrued paid vacation leave, personal leave, or medical or sick leave of the employee for leave provided under subparagraph (C) or (D) of subsection (a)(1) for any part of the 12-week period of such leave under such subsection, except that nothing in this title shall require an employer to provide paid sick leave or paid medical leave in any situation in which such employer would not normally provide any such paid leave.

(e) FORESEEABLE LEAVE.—

(1) REQUIREMENT OF NOTICE.—In any case in which the necessity for leave under subparagraph (A) or (B) of subsection (a)(1) is foreseeable based on an expected birth or placement, the employee shall provide the employer with not less than 30 days' notice, before the date the leave is to begin, of the employee's intention to take leave under such subparagraph, except that if the date of the birth or placement requires leave to begin in less than 30 days, the employee shall provide such notice as is practicable.

(2) DUTIES OF EMPLOYEE.—In any case in which the necessity for leave under subparagraph (C) or (D) of subsection (a)(1) is foreseeable based on planned medical treatment, the employee—

(A) shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the treatment so as not to disrupt unduly the operations of the employer, subject to the approval of the health care provider of the employee or the health care provider of the son, daughter, spouse, or parent of the employee, as appropriate; and

(B) shall provide the employer with not less than 30 days' notice, before the date the leave is to begin, of the employee's intention to take leave under such subparagraph, except that if the date of the treatment requires leave to begin in less than 30 days, the employee shall provide such notice as is practicable.

(f) SPOUSES EMPLOYED BY THE SAME EMPLOYER.—In any case in which a husband and wife entitled to leave under subsection (a) are employed by the same employer, the aggregate number of workweeks of leave to which both may be entitled may be limited to 12 workweeks during any 12-month period, if such leave is taken—

(1) under subparagraph (A) or (B) of subsection (a)(1); or

(2) to care for a sick parent under subparagraph (C) of such subsection.

SEC. 103. CERTIFICATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—An employer may require that a request for leave under subparagraph (C) or (D) of section 102(a)(1) be supported by a certification issued by the health care provider of the eligible employee or of the son, daughter, spouse, or parent of the employee, as appropriate. The employee shall provide, in a timely manner, a copy of such certification to the employer.

(b) SUFFICIENT CERTIFICATION.—Certification provided under subsection (a) shall be sufficient if it states—

(1) the date on which the serious health condition commenced;

(2) the probable duration of the condition;

(3) the appropriate medical facts within the knowledge of the health care provider regarding the condition;

(4)(A) for purposes of leave under section 102(a)(1)(C), a statement that the eligible employee is needed to care for the son, daughter, spouse, or parent and an estimate of the amount of time that such employee is needed to care for the son, daughter, spouse, or parent; and

(B) for purposes of leave under section 102(a)(1)(D), a statement that the employee is unable to perform the functions of the position of the employee; and

(5) in the case of certification for intermittent leave for planned medical treatment, the dates on which such treatment is expected to be given and the duration of such treatment.

(c) SECOND OPINION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In any case in which the employer has reason to doubt the validity of the certification provided under subsection (a) for leave under subparagraph (C) or (D) of section 102(a)(1), the employer may require, at the expense of the employer, that the eligible employee obtain the opinion of a second health care provider designated or approved by the employer concerning any information certified under subsection (b) for such leave.

(2) LIMITATION.—A health care provider designated or approved under paragraph (1) shall not be employed on a regular basis by the employer.

(d) RESOLUTION OF CONFLICTING OPINIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In any case in which the second opinion described in subsection (c) differs from the opinion in the original certification provided under subsection (a), the employer may require, at the expense of the employer, that the employee obtain the opinion of a third health care provider designated or approved jointly by the employer and the employee concerning the information certified under subsection (b).

(2) FINALITY.—The opinion of the third health care provider concerning the information certified under subsection (b) shall be considered to be final and shall be binding on the employer and the employee.

(e) SUBSEQUENT RECERTIFICATION.—The employer may require that the eligible employee obtain subsequent recertifications on a reasonable basis.

SEC. 104. EMPLOYMENT AND BENEFITS PROTECTION.

(a) RESTORATION TO POSITION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (b), any eligible employee who takes leave under section 102 for the intended purpose of the leave shall be entitled, on return from such leave—

(A) to be restored by the employer to the position of employment held by the employee when the leave commenced; or

(B) to be restored to an equivalent position with equivalent employment benefits, pay, and other terms and conditions of employment.

(2) LOSS OF BENEFITS.—The taking of leave under section 102 shall not result in the loss of any employment benefit accrued prior to the date on which the leave commenced.

(3) LIMITATIONS.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to entitle any restored employee to—

(A) the accrual of any seniority or employment benefits during any period of leave; or
(B) any right, benefit, or position of employment other than any right, benefit, or position to which the employee would have been entitled had the employee not taken the leave.

(4) CERTIFICATION.—As a condition of restoration under paragraph (1) for an employee who has taken leave under section 102(a)(1)(D), the employer may have a uniformly applied practice or policy that requires each such employee to receive certification from the health care provider of the employee that the employee is able to resume work, except that nothing in this paragraph shall supersede a valid State or local law or a collective bargaining agreement that governs the return to work of such employees.

(5) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to prohibit an employer from requiring an employee on leave under section 102 to report periodically to the employer on the status and intention of the employee to return to work.

(b) EXEMPTION CONCERNING CERTAIN HIGHLY COMPENSATED EMPLOYEES.—

(1) DENIAL OF RESTORATION.—An employer may deny restoration under subsection (a) to any eligible employee described in paragraph (2) if—

(A) such denial is necessary to prevent substantial and grievous economic injury to the operations of the employer;

(B) the employer notifies the employee of the intent of the employer to deny restoration on such basis at the time the employer determines that such injury would occur; and

(C) in any case in which the leave has commenced, the employee elects not to return to employment after receiving such notice.

(2) AFFECTED EMPLOYEES.—An eligible employee described in paragraph (1) is a salaried eligible employee who is among the highest paid 10 percent of the employees employed by the employer within 75 miles of the facility at which the employee is employed.

(c) MAINTENANCE OF HEALTH BENEFITS.—

(1) COVERAGE.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), during any period that an eligible employee takes leave under section 102, the employer shall maintain coverage under any "group health plan" (as defined in section 5000(b)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) for the duration of such leave at the level and under the conditions coverage would have been provided if the employee had continued in employment continuously for the duration of such leave.

(2) FAILURE TO RETURN FROM LEAVE.—The employer may recover the premium that the employer paid for maintaining coverage for the employee under such group health plan during any period of unpaid leave under section 102 if—

(A) the employee fails to return from leave under section 102 after the period of leave to which the employee is entitled has expired; and

(B) the employee fails to return to work for a reason other than—

(i) the continuation, recurrence, or onset of a serious health condition that entitles the employee to leave under subparagraph (C) or (D) of section 102(a)(1); or

(ii) other circumstances beyond the control of the employee.

(3) CERTIFICATION.—

(A) ISSUANCE.—An employer may require that a claim that an employee is unable to return to work because of the continuation, recurrence, or onset of the serious health condition described in paragraph (2)(B)(i) be supported by—

(i) a certification issued by the health care provider of the son, daughter, spouse, or parent of the employee, as appropriate, in the case of an employee unable to return to work because of a condition specified in section 102(a)(1)(C); or

(ii) a certification issued by the health care provider of the eligible employee, in the case of an employee unable to return to work because of a condition specified in section 102(a)(1)(D).

(B) COPY.—The employee shall provide, in a timely manner, a copy of such certification to the employer.

(C) SUFFICIENCY OF CERTIFICATION.—

(i) LEAVE DUE TO SERIOUS HEALTH CONDITION OF EMPLOYEE.—The certification described in subparagraph (A)(i) shall be sufficient if the certification states that a serious health condition prevented the employee from being able to perform the functions of the position of the employee on the date that the leave of the employee expired.

(ii) LEAVE DUE TO SERIOUS HEALTH CONDITION OF FAMILY MEMBER.—The certification described in subparagraph (A)(ii) shall be sufficient if the certification states that the employee is needed to care for the son, daughter, spouse, or parent who has a serious health condition on the date that the leave of the employee expired.

SEC. 105. PROHIBITED ACTS.

(a) INTERFERENCE WITH RIGHTS.—

(1) EXERCISE OF RIGHTS.—It shall be unlawful for any employer to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of or the attempt to exercise, any right provided under this title.

(2) DISCRIMINATION.—It shall be unlawful for any employer to discharge or in any other manner discriminate against any individual for opposing any practice made unlawful by this title.

(b) INTERFERENCE WITH PROCEEDINGS OR INQUIRIES.—It shall be unlawful for any person to discharge or in any other manner discriminate against any individual because such individual—

(1) has filed any charge, or has instituted or caused to be instituted any proceeding, under or related to this title;

(2) has given, or is about to give, any information in connection with any inquiry or proceeding relating to any right provided under this title; or

(3) has testified, or is about to testify, in any inquiry or proceeding relating to any right provided under this title.

SEC. 106. INVESTIGATIVE AUTHORITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—To ensure compliance with the provisions of this title, or any regulation or order issued under this title, the Secretary shall have, subject to subsection (c), the investigative authority provided under section 11(a) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 211(a)).

(b) OBLIGATION TO KEEP AND PRESERVE RECORDS.—Any employer shall make, keep, and preserve records pertaining to compliance with this title in accordance with section 11(c) of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 211(c)) and in accordance with regulations issued by the Secretary.

(c) REQUIRED SUBMISSIONS GENERALLY LIMITED TO AN ANNUAL BASIS.—The Secretary shall not under the authority of this section require any employer or any plan, fund, or program to submit to the Secretary any books or records more than once during any 12-month period, unless the Secretary has reasonable cause to believe there may exist a violation of this title or any regulation or order issued pursuant to this title, or is investigating a charge pursuant to section 107(b).

(d) SUBPOENA POWERS.—For the purposes of any investigation provided for in this section, the Secretary shall have the subpoena authority provided for under section 9 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 209).

SEC. 107. ENFORCEMENT.

(a) CIVIL ACTION BY EMPLOYEES.—

(1) LIABILITY.—Any employer who violates section 105 shall be liable to any eligible employee affected—

(A) for damages equal to—

(i) the amount of—

(I) any wages, salary, employment benefits, or other compensation denied or lost to such employee by reason of the violation; or

(II) in a case in which wages, salary, employment benefits, or other compensation have not been denied or lost to the employee, any actual monetary losses sustained by the employee as a direct result of the violation, such as the cost of providing care, up to a sum equal to 12 weeks of wages or salary for the employee;

(ii) the interest on the amount described in clause (i) calculated at the prevailing rate; and

(iii) an additional amount as liquidated damages equal to the sum of the amount described in clause (i) and the interest described in clause (ii), except that if an employer who has violated section 105 proves to the satisfaction of the court that the act or omission which violated section 105 was in good faith and that the employer had reasonable grounds for believing that the act or omission was not a violation of section 105, such court may, in the discretion of the court, reduce the amount of the liability to the amount and interest determined under clauses (i) and (ii), respectively; and

(B) for such equitable relief as may be appropriate, including employment, reinstatement, and promotion.

(2) RIGHT OF ACTION.—An action to recover the damages or equitable relief prescribed in paragraph (1) may be maintained against any employer (including a public agency) in any Federal or State court of competent jurisdiction by any one or more employees for and in behalf of—

(A) the employees; or

(B) the employees and other employees similarly situated.

(3) FEES AND COSTS.—The court in such an action shall, in addition to any judgment awarded to the plaintiff, allow a reasonable attorney's fee, reasonable expert witness fees, and other costs of the action to be paid by the defendant.

(4) LIMITATIONS.—The right provided by paragraph (2) to bring an action by or on behalf of any employee shall terminate—

(A) on the filing of a complaint by the Secretary in an action under subsection (d) in which restraint is sought of any further delay in the payment of the amount described in paragraph (1)(A) to such employee by an employer responsible under paragraph (1) for the payment; or

(B) on the filing of a complaint by the Secretary in an action under subsection (b) in which a recovery is sought of the damages described in paragraph (1)(A) owing to an eligible employee by an employer liable under paragraph (1), unless the action described in subparagraph (A) or (B) is dismissed without prejudice on motion of the Secretary.

(b) ACTION BY THE SECRETARY.—

(1) ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION.—The Secretary shall receive, investigate, and attempt to resolve complaints of violations of section 105 in the same manner that the Secretary receives, investigates, and attempts to resolve complaints of violations of sections 6 and 7 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (29 U.S.C. 206 and 207).

(2) CIVIL ACTION.—The Secretary may bring an action in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover the damages described in subsection (a)(1)(A).

(3) SUMS RECOVERED.—Any sums recovered by the Secretary pursuant to paragraph (2) shall be held in a special deposit account and shall be paid, on order of the Secretary, directly to each employee affected. Any such sums not paid to an employee because of inability to do so within a period of 3 years shall be deposited into the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts.

(c) LIMITATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), an action may be brought under this section not later than 2 years after the date of the last event constituting the alleged violation for which the action is brought.

(2) WILLFUL VIOLATION.—In the case of such action brought for a willful violation of section 105, such action may be brought within 3 years of the date of the last event constituting the alleged violation for which such action is brought.

(3) COMMENCEMENT.—In determining when an action is commenced by the Secretary under this section for the purposes of this subsection, it shall be considered to be commenced on the date when the complaint is filed.

(d) ACTION FOR INJUNCTION BY SECRETARY.—The district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction, for cause shown, in an action brought by the Secretary—

(1) to restrain violations of section 105, including the restraint of any withholding of payment of wages, salary, employment benefits, or other compensation, plus interest, found by the court to be due to eligible employees; or

(2) to award such other equitable relief as may be appropriate, including employment, reinstatement, and promotion.

(e) SOLICITOR OF LABOR.—The Solicitor of Labor may appear for and represent the Secretary on any litigation brought under this section.

SEC. 108. SPECIAL RULES CONCERNING EMPLOYEES OF LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES.

(a) APPLICATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, the rights (including the rights under section 104, which shall extend throughout the period of leave of any employee under this section), remedies, and procedures under this title shall apply to—

(A) any "local educational agency" (as defined in section 1471(12) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 2891(12))) and an eligible employee of the agency; and

(B) any private elementary or secondary school and an eligible employee of the school.

(2) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of the application described in paragraph (1):

(A) ELIGIBLE EMPLOYEE.—The term "eligible employee" means an eligible employee of an agency or school described in paragraph (1).

(B) EMPLOYER.—The term "employer" means an agency or school described in paragraph (1).

(b) LEAVE DOES NOT VIOLATE CERTAIN OTHER FEDERAL LAWS.—A local educational agency and a private elementary or secondary school shall not be in violation of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1400 et seq.), section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 794), or title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000d et seq.), solely as a result of an eligible employee of such agency or school exercising the rights of such employee under this title.

(c) INTERMITTENT LEAVE FOR INSTRUCTIONAL EMPLOYEES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), in any case in which an eligible employee employed principally in an instructional capacity by any such educational agency or school requests leave under subparagraph (C) or (D) of section 102(a)(1) that is foreseeable based on planned medical treatment and the employee would be on leave for greater than 20 percent of the total number of working days in the period during which the leave would extend, the agency or school may require that such employee elect either—

(A) to take leave for periods of a particular duration, not to exceed the duration of the planned medical treatment; or

(B) to transfer temporarily to an available alternative position offered by the employer for which the employee is qualified, and that—

(i) has equivalent pay and benefits; and

(ii) better accommodates recurring periods of leave than the regular employment position of the employee.

(2) APPLICATION.—The elections described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) shall apply only with respect to an eligible employee who complies with section 102(e)(2).

(d) RULES APPLICABLE TO PERIODS NEAR THE CONCLUSION OF AN ACADEMIC TERM.—The following rules shall apply with respect to periods of leave near the conclusion of an academic term in the case of any eligible employee employed principally in an instructional capacity by any such educational agency or school:

(1) LEAVE MORE THAN 5 WEEKS PRIOR TO END OF TERM.—If the eligible employee begins leave under section 102 more than 5 weeks prior to the end of the academic term, the agency or school may require the employee to continue taking leave until the end of such term, if—

(A) the leave is of at least 3 weeks duration; and

(B) the return to employment would occur during the 3-week period before the end of such term.

(2) LEAVE LESS THAN 5 WEEKS PRIOR TO END OF TERM.—If the eligible employee begins leave under subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) of section 102(a)(1) during the period that commences 5 weeks prior to the end of the academic term, the agency or school may require the employee to continue taking leave until the end of such term, if—

(A) the leave is of greater than 2 weeks duration; and

(B) the return to employment would occur during the 2-week period before the end of such term.

(3) LEAVE LESS THAN 3 WEEKS PRIOR TO END OF TERM.—If the eligible employee begins leave under subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) of section 102(a)(1) during the period that commences 3 weeks prior to the end of the academic term and the duration of the leave is greater than 5 working days, the agency or school may require the employee to continue to take leave until the end of such term.

(e) RESTORATION TO EQUIVALENT EMPLOYMENT POSITION.—For purposes of determinations under section 104(a)(1)(B) (relating to the restoration of an eligible employee to an equivalent position), in the case of a local educational agency or a private elementary or secondary school, such determination shall be made on the basis of established school board policies and practices, private school policies and practices, and collective bargaining agreements.

(f) REDUCTION OF THE AMOUNT OF LIABILITY.—If a local educational agency or a private elementary or secondary school that has violated this title proves to the satisfaction of the court that the agency, school, or department had reasonable grounds for believing that the underlying act or omission was not a violation of this title, such court may, in the discretion of the court, reduce the amount of the liability provided for under section 107(a)(1)(A) to the amount and interest determined under clauses (i) and (ii), respectively, of such section.

SEC. 109. NOTICE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each employer shall post and keep posted, in conspicuous places on the premises of the employer where notices to employees and applicants for employment are customarily posted, a notice, to be prepared or approved by the Secretary, setting forth excerpts from, or summaries of, the pertinent provisions of this title and information pertaining to the filing of a charge.

(b) PENALTY.—Any employer that willfully violates this section may be assessed a civil money penalty not to exceed $100 for each separate offense.

TITLE II—LEAVE FOR CIVIL SERVICE EMPLOYEES

SEC. 201. LEAVE REQUIREMENT.

(a) CIVIL SERVICE EMPLOYEES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 63 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subchapter:

"SUBCHAPTER V—FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE

"§ 6381. Definitions

"For the purpose of this subchapter—

"(1) the term 'employee' means any individual who—

"(A) is an 'employee', as defined by section 6301(2), including any individual employed in a position referred to in clause (v) or (ix) of section 6301(2), but excluding any individual employed by the government of the District of Columbia and any individual employed on a temporary or intermittent basis; and

"(B) has completed at least 12 months of service as an employee (within the meaning of subparagraph (A));

"(2) the term 'health care provider' means—

"(A) a doctor of medicine or osteopathy who is authorized to practice medicine or surgery (as appropriate) by the State in which the doctor practices; and

"(B) any other person determined by the Director of the Office of Personnel Management to be capable of providing health care services;

"(3) the term 'parent' means the biological parent of an employee or an individual who stood in loco parentis to an employee when the employee was a son or daughter;

"(4) the term 'reduced leave schedule' means a leave schedule that reduces the usual number of hours per workweek, or hours per workday, of an employee;

"(5) the term 'serious health condition' means an illness, injury, impairment, or physical or mental condition that involves—

"(A) inpatient care in a hospital, hospice, or residential medical care facility; or

"(B) continuing treatment by a health care provider; and

"(6) the term 'son or daughter' means a biological, adopted, or foster child, a stepchild, a legal ward, or a child of a person standing in loco parentis, who is—

"(A) under 18 years of age; or

"(B) 18 years of age or older and incapable of self-care because of a mental or physical disability.

"§ 6382. Leave requirement

"(a)(1) Subject to section 6383, an employee shall be entitled to a total of 12 administrative workweeks of leave during any 12-month period for one or more of the following:

"(A) Because of the birth of a son or daughter of the employee and in order to care for such son or daughter.

"(B) Because of the placement of a son or daughter with the employee for adoption or foster care.

"(C) In order to care for the spouse, or a son, daughter, or parent, of the employee, if such spouse, son, daughter, or parent has a serious health condition.

"(D) Because of a serious health condition that makes the employee unable to perform the functions of the employee's position.

"(2) The entitlement to leave under subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (1) based on the birth or placement of a son or daughter shall expire at the end of the 12-month period beginning on the date of such birth or placement.

"(b)(1) Leave under subparagraph (A) or (B) of subsection (a)(1) shall not be taken by an employee intermittently or on a reduced leave schedule unless the employee and the employing agency of the employee agree otherwise. Subject to paragraph (2), subsection (e)(2), and section 6383(b)(5), leave under subparagraph (C) or (D) of subsection (a)(1) may be taken intermittently or on a reduced leave schedule when medically necessary. In the case of an employee who takes leave intermittently or on a reduced leave schedule pursuant to this paragraph, any hours of leave so taken by such employee shall be subtracted from the total amount of leave remaining available to such employee under subsection (a), for purposes of the 12-month period involved, on an hour-for-hour basis.

"(2) If an employee requests intermittent leave, or leave on a reduced leave schedule, under subparagraph (C) or (D) of subsection (a)(1), that is foreseeable based on planned medical treatment, the employing agency may require such employee to transfer temporarily to an available alternative position offered by the employing agency for which the employee is qualified and that—

"(A) has equivalent pay and benefits; and

"(B) better accommodates recurring periods of leave than the regular employment position of the employee.

"(c) Except as provided in subsection (d), leave granted under subsection (a) shall be leave without pay.

"(d) An employee may elect to substitute for leave under subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (D) of subsection (a)(1) any of the employee's accrued or accumulated annual or sick leave under subchapter I for any part of the 12-week period of leave under such subsection, except that nothing in this subchapter shall require an employing agency to provide paid sick leave in any situation in which such employing agency would not normally provide any such paid leave.

"(e)(1) In any case in which the necessity for leave under subparagraph (A) or (B) of subsection (a)(1) is foreseeable based on an expected birth or placement, the employee shall provide the employing agency with not less than 30 days' notice, before the date the leave is to begin, of the employee's intention to take leave under such subparagraph, except that if the date of the birth or placement requires leave to begin in less than 30 days, the employee shall provide such notice as is practicable.

"(2) In any case in which the necessity for leave under subparagraph (C) or (D) of subsection (a)(1) is foreseeable based on planned medical treatment, the employee—

"(A) shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the treatment so as not to disrupt unduly the operations of the employing agency, subject to the approval of the health care provider of the employee or the health care provider of the son, daughter, spouse, or parent of the employee, as appropriate; and

"(B) shall provide the employing agency with not less than 30 days' notice, before the date the leave is to begin, of the employee's intention to take leave under such subparagraph, except that if the date of the treatment requires leave to begin in less than 30 days, the employee shall provide such notice as is practicable.

"§ 6383. Certification

"(a) An employing agency may require that a request for leave under subparagraph (C) or (D) of section 6382(a)(1) be supported by certification issued by the health care provider of the employee or of the son, daughter, spouse, or parent of the employee, as appropriate. The employee shall provide, in a timely manner, a copy of such certification to the employing agency.

"(b) A certification provided under subsection (a) shall be sufficient if it states—

"(1) the date on which the serious health condition commenced;

"(2) the probable duration of the condition;

"(3) the appropriate medical facts within the knowledge of the health care provider regarding the condition;

"(4)(A) for purposes of leave under section 6382(a)(1)(C), a statement that the employee is needed to care for the son, daughter, spouse, or parent, and an estimate of the amount of time that such employee is needed to care for such son, daughter, spouse, or parent; and

"(B) for purposes of leave under section 6382(a)(1)(D), a statement that the employee is unable to perform the functions of the position of the employee; and

"(5) in the case of certification for intermittent leave for planned medical treatment, the dates on which such treatment is expected to be given and the duration of such treatment.

"(c)(1) In any case in which the employing agency has reason to doubt the validity of the certification provided under subsection (a) for leave under subparagraph (C) or (D) of section 6382(a)(1), the employing agency may require, at the expense of the agency, that the employee obtain the opinion of a second health care provider designated or approved by the employing agency concerning any information certified under subsection (b) for such leave.

"(2) Any health care provider designated or approved under paragraph (1) shall not be employed on a regular basis by the employing agency.

"(d)(1) In any case in which the second opinion described in subsection (c) differs from the original certification provided under subsection (a), the employing agency may require, at the expense of the agency, that the employee obtain the opinion of a third health care provider designated or approved jointly by the employing agency and the employee concerning the information certified under subsection (b).

"(2) The opinion of the third health care provider concerning the information certified under subsection (b) shall be considered to be final and shall be binding on the employing agency and the employee.

"(e) The employing agency may require, at the expense of the agency, that the employee obtain subsequent recertifications on a reasonable basis.

"§ 6384. Employment and benefits protection

"(a) Any employee who takes leave under section 6382 for the intended purpose of the leave shall be entitled, upon return from such leave—

"(1) to be restored by the employing agency to the position held by the employee when the leave commenced; or

"(2) to be restored to an equivalent position with equivalent benefits, pay, status, and other terms and conditions of employment.

"(b) The taking of leave under section 6382 shall not result in the loss of any employment benefit accrued prior to the date on which the leave commenced.

"(c) Except as otherwise provided by or under law, nothing in this section shall be construed to entitle any restored employee to—

"(1) the accrual of any employment benefits during any period of leave; or

"(2) any right, benefit, or position of employment other than any right, benefit, or position to which the employee would have been entitled had the employee not taken the leave.

"(d) As a condition to restoration under subsection (a) for an employee who takes leave under section 6382(a)(1)(D), the employing agency may have a uniformly applied practice or policy that requires each such employee to receive certification from the health care provider of the employee that the employee is able to resume work.

"(e) Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit an employing agency from requiring an employee on leave under section 6382 to report periodically to the employing agency on the status and intention of the employee to return to work.

"§ 6385. Prohibition of coercion

"(a) An employee shall not directly or indirectly intimidate, threaten, or coerce, or attempt to intimidate, threaten, or coerce, any other employee for the purpose of interfering with the exercise of any rights which such other employee may have under this subchapter.

"(b) For the purpose of this section—

"(1) the term 'intimidate, threaten, or coerce' includes promising to confer or conferring any benefit (such as appointment, promotion, or compensation), or taking or threatening to take any reprisal (such as deprivation of appointment, promotion, or compensation); and

"(2) the term 'employee' means any 'employee', as defined by section 2105.

"§ 6386. Health insurance

"An employee enrolled in a health benefits plan under chapter 89 who is placed in a leave status under section 6382 may elect to continue the health benefits enrollment of the employee while in such leave status and arrange to pay currently into the Employees Health Benefits Fund (described in section 8909), the appropriate employee contributions.

"§ 6387. Regulations

"The Office of Personnel Management shall prescribe regulations necessary for the administration of this subchapter. The regulations prescribed under this subchapter shall, to the extent appropriate, be consistent with the regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Labor under title I of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993."

(2) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents for chapter 63 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SUBCHAPTER V—FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE

"6381. Definitions.

"6382. Leave requirement.

"6383. Certification.

"6384. Employment and benefits protection.

"6385. Prohibition of coercion.

"6386. Health insurance.

"6387. Regulations."

(b) EMPLOYEES PAID FROM NONAPPROPRIATED FUNDS.—Section 2105(c)(1) of title 5, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (C); and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(E) subchapter V of chapter 63, which shall be applied so as to construe references to benefit programs to refer to applicable programs for employees paid from nonappropriated funds; or"

TITLE III—COMMISSION ON LEAVE

SEC. 301. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established a commission to be known as the Commission on Leave (referred to in this title as the "Commission").

SEC. 302. DUTIES.

The Commission shall—

(1) conduct a comprehensive study of—

(A) existing and proposed policies relating to leave;

(B) the potential costs, benefits, and impact on productivity of such policies on employers; and

(C) alternative and equivalent State enforcement of title I of this Act with respect to employees described in section 108(a); and

(2) not later than 2 years after the date on which the Commission first meets, prepare and submit, to the appropriate Committees of Congress, a report concerning the subjects listed in paragraph (1).

SEC. 303. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) COMPOSITION.—

(1) APPOINTMENTS.—The Commission shall be composed of 12 voting members and 2 ex officio members to be appointed not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act as follows:

(A) SENATORS.—One Senator shall be appointed by the Majority Leader of the Senate, and one Senator shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the Senate.

(B) MEMBERS OF HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.—One Member of the House of Representatives shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and one Member of the House of Representatives shall be appointed by the Minority Leader of the House of Representatives.

(C) ADDITIONAL MEMBERS.—

(i) APPOINTMENT.—Two Members each shall be appointed by—

(I) the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

(II) the Majority Leader of the Senate;

(III) the Minority Leader of the House of Representatives; and

(IV) the Minority Leader of the Senate.

(ii) EXPERTISE.—Such members shall be appointed by virtue of demonstrated expertise in relevant family, temporary disability, and labor-management issues and shall include representatives of employers.

(2) EX OFFICIO MEMBERS.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Secretary of Labor shall serve on the Commission as nonvoting ex officio members.

(b) VACANCIES.—Any vacancy on the Commission shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made. The vacancy shall not affect the power of the remaining members to execute the duties of the Commission.

(c) CHAIRPERSON AND VICE CHAIRPERSON.—The Commission shall elect a chairperson and a vice chairperson from among the members of the Commission.

(d) QUORUM.—Eight members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum for all purposes, except that a lesser number may constitute a quorum for the purpose of holding hearings.

SEC. 304. COMPENSATION.

(a) PAY.—Members of the Commission shall serve without compensation.

(b) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—Members of the Commission shall be allowed reasonable travel expenses, including a per diem allowance, in accordance with section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, when performing duties of the Commission.

SEC. 305. POWERS.

(a) MEETINGS.—The Commission shall first meet not later than 30 days after the date on which all members are appointed, and the Commission shall meet thereafter on the call of the chairperson or a majority of the members.

(b) HEARINGS AND SESSIONS.—The Commission may hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence as the Commission considers appropriate. The Commission may administer oaths or affirmations to witnesses appearing before it.

(c) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—The Commission may secure directly from any Federal agency information necessary to enable it to carry out this title, if the information may be disclosed under section 552 of title 5, United States Code. Subject to the previous sentence, on the request of the chairperson or vice chairperson of the Commission, the head of such agency shall furnish such information to the Commission.

(d) USE OF FACILITIES AND SERVICES.—Upon the request of the Commission, the head of any Federal agency may make available to the Commission any of the facilities and services of such agency.

(e) PERSONNEL FROM OTHER AGENCIES.—On the request of the Commission, the head of any Federal agency may detail any of the personnel of such agency to serve as an Executive Director of the Commission or assist the Commission in carrying out the duties of the Commission. Any detail shall not interrupt or otherwise affect the civil service status or privileges of the Federal employee.

(f) VOLUNTARY SERVICE.—Notwithstanding section 1342 of title 31, United States Code, the chairperson of the Commission may accept for the Commission voluntary services provided by a member of the Commission.

SEC. 306. TERMINATION.

The Commission shall terminate 30 days after the date of the submission of the report of the Commission to Congress.

TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

SEC. 401. EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS.

(a) FEDERAL AND STATE ANTIDISCRIMINATION LAWS.—Nothing in this Act or any amendment made by this Act shall be construed to modify or affect any Federal or State law prohibiting discrimination on the basis of race, religion, color, national origin, sex, age, or disability.

(b) STATE AND LOCAL LAWS.—Nothing in this Act or any amendment made by this Act shall be construed to supersede any provision of any State or local law that provides greater family or medical leave rights than the rights established under this Act or any amendment made by this Act.

SEC. 402. EFFECT ON EXISTING EMPLOYMENT BENEFITS.

(a) MORE PROTECTIVE.—Nothing in this Act or any amendment made by this Act shall be construed to diminish the obligation of an employer to comply with any collective bargaining agreement or any employment benefit program or plan that provides greater family or medical leave rights to employees than the rights established under this Act or any amendment made by this Act.

(b) LESS PROTECTIVE.—The rights established for employees under this Act or any amendment made by this Act shall not be diminished by any collective bargaining agreement or any employment benefit program or plan.

SEC. 403. ENCOURAGEMENT OF MORE GENEROUS LEAVE POLICIES.

Nothing in this Act or any amendment made by this Act shall be construed to discourage employers from adopting or retaining leave policies more generous than any policies that comply with the requirements under this Act or any amendment made by this Act.

SEC. 404. REGULATIONS.

The Secretary of Labor shall prescribe such regulations as are necessary to carry out title I and this title not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 405. EFFECTIVE DATES.

(a) TITLE III.—Title III shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) OTHER TITLES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), titles I, II, and V and this title shall take effect 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) COLLECTIVE BARGAINING AGREEMENTS.—In the case of a collective bargaining agreement in effect on the effective date prescribed by paragraph (1), title I shall apply on the earlier of—

(A) the date of the termination of such agreement; or

(B) the date that occurs 12 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

TITLE V—COVERAGE OF CONGRESSIONAL EMPLOYEES

SEC. 501. LEAVE FOR CERTAIN SENATE EMPLOYEES.

(a) COVERAGE.—The rights and protections established under sections 101 through 105 shall apply with respect to a Senate employee and an employing office. For purposes of such application, the term "eligible employee" means a Senate employee and the term "employer" means an employing office.

(b) CONSIDERATION OF ALLEGATIONS.—

(1) APPLICABLE PROVISIONS.—The provisions of sections 304 through 313 of the Government Employee Rights Act of 1991 (2 U.S.C. 1204-1213) shall, except as provided in subsections (d) and (e)—

(A) apply with respect to an allegation of a violation of a provision of sections 101 through 105, with respect to Senate employment of a Senate employee; and

(B) apply to such an allegation in the same manner and to the same extent as such sections of the Government Employee Rights Act of 1991 apply with respect to an allegation of a violation under such Act.

(2) ENTITY.—Such an allegation shall be addressed by the Office of Senate Fair Employment Practices or such other entity as the Senate may designate.

(c) RIGHTS OF EMPLOYEES.—The Office of Senate Fair Employment Practices shall ensure that Senate employees are informed of their rights under sections 101 through 105.

(d) LIMITATIONS.—A request for counseling under section 305 of such Act by a Senate employee alleging a violation of a provision of sections 101 through 105 shall be made not later than 2 years after the date of the last event constituting the alleged violation for which the counseling is requested, or not later than 3 years after such date in the case of a willful violation of section 105.

(e) APPLICABLE REMEDIES.—The remedies applicable to individuals who demonstrate a violation of a provision of sections 101 through 105 shall be such remedies as would be appropriate if awarded under paragraph (1) or (3) of section 107(a).

(f) EXERCISE OF RULEMAKING POWER.—The provisions of subsections (b), (c), (d), and (e), except as such subsections apply with respect to section 309 of the Government Employee Rights Act of 1991 (2 U.S.C. 1209), are enacted by the Senate as an exercise of the rulemaking power of the Senate, with full recognition of the right of the Senate to change its rules, in the same manner, and to the same extent, as in the case of any other rule of the Senate. No Senate employee may commence a judicial proceeding with respect to an allegation described in subsection (b)(1), except as provided in this section.

(g) SEVERABILITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if any provision of section 309 of the Government Employee Rights Act of 1991 (2 U.S.C. 1209), or of subsection (b)(1) insofar as it applies such section 309 to an allegation described in subsection (b)(1)(A), is invalidated, both such section 309, and subsection (b)(1) insofar as it applies such section 309 to such an allegation, shall have no force and effect, and shall be considered to be invalidated for purposes of section 322 of such Act (2 U.S.C. 1221).

(h) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section:

(1) EMPLOYING OFFICE.—The term "employing office" means the office with the final authority described in section 301(2) of such Act (2 U.S.C. 1201(2)).

(2) SENATE EMPLOYEE.—The term "Senate employee" means an employee described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of section 301(c)(1) of such Act (2 U.S.C. 1201(c)(1)) who has been employed for at least 12 months on other than a temporary or intermittent basis by any employing office.

SEC. 502. LEAVE FOR CERTAIN CONGRESSIONAL EMPLOYEES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The rights and protections under sections 102 through 105 (other than section 104(b)) shall apply to any employee in an employment position and any employing authority of the House of Representatives.

(b) ADMINISTRATION.—In the administration of this section, the remedies and procedures under the Fair Employment Practices Resolution shall be applied.

(c) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term "Fair Employment Practices Resolution" means the resolution in rule LI of the Rules of the House of Representatives.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, today, Senator DODD and I are introducing S. 5, the Family and Medical Leave Act. The time for enacting this legislation is long overdue. For too long, the working men and women of our Nation have been living with the fear that they can easily lose their jobs when they fulfill their family obligations. Today, the new spirit of cooperation between the Congress and President Clinton means that family and medical leave will at last be signed into law.

The Family and Medical Leave Act is essential social justice and sound economic policy. It is good for business, and good for the working families of America, and it will achieve substantial savings for businesses and taxpayers. Taxpayers spend over $4 billion a year for welfare, unemployment compensation, food stamps, and Medicaid to support workers who have lost their jobs due to the lack of medical leave. It is more expensive for companies to terminate a worker and hire and train a new employee than it is to provide unpaid family and medical leave. Successful businesses provide such leave because they know it means higher employee morale, a more experienced work force and a more profitable company.

Balancing work and family commitments is a serious issue for all working Americans and their families. Enactment of this bill will provide desperately needed leave to the growing number of working men and women who must care for their sick children or elderly parents, or who are sick themselves. The Family and Medical Leave Act will finally guarantee that millions of American workers will no longer be forced to make the impossible choice between the job they need and the family they love. I urge swift passage of this legislation.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I rise as original cosponsor of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993. I want to commend Senator DODD for his steadfast leadership on this critical issue for working families.

This legislation should have been signed into law years ago. But regrettably, President Bush vetoed it on two occasions. I now look forward to its swift enactment under the leadership of President Clinton.

In the past two decades we have witnessed profound changes in the American working family. Today, most American families cannot survive on just one income. Both parents have to work just to put food on the table and a roof over their heads.

The business community prefers voluntary leave to mandatory leave. But the reality is that most of corporate America has not responded to this revolutionary change. Even in the biggest companies, only half of all the working mothers have adequate maternity leave. Roughly a third of American businesses provide no sick leave at all. And only 14 percent of American businesses provide spousal or elder care leave.

Workers are all too often faced with an agonizing choice between their job and their family. No worker should lose a job because he or she needs to take a few days or a few weeks off to care for a newborn infant, a sick child, or a dying parent or spouse.

And let's not kid ourselves—it is low-income workers who are most likely to have no leave. It is low-income families who are most dependent on two wage-earners. And it is they who stand to lose the most when they lose a job because they have to care for a sick family member.

The business community's opposition to this legislation is absurd. First, let's remember, this bill provides only unpaid leave. In a study of States that already require family and medical leave, 91 percent of employers said the requirements were not difficult to implement.

And under the bill's small business exemption, 95 percent of the businesses in this country would not even be covered, leaving over 60 percent of the work force unprotected. This bill ought to protect all workers, not just an arbitrary fraction. But I recognize that compromise is part of the legislative process.

Mr. President, this pro-family legislation is a matter of basic human decency. Over 70 percent of Americans support it, as do most of the Members of this body. I urge the Senate to move swiftly to enact this legislation and forward it to President Clinton for his signature.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my distinguished colleague Senator DODD as an original cosponsor of the Family and Medical Leave Act.

I was a proud sponsor of Wisconsin's family and medical leave law which has been in effect since 1988, and hope this year we will be able to create the same pro-family atmosphere for working families across the Nation.

Indeed, we are the only industrialized country that does not have a uniform policy determining family and medical leave benefits. Both the 101st and 102d Congress passed legislation establishing family and medical leave policies, and in both instances those bills were vetoed.

Now we face a fresh opportunity to assist working families. The Family and Medical Leave Act is a reasonable response to the changing needs of our work force. With more single-parent families, and more families where both parents work, caring for a sick child or parent poses special challenges. These challenges should not be compounded by fear of losing one's job.

Throughout the committee action and debate of the last two Congresses, I believe a very workable bill has been crafted. The Family and Medical Leave Act would require employers with more than 50 employees to provide up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave yearly. Coverage includes caring for a newborn or newly adopted child, caring for a seriously ill child, parent or spouse, or the employee's own serious illness. The bill would require continued health insurance, and reinstatement in the same or similar job at the end of leave. Accrued paid leave could be substituted.

Despite warnings raised during legislative debate on the Wisconsin law about the potential harmful effects on the State's business, Wisconsin's economy has continued to outperform many other States with no such law. In fact, by the end of the legislative debate on the issue, the bill was endorsed by the largest business lobby in our State, and was signed by Republican Gov. Tommy Thompson.

At the Federal level as well, this has become a bipartisan issue. Both Republicans and Democrats realize that a parent who is distracted by thoughts of a sick child at home, is not the most productive employee. They also realize that the failure to provide family or medical leave presents other hardships for employees striving to balance the needs of their families with the demands of their jobs.

For instance, as our elderly population grows, more and more adults contribute to the care of both their children and their parents while working full-time. Striving to keep parents in their own homes and relatively independent provides a real benefit to society as well as the family structure and should not be punished by loss of a job. Both our society and our families have undergone substantial change, our family leave policies must also change.

I join my colleagues in seeking swift passage of this important family values legislation.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I once again join the Senator from Connecticut and many of my other colleagues in introducing family and medical leave legislation. S. 5, the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, is almost identical to legislation that has already been passed by the Congress and vetoed twice by President Bush.

There is a real difference this year. For the first time since the bill's introduction over 7 years ago, we have a President who will not only sign this bill, but who actively supports this legislation and recognizes its value to families across the Nation.

As you know, Mr. President, the family and medical leave bill has existed in a variety of forms since it was first introduced. But it has consistently offered us the opportunity to address what are certain well-documented needs of many American families. Today's work force includes a majority of both men and women; and about 25 percent of all households are headed by single parents. In many homes in America today, there is simply no one family member who can address urgent family needs without risking the loss of his or her job.

Mr. President, we have discussed the many benefits, and even the possible problems, of a national family and medical leave law for many years now. Such a law has existed for some years in my own State of Rhode Island and is working quite well. I do not think we need to revisit all these issues again. The American people have made it clear that they want a family and medical leave law. Many responsible and profitable corporations have enacted such policies with great success, and numerous States have adopted or are considering such laws.

It is clear that the people of this Nation are quite ready to move forward. We have elected a new President, we have many new Members of Congress, and we have reached a strong bipartisan consensus on the need for prompt enactment of family and medical leave legislation. Let us take the best possible first step in this era of change and send a family and medical leave law to President Clinton as soon as we can.

• Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I congratulate my friend from Connecticut, Senator DODD, on nearing completion of the long journey he has had with the family leave bill. We know that the question for family leave is no longer whether or not, but when.

The bill we are introducing today is nearly identical to our amendment which passed the Senate overwhelmingly in October 1991 and which was sent to the President last September. The bill provides up to 12 weeks unpaid leave per covered employee per year for the birth or adoption of a child or for family medical emergencies. Workers do not now have this basic job protection, and evidence suggests that many, many people need it.

Over these past few years we have heard many people discussing the family, family values and how we must strengthen the family. As one who believes that for too long Government has ignored the importance of families, or worse yet created policies more likely to break them up than keep them together, I welcome this discussion.

Many of the problems facing society today can be attributed to the weakening of the American family. Drugs, violence, crime, declining educational performance, and poverty can be traced back to an empty childhood or a shattered family. There is a great need to strengthen the American family by reinforcing the tie and sense of responsibility between parents and children.

Of all the efforts and initiatives that I have been involved in since coming to the Senate, none have been more important to me than my efforts in the area of family preservation and children's issues.

Thus for the past several years, working with organizations in Missouri as well as other interested individuals I have been actively pushing a series of reforms and new policies designed for the sole purpose of keeping families together.

I believe that programs to help children and families are long-term investments by today's generation that will brighten the future of our Nation.

I believe that our solutions should be preventive rather than reactive. We must address the root causes of problems rather than simply applying Band-Aids to deep cuts.

America's children hold the key to our long-term prosperity. They will lead America in the years to come and affect the progress of our country. The motivation and the capacity to learn start with from birth and need constant attention. Parental involvement in the lives of their young children is the single most important factor ensuring the children's long-term success. So as Government leaders and as employers we must make policy decisions that help parents counteract the trends of having too little time and extended family separation, or too few resources to make stable family life possible.

In particular I believe we should address the foster care crisis, lack of child immunization, lack of parent education and early childhood education, and the infant mortality crisis in this Congress. I have specific legislative proposals in each of these areas and in some cases, have devoted my entire career to solving those problems.

But while all these efforts are important I believe the single most important step we can take to help all families in America is to try to reestablish individual and family responsibility. And to do that, we as a society need to make family obligation something we encourage rather than discourage. That's why I believe we should enact the Family and Medical Leave Act.

As a society we should never force a parent to choose between a sick child and his or her job.

We should never force a parent to choose between caring for an aged parent and a job.

And we should never force a mother to leave her newborn days after its birth in order to stay employed.

That is why I developed the compromise we passed overwhelmingly in 1991 and in 1992; that is why I will continue to urge Senators of both political parties to support it. Mr. President, some feel this issue is about mandates. I believe it is simply job protection at a time when it is needed most in a family. As a society we must begin to place a higher value on parenting and family obligation.

The workplace of the nineties cannot live by the rules of the 1950's. The fact is that more mothers of young children, even infants, work outside the home than ever before. In 1988, married women with young children comprised the majority of new entrants into the labor force. More than half of women with young infants return to work outside the home within a year of their child's birth. And contrary to what some may have you believe, it is not necessarily out of choice—it simply takes two incomes to pay the bills.

To prove my point: We know that more than two-thirds of women in the work force today are either single parents or have husbands who earn less than $18,000 per year. The fact is a family of three or four cannot live comfortably on under $18,000 per year in most parts of this country. Surveys show us that many married couples would choose to have one person stay home full time if money were not an object, but it is.

