There was no objection.

ADDITIONAL DEBATE TIME DURING FURTHER CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 7, NATIONAL SECURITY REVITALIZATION ACT

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, I have a unanimous-consent request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state the unanimous-consent request.

Mr. VOLKMER. The unanimous-consent request is that the leader of both sides, Republican and Democratic leaders, be allowed 3 minutes each for debate on H.R. 7.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I am taking the time to ask the gentleman if he could spell it out for us. Is that for debate purposes only?

Mr. VOLKMER. Yes. I said, for debate only.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Notwithstanding the time limitation?

Mr. BERMAN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I have one question. I assume this is not within the 10-hour limit?

Mr. VOLKMER. If the gentleman will yield, Mr. Speaker, that is correct. This is in addition to the other time. It does not come out of the time.

Mr. BERMAN. I withdraw my reservation of objection, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

NATIONAL SECURITY
REVITALIZATION ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 83 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 7.

□ 0905

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H.R. 7) to revitalize the national security of the United States, with Mr. LINDER in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Committee of the Whole rose on Wednesday, February 15, 1995, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON], as amended, had been disposed of, and the bill was open for amendment at any point.

Three hours and fifty minutes remain for consideration of amendments under the 5-minute rule, pursuant to the order of the House today.

Are there further amendments to the bill?

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. MCHALE

Mr. MCHALE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MCHALE: Page 9, after line 21, insert the following new paragraph (and redesignate the succeeding paragraphs accordingly):

(2) to provide for sufficient forces to meet the national security strategy of using forward-deployed and forward-based forces to promote regional stability, deter aggression, improve joint/combined operations among United States forces and allies, and ensure timely crisis response:

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCHALE] will be recognized for 1 minute, and a Member opposed will be recognized for 1 minute.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCHALE].

Mr. MCHALE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the 1 minute.

My hope is there is no Member opposed.

This amendment is being offered with the consent and approval of the leadership on both sides. I particularly want to thank the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE], for his agreement in allowing me to offer this amendment. I also want to emphasize, Mr. Chairman, that I offer this amendment with my good friend and colleague, the gentleman from Florida [Mrs. FOWLER], because on this issue, she and I absolutely see eye to eye.

Mr. Chairman, it was President Kennedy who said only when our strength is sufficient beyond doubt can we be certain beyond doubt that it will never be employed. This amendment simply says that we guarantee to particularly our naval forces the military resources necessary for peacetime deployment so that when a crisis occurs, when our Nation must quickly deploy forces into a combat theater, that the U.S. Navy and embarked forces will have the opportunity for crisis response. That is what the Navy typically does during peacetime.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time, and suggest perhaps a few comments from my colleague, the gentlewoman from Florida [Mrs. FOWLER], would be appropriate at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. Does any Member seek the 1 minute in opposition?

Hearing none, the Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Florida [Mrs. FOWLER] for 1 minute.

Mrs. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the 1 minute.

Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to cosponsor this amendment with my colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCHALE].

As he stated, this just puts into this bill the policy that in order to provide sufficient forces to meet our national security strategy of using forward-deployed and forward-based forces to promote regional stability, that it is very important that we have this policy in our bill, because this is what our U.S. Navy does, and we want to make sure that this language is spelled out clearly in this bill.

I am pleased to be a cosponsor with my colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCHALE].

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCHALE].

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. HEFLEY

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. It is amendment No. 5.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HEFLEY: Strike out section 309 (page 21, lines 19 through 22) and insert the following:

SEC. 309. FUNDING.

Funds for the activities of the Commission shall be made available to the Commission by the Secretary of Defense from funds appropriated for activities of the Office of the Secretary of Defense.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY] will be recognized for 5 minutes, and a Member in opposition will be recognized for 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY].

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, as we marked up this bill in the National Security Committee, I had concerns about spending additional money on a commission. I did not want an additional $1.5 million being taken away from our troops.

The chairman of our committee, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE], and his staff have worked diligently to calm my fears.

My amendment would simply state that the commission shall be paid for by funds appropriated for the Office of Secretary of Defense. This is appropriate since the Office of the Secretary of Defense is the one that generally has money to do studies of various kinds. It is also appropriate because these funds will not be coming out of training or readiness accounts, and I think that is the real key, Mr. Chairman, is that we do not want this money coming out of the hides of our fighting forces as we prepare them to meet whatever contingency is out there.

So we are asking that this come out of the Office of the Secretary of Defense. It is my understanding that the chairman is willing to accept this amendment, and I would ask support for the Hefley amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Does anyone seek recognition in opposition?

Ms. HARMAN. Yes, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN] for 5 minutes.

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise in opposition to the Hefley amendment.

First, let me thank my colleague for supporting an amendment I offered in the National Security Committee to strike the entire commission including its funding. I think that is the way to go, and in just a few minutes, my colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MENENDEZ], and I will offer an amendment again to do that.

I think the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY] is correct in pointing out the $1.5 million that would be appropriated for this commission should not come from new funds, nor should it come from existing funds. We should not spend it.

I am a supporter of the balanced budget amendment, as is he, and it is time to get serious about cutting out unnecessary funding. This is a point I made last night, too, as we made the difficult balance between more funds for national missile defense and readiness.

There is no free lunch, Mr. Chairman, and unfortunately this amendment would seem to be asking for one.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. HARMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SKELTON. I would like to again speak for the troops: $1.5 million will take care of a lot of taking care of their homes, their roofs, their refrigerators, the bathrooms, the quality of life. It will take care of a lot of ammunition for them to shoot on the rifle range. I think this is really a usurpation of our job here. The Constitution tells us we are in charge, not a commission.

I speak for the troops again.

Ms. HARMAN. I appreciate that. Mr. Chairman, I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MENENDEZ].

Mr. MENENDEZ. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I, too, oppose the Hefley amendment.

I think it is an obvious attempt to try to deflect from the upcoming amendment that the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN] and I are offering. The fact of the matter is $1.5 million out of the taxpayers' money, wherever you do it, is still $1.5 million out of the taxpayers' money, and it goes and flies against the spirit of the contract.

If you are for smaller government, you do not add another commission. If you are for less bureaucracy, you do not add another commission. If you are for less spending, you do not add another commission.

And so when we have the entire resources of the Congress, all the committees that review it, and ultimately the bottom-up review that has been had, the last thing we need to do is to continue to add another layer of bureaucracy, another $1.5 million.

You can shift the costs. You can shift the costs, but ultimately it is coming out of the average taxpayer's pocket.

Vote against the Hefley amendment.

Ms. HARMAN. Reclaiming my remaining time, I will just say this, let us balance the budget. Let us vote "no" on the Hefley amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would just, in response, point out that if the Office of the Secretary of Defense has $5 million to buy Korean oil, they can certainly have the money to do this.

I think the question which we will be debating in a few minutes of whether or not the commission is appropriate is a different question.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to my friend, the gentleman from California [Mr. HUNTER].

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, I thank my friend for yielding to me.

I think he made an interesting statement there with respect to Korean oil. It is my understanding we did make this major Korean oil purchase out of the purse, if you will, of the Office of the Secretary of Defense. It is a massive, massive pool of money. Is that right?

Mr. HEFLEY. It is, indeed. In fact, I think the figure is about $80 million that they have for studies, and that kind of thing, in the Office of the Secretary of Defense. I am not sure what the total budget is.

Mr. HUNTER. Let me offer to my friend that his idea that this comes out of the Secretary of Defense's office, I think, is a good one, because the Secretary of Defense himself commissions literally dozens and dozens of studies from outside groups. That is where the term "Beltway Bandit," I think, came into being.

Those are all the thousands of consultants that live in this city that do studies, and we are going to get into the heart of this commission shortly. But $1.5 million coming out of the OSD pot is going to be less, I understand, approximately 1 percent of that money that the Secretary has to run his office and to pay for commissions.

I think it is appropriate. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HEFLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, the Secretary of Defense came before us, and he said, "I don't want this study. Leave me alone. I don't want to spend $1.5 million." He did not want it. So why does the gentleman want to give it to him?

Mr. HUNTER. If the gentleman will yield further, we are going to get into this. But the Secretary of Defense has some real problems. As my friend, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY], knows, my friend from Mississippi, who always has the interest of the troops at heart and was arguing passionately and eloquently last night for more readiness for troops, for more housing, the Secretary of Defense has to come before our committee every time and say, "I have enough." And we know that he does not have enough money. We know that GAO just did this report that says he is underfunded, his own plan, by $150 billion. So we are going to get into the heart of this commission.

But my suggestion is the gentleman from Mississippi has a great tradition, has established a tradition a lot of us have followed of not always accepting everything the Secretary's office tells us, and having our own ideas.

I think this is going to help the Secretary to have some outside analysis on a number of these questions where there is so much difference in what the Secretary's position is and what other reliable agencies, like GAO, says. He and GAO were $150 billion apart. I think it is appropriate to figure out why they have a big difference.

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Chairman, if I might respond to my friend, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY], as well, the Secretary of Defense does not want 10 or 12 guard armories every year either. Yet I know the gentleman feels strongly about that, as many of us do. We have an oversight responsibility. Now, whether or not we need the commission, the argument for the commission is there is some question because of what the gentleman from California [Mr. HUNTER] said about the Bottom-Up Review and whether that really is a clear picture, and how do we get a clear picture?

The answer in this bill is we get an independent kind of commission that can look.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlemen yield further?

Mr. HEFLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. I thank the gentleman once again.

What we ought to be doing is not closing these military bases, which comes under the gentleman's subcommittee. We ought to save this $1.5 million in order to keep some of the bases open.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY].

The question was taken; and the chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 211, noes 180, not voting 43, as follows:

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Arney for, with Mr. Lewis of Georgia against.

Mr. Scarborough for, with Mr. Moakley against.

Messrs. GILCHREST, NEY, BUYER, and MCINTOSH changed their vote from "no" to "aye."

So, the amendment was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mrs. COLLINS of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I was unavoidably delayed, and I did not record my vote on rollcall No. 140. Had I been here, I would have voted "no."

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. WAMP. Mr. Chairman, this morning I was attending an event away from Capitol Hill to which I had been committed before the change in meeting time of the House to 9 a.m. Unfortunately, when the bells rang for the vote on the Hefley amendment, I was unable to return in time and I would therefore ask that the RECORD reflect that I would have voted "yes" on the Hefley amendment to H.R. 7.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the order of the House of today, it is now in order to consider the amendment to be offered by the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN].

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MS. HARMAN

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN] will be recognized for 8 minutes, and a Member opposed will be recognized for 8 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN].

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes.

My colleagues, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MENENDEZ] and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MEEHAN] and I are offering an amendment today that every deficit hawk should love. Balanced budget supporters should unite around it because it would strike a section of this bill, title 3, which would establish an Advisory Commission on National Security Revitalization that we simply do not need.

Let me make three quick points:

First, the commission is a waste of money. Even if we reprogram the money, its timetable is absurdly short, and its $1.5 million estimated budget wastes taxpayer funds that could be better spent on readiness or quality of life for our troops and their families.

In comparison to other Government expenditures, $1.5 million is not much. However, the challenge is for all of us in this economic environment to reduce wasteful Government expenditures, not increase them. If we are serious about balancing the budget, this money must not be spent.

Second, the commission usurps the responsibilities of the Secretary of Defense, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and the congressional defense committees. Defense Secretary Perry emphatically stated that, "the proposed commission usurps the responsibilities of the Secretary of Defense." At the same time this independent commission would interfere with the ability of the Committee on National Security to fulfill its responsibilities. Secretary Perry also correctly advised that we should not dilute the responsibilities of the Secretary of Defense by turning a key part of them over to an independent commission.

Third, the commission is redundant. I am holding up a list prepared by supporters of this commission. This 2-page list prepared by supporters of this commission shows 14 other commissions that are already doing work on overlapping subjects. This commission would duplicate tasks of the Rolls Admission Commission, the Quality of Life Task Force, the Reserve Forces Policy Board, the Task Force on Readiness, among others. It is a waste of time and money.

To sum up, Mr. Chairman, I agree with the recent comment of a senior member of the other body who said, "the commission is a real loser."

The CHAIRMAN. Does any Member seek time in opposition?

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN].

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE] for 8 minutes.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON].

(Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this amendment despite my admiration for the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN] in her leadership role on the Committee on National Security.

Why do we need this commission Mr. Chairman? Well, let us look at the facts as they are.

We have a Secretary of Defense who tells us we need one fund level for the defense needs over the next 5 years. We have the General Accounting Office tell us, no, we need $150 billion more than what the Secretary said. We have the Congressional Budget Office saying, no, we need $67 billion more than what the Secretary said. And then we have one of the most respected Members of the minority side, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON], saying, no, we need $44 billion more over the next 5 years.

No one knows what we need over the next 5 years.

Now, some would say let us let the Secretary go back and tell us. We know what he is going to tell us. He is going to tell us what he already told us, we are OK the way we are, which if I talk to almost every member of the minority party on the Committee on National Security, they will agree with us. They do not think there is enough money in there. What we are saying is we need an independent commission to look at that.

Now, we are not saying a political commission, because we adjusted the makeup and markup process to suit the needs of the minority to make sure it would be six Democrats and six Republicans appointees, and that is in fact what this commission will be, a bipartisan effort to come back to us and give us the real needs in terms of dollars and in line with the problems and challenges that are out there in the next 5 years.

Some of our colleagues are saying this will be a money saver. You want to save money? Boy, we will give you a list. Look at what the President put out. A nice glossy color brochure in two-part form entitled "A Time for Peace." Save money? Eliminate that garbage. We do not need it. It is a total waste of money. Eliminate the L.A. Youth programs in the defense bill, $10 million. How about electric vehicles? Believe it or not, it is in the defense bill, $15 million. Cancer research, even though it is important, I would support it if it were part of the health bill, over $200 million. This commission does not take away the authority of the Secretary. It lets us play our rightful role.

Now, let us look at what the minority party did when they were in power. These are just a few of the commissions that the minority party put into place, in many cases, in most cases, over the objections of the then Secretary of Defense. Everything from women in the military to bottom-up review, total force structure, everything you can think of established through an independent commission, in some instances where the commissioners were actually paid.

In this piece of legislation, no commissioner is paid. The only expenses involved will be those incurred, and they will be reimbursed for that. We are not taking the money from readiness; we are taking the money from the Secretary of Defense's account. What part of it? He will have a few less lunches, a little less money to go on trips overseas maybe. That is where it will come from.

So this in fact is a vote to let us play our rightful role and to see where we in fact can go in terms of the spending needs of the military for the next 5 years, and I urge my colleagues to oppose the Harman amendment and to support the need for the establishment of this.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Chairman, does this commission you want established have any authority; can it do anything?

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. The commission has the same authority these commissions had, which is basically to come back to Congress and do what the Secretary has not been able to do, and that is give us the straight scoop on what our defense needs are.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. He is a good Secretary.

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. A Secretary being misled by an administration that does not support the facts.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. The commission does nothing. He does not want it. He is not being misled.

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. The Secretary would like to have it, because it would end up supporting his needs for additional money for readiness that his President will not give in to because he pulls his defense budget number out of the air, as you know.

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MEEHAN].

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, is this not something? They did it when they were in power, so we can do it. They did it, so we can do it. Let us get serious. Here we are creating a commission to spend money to figure out how we are going to spend more money. We pass a balanced budget amendment, we talk about downsizing Government, we talk about reinventing Government. And what are we doing here today? Let us create a political commission, because we do not want to do our jobs.

We in Congress do not want to do our jobs on the Committee on National Security. We do not want to hold the Secretary of Defense back. Get real, If we are going to cut the size of Government, we cannot begin to create more commissions, created by politicians to appoint politicians to have more partisan rhetoric. National security is more important than partisan politics. This commission is a joke and everyone in the country knows it.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. HUNTER].

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, there is an enormous discrepancy between our own institution, the GAO and the Secretary of Defense's office. The GAO says the secretary of Defense has underfunded his own budget by $150 billion. The Chief of Staff of the Army has made statements to the effect that the Army is on the razor's edge of readiness, meaning they cannot cut another dime, that they are in very difficult shape. General Mundy, the Commandant of the Marine Corps, June 1994, last year, said that the Marine Corps was inadequately funded to carry out the President's own Bottom-Up Review requirements. So we have questions all over the place.

If you are satisfied with the $150 billion difference in funding projections, then vote no on this commission. If you are not satisfied, vote yes. We still authorize, we still legislate. But we are not going to say we refuse to see the evidence. Let us let this commission come up and try to resolve this $150 billion difference.

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ANDREWS], a great deficit hawk.

(Mr. ANDREWS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, here is why the Harman-Menendez amendment makes sense. When we go back to our districts this afternoon, if we stood in line at the supermarket this weekend, and we had to say to the person next to us "I am going to take $20 out of your pocket to pay for this program," could we look them in the eye and tell them they were getting their $20 worth for this program?

What would we tell them when they said, "Congressman, there were 14 other of these commissions that were supposed to do something like the same thing." What would we tell them when they say, "Congressman, do you not have committees already set up in the House and Senate supposed to do the same thing?" I do not have a good answer to that, and I think neither do you.

Let me just say this to my friends from the other side: Part of your Contract With America is to shed lockstep allegiance to partisan leadership and to do the right thing. The right thing is to vote for Harman-Menendez.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I would just like to point out that the reason we are setting up this commission is to reveal the flaws in the previous commission that was set up, the Bottom-Up Review, and point out how wrong it was. That is simply what is going to be. In other words, how can the other side say it is all right for them to have a commission set up and for us not to do the same thing?

Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER] is recognized for 2½ minutes.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Chairman, it is amazing how we can debate an issue of $1.5 billion and interject all the rhetoric as if it is $1.5 billion. Well, gentleman that have particular defense contractors in their districts may be asking for particular things, but come to the House floor and then want to talk about what things are particular, what things are a joke, and what is not a joke.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUYER. No, not at this particular time. If you became sensitive, that is your particular problem.

In regard to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN], I have great respect for you, and you have been a hawk with us on a lot of issues. But on this particular issue I am in agreement with the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE].

The Bottom-Up Review became suspect. It became suspect because of how it came about. We have talked about this on the Committee on National Security often. And that is, and I have to say it again, when Bush-Powell put together the numbers for defense cuts, they cut the $50 billion. Les Aspin said I can go $60 billion further on top of the $50 billion. Then all of a sudden Bill Clinton is a candidate for President, endorses Les Aspin's $60 billion in cuts. None of us were surprised when Les Aspin became the Secretary of Defense. Low and behold, when we did the 5-year budget resolution, it was $127, $128 billion, on top of the existing $50 billion.

Then all of a sudden, quickly, to cover themselves, Les Aspin comes to our committee and talks about having to do the Bottom-Up Review, a review of how to justify the numbers after the fact. That then made the Bottom-Up Review a very politically suspect document, and those of us then in the committee of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON] last year then had to deal with the difficult decisions about the open secret in this town.

The open secret is, my friends, and to those in our country, it is that we do not have a force structure to even meet the national security objectives and being able to fight and win two nearly simultaneous major regional conflicts.

So what we are saying is right now, time out. Let us not deal with the politics. Let us have the independent commission to give a real assessment. I understand the politics between the White House and the Secretary, and those are the chiefs that must salute constitutionally.

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUYER. I yield to the gentlewoman from California.

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the compliment and thank the gentleman for it. I would just say this: That our committee and its composition are competent to do what you are suggesting. Why do we need to interpose a commission between us and the policymakers and the executive branch? Why do not we do this ourselves?

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, we have many advisory committees and task forces to help us through the process, and that is exactly what this is. I think it is an excellent compliment to how we want to govern.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN] has 4 minutes remaining.

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, the Republican Contract on America mandates Congress to spend $1.5 billion on a new commission to study our Nation's military needs. Great. A new idea for more government. Do not we already have people studying the Nation's military needs and reporting to the legislative branch and the executive branch? Is not that what the Pentagon does? Is not that what the House Committee on Armed Services under the gentleman from South Carolina, Chairman SPENCE, has been doing? Is not that what the Committee on International Relations has been doing under the gentleman from New York, Chairman GILMAN?

Why do we need to spend $1.5 million on a commission to do what the Pentagon and Congress already should be doing and already are doing? Why do we need to spend money so we can find ways to spend more money? It is the full employment act for unemployed defense consultants. It is a bad idea. Vote for the Menendez-Harman amendment.

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS], one of the most honorable and impressive Members of this House, and the ranking member of the Committee on National Security.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, let me make one point of why I oppose this commission. It is not just that it is something we can do. The Framers of the Constitution gave us this responsibility. From time to time, Mr. Chairman, it is wholly appropriate that we establish commissions to engage until giving their expertise with respect to discrete items. This commission goes far beyond that. This commission attempts to establish the totality of our national security policy.

Set up a commission on roles and missions. But this is something far beyond that. We are being paid, my colleagues, in excess of $130,000 per annum to do this job fundamentally required by the Constitution of the United States. The Framers of the Constitution said do your job. Do not give it to an independent commission for the purposes of establishing the totality of our national security policy. That is our job.

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MENENDEZ], the cosponsor of this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Jersey is recognized for 3 minutes.

