TITLE I—GENERAL

SEC. 101. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—(1) The United States air traffic control system, spanning civil and military sectors and the busiest in the world, has set the standard since its inception for the utmost in aviation safety and efficiency of traffic movements.

(2) This Federal air traffic control system is integral to the United States aviation industry, a leading exporter and employer in the national economy, and contributes directly to this vital national resource and its links to an increasingly global economy.

(3) It is the continuing role of Congress and the Executive Branch to evaluate each Federal Government activity to determine whether its services continue to be needed and, if so, whether these services can be best provided by a Federal agency.
(4) The provision of more than 500,000 air traffic operations and the use of over 28,000 air navigation facilities in the National Airspace System daily by the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), operating 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, and the reliance of the United States aviation industry on these services, constitutes a unique Federal operational role, one that is increasingly burdened by traditional governmental management processes.

(5) Air traffic control is increasingly reliant on high-quality, well motivated staff and automated, electronic tracking and communication systems that require state-of-the-art computer equipment and applications, technology that advances extremely rapidly and has left current air traffic control operations behind.

(6) Current government-wide requirements for procurement, personnel, financial, and other fundamental elements of management are being updated but, despite the general changes achieved to date as a result of the National Performance Review, are not suited to the type of operating enterprise needed to bring the United States air traffic control system into the 21st century.

(7) Effective financing of air traffic modernization can be improved by a transition from the current Federal, excise-based user fees to a system of fees that more closely reflect the costs of providing air traffic control services, but changes of this nature are complicated by the ongoing, successful effort to reduce Federal budget deficits, an objective which should not be undercut.

(8) The FAA and the Department of Defense share a unique relationship as users and suppliers of air traffic services, and it is vital to safe and efficient air traffic control and defense readiness that this relationship continue to evolve under any new operational arrangement for civilian air traffic service.

(9) More user input, simpler procurement methods, more flexible personnel policies and incentives with improved labor-management partnerships, greater management longevity, and access to capital markets are necessary and achievable to maintain the FAA’s enviable record of efficiency in air traffic management, but not within the confines of a traditional Federal Government agency.

(10) The clear success of a much smaller, but similar, transfer of a long-time FAA activity (operation of National and Dulles Airports) to a non-Federal operator in 1987 demonstrates the efficacy of creating a self-governing, self-financing entity to manage inherently operational activities.

(11) Transfer legislation can relieve the Federal Government of operating roles and include the kind of safety, security, national defense, international, personnel and other mandates needed to guarantee that the successor entity will not compromise any of the benefits that have been produced by the FAA throughout its long and successful history of air traffic control operations.

(b) Purpose.—It is declared to be the purpose of Congress in this Act, pursuant to its authority under the Constitution to regulate commerce among the several states, to transfer operating responsibility for air traffic services currently provided by the Federal Aviation Administration on behalf of the United States to a separate corporate entity, to provide for more efficient operation and development of these services and related assets, without any reduction in accountability for aviation safety, security, national defense, airport development, or other necessary aviation functions currently entrusted to the Federal Aviation Administration.

(2) The Corporation shall develop and implement airspace orders, procedures, and other directives with respect to the use of navigable airspace. This authority includes the ability to issue routine airspace actions and airspace assignments and designations in accordance with rules prescribed for the Corporation by the Administrator. (3) The Corporation shall develop and implement air traffic orders, procedures, and other directives governing the flight of aircraft, for the navigation, protection, and identification of aircraft, for the protection of persons and property on the ground, and for the efficient utilization of the navigable airspace, including procedures as to safe altitudes of flight and the prevention of collision, between aircraft and land or water vehicles, and between aircraft and airborne objects.

(4) The Corporation is authorized to—

(A) acquire, establish, improve, dispose of, and eliminate air navigation facilities wherever necessary;

(B) operate and maintain such air-navigation facilities; and

(C) provide necessary facilities and personnel for the management and protection of air traffic.

The Corporation shall update and arrange for publi-

(5) To encourage and allow maximum use of the navigable airspace by civil aircraft consistent with national security, and subject to appropriate military authority exercised pursuant to section 40106 of title 49, United States Code, the Corporation shall recommend for issuance by the Administrator, in consultation with the Secretary of Defense, regulations that establish areas in the airspace the Administrator decides are necessary in the interest of national defense, and to restrict or prohibit flight of civil aircraft that the Corporation cannot identify, locate, and control with available facilities in those areas.

(6) The Corporation shall recommend to the Administrator long-range plans and policy for the orderly development and use of the navigable airspace that will best meet the needs of, and serve the interests of, civil aeronautics and the national defense, except for needs of the armed forces that are peculiar to warfare and primarily of military concern. In making recommendations, the Corporation shall emphasize—

(A) providing the highest degree of safety and efficiency in air commerce;
(B) meeting the forecasted needs of civil aeronautics; and

(C) meeting the requirements that the Secretary of Defense establishes for the support of the national defense.

(7) To implement the authority in this section, the Corporation may undertake reasonable actions, including action to—

(9) In any case where negotiations with other countries over airspace control and air navigation may be necessary or desirable, the Corporation shall be subject to the requirements of section 303 of this Act and shall act through the Federal Aviation Administration, the Department of Transportation, and the Department of State and, to the degree possible, provide the Administrator with as much notice as possible of requirements in this area.