So what happens when a family faces an emergency, an illness, or unexpected chance to adopt, but both partners work? Well, they had better hope they have an understanding employer.

A 1990 Bureau of Labor statistics found that only 37 percent of female employees have any type of maternity leave. And of the fortune 1,500 companies, where one might expect the best coverage of workers, only half offered parental leave beyond the standard 6-week maternity as disability period.

Paternity leave is extremely scarce. Only 18 percent of fathers at medium and large firms are covered by unpaid paternity leave.

According to the Chamber of Commerce, 82 percent of employers provide no leave to care for sick children.

And if an employee is sick himself or herself, there is a good chance that he or she works for a company that does not even provide sick leave.

That is why this bill is vital. During that unforeseen family emergency, we want our Nation's parents to think about their families' well-being, and not worry about whether their jobs will be there when their youngsters get out of the hospital.

Mr. President, I have thought long and hard about these issues, and I believe the compromise developed with Senator DODD 2 years ago which we are reintroducing today is important, necessary, and should be signed into law.

I do not take lightly criticism I have received from the business community about this bill. Some have characterized family leave as a mandated benefit and have accused me of disregarding the impact on jobs. I view the family leave bill, based on the compromise we reached 2 years ago, as a basic job protection for workers who most need it. We have made improvements to the bill in response to legitimate business concerns about the potential for abuse of leave. In addition, we have told the employee that he or she bears some responsibility in notifying employers of plans for leave, and must also provide documentation to ensure that the leave is necessary.

It is in the interest of all of us—of any political party or no political party—to keep families strong. We have a unique opportunity to forge a bipartisan consensus on children and family issues in this Congress. We will enact a family leave law this year with full congressional support. Our bipartisan efforts on behalf of family leave can serve as a model of what we can accomplish on other efforts to help children and families—specifically the parents as teachers program and reform of the child welfare system. We must take a bipartisan approach to ensure that the 103d will become the children's Congress.

This can be the Congress that does something for kids. The American family is the very foundation of our society, yet if anything, Government policy seems oftentimes to burden families, or ignore them. American families are overtaxed, and the reality of living in the 1990's is that parents don't spend enough time with their kids. Working parents can't be sure that their children are being properly cared for while they are at work. Times are tough for family life, and even tougher for poor families. When families are stressed, it's the kids who suffer most.

In the over 20 years I have worked on children and family issues, I have never suggested that Government should step in and solve all family problems. In fact, we should remember as we're tempted to do this and that for kids over the next few years, that parents know better than anyone, including all 535 Members of Congress, what is best for their own children.

But our policy decisions as Government leaders and as employers must help parents counteract the trends of having too little time and extended family separation, or too few resources to make stable family life possible.

So we begin by introducing the Family and Medical Leave Act. We can work together to pass this legislation but it will again take bipartisan support.

During this Congress, with the help of the new President we will have the opportunity to follow up on many of the good recommendations of the National Commission on Children, the Children's Defense Fund, the Child Welfare League and others who make it their business to make life better for our next generation. While I do not agree with all of the recommendations of these groups, I believe the basic premise is right on target: We should develop policies that make it possible for parents to fulfill the economic and child-rearing responsibilities they have to their children. I believe that preservation of America's families is the most critical challenge we face as individuals and as a nation as we move into the 21st century.●

● Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I am pleased to join as a cosponsor of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993. I have supported family leave legislation for 8 years, and I am delighted that this bill is a top priority for both the 103d Congress and the new administration.

The past quarter century has seen dramatic changes in the make-up of the Nation's work force. Women have entered the work force in record numbers, in fact about two-thirds of all women with children work full time. One-quarter of all children are being raised by single parents. And in 9 out of 10 two-parent families, both parents work outside the home—usually out of economic necessity. For most Americans it takes two incomes just to make ends meet.

The Family and Medical Leave Act would provide employees with 12 weeks of job security in the event that a worker must take leave to care for a newborn, a sick child, or an ailing parent. It would ease the fears of employees who fear dismissal if they take unpaid leave due to a family emergency. In short, it is a good bill that responds to the changing needs of the American family and the American worker.

I believe that the time has come for a strong Federal law in support of family leave policies. No father should be forced to choose between caring for a sick child and his job. No mother should fear that she will be fired from her job—and lose her health insurance—because she needs to take a few unpaid weeks of leave to stay home with her newborn. Working men and women should not have to give up their job security to care for a failing elderly parent.

This bill retains essentially the same form as the family and medical leave bill of the 102d Congress. Accordingly, it recognizes the stiff economic challenges confronting the Nation's small business community—as a result, businesses with fewer than 50 employees are exempt from the act. In addition, it limits employee eligibility to those individuals who have worked 1,250 hours, or an average of 25 hours per week, over the previous 12 months. The bill is also designed to prevent abuses by requiring employees to repay health insurance premiums if that employee does not return to work at the end of his or her absence from the work force. These are important provisions that balance the needs of working families with the legitimate concerns of the Nation's business community.

The family and medical leave bill of 1993 is the product of years of debate, compromise, and revision. I look forward to speedy Senate action on this bill, and I am hopeful that this bill will be enacted into law as quickly as possible.●

● Mr. PACKWOOD. Mr. President, I am pleased to again be an original cosponsor of the Family and Medical Leave Act for what I hope will be its last introduction in Congress.

The concept of family and medical leave, which originated as legislation back in 1985, has never seemed to me a radical idea. It is common sense that workers need and deserve certain basic benefits, not as a matter of largess by employers but because people are more productive when they can count on, for instance, a living wage, health insurance, safe work environments, and all the other things we as a nation have adopted as good policy. It is not a far jump to also consider the plight of a breadwinner—or cobreadwinner in the case of a two-earner family—who has a new baby, or an aging parent with a serious medical problem. That worker's presence in the home for the time it takes to get the family through the situation will make a difference not only in the worker's peace of mind during the crisis, but in her or his ability to do their job well for months and years after they return to work.

Mr. President, as much as I have been proud and pleased to support family and medical leave legislation for the past several years, I will be even more happy to see this bill with a public law number assigned to it. Those Members or Congress and organizations who have put in yeomans' service in this effort can then move on to other pressing issues facing American families. Thank you, Mr. President.●

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, it has been a long difficult fight, but today we stand a few short steps from victory. We now have a Congress that will pass the Family and Medical Leave Act and a President who has agreed to sign it into law. I am proud to be an original cosponsor of this legislation.

The Family and Medical Leave Act, which provides families with job security at a time when they most need it, is long overdue. No worker should be subject to termination for taking time off to care for a sick child. I believe that not only will this bill institute more humane workplace policies, it will make workers more productive by eliminating the prospect that they would leave to choose between their families and their jobs.

I urge my colleagues to join me in working for fast action on the Family and Medical Leave Act.

By Mr. DOLE (for himself, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. SIMPSON, Mr. MCCAIN, Mr. SPECTER, and Mr. COVERDELL):

S. 6. A bill to prevent and punish sexual violence and domestic violence, to assist and protect the victims of such crimes, to assist State and local efforts, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SEXUAL ASSAULT PREVENTION ACT OF 1993

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as I stated earlier, I am joined today by several of my Republican colleagues in introducing the Sexual Assault Prevention Act of 1993.

As is my right as Republican leader, I have asked that this bill be designated as "S. 6," symbolizing the fact that this bill is a top priority of Senate Republicans. This legislation is also being introduced in the House by Congresswoman SUSAN MOLINARI of New York.

I first introduced legislation similar to S. 6 in February of 1991—nearly 2 years ago. I reintroduced the legislation last fall. I know that Senator BIDEN is also very interested in this issue, and hope we can work together to write legislation that will protect women from crime in the streets and crime in their own home.

The bill contains three titles. Title I is concerned with violent sex crimes. Subtitle A of title I increases penalties for sexual violence and strengthens the rights and remedies available to victims of sexual violence.

Subtitle B contains changes in rules of evidence, practice, and procedure to facilitate effective prosecution of violent sex offenders, and to prevent abuse of victims and increase the rights of victims.

Subtitle C addresses the problem of sexual assaults at colleges and universities.

Subtitle D contains new justice assistance measures to enhance State and Local efforts against sexual violence.

Title II of the bill concerns domestic violence, stalking, and offenses against the family. It strengthens the Federal response to domestic violence, stalking, and noncompliance with child support obligations in cases with interstate elements, requires reports on a number of issues of importance to protecting the victims of domestic violence, and establishes a new justice assistance program to enhance State and local efforts to combat domestic violence and stalking, and to enforce child support obligations.

Title III of the bill establishes a national task force on violence against women. The task force would carry out a comprehensive examination of violent crime against women and recommend additional reforms and improvements.

I look forward to working with the distinguished chairman of the Judiciary Committee in finding common ground in our legislative proposals, and seeing them adopted into law.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill and any additional statements be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 6

TITLE I—SEXUAL VIOLENCESUBTITLE A—PENALTIES AND REMEDIES*SEC. 101. PRE-TRIAL DETENTION IN SEX OFFENSE CASES.

Section 3156(a)(4) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking “, or” at the end of subparagraph (A) and inserting a semicolon, by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting “; or”, and by adding after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

“(C) any felony under chapter 109A or chapter 110 of this title.”

SEC. 102. DEATH PENALTY FOR MURDERS COMMITTED BY SEX OFFENDERS.

Title 18 of the United States Code is amended—

(a) by adding the following new section at the end of chapter 51:

“§ 1118. Capital Punishment for Murders Committed by Sex Offenders

“(a) OFFENSE.—Whoever—

“(1) causes the death of a person intentionally, knowingly, or through recklessness manifesting extreme indifference to human life; or

“(2) causes the death of a person through the intentional infliction of serious bodily injury;

shall be punished as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

“(b) FEDERAL JURISDICTION.—There is Federal jurisdiction over an offense described in this section if the conduct resulting in death occurs in the course of another offense against the United States.

“(c) PENALTY.—An offense described in this section is a Class A felony. A sentence of death may be imposed for an offense described in this section as provided in subsections (d)–(l), except that a sentence of death may not be imposed on a defendant who was below the age of eighteen at the time of the commission of the crime.

“(d) MITIGATING FACTORS.—In determining whether to recommend a sentence of death, the jury shall consider whether any aspect of the defendant's character, background, or record or any circumstance of the offense that the defendant may proffer as a mitigating factor exists, including the following factors:

“(1) MENTAL CAPACITY.—The defendant's mental capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of law was significantly impaired.

“(2) DURESS.—The defendant was under unusual and substantial duress.

“(3) PARTICIPATION IN OFFENSE MINOR.—The defendant is punishable as a principal (pursuant to section 2 of this title) in the offense, which was committed by another, but the defendant's participation was relatively minor.

“(e) AGGRAVATING FACTORS.—In determining whether to recommend a sentence of death, the jury shall consider any aggravating factor for which notice has been provided under subsection (f), including the following factors—

“(1) KILLING IN COURSE OF DESIGNATED SEX CRIMES.—The conduct resulting in death occurred in the course of an offense defined in chapter 109A, 110, or 117 of this title.

“(2) KILLING IN CONNECTION WITH SEXUAL ASSAULT OR CHILD MOLESTATION.—The defendant committed a crime of sexual assault or crime of child molestation, as defined in subsection (x), in the course of an offense on which federal jurisdiction is based under subsection (b).

“(3) PRIOR CONVICTION OF SEXUAL ASSAULT OR CHILD MOLESTATION.—The defendant has previously been convicted of a crime of sexual assault or crime of child molestation as defined in subsection (x).

“(f) NOTICE OF INTENT TO SEEK DEATH PENALTY.—If the government intends to seek the death penalty for an offense under this section, the attorney for the government shall file with the court and serve on the defendant a notice of such intent. The notice shall be provided a reasonable time before the trial or acceptance of a guilty plea, or at such later time before trial as the court may permit for good cause. If the court permits a late filing of the notice upon a showing of good cause, the court shall ensure that the defendant has adequate time to prepare for trial. The notice shall set forth the aggravating factor or factors set forth in subsection (e) and any other aggravating factor or factors that the government will seek to prove as the basis for the death penalty. The factors for which notice is provided under this subsection may include factors concerning the effect of the offense on the victim and the victim's family. The court may permit the attorney for the government to amend the notice upon a showing of good cause.

“(g) JUDGE AND JURY AT CAPITAL SENTENCING HEARING.—A hearing to determine whether the death penalty will be imposed for an offense under this section shall be conducted by the judge who presided at trial or accepted a guilty plea, or by another judge if that judge is not available. The hearing shall be conducted before the jury that determined the defendant's guilt if that jury is available. A new jury shall be impaneled for the purpose of the hearing if the defendant pleaded guilty, the trial of guilt was conducted without a jury, the jury that determined the defendant's guilt was discharged for good cause, or reconsideration of the sentence is necessary after the initial imposition of a sentence of death. A jury impaneled under this subsection shall have twelve members unless the parties stipulate to a lesser number at any time before the conclusion of the hearing with the approval of the judge. Upon motion of the defendant, with the approval of the attorney for the government, the hearing shall be carried out before the judge without a jury. If there is no jury, references to “the jury” in this section, where applicable, shall be understood as referring to the judge.

“(h) PROOF OF MITIGATING AND AGGRAVATING FACTORS.—No presentence report shall be prepared if a capital sentencing hearing is held under this section. Any information relevant to the existence of mitigating factors, or to the existence of aggravating factors for which notice has been provided under subsection (f), may be presented by either the government or the defendant. The information presented may include trial transcripts and exhibits. Information presented by the government in support of factors concerning the effect of the offense on the victim and the victim's family may include oral testimony, a victim impact statement that identifies the victim of the offense and the nature and extent of harm and loss suffered by the victim and the victim's family, and other relevant information. Information is admissible regardless of its admissibility under the rules governing the admission of evidence at criminal trials, except that information may be excluded if its probative value is outweighed by the danger of creating unfair prejudice, confusing the issues, or misleading the jury. The attorney for the government and for the defendant shall be permitted to rebut any information received at the hearing, and shall be given fair opportunity to present argument as to the adequacy of the information to establish the existence of any aggravating or mitigating factor, and as to the appropriateness in that case of imposing a sentence of death. The attorney for the government shall open the argument, the defendant shall be permitted to reply, and the government shall then be permitted to reply in rebuttal.

"(i) FINDINGS OF AGGRAVATING AND MITIGATING FACTORS.—The jury shall return special findings identifying any aggravating factor or factors for which notice has been provided under subsection (f) and which the jury unanimously determines have been established by the government beyond a reasonable doubt. A mitigating factor is established if the defendant has proven its existence by a preponderance of the evidence, and any member of the jury who finds the existence of such a factor may regard it as established for purposes of this section regardless of the number of jurors who concur that the factor has been established.

"(j) FINDING CONCERNING A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—If the jury specially finds under subsection (i) that one or more aggravating factors set forth in subsection (e) exist, and the jury further finds unanimously that there are no mitigating factors or that the aggravating factor or factors specially found under subsection (i) outweigh any mitigating factors, then the jury shall recommend a sentence of death. In any other case, the jury shall not recommend a sentence of death. In any other case, the jury shall not recommend a sentence of death. The jury shall be instructed that it must avoid any influence of sympathy, sentiment, passion, prejudice, or other arbitrary factors in its decision, and should make such a recommendation as the information warrants.

"(k) SPECIAL PRECAUTION TO ASSURE AGAINST DISCRIMINATION.—In a hearing held before a jury, the court, before the return of a finding under subsection (j), shall instruct the jury that, in considering whether to recommend a sentence of death, it shall not be influenced by prejudice or bias relating to the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim, and that the jury is not to recommend a sentence of death unless it has concluded that it would recommend a sentence of death for such a crime regardless of the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim. The jury, upon the return of a finding under subsection (j), shall also return to the court a certificate, signed by each juror, that the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim did not affect the juror's individual decision and that the individual juror would have recommended the same sentence for such a crime regardless of the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim.

"(l) IMPOSITION OF A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—Upon a recommendation under subsection (j) that a sentence of death be imposed, the court shall sentence the defendant to death. Otherwise the court shall impose a sentence, other than death, that is authorized by law.

"(m) REVIEW OF A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—The defendant may appeal a sentence of death under this section by filing a notice of appeal of the sentence within the time provided for filing a notice of appeal of the judgment of conviction. An appeal of a sentence under this subsection may be consolidated with an appeal of the judgment of conviction and shall have priority over all non-capital matters in the court of appeals. The court of appeals shall review the entire record in the case including the evidence submitted at trial and information submitted during the sentencing hearing, the procedures employed in the sentencing hearing, and the special findings returned under subsection (i). The court of appeals shall uphold the sentence if it determines that the sentence of death was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor, that the evidence and information support the special findings under subsection (i), and that the proceedings were otherwise free of prejudicial error that was properly preserved for and raised on appeal. In any other case, the court of appeals shall remand the case for reconsideration of the sentence or imposition of another authorized sentence as appropriate, except that the court shall not reverse a sentence of death on the ground that an aggravating factor was not supported by the evidence and information if at least one aggravating factor set forth in subsection (e) which was found to exist remains and the court, on the basis of the evidence submitted at trial and the information submitted at the sentencing hearing, finds no mitigating factor or finds that the remaining aggravating factor or factors which were found to exist outweigh any mitigating factors. The court of appeals shall state in writing the reasons for its disposition of an appeal of a sentence of death under this section.

"(n) IMPLEMENTATION OF SENTENCE OF DEATH.—A person sentenced to death under this section shall be committed to the custody of the Attorney General until exhaustion of the procedures for appeal of the judgment of conviction and review of the sentence. When the sentence is to be implemented, the Attorney General shall release the person sentenced to death to the custody of a United States Marshal. The Marshal shall supervise implementation of the sentence in the manner prescribed by the law of the State in which the sentence is imposed, or in the manner prescribed by the law of another State designated by the court if the law of the State in which the sentence was imposed does not provide for implementation of a sentence of death. The Marshal may use State or local facilities, may use the services of an appropriate State or local official or of a person such as an official employee, and shall pay the costs thereof in an amount approved by the Attorney General.

"(o) SPECIAL BAR TO EXECUTION.—A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a woman while she is pregnant.

"(p) CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTION TO PARTICIPATION IN EXECUTION.—No employee of any State department of corrections, the Federal Bureau of Prisons, or the United States Marshals Service, and no person providing services to that department, bureau, or service under contract shall be required, as a condition of that employment or contractual obligation, to be in attendance at or to participate in any execution carried out under this section if such participation is contrary to the moral or religious convictions of the employee. For purposes of this subsection, the term 'participate in any execution' includes personal preparation of the condemned individual and the apparatus used for the execution, and supervision of the activities of other personnel in carrying out such activities.

"(q) APPOINTMENT OF COUNSEL FOR INDIGENT CAPITAL DEFENDANTS.—A defendant against whom a sentence of death is sought, or on whom a sentence of death has been imposed, under this section, shall be entitled to appointment of counsel from the commencement of trial proceedings until one of the conditions specified in subsection (v) has occurred, if the defendant is or becomes financially unable to obtain adequate representation. Counsel shall be appointed for trial representation as provided in section 3005 of this title, and at least one counsel so appointed shall continue to represent the defendant until the conclusion of direct review of the judgment, unless replaced by the court with other qualified counsel. Except as otherwise provided in this section, the provisions of section 3006A of this title shall apply to appointments under this section.

"(r) REPRESENTATION AFTER FINALITY OF JUDGMENT.—When a judgment imposing a sentence of death under this section has become final through affirmance by the Supreme Court on direct review, denial of certiorari by the Supreme Court on direct review, or expiration of the time for seeking direct review in the court of appeals or the Supreme Court, the government shall promptly notify the court that imposed the sentence. The court, within 10 days of receipt of such notice, shall proceed to make a determination whether the defendant is eligible for appointment of counsel for subsequent proceedings. The court shall issue an order appointing one or more counsel to represent the defendant upon a finding that the defendant is financially unable to obtain adequate representation and wishes to have counsel appointed or is unable competently to decide whether to accept or reject appointment of counsel. The court shall issue an order denying appointment of counsel upon a finding that the defendant is financially able to obtain adequate representation or that the defendant rejected appointment of counsel with an understanding of the consequences of that decision. Counsel appointed pursuant to this subsection shall be different from the counsel who represented the defendant at trial and on direct review unless the defendant and counsel request a continuation or renewal of the earlier representation.

"(s) STANDARDS FOR COMPETENCE OF COUNSEL.—In relation to a defendant who is entitled to appointment of counsel under subsections (q)–(r), at least one counsel appointed for trial representation must have been admitted to the bar for at least 5 years and have at least three years of experience in the trial of felony cases in the Federal district courts. If new counsel is appointed after judgment, at least one counsel so appointed must have been admitted to the bar for at least 5 years and have at least 3 years of experience in the litigation of felony cases in the Federal courts of appeals or the Supreme Court. The court, for good cause, may appoint counsel who does not meet these standards, but whose background, knowledge, or experience would otherwise enable him or her to properly represent the defendant, with due consideration of the seriousness of the penalty and the nature of the litigation.

"(t) CLAIMS OF INEFFECTIVENESS OF COUNSEL IN COLLATERAL PROCEEDINGS.—The ineffectiveness of incompetence of counsel during proceedings on a motion under section 2255 of title 28, United States Code, shall not be a ground for relief from the judgment or sentence in any proceeding. This limitation shall not preclude the appointment of different counsel at any stage of the proceedings.

"(u) TIME FOR COLLATERAL ATTACK ON DEATH SENTENCE.—A motion under section

2255 of title 28, United States Code, attacking a sentence of death under this section, or the conviction on which it is predicated, must be filed within 90 days of the issuance of the order under subsection (r) appointing or denying the appointment of counsel for such proceedings. The court in which the motion is filed, for good cause shown, may extend the time for filing for a period over all non-capital matters in the district court, and in the court of appeals on review of the district court's decision.

"(v) STAY OF EXECUTION.—The execution of a sentence of death under this section shall be stayed in the course of direct review of the judgment and during the litigation of an initial motion in the case under section 2255 of title 28, United States Code. The stay shall run continuously following imposition of the sentence and shall expire if—

"(1) the defendant fails to file a motion under section 2255 of title 28, United States Code, within the time specified in subsection (u), fails to make a timely application for court of appeals review following the denial of such a motion by a district court;

"(2) upon completion of district court and court of appeals review under section 2255 of title 28, United States Code, the Supreme Court disposes of a petition for certiorari in a manner that leaves the capital sentence undisturbed, or the defendant fails to file a timely petition for certiorari; or

"(3) before a district court, in the presence of counsel and after having been advised of the consequences of such a decision, the defendant waives the right to file a motion under section 2255 of title 28, United States Code.

"(w) FINALITY OF THE DECISION ON REVIEW.—If one of the conditions specified in subsection (v) has occurred, no court thereafter shall have the authority to enter a stay of execution or grant relief in the case unless—

"(1) the basis for the stay and request for relief is a claim not presented in earlier proceedings;

"(2) the failure to raise the claim is the result of governmental action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States, the result of the Supreme Court's recognition of a new Federal right that is retroactively applicable, or the result of the fact that the factual predicate of the claim could not have been discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence in time to present the claim in earlier proceedings; and

"(3) the facts underlying the claim would be sufficient, if proven, to undermine the court's confidence in the determination of guilt on the offense or offenses for which the death penalty was imposed.

"(x) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) 'crime of sexual assault' means a crime under Federal or State law that involved—

"(A) contact, without consent, between any part of the defendant's body or an object and the genitals or anus of another person;

"(B) contact, without consent, between the genitals or anus of the defendant and any part of the body of another person;

"(C) deriving sexual pleasure or gratification from the infliction of death, bodily injury, or physical pain on another person; or

"(D) an attempt or conspiracy to engage in any conduct described in paragraphs (A)–(C);

"(2) 'crime of child molestation' means a crime under Federal or State law that involved—

"(A) contact between any part of the defendant's body or an object and the genitals or anus of a child;

"(B) contact between the genitals or anus of the defendant and any part of the body of a child;

"(C) deriving sexual pleasure or gratification from the infliction of death, bodily injury, or physical pain on a child; or

"(D) an attempt or conspiracy to engage in any conduct described in paragraphs (A)–(C); and

"(3) 'child' means a person below the age of 14; and

(b) by adding the following at the end of the table of sections for chapter 51:

"1118. Capital Punishment for Murders Committed by Sex Offenders."

SEC. 103. INCREASED PENALTIES FOR RECIDIVIST SEX OFFENDERS.—

(a) Section 2245 of title 18, United States Code, is redesignated section 2246.

(b) Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting the following new section after section 2244:

"2245. Penalties for subsequent offenses.

"Any person who violates a provision of this chapter after a prior conviction under a provision of this chapter or the law of a State (as defined in section 513 of this title) for conduct proscribed by this chapter has become final is punishable by a term of imprisonment up to twice that otherwise authorized."

(c) The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) striking "2245" and inserting in lieu thereof "2246"; and

(2) inserting the following after the item relating to section 2244:

"2245. Penalties for subsequent offenses."

SEC. 104. INCREASED PENALTIES FOR SEX OFFENSES AGAINST VICTIMS BELOW THE AGE OF 16.—

Paragraph (2) of section 2245 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (B) by striking "or" after the semicolon;

(2) in subparagraph (C) by striking "and" and inserting in lieu thereof "or"; and

(3) by inserting a new subparagraph (D) as follows:

"(D) the intentional touching, not through the clothing, of the genitalia of another person who has not attained the age of 16 years with an intent to abuse, humiliate, harass, degrade, or arouse or gratify the sexual desire of any person;"

SEC. 105. SENTENCING GUIDELINES INCREASE FOR SEX OFFENSES.

The United States Sentencing Commission shall amend the sentencing guidelines to increase by at least 4 levels the base offense level for an offense under section 2241 (aggravated sexual abuse) or section 2242 (sexual abuse) of title 18, United States Code, and shall consider whether any other changes are warranted in the guidelines provisions applicable to such offenses to ensure realization of the objectives of sentencing. In amending the guidelines in conformity with this section, the Sentencing Commission shall review the appropriateness and adequacy of existing offense characteristics and adjustments applicable to such offenses, taking into account the heinousness of sexual abuse offenses, the severity and duration of the harm caused to victims, and any other relevant factors. In any subsequent amendment to the sentencing guidelines, the Sentencing Commission shall maintain minimum guidelines sentences for the offenses referenced in this section which are at least equal to those required by this section.

SEC. 106. HIV TESTING AND PENALTY ENHANCEMENT IN SEXUAL OFFENSE CASES

(a) Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting at the end the following new section:

"§ 2247. Testing for Human Immunodeficiency Virus; Disclosure of Test Results to Victim; Effect on Penalty

"(a) TESTING AT TIME OF PRE-TRIAL RELEASE DETERMINATION.—In a case in which a person is charged with an offense under this chapter, a judicial officer issuing an order pursuant to section 3142(a) of this title shall include in the order a requirement that a test for the human immunodeficiency virus be performed upon the person, and that follow-up tests for the virus be performed six months and twelve months following the date of the initial test, unless the judicial officer determines that the conduct of the person created no risk of transmission of the virus to the victim, and so states in the order. The order shall direct that the initial test be performed within 24 hours, or as soon thereafter as feasible. The person shall not be released from custody until the test is performed.

"(b) TESTING AT LATER TIME.—If a person charged with an offense under this chapter was not tested for the human immunodeficiency virus pursuant to subsection (a), the court may at a later time direct that such a test be performed upon the person, and that follow-up tests be performed six months and twelve months following the date of the initial test, if it appears to the court that the conduct of the person may have risked transmission of the virus to the victim. A testing requirement under this subsection may be imposed at any time while the charge is pending, or following conviction at any time prior to the person's completion of service of the sentence.

"(c) TERMINATION OF TESTING REQUIREMENT.—A requirement of follow-up testing imposed under this section shall be canceled if any test is positive for the virus or the person obtains an acquittal on, or dismissal of, all charges under this chapter.

"(d) DISCLOSURE OF TEST RESULTS.—The results of any test for the human immunodeficiency virus performed pursuant to an order under this section shall be provided to the judicial officer or court. The judicial officer or court shall ensure that the results are disclosed to the victim (or to the victim's parent or legal guardian, as appropriate), the attorney for the Government, and the person tested.

"(e) EFFECT ON PENALTY.—The United States Sentencing Commission shall amend existing guidelines for sentences for offenses under this chapter to enhance the sentence if the offender knew or had reason to know that he was infected with the human immunodeficiency virus, except where the offender did not engage or attempt to engage in conduct creating a risk of transmission of the virus to the victim."

"(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new item:

"2247. Testing for Human Immunodeficiency Virus; Disclosure of Test Results to Victim; Effect on Penalty"

SEC. 107. PAYMENT OF COST OF HIV TESTING FOR VICTIMS IN SEX OFFENSE CASES.

Section 503(c)(7) of the Victims' Rights and Restitution Act of 1990 is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: "the cost of up to two tests of the victim for the human immunodeficiency virus during the twelve months following the assault, and the cost of a counseling session by a medically trained professional on the accuracy of such tests and the risk of transmission of the human immunodeficiency virus to the victim as the result of the assault".

SEC. 108. INCREASED PENALTIES FOR DRUG DISTRIBUTION TO PREGNANT WOMEN.

Section 405 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 859) is amended by inserting "or to a woman while she is pregnant," after "to a person under twenty-one years of age" in subsection (a) and subsection (b).

SEC. 109. EXTENSION AND STRENGTHENING OF RESTITUTION.

Section 3663 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b), by inserting "or an offense under chapter 109A or chapter 110" after "an offense resulting in bodily injury to a victim" in paragraph (2);

(2) in subsection (b), by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (3), by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (5), and by inserting after paragraph (4) the following new paragraph:

"(4) in any case, reimburse the victim for lost income and necessary child care, transportation, and other expenses related to participation in the investigation or prosecution of the offense or attendance at proceedings related to the offense; and"; and

(3) in subsection (d), by inserting at the end the following: "However, the court shall issue an order requiring restitution of the full amount of the victim's losses and expenses for which restitution is authorized under this section in imposing sentence for an offense under chapter 109A or chapter 110 unless the government and the victim do not request such restitution."

SEC. 110. ENFORCEMENT OF RESTITUTION ORDERS THROUGH SUSPENSION OF FEDERAL BENEFITS.

Section 3663 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (g) and (h) as subsections (h) and (i), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (f) the following new subsection:

"(g)(1) If the defendant is delinquent in making restitution in accordance with any schedule of payments or any requirement of immediate payment imposed under this section, the court may, after a hearing, suspend the defendant's eligibility for all Federal benefits until such time as the defendant demonstrates to the court good-faith efforts to return to such schedule.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) the term 'Federal benefits'—

"(i) means any grant, contract, loan, professional license, or commercial license provided by an agency of the United States or appropriated funds of the United States; and

"(ii) does not include any retirement, welfare, Social Security, health, disability, veterans benefit, public housing, or other similar benefit, or any other benefit for which payments or services are required for eligibility; and

"(B) the term 'veterans benefit' means all benefits provided to veterans, their families, or survivors by virtue of the service of a veteran in the Armed Forces of the United States."

SEC. 111. CIVIL REMEDY FOR VICTIMS OF SEXUAL VIOLENCE.

(a) CAUSE OF ACTION.—Whoever, in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States, engages in sexual violence against another, shall be liable to the injured party in an action under this section. The relief available in such an action shall include compensatory and punitive damages and any appropriate equitable or declaratory relief.

(b) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, "sexual violence" means any conduct proscribed by chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, whether or not the conduct occurs in the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States or in a Federal prison.

(c) ATTORNEY'S FEES.—The Civil Rights Attorney's Fees Award Act of 1976 (42 U.S.C. 1988) is amended by striking "or" after "Public Law 92-318" and by inserting after "1964" the following: "or section 111 of the Sexual Assault Prevention Act of 1993."

SUBTITLE B—RULES OF EVIDENCE, PRACTICE, AND PROCEDURE

SEC. 121. ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE OF SIMILAR CRIMES IN SEX OFFENSE CASES

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by adding after Rule 412 the following new rules:

"Rule 413. Evidence of Similar Crimes in Sexual Assault Cases

"(a) In a criminal case in which the defendant is accused of an offense of sexual assault, evidence of the defendant's commission of another offense or offense or offenses of sexual assault is admissible, and may be considered for its bearing on any matter to which it is relevant.

"(b) In a case in which the government intends to offer evidence under this Rule, the attorney for the government shall disclose the evidence to the defendant, including statements of witnesses or a summary of the substance of any testimony that is expected to be offered, at least fifteen days before the scheduled date of trial or at such later time as the court may allow for good cause.

"(c) This Rule shall not be construed to limit the admission or consideration of evidence under any other Rule.

"(d) For purposes of this Rule and Rule 415, "offense of sexual assault" means a crime under Federal law or the law of a State (as defined in section 513 of title 18, United States Code) that involved—

"(1) any conduct proscribed by chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code;

"(2) contact, without consent, between any part of the defendant's body or an object and the genitals or anus of another person;

"(3) contact, without consent, between the genitals or anus of the defendant and any part of another person's body;

"(4) deriving sexual pleasure or gratification from the infliction of death, bodily injury, or physical pain on another person; or

"(5) an attempt or conspiracy to engage in conduct described in paragraphs (1)–(4).

"Rule 414. Evidence of Similar Crimes in Child Molestation Cases

"(a) In a criminal case in which the defendant is accused of an offense of child molestation, evidence of the defendant's commission of another offense or offenses of child molestation is admissible, and may be considered for its bearing on any matter to which it is relevant.

"(b) In a case in which the government intends to offer evidence under this Rule, the attorney for the government shall disclose the evidence to the defendant, including statements of witnesses or a summary of the substance of any testimony that is expected to be offered, at least fifteen days before the scheduled date of trial or at such later time as the court may allow for good cause.

"(c) This Rule shall not be construed to limit the admission or consideration of evidence under any other Rule.

"(d) For purposes of this Rule and Rule 415, "child" means a person below the age of fourteen, and "offense of child molestation" means a crime under Federal law or the law of a State (as defined in section 513 of title 18, United States Code) that involved—

"(1) any conduct proscribed by chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, that was committed in relation to a child;

"(2) any conduct proscribed by chapter 110 of title 18, United States Code;

"(3) contact between any part of the defendant's body or an object and the genitals or anus of a child;

"(4) contact between the genitals or anus of the defendant and any part of the body of a child;

"(5) deriving sexual pleasure or gratification from the infliction of death, bodily injury, or physical pain on a child; or

"(6) an attempt or conspiracy to engage in conduct described in paragraphs (1)–(5).

"Rule 415. Evidence of Similar Acts in Civil Cases Concerning Sexual Assault or Child Molestation

"(a) In a civil case in which a claim for damages or other relief is predicated on a party's alleged commission of conduct constituting an offense of sexual assault or child molestation, evidence of that party's commission of another offense or offenses of sexual assault or child molestation is admissible and may be considered as provided in Rule 413 and Rule 414 of these Rules.

"(b) A party who intends to offer evidence under this Rule shall disclose the evidence to the party against whom it will be offered, including statements of witnesses or a summary of the substance of any testimony that is expected to be offered, at least fifteen days before the scheduled date of trial or at such later time as the court may allow for good cause.

"(c) This Rule shall not be construed to limit the admission or consideration of evidence under any other Rule."

SEC. 122. EXTENSION AND STRENGTHENING OF RAPE VICTIM SHIELD LAW.

(a) AMENDMENTS TO RAPE VICTIM SHIELD LAW.—Rule 412 of the Federal Rules of Evidence is amended—

(1) in subdivisions (a) and (b), by striking "criminal case" and inserting "criminal or civil case";

(2) in subdivisions (a) and (b), by striking "an offense under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code," and inserting "an offense or civil wrong involving conduct proscribed by chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, whether or not the conduct occurred in the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States or in a Federal prison,";

(3) in subdivision (a), by striking "victim of such offense" and inserting "victim of such conduct";

(4) in subdivision (c)—

(A) by striking in paragraph (1) "the person accused of committing an offense under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code" and inserting "the accused"; and

(B) by inserting at the end of paragraph (3) the following: "An order admitting evidence under this paragraph shall explain the reasoning leading to the finding of relevance, and the basis of the finding that the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice notwithstanding the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased inferences."; and

(5) in subdivision (d), by striking "an offense under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code" and inserting "the conduct proscribed by chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code,".

(b) INTERLOCUTORY APPEAL.—Section 3731 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the second paragraph the following:

"An appeal by the United States before trial shall lie to a court of appeals from an order of a district court admitting evidence of an alleged victim's past sexual behavior in a criminal case in which the defendant is charged with an offense involving conduct proscribed by chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, whether or not the conduct occurred in the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States or in a Federal prison."

SEC. 123. INADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE TO SHOW PROVOCATION OR INVITATION BY VICTIM IN SEX OFFENSE CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by adding after Rule 415 (as added by section 121 of this Act) the following:

"Rule 416. Inadmissibility of evidence to show invitation or provocation by victim in sexual abuse cases.

"In a criminal case in which a person is accused of an offense involving conduct proscribed by chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, whether or not the conduct occurred in the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States or in a Federal prison, evidence is not admissible to show that the alleged victim invited or provoked the commission of the offense. This Rule does not limit the admission of evidence of consent by the alleged victim if the issue of consent is relevant to liability and the evidence is otherwise admissible under these Rules."

SEC. 124. RIGHT OF THE VICTIM TO FAIR TREATMENT IN LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

The following rules, to be known as the Rules of Professional Conduct for Lawyers in Federal Practice, are enacted as an appendix to title 28, United States Code:

"RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT FOR LAWYERS IN FEDERAL PRACTICE

"Rule 1. Scope

"Rule 2. Abuse of Victims and Others Prohibited

"Rule 3. Duty of Enquiry in Relation to Client

"Rule 4. Duty to Expedite Litigation

"Rule 5. Duty to Prevent Commission of Crime

"Rules 1. Scope

"(a) These rules apply to the conduct of lawyers in their representation of clients in relation to proceedings and potential proceedings before federal tribunals.

"(b) For purposes of these rules, 'federal tribunal' and 'tribunal' mean a court of the United States or an agency of the federal government that carries out adjudicatory or quasiadjudicatory functions.

"Rule 2. Abuse of Victims and Others Prohibited

"(a) A lawyer shall not engage in any action or course of conduct for the purpose of increasing the expense of litigation for any person, other than a liability under an order or judgment of a tribunal.

"(b) A lawyer shall not engage in any action or course of conduct that has no substantial purpose other than to distress, harass, embarrass, burden, or inconvenience another person.

"(c) A lawyer shall not offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false or attempt to discredit evidence that the lawyer knows to be true.

"Rule 3. Duty of Enquiry in Relation to Client

"A lawyer shall attempt to elicit from the client a truthful account of the material facts concerning the matters in issue. In representing a client charged with a crime or civil wrong, the duty of enquiry under this rule includes—

(1) "attempting to elicit from the client a materially complete account of the alleged criminal activity or civil wrong if the client acknowledges involvement in the alleged activity or wrong; and

"(2) attempting to elicit from the client the material facts relevant to a defense of alibi if the client denies such involvement.

"Rule 4. Duty to Expedite Litigation

"(a) A lawyer shall seek to bring about the expeditious conduct and conclusion of litigation.

"(b) A lawyer shall not seek a continuance or otherwise attempt to delay or prolong proceedings in the hope or expectation that—

"(1) evidence will become unavailable;

"(2) evidence will become more subject to impeachment or otherwise less useful to another party because of the passage of time; or

"(3) an advantage will be obtained in relation to another party because of the expense, frustration, distress, or other hardship resulting from prolonged or delayed proceedings.

"Rule 5. Duty to Prevent Commission of Crime

"(a) A lawyer may disclose information relating to the representation of a client to the extent necessary to prevent the commission of a crime or other unlawful act.

"(b) A lawyer shall disclose information relating to the representation of a client where disclosure is required by law. A lawyer shall also disclose such information to the extent necessary to prevent—

"(1) the commission of a crime involving the use or threatened use of force against another, or a substantial risk of death or serious bodily injury to another; or

"(2) the commission of a crime of sexual assault or child molestation.

"(c) For purposes of this rule, 'crime' means a crime under the law of the United States or the law of a State, and 'unlawful act' means an act in violation of the law of the United States or the law of a State."

SEC. 125. RIGHT OF THE VICTIM TO AN IMPARTIAL JURY.

Rule 24(b) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure is amended by striking "the Government is entitled to 6 peremptory challenges and the defendant or defendants jointly to 10 peremptory challenges" and inserting "each side is entitled to 6 peremptory challenges."

SEC. 126. VICTIM'S RIGHT OF ALLOCATION IN SENTENCING.

Rule 32 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of subdivision (a)(1)(B);

(2) by striking the period at the end of subdivision (a)(1)(C) and inserting "; and";

(3) by inserting after subdivision (a)(1)(C) the following:

"(D) if sentence is to be imposed for a crime of violence or sexual abuse, address the victim personally if the victim is present at the sentencing hearing and determine if the victim wishes to make a statement and to present any information in relation to the sentence."

(4) in the penultimate sentence of subdivision (a)(1) by striking "equivalent opportunity" and inserting "opportunity equivalent to that of the defendant's counsel";

(5) in the last sentence of subdivision (a)(1) by inserting "the victim," before "or the attorney for the Government."; and

(6) by adding at the end the following new subdivision:

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this rule—

"(1) 'crime of violence or sexual abuse' means a crime that involved the use or attempted or threatened use of physical force against the person or property of another, or a crime under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code; and

"(2) 'victim' means an individual against whom an offense for which a sentence is to be imposed has been committed, but the right of allocation under subdivision (a)(1)(D) may be exercised instead by—

"(A) a parent or legal guardian if the victim is below the age of 18 years or incompetent; or

"(B) one or more family members or relatives designated by the court if the victim is deceased or incapacitated, if such person or persons are present at the sentencing hearing, regardless of whether the victim is present.

SEC. 127. VICTIM'S RIGHT OF PRIVACY.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) the crime of rape is underreported to law enforcement authorities because of its traumatic effect on victims and the stigmatizing nature of the crime;

(2) rape victims may be further victimized by involuntary public disclosure of their identities;

(3) rape victims should be encouraged to come forward and report the crime without fear of being revictimized through involuntary public disclosure of their identities; and

(4) any interest of the public in knowing the identity of a rape victim notwithstanding the victim's wishes to the contrary is outweighed by the interest of protecting the privacy of rape victims and encouraging rape victims to report the crime and assist in prosecution.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that news media, law enforcement personnel, and other persons should exercise restraint and respect a rape victim's privacy by not disclosing the victim's identity to the general public or facilitating such disclosure without the consent of the victim.

SUBTITLE C—SAFE CAMPUSES

SEC. 131. NATIONAL BASELINE STUDY ON CAMPUS SEXUAL ASSAULT.

(a) STUDY.—The Attorney General shall provide for a national baseline study to examine the scope of the problem of campus sexual assaults and the effectiveness of institutional and legal policies in addressing such crimes and protecting victims. The Attorney General may utilize the Bureau of Justice Statistics, the National Institute of Justice, and the Office for Victims of Crime in carrying out this section.

(b) REPORT.—Based on the study required by subsection (a), the Attorney General shall prepare a report including an analysis of—

(1) the number of reported allegations and estimated number of unreported allegations of campus sexual assaults, and to whom the allegations are reported (including authorities of the educational institution, sexual assault victim service entities, and local criminal authorities);

(2) the number of campus sexual assault allegations reported to authorities of educational institutions which are reported to criminal authorities;

(3) the number of campus sexual assault allegations that result in criminal prosecution in comparison with the number of non-campus sexual assault allegations that result in criminal prosecution;

(4) Federal and State laws or regulations pertaining specifically to campus sexual assaults;

(5) the adequacy of policies and practices of educational institutions in addressing campus sexual assaults and protecting victims, including consideration of—

(A) the security measures in effect at educational institutions, such as utilization of campus police and security guards, control over access to grounds and buildings, supervision of student activities and student living arrangements, control over the consumption of alcohol by students, lighting, and the availability of escort services;

(B) the articulation and communication to students of the institution's policies concerning sexual assaults;

(C) policies and practices that may prevent or discourage the reporting of campus sexual assaults to local criminal authorities, or that may otherwise obstruct justice or interfere with the prosecution of perpetrators of campus sexual assaults;

(D) the nature and availability of victim services for victims of campus sexual assaults;

(E) the ability of educational institutions' disciplinary processes to address allegations of sexual assault adequately and fairly;

(F) measures that are taken to ensure that victims are free of unwanted contact with alleged assailants, and disciplinary sanctions that are imposed when a sexual assault is determined to have occurred; and

(G) the grounds on which educational institutions are subject to lawsuits based on campus sexual assaults, the resolution of these cases, and measures that can be taken to avoid the likelihood of lawsuits and civil liability;

(6) an assessment of the policies and practices of educational institutions that are of greatest effectiveness in addressing campus sexual assaults and protecting victims, including policies and practices relating to the particular issues described in paragraph (5); and

(7) any recommendations the Attorney General may have for reforms to address campus sexual assaults and protect victims more effectively, and any other matters that the Attorney General deems relevant to the subject of the study and report required by this section.

(c) SUBMISSION OF REPORT.—The report required by subsection (b) shall be submitted to the Congress no later than September 1, 1995.

(d) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, "campus sexual assaults" includes sexual assaults occurring at institutions of postsecondary education and sexual assaults committed against or by students or employees of such institutions.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATION.—There is authorized to be appropriated $200,000 to carry out the study required by this section.

SUBTITLE D—ASSISTANCE TO STATES AND LOCALITIES

SEC. 141. SEXUAL VIOLENCE GRANT PROGRAM.