(Mr. MENENDEZ asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Chairman, if the Contract With America means anything, it means we do not want to waste the taxpayers' money by establishing an unneeded commission to tell us what Republicans both in the bill and on their language on the floor already know they wanted to save. The amendment we offer seeks to strike this unnecessary money for the taxpayers. Whether you spend it out of the Secretary of Defense's budget or through an appropriation, it is still taxpayers' money, and I challenge my Republican colleagues to honor your contract vows to cut wasteful spending, to cut bureaucracy, to make Government smaller and eliminate the commission.

During the last Congress, the House of Representatives spent nearly $20 million on the budgets of congressional committees with oversight over this issue—Foreign Affairs, Armed Services, Government Operations, Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

Do you think you can tell the constituents back home that $20 million was not enough? And if you add the Members who in fact have served on those committees and who have great experience, offer 200 Members, it comes to $40 million in the House alone, without the Senate. If that is not enough to determine what it is that we need for national defense and security, I do not know what is. And as it relates to the secretary, let us hear what he had.

So to say. He said, "You are my commission," meaning the committee. "I do not need an independent commission interposing itself between myself and you, and you do not need to have an independent commission interposing yourself with me."

If you want to vote for smaller Government, if you want to have less spending, if you want to have less bureaucracy, if you want to save the taxpayers money, you will be voting yes on this amendment, you will vote for the Harman-Menendez amendment, and in fact you will be living with the Contract.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

Amendment offered by Mr. LEACH: On page 28, strike line 4 and all that follows through line 12 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

“(g) INTERPRETATION.—Subject to the power of the Congress to declare war under article I, section 8, clause 11 of the Constitution of the United States, nothing in this section shall be construed to derogate or limit the authority of the President as Commander-in-Chief of the United States Armed Forces under article II, section 2, clause 1 of the Constitution of the United States.”

Beginning on page 28, strike line 16 and all that follows through page 29, line 2.

ON page 29, line 3, strike “(c)” and insert in lieu thereof “(b)”

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH] will be recognized for 10 minutes, and a Member in opposition will be recognized for 10 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH].

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume. This is a self-explanatory amendment. It is designed to protect the constitutional authority and responsibility of the President as Commander in Chief from unprecedented and improper congressional tampering with the separation of powers doctrine.

The Commander in Chief clause of the Constitution supports two key policy precepts. First, it gives the President broad authority to command the military forces of the United States, thereby securing civilian command over the military. Second, and most relevant to this debate, the framers also sought to ensure that one commander had sole authority to direct the Nation's fighting forces.

The colonists had learned the difficulties of prosecuting war via committee during the American Revolution. Naming the President Commander in Chief was intended to assure consistent orders, plans, and decisions.

The President was not given the authority to make the political decision to declare war, but he was granted the authority to command the troops in day-to-day operations.

In its present form, this bill, with unbridled gall, undercuts the separation of powers doctrine by limiting the well-established constitutional authority of the President to decide upon the command arrangements for U.S. military personnel.

Title IV, for instance, attempts to prevent the expenditure of funds for any element—even an individual soldier—of U.S. Armed Forces under the command or operational control of a foreign national acting on behalf of the United Nations unless certain commitments are made to Congress.

As a matter of constitutional law, I believe that the Constitution does not permit the President to derogate his power as Commander in Chief to another body. Period. Certification requirements are inappropriate; indeed, they are constitutionally unseemly.

The Clerk announced the following pair:

On this vote:

Mr. Armye for, with Mr. Lewis of Georgia against.

Mrs. ROUKEMA and Mr. WILLIAMS changed their vote from “aye” to “no.”

Messrs. ROTH, WARD, and LAUGHLIN changed their vote from “no” to “aye.”

So the amendment was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. MFUME. Mr. Chairman, I was unfortunately detained in my congressional district in Baltimore earlier today and thus forced to miss two record votes. Specifically, I was not present to record my vote on rollcall vote No. 140, the amendment offered by Mr. HEFLEY of Colorado and rollcall vote No. 141, the amendment offered by Ms. HARMAN of California.

Had I been here I would have voted “nay” on rollcall No. 140 and “yea” on rollcall No. 141.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, on vote No. 141 I am recorded as voting “no.” My intention was to vote in favor of the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the order of the House previously agreed to, it is now in order to consider the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH].

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. LEACH

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Here, let me stress, there is a distinction between U.S. command, which no President can give up, and operational control, which both constitutionally and as a matter of established military practice, the President may delegate to others.

Yet this bill brazenly attempts to strip the President of his constitutional authority and responsibility for deciding upon the command arrangements for U.S. military personnel lawfully participating in U.N. operations.

Indeed, this bill would deny the President the authority to place U.S. troops under the operational control of another country even a NATO ally for U.N. operations.

In this regard, a fair reading of the Constitution and any understanding of history suggests that the Commander-in-Chief should properly retain the flexibility to place troops temporarily under the operational control of officers of another nation when it serves U.S. interests, as we have done in a number of military conflicts since the American Revolution.

Accordingly, my amendment strikes the existing interpretation section found on page 28 of title IV to the bill and inserts instead a new clause recognizing that subject to the power of the Congress under article I of the Constitution to declare war, nothing in this section of the bill shall be construed to derogate or limit the President's article II powers as Commander-in-Chief.

Title IV, as currently crafted, is poor constitutional law; it is also doubtful policy.

The principle of collective security has been a linchpin of U.S. national security policy of every administration since Franklin Roosevelt.

The effect of title IV, unless amended, is to diminish U.S. leadership in the U.N. and elsewhere and force Presidents in emergency settings to either do nothing or rely exclusively on unilateral actions.

At issue is whether we want to be the policeman for the world or the leading member of an international highway patrol. The second option, in more than a few instances, is more realistic and, I might add, cheaper.

So that there is no misunderstanding, this title is more constraining than the War Powers Resolution.

The War Powers Resolution, passed over President Nixon's veto, deals with Congressional assertions of power to declare war.

Because of modern practices of prosecuting but not declaring war, the war powers resolution was offered to check the President's authority as Commander-in-Chief to direct U.S. Armed Forces in the event of imminent hostilities which might lead to war.

But this bill goes beyond the reach of the war powers resolution by attempting to trench upon and limit the command authority of the President before hostilities are threatened and in instances of actions designed to deter conflict rather than lead to war.

On this point, let me quote from a recent Wall Street Journal editorial:

Yes we should check the exorbitant costs of U.N. peacekeeping by rectifying the accounting and limiting the U.S. share of the burden. But diminishing the legitimate powers of the presidency, even in this particular way, is poor precedent.

In the background of this debate is Somalia. In this Members' view it is a widely misunderstood circumstance. In earlier debate on this bill the minority pointed out that the problem was not command and control of U.S. Armed Forces, in that U.S. military personnel at all points were under U.S. command. This is true, but it begs the larger policy questions.

What happened in Somalia, and it was by no means a totally failed operation, was that President Bush called upon the U.S. military to take part in one of the most idealistic foreign policy interventions in the history of the world. The U.S. military because of its extraordinary organization and logistic capabilities was sent to a foreign country to feed a people whose social infrastructure had broken down. In a high-risk environment, a succeeding U.S. administration chose out of frustration to take sides in a civil war. This decision, made without intellectual rigor, profoundly changed American policy because it caused United States forces in the field to become diverted from the professionalism of their original mission and enmeshed in the history and sociology of internal Somalian politics.

Responsibility for the change of mission rests in the White House. This Congress has every reason in retrospect to be critical, but care should be taken to hold decision-makers, not the system, accountable. What is warranted is consideration of the need for new leadership, not a change in the constitutional framework of decision-making.

The character of modern international affairs is that decision need to be made quickly. What, for instance, would happen if when Congress was out of session a peace agreement were signed between Israel and Syria which included United States participation in peacekeeping in the Golan? Would a President be hamstrung by legal niceties in authorizing the movement of several hundred U.S. troops?

More consequentially, the character of modern Congressional politics is an unwillingness to share accountability with the executive branch. I don't know which is more remarkable: the fact Congress barely authorized the gulf war, giving President Bush much less of a mandate than he received from assorted rivals in the Security Council, or the fact that Congress almost didn't vote at all. The obvious conclusion that has been reached in modern Congresses is that there are no liabilities in standing by and many for taking sides in controversial questions of foreign affairs. Congress simply can't be relied on to share executive authority. Our Founding Fathers had it right then and now.

Finally, a personal note. When I signed the Contract With America last fall, I publicly made clear that I differed with several parts, particularly that which applied to a prospective bill on this subject. The Republican commitment was to raise the issues of the contract in a measured way. But the oath we all take is to uphold the Constitution. Just because we have little confidence in this President, just because we now control the Congress is insufficient rationale to turn the Constitution upside down.

A strong Presidency is in the national interest whether or not we have divided government.

Let's be measured and reasonable. I urge adoption of this amendment which conforms this title to constitutional stricture, historical experience, and the requirements of future national security.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] will be recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER].

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Nebraska rises in strong opposition to the Leach amendment. It is not what the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH] adds that is the problem. It is what he deletes. As the gentleman may recall, I did something like this in the committee without success, but without deleting language. The amendment would take out of the statement in section 401 the phrase "that nothing in this section may be construed, one, as authority for the President to use any element of the Armed Forces in any operation, two as authority for the President to place any element of the Armed Forces under the command and operational control of a foreign national, or, three, as an unconstitutional infringement on the authority of the President as Commander in Chief."

The third element in this phrase is exactly what the Committee on National Security added to assure that we are not infringing upon the constitutional rights of the President as Commander in Chief.

Without these statements, it would be argued that section 401 is intended by Congress as a grant of authority to the President to place U.S. forces under foreign operational control in those circumstances where it has not been forbidden. I for one do not ever want my vote on this legislation to be criticized as a vote in favor of authorizing the President to place U.S. forces under foreign command. It is to ensure that our approval of this measure is never interpreted as an authorization of foreign command that this language is found in section 401. But the Leach amendment will delete it. He will also delete the report requirement which is in a following subsection.

I would point out that this report language is not a gratuitous requirement. There is a serious question whether foreign command arrangements can ever be constitutional.

A recent article in the Washington Times by distinguished former officials in the U.S. Justice Department, Mr. Casey and Mr. Rivkin, set forth the constitutional problems with foreign command, and I will add that op-ed piece for the RECORD.

The reporting requirements which the amendment would delete provide us further insulation from the charge that we are authorizing something in section 401 that is unconstitutional.

I would say to the gentleman respectfully that his arguments, while learned, do not go to what the gentleman is really doing through his amendment, because what the Armed Services Committee or National Security Committee has done is put in the phrase to assure that we are not violating the constitutional powers of the President, again it is the following:

Nothing in this section may be construed as an unconstitutional infringement on the authority of the President as commander in chief.

I urge my colleagues to reject the Leach amendment.

[From the Washington Times, Jan. 30, 1995]
CONGRESS, THE PRESIDENT AND THE UNITED NATIONS

(By Lee A. Casey and David B. Rivkin Jr.)

When American troops began to arrive in France in 1917, the Allied High Command demanded that they be immediately assigned to fill the gaps (created by the kaiser's machine guns and the Allies' own idiocy) in the French and British formations on the Western Front.

Gen. John "Black" Jack Pershing said no. As commander of the American Expeditionary Force, he insisted that American troops would fight under American officers, in American formations, pursuant to the direction of the American president. American troops were in Europe as the representatives of a great power, fighting to make the world safe for democracy, not as modern-day Hesians.

Pershing's decision was both politically wise and constitutionally correct. It is a precedent that has been honored in the observance more than the breach, and Sen. Bob Dole would like to keep it that way. The new Senate majority leader is so concerned with President Clinton's affection for U.N. peace-keeping missions (and suggestions that American troops may actually be assigned to serve under U.N. commanders) that he has introduced legislation to require congressional approval of any such arrangement.

Ironically, Mr. Dole's bill—S. 5 the "Peace Powers Act of 1995"—has provoked criticism from usually sympathetic quarters. For example, The Washington Times suggested that the bill would unwisely limit the president's power to deploy American troops as necessary around the world. More broadly, a number of senior Republicans (including former Secretary of State James Baker) have admonished the Republican-controlled Congress not to continue their Democrat predecessors' destructive policy of interfering with the president's foreign policy powers. In principle, these admonitions are well-placed. However, as applied to S.5, they miss the mark.

Mr. Dole's bill might well tie the president's hands in certain instances, but it does not interfere with his constitutional prerogatives. In fact, Mr. Dole's instinct—to try to limit the president's ability to place American troops under foreign command—is constitutionally sound, and the bill has much to recommend it. As a start, it would repeal the War Powers Resolution, replacing that provision's constitutionally impermissible limits on the president's use of American forces abroad with simple consultation and reporting requirements.

Contrary to the claims of its critics, the bill's major flaw is not that it would prohibit the president from assigning American forces to U.N. command, but that it purports to allow such arrangements if Congress gives its consent. Under the Constitution the president does not have the authority, either as commander-in-chief or as chief executive, to subordinate American troops to foreign command—and Congress cannot vest him with that authority.

The president's authority as chief executive to make foreign policy is broad (in the Curtiss-Wright Export case the Supreme Court called it "plenary"), and the Constitution admits of few limits on his ability to command the armed forces as commander in chief. The Supreme Court also has made clear that these powers are at their height when the president acts with the specific authorization of Congress. These powers are not, however, entirely without limit. (It was not the Framers' habit to grant absolute power, with respect to any subject, to any branch of government.) In this instance, the president's authority over the armed forces (and the authority of Congress) is limited by the Constitution's requirement that anyone exercising the legal authority of the United States must be an "officer" of the United States, appointed in accordance with the "Appointments Clause."

The Constitution's Appointments Clause (Article II, section 2, clause 2) provides that the president "shall nominate, and by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, shall appoint Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, Judges of the Supreme Court, and all other Officers of the United States." Congress may vest the authority to appoint less important or "inferior" officers in the president alone, the courts of law, or with the heads of federal agencies. "Principal" officers, however, must be appointed by the president with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Supreme Court made clear in the landmark case of Buckley vs. Valeo that only individuals appointed in accordance with this provision may exercise "significant" federal authority.

Although the Appointments Clause is more often analyzed in terms of civilian appointments, it is fully applicable to military appointments—a point the Supreme Court reaffirmed only last term in a case styled Weiss vs. United States. Indeed, it is difficult to think of a more significant federal authority than the right to command American troops and, unlike the civilian service, Congress has required that even very junior military officers be appointed by and with the consent of the Senate. Neither the president nor Congress can waive the applicability of the Appointments Clause. As a result, no individual, whether the secretary general of the United Nations or a U.N. commander in the field, who is not a properly appointed officer of the United States can direct the actions of American troops.

There have, of course, been instances when American troops did indeed serve under foreign command. Pershing himself was forced to relent—for a time—in the face of a massive German offensive, and allow American troops to serve under Allied command. GIs also fought—again for a time—under British Field Marshal Montgomery during World War II. These are, however, exceptions to the rule, expedients undertaken in the very gravest circumstances of world war. Such instances do not alter the Constitution's clear requirement that only officers of the United States may command U.S. troops; that document cannot be amended by its own violation. Nor do they justify further violation of the Constitution's requirements.

Naturally, there are many possible arrangements for cooperation with the United Nations, and between American and allied troops on the ground, that would not violate the Appointments Clause. A prime example is NATO's practice, where the Supreme Allied Commander Europe—the Alliance's top military officer—has always been a U.S. general, an arrangement that is fully consistent with the Appointments Clause. In this respect, as in other military and foreign policy areas, the president has very great discretion in making agreements with the United Nations, or other international organizations. He is free to consult with the U.N. hierarchy in formulating American foreign policy. He can dispatch American forces to trouble spots at the request of the United Nations, and he can instruct those forces to cooperate fully with the U.N. command structure and with any other forces U.N. members contribute. He can subordinate the interests of the United States to those of the international community if he chooses.

The president is answerable for each of these actions to the electorate, and may well face congressional retaliation in the form of slashed budgets, legislative gridlock or even impeachment, if Congress objects. The Constitution, however, does not forbid any of these actions. What the president cannot do is to interpose a U.N. (or any other foreign) official into the chain of command. The president can delegate his authority only to a duly appointed officer of the United States. Any arrangement for international cooperation that includes the actual subordination of American military command to individuals who are not duly appointed officers of the United States, interposing those officials between the president and American troops, must fail.

If Mr. Clinton persists in placing American troops under U.N. command, Congress would be perfectly within its rights to remind the president that the Constitution forbids such an arrangement. Congress cannot, however, remove the constitutional impediment simply by giving its consent. The branches of government cannot among themselves agree to ignore the Constitution's mandates.

Congress could, of course, remove the constitutional impediment in accordance with the terms of Appointments Clause itself, by allowing the president to commission U.N. officials into the federal service. Senior officers (and junior ones if Congress chooses) would have to undergo Senate confirmation, but there is no constitutional requirement (although there currently is a statutory one) that officers of the United States also must be U.S. citizens. Under these circumstances, U.N. or foreign military officers could command American forces. They would, of course, be subject to the direction of the president, to the Uniform Code of Military Justice and accountable for their actions as are other American officers.

Such an arrangement might or might not be acceptable to the United Nations (probably not), and it is likely that there would be considerable congressional opposition (snowballs in hell come to mind). But Congress does have the authority to accomplish this within the bounds of the Constitution. What it cannot do is to agree with the president to ignore the Constitution's requirements—and the accountability they ensure—by allowing him simply to assign American troops to foreign command.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New York.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. BERUTER) having assumed the chair, Mr. LINDER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 7) to revitalize the national security of the United States, had come to no resolution thereon.

ADDITIONAL TIME FOR DEBATE DURING FURTHER CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 7, NATIONAL SECURITY REVITALIZATION ACT

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the 10-hour time limit for consideration of amendments to H.R. 7 be extended for 26 minutes, and that the debate time for amendment No. 13, 21, 24, 30, or 33, or a germane modification of one of those amendments be extended from 36 minutes to 44 minutes equally divided and controlled by the proponent and a Member opposed, and that the debate time for the Torricelli amendment No. 48, or amendment Nos. 28 or 43 be extended from 36 to 44 minutes equally divided and controlled by the proponent and a Member opposed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I will not object, I wish to take this time to pay tribute to the chairman, both chairmen, who have gone out of their way to make sure we accommodate the minority on time that was lost in a previous vote. This effort, I think, shows a commitment on our part to make sure that we do not take time away. There was a vote that was not anticipated in the past, and with the cooperation of the gentleman from California, who I know wants to speak, and the chairman, it has been worked out. I think that speaks to our wanting to work together and allow for a full and open debate of these remaining issues.

Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. BERMAN].

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman's yielding.

I was not planning to speak. I will simply say I accept the offer as appropriate given the inadvertence of what happened. It does not deal with the fundamental problem of a 10-hour time limit.

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

NATIONAL SECURITY REVITALIZATION ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 83 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 7.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H.R. 7) to revitalize the national security of the United States, with Mr. LINDER in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Committee of the Whole House rose earlier today, pending was the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH].

The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH] has 3 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] has 7½ minutes remaining.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. ROTH].

Mr. ROTH. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

This amendment would cut a key provision of this bill. The reason we have a Contract With America is because we want to put Congress back into the loop in the decisionmaking process when it comes to peacekeeping. But this amendment would say that Congress is meaningless whenever the President claims that he is acting as Commander in Chief.

The consequence is that the President can keep sending troops into Somalia, Haiti, Rwanda, the Balkans without congressional approval. What we are saying in the Contract With America is that Congress must be involved. We cannot abdicate our power.

Now, this is a key provision of this bill. The American people on November 8, when they voted for the Contract With America, one of the key provisions was that Congress was going to get more involved in our peacekeeping decisions. How the tax dollars are spent is important, also when young Americans are put into harm's way. This Congress has an obligation, speaking for the American people, to give either our approval or nonapproval, but under this amendment, Congress would be totally irrelevant.

Do you remember the Somalia debacle where we lost some 44 young Americans? When the bodies were dragged through the streets of Mogadishu? Do you remember that? This House went wild, and the Senate went wild. Does the gentleman from California remember we all went over to HC-5, had a big confab, and Congress said, "Why were we not involved?" That is what the American people were asking. That is why we have a Contract With America. That is why we are putting the Congress back in.

I remember the meeting at HC-5 that day. You know, we cannot just abdicate our power to the President and then, when things go bad, we all meet at HC-5 and we scream at the Secretary of Defense and we holler at the Secretary of State, and one of them has to lose his job. Then it is too late.

If we are going to be there for the crash landing, we have got to be there for the takeoff, too, and that is all we are saying in the Contract With America.

I want Congress to no longer abdicate its power. We made a commitment. We made a commitment on November 8. We said that Congress would be involved, but with this amendment, we would renege. We are stepping back. We cannot renege on our promises.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON].

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I rise in support of the Leach amendment. The Leach amendment, I think, simply restates the President's constitutional power as Commander in Chief.

The language that he seeks to strike from this bill can certainly be construed as a limitation on the President's Commander in Chief powers. It says specifically, "Nothing in this section may be construed as authority for the President to use any element of the armed forces in any operation." That is a limitation on the President's power.

