HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Thursday, May 12, 1994

The House met at 10 a.m.

The Chaplain, Rev. James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Teach us, O God, the value of faithfulness in our lives and in the lives of people about us. While we hope for achievement and success in what we do, may we also focus our energies toward responsibility and the stewardship of all that is trustworthy and authentic. Allow us to understand what we can do as custodians of an honorable tradition, a tradition enlightened by truth and justice and mercy. May Your blessing, O God, be with all Your people, now and evermore. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. KAPTUR] come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Ms. KAPTUR led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a joint resolution of the House of the following title:

H.J. Res. 303. Joint resolution to designate June 6, 1994, as "D-Day National Remembrance Day".

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 978. An act to establish programs to promote environmental technology, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate disagrees to the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 349) "An Act to provide for the disclosure of lobbying activities to influence the Federal Government, and for other purposes.", agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. GLENN, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. COHEN, and Mr. STEVENS to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that pursuant to sections 276(d)–276(g), of title 22, United States Code, as amended, the Chair, on behalf of the Vice President, appoints Mr. DODD, as a member of the Senate Delegation to the Canada-United States Interparliamentary Group during the Second Session of the One Hundred Third Congress, to be held in Sante Fe, NM, May 19–23, 1994.

The message also announced that pursuant to sections 276(d)–276(g), of title 22, United States Code, as amended, the Chair, on behalf of the Vice President, appoints Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. SPECTER, and Mr. COVERDELL, as members of the Senate Delegation to the Canada-United States Interparliamentary Group during the Second Session of the One Hundred Third Congress, to be held in Santa Fe, NM, May 19–23, 1994.

The message also announced that pursuant to Public Law 103–227, the Chair, on behalf of the Republican leader, appoints Mr. COCHRAN, as a member of the National Education Goals Panel.

ON BASEBALLS AND HAITI

(Ms. KAPTUR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, it is opening season on every sandlot across America. Today I want to talk about baseballs, but also about Haiti. In fact, the U.S. Government is the biggest defender of the Haitian embargo by purchasing products like duty-free baseballs and softballs assembled by partially owned United States companies in Haiti.

One of the largest U.S. companies, Home of Champions, pays many of its employees, mostly women, as little as 5 cents an hour to make these baseballs.

Despite an economic embargo against Haiti by the Organization of American States, last year our Nation imported over $116 million worth of goods from Haiti, up from $71 million the year before.

Why do American businesses continue to profit from duty-free imports, and why do we continue to trade with Haiti, a nation we have condemned for violating the most fundamental of worker and human rights? Because our Government has decided to extend special export sector licenses to them.

Let us stop kidding ourselves. True democracy is a long way off in Haiti if our Nation continues to allow Haitian workers to be abused while a wealthy few profit from their misery. Let us enforce the embargo before sacrificing the life of one American service man or woman, and stand up for fair labor standards, decent working conditions, and democracy. After all, they go hand in hand.

THE FOURTH MONKEY CONGRESS

(Mr. SMITH of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Mr. Speaker, the congressional leadership must know more about Whitewater than they are admitting. Why else would they be doing everything in their power to sweep under the rug anything related to Whitewater?

Of course, on one hand you cannot blame them, because that is how they have handled investigations before.

There was a House Post Office scandal, but no hearings.

There was a House bank scandal, but no hearings.

The congressional leadership has done one better than the storybook monkeys of see no evil, hear no evil, and speak no evil.

To this group of three they have added a fourth monkey—hold no hearings.

Hold no hearings is in charge of congressional oversight for the President who is in Whitewater, or for any Democrat who is in hot water.

The President should tell the congressional leadership to quit monkeying around and hold hearings so we can have full disclosure now.

HEALTH CARE REFORM GUARANTEES CHOICE

(Mr. DERRICK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, when it comes to health care, Americans prize the ability to make their own choices. Health care reform ensures patients and doctors their freedom of choice.

Health care reform guarantees private insurance to every American. Doctors will no longer risk losing money on uninsured patients—they will not have to turn sick people away.

Health care reform guarantees insurance, but will not allow insurance companies to dictate who they will cover or what. Doctors will not have to worry about their choices in caring for the sick—they can practice their craft freely.

AUTHENTICATED U.S. GOVERNMENT INFORMATION GPO

Health care reform gives individuals, not employers, their choice of health plan and doctor. Doctors will be able to choose what health plan they join. Fee-for-service plans will be offered to everyone.

Free choice in health care ensures the flexibility and adaptability we need to cover all Americans and maintain our high standards. Health care reform guarantees choice.

TODAY IS DISCLOSURE DAY

(Mr. THOMAS of Wyoming asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. THOMAS of Wyoming. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH] filed suit to get Federal regulatory agencies to release documents relating to Whitewater. Today should be disclosure day.

There are those who imagine they are doing the President a favor by covering up and sweeping away all Whitewater evidence.

They are wrong. But such is their right to be wrong.

However, they overstep their rights and the rights of this institution when they encourage officials of the executive branch to not comply with Congress.

Disclosure is central to an open government. Disclosure is central to you and I as citizens being able to control that government.

It is amazing and appalling that those who are seeking to protect the President are willing to raise Whitewater to a constitutional question. Documents pertaining to other politically sensitive cases have been released before. The only reason they are not now being released is because the person under scrutiny is the President, whose party controls this institution.

It is time for the President and his party to quit playing hide and seek with the American people. It is time for full disclosure now.

AMERICAN FAMILIES NEED HEALTH CARE REFORM

(Mr. VISCLOSKY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VISCLOSKY. Mr. Speaker, the American people want health care fixed and real reform is moving forward in Congress.

This health care reform contains the basic principles of President Clinton's plan: guaranteed private insurance for all Americans; choice of doctors and quality health plans; insurance reform making it illegal to drop or cut benefits; preserves medicare; and shares responsibility for coverage between employers, employees, and government.

From our working men and women to our doctors, these principles have broad support nationwide.

The President's proposal is supported by the American Academy of Family Physicians, the American Academy of Pediatrics, and the American College of Physicians. These doctors and others support the President's plan because it will work.

President Clinton's plan works for doctors, their families, and their patients because it works for every American.

Mr. Speaker, we need to pass health care reform so no family will ever be faced with the choice of taking their sick child to the hospital or paying their mortgage.

AMERICA'S HEALTH CARE SYSTEM NEEDS REPAIR, NOT DESTRUCTION

(Mr. GOODLATTE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Speaker, the President is giving many Americans an awful and unnecessary choice: They can either keep their job or turn over their health care to Government bureaucrats.

You see, the Clintons want to pay for their huge new Government power grab by raising payroll taxes on employers and employees. Small businesses get clobbered and big businesses do not fare so well either.

But the biggest loser is the average, American worker. CBO estimates that over 1.2 million jobs may be lost under the Clinton plan. Even the administration admits their plan could cost 600,000 jobs.

Now it should not take a Rhodes Scholar to figure out that losing 1 million jobs and turning our health care over to an incompetent, insensitive Government is just plain dumb.

We should fix what is wrong with our current health care system instead of completely destroying the best system in the world. Let us pass the Bilirakis-Rowland health care reforms now. And, let us reject the President's false choice and give the American people what they want and deserve—affordable, accessable health care where families decide what is best for themselves and not Government bureaucrats.

SMALL BUSINESSES NEED HEALTH CARE REFORM

(Mr. SKAGGS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Speaker, a broad coalition of 3 million small businesses recently stepped forward to endorse President Clinton's health care reform proposal. Why?

Because right now, four out of five small businesses provide health insurance to their employees, and the costs of the current system are killing them.

They pay more—about 35 percent more—than other businesses for the same coverage. They just do not have the bargaining power or clout to get decent rates. They have endorsed President Clinton's plan to give them that power through community-based ratings and by outlawing the unfair insurance practices that discriminate against small businesses.

Another reason they are endorsing the Clinton plan is that companies providing insurance are at a disadvantage when their competitors do not. Small businesses also end up paying more for their insurance to pay for the cost of the uninsured, many of them employed by their competitors. With universal coverage, there will be no more free riders taking advantage of the health care system—everyone will pay a fair share.

Small businesses today face health insurance costs that are rising 20 or 30 percent a year and more. No matter how profitable the business, that rate of increase is unsustainable. President Clinton's health care reform package offers generous discounts so small businesses can afford insurance. It will cut administrative costs and help bring health care under control.

The bottom line for the coalition of three million small businesses who endorsed the President's plan is that they want to be able to provide affordable, dependable insurance for their families and employees. They see the proposal offered by President Clinton as the best way to get there.

FULL DISCLOSURE NOW

(Mr. KNOLLENBERG asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Speaker, in a two party system, the minority party is always the watchdog of the party in power. This check prevents abuses of power and ensures accountability.

However, to be effective, the minority leaders must have access to executive branch information. Unfortunately, the Clinton administration has denied the minority party access to its records in the Whitewater/Madison Savings & Loan matter.

What message does this send?

I will tell you what type of message it sends. It says that the minority party can only investigate what the majority party sees fit.

Not only is this a blatant act of censorship, but it destroys the very notion of accountability.

This is not just about Whitewater. This is about any investigation the minority tries to conduct when the majority party controls the White House and Congress.

So much for accountability.

The majority's actions are an open invitation for abuse and scandal that will leave the public ill-served and in the dark.

Full disclosure is needed to ensure public accountability. To quote an old adage, "Nothing clears the air better than the glare of broad daylight."

Let the chips fall where they may. We need full disclosure now.

BETTER TRAINING FOR PRIVATE SECURITY OFFICERS

(Mr. MARTINEZ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. Speaker, 2 weeks ago this House defeated my amendment to add the language of H.R. 1534 to the omnibus crime bill.

I am convinced that the opposition to that amendment was based on misperceptions and misunderstanding of the amendment.

I intend to bring this bill back to the Members in an appropriate form.

The bottom line is that this bill would result in better training for private security officers.

But more importantly, it would also ensure that States can effectively prevent convicted criminals from being given badges, uniforms, and weapons and placed in a position of trust.

The Wall Street Journal reported on April 26, 1994, that concerns about safety in shopping malls and other retail establishments cause many Americans to modify their shopping habits.

Twenty-five percent of Americans expressed the view that they feel unsafe in shopping malls.

Does anyone here doubt where the American public stands on this issue?

Can anyone doubt the need for more effective training of these guardians of private property with public access?

Over the next few days, I will be discussing each of the issues raised during the floor vote on my amendment.

I urge my colleagues to listen closely to those statements.

SAD, BUT NECESSARY

(Mr. GOSS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, Congressman JIM LEACH filed suit to force banking agencies to release documents relating to Whitewater.

It is a sad day when a Member of Congress must sue to perform his oversight duties.

It is even sadder when the majority leadership works hard to prevent that Member from his constitutionally required oversight duties.

And it is sadder still when the executive branch reportedly conspires to cover up potentially embarrassing or illegal activities and makes the legislative branch's job even tougher.

Mr. Speaker, the question is simple: Will the Congress support full disclosure or will it support full coverup?

Will it support the Constitution or will it support political cronyism? Are we interested in truth or would we rather dabble in hearsay?

Mr. Speaker, it is a sad day in this House and in this country when JIM LEACH must sue to perform his duties.

Mr. Speaker, I am from the sunshine State of Florida. The public has a right to know and government in the sunshine does work. We learned that here in the House banking scandal. It was a painful time and it was only full disclosure that began to restore some public confidence and some credibility in this institution. That is what it is going to take to restore confidence in the administration, full disclosure.

INNOCENT UNTIL PROVEN GUILTY

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, Penny Stellmacher made $25,000 a year working for a cable company. Penny got married in 1984.

Mr. Speaker, check this out: Penny started filing joint tax returns with her husband. Penny never failed to file, she always paid her taxes with her husband, and suddenly one day the IRS came in, seized her assets, went to the bank, took their bank account, took their paychecks because they said Penny owed $100,000.

Mr. Speaker, the IRS never thought to check that maybe she got married. The IRS says, "Penny, you're guilty. Now, you prove to us you paid your taxes. You owe $100,000."

Unbelievable, Congress. H.R. 3261, Discharge Petition No. 12, says it right straightforward: In America you are innocent until you are proven guilty and if it is good enough for the serial killer, Son of Sam, it is good enough for Penny Stellmacher and mom and dad.

Think about it. Discharge Petition No. 12. You are innocent until proven guilty. When did we get the Gestapo over here, folks?

WASTED MONEY

(Mr. ALLARD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. Speaker, I rise to address the issue of Social Security disability insurance and supplemental security income cash benefits going to addicts, and not for their treatment.

I find it troubling that $1.4 billion is slipping through taxpayer pockets each year to prolong and support the drug addiction of these so called disabled.

The director of a homeless shelter in Denver, CO stated that SSI is, in effect suicide on the installment plan because the program provides ready cash to addicts and alcoholics with no strings attached for follow-up or treatment. He maintains that the first day of every month is considered "Christmas Day" by many alcoholics and addicts who use the money for illegal drugs and alcohol and then fail to enter the required treatment programs.

An individual in another town was indicted for allegedly defrauding the SSI program of $45,000 through faking mental illness to become eligible for the SSI payments.

Why not send the $1.4 billion that is appropriated for this program to the actual treatment centers to assist them and not to some representative payee who may be the person's supplier? The treatment centers will be more cost effective and easier for the Social Security Administration to monitor. I even question why the country needs to qualify these citizens as disabled. This is the wrong path for America to take to cure its social ills.

It is a failure of the Social Security Administration to monitor and enforce the requirements needed to prevent this corruption. I commend Senator WILLIAM COHEN for his work in this matter and I hope my colleagues on the House Ways and Means Committee will be successful in putting an end to this disgrace.

HAITI'S TORTURED AND DIFFICULT PROBLEMS

(Mr. MAZZOLI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I wish to address briefly the tortured and difficult problem of Haiti. This week the administration announced one Haitian policy change with which I heartily agree and sent up one trial balloon about which I am very apprehensive.

Mr. Speaker, the policy change I agree with entirely is that no longer will Haitians be interdicted in the Windward Passage and sent back to Haiti without having their claims examined for possibly being refugees fleeing persecution. This is entirely salutary. It is entirely in keeping with our national policy about refugee status.

Mr. Speaker, the trial balloon that I hope is not going to go very far and about which I have great apprehension deals with the possibility of invading Haiti, sending military troops in there either to train the Haitian police or to literally invade and occupy the island.

America tried that early in the second decade of the 1900's, we were there in Haiti until the early 1930's and we solved nothing and left many residual problems.

Mr. Speaker, I hope we can find some combination of international diplomacy, creativity of one sort or another, but not military intervention to solve Haiti's tortured and difficult problems.

NO UNITED STATES TROOPS IN HAITI

(Mr. MANZULLO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Speaker, we are hearing more and more talk about military intervention to oust the current rulers of Haiti. Make no mistake about it—the military rulers of Haiti are loathsome and anti-democratic. However, the administration evidently determines United States policy by caving in to the lobbyist for an exiled Haitian leader.

We must not let our U.S. military be used once again to remake nations into our own image. We have no national security interest at stake in Haiti. If President Clinton decides to invade Haiti because they have bad rulers, we will set a precedent to invade every country that does not match up to our standards. There are wars and bad leaders in the old Yugoslavia, Yemen, Rwanda, Azerbaijan, Sudan, Liberia, Sierra Leone, Burma, etc. and properly there is no talk about a United States invasion of those countries.

U.S. foreign policy should be made by elected officials, not by lobbyists. No United States troops for Haiti!

TRIBUTE TO SUPPORTERS OF AFFORDABLE HEALTH CARE FOR ALL AMERICANS

(Mr. WISE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, I have stood in this well before and challenged those who would stand in the way of a comprehensive national health care plan that provides guaranteed private insurance for everybody that cannot be taken away.

But as I have challenged some, I want to recognize some also, for instance, the physicians from many different organizations that are in Washington today to express their support for a comprehensive health care plan, the Clinton health care plan, that provides guaranteed private insurance. They know what is good for their profession and their patients.

The second group I would like to recognize, particularly when we hear all of these claims by some business groups about how this harms them, is Safeway. Safeway Stores, a retailing grocery chain, has put on some of its bags distributed in some of its stores the message, "Safeway supports affordable health care for all Americans." Do they have some incredible percentage of profit that means they can do this when others cannot? Well, the average profit margin for most retailers is 2½ percent. The average profit margin for food retailers is 1 percent. Yet Safeway has found, as have other food store chains doing similar announcements, Safeway has found what is good for their employees is also good for their consumers.

I want to applaud both those doctors and those businesses that are stepping forward at this critical time.

FULL, OPEN DISCLOSURE ON WHITEWATER

(Mr. HEFLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Speaker, President Clinton has a new strategy for dodging the blame on Whitewater. He claims this is all just a partisan attack from Republicans. Then, he claims Republicans are using it to hold up government.

I would say to my colleagues that the President is desperate for a way out of Whitewater and does not have a clue how to get there.

If the administration needs to find where the Whitewater problem is coming from, it need look no further than the mirror.

The Whitewater questions are this simple: Was public trust betrayed and elected position misused in Arkansas to gain financial favors? And was public trust again betrayed and elected government position again misused in Washington to cover up the earlier actions?

The answers are just as simple: Let Congress hold the hearings and let the administration tell the truth.

Republicans do not want any more on Whitewater than the American people want: full disclosure and then get on with governing.

ENACT HEALTH CARE REFORM

(Mr. CARDIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, one of my constituents, Kenneth Zierler, M.D., Professor of medicine at Johns Hopkins University, shared with me a statement that appeared in the publication, "Doctors, People and Government," by Dr. James Howard Means, chief of medical services, Massachusetts General Hospital, and professor of medicine at Harvard, and let me quote:

> The progress of medicine in the social and economic field has been slow, halting, and uncertain in direction, and constantly thwarted by special interests. All people, doctors and patients alike, agree that medical care should be of the best quality that our medical knowledge permits, and that it must be dispensed with skill and judgment on the part of doctors, but how it shall be equitably, efficiently and economically distributed to all people, and how it shall be paid for, are highly controversial and emotionally charged issues. Public discontent with the medical situation has been boiling up for more than a quarter-century, Survey after survey has disclosed a distressing amount of unmet medical need in this, the most opulent nation on earth. The introduction in Congress of health bill after health bill is indication enough that our lawmakers have been aware that the voters want something done to give them better medical care.

The year of Dr. Means' statement? 1953. It is time for Congress to enact now health care reform that guarantees affordable private insurance for all Americans.

HEARINGS WERE FREQUENT DURING REAGAN-BUSH ERA

(Mr. EWING asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. EWING. Mr. Speaker, during the Reagan-Bush Presidencies, the Democrats in Congress took the oversight responsibilities very seriously.

During those years, Congress conducted hearings or investigations into 25 separate allegations of ethical or legal wrongdoing. Whether it was President Reagan, Bush, George Schultz, Jim Baker—no one escaped the wrath of hearings or a special prosecutor.

Since 1993, however, curiously the pace has slowed. No hearings in Congress were held on travelgate. No hearings were held on the Ron Brown allegations. And, no hearings have been held on Whitewater.

Mr. Speaker, I think even the Maytag repairman has been busier than the Oversight and Investigations Subcommittees.

Mr. Speaker, it is time for full disclosure. On March 22, 408 Members of this House voted for Whitewater hearings. If this vote was not a sham, then it is time to schedule these hearings. Full disclosure now.

HEALTH CARE REFORM

(Mr. REYNOLDS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, health care reform is the proverbial train leaving the station. More and more Americans are embracing the President's health care reform agenda.

There is growing support among our Nation's teachers and doctors.

Small businesses are increasingly realizing that health insurance for all is good business. And yet, many Members of Congress want to derail the health care reform train.

The cost of doing nothing is far greater than the cost of reforming our health care system.

The American people want health care reform. They want an end to the uncertainty of health care coverage, and inadequate access that surrounds our present patchwork system.

The President's plan guarantees universal, private insurance to every American. It will increase choice, reduce inefficiencies, and restore a sense of personal security that eats at our confidence, reduces our competitiveness and saps our resources.

I urge my fellow Members to get on the health care reform train. The American people's desire for this change is fueling our efforts. Do not get left at the station.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). The Chair would advise Members to address their comments to the Chair and not to persons outside the Chamber.

AMERICAN TROOPS SHOULD SERVE UNDER AMERICAN COMMANDERS

(Mr. GINGRICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, I very much agree with the last Member's comments about the need for bipartisanship and for working together. I would just say that next week if the defense authorization bill comes to the floor, we will have a chance to be bipartisan and to work together.

There are a number of steps that have been taken recently which would place American troops under U.N. commanders. The Vice President said recently that he wanted to extend condolences to the families who had lost loved ones in Iraq in the service of the United Nations.

Mr. Speaker, there is a deep feeling on the part of the Clinton administration that the United States must subordinate itself to the United Nations in Bosnia and other places. I think when the defense authorization bill comes to the floor, there will be a bipartisan opportunity, which Republicans will take a lead role in, trying to offer some amendments that will make clear that American troops should serve under American commanders, that America should never be subordinated to a world talking organization, and that some very serious thinking has to go into the Clinton administration's pattern of spending American money not on American defense but transferring that money out of our defense to subsidize the United Nations which is clearly ineffective, which is clearly unable to get the job done, and which clearly does not understand and is incapable of leading the world to peace and to security.

PLAY BY THE RULES

(Mr. KINGSTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, what do the legislation regarding the assault-rifle ban and the Clinton tax increase have in common? Two things. Both of them failed. Neither had the requisite number of votes to pass in the allocated 15-minute voting period.

But the second thing they have in common is that after the 15 minutes' allowed time ran out, the majority allowed the vote to stay open until enough arms had been twisted, enough pork had been dispensed, enough roads had been promised so that two or three more votes were eked out and both of these pieces of legislation passed.

As I went home this weekend, people talked not so much about the assault-rifle bill, because I have folks on both sides of the issue, but what they said is, "What in the world is Congress doing letting the time run out and then going around twisting arms, taking roll, getting people to swap their votes or to go ahead and vote for the first time?"

It is ridiculous. The folks back home understand time periods. They vote in different organizations or elected bodies. Let us play by the rules, Mr. Speaker. If we cannot lead by example, then what good are we to the American people?

END THE ETHNIC FIGHTING IN AZERBAIJAN

(Mr. BILBRAY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BILBRAY. Mr. Speaker, yesterday I introduced a resolution, a resolution calling for the Governments of Azerbaijan, Armenia, and the Nagorno-Karabagh region of Azerbaijan that is occupied by ethnic Armenians, to cease fire and to hold their line and to end the embargoes on each other.

I asked Members of this body to join with me in trying to encourage the President to enter the fray there in the sense of using his influence and showing the American resolve to end the fighting between the Armenians and the Azeris that has been going on for years and that has cost thousands and thousands of lives.

I ask my colleagues in the House to join me in sponsoring this resolution and moving it forward because this is an area where again, like Bosnia, the fighting goes on day after day after day.

Mose people in the world have forgotten about what is going on in Armenia. But the winter is coming again in just a few months, and where the embargo from the Azerbaijans has cut off the gas and electricity to the area so that people freeze in their beds and suffer frostbite, even young children, and they die because of lack of heat. I again encourage my colleagues to join with me in cosponsoring this resolution and urging a cease-fire in this area of the world.

NO REST FOR WEARY AMERICANS

(Mr. STEARNS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, there is no rest for weary Americans. For more than 4 months, average Americans struggled to pay their largest ever bill from the taxman. In 1994, for the first time in the post war era, total Federal, State, and local spending reached more than 33 percent of GDP.

Americans might feel as though they have earned a chance to take a deep breath and start enjoying the fruits of their labors. But the fact is, for the next 2 months, wage earners will still be working to pay for the costs of Federal mandates and regulations. According to Americans for Tax Reform, until July of this year, families will be working to pay the costs of Government.

And, it gets worse. Just this year, Congress has added to this burden with a pork-laden disaster relief bill, a bureaucratic elementary education act, a redundant school-to-work bill, and new restrictions on first and second amendment rights.

These actions are typical of the way Congress operates today—new mandates on local government, new regulations on small business, new spending masked by slashing defense and temporarily low interest rates, and ever-increasing power over the lives of Americans.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, for all Americans, the hits just keep on coming.

CHARACTER COUNTS

(Mr. DORNAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, character counts. It counts for everything in the leadership of this country or any other country. This city is named for the Father of our country, George Washington, as is one of our 50 states, as is our newest supercarrier.

Mr. Speaker, George Washington was the epitome of character, so said our third President, Thomas Jefferson. He wrote rules of conduct for teenagers, not just in front of women, in front of everybody; 32 rules of conduct when he was 16 years of age.

Listen to what he said to his men in a general order at Valley Forge about using blasphemous or vile language:

> The general is sorry to be informed that the foolish and wicked practice of profane cursing and swearing, a vice heretofore little known to an American army, is going into fashion. He hopes the officers will endeavor to check it and that both they and the men will reflect that we can have little help of the blessing of Heaven upon our arms if we insult it by our impiety and folly. Added to this, it is a vice so mean and so low, without any temptation, that any man of sense and character detests and despises it.
> —George Washington, 1777, Valley Forge, PA.

That, Mr. Speaker, is character. From the 1st President to the 42d, we have developed to a disgusting situation of lack of character.

THIS IS A SPIRIT OF BIPARTISANSHIP? NOT

(Mr. WALKER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, earlier this month the three ranking members of the committees most concerned with health care reform wrote their counterparts, the chairmen of those committees, and asked that we in the spirit of bipartisanship handle the health care reform issue.

I quote from the letter that they wrote: "Let us work together to build on a solid base of bipartisanship."

It is disturbing the reply they got from one of the subcommittee chairmen of one of those committees. I am going to read to you what he wrote. And when I use the term "expletive deleted," it will refer to a term that refers to cow manure. He writes, "Dear Bill: This is pure, unadulterated" expletive deleted. "You don't want health care reform, and you know it. Regards, Pete."

Mr. Speaker, when there is an attempt to work on important national issues in a spirit of bipartisanship, we ought to expect the Democrats who control this House to be far more responsive than this letter indicates. This is the kind of thing that destroys the legislative process and destroys the ability to work together for the common good of this Nation.

I am personally appalled by what took place in this instance, and I think we are owed an apology from the House leadership and particularly from the gentleman involved in this particular letter.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 1994

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MAZZOLI). Pursuant to House Resolution 420 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 2442.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H.R. 2442) to reauthorize appropriations under the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965, as amended, to revise administrative provisions of the act to improve the authority of the Secretary of Commerce to administer grant programs, and for other purposes, with Mr. TORRES in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Committee of the Whole rose on Wednesday, May 11, 1994, the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute was open for amendment at any point. Pending was the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY].

The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY] is recognized for 5 minutes in support of his amendment.

Mr. HEFLEY. I thank the Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

Mr. Chairman, the amendment I am offering today will abolish the Economic Development Administration.

I have offered similar amendments to abolish the EDA in the past and, I have to say, it is not easy—it is hard on friendships. People say mean things about you.

In the past, my amendments have been opposed by representatives from across the political spectrum. Each has his or her own experience of how the EDA helped bail out a certain community.

I do not dispute that. I am certain the EDA has had many successful projects.

I am also certain the EDA has had many failures—in my district and elsewhere. Potemkin's villages had a more lasting economic impact that some EDA projects.

The debate today is not about the EDA assistance in rebuilding a dock, or revitalizing a neighborhood.

The debate today is whether, with a Federal debt of $4½ trillion and deficits that are expected to rise through the year 2000, the EDA is the best use of the taxpayer's dollar.

With that in mind, let me make two points about the EDA.

First, the EDA's influence on the economy is highly overrated.

On a good month, the U.S. economy will create, all by itself, more long-term jobs than the EDA has created in its 28-year history.

For every EDA project that created jobs at a reasonable cost, there is an EDA project that cost the taxpayer hundreds of thousands per job—or actually eliminated jobs.

In a $6 trillion economy, the EDA's input does not qualify as a drop in the bucket. This year EDA funding under this bill is less than one twenty-thousandth of the U.S. economy.

The best economic performance this country experienced in the last 28 years coincided with the time when the EDA's budget was the lowest.

So when I hear supporters tell me how vital the EDA is, I want to ask: Vital to whom? I would suggest that the economic future of the United States is not tied to the prospects of the EDA.

My second point is: We've been down this road before.

The pending bill represents a 180 degree change in our policy towards the EDA. Instead of fighting for its life, the EDA will become a bigger player in the Clinton administration's domestic agenda.

Here's an excerpt from the National Journal regarding the EDA's expanding role:

> The strategy calls for investment of small amounts of public money to leverage large amounts of private money to create jobs that will alleviate underemployment, increase the local tax base and thus revitalize the local economy.

Commenting on the strategy, a prominent Congressman says, "All the latest buzzwords—targeting, leveraging, public-private partnership—point to economic development as the most popular and logical strategy for attacking (economic) distress."

The article even mentions the creation of a national development bank and the pending jurisdiction dispute between the Public Works and Banking Committees.

Just another plug for Bill Clinton's ambitious expansion of Government?

Nope. This National Journal article was written in 1979—15 years ago. At the time, Jimmy Carter planned to take the EDA, fund it with billions of taxpayer dollars, and target the funding at needy communities across the country.

Four years later, the National Journal ran another article, this time entitled, "EDA on Death Row."

At the time of the second article, 40 percent of the loans in the EDA's portfolio were in default, anecdotes about the EDA's misfires filled the news, and even the EDA's supporters were conceding that the EDA was the "last of the pork barrel programs."

Today, we have another former governor from a small southern State pushing public-private partnerships, leveraging Federal funds, and targeting distressed communities.

We should learn from history.

The EDA has survived 12 years of purgatory for the simple reason that it makes Representatives and Senators look good.

Unlike other assistance programs, the EDA picks and chooses its own projects. This makes it highly susceptible to pressure from Capitol Hill.

As my colleagues might expect, this is an inefficient means for providing assistance to local communities. Admittedly the bill before us today addresses some of those problems. It tightens the eligibility requirements so that the affluent communities will not qualify as easily for assistance.

I support those changes. On the other hand, I am skeptical that these changes will solve the problem of undue congressional influence. Unlike the leopard, I do not think the EDA is about to change its spots, which is why I am offering the amendment today.

Mr. Chairman, the EDA has a history of waste, failure, and abuse. It wasted Federal dollars, it failed to create jobs at a reasonable cost, and it has abused the good will of the American taxpayer.

Let us do the fiscally responsible thing today and put EDA to rest.

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to the amendment to eliminate the Economic Development Administration offered by our friend, the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY]. Frankly I am astounded that the gentleman could offer this amendment again this year, particularly after the compelling discussion we have had on this floor and the number of hearings in all the subcommittees and the committees of the House that have jurisdiction over the Economic Development Administration.

Mr. Chairman, I have had the occasion over the last years to travel to Florida to look over the disaster of Hurricane Andrew, to look at the destruction in the Hawaiian Islands as a result of Hurricane Iniki, to go through the Midwest and see the flood devastation, but I want to tell my colleagues from personal experience my congressional district is the Wyoming Valley of Pennsylvania. It is the only valley that spurred a name for one of our States. It is famous for the Yankee, Connecticut Yankee, Indian wars of the Revolution, and back in 1972 massive waters of the Susquehanna River flooded that magnificent valley 27,000 homes and 1,600 businesses were inundated and destroyed. I can tell my colleagues as a practicing attorney at that time, and representing the flood victims, that the response of the U.S. Government was made from many agencies with many letters. But the one agency of the U.S. Government that showed ability of leadership, fast executive decisionmaking, and coordination with local decisions was the Economic Development Administration. Within 30 days tens of millions of dollars of special grant money and relief processes were put into place that literally saved the economic future of the heart of my congressional district and the largest national disaster at that time in American history.

Mr. Chairman, anyone who argues to me or the House of Representatives that the Economic Development Administration should die or should be put to death only misses the point of where we are in the world today. If anything, those of us that represent the less-than-affluent districts of this country that are anemic economically and need to move on, need the advantage and the ability on the civilian side of this Government to strike and perform the functions that the Economic Development Administration has done so well prior to 1980; I know there was a concerted effort in the last 12 years to put this great agency to death, and it has created some very deep wounds and effects on that agency, but I believe the Committee on Public Works of the House and the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs of the House are going to do everything they can with this new President and his new economic philosophy to breathe the type of energy into this new agency that it needs to carry on the mandate of the American people who are more disadvantaged.

I want to compliment my coleader, the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE]. He has succeeded to dequalify 80 percent of the districts in this country from the use of the Economic Development Administration and target it down to 45 percent. These are the type of structural improvements that have been necessary over all these years, but for anyone to suggest that the U.S. Government no longer has a need for economic development is to miss the point of where we are competitively in the world market and particularly where our less fortunate congressional districts are in terms of competitiveness in this national economy

Mr. Chairman, I would urge my colleagues of the House to stand tall and stand proudly, that this President and this Congress is going to breathe new life and new leadership into an agency known as the Economic Development Administration of the United States, and it will go on to spur the type of economic development the districts of this country that are anemic and depressed need, and it is going to be done with the assistance of the House of Representatives.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to the amendment to eliminate the Economic Development Administration. Frankly, it is astounding that the gentleman could offer this amendment, particularly after the compelling discussion we have had on this floor on the need for, not just the EDA in its current form, but for an expanded and strengthened EDA.

In the struggle to rebuild their economies after the devastation from Hurricane Andrew, the people of Florida and Louisiana have turned to the EDA for its vital assistance.

The same is true for the people of Hawaii following Hurricane Iniki's destruction.

As we speak here this morning, the EDA is in communities throughout the Midwest helping them rebuild their lives after last year's devastating floods; and the EDA is deployed right now in southern California providing vital assistance in recovering from this year's major earthquake.

Military bases across this country are in the process of closing down and disrupting the economies of hundreds of communities, and hundreds more will face serious problems when the new list of base closures is announced. It is the EDA to which these communities turn for help to build a new and better future.

And, it is not just the closure of military bases which result in the loss of thousands of local jobs. Our colleague from New York, Mr. HINCHEY, with the massive layoffs from the downsizing at IBM, is acutely aware of the crippling blow the loss of huge numbers of jobs can have on a region's economy. Once again, the EDA is the primary source of Federal assistance.

How many of us worry that the passage of NAFTA will result in the loss of significant numbers of jobs in our own districts. Should this happen, as it already is in some communities, it is the EDA to which we will turn for help.

And finally, Mr. Chairman, even without natural disasters, military base closures, or massive plant layoffs, there remain today in this country hundreds of communities which struggle with high levels of unemployment, stagnant economies, and deteriorating infrastructure. The people in these communities understand all too well the vital need for the existence and the expansion of the Economic Development Administration.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment is not only frivolous, it is dangerous to the future of this Nation as a whole, and I urge its resounding defeat.

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words and I rise here today in strong support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY] to abolish the Economic Development Administration. This amendment would save American taxpayers $1.1 billion over the next 5 years.

This is a perfect example of a Federal spending program that has long ago outlived its usefulness. But here in Congress, old spending programs never die, they just grow and grow and grow. Both the Reagan and Bush administrations proposed its elimination again and again, but the EDA is still going strong.

It is time to put a stop to this wasteful pork. In fact, Citizens Against Government Waste has designated the EDA on its list of Prime Cuts. According to CAGW.

The only thing EDA has proven itself capable of developing is a constituency of pork barrel enthusiasts in Washington and governors who want the federal government to carry their water for them. EDA grants have gone to cities [with] unemployment rates far below the national average.

Poll after poll shows that the vast majority of American citizens continue to prefer less spending and lower taxes to more of the same. The taxpaying public want us to cut spending first.

The President's so-called deficit reduction agreement last year was remarkable because it did exactly the opposite: It increased Government spending while enacting the largest tax increase in history. Not just higher incomes taxes on the rich, but higher taxes on all Americans. This year's budget maintains the status quo of last year's big-government budget, taxes and all. It is not remarkable for what it includes, but for what it lacks—there is no trace of real change or fundamental reform.

What the people in my district want to know is this: How on Earth can Congress continue to raise taxes while programs such as the Economic Development Administration continue to remain in the Federal budget? Is this Congress so out of touch that it can not even eliminate this one program?

Many Members like to talk about making tough choices. Opponents of the recently defeated balanced budget amendment argued that we did not need a gimmick to balance the budget. We just need to make tough choices. And yet we reject virtually every budget reform, constitutional control, and almost every specific spending cut offered on the floor. Most do not even make it to the floor to be voted on.

The truth is, this body has a fundamental credibility problem with the taxpayers we work for.

This is a straight-forward vote for fiscal sanity, one of the few floor votes we can make against pork barrel politics. The bottom line is that this Congress cannot afford not to change its spending ways. I urge my colleagues on both sides of the isle to support this commonsense amendment.

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the Economic Development Administration is a unique agency that serves a very useful role, stimulating industrial development and improving the quality of life in economically distressed areas of the country and helping communities overcome severe and sudden economic distress. The role of the agency has expanded in recent years to assist communities affected by base closures, which is obviously a problem that we are going to have in some degree for the next number of years. EDA performs that role very professionally and with a great deal of expertise.

Mr. Chairman, I was frankly disappointed in the two previous administrations, my administrations, because of their hostility to the Economic Development Administration. I was disappointed because I have always felt that EDA espoused some of the unique things the Republican Party stands for, using very limited Federal dollars to leverage private sector investment in enterprises that create private sector jobs, as opposed to public sector or so-called leaf-raking jobs. This was a program, it seemed to me, that used a very minimal investment of the Federal Government to do the sorts of things that Republicans were for, that is, generating new private sector jobs.

It is not a pork-barrel program, and I know that is a charge that is often made about EDA; that we are funding all sorts of useless, unnecessary, gold-plated projects.

I was a former chief counsel for the Economic Development Administration, and I can state with great authority, I think, that these projects get the most thorough vetting of any projects that are approved in the Federal Government. They go through an exhaustive review process to assure that, No. 1, there is no job dislocation, that we do not move jobs from one area of the country to another. That was a charge that David Stockman, the late, lamented head of the OMB, used to charge about EDA, that it was a zero-sum game, that you never really created any new jobs, you just moved jobs from one area of the country to the other. I think it was Mr. Stockman whom we have to thank for such strong Republican opposition to this program.

But he was wrong, because there is a clear directive in EDA that you cannot move jobs from one area to another, you have to create jobs. I know that in my own district I have seen the benefits of this program, where we have created jobs, and it has not been wasteful projects. These have been very vital projects.

EDA has established a network of regional development organizations throughout its service area, and I cannot stress too much the importance of this fact.