(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to strengthen and improve State and local efforts to prevent and punish sexual violence, and to assist and protect the victims of sexual violence.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF GRANTS.—The Attorney General, through the Bureau of Justice Assistance, the Office for Victims of Crime, and the Bureau of Justice Statistics, may make grants to support projects and programs relating to sexual violence, including support of—

(1) training and policy development programs for law enforcement officers and prosecutors concerning the investigation and prosecution of sexual violence;

(2) law enforcement and prosecutorial units and teams that target sexual violence;

(3) victim services programs for victims of sexual violence;

(4) educational and informational programs relating to sexual violence;

(5) improved systems for collecting, keeping, and disseminating records and data concerning sexual violence and offenders who engage in sexual violence;

(6) background check systems that enable employers to determine whether employees and applicants for employment have criminal histories involving sexual violence, in relation to employment positions for which a person may be unsuitable on the basis of such a history, such as child care positions and positions involving access to people's homes;

(7) registration systems which require persons convicted of sexual violence to keep law enforcement authorities informed of their addresses or locations;

(8) security measures in parks, public transportation systems, public buildings and facilities, and other public places which reduce the risk that acts of sexual violence will occur in such places;

(9) programs addressing campus sexual assaults, as defined in section 131 of this Act;

(10) programs assisting runaway and homeless children or other persons who have been subjected to or are at risk of sexual violence or sexual exploitation, including sexual exploitation through prostitution or in the production of pornography;

(11) training programs for judges in relation to cases involving sexual violence; and

(12) treatment programs in a correctional setting for offenders who engage in sexual violence, which may include aftercare components, and which shall include an evaluation component to determine the effectiveness of the treatment in reducing recidivism.

(c) FORMULA GRANTS.—Of the amount appropriated in each fiscal year for grants under this section, other than the amount set aside to carry out subsection (d)—

(1) 0.25 percent shall be set aside for each participating State; and

(2) the remainder shall be allocated to the participating States in proportion to their populations;

for the use of State and local governments in the States.

(d) DISCRETIONARY GRANTS.—Of the amount appropriated in each fiscal year, 20 percent shall be set aside in a discretionary fund to provide grants to public and private agencies to further the purposes and objectives set forth in subsections (a) and (b).

(e) APPLICATION FOR FORMULA GRANTS.—To request a grant under subsection (c), the chief executive officer of a State must, in each fiscal year, submit to the Attorney General a plan for addressing sexual violence in the State, including a specification of the uses to which funds provided under subsection (c) will be put in carrying out the plan. The application must include—

(1) certification that the Federal funding provided will be used to supplement and not supplant State and local funds;

(2) certification that any requirement of State law for review by the State legislature or a designated body, and any requirement of State law for public notice and comment concerning the proposed plan, has been satisfied; and

(3) provisions for fiscal control, management, recordkeeping, and submission of reports in relation to funds provided under this section that are consistent with requirements prescribed for the program.

(f) CONDITIONS ON GRANTS.—

(1) MATCHING FUNDS.—Grants under subsection (c) may be for up to 50 percent of the overall cost of a project or program funded. Discretionary grants under subsection (d) may be for up to 100 percent of the overall cost of a project or program funded.

(2) DURATION OF GRANTS.—Grants under subsection (c) may be provided in relation to a particular project or program for up to an aggregate maximum period of four years.

(3) LIMIT ON ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—Not more than 5 percent of a grant under subsection (c) may be used for costs incurred to administer the grant.

(4) PAYMENT OF COST OF FORENSIC MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS.—It is a condition of eligibility for grants under subsection (c) that a State pay the cost of forensic medical examinations for victims of sexual violence.

(5) POLICIES AGAINST CAMPUS SEXUAL ASSAULTS.—For an institution of postsecondary education seeking a grant under subsection (d), it is a condition of eligibility that the institution articulate and communicate to its students a clear policy that sexual violence will not be tolerated by the institution.

(g) EVALUATION.—The National Institute of Justice shall have the authority to carry out evaluations of programs funded under this section. The recipient of any grant under this section may be required to include an evaluation component to determine the effectiveness of the project or program funded that is consistent with guidelines issued by the National Institute of Justice.

(h) COORDINATION.—The Attorney General may utilize the Office of Justice Programs to coordinate the administration of grants under this section. The coordination of grants under this section shall include prescribing consistent program requirements for grantees, allocating functions and the administration of particular grants among the components that participate in the administration of the program under this section, coordinating the program under this section with the Domestic Violence and Family Support Grant Program established by section 208 of this Act, and coordinating the program under this section with other grant programs administered by components of the Department of Justice.

(i) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, "sexual violence" includes non-consensual sex offenses and sex offenses involving victims who are not able to give legally effective consent because of age or incompetency.

(j) REPORT.—The Attorney General shall submit an annual report to Congress concerning the operation and effectiveness of the program under this section.

(k) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated, in each of fiscal years 1994, 1995, and 1996, $250,000,000 to carry out this section, and such sums as may be necessary in each fiscal year thereafter.

SEC. 142. SUPPLEMENTARY GRANTS FOR STATES ADOPTING EFFECTIVE LAWS RELATING TO SEXUAL VIOLENCE.

(a) SUPPLEMENTARY GRANTS.—The Attorney General may, in each fiscal year, authorize the award to a State of an aggregate amount of up to $1 million under the Sexual Violence Grant Program established by section 141 of this Act, in addition to any funds that are otherwise authorized under that program. The authority to award additional funding under this section is conditional on certification by the Attorney General that the State has laws relating to sexual violence that exceed or are reasonably comparable to the provisions of federal law (including changes in federal law adopted by this Act) in the following areas:

(1) Authorization of pre-trial detention of defendants in sexual assault cases where prevention of flight or the safety of others cannot be reasonably assured by other means, and denial of release pending appeal for persons convicted of sexual assault offenses who have been sentenced to imprisonment.

(2) Authorization of severe penalties for sexual assault offenses.

(3) Pre-trial testing for the human immunodeficiency virus of persons charged with sexual assault offenses, with disclosure of test results to the victim.

(4) Payment of the cost of medical examinations and the cost of testing for the human immunodeficiency virus for victims of sexual assaults.

(5) According the victim of a sexual assault the right to be present at judicial proceedings in the case.

(6) Protection of victims from inquiry into unrelated sexual behavior in sexual assault cases.

(7) Rules of professional conduct for lawyers that protect victims from unwarranted cross-examination and impeachment, dilatory tactics, and other abuses in sexual assault cases.

(8) Authorization of admission and consideration in sexual assault cases of evidence that the defendant has committed sexual assaults on other occasions.

(9) Authorization of the victim in sexual assault cases to address the court concerning the sentence to be imposed.

(10) Authorization of the award of restitution to victims of sexual assaults as part of a criminal sentence.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated in each fiscal year such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

TITLE II—DOMESTIC VIOLENCE, STALKING, AND OFFENSES AGAINST THE FAMILY

SEC. 201. INTERSTATE TRAVEL TO COMMIT SPOUSE ABUSE OR TO VIOLATE PROTECTIVE ORDER; INTERSTATE STALKING.

(a) OFFENSE.—Part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 110 the following:

"CHAPTER 110A—DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND STALKING

"Sec.

"2261. Domestic violence and stalking.

"2261. Domestic violence and stalking

(a) OFFENSE.—Whoever causes or attempts to cause bodily injury to, engages in sexual abuse against, or violates a protective order in relation to, another shall be punished—

"(1) if death results, by death or by imprisonment for any term of years or for life;

"(2) if permanent disfigurement or life-threatening bodily injury results, by imprisonment for not more than 20 years;

"(3) if serious bodily injury results, or if a firearm, knife, or other dangerous weapon is possessed, carried, or used during the commission of the offense, by imprisonment for not more than 10 years; and

"(4) in any other case, by imprisonment for not more than five years.

If, however, the defendant engages in sexual abuse and the penalty authorized for such conduct under chapter 109A exceeds the penalty which would otherwise be authorized under this subsection, then the penalty authorized for such conduct under chapter 109A shall apply.

"(b) MANDATORY PENALTIES.—A sentence under this section shall include at least three months of imprisonment if the offense involves the infliction of bodily injury on or the commission of sexual abuse against the victim. A sentence under this section shall include at least six months of imprisonment if the offense involves the violation of a protective order and the defendant has previously violated a protective order in relation to the same victim.

"(c) JURISDICTION.—There is Federal jurisdiction to prosecute an offense under this section if the defendant traveled in interstate or foreign commerce, or transported or caused another to move in interstate or foreign commerce, with the intention of committing or in furtherance of committing the offense, and—

"(1) the victim was a spouse or former spouse of the defendant, was cohabiting with or had cohabited with the defendant, or had a child in common with the defendant; or

"(2) the defendant on two or more occasions—

"(A) has caused or attempted or threatened to cause death or serious bodily injury to or engaged in sexual abuse in relation to the victim; or

"(B) has engaged in any conduct that caused or was intended to cause apprehension by the victim that the victim would be subjected to death, serious bodily injury, or sexual abuse.

"(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) 'protective order' means an order issued by a court of a State prohibiting or limiting violence against, harassment of, contact or communication with, or physical proximity to another person;

"(2) 'sexual abuse' means any conduct proscribed by chapter 109A of this title, whether or not the conduct occurs in the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States or in a Federal prison;

"(3) 'serious bodily injury' and 'bodily injury' have the meanings given in section 1365(g); and

"(4) 'State' has the meaning given in section 513(c)(5)."

"(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The analysis for Part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item for chapter 110 the following:

"110A. Domestic violence and offenses against the family 2261".

"(c) MANDATORY RESTITUTION.—Section 3663 of title 18, United States Code, as amended by section 109 of this Act, is further amended by striking "or chapter 110" and inserting "chapter 110, or section 2261" in each of subsection (b)(2) and subsection (d).

"(d) INTERIM PROTECTION.—Section 3156(a)(4)(C) of title 18, United States Code, as added by section 101 of this Act, is amended by striking "or chapter 110" and inserting "chapter 110, or section 2261".

"(e) DEATH PENALTY PROCEDURES.—Section 1118 of title 18, United States Code, as enacted by section 102 of this Act, is amended in paragraph (1) of subsection (e) by inserting "or section 2261" after "117".

SEC. 202. FULL FAITH AND CREDIT FOR PROTECTIVE ORDERS.

"(a) REQUIREMENT OF FULL FAITH AND CREDIT.—Chapter 110A of title 18, United States Code, as enacted by section 201, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 2262. Full Faith and Credit for Protective Orders

"(a) A protective order issued by a court of a State shall have the same full faith and credit in a court in another State that it would have in a court of the State in which issued, and shall be enforced by the courts of any State if it were issued in that State.

"(b) For purposes of this section—

"(1) 'protective order' means an order prohibiting or limiting violence against, harassment of, contact or communication with, or physical proximity to another person; and

"(2) 'State' has the meaning given in section 513(c)(5)."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The analysis for chapter 110A of title 18, United States Code, as enacted by section 201, is amended by inserting at the end of the following:

"§ 2262. Full Faith and Credit for Protective Orders."

SEC. 203. NON-COMPLIANCE WITH CHILD SUPPORT OBLIGATIONS IN INTERSTATE CASES.

Chapter 11A of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"CHAPTER 11A—CHILD SUPPORT

"Sec.

"228. Non-compliance with child support obligations.

"§ 228. Non-compliance with child support obligations.

"(a) OFFENSE.—Whoever—

"(1) leaves or remains outside a State with intent to avoid payment of a child support obligation; or

"(2) fails to pay a major child support obligation, as defined in subsection (e), with respect to a child who resides in another State, despite having the financial resources to pay the obligation or the ability to acquire such resources through reasonable diligence; shall be punished as provided in subsection (c).

"(b) PRESUMPTION.—In relation to an offense charged under paragraph (1) of subsection (a), the absence of the defendant from the State for an aggregate period of six months without payment of the child support obligation shall create a rebuttable presumption that the intent existed to avoid payment of the obligation.

"(c) PENALTY.—A person convicted of an offense under this section shall be punished by imprisonment for up to six months, and on a second or subsequent conviction, by imprisonment for up to two years.

"(d) RESTITUTION.—In addition to any restitution that may be ordered pursuant to section 3663, a sentence for an offense under this section shall include an order of restitution in an amount equal to the past due support obligation as it exists at the time of sentencing. Subsections (e)-(i) of section 3663 shall apply to an order of restitution pursuant to this subsection.

"(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) 'child support obligation' means an amount determined under a court order or an order of an administrative process pursuant to the law of a State to be due from a person for the support of a child or of a child and the parent with whom the child is living;

"(2) 'major child support obligation' means a child support obligation that has remained unpaid for a period exceeding one year, or that is greater than $5,000;

"(3) 'past due support obligation' means a child support obligation that is unpaid at the time of sentencing for an offense under this section; and

"(4) 'State' has the meaning given in section 513(c)(5)."

SEC. 204. PRESUMPTION AGAINST CHILD CUSTODY FOR SPOUSE ABUSERS.

(a) The Congress finds that—

(1) courts fail to recognize the detrimental effects of having as a custodial parent an individual who physically abuses his or her spouse, insofar as they do not hear or weigh evidence of domestic violence in child custody litigation;

(2) joint custody forced upon hostile parents can create a damaging psychological environment for a child;

(3) physical abuse of a spouse is relevant to the likelihood of child abuse in child custody disputes;

(4) the effects on children of physical abuse of a spouse include—

(A) traumatization and psychological damage to children resulting from observation of the abuse and the climate of violence and fear existing in a home where abuse takes place;

(B) the risk that children may become targets of physical abuse when they attempt to intervene on behalf of an abused parent; and

(C) the negative effects on children of exposure to an inappropriate role model, in that witnessing an aggressive parent may communicate to children that violence is an acceptable means of dealing with others; and

(5) the harm to children from spouse abuse may be compounded by award of exclusive or joint custody to an abuser because further abuse may occur when the abused spouse is forced to have contact with the abuser as a result of the custody arrangement, and because the child or children may be exposed to abuse committed by the abuser against a subsequent spouse or partner.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of the Congress that, for purposes of determining child custody, evidence establishing that a parent engages in physical abuse of a spouse should create a statutory presumption that is detrimental to the child to be placed in the custody of the abusive spouse.

SEC. 205. REPORT ON BATTERED WOMEN'S SYNDROME.

(a) REPORT.—The Attorney General shall prepare and transmit to the Congress a report on the status of battered women's syndrome as a medical and psychological condition and on its effect in criminal trials. The Attorney General may utilize the National Institute of Justice to obtain information required for the preparation of the report.

(b) COMPONENTS OF REPORT.—The report described in subsection (a) shall include—

(1) a review of medical and psychological views concerning the existence, nature, and effects of battered women's syndrome as a psychological condition;

(2) a compilation of judicial decisions that have admitted or excluded evidence of battered women's syndrome as evidence of guilt or as a defense in criminal trials; and

(3) information on the views of judges, prosecutors, and defense attorneys concerning the effects that evidence of battered women's syndrome may have in criminal trials.

SEC. 206. REPORT ON CONFIDENTIALITY OF ADDRESSES FOR VICTIMS OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

(a) The Attorney General shall conduct a study of the means by which abusive spouses may obtain information concerning the addresses or locations of estranged or former spouses, notwithstanding the desire of the victims to have such information withheld to avoid further exposure to abuse. Based on the study, the Attorney General shall transmit a report to Congress including—

(1) the findings of the study concerning the means by which information concerning the addresses or locations of abused spouses may be obtained by abusers; and

(2) analysis of the feasibility of creating effective means of protecting the confidentiality of information concerning the addresses and locations of abused spouses to protect such persons from exposure to further abuse while preserving access to such information for legitimate purposes.

(b) The Attorney General may utilize the National Institute of Justice and the Office for Victims of Crime in carrying out this section.

SEC. 207. REPORT ON RECORDKEEPING RELATING TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall complete a study of, and shall submit to Congress a report and recommendations on, problems of recordkeeping of criminal complaints involving domestic violence. The study and report shall examine—

(1) the efforts that have been made by the Department of Justice, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation, to collect statistics on domestic violence; and

(2) the feasibility of requiring that the relationship between an offender and victim be reported in Federal records of crimes of aggravated assault, rape, and other violent crimes.

SEC. 208. DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND FAMILY SUPPORT GRANT PROGRAM.

(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to strengthen and improve State and local efforts to prevent and punish domestic violence and other criminal and unlawful acts that particularly affect women, and to assist and protect the victims of such crimes and acts.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF GRANTS.—The Attorney General, through the Bureau of Justice Assistance, the Office for Victims of Crime, and the Bureau of Justice Statistics, may make grants to support projects and programs relating to domestic violence and other criminal and unlawful acts that particularly affect women, including support of—

(1) training and policy development programs for law enforcement officers and prosecutors concerning the investigation and prosecution of domestic violence;

(2) law enforcement and prosecutorial units and teams that target domestic violence;

(3) model, innovative, and demonstration law enforcement programs relating to domestic violence that involve pro-arrest and aggressive prosecution policies;

(4) model, innovative, and demonstration programs for the effective utilization and enforcement of protective orders;

(5) programs addressing stalking and persistent menacing;

(6) victim services programs for victims of domestic violence;

(7) shelters that provide services for victims of domestic violence and related programs;

(8) educational and informational programs relating to domestic violence;

(9) resource centers providing information, technical assistance, and training to domestic violence service providers, agencies, and programs;

(10) coalitions of domestic violence service providers, agencies, and programs;

(11) training programs for judges and court personnel in relation to cases involving domestic violence; and

(12) enforcement of child support obligations, including cooperative efforts and arrangements of States to improve enforcement in cases involving interstate elements.

(c) FORMULA GRANTS.—Of the amount appropriated in each fiscal year for grants under this section, other than the amount set aside to carry out subsection (d)—

(1) 0.25 percent shall be set aside for each participating State; and

(2) the remainder shall be allocated to the participating States in proportion to their populations; for the use of State and local governments in the States.

(d) DISCRETIONARY GRANTS.—Of the amount appropriated in each fiscal year, 20 percent shall be set aside in a discretionary fund to provide grants to public and private agencies to further the purposes and objectives set forth in subsections (a) and (b).

(e) APPLICATION FOR FORMULA GRANTS.—To request a grant under subsection (c), the chief executive officer of a State must, in each fiscal year, submit to the Attorney General a plan for addressing domestic violence and other criminal and unlawful acts that particularly affect women in the State, including a specification of the uses to which funds provided under subsection (c) will be put in carrying out the plan. The application must include—

(1) certification that the Federal funding provided will be used to supplement and not supplant State and local funds;

(2) certification that any requirement of State law for review by the State legislature of a designated body, and any requirement of State law for public notice and comment concerning the proposed plan, has been satisfied; and

(3) provisions for fiscal control, management, recordkeeping, and submission of reports in relation to funds provided under this section that are consistent with requirements prescribed for the program.

(f) CONDITIONS ON GRANTS.—

(1) MATCHING FUNDS.—Grants under subsection (c) may be for up to 50 percent of the overall cost of a project or program funded. Discretionary grants under subsection (d) may be for up to 100 percent of the overall cost of a project or program funded.

(2) DURATION OF GRANTS.—Grants under subsection (c) may be provided in relation to a particular project or program for up to an aggregate maximum period of four years.

(3) LIMIT ON ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—Not more than 5 percent of a grant under subsection (c) may be used for costs incurred to administer the grant.

(g) EVALUATION.—The National Institute of Justice shall have the authority to carry out evaluations of programs funded under this section. The recipient of any grant under this section may be required to include an evaluation component to determine the effectiveness of the project or program funded that is consistent with guidelines issued by the National Institute of Justice.

(h) COORDINATION.—The Attorney General may utilize the Office of Justice Programs to coordinate the administration of grants under this section. The coordination of grants under this section shall include prescribing consistent program requirements for grantees, allocating functions and the administration of particular grants among the components that participate in the administration of the program under this section, coordinating the program under this section with the Sexual Violence Grant Program established by section 141 of this Act, and coordinating the program under this section with other grant programs administered by components of the Department of Justice.

(i) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, "domestic violence" includes any act of criminal violence in which the offender and the victim are members of the same household or relatives, or in which the offender and the victim are present or former spouses or cohabitants or have a child in common.

(j) REPORT.—The Attorney General shall submit an annual report to Congress concerning the operation and effectiveness of the program under this section.

(k) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated, in each of fiscal years 1994, 1995, and 1996, $250,000,000 to carry out this section, and such sums as may be necessary in each fiscal year thereafter.

TITLE III—NATIONAL TASK FORCE ON VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN

SEC. 301. ESTABLISHMENT.

Not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall establish a task force to be known as the "National Task Force on Violence Against Women" (referred to in this title as the "task force").

SEC. 302. DUTIES OF TASK FORCE.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE OF TASK FORCE.—The task force shall recommend Federal, State, and local strategies aimed at protecting women against violent crime, punishing persons who commit such crimes, and enhancing the rights of victims of such crimes.

(b) DUTIES OF TASK FORCE.—The task force shall perform such functions as the Attorney General deems appropriate to carry out of the purposes of the task force, including—

(1) considering the reports and recommendations of past Federal and State studies of violent crime, family violence, and the treatment of crime victims, including the Report of the Attorney General to the President on Combating Violent Crime (1992), the Report of the Attorney General's Task Force on Family Violence (1984), the Report of the President's Task Force on Victims of Crime (1982), and the reports and recommendations of the task forces and commissions established by the States of Alabama, Alaska, Arkansas, Hawaii, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Rhode Island, Virginia, Texas, and Wyoming;

(2) developing strategies for Federal, State, and local law enforcement designed to protect women against violent crime, and to prosecute those responsible for such crime;

(3) evaluating the adequacy of rules of evidence, practice, and procedure to ensure the effective prosecution and conviction of violent offenders against women and to protect victims from abuse in legal proceedings, and making recommendations for the improvement of such rules;

(4) evaluating the adequacy of pre-trial release, sentencing, incarceration, and post-conviction release in relation to violent offenders against women, and making recommendations designed to ensure that such offenders are restrained from causing further harm to the victim and others and receive appropriate punishment, including means of ensuring that the efficacy of criminal sanctions will not be undermined by parole or other early release mechanisms;

(5) assessing the issuance, formulation, and enforcement of protective orders, whether or not related to a criminal proceeding, and making recommendations for the effective use of such orders to protect women from violence;

(6) assessing the problem of stalking and persistent menacing of women, and recommending effective means of response to the problem;

(7) assessing the problem of sexual exploitation of women and youths through prostitution and in the production of pornography, and recommending effective means of response to the problem; and

(8) generally evaluating the treatment of women as victims of violent crime in the criminal justice system, and making recommendations designed to improve such treatment.

SEC. 303. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The task force shall consist of up to 10 members, who shall be appointed by the Attorney General not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act. The Attorney General shall ensure that the task force includes representatives of State and local law enforcement, the State and local judiciary, and groups dedicated to protecting the rights of victims.

(b) CHAIRMAN.—The Attorney General or the Attorney General's designee shall serve as chairman of the task force.

SEC. 304. PAY.

(a) NO ADDITIONAL COMPENSATION.—Members of the task force who are officers or employees of a governmental agency shall receive no additional compensation by reason of their service on the task force.

(b) PER DIEM.—While away from their homes or regular places of business in the performance of duties for the task force, members of the task force shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

SEC. 305. EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR AND STAFF.

(a) EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The task force shall have an Executive Director who shall be appointed by the Attorney General not later than 30 days after the task force is fully constituted under section 303.

(2) COMPENSATION.—The Executive Director shall be compensated at a rate not to exceed the maximum rate of the basic pay payable under GS-18 of the General Schedule as contained in title 5, United States Code.

(b) STAFF.—With the approval of the task force, the Executive Director may appoint and fix the compensation of such additional personnel as the Executive Director considers necessary to carry out the duties of the task force.

(c) APPLICABILITY OF CIVIL SERVICE LAWS.—The Executive Director and the additional personnel of the task force appointed under subsection (b) may be appointed without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and may be paid without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates.

(d) CONSULTANTS.—Subject to such rules as may be prescribed by the task force, the Executive Director may procure temporary intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code, at rates for individuals not to exceed $200 per day.

SEC. 306. POWERS OF TASK FORCE.

(a) HEARINGS.—For the purpose of carrying out this title, the task force may conduct such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence, as the task force considers appropriate. The task force may administer oaths before the task force.

(b) DELEGATION.—Any member or employee of the task force may, if authorized by the task force, take any action that the task force is authorized to take under this title.

(c) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—The task force may secure directly from any executive department or agency such information as may be necessary to enable the task force to carry out this title, to the extent access to such information is permitted by law. On request of the Attorney General, the head of such a department or agency shall furnish such permitted information to the task force.

(d) MAIL.—The task force may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the United States.

SEC. 307. REPORT.

Not later than 1 year after the date on which the task force is fully constituted under section 303, the Attorney General shall submit a detailed report to the Congress on the findings and recommendations of the task force.

SEC. 308. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATION.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1994, $500,000 to carry out the purposes of this title.

SEC. 309. TERMINATION.

The task force shall cease to exist 30 days after the date on which the Attorney General's report is submitted under section 307. The Attorney General may extend the life of the task force for a period of not to exceed one year.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I am very pleased to again be a cosponsor of the Sexual Assault Prevention Act, and I commend the Republican leader for his zeal and expedience in reintroducing this bill early in this session of Congress.

The phrase "increased crime in America" is no longer met with wide-eyed surprise. There was a time when law-abiding citizens reacted with skepticism at the idea that our Nation could be so riddled with crimes committed in our cities, our streets, and our homes. Now, the American people have become so accustomed to hearing over and over again that crime is on the rise that they no longer respond with surprise, but instead cry out in anger and frustration.

This outrage is especially strong against the cruel, perverse crimes committed against women. One of the most disturbing crimes infecting our society is that of sexual assault and forcible rape. These acts of violent, demented, bald-faced aggression are tantamount to terrorism against women, and the number of forcible rapes in this country is staggering. There were approximately 106,593 rapes reported in 1991, 4 percent higher than that in 1990. In my State of Arizona alone 1,590 rapes were reported.

We cannot, and must not, tolerate violence of this nature. Women in this country are singled out for this kind of violent aggression by criminals who know that our legal system is bogged down with loopholes which only succeed in keeping criminals from serving time behind bars. It is abhorrent to me that women live in fear of rape, and the victims of rape and sexual assault experience the fear and frustration of knowing that their assailant walks the streets freely where law-abiding citizens cannot.

Women in this country face distinct types of crime which need to be addressed specifically. For this reason, I believe that it is imperative that Congress enact the Sexual Assault Prevention Act. This legislation would address the crimes facing women in several ways. First, it authorizes the death penalty for murders committed by sex offenders. Second, the bill would double the maximum penalty for repeat offenders of sexual assaults. Third, it would require the testing of those accused of sexual assaults for the acquired immune deficiency syndrome [AIDS] virus, and disclosing the results of those tests to the victim. Fourth, it authorizes the admission of evidence of prior sexual assault offenses by the defendant in sexual assault trials. Fifth, it designates spousal abuse, including violation of protective orders, and "stalking," as a Federal crime. Finally, the bill would establish a comprehensive grant program to assist State and local efforts to combat sexual violence and domestic violence, and to enforce child support obligations.

Crimes against women are rampant, and this legislation would send a clear, strong message: Those who commit sexual assaults against anyone will be met with swift, stiff penalties.

Mr. President, it is untenable that the greatest democracy in the world should also suffer from this kind of cruel violence. We must use our democratic system as a tool to turn this trend around and make our lives safe again.

By Mr. DOLE (for himself, Mr. MCCONNELL, Mr. PACKWOOD, Mr. LOTT, Mr. GORTON, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. LUGAR, Mr. D'AMATO, Mr. SIMPSON, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. NICKLES, and Mr. CHAFEE):

S. 7. A bill to amend the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 to reduce special interest influence on elections, to increase competition in politics, to reduce campaign costs, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

COMPREHENSIVE CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM ACT

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, the distinguished Republican leader this morning in his remarks made reference to S. 7, the Republican campaign finance bill.

Mr. President, the Republican leader and I believe that this proposal is clearly in the best interests of the country as we seek to improve how elections are handled in the United States.

Mr. President, in 1992 voter turnout increased. Electoral competition increased. Congressional turnover increased. And campaign spending increased.

Most objective observers would say these are indications of a thriving political system. Less objective participants will twist it to fit their objective—partisan revision of campaign finance laws.

All indications are that campaign finance reform is on a fast-track—seemingly easily achievable. Something for the President and Congress to have to show for the next 100 days.

Keeping in mind that the reverberations of whatever passes likely will extend far beyond 100 days, I urge my colleagues to take great care in putting a final bill together.

Mr. President, we should not pass something that is reform in name only just for the sake of passing something.

"Change" and "reform" are terms used rather loosely around here. They are not interchangeable, not synonymous. To change is to alter. To reform is to improve.

Democratic campaign finance bills based on spending limits and taxpayer financing do indeed constitute change. They do not, however, reform. They do not improve the electoral process.

The democratic bills we have seen in the past were good public relations, but lousy legislation. Spending limits have been totally discredited in the Presidential system. Mandatory spending limits are unconstitutional. A taxpayer funded congressional campaign system to provide inducements, or penalties, is not palatable to American taxpayers. In fact, the Presidential Election Campaign Fund is on the verge of bankruptcy, because taxpayers have resoundingly voted no on their annual tax returns.

In the most extensive poll we ever take in this country, every April 15 taxpayers get a chance to vote on how they feel about the public funding of elections. In overwhelming numbers, they are increasingly voting no.

Mr. President, the Democratic campaign finance bills that passed in the last two Congresses were unconstitutional. If the majority goes down that road again and the President signs such a bill into law, then my colleagues can be assured that final disposition will rest with the Supreme Court.

Republicans will not stand by while the first amendment is sacrificed for a facade of reform.

Mr. President, campaign finance reform need not be unconstitutional, partisan, bureaucratic, or taxpayer-funded.

The minority leader and I, joined by Republican colleagues, have today introduced the Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Act—the most extensive and effective reform bill before this Congress, bar none.

It bans PAC's, the epitome of special interest influence and a major incumbent protection tool. Our bill bans soft money. All soft money—party, labor, and that spent by tax exempt organizations. It cuts campaign costs. Provides seed money to challengers, paid for not by taxpayers, but by the political parties. It constricts the millionaire's loophole; restricts and regulates independent expenditures; fights election fraud; and restricts gerrymandering.

Real reform. In stark contrast to the Democrats' bill, the Republican bill puts all the campaign money on top of the table where voters can see it. Nothing would have a more cleansing effect on the electoral process.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at this point in the RECORD S. 7 appear in its entirety. I am introducing it on behalf of the Republican leader, and myself, as well as Senators PACKWOOD, LOTT, GORTON, THURMOND, DOMENICI, LUGAR, D'AMATO, SIMPSON, STEVENS, and CHAFEE. I anticipate that virtually all of the Republicans will join this bill shortly.

I also ask unanimous consent that a section-by-section analysis be included at this point.

S. 7

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—REDUCTION OF SPECIAL INTEREST INFLUENCE

Subtitle A—Elimination of Political Action Committees From Federal Election Activities

SEC. 101. BAN ON ACTIVITIES OF POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES IN FEDERAL ELECTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title III of FECA (2 U.S.C. 301 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"BAN ON FEDERAL ELECTION ACTIVITIES BY POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES

"SEC. 324. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, no person other than an individual or a political committee may make contributions, solicit or receive contributions, or make expenditures for the purpose of influencing an election for Federal office."

(b) DEFINITION OF POLITICAL COMMITTEE.—(1) Section 301(4) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(4)) is amended to read as follows:

"(4) The term 'political committee' means—

"(A) the principal campaign committee of a candidate;

"(B) any national, State, or district committee of a political party, including any subordinate committee thereof;

"(C) any local committee of a political party which—

"(i) receives contributions aggregating in excess of $5,000 during a calendar year;

"(ii) makes payments exempted from the definition of contribution or expenditure under paragraph (8) or (9) aggregating in excess of $5,000 during a calendar year; or

"(iii) makes contributions or expenditures aggregating in excess of $1,000 during a calendar year; and

"(D) any committee jointly established by a principal campaign committee and any committee described in subparagraph (B) or (C) for the purpose of conducting joint fundraising activities."

(2) Section 316(b)(2) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441b(b)(2)) is amended by striking subparagraphs (B) and (C).

(c) CANDIDATE'S COMMITTEES.—(1) Section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(9) For the purposes of the limitations provided by paragraphs (1) and (2), any political committee which is established or financed or maintained or controlled by any candidate or Federal officeholder shall be deemed to be an authorized committee of such candidate or officeholder."

(2) Section 302(e)(3) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 432) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) No political committee that supports or has supported more than one candidate may be designated as an authorized committee, except that—

"(A) a candidate for the office of President nominated by a political party may designate the national committee of such political party as the candidate's principal campaign committee, but only if that national committee maintains separate books of account with respect to its functions as a principal campaign committee; and

"(B) a candidate may designate a political committee established solely for the purpose of joint fundraising by such candidates as an authorized committee."

(d) RULES APPLICABLE WHEN BAN NOT IN EFFECT.—For purposes of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, during any period in which the limitation under section 324 of that Act (as added by subsection (a)) is not in effect—

(1) the amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) shall not be in effect; and

(2) it shall be unlawful for any person that—

(A) is treated as a political committee by reason of paragraph (1); and

(B) is not directly or indirectly established, administered, or supported by a connected organization which is a corporation, labor organization, or trade association, to make contributions to any candidate or the candidate's authorized committee for any election aggregating in excess of $1,000.

Subtitle B—Ban on Soft Money in Federal Elections

SEC. 111. BAN ON SOFT MONEY.

Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(1) BAN ON SOFT MONEY.—(1) It shall be unlawful for the purpose of influencing any election to Federal office—

"(A) to solicit or receive any soft money; or

"(B) to make any payments from soft money.

"(2) For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'soft money' means any amount—

"(A) solicited or received from a source which is prohibited under section 316(a);

"(B) contributed, solicited, or received in excess of the contribution limits under section 315; or

"(C) not subject to the recordkeeping, reporting, or disclosure requirements under section 304 or any other provision of this Act."

SEC. 112. RESTRICTIONS ON PARTY COMMITTEES.

(a) DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION BY POLITICAL COMMITTEE.—(1) Section 302(c) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 432(c)) is amended—

(A) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (4);

(B) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting "; and"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(6) each account maintained by a political committee of a political party (including Federal and non-Federal accounts), and deposits into, and disbursements from, each such account."

(2) Section 304(b) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 434(b)) is amended—

(A) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (7);

(B) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (8) and inserting "; and"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(9) each account maintained by a political committee of a political party (including Federal and non-Federal accounts), and deposits into, and disbursements from, each such account."

(b) ALLOCATION OF EXPENDITURES FOR MIXED ACTIVITIES.—Title III of FECA, as amended by section 101(a), is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"REQUIRED ALLOCATION OF CONTRIBUTIONS AND EXPENDITURES FOR MIXED ACTIVITIES BY POLITICAL PARTY COMMITTEES

"SEC. 325. (a) REGULATIONS REQUIRING ALLOCATION FOR MIXED ACTIVITIES.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this section, the Commission shall issue regulations providing for a method for allocating the contributions and expenditures for any mixed activity between Federal and non-Federal accounts.

"(b) GUIDELINES FOR ALLOCATION.—(1) The regulations issued under subsection (a) shall—

"(A) provide for the allocation of contributions and expenditures in accordance with this subsection; and

"(B) require reporting under this Act of expenditures in connection with a mixed activity to disclose—

"(i) the method and rationale used in allocating the cost of the mixed activity to Federal and non-Federal accounts; and

"(ii) the amount and percentage of the cost of the mixed activity allocated to such accounts.

"(2) In the case of a mixed activity that consists of a voter registration drive, get-out-the-vote drive, or other activity designed to contact voters (other than an activity to which paragraph (3) or (4) applies), amounts shall be allocated on the basis of the composition of the ballot for the political jurisdiction in which the activity occurs, except that in no event shall the amounts allocated to the Federal account be less than—

"(A) 33½ percent of the total amount in the case of the national committee of a political party; or

"(B) 25 percent of the total amount in the case of a State or local committee of a political party or any subordinate committee thereof.

"(3) In the case of a mixed activity that consists of preparing and distributing brochures, handbills, slate cards, or other printed materials identifying or seeking support of (or opposition to) candidates for both Federal offices and non-Federal offices, amounts shall be allocated on the basis of total space devoted to such candidates, except that in no event shall the amounts allocated to the Federal account be less than the percentages under subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (2).

"(4)(A) In the case of a mixed activity by a national committee of a political party that consists of broadcast media advertising (or any portion thereof) that promotes (or is in opposition to) a political party without mentioning the name of any individual candidate for Federal office or non-Federal office, amounts allocated to the Federal account shall not be less than—

"(i) 50 percent of the total amount in the case of advertising in the national media market; and

"(ii) 40 percent in the case of advertising other than the national media market.

"(B) In the case of a mixed activity by a State or local committee of a political party or any subordinate committee thereof that consists of broadcast media advertising (or any portion thereof) described in subparagraph (A), costs shall be allocated on the basis of the composition of the ballot for the political jurisdiction in which the activity occurs, except that in no event shall the amounts allocated to the Federal account be less than 33 1/3 percent of the total amount.

"(5) Overhead and fundraising costs of a political committee of a political party for each 2-calendar year period ending with the calendar year in which a regularly scheduled election for Federal office occurs shall be allocated to the Federal account on the basis of the same ratio which—

"(A) the aggregate amount of receipts and disbursements of such political committee during such period in connection with elections for Federal office, bears to

"(B) the aggregate amount of receipts and disbursements of such political committee during such period.

"(c) MIXED ACTIVITY.—(1) For purposes of this section, the term 'mixed activity' means an activity the expenditures in connection with which are required under this Act to be allocated between Federal and non-Federal accounts because such activity affects 1 or more elections for Federal office and 1 or more non-Federal elections.

"(2) Activities under paragraph (1) include—

"(A) voter registration drives, get-out-the-vote drives, telephone banks, and membership communications in connection with elections for Federal offices and elections for non-Federal offices;

"(B) general political advertising, brochures, or other materials that include any reference (however incidental) to both a candidate for Federal office and a candidate for non-Federal office, or that urge support for or opposition to a political party or to all the candidates of a political party;

"(C) overhead expenses; and

"(D) activities described in clauses (v), (x), and (xii) of section 301(8)(B).

"(d) ACCOUNTS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'Federal account' means an account to which receipts and disbursements are allocated to elections for Federal offices; and

"(2) the term 'non-Federal account' means an account to which receipts and disbursements are allocated to elections other than non-Federal offices."

SEC. 113. PROTECTION FOR EMPLOYEES.

(a) CONTRIBUTIONS TO ALL POLITICAL COMMITTEES INCLUDED.—Section 316(b)(2) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441b(b)(2)) is amended by inserting "political committee," after "campaign committee."

(b) APPLICABILITY OF REQUIREMENTS TO LABOR ORGANIZATIONS.—Section 316(b) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441b(b)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(B)(A) Subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of paragraph (2) shall not apply to a labor organization unless the organization meets the requirements of subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D).

"(B) The requirements of this subparagraph are met only if the labor organization provides, at least once annually, to all employees within the labor organization's bargaining unit or units (and to new employees within 30 days after commencement of their employment) written notification presented in a manner to inform any such employee—

"(i) that an employee cannot be obligated to pay, through union dues or any other mandatory payment to a labor organization, for the political activities of the labor organization, including, but not limited to, the maintenance and operation of, or solicitation of contributions to, a political committee, political communications to members, and voter registration and get-out-the-vote campaigns;

"(ii) that no employee may be required actually to join any labor organization, but if a collective bargaining agreement covering an employee purports to require membership or payment of dues or other fees to a labor organization as a condition of employment, the employee may elect instead to pay an agency fee to the labor organization;

"(iii) that the amount of the agency fee shall be limited to the employee's pro rata share of the cost of the labor organization's exclusive representation services to the employee's collective bargaining unit, including collective bargaining, contract administration, and grievance adjustment;

"(iv) that an employee who elects to be a full member of the labor organization and pay membership dues is entitled to a reduction of those dues by the employee's pro rata share of the total spending by the labor organization for political activities;

"(v) that the cost of the labor organization's exclusive representation services, and the amount of spending by such organization for political activities, shall be computed on the basis of such cost and spending for the immediately preceding fiscal year of such organization; and

"(vi) of the amount of the labor organization's full membership dues, initiation fees, and assessments for the current year; the amount of the reduced membership dues, subtracting the employee's pro rata share of the organization's spending for political activities, for the current year; and the amount of the agency fee for the current year.

"(C) The requirements of this subparagraph are met only if, for purposes of verifying the cost of such labor organization's exclusive representation services, the labor organization provides all represented employees an annual examination by an independent certified public accountant of financial statements supplied by such organization which verify the cost of such services; except that such examination shall, at a minimum, constitute a 'special report' as interpreted by the Association of Independent Certified Public Accountants.

"(D) The requirements of this subparagraph are met only if the labor organization—

"(i) maintains procedures to promptly determine the costs that may properly be charged to agency fee payors as costs of exclusive representation, and explains such procedures in the written notification required under subparagraph (B); and

"(ii) if any person challenges the costs which may be properly charged as costs of exclusive representation—

"(I) provides a mutually selected impartial decisionmaker to hear and decide such challenge pursuant to rules of discovery and evidence and subject to de novo review by the National Labor Relations Board or an applicable court; and

"(II) places in escrow amounts reasonably in dispute pending the outcome of the challenge.

"(E)(i) A labor organization that does not satisfy the requirements of subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D) shall finance any expenditures specified in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) of paragraph (2) only with funds legally collected under this Act for its separate segregated fund.

"(ii) For purposes of this paragraph, subparagraph (A) of paragraph (2) shall apply only with respect to communications expressly advocating the election or defeat of any clearly identified candidate for elective public office."

SEC. 114. RESTRICTIONS ON SOFT MONEY ACTIVITIES OF TAX-EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 501 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to exemption from tax) is amended by redesignating subsection (n) as subsection (o) and by inserting after subsection (m) the following new subsection:

"(n) DENIAL OF TAX-EXEMPT STATUS FOR ACTIVITIES TO INFLUENCE A FEDERAL ELECTION.—An organization shall not be treated as exempt from tax under subsection (a) if such organization participates or intervenes in any political campaign on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for Federal office."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to any participation or intervention by an organization on or after September 1, 1992.

SEC. 115. DENIAL OF TAX-EXEMPT STATUS FOR CERTAIN POLITICALLY ACTIVE ORGANIZATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 501 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to exemption from tax), as amended by section 114, is amended by redesignating subsection (o) as subsection (p) and by inserting after subsection (n) the following new subsection:

"(o) DENIAL OF TAX-EXEMPT STATUS FOR CERTAIN POLITICALLY ACTIVE ORGANIZATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An organization shall not be treated as exempt from tax under subsection (a) if—

"(A) such organization devotes any of its operating budget to—

"(i) voter registration or get-out-the-vote campaigns; or

"(ii) participation or intervention in any political campaign on behalf of or in opposition to any candidate for public office; and

"(B) a candidate, or an authorized committee of a candidate, has—

"(i) solicited contributions to, or on behalf of, such organization; and

"(ii) the solicitation is made in cooperation, consultation, or concert with, or at the request or suggestion of, such organization.

"(2) CANDIDATE DEFINED.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'candidate' has the meaning given such term by paragraph (2) of section 301 of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 431(2)).

"(B) MEMBERS OF CONGRESS.—The term 'candidate' shall include any Senator or Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the Congress unless—

"(i) the date for filing for nomination, or election to, such office has passed and such individual has not so filed; and

"(ii) such individual is not otherwise a candidate described in subparagraph (A)."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years ending after the date of enactment of this Act, but only with respect to solicitations or suggestions by candidates made after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 116. CONTRIBUTIONS TO CERTAIN POLITICAL ORGANIZATIONS MAINTAINED BY A CANDIDATE.

(a) CONTRIBUTIONS BY PERSONS IN GENERAL AND BY MULTICANDIDATE POLITICAL COMMITTEES.—(1) Section 315(a)(1)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(1)(A)) is amended by striking "candidate and his authorized political committees" and inserting "candidate, a candidate's authorized political committees, and any political organizations (other than authorized committees) maintained by a candidate".

(2) Section 315(a)(2)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(2)(A)) is amended by striking "candidate and his authorized political committees" and inserting "candidate, a candidate's authorized political committees, and any political organizations (other than authorized committees) maintained by a candidate".

(3) Section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)), as amended by section 101(c), is amended by inserting at the end the following new paragraph:

"(10) For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(A) and (2)(A), the term 'political organization maintained by a candidate' means any non-Federal political action committee, non-Federal multicandidate political committee, or any other form of political organization regulated under State law which is not a political committee of a national, State, or local political party—

"(A) that is set up by or on behalf of a candidate and engages in political activity which directly influences Federal elections; and

"(B) for which that candidate has solicited a contribution."

(b) CONTRIBUTIONS BY NATIONAL BANKS, CORPORATIONS, AND LABOR ORGANIZATIONS.—(1) Section 316(b)(2) of the FECA (2 U.S.C. 441b(b)(2)) is amended by striking "candidate, campaign committee" and inserting "candidate, political organization (other than an authorized committee) maintained by a candidate, campaign committee."

(2) Section 316(b) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441b(b)), as amended by section 113(b), is amended by inserting at the end the following new paragraph:

"(9) For the purposes of paragraph (2), the term 'political organization maintained by a candidate' means any non-Federal political action committee, non-Federal multicandidate political committee, or any other form of political organization regulated under State law which is not a political committee of a national, State, or local political party—

"(A) that is set up by or on behalf of a candidate and engages in political activity which directly influences Federal elections; and

"(B) for which that candidate has solicited a contribution."