It also says nothing in the section may be construed as authority for the President to place any element of the Armed Forces under the command or operational control of a foreign national. A President has done that over and over and over again in our history. The implication of this language that the gentleman from Iowa seeks to strike is to limit the President's Commander in Chief powers. It micromanages and restricts the President's powers.

The Pentagon says if this language had been in effect you would not have been able to have D-Day, because you would not have been able to put together a collective effort that was so successful there.

The point here, my friends, is we have our job to do. The gentleman from Wisconsin stated that quite accurately. We have our constitutional responsibilities. But in exercising our responsibilities, we must not cut into the Commander in Chief powers. We need to allow the President to do his job as Commander in Chief.

I support the gentleman's amendment, and I commend him for offering it.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN].

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Chairman, I am the last Member of the House or Senate to have been in Haiti. I am the last Member of the House or Senate to have been in Somalia.

I did not bring out the flag in either case. I wish I had in Somalia.

I went to Somalia within a few days following my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA], to find out why 18 of America's best-trained soldiers had died in what they called the firefight from hell.

Three days later, Sergeant Matthew Rierson was killed with an unlucky mortar shot at the headquarters of the Rangers, and a dud landed at the feet of a U.S. two-star general, or we would have lost one of our best Special Forces major generals.

Now, I am standing here to tell you and to tell about 12 to 18 to 20 Republicans, including 2 or 3 freshmen, that we are starting to lose some of you on the Contract With America.

Please pay attention to why this is one of the core items of our Contract With America. The gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] had this chart made up. This is as of about May 1994. I do not want to distract you from my remarks, but please come down and take a look at this utter madness, what happens when our troops are under foreign command. Here is what I discovered within an hour of landing in Somalia, that we had a two-track chain of command. Major General Montgomery, with whom I just had lunch in Bastogne just a couple of weeks back at the 50th anniversary of the Battle of the Bulge, an excellent general, now one of the 3-star deputy commanders of our forces in Europe.

But I asked him about where was the rescue column? I told him I had just come back with him from an overflight in a Black Hawk, taking pictures with my camera, of Russian-license, built-in-India T-72 main battle tanks, 14 of them, and I said where were these Indian tanks to blow through the road blocks? He said, "You will have to talk to the other commander."

The whole thing is so complicated we simply must vote against the Leach amendment.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. HUNTER].

Mr. HUNTER. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman and my colleagues, Article 1, section 8 of the Constitution includes this language: "The Congress has the power to make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces." That is to say that what we are doing in the Contract is completely consistent with the Constitution and with our right to say as Representatives of those families who are visited by Navy and Marine Corps and Army teams when they have sons who are killed in combat, that that is to say to those families, "We will have a direct chain of accountability, you can always count on that up to an American commander and down from that American commander right down through the platoon and squad level to your son when he is in combat."

Let me just say there has been a lot of confusion about this. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON] talked about not being able to have D-day. D-day was not a United Nations operation. There has been confusion about Korea. The commander in Korea, General Luck, has a straight American chain of command. If we go into some type of a preemptive operation, should there be an invasion from the north then you move to a joint American-Korean command, but that is not under United Nations sanctions. So that section, that operation, is not applicable to this section with the Contract With America.

This is constitutional, it is appropriate, in response to our people.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 45 seconds to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCHALE].

Mr. MCHALE. I thank the chairman for yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to the Leach amendment.

As stated by Mr. BEREUTER a few minutes ago, the defect of this amendment is not contained in its actual text but rather in the deletion it makes to the underlying bill.

I have no objection, Mr. Chairman, if American forces are integrated at the strategic level into an overall command structure. We have heard references made to D-Day. I participated in Operation Desert Storm, which was indeed an operation involving the integration of international cooperation.

Mr. Chairman, at the battlefield level, where American forces are under fire, it requires a shared patriotism and peacetime training. That bond between American forces requires American leadership.

I rise in opposition to the Leach amendment.

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, I conclude with two points: First, I think everybody in this room must understand there is an emotive aspect of this issue that we all share a common sympathy.

But also at stake is the Constitution of the United States, which is very precise on who the commander in chief is and what the command function is.

This is a constitutional issue.

The second point I make is it is also a policy issue. Let there be no misunderstanding, this bill, as currently crafted, drives a stake into the United States leadership in multilateral diplomacy. If this kind of approach happened in all other countries in the world, peacekeeping comes to an end, burden sharing comes to an end. We do not have a prospect of expanding the rule of law in a reasoned way.

So I would urge the Members of this body to understand that there is a symbolism as well as a constitutionalism with regard to this particular amendment.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, let us be clear about just what is at issue with regard to this amendment. The Leach amendment waters down the restrictions on foreign command of U.S. forces in this bill. While couched as an effort to protect the President's constitutional authority, it deletes other language in the bill and effectively creates loopholes in the foreign command restrictions.

This bill includes language in section 401 protecting the President's constitutional authority. Accordingly, the new language added by the Leach amendment is unnecessary.

The fact is that the foreign command restrictions in the bill have been carefully crafted so as not to unduly constrain the President's authority. Let us not upset this carefully crafted balance.

I urge a vote against the Leach amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 158, noes 267, not voting 9, as follows:

NOT VOTING—9

Mr. METCALF, Mrs. THURMAN, and Messrs. JOHNSON of South Dakota, BROWDER, DE LA GARZA, and LAUGHLIN changed their vote from "aye" to "no."

Mrs. ROUKEMA changed her vote from "no" to "aye."

So the amendment was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The CHAIRMAN. Under a previous order of the House, it is now in order to consider the amendments of the gentleman from California [Mr. BERMAN]; amendments Nos. 13, 21, 24, 30, 33, and a germane modified amendment No. 13.

The Clerk will designate amendments Nos. 13, 21, 24, 30, and 33.

MODIFIED AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. BERMAN

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, pursuant to the previous order of the House, I offer amendment No. 13, as modified, which is at the desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the modified amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Modified Amendment No. 13 offered by Mr. BERMAN: Beginning on page 37, strike line 7 and all that follows through page 39, line 24, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SEC. 501. CREDIT AGAINST ASSESSMENT FOR EXPENDITURES IN SUPPORT OF UNITED NATIONS PEACEKEEPING OPERATIONS.

"(B) the amount of any reimbursement or credit to the United States of any contribution for United Nations peacekeeping activities.

"(C) The report for the fourth calendar quarter of each year shall be submitted as part of the annual report required by section 4(d) and shall include cumulative information for the preceding calendar year.

"(3) LIMITATION.—Funds may be obligated for payment to the United Nations of the United States assessed share of United Nations peacekeeping operations for a fiscal year only to the extent that the amount of such assessed share exceeds the amount equal to—

"(A) the total amount identified in the report submitted pursuant to paragraph (1) for the preceding fiscal year, reduced by

"(B) the amount of any reimbursement or credit to the United States by the United Nations for the costs of United States support for, or participation in, United Nations peacekeeping operations for the preceding fiscal year.

"(4) EXEMPTIONS.—Paragraph (3) shall not apply to—

"(i) costs for which the Department of Defense has been otherwise reimbursed;

States Armed Forces and if the President consults with the Consultative Group 15 days in advance of such waiver.

“(B) If the President determines that an emergency exists which prevents compliance with the requirement of subparagraph (A) and such waiver is in the national security interests of the United States, such consultation shall occur as soon as practicable but no later than 48 hours after such obligation.”

“(6) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘designated congressional committees’ shall include the Committee on National Security of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate.”

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The provisions of section 10(a) of the United Nations Participation Act of 1945, as added by subsection (a) shall apply only with respect to United Nations assessments for peacekeeping operations after fiscal year 1995.

(c) Definitions.—For purposes of the amendments made by this section—

(1) the term “incremental cost” shall mean those additional costs incurred directly as a result of a peacekeeping operation, but shall not include personnel costs or other costs that would have been incurred otherwise in the regular course of peacetime operations, such as training exercises, maintenance, and logistical support; and

(2) the term “Consultative Group” means the Standing Consultative Group established by section 501A of this Act.

SEC. 501A. CONSULTATION.

(a) STANDING CONSULTATIVE GROUP.—There is hereby established a Standing Consultative Group (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the “Consultative Group”).

(b) PURPOSE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—(A) The purpose of the Consultative Group shall be to facilitate improved consultation between the executive branch and the Congress with respect to United States participation in peacekeeping activities.

(B) Consultations in accordance with this section shall occur prior to the United States making commitments to the United Nations, any regional organization in which the United States participates, or any other countries, on United States participation in peacekeeping operations, including in particular any participation under Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter.

(C) Such consultations shall also include details of operational command and control arrangements governing United States participation in peacekeeping operations.

(2) REGULAR CONSULTATIONS.—In carrying out paragraph (1), the Consultative Group and the President or his designee shall meet regularly for discussions and consultation, but in no event less frequently than once a month.

(c) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—The conduct of consultation pursuant to subsection (b)(2) with respect to possible or ongoing United States participation in a peacekeeping operation which may involve the use of United States Armed Forces shall not be construed as a grant of authority to the President under the War Powers Resolution (87 Stat. 555).

Mr. GILMAN (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the modified amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California will be recognized for 22 minutes, and a Member in opposition will be recognized for 22 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. BERMAN].

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume up to 5 minutes.

(Mr. BERMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is addressed to section 501 of the bill. I am not going to spend a lot of time talking about the amendment because I am not going to ask for a recorded vote on the amendment, but for the reasons I will state, I believe in and of itself section 501 as put forth in this bill is reason enough for every Member in this Chamber to oppose this legislation.

Section 501, if it were ever signed into law, would totally wipe out—let me repeat that—totally wipe out every single regularly assessed peacekeeping operation now incurred or which may ever in the future be incurred by the United Nations.

Let me repeat that one more time: Not one single current U.N.-assessed peacekeeping operation now in place would continue if section 501 were to pass, because section 501, by requiring an automatic offset. For every dollar that is spent on U.S. voluntary contributions, incremental costs to U.N. peacekeeping activities would be deducted from our assessment. We would pay zip, zero, nothing to the United Nations for the regularly assessed peacekeeping operations. They would fall apart. They would end.

I say this in the context of trying to explain the kinds of operations we are talking about. We are talking about U.N.-assessed peacekeeping operations which, as the chart next to me shows utilize, of all the operations and the forces utilized, only 1.4 percent are American Forces. We are talking about a U.N.-assessed contribution that we pay that was legislated by the bill that the majority last year passed and was signed into law by President Clinton, that unilaterally reduces our assessed contribution from the extraordinarily high 31 percent to the 25 percent that we regularly pay for all other U.N. dues.

We are talking about a series of operations, and I want to just tell you the kinds of operations we are involved in, that will be eliminated if this were to happen. We are talking about the peacekeepers on the Golan Heights that help preserve the peace between Israel and Syria. We are talking about the U.N. peacekeepers on the Kuwait border, not American, mind you, who continue to constrain Saddam's ability to threaten his neighbors. We fought Desert Storm, Saddam still survives. Are we going to walk away from that Kuwait border before he is in full compliance with the U.N. resolutions, before it is clear that we have an Iraq that no longer has any aggressive intentions on its neighbors?

We are talking about U.N. peacekeepers who have been for 30 years in Cyprus to help prevent war between two NATO allies, Greece and Turkey. In former Yugoslavia, the United Nations is providing critical humanitarian assistance and helping prevent the conflict from spreading to other parts of Europe. In Mozambique, El Salvador, Nicaragua, and Namibia we have U.N. observers. Out of the total forces I have just talked about, 1.4 percent are American Forces. The rest are other countries' contributions through the assessed contribution scheme.

Now, these issues were raised in the Committee on National Security, and I want to take one moment to just compliment the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER], because one other part of title IV which was clearly unconstitutional on its face has been deleted by virtue of an amendment passed unanimously last night. But 501, while it does not raise constitutional problems, is the most foolish, self-defeating kind of provision we could want to adopt.

When we raised these issues in the Committee on National Security, people scrambled around, they made an adjustment, they added a waiver. What kind of waiver did they add? They added a waiver that said that we will not deduct those voluntary contributions that the United States now pays, those incremental costs, if the President can certify, and only if the President can certify, that those chapter 7 operations, there is no waiver for chapter 6 operations, those chapter 7 operations he would have undertaken on his own.

What foolishness that waiver is. That waiver, talk about enforcing a boycott against Iraq. By definition an economic boycott enforced by a blockade cannot be done unilaterally. One has to get Turkey to stop letting Iraq use its pipeline for oil. One has to bring in the multilateral nations.

The CHAIRMAN. Does any Member seek time in opposition?

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, I seek to control the time in opposition.

Mr. Chairman, it is my pleasure to yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. ROTH], the senior member of the Committee on International Affairs.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. Chairman, Liddell Hart, in writing about strategy and how you win wars, said, “Never do directly what you can do indirectly.” So I want to compliment the gentleman from California, because what he is doing is gutting this bill; but he is not doing it directly, he is doing it indirectly.

You know, in this Contract With America we say we will reduce our peacekeeping spending to a fair share. Last year, according to the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, the American taxpayer paid 80 percent of the expense for peacekeeping. We are projected now to pay about 31.7 percent. What we are saying in the Contract With America is we are reducing it to 25 percent. Out of the 182 countries in the world, we will still be paying one-fourth of all the peacekeeping.

Now, what this amendment does is put in exceptions. By the time you get done with all the exceptions, you have gutted the bill. So it is an indirect way of gutting it. Let me say that the issue here is: Do you believe that we are paying our fair share, or do you think that we are paying more than our fair share? Let me repeat again. One hundred and eighty-two countries in the world; one Nation, ours, pays 31.7 percent. What we are saying is we want to reduce it to 25 percent.

We are still paying 2½ times more than any other nation. Last year, again, we paid 80 percent, and that is according to the General Accounting Office. I want to underscore that.

There are those who believe that the U.S. taxpayer should go on paying more and more for all of these peacekeeping missions. In the Contract With America we pledged fairness. For one Nation to pay 80 percent and for its soldiers to do most of the heavy lifting, to do the fighting, I do not think is fair, and the American people do not think it is fair. Eighty percent of the money, our soldiers. That is why on November 8 the American people did affirmatively vote for the Contract With America.

Now, I want to say that you win wars not with op-ed pieces; you win wars with treasury and with soldiers. And that is why it is very important for us to look at this particular bill.

The issue here is whether you want to put the American taxpayer ahead of the United Nations. Do you? Or do you believe that the American taxpayer must automatically keep on paying more and more and more for whatever operations are dreamed up at the UN.

If we vote for this amendment, we will be renegeing on our Contract With America. Keep that in mind. We will be retreating from our Contract With America.

Did you read the headlines this morning in the Washington Times? You do not read the Washington Times? Let me tell you, there it is. "George Stephanopoulos, senior adviser to President Clinton, said yesterday that the Republicans in this House are retreating from their promises." And my dear friends, do not think for 1 minute, not on the 110th day or the 105th day, but on the 101st day, and in fact it is already started and we are only in the 43rd day.

My friends, we are not even at the 50th day. Can you imagine what is going to happen on the 101st day?

Do not be hornswoggled by these amendments. I have been telling you these guys are very deceptive over here. What does he go on to say? He says, "The Republicans are retreating from their promises they made in their Contract With America," and it says "He accused them of tackling easy elements of the pact and ducking the tougher votes."

Mr. Chairman, this is only the 43d day. The President's senior adviser went on to say that he is predicting that the voters will enact punishment on the Republicans for being reticent and not enacting their provisions of the Contract With America.

Mr. Chairman, let us stick with the Contract With America. That is what the people voted for. Let us not jump up and vote for these amendments that would indirectly gut the Contract With America. Believe me, you will be shown no mercy on the campaign trail or in the 1-minute or at any other time, any time we step away from the Contract With America. We do not want to end up with the contract just enumerating 10 issues and having it gutted, do we? No. Do not vote for the Berman amendment. Stick with the contract.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY].

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, in the 8 years that I chaired the Subcommittee on Foreign Operations of the Committee on Appropriations, I received three letters from Presidents Reagan and Bush, threatening to veto the foreign aid bills which we reported out of our subcommittee because they said we did not spend enough money. So I think my record in trying to save dollars in foreign aid is clear.

Section 501, just defended by my colleague from Wisconsin, is intended to reduce cost. That is obvious. But the fact is, it will have just the opposite effect. In fact, it will raise costs, because section 501 applies unless, unless the President certifies that a peacekeeping operation is so important that we would do it alone.

That is an open invitation to other countries to simply step back and say: "OK, let Uncle Sam go it alone, let Uncle Sam be uncle sucker." Just brilliant.

I tell you what confuses me about this proposal. I cannot figure out whether this bill was designed to be so dumb or whether it just happened that way by accident.

What when I see it coming from the party of Vandenberg, I do not know whether to cry or laugh.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], a member of the Committee on International Relations.

(Mr. SMITH of New Jersey asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, the criticisms that have been leveled against section 501, I believe, are misplaced. The Committee on International Relations carefully considered the objection and amended the reimbursement formula in an effort to ensure that funds would be available for true peacekeeping operations even after the offsets. We have received preliminary estimates from GAO of the amount of unreimbursed incremental chapter 6 peacekeeping expenses from fiscal year 1994. These are the only true peacekeeping expenses and the only ones for which legislation, as amended, would strictly require and offset. The total amount of these expenses is about $227 million. This is some $300 million less than the administration's budget request for peacekeeping in fiscal year 1996, and about $800 million less than the peacekeeping budget for fiscal year 1995, including the supplemental appropriation.

The remaining $1.5 billion in unreimbursed chapter 7 expenses for operations such as Desert Storm, Operation Deny Flight, and Uphold Democracy, which are more aptly described as peacemaking, would not require an offset provided that the President provided the necessary certification to Congress. In essence, this is a certification that the U.S. role in these operations was in its own strategic interest and not solely at the behest of the United Nations. As long as the United States remains prepared to contribute between $300 and $800 million per year to true international peacekeeping operations, it is inaccurate, and I would submit it is unfair, to say that we have removed peacekeeping as an option.

The second way in which the administration's criticism misses the mark is that it incorrectly assumes that the President would be required to certify in advance that we would unilaterally undertake the action in order to exempt it from the offset requirements. The administration then argues that if other nations knew the United States would undertake an operation of its own, there would be no need for them to cooperate in such inaction. This argument simply misreads the bill. There is no requirement that we act unilaterally, or even that we certify after the fact that we did act unilaterally, in order to avoid the offset requirement.

Rather, the President need only certify after the operation that it was the sort of operation that we would have undertaken in the strategic interest of the United States, even if we had been able to secure U.N. cooperation.

This formula, Mr. Chairman, leaves the President the flexibility he needs to protect the U.S. interests wherever he can certify in good conscience that such interests are at stake. Provided only that he can make such a certification, he need not fear that the cost of an operation will be offset against next year's peacekeeping budget.

Some of the proposed amendments would even go further, exempting practically everything from the offset, but that is something we did not have to deal with today.

Mr. Chairman, I ask for Members to vote against this amendment. I believe that the underlying language is sufficient and will positively serve peacekeeping for the United States and our allies.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds.

Under the theory that inaccurate statements should be refuted as quickly as possible, I ask everyone to read the waiver section of section 501. There is an automatic deduction unless the President certifies as to chapter 7 only, not chapter 6, operations, that the activity is of such importance to the national security the United States will undertake the activity unilaterally, unilaterally. Not in our strategic interest. Not in our national interest. Unilaterally.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH].

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, let me just stress I think the big question is not whether there is a modification—it is probably too harsh to call it a retreat—from a quasi-party platform, the contract.

The big question is whether there is going to be a retreat from international leadership, from the traditions of at least half a century of American involvement in world affairs.

I would only ask, as we look at this particular amendment that has been offered by the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. BERMAN], two questions:

Is it cheaper and more effective to advance the interests of the United States through international burden sharing, or is it cheaper and more effective to go it alone?

The second question is, How can we, in times of trauma, ask others to serve with us if we refuse to serve with them?

It is in this context that I think this particular amendment would add modestly to the bill and make it something that would be more acceptable to more Members of this body.

But I would stress to everyone, this has become a flawed bill in the final measure. With great regret, I am going to have to vote against it.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON], the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, one of the things I think that needs to be stressed is how much money the United States is paying for U.N. operations, peacekeeping and otherwise.

According to the General Accounting Office, the United States paid 80 percent, 80 percent of the worldwide peacekeeping operations for the United Nations last year. Out of $3.4 billion, we paid, the American taxpayers ponied up $2.7 billion.

And on the regular administrative cost of the United Nations, we pay between 25 and 33 percent. Of all the countries in the world, we are picking up almost a third of all the costs. I do not think it is unreasonable to want a complete accounting for the President to tell us about all these costs. And if we feel it is extremely high, we should be able to do something about it. This is a very, very good amendment.

The American people want us to participate and do what we can to make sure there is peace and harmony in this world, but they do not want to pay the whole enchilada. And 80 percent of the cost last year was paid for by the U.S. taxpayer.

In addition to that, the year before that, we paid 44 percent of the peacekeeping cost. Think about that. Forty-four percent is a lot when we consider all the countries in the world that are in the U.N. But it was almost doubled last year. This is a move that should be taken.