The other reason I think this is unique and that it should receive Republican support is that this is a program that is directed toward rural areas of distress, rural communities that are having trouble competing in a wide variety of ways. What this program does is provide an expertise that would not otherwise be available to these communities. Large cities can employ experts, grantsmen, people who understand how to package programs and make projects work. Rural areas do not have the resources to do that. They do not have the money to do that. EDA and ARC provide the kind of experts to assist rural communities with their unique problems. They are expert in identifying not just Federal resources but private sector resources, State resources, and local resources to put together projects that would otherwise not occur. In my own district, regional development organizations have been instrumental in identifying Federal grants programs suited to solve local problems. That is what it is all about. They establish information clearinghouses for local businesses competing for Federal contracts, and they coordinate these efforts.

So I think it is not fair to equate the relatively small budgets this agency is assigned with the charge that it plays a minor role in the communities it serves; to the contrary, I think EDA provides a crucial difference in whether a project will go forward or not.

Over the years in the history of the Economic Development Administration, I have seen the very beneficial effects this has produced throughout the country, primarily in rural areas, primarily in those areas that do not have the resources to do it on their own. The agency has a successful proven track record and has generated substantial return in payroll taxes, income taxes, and other taxes that meets or exceeds the agency's investment. This is a worthwhile investment. This agency should be allowed to continue its mission, which is to give rural America an opportunity to compete.

Mr. Chairman, I urge defeat of the amendment.

Mr. SCHAEFER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the Hefley amendment to H.R. 2442, and I want to commend my friend, the gentleman from Colorado, for leading the fight for eliminating this agency.

Despite the optimistic reports from the administration, our deficit is still going up. Four hundred billion dollars by the year 2000 is projected.

Congress should be looking for ways to eliminate inefficiency and wasteful programs, not reauthorizing them after 10 years. Congress need look no further than the EDA to begin to find an appropriate place in which to eliminate a few dollars from this budget that we are not going to be able to afford in a number of years.

Let me also add at this time that I support the amendments reducing or eliminating the funding for the Appalachian Regional Commission. This is a good example of why the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PENNY] and I introduced the Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1994.

We can go on and on and on trying to eliminate certain programs to try to cut the deficit, and we always lose. We do always lose, so that is why we have combined all these cuts, $550 billion over a 5-year period, so we could vote up or down on one piece of legislation, and this exact amendment was included in the Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1994.

I would just say to the Members that if we do not try to get a handle somewhere on how we are going to reduce spending, our children and our grandchildren are going to suffer. There is no longer any way that we can continue to ask the American taxpayers to put more revenues into the Federal Treasury through more taxes.

Mr. Chairman, the time has come to say no a few times on these programs that have outlived themselves.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today to urge my colleagues to oppose the Hefley amendment and other amendments to eliminate funding authorizations for the Economic Development Administration [EDA] and instead support EDA's reauthorization. I commend the Subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE] and the ranking Republican, the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI] for addressing the many needs of rural America in this important legislation.

This bill adequately addresses many of the past criticisms of the EDA. For instance, the grandfathering of eligibility resulting in over 85 percent of the country being eligible has been eliminated. I believe that an honest, good-faith effort has been made to reach a compromise on this bill. I am not advocating that it is a perfect bill, but I can tell you from first-hand, hands-on experience that the EDA in my district has been crucial in providing needed funds to many of the small, rural communities in Southern Missouri.

The partnership that has developed over the years between the Economic Development Administration and local county and municipal officials and organizations has been exemplary. There is not a day that goes by that I do not receive a phone call from a community urging me to support their application for a most fundamental element of infrastructure—a sewer system, or a business incubator, or an access road for an industrial park. Many of these communities are simply not able to contribute all of the capital investment needed for these projects. In these cases, the EDA has been able to step in and provide the necessary matching federal funds for that particular project.

Mr. Chairman, my district was one affected by the Midwest floods last summer. Then it was hit with flash floods that took several lives and devasted much of the same region. As we continue to recover and relocate, the EDA has come forward to be a full partner in assisting many small communities to restore infrastructure that had been damaged. I am not talking about frivolous projects. I am talking about legitimate public works and economic development projects that have helped small businesses and rural communities get back on their feet.

I realize that the EDA must improve its efficiency. It must continue to streamline its application process and work more closely with local officials. But I believe that this bill will move them in that direction. The EDA needs the tools that this bill provides if it is to continue to improve and become more proficient. I strongly support H.R. 2442, and I ask my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to do so.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

I rise in the strongest possible opposition to this amendment. Let me tell you why. I am going to mention a four-letter word, and do not get nervous. Here is a four-letter word we can all use in polite company. It is called jobs. What is more important in America today than helping people who are unemployed obtain employment, helping people who are underemployed obtain a job?

Jobs is indeed, and it should be, our favorite four letter word in this Chamber. And with the Economic Development Administration, we have an agency of the Federal Government whose sole purpose is to advance that agenda, that is, the jobs agenda, for America.

We all know, we have been victims in my district and many other districts to the downsizing, they call it, of the military. All across this country, military installations are being closed or are being significantly reduced. Sad to say, in my own district, I am losing about 5,000 jobs because the Air Force is reducing the size of Griffiss Air Force Base. But I understand that. I do not particularly like it. I understand it.

So what are we going to do? Are we going to put our tail between our legs and say there is nothing we can do? No, we are marching on the Philadelphia office of the Economic Development Administration, with plans in hand. We are saying to the EDA, look, it is your mission to help us. We want to work with you.

Guess what? They are doing a pretty darn good job. A very good job. There is hope in my community and there is hope in communities all across the country that have been victimized by a significant loss of employment opportunities because we have the Economic Development Administration.

I cannot speak for the rest of the country, but I will tell you what. The regional administrator of EDA in Philadelphia, a fellow named Jack Corrigan, and, incidentally, I happen to be a Republican and kind of proud of it, he happens to be a Democrat, I have a relationship with him. I almost say my daily prayers to him, because he is a guy who dedicates his role and his staff to working with communities, to help communities pull themselves up by their own bootstraps. That is critically important.

We have in my district and in districts like mine all over the country industrial parks, business parks, scenes of employment opportunities that were made possible because EDA had the wisdom to approve some grants for water lines and sewer lines for the necessary infrastructure that local governments cannot afford to pay for, particularly local governments that are really hurting because the jobs are fleeing elsewhere around the country.

Let me tell you something, colleagues. I am offering you a real good buy. $386 million for the next fiscal year for the Economic Development Administration, to help us with our primary mission of helping America create more jobs and more opportunity. Because the bottom line is this: What do the American people want? Do the American people want a handout from Washington? That is not what they want. The American people want from Washington opportunity. They want a hand up. Let us give them a hand up.

This agency is important. I strongly support it. I strongly oppose the amendment. I want to praise the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from West Virginia, [Mr. WISE], and the ranking member of the subcommittee, the gentlewoman from New York, [Ms. MOLINARI]. They are enlightened, they are farsighted, they are bringing us a good bill. They deserve in a bipartisan manner our strongest support.

Mr. THOMAS of Wyoming. Mr. Chairman, I rise to strike the last word.

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Wyoming. Mr. Chairman, I yield to my friend, the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Chairman, just in a very brief summary here, I said at the outset that every one would have examples. Yes, the EDA has done some good things. There is no question about that. I did not say that some good wasn't done. I did not say, as someone suggested, that the United States does not need economic development. I said they do not need the Economic Development Agency. And I said that this is not an efficient way to provide that economic development.

This is a place to park dollars so that Members can say to their constituents, "Look what I can do for you." We have gone over year after year the examples of the parking garages and the stockyard development in Fort Worth and on and on.

One of the speakers said that he gets calls from all kinds of people saying support this project and support that project. And that is our mentality up here, that whatever your little project is throughout the United States, whether it be a sewer system or whatever it be, that the Federal Government ought to pay for it. It is your system. But somehow or other, the Federal Government ought to pay for it.

Another thing in the bill that I think we ought to be aware of when we throw around the figure $386 million, is there is also a phrase in there that says "and such additional amounts." That has been scored, and the cost of this bill that we are trying to eliminate is $422 million, not $386 million.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Wyoming. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BOEHLERT. First of all I want to praise the preceding speaker, because he has been in the front ranks of those fighting to eliminate Government waste. As a matter of fact, the gentleman was very supportive of my effort to eliminate funding for the superconducting super collider. And that one little vote saved the taxpayers of America about $9 billion. Not million, billion with a B, over the next 5 years.

But in this instance, I disagree respectfully with my distinguished colleague. Because he says we need an economic development in America, but we do not need an Economic Development Agency. What are we supposed to be? Are we supposed to be involved in group prayer? Pray for jobs from on high? No. We have to earn those jobs. We have got to work hard to get them.

The gentleman said he is sick and tired of the mentality of saying the feds ought to pay for everything. Guess what? I agree with him. I am sick and tired of the mentality that will say the feds ought to pay everything.

Guess what? Under the EDA, the feds do not pay for everything. We have a good solid working partnership with State and local governments. That is the type of partnership we should encourage.

So I respectfully disagree with my colleague, for whom I have the highest regard, because I know he is in the front ranks of those fighting to eliminate waste, fraud, and abuse in Government. In this instance I think he is a little bit off the mark, but I look forward to working with him in future endeavors.

Mr. HAMBURG. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to the Hefley amendment.

The EDA is particularly important today as we struggle to adjust to profound changes in two major sectors of our economy: our rural, resource-based economy, and our military economy.

The EDA is playing a lead role in the defense conversion process, a role that will grow more important as more communities face base closure. To terminate this agency is to greatly endanger the ability of base closure communities to adapt to new economic realities.

This reauthorization increases the agency's flexibility in responding to immediate needs faced by communities whose economies are linked to defense conversion efforts.

This bill will allow communities, like Fairfield and Napa in the vicinity of Mare Island Naval Shipyard, to receive economic development grants through title IX before they have clear title to the land. With title IX grants, local communities can invest in infrastructure improvements without delay and avoid the deterioration accelerated by vacancy.

This bill will also guarantee assistance of a resident EDA defense conversion expert for each State facing base closures: an expert to help communities through the process. EDA will funnel $80 million to hard-hit communities specifically for defense conversion assistance. EDA's role is a key component of our national strategy to convert our economy from reliance on defense investment. We must not gut the agency.

EDA is also a front-line agency in assisting communities affected by natural disaster. EDA's assistance to Point Arena, a town of roughly 400 people on the north coast of California in my district, is a prime example of its critical postdisaster role. Point Arena is a fishing community that symbolizes the pioneer spirit in America. Harbormaster Bill Pettigrew recently wrote me describing EDA's importance:

In January of 1983, an "El Nino"-generated storm sent waves into Arena Cove of such height that the pier was totally destroyed. The result was the loss of a vibrant salmon fishing port that had received up to 100,000 pounds of product a day. Stores in town failed and were boarded up. The timber industry was starting to downsize at the same time and Point Arena became a severely depressed economic area.

The City of Point Arena joined forces with five different Federal and State agencies in 1985 to rebuild the pier. With a two and a half million dollar investment, the pier re-opened in April 1987. The Economic Development Administration (EDA) was the single largest grantor with a commitment of $875,000.

Following the "Grand Opening" in 1987, the once seasonal port has operated "year-round," creating many new jobs both in the Cove proper and downtown. Support facilities, stores, restaurants and private development have flourished. The fiscal year 1989-1990 saw Arena Cove become the nation's second largest port for receiving sea urchins with a total poundage exceeding 8.2 million pounds across the dock, 98% of this a United States export commodity going to Japan.

Mr. Pettigrew recently confided to me that "without the EDA, Point Arena would not exist today. We could never have coordinated the various agencies or achieved the level of funding necessary without the EDA's assistance."

To terminate EDA is to deprive communities affected by natural disaster of a powerful resource to help them rebuild their communities.

Finally, EDA is often the only financial resource for small communities expanding and diversifying their economic base. Many communities in my district are so small and have so few economic resources that they have nowhere else to turn.

In Eureka, a major port development project is under way. The port's expansion plays a critical role in creating new jobs through industrial diversification and expansion of tourism.

The city and harbor district simply cannot finance the improvements alone. The State of California cannot finance the entire project. No private investment funds the entire project. Faced with a declining natural resource base and a declining revenue base, the city of Eureka has one place to turn: the EDA.

This is the most relevant point. Where are small, poor communities to turn when they want to expand their economic base to attract new industries? Are we simply to abandon these communities to struggle on day-to-day to their eventual death? Or are we going to take a small amount of Federal moneys and give these communities some alternatives.

EDA is not a pork-barrel agency doling out moneys to congressional districts. The EDA helps small communities survive, providing hope and opportunity.

EDA has 30 years of experience in helping communities transform their distressed economies. We can't afford to give up such critical expertise at this juncture.

I urge my colleagues to defeat the Hefley amendment. It is short-sighted and fails to recognize the importance of this agency.

Mr. PETE GEREN of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to lend my voice to the bipartisan opposition to the Hefley amendment to terminate the Economic Development Agency and urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. Chairman, we have heard a great deal in the course of this debate about the EDA and what it does and does not accomplish. I would like to take this opportunity to briefly share the experience of the district I represent.

The city of Fort Worth is currently working with the EDA on an $11.8 million grant for economic development. This grant is the centerpiece of the renovation and the restoration of an economically depressed area of our city. The EDA has been working hand-in-glove with our community, and this restoration enjoys strong local support and financial backing. Fort Worth and local private investors have contributed more than $25 million to this restoration to leverage the Federal contribution by more than 2 to 1. This is a good example of a public-private partnership that is working well and should be encouraged.

Without this help from the EDA this area of Fort Worth would continue to struggle, becoming a further drain on the local, State, and Federal Governments. According to the 1990 U.S. census 49.4 percent of the households in this area have an income below the poverty line and the unemployment rate in this area is over 12 percent.

However, with this help from the EDA and the hard work and vision of a number of community leaders, this area is turning around, bringing hope to its citizens. There is little question that this investment by the Federal Government is well worth it and will pay great dividends. The people of Fort Worth are grateful for the help from the EDA and they have put their money behind it. In tight budget times this is the type of program that should survive. I am sure a number of the Members have similar stories about the good work of the EDA in their area.

There are plenty of areas in the Federal Government in serious need of reform and I have supported many Federal Government cutbacks. But the EDA should not fall in that category. It is doing its job and doing it well, and I truly believe that it is a big mistake to do anything that will jeopardize the future of this agency.

I urge a "no" vote on this amendment.

Mr. KLEIN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the compromise reached between the House Banking Committee and the House Public Works and Transportation Committee to reauthorize the Economic Development Administration. I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to oppose Congressman HEFLEY's amendment to terminate the EDA.

The two series of EDA grants contained in this legislation—both the public works and economic adjustment grants—are vital to our efforts to restore economically distressed areas like the cities of Paterson and Passaic, which are located in my congressional district in northern New Jersey. Communities like these need to have investment in their infrastructure in order to attract new business and industry and to create more jobs for the people who live there.

It is essential that we provide these distressed communities the support they need to rebuild their infrastructure and address the long-term problems created by economic deterioration, high unemployment, massive plant closures, and defense industry cutbacks.

Many of the problems that have plagued the EDA for the past 12 years have been corrected in the compromise bill we have before us today. We have improved upon the grant criteria; we have improved the procedures for processing applications; we have clearly defined EDA's mission; and we have made sure that applicants who receive EDA moneys have established long-term strategies to best address local economic problems.

This legislation is a modest investment in America's future, and it deserves your support.

I want to thank Chairman KANJORSKI for all his efforts to bring this compromise measure to the floor today, and I urge all my colleagues to oppose any amendments which would undermine the EDA authorization levels or reforms that have been incorporated into this bill.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to the Hefley amendment. I want to address some of the concerns that the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY] has brought up. I want to first visit history a little bit.

The gentleman states that the program has not been reauthorized for about a dozen years and that that should be some kind of evidence that it is obsolete. The gentleman needs to remember that the reason it has not been reauthorized is because both Presidents Reagan and Bush said they would veto the reauthorization should it come to their desk, but significantly, particularly in this House of Representatives, a majority of Members on both sides of the aisle, Republicans and Democrats, kept the EDA alive through the appropriations process. Why? Because a majority of this House and a majority, obviously, of the Senate recognized the significance and the importance of the Economic Development Administration.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman refers to a loan default problem and, indeed, he is correct. There was one in the late 1970's. That is why a majority of this House and a majority of the other body stopped funding the loan program, and so it has been moribund all these many years.

Indeed, in the legislation before us today there is no reauthorization of the loan program. Instead, what there is is a study to be completed and a report to be made to Congress suggesting whether or not such a program can be put together and how it would avoid the problems of the past.

Mr. Chairman, I want to repeat, there is no loan program such as the gentleman is talking about in this bill. There is a revolving loan program that has been in existence and has worked satisfactorily, and thanks to the contributions of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. COLLINS], that program has been made more flexible in the nature that I think most people think would be important, at the same time keeping its accountability.

There has been, and the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY] acknowledges this, there has been significant tightening up of the program to meet some of the complaints that have been made over the past dozen years. For instance, whereas the EDA was often criticized for applying, being able to apply, to 80 percent of the country, today it would be 45 percent of the country with the new criteria.

Mr. Chairman, there is a simplified application process, so that we do not have to make many of these communities jump through hoops. Something that I thought was important was that the EDA university centers are now required to be evaluated once every 2 years to make sure that indeed they are working.

Mr. Chairman, the loan program has been eliminated that the gentleman complained about. There have been other things made as well to try and bring that greater accountability to the EDA.

Mr. Chairman, I would urge Members to reject this. The gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT] eloquently spoke about the regional director in Philadelphia, Mr. Corrigan, who I also find to be the finest in the EDA tradition. I might point out that he was brought to Washington under Republican administrations to assist. There was a high degree of professionalism maintained through various administrations, and indeed one of the best EDA administrators that I ran into was Bonnie Newman, appointed under the Reagan administration, who disagreed with the program but said, "It is my job to run it and to run it effectively."

Mr. Chairman, the EDA has continued to assist those communities on a bipartisan or, better said, nonpartisan basis. I would just urge Members to reject this amendment and to do so overwhelmingly. In fact, I think it is a statement to the strength of the EDA, the bipartisan debate we have heard in favor of retaining the EDA. I would urge that because every one of us has a situation that we can recount about the EDA.

How many of my colleagues have had to deal with natural disasters, and unfortunately we can never tell when we are going to have to deal with a natural disaster, in Florida, in California, in Hawaii, in my own State of West Virginia in 1985.

How many of my colleagues are having to deal presently with the pain of defense closings, a military base closing, a realignment, or the significant downsizing of a defense plant? EDA's role has increased significantly to adapt with that.

How many of my colleagues are trying to put together that deal that will bring 200, 300, maybe 1,000 jobs to their area, to a hard hit, economically devastated area, and need just that final linchpin, and the final linchpin could be a water system or a sewer system.

Mr. Chairman, that is EDA. It puts it together, it makes it happen.

Mr. Chairman, I would urge rejection of this amendment and I am going to repeat something I said yesterday.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE] has expired.

(By unanimous consent Mr. WISE was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. WISE. When a Member has a military base closing, who is it they are going to call? They are going to call the EDA.

When a Member has a flood, an earthquake, a tornado and their businesses are devastated, who are they going to call? They are going to call the EDA.

When a Member is trying to put that deal together, the industrial park, that business moving in, who are they going to call? It is going to be the EDA.

Mr. Chairman, we all call upon the EDA because we have found it to be extremely effective and responsive. I urge rejection of the Hefley amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 97, noes 319, not voting 21, as follows:

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. TRAFICANT

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TRAFICANT: At the end of section 129 add the following:

The Secretary of Commerce shall provide to each recipient of such funds notice of the requirements specified in this section and information on methods to comply with such requirements.

At the end of section 213 add the following:

The Appalachian Regional Commission shall provide to each recipient of such funds notice of the requirements specified in this section and information on methods to comply with such requirements.

Mr. TRAFICANT (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. DE LA GARZA). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, the amendment deals specifically with anyone getting funds under this bill.

While Members keep losing jobs in their district, this amendment says anyone receiving funds under the bill would in fact receive a notice that there are some buy American provisions and that individuals follow those buy American provisions.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE].

Mr. WISE. I thank the gentleman for yielding. I have reviewed the gentleman's amendment to revise the buy American section of the compromise substitute. It is my understanding this amendment would require the Secretary of Commerce to notify recipients of Economic Development Administration grants of the buy American provisions of the act.

Mr. Chairman, I support the gentleman's longstanding defense of American workers and would say his amendment is certainly acceptable to our side.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the distinguished ranking member, the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI].

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Chairman, as always I am delighted to accept the very constructive changes brought forth by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT]. We do not intend to object to this amendment at all.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI] for her help.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KANJORSKI], chairman of the Subcommittee on Economic Growth and Credit Formation of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs.

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Chairman, I support the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT], and I compliment him on behalf of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs for carrying on this effort every year which paves the way to protect American jobs as we dispense Federal funds to create American jobs; so, I join in support of his amendment.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. DE LA GARZA). The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Chair will restate that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT] was agreed to. Does the gentleman now move to strike the last word?

Mr. TRAFICANT. Yes, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I would like to engage in a brief colloquy.

As you know, Mr. Chairman, I have been working for some time to establish a program whereby nonprofit corporations could be provided with funds directly from the EDA so that they can provide economic assistance to small businesses.

As my colleagues know, I represent an area that has been devastated by the loss of manufacturing jobs. Economic development in areas such as mine will depend largely on small business. That is why I believe it is vital that nonprofit economic development corporations be given all the assistance possible.

It is my understanding, Mr. Chairman, that the legislation before us today includes a provision that will allow the EDA to provide Federal assistance directly to nonprofit economic development corporations that I had, in fact, recommended.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRAFICANT. I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, I thank my friend and colleague, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT] not only for his inquiry but for all of his efforts to reauthorize EDA and the Appalachian Regional Commission. He has certainly been a leader of our committee's efforts to improve these economic development programs.

At the gentleman from Ohio's suggestion, the substitute amendment allows public and private nonprofit organizations to be eligible recipients of EDA grants. By expanding the number of eligible organizations, Congress will increase competition for EDA funding and will result in better services being provided to distressed communities. Again I thank the gentleman for his foresight on this issue.

Mr. TRAFICANT. I want to thank my esteemed colleague from West Virginia for working with me to ensure that this important provision was included in the final version of the bill.

I want to also thank the gentleman for placing in the bill a provision that directs the EDA to study all of EDA's financing tools—including unfunded programs that were originally authorized under title II of the Economic Development Act.

One of the title II programs that I strongly support would allow the EDA to buy down the interest rates on economic development loans to small businesses. This is an initiative that I brought to the Congress for 7 years. I strongly support this program, and I would hope that in studying their financing tools the EDA would find a way to implement this worthwhile title II program.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT] would continue to yield, as the gentleman stated, section 117 of the substitute amendment requires the Secretary of Commerce to conduct a study of innovative economic financing tools. Under this provision, EDA will review its title II authorities and other financing tools to determine what role these tools could play to complement EDA's grant authorities. We expect EDA to review all financing tools including the buy down of interest rates which the gentleman strongly supports. Within 1 year, the Secretary shall report to Congress on the results of the study and make recommendations on whether financing programs should be authorized.

Mr. TRAFICANT. As the gentleman knows, Mr. Chairman, for several years I have been promoting actively the interest rate subsidy program and would hope that next year this program will receive authorization and funding.

I believe the Congress cannot just give money to cities to spend it the way they want, but we could buy down interest rates when the banks make a loan.

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRAFICANT. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Chairman, I want to congratulate the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT], and I call to his attention that in the three instances that he mentioned in the EDA bill it was the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs' amendment inserted into the bill that changed the conditions that go along with his proposals. We agree with him on the nonprofit corporations. It will assist many agencies across America that are nonprofit in nature to be participants with EDA funding, and we also originally included in the actual funding for equity and for loans, but it has been converted by an agreement between the two committees to a study on that process, and we look forward over the next year, in working through that study process, so that we actually authorize direct loans and equity financing for economic development purposes.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I would ask that my bill would perhaps be reviewed for a hearing next year, and let me say this, Congress:

We do not have enough money to give every troubled city, but we could buy down interest rates. The banks do it the old-fashioned way. The banks put up their money to help some economic development, and I am going to ask that that be brought for a hearing next year and that bill be given some consideration.

Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE], the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI] for all the help they have given me on this.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. HEFLEY

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HEFLEY: Insert after section 129 the following new section:

SEC. 130. OVERALL CAP ON AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR EDA.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this title or any other provision of law, not more than $412,000,000 is authorized to be appropriated for each of fiscal years 1995 and 1996 to carry out the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965.

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Chairman, the funding included in H.R. 2442 for the Economic Development Administration is $10 million above the President's request for fiscal year 1995.

The amendment I have at the desk would cut the additional $10 million from the EDA and restore the President's funding level.

It is no secret that I am not a fan of the EDA. I think the program is ripe for abuse.

I am also not a fan of our convoluted appropriation process. We budget, we authorize and we appropriate. Then we conference and reconcile. At each step, the spending seems to grow.

The authorization for the EDA is a good example. The President sent his budget request to Congress, and he asked for a significant increase for the EDA.

Then the Banking and Public Works Committees got together to craft a bill, and they added a little more.

The summer, the appropriations will get their shot.

Finally, we will probably pass an emergency appropriation bill this fall that will include still more spending.

In the end, its little wonder we have had continuous deficits for the past 25 years.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment is an attempt to stem that tide by rolling back the spending level for the EDA to the level budgeted by the President.

As it is, the President's budget projects a $165 billion deficit. There is no reason to increase that deficit, even if its just $10 million.

The amendment I have at the desk will cut a total of $10 million from the EDA's funding for next year.

This cut includes $3 million from the salaries and expenses account, $3 million from the grants for public works and development facilities, $2 million from the technical assistance and economic development planning, and $2 million from the special economic development and adjustment assistance authorization.

In case someone is worried that these cuts are too draconian, I would point out that if my amendment is adopted, total spending by the EDA will increase by $163 million over the amount provided in last year's Commerce, Justice, State appropriation bill.

Authorization for the salaries and expenses portion alone will increase by almost $10 million.

Mr. Chairman, my amendment cuts $10 million from a program whose funding has practically doubled in the last 2 years, it restores the President's budget level for the EDA, and I hope the Members will support it.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY] to cut EDA funding, and it has a bit of a siren song to it. It says, "Well, what you're doing is cutting. You're cutting down to the administration's request."

I think we need to put this in perspective. First of all, the maximum amount, I believe, that the gentleman is talking about is $7 million. But the bipartisan substitute that is before us specifically authorizes an estimated amount of $306 million for the Economic Development Administration for each of the fiscal years 1995 and 1996. The substitute also authorizes additional sums, as may be necessary, for natural disasters or defense conversion.

Now the problem has come up, or at least in the gentleman's mind, because CBO, the Congressional Budget Office, has estimated that an additional $80 million may be appropriate, may be necessary, for these economic development activities. Remember these are natural disasters and defense closings, and the CBO has scored that as possibly requiring up to $80 million. Therefore the compromise substitute specifically authorizes $306 million, and the CBO is estimating that the substitute authorizes an estimated total of 386 million EDA's programs.

I think we ought to look at a couple of points. First of all, the authorized amount here is a bipartisan product. It came out of the Committee on Public Works and Transportation by a largely bipartisan vote, and, second, it is of course the Committee on Appropriations that has the ultimate check on this, and so it will decide how much is appropriated up to the authorized limit.

Second, the bipartisan compromise is fiscally responsible. The specific authorization, and this is an important point, is already $16 million below this year's appropriation, and it is $73 million below the President's fiscal 1995 budget request.

Mr. Chairman, I want to repeat that.

So let me repeat. The specific authorization level for the EDA, as provided in the compromise, is $16 million below the current year's appropriations and $73 million below the President's fiscal year 1995 budget request.

Now, if we assume that EDA receives the entire $80 million estimated for natural disasters and defense conversion activities, the compromise substitute approximately equals the President's fiscal year 1995 budget request. There is about a $7 million difference at most. Moreover, our substitute does not increase EDA's authorization for fiscal year 1996; it keeps it on a flat line.

I also might point out an interesting note of history. To equal the EDA's budgets in 1992 dollars of 1966 and 1967, we would have to combine all the EDA budgets for the last 10 years.

The real issue here is the language, "Such sums as may be necessary" in title IX. Title IX is how EDA responds to natural disasters, economic dislocations, and military defense closures. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration has not been able to predict for us a year ahead how many hurricanes, how many earthquakes, how many fires, how many floods, and how many tsunamis they are going to have in a given year so we could authorize that appropriate amount. We just do not know, and as many will recall, a couple of years ago we had a real rash of natural disasters.

By the same token, while we know how many military base closings there are going to be, it is hard to trace the economic effect of all those. To give an example, when a base closing is projected in one State, we know that in another State far away it affects the business of a subcontractor supplying material to that base. By the same token, how many of you have businesses in your districts that are subcontractors to major defense contractors?

So it takes a while for the ripple effect of an economic dislocation in one area to roll through to other areas. That is the reason for the "such sums as may be necessary" language. Once again, though, the Committee on Appropriations still has the final decision on this.

So as this House defeated by a large vote the previous amendment to eliminate the EDA, I urge that this amendment be rejected so that the EDA can continue to respond in the limited way it is now able to respond to those base closings, to those natural disasters, and to those other economic dislocations that take place.

Mr. Chairman, I urge rejection of the gentleman's amendment.

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment, and I rise simply to echo the points that have been raised by the chairman of this subcommittee. In fact, his point is well taken that we oftentimes stand at points of criticism for failing to adequately project and plan for the needs of our Nation.

What we attempted to do in crafting this bill and reaching a bottom line of financial assistance was to understand that we will never adequately understand the needs that will impact a community, as established in, say, May, by the end of December. And unfortunately, last year was a cruel reminder of how little control we have over this Earth and, therefore, how little control we have over the needs that may be brought forth by communities undergoing such tragedies as the floods in the Midwest, the earthquakes, the fire disasters, and, yes, in fact, the base closures. Certainly, I stand here as one who wishes I could predict how the Base Closures Commission set to begin in the very near future will impact communities and those that are now dealing with only understanding the disastrous effects on their economies of prior base closures.

So this is not something that was done in order to create more pork or to deal capriciously with the bottom line that we recognized, unfortunately, that we cannot often control in these United States, and we want to be able to respond to as many communities as possible.

With that, Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY].

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Chairman, just to deal with the figures the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE] talked about, we can talk about the fact that this number comes from here and that number comes from there, but the bottom line is that when we figure it up, the President came in with a request for $412 million. The Committee on Public Works and Transportation got hold of it and raised the figure to $441 million. Then the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs dealt with it, and they reached the figure of $402 million. The compromise was $422 million, and, yes, in that $422 million there is the CBO's scoring for $80 million as kind of a contingency sum, such funds as may be necessary. But we know in this body that when we have floods on the Mississippi River or we have earthquakes in Los Angeles, we have special appropriations to add to this.

So in estimating that this $80 million will be enough, we do not know whether it will be enough. Every year it seems like we have a disaster somewhere of some kind. There will probably be even more.

So, Mr. Chairman, we are talking here of $10 million in addition to what the President has requested, and I am simply asking that we bring it back to the President's request.

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I understand the desire of the proponent of the amendment to constrain the expenses in the budget, and I sympathize with that. But here we are in a multiyear authorization and we are talking about how many base closures there will be by the next and the following year. Nobody really knows. How many natural disasters will there be over the next 3 years? Nobody really knows.

I would suggest that the authority that has been granted to use such other sums is absolutely essential so that if a natural disaster occurs or an emergency occurs, there does not have to be a hesitancy. When the gentleman talks about additional appropriations, those are appropriations; those are not authorizations. We are asking for the authority here for authorization for appropriated money when it is made to be exercised or spent in a certain fashion. So we no longer have the Committee on Appropriations of the House controlling areas like the Economic Development Administration but, in fact, we have had the good foresight to authorize what we want to do and direct that being done.

I would call my colleagues' attention to an example, however, to show just how distinctly different this year's authorization is from past authorizations. If we look at 1980, some 15 years ago, the EDA was actually funded at a level of $513 million. Today that amount of funding, in accordance with the value of the dollar, would be $1,049,000,000, and in reality we are only authorizing $386 million. So we are some 65 percent lower than what the actual funding would be if we had stayed at 1980 spending levels. I do not think we can be any more frugal or responsible economically than that, and I would suggest, rather than deluding ourselves, that the important principle on the gentleman's amendment as to why it should not be adopted is what we are trying to do to get responsibility in this House, which is, in fact, to authorize and have those authorities followed by the executive branch so we can get control over the expenditures of the Government.

So, Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to vote down the gentleman's amendment in its present form.

Mr. APPLEGATE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this amendment. I think it is a bad amendment. EDA, as ARC and others, has been good for America. The U.S. taxpayers pay out $14 billion of their hard-earned money to other countries of the world. Three billion dollars goes to Israel, over $2 billion to Egypt, almost $1.5 billion to Russia, $600 million to Eastern Europe, $526 million to Turkey, $284 million to Greece, and on down and on down. American taxpayer dollars are going out to these other countries of the world to do the very same thing that we are asking American taxpayers to pay into EDA to help us.

We send billions and billions of dollars to all of these other countries to defend them militarily. We are losing our young people's lives. And yet we do not want to spend $300 million in economic development in the United States. Back in the United States, this program has helped many, many communities who have been hit economically.

We do it to increase jobs. We do it to retain jobs. I have used EDA in my area. I saved an aluminum company recently that hires over 2,000 people. If it was not for the fact that we needed this money to bring in some infrastructure, we may not have been able to do it.

We are losing them because of the base closures. We are looking at hundreds of jobs in my district that are going out, and they are going out all over the country.

Who is there to pick up the pieces when the Government closes your base? We are losing them because of bad trade policy. And let me talk a little bit about that.

You know, these countries of the world that we are trying to help, they are closing their borders. They are not allowing our American productivity to go into their countries. They subsidize them. We give them most favored nation status when they want to send their stuff into the United States so our American consumers can buy it. That means that they cut down on the amount of the tariff. Let me tell you, they do not cut any tariff off of American products. We got to sell ours at the highest figure.

So our jobs are going overseas. Who is going to be there to help pick up those pieces?

I am telling you, things are not all good. We are losing our jobs, our economy is hurting, and yet American taxpayer dollars are going overseas. American taxpayer dollars are under siege, not to help Americans who put that in.

These so-called free traders are hurting this country. And I say to them, your trade policies are killing America. They are hurting American jobs, American businesses, the ability to pay taxes, to feed families, to clothe their children, to educate the kids. These are the kind of programs that we want to see retained. Do not turn your back on the American taxpayer now. Give them the support that they need, and reject this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 171, noes 244, not voting 22, as follows:

The Clerk announced the following pair:

On this vote:

Mr. Roth for, with Mr. Hoagland against.

Mr. SPRATT changed his vote from "aye" to "no."

So the amendment was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. MFUME. Mr. Chairman, I was, unfortunately, unavoidably detained in my congressional district earlier today and therefore unable to vote during rollcall votes Nos. 164 and 165. Had I been here, I would have voted "nay" in both instances.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. BOEHNER

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BOEHNER: Strike section 212 and redesignate section 213 as section 212.

Conform the table of contents accordingly.

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Chairman. My amendment removes section 212 which creates a task force to study the characteristics of the ARC and determine how best to duplicate these characteristics to address the needs in the Mississippi Delta, the Ozarks, and along the Mexican border.

Congress has already created several programs to do the type of functions that these regional commissions would be charged with. Right now, these areas are eligible for rural development and other types of assistance programs through the USDA, Small Business Administration, and HUD.

In addition, the States have similar programs to address the needs of people who are in these regions. I believe Congress should act carefully and examine what we have and work to improve those programs before we start another regional development agency.

The ARC is inefficient and has not achieved its goals after more than 25 years. Its main objective, the highway system, is little more than two-thirds completed and the ARC, as a whole, has cost more than $6 billion. Yet the region still faces the same problems it had when LBJ created ARC.

Today, my office was offered assurances that the ARC will not be expanding its scope and that the language in the bill has been clarified to reflect this. If that is the case then let us go ahead and remove the section of the bill since it is pointless.

I urge my colleagues to support my amendment to remove the task force from this reauthorization.

Mr. Chairman, the point I want to make is that it appears that this language is in this bill so we can create a study that can be ballyhooed and be the basis for a dog and pony show to run around the country so that we end up expanding this down the road.

Mr. Chairman, I think it is a good time to say, no, we do not want to expand this, we do not need a task force, and let us save the taxpayers a few dollars in the process.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise obviously in opposition to this amendment by the gentleman from Ohio. A little bit of history and not too distant history. Yesterday in a move to eliminate the Appalachian Regional Commission altogether, the complaint was that the Appalachian Regional Commission has been successful; therefore, declare victory and abolish it.

Mr. Chairman, my feeling, then, is if the Appalachian Regional Commission has been successful, and I think it has been successful although the job is yet to be finished, and if it has application that could assist other areas, such as the Ozark region, such as the Mississippi Delta region, such as the Southwestern United States where there are bands of poverty that exist, compact regions of poverty, then why would not we want to borrow from something that has already been invested in and already proven successful?

Mr. Chairman, this is a study to be performed by a task force to be completed within a year that simply analyzes where it has been successful and where there might be other applications. It is not a move to expand the Appalachian Regional Commission.

Mr. Chairman, I would seek to at the appropriate time introduce into the RECORD a May 9, 1994, letter from Jesse L. White, Jr., the Federal cochair of the Appalachian Regional Commission, in which he states that "The primary mission of the task force is to evaluate the extent to which the unique characteristics of the Appalachian Regional Commission" and I will skip some words, "have improved the economic health of our region's communities.

"In addition, it will attempt to determine to what extent the ARC model could be applied to rural economic distress elsewhere. This study is not motivated by an attempt to expand ARC's boundaries or population. However, if the ARC model is determined to have played an important role in the region's progress, as I believe it has," quoting Chairman White "other areas of the country with persistent rural distress could learn from our lessons as they pursue their own solutions to the problems they face.

"I hope this clarification will address any questions which may be raised concerning our goals and objectives."

Mr. Chairman, once again the Appalachian Regional Commission is a unique creature. It has a Federal cochair appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate; it has a State cochair appointed and placed into position by the 13 Governors. There is a board that are the 13 Governors of the Appalachian Regional Commission. It is a true Federal-State partnership.