(c) DATE OF APPLICATION.—The amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) shall apply to contributions described in sections 315 and 316 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a and 441b) made in response to solicitations made after January 1, 1993.

SEC. 117. CONTRIBUTIONS TO STATE AND LOCAL PARTY COMMITTEES.

Section 315(a)(1) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(1)) is amended—

(1) by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (B);

(2) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting "; or"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) to the political committees established and maintained by a State or local political party, in connection with any activity that may influence an election for Federal office, in any calendar year which, in the aggregate, exceed the lesser of

"(i) $50,000; or

"(ii) the difference between $50,000 and the amount of contributions made by such person to any political committees established and maintained by a national political party."

Subtitle C—Other Activities

SEC. 121. MODIFICATIONS OF CONTRIBUTION LIMITS ON INDIVIDUALS.

(a) INCREASE IN CANDIDATE LIMIT.—Subparagraph (A) of section 315(a)(1) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(1)(A)) is amended by striking "$1,000" and inserting "the applicable amount".

(b) APPLICABLE AMOUNT DEFINED.—Section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)), as amended by section 116(a)(3), is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(11) For purposes of subsection (a)(1)(A)—

"(A) The term 'applicable amount' means—

"(i) $1,000 in the case of contributions by a person to—

"(I) a candidate for the office of President or Vice President or such candidate's authorized committees; or

"(II) any other candidate or such candidate's authorized committees if, at the time such contributions are made, such person is a resident of the State with respect to which such candidate seeks Federal office; and

"(ii) $500 in the case of contributions by any other person to a candidate described in clause (i)(II) or such candidate's authorized committees.

"(B) At the beginning of 1993, and each odd-numbered calendar year thereafter, the Secretary of Labor shall certify in the same manner as under subsection (c)(1) the percent difference between the price index for the preceding calendar year and the price index for calendar year 1991. Each of the dollar limits under subparagraph (A) shall be increased by such percent difference and rounded to the nearest $100. Each amount so increased shall be the amount in effect for the calendar year for which determined and the succeeding calendar year."

SEC. 122. POLITICAL PARTIES.

ITEMS NOT TREATED AS CONTRIBUTIONS OR EXPENDITURES.—(1) Section 301(8)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)(B)) is amended—

(A) in clauses (x) and (xii), by inserting "national," after "the payment by a"; and

(B) in clause (xii), by inserting "general research activities," after "the costs of".

(2) Section 301(9)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(9)(B)) is amended—

(A) in clauses (viii) and (ix), by inserting "national," after "the payment by a"; and

(B) in clause (ix), by inserting "general research activities," after "the costs of".

SEC. 123. CONTRIBUTIONS THROUGH INTERMEDIARIES AND CONDUITS.

Section 315(a)(8) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)(8)) is amended to read as follows:

"(8) For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) Contributions made by a person, either directly or indirectly, to or on behalf of a particular candidate, including contributions which are in any way earmarked or otherwise directed through an intermediary or conduit to such candidate, shall be treated as contributions from such person to such candidate.

"(B) If a contribution is made by a person either directly or indirectly to or on behalf of a particular candidate through an intermediary or conduit, the intermediary or conduit shall report the original source and the intended recipient of such contribution to the Commission and to the intended recipient.

"(C) No conduit or intermediary shall deliver or arrange to have delivered contributions from more than 2 persons who are employees of the same employer or who are members of the same trade association, membership organization, or labor organization.

"(D) No person required to register with the Clerk of the House of Representatives or the Secretary of the Senate under section 308 of the Federal Regulation of Lobbying Act (2 U.S.C. 267), or an officer, employee or agent of such a person, may act as an intermediary or conduit with respect to a contribution to a candidate for Federal office."

SEC. 124. INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURES.

(a) ATTRIBUTION OF COMMUNICATIONS; REPORTS.—(1) Section 318 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441d) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c)(1) If any person makes an independent expenditure through a broadcast communication on any television or radio station, the broadcast communication shall include a statement—

"(A) in such television broadcast, that is clearly readable to the viewer and appears continuously during the entire length of such communication; or

"(B) in such radio broadcast, that is clearly audible to the viewer and is aired at the beginning and ending of such broadcast, setting forth the name of such person and, in the case of a political committee, the name of any connected or affiliated organization.

"(2) If any person makes an independent expenditure through a newspaper, magazine, outdoor advertising facility, direct mailing, or other type of general public political advertising, the communication shall include, in addition to the other information required by this section—

"(A) the following sentence: 'The cost of presenting this communication is not subject to any campaign contribution limits.'; and

"(B) a statement setting forth the name of the person who paid for the communication and, in the case of a political committee, the name of any connected or affiliated organization, and the name of the president or treasurer of such organization.

"(3) Any person making an independent expenditure described in paragraph (1) or (2) shall furnish, by certified mail, return receipt requested, the following information, to each candidate and to the Commission, not later than the date and time of the first public transmission of the communication:

"(A) Effective notice that the person plans to make an independent expenditure for the purpose of financing a communication which expressly advocates the election or defeat of a clearly identified candidate.

"(B) An exact copy of the intended communication, or a complete description of the contents of the intended communication, including the entirety of any texts to be used in conjunction with such communication, and a complete description of any photographs, films, or any other visual devices to be used in conjunction with such communication.

"(C) All dates and times when such communication will be publicly transmitted."

(2) Section 318(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441d(a)) is amended by striking "Whenever" and inserting "Except as provided in subsection (c), whenever".

(b) DEFINITION OF INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURE.—Paragraph (17) of section 301 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(17)) is amended—

(1) by striking "(17) The term" and inserting "(17)(A) The term"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(B) For the purpose of subparagraph (A), an expenditure shall be considered to be made in cooperation, consultation, or concert with, or at the request or suggestion of, a candidate, authorized committee, or agent, if there is any arrangement, coordination, or direction by the candidate or the candidate's agent prior to the publication, distribution, display, or broadcast of a communication, and it shall be presumed to be so made when it is—

"(i) based on information about the candidate's plans, projects, or needs provided to the person making the expenditure by the candidate, or by the candidate's agents, with a view toward having an expenditure made; or

"(ii) made by or through any person who is, or has been—

"(I) authorized to raise or expend funds on behalf of the candidate or the candidate's authorized committees;

"(II) serving as an officer of the candidate's authorized committees; or

"(III) providing professional services to, or receiving any form of compensation or reimbursement from, the candidate, the candidate's committee, or agent."

(c) HEARINGS ON COMPLAINTS.—Section 309(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(13) Within 3 days after the Commission receives a complaint filed pursuant to this section which alleges that an independent expenditure was made with the cooperation or consultation of a candidate, or an authorized committee or agent of such candidate, or was made in concert with or at the request or suggestion of an authorized committee or agent of such candidate, the Commission shall provide for a hearing to determine such matter."

(d) EXPEDITED JUDICIAL REVIEW.—Section 310 of the FECA (2 U.S.C. 437h) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "It shall be the duty of the courts to advance on the docket and to expedite to the greatest possible extent the disposition of any matter relating to the making or alleged making of an independent expenditure."

TITLE II—INCREASE OF COMPETITION IN POLITICS

SEC. 201. SEED MONEY FOR CHALLENGERS.

Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a), as amended by section 111, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(j)(1) Notwithstanding subsection (a)(2), the congressional campaign committee or the senatorial campaign committee of a national political party, whichever is applicable, may make contributions to an eligible candidate (and the candidate's authorized committees) which in the aggregate do not exceed the lesser of—

"(A) $100,000; or

"(B) the aggregate qualified matching contributions received by such candidate and the candidate's authorized committees.

"(2) Any contribution under paragraph (1) shall not be treated as an expenditure for purposes of subsection (d)(3).

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualified matching contributions' means contributions made during the period of the election cycle preceding the primary election by an individual who, at the time such contributions are made, is a resident of the State in which the election with respect to which such contributions are made is to be held.

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'eligible candidate' means a candidate for Federal office (other than President or Vice President) who does not hold Federal office."

SEC. 202. CANDIDATE EXPENDITURES FROM PERSONAL FUNDS.

Section 315 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a), as amended by section 201, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(k)(1)(A) Not less than 15 days after a candidate qualifies for a primary election ballot under State law, the candidate shall file with the Commission, and each other candidate who has qualified for that ballot, a declaration stating whether the candidate intends to expend for the primary and general election an amount exceeding $250,000 from—

"(i) the candidate's personal funds;

"(ii) the funds of the candidate's immediate family; and

"(iii) personal loans incurred by the candidate and the candidate's immediate family in connection with the candidate's election campaign.

"(B) The declaration required by subparagraph (A) shall be in such form and contain such information as the Commission may require by regulation.

"(2) Notwithstanding subsection (a), if a candidate—

"(A) declares under paragraph (1) that the candidate intends to expend for the primary and general election funds described in such paragraph an amount exceeding $250,000;

"(B) expends such funds in the primary and general election an amount exceeding $250,000; or

"(C) fails to file the declaration required by paragraph (1), the limitations on contributions under subsection (a), and the limitations on expenditures under subsection (d), shall be modified as provided under paragraph (3) with respect to other candidates for the same office who are not described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C).

"(3) For purposes of paragraph (2)—

"(A) the limitation under subsection (a)(1)(A) shall be increased to $5,000; and

"(B) if a candidate described in paragraph (2)(B) expends more than $1,000,000 of funds described in paragraph (1) in the primary and general election—

"(i) the limitation under subsection (a)(1)(A) shall not apply;

"(ii) the limitation under subsection (a)(2) shall not apply to any political committee of a political party; and

"(iii) the limitation under subsection (d)(3) shall not apply.

The $5,000 amount under subparagraph (A) shall be adjusted each calendar year in the same manner as amounts are adjusted under subsection (a)(11)(B).

"(4) If—

"(A) the modifications under paragraph (3) apply for a convention or a primary election by reason of 1 or more candidates taking (or failing to take) any action described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) of paragraph (2); and

"(B) such candidates are not candidates in any subsequent election in the same election campaign, including the general election, paragraph (3) shall cease to apply to the other candidates in such campaign.

"(5) A candidate who—

"(A) declares, pursuant to paragraph (1), that the candidate does not intend to expend funds described in paragraph (1) in excess of $250,000; and

"(B) subsequently changes such declaration or expends such funds in excess of that amount, shall file an amended declaration with the Commission and notify all other candidates for the same office within 24 hours after changing such declaration or exceeding such limits, whichever first occurs, by sending a notice by certified mail, return receipt requested.

"(6) Contributions to a candidate or a candidate's authorized committees may be used to repay any expenditure or personal loan incurred in connection with the candidate's election to Federal office by a candidate or a member of the candidate's immediate family only to the extent that such repayment—

"(A) is limited to the amount of such expenditure or the principal amount of such loan (and no interest is paid); and

"(B) is not made from any such contributions received after the date of the general election to which such expenditure or loan relates.

"(7) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'immediate family' means—

"(A) a candidate's spouse;

"(B) any child, stepchild, parent, grandparent, brother, half-brother, sister, or half-sister of the candidate or the candidate's spouse; and

"(C) the spouse of a person described in subparagraph (B).

"(8) The Commission shall take such action as it deems necessary under the enforcement provisions of this Act to ensure compliance with this subsection."

SEC. 203. FRANKED COMMUNICATIONS.

(a) AMENDMENT OF TITLE 39, UNITED STATES CODE.—(1) Section 3210(a)(6)(A) of title 39, United States Code is amended—

(A) by striking clause (i) and inserting the following new clause:

"(i) if the mass mailing is mailed during the calendar year of any primary or general election (whether regular or runoff) in which the Member is a candidate for reelection; or"; and

(B) in clause (ii)(II), by striking "fewer than 60 days immediately before the date" and inserting "during the year".

(2) Section 3210(a)(6)(C) of title 39, United States Code, is amended by striking "fewer than 60 days immediately before the date" and inserting "during the year".

(3) Section 3210(a)(6) of title 39, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by redesignating subparagraphs (D), (E), and (F) as subparagraphs (E), (F), and (G), respectively; and

(B) by inserting after subparagraph (C) the following new subparagraph:

"(D)(i)(I) When a Member of the Senate disseminates information under the frank by a mass mailing, the Member shall register annually with the Secretary of the Senate such mass mailings. Such registration shall be made by filing with the Secretary of the Senate a copy of the matter mailed and providing, on a form supplied by the Secretary of the Senate, a description of the group or groups of persons to whom the mass mailing was mailed.

"(II) The Secretary of the Senate shall promptly make available for public inspection and copying a copy of the mail matter registered and a description of the group or groups of persons to whom the mass mailing was mailed.

"(ii)(I) When a Member of the House of Representatives disseminates information under the frank by a mass mailing, the Member shall register annually with the Clerk of the House of Representatives such mass mailings. Such registration shall be made by filing with the Clerk of the House of Representatives a copy of the matter mailed and providing, on a form supplied by the Clerk of the House of Representatives, a description of the group or groups of persons to whom the mass mailing was mailed.

"(II) The Clerk of the House of Representatives shall promptly make available for public inspection and copying a copy of the mail matter registered and a description of the group or groups of persons to whom the mass mailing was mailed."

(b) AMENDMENT OF STANDING RULES OF THE SENATE.—(1) Paragraph 1 of Rule XL of the Standing Rules of the Senate is amended by striking "less than sixty days immediately before the date" and inserting "during the year".

(2) This subsection is enacted—

(A) as an exercise of the rulemaking power of the Senate; and

(B) with full recognition of the constitutional right of the Senate to change the rules at any time, in the same manner and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of the Senate.

SEC. 204. LIMITATIONS ON GERRYMANDERING.

(a) REAPPORTIONMENT OF REPRESENTATIVES.—Section 22 of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the fifteenth and subsequent decennial censuses and to provide for apportionment of Representatives in Congress," approved June 18, 1929 (2 U.S.C. 2a), is amended—

(1) by striking subsection (c); and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(c)(1) In each State entitled in the One Hundred Third Congress or in any subsequent Congress to more than one Representative under an apportionment made pursuant to the second paragraph of the Act entitled 'An Act for the relief of Doctor Ricardo Vallejo Samala and to provide for congressional redistricting', approved December 14, 1967 (2 U.S.C. 2c), as in effect prior to the date of enactment of this subsection, there shall be established in the manner provided by the law of the State a number of districts equal to the number of Representatives to which such State is so entitled, and Representatives shall be elected only by eligible voters from districts so established, no district to elect more than 1 Representative.

"(2) Such districts shall be established in accordance with the provisions of this Act as soon as practicable after the decennial census date established in section 141(a) of title 13, United States Code, but in no case later than such time as is reasonably sufficient for their use in the elections for the One Hundred Third Congress and in each fifth Congress thereafter.

"(d)(1) The number of persons in congressional districts within each State shall be as nearly equal as is practicable, as determined under the then most recent decennial census.

"(2) The enumeration established according to the Federal decennial census pursuant to article I, section II, United States Constitution, shall be the sole basis of population for the establishment of congressional districts.

"(e) Congressional districts shall be comprised of contiguous territory, including adjoining insular territory.

"(f) Congressional districts shall not be established with the intent or effect of diluting the voting strength of any person, group of persons, or members of any political party.

"(g) Congressional districts shall be compact in form. In establishing such districts, nearby population shall not be bypassed in favor of more distant population.

"(h) Congressional district boundaries shall avoid the unnecessary division of counties or their equivalent in any State.

"(i) Congressional district boundaries shall be established in such a manner so as to minimize the division of cities, towns, villages, and other political subdivisions.

"(j)(1) It is the intent of the Congress that congressional districts established pursuant to this section be subject to reasonable public scrutiny and comment prior to their establishment.

"(2) At the same time that Federal decennial census tabulations data, reports, maps, or other material or information produced or obtained using Federal funds and associated with the congressional reapportionment and redistricting process are made available to any officer or public body in any State, those materials shall be made available by the State at the cost of duplication to any person from that State meeting the qualifications for voting in an election of a Member of the House of Representatives.

"(k) Nothing in this section shall be construed to supersede any provision of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 1973 et seq.).

"(l)(1) A State may establish by law criteria for implementing the standards set forth in this section.

"(2) Nothing in this section shall be construed as limiting the power of a State to strengthen or add to the standards set forth in this section, or to interpret those standards in a manner consistent with the law of the State, to the extent that any additional criteria or interpretations are not in conflict with this section.

"(m)(1) The district courts of the United States shall have exclusive jurisdiction to hear and determine any action to enforce subsections (c) through (l).

"(2) A person who meets a State's qualifications for voting in an election of a Member of the House of Representatives from the State may bring an action in the district court for the district in which the person resides to enforce subsections (c) through (l) with regard to the State in which the person resides.

"(3) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the district courts of the United States shall have authority to issue all judgments, orders, and decrees necessary to ensure that any criteria established by State law pursuant to this section are not in conflict with this section.

"(4) With the exception of actions brought for the relief described in paragraph (3), the district court for the purposes of this section shall be a three-judge district court pursuant to section 2284 of title 28, United States Code.

"(5) On motion of any party in accordance with section 1657 of title 28, United States Code, it shall be the duty of the district court to assign the case for briefing and hearing at the earliest practicable date, and to cause the case to be in every way expedited. The district court shall have authority to enter all judgments, orders and decrees necessary to bring a State into compliance with this Act.

"(6) An action to challenge the establishment of a congressional district in a State after a Federal decennial census may not be brought after the end of the 9-month period beginning on the date on which the last such district is so established.

"(7) For the purposes of this section, an order dismissing a complaint for failure to state a cause of action shall be appealable in accordance with section 1253 of title 28, United States Code.

"(8) If a district court fails to establish a briefing and hearing schedule that will permit resolution of the case prior to the next general election, any party may seek a writ of mandamus from the United States Court of Appeals for the circuit in which the district court sits. The court of appeals shall have jurisdiction over the motion for a writ of mandamus and shall establish an expedited briefing and hearing schedule for resolution of the motion. Such a motion shall not stay proceedings in the district court.

"(9) If a district court determines that the congressional districts established by a State's redistricting authority pursuant to this Act are not in compliance with this Act, the court shall remand the plan to the State's redistricting authority to establish new districts consistent with subsections (c) through (l). The district court shall retain jurisdiction over the case after remand.

"(10) If, after a remand under paragraph (9), the district court determines that the congressional districts established by a State's redistricting authority under the remand order are not consistent with subsections (c) through (l), the district court shall enter an order establishing districts that are consistent with subsections (c) through (l) for the next general congressional election.

"(11) If any question of State law arises in a case under this section that would require abstention, the district court shall not abstain. However, in any State permitting certification of such questions, the district court shall certify the question to the highest court of the State whose law is in question. Such certification shall not stay the proceedings in the district court or delay the court's determination of the question of State law.

"(12) With the exception of actions brought for the relief described in paragraph (3), an appeal from a decision of the district court under this section shall be taken in accordance with section 1253 of title 28, United States Code. An appeal under this paragraph shall be noticed in the district court and perfected by docketing in the Supreme Court within thirty days of the entry of judgment below. Appeals brought to the Supreme Court under this paragraph shall be heard as soon as practicable.

"(13) For purposes of this section, the term 'redistricting authority' means the officer or public body having initial responsibility for the congressional redistricting of a State."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS AND REPEALER.—(1) The first sentence of section 1657 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking "chapter 153 or" and inserting "chapter 153, any action under subsection (m) through (l) of section 22 of the Act entitled 'An Act to provide for the fifteenth and subsequent censuses and to provide for apportionment of Representatives in Congress,' approved June 18, 1929 (2 U.S.C. 2a), or".

(2) Section 141(c) of title 13, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following: "In circumstances in which this subsection requires that the Secretary provide criteria to, consult with, or report tabulations of population to (or if the Secretary for any reason provides material or information to) the public bodies having responsibility for the legislative apportionment or districting of a State, the Secretary shall provide, without cost, such criteria, consultations, tabulations, or other material or information simultaneously to the leadership of each political party represented on such public bodies. For purposes of this subsection, the term 'political party' means any political party whose candidates for Representatives to Congress received, as the candidates of such party, 5 percent or more of the total number of votes received statewide by all candidates for such office in any of the 5 most recent general congressional elections. Such materials may include those developed by the Census Bureau for redistricting purposes for the 1990 Census."

(3) The second paragraph of the Act entitled "An Act for the relief of Doctor Ricardo Vallejo Samala and to provide for congressional redistricting", approved December 14, 1967 (2 U.S.C. 2c), is repealed.

SEC. 205. ELECTION FRAUD, OTHER PUBLIC CORRUPTION, AND FRAUD IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

(a) ELECTION FRAUD AND OTHER PUBLIC CORRUPTION.—(1) Chapter 11 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 225. Public corruption

"(a) Whoever, in a circumstance described in subsection (d), deprives or defrauds, or endeavors to deprive or to defraud, by any scheme or artifice, the inhabitants of a State or political subdivision of a State of the honest services of an official or employee of such State, political subdivision, or Indian tribal government shall be fined under this title, or imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(b) Whoever, in a circumstance described in subsection (d), deprives or defrauds, or endeavors to deprive or to defraud, by any scheme or artifice, the inhabitants of a State or political subdivision of a State of a fair and impartially conducted election process in any primary, runoff, special, or general election—

"(1) through the procurement, casting, or tabulation of ballots that are materially false, fictitious, or fraudulent or that are invalid, under the laws of the State in which the election is held;

"(2) through paying or offering to pay any person for voting;

"(3) through the procurement or submission of voter registrations that contain false material information, or omit material information; or

"(4) through the filing of any report required to be filed under State law regarding an election campaign that contains false material information or omits material information, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(c) Whoever, being a public official or an official or employee of a State, political subdivision of a State, or Indian tribal government, in a circumstance described in subsection (d), deprives or defrauds, or endeavors to deprive or to defraud, by any scheme or artifice, the inhabitants of a State or political subdivision of a State of the right to have the affairs of the State, political subdivision, or Indian tribal government conducted on the basis of complete, true, and accurate material information, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(d) The circumstances referred to in subsections (a), (b), and (c) are that—

"(1) for the purpose of executing or concealing such scheme or artifice or attempting to do so, the person so doing—

"(A) places in any post office or authorized depository for mail matter, any matter or thing whatever to be sent or delivered by the Postal Service, or takes or receives therefrom, any such matter or thing, or knowingly causes to be delivered by mail according to the direction thereon, or at the place at which it is directed to be delivered by the person to whom it is addressed, any such matter or thing;

"(B) transmits or causes to be transmitted by means of wire, radio, or television communication in interstate or foreign commerce any writings, signs, signals, pictures, or sounds;

"(C) transports or causes to be transported any person or thing, or induces any person to travel in or to be transported in, interstate or foreign commerce; or

"(D) uses or causes to use of any facility of interstate or foreign commerce;

"(2) the scheme or artifice affects or constitutes an attempt to affect in any manner or degree, or would if executed or concealed so affect, interstate or foreign commerce; or

"(3) as applied to an offense under subsection (b), an objective of the scheme or artifice is to secure the election of an official who, if elected, would have some authority over the administration of funds derived from an Act of Congress totaling $10,000 or more during the twelve-month period immediately preceding or following the election or date of the offense.

"(e) Whoever deprives or defrauds, or endeavors to deprive or to defraud, by any scheme or artifice, the inhabitants of the United States of the honest services of a public official or person who has been selected to be a public official shall be fined under this title or imprisoned for not more than 10 years, or both.

"(f) Whoever, being an official, public official, or person who has been selected to be a public official, directly or indirectly discharges, demotes, suspends, threatens, harasses, or in any manner discriminates against an employee or official of the United States or any State or political subdivision of a State, or endeavors to do so, in order to carry out or to conceal any scheme or artifice described in this section, shall be fined under this title or subject to imprisonment of up to 5 years or both.

"(g)(1) An employee or official of the United States or any State or political subdivision of such State who is discharged, demoted, suspended, threatened, harassed, or in any other manner discriminated against because of lawful acts done by the employee as a result of a violation of subsection (e) or because of actions by the employee or official on behalf of himself or others in furtherance of a prosecution under this section (including investigation for, initiation of, testimony for, or assistance in such a prosecution) may bring a civil action and shall be entitled to all relief necessary to make such employee or official whole. Such relief shall include reinstatement with the same seniority status that the employee or official would have had but for the discrimination, 3 times the amount of back pay, interest on the back pay, and compensation for any special damages sustained as a result of the discrimination, including reasonable litigation costs and reasonable attorney's fees.

"(2) An individual shall not be entitled to relief under paragraph (1) if the individual participated in the violation of this section with respect to which relief is sought.

"(3) A civil action brought under paragraph (1) shall be stayed by a court upon the certification of an attorney for the Government, stating that the action may adversely affect the interests of the Government in a current criminal investigation or proceeding. The attorney for the Government shall promptly notify the court when the stay may be lifted without such adverse effects.

"(h) For purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'State' means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and any other commonwealth, territory, or possession of the United States;

"(2) the terms 'public official' and 'person who has been selected to be a public official' have the meaning set forth in section 201 and shall also include any person acting or pretending to act under color of official authority;

"(3) the term 'official' includes—

"(A) any person employed by, exercising any authority derived from, or holding any position in an Indian tribal government or the government of a State or any subdivision of the executive, legislative, judicial, or other branch of government thereof, including a department, independent establishment, commission, administration, authority, board, and bureau, and a corporation or other legal entity established and subject to control by a government or governments for the execution of a governmental or intergovernmental program;

"(B) any person acting or pretending to act under color of official authority; and

"(C) includes any person who has been nominated, appointed or selected to be an official or who has been officially informed that he or she will be so nominated, appointed or selected;

"(4) the term 'under color of official authority' includes any person who represents that the person controls, is an agent of, or otherwise acts on behalf of an official, public official, and person who has been selected to be a public official; and

"(5) the term 'uses any facility of interstate or foreign commerce' includes the intrastate use of any facility that may also be used in interstate or foreign commerce."

(2)(A) The chapter analysis for chapter 11 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following item:

"225. Public Corruption."

(B) Section 1961(1) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting "section 225 (relating to public corruption)," after "section 224 (relating to sports bribery)."

(C) Section 2516(1)(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting "section 225 (relating to public corruption)," after "section 224 (bribery in sporting contests)."

(b) FRAUD IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE.—(1) Section 1343 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by striking "transmits or causes to be transmitted by means of wire, radio, or television communication in interstate or foreign commerce, any writings, signs, signals, pictures, or sounds" and inserting "uses or causes to be used any facility of interstate or foreign commerce"; and

(B) by inserting "or attempting to do so" after "for the purpose of executing such scheme or artifice".

(2)(A) The heading of section 1343 of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 1343. Fraud by use of facility of interstate commerce".

(B) The chapter analysis for chapter 63 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking the item for section 1343 and inserting the following:

"1343. Fraud by use of facility of interstate commerce."

TITLE III—REDUCTION OF CAMPAIGN COSTS

SEC. 301. BROADCAST DISCOUNT.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) in the 45 days preceding a primary election, and in the 60 days preceding a general election, candidates for political office need to be able to buy, at the lowest unit charge, nonpreemptible advertising spots from broadcast stations and cable television stations to ensure that their messages reach the intended audience and that the voting public has an opportunity to make informed decisions;

(2) since the Communications Act of 1934 was amended in 1972 to guarantee the lowest unit charge for candidates during these important preelection periods, the method by which advertising spots are sold in the broadcast and cable industries has changed significantly;

(3) changes in the method for selling advertising spots have made the interpretation and enforcement of the lowest unit charge provision difficult and complex;

(4) clarification and simplification of the lowest unit charge provision in the Communications Act of 1934 is necessary to ensure compliance with the original intent of the provision; and

(5) in granting discounts and setting charges for advertising time, broadcasters and cable operators should treat candidates for political office at least as well as the most favored commercial advertisers.

(b) AMENDMENT OF COMMUNICATIONS ACT.—Section 315 of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 315) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)(1) by striking "class and";

(2) by redesignating subsections (c) and (d) as subsections (d) and (e), respectively; and

(3) by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c) A licensee shall not preempt the use, during any period specified in subsection (b)(1), of a broadcasting station by a legally qualified candidate for public office who has purchased such use pursuant to subsection (b)(1)."

TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Federal Election Commission Enforcement Authority

SEC. 401. ELIMINATION OF REASON TO BELIEVE STANDARD.

Section 309(a)(2) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(2)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(A)" after "(2)"; and

(2) by striking the first sentence and inserting the following: "Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (B), if the Commission, upon receiving a complaint under paragraph (1) or on the basis of information ascertained in the normal course of carrying out its supervisory responsibilities determines, by an affirmative vote of 4 of its members, that an allegation of a violation or from pending violation of this Act or chapter 95 or 96 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 states a claim of violation that would be sufficient under the standard applicable to a motion under rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the Commission shall, through its chairman or vice chairman, notify the person of the alleged violation. Such vote shall occur within 90 days after receipt of such complaint."

SEC. 402. INJUNCTIVE AUTHORITY.

Section 309(a)(2) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(2)), as amended by section 401, is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(B) The Commission may petition the appropriate court for an injunction if—

"(i) the Commission believes that there is a substantial likelihood that a violation of this Act or of chapter 95 or 96 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is occurring or is about to occur;

"(ii) the failure to act expeditiously will result in irreparable harm to a party affected by the potential violation;

"(iii) such expeditious action will not cause undue harm or prejudice to the interests of others; and

"(iv) the public interest would be best served by the issuance of an injunction."

SEC. 403. TIME PERIODS.

Section 309(a)(4)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(4)(A)) is amended—

(1) in clause (i)—

(A) by striking "for a period of at least 30 days,"; and

(B) by striking "90 days" and inserting "60 days"; and

(2) in clause (ii) by striking "at least" and inserting "no more than".

SEC. 404. KNOWING VIOLATION PENALTIES.

Section 309(a)(5)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(5)(B)) is amended by striking "may require that the person involved in such conciliation agreement shall pay a civil penalty which does not exceed the greater of $10,000 or an amount equal to 200 percent of any contribution or expenditure involved in such violation" and inserting "shall require that the person involved in such conciliation agreement shall pay a civil penalty which is not less than the greater of $5,000 or an amount equal to any contribution or expenditure involved in such violation, except that if the Commission believes that a knowing and willful violation of this Act or of chapter 95 or chapter 96 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 has been committed during the 15-day period immediately preceding any election, a conciliation agreement entered into by the Commission under paragraph (4)(A) shall require that the person involved in such conciliation agreement shall pay a civil penalty which is not less than the greater of $10,000 or an amount equal to 200 percent of any contribution or expenditure involved in such violation".

SEC. 405. COURT RESOLVED VIOLATIONS AND PENALTIES.

Section 309(a)(6) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(6)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A)—

(A) by striking "Commission may" and inserting "Commission shall";

(B) by striking "including" and inserting "which shall include"; and

(C) by striking "which does not exceed the greater of $5,000 or an amount equal to any" and inserting "which equals the greater of $10,000 or an amount equal to 200 percent of any"; and

(2) in subparagraph (B)—

(A) by striking "court may" and inserting "court shall"; and

(B) by striking "including" and inserting "which shall include"; and

(C) by striking "which does not exceed the greater of $5,000 or an amount equal to any" and inserting "which equals the greater of $10,000 or an amount equal to 200 percent of any".

SEC. 406. PRIVATE CIVIL ACTIONS.

Section 309(a)(6)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(6)(A)), as amended by section 405, is amended—

(1) by inserting "(i)" after "(6)(A)"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(ii) If, by a tie vote, the Commission does not vote to institute a civil action pursuant to clause (i), the candidate involved in such election, or an individual authorized to act on behalf of such candidate, may file an action for appropriate relief in the district court for the district in which the respondent is found, resides, or transacts business. If the court determines that a violation has occurred, the court shall impose the appropriate civil penalty. Any such award of a civil penalty made under this paragraph shall be made in favor of the United States. In addition to any such civil penalty, the court shall award to the prevailing party in any action under this paragraph, all attorneys' fees and actual costs reasonably incurred in the investigation and pursuit of any such action, including those attorneys' fees and costs reasonably incurred in bringing or defending the proceeding before the Commission."

SEC. 407. KNOWING VIOLATIONS RESOLVED IN COURT.

Section 309(a)(6)(C) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(6)(C)) is amended by striking "may impose a civil penalty which does not exceed the greater of $10,000 or an amount equal to 200 percent of any contribution or expenditure involved in such violation" and inserting "shall impose a civil penalty which is not less than the greater of $10,000 or an amount equal to 200 percent of any contribution or expenditure involved in such violation, except that if such violation was committed during the 15-day period immediately preceding the election, the court shall impose a civil penalty which is not less than the greater of $15,000 or an amount equal to 300 percent of any contribution or expenditure involved in such violation".

SEC. 408. ACTION ON COMPLAINT BY COMMISSION.

Section 309(a)(8)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(8)(A)) is amended—

(1) by striking "act on" and inserting "reasonably pursue";

(2) by striking "120-day" and inserting "60-day"; and

(3) by striking "United States District Court for the District of Columbia" and inserting "appropriate court".

SEC. 409. VIOLATION OF CONFIDENTIALITY REQUIREMENT.

Section 309(a)(12)(B) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(12)(B)) is amended—

(1) by striking "$2,000" and inserting "$5,000"; and

(2) by striking "$5,000" and inserting "$10,000".

SEC. 410. PENALTY IN ATTORNEY GENERAL ACTIONS.

Section 309(d)(1)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(d)(1)(A)) is amended by striking "exceed" and inserting "be less than".

SEC. 411. AMENDMENTS RELATING TO ENFORCEMENT AND JUDICIAL REVIEW.

(a) TIME LIMITATIONS FOR AND INDEX OF INVESTIGATIONS.—Section 309(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)), as amended by section 124, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(14) The Commission shall establish time limitations for investigations under this subsection.

"(15) The Commission shall publish an index of all investigations under this section and shall update the index quarterly."

(b) PROCEDURE ON INITIAL DETERMINATION.—Section 309(a)(2) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(2)), as amended by section 402, is amended by adding at the end the following: "Before a vote based on information ascertained in the normal course of carrying out supervisory responsibilities, the person alleged to have committed the violation shall be notified of the allegation and shall have the opportunity to demonstrate, in writing, to the Commission within 15 days after notification that no action should be taken against such person on the basis of the information. Prior to any determination, the Commission may request voluntary responses to questions from any person who may become the subject of an investigation. A determination under this paragraph shall be accompanied by a written statement of the reasons for the determination."

(c) PROCEDURE ON PROBABLE CAUSE DETERMINATION.—(1) Section 309(a)(3) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(3)) is amended by adding at the end the following: "The Commission shall make available to a respondent any documentary or other evidence relied on by the general counsel in making a recommendation under this subsection. Any brief or report by the general counsel that replies to the respondent's brief shall be provided to the respondent."

(2) Section 309(a)(4)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(4)(A)) is amended by adding at the end the following new clauses:

"(iii) A determination under clause (i) shall be made only after opportunity for a hearing upon request of the respondent and shall be accompanied by a statement of the reasons for the determination.

"(iv) The Commission shall not require that any conciliation agreement under this paragraph contain an admission by the respondent of a violation of this Act or any other law."

(d) ELIMINATION OF EN BANC HEARING REQUIREMENT.—Section 310 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 437h), as amended by section 124(d), is amended by striking "which shall hear the matter sitting en banc".

SEC. 412. TIGHTENING ENFORCEMENT.

(a) REPEAL OF PERIOD OF LIMITATION.—Section 406 of FECA (2 U.S.C. 455) is repealed.

(b) SUPPLYING OF INFORMATION TO THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.—Section 309(a)(12) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 437g(a)(12)(A)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(C) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prohibit or prevent the Commission from making information contained in compliance files available to the Attorney General, at the Attorney General's request, in connection with an investigation or trial."

Subtitle B—Other Provisions

SEC. 421. DISCLOSURE OF DEBT SETTLEMENT AND LOAN SECURITY AGREEMENTS.

Section 304(b) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 434(b)), as amended by section 112, is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (8);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (9) and by inserting a semicolon; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(10) for the reporting period, the terms of any settlement agreement entered into with respect to a loan or other debt, as evidenced by a copy of such agreement filed as part of the report; and

"(11) for the reporting period, the terms of any security or collateral agreement entered into with respect to a loan, as evidenced by a copy of such agreement filed as part of the report."

SEC. 422. CONTRIBUTIONS FOR DRAFT AND ENCOURAGEMENT PURPOSES WITH RESPECT TO ELECTIONS FOR FEDERAL OFFICE.

(a) DEFINITION.—Section 301(8)(A) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 431(8)(A)) is amended by striking "or" after the semicolon at the end of clause (i), by striking the period at the end of clause (ii) and inserting "; and", and by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(iii) any gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money or anything of value made by any person for the purpose of drafting a clearly identified individual as a candidate for Federal office or encouraging a clearly identified individual to become a candidate for Federal office."

(b) DRAFT AND ENCOURAGEMENT CONTRIBUTIONS TO BE TREATED AS CANDIDATE CONTRIBUTIONS.—Section 315(a) of FECA (2 U.S.C. 441a(a)), as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(12) For purposes of paragraph (1)(A) and paragraph (2)(A), any contribution described in section 301(8)(A)(iii) shall be treated, with respect to the individual involved, as a contribution to a candidate, whether or not the individual becomes a candidate."

SEC. 423. SEVERABILITY.

If any provision of this Act or any amendment made by this Act, or the application of any such provision to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of any other such provision, and the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 424. EFFECTIVE DATE.

Except as otherwise provided in this Act, this Act and the amendments made by this Act shall become effective on November 9, 1994, and shall apply to all contributions and expenditures made after that date.

DOLE-MCCONNELL CFR PROPOSAL

SPECIAL INTEREST INFLUENCE

PAC Ban

Eliminates all "special interest" political action committees (corporate, union, and trade association PACs). Also bans all non-connected or ideological PACs and all "leadership" PACs. [Note: if a ban on non-connected PACs is determined to be unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, the legislation will subject non-connected PACs to a $1000 per election contribution limit.]

Soft Money Ban

Bans all "soft" money from being used to influence a federal election. "Soft" money is defined as the raising and spending of political money outside of the source restrictions, contribution limits, and disclosure requirements of the Federal Election Campaign Act and its regulations.

Political Parties

Establishes new rules for political party committees to ensure that "soft" money is not used to influence federal elections, including:

(1) the requirement that national, state and local political parties establish a separate account for activities benefiting federal candidates and a separate account for activities benefiting state candidates;

(2) the requirement of full disclosure of all accounts by any political party committee that maintains a federal account; and

(3) the establishment of minimum percentages of federal funds which must be used for any party building program (e.g. voter registration, get-out-the-vote, absentee ballot, ballot security) which benefits both federal and state candidates.

Exempts certain organizational activities (research, GOTV, voter registration) from coordinated or other limitations; requires disclosure and allocation for these activities; and retains the same coordinated expenditure limits for media expenditures. Maintains the limit on total contributions of Federal party accounts at $20,000; limits to $50,000 per calendar year the total amount of contributions an individual or other entity may make to national, state and local party accounts combined.

Labor Soft Money/Employee Protections

Codifies the Supreme Court decision in Beck v. Communications Workers of America and provides certain rights for employees who are union members.

501(c) Soft Money Restrictions

Prohibits tax-exempt, 501(c) organizations from engaging in any activity which attempts to influence a federal election on behalf of a specific candidate for public office. Extends to all 501(c) organizations the current prohibition on campaign activity which applies to 501(c)(3) charities. Restricts tax-exempt organizations from engaging in voter registration or GOTV activities (which are not candidate-specific) if a candidate or Member of Congress solicits money for the organization.

State PACS Controlled Federal Candidates

Restricts federal activities by state PACs created by Members of Congress.

Individual Contribution Limits

Reduces from $1000 to $500 the maximum allowable contribution by individuals residing outside of a candidate's state. Indexes the individual contribution limit ($1000 per election for in-state contributions or $500 per election for out-of-state contributions) for Congressional candidates using the Consumer Price Index; adjustments would be rounded to the nearest $100.

Bundling

Prohibits "bundling" by registered, lobbyists, unions, trade associations, corporations, and other employers. Bundled contributions which are permitted must be made payable to the candidate and disclosed to the candidate and the Federal Election Commission.

Independent Expenditures

Requires all independently-financed political communications to disclose the person or organization financing it; requires that disclosure be complete and conspicuous; and requires timely notice to all candidates of the communications' placement and content. Defines "independent expenditure" to prohibit consultation with a candidate or his agents; requires the FCC to hold a hearing within 3 days of any formal complaint of collusion between an independent expenditure committee and a candidate. Creates an expedited cause of action in federal courts for a candidate seeking relief from expenditures which are not "independent".

CAMPAIGN COST REDUCTION

Broadcast Discount

Allows Presidential and Congressional candidates to purchase non-preemptible time at the lowest unit rate for preemptible time, in the last 45 days before a primary and the last 60 days before the general election.

COMPETITIVENESS

Challenger Seed Money

Permits political party committees to use a special coordinated expenditure fund to "match" early, in-state contributions by challengers to help begin a campaign. Party committee matching funds would be permitted to a maximum of $100,000 for any House or Senate candidate who is a challenger.

Millionaire's Loophole

Requires Congressional candidates to declare upon filing for an election whether they intend to spend or loan over $250,000 in personal funds in the race; raises the individual contribution limit to $5000 per election from $1000 for all opponents of a candidate who declares such an intention. No limits would apply to individual contributions and expenditures by party committees if a candidate spends more than $1 million in personal funds. Also prohibits candidates from recovering personal funds or loans used in their race from contributions raised after the election.

Franked Mail

Prohibits franked "mass mailings" during the election year of a Member of Congress, and requires more disclosure of the use of the frank for unsolicited mailings.

Gerrymandering

Requires new standards for Congressional reapportionment and redistricting, including the full and fair enforcement of the Voting Rights Act. This provision would: (1) codify current case law and maintain previous statutory requirements that Congressional districts be of equal population, and be contiguous and compact in form; (2) repeal current statutory provisions permitting multi-member Congressional districts and require single-member Congressional districts; and (3) limit the division of county and political subdivision boundary lines, as well as redistricting egregious partisan gerrymandering.

MISCELLANEOUS

Enhanced FEC Enforcement

Eliminates the "reason to believe" standard. The Commission, upon receiving a complaint, will have to investigate a complaint if the identity of the complainant is known, and the complaint is sufficient on its face.

Provides the FEC the authority to seek injunctive relief to stop certain violations or an impending violation. Reduces the time period by which the Commission must act on a complaint from 120 to 60 days. Streamlines the administrative procedures for a complaint brought by the Commission by eliminating the minimum waiting period of 30 days and lowering the maximum period for post-probable cause conciliation bargaining to 60 days.

Increases the penalties for knowing and willful violations which are resolved informally and requires these penalties to be mandatory. Increases the penalty for violations that must be resolved in court and requires the penalty to be mandatory.

Permits a candidate, or a person authorized by a candidate, to sue on a complaint whenever the Commission declines to pursue an alleged violation by a tie vote. Increases the penalties for knowing and willful violations resolved in court.

Increases the fines for violations of the confidentiality requirement. Increases the penalties for violations of the election laws where the Attorney General separately prosecutes.

Implements procedural recommendations proposed by the 1990 Mitchell/Dole Panel on Campaign Finance Reform. Provides the Commission with more authority to: informally resolve investigations before any determination by the Commission; provide respondents with more access to documents provided by third parties; provide respondents with access to any report submitted to the Commission by the General Counsel; and provide respondents with the right to present oral arguments before a Commission finding of probable cause. Also eliminates the ability of the Commission to routinely require admissions by the respondent that a violation has occurred; and establishes time limits for investigations, requiring the Commission to publish an index of all investigations which have been concluded.

Repeals the shortened 3-year statute of limitations for violations of the Act and returns to the general 5-year statute of limitations. Also permits the Attorney General to have access to FEC compliance files pursuant to a criminal investigation or trial.

Election Fraud/Public Corruption

Creates a new public corruption statute which codifies current case law and increases the authority of the U.S. Justice Department to combat election fraud at all levels of government.

Draft/Exploratory Committees

Defines "contribution" to include donations made to draft or exploratory committees advocating that a clearly identified individual becomes a candidate for federal office.

Severability

Provides that if any portion of this Act is found to be invalid, then the remaining portions of the Act shall continue in full force and effect.

• Mr. PACKWOOD, Mr. President, I rise today to once again join with my colleagues in introducing a very far-reaching, comprehensive campaign finance reform bill. This measure, the subject of extensive debate in the last several Congresses as well, goes farther than any other reform proposal we've had before us. It achieves what I believe should be the goals of campaign finance reform. As I have stated here on more than one occasion, I believe those goals to be twofold.

First, if the perception is that PAC's are an evil, then ban PAC contributions altogether. Whatever may have been the public perception of campaign financing in the past, there is today widespread feeling that elections are principally financed by groups who have a very narrow interest as opposed to a broad public interest. In a democracy, the public must perceive the law to be fair or confidence is severely undermined. The obvious way to respond to the growing perception that Members of Congress are bought and paid for by the special interests is to eliminate all PAC contributions—corporate, labor, trade association and independent. The bill we are introducing today does this.

Second, any campaign finance reform bill should encourage massive participation in campaigns. You don't accomplish this with expenditure limits. Such limits simply drive a candidate to raise money in the least expensive, quickest way possible and with the least effort. The candidate contracts a minimal number of contributors who are able to give the largest amount until the contribution limits are reached. I do not think this is what we want to achieve. Our goal should be to encourage millions of people to give small financial contributions directly to campaigns. If we can encourage 10 to 20 million people to give $5, $10, or $50 directly to a campaign, we will ensure the massive voter participation we are trying to achieve. While the bill before us does not go as far as I would like in this regard, it is a good start. We cut in half, from $1,000 to $500, the individual contribution limit for out-of-State contributions. The in-State individual contribution limit is left unchanged at $1,000.

The challenge is to make congressional campaigns more competitive, less dependent on large contributors, and financed by a broader segment of the population. The bill we are introducing today puts people back into the political process.