I think it is a good amendment. I hope my colleagues will support it.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON], the ranking member of the committee.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time, and I certainly commend him for his amendment, which I strongly support.

Section 501, as it is drafted in H.R. 7, limits the U.S.-assessed contributions to U.N. peacekeeping to only the amount that exceeds DOD's costs in support of U.N.-authorized operations.

Mr. Chairman, the provision says in effect that DOD costs include not only DOD support to regular U.N. peacekeeping operations, such as Cyprus, but to any U.N. peacekeeping activity. By that definition, Mr. Chairman, we would include a lot of things that the United States today is doing under the rule; for example, 15,000 United States personnel enforcing no-fly zones in Iraq, very much in the interests of the United States; troops in Operation Provide Comfort, helping the Kurds in Iraq; troops in South Korea, and many other areas.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, the impact of all of that would be that, as drafted, it would prohibit the United States from making its assessed U.N. peacekeeping contribution, and will, in effect, kill U.N. peacekeeping. That is the judgment, I think, of all of the experts in the administration that have looked at it carefully. One of the problems here is that the language is so broadly drawn that it includes all kinds of DOD costs.

Another problem here, Mr. Chairman, is we simply do not know what the costs are, so we have very vague language, and the result is that U.N. peacekeeping, our assessment, we would be owed money by the United Nations.

We would not pay our assessment, other countries would note that, they would not pay their assessment, and we would effectively destroy U.N. peacekeeping.

Mr. Chairman, what the Berman amendment does is to define those DOD costs much more narrowly. We have two purposes that are sought here, it seems to me. The first is that the Defense Department be fully reimbursed for these reasonable expenses. That is the concern that the majority is emphasizing, and it is a perfectly legitimate concern, but they have overdrawn their amendment much, much too broadly.

The second concern, I think, is that we maintain U.N. peacekeeping capabilities. The advantage of the Berman amendment is that it accomplishes both purposes, DOD reimbursement on a reasonable basis, a limited basis, but at the same time not destroying American national interest.

Mr. Chairman, I strongly urge support of the Berman amendment.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. ROGERS], the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, we are not anti-United Nations, we are not anti-reasonable peacekeeping operations. There are some good peacekeeping operations, we have to say. There have been some bungled ones, obviously. Those are the ones we need to focus on.

However, let me say this, Mr. Chairman, three points. There must be some fairness in the sharing of the burden of peacekeeping in the world. The United States is being overburdened in this process. The direct contribution that we make is, as has been noted, almost a third of the total cost, not to mention the extra costs of the Department of Defense and the others in support of those missions.

It is reasonable to say we are paying upwards of 60 to 70 percent of the total cost of peacekeeping missions. That is unfair. That must be addressed by the United Nations. The only way to get them to address those kinds of questions is for this Congress to be obstinate on funding. That is what we will be doing.

Two, the ineptitude of the United Nations operations, both its regular operations and peacekeeping. There are some 40,000 employees of the United Nations in New York alone. Until recently, only 40 of those people were trying to oversee 17 peacekeeping military operations with 70,000 soldiers around the globe, 5 days a week, 8 hours a day. It absolutely was inept; there is some improvement, but not nearly enough.

Fairness to the Congress, fairness from the administration to the Congress. The administration votes for these peacekeeping missions in the United Nations. We do not know in the Congress how much it is going to cost, when it is going to cost it, when we are going to get out, how we are going to get out, how we are going to pay for it.

They simply—the United Nations—simply sends the U.S. Congress the bill, after the fact. In former years it was a fairly small amount, $40 million a year 5 years ago. Now it is $1.2 billion for 1995 plus another $672 million supplemental they have just sent up here, so that is $1.8 or $1.9 billion, not counting DOD expenses. That is a significant figure.

We have to regularize this process. We simply cannot run the Government in that fashion. The Congress has to be in on the operation from the outset, so we can plan, at least financially, how to deal with it.

Mr. Chairman, the $672 million supplemental they have just set up for what the United Nations says are 1995 cost overruns is not offset. The administration says "We are not going to ask you to cut other spending, just give us out of the clear blue sky this money."

I say, "This must be offset. You have to pay for it. Then we will think about it."

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I am happy to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. GEJDENSON].

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Chairman, I think again we have to understand the fundamental principle. What the U.N. does in the post-cold-war era is carry out American foreign policy interests. If it is not in America's foreign policy interests, we use our veto to stop it.

Therefore, the choice here is we continue to operate within the United Nations or we will end up having to do these things unilaterally; or even worse, we will wait until a crisis in a region explodes to a far greater crisis, to far greater costs in both human life and dollars.

Mr. Chairman, the principal impact of this piece of legislation and this section would be that Saudi Arabia would not pay its U.N. dues for the next 50 years. Japan, France, and the Soviet Union, along with the United States, would ask for additional payment from Bangladesh and other impoverished countries.

Think about what we are saying here. These are our national policy interests. The President of the United States, President Bush, mobilizes the world through the United Nations to stop Saddam Hussein's cut off of oil. Because it is a United Nations operation, rather than an American unilateral operation, we are able to get the Saudis and the Japanese and others to pay for the major portion of this activity.

Now we would all go back to the United Nations and ask the most impoverished countries of the world to pay for our military action, to protect the West's oil supplies.

Mr. Chairman, it would not just stop with the French and the British and the Americans and the Japanese and the Saudis. The Russians would be at the U.N. immediately as well, because they would say "Look what the Americans have done. We are in Tajikistan and we are in Georgia under U.N. authorization. We want to be paid for that."

Now we would have the Saudis, the Japanese, the French, the British, the Russians, and the Americans coming to the United Nations telling Bangladesh that they owe more dues to pay us for our involvement in the gulf war.

Mr. Chairman, let us be straight about it. If Members are where Congress was at the end of World War I and they believe we should not have been in the League of Nations and they believe we should not be in the United Nations, then get up and tell us to get out of the United Nations, but do not continue to try to either hamstring the President's ability to operate within multilateral organizations, or bankrupt the organization through this budget maneuver.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GEJDENSON. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. All of it or half of it or three-fourths of it, how much?

Mr. GEJDENSON. I think that the present law that we passed in the previous year is adequate, 25 percent. I think we are heading in the right direction on our payments. But clearly it should not be Bangladesh subsidizing the Saudis.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON], chairman of the Subcommittee on Research and Development of the Committee on National Security.

(Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, let us be straight with the American people our colleagues. This amendment is not about getting out of the United Nations nor is it against peacekeeping. It is about fairness, to our taxpayers and military.

We heard debate earlier today about saving $1.5 billion for a commission. Two hundred two Members, largely of the minority party, voted "yes" for that huge savings in defense spending for the readiness of our troops. We had a big vote on missile defense. The key issue was savings. This year we are spending almost $2 billion of American taxpayer money on the United Nations and its operations around the world, $2 billion. We simply want to have some accounting and we want to have some credit for what we put in.

Let me use Haiti as an example. We had no debate before our troops were committed to Haiti, I might add, not 1 minute of debate on this floor before the troops went in. Yet we have in fact spent $1.5 billion of American taxpayers' money. Even more outrageous and the purpose of the three flags in my lapel, Bangladesh, Guatemala, and Nepal. Here we are right now paying the full salaries, benefits, and housing costs of the troops of these three countries. Yes, my colleagues we are paying with DOD dollars the benefits, the salaries, and the expenses of the troops from these nations in Haiti. At the same time that 600 troops from the Second Armored Division of Fort Hood, TX, had to conduct 10 training exercises in the range walking together pretending they were in tanks because we do not have enough money for fuel and maintenance.

The new slogan of that battalion of 600 troops that used tanks in training is to march together and say, "Clank, clank, I'm a tank." While we are paying the full benefits of troops from Bangladesh, Nepal, and Guatemala.

This has got to stop, Mr. Chairman. We want fairness. That is all we want. We are not saying pull out of the United Nations. We are not saying isolate ourselves. We are saying what our colleagues said. Let us have some concern about the taxpayers' money. It is not a bottomless pit. Two billion dollars is what we are spending. Is that enough? I think it is too much.

I think the provision in the bill allows us to get a hold of the money that we are spending and better use those dollars for American troops so that from time to time we can go together with out allies. But I really have a problem using American DOD dollars to pay the salaries and benefits of foreign troops when we cannot even take care of our own readiness needs as so many of our National Security colleagues mentioned today.

I might add for the RECORD, I just have to insert this letter from one of my constituents serving in Haiti who is absolutely outraged at what role he is paying there now.

Mr. Chairman, the letter referred to is as follows:

HONORABLE CURT WELDON: I am stationed here in Port-au-Prince Haiti, with the U.S. Army. As a local constituent I am writing you concerning several issues about the armed forces and our involvement here in Haiti.

First I would like to mention about our military mission here in Haiti. Several of my fellow service members and I find no purpose in Clinton's administration policy to reinstall Aristide, a communist leader, back into this country. Since when do the U.S. forces work for a communist leader who has always denounced the United States as evil. A leader who has stolen tens-of-millions of dollars from his citizens, which the U.S. tax payers may have to pay back to the people of Haiti. This also does not include the enormous expenses of this entire military operation, to the American tax payers to which there will be no benefits. Now, since this military operation is done and over with, and our mission of restoring Aristide finished, we all should be getting back home. But, now due to the effort of the United Nations and the Joint Staff Commanders, several thousand U.S. service members are staying and we shouldn't be. Staying because the United Nations and the Joint Task Force commanders say they need us. This country is now safer to walk the streets than most cities back in the states. The Joint Task Forces, under the United Nations are fully capable of keeping the peace here. What my fellow service members and I want to know from you, is what are you doing to end Clinton's U.S. involvement here in Haiti. And to keep future U.S. forces out of the control of the United Nations.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds.

When the gentleman talks about Haiti, he talks about a United States decision that we went to the United Nations and obtained authorization for under chapter 7. It is an incremental cost. There is nothing in 501 that would do anything about who pays for that. What would happen is every dollar of that would deduct and wipe out the peacekeeping costs for every regularly assessed operation which we supported in the United Nations.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. WYNN].

Mr. WYNN. I thank the gentleman from California for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, it is time we accept the reality. We are a world power. We are a world power. We defeated communism, and no, we cannot expect Nepal and Bangladesh to pay the same amount of money that we do. Yes, we are going to have to take the leadership, and part of that burden means we are going to have to pay more.

But, Mr. Chairman, I would submit that this is a very wise investment, which is why I believe this bill is mistaken when it attempts to undermine funding for U.N. peacekeeping activities. The point I am trying to make is that we have very legitimate and vital national interests which are protected by U.N. peacekeeping.

What are our interests? We have an interest in the global marketplace, that markets are allowed to thrive and not be disrupted by localized aggression and by petty dictators. We do not want to set the precedent that might makes right. We do not want to see our markets disrupted by petty dictators. We want to have the ability to work collectively within the world community to thwart these kinds of efforts.

We have an interest in oil. Our recent efforts in Desert Storm magnify the fact that we need to work collectively and we need to have the resources of other countries join with ours to fight to help protect our specific interests.

We have a very important interest, Mr. Chairman, in fighting terrorism internationally. With the exception of the very unfortunate bombing in New York, we have had the good fortune of not having very much terrorism on our shores. It is better, I submit, to fight terrorism on other shores in a preemptive manner rather than have it come to this country.

What does this have to do with U.N. burdensharing? The gentleman was saying that we are paying for Napalese soldiers. I would submit that is probably a wise investment. Better to have other soldiers involved in the fight than to have all U.S. soldiers, because this bill provides us with an unfortunate option. We either go it alone or do not go at all. We have got interests that mean we have to go. I submit we are better off if we go with others.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER], the chairman of our Subcommittee on Asia and the Pacific.

(Mr. BEREUTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, a lot has been said about this subject and I think there may be some confusion, but I hope some Members focused on the remarks of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON] a few minutes ago when he said that recently the United States, when you consider all costs, was paying over 80 percent of the peacekeeping operations of the United Nations. It is incredible.

What I am suggesting and what I was able to do in the committee is to assure that at least incremental costs are to be offset. We have a tremendous expenditure of funds.

We have an important role to play in peacekeeping. But as I suggested to the Secretary of State when he appeared before us, the status quo is not acceptable. We have to have some changes in the way our assessments are calculated.

Mr. Chairman, I would be absolutely convinced that even though our peacekeeping assessment is 30.7 percent, and even though the last Congress said by resolution that we are going to reduce it to 25 percent, supporters of the United Nations, perhaps even the Clinton administration, will come to us later this year and say again next year, and perhaps next year, "You are in arrearage," even though we had expressed our clear intent to pay no more than 25 percent.

That is a very generous share, because when we consider all of our other calculated costs, incremental costs and others, we are paying far, far beyond 25 percent. We are paying more than 50 percent. Recently we paid 80 percent. I think it should be clear to our colleagues that we can ask for some different procedures to be established when it comes to our contributions to peacekeeping.

I urge opposition to the amendment.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER].

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from California for his allowance of time.

Make no mistake about it. Title V is a gilt-edged, hand-engraved invitation to adventurism. It would effectively end U.N. peacekeeping with catastrophic consequences. It would be an open invitation to would-be aggressors and rogue states all around the world. Wars and conflicts with all their suffering and chaos would multiply. Gorazde and Sarajevo would be just a hint of things to come. We would be left with a stark choice, intervene unilaterally or do nothing at all.

Mr. Chairman, the fundamental problem with the measure as it is written is that it presents a false tradeoff, fulfilling our collective security obligations versus maintaining the readiness of our Armed Forces. In reality, as a practical matter, they are two sides of the same coin.

By leveraging our forces through the United Nations, we ease the demands on our Armed Forces in the same way a high state of readiness bolsters the credibility of a collective security system. But trying to maintain a high state of readiness when we are constrained to unilateral action is simply untenable.

In the period between the wars, we had neither an adequate state of readiness nor credible collective security. The result was unprecedented global disaster.

It was in that period that arch-isolationist, Arthur Vandenberg, was transformed into one of the most formidable advocates of collective security through the United Nations. Today we discard the lessons we learned at our great peril. The conflicts, no matter where they are, no matter how distant, left unattended can affect us all.

John Dunne was absolutely right. The bill's greatest flaw is that it fails to recognize that U.N. peacekeeping promotes our national interests.

Arthur Vandenberg said it best. Let me just share this observation from him.

Much as we might crave the easier way of lesser responsibility, we are denied this privilege. We cannot turn back the clock. We cannot fail by the old and easier charts. That has been determined for us by the march of events. We have no choice as to whether we shall play a great part in the world. We have to play that part. We have to play it in sheer defense of our own self-interest. All that we can decide is whether we shall play it well or ill.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Berman amendment. It fails the minimal truth-in-labeling standard required for any provision that calls itself a credit against our peacekeeping assessment.

After all the exemptions in this amendment are added up, the U.S. taxpayer will still be paying roughly the same amount for U.N. peacekeeping.

Our legislation merely seeks to get a handle on our spiraling direct and indirect costs for peacekeeping which amounted to some $2.8 billion last year. Our bill provides that a portion or our unreimbursed Defense Department expenditures in support of peacekeeping will be deducted from our U.N. assessment.

What we are now considering in this amendment is a so-called credit that has so many loopholes that virtually every peacekeeping mission we support in the world today would be exempted. It guts the provisions now in the bin.

Adopting this amendment would move us further from our goal of getting credit for the rapidly escalating indirect costs—$1.7 billion at last count—of DOD support for U.N. peacekeeping. Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to defeat this amendment.

This amendment does not in any manner end our support for U.N. peacekeeping. It does undertake a modest first step in ensuring that we get credit for all of our direct and indirect support for any U.N. peacekeeping operations.

I urge my colleagues to delay the Berman amendment.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the remainder of our time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California is recognized for 2½ minutes.

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, to try to put the debate in perspective of the language in section 501, if 501 had been in place in 1990, $60 billion that we spent in incremental costs on Desert Storm, $60 billion that was authorized by the United Nations because we went to the United Nations and got them to authorize it, would have been deducted and wiped out every peacekeeping cost for the next 50 years, even though the vast majority of that money was reimbursed by other countries.

This inflexible, silly language makes no provision for costs that are reimbursed for other countries that have to be reimbursed for the United States.

Second, yes, we can construe U.N.-authorized operations and attribute percent of the costs. It does not cover what is wiped out. You have wiped out U.N.-assessed costs where after this fiscal year we will only pay 25 percent. The other costs are operations we want to help ourselves diplomatically, politically, and militarily in terms of enforcing embargoes we got the United Nations to authorize so other countries would help us, help us. Penny-wise, pound-foolish, this amendment.

Finally, to remind Members, nothing is undertaken by the United Nations unless the United States decides it. If we do not like a specific U.N. operation, whether it is Somalia or Haiti, fight on that issue. Do not wipe out all of the good because of one thing you do not like.

It is the end of the cold war. We are at a point where America's security environment is more complicated than ever, and we are asked with this language in 501 to choose isolationism.

This so-called National Security Revitalization Act is billed as a cost-saving move to limit foreign adventurism, but its effect would be to undermine our national security by gutting our ability to use the United Nations as a tool to pursue U.S. interests.

Vote for the amendment. Defeat the bill. H.R. 501 is wrong.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield the balance of our time to the gentleman from California [Mr. HUNTER], the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Procurement of the Committee on National Security.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman of the committee for yielding me the time and for his great work.

My colleagues, let us look at this part of the Contract With America for what it is. This is a taxpayers' credit, and here is what it says: It says if you have U.N. operation going on, and we are paying almost 30 percent of that, or almost a third of that, we are helping the U.N. operation. We may be undertaking at the same time an American airlift that we are paying entirely out of U.S. taxpayer funds. We have undertaken this airlift in Bosnia now longer than the Berlin airlift, and all we are saying is that we would like to get a little credit for this in-kind contribution.

We spent about $1.4 billion in DOD airlifts and incremental costs, and at worst case, if the President exercises his exemptions, the U.S. taxpayers are only going to the credited for about $240 million out of the fiscal year 1994 incremental costs for peacekeeping requirements, we are only getting a credit of 240 million. The gentleman from California [Mr. BERMAN] wants to cut the $240 million credit down lower.

The U.S. taxpayers have a right to get this tax credit. They are paying two ways. They are paying through the United Nations and they are also paying for U.S. unilateral actions.

Please reject the Berman amendment or we are going to water this doggone thing down to the point where U.S. taxpayers do not get any credit at all for American unilateral actions carried out by DOD.

Please vote "no" on the Berman amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The question is on the modified amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. BERMAN].

The modified amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. Under a previous order of the House, it is now in order to consider an amendment by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SAM JOHNSON].

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] and others have talked about the costs of the United Nations, but what has not been talked about is we are talking about percentages, 25 percent of an already bloated budget. They are not cutting back on their costs, they are not addressing budget reductions.

I had planned to offer an amendment which would have placed a monetary cap of $250 million for the U.S. contribution to the United Nations. Here at home we are making painful budget cuts, we are eliminating wasteful spending and abolishing unnecessary bureaucracies. The taxpayers have insisted that we change the way we do business here in Washington, and I think that we can accept no less from the United Nations.

I believe we have the right and indeed the obligation to require the United Nations to do this, because the American taxpayer provides it with a quarter of its $1 billion plus budget. When we add in peacekeeping, as the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] has already said, $2.8 billion, we are already at $3 billion plus. That is too much money, and as the largest donor we are the only country capable of effecting positive change at the United Nations.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SAM JOHNSON] certainly raises a pertinent point on the issue of the U.S. contribution to the U.N. regular budget, and I share the gentleman's concerns about the level of our contributions, particularly in light of the poor management practices and inefficiencies that have been characterizing the U.N. organization. And I can assure the gentleman from Texas that our International Relations Committee will continue to press for reforms and hold the United Nations to no real growth in their budgets.

If the gentleman is willing, I would be pleased to work with him on this issue as part of the State Department authorization process. Our Committee on International Relations will be considering the authorization for the State Department for fiscal years 1996 and 1997 in the next few months, and this is a bill that authorizes the funding for the United Nations and the international organizations.

I am certain our Members would welcome the views of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SAM JOHNSON] on the U.S. contribution to the U.N. budget, so we would look forward to being of assistance to you in addressing your concerns and interest in the U.N. regular budget consideration.

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. I thank the Chairman. I appreciate him yielding time to me to discuss this, and I will take the chairman's suggestion and not offer the amendment today but will, instead, bring it up at the appropriate time, which will be during the State Department authorization process.

The CHAIRMAN. Under a previous order of the House, it is now in order to consider the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. TRAFICANT

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Page 53, beginning on line 15, strike out "25 percent" and insert "20 percent".

Page 53, line 18, strike out "25 percent" and insert "20 percent".

Page 53, line 21, after "the United States." insert the following new sentences:

For any United Nations peacekeeping operation that is initially authorized by the United Nations Security Council before the date of the enactment of this section, the applicable percentages under the preceding sentence shall be 25 percent. For United Nations peacekeeping operations that are initially authorized by the United Nations Security Council on or after the date of the enactment of this section, the President may increase the percentage limitations under the first sentence of this subsection to a percentage not greater than 25 percent. The President may exercise the authority under the preceding sentence only after transmitting to Congress a report providing notice of the percentage increase under the preceding sentence and a statement of the reasons for the increase.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT] will be recognized for 2½ minutes, and a Member opposed will be recognized for 2½ minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I listened very carefully during this debate.