Mr. Chairman, the statistics I read yesterday from a recent report show that the Appalachian Regional Commission is working, that per capita income increased at a faster rate than similar counties, that job creation increased at a faster rate, the ARC region is still behind but it is gaining faster than similarly placed counties that are not within the ARC region. For that reason I would think that in other hard-hit areas, I would have to believe that there would be a desire to look at what is working and to see the extent to which that might be applied separately, through other regional commissions perhaps, which might be applied there. It may be that the regional concept used by the ARC does not work as well in other areas but perhaps there are some things that can be borrowed from the ARC. That is what this is all about.

Mr. Chairman, to argue yesterday that the ARC has been successful and, therefore, ought to be retired, then I do not believe we can come to the floor and vote today to say we do not want to even look at what has been successful and to see if other regions which have not been so blessed can benefit from it.

Mr. Chairman, for those reasons, I would urge rejection.

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WISE. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman has those statistics at hand and believes it has been so successful, will the gentleman explain to us why we need to do an independent study that according to the bill would cost up to $500,000 of taxpayer money to apply these principles elsewhere? I do not understand.

Second, the Mississippi Delta Commission that has looked at the Appalachian Regional Commission decided some time ago that it was in their best interest to remain a private organization and not to be involved in a Federal-State partnership. They do not want that bureaucracy laid on top of them. Mr. Chairman, with those two considerations of mine, I am trying to understand why this language is in the bill.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, I am glad to hear my statistics yesterday were compelling, because I do believe they tell the story. However, the statistics do not show automatically how we got there. They say that something is working, that there is a process that is working where the ARC has been in place. What is it that can be extrapolated from that?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE] has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. WISE was allowed to proceed for 3 additional minutes.)

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, what is it that can be extrapolated from that to be applied to other regions?

It may be as the gentleman says that the Mississippi Delta chooses not to. I think one reason that the Mississippi Delta Commission, and I am not an expert on that but maybe the gentleman from Ohio is not either, since neither one of us are from that region, but one reason they may have gone that way is because at that time there was not going to be obviously a very active Federal role given the reluctance of the administration to get into any other expansion of any program. This was under President Reagan, as I recall.

By the same token, I would like to show the gentleman from Ohio, and I realize my map is kind of small, but if the gentleman can look at the blocks of red on this map, it shows concentrated pockets of poverty by county in our country, and this is the ARC region here, but it does show that there are other regional groupings and that indeed poverty largely seems to be grouped on a regional basis.

Mr. Chairman, I think that half a million dollars to look at what has been done in the Appalachian Regional Commission, which seems by the statistics to be showing good results, is not too much to spend to bring to these other areas some application that may benefit them.

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WISE. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Chairman, my only point is that we have the General Accounting Office, we have the statistics, we have the committee members, and if we want to expand it, let us go ahead and propose to expand it. Let us not waste $500,000 developing what I think is going to be a road show trying to convince all of us that this is the right way to do it. Let us stop all of that. We create task forces and study commissions in every piece of legislation that we pass.

Mr. Chairman, at some point we ought to look up and say that we can develop this on our own and we should not just use it to develop cover to make these votes easier down the road.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman raises a good point.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE] has again expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. WISE was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman makes a good point on not wanting to put together a road show and, in fact, on a bipartisan basis, I believe there were some Members from the other side that reined in to some extent what the purview of this study might be, and that is why there is a finite amount of half a million dollars. That is why there is a final time for reporting. That is why there is a definite commission that is created.

Mr. Chairman, the purpose is not to create a road show, and I share the gentleman's concern about that. The purpose is to take a hard look at what the ARC has done, how it has been successful and to see whether there are other applications.

Mr. Chairman, in terms of expanding the ARC boundaries, that is not the purpose here. If that were the purpose and, indeed, in order for the ARC to be expanded, we have to come back to Congress, anyhow.

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, I understand the purpose, and the purpose appears to be to set the stage to create a similar type of commission in the three other areas of the country that the gentleman outlined. That is where my concerns are. If, in fact, that is what the gentleman wants to do, why not bring that proposal to the Congress and let us vote on it.

Mr. WISE. Because that is the purpose of a task force, to look at what has been successful. It may be in other regions that there is nothing that is applicable. I happen to think that there is in rural poverty.

Mr. Chairman, we have spent $6 billion since 1965 on the Appalachian Regional Commission. I would think we would want to see whether or not there are some other areas so we do not constantly reinvent the wheel.

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BOEHNER], particularly in the name of my chairman of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ], who wished to be here to oppose this particular amendment but unfortunately is tied up at a hearing with the Secretary of HUD.

Mr. Chairman, the reasons why this task force should be formed are probably the reasons why we should do more introspection in this institution as to how we spend money. This really is a performance evaluation. It is a study of whether or not the Appalachian Regional Commission is performing the objectives and goals it was originally set up for, whether the principles are applicable in other areas of the country, how successful or how effective or how efficient it has been as a tool of the Government in working in specifically defined economic areas of the country.

Mr. Chairman, I would think, as the chairman of the Subcommittee on Economic Development has so eloquently said, if we are spending $6 billion over 25 years, it seems to me rather rational to spend 1/12,000th of that to make an evaluation as whether or not it has been as effective as it could be or how it could be changed or modified.

And remember that when the recommendations come in, they will either come in to expand, to contract, to replicate, and no action will be taken on the study except with the input of the Members of this House and the full Congress to determine what should be done.

If I had any recommendation, I support the study and oppose this amendment, because I think it is really what reinventing government is all about. Let us start seeing where we have made mistakes or what we have done well, and when we find either, make the appropriate corrections.

Why do we want to stick our heads in the ground and fail to study something that is quite evident as a tool that can be used in the future or beaten into a tool that no longer should be used in the future? And the only way that one could come to that conclusion is the type of study like this. I oppose the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio and ask my colleagues to support the study as indicated in the bill.

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KANJORSKI. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Chairman, we have got GAO reports for 20 years that have looked at the effectiveness and how the money has been spent for the Appalachian Regional Commission, and those studies speak for themselves.

It is very clear in the committee report, in the original bill, that somewhat is changed in the bill before us, what the purpose of the study is. The purpose of the study is to find out those unique characteristics that allow this to be successful and to apply them in other areas of the country.

I do not think that we need a study to determine what part of the Appalachian Regional Commission works and those parts that do not work.

Mr. KANJORSKI. Reclaiming my time to answer that question, let me call the gentleman's attention to the fact that more than half the Members of this House were not here prior to 1990, so going back from the beginning of the Appalachian Regional Commission, the 25 years of their history, they are not aware of. If anything I have observed while a Member of this House during the last 9 years is that although we try very hard, we have a limited amount of time to understand all the facets of this Government, and I would venture to say there are probably less than 20 Members of this body that really understand to any depth what the Appalachian Regional Commission has done.

If I further had to make an observation, I think it would behoove us all to be better students on all of these fine points of government, and the way to accomplish it is to have members of this task force, Members of this Congress, so they go out and physically see what happened.

I would invite the gentleman from Ohio to join me as I travel around the country and hold hearings all over the United States to find out the best practices of success in economic development. I think we can save money. I think we can be efficient. And I think we can act in the manner the American people wish us to act in representing their interests to create jobs.

But instead, if we do not study and we do not evaluate, we end up replicating the failures and fallacies of the past, and we never update ourselves.

So I think this really is a policy that should emanate from the conservative side of this House, the gentleman's own party. Let us get a good evaluation and keep what is good, do away with what is bad, be more efficient and more effective in the expenditure of the American taxpayers' money to develop economic policy in this country.

Ms. LAMBERT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition, strong opposition, to this amendment.

As we look around the room, I suppose I am one of the few that has spoken coming from an area that will be greatly affected. I represent the Mississippi Delta, the eastern half of Arkansas.

I think it is wise for us to look at getting the biggest bang for our Federal buck and allowing us these studies; we are capable of looking at what has been learned in the Appalachian Region Commission and how it is applicable to the Mississippi Delta and the other impoverished areas of this Nation.

I think it is critical for us to use that knowledge to see how it is applicable. In order to set that foundation, we must have the appropriate study.

I rise in strong opposition to the amendment and urge my colleagues to vote against it.

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 2442, the Economic Development Authorization Act of 1994, but in strong opposition to the amendment from my colleague regarding the Appalachian Regional Commission [ARC]. This bill calls for a task force to study whether the Appalachian Regional Commission could utilize its unique characteristics to also address the economic needs of other distressed rural areas such as the Lower Mississippi Delta, the United States-Mexico border area, and the Ozarks. By approving the gentleman's amendment, we would cause great harm to these areas by denying them the benefit of the ARC's experience in dealing with economic development matters.

It has been stated by some that the ARC has done a lackluster job in improving the well-being and livelihood of residents in the Appalachian region. Well, that is not the case. In a study entitled "The Economic Effects of the Appalachian Regional Commission: An Empirical Assessment of 27 Years of Regional Development Policy," researchers concluded that when comparing Appalachian counties within the ARC to non-Appalachian twin counties, the ARC counties grew significantly faster in income, earnings, population, and per capita income. Even further, the researchers concluded that the ARC programs helped these counties perform better.

The area of the county that I represent—the United States-Mexico border region—is one of the most severely distressed anywhere. Double-digit unemployment rates, high poverty rates, and low per capital incomes are among the mainstays of the border economies. I feel that application of the ARC principles would be extremely beneficial in dealing with the problems of the United States-Mexico border region.

Finally, this bill only authorizes a task force to study the applicability of the ARC principles to other distressed areas. This bill does not call for the expansion of the ARC as some may claim. It only calls for a task force to study the ways the ARC's characteristics could be applied in other distressed areas. Other distressed areas could benefit from the ARC's unique characteristics, for example, the Federal-State partnership. This is all this bill would seek to do. No expansion of the ARC is called for. I feel that the ARC's approach to dealing with problems on a regional basis could be beneficial for the United States-Mexico border area.

So I ask my colleagues to reject this amendment for the reasons I mentioned. It is a wrong approach to take and I urge my colleagues to oppose it.

Mr. THOMAS of Wyoming. Mr. Chairman, I had planned to offer a similar amendment to that of Mr. BOEHNER today, but in the interest of time I'm pleased to join with him in offering this amendment jointly.

The Appalachian Regional Commission is known by its initials—ARC. ARC is short for archaic in this instance.

This program, created by Lyndon Johnson in 1965, is another relic of the Great Society.

Despite the fact this program was created to empower this region to support itself, through the workings of a strengthened free-enterprise economy, it has turned into a kind of entitlement hand-out.

Over the years $6.4 billion has been spent on this program.

And it has shown a propensity for growth—what started out as a program covering 360 counties in 11 States has grown to 399 counties in 13 States. I guess we cannot get this porker away from the trough.

Now I do not argue that these areas don't need help—but Mr. Chairman the Federal Government already spends millions in this region through nationwide programs like the highway trust fund, community development block grants, and other grants. The ARC is an expensive, unnecessary duplication.

Several groups have included elimination of the ARC as part of their deficit reduction efforts, including the Concord coalition and Citizens Against Government Waste. In addition, several articles have been written about the ARC, and at this time I wish to state that I will by unanimous consent place an article that appeared in the August 1993, edition of the Reader's Digest in the RECORD immediately following my statement.

Mr. Chairman, I recognize the ARC will not be eliminated this year. We had that vote last night, and I congratulate the supporters of the program for a successful defense of the ARC. However, we can take the important step today of ensuring that the ARC isn't expanded to include areas nowhere near the Appalachian region.

H.R. 2442 includes the creation of a task force which will, among other things, study whether or not the ARC format can work in areas like the Ozarks or the Mexican-border region.

This is not the mission of the ARC, and I see no reason for sending some Appalachian gravy down south, unless it is a thinly veiled attempt at building political support for an outdated program.

My friends who are managing the bill say it is not their intention to expand the ARC, and I appreciate the small change that was made before bringing the bill to the floor. However, if the sponsors do not wish to expand the ARC, then I wish they would explain to the House why the study is needed. If they are truly committed to limiting the expansion of the ARC, then they will accept our amendment.

I encourage my colleagues to vote for the Boehner-Thomas amendment. It is not a drastic reduction of funding; it is not a change or reduction in mission. This amendment simply states, let us keep the Appalachian Regional Commission in Appalachia, and it deserves support.

YOU CAN'T KILL A GOOD GIVEAWAY—FOR YEARS TAXPAYERS HAVE BEEN TAKEN FOR A RIDE IN APPALACHIA—ON WHAT MIGHT BE THE "LONGEST GRAVY TRAIN IN HISTORY"

(By Dale Van Atta)

On a spring day 29 years ago, President Lyndon B. Johnson launched the Great Society from the ramshackle porch of Tom Fletcher's three-room tar-paper shack near the mountain-hollow town of Inez, Ky.

Johnson plopped himself down on a pile of two-by-fours and spoke to the unemployed coal miner while scores of reporters and cameramen looked on. Fletcher was a 38-year-old father of eight with a second-grade education. His two oldest children had dropped out of school, he told the President, and he feared the others would as well.

"I want you to keep those kids in school," Johnson said to Fletcher. The President later wrote: "I knew he had to have help, and I resolved to see that he got it."

On March 9, 1965, Johnson signed the law creating the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC). It was to enable the region to "support itself, through the workings of a strengthened free-enterprise economy."

Johnson's measure found enthusiastic support in Congress, but some members voiced dissent, including Rep. H.R. Gross (R., Iowa). Gross predicted it was the beginning of the "longest gravy train in history."

Today, Gross's words appear prophetic. The ARC has spent $6.2 billion to help build highways, sewer lines, industrial parks and tourist attractions, but these improvements have not created significant, long-term employment, especially in central Appalachia. Instead, most of the money has been ladled out to the home states of politically powerful Congressmen and other officials. Consider:

In West Virginia, home of long-time ARC supporter Sen. Robert Byrd (D., W.Va.), the ARC provided $26.3 million to help build the spectacular New River Gorge Bridge near Fayetteville. It is a wonder to behold—the world's longest arch steel-span bridge and, at 876 feet above the river, America's second highest. Skydivers love it, and General Motors filmed a commercial featuring a truck being dropped from the bridge on a bungee cord. But it has not created any jobs for impoverished citizens of the coal counties farther southwest.

In the home state of Rep. Tom Bevill (D., Ala.), chairman of the subcommittee overseeing the ARC, the agency forked over $17,498 to the Alabama Music Hall of Fame in Tuscumbia. Taxpayer money contributed to a 10-by-20-foot portable exhibit featuring a 12-foot-tall jukebox and makeshift recording studio to promote the museum, which honors native stars from Hank Williams to the Grateful Dead. The Congressman proudly took a turn singing in the studio when it toured Washington, D.C.

Parts of Mississippi's Marshall County are booming as workers from Memphis, Tenn., make these areas home. Cayce, one of the fastest-growing sections, is getting a new water system and more than 70 fireplugs with $250,000 of ARC money. Marshall County is not by any stretch of the imagination part of Appalachia. But it is in the Congressional district of Rep. Jamie Whitten (D., Miss.), who was until last year House Appropriations Committee chairman.

"The ARC has become purely a pork-barrel giveaway," notes economist Stephen Moore of the Cato Institute, a Washington think tank. "It is a classic example of why federal government programs fail to foster economic growth."

Logrolling. Stubborn poverty in the coal counties of four states—eastern Kentucky and Tennessee, southern West Virginia and southwestern Virginia—was the reason for the ARC's creation. But from the start, Congressional boosters invited other states to join them at the trough. "We needed every supporter we could get," admits an ARC architect, Paul Crabtree.

Congressionally defined Appalachia originally consisted of 360 counties in 11 states from Alabama to Pennsylvania. But political logrolling continues to swell the region, and today 399 counties in 13 states, with a population of 20.7 million, are eligible for aid. Not a single county, however, has ever been disconnected from the ARC spigot—not even Gwinnett and Forsyth, suburbs of Atlanta whose per-capita earned incomes in 1990 were $18,865 and $19,010, respectively—well above the $6652 poverty level.

Headquartered in Washington, the ARC is a federal-state partnership with a staff of 54 run by three chiefs: the states' co-chairman, the federal co-chairman and the executive director. The states' co-chairman represents the 13 state governors and has a 50-percent vote on which projects are given federal funds. The other half goes to the federal co-chairman. Technically, this is the most powerful person in the 14-member ruling body, having veto power over any project. In practice, however, chairmen have rarely vetoed a project demanded by the governors.

Back in 1979, the General Accounting Office (GAO) criticized the ARC for continuing to make investments and approve "projects in metropolitan and urban areas that had already achieved a self-sustaining growth rate." But nothing has changed. Consider Knoxville, Tenn., in the home state of powerful Republican Howard Baker, the Senate Majority Leader from 1981 to 1985. Knox County has a per-capita income average of $14,810 and a minuscule 4.3-percent unemployment rate. Yet it benefits from $9 million in ARC largess for health, water and sewer projects. The ARC also gave $99,127 to the Knoxville College library and $374,000 to the University of Tennessee library.

Another ARC favorite is Huntsville, Ala., whose aerospace economy fuels a countywide per-capita income average of $16,418 and an unemployment rate of five percent. This is no poverty pocket. Nevertheless, the ARC recently forked over $370,000 for a Huntsville research park, $500,000 for the U.S. Space and Rocket Center tourist attraction and more than $1 million for improvements near the Huntsville airport.

Kings of the Road: Since the ARC was started, two-thirds of its funding has gone for roads. The original plan directed the ARC to build 2,350 miles at a cost of $840 million. But Congress added states to the original definition of Appalachia and authorized another 675 miles of highways. Seventy-three percent of all ARC roads authorized to date have been built. The ARC now estimates that the 26-highway system will cost nearly $9 billion and "cannot be completed until after the year 2060."

And who gets these highways? "The county-seat towns," observes historian Ron Eller of the University of Kentucky's Appalachia Center. "That's where the political power is strongest. Communities in central Appalachia—the more rural, the more impoverished—do not have the political clout."

Ironically, seven of the ten counties that have received the least ARC support are in the heart of central Appalachia. Owsley County, Kentucky, for example, with a per-capita income of $4513, is the nation's 12th poorest county. Yet it has received only $473,500 of ARC money since 1965, an average of $16,910 a year, and has not gotten a dime in ARC highway aid.

Meanwhile, the conference committee chaired by Rep. Tom Bevill, which sets the ARC's budget, has earmarked $80.2 million in ARC road funds for his state in the past three years.

Dead-End Voc Ed: The ARC has disbursed $389 million to build and equip 700 vocational facilities at 510 schools. Unfortunately, little of it fosters economic development in Appalachia.

In the 1970's ARC consultant Richard Powers warned that its voc-ed programs lacked local "job relevance." For example, the Hazard (Ky.) vocational school has received $191,082 to build a mock mine structure, where future coal miners can crawl around in a cramped, dirty underground environment. A similar structure, price tag $498,000, was built in Sumiton, Ala., at the Bevill State Community College.

The trouble with such voc-ed training is that mechanization and global competition have drastically reduced jobs in the coal industry. ARC's own statistics show that while production has increased from 1981 to 1991, the number of miners has plummeted from 172,000 to 89,000.

The GAO has criticized the ARC-sponsored programs, which train workers for jobs that do not exist in Appalachia, thus forcing them to leave the region to find permanent employment.

In the end, the voc-ed program is just another wildly expensive pork barrel. Thus, the Arch A. Moore vocational center in Leroy, W. VA., got $232,000 for equipment at the behest of its namesake, then the state's governor. The George C. Wallace State Community College in Cullman County, Alabama, snagged $960,000. Alabama's Gadsden State Community College came in for $50,700; it then named its manufacturing-technology center "The Bevill Center" for Rep. Tom Bevill. The school receiving the biggest chunk of ARC dollars, more than $4 million, is Itawamba Community College near Tupelo, in Rep. Jamie Whitten's Mississippi district.

Sure Flops. A 1966 study by Robert Nathan Associates warned the commission to stay away from tourism investments, explaining that the recreation industry is typically one of "low pay and a seasonal nature." But top ARC officials and state governors love these projects. So, for example, the ARC spent $877,000 to help develop a nine-hole public golf course near Charleston, W.Va.

Other ARC grants to encourage tourism have included:

$2.9 million for an access road serving the Montage ski resort in Lackawanna County, Pennsylvania. The county was forced to take over the resort when it faced a $9-million debt in 1991.

$28,823 for a "Limestone Cave Display" that became part of the Georgia Minerals Museum in Cartersville and $37,078 for preliminary design concepts for a "Kentucky Coal Mining Museum & Exhibition Mine," which was never developed.

$50,000 for the "Jamie L. Whitten Historical Center," which opened last August outside Tupelo, honoring one of the ARC's chief Congressional benefactors. Not many tourists have gone out of their way to ogle the "living memorial," which consists mainly of exhibits about federal projects Whitten has brought to his district.

Fourteen years ago, the GAO complained there was no yardstick for ARC success, no objective way to determine if the commission was even needed. "There are no constraints to prevent the Appalachian states from believing the program will go on indefinitely," the GAO said.

Indeed, the ARC's most remarkable achievement is its self-perpetuation. It was supposed to be terminated in 1971, but political pressure by Senators Howard Baker, Jennings Randolph, Robert Byrd and John C. Stennis caused President Nixon to extend it until 1975. President Ford took less persuasion to allow a four-year lease on life to 1979.

In a handwritten note on ARC's future, President Jimmy Carter, a former states' co-chairman, wrote: "In general, I consider regional commissions to be a waste of time and money." Still, in obeisance to the commission's powerful Congressional patrons, he kept it going.

The ARC's most serious fight for its life came in 1981, when President Ronald Reagan called for the abolition of everything except its highway program. In response, the commission's awesome bipartisan Congressional lobby—13 governors, 26 U.S. Senators and 60 members of the House of Representatives—along with an army of private citizens precipitated a massive letter-writing and phone-calling campaign asking Reagan not to end the program.

For the next seven years the battle was joined. Reagan would kill the commission, and Congress would resurrect it. After Reagan, President Bush was a pushover for the ARC. Immediately after his inauguration, the ARC took a renewed interest in adult-literacy programs throughout Appalachia—a pet project of Barbara Bush. The President's first budget proposed $50 million for the ARC; Congress pushed that to $190 million by 1992.

Now President Clinton continues the pork-barrel tradition. Despite his promise to reduce government spending, Clinton's new budget allocates $189 million to the ARC—a minuscule cut of $1 million.

In Inez, Ky., Tom Fletcher will not be affected one way or another. In the 29 years since Lyndon Johnson showed up on Fletcher's front porch, the ARC has dispensed only $515,800 to Martin County.

Now 67, Fletcher still lives in the same shack. None of his eight children ever got past the eighth grade. Unemployed for most of his life, he survives on his Social Security checks.

Things haven't changed much for him, nor for millions of others in Appalachia. "The ARC is a moldy piece of Great Society cheese," writes the Charleston (W.Va.) Daily Mail. It is time to abolish it. This country can no longer afford its wornout, misdirected programs.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BOEHNER].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

The Clerk announced the following pair:

On this vote:

Mr. Grandy for, with Mr. Becerra against.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland changed his vote from "aye" to "no."

So the amendment was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. McDERMOTT. Mr. Chairman, during rollcall vote No. 166, an amendment on H.R. 2442, I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present, I would have voted "no."

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. WALKER

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WALKER: After section 129, add the following new section:

Sec. 130. The Administrator may, in consultation with and approval of other Federal agencies with jurisdiction over the matters involved, waive Federal regulations which interfere with economic development.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, I have a point of order.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, I raise a point of order against the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] as it violates clause 7 of rule XVI. That rule requires that amendments to the text be germane to the subject matter contained therein.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman's amendment would require the Administrator of the Economic Development Administration to waive Federal regulations; that is, all Federal regulations such as the Clean Air Act, et cetera, and to do so in consultation with and approval of other Federal agencies.

There is nothing in the base text of the bill that speaks to this issue, Mr. Chairman, and, in addition, the amendment goes well beyond the scope of the bill and the current regulatory responsibilities of the Economic Development Administration.

As such, Mr. Chairman, the amendment is not germane to the base text, and I insist upon my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] wish to be heard on his point of order?

Mr. WALKER. I do, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, the bill before us is a very, very broad bill with regard to economic development going to the entire economy of the United States as described in the section of the bill delineating the coverage, and so in this case the coverage is very broad.

All this particular amendment does is to assure that the Administrator, in conjunction with other Federal agencies with jurisdiction over the matters involved, may waive Federal regulations that interfere with economic development. So it is only regulations; it does not change law in any way. It is all matters within the jurisdiction of the administration. It is within the Administrator's duties because it relates only to economic development, and "economic development" would be defined as the very broad-based issues that are raised in the original bill. So I believe that there is jurisdiction here.

Beyond that, under the amendment the Administrator could not act without the agreement of the other Federal agencies. So there is nothing in the amendment saying that something could be changed unless the other Federal agencies agreed with it. But what it would do is allow a one-stop shopping center in the Federal Government for those who have regulatory problems to get those regulatory problems waived.

So I do believe the amendment is germane, Mr. Chairman, and I urge the Chair to approve the offering of the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE] wish to be heard further on the point of order?

Mr. WISE. Yes, I do, Mr. Chairman.

To reply further, my subcommittee will be delighted to know that our jurisdiction goes to the entire economy of the United States. Actually, the bill itself goes only to the Economic Development Administration. The amendment goes well beyond the scope of this bill, affecting all Federal interests.

For the reasons I have stated both here and in my previous remarks, Mr. Chairman, I believe the amendment is not germane, and I insist further on my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. TORRES). The Chair is prepared to rule on the point of order.

The Chair would state that the amendment seeks to accomplish the waiver of any Federal regulation promulgated under any Federal law which might have the effect of interfering with economic development. As such, the amendment may involve actions by agencies and change of regulations pursuant to laws not within the jurisdiction of the reporting committees and beyond the purview of the Economic Development Administration.

Therefore, the Chair sustains the point of order.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. WALKER

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I offer my amendment number 2.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WALKER: After Section 129, add the following new section:

SEC. 130. REGULATORY RELIEF.

The Administrator shall, upon petition from an entity impacted adversely by federal regulations on matters of economic development as described in this Act, notify the departments and agencies involved with promulgating and administering those regulations and suggest to those departments and agencies that regulations be waived which interfere with economic development. Nothing in this section shall affect the ability of the Administrator to carry out his duties otherwise provided by law.

Mr. WALKER (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, one of the things that really does get in the way of economic development in this country is the myriad of regulations that have been written at the Federal, State, and local level which take the power out of the hands of entrepreneurs to create an economy and create jobs.

This is an attempt in this amendment to assure that there is a place to come in the Federal Government to get some relief from Federal regulations. Essentially, this amendment does not go as far as the one that was just ruled out of order because it does not give the Administrator the ability to waive Federal regulations that are getting in the way of economic development. That would be preferable because it would be of tremendous help. Where there is an individual regulation that may have been written for all the right reasons and may have general applicability and be a good thing, but where the specific applicability of it is interfering with the ability to create jobs, then the Administrator would be able to waive that. This amendment does not go that far.

What it does do is it creates an advocate for regulatory relief within the Federal Government. At the present time there is no place where communities can come, where businesses can come, or where individuals can come within the Federal Government to seek to have regulatory relief.

With this amendment, we would create in the Office of the Administrator of EDA a place where you could get some help, because what this amendment says is, if you feel that regulations of the Federal Government are adversely impacting on your ability to create jobs or to pursue economic development, you can now come to the Administrator; you would petition him, and he would go to the individual agencies involved, notify them of your problem, and also suggest to them that the regulations which interfere with economic development be waived. So you have now created a place in Government of an advocate for economic development, and we would begin to weigh the two things, I think, on a more rational basis. Instead of simply having regulations out there that no one can get to, you would now have someone within the Government saying that the creation of jobs here is an important thing and, therefore, we ought to look at the regulatory impact that this individual or this entity has about the way the regulations are stopping economic development.

I think this provides at least a piece of regulatory relief. It does not get nearly as far as most of us would like to go, but it is a way of moving toward regulatory relief and assuring for the most time that we would have an advocate within the Government for stopping regulations which interfere with the ability to create jobs.

This is the kind of thing middle class America is looking for. Middle class America wants to be assured that their Government is not just creating laws and regulations that wipe out their ability to get jobs. In this case we will have created now an advocate for middle class America in terms of having the jobs created if Federal regulations have to be gotten out of the way in order for those jobs to be provided.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALKER. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman has offered here a very, very efficacious amendment, one that moved us in the right direction.

One of the complaints that I hear most often as people are contemplating economic development and as communities are contemplating economic development is about the very obstacles that the Federal Government itself presents. If this amendment, as I read it and understand it, will move us to a position where we will have an opportunity to at least talk about resolving some of the conflicts that the Feds present as we try to develop economically, this amendment will have rendered a very great service.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. EMERSON]. He helps make my point, because it is extremely important to recognize that if someone out in the country would have a complaint of regulatory problems, the Administrator under this amendment would have to go to bat for that person. So for the first time we would have an ability for the country to have some impact in Washington at the moment they ran into major regulatory problems.

Mr. Chairman, I think that is something that has been looked for by employers, whether they be public or private employers, across the country.

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I would just briefly like to rise in support of this amendment. In fact, there is strong precedent for this type of decisionmaking to proceed now on the Federal level.

I have right here a book that has been issued by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Department of Agriculture called "Building Communities Together, Empowerment Zones and Enterprise Communities Application Guide."

In fact, in one chapter it states under "Overcoming Federal Barriers" the following:

A primary goal of this initiative is to review the commitment to cooperation among the Federal Government, States, and localities.

To accomplish this goal we will work with all communities that have submitted a strategic plan for change, even if they do not receive Empowerment Zones or Enterprise Community designation.

The strategic point of this paragraph, though, reads as follows: "We will strive to overcome programmatic, regulatory, and statutory impediments to encourage more effective economic, human, physical, environmental, and community development activities."

So I think the gentleman's amendment relative to the Economic Development Agency is very consistent with movements that are taking place throughout the Federal Government, and I thank the gentleman for offering this very valuable amendment to plug a hole and initiate a very important discussion on the reauthorization of the EDA.

Mr. WISE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, this matter was presented to me just a short time ago. Upon reviewing the material contained in this second amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER], I want to announce that our side has no objection, and I would ask that we move to a vote on the amendment. We will accept the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Messrs. GIBBONS, LEVIN, and SWIFT changed their vote from "no" to "aye."

So the amendment was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Chairman, I was unavoidably detained during rollcall vote No. 167 on the Walker amendment. Had I been present, I would have voted "yea."

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. McDERMOTT. Mr. Chairman, during rollcall vote No. 167, an amendment on H.R. 2442, I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present, I would have voted "yea."

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to commend my colleagues on the Public Works and Banking Committees for their work on bringing this long awaited reauthorization legislation to the floor.

The Economic Development Administration has played an important role in diversifying North Dakota's economy. The regional planning councils in my State, which received EDA planning grants, have been crucial in coordinating economic development efforts. Communities with a low population density and a small tax base rely on the regional councils for their planning and technical expertise.

In addition, many successful projects have received EDA funding in North Dakota:

The expansion of Killdeer Mountain Manufacturing, a small family-owned manufacturing business. This expansion created jobs for an area suffering from the downturn in the oil industry in the late 1980's.

The construction of an industrial park offered the needed sewage and water services for a farmer-owned pasta company. EDA funding helped make an agriculture commodity into a processed product and further diversify my State's economy and created over 100 jobs.

While I support authorizing EDA, I have some strong reservations regarding the grant eligibility requirements. My State is mostly rural, sparsely populated and dependent on agriculture and the energy industry.

The economic downturns experienced in my State are not just one event like a plant closing. North Dakota's economy is affected by the weather and the price of oil. Our economic stress tends to be more gradual and widespread. I am concerned whether the criteria of major economic dislocation would apply to my State.

North Dakota's unemployment rate is historically lower than the national average because people leave the State in search of job opportunities. Consideration of unemployment figures only does not give sufficient weight to the economic effects of gradual outmigration.

I realize this bill allows grants for high outmigration as pockets of distress. Unfortunately, these pockets of distress are eligible to compete for only 35 percent of EDA's total appropriation. I am sure there are many other districts like mine which are in desperate need of EDA assistance but do not fit the distress criteria.

I call on the other body to make adjustments in these eligibility requirements. I cannot support final passage of this authorization if it does not recognize the diverse needs of rural America.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. Chairman, as we come to final passage, I urge my colleagues to vote for the bill.

While some excellent amendments were rejected, other amendments have strengthened and improved this legislation.

I especially commend to my colleagues the amendment that would make it easier for small businesses to utilize our federally paid-for research and development.

This amendment will not cost any new Federal money and, if Congress is vigilant, won't create any vast new bureaucracy.

We also voted on abolishing both the Economic Development Administration and the Appalachian Regional Commission.

The House clearly intends to continue these agencies under the reforms and other provisions of their reauthorization legislation.

Nevertheless, Congress must be vigilant in its oversight of the EDA and ARC.

We must be sure that reforms in targeting the funds and leveraging them with private, State, and local funds and efforts are, in fact, carried out.

Congress must ensure that the EDA defense conversion funds are utilized and expedited to the communities struggling with base closings.

The EDA and ARC must be made keenly aware that Congress in watching.

On behalf of the minority members of the Banking Committee, I thank my colleagues on the Public Works Committee for their cooperation in bringing this bill before the House.

The debate has been wide-ranging and enlightening.

I thank the majority members of both the Banking and Public Works Committee and their staff assistants for their cooperation and information during consideration of this bill.

While I have reservations about the ARC and other provisions, I urge my colleagues to vote for this amended legislation.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the reauthorization of the Economic Development Administration [EDA]. EDA is an important agency that contributes significantly to economic growth and job expansion. Clearly, EDA fulfills a key function in providing State and local governments, nonprofit organizations, and public institutions with vital economic grants and technical assistance. This reauthorization is a demonstration of our commitment to see that EDA has the capacity to serve those who depend on its resources.

Over the years, EDA has proven to be a valuable source of economic assistance for regions all over the United States. EDA provided a total of $301.8 million in 1993 to various organizations across the country. This assistance was in the form of public works grants to public and private nonprofit organizations and technical grants and assistance to enable communities and firms find solutions to problems that inhibit economic growth.

EDA also provided planning grants to States, cities, districts, and Indian reservations and special economic adjustment assistance to help State and local governments solve recent and anticipated severe adjustment problems, including defense conversion assistance.

I know that my home State of Maine has benefited from EDA funding. Last year, EDA provided economic assistance for 12 projects in Maine totaling over $2.5 million. Some of these projects assisted with EDA funds include the expansion of the international and domestic arrivals terminals at Bangor International Airport and the Eastport cargo facilities. EDA assistance has helped finance Maine businesses and developed revolving loan fund programs, as well. In short, Maine, like many areas of the country, benefits tangibly from EDA resources.

Mr. Chairman, as we consider reauthorizing EDA for the first time since 1982, we cannot overlook its valuable contributions to communities all across this Nation. I am very much aware of the economic benefits for which EDA is responsible for in Maine. I hope my colleagues can see what EDA does for their States and districts and join me in supporting its reauthorization.

Miss COLLINS of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to support the bill extending the Economic Development Administration today and I strongly oppose efforts of some Members to eliminate or reduce EDA funding. Instead of debating the termination of EDA or reducing help to distressed communities, we should be celebrating the fact that the House is debating the issue. For 12 long years, economic development assistance for distressed communities was held hostage by administrations in Washington who had scant concern for the millions of jobless Americans in areas like Detroit.

For many communities, and especially for my home community of Detroit, EDA programs are as important today as they were in 1965 when the EDA was established. In my district, EDA grants support a number of economic development activities, including FOCUS: HOPE, a project which I recently visited with President Clinton that has been cited as a model for job retraining.

Some today are touting the economic recovery and cite the recovery as a reason for cutting or eliminating EDA programs. I say to those who promote this view, to those who see no need for EDA, "Come to Detroit. Come and see what the face of joblessness really looks like."

When the U.S. Postal Service advertised in Detroit that they were giving an exam to determine eligibility for future employment, 20,000 people waited in line all day in the freezing cold. Unemployment among African-Americans hovers at 19 percent, more than double that of others. As basic manufacturing jobs diminish and our economy becomes more high tech, African-Americans are becoming even more disadvantaged in the job market.

This is why I am shocked that we are even debating elimination of EDA funds. Efforts to reduce funding for economic development projects must be soundly rejected. I say to my colleagues who would eliminate funding, "The recession may be over in your district, but in mine it rages on."

This is no time to be cutting economic development funds. To the contrary, we need to be strengthening these programs until the economic recovery comes to every community. I am pleased that in the Public Works Committee we were able to put special emphasis on pockets of poverty within cities.

I have introduced legislation to dramatically increase funds to distressed communities for economic development, and I have introduced a bill to provide job training for the unemployed. I worked to create empowerment zones. I supported the school-to-work bill.

I invite every Member who would cut the EDA to visit Detroit, to talk to the people who want to work, to talk to those whose jobs are gone, to visit FOCUS: HOPE, and to see a city that needs this bill. If you did, I am sure you would agree that the EDA is not a Washington boondoggle. It can and does make a real difference in many communities.

I am working to pass this bill and I hope my colleagues will join me.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there further amendments to come before the committee?

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I take this moment to congratulate the chairman of the Subcommittee on Economic Development of the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, as well as the ranking Republican member, on the splendid work they have done in fashioning a bill that has brought together such broad bipartisan support, as EDA has done throughout its many years of functioning and successful operation.

I especially take this time to note the impending retirement of the chief counsel of the Subcommittee on Economic Development, Carl Lorenz. Carl has served the Committee on Public Works and Transportation for well over 25 years. We first became acquainted when he came on board the committee staff as a junior attorney, and I was the administrator of the staff of the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, coming here from Baltimore, having worked with the former chairman, George Fallon, and then under John Blatnik's leadership as chairman of that subcommittee, and years later I transformed from a staff member to a Member of Congress and Carl and I worked together when I chaired the Subcommittee on Economic Development.

Carl epitomizes for all of my colleagues, I say, in the House, who know the splendid work and support that we have from our staff, he epitomizes the professionalism, the dedication to duty, the carrying out of policy that is set by the Chair and by the members of the committee. He has never blurred that distinction.

Carl has always served the committee to the highest degree of his ability, and given 110 percent. Many are the long hours in the evening and the long Saturdays and Sundays that he dedicated to his commitment to his career service of economic development.

Carl, we will miss you greatly. I shall miss a friend, and I shall miss a colleague and a professional of the highest order. Congratulations on a job and a career truly superbly undertaken.