(10) The Corporation shall refer for action by the Federal Aviation Administration, pursuant to chapter 447 and chapters 461 through 465 of title 49, United States Code, complaints against any person for violations of rules, regulations, orders, and other directives issued by the Corporation or by the Administrator. The Corporation shall provide necessary assistance in any enforcement action taken under this subsection. Nothing in this paragraph limits or changes the current power of the Administrator to take action under his or her own authority.

(b) Aviation Research and Development.—The Corporation is authorized to undertake research and devel-development projects as it deems necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act.

(c) Meteorological Services; Aeronautical Charts.—The Corporation shall be responsible for the dissemination of available aviation-related meteorological information to its air traffic services users in accordance with published air traffic procedures.

The aggregate amount of any such obligations outstanding at any one time shall not exceed $15,000,000,000.

(b) Treasury Borrowing.—The Corporation may issue to the Secretary of the Treasury notes or other obligations in such forms and denominations, bearing such maturities, and subject to such terms and conditions, as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. Such notes shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration current market yields on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States of comparable maturities. The Secretary of the Treasury shall purchase any notes or other obligations issued hereunder, and for that purpose the Secretary is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under chapter 31 of title 31, United States Code, and the purposes for which include any purchase of such notes or obligations acquired by him or her under this subsection. The Secretary of the Treasury may at any time sell any notes or other obligations acquired by him or her under this subsection.

(c) Market Borrowing.—(1) If the Corporation demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary of Treasury that borrowing from the private markets would be cost-effective, the Corporation is authorized to issue notes and other obligations to private entities consistent with this subsection.
(2) The Corporation may pledge its assets and pledge and use its revenues and receipts for the payment of the principal or interest on its obligations, for the purchase or redemption thereof, and for other purposes incidental funds which may be similarly pledged and used, to such extent and in such manner as the board deems necessary or desirable. The Corporation is authorized to enter into binding covenants with the holders of such obligations, and with the trustee, if any, under any agreement entered into in accordance with the issuance thereof with respect to the establishment of reserve, sinking, and other funds, application and use of revenues and receipts of the Corporation, stipulations concerning the subsequent issuance of obligations or the execution of leases or lease/purchases relating to properties of the Corporation and such other matters as the board deems necessary or desirable to enhance the marketability of such obligations. However, the Corporation may not enter into covenants that have the effect of conflicting with any requirement of this Act, as determined by the Secretary of Transportation in approving the issuance of indebtedness pursuant to subsection 203(g) of this Act.

(3) Obligations issued by the Corporation under this subsection shall be subject to such terms and conditions as the board determines.
(4) Obligations issued by the Corporation under this subsection shall—

(A) be negotiable or nonnegotiable and bearer or registered instruments, as specified therein and in any indenture or covenant relating thereto;

(B) contain a recital that they are issued under this section, and such recital shall be conclusive evidence of the regularity of the issuance of sale of such obligations and of their validity; and

(C) be treated as an obligation or security of the United States for purposes of the counterfeiting and forgery provisions of title 18, United States Code.

(b) Taxation of Corporation Indebtedness.—The indebtedness of the Corporation, in whatever form, shall be exempt both as to principal and interest from all taxation now or hereafter imposed by a State or local taxing authority except estate, inheritance, and gift taxes.

SEC. 209. FEES AND OTHER CHARGES FOR SERVICES.

(a) Fees and Other Charges for Services.—The Corporation is authorized to and shall impose fees or other charges for service that are consistent with the requirements of this section. The imposition and subsequent modification of fees or other charges shall be carried out by means that provide the opportunity for public comment in writing, and for access by the public to all comments filed in a particular action on fees or other charges.
Fees and charges by the Corporation may not become effective prior to January 1, 1997.

(b) Policy for Imposition of Fees, Charges and Practices.—The fees, charges and related practices of the Corporation shall conform to the following policies:

(1) Fees, charges and practices shall not unreasonably restrain competition by, for example, being unfair, unreasonable, unjustly discriminatory among current or potential users of the air traffic system,
or unreasonably disadvantaging new entrants.

(2) Fees and charges shall be consistent with all obligations of the United States Government under an international agreement.

(3) Fees and charges shall be maintained at a level sufficient to assure the satisfaction of all obligations incurred by the Corporation, including those that are held by the United States.

(c) Payment to Corporation.—Fees and other charges for services under this Act shall be paid directly to the Corporation or its agent. The Corporation is authorized to levy fines, interest, and penalties for late payment or nonpayment of fees and other charges imposed under this Act.
(d) Cost Allocation Study.—(1) The Corporation shall, as soon as practical after the date of transfer, undertake a study of the allocation of all Corporation costs to identifiable, discrete—

(A) air-traffic-service categories, distinguishing at a minimum among domestic operations, foreign air transportation operations to and from the United States, and overflights of the United States; and

(B) user categories, including commercial aviation, general aviation, and public-use aviation.

(2) The Corporation shall complete the cost allocation study not later than 18 months after the date of transfer. The study shall consider all costs incurred by the Corporation, and all costs incurred by the Department of Defense to produce air traffic control services for civil aviation. The study shall be consistent with generally accepted accounting principles for commercial, not-for-profit entities.