In addition to eliminating PAC contributions and lowering the out-of-State individual contribution limit, the bill contains a number of other sweeping and, I believe, very necessary reforms. We get rid of soft money contributions. We limit bundling and independent expenditures. We eliminate the millionaire's loophole. A candidate should work hard to get elected. He or she should earn the seat.

The effect of these provisions, the inevitable result, is that spending will go down. Under this bill, candidates will have to go out and raise money in smaller amounts from many, many more people. Congress to this point has taken the easy route to raising money, that is to raise it in large contributions from relatively few people or PAC's. Under this bill, we will have to broaden our base. Instead of $5,000 PAC contributions from one source, we will have to seek much smaller contributions from many sources.

What we really want to accomplish with campaign reform legislation is voter participation, a galvanization of grassroots volunteers, and money raised in small amounts. This is good for the voters, good for our States, good for politics, and good for challengers who are in local politics in our home States. You then have every benefit without having to resort to PAC's, soft money, or bundling. What you have then is a de facto reduction in spending. At the same time, you are able to run a successful campaign without 1 penny of public funds.

The real stumbling block in all our discussions on campaign finance reform has been over the issue of public funding, taxpayer financing of campaigns. That is a touchstone difference, and make no mistake, if there is any disincentive to voter participation, it is public financing. With public financing, the voter has no sense of connection to the candidate.

The spending limits as embodied in all previous Democrat campaign finance reform measures considered by the Senate are necessarily dependent on some form of public funds, of Federal largess. It may not be money directly from the Treasury, but it will be some form of Federal largess, nonetheless, in exchange for agreeing to spending limits; it will be in the form of reduced mail rates or free television time or free something else if you agree to spending limits. Public financing of campaigns, whether it be direct or indirect, is not in this bill.

Republicans are very adverse to asking the taxpayers to fund our campaigns when we are running $300 billion deficits. Whether it is direct money from the Treasury, as in Presidential campaigns, or subsidized mailing rates, it is still money from the Government. When we are running $300 billion deficits, we should not be asking on top of that for taxpayers to fund our campaigns, either fully or partially. When we don't have enough money for education, child nutrition, and all our other human resource needs, are we then going to say to the taxpayer, let's establish a new entitlement program for Senators, for Congress? Let's have the taxpayers pay for our campaigns?

I contend, and I repeat, when you have gotten rid of PAC's and soft money contributions, when you have gotten rid of bundling and lower the out-of-State contribution limit to $500 or less, the effect will be to drive campaign spending down. So I would hope that the Senate would accept this. I think most people of good conscience can say these reforms go in the right direction.

Mr. President, it is time to put aside partisan differences and ambitions and correct the flaws in our campaign finance system. There is genuine bipartisan agreement on a number of the proposed solutions. It is my hope that this session of Congress will see a real breakthrough in the negotiations between Republicans and Democrats. The time has come, and I believe we have the commitment, to enact comprehensive, meaningful reform, reform which will foster competition and encourage broad-based individual participation in our Nation's political process.●

By Mr. HATCH (for himself, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. SIMPSON, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. SPECTER, Mr. DOLE, Mr. BROWN, Mr. PRESSLER, and Mr. NICKLES):

S. 8. A bill to control and prevent crime; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

CRIME CONTROL ACT

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Crime Control Act of 1993—a comprehensive anti-crime measure. This bill: First, provides needed assistance to our country's frontline officers; second, beefs up Federal antidrug, crime, and gang initiatives in rural and urban areas; and third, proposes reform measures that will return some measure of credibility to our criminal justice system.

Rural States, like my State of Utah, have seen a dramatic increase in crime which exceeds that of many more populated areas. For example, FBI figures show that, in 1991, violent crime rose 35 percent faster in rural counties than it did in America's eight largest cities. This bill authorizes additional resources for States like Utah in addition to help for more urban States. We cannot be guided by the erroneous view that crime is a serious problem only for States with large urban centers.

The Crime Control Act of 1993 treats rural States' problems as seriously as others by ensuring that law enforcement grants are equitably distributed and by requiring that a larger percentage of new Federal agents are assigned to rural States. The bill also establishes Federal rural crime and drug task forces throughout the Nation. Also, the bill includes a comprehensive antigang program which responds to the growing problem of juvenile gangs in urban and rural States. Passage of this legislation will ensure that States like Utah are provided their fair share of Federal law enforcement aid and assistance.

Our Nation is faced with a growing violent crime epidemic which the Congress has failed to address adequately. The crisis we face is evident when one reviews the staggering statistics. In 1991, there were 24,000 murders committed in our country—which equates to 1 murder every 21 minutes. There were also 106,000 rapes—one every 5 minutes. In all, violent crimes reported to law enforcement exceeded 1.9 million offenses. In other words, there were more violent crimes committed in 1991 than ever before—a 5-percent increase in just 1 year and a 29-percent increase since 1987.

Any true reform strategy must recognize that acts of violence will only be deterred by actually punishing individuals for violent acts. My bill does so. It includes a comprehensive Federal death penalty which will ensure that the most heinous crimes against the people of the United States are appropriately punished. While the Federal Government has been a leader in other criminal reform areas, it has failed to do what 36 States have done—enact a comprehensive death penalty statute. Drug kingpins, terrorists, and other violent killers must be appropriately punished, and the Federal Government is in the best position to capture and prosecute these heinous offenders.

The Crime Control Act of 1993 also reforms Federal habeas corpus procedures. Federal habeas corpus laws, which currently serve as a de facto, and unlimited, Federal appellate jurisdiction over State criminal judgments, are largely responsible for the endless reexamination of criminal cases. This saps judicial and prosecutorial resources while diminishing the deterrent and retributive effect of punishment. My habeas proposal is identical to that which overwhelmingly passed the proposal is identical to that which overwhelmingly passed the Senate last Congress. It establishes a more appropriate standard of review in habeas corpus cases by according greater deference to the results of State adjudications. This habeas reform measure will return credibility to the Federal criminal justice system and enable the States to do so as well.

This bill also responds to the growing problem of violent crimes perpetrated against women by incorporating much of Senator DOLE's proposals in this area. It greatly enhances the effectiveness of the criminal justice system in preventing, prosecuting, and punishing sexual violence and child abuse and in safeguarding victims of rape, child molestation, and other violent crimes from gratuitous abuse and traumatization.

In addition, this bill reforms the exclusionary rule by taking the common sense step of allowing the admission of evidence obtained in warrantless searches where law enforcement officers act in an objectively reasonable belief that their search was lawful. This extends the so-called good faith exception to the exclusionary rule embodied in the Supreme Court's 1984 decision in United States versus Leon.

Finally, the bill comes through with added assistance to law enforcement. It provides over $1 billion in aid to State and local law enforcement which they can use to hire additional law enforcement officers, and it creates a $150 million grant program to encourage States and local communities to institute community policing initiatives.

In closing, President Clinton has pledged to work with the Congress in an effort to solve this country's diverse domestic problems. There is no doubt that violent crime must be one of his top priorities. I look forward to reviewing the Clinton administration's anticrime legislation, assuming Congress receives one, and I plan to work with the new administration in a bipartisan effort to pass tough, true anticrime legislation. In the meantime, I urge my colleagues to give serious consideration to the proposals I have included in this bill. I welcome their support.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill and a section-by-section analysis of the bill be printed in the RECORD immediately following my remarks.

There being no objection, the materials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

"A defendant who has been found guilty of—

"(1) an offense described in section 794 or section 2381;

"(2) an offense described in section 1751(c) if the offense, as determined beyond a reasonable doubt at a hearing under section 3593, constitutes an attempt to murder the President of the United States and results in bodily injury to the President or comes dangerously close to causing the death of the President;

"(3) an offense referred to in section 408(c)(1) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 848(c)(1)), committed as part of a continuing criminal enterprise offense under the conditions described in subsection (b) of that section which involved not less than twice the quantity of controlled substance described in subsection (b)(2)(A) or twice the gross receipts described in subsection (b)(2)(B);

"(4) an offense referred to in section 408(c)(1) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 848(c)(1)), committed as part of a continuing criminal enterprise offense under that section, where the defendant is a principal administrator, organizer, or leader of such an enterprise, and the defendant, in order to obstruct the investigation or prosecution of the enterprise or an offense involved in the enterprise, attempts to kill or knowingly directs, advises, authorizes, or assists another to attempt to kill any public officer, juror, witness, or members of the family or household of such a person;

"(5) an offense constituting a felony violation of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.), the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 951 et seq.), or the Maritime Drug Law Enforcement Act (46 U.S.C. App. 1901 et seq.), where the defendant, intending to cause death or acting with reckless disregard for human life, engages in such a violation, and the death of another person results in the course of the violation or from the use of the controlled substance involved in the violation; or

"(6) any other offense for which a sentence of death is provided if the defendant, as determined beyond a reasonable doubt at a hearing under section 3593, caused the death of a person intentionally, knowingly, or through recklessness manifesting extreme indifference to human life, or caused the death of a person through the intentional infliction of serious bodily injury, shall be sentenced to death if, after consideration of the factors set forth in section 3592 in the course of a hearing held pursuant to section 3593, it is determined that imposition of a sentence of death is justified, except that no person may be sentenced to death who was less than 18 years of age at the time of the offense or who is mentally retarded.

"§ 3592. Factors to be considered in determining whether a sentence of death is justified

"(a) MITIGATING FACTORS.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified for any offense, the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following mitigating factors and determine which, if any, exist:

"(1) MENTAL CAPACITY.—The defendant's mental capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of law was significantly impaired, regardless of whether the capacity was so impaired as to constitute a defense to the charge.

"(2) DURESS.—The defendant was under unusual and substantial duress, regardless of whether the duress was of such a degree as to constitute a defense to the charge.

"(3) PARTICIPATION IN OFFENSE MINOR.—The defendant's participation in the offense, which was committed by another, was relatively minor, regardless of whether the participation was so minor as to constitute a defense to the charge.

"(4) NO SIGNIFICANT CRIMINAL HISTORY.—The defendant did not have a significant history of other criminal conduct.

"(5) DISTURBANCE.—The defendant committed the offense under severe mental or emotional disturbance.

"(6) VICTIM'S CONSENT.—The victim consented to the criminal conduct that resulted in the victim's death.

The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider whether any other aspect of the defendant's background, character or record or any other circumstance of the offense that the defendant may proffer as a mitigating factor exists.

"(b) AGGRAVATING FACTORS FOR ESPIONAGE AND TREASON.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified for an offense described in section 3591(1), the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following aggravating factors and determine which, if any, exist:

"(1) PREVIOUS ESPIONAGE OR TREASON CONVICTION.—The defendant has previously been convicted of another offense involving espionage or treason for which a sentence of life imprisonment or death was authorized by statute.

"(2) RISK OF SUBSTANTIAL DANGER TO NATIONAL SECURITY.—In the commission of the offense the defendant knowingly created a grave risk to the national security.

"(3) RISK OF DEATH TO ANOTHER.—In the commission of the offense the defendant knowingly created a grave risk of death to another person.

The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, may consider whether any other aggravating factor exists.

"(c) AGGRAVATING FACTORS FOR HOMICIDE AND FOR ATTEMPTED MURDER OF THE PRESIDENT.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified for an offense described in section 3591 (2) or (6), the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following aggravating factors and determine which, if any, exist:

"(1) CONDUCT OCCURRED DURING COMMISSION OF SPECIFIED CRIMES.—The conduct resulting in death occurred during the commission or attempted commission of, or during the immediate flight from the commission of, an offense under section 32 (destruction of aircraft or aircraft facilities), section 33 (destruction of motor vehicles or motor vehicle facilities), section 36 (violence at international airports), section 351 (violence against Members of Congress, Cabinet officers, or Supreme Court Justices), section 751 (prisoners in custody of institution or officer), section 794 (gathering or delivering defense information to aid foreign government), section 844(d) (transportation of explosives in interstate commerce for certain purposes), section 844(f) (destruction of Government property by explosives), section 844(i) (destruction of property affecting interstate commerce by explosives), section 1116 (killing or attempted killing of diplomats), section 1118 (prisoners serving life term), section 1201 (kidnapping), section 1203 (hostage taking), section 1751 (violence against the President or Presidential staff), section 1992 (wrecking trains), section 2280 (maritime violence), section 2281 (maritime platform violence), section 2332 (terrorist acts abroad against United States nationals), section 2339A (use of weapons of mass destruction), or section 2381 (treason) of this title, section 1826 of title 28 (persons in custody as recalcitrant witnesses or hospitalized following insanity acquittal), or section 902 (i) or (n) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. App. 1472 (i) or (n) (aircraft piracy)).

"(2) INVOLVEMENT OF FIREARM OR PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF VIOLENT FELONY INVOLVING FIREARM.—The defendant—

"(A) during and in relation to the commission of the offense or in escaping or attempting to escape apprehension used or possessed a firearm (as defined in section 921); or

"(B) has previously been convicted of a Federal or State offense punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than 1 year, involving the use of attempted or threatened use of a firearm (as defined in section 921), against another person.

"(3) PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF OFFENSE FOR WHICH A SENTENCE OF DEATH OR LIFE IMPRISONMENT WAS AUTHORIZED.—The defendant has previously been convicted of another Federal or State offense resulting in the death of a person, for which a sentence of life imprisonment or death was authorized by statute.

"(4) PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF OTHER SERIOUS OFFENSES.—The defendant has previously been convicted of 2 or more Federal or State offenses, each punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than 1 year, committed on different occasions, involving the importation, manufacture, or distribution of a controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802)) or the infliction of, or attempted infliction of, serious bodily injury or death upon another person.

"(5) GRAVE RISK OF DEATH TO ADDITIONAL PERSONS.—The defendant, in the commission of the offense or in escaping or attempting to escape apprehension, knowingly created a grave risk of death to one or more persons in addition to the victim of the offense.

"(6) HEINOUS, CRUEL OR DEPRAVED MANNER OF COMMISSION.—The defendant committed the offense in an especially heinous, cruel, or depraved manner in that it involved torture or serious physical abuse to the victim.

"(7) PROCUREMENT OF OFFENSE BY PAYMENT.—The defendant procured the commission of the offense by payment, or promise of payment, of anything of pecuniary value.

"(8) COMMISSION OF THE OFFENSE FOR PECUNIARY GAIN.—The defendant committed the offense as consideration for the receipt, or in the expectation of the receipt, of anything of pecuniary value.

"(9) SUBSTANTIAL PLANNING AND PREMEDITATION.—The defendant committed the offense after substantial planning and premeditation.

"(10) VULNERABILITY OF VICTIM.—The victim was particularly vulnerable due to old age, youth, or infirmity.

"(11) TYPE OF VICTIM.—The defendant committed the offense against—

"(A) the President of the United States, the President-elect, the Vice President, the Vice President-elect, the Vice President-designate, or, if there was no Vice President, the officer next in order of succession to the office of the President of the United States, or any person acting as President under the Constitution and laws of the United States;

"(B) a chief of state, head of government, or the political equivalent, of a foreign nation;

"(C) a foreign official listed in section 1116(b)(3)(A), if that official was in the United States on official business; or

"(D) a Federal public servant who was outside of the United States or who was a Federal judge, a Federal law enforcement officer, an employee (including a volunteer or contract employee) of a Federal prison, or an official of the Federal Bureau of Prisons—

"(i) while such public servant was engaged in the performance of his official duties;

"(ii) because of the performance of such public servant's official duties; or

"(iii) because of such public servant's status as a public servant.

For purposes of this paragraph, the terms 'President-elect' and 'Vice President-elect' mean such persons as are the apparent successful candidates for the offices of President and Vice President, respectively, as ascertained from the results of the general elections held to determine the electors of President and Vice President in accordance with sections 1 and 2 of title 3; a 'Federal law enforcement officer' is a public servant authorized by law or by a Government agency or Congress to conduct or engage in the prevention, investigation, or prosecution of an offense; 'Federal prison' means a Federal correctional, detention, or penal facility, Federal community treatment center, or Federal halfway house, or any such prison operated under contract with the Federal Government; and 'Federal judge' means any judicial officer of the United States, and includes a justice of the Supreme Court and a United States magistrate judge.

The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, may consider whether any other aggravating factor exists.

"(d) AGGRAVATING FACTORS FOR DRUG OFFENSE DEATH PENALTY.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified for an offense described in section 3591 (3), (4), or (5), the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following aggravating factors and determine which, if any, exist:

"(1) PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF OFFENSE FOR WHICH A SENTENCE OF DEATH OR LIFE IMPRISONMENT WAS AUTHORIZED.—The defendant has previously been convicted of another Federal or State offense resulting in the death of a person, for which a sentence of life imprisonment or death was authorized by statute.

"(2) PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF OTHER SERIOUS OFFENSES.—The defendant has previously been convicted of two or more Federal or State offenses, each punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than one year, committed on different occasions, involving the importation, manufacture, or distribution of a controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802)) or the infliction of, or attempted infliction of, serious bodily injury or death upon another person.

"(3) PREVIOUS SERIOUS DRUG FELONY CONVICTION.—The defendant has previously been convicted of another Federal or State offense involving the manufacture, distribution, importation, or possession of a controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802)) for which a sentence of five or more years of imprisonment was authorized by statute.

"(4) USE OF FIREARM.—In committing the offense, or in furtherance of a continuing criminal enterprise of which the offense was a part, the defendant used a firearm or knowingly directed, advised, authorized, or assisted another to use a firearm (as defined in section 921) to threaten, intimidate, assault, or injure a person.

"(5) DISTRIBUTION TO PERSONS UNDER 21.—The offense, or a continuing criminal enterprise of which the offense was a part, involved conduct proscribed by section 418 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 859) which was committed directly by the defendant or for which the defendant would be liable under section 2 of this title.

"(6) DISTRIBUTION NEAR SCHOOLS.—The offense, or a continuing criminal enterprise of which the offense was a part, involved conduct proscribed by section 419 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 860) which was committed directly by the defendant or for which the defendant would be liable under section 2 of this title.

"(7) USING MINORS IN TRAFFICKING.—The offense, or a continuing criminal enterprise of which the offense was a part, involved conduct proscribed by section 420 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 861) which was committed directly by the defendant or for which the defendant would be liable under section 2 of this title.

"(8) LETHAL ADULTERANT.—The offense involved the importation, manufacture, or distribution of a controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802)), mixed with a potentially lethal adulterant, and the defendant was aware of the presence of the adulterant.

The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, may consider whether any other aggravating factor exists.

"§ 3593. Special hearing to determine whether a sentence of death is justified

"(a) NOTICE BY THE GOVERNMENT.—Whenever the Government intends to seek the death penalty for an offense described in section 3591, the attorney for the Government, a reasonable time before the trial, or before acceptance by the court of a plea of guilty, or at such time thereafter as the court may permit upon a showing of good cause, shall sign and file with the court, and serve on the defendant, a notice that the Government in the event of conviction will seek the sentence of death. The notice shall set forth the aggravating factor or factors enumerated in section 3592, and any other aggravating factor not specifically enumerated in section 3592, that the Government, if the defendant is convicted, will seek to prove as the basis for the death penalty. The factors for which notice is provided under this subsection may include factors concerning the effect of the offense on the victim and the victim's family. The court may permit the attorney for the Government to amend the notice upon a showing of good cause.

"(b) HEARING BEFORE A COURT OR JURY.—When the attorney for the Government has filed a notice as required under subsection (a) and the defendant is found guilty of an offense described in section 3591, the judge who presided at the trial or before whom the guilty plea was entered, or another judge if that judge is unavailable, shall conduct a separate sentencing hearing to determine the punishment to be imposed. Prior to such a hearing, no presentence report shall be prepared by the United States Probation Service, notwithstanding the provisions of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. The hearing shall be conducted—

"(1) before the jury that determined the defendant's guilt;

"(2) before a jury impaneled for the purpose of the hearing if—

"(A) the defendant was convicted upon a plea of guilty;

"(B) the defendant was convicted after a trial before the court sitting without a jury;

"(C) the jury that determined the defendant's guilt was discharged for good cause; or

"(D) after initial imposition of a sentence under this section, reconsideration of the sentence under the section is necessary; or

"(3) before the court alone, upon motion of the defendant and with the approval of the attorney for the Government.

A jury impaneled pursuant to paragraph (2) shall consist of 12 members, unless, at any time before the conclusion of the hearing, the parties stipulate, with the approval of the court, that it shall consist of a lesser number.

"(c) PROOF OF MITIGATING AND AGGRAVATING FACTORS.—At the hearing, information may be presented as to—

"(1) any matter relating to any mitigating factor listed in section 3592 and any other mitigating factor; and

"(2) any matter relating to any aggravating factor listed in section 3592 for which notice has been provided under subsection (a) and (if information is presented relating to such a listed factor) any other aggravating factor for which notice has been so provided. The information presented may include the trial transcript and exhibits. Any other information relevant to such mitigating or aggravating factors may be presented by either the Government or the defendant. The information presented by the Government in support of factors concerning the effect of the offense on the victim and the victim's family may include oral testimony, a victim impact statement that identifies the victim of the offense and the nature and extent of harm and loss suffered by the victim and the victim's family, and other relevant information. Information is admissible regardless of its admissibility under the rules governing admission of evidence at criminal trials, except that information may be excluded if its probative value is outweighed by the danger of creating unfair prejudice, confusing the issues, or misleading the jury. The attorney for the Government and for the defendant shall be permitted to rebut any information received at the hearing, and shall be given fair opportunity to present argument as to the adequacy of the information to establish the existence of any aggravating or mitigating factor, and as to the appropriateness in that case of imposing a sentence of death. The attorney for the Government shall open the argument. The defendant shall be permitted to reply. The Government shall then be permitted to reply in rebuttal. The burden of establishing the existence of an aggravating factor is on the Government, and is not satisfied unless the existence of such a factor is established beyond a reasonable doubt. The burden of establishing the existence of any mitigating factor is on the defendant, and is not satisfied unless the existence of such a factor is established by a preponderance of the evidence.

"(d) RETURN OF SPECIAL FINDINGS.—The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider all the information received during the hearing. It shall return special findings identifying any aggravating factor or factors set forth in section 3592 found to exist and any other aggravating factor for which notice has been provided under subsection (a) found to exist. A finding with respect to a mitigating factor may be made by one or more members of the jury, and any member of the jury who finds the existence of a mitigating factor may consider such factor established for purposes of this section regardless of the number of jurors who concur that the factor has been established. A finding with respect to any aggravating factor must be unanimous. If no aggravating factor set forth in section 3592 is found to exist, the court shall impose a sentence other than death authorized by law.

"(e) RETURN OF A FINDING CONCERNING A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—If, in the case of—

"(1) an offense described in section 3591(1), an aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592(b) is found to exist;

"(2) an offense described in section 3591(2) or (6), an aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592(c) is found to exist; or

"(3) an offense described in section 3591(3), (4), or (5), an aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592(d) is found to exist, the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall then consider whether the aggravating factor or factors found to exist under subsection (d) outweigh any mitigating factor or factors. The jury, or if there is no jury, the court shall recommend a sentence of death if it unanimously finds at least one aggravating factor and no mitigating factor or if it finds one or more aggravating factors which outweigh any mitigating factors. In any other case, it shall not recommend a sentence of death. The jury shall be instructed that it must avoid any influence of sympathy, sentiment, passion, prejudice, or other arbitrary factors in its decision, and should make such a recommendation as the information warrants.

"(f) SPECIAL PRECAUTION TO ASSURE AGAINST DISCRIMINATION.—In a hearing held before a jury, the court, prior to the return of a finding under subsection (e), shall instruct the jury that, in considering whether a sentence of death is justified, it shall not be influenced by prejudice or bias relating to the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or of any victim and that the jury is not to recommend a sentence of death unless it has concluded that it would recommend a sentence of death for the crime in question no matter what the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or of any victim may be. The jury, upon return of a finding under subsection (e), shall also return to the court a certificate, signed by each juror, that prejudice or bias relating to the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim was not involved in reaching his or her individual decision and that the individual juror would have made the same recommendation regarding a sentence for the crime in question no matter what the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim may be.

"§ 3594. Imposition of a sentence of death

"Upon the recommendation under section 3593(e) that a sentence of death be imposed, the court shall sentence the defendant to death. Otherwise the court shall impose a sentence, other than death, authorized by law. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if the maximum term of imprisonment for the offense is life imprisonment, the court may impose a sentence of life imprisonment without the possibility of release.

"§ 3595. Review of a sentence of death

"(a) APPEAL.—In a case in which a sentence of death is imposed, the sentence shall be subject to review by the court of appeals upon appeal by the defendant. Notice of appeal of the sentence must be filed within the time specified for the filing of a notice of appeal of the judgment of conviction. An appeal of the sentence under this section may be consolidated with an appeal of the judgment of conviction and shall have priority over all other cases.

"(b) REVIEW.—The court of appeals shall review the entire record in the case, including—

"(1) the evidence submitted during the trial;

"(2) the information submitted during the sentencing hearing;

"(3) the procedures employed in the sentencing hearing; and

"(4) the special findings returned under section 3593(d).

"(c) DECISION AND DISPOSITION.—

"(1) AFFIRMANCE.—If the court of appeals determines that—

"(A) the sentence of death was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor;

"(B) the evidence and information support the special findings of the existence of an aggravating factor or factors; and

"(C) the proceedings did not involve any other prejudicial error requiring reversal of the sentence that was properly preserved for and raised on appeal, it shall affirm the sentence.

"(2) REMAND.—In a case in which the sentence is not affirmed under paragraph (1), the court of appeals shall remand the case for reconsideration under section 3593 or for imposition of another authorized sentence as appropriate, except that the court shall not reverse a sentence of death on the ground that an aggravating factor was invalid or was not supported by the evidence and information if at least one aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592 remains which was found to exist and the court, on the basis of the evidence submitted at trial and the information submitted at the sentencing hearing, finds no mitigating factor or finds that the remaining aggravating factor or factors which were found to exist outweigh any mitigating factors.

"(3) STATEMENT OF REASONS.—The court of appeals shall state in writing the reasons for its disposition of an appeal of a sentence of death under this section.

"§ 3596. Implementation of a sentence of death

"(a) IN GENERAL.—A person who has been sentenced to death pursuant to this chapter shall be committed to the custody of the Attorney General until exhaustion of the procedures for appeal of the judgment of conviction and for review of the sentence. When the sentence is to be implemented, the Attorney General shall release the person sentenced to death to the custody of a United States Marshal, who shall supervise implementation of the sentence in the manner prescribed by the law of the State in which the sentence is imposed. If the law of such State does not provide for implementation of a sentence of death, the court shall designate another State, the law of which does so provide, and the sentence shall be implemented in the manner prescribed by such law.

"(b) SPECIAL BARS TO EXECUTION.—A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a person who lacks the mental capacity to understand the death penalty and why it was imposed on that person, or upon a woman while she is pregnant.

"(c) EMPLOYEES MAY DECLINE TO PARTICIPATE.—No employee of any State department of corrections, the Federal Bureau of Prisons, or the United States Marshals Service, and no employee providing services to that department, bureau, or service under contract shall be required, as a condition of that employment or contractual obligation, to be in attendance at or to participate in any execution carried out under this section if such participation is contrary to the moral or religious convictions of the employee. For purposes of this subsection, the term 'participation in any execution' includes personal preparation of the condemned individual and the apparatus used for the execution, and supervision of the activities of other personnel in carrying out such activities.

"§ 3597. Use of State facilities

"A United States Marshal charged with supervising the implementation of a sentence of death may use appropriate State or local facilities for the purpose, may use the services of an appropriate State or local official or of a person such an official employs for the purpose, and shall pay the costs thereof in an amount approved by the Attorney General.

"§ 3598. Appointment of counsel

"(a) REPRESENTATION OF INDIGENT DEFENDANTS.—This section shall govern the appointment of counsel for any defendant against whom a sentence of death is sought, or on whom a sentence of death has been imposed, for an offense against the United States, where the defendant is or becomes financially unable to obtain adequate representation. Such a defendant shall be entitled to appointment of counsel from the commencement of trial proceedings until one of the conditions specified in section 3599(b) has occurred. This section shall not affect the appointment of counsel and the provision of ancillary legal services under section 408(q) (4), (5), (6), (7), (8), (9), and (10) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 848 (q) (4), (5), (6), (7), (8), (9), and (10)).

"(b) REPRESENTATION BEFORE FINALITY OF JUDGMENT.—A defendant within the scope of this section shall have counsel appointed for trial representation as provided in section 3005. At least 1 counsel so appointed shall continue to represent the defendant until the conclusion of direct review of the judgment, unless replaced by the court with other qualified counsel.

"(c) REPRESENTATION AFTER FINALITY OF JUDGMENT.—When a judgment imposing a sentence of death has become final through affirmance by the Supreme Court on direct review, denial of certiorari by the Supreme Court on direct review, or expiration of the time for seeking direct review in the court of appeals or the Supreme Court, the Government shall promptly notify the district court that imposed the sentence. Within 10 days after receipt of such notice, the district court shall proceed to make a determination whether the defendant is eligible under this section for appointment of counsel for subsequent proceedings. On the basis of the determination, the court shall issue an order—

"(1) appointing 1 or more counsel to represent the defendant upon a finding that the defendant is financially unable to obtain adequate representation and wishes to have counsel appointed or is unable competently to decide whether to accept or reject appointment of counsel;

"(2) finding, after a hearing if necessary, that the defendant rejected appointment of counsel and made the decision with an understanding of its legal consequences; or

"(3) denying the appointment of counsel upon a finding that the defendant is financially able to obtain adequate representation.

Counsel appointed pursuant to this subsection shall be different from the counsel who represented the defendant at trial and on direct review unless the defendant and counsel request a continuation or renewal of the earlier representation.

"(d) STANDARDS FOR COMPETENCE OF COUNSEL.—In relation to a defendant who is entitled to appointment of counsel under this section, at least 1 counsel appointed for trial representation must have been admitted to the bar for at least 5 years and have at least 3 years of experience in the trial of felony cases in the federal district courts. If new counsel is appointed after judgment, at least 1 counsel so appointed must have been admitted to the bar for at least 5 years and have at least 3 years of experience in the litigation of felony cases in the Federal courts of appeals or the Supreme Court. The court, for good cause, may appoint counsel who does not meet the standards prescribed in the 2 preceding sentences, but whose background, knowledge, or experience would otherwise enable him or her to properly represent the defendant, with due consideration of the seriousness of the penalty and the nature of the litigation.

"(e) APPLICABILITY OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE ACT.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, section 3006A shall apply to appointments under this section.

"(f) CLAIMS OF INEFFECTIVENESS OF COUNSEL.—The ineffectiveness or incompetence of counsel during proceedings on a motion under section 2255 of title 28 in a capital case shall not be a ground for relief from the judgment or sentence in any proceeding. This limitation shall not preclude the appointment of different counsel at any stage of the proceedings.

"§ 3599. Collateral attack on judgment imposing sentence of death

"(a) TIME FOR MAKING SECTION 2255 MOTION.—In a case in which a sentence of death has been imposed, and the judgment has become final as described in section 3598(c), a motion in the case under section 2255 of title 28 shall be filed within 90 days of the issuance of the order relating to appointment of counsel under section 3598(c). The court in which the motion is filed, for good cause shown, may extend the time for filing for a period not exceeding 60 days. A motion described in this section shall have priority over all noncapital matters in the district court, and in the court of appeals on review of the district court's decision.

"(b) STAY OF EXECUTION.—The execution of a sentence of death shall be stayed in the course of direct review of the judgment and during the litigation of an initial motion in the case under section 2255 of title 28. The stay shall run continuously following imposition of the sentence, and shall expire if—

"(1) the defendant fails to file a motion under section 2255 of title 28 within the time specified in subsection (a), or fails to make a timely application for court of appeals review following the denial of such a motion by a district court;

"(2) upon completion of district court and court of appeals review under section 2255 of title 28, the motion under that section is denied and—

"(A) the time for filing a petition for certiorari has expired and no petition has been filed;

"(B) a timely petition for certiorari was filed and the Supreme Court denied the petition; or

"(C) a timely petition for certiorari was filed and upon consideration of the case, the Supreme Court disposed of it in a manner that left the capital sentence undisturbed; or

"(3) before a district court, in the presence of counsel and after having been advised of the consequences of the decision to do so, the defendant waives the right to file a motion under section 2255 of title 28.

"(c) FINALITY OF DECISION ON REVIEW.—If one of the conditions specified in subsection (b) has occurred, no court thereafter shall have the authority to enter a stay of execution or grant relief in the case unless—

"(1) the basis for the stay and request for relief is a claim not presented in earlier proceedings;

"(2) the failure to raise the claim was—

"(A) the result of governmental action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States;

"(B) the result of the Supreme Court recognition of a new Federal right that is retroactively applicable; or

"(C) based on a factual predicate that could not have been discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence in time to present the claim in earlier proceedings; and

"(3) the facts underlying the claim would be sufficient, if proven, to undermine the court's confidence in the determination of guilt on the offense or offenses for which the death penalty was imposed.

"§ 3600. Application in Indian country

"Notwithstanding sections 1152 and 1153, no person subject to the criminal jurisdiction of an Indian tribal government shall be subject to a capital sentence under this chapter for any offense the Federal jurisdiction for which is predicated solely on Indian country as defined in section 1151 and which has occurred within the boundaries of such Indian country, unless the governing body of the tribe has made an election that this chapter have effect over land and persons subject to its criminal jurisdiction."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The part analysis for part II of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding after the item relating to chapter 227 the following new item:

"228. Death penalty procedures 3591."

SEC. 103. CONFORMING AMENDMENT RELATING TO DESTRUCTION OF AIRCRAFT OR AIRCRAFT FACILITIES.

Section 34 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking the comma after "life" and all that follows through "order".

SEC. 104. CONFORMING AMENDMENT RELATING TO ESPIONAGE.

Section 794(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking the period at the end and inserting ", except that the sentence of death shall not be imposed unless the jury or, if there is no jury, the court, further finds beyond a reasonable doubt at a hearing under section 3593 that the offense directly concerned—

"(1) nuclear weaponry, military spacecraft and satellites, early warning systems, or other means of defense or retaliation against large-scale attack;

"(2) war plans;

"(3) communications intelligence or cryptographic information;

"(4) sources or methods of intelligence or counterintelligence operations; or

"(5) any other major weapons system or major element of defense strategy."

SEC. 105. CONFORMING AMENDMENT RELATING TO TRANSPORTING EXPLOSIVES.

Section 844(d) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "as provided in section 34 of this title".

SEC. 106. CONFORMING AMENDMENT RELATING TO MALICIOUS DESTRUCTION OF FEDERAL PROPERTY BY EXPLOSIVES.

Section 844(f) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "as provided in section 34 of this title".

SEC. 107. CONFORMING AMENDMENT RELATING TO MALICIOUS DESTRUCTION OF INTERSTATE PROPERTY BY EXPLOSIVES.

(a) OFFENSE.—Chapter 111 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new sections:

“§ 2290. Violence against maritime navigation

“(a) OFFENSE.—Whoever unlawfully and intentionally—

“(1) seizes or exercises control over a ship by force or threat thereof or any other form of intimidation;

“(2) performs an act of violence against a person on board a ship if that act is likely to endanger the safe navigation of that ship;

“(3) destroys a ship or causes damage to a ship or to its cargo which is likely to endanger the safe navigation of that ship;

“(4) places or causes to be placed on a ship, by any means whatsoever, a device or substance which is likely to destroy that ship, or cause damage to that ship or its cargo which endangers or is likely to endanger the safe navigation of that ship;

“(5) destroys or seriously damages maritime navigational facilities or seriously interferes with their operation, if such act is likely to endanger the safe navigation of a ship;

“(6) communicates information, knowing the information to be false and under circumstances in which such information may reasonably be believed, thereby endangering the safe navigation of a ship;

“(7) injures or kills any person in connection with the commission or the attempted commission of an offense described in paragraph (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), or (6); or “(8) attempts to commit any act prohibited under paragraph (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), (6), or (7), shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 20 years, or both, and if the death of any person results from conduct prohibited by this subsection, shall be punished by death or imprisoned for any term of years or for life.

“(b) THREATENED OFFENSE.—Whoever threatens to commit any act prohibited under subsection (a) (2), (3), or (5), with apparent determination and will to carry the threat into execution, if the threatened act is likely to endanger the safe navigation of the ship in question, shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

“(c) JURISDICTION.—There is jurisdiction over the activity prohibited in subsections (a) and (b)—

“(1) in the case of a covered ship, if—

“(A) such activity is committed—

“(i) against or on board a ship flying the flag of the United States at the time the prohibited activity is committed;

“(ii) in the United States; or

“(iii) by a national of the United States or by a stateless person whose habitual residence is in the United States;

“(B) during the commission of such activity, a national of the United States is seized, threatened, injured, or killed; or

“(C) the offender is later found in the United States after such activity is committed;

“(2) in the case of a ship navigating or scheduled to navigate solely within the territorial sea or internal waters of a country other than the United States, if the offender is later found in the United States after such activity is committed; and

“(3) in the case of any vessel, if such activity is committed in an attempt to compel the United States to do or abstain from doing any act.

“(d) DELIVERY OF PROBABLE OFFENDER.—

The master of a covered ship flying the flag of the United States who has reasonable grounds to believe that he or she has on board the ship any person who has committed an offense under Article 3 of the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Against the Safety of Maritime Navigation may deliver such person to the authorities of a State Party to that Convention. Before delivering such person to the authorities of another country, the master shall notify in an appropriate manner the Attorney General of the United States of the alleged offense and await instructions from the Attorney General as to what action the master should take. When delivering the person to a country which is a State Party to the Convention, the master shall, whenever practicable, and if possible before entering the territorial sea of such country, notify the authorities of such country of his or her intention to deliver such person and the reason therefor. If the master delivers such person, the master shall furnish the authorities of such country with the evidence in the master's possession that pertains to the alleged offense.

“(e) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section—

“(1) ‘ship’ means a vessel of any type whatsoever not permanently attached to the seabed, including dynamically supported craft, submersibles or any other floating craft, but does not include a warship, a ship owned or operated by a government when being used as a naval auxiliary or for customs or police purposes, or a ship that has been withdrawn from navigation or laid up;

(a) OFFENSE.—Chapter 51 of title 18, United States Code, as amended by section 110, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 1119. Murder by escaped prisoners

"(a) OFFENSE.—A person who, having escaped from a Federal prison where the person was confined under a sentence for a term of life imprisonment, kills another person, shall be punished as provided in sections 1111 and 1112.

"(b) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the terms 'Federal prison' and 'term of life imprisonment' have the meanings stated in section 1118."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 51 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"1119. Murder by escaped prisoners."

SEC. 142. DEATH PENALTY FOR MURDERS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Title 18 of the United States Code is amended—

(a) by adding the following new section at the end of chapter 51:

"§ 1118. Capital punishment for murders in the District of Columbia

"(a) OFFENSE.—It is an offense to cause the death of a person intentionally, knowingly, or through recklessness manifesting extreme indifference to human life, or to cause the death of a person through the intentional infliction of serious bodily injury.

"(b) FEDERAL JURISDICTION.—There is a federal jurisdiction over an offense described in this section if the conduct resulting in death occurs in the District of Columbia.

"(c) PENALTY.—An offense described in this section is a Class A felony. A sentence of death may be imposed for an offense described in this section as provided in subsections (d)–(1).

"(d) MITIGATING FACTORS.—In determining whether to recommend a sentence of death, the jury shall consider whether any aspect of the defendant's character, background, or record or any circumstance of the offense that the defendant may proffer as a mitigating factor exists, including the following factors:

"(1) MENTAL CAPACITY.—The defendant's mental capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of law was significantly impaired.

"(2) DURESS.—The defendant was under unusual and substantial duress.

"(3) PARTICIPATION IN OFFENSE MINOR.—The defendant is punishable as a principal (pursuant to section 2 of this title) in the offense, which was committed by another, but the defendant's participation was relatively minor.

"(e) AGGRAVATING FACTORS.—In determining whether to recommend a sentence of death, the jury shall consider any aggravating factor for which notice has been provided under subsection (f), including the following factors—

"(1) KILLING IN FURTHERANCE OF DRUG TRAFFICKING.—The defendant engaged in the conduct resulting in death in the course of or in furtherance of drug trafficking activity.

"(2) KILLING IN THE COURSE OF OTHER SERIOUS VIOLENT CRIMES.—The defendant engaged in the conduct resulting in death in the course of committing or attempting to commit an offense involving robbery, burglary, sexual abuse, kidnapping, or arson.

"(3) MULTIPLE KILLINGS OR ENDANGERMENT OF OTHERS.—The defendant committed more than one offense under this section, or in committing the offense knowingly created a grave risk of death to one or more persons in addition to the victim of the offense.

"(4) INVOLVEMENT OF FIREARM.—During and in relation to the commission of the offense, the defendant used or possessed a firearm as defined in section 921 of this title.

"(5) PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF VIOLENT FELONY.—The defendant has previously been convicted of an offense punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than one year that involved the use or attempted or threatened use of force against a person or that involved sexual abuse.

(6) KILLING WHILE INCARCERATED OR UNDER SUPERVISION.—The defendant at the time of the offense was confined in or had escaped from a jail, prison, or other correctional or detention facility, was on pre-trial release, or was on probation, parole, supervised release, or other post-conviction conditional release.

"(7) HEINOUS, CRUEL OR DEPRAVED MANNER OF COMMISSION.—The defendant committed the offense in an especially heinous, cruel, or depraved manner in that it involved torture or serious physical abuse to the victim.

"(8) PROCUREMENT OF THE OFFENSE BY PAYMENT.—The defendant procured the commission of the offense by payment, or promise of payment, of anything of pecuniary value.

"(9) COMMISSION OF THE OFFENSE FOR PECUNIARY GAIN.—The defendant committed the offense as consideration for receiving, or in the expectation of receiving or obtaining, anything of pecuniary value.

"(10) SUBSTANTIAL PLANNING AND PREMEDITATION.—The defendant committed the offense after substantial planning and premeditation.

"(11) VULNERABILITY OF VICTIM.—The victim was particularly vulnerable due to old age, youth, or infirmity.

"(12) KILLING OF PUBLIC SERVANT.—The defendant committed the offense against a public servant—

"(i) while such public servant was engaged in the performance of his or her official duties;

"(ii) because of the performance of such public servant's official duties; or

"(iii) because of such public servant's status as a public servant.

"(13) KILLING TO INTERFERE WITH OR RETALIATE AGAINST WITNESS.—The defendant committed the offense in order to prevent or inhibit any person from testifying or providing information concerning an offense, or to retaliate against any person for testifying or providing such information.

"(f) NOTICE OF INTENT TO SEEK DEATH PENALTY.—If the government intends to seek the death penalty for an offense under this section, the attorney for the government shall file with the court and serve on the defendant a notice of such intent. The notice shall be provided a reasonable time before the trial or acceptance of a guilty plea, or at such later time as the court may permit for good cause. The notice shall set forth the aggravating factor or factors set forth in subsection (e) and any other aggravating factor or factors that the government will seek to prove as the basis for the death penalty. The factors for which notice is provided under this subsection may include factors concerning the effect of the offense on the victim and the victim's family. The court may permit the attorney for the government to amend the notice upon a showing of good cause.

"(g) JUDGE AND JURY AT CAPITAL SENTENCING HEARING.—A hearing to determine whether the death penalty will be imposed for an offense under this section shall be conducted by the judge who presided at trial or accepted a guilty plea, or by another judge if that judge is not available. The hearing shall be conducted before the jury that determined the defendant's guilt if that jury is available. A new jury shall be impaneled for the purpose of the hearing if the defendant pleaded guilty, the trial of guilt was conducted without a jury, the jury that determined the defendant's guilt was discharged for good cause, or reconsideration of the sentence is necessary after the initial imposition of a sentence of death. A jury impaneled under this subsection shall have twelve members unless the parties stipulate to a lesser number at any time before the conclusion of the hearing with the approval of the judge. Upon motion of the defendant, with the approval of the attorney for the government, the hearing shall be carried out before the judge without a jury. If there is no jury, references to "the jury" in this section, where applicable, shall be understood as referring to the judge.

"(h) PROOF OF MITIGATING AND AGGRAVATING FACTORS.—No presentence report shall be prepared if a capital sentencing hearing is held under this section. Any information relevant to the existence of mitigating factors, or to the existence of aggravating factors for which notice has been provided under subsection (f), may be presented by either the government or the defendant, regardless of its admissibility under the rules governing the admission of evidence at criminal trials, except that information may be excluded if its probative value is outweighed by the danger of creating unfair prejudice, confusing the issues, or misleading the jury. The information presented may include trial transcripts and exhibits. The attorney for the government and for the defendant shall be permitted to rebut any information received at the hearing, and shall be given fair opportunity to present argument as to the adequacy of the information to establish the existence of any aggravating or mitigating factor, and as to the appropriateness in that case of imposing a sentence of death. The attorney for the government shall open the argument, the defendant shall be permitted to reply, and the government shall then be permitted to reply in rebuttal.

"(i) FINDINGS OF AGGRAVATING AND MITIGATING FACTORS.—The jury shall return special findings identifying any aggravating factor or factors for which notice has been provided under subsection (f) and which the jury unanimously determines have been established by the government beyond a reasonable doubt. A mitigating factor is established if the defendant has proven its existence by a preponderance of the evidence, and any member of the jury who finds the existence of such a factor may regard it as established for purposes of this section regardless of the number of jurors who concur that the factor has been established.

"(j) FINDING CONCERNING A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—If the jury specially finds under subsection (i) that one or more aggravating factors set forth in subsection (e) exist, and the jury further finds unanimously that there are no mitigating factors or that the aggravating factor or factors specially found under subsection (i) outweigh any mitigating factors, then the jury shall recommend a sentence of death. In any other case, the jury shall not recommend a sentence of death. The jury shall be instructed that it must avoid any influence of sympathy, sentiment, passion, prejudice, or other arbitrary factors in its decision, and should make such a recommendation as the information warrants.