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, just as the very distinguished gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. OBERSTAR] who just preceded me has served long and well on the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, both as a former staff member and now as a very distinguished Member of the Congress, I would like to take this time to recognize and congratulate also Mr. Carl Lorenz, who is the counsel and staff director of our Committee on Economic Development.

Members may have noticed an extra lightness in Carl's step, or caught him whistling a tune. It is for good reason. Carl has decided to shed the pressures of Capitol Hill and retire after a long and distinguished career in government. Having joined the Committee on Public Works and Transportation in 1962, Carl served originally as associate counsel to our Subcommittee on Federal Aid Highway Programs before moving on to Economic Development. He has since labored to protect and promote the ideals and practical necessities of developing our Nation's infrastructure.

Carl has been a valued member of the Public Works team and a special friend to us all. On behalf of the members and staff of the committee, I wish Carl and his wife Nancy a happy and healthy retirement, which I am sure will include many hours at his beach house. Mr. chairman, after 32 years of government service, it is richly deserved.

Mr. Chairman, we all wish Carl good health and Godspeed.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. BONIOR] having assumed the chair, Mr. TORRES, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2442) to reauthorize appropriations under the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965, as amended, to revise administrative provisions of the Act to improve the authority of the Secretary of Commerce to administer grant programs, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 420, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute adopted by the Committee of the Whole?

If not, the question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 2473, THE MONTANA WILDERNESS ACT OF 1994

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 423 and ask for its immediate consideration.

H. RES. 423

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 2473) to designate certain National Forest lands in the State of Montana as wilderness, to release other National Forest lands in the State of Montana for multiple use management, and for other purposes. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. Points of order against consideration of the bill for failure to comply with clause 2(l)(6) of rule XI are waived. General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed ninety minutes, with sixty minutes equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Natural Resources, fifteen minutes equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Agriculture, and fifteen minutes equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Natural Resources now printed in the bill. Each section of the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be considered as read. Points of order against the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute for failure to comply with clause 5(a) of rule XXI are waived. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. Any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SERRANO). The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the customary 30 minutes, for the purpose of debate only, to the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 423 is an open rule which provides for the consideration of H.R. 2473, the Montana Wilderness Act.

The rule provides for 90 minutes of general debate; 1 hour to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Natural Resources Committee, 15 minutes to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Agriculture Committee, and 15 minutes to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

The rule waives clause 2(l)(6) of rule XI—which requires a 3-day layover of legislation reported from committee—against consideration of the bill.

The rule makes in order the Natural Resources Committee amendment in the nature of substitute now printed in the bill as an original bill for the purposes of amendment, with each section considered as read.

The rule also waives clause 5(A) of rule XXI—which prohibits appropriations in a legislative bill—against the committee substitute.

Finally, the rule provides one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

Mr. Speaker, since 1983, 10 pieces of legislation have been introduced making various wilderness designations in Montana, and numerous hearings have been held in the House and the Senate. Congress passed one of the bills in the 100th Congress, but it was pocket vetoed.

H.R. 2473 adds nearly 1.7 million acres to the 3.4 million acres currently protected as wilderness in Montana and sets aside an additional 375,000 acres as wilderness study areas.

Approximately 240,000 acres are set aside for special management by the Forest Service, and 3.2 million acres will be released from wilderness protection for logging, mining, oil drilling and road construction.

I want to commend Chairman GEORGE MILLER and subcommittee Chairman BRUCE VENTO along with Congressman PAT WILLIAMS for their hard work. If it were not for their dedication to the substance of the bill and their legislative ability, this legislation would not be before the House today.

Mr. Speaker, this is an open rule. I encourage my colleagues to adopt the resolution.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER], chairman of the Committee on Natural Resources, for requesting an open rule on this bill, calling for an open amendment process. I like to refer to him as Mr. Open Rule for his unbroken streak of open rule requests. It is unfortunate, however, that streak apparently is going to come to an abrupt end next week when we bring up the California Desert Protection Act.

The request of the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER], notwithstanding, I oppose this rule because it waives clause 2(l)(6) of rule XI requiring a 3-day layover so Members can have an opportunity to review the bill before it is considered.

The Committee on Natural Resources filed its report on H.R. 2473 on April 28, but the Committee on Agriculture, very ably chaired by our friend, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DE LA GARZA], which also had jurisdiction over the bill, did not file its report until May 10, just 2 days ago, and a printed copy was not available until yesterday.

It is important to note that the bill reported by the Committee on Agriculture is different than the one reported by the Committee on Natural Resources. In addition, whereas the Committee on Natural Resources bill was reported by a voice vote, the Committee on Agriculture bill was reported by a very narrow 22 to 19 margin. While the Committee on Agriculture bill is not the text that the House bill will consider for amendment, Members deserve an opportunity to compare the two bills and understand why there was such strong opposition in the Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. Speaker, it is very important that the 3-day layover rule be followed, particularly on this legislation, because it raises a number of very complicated private property rights questions. For this reason, Mr. Speaker, I urge a no vote on the rule.

Mr. Speaker, for the RECORD, I include some statistics on open versus restrictive rules in the 95th through 103d Congresses, as well as the roll call votes on this rule in the Committee on Rules.

[1] Total rules counted are all order of business resolutions reported from the Rules Committee which provide for the initial consideration of legislation, except rules on appropriations bills which only waive points of order. Original jurisdiction measures reported as privileged are also not counted.

[2] Open rules are those which permit any Member to offer any germane amendment to a measure so long as it is otherwise in compliance with the rules of the House. The parenthetical percentages are open rules as a percent of total rules granted.

[3] Restrictive rules are those which limit the number of amendments which can be offered, and include so-called modified open and modified closed rules, as well as completely closed rule, and rules providing for consideration in the House as opposed to the Committee of the Whole. The parenthetical percentages are restrictive rules as a percent of total rules granted.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Agriculture reported H.R. 2473 on April 28, 1994, and filed the report on May 10, 1994. The bill was reported out of the Committee on Agriculture without amendment. The committee report consisted of 11 pages, including additional minority reviews. The report was available to the membership yesterday.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS].

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the Committee on Rules, the Committee on Natural Resources, the Committee on Agriculture, and the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries for bringing this bill before us today. The Montana wilderness bill has been under consideration in every Congress since 1986, and with no resolution. So I have begun this process in this Congress with determination, but also with patience, and frustration.

I began this process 16 years ago because I believed that this consideration is critically important. Our Federal land managers believe it is critical to the future management of the public land in Montana. Our resource dependent industries, timber and mining, cry out for a resolution and management certainty. Our State's public and our State's private game managers believe it is important if we are to continue our world class quality hunting in Montana without resorting to a lottery.

The citizens in our local communities are demanding, insisting, for an end to the 16 years of controversy and disagreement.

With this bill, I have introduced five pieces of legislation specifically addressing the remaining RARE II wilderness designations in Montana. This is the 15th piece of legislation introduced by some Member or other of the Montana delegation on this issue. If this bill is fortunate enough to move through the House of Representatives, it will be the sixth time this House of Representatives has passed legislation, and once both the House and Senate passed the same legislation, and it was vetoed, tragically, by former President Reagan.

The statistics of consideration are impressive by any legislative standards in the history of this country. Fifteen pieces of legislation introduced over 16 years. This issue has been the subject of 50 congressional hearings. We have had 235 hours of direct testimony. The Congress has 20 volumes of printed hearing records on this issue. We have testimony from many hundreds of Montanans. We have testimony from dozens of Montana organizations. And, by the way, the other day I counted, these organizations have claimed in total to represent citizens of Montana who double the actual number of people living in our State.

My colleagues, Montanans and Americans have waited long enough. This is a good bill. This is a bill about the public lands, and the bill was made in Montana. It enjoys the support, almost overwhelming support, of the members of the three committees to which it was referred. I am pleased again with the members of the Committee on Rules, who have brought this bill out on the floor with an open rule.

I want to say, finally, that I requested an open rule on this bill. I want openness on this bill. And heaven knows, that after 16 years and two-hundred-plus hour of direct testimony, after multiple considerations in both the House and Senate, this wilderness consideration process has been as open, if not more open, in fact more open, than any that has come before the Congress in its long history. And I am pleased that the Committee on Rules is again today asking for an open rule, so that all Members are protected in their attempt to make whatever changes they desire in my legislation.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO], the chairman of the Subcommittee on National Parks, Forests, and Public Lands, that shepherded this bill to the floor.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule offered by our friend and colleague, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORDON]. I think this is a fair rule. The primary jurisdiction for wilderness designations is with the Committee on Natural Resources. We have worked in a deliberate manner with open hearings on the issue and dealing with a significant classification of these wild lands in Montana. There are nearly 6 million acres of national forest roadless lands in the Great State of Montana, the Great Sky Country.

The rule makes the Committee on Natural Resources version of H.R. 2473 the vehicle for floor action. This is appropriate. As I say, we have the jurisdiction over these Western wilderness designations. We share some jurisdiction with the Committee on Agriculture simply on the manner in which the lands that are not declared wilderness will be released. The Committee on Agriculture reported the bill as introduced and did not make the modifications in the release language, as we call it, that is, the language that directs the management of the remaining lands in this area that are not designated as wilderness.

I think we have crafted a good alternative here, and commend it to Members. Obviously there has been some concern expressed how long the report from the Committee on Agriculture has been available, but really the basic changes have been before the body for a long time. They will have further time to review this before we take up the measure on general debate and under an open rule next Tuesday. So I think any type of concern about that should be allayed on that basis.

We are moving deliberately and hopefully conclusively on the important issue of Montana wilderness, something that has been waiting for over a dozen years, as my colleague said. So I urge the support of Members for the rule, and thank the gentleman for yielding time.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER], the chairman of the full Committee on Natural Resources.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, once again the Natural Resources Committee is bringing before the House a statewide, national forest wilderness bill and once again that State is Montana. As before, the committee presents a bill that meets our obligation to protect the remnants of the magnificent wilderness that is at the heart of our natural heritage, while fairly and responsibly recognizing the legitimate interests and concerns of local residents.

For more than a decade, it has been the House and the House Natural Resources Committee that has set the standard for achieving that kind of balance. When all the dust of competing proposals and amendments has settled, the record will show that the wilderness designations and the management provisions crafted by the House and the Natural Resources Committee have been the basis for laws signed by both Republican and Democratic Presidents.

Once again today, you will hear this bill attacked from the left and from the right. You will hear that the bill locks up too many resources and that it violates Montana's rights to control its water. But as the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS] will tell you, we have worked long and hard with Montanans to draw the boundaries and select the wilderness areas that meet their concerns. At the same time, the release and water rights language are consistent with positions that the House has taken often and rightly so, and is so doing repeatedly and without exception rejecting amendments to weaken them.

From the other side, you will hear that the Interior Committee bill is inadequate, even that it is a sell-out of Montana's remaining wildlands. I sympathize and share concern with those who have watched our forests mismanaged, our old growth cut down and our wilderness roaded and who warn that we have a real crisis on our hands. They are right.

But to characterize the Natural Resources Committee bill as anything less than a strong statement for protection of Montana wilderness is just plain wrong. In 1979, the Forest Service completed its review of almost 6 million acres of roadless lands in Montana. It recommended 900,000 acres for wilderness. Since that day, those 900,000 acres have been managed as wilderness and the rest—more than 5 million acres—have been managed for multiple use under forest plans. Today, the committee bill proposes that every one of those 900,000 acres, plus another 2 million acres, be placed in wilderness or similar land management categories. In other words, every acre of Montana forests that have been managed as wilderness will continue to be so managed and another 2 million acres that have been managed for multiple use will be managed as wilderness. No lands receive a lesser standard of protection than they have today. Rarely has the committee been able to say this about any wilderness bill.

Despite all the criticism, Mr. Speaker, I know that any honest and dispassionate analysis would conclude that this bill is cut from the same cloth as Forest Service wilderness bills—now law—for Washington and Oregon, for California, for Arizona and New Mexico, for Utah, Nevada, Colorado and Wyoming and many other States. They are all bills that sprung from this House and they are all laws of which this Congress and this Nation are justifiably proud. If anything, the many years of hard labor by Mr. WILLIAMS and Mr. VENTO have made this a superior bill.

The House has a responsibility to exercise its own considered judgement with regard to which areas should be designated wilderness, how the Federal rights to protect wilderness water resources should be exercised and how lands not designated should be managed.

But I am confident that the Natural Resources Committee has done so in a responsible and reasonable manner under extremely difficult circumstances and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I urge a "no" vote on this rule, the reason being that this violates the 3-day layover provisions. All Members should have an opportunity to carefully consider this measure before we proceed. I hope that my colleagues will join me in voting against the rule.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, let me just remind the Members of two things: First of all, this is an open rule. Second, although we are passing the rule today, we will not be taking up this legislation until next Tuesday. There is plenty of time for Members to consider this bill, particularly keeping in mind that this has been before us for 16 years. I think it is time we move forward, move forward with an open rule.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON S. 2000, HUMAN SERVICES AMENDMENTS OF 1994

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 421 and ask for its immediate consideration.

H. RES. 421

Resolved, That upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider the conference report to accompany the bill (S. 2000) to authorize appropriations for fiscal years 1995 through 1998 to carry out the Head Start Act and the Community Services Block Grant Act, and for other purposes. All points of order against the conference report and against its consideration are waived.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SERRANO). The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HALL] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. QUILLEN] for purposes of debate only, pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 421 is the rule providing for the consideration of the conference report on S. 2000, the Human Services Amendments of 1994. The rule waives all points of order against the conference report and against its consideration. Because there are several amendments that were agreed to by House and Senate conferees, but are technically outside of the scope of the conference, it was necessary to waive points of order. This rule will allow us to bring this important legislation to the floor.

Mr. Speaker, the agreements reached on the human services legislation pertain to critical issues that directly affect the lives of millions of children, low-income citizens and families having difficulty making ends meet. The measure reauthorizes the Head Start Program through fiscal year 1998. I have personally visited many Head Start Programs in my home town of Dayton, OH, and I am impressed with the opportunity the program gives to our children at an early age. Included in this measure are provisions to create a new infant and toddler initiative for children up to age 3.

The legislation also reauthorizes the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program [LIHEAP] through fiscal year 1999. This program helps families pay their energy bills in the winter which is especially important in cold States like Ohio. It targets households with low incomes and high heating costs. Many other worthwhile antipoverty programs are funded in this initiative including the Community Food and Nutrition Program, the Community Services Block Grant, the McKinney Homeless Grant Program, and the National Youth Sports Program.

Mr. Speaker, this conference report is a carefully crafted compromise. I urge my colleagues to join me in adopting the rule.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HALL] has described, this rule provides for the consideration of the conference report on S. 2000, which reauthorizes the Head Start Act, the Community Services Block Grant Act, and the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program. I am a strong supporter of all of these programs, and I support the conference report.

It has become so customary to grant a rule waiving all points of order against conference reports that the House just accepts this process as noncontroversial and routine. Even those of us who do not particularly support these blanket waivers have allowed these rules to be debated and adopted without putting up much of a fight. But not this time, Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote against this rule.

The rule waives all points of order, but it does not specify which rules are being waived and for what purpose. We discussed this matter at some length in the Rules Committee yesterday, and we know that there are scope violations in the conference report. A list of those violations was provided to us, and we understand that the conferees all agreed to these provisions. So there is an obvious need for a waiver of clause 3 of rule 28 to protect these scope violations.

No member of the Rules Committee seemed to be aware of any other rules violation, and the minority members of the committee wanted to know why it was necessary to waive all points of order. The response was something along the lines of "just in case there's something in the conference report that we don't know about that needs protection." That is not a direct quote, Mr. Speaker, but I think it accurately describes the answer we were given.

The Rules Committee and the Committees of jurisdiction of any legislation that comes to this floor have an obligation to make sure all Members are aware of any rules violations contained in any bill or conference report.

An amendment was offered in the Rules Committee to waive only the scope rule, but it was defeated on a party-line vote and the rule was adopted on a party line vote.

Mr. Speaker, I have said over and over again that we need to put a stop to this trend of granting blanket waivers. Let us stop it today, I strongly urge my colleagues to vote down this rule.

Mr. Speaker, I include for the RECORD the following information:

ROLL CALL VOTES IN THE RULES COMMITTEE ON THE RULE FOR HUMAN SERVICES ACT CONFERENCE REPORT (S. 2000), WEDNESDAY, MAY 11, 1994

1. Specify Rule Waivers—Motion to strike the waiver of all points of order against the conference report and its consideration and substitute a specific waiver only of clause 3, rule XXVIII (the scope rule). Rejected: 3–4. Yeas: Solomon, Quillen, and Dreier. Nays: Moakley, Derrick, Beilenson, and Gordon. Not voting: Frost, Bonior, Hall, Wheat, Slaughter, and Goss.

2. Report Role—Motion to order rule reported as moved. Adopted: 4–3. Yeas: Moakley, Derrick, Beilenson, and Gordon. Nays: Solomon, Quillen, and Dreier. Not Voting: Frost, Bonior, Hall, Wheat, Slaughter, and Goss.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM].

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, a lot of us do not support rules that are not open, but I would like to speak on behalf of Head Start.

As an original cosponsor of the Head Start Quality Improvement Act, I am very happy to see that most of those recommendations went into the Head Start reauthorization within the Committee on Education and Labor.

I am pleased to see an increase in the recognition of the crucial role that parents play in the education and development of their children, and most of us have seen that any school program that works enforces the involvement of parents.

We would like to see stronger language to enforce that parents take part in this, but at least the bill is going in the right direction.

Second, this bill requires programs to actively seek parental participation, and while I would like to see even stronger language regarding the parental involvement in Head Start programs, the language addressing family literacy and parental skills training takes the right direction. It is important to recognize and establish parents as their children's primary teachers.

Raising the quality of all Head Start programs throughout the country has long been a concern, and I am pleased to see the strengthened program accountability, and that is a strange word around this body, but believe it or not, this Head Start program enforces accountability for providing high-quality services included in this reauthorization.

The key to a successful Head Start program is ensuring quality over quantity. We should serve as many eligible children as possible with the highest quality services possible, instead of just striving to serve all eligible children with mediocre or poor services. If we look at parental involvement, accountability, and the quality of the program, that is what we need to support in a program.

I would also like to state, Mr. Speaker, that both this program, children's immunization, and other things belong in the committee itself, where we have a budget to work with budget-agreed caps. They do not belong on emergency spending bills. I am happy to see this come out of the committee with hearings and support to make it a good bill.

Mr. Chairman, I do not support everything in the bill, but it is a good bill, and I ask support from my colleagues.

Mr. QUILLEN. Mr. Speaker, I urge a no vote on the rule. I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the rule, I call up the conference report on the Senate bill (S. 2000) to authorize appropriations for fiscal years 1995 through 1998 to carry out the Head Start Act and the Community Services Block Grant Act, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the conference report is considered as having been read.

(For conference report and statement, see proceedings of the House of Monday, May 9, 1994, at page H. 3159).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlemen from Michigan [Mr. FORD].

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, on February 10, 1994, H.R. 3842—to reauthorize the Head Start program for another 4 years—was introduced in the House of Representatives. The bill has cosponsors from both sides of the aisle. Measures to reauthorize the Community Services Block Grant Program [CSBG] (H.R. 4084) and the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program [LIHEAP] (H.R. 4085) were introduced shortly thereafter. The bills were eventually merged into a single measure (H.R. 4250).

In 3 short months from the day the Head Start reauthorization bill was first introduced, hearings on the legislation were completed, the Committee on Education and Labor amended and reported the bill, the House of Representatives overwhelmingly approved the bill, and today I am pleased to bring back to the House of Representatives the conference report on the Human Services Amendments of 1994. The Senate passed the conference report last night by a vote of 98 to 1.

The speed with which this legislation has progressed through the Congress is a testament to the vitality of the Head Start program and is an affirmation of the ability of Republicans and Democrats to work together for the sake of improving the lives of young children and their parents living in poverty in this country.

I am indeed honored that in my last year serving in the U.S. Congress I will have had the opportunity to help extend the Head Start program into the 21st century. For it was 29 years ago, within the first few months of my first term as a freshman Member of Congress, that I heard President Lyndon Johnson speak these words at a Rose Garden ceremony:

> Today we are able to announce that we will have open, and we believe operating this summer coast-to-coast, some 2,000 child development centers serving as many as possibly a half million children.
> This means that nearly half the preschool children of poverty will get a head start on their future. These children will receive preschool training to prepare them for regular school in September. They will get medical and dental attention that they badly need and their parents will receive counseling on improving the home environment.
> This is a most remarkable accomplishment and it has been done in a very short time. It would not be possible except for the willing and the enthusiastic cooperation of Americans throughout the country.
> Five and six year old children are inheritors of poverty's curse and not its creators. Unless we act, these children will pass it on to the next generation, like a family birthmark.

In the 29 years since its inception, Head Start has provided hope and support to more than 13 million low-income families. It has become our country's premier child care model, offering health, nutrition, education, mental, and social services to poor children and their families in each and every county in the Nation. It has grown from a $350 million summer initiative to a year-round program funded at $3.3 billion serving approximately 750,000 children and their families. The wisdom in which Head Start was conceived enables this program to endure. It continues to enjoy broad bipartisan support and is just as viable today as it was some 30 years ago.

Yet, the world of Head Start today is drastically different than it was 30 years ago. Children are faced with challenges and influences which affect their development at an earlier age. Families suffering from homelessness, substance abuse, unemployment, and lack of education and training hold little promise for children born into poverty through no fault of their own.

Head Start today, as it was 30 years ago, is a beacon of hope for children in poverty and their families. Community-based, community-governed, community- and family-responsive Head Start programs afford comprehensive services to children and their low-income families in the place of futility.

The conference report to S. 2000 builds upon the successes of Head Start, responds to its critics, and extends the Head Start Program for another 4 years. The bill incorporates improvements to respond to the changing needs of children and their families as recommended by Secretary Shalala's Advisory Committee on Head Start Quality and Expansion. I would like to highlight several of these improvements.

For the first time, Head Start programs will be required to coordinate with local schools. The provisions complement similar language incorporated into H.R. 6, a bill to reauthorize the Elementary and Secondary Education Act programs, approved by the House of Representatives on March 24.

The bill retains the 1990 statutory requirement that 25 percent of all Head Start funds be used to improve the quality of existing programs, such as ensuring sufficient staffing and ensuring adequate compensation of Head Start staff.

The legislation establishes a new initiative to extend Head Start type services to children from birth to 3 and their families.

The bill permits Head Start programs, for the first time, to construct their own facilities where the Secretary determines suitable facilities are not otherwise available or where construction would be more cost-effective than purchase or renovation.

This conference report does more than reauthorize Head Start—it also renews our commitment to a number of worthy programs addressing the needs of individuals living in poverty.

The conference report reauthorizes the Community Services Block Grant Act through fiscal year 1998. Since its creation in 1981 as a continuation of work begun in the Office of Economic Opportunity, CSBG funds have been used to leverage other resources to operate programs addressing the problems caused by poverty and providing advocacy services for the poor.

The conference report also continues through fiscal year 1999, the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program [LIHEAP]—an initiative of particular importance to low-income individuals who find their lives threatened by harsh weather. Recent budget cuts have caused a fall-off in the number of households served to the point where today only one-quarter of the eligible households are able to participate in the program. The action we take today is intended to sustain the program and provide a suitable response to critical life-threatening situations which have far too often resulted in injury or death.

Finally, the conference report consolidates several existing programs into an expanded community-based family resource program which will help build networks of comprehensive family resource centers and services and promote a systematic approach to prevention.

The conference report represents a significant effort to maintain bipartisan support for social service programs which answer critical needs of American families and communities.

I am proud to have chaired the House conferees in this effort and congratulate Chairman MARTINEZ on his good work and applaud all of the House conferees who signed the conference report—Mr. KILDEE, Mr. OWENS, Mr. ANDREWS of New Jersey, Mr. SCOTT, Ms. WOOLSEY, Mr. ROMERO-BARCELÓ, Mr. BAESLER, Mr. GOODLING, Ms. MOLINARI, Mr. BARRETT, and Mr. CASTLE—and their respective staffs for the collegial effort which has brought us here today. I also thank Chairman DINGELL and Energy and Power Subcommittee Chairman SHARP and Members from both parties on the Committee on Energy and Commerce for their cooperation in this effort.

In closing, I congratulate President Clinton for his vision, Secretary Shalala for her determination, and the staff of the Department of Health and Human Services for their hard work in what I view as an unprecedented effort to forge a truly bipartisan product renewing these important human service programs.

I would also like to thank our Senate counterparts for their cooperation and commitment in this endeavor. Senator KENNEDY, Senator DODD, Senator KASSEBAUM, and Senator COATS offered bipartisan cooperation without which we could not have achieved this great success.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this conference agreement on these important human services programs and creating a 21st century Head Start.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I thank the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD], the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, for his kind remarks. It has been a tremendous opportunity to work alongside him on the committee, equally as it has been to work with the ranking Republican, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING].

Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING].

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report accompanying S. 2000, the Human Services Amendments of 1994. This important legislation contains separate reauthorization for Head Start, CSBG, LIHEAP, and other programs.

The Human Services Amendments of 1994 is the product of lengthy negotiations, the early stages of which actually began over a year ago. While the conference report is not a perfect bill, is contains important provisions of which I am particularly proud, provisions which I believe move these programs in the right direction.

First of all, Mr. Speaker, contained in title I, which reauthorizes Head Start, are several mechanisms which will improve the quality of services provided to needy children under the Head Start program. Many of these ideas we had incorporated in the Goodling-Molinari-Kassebaum Head Start Quality Improvement Act.

As I have been saying for many years, we have to ask ourselves the question, when we say we need more money to cover more children, we have to ask the question, "To cover them with what? The answer has to be "to cover them with excellence."

Since the beginning of Head Start, Congress has spent over $27 billion of taxpayers' money to fund the program. Our reports thus far are not the most glowing reports in relationship to how long these benefits last. It is our hope that with this reauthorization, the answer will be they will last a lifetime. It is not enough for us just to fund more Head Start programs and serve greater numbers of children. We have to be confident that the services provided produce measurable improvements for these children. For Head Start programs to make a positive impact on children's lives, the programs must provide the highest quality services possible. The improvements we have included in the legislation move Head Start in the direction of greater and more consistent quality and excellence.

Mr. Speaker, also contained in the Head Start section of the bill are provisions to improve parental involvement in Head Start. These programs will now offer all Head Start parents the opportunity to participate in family literacy programs and parenting skills training. It took this country an awful long time, and I do not understand why, to understand that the only way we will be successful is if we deal with the entire family. Family literacy now is the program that is going to get us where we want to go and, that is, to make sure that not only all children are literate and have the best skills possible but also their parents have the same.

Mr. Speaker, the bill we are considering today includes a provision requiring Head Start programs to coordinate their services with the Even Start program. This provision matches up nicely with the same kind of coordination requirements that we already put in the Even Start law.

All of these changes strengthen the Head Start program and bring needed accountability to a program that potentially can offer so much more to the future of disadvantaged children.

Mr. Speaker, I do have some concerns about an addition by our Members in the other body where they get into the business of having prevailing wages for construction workers. I get concerned simply because we do not seem to have enough money at the present time to give quality programs to these children that are eligible and if we spread it thinner and we get into the business of how much somebody might spend on construction, now, some will argue, "Well, the rent they save will somehow or other make up for this." I would question that seriously.

Mr. Speaker, in the reauthorization of LIHEAP, the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program, I am pleased that the conferees maintained House language that sends a strong bipartisan message to the administration regarding the importance of this program and that Congress is unwilling to accept the funding cuts the administration has requested.

Mr. Speaker, I am also pleased that the conferees dropped the unnecessary program performance goals and measurements in the House bill and maintained the existing prohibition against the Secretary issuing program regulations for LIHEAP. Each State participating in the LIHEAP programs is very unique geographically, demographically, and in its governance structure. The conferees have recognized that States need continued flexibility to ensure that energy assistance is distributed in the method that makes the most sense for each individual State.

Mr. Speaker, in the Community Service Block Grant Program, conferees also avoided giving the Secretary unfettered regulatory authority, although they did allow the Secretary to prescribe procedures for the States to determine the effectiveness of CSBG programs.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank all on both sides of the aisle. I am particularly pleased that our retiring chairman has an opportunity to play a leading role in making sure that Head Start programs in the future will be even better than they have been in the past, and that his grandchildren and great grandchildren may also benefit greatly from these early childhood programs that we are putting forth and in which we are improving the quality.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to thank the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BALLENGER], the gentleman from California [Mr. MARTINEZ], the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI], and the staffs on both sides, and also the relationship we had with the other body, because I think in working together we have truly produced not a perfect bill, we have never produced one of those, but a bill that will go a long way to improve all of these programs in which the Federal Government has some responsibility.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, before yielding to the gentleman from California, the subcommittee chairman, it should be noted that we owe a debt of gratitude to the Committee on Energy and Commerce and particularly to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], the chairman of that committee, for their cooperation in being able to work out the low income energy assistance portion of the bill and include it in a single package.

Mr. Speaker, it should be noted that building on the experience we had last winter when we had record cold spells and periods of cold in the United States and a great deal of suffering as a result thereof, this bill carries forward a $600 million a year emergency authorization that will be there, available for appropriation, if we hit another winter like last year sometime in the future. It is the kind of forward thinking that we were very happy to work out across jurisdictional lines with the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is also important to note for the record that there was an extraordinary amount of staff cooperation in putting all these pieces together into the final product and working out the multitude of differences between the House and Senate so that our job as Members at the Senate-House conference was really sort of routine. They were led by, on the majority side, Alan Lopatin and, of course, the staff of the gentleman from California [Mr. MARTINEZ] and the staff of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], and I put into the RECORD the names of the people who worked on this:

Kris Gilbert, Les Sweeting, Terry Deshler, Dennis Glavin, and Leslie Harris. On the Republican side, Lee Collin.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from that little town on the west coast, Los Angeles, CA [Mr. MARTINEZ], the fellow who did the heavy hitting on this legislation, one of the most productive and competent subcommittee chairmen we have on the committee and one who really deserves to take the bows when the President signs this at the White House next week.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in complete support of the conference agreement and urge all Members to vote in favor of this bipartisan agreement.

I would like, first, to take this opportunity to publicly thank the hundreds of Head Start parents, teachers, administrators, and graduates who met with me, wrote to me, and called to express their continued support for the Head Start Program and our Head Start bill.

I want to thank Sarah Greene, executive Director, and Ron Herndon, president of the National Head Start Association, and Linda Likens, director of government relations for the association for their willingness to frame and discuss significant issues arising in the reauthorization of Head Start.

We were very successful in addressing all of those concerns, and the conference agreement embodies their suggestions on: Construction of Head Start facilities, modifications and improvements to both the Indian and Migrant Head Start Programs, recognition of the importance of full-day and full-year services, mentor teachers, additional support of family service workers, enhanced parent involvement, improvement and renewed support for the Head Start transition project and the State collaboration projects, and an expansion of the work that Head Start has been doing with younger children.

I would like to assure them that we have listened to their concerns about the Infants and Toddler Program and have included language that requires a secretarial panel designing the new zero to three effort to report its findings by December 31, 1994.

I am assured by Secretary Shalala and her staff that this panel is already working and will be reporting on time.

We also heard from a significant number of Americans across the country in connection with title 2 of the bill, the Community Services Block Grant Program reauthorization, and have heeded their requests to ensure continued authorization of the Community Food and Nutrition Program and the National Youth Sports Program.

I appreciate the dedication and hard work that those programs have done over the years and am happy to say that our proposal to reauthorize those programs was agreed to in conference, in full consultation and with the support of the administration.

I want to acknowledge the leadership of my chairman, BILL FORD, and Chairman EDWARD M. KENNEDY of the other body, in shepherding this important legislation through the legislative process in a very expeditious manner.

This is a truly bipartisan bill, thanks to the efforts of Ranking Member BILL GOODLING, Ms. MOLINARI, Mr. BARRETT, and Mr. CASTLE, each of whom offered important suggestions to enhance the bill throughout.

The Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program [LIHEAP] serves millions of needy Americans nationwide, providing low-income and other vulnerable households with assistance for home heating, cooling, crisis intervention, and low cost weatherization.

The conference agreement contains modifications that increase State flexibility—as it encourages targeting of low-income households with high energy burdens.

The bill encourages new approaches in services and service delivery and promotes a collaborative relationship between States and the Department of Health and Human Services.

I would like to thank Chairman DINGELL of the Committee on Energy and Commerce for his leadership, and Chairman SHARP of the Subcommittee on Energy and Power for his cooperation and assistance in getting this important legislation to the floor.

I would also like to thank my colleague from Michigan, Mr. KILDEE, for his continued support of LIHEAP and his contribution to our bill.

I am confident that the changes made will strengthen and improve the overall effectiveness of the program.

Again, this is a very good conference bill, one that is truly bipartisan, and I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to vote in favor of the agreement.

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BARRETT], who was a tremendous asset to the construction of this legislation, and most importantly during the conference period he substituted for all of us with his energy, and we appreciate that.

Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for her kind remarks; I thank the chairman, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD], for his kind remarks as well. I also want to recognize the chair of the subcommittee, the gentleman from California [Mr. MARTINEZ], who also did an excellent job with the report, as well as the gentlewoman from New York.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on S. 2000, which would reauthorize the Head Start, Community Services Block Grant, and the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance programs.

I do, however, have some concerns with a couple of provisions in the conference report. I am concerned with expanding Head Start to serve children from 0 to 3 years of age.

The conference report, I fear, takes a head strong plunge into providing more services to infants and toddlers without first taking a cautious and realistic review of how this expansion may affect current Head Start programs.

It would be a shame that in the rush to provide more services to needy children and families, we may be jeopardizing other needy families that may benefit from excellent Head Start programs today.

Mr. Speaker, I will be requesting the General Accounting Office [GAO] to study the impact that the 0 to 3 initiative might have on current programs, and what factors should be considered by the Department of Health and Human Services, as it implements the initiative.

I urge my colleagues to join me in requesting a GAO study, because it may make Congress and the administration aware of the pitfalls of providing Head Start services to needy families.

A concern has also been raised that the conference report may infringe upon English literacy programs by requiring Head Start centers to provide services to non-English speaking individuals.

Americans, and new immigrants to our country, should be fluent in English in order to fully participate in our society. I hope that when the Department of Health and Human Services issues its regulations to cover these matters, it will keep firmly in mind the need to place a priority on providing more English literacy programs in Head Start, and not endanger these vital programs with an overzealous expansion of required activities.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I believe that a number of other positive features in the conference report outweigh my reservations. Namely, the compromise enhances family literacy programs and insures that Head Start programs are providing quality programs.

I urge my colleagues to support the conference report.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Ms. DELAURO].

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, this past winter was devastatingly cold across a large swath of our country. So cold, that many States were on the verge of running out of funding for their Low Income Home Energy Assistance Programs [LIHEAP] long before the end of the cold weather. The LIHEAP program provides critical assistance for our elderly, disabled, and low-income working families so they can keep their homes adequately heated. That is why I strongly support the reauthorization of LIHEAP and wholeheartedly agree with the language in the LIHEAP reauthorization conference report before us that expresses the sense of Congress that maintaining LIHEAP should be a high priority, and that all fiscal year 1995 appropriations for LIHEAP should be expended.

I also want to express my strong support for the Head Start reauthorization contained in the conference report. This program, whose father, Dr. Ed Zigler, hails from my congressional district, enjoys broad support within Congress—and for good reason. It provides our most vulnerable preschool children with a chance to begin their education ready and able to learn. I am pleased the conference report makes needed improvements in Head Start, such as staff improvements and program quality, expansion, and review initiatives. We must strive not only to serve more eligible children, but we must also carefully monitor how effective our increased investment in Head Start is. This bill will make sure that we have performance and quality standards, and that every Head Start agency will be fully reviewed.

Mr. Speaker. I urge my colleagues to support the LIHEAP, Head Start, Community Services Block Grant reauthorization conference report.

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MILLER], also a member of the subcommittee.

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to the Head Start Amendments Act of 1994.

As a member of both the Education and Labor Committee and the Subcommittee on Human Resources, I do so with some regret, because I strongly support the concept of Head Start, a program that attempts to help low-income children in their formative learning years.

In an age of falling test scores and rising illiteracy, we need to invest more in our children to help them prepare to succeed both in school and in life. We could do even better if we got the Federal Government out of the administration of Head Start, block granting the needed funds to the States.

But the rest of this conference report is unacceptable. It undermines legitimate programs like Head Start by authorizing massive increases in funding for Community Service Block Grants and the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program—two programs filled with pork barrel and unnecessary spending. Instead of increasing their funding, we should be talking about eliminating CSBG and LIHEAP outright.

When the President presented his proposal to reauthorize the programs included in this bill, Head Start, CSBG and LIHEAP, he focused on quality and efficiency. He proposed funding the CSBG Program at $434 million and the LIHEAP Program at $730 million. This conference report, however, increases CSBG to $595 million—a 40-percent increase. LIHEAP, is increased to $2 billion—over a 100-percent increase of the President's proposal.

What are we thinking? While asking the American people to tighten their belts to pay for one tax hike after another, Congress continues to refuse to make even modest reductions in Federal spending.

We cannot even maintain the status quo, but continue to increase the funding for unnecessary programs even beyond the President's own request.

The uphill battle we are fighting to balance the budget is getting steeper every time we mark up a bill in the Education and Labor Committee. We saw H.R. 6 grow by $1.6 billion during the committee mark, and now CSBG has grown by $161 million and LIHEAP has grown by $1.2 billion. If we can not make even a small step toward reducing spending and working together with the President, how will we ever be able to move toward fiscal sanity?

This conference report also bugs me because many of the changes made to the Head Start Program in both the committee and the conference are improvements on the program. I commend the improvements, including enhanced parental involvement provisions, set-asides for quality improvement, and attempts to expand the impact of the program.

But I cannot allow the bloated CSBG and LIHEAP programs to get a free ride on the backs of the American taxpayers. This is just one more example of a broken Federal budget process that allows massive omnibus spending authorizations to sail through the House untouched. Time and again, I watch wasteful, duplicative, and unnecessary spending boondoggles ride piggy-back on otherwise constructive programs. It happened several weeks ago on the crime bill, and it is happening again today.

In the name of fiscal sanity, join me in voting against this conference report. We can do much better.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ROEMER].

Mr. ROEMER. I thank the chairman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to begin by rising and thanking a number of people who are responsible for, maybe, one of the wisest and smartest investments that we will make in our Nation's children in this session of Congress. I would like to thank the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD], the gentleman from California [Mr. MARTINEZ], the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], and the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI], and staff members like Carole Stringer and Alan Lopatin, for their hard work on this bill.