I would just like to offer my little assessment. I think the American people are fed up, fed up knowing that Uncle Sam has become the policeman for the entire world. But what they are really galled about is Uncle Sam then sticks around and organizes a neighborhood crime watch everywhere around the planet.

We happen to have 25,000 murders a year in America. Now, I know that is not germane to this debate. There are 25,000 murders, it is approaching, a year in America and everybody is talking about the borders overseas, controlling borders and patrolling and helping foreign nations.

Somebody better take a look at our borders.

The bill sets a cap of 25 percent for U.N. peacekeeping operations, our share. The Traficant amendment says that it shall be a 20-percent cap as a target, and the President can go to the 25 percent, but he must notify the Congress that they have reached 20 percent expenditure, and he is going to increase it and give us the reasons why the President wants those additional monies.

Now, I have heard everybody saying we are a world power. Ladies and gentleman, we are an almost bankrupt world power, and a bankrupt America does not have much world power in the future. So I do not want the Contract With America to accept the Traficant amendment, go to conference, and throw it out.

I want to take another second to explain it. The Traficant amendment says that somebody in the White House or the Pentagon has to get out an adding machine or a calculator and figure out what they are spending and say, "Mr. President, we are approaching 20 percent. Now, we have got to send it to the Congress, notify them we are going to use the full 5."

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Does any Member seek time in opposition?

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I seek the time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] for 5 minutes.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. ROTH].

Mr. ROTH. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I want to say to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT], "You are right on target." I support this amendment.

This amendment further reduces the cap of the U.S. share of U.N. peacekeeping from 25 to 20 percent, and when you see what is taking place in our country, you are right on target. It permits two exceptions, I think, that the Members should know. It grandfathered existing operations and it permits the President the flexibility of increasing it to 25 percent where he believes it is necessary.

This is a very well thought out amendment, and the value of this amendment is that it makes it clear a congressional policy is in order that the U.S. taxpayer should not be paying more than 20 percent of the tab. It is time to ensure that the U.S. taxpayer is no longer fleeced.

I want to thank the gentleman from Ohio for pointing that out. Eighty percent of the tab, like the Clinton administration paid last year, is grossly unfair to the American taxpayer, and this is a fair amendment. It is a just amendment, and it deserves the support of this House.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DUNCAN].

Mr. DUNCAN. I rise in support of this amendment. A few months ago the front page of the Washington Post said we had our troops in Haiti picking up garbage and settling domestic disputes. Those should not be the mission of the American military, yet those are the kinds of things we are doing in these peacekeeping operations.

I support the amendment.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this amendment which I believe is in keeping with the other provisions of this title providing greater scrutiny and congressional oversight of the funding of U.N. peacekeeping operations. This amendment would establish a 20-percent assessment for new peacekeeping operations which the administration could raise up to the prevailing level of 25 percent to the extent it reports to Congress on the reasons for our increased financial support.

I would like to commend the gentleman for offering this amendment and the majority accepts the Congressman's amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under a previous order of the House, it is now in order to consider the amendment of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN].

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. DURBIN

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DURBIN: Page 63, line 4, strike "In particular," and insert "Numerous Central and East European countries, particularly"

(7) that, when any other European country emerging from communist domination is in a position to further the principles of the North Atlantic Treaty and to contribute to the security of the North Atlantic area, it should, in accordance with Article 10 of such Treaty, be invited to become a full NATO member, provided it—

(A) meets appropriate standards, including each of the standards specified in clauses (i) through (vii) of paragraph (5)(A); and

(B) remains committed to protecting the rights of all its citizens and respecting the territorial integrity of its neighbors;

(8) that the United States, other NATO member nations, and NATO itself should furnish appropriate assistance to facilitate the transition of other European countries emerging from communist domination to full NATO membership at the appropriate time.

Page 67, line 8, strike the semicolon and insert "including Russia, and"

Page 67, strike line 14 and all that follows through line 21

(8) that the United States, other NATO member nations, and NATO itself should furnish appropriate assistance to facilitate the transition of other European countries emerging from communist domination to full NATO membership at the appropriate time;

Page 67, line 8, strike the semicolon and insert "including Russia, and"

Page 67, strike line 14 and all that follows through line 21.

The CHAIRMAN. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN] will be recognized for 5 minutes, and a Member opposed will be recognized for 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN].

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would like to say at the outset I want to express my appreciation to the chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN], as well as the ranking member, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON], who have cooperated in the reparation of this amendment.

Let me try to describe this amendment in very express and succinct terms. This bill envisions the possibility that NATO will be expanded in the future. The North American Treaty Organization, which has been the bedrock of democracy in Europe since World War II, has been a major factor in American foreign policy.

Many countries which were not members of NATO after World War II were under Communist domination and were thereby precluded from participation. Now that we have seen the elimination of the Soviet Union per se and the emergence of new countries in the region, many of them new democracies, we are envisioning the possibility that NATO in the future will embrace these same democracies.

The bill is express in its terms and suggests that we should consider enlarging NATO to include Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic, and Slovakia. I have absolutely no objection to that, and feel they are appropriate candidates to be considered for NATO.

Unfortunately, the bill does not list many other nations which were formerly under Communist domination, and I think immediately, but not exclusively, about the Baltic States, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, and Ukraine.

What my amendment does is to open the possibility, the potentiality, that other formerly Communist-dominated nations will also be considered for NATO membership.

This a great boost to these countries to know that they, too, are considered potential allies of the United States and all freedom-loving nations.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I claim the other 5 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] for 5 minutes.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the amendment offered by Mr. DURBIN which amends title VI regarding NATO.

This amendment makes clear that there are a number of Central European countries beyond the Visegrad Four which should, at some point, be in a position to become full NATO members. I believe this is a very useful addition to the bill.

As I understand it, this is a consensus amendment worked out by the gentleman from Illinois in cooperation with the Central and East European Coalition which consists of those prominent organizations that represent Americans of East European lineage.

That coalition has reportedly obtained the approval of Baltic-Americans, Ukrainian-Americans, Armenian-Americans, Hungarian-Americans, Czech-Americans, Polish-Americans, and others for this amendment as introduced.

I would also like to note the amendment includes language urging other NATO nations to furnish appropriate assistance to facilitate the transition of these countries to NATO membership. This is a key point. The U.S. cannot be the sole source of assistance for these countries.

This amendment also deletes language in the bill that has been interpreted—I am certain, inadvertently—as giving Russia a veto over NATO expansion in Central and Eastern Europe.

I urge my colleagues to support the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I am not going to take further time. I understand there are other amendments and other debates that need to be considered.

I certainly thank my colleague, the gentleman from New York. He has been a pleasure to work with, on a very important issue. I also want to salute the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KNOLLENBERG] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HOKE], who share our feelings on this important issue, as well as my colleague from Chicago, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LIPINSKI], who is a cosponsor of this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. I rise to express my strong support for the amendment offered by Mr. DURBIN to include other European countries along with Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic, and Slovakia, for NATO membership in the future.

In particular I support restoring the eligibility of the Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania, as well as Ukraine to join NATO when they are able to meet the necessary requirements.

Since their independence from the Soviet Union, these nations have been working diligently to rebuild internally and establish democratic and free governments. By reaching out to the West, the Baltic states have been striving to develop peaceful relations throughout the global community.

Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, and Ukraine cannot ignore their neighbor to the east, the Russian Federation. We too cannot help but realize that Russia continues to present a potential threat to these countries. Certainly we all can see that the instability and actions of Russia have heightened tensions within its neighbors who remember all too clearly the history of the past 70 years.

In its current form H.R. 7 sends a message to these nations of Central and Eastern Europe that they are on their own in security matters. This is a message we surely do not mean and one we cannot risk sending. It threatens to destabilize this region through the implication that NATO expansion would be limited to the four named countries, Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic, and Slovakia. Certainly we should not imply that consideration of NATO membership will be limited to just these four countries. When the Baltic states or Ukraine meet the appropriate requirements they should be permitted to, at the least, be considered for NATO membership.

The Durbin amendment resolves this problem in a fair and suitable manner. This language making numerous Central and Eastern European countries eligible for consideration in future NATO expansion extends the same criteria for NATO integration to all the nations of Central and Eastern Europe. I support this amendment and urge my colleagues to do so as well.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN].

The amendment was agreed to.

□ 1410

The CHAIRMAN. Under a previous order of the House, it is now in order to consider the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BATEMAN].

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. BATEMAN

Mr. BATEMAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BATEMAN: Page 74, after line 16, strike all through line 20; Redesignate current paragraph (B) as the (A); Add after (A) the following new paragraph (B):

(B) certain countries that were a part of the former Union of Soviet Socialist Republics or that were part of the former Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, which the President may designate pursuant to Section 203(d)(2) of the NATO Participation Act of 1994.

The CHAIRMAN. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BATEMAN] will be recognized for 1½ minutes, and a Member opposed will be recognized for 1½ minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BATEMAN].

Mr. BATEMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume. Mr. Chairman, in the bill as it comes to the floor, there are terms within the bill, or a phrase, "certain other European countries emerging from communist domination." In a section of the bill thereafter this phrase is defined legislatively. The legislative definition now in the bill is written so as to make eligible for participation in programs that bring additional countries into NATO, territories of the former Soviet Union and territories of the former Federal Socialist Republic of Yugoslavia.

My amendment changes that definition of that phrase, "certain European countries which have emerged from communist domination." But the nature of the amendment makes no substantive difference in the bill. What it does do, however, is to remove that blanket invitation to have someone possibly construe this that we are thinking in terms of countries as remote from NATO as Kazakhstan or Azerbaijan or Armenia or Turkistan, which I do not think anyone really contemplates is what we have in mind.

Similarly, if you say all of the former territories of the Federal Socialist Republic of Yugoslavia—

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BATEMAN] has expired.

Mr. BATEMAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent for 2 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee is under a unanimous-consent agreement of the House where it is not in order to ask for additional minutes.

If the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] would like to control the time, he can yield.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I would be pleased to yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATEMAN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the gentleman's amendment.

I believe it helps to clarify the fact that the President has the discretion to identify certain countries in the former Soviet Union and in the former Yugoslavia which may be eligible for assistance.

Some countries may be designated in those regions. Others may not. It's the President's decision.

I urge my colleague to support Mr. BATEMAN's amendment.

Mr. BATEMAN. Mr. Chairman, it is my understanding it is also acceptable by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON], the ranking member of the full committee.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATEMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

(Mr. OBERSTAR asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OBERSTAR. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to make sure this language does not preclude the possibility of a country like Slovenia, which is independent, has a privatized economy, had had successful free democratic elections, from joining, having the same status as the already named countries in the legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I greatly appreciate the positive response of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BATEMAN], as well as the concurrence and affirmation by the chairman of the Committee on International Relations, Mr. GILMAN, that the amendment of the gentleman from Virginia and the amendment of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN], clearly open the door for admission of Slovenia to NATO membership without specifically mentioning that country by name.

Slovenia clearly deserves equal standing with the other countries already named in the pending bill and merits membership on a full equality basis in NATO, because Slovenia obviously has taken its place in the family of nations as a democratic, free market-based, privatized economy. In a December 1990 plebiscite, Slovenes voted 96 percent for independence from what was then Yugoslavia. That plebiscite directed the Slovene Parliament to craft a constitution, based on democratic, representative, government principles and set June 26, 1991, as the date on which independence from Yugoslavia should be formally declared.

Those directives were carried out by the Slovene Parliament, independence was declared; the Yugoslav army invade Slovenia to stifle independence, but, after a 9-day military confrontation with minimal loss of life, the Yugoslav army retreated and the Slovene people prevailed. The United States formally recognized the Republic of Slovenia on April 7, 1992.

Immediately upon the successful establishment of its independence, the Slovene Government began a very intensive privatization of its national economy, much of which already was operating on a market basis.

In January 1993, an international trade journal, International Trade Reporter, said this about Slovenia: "Of all the countries of eastern Europe, Slovenia has the best preconditions for the transition to a market economy and a fast start toward dynamic economic development."

Now, a fully privatized economy, Slovenia is the 20th largest exporter in the world, exporting over $7 billion in goods each year, which accounts for 60 percent of Slovenia's GNP. Slovenia now enjoys a lively trade with the United States, shipping $229 million worth of goods to the United States each year and importing some $180 in United States goods annually.

However, for Slovenes, these are not surprising numbers. Prior to separation from the former Yugoslavia, Slovenia, with a population of 2.4 million, just over 8 percent of the total population of the former Yugoslavia, represented 40 percent of former Yugoslavia's overall GNP and 36 percent of its total tax base. Slovenes are industrious, hard working, committed to democratic principles and a vigorous market economy. They deserve to have their rightful place in the family of nations and, should they choose to do so, a seat in NATO and in the Western European Alliance.

Not only would such status be emphatically embraced by the Slovene Government and its people, but it would also fill with pride the three-quarter million or so of Americans of Slovene descent, including me, who are scattered throughout nearly every one of these United States.

Mr. BATEMAN. Mr. Chairman, I would say to the gentleman he is correct. It is written so as not to exclude the possibility of Slovenia.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BATEMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. BEREUTER. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I commend him on his work. It has indeed taken care of some clarification both with respect to the Soviet Union and the Socialist Republic of Yugoslavia. I thank the gentleman for his work, it is very fine work.

I hope we can support it.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BATEMAN].

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under a previous order of the House of today, it is now in order to consider the amendment of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI].

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. TORRICELLI

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TORRICELLI: Page 68, line 4, strike out "shall" and insert "may."

The CHAIRMAN. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] will be recognized for 22 minutes, and an opponent will be recognized for 22 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI].

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, never in my memory has a more simple amendment been brought before this institution. It hangs largely on one word, "may" the United States establish the new military aid program and expansion of foreign aid in eastern Europe, or "shall" it do so? Is it mandatory?

In my memory of this institution, I have never known this Congress in its enthusiasm for foreign aid to mandate an expansion of that program to other countries. But indeed, unless my amendment is accepted, that is exactly what we will do today: Add 4 countries in eastern Europe on a mandatory basis, requiring military aid.

Now, I know this is a large institution and we represent very different districts with different electoral experiences. But I cannot believe that anyone in this institution feels that it is a mandate from their constituents in the second month of this new Congress as a matter of the highest priority to come here to this floor to expand foreign aid. I do not think anybody knew it was in the contract. I do not think anyone would have been for it if they did.

But you have got one opportunity to take it out today; change the word "shall" expand foreign aid to "may," based on the judgment of the administration.

Now, I know that the intentions of the authors of the legislation are sound, to bring into the western alliance for security purposes the nations of eastern Europe.

And indeed under the Partnership for Peace, $100 million has already been authorized to work with eastern Europe nations so that one day they might coordinate their defense policies and perhaps eventually enter NATO.

But this is beyond coordinating defense programs. This is providing direct assistance.

Now, the authors may claim that the $100 million of the Partnership for Peace can be used to fund this new foreign aid program. But indeed there is no reason to believe that this money would be sufficient. It is already being used with other nations. It may already be entirely consumed.

The simple truth is that if we vote to expand this foreign aid program, that money either has to come from withdrawing other eastern European nations from the Partnership for Peace, coming back to expand overall foreign aid money, or taking it from current recipients, most notably the biggest recipients, the Russian program, the Israeli program, or the Egyptian program.

Indeed, those countries could not possibly be unaffected if we are to mandate this foreign aid program because there are no other sources.

I find myself, Mr. Chairman, in a peculiar position. Having served on the Committee on Foreign Affairs all these years, I have come to this floor previously to argue for foreign aid, for poor nations, for nations with security problems, for nations working with the United States on a bilateral basis for our own defense, but considering our other budgetary problems and the other needs before this Congress, our domestic priorities, I cannot argue that we should add any nation on a mandatory basis for American foreign aid.

My amendment would simply allow the administration to look at each of these countries, Slovakia, Czech Republic, Hungary, and Poland, gauge the strengths of their democracies, the liberalization of their economies, what they are doing for their own security needs, and then make a determination whether or not we want to expand our military assistance.

It is a discretion that makes sense. Indeed, in the underlying legislation, on page 68 and page 69, this is exactly the formula that the authors use for expanding this to other countries beyond the four I just mentioned. They would gauge the progress of democracy in those countries, Ukraine, Baltics. That is what we should do for these.

Indeed, frankly I think of no better evidence than of the four countries mandated for an expansion of military aid, two of them are now led by former communists. One has an authoritative government. All have declining defense budgets.

So the majority would have us have a mandated foreign aid program for countries led by two former communists? Where they themselves are decreasing their defense spending? With all due respect, Mr. Chairman, who is doing the thinking here? This cannot make any sense.

Let us work together with the administration to determine whether or not they are making progress, and they should be brought into the program.

There are times, Mr. Chairman, when this Congress feels so strongly and the merits are so overwhelming for foreign assistance programs in our security needs that this Congress should mandate, and we do, for Israel, for Egypt. But if I might paraphrase the words of former Senator Bentsen, Slovakia is no Israel. There is no need at this point to write into the law this which in my judgment is the largest expansion in terms of naming the countries involved with American foreign aid in my memory.

I cannot believe that any Member of this institution wants to go home this evening, meet their constituents on the streets and say to them, "You can be proud. I recognized our needs. I just voted to on a mandatory basis add four countries to the American foreign aid program."

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] is recognized for 22 minutes.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], a senior member of the Committee on International Relations and chairman of the Subcommittee on International Operations.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to voice my strong support for the underlying provisions of the legislation, namely title 6, which squarely addresses the issue of NATO expansion. At the outset, let me dispel the notion that this section would somehow hamstring the administration's foreign policy, assuming it has one. Nothing in the National Security Revitalization Act mandates NATO membership for any country or group of countries. Changes in the membership of NATO are determined on the basis of consensus among the alliance's member states as stipulated under article 10 of the North Atlantic Treaty, a point reaffirmed in the pending legislation and known to Members on both sides of the aisle.

The crux of the matter is how best to consolidate and build upon the fundamental political changes which have occurred in many of the countries of Central Europe, the Baltics, and some of the New Independent States of the Former Soviet Union. On the security front, a veritable "no-man's-land" has emerged between Germany and Russia following the demise of the Warsaw Pact, and the ensuing moves toward democracy and market economy by many in the region.

The Clinton administration, like the administration before it, the Bush administration, has been slow to move to fill this vacuum. Mr. Chairman, this has been a source of great consternation to the emerging democracies in the region who rightly view it as a source of potential instability.

I think my colleagues would agree that the Partnership for Peace initiative launched a year ago has failed to fill this void. By making the program mandatory, as we do in title 6, we are ensuring that the job gets done. I would urge my colleagues to read the legislation. The legislation clearly states that the program is to assist in the transition to full NATO membership of Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic, Slovakia, and any other European country emerging from Communist domination that is designated by the President, and so on and so forth.

The amendment offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI], making the transition optional would make this entire section a sense-of-the-Congress resolution. Mr. Chairman, title 7 of the National Security Revitalization Act I believe provides a reasonable framework for addressing the concerns consistent with U.S. interests in ensuring stability in Europe. Very clearly delineated in the bill is a list of criteria, such as respect for democratic principles and human rights enshrined in the Helsinki Final Act, against which to evaluate the suitability of prospective candidates for NATO membership. In addition, it establishes a program to provide the emerging democracies with the necessary tools to facilitate their transition to full NATO membership, which, as I pointed out earlier, will ultimately be up to the members of NATO to decide.

Given the broad range of our political, economic, and security interests in Europe, strengthening new free markets and democracies in that region benefits the United States. Interestingly two of the most prominent members of the foreign policy establishment, Henry Kissinger and Zbigniew Brzezinski, are ardent supporters of the timely expansion of NATO.

Dr. Kissinger sees the existing vacuum as a threat, not only to NATO cohesion, but the very existence of NATO as a meaningful institution, and he writes, "NATO expansion represents a balancing of two conflicting considerations the fear of alienating Russia against the danger of creating a vacuum in central Europe. A wise policy," he counsels, "would proceed with the membership for Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic and Slovakia, and to reject a Russian veto." Dr. Kissinger concludes, "NATO cannot long survive if the borders it protects are not threatened while it refuses to protect the borders of adjoining countries that do feel threatened."

Zbigniew Brzezinski recently urged NATO to formally declare its "criteria for expansion and indicate which countries appear to meet them. This would end the counterproductive debates with Russia over whether NATO should expand. The longer this step is delayed, the more vociferous Moscow's objections are likely to be."

Mr. Chairman, this is precisely the purpose of title 6 of the National Security Revitalization Act.

Rather than dodging the issue of NATO expansion, as it has largely done to date, the Clinton administration, should move on the membership issue before more time is lost. But that requires leadership. We must seize upon today's opportunities which could be gone tomorrow. A steady and deliberate course of action is one thing, obfuscation, which has characterized the Clinton administration's approach to date is another.

Russia, perhaps sensing a certain timidity within the administration, has sought to block NATO expansion. It is instructive to recall that the Soviet Union vehemently opposed German membership in NATO in 1955 and attempted to deny unified Germany continued participation in the Alliance. A democratic Russia has nothing to fear from a defensive alliance founded on democratic principles. It would be foolhardy and dangerous, as Henry Kissinger rightly pointed out, to give Russia a veto over NATO expansion, and, as Dr. Brzezinski observed, failure to act now will only make matters worse.