"(k) SPECIAL PRECAUTION TO ASSURE AGAINST DISCRIMINATION.—In a hearing held before a jury, the court, before the return of a finding under subsection (j), shall instruct the jury that, in considering whether to recommend a sentence of death, it shall not consider the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim, and that the jury is not to recommend a sentence of death unless it has concluded that it would recommend a sentence of death for such a crime regardless of the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim. The jury, upon the return of a finding under subsection (j), shall also return to the court a certificate, signed by each juror, that the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim did not affect the juror's individual decision and that the individual juror would have recommended the same sentence for such a crime regardless of the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim.

"(l) IMPOSITION OF A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—Upon a recommendation under subsection (j) that a sentence of death be imposed, the court shall sentence the defendant to death. Otherwise the court shall impose a sentence, other than death, authorized by law.

"(m) REVIEW OF A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—

"(1) The defendant may appeal a sentence of death under this section by filing a notice of appeal of the sentence within the time provided for filing a notice of appeal of the judgment of conviction. An appeal of a sentence under this subsection may be consolidated within an appeal of the judgment of conviction and shall have priority over all noncapital matters in the court of appeals.

"(2) The court of appeals shall review the entire record in the case including the evidence submitted at trial and information submitted during the sentencing hearing, the procedures employed in the sentencing hearing, and the special findings returned under subsection (i). The court of appeals shall uphold the sentence if it determines that the sentence of death was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor, that the evidence and information support the special findings under subsection (i), and that the proceedings were otherwise free of prejudicial error that was properly preserved for review.

"(3) In any other case, the court of appeals shall remand the case for reconsideration of the sentence or imposition of another authorized sentence as appropriate, except that the court shall not reverse a sentence of death on the ground that an aggravating factor was invalid or was not supported by the evidence and information if at least one aggravating factor described in subsection (e) remains which was found to exist and the court, on the basis of the evidence submitted at trial and the information submitted at the sentencing hearing, finds that the remaining aggravating factor or factors which were found to exist outweigh any mitigating factors. The court of appeals shall state in writing the reasons for its disposition of an appeal of a sentence of death under this section.

"(n) IMPLEMENTATION OF SENTENCE OF DEATH.—A person sentenced to death under this section shall be committed to the custody of the Attorney General until exhaustion of the procedures for appeal of the judgment of conviction and review of the sentence. When the sentence is to be implemented, the Attorney General shall release the person sentenced to death to the custody of a United States Marshal. The Marshal shall supervise implementation of the sentence in the manner prescribed by the law of a State designated by the court. The Marshal may use State or local facilities, may use the services of an appropriate State or local official or of a person such as an official employee, and shall pay the costs thereof in an amount approved by the Attorney General.

"(o) SPECIAL BAR TO EXECUTION.—A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a woman while she is pregnant.

"(p) CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTION TO PARTICIPATION IN EXECUTION.—No employee of any State department of corrections, the United States Marshals Service, or the Federal Bureau of Prisons, and no person providing services to that department, service, or bureau under contract shall be required, as a condition of that employment or contractual obligation, to be in attendance at or to participate in any execution carried out under this section if such participation is contrary to the moral or religious convictions of the employee. For purposes of this subsection, the term 'participate in any execution' includes personal preparation of the condemned individual and the apparatus used for the execution, and supervision of the activities of other personnel in carrying out such activities.

"(q) APPOINTMENT OF COUNSEL FOR INDIGENT CAPITAL DEFENDANTS.—A defendant against whom a sentence of death is sought, or on whom a sentence of death has been imposed, under this section, shall be entitled to appointment of counsel from the commencement of trial proceedings until one of the conditions specified in subsection (v) has occurred, if the defendant is or becomes financially unable to obtain adequate representation. Counsel shall be appointed for trial representation as provided in section 3005 of this title, and at least one counsel so appointed shall continue to represent the defendant until the conclusion of direct review of the judgment, unless replaced by the court with other qualified counsel. Except as otherwise provided in this section, the provisions of section 3006A of this title shall apply to appointments under this section.

"(r) REPRESENTATION AFTER FINALITY OF JUDGMENT.—When a judgment imposing a sentence of death under this section has become final through affirmation by the Supreme Court on direct review, denial of certiorari by the Supreme Court on direct review, or expiration of the time for seeking direct review in the court of appeals or the Supreme Court, the government shall promptly notify the court that imposed the sentence. The court, within 10 days of receipt of such notice, shall proceed to make determination whether the defendant is eligible for appointment of counsel for subsequent proceedings. The court shall issue an order appointing one or more counsel to represent the defendant upon a finding that the defendant is financially unable to obtain adequate representation and wishes to have counsel appointed or is unable competently to decide whether to accept or reject appointment of counsel. The court shall issue an order denying appointment of counsel upon a finding that the defendant is financially able to obtain adequate representation or that the defendant rejected appointment of counsel with an understanding of the consequences of that decision. Counsel appointed pursuant to this subsection shall be different from the counsel who represented the defendant at trial and on direct review unless the defendant and counsel request a continuation or renewal of the earlier representation.

"(s) STANDARDS FOR COMPETENCE OF COUNSEL.—In relation to a defendant who is entitled to appointment of counsel under subsections (q)-(r), at least one counsel appointed for trial representation must have been admitted to the bar for at least 5 years and have at least three years of experience in the trial of felony cases in the Federal district courts. If new counsel is appointed after judgment, at least one counsel so appointed must have been admitted to the bar for at least 5 years and have at least 3 years of experience in the litigation of felony cases in the Federal courts of appeals or the Supreme Court. The court, for good cause, may appoint counsel who does not meet these standards, but whose background, knowledge, or experience would otherwise enable him or her to properly represent the defendant, with due consideration of the seriousness of the penalty and the nature of the litigation.

"(t) CLAIMS OF INEFFECTIVENESS OF COUNSEL IN COLLATERAL PROCEEDINGS.—The ineffectiveness or incompetence of counsel during proceedings on a motion under section 2255 of title 28, United States Code, in a case under this section shall not be a ground for relief from the judgment or sentence in any proceeding. This limitation shall not preclude the appointment of different counsel at any stage of the proceedings.

"(u) TIME FOR COLLATERAL ATTACK ON DEATH SENTENCE.—A motion under section 2255 of title 28, United States Code, attacking a sentence of death under this section, or the conviction on which it is predicated, must be filed within 90 days of the issuance of the order under subsection (r) appointing or denying the appointment of counsel for such proceedings. The court in which the motion is filed, for good cause shown, may extend the time for filing for a period not exceeding 60 days. Such a motion shall have priority over all non-capital matters in the district court, and in the court of appeals on review of the district court's decision.

"(v) STAY OF EXECUTION.—The execution of a sentence of death under this section shall be stayed in the course of direct review of the judgment and during the litigation of an initial motion in the case under section 2255 of title 28, United States Code. The stay shall run continuously following imposition of the sentence and shall expire if—

"(1) the defendant fails to file a motion under section 2255 of title 28, United States Code, within the time specified in subsection (u), or fails to make a timely application for court of appeals review following the denial of such a motion by a district court;

"(2) upon completion of district court and court of appeals review under section 2255 of title 28, United States Code, the Supreme Court disposes of a petition for certiorari in a manner that leaves the capital sentence undisturbed, or the defendant fails to file a timely petition for certiorari; or

"(3) before a district court, in the presence of counsel and after having been advised of the consequences of such a decision, the defendant waives the right to file a motion under section 2255 of title 28, United States Code.

"(w) FINALITY OF THE DECISION ON REVIEW.—If one of the conditions specified in subsection (v) has occurred, no court thereafter shall have the authority to enter a stay of execution or grant relief in the case unless—

"(1) the basis for the stay and request for relief is a claim not presented in earlier proceedings;

"(2) the failure to raise the claim is the result of governmental action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States, the result of the Supreme Court's recognition of a new Federal right that is retroactively applicable, or the result of the fact that the factual predicate of the claim could not have been discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence in time to present the claim in earlier proceedings; and

"(3) the facts underlying the claim would be sufficient, if proven, to undermine the court's confidence in the determination of guilt on the offense or offenses for which the death penalty was imposed.

"(x) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) 'State' has the meaning given in section 513 of this title, including the District of Columbia;

"(2) 'Offense', as used in paragraphs (2), (5), and (13) of subsection (e), and in paragraph (5) of this subsection, means an offense under the law of the District of Columbia, another State, or the United States;

"(3) 'Drug trafficking activity' means a drug trafficking crime as defined in section 929(a)(2) of this title, or a pattern or series of acts involving one or more drug trafficking crimes;

"(4) 'Robbery' means obtaining the property of another by force or threat of force;

"(5) 'Burglary' means entering or remaining in a building or structure in violation of the law of the District of Columbia, another State, or the United States, with the intent to commit an offense in the building or structure;

"(6) 'Sexual abuse' means any conduct proscribed by chapter 109A of this title, whether or not the conduct occurs in the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States;

"(7) 'Arson' means damaging or destroying a building or structure through the use of fire or explosives;

"(8) 'Kidnapping' means seizing, confining, or abducting a person, or transporting a person without his or her consent;

"(9) 'Pre-trial release', 'probation', 'parole', 'supervised release', and 'other post-conviction conditional release', as used in subsection (e)(6), mean any such release, imposed in relation to a charge or conviction for an offense under the law of the District of Columbia, another State, or the United States; and

"(10) 'Public servant' means an employee, agent, officer, or official of the District of Columbia, another State, or the United States, or an employee, agent, officer, or official of a foreign government who is within the scope of section 1116 of this title.

"(y) When an offense is charged under this section, the government may join any charge under the District of Columbia Code that arises from the same incident; and

"(b) by adding the following at the end of the table of sections for chapter 51:

"1118. Capital punishment for murders in the District of Columbia."

TITLE II—HABEAS CORPUS REFORM

Subtitle A—General Habeas Corpus Reform

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Habeas Corpus Reform Act of 1993".

SEC. 202. PERIOD OF LIMITATION.

Section 2244 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d) A one-year period of limitation shall apply to an application for a writ of habeas corpus by a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court. The limitation period shall run from the latest of—

"(1) the time at which State remedies are exhausted;

"(2) the time at which the impediment to filing an application created by State action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States is removed, where the applicant was prevented from filing by such State action;

"(3) the time at which the Federal right asserted was initially recognized by the Supreme Court, where the right has been newly recognized by the Court and is retroactively applicable; or

"(4) the time at which the factual predicate of the claim or claims presented could have been discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence."

SEC. 203. APPEAL.

Section 2253 of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 2253. Appeal

"In a habeas corpus proceeding or a proceeding under section 2255 before a circuit or district judge, the final order shall be subject to review, on appeal, by the court of appeals for the circuit where the proceeding is had.

"There shall be no right of appeal from such an order in a proceeding to test the validity of a warrant to remove, to another district or place for commitment or trial, a person charged with a criminal offense against the United States, or to test the validity of his detention pending removal proceedings.

"An appeal may not be taken to the court of appeals from the final order in a habeas corpus proceeding where the detention complained of arises out of process issued by a State court, or from the final order in a proceeding under section 2255, unless a circuit justice or judge issues a certificate of probable cause."

SEC. 204. AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL RULES OF APPELLATE PROCEDURE.

Rule 22 of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure is amended to read as follows:

"Rule 22. Habeas corpus and section 2255 proceedings

"(a) Application for an Original Writ of Habeas Corpus.—An application for a writ of habeas corpus shall be made to the appropriate district court. If application is made to a circuit judge, the application will ordinarily be transferred to the appropriate district court. If an application is made to or transferred to the district court and denied, renewal of the application before a circuit judge is not favored; the proper remedy is by appeal to the court of appeals from the order of the district court denying the writ.

"(b) Necessity of Certificate of Probable Cause for Appeal.—In a habeas corpus proceeding in which the detention complained of arises out of process issued by a State court, and in a motion proceeding pursuant to section 2255 of title 28, United States Code, an appeal by the applicant or movant may not proceed unless a circuit judge issues a certificate of probable cause. If a request for a certificate of probable cause is addressed to the court of appeals, it shall be deemed addressed to the judges thereof and shall be considered by a circuit judge or judges as the court deems appropriate. If no express request for a certificate is filed, the notice of appeal shall be deemed to constitute a request addressed to the judges of the court of appeals. If an appeal is taken by a State or the Government or its representative, a certificate of probable cause is not required."

SEC. 205. SECTION 2254 AMENDMENTS.

Section 2254 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by amending subsection (b) to read as follows:

"(b) An application for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court shall not be granted unless it appears that the applicant has exhausted the remedies available in the courts of the State, or that there is either an absence of available State corrective process or the existence of circumstances rendering such process ineffective to protect the rights of the applicant. An application may be denied on the merits notwithstanding the failure of the applicant to exhaust the remedies available in the courts of the State;";

(2) by redesignating subsections (d), (e), and (f) as subsections (e), (f), and (g), respectively;

(3) by inserting after subsection (c) the following new subsection:

"(d) An application for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court shall not be granted with respect to any claim that has been fully and fairly adjudicated in State proceedings;";

(4) by amending subsection (e), as redesignated by paragraph (2), to read as follows:

"(e) In a proceeding instituted by an application for a writ of habeas corpus by a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State court, a full and fair determination of a factual issue made in the case by a State court shall be presumed to be correct. The applicant shall have the burden of rebutting this presumption by clear and convincing evidence." and

(5) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(h) In all proceedings brought under this section, and any subsequent proceedings on review, appointment of counsel for a petitioner who is or becomes financially unable to afford counsel shall be in the discretion of the court, except as provided by a rule promulgated by the Supreme Court pursuant to statutory authority. Appointment of counsel under this section shall be governed by section 3006A of title 18, United States Code."

SEC. 206. SECTION 2255 AMENDMENTS.

Section 2255 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking the second paragraph and the penultimate paragraph; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"A two-year period of limitation shall apply to a motion under this section. The limitation period shall run from the latest of—

"(1) the time at which the judgment of conviction becomes final;

"(2) the time at which the impediment to making a motion created by governmental action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States is removed, where the movant was prevented from making a motion by such governmental action;

"(3) the time at which the right asserted was initially recognized by the Supreme Court, where the right has been newly recognized by the Court and is retroactively applicable; or

"(4) the time at which the factual predicate of the claim or claims presented could have been discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence.

"In all proceedings brought under this section, and any subsequent proceedings on review, appointment of counsel for a movant who is or becomes financially unable to afford counsel shall be in the discretion of the court, except as provided by a rule promulgated by the Supreme Court pursuant to statutory authority. Appointment of counsel under this section shall be governed by section 3006A of title 18, United States Code."

Subtitle B—Death Penalty Litigation Procedures

SEC. 211. SHORT TITLE FOR SUBTITLE B.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Death Penalty Litigation Procedures Act of 1993".

SEC. 212. DEATH PENALTY LITIGATION PROCEDURES.

(a) ADDITION OF CHAPTER TO TITLE 28, UNITED STATES CODE.—Title 28, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 153 the following new chapter:

CHAPTER 154—SPECIAL HABEAS CORPUS PROCEDURES IN CAPITAL CASES

"Sec.

"2256. Prisoners in State custody subject to capital sentence; appointment of counsel; requirement of rule of court or statute; procedures for appointment.

"2257. Mandatory stay of execution; duration; limits on stays of execution; successive petitions.

"2258. Filing of habeas corpus petition; time requirements; tolling rules.

"2259. Evidentiary hearings; scope of Federal review; district court adjudication.

"2260. Certificate of probable cause inapplicable.

"2261. Application to state unitary review procedures.

"2262. Limitation periods for determining petitions.

"2263. Rule of construction.

"§ 2256. Prisoners in State custody subject to capital sentence; appointment of counsel; requirement of rule of court or statute; procedures for appointment

"(a) APPLICATION OF CHAPTER.—This chapter shall apply to cases arising under section 2254 brought by prisoners in State custody who are subject to a capital sentence. It shall apply only if the provisions of subsections (b) and (c) are satisfied.

"(b) ESTABLISHMENT OF APPOINTMENT MECHANISM.—This chapter is applicable if a State establishes by rule of its court of last resort or by statute a mechanism for the appointment, compensation and payment of reasonable litigation expenses of competent counsel in State postconviction proceedings brought by indigent prisoners whose capital convictions and sentences have been upheld on direct appeal to the court of last resort in the State or have otherwise become final for State law purposes. The rule of court or statute must provide standards of competency for the appointment of such counsel.

"(c) OFFER OF COUNSEL.—Any mechanism for the appointment, compensation and reimbursement of counsel as provided in subsection (b) must offer counsel to all State prisoners under capital sentence and must provide for the entry of an order by a court of record—

"(1) appointing 1 or more counsel to represent the prisoner upon a finding that the prisoner is indigent and accepted the offer or is unable competently to decide whether to accept or reject the offer;

"(2) finding, after a hearing if necessary, that the prisoner rejected the offer of counsel and made the decision with an understanding of its legal consequences; or

"(3) denying the appointment of counsel upon a finding that the prisoner is not indigent.

"(d) PREVIOUS REPRESENTATION.—No counsel appointed pursuant to subsections (b) and (c) to represent a State prisoner under capital sentence shall have previously represented the prisoner at trial or on direct appeal in the case for which the appointment is made unless the prisoner and counsel expressly request continued representation.

"(e) NO GROUND FOR RELIEF.—The ineffectiveness or incompetence of counsel during State or Federal collateral postconviction proceedings in a capital case shall not be a ground for relief in a proceeding arising under section 2254. This limitation shall not preclude the appointment of different counsel, on the court's own motion or at the request of the prisoner, at any phase of State or Federal postconviction proceedings on the basis of the ineffectiveness or incompetence of counsel in such proceedings.

"§ 2257. Mandatory stay of execution; duration; limits on stays of execution; successive petitions

"(a) STAY.—Upon the entry in the appropriate State court of record of an order under section 2256(c), a warrant or order setting an execution date for a State prisoner shall be stayed upon application to any court that would have jurisdiction over any proceedings filed under section 2254. The application must recite that the State has invoked the postconviction review procedures of this chapter and that the scheduled execution is subject to stay.

"(b) EXPIRATION OF STAY.—A stay of execution granted pursuant to subsection (a) shall expire if—

"(1) a State prisoner fails to file a habeas corpus petition under section 2254 within the time required in section 2258, or fails to make a timely application for court of appeals review following the denial of such a petition by a district court;

"(2) upon completion of district court and court of appeals review under section 2254 the petition for relief is denied and—

"(A) the time for filing a petition for certiorari has expired and no petition has been filed;

"(B) a timely petition for certiorari was filed and the Supreme Court denied the petition; or

"(C) a timely petition for certiorari was filed and upon consideration of the case, the Supreme Court disposed of it in a manner that left the capital sentence undisturbed; or

"(3) before a court of competent jurisdiction, in the presence of counsel and after having been advised of the consequences of his decision, a State prisoner under capital sentence waives the right to pursue habeas corpus review under section 2254.

"(c) LIMITATION ON FURTHER STAY.—If one of the conditions in subsection (b) has occurred, no Federal court thereafter shall have the authority to enter a stay of execution or grant relief in a capital case unless—

"(1) the basis for the stay and request for relief is a claim not previously presented in the State or Federal courts;

"(2) the failure to raise the claim is—

"(A) the result of State action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States;

"(B) the result of the Supreme Court recognition of a new Federal right that is retroactively applicable; or

"(C) based on a factual predicate that could not have been discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence in time to present the claim for State or Federal postconviction review; and

"(3) the facts underlying the claim would be sufficient, if proven, to undermine the court's confidence in the determination of guilt on the offense or offenses for which the death penalty was imposed.

"§ 2258. Filing of habeas corpus petition; time requirements; tolling rules

"Any petition for habeas corpus relief under section 2254 must be filed in the appropriate district court within 180 days from the filing in the appropriate State court of record of an order under section 2256(c). The time requirements established by this section shall be tolled—

"(1) from the date that a petition for certiorari is filed in the Supreme Court until the date of final disposition of the petition if a State prisoner files the petition to secure review by the Supreme Court of the affirmance of a capital sentence on direct review by the court of last resort of the State or other final State court decision on direct review;

"(2) during any period in which a State prisoner under capital sentence has a properly filed request for postconviction review pending before a State court of competent jurisdiction; if all State filing rules are met in a timely manner, this period shall run continuously from the date that the State prisoner initially files for postconviction review until final disposition of the case by the highest court of the State, but the time requirements established by this section are not tolled during the pendency of a petition for certiorari before the Supreme Court except as provided in paragraph (1); and

"(3) during an additional period not to exceed 60 days, if—

"(A) a motion for an extension of time is filed in the Federal district court that would have proper jurisdiction over the case upon the filing of a habeas corpus petition under section 2254; and

"(B) a showing of good cause is made for the failure to file the habeas corpus petition within the time period established by this section.

"§ 2259. Evidentiary hearings; scope of Federal review; district court adjudication

"(a) REVIEW OF RECORD; HEARING.—Whenever a State prisoner under a capital sentence files a petition for habeas corpus relief to which this chapter applies, the district court shall—

"(1) determine the sufficiency of the record for habeas corpus review based on the claims actually presented and litigated in the State courts except when the prisoner can show that the failure to raise or develop a claim in the State courts is—

"(A) the result of State action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States;

"(B) the result of the Supreme Court recognition of a new Federal right that is retroactively applicable; or

"(C) based on a factual predicate that could not have been discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence in time to present the claim for State postconviction review; and

"(2) conduct any requested evidentiary hearing necessary to complete the record for habeas corpus review.

"(b) ADJUDICATION.—Upon the development of a complete evidentiary record, the district court shall rule on the claims that are properly before it, but the court shall not grant relief from a judgment of conviction or sentence on the basis of any claim that was fully and fairly adjudicated in State proceedings.

"§ 2260. Certificate of probable cause inapplicable

"The requirement of a certificate of probable cause in order to appeal from the district court to the court of appeals does not apply to habeas corpus cases subject to this chapter except when a second or successive petition is filed.

"§ 2261. Application to State unitary review procedure

"(a) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the term 'unitary review procedure' means a State procedure that authorizes a person under sentence of death to raise, in the course of direct review of the judgment, such claims as could be raised on collateral attack. This chapter shall apply, as provided in this section, in relation to a State unitary review procedure if the State establishes by rule of its court of last resort or by statute a mechanism for the appointment, compensation, and payment of reasonable litigation expenses of competent counsel in the unitary review proceedings, including expenses relating to the litigation of collateral claims in the proceedings. The rule of court or statute must provide standards of competency for the appointment of such counsel.

"(b) OFFER OF COUNSEL.—A unitary review procedure, to qualify under this section, must include an offer of counsel following trial for the purpose of representation on unitary review, and entry of an order, as provided in section 2256(c), concerning appointment of counsel or waiver or denial of appointment of counsel for that purpose. No counsel appointed to represent the prisoner in the unitary review proceedings shall have previously represented the prisoner at trial in the case for which the appointment is made unless the prisoner and counsel expressly request continued representation.

"(c) APPLICATION OF OTHER SECTIONS.—Sections 2257, 2258, 2259, 2260, and 2262 shall apply in relation to cases involving a sentence of death from any State having a unitary review procedure that qualifies under this section. References to State 'post-conviction review' and 'direct review' in those sections shall be understood as referring to unitary review under the State procedure. The references in sections 2257(a) and 2258 to 'an order under section 2256(c)' shall be understood as referring to the post-trial order under subsection (b) concerning representation in the unitary review proceedings, but if a transcript of the trial proceedings is unavailable at the time of the filing of such an order in the appropriate State court, the start of the 180-day limitation period under section 2258 shall be deferred until a transcript is made available to the prisoner or the prisoner's counsel.

"§ 2262. Limitation periods for determining petitions

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The adjudication of any petition under section 2254 that is subject to this chapter, and the adjudication of any motion under section 2255 by a person under sentence of death, shall be given priority by the district court and by the court of appeals over all noncapital matters. The adjudication of such a petition or motion shall be subject to the following time limitations:

"(1) A Federal district court shall determine such a petition or motion within 110 days of filing.

"(2)(A) The court of appeals shall hear and determine any appeal relating to such a petition or motion within 90 days after the notice of appeal is filed.

"(B) The court of appeals shall decide any application for rehearing en banc within 20 days of the filing of the application unless a responsive pleading is required, in which case the court of appeals shall decide the application within 20 days of the filing of the responsive pleading. If en banc consideration is granted, the en banc court shall determine the appeal within 90 days of the decision to grant such consideration.

"(3) The Supreme Court shall act on any application for a writ of certiorari relating to such a petition or motion within 90 days after the application is filed.

"(b) APPLICATION OF SECTION.—The time limitations under subsection (a) shall apply to an initial petition or motion, and to any second or successive petition or motion. The same limitations shall also apply to the re-determination of a petition or motion or related appeal following a remand by the court of appeals or the Supreme Court for further proceedings, and in such a case the limitation period shall run from the date of the remand.

"(c) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—The time limitations under this section shall not be construed to entitle a petitioner or movant to a stay of execution, to which the petitioner or movant would otherwise not be entitled, for the purpose of litigating any petition, motion, or appeal.

"(d) NO GROUND FOR RELIEF.—The failure of a court to meet or comply with the time limitations under this section shall not be a ground for granting relief from a judgment of conviction or sentence. The State or Government may enforce the time limitations under this section by applying to the court of appeals or the Supreme Court for a writ of mandamus.

"(e) REPORT.—The Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall report annually to Congress on the compliance by the courts with the time limits established in this section.

"§ 2263. Rule of construction

"This chapter shall be construed to promote the expeditious conduct and conclusion of State and Federal court review in capital cases."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The part analysis for part IV of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding after the item relating to chapter 153 the following new item:

"154. Special habeas corpus procedures in capital cases 2256."

Subtitle C—Equalization of Capital Habeas Corpus Litigation Funding

SEC. 221. FUNDING FOR DEATH PENALTY PROSECUTIONS.

Part E of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 511 the following new section:

"FUNDING FOR DEATH PENALTY PROSECUTIONS

"SEC. 511A. Notwithstanding any other provision of this part, the Director shall provide grants to the States, from the funding allocated pursuant to section 511, for the purpose of supporting litigation pertaining to Federal habeas corpus petitions in capital cases. The total funding available for such grants within any fiscal year shall be equal to the funding provided to capital resource centers, pursuant to Federal appropriation, in the same fiscal year."

TITLE III—EXCLUSIONARY RULE

SEC. 301. ADMISSIBILITY OF CERTAIN EVIDENCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 223 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 3509. Admissibility of evidence obtained by search or seizure

"(a) EVIDENCE OBTAINED BY OBJECTIVELY REASONABLE SEARCH OR SEIZURE.—Evidence that is obtained as a result of a search or seizure shall not be excluded in a proceeding in a court of the United States on the ground that the search or seizure was in violation of the fourth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, if the search or seizure was carried out in circumstances justifying an objectively reasonable belief that it was in conformity with the fourth amendment. The fact that evidence was obtained pursuant to and within the scope of a warrant constitutes prima facie evidence of the existence of such circumstances.

"(b) EVIDENCE NOT EXCLUDABLE BY STATUTE OR RULE.—Evidence shall not be excluded in a proceeding in a court of the United States on the ground that it was obtained in violation of a statute, an administrative rule or regulation, or a rule of procedure unless exclusion is expressly authorized by statute or by a rule prescribed by the Supreme Court pursuant to statutory authority.

"(c) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—This section shall not be construed to require or authorize the exclusion of evidence in any proceeding."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 223 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"3509. Admissibility of evidence obtained by search or seizure."

TITLE IV—RURAL CRIME AND DRUG CONTROL

Subtitle A—Drug Trafficking in Rural Areas

SEC. 401. AUTHORIZATIONS FOR RURAL LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES.

"(7) There are authorized to be appropriated $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and such sums as are necessary for fiscal years 1995 and 1996 to carry out part O of this title."

(b) AMENDMENT TO BASE ALLOCATION.—Section 1501(a)(2)(A) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 is amended by striking "$100,000" and inserting "$250,000".

SEC. 402. RURAL CRIME AND DRUG ENFORCEMENT TASK FORCES.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General, in consultation with the Governors, mayors, and chief executive officers of State and local law enforcement agencies, shall establish a Rural Crime and Drug Enforcement Task Force in each of the Federal judicial districts which encompass significant rural lands.

(b) TASK FORCE MEMBERSHIP.—The task forces established under subsection (a) shall be chaired by the United States Attorney for the respective Federal judicial districts. The task forces shall include representatives from—

- (1) State and local law enforcement agencies;
- (2) the Drug Enforcement Administration;
- (3) the Federal Bureau of Investigation;
- (4) the Immigration and Naturalization Service;
- (5) the Customs Service;
- (6) the United States Marshals Service; and
- (7) law enforcement officers from the United States Park Police, United States Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management, and such other Federal law enforcement agencies as the Attorney General may direct.

SEC. 403. CROSS-DESIGNATION OF FEDERAL OFFICERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General may cross-designate up to 100 law enforcement officers from each of the agencies specified under section 1502(b)(6) with jurisdiction to enforce the provisions of the Controlled Substances Act on non-Federal lands and title 18 of the United States Code to the extent necessary to effect the purposes of this Act.

(b) ADEQUATE STAFFING.—The Attorney General shall ensure that each of the task forces established in accordance with this title are adequately staffed with investigators and that additional investigators are provided when requested by the task force.

SEC. 404. RURAL DRUG ENFORCEMENT TRAINING.

(a) SPECIALIZED TRAINING FOR RURAL OFFICERS.—The Director of the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center shall develop a specialized course of instruction devoted to training law enforcement officers from rural agencies in the investigation of drug trafficking and related crimes.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out subsection (a) $1,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1994, 1995 and 1996.

Subtitle B—Rural Drug Prevention and Treatment

SEC. 411. RURAL SUBSTANCE ABUSE TREATMENT AND EDUCATION GRANTS.

Part A of title V of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 290aa et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 509H. RURAL SUBSTANCE ABUSE TREATMENT.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Office for Treatment Improvement (referred to in this section as the 'Director') shall establish a program to provide grants to hospitals, community health centers, migrant health centers, health entities of Indian tribes and tribal organizations (as defined in section 1913(b)(5)), and other appropriate entities that serve nonmetropolitan areas to assist such entities in developing and implementing projects that provide, or expand the availability of, substance abuse treatment services.

"(b) REQUIREMENTS.—To receive a grant under this section a hospital, community health center, or treatment facility shall—

"(1) serve a nonmetropolitan area or have a substance abuse treatment program that is designed to serve a nonmetropolitan area;

"(2) operate, or have a plan to operate, an approved substance abuse treatment program;

"(3) agree to coordinate the project assisted under this section with substance abuse treatment activities within the State and local agencies responsible for substance abuse treatment; and

"(4) prepare and submit an application in accordance with subsection (c).

"(c) APPLICATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section an entity shall submit an application to the Director at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Director shall require.

"(2) COORDINATED APPLICATIONS.—State agencies that are responsible for substance abuse treatment may submit coordinated grant applications on behalf of entities that are eligible for grants pursuant to subsection (b).

"(d) PREVENTION PROGRAMS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Each entity receiving a grant under this section may use a portion of such grant funds to further community-based substance abuse prevention activities.

"(2) REGULATIONS.—The Director, in consultation with the Director of the Office of Substance Abuse Prevention, shall promulgate regulations regarding the activities described in paragraph (1).

"(e) SPECIAL CONSIDERATION.—In awarding grants under this section the Director shall give priority to—

"(1) projects sponsored by rural hospitals that are qualified to receive rural health care transition grants as provided for in section 4005(e) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987;

"(2) projects serving nonmetropolitan areas that establish links and coordinate activities between hospitals, community health centers, community mental health centers, and substance abuse treatment centers; and

"(3) projects that are designed to serve areas that have no available existing treatment facilities.

"(f) DURATION.—Grants awarded under subsection (a) shall be for a period not to exceed 3 years, except that the Director may establish a procedure for renewal of grants under subsection (a).

"(g) GEOGRAPHIC DISTRIBUTION.—To the extent practicable, the Director shall provide grants to fund at least one project in each State.

"(h) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For the purpose of carrying out this section there is authorized to be appropriated $25,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1994 and 1995."

Subtitle C—Rural Areas Enhancement

SEC. 421. ASSET FORFEITURE.

The assets seized as a result of investigations initiated by a Rural Drug Enforcement Task Force shall be used primarily to enhance the operations of the task force and its participating State and local enforcement agencies.

SEC. 422. PROSECUTION OF CLANDESTINE LABORATORY OPERATORS.

(a) CRIMINAL CHARGES.—State and Federal prosecutors, when bringing charges against the operators of clandestine methamphetamine and other dangerous drug laboratories, shall, to the fullest extent possible, include, in addition to drug-related counts, counts involving infringements of the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act or any other environmental protection Act, including—

- (1) illegal disposal of hazardous waste; and
- (2) knowing endangerment of the environment.

(b) CIVIL ACTIONS.—Federal prosecutors may bring suit against the operators of clandestine methamphetamine and other dangerous drug laboratories for environmental and health related damages caused by the operators in their manufacture of illicit substances.

TITLE V—FIREARMS AND RELATED AMENDMENTS

SEC. 501. SMUGGLING FIREARMS IN AID OF DRUG TRAFFICKING.

Section 924 of title 18, United States Code, as amended by section 136, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(j) Whoever, with the intent to engage in or to promote conduct that—

"(1) is punishable under the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.), the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 951 et seq.), or the Maritime Drug Law Enforcement Act (46 U.S.C. App. 1901 et seq.);

- (1) by inserting after the part heading the following subpart heading:

"Subpart I—General Grant Programs";

and

- (2) by adding at the end the following new subpart:

"Subpart II—Juvenile Drug Trafficking and Gang Prevention Grants

"FORMULA GRANTS

"SEC. 231. (a) AUTHORIZATION.—The Administrator may make grants to States, units of general local government, private not-for-profit anticrime organizations, or combinations thereof to assist them in planning, establishing, operating, coordinating, and evaluating projects, directly or through grants and contracts with public and private agencies, for the development of more effective programs including prevention and enforcement programs to reduce—

"(1) the formation or continuation of juvenile gangs; and

"(2) the use and sale of illegal drugs by juveniles.

"(b) PARTICULAR PURPOSES.—The grants made under this section can be used for any of the following specific purposes:

"(1) To reduce the participation of juveniles in drug-related crimes (including drug trafficking and drug use), particularly in and around elementary and secondary schools.

"(2) To reduce juvenile involvement in organized crime, drug and gang-related activity, particularly activities that involve the distribution of drugs by or to juveniles.

"(3) To develop within the juvenile justice system, including the juvenile corrections system, innovative means to address the problems of juveniles convicted of serious drug-related and gang-related offenses.

"(4) To reduce juvenile drug and gang-related activity in public housing projects.

"(5) To reduce and prevent juvenile drug and gang-related activity in rural areas.

"(6) To provide technical assistance and training to personnel and agencies responsible for the adjudicatory and corrections components of the juvenile justice system to—

"(A) identify drug-dependent or gang-involved juvenile offenders; and

"(B) provide appropriate counseling and treatment to such offenders.

"(7) To promote the involvement of all juveniles in lawful activities, including in-school and after-school programs for academic, athletic, or artistic enrichment that also teach that drug and gang involvement are wrong.

"(8) To facilitate Federal and State cooperation with local school officials to develop education, prevention, and treatment programs for juveniles who are likely to participate in drug trafficking, drug use, or gang-related activities.

"(9) To prevent juvenile drug and gang involvement in public housing projects through programs establishing youth sports and other activities, including girls' and boys' clubs, scout troops, and little leagues.

"(10) To provide pre- and post-trial drug abuse treatment to juveniles in the juvenile justice system with the highest possible priority to providing drug abuse treatment to drug-dependent pregnant juveniles and drug-dependent juvenile mothers.

"(11) To provide education and treatment programs for juveniles exposed to severe violence in their homes, schools, or neighborhoods.

"(12) To establish sports mentoring and coaching programs in which athletes serve as role models for juveniles to teach that athletics provides a positive alternative to drug and gang involvement.

"AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

"SEC. 232. There are authorized to be appropriated $100,000,000 for fiscal year 1994 and such sums as are necessary for fiscal year 1995 to carry out this subpart.

"ALLOCATION OF FUNDS

"SEC. 233. The amounts appropriated for this subpart for any fiscal year shall be allocated as follows:

"(1) $500,000 or 1.0 percent, whichever is greater, shall be allocated to each of the States.

"(2) Of the funds remaining after the allocation under paragraph (1), there shall be allocated to each State an amount that bears the same ratio to the amount of remaining funds described in this paragraph as the population of juveniles residing in the State bears to the population of juveniles residing in all the States.

"APPLICATION

"SEC. 234. (a) IN GENERAL.—Each State or entity applying for a grant under section 231 shall submit an application to the Administrator in such form and containing such information as the Administrator shall prescribe.

"(b) REGULATIONS.—To the extent practicable, the Administrator shall prescribe regulations governing applications for this subpart that are substantially similar to the regulations governing applications required under subpart I of this part and subpart II of part C, including the regulations relating to competition."

SEC. 622. CONFORMING REPEALER AND AMENDMENTS.

(a) REPEAL OF PART D.—Part D of title II of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5667 et seq.) is repealed, and part E of title II of that Act is redesignated as part D.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 291 of title II of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5671) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) in paragraph (1) by striking "(1)" and by striking "(other than part D)"; and

(B) by striking paragraph (2); and

(2) in subsection (b) by striking "(other than part D)".

SEC. 623. CRIMINAL STREET GANGS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 25 the following new chapter:

"CHAPTER 26—CRIMINAL STREET GANGS

"Sec.

"521. Criminal street gangs.

"§ 521. Criminal street gangs

"(a) ENHANCED PENALTY.—A person who, under the circumstances described in subsection (c), commits an offense described in subsection (b), shall, in addition to any other sentence authorized by law, be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not more than 10 years and may also be fined under this title. A sentence of imprisonment imposed under this subsection shall run consecutively to any other sentence that is imposed.

"(b) OFFENSES.—The offenses referred to in subsection (a) are—

"(1) a Federal felony involving a controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802));

"(2) a Federal felony crime of violence;

"(3) a felony violation of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.), the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 951 et seq.), or the Maritime Drug Law Enforcement Act (46 U.S.C. App. 1901 et seq.); and

"(4) a conspiracy to commit an offense described in paragraph (1), (2), or (3).

"(c) CIRCUMSTANCES.—The circumstances referred to in subsection (a) are—

"(1) that the offense described in subsection (b) was committed by a member of, on behalf of, or in association with a criminal street gang; and

"(2) within 5 years prior to the date of the offense, the offender had been convicted of—

"(A) an offense described in subsection (b);

"(B) a State offense that—

"(i) involves a controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802)); or

"(ii) is a crime of violence for which the maximum penalty is more than 1 year's imprisonment;

"(C) a Federal or State offense that involves the theft or destruction of property for which the maximum penalty is more than 1 year's imprisonment; or

"(D) a conspiracy to commit an offense described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C).

"(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'criminal street gang' means a group, club, organization, or association of 5 or more persons—

"(A) whose members engage, or have engaged within the past 5 years, in a continuing series of any of the offenses described in subsection (b); and

"(B) whose activities affect interstate or foreign commerce; and

"(2) the term 'conviction' includes a finding, under State or Federal law, that a person has committed an act of juvenile delinquency involving a violent felony or controlled substances felony."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The part analysis for part I of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to chapter 25 the following new item:

"26. Criminal street gangs 521".

Subtitle C—Juvenile Penalties

SEC. 631. TREATMENT OF VIOLENT JUVENILES AS ADULTS.

(a) DESIGNATION OF UNDESIGNATED PARAGRAPHS.—Section 5032 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by designating the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth, and eleventh undesignated paragraphs as subsections (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i), (j), and (k), respectively.

(b) JURISDICTION OVER CERTAIN FIREARMS OFFENSES.—Section 5032(a) of title 18, United States Code, as designated by subsection (a), is amended by striking "922(p)" and inserting "924 (b), (g), or (h)".

(c) ADULT STATUS OF JUVENILES WHO COMMIT FIREARMS OFFENSES.—Section 5032(d) of title 18, United States Code, as designated by subsection (a), is amended to read as follows:

"(d)(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), a juvenile who is alleged to have committed an act of juvenile delinquency and who is not surrendered to State authorities shall be proceeded against under this chapter unless the juvenile has requested in writing upon advice of counsel to be proceeded against as an adult.

"(2) With respect to a juvenile 15 years and older alleged to have committed an act after his or her 15th birthday which if committed by an adult would be a felony that is a crime of violence or an offense described in section 401 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 841), section 1002(a), 1005, or 1009 of the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 952(a), 955, 959), or section 924 (b), (g), or (h) of this title, criminal prosecution on the basis of the alleged act may be begun by motion to transfer of the Attorney General in the appropriate district court of the United States, if such court finds, after hearing, that such a transfer would be in the interest of justice.

"(3) A juvenile who is alleged to have committed an act after his or her 16th birthday which if committed by an adult would be a felony offense that has as an element thereof the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force against the person of another, or that, by its very nature, involves a substantial risk that physical force against the person of another may be used in committing the offense, or would be an offense described in section 32, 81, 844 (d), (e), (f), (h), (i) or 2275 of this title, subsection (b)(1) (A), (B), or (C), (d), or (e) of section 401 of the Controlled Substances Act, or section 1002(a), 1003, 1009, or 1010(b) (1), (2), or (3) of the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 952(a), 953, 959, 960(b)(1), (2), and (3)), and who has previously been found guilty of an act which if committed by an adult would have been one of the offenses set forth in this subsection or an offense in violation of a State felony statute that would have been such an offense if a circumstance giving rise to Federal jurisdiction had existed, shall be transferred to the appropriate district court of the United States for criminal prosecution."

SEC. 632. SERIOUS DRUG OFFENSES BY JUVENILES AS ARMED CAREER CRIMINAL ACT PREDICATES.

(a) ACT OF JUVENILE DELINQUENCY.—Section 924(e)(2)(A) of title 18, United States Code, as amended by section 422, is amended—

- (1) by striking "or" at the end of clause (ii);
- (2) by striking "and" at the end of clause (iii) and inserting "or"; and
- (3) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(iv) any act of juvenile delinquency that, if it were committed by an adult, would be punishable under section 401(b)(1)(A) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 841(b)(1)(A)); and";

(b) SERIOUS DRUG OFFENSE.—Section 924(e)(2)(C) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding "or serious drug offense" after "violent felony".

SEC. 633. CERTAINTY OF PUNISHMENT FOR YOUNG OFFENDERS.

(a) AMENDMENT OF THE OMNIBUS CRIME CONTROL AND SAFE STREETS ACT OF 1968.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended—

- (1) by redesignating part P as part Q;
- (2) by redesignating section 1601 as section 1701; and
- (3) by inserting after part O the following new part:

"PART P—ALTERNATIVE PUNISHMENTS FOR YOUNG OFFENDERS

"SEC. 1601. GRANT AUTHORIZATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance (referred to in this part as the "Director") may make grants under this part to States, for the use by States and units of local government in the States, for the purpose of developing alternative methods of punishment for young offenders to traditional forms of incarceration and probation.

"(b) ALTERNATIVE METHODS.—The alternative methods of punishment referred to in subsection (a) should ensure certainty of punishment for young offenders and promote reduced recidivism, crime prevention, and assistance to victims, particularly for young offenders who can be punished more effectively in an environment other than a traditional correctional facility, including—

- "(1) alternative sanctions that create accountability and certainty of punishment for young offenders;
- "(2) boot camp prison programs;
- "(3) technical training and support for the implementation and maintenance of State and local restitution programs for young offenders;
- "(4) innovative projects;
- "(5) correctional options, such as community-based incarceration, weekend incarceration, and electric monitoring of offenders;
- "(6) community service programs that provide work service placement for young offenders at nonprofit, private organizations and community organizations;
- "(7) demonstration restitution projects that are evaluated for effectiveness; and

"(8) innovative methods that address the problems of young offenders convicted of serious substance abuse, including alcohol abuse, and gang-related offenses, including technical assistance and training to counsel and treat such offenders.

"SEC. 1602. STATE APPLICATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) To request a grant under this part, the chief executive of a State shall submit an application to the Director in such form and containing such information as the Director may reasonably require.

"(2) An application under paragraph (1) shall include assurances that Federal funds received under this part shall be used to supplement, not supplant, non-Federal funds that would otherwise be available for activities funded under this part.

"(b) STATE OFFICE.—The office designated under section 507 of title I—

"(1) shall prepare the application required under section 1602; and

"(2) shall administer grant funds received under this part, including, review of spending, processing, progress, financial reporting, technical assistance, grant adjustments, accounting, auditing, and fund disbursement.

"SEC. 1603. REVIEW OF STATE APPLICATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Bureau shall make a grant under section 1601(a) to carry out the projects described in the application submitted by an applicant under section 1602 upon determining that—

- "(1) the application is consistent with the requirements of this part; and
- "(2) before the approval of the application, the Bureau has made an affirmative finding in writing that the proposed project has been reviewed in accordance with this part.

"(b) APPROVAL.—Each application submitted under section 1602 shall be considered approved, in whole or in part, by the Bureau not later than 45 days after first received unless the Bureau informs the applicant of specific reasons for disapproval.

"(c) RESTRICTION.—Grant funds received under this part shall not be used for land acquisition or construction projects, other than alternative facilities described in section 1601(b) for young offenders.

"(d) DISAPPROVAL NOTICE AND RECONSIDERATION.—The Bureau shall not disapprove any application without first affording the applicant reasonable notice and an opportunity for reconsideration.

"SEC. 1604. LOCAL APPLICATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) To request funds under this part from a State, the chief executive of a unit of local government shall submit an application to the office designated under section 1602(b).