This is smart and wise because it is proactive, it is preventive, and it invests in education for our children.

When 30 years ago, Mr. Speaker, when we first came up with Head Start, we crafted what we thought was a good bipartisan bill to solve problems for at-risk children. We ran into a number of significant problems over the last 30 years; trends have changed, times have changed, families and children have changed.

We have now brought this bill up to these trends to deal with the problems in our families and with our children and respond to the need to reform our welfare children. This invests in and anticipates those changes. It also is reflective of the good job that Congress is trying to do with its oversight function.

Here we worked in a bipartisan way to try to anticipate these trends and try to expand the programs, 0 to 3, try to improve recordkeeping for immunizations and academic records, try to improve the quality of teachers and teachers aides that we get; that is one of the best investments we can make with the problems that our children are running into these days.

I would also like to commend the inclusion in this particular bill of the National Youth Sports Program. Here is a program that brings at-risk children to college campuses. Many children never get this experience in their entire lives. When I visited the program at Notre Dame, children told me that, "This school, Notre Dame, isn't just for rich or white people, this is for everybody."

So the National Youth Sports Program does give the exposure and the experience to young people to learn academically, to get physicals, to learn about the dangers of drugs, and to live on a college campus for a few weeks and know with confidence that they can go to that school someday.

So I applaud the committee's inclusion of the Community Services Block Grant and the National Youth Sports Program, and I highly applaud this bipartisan Head Start bill.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report on S. 2000, the Head Start Act Amendments of 1994.

Title I of the bill, which reauthorizes Head Start for 4 years, responds to the recommendations of Secretary Shalala's Advisory Committee on Head Start Quality and Expansion. This legislation moves toward ensuring that a 21st century Head Start Program is more responsive to the changing needs of American families. The agreement also establishes a new infant and toddler program which promises to build upon the successes of Head Start to give families with very young children a chance at breaking the cycle of poverty.

The agreement also includes provisions to enhance the linkages between Head Start and schools to help secure the gains made by Head Start youngsters as they enter elementary school.

The agreement also reauthorizes the Community Services Block Grant which sustains the good work of community action agencies. Also reauthorized under this act is the National Youth Sports Program [NYSP] which brings thousands of economically disadvantaged youth, ages 10 to 16, onto college and university campuses nationwide. For most of these participants, NYSP is their first exposure to a college campus. For more than a quarter of a century, NYSP has provided sports instruction and a host of other enrichments, such as education and career counseling, math and science instruction and medical examinations for our Nation's underprivileged youth.

I believe that both Head Start and National Youth Sports represent successful intervention programs for economically disadvantaged youth that reaffirm our commitment to invest in our Nation's children. I urge my colleagues to support the conference agreement.

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. GILMAN. I thank the gentlewoman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of S. 2000, the Head Start Act Amendments of 1994. I would like to commend all of the conferees for their diligent work on this important measure and particularly the gentleman from Michigan, the commission's distinguished chairman, Mr. FORD, and the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and the staunch supporters of Head Start, the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI] and the gentleman from California [Mr. MARTINEZ] the distinguished subcommittee chairman.

This conference report improves program quality and management accountability at Head Start centers around our Nation. In addition, and more importantly, this measure extends Head Start services to families with infants and toddlers, reserves funds for teachers' salaries and facility upgrades, and requires the Department of Health and Human Services [HHS] to consider a grant recipient's past performance when allocating funds. Moreover, an important aspect of this bill, allows Head Start agencies to construct sorely needed new facilities.

Mr. Speaker, we all recognize that our Nation's children are our most precious resource. Head Start has enjoyed bipartisan support since its inception some 29 years ago and has proven to be an invaluable program for our entire Nation.

Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to fully support this conference report.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MEEHAN].

Mr. MEEHAN. I thank the chairman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, the Head Start Program is one of the few programs that directly helps children and demonstrably improves their chances to live and learn to their full potential. Head Start provides more than just early education. It give poor children a shot at decent health care, nutrition, and social services, at a critical stage in their development.

We cannot talk about solving the crime problem, ending welfare dependency, or improving the quality of life for ourselves and our children without addressing the simple fact that our kids need help. Too many children come from disadvantaged backgrounds and will never be able to overcome the barriers they face, unless we help provide them a level playing field. Head Start is one way to give children a chance.

Children who are abused, children who do not get adequate medical care, and children who are simply neglected are children who fail in life. Their growing numbers threaten to undermine our economic competitiveness and destroy our social fabric while condemning millions to a lifetime of dysfunction and underachievement.

Some people say we should not expand Head Start. I say we should not expand any Government program without thinking about how to make it work better, and that is what this reauthorization does. It makes children eligible for Head Start earlier to reflect emerging evidence about the importance of reaching children before preschool. It builds on proven success stories to reform the existing program.

A lot of Government programs begin with good intentions but never work as planned. This is a program that deserves support because we know it works and because we know it is desperately needed to give poor children a future with jobs, families, and hope rather than poverty, prison, and despair, Let us pass the conference report.

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, I am extremely honored and delighted and privileged to yield 1 minute to the wonderful gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GUNDERSON].

Mr. GUNDERSON. Mr. Speaker, we spend a lot of time in this House talking about crime, anticrime legislation. I would like to suggest to my colleagues the bill in front of you now will do more to prevent crime in this country than anything we did during that 3 weeks' marathon, because the most important thing we can do at the Federal Government level is get to children at risk at an early age. That is why I encourage you to support this conference report. Head Start will get to literally thousands, if not millions, of children at risk before they begin school so that they can be a full partner in that school.

In Wisconsin, 9,000 kids alone are going to benefit from this program. This conference report connects it more to education than the system of Head Start has been in the past.

Second, in the community services block grant we have included a number of programs, such as the National Youth Sports Program, which goes to the same children at risk during their elementary school years, during the summer, making sure they are not only busy doing good things but that they have not only an athletic component but an educational component as well.

I say to my colleagues, "So, when you vote today on this conference report, remember this is the real way we at the Federal Government can truly fight crime."

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER], chairman of the Democratic Caucus.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD] for his generosity and say that I rise in strong support of all three of the components of this legislation. I think this conference report makes some key improvements in the Head Start Program, and I agree with the previous speaker, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GUNDERSON], who has been so eloquently described by the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI].

But, Mr. Speaker, I rise to say a few cautionary words about a provision in the conference report that we did not include in the House bill. I am referring to the section authorizing the Secretary to approve construction of Head Start facilities where other alternatives are unavailable.

I do appreciate that this section of the conference report says that, in using this new authority, the Secretary shall promote collocation of Head Start with other programs serving low-income children and families. But I remain convinced, and I would urge the committee members to focus on this issue, that construction of new buildings to house Head Start may well act as a centrifugal force, decentralizing services for disadvantaged families at a time when education, social service, and health care programs should be brought together in one easily accessible location for those who need them most.

Mr. Speaker, in an excellent speech at Georgetown University in February, Secretary Riley mentioned just such a model, which he referred to as and I quote, "early childhood family centers."

We need early childhood family centers. That is the goal we should be working toward, and it is one of my major priorities as a member of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education.

If we can renovate public school buildings to include Head Start centers, that is money well spent. If we can construct Head Start facilities that will include a maternal and child health center and after-school programs, that is money well spent. And, in my opinion; and this is the key they should be collocated on public school grounds whenever possible, not so the public schools can have ownership of all the programs, but so that the people who so desperately need these services to become effective, productive, taxpaying citizens will have the ability to access them in a comprehensive way.

The language in the conference report allows the Secretary to use Head Start construction authority in just that way. I would urge the Secretary, and hope to encourage this in the appropriations bill as well, to use the authority only in that way, and to use it sparingly, since quality improvement and expansion to full-day, full-year programs should be the first priority for Head Start right now.

Again, Mr. Speaker, this conference report is a good blueprint for taking Head Start into the 21st century, and I commend it to my colleagues.

Let me say to those colleagues who say that Head Start works well that it does in most instances, but let us not fool ourselves. By just saying we support Head Start it does not mean that we are giving quality services to young children. There are some programs that are not working well, and I commend the chairman of the subcommittee and the ranking member for also making sure that this conference report includes significant oversight and incentives for performance, and where performance is failing; that is to say we are failing young children, that we will take appropriate action.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD] for having yielded so generously of his time.

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BALLENGER].

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to address my remarks to title IV of the conference report which authorizes the community-based family resource programs.

The conference report incorporates what was best about the House and Senate's respective versions of title IV. It adopts the House's language to ensure that all families are eligible to be served—including families of children with disabilities, and it adopts the Senate's program consolidations that combine differing resources into a single funding stream that will help States pursue systemic reforms in the way they deliver family resource services.

The title IV provisions that originally passed the Senate had several positive components. However, I felt that the Senate legislation did not clearly include families of children with disabilities and did not ensure that States would address the unique needs that these families experience.

To improve the legislation, we called upon many of the ideas that are being generated from the family support movement—ideas like strategic planning to break down statutory and bureaucratic barriers that make it difficult to provide services tailored to a family's needs, and bringing the family to the center of the decisionmaking process.

I believe that this legislation has the potential to break the long tradition in Congress of creating separate programs for the disabled and the nondisabled. Instead, this program creates a single approach to statewide systems change and coordination of existing resources that can help all families—including families of children that are disabled.

I know that many families of children with disabilities are naturally skeptical. They fear that, in the statewide and community-wide planning process, their unique needs will be overlooked. I encourage these families not to be skeptical observers, but to become active participants in the planning process and to try to create positive change. I would note that this program will provide seed money to every State to begin the systems change process, and that families must be alert to take advantage of this opportunity.

For my part, I plan to continue working in Congress to include the themes of systems integration and family-centeredness in other legislation under the committee's jurisdiction, and to ensure that legislation is responsive to the needs of all individuals, including individuals with disabilities.

I would like to express my appreciation to Subcommittee Chairman OWENS and Senator KASSEBAUM and DODD for working cooperatively to develop an excellent compromise that can help meet the diverse needs of all families.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS].

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, I would also like to add my congratulations to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD], and the gentleman from California [Mr. MARTINEZ] and all my colleagues on both sides of the aisle who helped to make this legislation possible. I would like to express my appreciation for the additional money for LIHEAP and the recognition of the fact that LIHEAP is an emergency program, a program giving funds to victims of emergencies, and to recognize that in the future we have to have that more flexible and increase the funding. We have witnessed the passage of an $8-billion program for earthquake relief for California, a $6-billion program for relief for the victims of the Midwest floods, a $6-billion program before that for relief of the hurricane victims in Florida. We recognize natural disasters, and we rally to the aid of victims, everybody except in the Northeast when they have massive snow storms, and nobody wants to recognize that those victims also deserve the help of their Government. Government should come to the aid of victims, certainly people who are victimized by natural disasters. LIHEAP, as inadequate as it is, at least moved a few inches forward, and we praise the conference for that. Community services block grant is contained in this program. As a former community action director I regret the fact that community action agencies are still the most underrated agencies receiving Federal funds.

Most of the community activist agencies in this Nation receive only about 10 to 15 percent of their total funding from the community services block grant. The other funds come from money that they are able to acquire from other sources.

They get the biggest bang for the buck of any social program funded by the Government. Yet that is not recognized. They are held at a stable across-the-board rate, and no rewards are there for the great job that the community action agencies are doing.

Head Start, of course, everybody recognizes is a great program. The quality of Head Start has been eroded as a result of cutbacks in funding. We are replacing those funds now and insisting that the quality of Head Start be restored to what it was in its early days.

Most important in the Head Start Program, in this particular package, is the fact it has flexibility which allows for facilities to be renovated and even for facilities to be constructed.

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. ROHRABACHER].

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the conference report on S. 2000, the Head Start Act Amendments of 1994. I would like to note that I have always supported the Head Start.

Head Start has been successful because it is a specially targeted program which prepares disadvantaged children for their first years of school. It provides these children with the tools they will need to help them achieve educational success.

Many immigrant families depend on Head Start to give their children a chance to learn English. The Head Start Program currently meets the needs of non-English speaking children through bilingual programs. This is questionable enough. I don't need to state the importance of ensuring that these children become fluent in English in order to assimilate successfully in our society.

This particular bill, however, goes beyond the current scope of the Head Start Program. Currently, Head Start must provide special services for "non-English language children." This bill strikes this particular language and replaces it with "non-English language background children and their families."

Under this bill, children who already speak English will also receive instruction in their families' native languages. Mr. Speaker, it is absurd to think that we are going to use the Head Start Program to provide foreign language instruction to children who already speak English!

Liberals are so intent on "balkanizing" this country, it is no longer enough to provide special bilingual programs through Head Start. Now, this bill requires that we must also provide instruction in the language of their parents' homeland to English-speaking children.

It is often said that Head Start only reaches half of those children who are eligible. Perhaps that's because we are including millions of illegal aliens and their children as being eligible for Head Start. Under current law, which is continued in this bill, illegal aliens and their children qualify for all the services provided by Head Start. I would also note that illegal aliens are fully eligible for the energy assistance provisions of this bill, as well.

Mr. Speaker, as I said earlier, I have always been a strong supporter of Head Start. For the last several decades Head Start has provided disadvantaged children with the tools they need to succeed in our society. I must, however, question the wisdom of enacting an unlimited authorization for services which go beyond the traditional scope of Head Start. The Head Start Program was designed to help disadvantaged students successfully assimilate into society. I simply do not understand how providing instruction to English-speaking children in their parents' language will further the legitimate goals of the Head Start Program. Therefore, I oppose S. 2000 and ask my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROHRABACHER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I wanted to make sure Members knew, in the conference statement of the managers, we stated the conferees wish to emphasize the importance of assisting non-English speaking families in becoming literate in English.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I support bilingual education programs that are aimed at teaching non-English speakers to speak English. I have supported that consistently. I think that is a worthy and necessary goal. But this is not the segment of the bill which I am opposing now. I believe the expenditure of funds to teach young children who already speak English to speak the native language of their parents, to teach them in Spanish or French or whatever that language is, I think that is a waste of money.

Mr. GOODLING. If the gentleman would yield further, I would think that would be stretching one's imagination greatly. As I said, the whole emphasis is to get the parent and the child to speak English. I cannot imagine that anyone could possibly use funds to do anything other than that.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I had a conversation with a teacher last night that said that is exactly the purpose. My staff has researched this. Unfortunately, that is the purpose of the change in language of this bill.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1½ minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to reassure the gentleman, who touched my heart with his plaintive words that he has always supported Head Start, and he knows it is a good program, and he knows it is good for preparing children to go to school, and he is now bothered by an interpretation of the language of this legislation that is totally erroneous. And I can assure the gentleman that there is no change in the mission of teaching non-English-speaking children to be able to speak it and be literate in English. That is the primary purpose of the language of the bill, and nothing is different in that regard in this reauthorization from all of the years it has been on the books, more than 29 years, except a piece of literature that the gentleman apparently read, instead of reading the bill and the committee report.

That is the only group in this country that says that the language in the bill means what it means. As the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] said, it requires an extreme stretch of the imagination to read that kind of interpretation into it.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. If the gentleman would yield for a question, why then was the language changed in the bill this year? If the purpose was not to change the way the procedure on how children are taught and what they are taught, why was the language changed in this authorization?

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, because there is a change to the extent that we ask the Head Start people to spend more time working with the family and the child, and that called for a clear explanation that we wanted them to break with what happens in some places, where they deal with only the child. And, very frankly, that amendment was very strongly supported from your side of the aisle. It is only fair to tell you that your representatives on the committee brought our attention to the fact that if we are trying to extend this to family involvement, we had better do something to make it consistent.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the following staff for their hard work in helping to ensure a strong bill was crafted and moved through the Congress expeditiously:

On the Education and Labor Committee staff, Alan Lopatin and Kris Gilbert;

On the Human Resources Subcommittee, Les Sweeting, Terry Deschler, Dennis Glavin, and Leslie Harris;

On the minority staff of the Education and Labor Committee, Lee Cowen, Hans Meeder, Vic Klatt, and Mary Ann Fitzgerald;

On the Subcommittee for Select Education and Civil Rights staff, Braden Goetz and Rob MacDonald;

On the Subcommittee on Elementary, Secondary and Vocational Education, Tom Kelly and Jeff MacFarland; and

On the Energy and Commerce Committee, Lisa Kountoupas, Tom Runge, and Karen Hunsicker.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE HEAD START CONCERNS

Some have argued that the conference report would chart a new course for bilingual or non-English language Head Start programs. I offer the following observations:

Since 1965, Head Start has been serving children from low income families as diverse as the American population. In fiscal year 1993, Head Start enrollment included children from a broad group of home language backgrounds including: English (553,000); Spanish (123,000); Native American and related (14,000); Vietnamese (2,700); Chinese (2,500); Hmong (2,400); Haitian (2,200); Cambodian (1,100); and French (242).

While Head Start children come from families where English is not their home language, Head Start is virtually the only program which teaches preschoolers English.

The current Head Start statute requires the Secretary, in designating Head Start agencies to take into account, the plan of an applicant to meet the needs of non-English language children in the community. Section 641(d)(7). This has been the law for more than 2 decades. The only change in S. 2000 is to note that families are a part of Head Start.

The conference report on S. 2000 retains a number of provisions which were part of the House-passed Human Services Amendments of 1994 which deal with the sensitivity of programs to the needs of non-English language background children and their families; 21 of 22 House conferees—14 Democrats, 7 Republicans—signed the conference agreement, along with all Senate conferees.

The joint statement of managers illuminates the intent of the conference report: The conferees wish to emphasize the importance of assisting non-English language families in becoming literate in English. However, this is not intended to prevent programs from utilizing a bilingual approach or from assisting the large number of Hispanic families who receive services under this act from becoming literate in Spanish, nor to prevent efforts by Indian, or Native Alaskan, or Hawaiian programs to promote literacy in indigenous languages.

Critics have suggested that under the terms of the conference report, the Secretary could terminate a program for failing to be bilingual. The Secretary has discretion in establishing standards and would be expected to establish standards consistent with 29 years of program experience to address community needs, as appropriate.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Washington [Mrs. UNSOELD].

Mrs. UNSOELD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the Chairman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I want to compliment the chairman, the chairman of the subcommittee, and the ranking member of the Committee on Education and Labor. This is a super bill, and I rise to give it all the support I have. I am so delighted with the administration, with President Clinton, for making an emphasis for Head Start, and particularly the birth to 3-years-of-age.

Last month I held forums in my district on early childhood education and violence prevention. The overwhelming testimony expressed by expert panelists and attendees alike was that antisocial behavior begins from failed human relations at a very early age, when conscience and compassion have not been taught.

We must help families with young children and more must be done to help children and families avoid the problems that lead our youth to gangs, drugs, and senseless violence. If we assist struggling families with young children, we help all families and all children.

Parents will be given the opportunity to interact with other parents, learn more about basic child development, positive discipline techniques, and parent-child communication skills.

The foundation of antisocial behavior is laid in those very early years of childhood so it is not only wise to invest in children and families, it is incumbent on us as elected officials to do so. That is why I am very pleased that provisions from my bill, H.R. 4270, were incorporated into the final version of the reauthorization.

A few weeks ago, the Carnegie Foundation released a landmark study focusing on our Nation's 12 million children under the age of 3. This report concluded that we have got to give more weight to programs that serve these families with very young children. The report also outlines the risks associated with not supporting these families. By supporting them, we save money that can be spent in other ways.

This is a great bill. I urge everyone to support it.

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM] for an interesting reaction that I am sure the Chair will enjoy.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, first of all, I would like to say that this is one Member that will miss the gentleman from Michigan, Chairman FORD. He has been a tough, old bird at the chairmanship, but I have found that also when a Member works with the chairman, he will work with them. I appreciate that.

I would ask my friend, the gentleman from California [Mr. ROHRABACHER], who is a good, close friend, and he is a good conservative, I would ask him, as a conservative, to support this conference report.

First of all, Dan Quayle does not have a limit on family values. This bill supports family values. As a mechanic used to say, "It is pay me now or pay me later." Without this bill, the payment later is tenfold. That is a conservative position, especially on the economy.

I am concerned about illegal aliens, especially in the State of California, as my friend. We both support English as a first language. We are not talking about that here as a bill.

Believe it or not, in some areas of our country we have English-speaking students that do not have the literary skills to succeed in school. Are Members going to tell me that I cannot improve their English so that they can succeed in school? No. And we do not do the same thing with other language as well.

The bill supports family involvement. That is what Dan Quayle wanted. That is what most of us want, as conservatives.

The minorities, up to 45 percent of many of the minorities do not complete high school. If that is the case, what at best are they going to do? They are going to get a low-income paying job.

We are going to have to pay them welfare, or they are going to be on unemployment, which we extend in this body many, many times. And think of the cost of that. And think, as my friend, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GUNDERSON] mentioned, the application to crime.

So this is a conservative position to support this conference report.

I would also like to thank, besides the chairman, I would like to thank a fellow San Diegon, Dr. Pasant and Secretary Riley. I think they are bright stars in the Clinton administration.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I just want to correct part of the gentleman's opening statement. He is a young bird, not an old bird.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I accept the correction.

Mr. GOODLING. But bird he is.

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to consider and to have taken part in the development of legislation to authorize the Human Services Act.

As many of my colleagues know, and we have heard, Head Start is approaching its 30th anniversary. This program clearly has an impressive history, but it also has a whole new set of challenges for the future.

One of those challenges is to address, in response to recent reports, the disparities in the quality of services provided by Head Start programs and to eliminate the fade-out effect in children once they leave Head Start.

We have aggressively confronted these problems in this bill by including measures to assure greater and more consistent quality, by putting poor performance programs on notice that the status quo is over and enhancing services to help parents become full partners in the education of their children.

By making a Head Start center's continued funding contingent upon quality service, this legislation will inject new levels of accountability and responsibility into this program. By providing parents with a greater voice and an enhanced role in these programs and by providing necessary family literary services and parenting skills training, this legislation truly empowers the most important people in a child's life, their parents.

Let me just say, relative to the discussion that just took place, one of the changes we do make is to require as part of the family, a new part of the family literacy requirements, English as a second language service to help teach parents English and enable them to further engage in the development and the education of their children.

I am also encouraged to see a renewal of all these ideas that were originally presented in Republican legislation. It was an honor to take the lead from Members like the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] and Senator KASSEBAUM, who talked about taking courageous but necessary steps to make a good program a great program.

Naturally, I am encouraged to see a renewal of the LIHEAP program in this legislation. The LIHEAP program, as the Speaker knows, is important to the whole country but especially to colder states.

My State of New York is the largest recipient of LIHEAP funds and would be one of the hardest hit by the proposed budget cuts. This bill and conference report helps to restore that.

Mr. Speaker, it has been my pleasure to work with the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING], the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD] and the gentleman from California [Mr. MARTINEZ] to develop this comprehensive bipartisan reauthorization package. I want to thank them for their leadership on these issues.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. KENNELLY].

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SERRANO). The gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. KENNELLY] is recognized for a 1½ minutes.

Mrs. KENNELLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the conference report on S. 2000, to authorize appropriations for Head Start, the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program and the Community Services Block Grant.

I would like to comment just briefly on two programs that have enormous impact in my State. Head Start is one of the most successful Federal programs to date and one I have consistently supported. Last year's appropriation served more than 730,000 children across this country. And while that may seem like a large number, it represents only 40 percent of those children eligible for Head Start.

S. 2000 would reauthorize Head Start through fiscal year 1998 and would strengthen and improve the quality of existing programs. Child development services would also be expanded. A particular highlight of Head Start is the "Initiative on Families with Infants and Toddlers" which would provide early, continuous and comprehensive child development and family services to low-income families with very young children. Pregnant women and families with children under age three, who meet the low-income standards under the regular Head Start program, would be eligible to participate in this initiative.

Another important piece of S. 2000 is the reauthorization of the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program. LIHEAP has been highly successful in serving the needs of low-income elderly, disabled and working poor in Connecticut and is particularly important in light of the harsh winter the Northeast just experienced. I am pleased that the agreement includes Senate language to authorize $2 billion in each of fiscal years 1995 through 1999, $1.27 billion more than the administration's request for fiscal year 1995.

The core purpose of providing heating assistance to low-income households based on total household income has been maintained. States, within existing eligibility standards, may give priority to households with the highest energy costs or needs in relation to their income.

The agreement would also make permanent the authorization to appropriate $600 million each year in emergency funds to meet the needs of residents in States that have suffered natural disasters. Under current law, the process of seeking release of these funds created difficulty in terms of timing for States trying to meet immediate crisis situations. Permanent authorization of emergency funds is a significant step to facilitating better and more timely action.

I am also pleased that the language of House Concurrency Resolution 202 was included in this agreement expressing that LIHEAP should be a priority to enable the working poor, the disabled, and the low-income elderly meet their energy costs and needs.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support passage of the conference report on S. 2000 to preserve services like Head Start and LIHEAP that are vital to thousands of Americans.

Mr. EWING. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to express my strong support for S. 2000, the conference report which reauthorizes Head Start funding through fiscal year 1998.

Since its inception in 1968, the Head Start Program has played a significant part in the lives of millions of America's children. The benefits of early intervention are well known, especially when it comes to making better futures for low-income children. The Head Start conference report guarantees that this important program will continue. The conference report also addresses the important issues of program quality improvement, management accountability of Head Start centers, and allows agencies to construct new Head Start facilities if adequate facilities are not available.

The conference report also reauthorizes for 1 year the State Dependent Care Development Grants Act. The administration's proposed 1995 budget would consolidate this program with the Child Care and Development Block Grant. The Temporary Care and Crisis Nurseries, and the Child Development Associate Scholarship programs are also to be included in this consolidation.

Many of my constituents whom are involved in providing child care have expressed concern about the redtape and State bureaucracy which might prevent the moneys from going to important programs which have received funding in the past. I hope that the preservation of separate funding for these programs will be seriously considered for fiscal year 1995. It would ensure continuation of these important services, many of which work in conjunction with Head Start in helping to make better futures for our Nation's children.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 2000, the Human Services Amendments of 1994. This important legislation reauthorizes for 4 years the widely acclaimed Head Start Act as well as the Community Services Block Grant Act, and reauthorizes for 5 years the low-income Home Energy Assistance Program.

HEAD START ACT

The Head Start Act Amendments of 1994 fulfill the commitment of the Congress and the Clinton administration to the American people to expand and strengthen this extraordinarily successful program for the development of children 3 and 4 years of age. Funded primarily by the Federal Government, Head Start programs are community based. Local agencies and program sponsors respond to local needs and coordinate the delivery of services with local organizations in communities throughout America.

Mr. Speaker, few among us deny the exemplary record of Head Start in enriching the lives of the most vulnerable members of our society—our children. The legislation under consideration today builds on the illustrious educational achievements of Head Start by: Strengthening the specific performance standards Head Start programs must need in order to continue to be funded; Expanding Head Start programs in increased areas and in areas of greatest need; and funding a much-needed and long-awaited initiative to serve low-income children before they reach their third birthday.

PERFORMANCE STANDARDS

Critical to the continued success of Head Start is the requirement that individual programs meet specific performance standards in each of the five major services provided: Physical and mental health; nutrition; education; social services; and parent involvement. The legislation we consider today reserves at least twenty five percent of Head Start funding to enhance program quality and to enable local programs to meet their specific performance standards. Such funds may be spent not only to add teachers, social workers, and other professionals but also to fund in-service professional development programs and other activities.

A growing body of evidence suggests that Head Start eligible families are facing greater and more complex problems as a result of the drugs and violence that plague far too many of our committees. As a result, the legislation also makes funds available to augment the capacity of Head Start programs to coordinate with other community based organizations the services that make Head Start programs so successful.

PROGRAM EXPANSION

Currently, only fewer than 40 percent of eligible 3- and 4-year-olds are served by the Head Start Program. The legislation makes funds available to continue to expand the availability of such programs in an orderly fashion. Funds for program expansion are critical because the Nation's population for poor children eligible and in need of Head Start programs far exceeds the availability of programs.

INFANT AND TODDLER PROGRAMS

Mr. Speaker, perhaps the most exciting aspect of the legislation we are considering today is the recognition that healthy child development for many of the children served by Head Start must begin before children reach 3 and 4 years of age. Accordingly, the legislation reserves funds for the initiation or extension of Head Start programs for infants and toddlers younger than 3 years of age. These family centered programs will offer the full range of Head Start services in order to promote family self-sufficiency, ensure good health, and enhance child educational achievement.

LIHEAP

The human services amendments of 1994 also reauthorize the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Act of 1981 [LIHEAP]. Mr. Speaker, it is beyond peradventure that many of the working poor, the disabled, and low-income elderly have trouble paying for their energy needs because they live in communities with high energy costs that consume a disproportionate share of their income. Indeed, in fiscal year 1990, LIHEAP assisted over 6 million low-income households to meet the costs of their energy needs. However, the programs currently serve less than 24 percent of eligible households. Nevertheless, the Administration proposed a 51 percent cut in appropriated funds for LIHEAP.

I strongly support not only the continuation of LIHEAP but also the expenditure of all funds appropriated in fiscal year 1995 as well as an increase in such expenditures in fiscal year 1996. The legislation before us today continues and strengthens LIHEAP. For example, over 7 million eligible households have energy bills that exceed 15 percent of their annual income. Accordingly, States will be able to target their assistance to households with the highest energy costs in relation to household income. In addition, funds may be used to subsidize low-cost weatherization and cost-effective energy-related home repairs. The legislation also authorizes the President to request funds in response to truly unusual energy emergencies, such as the prolonged and bitter cold weather many communities experienced during the winter of 1993, or natural disasters experienced in many other communities in 1993.

Mr. Speaker, in the past, many perceived that LIHEAP failed to establish sufficiently precise and uniform goals to assist State agencies in the administration and implementation of the program. As a result, during the full committee markup of this bill, I offered and the committee accepted an amendment that directed the Secretary of Health and Human Services to develop performance goals and measurements in consultation with LIHEAP grantees in order to assist States in evaluating their success in achieving the purposes of the program. As a result of this amendment, State and local agencies will know what is expected. The development of such statements of program goals together with the collection of specific performance data should strengthen the administration of LIHEAP and assure the achievement of its goals.

I urge my colleagues to support S. 2000.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support for the Head Start Act amendments conference report. This conference report not only reauthorizes the very important and successful Head Start Program, it also reauthorizes the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program and the Community Services Block Grant Program, and It consolidates several programs into a new community-based Family Resource Program.

While all these programs are important, I want speak for a moment about the Head Start Program. For the past 20 years or so there have been a number of experimental policies and programs intended to address students who are considered to be at-risk. Unfortunately, over half of the minority children in this Nation's large inner city and poor rural school districts are destined to drop out of school because they are not adequately prepared to begin their education. One of the major obstacles preventing inner city children from success in achieving their educational goals is the pervasive poverty in their communities that they must deal with every day. Head Start, a program that was developed in the 1960's when the Federal Government declared its "war on poverty" addresses this issue directly. The program provides services in comprehensive early childhood development, education, health, nutrition, and other related social services to preschool children and their families. The goal is to improve the conditions surrounding a child so that he or she is prepared succeed in later school and life. To this day, in the 1990's the battle continues and Head Start has been and will continue to be one of the most potent weapons we have in our arsenal in the war against poverty. It is becoming clearer every day that young children in inner city schools are the victims of isolation from broader educational opportunities and the doors that those opportunities open in job market. These kinds need to get the schooling that will enable them to proceed to advanced education and ultimately to enter the economic and cultural mainstream of this Nation. The consequences of not giving these children an adequate chance for a good education are: unemployment, crime, violence, drug problems, teenage pregnancy and increasing school drop out rates.

Without the programs reauthorized in this conference report, we as a society will end up paying for the consequences in one way or another, therefore it is imperative that we approve this conference report and give these kids the opportunity to get the most out of their education and provide for better living conditions for them and their families.

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the conference report on S. 2000, the Head Start Act amendments. Specifically, I would like to comment on the necessity of mandatory funding for Head Start and the inclusion of multilingual programs reflective of the needs of a Head Start community.

If our Nation is to provide for our future leadership in the global market, we must invest in the education of our children. Head Start puts our words into action by providing services for children most at-risk and in need, at a time in their lives that is crucial to their progress in developing to their full potential. Providing for the education of non-English-speaking children, and ensuring services for their parents, plays an important role in the mission of Head Start to prepare all participating children for the challenges of school.

There are some people who would have us believe that this bill requires that Head Start applicants teach children in a language other than English. Let me be clear when I say that non-English instruction is not required in this act. However, with one-fourth of Head Start participants having a non-English background, a background where children live in homes where English is not the language used for the majority of conversation, it is important for Head Start applicants to develop a plan to meet the needs of these eligible participants. To do otherwise would be to base Head Start educational programming on exclusion, rather than inclusion.

Four-year-old children living in low-income families face an uphill battle in acquiring an education. Four-year-old children without an understanding of English, or even a proficiency in their own language, have an even more difficult time. Without some help in their native language these children could be left behind, intimated by their teachers and not understood by their peers, left to start again the circle of poverty that brought them into the Head Start situation. It is necessary for Head Start applicants to reach out to these non-English background children with staff that can communicate with them and help them on their way to mastering English.

The basis for Head Start, and the very reason for its success, is that it is based on the development of a family. As low-income children learn, their parents are also encouraged to complete GED's, participate in job counseling and are encouraged to attend ESL—English as a second language—courses. Advocating the use of local multilingual organizations in the development of a Head Start plan encourages the participation of parents in the Head Start program and provides a stable support structure for participating children's education. This act codifies past practices of Head Start organizations and serves as a reminder that inclusion of all types of local organizations in the planning stages of a Head Start strategy leads to the full inclusion of children from non-English backgrounds.

A Head Start program that plans for full inclusion of all students and parents better meets the needs of the participants and their community and helps fulfill the requirement that children be prepared for the transition to elementary school. It must be acknowledged that the family language is the basis for communication between parent and child and is a part of the family's culture. Head Start has done this over time, and time has shown that children leaving Head Start use English. Studies have proven that Head Start provides the jump start which better prepares children for the challenges of school.

In order to lead internationally, we must devote time, energy, and money to the education of our children. Head Start has been a proven mechanism for ensuring that children who are often left behind in this society are given the chance to become contributing members of our society. Support for this conference report translates into an endorsement of our children, and will be an investment reaped tenfold in the future.

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report to accompany S. 2000, the Human Services Amendment of 1994.

This conference agreement provides for a 4-year extension and improvement of Head Start, the community services block grant, low-income home energy assistance, and community-based family resources programs.

These are programs which, over the years, I have enthusiastically supported. They help and they work well because they give a hand up instead of a hand out.

Thus, in providing preschool services, critical community services, and energy assistance, they successfully promote, protect, defend, and enhance human dignity.

I would like to thank the subcommittee chairman, Mr. MARTINEZ, and the ranking republican, Ms. MOLINARI for their leadership in developing an excellent bill which has moved quickly and smoothly through the process. I would also like to thank them for their support and assistance for in including in this conference agreement several improvements which I sponsored.

The first improvement is language related to Head Start to elementary school transition. Research indicates that the smooth transition of children from preschool through the early elementary grades is important, yet not very prevalent.

Consequently, I have worked, in this bill and H.R. 6, the Elementary and Secondary Education Act reauthorization bill, to improve the transition efforts and activities of both public elementary schools and Head Start Programs.

It is my hope that as both preschools and elementary schools reach out to help, disadvantaged children will increasingly build upon the gains they received in programs like Head Start. The second improvement I sponsored is the authorization of a new activity in low-income home energy assistance called REACH, [residential energy assistance challenge option].

REACH is a discretionary activity which will enable community-based organizations to help the poor stay current on energy bills and, at the same time, improve their energy conservation and bill management.

Mr. Speaker, this is an excellent agreement and I urge its adoption.

Mr. FRANKS of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 2000, a bill to reauthorize the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program and the Head Start Programs. These programs have been effective in helping those in poverty, especially children, to get through difficult economic times. My constituents in Connecticut have not shared in the economic recovery taking place in the rest of the country, and this bill is very important to us.

I am pleased to see that this bill does not make cuts to the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program, or LIHEAP. LIHEAP provides Federal heating assistance to over 75,000 low-income households in Connecticut. These households are mainly made up of elderly, disabled, or working poor individuals and families. LIHEAP was especially important to them this past winter, when my State experienced exceptionally cold weather.

Considering the importance of LIHEAP to my State, I was disturbed when President Clinton released his budget earlier this year with major cuts in LIHEAP funding. Even though many frivolous programs appear in this year's budget, President Clinton instead chose LIHEAP as a program to be cut by 50 percent. President Clinton spent three winters in Connecticut. He should have remembered the cold winters we experience in the Northeast and thought about how LIHEAP dollars have been dollars well spent. LIHEAP has probably saved lives.

Earlier this year I cosponsored a bill calling for LIHEAP to provide an equal or better level of services in the coming years. Program cuts have forced the State to significantly cut back on LIHEAP benefits to households during the past 3 years. I am pleased to report that the language in the bill I cosponsored has been included in the bill before us today.

I also support allowing States to set eligibility standards which best meet the needs of recipients. Because of my State's relatively high cost of living, it is important that the State determine the guidelines under which a household would be available for heating assistance. This bill today maintains current law prohibiting the Federal Government from regulating the State use of LIHEAP funds.

If the President's proposal had become law, the State of Connecticut would have lost over $14 million in energy assistance this year alone. I support this bill, because it rejects the President's proposal and provides the funds the entire Northeast needs to keep low-income residents warm next winter.

This bill also reauthorizes Head Start Programs. During the past 30 years, Head Start has been an important part of our efforts to help disadvantaged children prepare for learning. Connecticut resident Edward Zigler, one of the founders of Head Start, states accurately that the program's approach and commitment to involving parents and strengthening families have come to define the components of effective intervention. During my time serving in Congress, my constituents have attested to the value of the Head Start Programs.

Earlier this Congress, I voted for the Goals 2000: Educate America Act, which established eight national education goals. The first goal is that by the year 2000, all children in America will start school ready to learn. Head Start plays an important role in achieving that goal. It allows disadvantaged children to have access to high-quality and developmentally appropriate preschool programs. Over 13 million poor children have entered school healthier and ready to learn because of Head Start.

Even successful programs such as Head Start need improvements. I am pleased that Republicans were able to play an important role in developing quality assurance mechanisms and parental involvement components in this bill. As Head Start expands to embrace more children, there are likely to be growing pains. This bill allows Head Start Programs to use Federal funds in the most effective way.

Mrs. COLLINS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise this afternoon in strong support of the conference report on S. 2000, the Head Start Act Amendments of 1994.