Let's look at the earlier inclusion of new countries. As my colleagues know, when we look at countries that were included into NATO, Greece and Turkey were hardly stellar democracies when they joined in 1952. I remind Members that Portugal, one of the founding members of NATO, was under a dictatorship in 1949. In this bill we lay out clear markers which we think have to be achieved before this program goes forward. We are trying to promote and push these countries in the direction of democracy, free markets, respect for human rights. I believe title 6, as a mandatory program, goes much further to ensure those objectives, and, hopefully, a safer world, rather than making this title a sense-of-the-Congress resolution by amending it to an optional program.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Chairman, I am proud to yield 4 minutes to the gentleman who coauthored this amendment with me, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ROEMER].

I want to remind the body, however, that this amendment does not impact NATO expansion, only the question of whether there should be a mandatory foreign aid program.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, I would encourage especially the new freshmen of this body to read this title, pages 61 through 75. All the amendment that the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] and I have offered would do is say that the President may establish this program, not that he has to establish this program as a mandate.

As we read through the next 14 pages, as Members are on the floor or in their offices and they decide whether or not to vote for this amendment, let me say that in title IV what we have been debating is whether or not there should be some accountability and limits to U.S. participation in Somalia, in Haiti, in Bosnia, and other places around the world.

Title VI then says it completely unties that, completely undoes it, and says we are going to possibly send troops and foreign aid to Poland, Hungary, Slovakia, Albania, or Romania.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROEMER. I will not yield until I have finished.

It opens up all these possibilities by mandating to the President that he has to expand NATO and he has to look at providing foreign aid and disarmament aid to these qualifying countries.

I would also argue to my colleagues that in reading through what this legislation says, we read through this and find that on page 71 of title VI, at the top of the page, these countries would be eligible for economic support assistance, they would be eligible for security assistance, and they would be eligible for nonproliferation and disarmament funds.

Where in the Contract for America does it say that we are going to mandate that we expand NATO, that we list to the President of the United States all these countries that have to join, according to this legislation, in title VI, and that the American taxpayer is then going to fund this new expanded NATO? I do not think that that is what the elections in November were about.

I would further argue that whether or not we intended this, the gentleman from New Jersey and I are in complete adherence to what the contract says. The Contract With America at page 108 says, and I quote, "With respect to this program, the President is given authority to establish a program to assist Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic," et cetera, not mandate it to the President.

That is exactly what the Torricelli-Roemer amendment does. It does not mandate. It says the President may. It gives the President authority. It is in complete agreement with what the contract says. It gives the President authority.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROEMER. I will not yield yet.

I will just conclude by saying that I am delighted that somebody did not stick Chechnya in this. What would that mean? Where would we be then? What would that commit us to? What about Albania and Romania? Will the gentleman answer that question? They do not even have an organized military. Yet Title 5 of the NATO treaty requires mutual cooperation between the countries.

How much does this cost? What would be the financial burden to the United States to start funding this under these three or four different accounts, and would the United States be required to send troops to Albania and Slovakia?

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. HOBSON). The time of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ROEMER] has expired.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, first of all, perhaps we have had too many discussions on the floor about mandates because mandates seem to be on the brain.

There is nothing in this bill that mandates that any country join NATO. That has to be made very clear. What we are doing is saying that the program that would assist nations like Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic, and Slovakia and other European nations means that these nations would be designated for transitional help. There is $100 million being requested for the President by the President for this kind of thing. We want to encourage expansion—that is what we are talking about.

As I have said, we have had a lack of leadership with regard to this, and we are saying that Congress should speak up and say these countries are worth it. A window of opportunity exists and we do not want to see that window closed.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. If I have the time, I will yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. ROEMER. Again I ask, what is the cost of this? Have we had hearings on this?

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. As the gentleman knows, there is no cost figure stated in the legislation.

Mr. ROEMER. There certainly is not.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. At a later date we will talk about it, but already we have $100 million for the fiscal year requested by the President in the Partnership For Peace.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for another question?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] has expired.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER], the distinguished chairman of our Subcommittee on Asia and the Pacific.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to the Torricelli amendment.

There is a lot of confusion around here. Nowhere is there a requirement that the President enlarge NATO. Nowhere is there a requirement that the United States support an enlargement of NATO under all conditions. Section 604 tries to provide some leadership. It is assisting, and it would encourage NATO expansion.

This has been unfairly characterized as mandatory foreign aid, even mandatory military aid. There is nothing about it that is mandatory. If the President decides to create an office but uses no funds, he has that authority.

But what has the President done? He has offered the Warsaw Initiative last July, and in the budget document we submitted, we have $100 million for the Warsaw Initiative. We would expect that under section 604 as written the Warsaw Initiative funds would be channeled through this source.

Nowhere is it restricted to military assistance. If in fact we talk to the State Department, they will talk to us about transportation improvements and other kinds of ESF related expenditures. There may in fact not be a single penny spent on military aid as a result of this.

What I think we are doing is trying to provide some guidance. If in fact we are going to enlarge into the Visegrad Four countries or other eligible countries for a period of time when they meet the criteria spelled out in title VI, then we would have an opportunity to expand NATO, with the approval of our 15 additional NATO allies.

But what we are attempting to do with this program is to provide some guidance to the executive branch. That is an entirely appropriate activity of the Congress of the United States. The President is proposing to spend $100 million on the Visegrad Four and other Partnership For Peace countries. We are going to give some direction through section 604.

Mr. Chairman, I urge rejection of the Torricelli amendment.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. JOHNSTON], a member of the committee.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Torricelli amendment. I believe that the mandated-funding provision and other policies contained in title VI of this bill are severely flawed.

Mandating a funding program for these four countries is a serious mistake. Congress should not attempt to legislate the expansion of NATO—NATO expansion must be handled flexibly, in close consultation with our allies, as circumstances in Europe evolve. In addition, NATO expansion would be at an enormous expense—tens of billions of dollars. This bill mandates an expansion of our commitments overseas, yet it doesn't say how we should pay for them—and all during a period of declining foreign assistance resources.

Specifying countries that are to be fast-tracked into NATO membership is also a mistake. As Secretaries Christopher and Perry recently wrote in the New York Times, "If we arbitrarily lock in advantages now for some countries, we risk discouraging reformers in countries not named and fostering complacency in countries that are."

In general, this bill micromanages U.S. foreign policy to an unacceptable extent. Any policy of NATO expansion should be closely responsive to the very fluid political landscape in Europe—the President should decide how and when NATO is expanded. Members on both sides know well that this sort of micromanaging simply does not work.

Mr. Chairman, I must also question the wisdom of the underlying policy of NATO expansion as expressed in this bill. At the very least, I believe the Nation needs a broad national debate on NATO expansion, a debate that has hardly begun.

This policy of NATO expansion would draw clear new lines across Europe. It would prejudice, and I believe adversely affect, the outcome of transitions underway in Russia and throughout the region. Moreover, I am not convinced that NATO expansion is viable politically. Do the American people truly understand the legal and financial implications of providing security guarantees to Bratislava and Budapest? Are we ready to sacrifice the lives of our sons and daughters to defend Slovakia and the other countries? Once the public debate begins in earnest, the expansion of NATO by treaty obligation may well be politically impossible.

I strongly support the Torricelli amendment to this bill.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MICA].

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to respond to a couple of the points that have been made in this debate. I am very familiar with Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic and Slovakia, having visited and examined some of their emergence from the former Soviet bloc, and I can tell you that this amendment by the gentleman from New Jersey is a grave mistake at this time.

The point was made here that this is some extension of foreign aid, and that is not correct. There is foreign aid already in all of these countries, United States foreign aid. This amendment says the President shall establish a program to assist in the transition to full NATO membership. He says "may."

Well, the President already may. That is what we are suffering from, is a lack of leadership, a lack of direction. And what this Congress is trying to do is say that we shall assist these emerging nations to reach NATO status. And that is the clear intent.

That is what has been lacking here, and that is what will be lacking if we miss this opportunity. We will make a grave mistake if we pass this amendment and put us back in the situation we are in, because these countries, Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic and Slovakia want this status and want to work toward this status, and this directs from the Congress, providing leadership, to say that we will establish a program and the President will cooperate with us to bring these people into NATO. And that can only be in the long-term interests of the security and peace of not only this Nation, but the entire world.

If we adopt this amendment, we are voting for the status quo, and we are voting to make a great mistake in the history of these emerging nations. I urge its defeat.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. RICHARDSON].

(Mr. RICHARDSON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Chairman, if I were a NATO ally, I would be scratching my head in wonderment and asking has the U.S. Congress gone mad, or is this a joke? Did the Americans hear that the cold war is over, or is this a time warp?

Whatever happened to consultation with our NATO allies? What does the President think about this initiative? Oh, I forgot, we now have 230 Secretaries of State and Defense, and we do not need an executive branch. We now have an imperial Congress with a constitutional authority to run foreign policy.

Mr. Chairman, this is a bad bill. It is an attempt to dictate the terms of NATO expansion with no criteria for membership. England is against this, France is against this, Germany is against this. Russia is going to think we are indicating aggression. Slovakia is run by an authoritarian leader. Poland is run by a former Communist Party member. Should we not be discussing these issues with others, rather than dictating to NATO and the executive branch?

We are also starting a new military assistance program, an entitlement program. This is going to take money from other strategic allies like Israel, like Turkey, like Pakistan.

Mr. Speaker, let us not allow this amendment of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] to go down. It corrects a serious flaw. This bill is not going to become law, but it sends a chilling signal to our allies that the United States is divided, that there is no cohesion between the executive and congressional branches.

Mr. Chairman, let us debate NATO expansion within the Congress, within the American public, but with our allies. Let us pass the Torricelli amendment and correct a very, very chilling signal that is going to arrive in Europe and NATO tomorrow that the United States is divided.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER].

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, I would just say to the gentleman, I hope the gentleman is aware there is no entitlement program created by this. The President, of course, is proposing to spend $100 million for the Warsaw Initiative, part of which could go for the countries which would be eligible. There is no mandatory timeframe, of course.

We have by the action of the framers of H.R. 7 and by action of the Committee on International Relations taken additional criteria that ought to be considered, giving some guidance to these countries on how we ought to proceed. But we certainly are not forcing our allies or the President to take them in.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEREUTER. I yield to the gentleman from New Mexico.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is an expert on many of these issues, NATO especially. The gentleman knows our allies are seriously concerned about this initiative, and you are going to be taking money from other strategic allies. You are setting forth a military assistance program. The language is very clear.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON], the ranking member of the Committee on International Relations.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Torricelli amendment. It calls on NATO membership for four countries in the near future. It mandates an assistance program of all kinds to aid in the transition to NATO membership. It specifically designates four countries. Now, there are a lot of things wrong with that.

First of all, it prejudices and dictates the pace and direction of NATO expansion. What you have got going on in this part of the world is a very elaborate historical process to determine the security regime of Europe in the years ahead, and the Congress of the United States comes in with this provision in H.R. 7 and tries to dictate what that result would be.

Furthermore, this is just gratuitous advice, because NATO expansion cannot be dictated by a statute of the Congress. We short-circuit the partnership for peace initiative, which is supported by all of our allies today. That establishes closer military and political ties between NATO and the nations of central and Eastern Europe. We ought to let that evolve.

Now, there has been a lot of talk in here about this bill providing guidance to the President. This does not provide guidance to the President. This tells the President what to do. It mandates the President shall establish a program. That is not providing guidance. That is mandating. And you are telling the President to assist in the transition, and furthermore, you are not giving him any resources to do what you tell him to do.

That is no way to conduct American foreign policy. You are mandating an ambitious program of military and economic assistance here. You are picking out winners and losers in this historical process that is going on. You are creating a dangerous gulf between our commitments on the one hand and the resources that we provide on the other hand.

We are extending U.S. security commitments under the plan you put into H.R. 7, and that is an unwise thing to do. I strongly support the Torricelli amendment.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. HAYES].

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I would ask if the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] would engage in a brief colloquy with my regarding the U.S. policy toward NATO as spelled out in clause 4 of section 603, which is language I worked with the chairman and his committee to develop.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I would be happy to engage in a colloquy with the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, it is my understanding that this provision addresses NATO's current lack of an airborne ground surveillance system to provide allied forces with essential, timely, and reliable enemy movement and targeting information.

Mr. GILMAN. If the gentleman would yield, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is correct. In 1991, the United States recommended to NATO that it consider procuring an airborne ground surveillance capability to complement the air surveillance capability of the NATO AWACS fleet. The AWACS system has effectively provided our pilots with a map of the skies, however, it is not designed to observe real-time movement of ground forces on the battlefield at extended ranges. It is, therefore, in the best interests of the United States and the NATO alliance to expedite a program which will provide our ground forces with the same ability to see the battlefield that our pilots currently enjoy with the AWACS fleet.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, is it not correct that the United States has already developed such a system which is called JSTARS and demonstrated its battle management capabilities during Desert Storm?

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will continue to yield, the gentleman is again correct. In fact, the JSTARS program has been nominated by our Nation as the best candidate to meet the needs of NATO. I am confident that the JSTARS program will provide NATO with a significant operational advantage that will strengthen the capabilities of our allied forces.

Mr. HAYES. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, all sides including the administration, envision the eventual expansion of NATO. The problem is that the administration has been unwilling to spell out in clear terms what conditions candidates would have to meet. This ambiguity does not serve any good purpose and, in fact, plays into the hands of the Russians who want to block any expansion.

Let me remind Members and assure Members the bill does not mandate that the countries listed or any others would be invited to even join NATO. There is a separate process for that. The process for expansion is qualified by article 10 of the NATO treaty. There is a specific process for that. We are talking about a program to assist in the transition.

I urge Members to read on page 69 the kinds of things we are talking about that we would like to see happen: shared values and interests, democratic governments, free market economies, civilian control of the military, and so on and so forth.

Let us not just be passive and reactive. I believe we need to be proactive for the sake of security for Europe and for the rest of the world.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. PELOSI].

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me and for his leadership in presenting this amendment, because I think that if it passes, it will vastly improve H.R. 872.

I am very, very concerned about the language contained therein, which would expand NATO membership. We must remember that NATO membership means that our security alliance would be expanded, that we would expand the guarantee of security to many more countries.

And this may be appropriate, as my colleague and friend, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] said, we all envision a time when that would happen. But right now, 16 governments are involved in any decision to expand NATO. The United States, we do not make this decision alone. The situation in Eastern Europe and in the New Independent States is a delicate one, the balance of which could be very disturbed by this legislation.

The administration's partnership for peace was designed to enhance the security of our allies in this region while providing incentives for reform for the new European democracies. If we move forward with these NATO provisions, we will run the risk of alienating the countries not named and the greater risk of developing a bunker mentality with Russia.

I urge my colleagues to support the Torricelli amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong opposition to H.R. 872, which poses a significant threat to our national security. The bill before us violates basic tenets of our national defense strategy; it abrogates international treaties; and, it violates the U.S. Constitution. The National Security Revitalization Act is fundamentally flawed. It is also dangerous.

H.R. 872 is dangerous because it would revive the old star wars project, an ineffective, unnecessary, and costly project which was, after significant public and congressional debate under previous administrations, deemed to be not worthy of funding.

The Congressional Budget Office [CBO] has estimated that the system proposed by the Republicans in this bill could cost $29–$30 billion over the next 5 years. Others have estimated that the costs could range as high as $39 billion. In today's budget climate, funding one projects means not funding something else. If star wars goes forward, troop readiness and weapon modernization will be cut.

In addition, restarting star wars would actually make the world less safe. The passage of this bill could abrogate the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, threaten START II negotiations, and terminate existing Nunn-Lugar agreements to dismantle nuclear warheads with Russia, Ukraine, Byelarus, and Kazakhstan. These actions do not increase our security, they undermine it by threatening the real progress which is being made toward diminishing the threat of nuclear destruction.

H.R. 872 is dangerous because it would tie the hands of the President, any President, in international crisis when he or she determines it is in our national interest to place our troops under the operational control of another country, including NATO allies. My Republican colleagues must know that with this law on the books, President Bush would not have been able to deploy the troops he deemed necessary to carry out Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm against Saddam Hussein; President Clinton would not have been able to respond to Hussein's threats by deploying troops to Kuwait in 1994. For that matter, if constrained by this law, President Truman would not have been able to deploy troops to Korea in 1950.

This provision is unnecessary. Today, our forces always remain under the command of the President of the United States. We already apply the most rigorous standards when we pass even the most limited responsibility to a competent foreign commander—an action which has been done throughout this great Nation's history from the Revolutionary War through the Persian Gulf war. I frankly do not understand why my Republican colleagues, who have steadfastly defended the President's prerogatives for years, would choose to tie his hands in what is a very dangerous way.

H.R. 872 is dangerous because it undermines the very viability of international peacekeeping efforts. Many argue that the United States cannot and should not be the world's policeman. We cannot afford to intervene everywhere; we do not want to put American lives at risk. However, conflicts do not go away and in this post-cold-war world, there seem to be an evergrowing number of global hot spots. If we want to retain our role as the world's only superpower and if we do not want to be the world's policeman, it is critical for us to work to strengthen, not to weaken, multinational institutions.

If this bill passes, we are going in the wrong direction. The U.N. peacekeeping provisions contained in this legislation would cripple multinational efforts to address international crises. If we reduce our assessed peacekeeping dues dollar-for-dollar by the costs of peacekeeping operations which we conduct voluntarily and in support of U.S. interests, we would force the cancellation of peacekeeping activities, undermine U.N. peacekeeping efforts, and ultimately devastate the United Nations. If the United States changes the way it funds U.N. peacekeeping, other countries will follow suit.

As much as some would like to believe this country can survive in isolation, it cannot. If we pass this bill, we will be forced either to be the world's sole policeman or to ignore conflicts which could threaten our national security. I do not believe this choice is what the American people really want.

H.R. 872 is also dangerous because it unilaterally designates certain candidates for NATO membership. Sixteen governments are involved in any decision to expand NATO; the United States does not make this decision alone. The situation in Eastern Europe and the New Independent States is a delicate one, the balance of which can be disturbed by H.R. 872. The Administration's Partnership for Peace was designed to enhance the security of our allies in the region while providing incentives for reform for the new European democracies. If we move forward with these NATO provisions, we run the real risk of alienating the countries not named by the Republicans for NATO membership and destabilizing an already precarious region. These NATO provisions are imprudent also because it sends the wrong message to Russia. The last thing we need is for Russia to adopt a bunker mentality as the security guarantee is extended to all of their neighbors. Against what country.

H.R. 872 contains a number of other objectionable provisions, some of which are dangerous and some of which are just plain silly. One of the themes of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle has been that government should be downsized, reduced, and eliminated. It is therefore with some perplexity that I note the inclusion in this bill of an unnecessary and duplicative commission to review national security.

Why do people who claim to be opponents of government agencies, bureaucracies, and departments, propose to establish a brand new one, one which would duplicate services which are already being provided by the Secretary of Defense and Members of Congress?

American taxpayers already pay the salaries of people to review U.S. security needs. We have a Department of Defense and defense specialists in other Government agencies and here in Congress. But, this bill would spend an additional $1.5 million of American workers' hard-earned dollars to copy what people in Government are already doing. This Commission does not make sense.

Mr. Chairman, for all of the above reasons and others, I believe that the National Security Revitalization Act should be defeated. If it passes, U.S. national security will be weakened significantly.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, at this point I would like to engage the distinguished chairman of the Committee on International Relations in a colloquy, the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

Mr. Chairman, I wondered if the gentleman could succinctly tell us, does he have some estimation of exactly how much we would be spending in new foreign assistance to help these poor countries? Is there a dollar amount he has in mind?

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TORRICELLI. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, the President has to evolve a program and then send the program to us. We are not mandating.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, so in fact, we would be mandating a foreign assistance program without knowing a number?

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will continue to yield—

Mr. TORRICELLI. Reclaiming my time, if the gentleman would then answer, is there a reason, a theory in mind, why when each of these four countries is declining in their defense spending, spending less of their dollars, we would take the American taxpayers' dollars in foreign aid to substitute for their military spending? Is there a rationale there I am missing?

Mr. GILMAN. I thank the gentleman for his comment. We await the President's program before we can analyze what the costs would be.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, this is evidence that if one lives long enough, they can see anything.

The majority has come to this Congress to establish a mandatory foreign aid program at a time of enormous domestic problems and mounting deficits in this country.

They have done so claiming that our current program to help these same foreign nations is not working, even though it is only 90 days old. We have asked the President for 90 days to begin working militarily for NATO expansion with these countries. Now in our impatience we tell him on a mandatory basis, he must do so, that we do not know what it would cost. We overlook the fact that two of the four countries have former Communists running their governments. One is becoming an authoritative government. But we want to expand foreign aid to help them. Even though the same countries, every one of them, has a declining defense budget. But in our enthusiasm to help them, even when we do not have enough money for our own armed forces, we are going to throw our money upon them.