"(2) An application under paragraph (1) shall be considered approved, in whole or in part, by the State not later than 45 days after such application is first received unless the State informs the applicant in writing of specific reasons for disapproval.

"(3) The State shall not disapprove any application submitted to the State without first affording the applicant reasonable notice and an opportunity for reconsideration.

"(4) If an application under paragraph (1) is approved, the unit of local government is eligible to receive the funds requested.

"(b) DISTRIBUTION TO UNITS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT.—A State that receives funds under section 1601 in a fiscal year shall make such funds available to units of local government with an application that has been submitted and approved by the State within 45 days after the Bureau has approved the application submitted by the State and has made funds available to the State. The Director may waive the 45-day requirement in this section upon a finding that the State is unable to satisfy the requirement of the preceding sentence under State statutes.

"SEC. 1605. ALLOCATION AND DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS.

"(a) STATE DISTRIBUTION.—Of the total amount appropriated for this part in any fiscal year—

"(1) 1.0 percent shall be allocated to each of the participating States; and

"(2) of the total funds remaining after the allocation under paragraph (1), there shall be allocated to each of the participating States an amount that bears the same ratio to the amount of remaining funds described in this paragraph as the number of young offenders in the State bears to the number of young offenders in all the participating States.

"(b) LOCAL DISTRIBUTION.—(1) A State that receives funds under this part in a fiscal year shall distribute to units of local government in the State for the purposes specified under section 1601 the portion of those funds that bears the same ratio to the aggregate amount of those funds as the amount of funds expended by all units of local government for criminal justice in the preceding fiscal year bears to the aggregate amount of funds expended by the State and all units of local government in the State for criminal justice in the preceding fiscal year.

"(2) Any funds not distributed to units of local government under paragraph (1) shall be available for expenditure by the State for purposes specified under section 1601.

"(3) If the Director determines, on the basis of information available during any fiscal year, that a portion of the funds allocated to a State for the fiscal year will not be used by the State or that a State is not eligible to receive funds under section 1601, the Director shall award such funds to units of local government in the State giving priority to the units of local government that the Director considers to have the greatest need.

"(c) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of a grant made under this part may not exceed 75 percent of the total costs of the projects described in the application submitted under section 1602(a) for the fiscal year for which the projects receive assistance under this part.

"SEC. 1606. EVALUATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Each State and local unit of government that receives a grant under this part shall submit to the Director an evaluation not later than March 1 of each year in accordance with guidelines issued by the Director and in consultation with the National Institute of Justice.

"(2) The Director may waive the requirement specified in subsection (a) if the Director determines that such evaluation is not warranted in the case of the State or unit of local government involved.

"(b) DISTRIBUTION.—The Director shall make available to the public on a timely basis evaluations received under subsection (a).

"(c) ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—A State and local unit of government may use not more than 5 percent of funds it receives under this part to develop an evaluation program under this section."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of contents of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by striking the matter relating to part P and inserting the following:

"PART P—ALTERNATIVE PUNISHMENTS FOR YOUNG OFFENDERS

"Sec. 1601. Grant authorization.

- "Sec. 1602. State applications.
 "Sec. 1603. Review of State applications.

 "Sec. 1606. Evaluation.

"PART Q—TRANSITION; EFFECTIVE DATE;
 REPEALER

- "Sec. 1701. Continuation of rules, authorities, and proceedings."

(c) DEFINITION.—Section 901(a) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3791(a)) is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (22);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (23) and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(24) The term 'young offender' means an individual 28 years of age or younger."

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 1001(a) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3793(a)), as amended by section 1401(e), is amended—

(1) in paragraph (3) by striking "and O" and inserting "O, and P"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(10) There is authorized to be appropriated $200,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1994, 1995, and 1996 to carry out projects under part P."

Subtitle D—Other Provisions

SEC. 641. BINDER SYSTEM FOR CERTAIN VIOLENT JUVENILES.

Section 501(b) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3751) is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (20);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (21) and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (21) the following new paragraph:

"(22) programs that address the need for effective binder systems for the prosecution of violent 16- and 17-year-olds in courts with jurisdiction over adults for the crimes of—

"(A) murder in the first degree;

"(B) murder in the second degree;

"(C) attempted murder;

"(D) armed robbery when armed with a firearm;

"(E) aggravated battery or assault when armed with a firearm;

"(F) criminal sexual penetration when armed with a firearm; and

"(G) drive-by shootings as described in section 931 of title 18, United States Code."

SEC. 642. GANG INVESTIGATION COORDINATION AND INFORMATION COLLECTION.

(a) COORDINATION.—The Attorney General (or the Attorney General's designee), in consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury (or the Secretary's designee), shall develop a national strategy to coordinate gang-related investigations by Federal law enforcement agencies.

(b) DATA COLLECTION.—The Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall acquire and collect information on incidents of gang violence for inclusion in an annual uniform crime report.

(c) REPORT.—The Attorney General shall prepare a report on national gang violence outlining the strategy developed under subsection (a) to be submitted to the President and Congress by January 1, 1994.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1994 such sums as are necessary to carry out this section.

SEC. 643. CLARIFICATION OF REQUIREMENT THAT ANY PRIOR RECORD OF A JUVENILE BE PRODUCED BEFORE THE COMMENCEMENT OF JUVENILE PROCEEDINGS.

Section 5032(j) of title 18, United States Code, as designated by section 301(a), is amended by striking "Any proceedings against a juvenile under this chapter or as an adult shall not be commenced until" and inserting "A juvenile shall not be transferred to adult prosecution nor shall a hearing be held under section 5037 until".

TITLE VII—TERRORISM AND INTERNATIONAL MATTERS

SEC. 701. TERRORISM CIVIL REMEDY.

(a) REINSTATEMENT OF LAW.—The amendments made by section 132 of the Military Construction Appropriations Act, 1991 (104 Stat. 2250), are repealed effective as of April 10, 1991.

(b) TERRORISM.—Chapter 113A of title 18, United States Code, as amended by subsection (a), is amended—

(1) in section 2331 (as in effect prior to enactment of the Military Construction Appropriations Act, 1991) by striking subsection (d) and redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (d);

(2) by redesignating section 2331 (as in effect prior to enactment of the Military Construction Appropriations Act, 1991) as section 2332 and amending the heading for section 2332, as redesignated, to read as follows:

"§ 2332. Criminal penalties";

(3) by inserting before section 2332, as redesignated by paragraph (2), the following new section:

"§ 2331. Definitions

"In this chapter—

"act of war" means any act occurring in the course of—

"(A) declared war;

"(B) armed conflict, whether or not war has been declared, between two or more nations; or

"(C) armed conflict between military forces of any origin.

"international terrorism" means activities that—

"(A) involve violent acts or acts dangerous to human life that are a violation of the criminal laws of the United States or of any State, or that would be a criminal violation if committed within the jurisdiction of the United States or of any State;

"(B) appear to be intended—

"(i) to intimidate or coerce a civilian population;

"(ii) to influence the policy of a government by intimidation or coercion; or

"(iii) to affect the conduct of a government by assassination or kidnapping; and

"(C) occur primarily outside the territorial jurisdiction of the United States, or transcend national boundaries in terms of the means by which they are accomplished, the persons they appear intended to intimidate or coerce, or the locale in which their perpetrators operate or seek asylum.

"national of the United States" has the meaning given such term in section 101(a)(22) of the Immigration and Nationality Act.

"person" means any individual or entity capable of holding a legal or beneficial interest in property.";

(4) by inserting after section 2332, as redesignated by paragraph (2), the following new sections:

"§ 2333. Civil remedies

"(a) ACTION AND JURISDICTION.—Any national of the United States injured in his or her person, property, or business by reason of an act of international terrorism, or his or her estate, survivors, or heirs, may sue therefor in any appropriate district court of the United States and shall recover threefold the damages he or she sustains and the cost of the suit, including attorney's fees.

"(b) ESTOPPEL UNDER UNITED STATES LAW.—A final judgment or decree rendered in favor of the United States in any criminal proceeding under section 1116, 1201, 1203, or 2332 of this title or section 902 (i), (k), (l), (n), or (r) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. App. 1472 (i), (k), (l), (n), and (r)) shall estop the defendant from denying the essential allegations of the criminal offense in any subsequent civil proceeding under this section.

"(c) ESTOPPEL UNDER FOREIGN LAW.—A final judgment or decree rendered in favor of any foreign state in any criminal proceeding shall, to the extent that such judgment or decree may be accorded full faith and credit under the law of the United States, estop the defendant from denying the essential allegations of the criminal offense in any subsequent civil proceeding under this section.

"§ 2334. Jurisdiction and venue

"(a) GENERAL VENUE.—Any civil action under section 2333 of this title against any person may be instituted in the district court of the United States for any district where any plaintiff resides or where any defendant resides or is served, or has an agent. Process in such a civil action may be served in any district where the defendant resides, is found, or has an agent.

"(b) SPECIAL MARITIME OR TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION.—If the actions giving rise to the claim occurred within the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States, any civil action under section 2333 against any person may be instituted in the district court of the United States for any district in which any plaintiff resides or the defendant resides, is served, or has an agent.

"(c) SERVICE ON WITNESSES.—A witness in a civil action brought under section 2333 may be served in any other district where the defendant resides, is found, or has an agent.

"(d) CONVENIENCE OF THE FORUM.—The district court shall not dismiss any action brought under section 2333 on the grounds of the inconvenience or inappropriateness of the forum chosen, unless—

"(1) the action may be maintained in a foreign court that has jurisdiction over the subject matter and over all the defendants;

"(2) that foreign court is significantly more convenient and appropriate; and

"(3) that foreign court offers a remedy that is substantially the same as the one available in the courts of the United States.

"§ 2335. Limitation of actions

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (b), a suit for recovery of damages under section 2333 shall not be maintained unless commenced within 4 years from the date the cause of action accrued.

"(b) CALCULATION OF PERIOD.—The time of the absence of the defendant from the United States or from any jurisdiction in which the same or a similar action arising from the same facts may be maintained by the plaintiff, or any concealment of the defendant's whereabouts, shall not be counted for the purposes of the period of limitation prescribed by subsection (a).

"§ 2336. Other limitations

"(a) ACTS OF WAR.—No action shall be maintained under section 2333 for injury or loss by reason of an act of war.

"(b) LIMITATION ON DISCOVERY.—If a party to an action under section 2333 seeks to discover the investigative files of the Department of Justice, the attorney for the Government may object on the ground that compliance will interfere with a criminal investigation or prosecution of the incident, or a national security operation related to the incident, which is the subject of the civil litigation. The court shall evaluate any objections raised by the Government in camera and shall stay the discovery if the court finds that granting the discovery request will substantially interfere with a criminal investigation or prosecution of the incident or a national security operation related to the incident. The court shall consider the likelihood of criminal prosecution by the Government and other factors it deems to be appropriate. A stay of discovery under this subsection shall constitute a bar to the granting of a motion to dismiss under rules 12(b)(6) and 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

"(c) STAY OF ACTION FOR CIVIL REMEDIES.—
(1) The Attorney General may intervene in any civil action brought under section 2333 for the purpose of seeking a stay of the civil action. A stay shall be granted if the court finds that the continuation of the civil action will substantially interfere with a criminal prosecution which involves the same subject matter and in which an indictment has been returned, or interfere with national security operations related to the terrorist incident that is the subject of the civil action. A stay may be granted for up to 6 months. The Attorney General may petition the court for an extension of the stay for additional 6-month periods until the criminal prosecution is completed or dismissed.

"(2) In a proceeding under this subsection, the Attorney General may request that any order issued by the court for release to the parties and the public omit any reference to the basis on which the stay was sought.

"§ 2337. Suits against Government officials

"No action shall be maintained under section 2333 against—

"(1) the United States, an agency of the United States, or an officer or employee of the United States or any agency thereof acting within the officer's or employee's official capacity or under color of legal authority; or

"(2) a foreign state, an agency of a foreign state, or an officer or employee of a foreign state or an agency thereof acting within the officer's or employee's official capacity or under color of legal authority.

"§ 2338. Exclusive Federal jurisdiction

"The district courts of the United States shall have exclusive jurisdiction over an action brought under this chapter."

(c) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—(1) The chapter analysis for chapter 113A of title 18, United States Code is amended to read as follows:

"CHAPTER 113A—TERRORISM

"Sec.

"2331. Definitions.

(2) The item relating to chapter 113A in the part analysis for part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"113A. Terrorism 2331".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section and the amendments made by this section shall apply to any pending case or any cause of action arising on or after 4 years before the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 702. PROVIDING MATERIAL SUPPORT TO TERRORISTS.

(a) OFFENSE.—Chapter 113A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 2339. Providing material support to terrorists

"Whoever, within the United States, provides material support or resources or conceals or disguises the nature, location, source, or ownership of material support or resources, knowing or intending that they are to be used to facilitate a violation of section 32, 36, 351, 844 (f) or (i), 1114, 1116, 1203, 1361, 1363, 1751, 2280, 2281, 2332, or 2339A of this title or section 902(i) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. App. 1472(i)), or to facilitate the concealment or an escape from the commission of any of the foregoing, shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 10 years, or both. For purposes of this section, material support or resources includes currency or other financial securities, financial services, lodging, training, safehouses, false documentation or identification, communications equipment, facilities, weapons, lethal substances, explosives, personnel, transportation, and other physical assets."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 113A of title 18, United States Code, as amended by section 601(b)(1), is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"2339. Providing material support to terrorists."

SEC. 703. FORFEITURE OF ASSETS USED TO SUPPORT TERRORISTS.

Section 982(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) Any property, real or personal—

"(A) used or intended for use in committing or to facilitate the concealment or an escape from the commission of; or

"(B) constituting or derived from the gross profits or other proceeds obtained from, a violation of section 32, 36, 351, 844 (f) or (i), 1114, 1116, 1203, 1361, 1363, 1751, 2280, 2281, 2332, or 2339A of this title or section 902(i) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. 1472(i))."

SEC. 704. ALIEN WITNESS COOPERATION.

(a) AMENDMENT OF CHAPTER 224 OF TITLE 18.—Chapter 224 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating section 3528 as section 3529; and

(2) by inserting after section 3527 the following new section:

"§ 3528. Aliens; waiver of admission requirements

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Upon authorizing protection to any alien under this chapter, the United States shall provide the alien with appropriate immigration visas and allow the alien to remain in the United States so long as that alien abides by all laws of the United States and guidelines, rules and regulations for protection. The Attorney General may determine that the granting of permanent resident status to such alien is in the public interest and necessary for the safety and protection of such alien without regard to the alien's admissibility under immigration or any other laws and regulations or the failure to comply with such laws and regulations pertaining to admissibility.

"(b) ALIEN WITH FELONY CONVICTIONS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this chapter, an alien who would not be excluded because of felony convictions shall be considered for permanent residence on a conditional basis for a period of 2 years. Upon a showing that the alien is still being provided protection, or that protection remains available to the alien in accordance with this chapter, or that the alien is still cooperating with the Government and has maintained good moral character, the Attorney General shall remove the conditional basis of the status effective as of the second anniversary of the alien's obtaining the status of admission for permanent residence. Permanent resident status shall not be granted to an alien who would be excluded because of felony convictions unless the Attorney General determines, pursuant to regulations which shall be prescribed by the Attorney General, that granting permanent residence status to the alien is necessary in the interests of justice and comports with safety of the community.

"(c) LIMIT ON NUMBER OF ALIENS.—The number of aliens and members of their immediate families entering the United States under the authority of this section shall in no case exceed 200 persons in any fiscal year. The decision to grant or deny permanent resident status under this section is at the discretion of the Attorney General and shall not be subject to judicial review.

"(d) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section, the terms 'alien' and 'United States' have the meanings stated in section 101 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101)."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 224 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to section 3528 and inserting the following:

"3528. Aliens; waiver of admission requirements.

"3529. Definition."

SEC. 705. TERRITORIAL SEA EXTENDING TO 12 MILES INCLUDED IN SPECIAL MARITIME AND TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION.

The Congress declares that all the territorial sea of the United States, as defined by Presidential Proclamation 5928 of December 27, 1988, is part of the United States, subject to its sovereignty, and, for purposes of Federal criminal jurisdiction, is within the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States wherever that term is used in title 18, United States Code.

SEC. 706. ASSIMILATED CRIMES IN EXTENDED TERRITORIAL SEA.

Section 13 of title 18, United States Code is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by inserting after "title" the following: "or on, above, or below any portion of the territorial sea of the United States not within the territory of any State, territory, possession, or district"; and

(2) by inserting at the end the following new subsection:

"(c) Whenever any waters of the territorial sea of the United States lie outside the territory of any State, territory, possession, or district, such waters (including the airspace above and the seabed and subsoil below, and artificial islands and fixed structures erected thereon) shall be deemed for purposes of subsection (a) to lie within the area of the State, territory, possession, or district within which it would lie if the boundaries of the State, territory, possession, or district were extended seaward to the outer limit of the territorial sea of the United States."

SEC. 707. JURISDICTION OVER CRIMES AGAINST UNITED STATES NATIONALS ON CERTAIN FOREIGN SHIPS.

Section 7 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting at the end the following new paragraph:

"(8) Any foreign vessel during a voyage having a scheduled departure from or arrival in the United States with respect to an offense committed by or against a national of the United States."

SEC. 708. PENALTIES FOR INTERNATIONAL TERRORIST ACTS.

Section 2332 of title 18, United States Code, as redesignated by section 601(a)(2), is amended—

- (1) in subsection (a)—
- (A) in paragraph (2) by striking "ten" and inserting "20"; and
- (B) in paragraph (3) by striking "three" and inserting "10"; and
- (2) in subsection (c) by striking "five" and inserting "10".

SEC. 709. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated in each of the fiscal years 1994, 1995, and 1996, in addition to any other amounts specified in appropriations Acts, for counterterrorist operations and programs:

- (1) for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, $25,000,000;
- (2) for the Department of State, $10,000,000;
- (3) for the United States Customs Service, $7,500,000;
- (4) for the United States Secret Service, $2,500,000;
- (5) for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, $2,500,000;
- (6) for the Federal Aviation Administration, $2,500,000;
- (7) for the United States Marshals Service, $2,500,000; and
- (8) for grants to State and local law enforcement agencies, to be administered by the Office of Justice Programs in the Department of Justice, in consultation with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, $25,000,000.

SEC. 710. ENHANCED PENALTIES FOR CERTAIN OFFENSES.

(a) INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC EMERGENCY POWERS ACT.—(1) Section 206(a) of the International Economic Emergency Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1705(a)) is amended by striking "$10,000" and inserting "$1,000,000".

(2) Section 206(b) of the International Economic Emergency Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1705(b)) is amended by striking "$50,000" and inserting "$1,000,000".

(b) SECTION 1541 OF TITLE 18.—Section 1541 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

- (1) by striking "$500" and inserting "$250,000"; and
- (2) by striking "one year" and inserting "5 years".

(c) CHAPTER 75 OF TITLE 18.—Sections 1542, 1543, 1544, and 1546 of title 18, United States Code, are each amended—

- (1) by striking "$2,000" each place it appears and inserting "$250,000"; and
- (2) by striking "five years" each place it appears and inserting "10 years".

(d) SECTION 1545 OF TITLE 18.—Section 1545 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

- (1) by striking "$2,000" and inserting "$250,000"; and
- (2) by striking "three years" and inserting "10 years".

SEC. 711. SENTENCING GUIDELINES INCREASE FOR TERRORIST CRIMES.

The United States Sentencing Commission shall study and, if warranted, amend its sentencing guidelines to provide an increase in the base offense level for any felony, whether committed within or outside the United States, that involves or is intended to promote international terrorism, unless such involvement or intent is itself an element of the crime.

SEC. 712. EXTENSION OF THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS FOR CERTAIN TERRORISM OFFENSES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 213 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 3285 the following new section:

"§ 3286. Extension of statute of limitations for certain terrorism offenses

"Notwithstanding section 3282, no person shall be prosecuted, tried, or punished for any offense involving a violation of section 32, 36, 112, 351, 1116, 1203, 1361, 1751, 2280, 2281, 2332, 2339A, or 2340A of this title or section 902 (i), (j), (k), (l), or (n) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. App. 1572 (i), (j), (k), (l), and (n)), unless the indictment is found or the information is instituted within 10 years next after such offense shall have been committed."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 213 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 3285 the following new item:

"3286. Extension of statute of limitations for certain terrorism offenses."

SEC. 713. INTERNATIONAL PARENTAL KIDNAPING.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 55 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 1204. International parental kidnapping

"(a) OFFENSE.—Whoever removes a child from the United States or retains a child (who has been in the United States) outside the United States with intent to obstruct the lawful exercise of parental rights shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 3 years, or both.

"(b) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section—

- "(1) the term 'child' means a person who has not attained the age of 16 years; and
- "(2) the term 'parental rights', with respect to a child, means the right to physical custody of the child—

"(A) whether joint or sole (and includes visiting rights); and

"(B) whether arising by operation of law, court order, or legally binding agreement of the parties.

"(c) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—This section does not detract from The Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Parental Child Abduction, done at The Hague on October 25, 1980."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 55 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"1204. International parental kidnapping."

SEC. 714. FOREIGN MURDER OF UNITED STATES NATIONALS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 51 of title 18, United States Code, as amended by section 141(a), is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 1120. Foreign murder of United States nationals

"(a) OFFENSE.—Whoever kills or attempts to kill a national of the United States while such national is outside the United States but within the jurisdiction of another country shall be punished as provided under sections 1111, 1112, and 1113.

"(b) APPROVAL OF PROSECUTION.—No prosecution may be instituted against any person under this section except upon the written approval of the Attorney General, the Deputy Attorney General, or an Assistant Attorney General, which function of approving prosecutions may not be delegated. No prosecution shall be approved if prosecution has been previously undertaken by a foreign country for the same act or omission.

"(c) CRITERIA FOR APPROVAL.—No prosecution shall be approved under this section unless the Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of State, determines that the act or omission took place in a country in which the person is no longer present, and the country lacks the ability to lawfully secure the person's return. A determination by the Attorney General under this subsection is not subject to judicial review.

"(d) ASSISTANCE FROM OTHER AGENCIES.—In the course of the enforcement of this section and notwithstanding any other law, the Attorney General may request assistance from any Federal, State, local, or foreign agency, including the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

"(e) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term 'national of the United States' has the meaning stated in section 101(a)(22) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(22))."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—(1) Section 1117 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "or 1116" and inserting "1116, or 1120".

(2) The chapter analysis for chapter 51 of title 18, United States Code, as amended by section 141(b), is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"1120. Foreign murder of United States nationals."

SEC. 715. EXTRADITION.

(a) SCOPE.—Section 3181 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a) IN GENERAL.—" before "The provisions of this chapter"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(b) SURRENDER WITHOUT REGARD TO EXISTENCE OF EXTRADITION TREATY.—This chapter shall be construed to permit, in the exercise of comity, the surrender of persons who have committed crimes of violence against nationals of the United States in foreign countries without regard to the existence of any treaty of extradition with such foreign government if the Attorney General certifies in writing that—

"(1) evidence has been presented by the foreign government that indicates that, if the offenses had been committed in the United States, they would constitute crimes of violence (as defined under section 16); and

"(2) the offenses charged are not of a political nature.

"(c) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term 'national of the United States' has the meaning stated in section 101(a)(22) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(22))."

(b) FUGITIVES.—Section 3184 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in the first sentence by inserting after "United States and any foreign government," the following: "or in cases arising under section 3181(b).";

(2) in the first sentence by inserting after "treaty or convention," the following: "or provided for under section 3181(b)."; and

(3) in the third sentence by inserting after "treaty or convention," the following: "or under section 3181(b)."

SEC. 716. FBI ACCESS TO TELEPHONE SUBSCRIBER INFORMATION.

(a) REQUIRED CERTIFICATION.—Section 2709(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(b) REQUIRED CERTIFICATION.—

"(1) NAME, ADDRESS, AND LENGTH OF SERVICE ONLY.—The Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, or the Director's designee in a position not lower than Deputy Assistant Director, may request the name, address, and length of service of a person or entity if the Director (or designee in a position not lower than Deputy Assistant Director) certifies in writing to the wire or electronic communication service provider to which the request is made that—

“(A) the information sought is relevant to an authorized foreign counterintelligence investigation; and

“(B) there are specific and articulable facts giving reason to believe that communication facilities registered in the name of the person or entity have been used, through the services of the provider, in communication with—

“(i) an individual who is engaging or has engaged in international terrorism (as defined in section 101 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1801)) or clandestine intelligence activities that involve or may involve a violation of the criminal statutes of the United States; or “(ii) a foreign power (as defined in section 101 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1801)) or an agent of a foreign power (as defined in that section) under circumstances giving reason to believe that the communication concerned international terrorism (as defined in that section) or clandestine intelligence activities that involve or may involve a violation of the criminal statutes of the United States.

“(2) NAME, ADDRESS, LENGTH OF SERVICE, AND TOLL BILLING RECORDS.—The Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, or the Director's designee in a position not lower than Deputy Assistant Director, may request the name, address, length of service, and toll billing records of a person or entity if the Director (or designee in a position not lower than Deputy Assistant Director) certifies in writing to the wire or electronic communication service provider to which the request is made that—

“(A) the name, address, length of service, and toll billing records sought are relevant to an authorized foreign counterintelligence investigation; and

“(B) there are specific and articulable facts giving reason to believe that the person or entity to whom the information sought pertains is a foreign power (as defined in section 101 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978 (50 U.S.C. 1801)) or an agent of a foreign power (as defined in that section).”

(b) REPORT TO JUDICIARY COMMITTEES.—Section 2709(e) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding after “Senate” the following: “, and the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives and the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate.”

TITLE VIII—SEXUAL VIOLENCE, CHILD ABUSE, AND VICTIMS' RIGHTS

Subtitle A—Sexual Violence and Child Abuse

SECTION 800. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the “Sexual Assault Prevention Act of 1993”.

CHAPTER 1—SEXUAL VIOLENCE

Subchapter A—Penalties and Remedies

SEC. 801. PRE-TRIAL DETENTION IN SEX OFFENSE CASES.

Section 3156(a)(4) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking “, or” at the end of subparagraph (A) and inserting a semicolon;

(2) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting “; or”; and

(3) by adding after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

“(C) any felony under chapter 109A or chapter 110.”

SEC. 802. DEATH PENALTY FOR MURDERS COMMITTED BY SEX OFFENDERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 51 of title 18, United States Code is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

“§ 1118. Death penalty for murders committed by sex offenders

“(a) OFFENSE.—A person who—

“(1) causes the death of a person intentionally, knowingly, or through recklessness manifesting extreme indifference to human life; or

“(2) causes the death of a person through the intentional infliction of serious bodily injury, shall be punished as provided in subsection (c).

“(b) FEDERAL JURISDICTION.—There is Federal jurisdiction over an offense described in this section if the conduct resulting in death occurs in the course of another offense against the United States.

“(c) PENALTY.—An offense described in this section is a Class A felony. A sentence of death may be imposed for an offense described in this section as provided in this section, except that a sentence of death may not be imposed on a defendant who was below the age of 18 years at the time of the commission of the crime.

“(d) MITIGATING FACTORS.—In determining whether to recommend a sentence of death, the jury shall consider whether any aspect of the defendant's character, background, or record or any circumstance of the offense that the defendant may proffer as a mitigating factor exists, including the following factors:

“(1) MENTAL CAPACITY.—The defendant's mental capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of law was significantly impaired.

“(2) DURESS.—The defendant was under unusual and substantial duress.

“(3) PARTICIPATION IN OFFENSE MINOR.—The defendant is punishable as a principal (pursuant to section 2) in the offense, which was committed by another, but the defendant's participation was relatively minor.

“(e) AGGRAVATING FACTORS.—In determining whether to recommend a sentence of death, the jury shall consider any aggravating factor for which notice has been provided under subsection (f) of this section, including the following factors—

“(1) KILLING IN COURSE OF DESIGNATED SEX CRIMES.—The conduct resulting in death occurred in the course of an offense defined in chapter 109A, 110, or 117.

“(2) KILLING IN CONNECTION WITH SEXUAL ASSAULT OR CHILD MOLESTATION.—The defendant committed a crime of sexual assault or crime of child molestation in the course of an offense on which Federal jurisdiction is based under subsection (b).

“(3) PRIOR CONVICTION OF SEXUAL ASSAULT OR CHILD MOLESTATION.—The defendant has previously been convicted of a crime of sexual assault or crime of child molestation.

“(f) NOTICE OF INTENT TO SEEK DEATH PENALTY.—If the Government intends to seek the death penalty for an offense under this section, the attorney for the Government shall file with the court and serve on the defendant a notice of such intent. The notice shall be provided a reasonable time before the trial or acceptance of a guilty plea, or at such later time before trial as the court may permit for good cause. If the court permits a late filing of the notice upon a showing of good cause, the court shall ensure that the defendant has adequate time to prepare for trial. The notice shall set forth the aggravating factor or factors the Government will seek to prove as the basis for the death penalty. The factors for which notice is provided under this subsection may include factors concerning the effect of the offense on the victim and the victim's family. The court may permit the attorney for the Government to amend the notice upon a showing of good cause.

“(g) JUDGE AND JURY AT CAPITAL SENTENCING HEARING.—A hearing to determine whether the death penalty will be imposed for an offense under this section shall be conducted by the judge who presided at trial or accepted a guilty plea, or by another judge if that judge is not available. The hearing shall be conducted before the jury that determined the defendant's guilt if that jury is available. A new jury shall be impaneled for the purpose of the hearing if the defendant pleaded guilty, the trial of guilt was conducted without a jury, the jury that determined the defendant's guilt was discharged for good cause, or reconsideration of the sentence is necessary after the initial imposition of a sentence of death. A jury impaneled under this subsection shall have 12 members unless the parties stipulate to a lesser number at any time before the conclusion of the hearing with the approval of the judge. Upon motion of the defendant, with the approval of the attorney for the Government, the hearing shall be carried out before the judge without a jury. If there is no jury, references to ‘the jury’ in this section, where applicable, shall be understood as referring to the judge.

“(h) PROOF OF MITIGATING AND AGGRAVATING FACTORS.—No presentence report shall be prepared if a capital sentencing hearing is held under this section. Any information relevant to the existence of mitigating factors, or to the existence of aggravating factors for which notice has been provided under subsection (f), may be presented by either the Government or the defendant. The information presented may include trial transcripts and exhibits. Information presented by the Government in support of factors concerning the effect of the offense on the victim and the victim's family may include oral testimony, a victim impact statement that identifies the victim of the offense and the nature and extent of harm and loss suffered by the victim and the victim's family, and other relevant information. Information is admissible regardless of its admissibility under the rules governing the admission of evidence at criminal trials, except that information may be excluded if its probative value is outweighed by the danger of creating unfair prejudice, confusing the issues, or misleading the jury. The attorney for the Government and the attorney for the defendant shall be permitted to rebut any information received at the hearing, and shall be given fair opportunity to present argument as to the adequacy of the information to establish the existence of any aggravating or mitigating factor, and as to the appropriateness in that case of imposing a sentence of death. The attorney for the Government shall open the argument, the defendant shall be permitted to reply, and the Government shall then be permitted to reply in rebuttal.

“(i) FINDINGS OF AGGRAVATING AND MITIGATING FACTORS.—The jury shall return special findings identifying any aggravating factor or factors for which notice has been provided under subsection (f) and which the jury unanimously determines have been established by the Government beyond a reasonable doubt. A mitigating factor is established if the defendant has proven its existence by a preponderance of the evidence, and any member of the jury who finds the existence of such a factor may regard it as established for purposes of this section regardless of the number of jurors who concur that the factor has been established.

“(j) FINDING CONCERNING A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—If the jury specially finds under subsection (i) that one or more aggravating factors set forth in this section exist, and the jury further finds unanimously that there are no mitigating factors or that the aggravating factor or factors specially found under subsection (i) outweigh any mitigating factors, the jury shall recommend a sentence of death. In any other case, the jury shall not recommend a sentence of death. The jury shall be instructed that it must avoid any influence of sympathy, sentiment, passion, prejudice, or other arbitrary factors in its decision, and should make such a recommendation as the information warrants.

“(k) SPECIAL PRECAUTION TO ASSURE AGAINST DISCRIMINATION.—In a hearing held before a jury, the court, before the return of a finding under subsection (j), shall instruct the jury that, in considering whether to recommend a sentence of death, it shall not be influenced by prejudice or bias relating to the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim, and that the jury is not to recommend a sentence of death unless it has concluded that it would recommend a sentence of death for such a crime regardless of the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim. The jury, upon the return of a finding under subsection (j), shall also return to the court a certificate, signed by each juror, that the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim did not affect the juror's individual decision and that the individual juror would have recommended the same sentence for such a crime regardless of the race, color, religion, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim.

“(l) IMPOSITION OF A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—Upon a recommendation under subsection (j) that a sentence of death be imposed, the court shall sentence the defendant to death. Otherwise the court shall impose a sentence, other than death, that is authorized by law.

“(m) REVIEW OF A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—The defendant may appeal a sentence of death under this section by filing a notice of appeal of the sentence within the time provided for filing a notice of appeal of the judgment of conviction. An appeal of a sentence under this subsection may be consolidated with an appeal of the judgment of conviction and shall have priority over all non-capital matters in the court of appeals. The court of appeals shall review the entire record in the case including the evidence submitted at trial and information submitted during the sentencing hearing, the procedures employed in the sentencing hearing, and the special findings returned under subsection (i). The court of appeals shall uphold the sentence if it determines that the sentence of death was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor, that the evidence and information support the special findings under subsection (i), and that the proceedings were otherwise free of prejudicial error that was properly preserved for and raised on appeal. In any other case, the court of appeals shall remand the case for reconsideration of the sentence or imposition of another authorized sentence as appropriate, except that the court shall not reverse a sentence of death on the ground that an aggravating factor was not supported by the evidence and information if at least one aggravating factor set forth in subsection (e) that was found to exist remains and the court, on the basis of the evidence submitted at trial and the information submitted at the sentencing hearing, finds no mitigating factor or finds that the remaining aggravating factor or factors which were found to exist outweigh any mitigating factors. The court of appeals shall state in writing the reasons for its disposition of an appeal of a sentence of death under this section.

“(n) IMPLEMENTATION OF SENTENCE OF DEATH.—A person sentenced to death under this section shall be committed to the custody of the Attorney General until exhaustion of the procedures for appeal of the judgment of conviction and review of the sentence. When the sentence is to be implemented, the Attorney General shall release the person sentenced to death to the custody of a United States Marshal. The Marshal shall supervise implementation of the sentence in the manner prescribed by the law of the State in which the sentence is imposed, or in the manner prescribed by the law of another State designated by the court if the law of the State in which the sentence was imposed does not provide for implementation of a sentence of death. The Marshal may use State or local facilities, may use the services of an appropriate State or local official or of a person such as an official employee, and shall pay the costs thereof in an amount approved by the Attorney General.

“(o) SPECIAL BAR TO EXECUTION.—A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a woman while she is pregnant.

“(p) CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTION TO PARTICIPATION IN EXECUTION.—No employee of any State department of corrections, the Federal Bureau of Prisons, or the United States Marshals Service, and no person providing services to that department, bureau, or service under contract shall be required, as a condition of that employment or contractual obligation, to be in attendance at or to participate in any execution carried out under this section if such participation is contrary to the moral or religious convictions of the employee. For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘participate in any execution’ includes personal preparation of the condemned individual and the apparatus used for the execution, and supervision of the activities of other personnel in carrying out such activities.

“(q) APPOINTMENT OF COUNSEL FOR INDIGENT CAPITAL DEFENDANTS.—A defendant against whom a sentence of death is sought, or on whom a sentence of death has been imposed, under this section, shall be entitled to appointment of counsel from the commencement of trial proceedings until one of the conditions specified in subsection (v) has occurred, if the defendant is or becomes financially unable to obtain adequate representation. Counsel shall be appointed for trial representation as provided in section 3005, and at least one counsel so appointed shall continue to represent the defendant until the conclusion of direct review of the judgment, unless replaced by the court with other qualified counsel. Except as otherwise provided in this section, section 3006A shall apply to appointments under this section.

“(r) REPRESENTATION AFTER FINALITY OF JUDGMENT.—When a judgment imposing a sentence of death under this section has become final through affirmance by the Supreme Court on direct review, denial of certiorari by the Supreme Court on direct review, or expiration of the time for seeking direct review in the court of appeals or the Supreme Court, the Government shall promptly notify the court that imposed the sentence. The court, within 10 days of receipt of such notice, shall proceed to make a determination whether the defendant is eligible for appointment of counsel for subsequent proceedings. The court shall issue an order appointing one or more counsel to represent the defendant upon a finding that the defendant is financially unable to obtain adequate representation and wishes to have counsel appointed or is unable competently to decide whether to accept or reject appointment of counsel. The court shall issue an order denying appointment of counsel upon a finding that the defendant is financially able to obtain adequate representation or that the defendant rejected appointment of counsel with an understanding of the consequences of that decision. Counsel appointed pursuant to this subsection shall be different from the counsel who represented the defendant at trial and on direct review unless the defendant and counsel request a continuation or renewal of the earlier representation.

“(s) STANDARDS FOR COMPETENCE OF COUNSEL.—In relation to a defendant who is entitled to appointment of counsel under this section, at least one counsel appointed for trial representation must have been admitted to the bar for at least 5 years and have at least 3 years of experience in the trial of felony cases in the Federal district courts. If new counsel is appointed after judgment, at least one counsel so appointed must have been admitted to the bar for at least 5 years and have at least 3 years of experience in the litigation of felony cases in the Federal courts of appeals or the Supreme Court. The court, for good cause, may appoint counsel who does not meet these standards, but whose background, knowledge, or experience would otherwise enable that counsel to properly represent the defendant, with due consideration of the seriousness of the penalty and the nature of the litigation.

“(t) CLAIMS OF INEFFECTIVENESS OF COUNSEL IN COLLATERAL PROCEEDINGS.—The ineffectiveness or incompetence of counsel during proceedings on a motion under section 2255 of title 28 shall not be a ground for relief from the judgment or sentence in any proceeding. This limitation shall not preclude the appointment of different counsel at any stage of the proceedings.

“(u) TIME FOR COLLATERAL ATTACK ON DEATH SENTENCE.—A motion under section 2255 of title 28 attacking a sentence of death under this section, or the conviction on which it is predicated, shall be filed within 90 days of the issuance of the order under subsection (r) appointing or denying the appointment of counsel for such proceedings. The court in which the motion is filed, for good cause shown, may extend the time for filing for a period not exceeding 60 days. Such a motion shall have priority over all non-capital matters in the district court, and in the court of appeals on review of the district court's decision.

“(v) STAY OF EXECUTION.—The execution of a sentence of death under this section shall be stayed in the course of direct review of the judgment and during the litigation of an initial motion in the case under section 2255 of title 28. The stay shall run continuously following imposition of the sentence and shall expire if—

“(1) the defendant fails to file a motion under section 2255 of title 28 within the time specified in subsection (u), or fails to make a timely application for court of appeals review following the denial of such a motion by a district court;

"(2) upon completion of district court and court of appeals review under section 2255 of title 28, the Supreme Court disposes of a petition for certiorari in a manner that leaves the capital sentence undisturbed, or the defendant fails to file a timely petition for certiorari; or

"(3) before a district court, in the presence of counsel and after having been advised of the consequences of such a decision, the defendant waives the right to file a motion under section 2255 of title 28.

"(w) FINALITY OF THE DECISION ON REVIEW.—If one of the conditions specified in subsection (v) has occurred, no court thereafter shall have the authority to enter a stay of execution or grant relief in the case unless—

"(1) the basis for the stay and request for relief is a claim not presented in earlier proceedings;

"(2) the failure to raise the claim is the result of governmental action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States, the result of the Supreme Court's recognition of a new Federal right that is retroactively applicable, or the result of the fact that the factual predicate of the claim could not have been discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence in time to present the claim in earlier proceedings; and

"(3) the facts underlying the claim would be sufficient, if proven, to undermine the court's confidence in the determination of guilt on the offense or offenses for which the death penalty was imposed.

"(x) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—

"'child' means a person below the age of 14.

"'crime of child molestation' means a crime under Federal or State law that involved—

"(A) contact between any part of the defendant's body or an object and the genitals or anus of a child;

"(B) contact between the genitals or anus of the defendant and any part of the body of a child;

"(C) deriving sexual pleasure or gratification from the infliction of death, bodily injury, or physical pain on a child; or

"(D) an attempt or conspiracy to engage in any conduct described in paragraphs (A) through (C).

"'crime of sexual assault' means a crime under Federal or State law that involved—

"(A) contact, without consent, between any part of the defendant's body or an object and the genitals or anus of another person;

"(B) contact, without consent, between the genitals or anus of the defendant and any part of the body of another person;

"(C) deriving sexual pleasure or gratification from the infliction of death, bodily injury, or physical pain on another person; or

"(D) an attempt or conspiracy to engage in any conduct described in paragraphs (A) through (C)."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 110A of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"1118. Death penalty for murders committed by sex offenders."

SEC. 803. INCREASED PENALTIES FOR RECIDIVIST SEX OFFENDERS.

(a) PENALTIES FOR SUBSEQUENT OFFENSES.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating section 2245 as section 2246; and

(2) by inserting after section 2244 the following new section:

"§ 2245. Penalties for subsequent offenses

"A person who violates this chapter, after a prior conviction under this chapter or the law of a State (as defined in section 513) for conduct proscribed by this chapter has become final, is punishable by a term of imprisonment up to twice that otherwise authorized."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "2245" and inserting "2246"; and

(2) by inserting after the item relating to section 2244 the following new item:

"2245. Penalties for subsequent offenses."

SEC. 804. INCREASED PENALTIES FOR SEX OFFENSES AGAINST VICTIMS BELOW THE AGE OF 16.

Section 2245(2) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (B);

(2) by striking "; and" at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting "; or"; and

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (C) the following new subparagraph:

"(D) the intentional touching, not through the clothing, of the genitalia of another person who has not attained the age of 16 years with an intent to abuse, humiliate, harass, degrade, or arouse or gratify the sexual desire of any person;"

SEC. 805. SENTENCING GUIDELINES INCREASE FOR SEX OFFENSES.

The United States Sentencing Commission shall study and, if necessary, amend the sentencing guidelines to increase by at least 4 levels the base offense level for an offense under section 2241 (relating to aggravated sexual abuse) or section 2242 (relating to sexual abuse) of title 18, United States Code, and shall consider whether any other changes are warranted in the guidelines provisions applicable to such offenses to ensure realization of the objectives of sentencing. In amending the guidelines in conformity with this section, the Sentencing Commission shall review the appropriateness and adequacy of existing offense characteristics and adjustments applicable to such offenses, taking into account the heinousness of sexual abuse offenses, the severity and duration of the harm caused to victims, and any other relevant factors.

SEC. 806. HIV TESTING AND PENALTY ENHANCEMENT IN SEXUAL OFFENSE CASES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, as amended by section 803, is amended by inserting at the end the following new section:

"§ 2247. Testing for human immunodeficiency virus; disclosure of test results to victim; effect on penalty

"(a) TESTING AT TIME OF PRE-TRIAL RELEASE DETERMINATION.—In a case in which a person is charged with an offense under this chapter, a judicial officer issuing an order pursuant to section 3142(a) shall include in the order a requirement that a test for the human immunodeficiency virus be performed upon the person and that followup tests for the virus be performed 6 months and 12 months following the date of the initial test, unless the judicial officer determines that the conduct of the person created no risk of transmission of the virus to the victim, and so states in the order. The order shall direct that the initial test be performed within 24 hours, or as soon thereafter as feasible. The person shall not be released from custody until the test is performed.

"(b) TESTING AT LATER TIME.—If a person charged with an offense under this chapter was not tested for the human immunodeficiency virus pursuant to subsection (a), the court may at a later time direct that such a test be performed upon the person, and that follow-up tests be performed 6 months and 12 months following the date of the initial test, if it appears to the court that the conduct of the person may have risked transmission of the virus to the victim. A testing requirement under this subsection may be imposed at any time while the charge is pending, or following conviction at any time prior to the person's completion of service of the sentence.

"(c) TERMINATION OF TESTING REQUIREMENT.—A requirement of follow-up testing imposed under this section shall be canceled if any test is positive for the virus or the person obtains an acquittal on, or dismissal of, all charges under this chapter.

"(d) DISCLOSURE OF TEST RESULTS.—The results of any test for the human immunodeficiency virus performed pursuant to an order under this section shall be provided to the judicial officer or court. The judicial officer or court shall ensure that the results are disclosed to the victim (or to the victim's parent or legal guardian, as appropriate), the attorney for the Government, and the person tested.

"(e) EFFECT ON PENALTY.—The United States Sentencing Commission shall amend existing guidelines for sentences for offenses under this chapter to enhance the sentence if the offender knew or had reason to know that he was infected with the human immunodeficiency virus, except where the offender did not engage or attempt to engage in conduct creating a risk of transmission of the virus to the victim."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, as amended by section 803, is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"2247. Testing for human immunodeficiency virus; disclosure of test results to victim; effect on penalty."

SEC. 807. PAYMENT OF COST OF HIV TESTING FOR VICTIMS IN SEX OFFENSE CASES.

Section 503(c)(7) of the Victims' Rights and Restitution Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 10607(c)(7)) is amended by inserting: ", the cost of up to two tests of the victim for the human immunodeficiency virus during the 12 months following the assault, and the cost of a counseling session by a medically trained professional on the accuracy of such tests and the risk of transmission of the human immunodeficiency virus to the victim as the result of the assault" before the period at the end.

SEC. 808. EXTENSION AND STRENGTHENING OF RESTITUTION.