As you know, Head Start is a proven program designed to ensure that America's most underprivileged children receive the proper nourishment, medical care, and educational opportunities to enable them to lead healthier, happier, and more productive lives. I have long been an outspoken advocate of the numerous benefits provided to children involved in this program and am very pleased that, under this legislation, Head Start will be expanded and strengthened.

Over the past decade, focused attention upon and comprehensive resources for the troubles affecting a large number of America's underprivileged youngsters and their families was lacking. As a result, all too many of our children have become increasingly exposed to the problems of poverty, hunger, and illness. Head Start has proven extremely effective in combating the struggles faced by individuals living in less fortunate environments and we must utilize its well-developed resources to their full potential.

This conference report contains provisions that will do just that. It will create a new infant and toddler initiative, finally recognizing that, during the most formative years of a child's life, ages 0–3, we must pay close attention to the developmental needs of these youngsters. In addition, this bill will get parents more directly involved in their children's education through family-focused teaching and literacy initiatives. Most importantly, the measure targets those areas most in need of Head Start services and directs the Secretary of HHS to work to provide such services swiftly and effectively.

This legislation will also reauthorize the National Youth Sports Program [NYSP] that has given thousands of disadvantaged and minority youth across the country a chance to experience both the thrill of athletic competition and the many benefits of teamwork. This valuable program provides these youngsters with a positive outlet through which to develop their skills and channel their energy.

Today, with the problems of violence and drug abuse continuing to plague many of our communities, it is imperative that we lend our utmost support to all programs with proven records of steering youth down productive avenues. NYSP is indeed one of these valuable initiatives.

In addition, this conference report recognizes that high priority must be given to aiding the working poor, the disabled, and the low-income elderly in paying their energy bills through the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program [LIHEAP].

LIHEAP annually serves over 6 million low- and fixed-income households in the Nation, including over 650,000 in the State of Illinois. This vital program keeps poor families, as well as older Americans, from having to choose each winter between essential energy services and other daily necessities.

Recently, the amount of LIHEAP funds that have gone to each household eligible for assistance has declined while fuel costs have continued to rise. Today, the States are being forced to turn away a growing number of eligible recipients as lower income households continue to spend three times more of their income on energy than the average American family.

The fair and efficient provision of basic utilities such as winter heating is of utmost importance to low-income Americans, especially those battling with a bitter cold winter season such as that in my city of Chicago. In Illinois last year, over 35,000 households, a large majority of them in Chicago, applied for LIHEAP assistance and were denied for lack of funds. This conference report will work to reverse this unfortunate trend.

Passage of this vital legislation will signal that this Congress is fully committed to putting people first and helping all Americans better provide for themselves and their families and achieve their personal goals. I urge my colleagues to vote "yes" on this conference report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. All time has expired.

Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the conference report.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the conference report.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

Mr. MILLER of Florida changed his vote from "yea" to "nay."

So the conference report was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Speaker, on May 12, 1994, due to an urgent meeting in my district, I unavoidably missed rollcall vote No. 170 on the conference report on S. 2000, the Human Services amendments of 1994. Had I been present, I would have voted "aye."

S. 2000 reauthorizes the Head Start Act, the Community Services Block Grant, and the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program. I strongly support the conference report on S. 2000 which is the result of a collaboration of bipartisan and bicameral efforts. The Head Start Act addresses many issues that have hindered this program over the decades since its inception in 1965.

The Head Start Act dramatically improves the quality standards and procedures for program monitoring. This bill provides for stronger training and technical assistance strategies. It also enhances the parental involvement component to address the changing needs of families today.

In fiscal year 1994, Head Start is estimated to serve 750,000 children. Unfortunately, after almost 30 years of existence, Head Start still only serves about one-third of poor children age 3 to 4. Head Start is an important base for low-income children and their families to build upon as they strive to overcome the innumerable barriers that lie before them.

This bill seeks to better Head Start so that all its participants receive the best quality and most appropriate service possible. With such improvements, Head Start can continue to serve our Nation's poor into the 21st century.

For this reason, I strongly support the conference report on S. 2000.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. GUTIERREZ. Mr. Speaker, at the end of the afternoon of Thursday, April 12, 1994, I was unavoidably absent from this Chamber and therefore missed rollcall vote No. 168, a vote for passage of the reauthorization of the Economic Development Administration, rollcall vote No. 169 regarding Social Security taxes for domestic workers and rollcall vote No. 170 to reauthorize Head Start. I deeply regret I was unable to cast my votes but could I have been here I would have voted "yes."

THE MONTANA WILDERNESS ACT OF 1994

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 423 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 2473.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 2473) to designate certain National Forest lands in the State of Montana as wilderness, to release other National Forest lands in the State of Montana for multiple use management, and for other purposes, with Ms. WOOLSEY in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] will be recognized for 30 minutes, the gentleman from Utah [Mr. HANSEN] will be recognized for 30 minutes, the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS] will be recognized for 7½ minutes, the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ALLARD] will be recognized for 7½ minutes, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. STUDDS] will be recognized for 7½ minutes, and the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG] will be recognized for 7½ minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

Mr. VENTO. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, this initiative, H.R. 2473, is really the work of our colleague, the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS]. The gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS] is not able to be with us at this time. We have agreed with him to proceed with the general debate on this matter, and we assume that all of the time will not be utilized today.

I will be reserving 10 minutes for the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS] upon his return on Tuesday next to use that time in general debate for his statement, and I would ask the indulgence of the other Members not to reserve time at the end of today but to proceed on that basis.

The gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS] is attending the graduation of his son and left here about 30 minutes ago to try to make a plane.

Madam Chairman, this is an enormously important bill. The Montana wilderness proposal involves 6 million acres of land, 3 million of which is classified by this bill as wilderness and other special management areas. It is a classification and a definition of land in Montana in terms of wilderness. Montana has some of the largest noncontiguous blocks of roadless land along with Idaho, in this intermountain west region.

It is the land that has been immortalized in the film and book by Norman MacLain, "A River Runs Through It." It is the "Big Sky" country. It is a magnificent legacy and a natural heritage in Montana. There is no place like these lands in the world.

We in Congress have responsibility in terms of stewardship, in terms of classifying the use of such lands, in terms of passing them on to future generations through our actions on this floor in the week ahead.

The gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS] has done a great job and done it, I might say, with a lot more pressure than most of us face in terms of this issue, as his constituents are most immediately affected by the actions in this measure.

He has shown, Madam Chairman, great courage, great insight, and a great deal of work in the process. He has to live it, sleep it and eat it, I might say, day in and day out. We owe to PAT WILLIAMS and the people of Montana a decision on this important issue.

Madam Chairman, this issue has been before the Congress for well over a decade, in fact 16 years, I think, is what is claimed. In any case it has been a long time that this land has been in the planning process.

Congress has attempted in the past to act on this legislation, and it was vetoed, in fact the only wilderness bill ever vetoed, in 1988 by the then-President Reagan.

I would suggest to my colleagues I think that the President did not act correctly at that time, but, hopefully, we will put that behind us and move ahead now with the type of debate and consideration that will provide for the deliberate consideration and finally the enactment of this legislation which is so important to the Great Sky country. In providing for the preservation of wilderness, we will exercise our responsibility as stewards of our natural heritage and legacy.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HANSEN. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, the issue of Montana wilderness has been considered by this body even before I arrived here nearly 14 years ago. As a member of the Natural Resources Committee, I have participated in numerous hearings and markups on this issue.

Coming from a western public lands State which is 64 percent federally owned and as author of the 1984 Utah Wilderness Act, I believe that decisions on wilderness are best left to the members of the affected State. They are the only ones elected by those who are directly affected by these decisions. Therefore, I agree with Chairman MILLER that we should defer to the members of the delegation for direction.

Unfortunately, the Natural Resources Committee and the House often fails to defer to those members that are duly elected by constituents who live and work in the areas proposed for wilderness. For example, next week the House will consider a 7 million acre wilderness bill for the California desert, which is opposed by all four Members who represent that area.

I personally believe the acreage in this bill is excessive. It designates twice as much wilderness as the professional land managers at the Forest Service recommended in their exhaustive rare II study. In fact, some of the counties affected by H.R. 2473 have voiced their opposition to this bill and I personally believe that local support is very important. However, I will defer to the gentleman from Montana on that matter. In turn, I hope he defers to the four gentleman representing the California desert when H.R. 518 comes up next week.

I am concerned with several precedents in this bill that could become boiler plate language for other wilderness bills. I disagree with the Montana ecosystem and economics study created in section 9, which the Congressional Budget Office claims will cost $8 million. Similarly, I prefer stronger release language to help assure that the 3 million acres released for multiple use is actually managed that way.

Finally, I am concerned that this bill will affect land management decisions and the local economies outside the State of Montana. For example, wilderness and special management designations in northwest Montana will exacerbate the timber supply crisis in Oregon and other nearby States. I supported a reasonable but unsuccessful amendment by Mr. Smith of Oregon, who represents such an affected area.

In conclusion, while I defer to Mr. WILLIAMS generally on his bill affecting his State, I have some reservations. I will support reasonable amendments which I believe improve the bill, but keep the basic package in tact.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. VENTO. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. FARR].

Mr. FARR of California. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Madam Chairman, I would like to inquire of Chairman VENTO regarding the intent of this bill.

Madam Chairman, I am uncomfortable with the wording of the release language in section 11 of the bill.

Section 11 states that the released land "Shall be managed for multiple use in accordance with land and resources management plans" and that "those roadless areas need not be managed for the purpose of protecting their suitability for wilderness designation".

Will this language prohibit consideration of the released land for possible future designation as a wilderness, and does it in any way limit wilderness reviews to be conducted in these areas by the Forest Service?

Mr. VENTO. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FARR of California. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Chairman, the release language does not prohibit consideration of the released land for possible future designation as a wilderness by Congress, nor does it in any way limit future wilderness reviews to be conducted by the Forest Service. This would occur when the forest plans are revised.

Mr. HANSEN. Madam Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ALLARD].

Mr. ALLARD. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

I would like to say at this time I do appreciate the gentleman's leadership on Western issues and his tireless efforts on our behalf.

I would like to make a few comments regarding this legislation; specifically the water language, which is of particular significance to me because it was modeled after similar language contained in the Colorado Wilderness Act, which was passed last year. The Colorado water language was carefully crafted to try to prevent the assertion of a Federal reserve water right. I believe any Federal water language reported out of the House will become boilerplate language for other wilderness legislation facing States in the western part of the United States.

Madam Chairman, when the Montana wilderness bill was originally introduced, those in Congress, as well as water users in Montana, were led to believe that this bill would preclude the creation or assertion of a Federal reserve water right as well. While this originally may have been the intent of H.R. 2473, the present legislation does not reflect this concern. As one who is very familiar with the language in the Colorado wilderness bill and has worked closely on water issues, I can testify that the present language in H.R. 2473, does not protect the water rights of those in Montana. Rather, the changes made in section 4(b) of H.R. 2473 effectively permit the assertion of a Federal reserve water right. In addition, this language sets a bad precedent for preserving State water law throughout the West.

When Mr. WILLIAMS originally introduced H.R. 2473, it read "Nothing in this Act shall be construed as a creation, recognition, disclaimer, relinquishment, or reduction of any water rights of the United States in the State of Montana existing before the date of enactment of this Act." However, the Natural Resources Committee significantly changed this language by striking the words "creation" and "recognition" effectively eliminating the little protection this provision attempted to provide Montana water users.

While I am not saying that by restoring the original language we will make the bill perfect, because this bill is far from perfect, however, it will help improve the bill considerably. By reinserting the original language, water users in Montana will at least be ensured the protection they were told to expect. Several organizations in Montana, including the Montana Farm Bureau Federation. Stockgrowers Association and some of the County Commissioners are just as displeased with the changes that the gentleman from Montana made to this bill in Committee. These Montana groups realize that by removing the two words, they are not protected against the assertion of a Federal reserve water right by the Federal Government in any wilderness areas established by this act.

It is important that the original language is restored, not only for the benefit of those water users in Montana, but for everybody in the West who cares about protecting the most precious private property of all, namely water. The least we can do is restore the original language that Montana water users were promised. Congress has an obligation to protect private property rights and a responsibility to clearly state that principle in this legislation.

Mr. VENTO. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALLARD. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. Madam Chairman, I just wanted to point out that there is a difference of opinion on this. I do not want to take the gentleman's time to debate him, but I wanted to say I think it is timely to point out that, while there is a slight change from the Colorado language, the change we believe is relevant to Montana. I say to the gentleman, there is a provision in the water language that you have before you that says, "on or before the date of enactment of this act," so we are dealing with preexisting conditions—in other words, taking care of it in this way.

Madam Chairman, I understand that the gentleman will want to continue this debate. I think that he has plans for that, and so I will not pursue it at this time with him.

Mr. ALLARD. Madam Chairman, I would like to be able to reserve, along with the rest of the committee members, some time later on so we can continue this debate when maybe the gentleman from Montana would be here to argue that perspective. But in the water language debate that we had in the State of Colorado there was balance on both sides so that those who were concerned about creating a new Federal reserve water——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ALLARD] has expired.

Mr. HANSEN. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ALLARD].

Mr. ALLARD. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Utah [Mr. HANSEN] for yielding me an additional minute.

So, in the debate we had that proper balance, and with the committee action I see that we have lost that balance and so would look forward to further debate on this particular issue.

Mr. HANSEN. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS].

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Utah [Mr. HANSEN] for yielding this time to me.

Madam Chairman, I would like to engage the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ALLARD] in a colloquy, if I might. I want to thank him for his leadership in the House Committee on Agriculture. We had joint referral of this bill. We had a very close vote. It was, as I recall, 22 to 19, and it was basically because of the concern that the gentleman has raised in regard to legislation that is in this bill becoming what we call boilerplate portions of legislation or an example that can be used in additional bills. The gentleman, at least the way I understood it, was concerned about what could be a substantial Federal reserve of water rights.

Madam Chairman, I thought we were going to the Committee on Rules after the bill passed out of the Committee on Agriculture to make sure that the original bill language would be preserved and each committee's amendments be made in order for consideration under the 5 minute rule in the Committee of the Whole. Now what happened to that?

Mr. ALLARD. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBERTS. I yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. ALLARD. Madam Chairman, we acted in the Committee on Agriculture, as the gentleman will recall, after the Committee on Natural Resources had acted on the Montana wilderness bill, and, as the bill was reported out of the committee on Natural Resources, two words were stricken on the water language which we were discussing earlier.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS] has expired.

Mr. HANSEN. Madam Chairman, I yield an additional minute to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. ALLARD. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBERTS. I yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. ALLARD. So, Madam Chairman, the legislation was reported out of the Committee on Natural Resources in a different form than when it was before us in the Committee on Agriculture. The piece of legislation that we had before us in the Committee on Agriculture was as it was originally introduced by the bill's sponsor. I raised this point, as the gentleman will recall, in the Committee on Agriculture, and we were assured that our concerns would be reflected in any action by the Committee on Rules. The bill that was eventually reported to the floor of the House that was the one that was reported out of the Committee on Natural Resources——

Mr. ROBERTS. OK; bottom line, if the gentleman would simply respond to this:

The version that you were advocating and the version that was in the original bill had language that, and I'm quoting here, "could not create or recognize new Federal Reserve water rights," in wilderness, special study areas, et cetera, that are carved out of National Forest lands.

Is this in or out of what the Rules Committee has made in order in H.R. 2473 as original text from language reported by the Committee on Natural Resources?

Mr. ALLARD. That is out.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS] has expired.

Mr. HANSEN. Madam Chairman, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Utah [Mr. HANSEN], my friend, for yielding this time to me.

Madam Chairman and my colleagues, I rise in opposition to the Montana wilderness bill. Its purpose really is to do two things. It is first to designate about 1½ million acres of wilderness in Montana, and, by the way, this has been mentioned, but it is twice the size that the Forest Service recommended to be designated as wilderness in Montana. And the second thing this bill provides is the, quote, release of some 3 million acres of lands not suitable for wilderness but in wilderness study areas. Supposedly these lands are now released to be used for timber production.

Not so. This bill is a sham, and, if anybody says that we are releasing 3 million acres of land for timber production, they are not telling the truth. This bill will establish massive and more wilderness areas, and it certainly gives nothing back to the hard-working people of the State of Montana who depend upon natural resources.

The release language in this bill is so weak that even the lands not suitable for wilderness will be set aside in a park-like status in perpetuity. Preservationist will continue to block timber sales and timber communities will continue to choke to death. Meanwhile all of our constituents outside the State of Montana will suffer because prices of housing will go up through the roof, as they already have, because of shortage of wood, and the American dream of owning a home will be further and further away.

Well, do not let anybody say that there is release of multiple use lands in the State of Montana, and I want to tell my colleagues why. I was told the same thing on the floor of this House in 1984, of all times, when the Oregon wilderness bill passed the House of Representatives. At that time those who wished for more wilderness offered 1 million acres of wilderness and a carrot: quote, release of more than 2 million acres for the harvest of timber. In other words, the wilderness study area would be allowed to be used for multiple use purposes. Ten years later almost, Madam Chairman, how many acres have been released in Oregon for multiple use? Seven thousand acres. That, my colleagues, is seven-tenths of 1 percent or less than was promised on the floor of the House to me and to Oregonians.

Now what has happened in Oregon since then? We know the story. With the Endangered Species Act, the spotted owl, the marbled merelet, the salmon issue, we have lost 6,000 jobs in Oregon right now. They are gone. Mills are closing every week. We have no timber policy program in the State of Oregon. Whatever happened to the released lands?

Eighty-five percent of the timber lands in the Northwest are set aside from ever having timber harvested from them. That is a place, my friends, where 50 percent historically of the soft woods for this Nation have been growing and have been harvested in the past.

I was fascinated by Mr. FARR'S question to the chairman. His question was, well, if we pass this bill, does it mean that we are not going to be allowed to put these other acres into wilderness?

Well, he did not have to ask that question. The facts are that 3 million acres will go into park-like wilderness if you pass this bill with this release language.

Now, I attempted to amend this bill in committee and attempted to tell this story to people. There would be some who would wonder why in the world would a person from Oregon be so concerned about the Montana wilderness bill? Well, I have given you one example, my own example of the injury done to the so-called release language, the same language, by the way, in this bill. The Oregon bill had the same language in the bill as this one does. You do not think there is going to be the same results?

There is another result. Oregon mills are closing. People are losing their jobs. The mills left operating are reaching out to Montana, South Dakota, Canada, reaching for wood desperately to maintain their mills, their employment, and the 72 little communities in Oregon that depend upon the timber industry. They are reaching out.

So we are reaching out in Oregon, trying to find desperately wood to take care of this Nation's needs, and to provide some small employment left in our timber industry. And, yes, we are interested in Montana, and, yes, we do not want it all set aside. And, yes, we do not want 4 million acres unavailable, beyond thinking about Montanans. Think about what they are living through. They are facing again, mass unemployment, like Oregon. They are facing losing their homes, changing their lifestyles, for the promise of release.

It is a sham. Do not fall for it in this bill. We did it in Oregon 10 years ago. We should have learned something. But do not injure Montanans like we have injured Oregonians.

Mr. HANSEN. Madam Chairman, I reserve 5 minutes of my time for next Tuesday. I have no further requests for time, and yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. VENTO. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, I would just rise again in support of the bill. I understand that the procedure here is that the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS] has been ceded the time to manage for the Committee on Agriculture and intends to use that on Tuesday next. My intention, Madam Chairman, is to reserve 5 minutes for the Committee on Natural Resources, and then it is my understanding the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ALLARD] will reserve the 7½ minutes of the Committee on Agriculture, and the other time would be ceded to not be used by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. We would then each have 12½ minutes on Tuesday next.

That is the understanding we have gained. I thought since the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS] was not here, we would extend the option to him. But we will proceed this way. That way we get a better comfort level.

Madam Chairman, I would just mention that with regard to water, I think there are six pages of water language in the bill. So those Members who aspire to the issue have done well in terms of putting additional language in the bill. For my part, I would just as soon be silent with regard to water language in this bill, and let the existing laws as they are applicable in Montana and nationally with regards to whatever water rights accrue to wilderness prevail.

The issue here, in terms of this language, is to try to provide some guarantee, some comfort level, some assurances, that we will deal with this matter based on Montana law, regarding Federal water rights.

I might say to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. ALLARD] that each State's water language that we have passed, for Arizona and other Western States, such as Colorado, has had different water language in it. The fact that the Colorado and Montana water language are so similar is a surprise to me. I can assure the gentleman that the intent is not to upset the type of balance that was achieved. As I said, we will have an opportunity to debate that further.

With regard to the comments that were made on release language, which is another sensitive issue, we are releasing the lands not designated here to the forest planning process. We are not releasing them to other purposes. Those purposes will be guided by the forest plans that are now in effect, until such time as they are revised, either timely or untimely.

The issue is some of these lands will be subject to sale for timber. Some will be open to claim under the mining laws.

I might say, furthermore, that this release language is substantially different than that which had previously been acted on and agreed upon by Congress. In fact, that is an agreement that was then worked out, I believe, by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FOLEY] when he chaired the Committee on Agriculture, along with our predecessor on the committee, chairman Mo Udall, and subcommittee chairman, John Seiberling. So the fact is we have evolved into a different type of release language here.

I would point out further that I think there is a good faith effort when we do go through this to release these lands to multiple purpose use. I would say though that I am not, nor is anyone in this body, capable of legislating and limiting scientific inquiry and knowledge, nor should we be. So as we gain greater information about these ecosystems, whether they be in the temperate rain forests of the Pacific Northwest or the boreal forests of the inland West, and the hot dry areas in other places where we see fragile lifeforms struggling to survive and sometimes grow magnificent forests, that new information is going to be used. It should be used. I think we would want it to be used in terms of making the best decisions for these resources on Federal lands that exist.

That is something that we have to face. I think we have very often been cast in the role of acting inconsistently, some would say acting in bad faith, when indeed it is the use of the information available. I have been especially surprised by the development of information and the subsequent limitations that have been faced in the Pacific Northwest in terms of vertebrate fish species, and in terms of other types of problems in those temperate rain forest areas.

The issue here concerns resources and how the national forests should and could be used. I think that it should be apparent to all of us that the demographics, the demands on these forests, are changing. The demographics of our populations are changing, and the demand on those forests are changing.

People want them. If you talk in terms of recreation, of preservation, of conservation of these resources, of restoration of them, the attitude of the public, I think, would lean very strongly in that direction, trying to be sensitive. We are trying to be sensitive to the needs of local communities, small communities, that while not representative of the numbers present here, that we have an obligation to, insofar as they are dependent upon and utilize the Federal estate.

But I might point out that the nature of that and the character of that has changed. Where private lands early on were utilized and limits placed on the use of public lands because they would devalue the timber and the resources coming from private lands, today, after much of the supply on these private lands has been exhausted, and in some cases where they have been mismanaged and overmanaged in other cases, now we find increasingly this dependence on using the national forests in a way that would be fact destroy much of what is valued as an important resource by the American people, and, frankly by the world.

So it is a dilemma that we face in these issues, but I think one in which we are trying to find a path that is fair, that does prescribe the use of these lands and does permit us to exercise our responsibilities.

I know there are those of my colleagues that come closer to ground in terms of these issues and face some tough decisions, but I think that nevertheless they are issues that we can face up to and that we can respond to.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

I recognize Mr. HANSEN has yielded back his time. I would be happy to yield to him in the event that he had any further comments or observations with regard to my editorializing, as he sometimes has put it, on other comments. But we are in an open and fair system here.

I appreciate the gentleman's efforts. We will be debating the amendments in detail.

Madam Chairman, I will get general leave for everyone's statements when we conclude today. I would then, therefore, yield back all but 5 minutes of my time. The gentleman from Utah has done the same. And the Committee on Agriculture has reserved time for next Tuesday.

Is that the understanding of the Chair?

The CHAIRMAN. That is the Chair's understanding.

The Chair is advised that the time controlled by members of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries is yielded back. Other time is reserved as indicated by the managers.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Madam Chairman, we have before us today H.R. 2473, as amended by the House Natural Resources Committee. H.R. 2473 would designate certain national forest lands in the State of Montana as wilderness, release other national forest lands in the State of Montana for multiple use management and for other purposes.

Montana has over 6 million acres of qualifying roadless areas in its 10 national forests and 3.4 million acres of already designated wilderness. H.R. 2473, as amended by the Natural Resources Committee, would add an additional 1.7 million acres of wilderness, designate 240,000 acres of special management areas and designate 375,000 acres as wilderness study areas.

Madam Chairman, I urge that the House approve final passage of the legislation.

Mr. VENTO. Madam Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. VENTO) having assumed the chair, Ms. WOOLSEY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2473) to designate certain national forest lands in the State of Montana as wilderness, to release other national forest lands in the State of Montana for multiple use management, and for other purposes, had come to no resolution thereon.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of February 11, 1994, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

UPCOMING PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION IN MEXICO

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR] will be recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to talk about an election that could change the lives of millions of people.

An election that could be a triumph for democracy and restore a sense of trust between a people and their government.

An election that could have a deep and lasting impact upon the United States and affect both our economy and our way of life.

I speak, of course, about the upcoming presidential election in the state of Mexico.

This week, Mr. Speaker, the world celebrates the triumph of democracy in South Africa. We rejoice in the election of Nelson Mandela and the end of 300 years of brutal suppression and one-party rule.

It is my hope, Mr. Speaker, that 100 days from today, the world will once again rejoice in the triumph of democratic reform.

We will celebrate free and fair elections in Mexico—and open and honest debate.

And we will welcome a new President in Mexico who will be a partner with America and lead the world into a new era and a new century.

That is our hope, Mr. Speaker—and indeed, there are many people in Mexico from across the political spectrum—both inside and outside the government—from all sectors of society who are working to meet that challenge.

But let's not pull any punches, Mr. Speaker. It's a big challenge.

The people of Mexico today are struggling to overcome decades of rigged elections and entrenched political corruption.

Fresh in their minds are last December's election in the State of Yucatan, where voter turnout rates met or exceeded 100 percent in over 20 precincts—and March's election in the state of Morelos, where widespread voter fraud was witnessed and widely reported.

On the eve of the August 21 election, Mexico is struggling with a rebel uprising in the State of Chiapas.

It's still reeling from the assassination of Donaldo Colosio, the ruling party's original presidential candidate.

It's still witnessing massive demonstrations throughout the country calling for greater democracy and a more open electoral process.

And in recent weeks, it's become increasingly clear that in preparation for the August election the government of Mexico is investing not only in new polling stations and new voter cards but also in riot-control vehicles for any civil unrest that might occur.

I have an article in front of me that details millions of dollars that the Mexican Government has spent on 18 commando vehicles equipped with water cannons capable of leveling crowds and on armored trucks fitted with plows to break through barricaded streets.

I think we'd all agree, Mr. Speaker, that the purchase of these vehicles sends the wrong signal. Because if the elections were going to be honest and open, there shouldn't be any need for riot control because there shouldn't be any riots.

Now, those are some of the obstacles Mexico has to overcome. But while there are obstacles, there are also great opportunities.

The passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement—even though I thought we could have come up with a better agreement—presents new opportunities for both Mexico and America.

In the wake of last fall's NAFTA debate, Mexican leaders from across the political spectrum have recognized the need for political reform and have begun to work together.

Last January, Mexico's major political parties joined together in an agreement—known as the Agreement for Peace, Democracy and Justice—to reform the electoral system.

Among other things, the agreement called for an independent election-monitoring authority and since then, the Mexican Congress has met several times to make the necessary constitutional and statutory changes needed to reform the electoral process.

Mr. Speaker, I believe the United States should be supporting these reforms.

We should be encouraging Mexico to comply with the principles of democracy set forth in the Agreement for Peace, Democracy, and Justice and we should be urging them to invite representatives from the United Nations and the Organization of American States to monitor the August elections.

International observers will help bridge the mistrust that exists now between the people and their government and will give the Mexican people the confidence to know that their vote will be respected.

Mr. Speaker, we could be on the dawn of a new day in Mexico.

In August, the people of Mexico will come to a fork in the road.

Down one path lies the bright path of democracy and free and fair elections.

And down the other path lies water cannons and armored trucks.

Today, I believe we need to do all we can to encourage Mexico to choose the right path.

CELEBRATING THE ACHIEVEMENTS OF PUBLIC LAW 480, THE FOOD FOR PEACE PROGRAM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, in a special order on May 10, 1994, this Member recalled that this year is the 40th anniversary of the Food for Peace Program, also known as the Public Law 480 Program. The history of the Food for Peace Program, which was outlined in detail in that speech, shows a program that has adapted over the years to the needs of the times, while saving literally millions and millions of lives at risk from famine and malnutrition. Since it began in 1954, Public Law 480 has provided about $48 billion worth of U.S. food to countries with food shortages.

The program was last redesigned in 1990 to focus particularly on improving food security in countries with significant levels of malnutrition, chronic food shortages, and high infant mortality rates. Food aid donations in very poor, food-deficit countries are used to respond to chronic hunger needs and also to improve long-term food security through development programs funded by the local proceeds of food sales. Some Public Law 480 food is also donated for use in emergencies. Both of these programs are administered by the U.S. Agency for International Development [AID]. Food deficit countries that are potential future customers for U.S. commercial sales of food can receive food aid under a concessional loan program administered by the Department of Agriculture.

My remarks today focus on several difficult current challenges to the very essence of the Public Law 480 Program. The first challenge is the serious decline in funding levels in the face of ongoing, and even escalating, needs for international food aid. The second challenge is how to preserve Public Law 480's long-term development programs addressing chronic hunger and food insecurity among the poorest people in the poorest countries in the world in the face of extraordinary emergency food aid needs.

FUNDING

This year, in fiscal 1994, due to cuts in Public Law 480 funding and decreases in the availability of Government-held surplus commodities that the Commodity Credit Corporation can also donate abroad under the section 416 program, total food aid tonnage will be 30 percent less than in fiscal year 1993. The President has proposed an additional 17 percent budget cut in Public Law 480 for fiscal year 1995. If these additional cuts are enacted, many targeted assistance programs for the chronically hungry and malnourished will have to be curtailed. The United States will abandon its long-standing leadership in combating world hunger if this trend continues.

This downward trend in food aid shipments runs counter to the intent of the 1990 farm bill law, the most recent statement of U.S. Government policy on Public Law 480. This law directs the President to combat world hunger and malnutrition by increasing the contributions of food aid by the United States and encouraging other donor countries to make similar commitments, recognizing the food aid needs for both emergency and chronic hunger are expected to grow throughout the decade of the nineties.

It is disturbing to see that programs that meet the needs of the hungry and vulnerable are the ones receiving disproportionate cuts in the President's international affairs budget proposal for fiscal year 1995. The Public Law 480 Program alone accounts for substantially more than 50 percent of the President's total dollar cuts in all the regular programs in the International Affairs—Function 150—budget account. The President's budget proposal is so low that it even violates several statutory minimum requirements established in the 1990 law for the size of the developmental and emergency portions of the Public Law 480 Program.

These proposed drastic fiscal year 1995 cuts in Public Law 480 come at a time when, as the President stated in his October 16, 1993 World Food Day Report to Congress (p. 15),

> An estimated 20 percent of the world's population consumes an inadequate amount of food, and growth failure affects one-third of the world's children. More than 40 percent of women worldwide are underweight and/or anaemic, and at least 1 billion people around the world are probably affected by one or more nutritional deficiencies.

The increased demand for food assistance due to the dissolution of the former Soviet Union has been added on top of major chronic and emergency hunger needs in much poorer countries.

EMERGENCIES

Over the last 5 years there has been an increase in the number of protracted emergencies, which result from recurring droughts and environmental changes as well as warfare and persecution. The number of refugees and displaced persons without access to their customary food supplies is soaring.

Up to now, Public Law 480 funding has not been intended as the principal U.S. resource for meeting extraordinary emergency needs. Within Public Law 480, one-quarter of the title II program designed for meeting food aid needs through private voluntary organizations and the World Food Programme of the United Nations is all that has been regularly designated for emergency use. This is because, in the past, Congress would provide supplemental funding for extraordinary or large emergencies, such as the $225 million appropriated for the 1984–85 famine in East Africa, or donate surplus commodities through the section 416 program. But at present, Government-held surplus levels are so low that surpluses available for foreign donation are estimated to be only $75 million in fiscal year 1994 and $25 million for fiscal year 1995, compared to the actual level of $647 million in fiscal year 1993. With Public Law 480 funding planned to decrease by 17 percent in fiscal year 1995 and stringent budgetary caps on supplemental appropriations, the ability of the United States to respond to emergency needs has been greatly hindered.

The most likely source for additional emergency funding is to shift funds by reducing regular Public Law 480 targeted assistance programs that help the chronically poor who are nutritionally at risk. These programs target the truly needed at the moments when they are greatest risk, such as food supplementation for malnourished children and pregnant women and food-for-work programs during the "hungry" season before crops are harvested. These programs are long-term developmental interventions that prevent and mitigate disasters by strengthening local coping mechanisms. Such programs cannot stop and restart without compromising their effectiveness.

It would be tragic for the lack of proper foresight in budgeting for extraordinary emergency food aid needs to force a tradeoff between life-saving programs that serve those caught in emergencies and those chronically at nutritional risk. This issue is likely to be on the front burner within a matter of months. There are preliminary assessments that the most severe drought in a decade is arriving in greater east Africa, with 23 million people at risk. The $329 million requested by the President for emergencies worldwide in fiscal year 1995 will just be a downpayment for this one area alone, let alone meeting needs in Bosnia and a dozen other areas of war and drought.

Public Law 480 is a program where we do good and do well at the same time, and it has the strong and heartfelt support of the American people. Moreover, nearly all of the funds of Public Law 480 are spent in the United States to purchase and process agricultural commodities and to provide transportation and related services. Even though Public Law 480 levels have decreased, food aid continues to be an important market for agricultural goods and an important cargo for U.S. transportation industries. For instance, in fiscal year 1993, food aid shipments accounted for 30 percent of wheat flour exports, 20 percent of rice exports, 50 percent of soybean oil exports, and 45 percent of dry pea and lentil exports.

The result of Public Law 480 food aid is better nutrition for individuals around the world, and also creation of a context of food security and stability in which sustainable economic and democratic reforms can be sustained.

The latest set of reforms in Public Law 480 in 1990 have given us a well-structured program, focused on making long-lasting improvements in the food security of developing countries, with food security defined as "access by all people at all times to sufficient food and nutrition for a healthy and productive life."

Mr. Speaker, U.S. citizens are proud of the contributions we make to responding to the basic need for food worldwide, both through commercial exports, Government-financed exports, and food aid donations. We in Congress indeed should celebrate the many achievements of Public Law 480 through these last 40 years and insure that the program is strong and well-funded enough to keep that commitment alive in order to meet the newest challenges to worldwide food security.

MAINTENANCE OF MOST FAVORED NATION STATUS FOR CHINA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I have taken this time to talk about a very important issue that is going to be facing us in the not-too-distant future. Actually, the real decision lies down at 1600 Pennsylvania with President Clinton. I am talking about the maintenance of most-favored-nation trading status with China.

We know that on June 4 we will be marking the fifth anniversary of one of the greatest tragedies in recent history, that being the massacre that took place in Tiananmen Square, when we saw those young people who were fighting on behalf of democracy, liberty, freedom, gunned down by the military in China. We all remember vividly those pictures which came across the screen throughout the world, where we saw the tragic treatment that those young people received.

Mr. Speaker, one of the natural responses which one would have to an incident like the Tiananmen Square massacre would be to eliminate any kind of tie whatsoever with China, and that is sort of the gut response that one has to an incident like that. However, I have concluded, after having gone through the past 5 years, having talked with many people on this issue, including former President Nixon and many others, that the best way for us to bring about retribution and actually move towards the kind of political pluralism and further economic recovery in China is for us to not only maintain but to expand trade ties between the People's Republic of China and the West; specifically, the United States.

There are some who believe that because of the horrendous human rights violations which we have observed over the past several years, that we should end most-favored-nation trading status, and we will, by doing that, be able to alienate China from the United States and the rest of the world.

Mr. Speaker, nothing could be further from the truth. If we revoke most-favored-nation trading status with China, there is no doubt in my mind whatsoever that we will not alienate

China from the rest of the world, but we will succeed in alienating the United States of America from the rest of the world, and I believe that that would be a very grave mistake.

And I hope very much that President Clinton does not make the decision to do that.

As we look at reports which have come out, just the report that came out this morning of the dissident who was released in the Fukien Province in the southern part of China, we are seeing indications that the human rights situation is improving, it is getting better. And even when we look at the tragedy of Tiananmen Square, if we take the past decade, what we find is that there have been improvements in the human rights situation in China.

So it is my hope, Mr. Speaker, that when we look towards this June 3 date that the President makes a decision to renew most-favored-nation trading status, and if by chance some Member of Congress were to decide to offer a resolution of disapproval that our colleagues, Republicans and Democrats alike, Members of the House and Senate will stand up and firmly support the one thing that can move us toward better human rights, to a better human rights situation in China, and that is maintaining that trade tie.

One of the things that people have often forgotten is that we need to look at the broad context on the situation of our relations with China. Not everyone is aware of the fact that China is the most populous nation in the world. Nearly 1.3 billion people live in China, almost five times the population of the United States of America.

Next Wednesday morning we are going to be hearing from the Prime Minister of the second largest country in the world, second most populous country, that being India. But China, as the most populous country, as a nation which has embarked on many business arrangements with the United States and other parts of the world, recognizes that it is important to keep those ties going. And I hope that we will be able to do the same thing.

But this broad context question puts us in a position where we can work with China to do things like maintain and ensure that we do not have a nuclear Korean Peninsula. We know about the great tensions that exist today between the government of Kim Il-song in North Korea and the South Koreans, and it seems to me that trying to work to maintain ties with China will keep China working with us to ensure that we do not see a nuclear buildup on the Korean Peninsula.

Also, it is very important, Mr. Speaker, for us to recognize the support that we have had from China in the United Nations Security Council, and we want to do what we can to discourage the export of weapons from China to other parts of the world.

Let us work to maintain most-favored-nation trading status. I hope President Clinton will do that. If there is a motion of disapproval that were to come forward, I hope that our colleagues will come together and do everything we possible can to defeat it.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE BUDGET REGARDING CURRENT LEVELS OF SPENDING AND REVENUES FOR FISCAL YEARS 1994–98

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. SABO] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SABO. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Committee on the Budget and pursuant to sections 302 and 311 of the Congressional Budget Act, I am submitting for printing in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD an updated report on the current levels of on-budget spending and revenues for fiscal year 1994 and for the 5-year period fiscal year 1994 through fiscal year 1998.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, COMMITTEE ON THE BUDGET,
Washington, DC, May 12, 1994.