Mr. Chairman, the simple truth is, this has not been well thought through. We have a program that is working. We tell the President of the United States, you may have a program to help these countries if they are democratic, they are pluralistic, it would help the security interests of the United States, our NATO allies agree.

It is a good program. It is under way, and we should remain with it. Our differences indeed are narrow, whether we apply those criteria to those four countries, do so on a basis of the President's discretion or, in my judgment, have the largest mandatory expansion of the American foreign assistance program that I have ever witnessed.

Mr. Chairman, I urge the Members of this institution to vote for my amendment. It is consistent with bipartisan foreign policy, the actions of the 103d Congress, and indeed, as the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ROEMER] has pointed out, the Contract With America, which itself talks about a permissive expansion of our foreign assistance program, not a mandatory expansion.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TORRICELLI. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. ROEMER. I would just like to remind my colleagues, on page 108 of the contract, it says "the President is given authority to establish this program."

If the Torricelli-Roemer amendment is adopted, we say he "may establish" this program, not as the current language reads, he "shall establish" a program, which is mandatory. The other side even lists the countries that should be in NATO.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Indian. I urge a yes vote. I thank Members of the majority party, the new members in the committee who voted for this amendment in committee.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, section 604(a) of H.R. 872 directs the President to establish a program to assist in the transition of full NATO membership of Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic, and Slovakia and any other country emerging from Communist domination that is designated by the President.

The author of this amendment, Mr. TORRICELLI and the administration opposes the mandatory establishment of this program. That is no surprise to me. This administration, and in fact, any administration, nearly always opposes congressionally mandated initiatives.

I am reminded of the Bush administration's vociferous objections to the establishment of the Nunn-Lugar program. And also to the establishment of the nonproliferation and disarmament fund which was a part of the Freedom bill.

In fact, I am quite confident that each and every Member here can point to examples of congressional initiatives which this and other administrations have opposed. It seems to me that if it is not their idea then it is not a good idea.

Permit me to explain why I think it is so important to direct that this program be established. The answer is quite simple.

It is clear that this administration wants to provide assistance to certain Central European countries. This administration has been trying to find a way for more than a year to make additional countries eligible for excess defense articles.

In fact, the administration recently briefed staff of the International Relations Committee about the President's fiscal year 1996 budget request for $100 million for military cooperation with Central European states. We want to work with the President to support that assistance.

But I want to make clear that we want that done in a proper framework. The establishment of a program under this provision provides a framework for the Committee on International Relations to carry out its fundamental oversight responsibilities. It will provide us a framework for accounting purposes. It will provide us a framework for hearing purposes. I don't know why any Member would oppose that provision.

One final point and it is a key one, let me be clear that although section 604 directs that the program be established it does not in any way, shape, or form, mandate that the President provide assistance to these countries. Not one penny is earmarked in this legislation. The decision to provide assistance under this program is left entirely up to the administration.

Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to defeat the Torrecelli amendment.

The Clerk announced the following pair:

On this vote:

Mr. Lewis of Georgia for, with Mr. McHugh against.

Mr. EVANS changed his vote from "aye" to "no."

Ms. HARMAN, Mr. NADLER, and Mr. COOLEY changed their vote from "no" to "aye."

So the amendment was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The CHAIRMAN. Under a previous order of the House, it is now in order to consider the amendment of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON].

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. SKELTON

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

"(5) The number, types, and costs of NATO armed forces that would be required to defend the country and the number, types, and costs of United States Armed Forces that would be required as part of such a NATO force.

"(6) Whether the United States is prepared to provide a nuclear guarantee to the country.

"(7) The likelihood that the country may become involved in disputes or armed conflict with neighboring countries in the region."

The CHAIRMAN. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON] will be recognized for 1 minute, and a Member opposed will be recognized for 1 minute.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON].

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, my amendment would add a section to 604 requiring the President to assess the number, types, and costs of NATO armed forces that would be required to defend the country and the number, types, and costs of U.S. Armed Forces; also whether the United States is prepared to provide a nuclear guarantee to the country; and also the likelihood that the country may become involved in disputes or armed conflict in neighboring countries in that region.

I would hope that the majority will accept this amendment. We have discussed it.

The CHAIRMAN. Does any Member seek time in opposition?

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, the majority is prepared to accept the gentleman's amendment to title VI regarding NATO. The information requested from the administration will be useful to the committee and the Congress in determining just how fast and under what circumstances NATO should be expanded.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON].

The amendment was agreed to

The CHAIRMAN. Under a previous order of the House today, it is in order for the consideration of the amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. ENGEL].

AMENDMENT, AS MODIFIED, OFFERED BY MR. ENGEL

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Chairman, pursuant to the previous order, I offer an amendment, as modified.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ENGEL: Page 23, strike line 12 and insert the following:

"(c) ADDITIONAL EXCEPTIONS.—

"(1) EXCEPTION FOR AUTHORIZATION BY LAW.—

Page 23, after line 17, insert the following new paragraph:

"(2) EXCEPTION FOR NATO OPERATIONS.— Subsection (a) shall not apply in the case of a proposed placement of any element of the armed forces in an operation conducted by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

"(d) ADDITIONAL EXCEPTIONS.—

Page 31, after line 14, insert the following new paragraph:

"(2) EXCEPTION FOR NATO OPERATIONS.— Subsection (b) shall not apply in the case of a proposed placement of any element of the armed forces in an operation conducted by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Mr. GILMAN (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

□ 1320

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York [Mr. ENGEL] is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Chairman, I have been troubled by the fact that this bill would prohibit U.S. troops from serving under a military commander from a NATO country. The NATO alliance is very, very, important and I think that that is really not what ought to be.

This amendment, and I thank the chairman of the committee, goes a step in the direction not quite as far as I would like it to go, but needless to say it goes a step in the right direction in saying that U.S. troops would be able to serve under a military commander of NATO, in a NATO operation.

I think that at a time when we are talking about expanding NATO we ought to respect it.

I wanted to say, Mr. Chairman, that the process really is terrible, it is terrible because we have to operate under this majority-imposed ridiculous 10-hour constraint and it is terrible, frankly, because some people on this side of the aisle were unhelpful and less than frank with me in terms of helping me to bring my amendment for a vote. However, in the 10 or so seconds I have left, I want to say that the chairman has tried his best and I appreciate the fact he has worked with me to bring this amendment forward.

If we did not have something like this, we could not have had D-day, fought World War I or II or Desert Storm, and that is why I think the amendment is a step in the right direction.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. JOHNSON] for a colloquy.

(Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. In view of the tremendous progress toward establishing democratic political institutions and market economies made by the Baltic States and their keen interests in NATO memberships, I want to clarify my understanding that this bill in no way compromises their opportunity for future NATO membership.

It is my understanding that today's bill includes language recognizing the transformation toward economic, political, and military reform in Poland, the Czech Republic, Slovakia, and Hungary. These states have taken the necessary steps toward democratic reforms and I support the recognition of their efforts and continued U.S. assistance.

Mr. GILMAN. The gentlewoman is absolutely correct.

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. I thank the gentleman.

The expansion of NATO will foster continued economic growth and political stability in these regions. Moreover, the declining defense budgets of European and American forces necessitate expansion of the NATO security umbrella and the military cooperation it fosters.

It is also my understanding that this bill authorizes the President to designate "other European countries emerging from communist domination" who might receive assistance. Title VI of H.R. 872 specifically designates the Baltic States of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania as eligible to be considered for future NATO membership. These countries will be required to continue to develop their democratic political structures, market economies, and military reforms while contributing to the security of the North Atlantic area.

To date, the Baltic States have made significant progress in these areas. Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania all have progressed toward democratic institutions by adopting Western-style constitutions and holding free and fair elections. In addition, these states have moved toward a market economy by following tight fiscal and monetary policies, creating strong currencies, and moving toward privatization of housing, small businesses, and industry.

Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania also constitute the Baltic Peacekeeping Battalion. This force is currently receiving assistance from the U.S. Military and should be operational for security and mutual defense by 1996. As members of the Partnership of Peace, these states hope to maintain cooperation in the areas of defense and peacekeeping while adopting NATO military hardware standards.

Further, the Baltic States have been admitted to the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe [CSCE] and the United Nations. Besides being members of the International Monetary Fund [IMF] and the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development [EBRD], the Baltic States hope soon to be members of the European Union [EU], with which they have free-trade agreements.

I am pleased with the language of H.R. 872 regarding the expansion of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. This provides the United States a historic opportunity to ensure future regional security by taking appropriate actions now. We can no longer adhere to lines drawn during the cold war. NATO expansion and admissions will lend stability to the entire region, promote U.S. interests, and provide security against a possible resurgence of nationalism.

I thank the gentleman from New York for entering into this colloquy with me and am glad that we were able to clarify this important issue.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, the majority is prepared to accept the gentleman's amendment to title VI regarding NATO.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment, as modified, offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. ENGEL].

The amendment as modified was agreed to.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The minority leader is recognized for 3 minutes.

(Mr. GEPHARDT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in disappointment and sorrow that this bill which I think is terribly ill-advised will be passed by our House of Representatives.

I have served in this House for 18 years and I have witnessed the fiercest debates on both domestic and foreign policy. But I have seen that even though we have differed sometimes on foreign and defense policy, that for all the time that I have been here and before, this has been a country, this has been a House of Representatives that could find its way to support a bipartisan internationalist foreign and defense policy for our country.

I think back to the 1920's when there were isolationists in both parties, but America finally rejected isolationism and fought World War II, and after World War II came together in the greatest act of compassion in the world, and sensibility, and supported the Marshal Plan. Republicans and Democrats together.

We formed the United Nations, whereas in the early part of the century we decided we did not want the League of Nations and backed out of the world after World War II and in a bipartisan way we created a multilateral action for world peace.

After the Marshal Plan and the United Nations, we fought a cold war for 45 years, and together, Republicans, Democrats, Americans, we stayed involved as the leader of this world and rejected isolationism, rejected pulling back into our borders, rejected the idea that we could be self-sufficient, alone in this world.

The crowning achievement of these years was no matter how much we squabbled about our internal domestic policies, when it came to the shores of the United States we came together, and we decided together with the American people what our policy would be.

I believe that if this bill passes today we put all of that history, all of that partnership, and all of that progress at risk.

When you try to politicize the actions of the United Nations and our relationship with the United Nations, when you strain to reinvent a cold war that no longer exists, when you politicize NATO and who should be in NATO, and who should be out, and who should decide it, when you politicize the decisions in NATO between the Congress and the President, and when you politicize arms control and try to reinvent nostalgically a weapon system that may have been appropriate 10, 15 years ago but is not appropriate to the threats we meet today, then you put at risk all of that progress, all of that achievement which is the crowning achievement of our country.

Theodore Roosevelt once said we have no choice, we the people of the United States, as to whether we shall play a great part in the world. That has been decided for us by fate, by the march of events. All that we can decide is whether we play it well, or ill.

My friends in the House, I think if this bill passes, we will play it ill and not well.

This bill is not about campaigns and about pollsters and what may achieve some more votes or some more popularity among some in the country or in the world. It is about our conscience. It is about our achievement together of a foreign and defense policy that has made the American people secure. It is not about campaigns. It is about our conscience, and if we allow that conscience to be dictated by opinion polls, if we allow it to be bought and sold for votes, then God help this Congress and God help this United States of America.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the majority leader, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARMEY].

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, yes, this has been an important bill. It has been an important debate.

It has not been the most important bill, nor the most important debate on this Nation's role in protecting the peace and freedom and dignity of nations as well as ourselves across the globe. In the 10 years I have been here, I have seen more exciting debate. I have seen more fitful differences of opinion. I have seen more important and more immediate and more pressing issues with extraordinarily more sharply divided and heartfelt differences of opinion. The debate we had for so many years over Nicaragua, for example, comes to mind.

It has been a strange debate. People have been lining up in positions that we have not been accustomed to seeing them in over these past few years.

There is no need to hyperbolize this. This is not this Congress' last word. This is not the last word on defense of this session of Congress. There will be a defense authorization bill later.

What is this bill about today within this contract period? It's a course correction. It is a statement by this Congress that, yes, we, too, have heard the voices of the American people. These voices have said it is necessary to this Nation and to this world for this Nation to have a strong, independent, and able defense—first and foremost of its own national interest and then also, and importantly, the interest of peace and freedom across the globe. It is important that this Nation's strong defense be deployed when necessary in support of our NATO allies—and even to the U.N. peacekeeping efforts—but they must be deployed in a balanced, thoughtful way, and never, never when the interests of this Nation, nor the safety and security of this Nation's troops, are made subservient to some other cause.

It is a mid-course correction that recognizes that this Nation is and must be the world's champion for democracy, the world's guardian against tyrants, in concert with alliance with the United Nations at times, NATO at times, and other nations in the world and other theaters in the world.

It is a bill that says this Nation has a duty even in the post-cold-war era to recognize new and different kinds of threats and to be ready and able to change deployment schemes.

This is a good bill. It is a bill that has enjoyed the jurisdiction of three of our most important committees. It has had thoughtful debate. It has had thoughtful markup. It does deserve our thoughtful consideration, and it does deserve our vote.

I am saddened to see even the intimidation by anybody in the debate that this is a political effort. This is a serious effort and an effort that has commanded the serious attention of the people on those committees that have taken their most serious professional commitment to the task. Their work product needs to be respected. Their motives need to be understood to be decent and honorable motives. The product is important to reaffirm Congress' standing with the American people, for us to say to America at this time, "Yes, we agree, and we understand what you have told us." The Nation has gone too far in the direction of globalism and has lost sight of its essential footing, and we intend to correct that before we go on to the larger task of this year's defense authorizations and appropriations bills.

I want to give my best regards to and appreciation for all three of the committees of jurisdiction. I want to thank everybody who has participated in the debate. I want to appreciate everybody for their different point of view at times, and ask my colleagues, vote for this product, reaffirm our standing with the American people.

Mrs. COLLINS of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, in the words of our former President, here we go again. Believe it or not, after spending billions of dollars on a defense system with questionable results, the Republicans are now asking that we immediately build up a new arsenal to fend off who? Darth Vader? The star wars missile defense system made a modicum of sense when we were worried that the Soviet Union would launch missiles against us. But now, with the Soviet Union disintegrated and no other significant long-range ballistic missile threat existing, I cannot fathom why we should direct millions of Federal dollars toward this far-out defense system.

Thousands of families in my congressional district desperately need improved schools, housing, job training, and so forth. Over half of the public school buildings in Chicago were built before World War II and 15 percent were built before the turn of the century. And yet there is no funding for our children, our future? Mr. Speaker, I simply cannot accept the whimsy explanations offered by the other side of the aisle for promoting this over-the-top star wars system.

Even worse, Mr. Chairman, is that this bill calls for the reestablishment of the budget firewalls between defense and domestic spending. This means that should we one day realize that our priorities are completely distorted, our hands will be tied. Should we one day regret that we are spending billions of dollars to fight off fictional foes that never materialize, we will be hamstrung. When we finally take a look around and realize that teenagers are being shot in the streets, families are working full time and still aren't able to climb out of poverty and young children are attending pitifully under-funded schools with almost no chance to afford a college education, it will simply be too bad. We will not be able to redirect our billion dollar star wars budget to here at home where it is needed the most.

And finally, Mr. Chairman, this bill is heading directly for a Presidential veto because it completely destroys our current military operation system which allows the President to respond quickly to threatening situations. I urge my colleagues to join me in rejecting this ill-prepared bill and voting against H.R. 7.

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Chairman, passage of the Durbin, Lipinski, Gilman, Knollenberg amendment will encourage stability in Central Europe. As written, H.R. 7 mentions only the visegrad nations. We need to make it clear that other European countries emerging from communist domination should receive assistance and be welcomed into NATO when they meet appropriate standards.

Expressing an interest in having these countries join NATO one day will create stability and provide for the growth of democracy and economic prosperity. We will be encouraging these countries to expedite the promotion of democratic principles within their respective governments. It follows that a less volatile political environment will provide fertile ground for foreign investors.

With the end of the cold war, the United States is the largest single investor in this part of the world. Our investment creates employment and encourages stability and the strengthening of democracy.

By assisting our friends in Central Europe, we will bring continued stability and prosperity in Western Europe, and thus secure United States interests in all of Europe.

Mr. FAZIO of California. Mr. Chairman: Yesterday the House of Representatives reversed course on resurrecting the star wars anti-missile defense system, demonstrating clearly how out of step the Republican contract is with the views of the American public. This misguided effort to further bankrupt our defense coffers with wasteful spending simply reflects failed policies of the past rather than a fresh vision for the future.

Little acknowledgement is given in this measure for the changing world view we face and the types of regional conflicts likely to arise. With the end of the cold war we need to reevaluate the role of the United States as a world leader and the types of alliances that will support our efforts abroad. This bill chooses to relinquish our involvement with strategically important allies that in the past have fostered political and economic as well as military cooperation. An unfounded fear of United Nations control of American forces belies the fact that since World War I the President has only on occasion allowed purely operational control—not military command—of U.S. troops by a foreign commander.

Now more than ever the United States has an obligation and an opportunity to promote peace and democracy world-wide. This effort to hamstring and second guess the President's authority as Commander in Chief is not only short-sighted but dangerous. Asking the President to jump through hoops in order to execute vital military actions diminishes the U.S. stature as a world power and jeopardizes the effectiveness of our foreign policy.

Times have changed and a return to isolationism and a star-based missile defense system is a return to foreign policy based on fear rather than readiness. Let us take advantage of the fall of the Soviet Union to make the kind of changes which prepare us against the rede-fined threats that realistically may occur. Allowing Congress to undermine the President's position as world leader subjects us to the kind of divisiveness that makes effective foreign policy decision-making impossible. While not every foreign policy decision may be universally supported, the current checks and balances serve adequately to preserve our ability to act responsibly when needed.

Now that we have shown the foresight not to once again take the path to frivolous defense spending with the reinvention of the star wars missile defense system, let us also reject a return to isolationist policy centered on imaginary fears and insecurity. Our true national security interest lies in our ability to assert our leadership and to focus our defense dollars on combat readiness. To be successful in dealing with the end of the cold war, we need to look to the future—not to the past.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to voice my strong support for the provisions of the pending legislation which squarely addresses the issue of NATO expansion. At the outset let me dispel the notion that this section would somehow hamstring the administration's foreign policy—assuming it has one. Nothing in the National Security Revitalization Act mandates NATO membership for any country or group of countries. Changes in the membership of NATO are determined on the basis of consensus among the Alliance's member states as stipulated under article X of the North Atlantic Treaty, a point reaffirmed in the pending legislation and known to Members on both sides of the aisle.

The crux of the matter is how best to consolidate and build upon the fundamental political changes which have occurred in many of the countries of central Europe, the Baltics, and some of the New Independent States of the former Soviet Union. On the security front, a veritable no-man's-land has emerged between Germany and Russia following the demise of the Warsaw Pact, and the ensuing moves toward democracy and market economy by many in the region.

The Clinton administration, like the one before it, has been slow to move to fill this vacuum. Mr. Chairman, this has been a source of great consternation to the emerging democracies of the region, who rightly view it as a source of potential instability. I think my colleagues would agree that the Partnership for Peace initiative, launched by the administration a year ago, has failed to fill this void.

The National Security Revitalization Act provides a reasonable framework for addressing these concerns consistent with U.S. interests in ensuring stability in Europe. It lists a variety of criteria, such as respect for democratic principles and human rights enshrined in the Helsinki Final Act, against which to evaluate the suitability of prospective candidates for NATO membership. In addition, it establishes a program to provide the emerging democracies with the necessary tools to facilitate their transition to full NATO membership, which, as I pointed out earlier, will ultimately be up to the current members to decide.

Given the broad range of our political, economic, and security interests in Europe, strengthening new free markets and democracies in that region benefits the United States. Two of the most prominent members of the foreign policy establishment, Henry Kissinger and Zbigniew Brzezinski, are ardent supporters of the timely expansion of NATO.

Kissinger sees the existing vacuum as a threat not only NATO cohesion but the very existence of NATO as a meaningful institution. "NATO expansion," he observed, "represents a balancing of two conflicting considerations: the fear of alienating Russia against the danger of creating a vacuum in central Europe * * *." "A wise policy," he counsels, "would proceed with membership for the Visegrad countries [Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic, and Slovakia] and reject a Russian veto." Dr. Kissinger concluded, "NATO cannot long survive if the borders it protects are not threatened while it refuses to protect the borders of adjoining countries that do feel threatened."

Brzezinski recently urged NATO to formally declare its "criteria for expansion and indicate which countries appear to meet them. This would end the counterproductive debates with Russia over whether NATO should expand. The longer this step is delayed, the more vociferous Moscow's objections are likely to be."

Mr. Chairman, this is precisely the purpose of title VI of the National Security Revitalization Act.

Rather than dodging the issue of NATO expansion, as it has largely done to date, the Clinton administration, should move on the membership issue before more time is lost. But that requires leadership. We must seize upon today's opportunities which could be gone tomorrow. A steady and deliberate course of action is one thing, obfuscation, which has characterized the Clinton administration's approach to date is another.