Section 3663 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)—

(A) in paragraph (2) by inserting "or an offense under chapter 109A or chapter 110" after "an offense resulting in bodily injury to a victim";

(B) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (3);

(C) by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (5); and

(D) by inserting after paragraph (4) the following new paragraph:

"(4) in any case, reimburse the victim for lost income and necessary child care, transportation, and other expenses related to participation in the investigation or prosecution of the offense or attendance at proceedings related to the offense; and"; and

(2) in subsection (d) by adding at the end: "However, the court shall issue an order requiring restitution of the full amount of the victim's losses and expenses for which restitution is authorized under this section in imposing sentence for an offense under chapter 109A or chapter 110, unless the Government and the victim do not request such restitution."

SEC. 809. ENFORCEMENT OF RESTITUTION ORDERS THROUGH SUSPENSION OF FEDERAL BENEFITS.

Section 3663 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (g) and (h) as subsections (h) and (i), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (f) the following new subsection:

"(g)(1) If the defendant is delinquent in making restitution in accordance with any schedule of payments or any requirement of immediate payment imposed under this section, the court may, after a hearing, suspend the defendant's eligibility for all Federal benefits until such time as the defendant demonstrates to the court good-faith efforts to return to such schedule.

"(2) In this subsection—

"(A) 'Federal benefits'—

"(i) means any grant, contract, loan, professional license, or commercial license provided by an agency of the United States or appropriated funds of the United States; and

"(ii) does not include any retirement, welfare, Social Security, health, disability, veterans benefit, public housing, or other similar benefit, or any other benefit for which payments or services are required for eligibility.

"(B) 'veterans benefit' means all benefits provided to veterans, their families, or survivors by virtue of the service of a veteran in the Armed Forces of the United States."

SEC. 810. CIVIL REMEDY FOR VICTIMS OF SEXUAL VIOLENCE.

(a) CAUSE OF ACTION.—A person who, in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States, engages in sexual violence against another, shall be liable to the injured party in an action under this section. The relief available in such an action shall include compensatory and punitive damages and any appropriate equitable or declaratory relief.

(b) DEFINITION.—In this section, "sexual violence" means any conduct proscribed by chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, whether or not the conduct occurs in the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States or in a Federal prison.

(c) ATTORNEY'S FEES.—Section 922 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1988) is amended—

(1) by striking "or" after "Public Law 92-318"; and

(2) by inserting "or section 111 of the Sexual Assault Prevention Act of 1993," after "1964".

Subchapter B—Rules of Evidence, Practice, and Procedure

SEC. 821. ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE OF SIMILAR CRIMES IN SEX OFFENSE CASES

The Federal Rules of Evidence are amended by adding after Rule 412 the following new rules:

"Rule 413. Evidence of Similar Crimes in Sexual Assault Cases

"(a) EVIDENCE ADMISSIBLE.—In a criminal case in which the defendant is accused of an offense of sexual assault, evidence of the defendant's commission of another offense or offenses of sexual assault is admissible, and may be considered for its bearing on any matter to which it is relevant.

"(b) DISCLOSURE TO DEFENDANT.—In a case in which the government intends to offer evidence under this rule, the attorney for the government shall disclose the evidence to the defendant, including statements of witnesses or a summary of the substance of any testimony that is expected to be offered, at least 15 days before the scheduled date of trial or at such later time as the court may allow for good cause.

"(c) EFFECT ON OTHER RULES.—This rule shall not be construed to limit the admission or consideration of evidence under any other rule.

"(d) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this rule and rule 415, 'offense of sexual assault' means a crime under Federal law or the law of a State (as defined in section 513 of title 18, United States Code) that involved—

"(1) conduct proscribed by chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code;

"(2) contact, without consent, between any part of the defendant's body or an object and the genitals or anus of another person;

"(3) contact, without consent, between the genitals or anus of the defendant and any part of another person's body;

"(4) deriving sexual pleasure or gratification from the infliction of death, bodily injury, or physical pain on another person; or

"(5) an attempt or conspiracy to engage in conduct described in paragraph (1), (2), (3), or (4).

"Rule 414. Evidence of Similar Crimes in Child Molestation Cases

"(a) EVIDENCE ADMISSIBLE.—In a criminal case in which the defendant is accused of an offense of child molestation, evidence of the defendant's commission of another offense or offenses of child molestation is admissible and may be considered for its bearing on any matter to which it is relevant.

"(b) DISCLOSURE TO DEFENDANT.—In a case in which the government intends to offer evidence under this rule, the attorney for the government shall disclose the evidence to the defendant, including statements of witnesses or a summary of the substance of any testimony that is expected to be offered, at least 15 days before the scheduled date of trial or at such later time as the court may allow for good cause.

"(c) EFFECT ON OTHER RULES.—This rule shall not be construed to limit the admission or consideration of evidence under any other rule.

"(d) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this rule and rule 414, 'child' means a person below the age of 14 years, and 'offense of child molestation' means a crime under Federal law or the law of a State (as defined in section 513 of title 18, United States Code) that involved—

"(1) conduct proscribed by chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, that was committed in relation to a child;

"(2) conduct proscribed by chapter 110 of title 18, United States Code;

"(3) contact between any part of the defendant's body or an object and the genitals or anus of a child;

"(4) contact between the genitals or anus of the defendant and any part of the body of a child;

"(5) deriving sexual pleasure or gratification from the infliction of death, bodily injury, or physical pain on a child; or

"(6) an attempt or conspiracy to engage in conduct described in paragraph (1), (2), (3), (4), or (5).

"Rule 415. Evidence of Similar Acts in Civil Cases Concerning Sexual Assault or Child Molestation

"(a) EVIDENCE ADMISSIBLE.—In a civil case in which a claim for damages or other relief is predicated on a party's alleged commission of conduct constituting an offense of sexual assault or child molestation, evidence of that party's commission of another offense or offenses of sexual assault or child molestation is admissible and may be considered as provided in rule 413 and rule 414 of these rules.

"(b) DISCLOSURE TO OTHER PARTIES.—A party who intends to offer evidence under this rule shall disclose the evidence to the party against whom it will be offered, including statements of witnesses or a summary of the substance of any testimony that is expected to be offered, at least 15 days before the scheduled date of trial or at such later time as the court may allow for good cause.

"(c) EFFECT ON OTHER RULES.—This rule shall not be construed to limit the admission or consideration of evidence under any other rule."

SEC. 822. EXTENSION AND STRENGTHENING OF RAPE VICTIM SHIELD LAW.

(a) AMENDMENTS TO RAPE VICTIM SHIELD LAW.—Rule 412 of the Federal Rules of Evidence is amended—

(1) in subdivisions (a) and (b) by striking "criminal case" and inserting "criminal or civil case";

(2) in subdivisions (a) and (b) by striking "an offense under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code," and inserting "an offense or civil wrong involving conduct proscribed by chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, whether or not the conduct occurred in the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States or in a Federal prison";

(3) in subdivision (a) by striking "victim of such conduct" and inserting "victim of such conduct";

(4) in subdivision (c)—

(A) by striking in paragraph (1) "the person accused of committing an offense under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code" and inserting "the accused"; and

(B) by inserting at the end of paragraph (3): "An order admitting evidence under this paragraph shall explain the reasoning leading to the finding of relevance, and the basis of the finding that the probative value of the evidence outweighs the danger of unfair prejudice notwithstanding the potential of the evidence to humiliate and embarrass the alleged victim and to result in unfair or biased inferences."; and

(5) in subdivision (d) by striking "an offense under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code" and inserting "the conduct proscribed by chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code."

(b) INTERLOCUTORY APPEAL.—Section 3731 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the second paragraph the following new paragraph:

"An appeal by the United States before trial shall lie to a court of appeals from an order of a district court admitting evidence of an alleged victim's past sexual behavior in a criminal case in which the defendant is charged with an offense involving conduct proscribed by chapter 109A, whether or not the conduct occurred in the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States or in a Federal prison."

SEC. 823. INADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE TO SHOW PROVOCATION OR INVITATION BY VICTIM IN SEX OFFENSE CASES.

The Federal Rules of Evidence, as amended by section 821, are amended by adding after rule 415 the following new rule:

"Rule 416. Inadmissibility of Evidence to Show Invitation or Provocation by Victim in Sexual Abuse Cases"

"In a criminal case in which a person is accused of an offense involving conduct proscribed by chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code, whether or not the conduct occurred in the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States or in a Federal prison, evidence is not admissible to show that the alleged victim invited or provoked the commission of the offense. This rule does not limit the admission of evidence of consent by the alleged victim if the issue of consent is relevant to liability and the evidence is otherwise admissible under these rules."

SEC. 824. RIGHT OF THE VICTIM TO FAIR TREATMENT IN LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Judicial Conference of the United States shall review and make recommendations regarding the following Rules of Professional Conduct for Lawyers in Federal Practice:

"RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT FOR LAWYERS IN FEDERAL PRACTICE"

"Rule 1. Scope"

"Rule 2. Abuse of Victims and Others Prohibited"

"Rule 3. Duty of Enquiry in Relation to Client"

"Rule 4. Duty To Expedite Litigation"

"Rule 5. Duty To Prevent Commission of Crime"

"Rule 1. Scope"

"(a) These rules apply to the conduct of lawyers in their representation of clients in relation to proceedings and potential proceedings before federal tribunals.

"(b) For purposes of these rules, 'federal tribunal' and 'tribunal' mean a court of the United States or an agency of the federal government that carries out adjudicatory or quasi-adjudicatory functions.

"Rule 2. Abuse of Victims and Others Prohibited"

"(a) A lawyer shall not engage in any action or course of conduct for the purpose of increasing the expense of litigation for any person, other than a liability under an order or judgment of a tribunal.

"(b) A lawyer shall not engage in any action or course of conduct that has no substantial purpose other than to distress, harass, embarrass, burden, or inconvenience another person.

"(c) A lawyer shall not offer evidence that the lawyer knows to be false or attempt to discredit evidence that the lawyer knows to be true.

"Rule 3. Duty of Enquiry in Relation to Client"

"A lawyer shall attempt to elicit from the client a truthful account of the material facts concerning the matters in issue. In representing a client charged with a crime or civil wrong, the duty of enquiry under this rule includes—

"(1) attempting to elicit from the client a materially complete account of the alleged criminal activity or civil wrong if the client acknowledges involvement in the alleged activity or wrong; and

"(2) attempting to elicit from the client the material facts relevant to a defense of alibi if the client denies such involvement.

"Rule 4. Duty To Expedite Litigation"

"(a) A lawyer shall seek to bring about the expeditious conduct and conclusion of litigation.

"(b) A lawyer shall not seek a continuance or otherwise attempt to delay or prolong proceedings in the hope or expectation that—

"(1) evidence will become unavailable;

"(2) evidence will become more subject to impeachment or otherwise less useful to another party because of the passage of time; or

"(3) an advantage will be obtained in relation to another party because of the expense, frustration, distress, or other hardship resulting from prolonged or delayed proceedings.

"Rule 5. Duty To Prevent Commission of Crime"

"(a) A lawyer may disclose information relating to the representation of a client to the extent necessary to prevent the commission of a crime or other unlawful act.

"(b) A lawyer shall disclose information relating to the representation of a client where disclosure is required by law. A lawyer shall also disclose such information to the extent necessary to prevent—

"(1) the commission of a crime involving the use or threatened use of force against another, or a substantial risk of death or serious bodily injury to another; or

"(2) the commission of a crime of sexual assault or child molestation.

"(c) For purposes of this rule, 'crime' means a crime under the law of the United States or the law of a State, and 'unlawful act' means an act in violation of the law of the United States or the law of a State."

SEC. 825. VICTIM'S RIGHT OF ALLOCATION IN SENTENCING.

Rule 32 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of subdivision (a)(1)(B);

(2) by striking the period at the end of subdivision (a)(1)(C) and inserting "and";

(3) by inserting after subdivision (a)(1)(C) the following:

"(D) if sentence is to be imposed for a crime of violence or sexual abuse, address the victim personally if the victim is present at the sentencing hearing and determine if the victim wishes to make a statement and to present any information in relation to the sentence;"

(4) in the penultimate sentence of subdivision (a)(1) by striking "equivalent opportunity" and inserting "opportunity equivalent to that of the defendant's counsel";

(5) in the last sentence of subdivision (a)(1) by inserting "the victim," before "or the attorney for the Government,"; and

(6) by adding at the end the following new subdivision:

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this rule—

"(1) 'crime of violence or sexual abuse' means a crime that involved the use or attempted or threatened use of physical force against the person or property of another, or a crime under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code; and

"(2) 'victim' means an individual against whom an offense for which a sentence is to be imposed has been committed, but the right of allocation under subdivision (a)(1)(D) may be exercised instead by—

"(A) a parent or legal guardian if the victim is below the age of 18 years or incompetent; or

"(B) one or more family members or relatives designated by the court if the victim is deceased or incapacitated, if such person or persons are present at the sentencing hearing, regardless of whether the victim is present."

SEC. 826. VICTIM'S RIGHT OF PRIVACY.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) the crime of rape is underreported to law enforcement authorities because of its traumatic effect on victims and the stigmatizing nature of the crime;

(2) rape victims may be further victimized by involuntary public disclosure of their identities;

(3) rape victims should be encouraged to come forward and report the crime without fear of being revictimized through involuntary public disclosure of their identities; and

(4) any interest of the public in knowing the identity of a rape victim notwithstanding the victim's wishes to the contrary is outweighed by the interest of protecting the privacy of rape victims and encouraging rape victims to report the crime and assist in prosecution.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that news media, law enforcement personnel, and other persons should exercise restraint and respect a rape victim's privacy by not disclosing the victim's identity to the general public or facilitating such disclosure without the consent of the victim.

Subchapter C—Safe Campuses

SEC. 831. NATIONAL BASELINE STUDY ON CAMPUS SEXUAL ASSAULT.

(a) STUDY.—The Attorney General shall provide for a national baseline study to examine the scope of the problem of campus sexual assaults and the effectiveness of institutional and legal policies in addressing such crimes and protecting victims. The Attorney General may utilize the Bureau of Justice Statistics, the National Institute of Justice, and the Office for Victims of Crime in carrying out this section.

(b) REPORT.—Based on the study required by subsection (a), the Attorney General shall prepare a report including an analysis of—

(1) the number of reported allegations and estimated number of unreported allegations of campus sexual assaults, and to whom the allegations are reported (including authorities of the educational institution, sexual assault victim service entities, and local criminal authorities);

(2) the number of campus sexual assault allegations reported to authorities of educational institutions which are reported to criminal authorities;

(3) the number of campus sexual assault allegations that result in criminal prosecution in comparison with the number of non-campus sexual assault allegations that result in criminal prosecution;

(4) Federal and State laws or regulations pertaining specifically to campus sexual assaults;

(5) the adequacy of policies and practices of educational institutions in addressing campus sexual assaults and protecting victims, including consideration of—

(A) the security measures in effect at educational institutions, such as utilization of campus police and security guards, control over access to grounds and buildings, supervision of student activities and student living arrangements, control over the consumption of alcohol by students, lighting, and the availability of escort services;

(B) the articulation and communication to students of the institution's policies concerning sexual assaults;

(C) policies and practices that may prevent or discourage the reporting of campus sexual assaults to local criminal authorities, or that may otherwise obstruct justice or interfere with the prosecution of perpetrators of campus sexual assaults;

(D) the nature and availability of victim services for victims of campus sexual assaults;

(E) the ability of educational institutions' disciplinary processes to address allegations of sexual assault adequately and fairly;

(F) measures that are taken to ensure that victims are free of unwanted contact with alleged assailants, and disciplinary sanctions that are imposed when a sexual assault is determined to have occurred; and

(G) the grounds on which educational institutions are subject to lawsuits based on campus sexual assaults, the resolution of these cases, and measures that can be taken to avoid the likelihood of lawsuits and civil liability;

(6) an assessment of the policies and practices of educational institutions that are of greatest effectiveness in addressing campus sexual assaults and protecting victims, including policies and practices relating to the particular issues described in paragraph (5); and

(7) any recommendations the Attorney General may have for reforms to address campus sexual assaults and protect victims more effectively, and any other matters that the Attorney General deems relevant to the subject of the study and report required by this section.

(c) SUBMISSION OF REPORT.—The report required by subsection (b) shall be submitted to the Congress no later than September 1, 1995.

(d) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, "campus sexual assaults" includes sexual assaults occurring at institutions of postsecondary education and sexual assaults committed against or by students or employees of such institutions.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATION.—There is authorized to be appropriated $200,000 to carry out the study required by this section.

Subchapter D—Assistance to States and Localities

SEC. 841. SEXUAL VIOLENCE GRANT PROGRAM.

(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to strengthen and improve State and local efforts to prevent and punish sexual violence, and to assist and protect the victims of sexual violence.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF GRANTS.—The Attorney General, through the Bureau of Justice Assistance, the Office for Victims of Crime, and the Bureau of Justice Statistics, may make grants to support projects and programs relating to sexual violence, including support of—

(1) training and policy development programs for law enforcement officers and prosecutors concerning the investigation and prosecution of sexual violence;

(2) law enforcement and prosecutorial units and teams that target sexual violence;

(3) victim services programs for victims of sexual violence;

(4) educational and informational programs relating to sexual violence;

(5) improved systems for collecting, keeping, and disseminating records and data concerning sexual violence and offenders who engage in sexual violence;

(6) background check systems that enable employers to determine whether employees and applicants for employment have criminal histories involving sexual violence, in relation to employment positions for which a person may be unsuitable on the basis of such a history, such as child care positions and positions involving access to people's homes;

(7) registration systems which require persons convicted of sexual violence to keep law enforcement authorities informed of their addresses or locations;

(8) security measures in parks, public transportation systems, public buildings and facilities, and other public places which reduce the risk that acts of sexual violence will occur in such places;

(9) programs addressing campus sexual assaults (as defined in section 831);

(10) programs assisting runaway and homeless children who have been subjected to or at risk of sexual violence or sexual exploitation;

(11) training programs for judges and court personnel in relation to cases involving sexual violence; and

(12) treatment programs in a correctional setting for offenders who engage in sexual violence, which may include aftercare components, and which shall include an evaluation component to determine the effectiveness of the treatment in reducing recidivism.

(c) FORMULA GRANTS.—Of the amount appropriated in each fiscal year for grants under this section, other than the amount set aside to carry out subsection (d)—

(1) 1 percent shall be set aside for each participating State; and

(2) the remainder shall be allocated to the participating States in proportion to their populations;

for the use of State and local governments in the States.

(d) DISCRETIONARY GRANTS.—Of the amount appropriated in each fiscal year, 20 percent shall be set aside in a discretionary fund to provide grants to public and private agencies to further the purposes and objectives set forth in subsections (a) and (b).

(e) APPLICATION FOR FORMULA GRANTS.—To request a grant under subsection (c), the chief executive officer of a State must, in each fiscal year, submit to the Attorney General a plan for addressing sexual violence in the State, including a specification of the uses to which funds provided under subsection (c) will be put in carrying out the plan. The application shall include—

(1) certification that the Federal funding provided will be used to supplement and not supplant State and local funds;

(2) certification that any requirement of State law for review by the State legislature or a designated body, and any requirement of State law for public notice and comment concerning the proposed plan, have been satisfied; and

(3) provisions for fiscal control, management, recordkeeping, and submission of reports in relation to funds provided under this section that are consistent with requirements prescribed for the program.

(f) CONDITIONS ON GRANTS.—

(1) MATCHING FUNDS.—Grants under subsection (c) may be for up to 50 percent of the overall cost of a project or program funded. Discretionary grants under subsection (d) may be for up to 100 percent of the overall cost of a project or program funded.

(2) DURATION OF GRANTS.—Grants under subsection (c) may be provided in relation to a particular project or program for up to an aggregate maximum period of 4 years.

(3) LIMIT ON ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—Not more than 5 percent of a grant under subsection (c) may be used for costs incurred to administer the grant.

(4) PAYMENT OF COST OF FORENSIC MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS.—It is a condition of eligibility for grants under subsection (c) that a State pay the cost of forensic medical examinations for victims of sexual violence.

(5) POLICIES AGAINST CAMPUS SEXUAL ASSAULTS.—For an institution of postsecondary education seeking a grant under subsection (d), it is a condition of eligibility that the institution articulate and communicate to its students a clear policy that sexual violence will not be tolerated by the institution.

(g) EVALUATION.—The National Institute of Justice shall have the authority to carry out evaluations of programs funded under this section. The recipient of any grant under this section may be required to include an evaluation component to determine the effectiveness of the project or program funded that is consistent with guidelines issued by the National Institute of Justice.

(h) COORDINATION.—The Attorney General may utilize the Office of Justice Programs to coordinate the administration of grants under this section. The coordination of grants under this section shall include prescribing consistent program requirements for grantees, allocating functions and the administration of particular grants among the components that participate in the administration of the program under this section, coordinating the program under this section with the Domestic Violence and Family Support Grant Program established by section 857, and coordinating the program under this section with other grant programs administered by components of the Department of Justice.

(i) DEFINITION.—In this section, "sexual violence" includes nonconsensual sex offenses and sex offenses involving victims who are not able to give legally effective consent because of age or incompetency.

(j) REPORT.—The Attorney General shall submit an annual report to Congress concerning the operation and effectiveness of the program under this section.

(k) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section—

(1) $250,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1994, 1995, and 1996; and

(2) such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year thereafter.

SEC. 842. SUPPLEMENTARY GRANTS FOR STATES ADOPTING EFFECTIVE LAWS RELATING TO SEXUAL VIOLENCE.

(a) SUPPLEMENTARY GRANTS.—The Attorney General may, in each fiscal year, authorize the award to a State of an aggregate amount of up to $1,000,000 under the Sexual Violence Grant Program established by section 141, in addition to any funds that are otherwise authorized under that program. The authority to award additional funding under this section is conditional on certification by the Attorney General that the State has laws relating to sexual violence that exceed or are reasonably comparable to the provisions of Federal law (including changes in Federal law made by this Act) in the following areas:

(1) Authorization of pre-trial detention of defendants in sexual assault cases where prevention of flight or the safety of others cannot be reasonably assured by other means, and denial of release pending appeal for persons convicted of sexual assault offenses who have been sentenced to imprisonment.

(2) Authorization of severe penalties for sexual assault offenses.

(3) Pre-trial testing for the human immunodeficiency virus of persons charged with sexual assault offenses, with disclosure of test results to the victim.

(4) Payment of the cost of medical examinations and the cost of testing for the human immunodeficiency virus for victims of sexual assaults.

(5) According the victim of a sexual assault the right to be present at judicial proceedings in the case.

(6) Protection of victims from inquiry into unrelated sexual behavior in sexual assault cases.

(7) Rules of professional conduct for lawyers that protect victims from unwarranted cross-examination and impeachment, dilatory tactics, and other abuses in sexual assault cases.

(8) Authorization of admission and consideration in sexual assault cases of evidence that the defendant has committed sexual assaults on other occasions.

(9) Authorization of the victim in sexual assault cases to address the court concerning the sentence to be imposed.

(10) Authorization of the award of restitution to victims of sexual assaults as part of a criminal sentence.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated in each fiscal year such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

CHAPTER 2—DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND OFFENSES AGAINST THE FAMILY

SEC. 851. NONCOMPLIANCE WITH CHILD SUPPORT OBLIGATIONS IN INTERSTATE CASES.

(a) OFFENSE.—Part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 110 the following new chapter:

"CHAPTER 110A—NONCOMPLIANCE WITH CHILD SUPPORT OBLIGATIONS

"Sec. 2261. Noncompliance with child support obligations.

"§ 2261. Noncompliance with child support obligations.

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—
"child support obligation' means an amount determined under a court order or an order of an administrative process pursuant to the law of a State to be due from a person for the support of a child or of a child and the parent with whom the child is living.
"major child support obligation' means a child support obligation that has remained unpaid for a period exceeding one year, or that is greater than $5,000.

"past due support obligation' means a child support obligation that is unpaid at the time of sentencing for an offense under this section.

"State' has the meaning stated in section 513(c)(5).

"(b) OFFENSE.—A person who—

(1) leaves or remains outside a State with intent to avoid payment of a child support obligation; or

(2) fails to pay a major child support obligation with respect to a child who resides in another State, despite having the financial resources to pay the obligation or the ability to acquire such resources through reasonable diligence, shall be punished as provided in subsection (d).

"(c) PRESUMPTION.—In relation to an offense charged under subsection (b)(1), the absence of the defendant from the State for an aggregate period of 6 months without payment of the child support obligation shall create a rebuttable presumption that the intent existed to avoid payment of the obligation.

"(d) PENALTY.—A person convicted of an offense under this section shall be punished by imprisonment for up to 6 months, and on a second or subsequent conviction, by imprisonment for up to 2 years.

"(e) RESTITUTION.—In addition to any restitution that may be ordered pursuant to section 3663, a sentence for an offense under this section shall include an order of restitution in an amount equal to the past due support obligation as it exists at the time of sentencing. Subsections (e) through (i) of section 3663 apply to an order of restitution pursuant to this subsection."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The part analysis for part 1 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item for chapter 110 the following new item:

"2261. Noncompliance with child support obligations."

(c) CONDITION OF PROBATION AND SUPERVISED RELEASE.—Section 3563(b)(1) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting before the semicolon "including compliance with any court order or administrative order under the law of a State (as defined in section 513(c)(5)) requiring payments for the support of a child or of a child and the parent with whom the child is living".

SEC. 852. FULL FAITH AND CREDIT FOR PROTECTIVE ORDERS.

(a) REQUIREMENT OF FULL FAITH AND CREDIT.—Chapter 110A of title 18, United States Code, as added by section 851, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 2262. Full faith and credit for protective orders

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section—

"protective order' means an order prohibiting or limiting violence against, harassment, or contact or communication with, or physical proximity to another person.

"State' has the meaning stated in section 513(c)(5).

"(b) FULL FAITH AND CREDIT.—A protective order issued by a court of a State shall have the same full faith and credit in a court in another State that it would have in a court of the State in which issued, and shall be enforced by the courts of any State as if it were issued in that State."

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 110A of title 18, United States Code, as added by section 201, is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"2262. Full faith and credit for protective orders."

SEC. 853. PRESUMPTION AGAINST CHILD CUSTODY FOR SPOUSE ABUSERS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) courts fail to recognize the detrimental effects of having as a custodial parent an individual who physically abuses his or her spouse, insofar as they do not hear or weigh evidence of domestic violence in child custody litigation;

(2) joint custody forced upon hostile parents can create a damaging psychological environment for a child;

(3) physical abuse of a spouse is relevant to the likelihood of child abuse in child custody disputes;

(4) the effects on children of physical abuse of a spouse include—

(A) traumatization and psychological damage to children resulting from observation of the abuse and the climate of violence and fear existing in a home where abuse takes place;

(B) the risk that children may become targets of physical abuse when they attempt to intervene on behalf of an abused parent; and

(C) the negative effects on children of exposure to an inappropriate role model, in that witnessing an aggressive parent may communicate to children that violence is an acceptable means of dealing with others; and

(5) the harm to children from spouse abuse may be compounded by award of exclusive or joint custody to an abuser because further abuse may occur when the abused spouse is forced to have contact with the abuser as a result of the custody arrangement, and because the child or children may be exposed to abuse committed by the abuser against a subsequent spouse or partner.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of the Congress that, for purposes of determining child custody, evidence establishing that a parent engages in physical abuse of a spouse should create a statutory presumption that it is detrimental to the child to be placed in the custody of the abusive spouse.

SEC. 854. REPORT ON BATTERED WOMEN'S SYNDROME.

(a) REPORT.—The Attorney General shall prepare and transmit to the Congress a report on the status of battered women's syndrome as a medical and psychological condition and on its effect in criminal trials. The Attorney General may utilize the National Institute of Justice to obtain information required for the preparation of the report.

(b) COMPONENTS OF REPORT.—The report described in subsection (a) shall include—

(1) a review of medical and psychological views concerning the existence, nature, and effects of battered women's syndrome as a psychological condition;

(2) a compilation of judicial decisions that have admitted or excluded evidence of battered women's syndrome as evidence of guilt or as a defense in criminal trials; and

(3) information on the views of judges, prosecutors, and defense attorneys concerning the effects that evidence of battered women's syndrome may have in criminal trials.

SEC. 855. REPORT ON CONFIDENTIALITY OF ADDRESSES FOR VICTIMS OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

(a) REPORT.—The Attorney General shall conduct a study of the means by which abusive spouses may obtain information concerning the addresses or locations of estranged or former spouses, notwithstanding the desire of the victims to have such information withheld to avoid further exposure to abuse. Based on the study, the Attorney General shall transmit a report to Congress including—

(1) the findings of the study concerning the means by which information concerning the addresses or locations of abused spouses may be obtained by abusers; and

(2) analysis of the feasibility of creating effective means of protecting the confidentiality of information concerning the addresses and locations of abused spouses to protect such persons from exposure to further abuse while preserving access to such information for legitimate purposes.

(b) USE OF COMPONENTS.—The Attorney General may use the National Institute of Justice and the Office for Victims of Crime in carrying out this section.

SEC. 856. REPORT ON RECORDKEEPING RELATING TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall complete a study of, and shall submit to Congress a report and recommendations on, problems of recordkeeping of criminal complaints involving domestic violence. The study and report shall examine—

(1) the efforts that have been made by the Department of Justice, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation, to collect statistics on domestic violence; and

(2) the feasibility of requiring that the relationship between an offender and victim be reported in Federal records of crimes of aggravated assault, rape, and other violent crimes.

SEC. 857. DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND FAMILY SUPPORT GRANT PROGRAM.

(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to strengthen and improve State and local efforts to prevent and punish domestic violence and other criminal and unlawful acts that particularly affect women, and to assist and protect the victims of such crimes and acts.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF GRANTS.—The Attorney General, through the Bureau of Justice Assistance, the Office for Victims of Crime, and the Bureau of Justice Statistics, may make grants to support projects and programs relating to domestic violence and other criminal and unlawful acts that particularly affect women, including support of—

(1) training and policy development programs for law enforcement officers and prosecutors concerning the investigation and prosecution of domestic violence;

(2) law enforcement and prosecutorial units and teams that target domestic violence;

(3) model, innovative, and demonstration law enforcement programs relating to domestic violence that involve pro-arrest and aggressive prosecution policies;

(4) model, innovative, and demonstration programs for the effective utilization and enforcement of protective orders;

(5) programs addressing stalking and persistent menacing;

(6) victim services programs for victims of domestic violence;

(7) shelters that provide services for victims of domestic violence and related programs;

(8) educational and informational programs relating to domestic violence;

(9) resource centers providing information, technical assistance, and training to domestic violence service providers, agencies, and programs;

(10) coalitions of domestic violence service providers, agencies, and programs;

(11) training programs for judges and court personnel in relation to cases involving domestic violence; and

(12) enforcement of child support obligations, including cooperative efforts and arrangements of States to improve enforcement in cases involving interstate elements.

(c) FORMULA GRANTS.—Of the amount appropriated in each fiscal year for grants under this section, other than the amount set aside to carry out subsection (d)—

(1) 1 percent shall be set aside for each participating State; and

(2) the remainder shall be allocated to the participating States in proportion to their populations;

for the use of State and local governments in the States.

(d) DISCRETIONARY GRANTS.—Of the amount appropriated in each fiscal year, 20 percent shall be set aside in a discretionary fund to provide grants to public and private agencies to further the purposes and objectives set forth in subsections (a) and (b).

(e) APPLICATION FOR FORMULA GRANTS.—To request a grant under subsection (c), the chief executive officer of a State must, in each fiscal year, submit to the Attorney General a plan for addressing domestic violence and other criminal and unlawful acts that particularly affect women in the State, including a specification of the uses to which funds provided under subsection (c) will be put in carrying out the plan. The application must include—

(1) certification that the Federal funding provided will be used to supplement and not supplant State and local funds;

(2) certification that any requirement of State law for review by the State legislature or a designated body, and any requirement of State law for public notice and comment concerning the proposed plan, have been satisfied; and

(3) provisions for fiscal control, management, recordkeeping, and submission of reports in relation to funds provided under this section that are consistent with requirements prescribed for the program.

(f) CONDITIONS ON GRANTS.—

(1) MATCHING FUNDS.—Grants under subsection (c) may be for up to 50 percent of the overall cost of a project or program funded. Discretionary grants under subsection (d) may be for up to 100 percent of the overall cost of a project or program funded.

(2) DURATION OF GRANTS.—Grants under subsection (c) may be provided in relation to a particular project or program for up to an aggregate maximum period of four years.

(3) LIMIT ON ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—Not more than 5 percent of a grant under subsection (c) may be used for costs incurred to administer the grant.

(g) EVALUATION.—The National Institute of Justice shall have the authority to carry out evaluations of programs funded under this section. The recipient of any grant under this section may be required to include an evaluation component to determine the effectiveness of the project or program funded that is consistent with guidelines issued by the National Institute of Justice.

(h) COORDINATION.—The Attorney General may utilize the Office of Justice Programs to coordinate the administration of grants under this section. The coordination of grants under this section shall include prescribing consistent program requirements for grantees, allocating functions and the administration of particular grants among the components that participate in the administration of the program under this section, coordinating the program under this section with the Sexual Violence Grant Program established by section 841, and coordinating the program under this section with other grant programs administered by components of the Department of Justice.

(i) DEFINITION.—In this section, "domestic violence" includes any act of criminal violence in which the offender and the victim are members of the same household or relatives, or in which the offender and the victim are present or former spouses or cohabitators or have a child in common.

(j) REPORT.—The Attorney General shall submit an annual report to Congress concerning the operation and effectiveness of the program under this section.

(k) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section—

(1) $250,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1994, 1995, and 1996; and

(2) such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year thereafter.

CHAPTER 3—NATIONAL TASK FORCE ON VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN

SEC. 861. ESTABLISHMENT.

Not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall establish a task force to be known as the National Task Force on Violence Against Women (referred to in this title as the "task force").

SEC. 862. DUTIES OF TASK FORCE.

(a) GENERAL PURPOSE OF TASK FORCE.—The task force shall recommend Federal, State, and local strategies aimed at protecting women against violent crime, punishing persons who commit such crimes, and enhancing the rights of victims of such crimes.

(b) DUTIES OF TASK FORCE.—The task force shall perform such functions as the Attorney General deems appropriate to carry out the purposes of the task force, including—

(1) considering the reports and recommendations of past Federal and State studies of violent crime, family violence, and the treatment of crime victims, including the Report of the Attorney General to the President on Combating Violent Crime (1992), the Report of the Attorney General's Task Force on Family Violence (1984), the Report of the President's Task Force on Victims of Crime (1982), and the reports and recommendations of the task forces and commissions established by the States of Alabama, Alaska, Arkansas, Hawaii, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Rhode Island, Virginia, Texas, and Wyoming;

(2) developing strategies for Federal, State, and local law enforcement designed to protect women against violent crime, and to prosecute and punish those responsible for such crime;

(3) evaluating the adequacy of rules of evidence, practice, and procedure to ensure the effective prosecution and conviction of violent offenders against women and to protect victims from abuse in legal proceedings, and making recommendations for the improvement of the rules;

(4) evaluating the adequacy of pre-trial release, sentencing, incarceration, and post-conviction release in relation to violent offenders against women, and making recommendations designed to ensure that such offenders are restrained from causing further harm to the victim and others and receive appropriate punishment, including means of ensuring that the efficacy of criminal sanctions will not be undermined by parole or other early release mechanisms;

(5) assessing the issuance, formulation, and enforcement of protective orders, whether or not related to a criminal proceeding, and making recommendations for the effective use of such orders to protect women from violence;

(6) assessing the problem of stalking and persistent menacing of women, and recommending effective means of response to the problem; and

(7) generally evaluating the treatment of women as victims of violent crime in the criminal justice system, and making recommendations designed to improve such treatment.

SEC. 863. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The task force shall consist of up to 10 members, who shall be appointed by the Attorney General not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act. The Attorney General shall ensure that the task force includes representatives of State and local law enforcement, the State and local judiciary, and groups dedicated to protecting the rights of victims.

(b) CHAIRMAN.—The Attorney General or the Attorney General's designee shall serve as chairman of the task force.

SEC. 864. PAY.

(a) NO ADDITIONAL COMPENSATION.—Members of the task force who are officers or employees of a governmental agency shall receive no additional compensation by reason of their service on the task force.

(b) PER DIEM.—While away from their homes or regular places of business in the performance of duties for the task force, members of the task force shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

SEC. 865. EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR AND STAFF.

(a) EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The task force shall have an Executive Director who shall be appointed by the Attorney General not later than 30 days after the task force is fully constituted under section 303.

(2) COMPENSATION.—The Executive Director shall be compensated at a rate not to exceed the maximum rate of the basic pay payable for a position above GS-15 of the General Schedule contained in title 5, United States Code.

(b) STAFF.—With the approval of the task force, the Executive Director may appoint and fix the compensation of such additional personnel as the Executive Director considers necessary to carry out the duties of the task force.

(c) APPLICABILITY OF CIVIL SERVICE LAWS.—The Executive Director and the additional personnel of the task force appointed under subsection (b) may be appointed without regard to title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and may be paid without regard to chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of that title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates.

(d) CONSULTANTS.—Subject to such rules as may be prescribed by the task force, the Executive Director may procure temporary intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code, at rates for individuals not to exceed $200 per day.

SEC. 866. POWERS OF TASK FORCE.

(a) HEARINGS.—For the purpose of carrying out this title, the task force may conduct such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence, as the task force considers appropriate. A member of the task force may administer oaths to persons appearing before the task force.

(b) DELEGATION.—Any member or employee of the task force may, if authorized by the task force, take any action that the task force is authorized to take under this title.

(c) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—The task force may secure directly from any executive department or agency such information as may be necessary to enable the task force to carry out this title, to the extent access to such information is permitted by law. On request of the Attorney General, the head of such a department or agency shall furnish such permitted information to the task force.

(d) MAIL.—The task force may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the United States.

SEC. 867. REPORT.

Not later than 1 year after the date on which the task force is fully constituted under section 303, the Attorney General shall submit a detailed report to the Congress on the findings and recommendations of the task force.

SEC. 868. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATION.

There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this title $500,000 for fiscal year 1994.

SEC. 869. TERMINATION.

The task force shall cease to exist 30 days after the date on which the Attorney General's report is submitted under section 307. The Attorney General may extend the life of the task force for a period of not to exceed one year.

Subtitle B—Victims' Rights

SEC. 871. RESTITUTION AMENDMENTS.

Section 3663(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (3);

(2) by redesignating paragraph (4) as paragraph (5); and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (4) the following new paragraph:

"(4) in any case, reimburse the victim for necessary child care, transportation, and other expenses related to participation in the investigation or prosecution of the offense or attendance at proceedings related to the offense; and"

(b) SUSPENSION OF FEDERAL BENEFITS.—Section 3663 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (g) and (h) as subsections (h) and (i), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (f) the following new subsection:

"(g)(1) If the defendant is delinquent in making restitution in accordance with any schedule of payments or any requirement of immediate payment imposed under this section, the court may, after a hearing, suspend the defendant's eligibility for all Federal benefits until such time as the defendant demonstrates to the court good-faith efforts to return to such schedule.

"(2) In this subsection—

"(A) 'Federal benefits'—

"(i) means any grant, contract, loan, professional license, or commercial license provided by an agency of the United States or by appropriated funds of the United States; and

"(ii) does not include any retirement, welfare, Social Security, health, disability, veterans benefit, public housing, or other similar benefit, or any other benefit for which payments or services are required for eligibility.

"(B) 'veterans benefit' means all benefits provided to veterans, their families, or survivors by virtue of the service of a veteran in the Armed Forces of the United States."

SEC. 872. RIGHT OF THE VICTIM TO AN IMPARTIAL JURY.

Rule 24(b) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure is amended by striking "the Government is entitled to 6 peremptory challenges and the defendant or defendants jointly to 10 peremptory challenges" and inserting "each side is entitled to 6 peremptory challenges".

SEC. 873. MANDATORY RESTITUTION AND OTHER PROVISIONS.

(a) ORDER OF RESTITUTION.—Section 3663 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

"(A) by striking "may order" and inserting "shall order"; and

"(B) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) In addition to ordering restitution of the victim of the offense of which a defendant is convicted, a court may order restitution of any person who, as shown by a preponderance of evidence, was harmed physically, emotionally, or pecuniarily, by unlawful conduct of the defendant during—

"(A) the criminal episode during which the offense occurred; or

"(B) the course of a scheme, conspiracy, or pattern of unlawful activity related to the offense."

(2) in subsection (b)(1)(A) by striking "impractical" and inserting "impracticable";

(3) in subsection (b)(2) by inserting "emotional or" after "resulting in";

(4) in subsection (c) by striking "If the Court decides to order restitution under this section, the" and inserting "The";

(5) by striking subsections (d), (e), (f), (h), and (i), as redesignated by section 871(b)(1);

(6) by redesignating subsection (g), as added by section 871(b)(2), as subsection (d); and

(7) by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(e)(1) The court shall order restitution to a victim in the full amount of the victim's losses as determined by the court and without consideration of—

"(A) the economic circumstances of the offender; or

"(B) the fact that a victim has received or is entitled to receive compensation with respect to a loss from insurance or any other source.

"(2) Upon determination of the amount of restitution owed to each victim, the court shall specify in the restitution order the manner in which and the schedule according to which the restitution is to be paid, in consideration of—

"(A) the financial resources and other assets of the offender;

"(B) projected earnings and other income of the offender; and

"(C) any financial obligations of the offender, including obligations to dependents.

"(3) A restoration order may direct the offender to make a single, lump-sum payment, partial payment at specified intervals, or such in-kind payments as may be agreeable to the victim and the offender.

"(4) An in-kind payment described in paragraph (3) may be in the form of—

"(A) return of property;

"(B) replacement of property; or

"(C) services rendered to the victim or to a person or organization other than the victim.

"(f) When the court finds that more than 1 offender has contributed to the loss of a victim, the court may make each offender liable for payment of the full amount of restitution or may apportion liability among the offenders to reflect the level of contribution and economic circumstances of each offender.

"(g) When the court finds that more than 1 victim has sustained a loss requiring restitution by an offender, the court shall order full restitution of each victim but may provide for different payment schedules to reflect the economic circumstances of each victim.

"(h)(1) If the victim has received or is entitled to receive compensation with respect to a loss from insurance or any other source, the court shall order that restitution be paid to the person who provided or is obligated to provide the compensation, but the restitution order shall provide that all restitution of victims required by the order be paid to the victims before any restitution is paid to such a provider of compensation.

"(2) The issuance of a restitution order shall not affect the entitlement of a victim to receive compensation with respect to a loss from insurance or any other source until the payments actually received by the victim under the restitution order fully compensate the victim for the loss, at which time a person that has provided compensation to the victim shall be entitled to receive any payments remaining to be paid under the restitution order.

"(3) Any amount paid to a victim under an order of restitution shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by the victim in—

"(A) any Federal civil proceeding; and

"(B) any State civil proceeding, to the extent provided by the law of the State.

"(i) A restitution order shall provide that—

"(1) all fines, penalties, costs, restitution payments and other forms of transfers of money or property made pursuant to the sentence of the court shall be made by the offender to an entity designated by the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts for accounting and payment by the entity in accordance with this subsection;

"(2) the entity designated by the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall—

"(A) log all transfers in a manner that tracks the offender's obligations and the current status in meeting those obligations, unless, after efforts have been made to enforce the restitution order and it appears that compliance cannot be obtained, the court determines that continued recordkeeping under this subparagraph would not be useful;

"(B) notify the court and the interested parties when an offender is 90 days in arrears in meeting those obligations; and

"(C) disburse money received from an offender so that each of the following obligations is paid in full in the following sequence:

"(i) a penalty assessment under section 3013;

"(ii) restitution of all victims; and

"(iii) all other fines, penalties, costs, and other payments required under the sentence; and

"(3) the offender shall advise the entity designated by the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts of any change in the offender's address during the term of the restitution order.

"(j) A restitution order shall constitute a lien against all property of the offender and may be recorded in any Federal or State office for the recording of liens against real or personal property.

"(k) Compliance with the schedule of payment and other terms of a restitution order shall be a condition of any probation, parole, or other form of release of an offender. If a defendant fails to comply with a restitution order, the court may revoke probation or a term of supervised release, modify the term or conditions of probation or a term of supervised release, hold the defendant in contempt of court, enter a restraining order or injunction, order the sale of property of the defendant, accept a performance bond, or take any other action necessary to obtain compliance with the restitution order. In determining what action to take, the court shall consider the defendant's employment status, earning ability, financial resources, the willfulness in failing to comply with the restitution order, and any other circumstances that may have a bearing on the defendant's ability to comply with the restitution order.

"(l) An order of restitution may be enforced—

"(1) by the United States—

"(A) in the manner provided for the collection and payment of fines in subchapter B of chapter 229; or

"(B) in the same manner as a judgment in a civil action; and

"(2) by a victim named in the order to receive restitution, in the same manner as a judgment in a civil action.

"(m) A victim or the offender may petition the court at any time to modify a restitution order as appropriate in view of a change in the economic circumstances of the offender."

(b) PROCEDURE FOR ISSUING ORDER OF RESTITUTION.—Section 3664 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking subsection (a);

(2) by redesignating subsections (b), (c), (d), and (e) as subsections (a), (b), (c), and (d);

(3) by amending subsection (a), as redesignated by paragraph (2), to read as follows:

"(a) The court may order the probation service of the court to obtain information pertaining to the amount of loss sustained by any victim as a result of the offense, the financial resources of the defendant, the financial needs and earning ability of the defendant and the defendant's dependents, and such other factors as the court deems appropriate. The probation service of the court shall include the information collected in the report of presentence investigation or in a separate report, as the court directs."; and

(4) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) The court may refer any issue arising in connection with a proposed order of restitution to a magistrate or special master for proposed findings of fact and recommendations as to disposition, subject to a de novo determination of the issue by the court."