Hon. THOMAS S. FOLEY,
Speaker, House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: To facilitate application of sections 302 and 311 of the Congressional Budget Act, I am transmitting an updated status report on the current levels of on-budget spending and revenues for fiscal year 1994 and for the 5-year period fiscal year 1994 through fiscal year 1998.

The term "current level" refers to the amounts of spending and revenues estimated for each fiscal year based on laws enacted as of April 28, 1994.

The first table in the report compares the current levels of total budget authority, outlays, and revenues with the overall limits set in H. Con. Res. 64, the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 1994. This comparison is needed to implement section 311(a) of the Budget Act, which creates a point of order against measures that would breach the budget resolution's overall limits. The table does not show budget authority and outlays for years after fiscal year 1994 because appropriations for those years have not yet been considered.

The second table compares the current levels of budget authority, outlays, and new entitlement authority for each direct spending committee with the "section 602(a)" allocations made under H. Con. Res. 64 for fiscal year 1994 and for fiscal years 1994 through 1998. This comparison is needed to implement section 302(f) of the Budget Act, which creates a point of order against measures that would breach the section 602(a) allocation of new discretionary budget authority or new entitlement authority for the committee that reported the measure. It is also needed to implement section 311(b), which exempts committees that comply with their allocations from the point of order under section 311(a). The section 602(a) allocations were printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for March 31, 1993 on pages H. 1784–87.

The third table compares the current levels of discretionary appropriations for fiscal year 1994 with the revised "section 602(b)" suballocations of discretionary budget authority and outlays among Appropriations subcommittees. This comparison is also needed to implement section 302(f) of the Budget Act, since the point of order under that section also applies to measures that would breach the applicable section 602(b) suballocation. The revised section 602(b) suballocations were filed by the Appropriations Committee on September 30, 1993 (H. Rept. 103–271).

Sincerely,

MARTIN OLAV SABO,
Chairman.

Con. Res. 64), and is current through April 28, 1994. A summary of this tabulation follows:

[In millions of dollars]

	House current level	Budget resolution (H. Con. Res. 64)	Current level +/− resolution

Since my last report, dated April 11, 1994, Congress has approved for the President's signature S. 2004, extending loan ineligibility exemptions for certain colleges. This action changed the current level of budget authority and outlays.

THE MEANING OF MANAGED CARE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of February 11, 1994, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. MCDERMOTT] is recognized for 60 minutes as the majority leader's designee.

Mr. MCDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, as part of my effort to talk to my colleagues each week about how health care reform issues affect the American people personally, I would like to talk tonight about managed care.

The meaning of managed care is changing even as we speak. So I want to talk to the American people tonight about their relationships with their doctors—and about who should make medical treatment decisions.

What managed care meant 20 or 10 or even 5 years ago is very different from what it is coming to mean today—even without one word of legislation.

It is different from the traditional notion of community-based nonprofit providers who coordinate and oversee the care of their patients.

Before 10 years ago non-profit HMO's for per capita fee agreed to provide all the care for individuals. HMO took the risk of managing the care of patients for a fixed fee.

The advent of for-profit managed care operators has changed by this, this change is happening today as the market is left to its own devices to solve the health care cost crisis. A recent article in the May 16th edition of the Nation has an interesting description of managed care which I include, as follows:

[From the Nation, May 16, 1994]

PLAYING THE DENIAL GAME: THE MANAGED CARE SCAM

(By Suzanne Gordon and Judith Shindul-Rothschild)

When Ruth Trotman talks about her daughter Robin's condition she can barely contain her despair. Her 19-year-old is suicidal because of a very rare and difficult to treat mental illness—obsessive-compulsive disorder (O.C.D.). Robin is terrified of germs and washes her hands until they are raw; she is often so fearful that her mother cannot even leave her side, and she is totally consumed by thoughts about God and His punishment.

Unfortunately, Robin also suffers from a new health care disorder—managed care. She is insured by Bay State Health Care, one of Massachusetts' biggest managed care companies. When trying to lure subscribers, Bay State says that patients will have "thousands of physicians to choose from." Trotman says Bay State told her Robin could be treated out of its network of providers and hospitals if it was medically necessary. Although there seems to be no dispute about the fact that Trotman's daughter needs hospitalization, there is intense disagreement about where. Bay State refuses to allow her to be hospitalized at McLean's, a prestigious psychiatric facility that has the only O.C.D. in-patient unit in the state. Instead, Bay State insists Robin be hospitalized at Fuller Memorial Hospital—a small community hospital in Attleboro that lacks such a specialized program.

Fuller does have one distinct advantage—to Bay State, that is. To attract a managed care contract in psychiatry it provides discounted services to Bay State. Despite Trotman's efforts, including a lengthy appeal through Bay State internal channels, contacts with an attorney and her political representatives, the insurance company has not budged.

"There are nights when I stay up cradling Robin in my arms because she can't stop crying," the anguished mother recounts. "She says she can't stand to go on living this way. What's so terrible is that there's help for her and Bay State won't let her get it. No one can cure her, but they can help her to live with O.C.D."

While Ruth Trotman was trying to save her daughter's life, another Massachusetts woman was trying to deal with a less critical but still troublesome health problem—an immobilizing tendinitis in her right shoulder. She went to an orthopedic specialist, who recommended course of anti-inflammatory drugs and physical therapy. The woman's insurance company required her to get prior authorization for physical therapy, so she called the number indicated and reached a nurse sitting behind a video display terminal in Washington, D.C. The nurse informed her that her insurer would not allow her to make a physical therapy appointment before she finished a two-week course of anti-inflammatories. When the woman reminded the nurse that she was only following her doctor's orders, the nurse responded, "This is company policy."

When the woman arrived in the physical therapist's office after the two-week drug course, the clinician was shocked at the state of her arm. "Why have you waited so long to come to me?" she said. "You should have come much sooner."

Then there's the case of the elderly California woman dying of multiple myeloma—a cancer of the bone marrow. She had been seeing an oncologist before her health plan switched to managed care. Once that happened, she was told she had to pick a primary care physician from an approved list who would then refer her to an oncologist approved by the plan. Her new primary care physician agreed to allow her to continue with her oncologist, who was not part of the plan, but only on one condition: Before each oncology visit she had to appear at his office to be handed a signed permission slip to see the specialist. The primary care physician billed the health management organization $85 for each slip. This went on for three months, until the woman became eligible for Medicare. "To have to deal with fighting for care while you're dying is cruel," she said.

Such experiences are becoming the norm in American health care. President Clinton's American Health Security Act may be in trouble in Congress, but its grounding philosophy—managed competition and managed care—is alive and well. Representative Jim Cooper's bill and all the Republican health care proposals endorse managed care's central tenets—that the way to cut costs is to discipline patients and give insurance companies the responsibility for policing medical practice and patient behavior. Most important, managed care has become the darling of employers, who believe it will save them money. As Barron's recently put it, "employers are already switching en masse from traditional insurance plans to 'managed care.'"

Americans traditionally equate access to health insurance with access to health care providers and reimbursement for their treatments and services. With managed care—a byzantine system in which insurers and employers herd patients and families into health maintenance organizations (H.M.O.s) or networks of approved physicians and other providers and hospitals, all competing against one another to provide the cheapest services—this equation can no longer be taken for granted.

Managed care does not guarantee access to health care. It merely assures access to what we call "the denial game." This is an elaborately choreographed dance of come-hither advertising designed to attract subscribers, followed by a series of rules and rejections that get in the way when a patient actually seeks services. The main goal of the denial game is to maintain the profitability of some of the most lucrative corporations in America today—for-profit H.M.O.s and managed care companies that earn profits of up to 20 percent annually. They achieve this goal by three primary mechanisms:

The denial of free choice of doctor and hospital and the substitution of a select group of providers who are generally chosen by the criteria of cost and their willingness to follow a managed care plan's guidelines on which services are appropriate and when.

The erection of rigid barriers to access, which are applied to all enrollees regardless of how much or how little they may, in fact, use the system.

The bureaucratic micromanagement of care by a group of what we call "invisible diagnosticians"—nurses and physicians who never examine patients but nonetheless decide the course of their treatment.

Consider the impact of the first principle—the denial of choice. The requirement that patients may go only to members of a closed panel of primary care physicians or specialists, the bedrock of managed care, pits clinician against clinician to discount services.

Here's how it works: Every year physicians on the panel get a report card that grades them according to how much they saved or cost the managed care company in providing patient care. If your primary care physician or specialist is at the top of the list—spending more money than his or her peers on patient care or advocating too aggressively for patients—that doctor will be dropped from the panel and you'll have to switch to a more "cost-effective" or more tractable provider. Provider report cards are not based on quality indicators, like complications, re-admissions, suicide or mortality rates. Clinicians are judged solely by their contribution to the corporate bottom-line.

In their effort to obtain cut-rate care, managed care plans also negotiate deep discounts with hospitals. Because managed care groups seek to negotiate the least costly services from year to year, subscribers may be forced to change physicians, nurses and hospitals frequently. Last fall in Massachusetts, Pilgrim Health Care decided to end its $10 million managed care contract with Tufts New England Medical Center and informed patients they would have to switch to another hospital. After eight years, Harvard Community Health Plan declined to renew its pediatrics contract with Massachusetts General Hospital and instead diverted its patients to Children's Hospital.

This kind of hospital and clinician hopping encourages discontinuities of care. "Competition addicts think that health care is a machine assembled with interchangeable parts. They're wrong," says Alan Sager of Boston University School of Public Health's Access and Affordability Monitoring Project. "Health care is an ecology, in which different organisms often have symbiotic relationships with one another. The patient-clinician relationship is dangerous to uproot, and hard to re-establish. Market forces act like tornadoes, destructively tossing around hospitals, their patients and their staff."

These restrictive policies not only inhibit patients, they severely restrict providers. A prominent Boston physician explained that "if a patient of mine needs a particularly tricky operation, I know there are three or four excellent surgeons in town to whom I can refer the patient. But many insurance companies now force me to refer the patient to surgeons that I know may botch the job."

Physicians and nurses who want to prescribe a particular drug or treatment may not be able to do so because their patient's managed care company will pay for drug A but not drug B. "I had a kid with recurrent ear infections, so I prescribed a stronger antibiotic at the bottom of the H.M.O.'s list, which happened to be the most expensive," one frustrated physician said. "The next thing I knew, the mother of the patient is calling me from home saying that some anonymous reviewer from the H.M.O.—who had never laid eyes on the kid—called and told her I should have prescribed the cheaper antibiotic. She was told that if she wanted the one I prescribed, she would have to pay for it herself. So I have to fight with the insurer to get the kid the medicine he needs. What an incredible waste of time. Just give me the list of the least expensive drugs and I'll prescribe them when appropriate. Don't second-guess my clinical judgment."

Limiting choice—and thus real quality competition among providers—is only the beginning of the denial game. Next comes restricting the availability of this narrowed range of providers.

"We have a structure for providing medical care in this country. What insurers have created is a shadow structure," says Woolhandler. "For every action a physician or nurse takes, there is a paper construction reflecting it and a person reviewing it. Everything is done twice—by me and by my shadow. These shadows follow computer protocols that are kept secret. They won't tell us why they are denying needed care, they just say the protocol says no. If I see a patient who I think has a retinal detachment that can lead to blindness, and I say she needs to see an ophthalmologist, and the shadow says no she doesn't, that shadow is not legally liable. But I am. These people are entirely out of the loop of accountability and quality."

The role of these new, invisible diagnosticians makes a mockery of managed care advocates' rhetorical pronouncements about quality care, consumer choice and the potential of consumer education—all touted features of the Clinton plan. How can patients and families learn how to navigate a health care system in which the real decision-makers are completely insulated from public scrutiny and patient criticism? What good is consumer information about a hospital or physician or other provider, when neither that institution nor that individual provider is really the one pulling the most important health care levers? What good does it do to increase the number of primary care providers, if those providers are simply viewed as servants of managed care companies?

The final irony of managed care is that it raises, rather than lowers, health care costs, as studies by numerous government agencies and health care researchers have shown. Managed care groups have higher administrative overhead than did Medicare or traditional indemnity plans like Blue Cross ten or twenty years ago. Managed care companies spend huge sums on advertising and marketing, and on paying utilization reviewers to micromanage each case. In order to amass the profits necessary to pay executive salaries in the seven figures, enrich stockholders and offer bonuses to elite physician providers—some of whom now receive year-end perks based on the amount of care and treatment they denied—managed care companies must cut labor costs, increase provider productivity by enforcing assembly-line conditions and skimp on the care and treatment they make available to patients.

Over and over Washington politicians insist that Americans must be willing to make sacrifices and tough choices to solve the nation's health crisis. But it is politicians, not patients and their families, who need to make them. Our health care crisis will be solved only when government leaders are willing to set global budgets, negotiate fee scales for physicians, rein in drug company costs and fairly and democratically ration expensive medical technology, as is done in every other industrialized country. Not surprisingly, politicians, who would rather avoid the accountability for such tough decisions, are attracted to a free-market approach (not to mention free-market dollars). But substituting the invisible hand of the market for the visible courage of political leadership is the wrong prescription.

Study after study—as well as the experience of governments in Europe and Canada—has documented that a single-payer financial reimbursement mechanism is the only way to save money and increase access while maintaining quality and continuity of care. As patients are learning every day, managed care, on the other hand, does little but manage the care right out of our health system.

And that means that insurance companies interfere more and more aggressively in the treatment decisions of doctors. They do this not to protect the patient's quality of care, but to protect profit margins for their stockholders.

This is happening not just in HMOs. All patients are experiencing the reality that it is their insurance company, not their doctor, who determines whether or not they are admitted to a hospital.

It is their insurance company who decides if a child can stay in the hospital overnight after a bad reaction to surgery.

It is their insurance company who is deciding that women should be discharged from the hospital on the same day as childbirth, or that newborns should be sent home before their first feeding.

These decisions are not being made by the physicians or nurses or other practitioners who actually care for patients and bear the responsibility for their well-being.

They are being made by company employees who never see the patient but are sitting at a 1-800 number just to approve or disapprove care.

The American people know in the hearts, in their guts, and in their minds that something is terribly wrong with this arrangement.

They know that this cost-control approach by the insurance companies ultimately will ruin the quality of American health care.

And I want to be clear, It is not the Government that is doing this. It is the free market approach to health care that is giving the insurance companies unprecedented control over the doctor-patient relationship.

I am getting a lot of mail and hearing a lot of stories from constituents about the effects of managed care on people's lives. I want to share these with you because I know you will understand immediately what I am talking about.

One mother told me about her 4-year-old daughter who had to have a tonsillectomy after months of chronic infection and enlargement.

After the surgery, the child's blood pressure did not stabilize, the intravenous fluids could not be disconnected, and the child was vomiting blood.

The surgeon, appropriately, and all the nurses attending the child determined that the little girl needed to be admitted for one night to be stabilized and treated after surgery. The insurance company would not consent to the admission.

Fortunately, the surgeon felt strongly enough about the need for the child to stay in the hospital, that he was willing to spend 2 hours continuously on the phone with an insurance clerk in another State to convince them to consent to the admission.

Two hours of a doctor's time defending a decision that was unquestionable. Two hours that could have been spent caring for patients. Two hours just to protect a patient from her own insurance company.

Why? Because the insurance company had a policy that tonsillectomy is an outpatient procedure—a rule that I doubt the American Academy of Pediatrics or the surgeons, or any parent who has been through it, would agree with.

And even if the policy were justified in general, which it is not, the surgeon caring for and responsible for this child said, "this child is too sick to go home, she is not stabilizing." Should not that have been enough?

Then there is the case of Mr. Howard Silver. Mr. Silver developed prostate cancer in Florida. Prostate cancer is the most common form of cancer in men. There are two ways to prevent the recurrence of prostate cancer once it is initially treated.

The first way is to take medication that will inhibit recurrence. It is expensive. It costs about $4,000 a year, but it enables men to lead relatively normal lives and keeps the disease in remission.

The other way is castration. This costs only about $2,000, and of course is a one-time expense. His HMO would agree only to pay for the castration, not the medication.

Mr. Silver fought the decision of his HMO in court and won. Why did he have to go through this?

His insurance company decided to substitute its judgment for his doctor's and his. I want to emphasize again that it is not Government that is doing this. It is the free market that is giving insurance companies this control.

No democratic government that had to face elections would dream of trying to get away with these kinds of practices.

Indeed, one of the most ominous recent developments was the announcement on March 22 that Travelers Insurance Company and Metropolitan Life are entering negotiations to merge their health care operations. Where are the patients and providers in this merger?

I am a physician as well as a Congressman. I practiced medicine for 25 years. To me, just as the family is the building block of civilization, so is the physician-patient relationship the building block to good medical care. That is why I support single-payer health reform. Because it is the only mechanism that will preserve the patient-doctor relationship.

In single-payer systems throughout the world, patients choose their own doctors, and physicians do not have to justify individual treatment decisions to insurance companies or to the Government.

They do not have to seek permission in advance for the treatment they and their patients have chosen.

In fact, in the single-payer bill I have coauthored, the American Health Security Act, interfering in treatment decisions is expressly prohibited.

We are the only country in the world that permits interference in the relationships between patients and doctors—and to what end?

It has not controlled costs, it has not improved quality, it has not made life better for patients or doctors.

When the American College of Surgeons endorsed single-payer as its choice for health reform, it did so because it recognized that doctors cannot continue to tolerate insurance company interference in their decisions if they want to practice good medicine.

The Government Accounting Office just completed a study on the availability of bone marrow transplants in the United States compared to other countries.

The study looked at both the availability of transplants and whether they were done at the best time for the best result in the patient.

It concluded that the United States ranked 7th—behind six single-payer countries—in both availability and timing or appropriateness for these transplants.

The GAO also testified at the hearing on its report that what differentiated these countries' medical practice from the United States was the amount of interference in U.S. doctors' treatment decisions.

In single-payer systems, the doctors made the decisions and were not second-guessed by insurance companies or Government.

Mr. Speaker, single-payer health care reform will do four things for the people of the United States.

It will guarantee your coverage, it will let you choose your own doctors, it will preserve your relationships with your doctors, and it will cost less because it will eliminate insurance company administrative overhead and profit from your health care bill.

Mr. Speaker, it is my hope that the American people will call their Members of Congress and tell them they want single-payer. It is time to take the insurance companies out of the practice of medicine.

REDUCING THE REGULATORY MAZE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SAWYER). Under the Speaker's announced policy of February 11, 1994, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DELAY] is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, as chairman of the Republican Research Task Force on Competitiveness, I am pleased to run the opening lap of the third annual Republican regulatory relay.

Our country is faced with a huge and growing bureaucracy of overzealous regulators who ignore cost-benefit analysis and whose primary concern is validating their own existence.

Since 1992, Members of Congress have run laps on the House floor to bring attention to the multitude of unnecessary and ill-conceived regulations that are forced down the throats of American businesses and American consumers. Last year, President Clinton and Vice President AL GORE brought stacks of regulations out on the White House lawn to promote their reinventing government effort which was intended to reduce the regulatory maze within the Federal Government.

I would much rather fight to ease the regulatory burden faced by small businesses all across America which are the job-creating engines of our economy rather than to make Federal pencil-pushers' jobs easier.

At its best, the process makes no sense, and at its worst, regulators classify their children's teeth as toxic waste, they force banks to make teller machines accessible to blind drivers, they dictate that hard hats must be disinfected before each use, and they require employers to inform employees about the hazards of coming in contact with Joy dishwashing liquid.

Since reaching a low point in 1968, the cost of regulatory compliance, the number of rules reviewed by the White House's office of information and regulatory affairs, the number of Federal Register pages and employment at Federal regulatory agencies all have been steadily increasing. In fact, President Clinton's first year saw the most regulatory activity since President Carter's last. The page total for 1993 of the Federal Register was 69,608 pages, the third highest total of all time. A not surprising increase in the number of regulatory bureaucrats corresponds with this proliferation of regulation.

While from 1988 to 1992 regulatory staffing increased by over 20 percent to almost 125,000 employees, under President Clinton the largest number of Federal bureaucrats ever, 128,615 people were called for to run his Federal regulatory apparatus. The direct costs of Federal regulations are estimated to be about $500 billion a year. Now if you take into account the indirect costs and include State and local regulation, the regulatory burden is anywhere from $810 billion to $1.7 trillion dollars per year. That is a staggering $8,400 to $17,000 per household per year.

As you can see, the costs of Federal regulation are only going to continue to escalate throughout this decade. A typical American business must fulfill provisions of the Clean Air and Clean Water Acts, provide a minimum standard of living for workers, engage in recycling, carry an expensive insurance policy against product liability, ferret out illegal aliens, provide costly packages of medical benefits to employees which may have to include acupuncture, wigs, pastoral services, and drug treatment.

They have to provide special accommodations to disabled employees and promote equal opportunity as determined by race, sex and sexual activity.

Listed here, in the RECORD, there will be 100 forms and booklets of information that a typical business has to sort through and fill out to comply with Federal rules and regulations. This list does not even include many of the regulations contained in the Clean Air Act amendments of 1990 or the recently passed Family and Medical Leave Act. The Small Business Administration estimated that small business owners spend almost a billion hours a year just filling out Government forms at an annual cost of $100 million dollars. Imagine what a boost that kind of money would be to the economy.

Let me just outline, Mr. Speaker, some of the kinds of horror stories that are happening all over this country.

The Department of Transportation repeatedly considered promulgating new hazardous material regulations for the shipping of butter and salad oil. The plan, which has apparently been dropped but picked up again by the Department of Commerce and other departments, would have required 24 hours, 24 hours of classroom and field training for workers who responded to spill emergencies of butter and salad oil.

John Shuler, a Montana rancher, was reportedly fined $4,000 for violating the Endangered Species Act. What was Mr. Shuler's crime? He shot and killed a grizzly bear that had charged after him on his own property.

O.C. Mills and his son Carey run a small contracting business in Florida. Recently, they were both thrown into prison for putting 19 loads of sand on two waterfront properties they wished to develop. Despite initial approval of their development project by Florida's environmental regulators, then headed by the current EPA administrator, Administrator Carol Browner, the Millses were convicted of wetlands violations shortly after the project began.

John McCurdy, who is an owner of a very small herring smoke house, recently had a run-in with the FDA. Despite producing over 54 million filets over 20 years without one single reported case of food poisoning, the FDA told McCurdy he would have to change his methods. Unfortunately, that would have required $75,000 worth of new equipment. Facing the hopeless choice between installing equipment he could not afford or fighting a legal battle with the FDA, Mr. McCurdy chose the only other alternative, he closed his business and laid off his 22 employees.

Carol Roberts is a self-employed knitter who does all her work at home. She produces sweaters, hats, and mittens and sells them to retailers for a small profit that helps support her family. But all this could change if the AFL–CIO and the Labor Department get their way. Union officials are now pushing to reinstate a ban on at-home garment work that was removed in the 1980's. If the law goes back into effect, home garment workers like Carol Roberts would be considered criminals in the eyes of the law.

Robert M. Cox was the former vice president of the Gilbert Spruance Co., a small paint company from Pennsylvania. In 1984, a nightmare began for his company when they were notified that a former waste hauler for Mr. Cox's company had apparently dumped waste illegally in New Jersey. Despite the fact that Mr. Cox's company had no knowledge of or connection to the waste hauler's illegal activity, the Gilbert Spruance Co. was asked to foot a substantial part of the cleanup costs, ranging from $175,000 to $1.3 million dollars. Years of legal wrangling and work with Government agencies, administrators and legislators, Mr. Cox's company finally had to declare bankruptcy and sell all of their assets. As Mr. Cox, a self-described environmentalist, asked:

> Why doesn't the system allow an environmentally sensitive paint company to coexist with Superfund? Why does our system create so much inertia that the lawyers and administrators get rich off a manufacturing company that has been trying to do the correct thing all along?

I could go on and on and on. I have pages after pages after pages of horror stories like these that we find happening in our Government all the time.

This month the regulatory relay is focusing on the dry cleaning industry whose experience with Government regulations is indicative of the larger trend of increased difficulty in starting up and maintaining a very small business.

Their plight is eloquently described in a paper called "Taken to the Clearners: A Case Study of the Overregulation of American Small Business." That was recently published by the Cato Institute and written by Jonathan Adler, a policy analyst at the Competitive Enterprise Institute. The paper points out that according to the International Fabric Care Institute, the typical dry cleaning outlet is a very small family-owned business that employees an average of 5 people and grosses an average of $200,000 per year. The estimated profit per firm is only $10,000 annually, clearly a very limited amount with which to absorb additional regulatory costs. In 1990, the average profit for a dry cleaner was 0.43 percent.

Because of their small size dry cleaners are extremely vulnerable to the costs of regulation, even those seemingly benign requirements such as filing a hazardous waste report. This rule can require as many as 60 hours to fulfill, a significant burden on a dry cleaning business whose employees put in no more than 200 man-hours per week.

And that is just one regulation. Operators of small businesses face regulatory hurdles at every turn. The CATO paper states that for dry cleaners, that means clean air regulations governing perchloroethylene [perc] emissions and hazardous waste regulations governing the disposal of chemicals. Occupational safety regulations cover exposure to cleaning solvents and require demanding precautions in the handling of garments worn in hospitals and dental offices. Governments at all levels have imposed exacting liability standards that threaten the existence of many dry cleaning establishments. Additionally, dry cleaners are subject to the labor codes, wage laws, and tax rules that affect all small businesses nationwide.

While many regulations are well-intended, the lack of reliable cost/benefit analysis means that their implementation often results in ridiculous situations. For example:

In southern California, a dry cleaner was fined $250 for failing to post a listing of employee injuries that had occurred during the last 12 months. The problem is, the dry cleaner had no employee injuries to report. In effect, the business was fined for failing to post a blank piece of paper.

Because of regulations covering the disposal of so-called hazardous wastes, the costs of disposing spent cartridge filters and other process waste have skyrocketed. A new filter cartridge can be purchased in San Antonio, TX, for $18.75, but its disposal costs $21.

In Virginia, a dry cleaner is required to submit monthly retail sales tax forms to the State even though the store sells no taxable items. Failure to file the tax forms would result in fines, even though not filing would save time and money for both the business and the government.

Other times, regulators cause serious damage in their enforcement of regulations. At a press conference we held yesterday kicking off the Relay, Bill Griggs, vice president and manager of Wayside Cleaners in Portsmouth, VA, spoke of the ordeal he had to go through after the Virginia Department of Labor and Industry showed up unannounced for an occupational safety and health inspection. As a result of the DLI's 3-day inspection—during which Mr. Griggs was unable to spend time tending to his business, talking to customers, or overseeing operations, Wayside Cleaners was found potentially liable for $30,000 in fines. Four months later and after plea-bargaining, Mr. Griggs received a 32-page DLI citation and a reduced fine of $13,200. Among his "serious" violations:

Smoking was "permitted in flammable or combustible liquid storage areas." In point of fact, smoking was not allowed in the work area, but was allowed in a bathroom located behind the dry cleaning area. The bathroom was fully enclosed and separated from the work area by a cement wall and a fully closing door.

Wayside failed to provide an "educational program" complete with documentation of annual training for all employees on the operation of portable fire extinguishers to be used in case of an emergency. Employers are required to have such programs for emergency equipment and workplace hazards, such as cleaning solvents, and provide documentation that all workers participated.

One of Wayside's approximately 100 electrical outlets was found to have reversed polarity.

It is amazing to me that this situation exists for the dry cleaning industry.

The EPA classifies perc as a hazardous waste when discarded or otherwise disposed of. In addition, existing EPA regulations classify any wastes that are "mixed with" or "derived from" perc as hazardous. Under that definition, used perc and filter cartridges that contain minute amounts of perc are classified as "hazardous wastes." By the EPA's own admission, "A regulated hazardous waste handler must do hundreds of things correctly to fully comply with the regulations, yet doing only one thing wrong makes the handler a violator." In the case of the typical dry cleaner, that means storing hazardous wastes in properly marked containers and keeping detailed records of the use, transportation, and disposal of the wastes.

Because of the complexity of the hazardous waste regulations—the EPA has acknowledged that "the definitions of 'solid waste' and 'hazardous waste' are exceedingly difficult to understand even for the most experienced staff"—most dry cleaners contract with certified hazardous waste disposal firms to ensure regulatory compliance. SafetyKleen provides those services for most dry cleaners. Because SafetyKleen is also required to comply with the regulations governing the handling, treatment, and disposal of hazardous waste, the costs of disposal are inflated. Dry cleaners will thus spend as much as $2,000 or more disposing of cartridges and other "hazardous" materials. The regulations have inflated the costs of disposal so much that in some parts of the country it costs more to dispose of a filter cartridge than it does to purchase one new.

The paperwork burden imposed by the hazardous waste regulations is substantial. Numerous forms and permit applications are typically required for proper perc handling and disposal. Among those is the EPA's five-volume National Survey of Hazardous Waste Generators, the first volume of which contains over 80 pages of instructions on how to fill out the remaining volumes. "They even sent instructions on how to read the instructions," according to Gerald Levine, associate director of the Neighborhood Cleaners Association. Such monstrous documents could intimidate any small business owner, let alone a recent immigrant who might not have complete control of the language. The EPA's "1991 Hazardous Waste Report" required an estimated average of 19 hours—nearly half of a work week—to complete, according to the EPA. Dry cleaners interviewed for this study suggested that the actual time required is significantly greater. The EPA's "Hazardous Waste Report" is in addition to whatever State requirements are in place. In some States, it may cost over $800 simply to obtain hazardous waste permits from local agencies. The hazardous waste regulations are yet another layer in the government burdens threatening to smother small business in America.

Let me break right now because I see that my colleague, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MICA], has come to the floor to participate in this special order and this regulatory relay.

The gentleman from Florida is well known for his championing the risk assessment issue here on the floor of the House and is credited with bringing this issue to the attention of the House of Representatives. In fact, he has sent back to the drawing boards the bill that raises the EPA to a department-level agency because the Clinton administration refuses to support the implementation of risk assessments before they impose regulations on small businesses in this country, and I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Florida and compliment him on the great work that he performs.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding and would like to also commend the gentleman from Texas for his tremendous leadership in bringing before not only the Congress but also before the American people the cost and the effect of Government regulation and, in fact, how it is affecting business and in particular how it is affecting one small business, a mom-and-pop business, the dry cleaning business.

Mr. Speaker, I come from a family of people who for 3 generations, going on almost the fourth generation, have been in the dry cleaning business still in Upstate New York, in Binghamton, NY, and our family always made a good living through this particular business activity, and I was stunned to find out as we heard yesterday in the press conference that we held the amount of regulation, the cost of doing business, the imposition on the Federal and State level of burdensome regulatory practices that are putting these folks out of business and really scaring folks.

In that regard, we do not really pay attention to what government regulations are costing us, but just for example, I would like to point out that environmental regulations cost over $150 billion each year, and this translates into $1,500 cost per household, so this has a direct cost. When you go and pick up your dry cleaning, you might be interested to know that probably the greatest single factor in increase in cost is government regulation and the additional burdens and laws and rules that these people that are trying to conduct business in a reasonable manner find oppressive and they must pass this cost on to the consumer.

Federal regulations cost $510 billion in paperwork alone each year. The cost is staggering. Yesterday we had stacked up the regulations that have been pumped out and rules and Federal Register and compliance that goes on and on. In fact, it is interesting that the single greatest increase in local government taxes today is government regulations, and this is passed on to the local taxpayer, the home owner, and it is also passed on in the form of consumer goods and services like the dry cleaning industry provides.

Environmental and other regulation can increase start-up costs for a single dry cleaner as much as $138,000, just start-up cost. Imagine how this is transferred again in the cost of goods and services.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, if I could interrupt the gentleman there, that is such a poignant point. What the gentleman is saying is for anybody who wants to start up a dry cleaning business, it is going to cost them, up-front cost, they have to have in-pocket $138,000 before they even open their doors.

Mr. MICA. That is just the cost of regulation imposed, additional regulation.

When my family started the business 70 or 80 years ago, we took this laundry and dry cleaning and it was done in a very simple fashion. This is the cost of compliance today just to start up, not the cost of staying in business.

Mr. Speaker, in 1991, the National Federation of Independent Businesses determined that opening a new dry cleaner requires filling out and complying with almost 100 forms and manuals. We say yesterday in this press conference the number of manuals that are required and regulations that these individuals must comply with. Really one of the most interesting things I have heard is a plea from a small dry cleaner, a gentleman by the name of Bill O'Hannon who appeared at our press conference, and he has been in the business in Woodbridge, VA, for the past 20 years. This gentleman described how he is trying to comply with hazardous waste disposal which is now costing him over $4,000 a year in government regulations and compliance.

He talked about Superfund. He said that under this law, the Federal Government can seize anything he owns, even though he has never committed a crime or violated a law, and he said that this is something that must be wrong with our society when even drug dealers have more rights than dry cleaners. That will always stick in my mind.

He went on to tell us again compliance for installing just new equipment and revising his new equipment was $12,000 to comply with meeting new Federal standards and that he has been told that the business will not be able to obtain a loan through a bank anymore because of questions raised in the regulatory process about the conduct of their business.

Mr. O'Hannon went on to tell us that the average dry cleaner will have to spend $13,000 to comply with another additional government regulation that has been imposed, not to mention OSHA regulations that have been imposed on him. Under OSHA, dry cleaners are required to have a written communications plan, hazardous communication plans, employee training programs and copies of materials available. He said the cost for compliance in this is over $500 per year.

When Mr. O'Hannon went into complaining about this, he found that even the agency that is requiring this in Washington does not comply with its own standards or posting.

For employee protection, dry cleaners must have respirators on hand in case of an emergency, according to new regulation, another $500. In 1989, OSHA issued lockout/tagout, and to comply with this particular standard and regulation, the cost is $2,500 per year. The list goes on and on.

But what was really most shocking was the last statement that Mr. O'Hannon made, again this gentleman struggling to stay in business, and I want to quote him here as I conclude. He said:

My greatest fear is that the dream of starting your own business is dying in this country, that the fire inside of us that calls us to risk everything to be our own boss is fading. I saw in USA-Today this week that the fastest growing job sector in this country was 'temporary employment.'

"Temporary employment?" Mr. O'Hannon asked, "What does that say about my future? What does that say about the future of business? What does that say about the future of America?"

So, ladies and gentleman and my colleagues, when we see that Federal regulations are, in fact, taking us to the dry cleaners, when they are the greatest source of cost for that service today, when they impose these needless and burdersome regulatory compliance issues on small business, when they generate $510 billion worth of needless paperwork each year, and when they are the source of the greatest single increase of local and property taxes and State and local taxes to you, the taxpayer, the consumer, something is wrong.

So we are asking that you contact your legislator, that you contact your Member of Congress and express that you are interested in looking at the risk involved in adopting regulations, that you want to see the cost and the benefit before we go off helter-skelter and force small businesses, dry cleaners, mom-and-pop operations out of business, before we extinguish the American dream.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman has presented to the American people through the special orders in a very eloquent way the problem of not just the dry cleaning industry but the problem small businesses all across this country are having by onerous regulations, and the worst part about it, and it does have a lot of do with businesses, but the worst part about it is what we are doing to our families in driving up the cost of living and driving up the standard of living of families in this country.

Right now if we take all the taxes charged by State, local and Federal governments and add to it these costs, because the businesses do not pay these costs, they either go out of business or pass the costs on to the consumer, families of four on the average are paying over 53 percent of their annual income to the cost of government and it is going up. It is not going down. It is going up, and it is going to get even worse.

That is what we are trying to do here. The message of the relay is this: The system for drafting, evaluating, approving and promulgating rules, must be overhauled. The lack of an effective regulatory review process to weigh costs and benefits is wrecking havoc on our economy, resulting in lost jobs, lost productivity, and lost competitiveness.

We must establish a system of cost-benefit analysis, pass the Paperwork Reduction Act, strengthen the Regulatory Flexibility Act, and provide protections for whistle-blowers, whose firms are being abused by overzealous regulators.

Last year, I introduced H.R. 1817, the Private Sector Whistle-Blowers Protection Act, as a response to the unmistakable reluctance of businesses and individuals to go on record with the regulatory abuses to which they felt they had been subjected. They feared with that angry regulators would retaliate by doing anything, from holding up permits to levying fines. Of course, agencies denied that such abuse of power takes place, and the experience of my constituents argues otherwise.

My bill makes retaliation by agencies a prohibited regulatory practice, which would result in a $25,000 fine for each violation. As our constituents struggle daily to comply with an unending array of regulatory requirements, at the very least they should feel free to speak openly about regulatory actions taken against them that they believe to be unfair.

Further, if Federal or state regulators are taking retaliatory action for such openness by our constituents, they ought to be held accountable. Nonetheless, the means to every end of improving the general welfare cannot, nor should it, be accomplished by regulation. There are many cases where existing market forces are much more effective than regulation. A regulation disrupts market dynamics by adding costs to those necessarily associated with providing a good or service.

Hidden though they may be, these added costs are taxes. I want to emphasize that point. When the Government forces business to divert resources in ways they would not otherwise, a tax is being levied upon those businesses as surely as if the money had been collected by the IRS. Higher costs to businesses means less growth and fewer jobs.

Politically, however, it is much easier to levy $20 million in regulatory costs than it is to levy $20 million in increased tax revenues. Waiting in the wings for Congressional approval are additional health care mandates, tougher workplace safety requirements, and a whole host of stringent environmental regulations.

I was very pleased when earlier this year the House rejected the bill elevating the Environmental Protection Agency to a cabinet level, a bill which has huge regulatory ramifications, because of the amendment of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MICA] requiring the EPA to conduct a cost-benefit analysis of any rules it proposes, was not allowed to be offered by the Democrat leadership of this House. I was very encouraged by this, and intend to continue to fight at every opportunity to force the Government to do the one thing it can do to help the small business people of America. It has got to get out of the way.

This is the first of many months of laps of the Republican Regulatory Relay. Next month we will highlight another industry that is being over burdened by regulations of this Government. Next month we will highlight more horror stories that are going on in the country today, and next month and the following months we will try to convince the American people that, yes, is some cases regulations are important. But what we have now is a Government that is running amuck, that we have regulators and legislators that are running amuck, and the effect it is having on our families and the incomes of our families are devastating, and we hope to prove these points to our colleagues so that we can do something about it in the future.

MAY IN AMERICA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of February 11, 1994, the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I want to comment on my colleagues from Florida and Texas, Mr. DELAY and Mr. MICA. That was an excellent presentation on the burden of the severe overregulation on our small businesses and the problems that that creates. Most Americans are shocked when they hear that 95 percent of all employment in this country, depending on which state you are talking about, is created by what we all know as small businesses. It is rather ironic, because all of us in this profession, while trying to look neat for those who voted for us, frequent dry cleaning establishments. I always use this as an example when talking about small business. We have all heard how rough it is. I will not forget that the average start-up cost for a small business is $138,000. This money is used to hire a few people, put the equipment together, get a good store front in a good location, and try and keep the clothes cleaned and pressed and looking good for the men and women in whatever neighborhood you try to set up. That is stunning.

Trying to stay in business, it appears, is even worse. So I would like to associate myself with all the remarks in that splendid presentation.

Mr. Speaker, I assume I will be the last speaker tonight, and the House is not in tomorrow. We are all going home for the weekend. I am going back to beautiful Southern California and then Santa Barbara, Santa Maria, and San Luis Obispo, areas of this country that are so beautiful it takes your breath away. I'll be making some appearances in a Republican primary for the lady of my choice. I know what I am going to hear when I get home, and it is not going to be about Haiti. However, the topic of Haiti may come up, especially if anybody is out there, that is in the C–SPAN audience of 1½ million listening to my words tonight.

I know they are going to be bringing up all sorts of scandals. It seems to turn into a nightmare with each passing day, and with each passing week. We are all trying to sort out here how to be fair to both parties, to the other body, the U.S. Senate, and to the White House itself, on how to handle all this. Especially with respect to the rules of this House on decency, comity, which is a word not used in the general public, but used around here. We do not want to sound like comedy, but comity, which means respect for one another. We don't have some of the wilder debates of the Canadian Parliament or the British House of Commons, which some of us, at least my wife, thinks might be good for a change around here, to let off some of the steam. The great Disraeli was shouted down at his first speech and never got to speak. I don't know if we want to carry it that far, so I will go with the rules of the House.

I am still trying to sort out in my mind how I have my freedom of speech and represent the freedom of speech for my district, but at the same time I can't discuss the scandals that are surfacing and how they might impact foreign policy. As was the case last week when LAMAN SMITH of Texas put news magazines in the RECORD. This caused our Speaker to remind everybody that the White House is included in the respect and comity that we show to other Members of the House and to Members of the other body.

However, last night on ABC's Nightline, hosted by the main man, Ted Koppel himself, they covered one of the scandals from A to Z. They began with a C–SPAN clip of this Member, BOB DORNAN, standing up here showing the front page of the Washington Post and a button that had circulated that said, "I believe a certain woman that is bringing charges against an elected official." At the beginning or after they showed this short clip of my speaking, they said, "From Congressman BOB DORNAN, a noted basher of Professor Anita Hill." Let's stop right here! That is not true. Then it went on to say something else to somebody on the other end of some political spectrum. Everybody has something to say about the current scandals that I am not mentioning.

I just want to correct the RECORD. We have called Nightline. They were both very apologetic and very polite.

They said maybe they had jumped to conclusions. What my staff told them was that to support Justice Clarence Thomas, from the Court of Appeals here in D.C., is not to have bashed Professor Anita Hill. I analyzed some things that she did on television or radio shows around America. I do not believe I ever did it on the House floor. If I did, I stand corrected. We cannot find a single speech I ever made against Anita Hill on the floor of the House.

What I did say, was that it is most unusual that she followed Clarence Thomas from job to job and that she never even put him on notice for anything he was saying in her presence. A rule of fairness at the entry level of sexual harassment, is that you let somebody know if you do not like the way they are speaking in front of you. That goes for a manly man, who might decide to tell the boys, "Hey, count me out when you tell dirty jokes, I do not like it." That is what my dad always told me to do. Put people on notice. I have done it a few times, but failed my father mainly by either just giving a weak, perfunctory laugh or walking away. I am a father of three grown daughters, all in their thirties, and four granddaughters, God willing, more to come out of our grandkids, and I think any woman who does not like somebody's mouth, and it is usually a male involved, should stand up and tell them. If they persist, there is no other way to handle it before you have to take it to the courts.

So I want Ted Koppel and the Nightline crew to know that, yes, I have discussed scandals on this House floor. No, I have never bashed Professor Hill. I was a supporter of someone I think is a wonderful person and is an excellent Justice at the Appeals Court level. I think he is going to be a superb Supreme Court Justice.

I would like to comment on what a lot of writers are saying now, about Clarence Thomas. He seems to have been "struck mute," in the way he handles his job on the Supreme Court. They say it is because of having his reputation trashed, what he called a "high-tech lynching," and I hope that is not true. I think the further we get from that terrible year of 1991, and what liberal staffers on the Senate side tried to do to his reputation, Clarence Thomas wins on the respect factor in the long run. And Anita Hill may have struck gold.

I read in one of the news magazines that she made, brace yourself, $500,000 last year, half a million dollars. She did not make $10,000 the year before. She was sort of dragged, according to her, kicking and screaming symbolically further and further into this arena by staffers of two Senators.

Now there is a new scandal on the front page of today's Washington Times. To avoid all elected officials here, let us just look at Dan Lassiter, who was never elected to anything, from the State of Arkansas.

There are now new charges. Investigators want to know whether Dan Lassiter contributed thousands of dollars to certain campaigns and if he used a New Mexico resort. His name is stunning. I will never forget it, a great call sign for the Air Force or Navy flight of four, "angel fire."

It was 22,000 acres in New Mexico. It appears to have cost naive investors upwards of $40 million or more. So more will be heard on that.

I guess we will have to meet with all the Parliamentarians and write some new rules around here, if and when the House committees, the relevant committees, start having hearings on the financial scandals.

There is a new button that is in our Cloakroom now that says, "Full Disclosure Now." That means, when do we get these hearings that the Senate voted 90-something to a couple of people and that were voted here 380-something to a few to have these hearings. Where do we go from here before we take the memorial 50th anniversary of D-Day district work period break that begins 2 weeks from tomorrow?

Now, do these scandals affect foreign policy where people can die. I said here last night that six moderate to conservative Democrats told me they thought it would have an effect. That there were people in the White House talking about military force in Haiti and that it was driven by domestic concerns.

I have here the draft of the House Republican Policy Committee, chaired by the very distinguished HENRY HYDE of Illinois, my good friend. I think this will probably be approved, Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday. I want to read it in its totality just in case somebody on the National Security Council convinces the White House to put people, men and now women, in harm's way in Haiti. I want this Republican Policy Committee draft on record, because we had a unanimous vote to move on this.

I do not know what they do in the Democratic Cloakroom, but in the Republican Cloakroom we have something cleverly titled "The Boarding Pass." All the people racing out to catch airplanes. I am leaving in the morning. I did not have to grab it and run to Dulles or National Airport.

Our Boarding Pass is put up by the Republican Conference, DICK ARMEY, chairman, and it gives us themes to discuss at town hall meetings or with our voters or in appointments in getting out and about in our various districts.

And the weekend theme is the coming GOP majority. Followed by recurring theme, health care, and then it says, "Clinton's Haiti policy, welcome to the sunshine state." I am going to read that.

But first, I want to reread a letter that I quickly read last night, because I only had 5 minutes, and re-submit it for the RECORD today, because it comes from, I will just use his first name, Howell, from the Carolinas, I will not even say which one. Howell took me for a tour of his textile plant in Haiti, a beautiful facility.

My father was a businessman and always prided himself on having the best working conditions for his workers of anybody in the field. I was one of those workers in California Heating and Air Conditioning for three long summers, crawling around among spiders under houses putting in units or updating heating units til I got promoted to the air-conditioning and forced-air part of my father's business. This is when I was 14, 15, and 16 years of age.

I know good working conditions from poor. And Howell and his family's textile plant in Haiti was as good as I have ever seen.

I was there all morning watching the coffee breaks, the lunch break, the machine facilities for lunches. And it was excellent.

Here is what he wrote to me, this is dated April 12, last month, 1994. And I can see from the letterhead that he is into a new career field in the restaurant business.

He says, "Dear Congressman, I will never forget the morning you rode through the streets of Port-au-Prince, Haiti, with me during the riots."

We went out, I would ask the people listening to my words to picture Haiti as though you are looking at a bull, an animal from the top down. It is only a third of the Island that Columbus discovered in 1492. He discovered it, as a matter of fact, this very week of 1493. I believe he named it Hispaniola. Haiti it is only a third of the Island, the western third. There is two big, long peninsulas that come out with a big Island in the middle of this natural port, as natural a port as Guantanamo Bay.

Teddy Roosevelt once put the entire Great White Fleet inside Guantanamo, and I have seen writings from the turn of the century where the whole United States fleet could have gone into Port-au-Prince in Haiti.

I went way out on the Southern peninsula, the bigger of the two horns, during this election period among election riots. Seven people were killed within 5 minutes just right of where we were. Our charge d'affaires, a tremendous lady in the Foreign Service, said, "We had better get out of here."

I saw a lot of horror there. I saw the torture house right down by the port facilities where they deliberately would torture people at night. This is back 4 or 5 years and several juntas ago. They would allow the screams of the people being tortured to waft up, bringing a terrifying chill to everybody in the lower city area. On a cool, calm, clear night they told me at the Ambassador's house, which was then occupied by a charge d'affaires that sometimes you could hear the screaming all the way up in the area where the larger homes were. All chilling stories about the horror of Haiti.

For those who want a crash history course, it is fascinating. Napoleon sold the Louisiana Purchase to our third President, Thomas Jefferson, for one reason only: to get money to continue his war of combat in Haiti, because he thought Haiti was such a rich little slave colony. They were getting more money out of Haiti than they would ever get out of New Orleans, (which was to become the State of Louisiana two decades later) or the entire Louisiana Purchase, going up to the Missouri and Mississippi headlands.

Interestingly enough, Haiti's birth as an independent nation was 1 year after the Louisiana Purchase. Napoleon got the money from this fledgling country that was by then given, using our Constitution, only 17 years old. Yet it was not enough. Haiti became an independent nation in 1804. The first independent nation in the Caribbean. It is just tragic that it has lived such a violent, turbulent history over the last 190 years. Haiti has ended up in this tragic state now where the people are starving to death because of our policy of sanctions on this country, while we try to restore an unstable non-democrat. Although elected in the 1960s, Jean-Bertrand Aristide is more in the category of Allende, who won in the 1930s, or yes, even an emerging terror like Adolf Hitler, who won 34.-something percent. Just because you win an election does not always mean you are a democrat, even if you win with 63 percent.

Back to the letter from my friend Howell. He says, "Riding with you during the riots, your interest was most appreciated. Our factory was 'nationalized' after Aristide came to power. I lost everything. All I brought back from Haiti was a couple of bullet wounds.

If Brian, who was then my chief of staff and has now gone into business in Orange County, "if Brian is still with you, tell him hello. I have some interesting information firsthand from Ron Brown," I don't know what Ron Brown he is referring to, it must be his Ron Brown, "concerning a diversion of funds from the Nation of Haiti to a congressional caucus," he means a subcaucus. "Give me a call if you are interested. Best of luck, Howell."

If anybody in the Carolinas, Mr. Speaker, is hearing my voice, I have yet to call him, but I will.

Here is what our Republican Conference boarding pass says about what we might expect over the weekend on Haiti. I repeat the title: "Welcome to the Sunshine State."

"By giving in to sit-ins by one liberal sub-caucus," and this must mean the Black Caucus, "and a hunger strike by Trans-Africa's Randall Robinson, Clinton continued to display his lack of leadership in foreign policy. According to Democrat Senator BOB GRAHAM, the President's decision to switch course on Haiti will amount to a very substantial green light for people to leave Haiti."

The luckier ones will survive. Many will drown at sea, as probably half a million Vietnamese, more like 600,000 or more, drowned in the South China Sea because of action taken in this Chamber a year and nine months before I was sworn in. I'm talking about the votes of the spring of 1975, which cut off all economic and finally all military aid by that newly elected Watergate class in the spring of 1975 to Vietnam.

"The President's erratic Haiti policy now appears to be cynically tied to moving forward with his liberal domestic agenda," so our conference is making the case that it is not scandal-driven, it is liberal domestic agenda driven, "particularly government-run health care. Clinton needs the Black Caucus's support, and according to Dalton West of the Global Strategy Council, Clinton is giving the foreign policy issue away in order to hold his whole coalition together.

"President Clinton, however, may be painting the United States into a corner. If the tougher economic sanctions don't end Haiti's military rule, United States military action may be the only option left.

"The Boston Globe reports, however, that 'Haiti's military believes it can continue to ignore the United States, because the Clinton Administration is not serious about restoring Aristide to power.'"

"Commenting About Clinton's new policy on Haiti, the New York Post writes, 'Simply translated, it says Randall Robinson will eat, but lots of Haitian children will starve,'" That was the New York Post.

Here is the Henry Hyde-led House Republican Policy Committee, and I appreciate this and stand by every word myself: "Statement of Republican Policy on Haiti," and this is the loyal opposition which expanded Tuesday by one. There are now 177 Republicans in this House.

I noticed in our boarding pass it says, "How about a re-vote on the President's massive tax increase of last year, which only won by one, or how about a re-vote on the ban on semi-automatic weapons that look ugly?" Interesting thought.

Most people who earn their living analyzing or toting elections say that we should take 16 seats, a slam dunk. I would never count those chickens until the votes are counted, but that means if we take 16 seats, the Republican Party has 193 Members. That is more than Ronald Reagan had with 192 when he was sworn in in January of 1981, and President Nixon twice hit 192, never got beyond that.

President Eisenhower had a majority in the 220s in 1953 and 1954, and then lost it, and then fought back to about 203, I believe. Then he lost it again in the elections of 1958 and dropped down in the dismal area where we are now and have been for the last 40 years.

One hundred and ninety-three would be a magic number, rebuilding what the late Tip O'Neill called the conservative coalition, where it flushes a lot of moderate Democrats who will come out and vote more conservatively when the Republican numbers get over 190. Here we sit at 177, the House Republican Policy Committee.

Here is our statement on Haiti: "Republicans strongly oppose calls for United States military intervention in Haiti. In the absence of threats to American citizens in Haiti, there are no United States National interests at stake that compel us to take such action.

It is not a solution to Haiti's chronic internal problems. That would be a serious and costly mistake for the United States. U.S. armed forces should not be sent into combat as a substitute for sound foreign policy."

Forgive me if I say amen at that first paragraph.

"President Clinton's uncertain Haiti policy seems more responsive to stormy political winds whipped up by United States domestic special interests than to any careful assessment of our national interest in Haiti. The President said, 'We have an interest in bolstering democracy and human rights in Haiti.' This is true, but as events in Somalia have made painfully clear with the loss of 30 American young lives, we have not the means nor the ability to send American troops to forcibly impose democracy and respect for human rights on every one of the dozens of countries where those rights are lacking.

"United States forces occupied Haiti from 1915 to 1934 without ever achieving any durable political reform. There is no reason to believe that our will can be imposed upon Haitians any more effectively today than it was from 1915 to 1934."

The third paragraph, "The President says, 'We have a humanitarian interest in preventing a massive and disastrous exodus of Haitians by sea,' and, indeed we do. Clinton himself recognized this when he abruptly reversed his campaign rhetoric even before his inauguration." That is because the boats were underway, "and embraced the hard choice of the Bush Administration, continuing the policy of forced repatriation of Haitians picked up at sea."

I would have changed that, "rescued at sea," because many of them were on the edge of death.

"Now by reversing himself again and reinstituting shipboard processing of asylum seekers—" I have never heard of that in my life, a floating immigration office at sea—"Clinton is encouraging Haitians to risk their lives in rickety boats and dangerous seas," shark infested waters I might add, recalling some of the horrible shark attacks on a plane crash stuffed with people going to New York in the days of Veto Mark Antonio, a member of this Chamber, "Dangerous seas while the United States consular facilities in Haiti continue to process asylum applications.

"Rather than continuing to make veiled threats to use force," I would have added over and over again, "Clinton should abandon his administration's haphazard and quixotic," I love that word as in Don Quixote, "quixotic approach to Haiti and formulate a policy that has some credibility. He should begin by loosening the grip of Jean-Bertrand Aristide and his well-heeled lobbyists over U.S. policy options. He should aggressively work with regional friends, the organization of American States and the United Nations to seek agreement among Haiti's parliamentarians, military leaders and president." I would call him ex-President Aristide because a new president was appointed by the Parliament down there yesterday. As I said last night, the Parliament that still sits in Haiti, however you want to characterize it, was elected in the same election on 16 December 1990 that elected Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

"And we should seek agreement among Haiti's parliamentarians, military leaders", and Aristide himself, "to schedule new elections," let him try again, "in order to get beyond the current impasse. A bold and effective solution to the looming refugee crisis may lie in the use of Ile De La Gonave. . ." That is this big island that I described between the two peninsulas, the horns of the one-third of the Island of Hispaniola known as Haiti. It is the island near Port au Prince, right inside the Port of Au Prince, "as a safe haven for Haitians."

Now let me spell that name to drive, Mr. Speaker, some of our watchers and listeners to their geography books and their atlases. Isle of the Gonave, G-o-n-a-v-e. I assume the "e" is silent, being French. Isle, I-s-l-e, de, d-e, la, l-a, Gonave. That giant island is more friendly to the United States than any comparable part of Haiti.

If we are going to put any young American Marines, male and female, to touch Haitian soil, and they do not land on this island only as a first step to set up a safe haven for Haitians trying to escape either starvation, now caused by us, or some of the cruelties of the military junta there, then they have no right to ask any American under a Commander in Chief, who dodged the draft twice. On the third go-round he was drafted with an induction date of July 28, 1969. He had that induction notice politically suppressed and reversed. As I have said many times on this floor, I have never heard of anybody ever doing that other than a tragic automobile accident with severe injuries, or a severe athletic injury. Nobody undoes a draft induction show-up date. Every military base I have visited, and I have been on about 10 of them in the last 4 months, people come up to me of all ranks and military positions and jobs and say that it is hurtful to be put in harm's way by somebody who three times avoided the call of his country and let other young high school kids to in his place.

Our last and fifth paragraph on the Republican policy statement. "Only bold initiatives like this," combining using this Island of Gonave," with active diplomacy, will lead to a resolution of Haiti's problems. The Clinton administration should be broadening its diplomatic engagement, not limiting its options to costly and unworkable solutions. Above all, Haitians must take responsibility for their own future. No action by the United States can substitute for that." Now, that calls to mind President John F. Kennedy's stirring words, and I imitate him as flattery, not derision, when he said, "In the end it will be Vietnamese boys that will have to win their own freedom." I do not know when we are ever going to learn here not to relive the mistakes of the past. But if we are going to go into Haiti because of its current problems of over a 190-year span since it won freedom in 1804, what are we going to do about Cuba? That has been a dictatorship from the middle of the fourth decade, and what are we going to do about Castro? Even in the ill-fated Bay of Pigs when the same President Kennedy denied air coverage while the men on the beach were depending on it, we were still using Cuban boys, really tough men no matter how young they were, to fight for their freedom, and we left them hanging out there on the limb to be captured, several thousand of them by Castro, who did put his air power over the beach at the Bay of Pigs. How can we ask a young woman or a young man under a flawed command to go in and put their life on the line when we will not do it for Cuba. There are still Cuban boat people of all colors and backgrounds trying to sail north to refuge in the world's largest, truly free democracy?

I have to pay a little respect to India which is twice our size and does have wild democratic elections where an average of 40, 50, 80 people are killed in every election that they have there. So I will take our system of open elections.

Mr. Speaker, I hope when we come back for votes on Tuesday, or when the House comes back in to debate on Monday, there will be no surprises by the National Security Adviser, Tony Lake, convincing Mr. Clinton that the way to go in Haiti is to put American forces in there.

I was sickened when the U.S.S. Harlan County pulled away, just a few days after the firefight from hell on October 3 and 4 in Somalia, from a gang of 40 rent-a-thugs screaming, "You're going to get what you got in Somalia," 40 rent-a-thugs is what the best intelligence sources can tell the press now. They drove back U.S. Forces of mostly engineers who were told they could not bring their now banned for civilian ownership semiautomatic M–16's with them. It does not have a treble burst function. They had to carry only sidearms, only their Beretta. And now we are being told by caucuses in this House that the men on the Harland County could have scared off these 40 rent-a-thugs. Why did we not go in? Well, the fact remains we did not because there was guilt at the White House because the Commander in Chief, according to the liberal Washington Post, went into a pay phone up at a golf course in Martha's Vineyard and made a call down to I guess Tony Lake and said send in that special operations group, whatever they call it. He did not know the term "Delta," which is the biggest known secret in the world. Now staffers at the White House, as high as you get, say that the one incident we cannot run from is the death of 18 of America's best-trained Army personnel in Aideed country near the Bacarra Market in downtown Mogadishu.

I rushed my words last night when I was talking about having widows and sisters up in the gallery, having fathers call me who had survived two or three tours in Vietnam without ever being scratched, who lost their son. Mr. Joyce has retraced his very steps as his son was fighting for his life and then lying there dying. He said, "I was on the ninth hole at a golf course outside of Chicago." He will live with that memory forever. In a beautiful tribute in Newsweek magazine about 3 weeks ago to his son he asked, "Why did my son die in Mogadishu, Somalia?"

There are no clear answers, and that is why I am going to recite on the floor next week the six Cap Weinberger commandments which outline when we should not put American men and now women in harm's way. And I have added four to those, not to round it off to a mosaic 10, but there are four new things that have come up. One of them Cap Weinberger pointed out to me just last week, that American forces should never be put under foreign command.

They should always go into combat under U.S. commanders or under allied commanders who trained with us under ratified treaties such as NATO.

One of the things I have had to add to Cap's six and his newest seventh is we have to make sure our people are trained and armed properly. None of this U.S.S. Harlan County Beretta 9mm only, and no weapons. It was sickening that we turned around. It has created problems for us in Bosnia and everywhere else in the world, but nevertheless, we did turn around, and now we are stuck with a totally different situation in Haiti.

As far as this Congressman is concerned, I will make this promise: I hope somebody, Mr. Speaker, from the White House is listening, that if any American soldier, sailor, marine, pilot, or crewman, any man or woman dies in any operation in Haiti other than an operational accident off the coast, but dies from hostile fire, I will travel at my expense to anywhere in the country and personally talk to the mother, the father, the widow, any children over 13, and I will try to bring their opinions back to this House. I will try to extend the sympathy of my Government that we have squandered lives in another non-clearly-defined operation that may be driven by something other than human rights considerations, America's vital interests or the interests of any legitimate allies. For any of the aforementioned reasons from what those six moderate Democrats told me to get scandals off the front page or, as my Republican Party in its majority opinion believes, that it is to try to hold together a coalition of liberal people in this House.

The Republican Party has taken seven for seven this year and last of all the special elections. We probably are going to pick up a great number of seats in this Chamber and may even have an outside chance at taking control of the Senate which, in the last 40 years, was under Republican control for President Reagan's first 6 years. I am not going to sit here as member of the Committee on Armed Services as a peacetime veteran, trained to be a combat fighter pilot, but serving under five-star general President Eisenhower, never having to kill another mother's son or to put my life in jeopardy other than in the dangers of flying supersonic aircraft in tough operational training.

I owe a debt to those who died before me. That is why I am going to Normandy with our distinguished colleague, retired two-star general SONNY MONTGOMERY of Mississippi, why I will probably go back to Europe, this Christmas after we adjourn and the elections are over and walk the battlefield at Bastogne, in Belgium, and find that field at Malmedy where German war criminals machine-gunned to death 108 young U.S. prisoners, some of them 18 years of age. Where the army violated an order from this House, this Chamber then, that no 18-year-olds would ever be sent in combat. They would stay here and replace others of older age who would go over. Pretty soon we usually find this is the military way of doing things, suddenly somebody does not get the word, and here are 18-year-old young Americans in combat against German Waffen SS and Panzer Divisions. I owe a debt to those men behind me, and I owe a debt to those that came after me in Vietnam.

I want our young military people on active duty to live through their career, whatever time they give to their country. If they are called into combat, they should know the ground upon which they stand and that their country, including this Congress, both Houses, are going to back them up, that there is a victory goal in sight, that if the policies change, we will debate it in this House. There will be a whole new operational plan that they will be properly trained, and I am going to put in the RECORD those 10 commandments and hope to send them to all of the Chiefs of Staff of the various militaries under the Chairman, Gen. John Shalikashvili, and let us see if we cannot adopt a policy in this House so we do not have any more no-victory conflicts like Korea or Vietnam. No more indecision such as we have seen in Bosnia and the ultimate tragedy that took 30 or our Nation's finest men in uniform in Mogadishu, Somalia.

Here are those commandments right here, Mr. Speaker. I have time to read those Cap Weinberger-BOB DORNAN commandments. I ask Cap if I could structure them in a Mosaic way and make them all thou-shalt-not, and he said, "Of course," and he added that seventh one. The first six are pure vintage Cap Weinberger from a November 28, 1984, speech.

1. Thou shalt not commit U.S. combat forces unless the situation is vital to U.S. or allied national interests.

2. Thou shalt not commit U.S. combat forces unless all other options already have been used or considered.

3. Thou shalt not commit U.S. combat forces unless there is a clear commitment including allocated resources to achieving victory.

4. Thou shalt not commit U.S. combat forces unless there is clearly defined political and military objectives.

5. Thou shalt not commit U.S. combat forces unless our commitment of these forces will change if the objectives change.

6. Thou shalt not commit U.S. combat forces unless the American people and the Congress support the action.

Here is the one that Cap Weinberger asked me to add last week. Cap, forgive me. We have worked out the language without you signing it off on here to include ratified treaties.

7. Thou shalt not commit U.S. combat forces unless under the operational command of American commanders or allied commanders under a ratified treaty.

The following three are my own, and I will send them to Cap Weinberger to get his opinion before I send it on to the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

8. Thou shalt not commit U.S. combat forces unless properly equipped, trained, and maintained by the United States Congress.

9. Thou shalt not commit U.S. combat forces unless there is substantial and reliable intelligence information including human intelligence.

10. Thou shalt not commit U.S. combat forces unless the Commander in Chief and Congress can explain to the loved ones of any American soldier, marine, pilot, or air crewman killed or wounded why that man or woman was sent in harm's way.

I added to the last one "sent in harm's way" to indicate that people just do not turn up in harm's way. Somebody sends them there.

Now, the leprechaun that brought me these from my office, Mr. Speaker, brought me another article that I am going to read part of, and then submit for the RECORD. It is by the man that I think is the best writer on all affairs, military and foreign policy, that involves military operations or potential operations, and that is Vietnam veteran, and I believe he is also a Korean combat vet, Harry Summers, Jr. He writes for the L.A. Times Syndicate.

Here is what Col. Summers says. Title: "Let Blood And Thunder Men Practice What They Preach," blood and thunder men. He wrote this in the traditional great barracks that need a lot of reworking, I might add, Schofield Barracks, in Hawaii.

For those of you who are Pearl Harbor buffs or movie buffs, that is the barracks that Burt Lancaster grabbed an air-cooled .50-caliber machine gun and went up on the roof to singlehandedly shoot down attacking Japanese Zeroes and Kates.

Here is what he says: "'Resolved,' that the resolution of the 24th North Carolina Regiment, August 26, 1863, 'that the blood and thunder men should practice what they preach, by getting into the ranks and fighting, or forever hold their cowardly tongues, whether saint or sinner.'" A great civil war quote that I never saw. "Then and now," Harry Summers writes, "the view of those in the ranks who would close with the enemy with rifle and bayonet differ considerably from those who preach the virtues of military involvement far removed from the battlefield. To the civilian interventionists and editorialists now baying for United States soldiers to be committed to action in Bosnia, in Haiti, or in any other trouble spot around the world, military operations to them are an intellectual abstraction.

Addressing the graduating class at West Point in 1869, which is 4 years after Appomattox, "General William Tecumseh Sherman, one of America's fiercest warriors, noted that phenomenon over a century ago. 'I know there exist many good men who honestly believe that one may, with the aid of modern science, sit in comfort and ease in his office chair, and with little blocks of wood to represent men or even with figures and algebraic symbols, master the great game of war.'

"I think this is an insidious and most dangerous mistake," he said. "The soldier in the ranks is not a block of wood or a mere unit; he is a man like yourselves, full of feeling and passion, varying in size and strength, and all the attributes of manhood."

Now we are going to put our young American women in uniform in harm's way.

"Those words came to mind," Summers continues, as I trooped the line of the 1st and 3rd Battalions of the 21st Infantry here at Scofield, paraded in my honor as the newly appointed honorary colonel of the regiment." Congratulations, Harry, I did not know that. "And they were brought home again the following evening as the young soldiers of those rifle companies and their corporals, sergeants, lieutenants, and captains and their wives passed through the receiving line at the regimental dining out. Although it is seldom mentioned, the first thing being an infantryman entails is unlimited liability. A Navy admiral, a distinguished Vietnam War fighter pilot, once said he didn't know the difference between direct and indirect combat. A rifleman does. It is called the topical crest of the hill. If you are dug in 20 meters down the front slope with no way in hell of getting out when the enemy attacks, you're in direct combat. Indirect combat has its dangers too, but those 'rear-echelon willies'"—now that is an unusual turn of a phrase. Those "rear-echelon willies," either singular or plural, "on the reverse slope can cut and run if it gets too bad. The tanks can reverse gear and drive away. The planes can zoom out of harm's way, and the artillery displaced to a safer location. But the riflemen are stuck. They have a commitment to stand and fight, and, if need be, to die. That is shared by no one else in the Armed Forces. They are the military's true elite." Amen, Harry.

"Where once nuclear bombs and missiles were America's strategic forces, today conventional forces are once again the true strategic (that is, war-winning) force. And at the heart of conventional forces is the infantry. All the other arms and services exist to support their mission to seize and hold ground." And I know that this Army colonel is including the Marine infantry.

"Everything depends on combat, Carl von Clausewitz emphasized in his treatises on war 160 years ago. Even if you never fight, it depends on combat because it rests on the perception that if you did fight, you'd win." He concludes, "But infantry units cannot be committed lightly. As Sherman said, they are not blocks of wood." Not toys, war-gaming. "And neither are these volunteers a kind of foreign legion. They are America's sons and daughters, as, to its credit, the news media reminds us when one of these soldiers is killed or injured in the Nation's service. If today's 'blood and thunder men' are so anxious to intervene, perhaps they could, as in the 1930's Spanish Civil War, form a latter-day Lincoln Brigade with companies from the New Republic," that is our schizophrenic magazine here in D.C., "the New York Times, the Washington Post, and other such jingoist organizations. Save the infantry for when the vital interests of the Nation itself are imperiled." That is Harry Summers, Jr., U.S. Colonel Retired. I think I will send my Weinberg-Dornan commandments to Harry.

Mr. Speaker, I hope I do not have to speak on Haiti next week. I will hold my breath over this 4-day weekend and see what the situation is next week.

IDENTIFICATION NUMBER

NOTE on ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

(i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)

(ii) "Employer".—To file as an "employer", write "None" in answer to Item "B".

(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:

(i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.

(ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

☐ CHECK IF ADDRESS IS DIFFERENT THAN PREVIOUSLY REPORTED

NOTE on ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER —State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE on ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports. ☐

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) description, (b) quantity distributed, (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and, if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out items "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly Report."

P	QUARTER

NOTE on ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

(i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)

(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:

(i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.

(ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE on ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER —State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE on ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have ☐ terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) description, (b) quantity distributed, (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and, if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out items "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly Report."

STATEMENT OF VERIFICATION

NOTE on ITEM "D."—(a) IN GENERAL. The term "contribution" includes anything of value. When an organization or individual uses printed or duplicated matter in a campaign attempting to influence legislation, money received by such organization or individual—for such printed or duplicated matter—is a "contribution." "The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution"—§ 302(a) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN EMPLOYER.—(i) In general. Item "D" is designed for the reporting of all receipts from which expenditures are made, or will be made, in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Receipts of Business Firms and Individuals.—A business firm (or individual) which is subject to the Lobbying Act by reason of expenditures which it makes in attempting to influence legislation—but which has no funds to expend except those which are available in the ordinary course of operating a business not connected in any way with the influencing of legislation—will have no receipts to report, even though it does have expenditures to report.

(iii) Receipts of Multi-purpose Organizations.—Some organizations do not receive any funds which are to be expended solely for the purpose of attempting to influence legislation. Such organizations make such expenditures out of a general fund raised by dues, assessments, or other contributions. The percentage of the general fund which is used for such expenditures indicates the percentage of dues, assessments, or other contributions which may be considered to have been paid for that purpose. Therefore, in reporting receipts, such organizations may specify what that percentage is, and report their dues, assessments, and other contributions on that basis. However, each contributor of $500 or more is to be listed, regardless of whether the contribution was made solely for legislative purposes.

(c) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE.—(i) In general. In the case of many employees, all receipts will come under Items "D 5" (received for services) and "D 12" (expense money and reimbursements). In the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, it will be presumed that your employer is to reimburse you for all expenditures which you make in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Employer as Contributor of $500 or More.—When your contribution from your employer (in the form of salary, fee, etc.) amounts to $500 or more, it is not necessary to report such contribution under "D 13" and "D 14," since the amount has already been reported under "D 5," and the name of the "employer" has been given under Item "B" on page 1 of this report.

PLEASE RETURN 1 ORIGINAL TO: THE SECRETARY OF THE SENATE, OFFICE OF PUBLIC RECORDS, 232 HART SENATE OFFICE BUILDING, WASHINGTON, D.C. 20510

NOTE on ITEM "A".—(a) IN GENERAL. This "Report" form may be used by either an organization or an individual, as follows:

(i) "Employee".—To file as an "employee", state (in Item "B") the name, address, and nature of business of the "employer". (If the "employee" is a firm [such as a law firm or public relations firm], partners and salaried staff members of such firm may join in filing a Report as an "employee".)

(b) SEPARATE REPORTS. An agent or employee should not attempt to combine his Report with the employer's Report:

(i) Employers subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their agents or employees.

(ii) Employees subject to the Act must file separate Reports and are not relieved of this requirement merely because Reports are filed by their employers.

A. ORGANIZATION OR INDIVIDUAL FILING:

1. State name, address, and nature of business.

2. If this Report is for an Employer, list names of agents or employees who will file Reports for this Quarter.

NOTE on ITEM "B".—Reports by Agents or Employees. An employee is to file, each quarter, as many Reports as he has employers, except that: (a) If a particular undertaking is jointly financed by a group of employers, the group is to be considered as one employer, but all members of the group are to be named, and the contribution of each member is to be specified; (b) if the work is done in the interest of one person but payment therefor is made by another, a single Report—naming both persons as "employers"—is to be filed each quarter.

B. EMPLOYER —State name, address, and nature of business. If there is no employer, write "None."

NOTE on ITEM "C".—(a) The expression "in connection with legislative interests," as used in this Report, means "in connection with attempting, directly or indirectly, to influence the passage or defeat of legislation." "The term 'legislation' means bills, resolutions, amendments, nominations, and other matters pending or proposed in either House of Congress, and includes any other matter which may be the subject of action by either House"—§ 302(e).

(c) After beginning such activities, they must file a "Quarterly" Report at the end of each calendar quarter in which they have either received or expended anything of value in connection with legislative interests.

C. LEGISLATIVE INTERESTS, AND PUBLICATIONS in connection therewith:

1. State approximately how long legislative interests are to continue. If receipts and expenditures in connection with legislative interests have ☐ terminated, place an "X" in the box at the left, so that this Office will no longer expect to receive Reports.

2. State the general legislative interests of the person filing and set forth the specific legislative interests by reciting: (a) Short titles of statutes and bills; (b) House and Senate numbers of bills, where known; (c) citations of statutes, where known; (d) whether for or against such statutes and bills.

3. In the case of those publications which the person filing has caused to be issued or distributed in connection with legislative interests, set forth: (a) description, (b) quantity distributed, (c) date of distribution, (d) name of printer or publisher (if publications were paid for by person filing) or name of donor (if publications were received as a gift).

4. If this is a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) rather than a "Quarterly" Report, state below what the nature and amount of anticipated expenses will be; and, if for an agent or employee, state also what the daily, monthly, or annual rate of compensation is to be. If this is a "Quarterly" Report, disregard this item "C4" and fill out items "D" and "E" on the back of this page. Do not attempt to combine a "Preliminary" Report (Registration) with a "Quarterly Report."

NOTE on ITEM "D."—(a) IN GENERAL. The term "contribution" includes anything of value. When an organization or individual uses printed or duplicated matter in a campaign attempting to influence legislation, money received by such organization or individual—for such printed or duplicated matter—is a "contribution." "The term 'contribution' includes a gift, subscription, loan, advance, or deposit of money, or anything of value, and includes a contract, promise, or agreement, whether or not legally enforceable, to make a contribution"—§ 302(a) of the Lobbying Act.

(b) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN EMPLOYER.—(i) In general. Item "D" is designed for the reporting of all receipts from which expenditures are made, or will be made, in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Receipts of Business Firms and Individuals.—A business firm (or individual) which is subject to the Lobbying Act by reason of expenditures which it makes in attempting to influence legislation—but which has no funds to expend except those which are available in the ordinary course of operating a business not connected in any way with the influencing of legislation—will have no receipts to report, even though it does have expenditures to report.

(iii) Receipts of Multi-purpose Organizations.—Some organizations do not receive any funds which are to be expended solely for the purpose of attempting to influence legislation. Such organizations make such expenditures out of a general fund raised by dues, assessments, or other contributions. The percentage of the general fund which is used for such expenditures indicates the percentage of dues, assessments, or other contributions which may be considered to have been paid for that purpose. Therefore, in reporting receipts, such organizations may specify what that percentage is, and report their dues, assessments, and other contributions on that basis. However, each contributor of $500 or more is to be listed, regardless of whether the contribution was made solely for legislative purposes.

(c) IF THIS REPORT IS FOR AN AGENT OR EMPLOYEE.—(i) In general. In the case of many employees, all receipts will come under Items "D 5" (received for services) and "D 12" (expense money and reimbursements). In the absence of a clear statement to the contrary, it will be presumed that your employer is to reimburse you for all expenditures which you make in connection with legislative interests.

(ii) Employer as Contributor of $500 or More.—When your contribution from your employer (in the form of salary, fee, etc.) amounts to $500 or more, it is not necessary to report such contribution under "D 13" and "D 14," since the amount has already been reported under "D 5," and the name of the "employer" has been given under Item "B" on page 1 of this report.