Russia, perhaps sensing a certain timidity within the administration, has sought to block NATO expansion. It is instructive to recall that the Soviet Union vehemently opposed German membership in NATO in 1955 and attempted to deny unified Germany's continued participation in the Alliance. A democratic Russia has nothing to fear from a defensive alliance founded on democratic principles. It would be foolhardy and dangerous, as Henry Kissinger rightly pointed out, to give Russia a veto over NATO expansion. And, as Dr. Brzezinski observed, failure to act now will only make matters worse.

Our approach to NATO expansion is steady and deliberate, not the sketchy and indecisive path proposed by some.

Some are critical of the fact that four countries—Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic, and Slovakia—are mentioned as leading candidates for NATO membership at some point in the near future. This reference is a testament to the great strides which these countries have, in fact, made since the fall of communism. It neither ensures their membership nor precludes others from joining. It does not, as some claim, arbitrarily lock in advantages from some countries. Instead of fostering complacency in these countries as some warn, the reference should serve as an incentive for continued progress as those named should be subjected to more, not less, scrutiny as they move toward membership in NATO. The reference is simply an acknowledgement of the fact that reform in the region is uneven. Rather than serving as a discouragement, this should spur others to redouble their efforts if they are seriously interested in pursuing NATO membership.

Mr. Chairman, my endorsement of an expanded NATO should not be read as a failure to understand that each of the countries considered here has residual problems with its transition to democracy. On the contrary, I believe that NATO membership, and the integration and cooperation with Western countries it entails, increases the opportunities for addressing outstanding concerns. There are, in fact, specific areas where I believe the United States should weight in to seek further reform. As Chairman of the Helsinki Commission, I am very much aware of need for further progress in these and other countries in the region. I believe the Czech citizenship law, for example, is deeply flawed and should be amended; the newest Slovak government has signaled in word its commitment to continuing reform, but has yet to follow through in many specific areas where reform has been slow or altogether lacking thus far, and the Hungarian government would do well to lead by example in improving its relations with many of its neighbors.

Mr. Chairman, nothing in the pending legislation diminished the fact that each candidate will be individually judged on its own merits on a case-by-case basis.

It is also instructive to recall that this is not the first expansion of NATO. In 1952 Greece and Turkey acceded to the North Atlantic Treaty joining the 12 NATO countries in common security system. The Federal Republic of Germany joined the Alliance in 1955 and in 1982, Spain also became a member of NATO. Besides its contribution to collective security in Europe, NATO has served as an important vehicle for bolstering democracy among its members as these cases demonstrate.

Finally, critics assert that the course we have proposed could lead to instability in Europe. Mr. Chairman, one thing is clear: continued ambiguity and foot-dragging will not enhance European security but will, as Kissinger and Brzezinski point out, be counterproductive. The National Security Revitalization Act, provides a much needed action plan for seizing new opportunities as NATO and its members face new challenges.

Given the implications for our own national security, the future of NATO demands our immediate attention.

Mr. LAZIO of New York. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPRATT].

This bill does not actually authorize any specific missile defense system. But this amendment seeks to tie our hands despite whatever technologies may develop. If there is a problem with a particular missile defense system, the normal authorization and appropriation process is the proper forum for this type of program restriction.

I am personally opposed to committing, at the present time, to a space-based antiballistic missile defense system because we are not at a point technologically where such a system makes sense. But it does make sense to continue doing the research necessary to develop this important defense option. I am committed to making the necessary funding investment to determine the feasibility of such a program.

This amendment is too restrictive and raises concerns about whether this option could be even explored. Congress needs to be very careful that we do not act in a precipitous way which would preclude this research option.

Therefore, I urge my colleagues to reject the Spratt amendment.

Mr. FRANKS of Connecticut. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support to Congress reaffirming its commitment to a strong national defense.

The world is a changing place, Mr. Chairman. If you had told me 15 years ago that the Soviet Union would be dissolved and the Berlin Wall would vanish by the 1990's, I certainly would have had trouble accepting your claims. However, as time passed on during the eighties, our late nemesis, the Soviet Union, eventually splintered and the Berlin Wall was reduced to dust. Since the Soviet Union has been disintegrated, we have discovered other situations and crises in the realm of foreign affairs. Within the last 4 years, there have been crises with nations such as Kuwait, Bosnia, Somalia, Haiti, Korea, and Rwanda which have required the aid, in one form or another, of the United States.

This example alone should serve as a reminder to my colleagues that our planet is in a constant state of evolution and flux. Events happen which cause the world to be sometimes turbulent and volatile and it is up to our Nation to take the lead. With this in mind, it is important that our country stay in its position of strength and leadership within the world community while protecting our own national interests.

Mr. Chairman, I believe H.R. 7, the National Security Revitalization Act, is a measure which our body should adopt to achieve these purposes.

The National Security Revitalization Act has been written to refocus the priorities of our military so it may keep in step with a world that is constantly changing.

H.R. 7 would direct the leaders of our Nation to address questions and situations which should have been dealt with during the past several years. For example, H.R. 7 would direct that the Department of Defense establish a comprehensive review of American defense needs by commissioning a bipartisan panel of independent defense experts to assess our Nation's military readiness, process and status of modernization, force structure, and strategic vision. Mr. Chairman, this commission will play a most essential role in maintaining our security needs which are so vital to our Nation's well-being.

This bill would also reassert our Nation's commitment to an effective national missile system to having the Department of Defense cultivate and create mature ballistic missile defense systems in the future. American intelligence officers such as Lt. Gen. James Clapper of the Defense Intelligence Agency and Adm. William Stuedeman, the Acting Director of the Central Intelligence Agency have alerted Congress to the possibility of a rogue regime possessing the capability of attacking the United States with ballistic missiles toward the end of this decade. With effective antimissile defenses, I believe we can ensure basic protection for the citizens of America. Mr. Chairman, there may be chronic opponents of defense spending who will complain that we are trying to create star wars II by implementing this part of H.R. 7. This is not true. What we are trying to do is build upon the technology we have now and the vision of Clinton Defense Secretary Perry who claims we can create a ground-based missile system by the end of the decade at a reasonable price over 5 years. I believe the Department of Defense should pursue this objective and I would support the Department's efforts.

H.R. 7 also addresses new guidelines for restrictions in regard to U.N. operations. In the past, the American Ambassador to the United Nations would make commitments to United Nations without either the House or Senate being consulted. Mr. Chairman, with H.R. 7, we state that before we send our troops under the command of the United Nations, the President must make it clear to both Houses that the U.N. operation is vital to our own interests, that the commander of the American forces be allowed to report to our own Nation's military authorities and decline to partake in actions which he may deem to be illegal, imprudent or beyond what the U.N. mission is supposed to do. Also, this bill also dictates that American forces will remain under American administrative command. Mr. Chairman, our troops have been trained by American commanders in the ways of American military procedure with the best American military equipment available. I feel that it is in the interests of our Nation, our soldiers, and even the U.N. operation to enact the certain amount of autonomy and the certain amount of legislative and executive responsibility as dictated by this bill.

I also want to point out that H.R. 7 would state that it should be the policy of the United States to include the former Soviet bloc nations Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic, and Slovakia as full members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization [NATO]. Mr. Chairman, by allowing these countries to join NATO, we will be able to help them to continue their maturing into full-fledged democracies.

Mr. Chairman, H.R. 7 is not the ultimate panacea in regard to our foreign affairs and defense matters, as we will have to continue debate and consideration of these matters in our authorization and appropriation bills. Rather, I feel that it is a responsible first step toward a sounder foreign policy and a sturdier defense policy in a constantly changing world. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 7 and oppose any amendments which can be deemed as weakening the bill.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Chairman, over the last several years, the world has changed dramatically, and with it, the role of the United States, as well as the activities required of the U.S. military to carry out that role. Since the breakup of the Soviet Union and the end of the cold war, United States defense policy has shifted its primary, concentrated focus to a widely dispersed number of potential threats. At the same time, peacekeeping operations have greatly increased. Since 1988, the United States has entered into 21 new peacekeeping missions compared to only 13 missions in the previous 40 years. In light of these dramatic changes, it is necessary to redefine U.S. defense and foreign policy.

In my view, H.R. 7 takes a sound and balanced approach to clarifying the new U.S. position in the world. It calls for a commission to evaluate U.S. defense needs and assess force structure, readiness, strategic vision, modernization, and personnel policies, requires the President to identify our national security interests before deploying United States troops, wisely restricts the ability of the Commander in Chief to place troops under foreign control or command, promotes the expansion of NATO to include fledgling democracies in Central and Eastern Europe, and encourages the deployment of a workable national missile defense system.

I would like to draw attention to the provision that prohibits U.S. troops from being under U.N. or foreign command. The measure is vital to our goal of maintaining the integrity of our military force. As Speaker Gingrich noted: "We invest a lot of money in the best command and control, the best communications and the best training in the world * * *. When you take a unit from that level of speed and effectiveness and you reduce it by putting them under the command of somebody who has never practiced the tempo and complexity of American operations, you are raising the risk of young Americans getting killed * * *."

The missile defense provisions in the bill have precipitated a significant amount of debate, and, I'm afraid, a fair amount of misunderstanding. The original language in the bill states that "it shall be U.S. policy to deploy at the earliest practical date an anti-ballistic missile system" to ensure the security of the United States. Last night, the House properly rejected an amendment offered by Representative EDWARDS that would have prohibited the Department of Defense from deploying a missile defense system that included space-based interceptors. It is bad policy for Congress to tie the hands of DOD before giving the agency the time to make recommendations to Congress on how best to protect the American people. By rejecting this amendment, Congress has allowed for the opportunity for an analysis of the effectiveness and costs of both ground- and space-based systems before mandating which one should be deployed.

I opposed another amendment, offered by Representative SPRATT, for largely the same reasons. The amendment requires that operational readiness and modernization of existing forces take fiscal priority over developing and deploying an effective theater missile defense. Modernization of defenses is absolutely necessary to maintain a reasonable level of readiness in the face of ever-improving offensive systems in regions of potential conflict, such as North Korea and Iraq. The Spratt amendment will tie the hands of our military in ensuring such readiness. Unfortunately, the Spratt amendment passed by a narrow margin of 218-212.

I should note that two important amendments were passed en bloc Wednesday night that I believe removed a flaw in an otherwise sound approach to national security. These amendments removed from H.R. 7 language that prohibits the use of defense funds to pay the cost of participating in the U.N. peacekeeping missions unless such action is specifically authorized by Congress. I believe this provision imposes unfair and counterproductive restrictions on the President as Commander in Chief, violating his constitutionally granted powers. In certain situations, I believe it has been in our interests to move from unilateral occupation to a U.N. operation. For example, at the end of this month it is my understanding that in Haiti the United States command will become a U.N. peacekeeping operation. We do not want to continue to occupy Haiti. The shift to the United Nation is in our national interest and gives us a way out. The Bereuter amendments remove language in the original bill that would have given the administration an incentive to maintain the unilateral U.S. mission instead of moving to a more sensible, cooperative effort with the United Nation. I am pleased that my colleagues on both sides of the aisle were able to come to agreement on this issue and eliminate this inadvertent but realistic effect of this bill.

In the end, I believe H.R. 7 successfully enhances the national security of the United States in a balanced and appropriate manner. It affirms our commitment to a strong, modern defense force and properly limits our role in United Nations operations. I commend Chairman SPENCE and Chairman GILMAN for their good work on this legislation.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, this Member would take this opportunity to explain the two Bereuter amendments to title V of H.R. 872, the National Security Restoration Act, that were accepted under unanimous consent during yesterday's debate.

The first of these amendments addresses concerns raised about section 508 of the bill. This amendment deletes language that would prohibit the President from spending Department of Defense funds on any operation that was authorized by the U.N. Security Council unless Congress specifically authorizes the use of funds for that purpose.

This body should know that section 508, as drafted, would be an extraordinary limitation on the President as Commander in Chief. This limitation has its origins in what many on our side of the aisle view as legitimate concerns about the judgment of the current Commander in Chief, but that does not, ipso facto, mean that this body should limit the prerogatives of the Commander in Chief. If enacted, this statute would limit the actions of any future administration—Republican and Democrat alike.

There is a need to separate our understandable frustration about some policy decisions made by this administration from the act of legislating restrictions.

Constitutional questions have been raised. Can the legislative branch limit the actions of the President as Commander in Chief by withholding funds until a specific authorization has been approved? for decades, Members on both sides of the aisle have complained about constitutional infringements through the War Powers Act and the Boland amendments. This body should be very careful about placing further limitations, however well intended.

This body needs to be aware that crises do occasionally occur when Congress is not in session. The President still must have the flexibility to act as Commander in Chief after this body has recessed.

Lastly, section 508 reflects a genuine and bipartisan indignation regarding the manner in which this administration went to the U.N. Security Council for approval of nonemergency peacekeeping operations in Haiti without coming to Congress for prior approval; nor did the Clinton administration come to Congress when they escalated the humanitarian operation in Somalia into a peace-enforcement operation. But we should remember that this provision is not central to the Contract With America.

Members on this side of the aisle should recall that section 508 is not a part of the contract document that many House Republicans signed. The important peacekeeping provisions of Contract With America deal with: maintaining U.S. command of U.S. troops; making sure the United States is no longer to be grossly exploited through exorbitant assessments; and ensuring that the United States reimbursed for all of incremental costs in our peacekeeping expenditures.

We should not permit the very good peacekeeping provisions in this legislation to be obscured by raising this an unnecessary constitutional question. Failing to address this issue would leave the administration with a legitimate excuse for challenging the constitutionality of this legislation and thereby justifying a Presidential veto.

The second amendment that was approved under unanimous consent addresses this Member's concern regarding the level of reimbursements that nations should receive for peacekeeping activities.

This Member raised the issue in committee, seeking at that time to set U.S. policy on this matter. While both majority and minority generally expressed sympathy for my concern, this Member was persuaded by the argument that it was not yet time to establish a new U.S. Government policy on reimbursement matters.

But the problem remains. It is only proper that Congress understand the full extent of the problem. Hence, the reporting requirement.

We know how much the United Nations pays nations who supply peacekeepers—slightly over $980 per month for enlisted, and around $1,300 for officers. It is also clear that some of the lesser developed nations that provide a higher proportion of the peacekeeping troops in many U.N. operations are paying their troops far less than this amount—sometimes less than 10 percent of the U.N. personnel payments—in other words a 1,000 percent mark up.

The personnel payments, of course, don't go to the individual soldiers—but, yes, you guessed it, to the treasury of the country sending that underpaid soldier.

It might be one thing if these nations were plowing their reimbursements back into their military to augment training. But this does not appear to be the case. Rather, it would seem that this is a case of take the money and run. This is a poor reason to be involved in peacekeeping operations.

We also have indications that the civilian managers and general-purpose police officers, international cops on the beat, attached to peacekeeping operations from some accounts are making obscene amounts of money—over $100,000 per year.

The International Relations Committee has heard tales, which I have reason to believe are accurate, of mid-level civilian employees making six figure salaries, with an extraordinary package of perks that would make even the most jaded individuals blush.

Regrettably, I have concluded that it is premature, in H.R. 7, to set U.S. policy on these issues until this body has the facts, but it is entirely appropriate to expect to receive the facts so that we can strenuously demand reforms. This amendment requires the Secretary of State to present these facts.

The United Nations probably may object to supplying some of this information. After all, some at the United Nations and certainly some member nation may find it to be in their interest to keep us in the dark as to how our peacekeeping dollars are being spent.

But the United States—indeed any nation—should be able to get such information from the United Nations.

Again, this amendment is a vehicle to require this information and to ask our Government to recommend the kind of reforms it will push in the United Nations or which we in the Congress can demand next year.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Chairman, I will vote against this bill because it infringes on the constitutional authority of the President to use the military command and control structure that is essential to our Nation's strategic interests.

The bill's provision prohibiting the President from deploying U.S. troops in peacekeeping operations without an explicit authorization by Congress for such purpose is unacceptable and quite possibly unconstitutional. Under such a provision, President Bush would not have been able to deploy troops and equipment to Operation Desert Storm, President Clinton would have been blocked from deploying troops to Kuwait in 1994 to stop an Iraqi threat, and even President Truman would have been prevented from sending troops to Korea in 1950. Such prohibitions would not have been in our strategic interest.

By dictating how the President should conduct foreign policy, the bill both micromanages U.S. actions and denies the President the flexibility needed in times of crisis.

In the post-cold-war world, it remains essential that the President retains his authority to establish command arrangements best suited to meet the needs of future operations. U.S. troops will always and ultimately be under U.S. command as per the Constitution. No Presidential action can change this fact. This bill undermines the power of the President as Commander in Chief, and I cannot support it.

Ms. BROWN of Florida. Mr. Chairman, H.R. 7 is bad legislation and should be defeated. In the stated opinion of DOD, H.R. 7 is "dangerous, wasteful, and unconstitutional." It is a Republican tactic to provide "defense welfare" for military contractors who seek lucrative Government contracts.

H.R. 7 is dangerous because it sacrifices American military readiness for star wars. It is a wasteful Republican effort to spend $30 to $40 billion on star wars at the price of military readiness. These billions of dollars should be spent to make life better for American families and for decreasing the deficit. H.R. 7 is a Republican boondoggle.

H.R. 7 is unconstitutional because it limits the ability of the President of the United States to fulfill his constitutional role as Commander in Chief of our military forces. It restricts his ability to utilize troops in a most effective manner by limiting the amount the United States can spend on operations with the United Nations. H.R. 7 cripples U.N. peacekeeping and destroys the idea of collective security. If H.R. 7 had been law during Desert Storm, America would have been prevented from successfully deploying necessary troops.

If America insists on spending countless billions on star wars at the expense of our troops, if America retreats from global economic and military cooperation, if America refuses to feed, educate, and house her own troops and citizens at risk—the children, the sick, and the elderly—a bankrupt America will fall into economic and social ruin.

For years, respected Members of Congress, such as former Congressman Charles Bennett who represented Jacksonville, have opposed funding for star wars. These Members believed that troop readiness was a top priority. Their efforts were focused on conventional warfare requirements and on providing all that was necessary for our troops to perform their duties with excellence.

Today it is shameful that many U.S. troops live in substandard housing and use food stamps because they cannot stretch their pay to cover even the most basic needs for their families. This does not contribute to military readiness.

We in Congress should demonstrate our interest in funding military programs that benefit our troops and our military families. We want our military dollars spent to keep our troops ready in every way.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to H.R. 7, the National Security Revitalization Act of 1995. While I am aware of the current fashion in the Congress to increase defense spending at the expense of our domestic programs, I am also mindful of my duty as a Member of Congress to act in the best interest of the people I represent and in the best interest of the U.S. Constitution I have sworn to uphold. This shortsighted and rushed legislation will not only try to resurrect cold war programs long not needed, but will endanger the delicate balance of domestic and defense spending.

The National Security Revitalization Act of 1995 that we are considering here today is completely out of balance. H.R. 7 seeks to isolate the United States by restricting America's role in peace keeping operations, and misguidedly redirects billions of dollars to a star wars missile defense system whose time passed with the end of the cold war. It would be an abdication of congressional responsibility if we support this legislation at the expense of our most important efforts to improve the quality of life for all Americans.

Mr. Chairman, there is no doubt that our military is by far among the world's best. This was demonstrated by our leadership of international forces during the war in the Gulf. Over the past 20 years, our military has undergone a massive undertaking to build a defense infrastructure which has allowed us to effectively provide an international show of strength.

While I believe that we must maintain a strong military presence in an era of low intensity global conflicts, I am an avid believer that a healthy balance must be reached between domestic and defense spending. The importance of striking this balance is especially true in light of recent world events such as the end of the cold war. Because of these changes in world politics, the United States is faced with an unprecedented opportunity to redirect funds to relieve problems here at home.

Contrary to the arguments that have been made by the supporters of H.R. 7, President Clinton has proposed a budget that reasonably addresses the defense needs of this Nation. President Clinton's fiscal year 1996 defense budget, which is strongly supported by the Pentagon, has two key initiatives: Enhancement of military readiness, and improvement of quality of life for our men and women in uniform and their families. The ironic truth about H.R. 7 is that it will actually weaken our national defense. The bill directs massive amounts of defense dollars to a star wars missile defense system that will certainly undermine the more legitimate funding goals outlined in the President's budget.

Mr. Chairman, I have always been in favor of a balanced approach to our domestic and foreign affairs interests, and the Constitution's separation of powers. H.R. 7 requires that U.S. Forces may not be placed under control of any foreign commander. Such actions would effectively end U.S. involvement in multilateral peacekeeping operations. This is contrary to the principle of separation of powers and the clear language of the Constitution. The Constitution permits the President as Commander in Chief of the U.S. Armed Forces the power to place U.S. Forces under the operational control of other nations' military leaders for United Nations operations.

Mr. Chairman, I think it is important for me to point out that under the current congressional leadership, U.S. policy has taken a direction that will adversely affect the essence of each and every one of our lives. The majority party's plan ignores quality of human life questions, and in order to finance additional military spending, we have been expected time and time again to sacrifice already substantially depleted health, housing, education, and employment budgets.

As opposed to spending billions of dollars to immunize American children, revitalize our urban centers, provide jobs to the jobless or homes for the homeless, this bill seeks to divert funds from these essential services to fund star wars and other unworkable initiatives. H.R. 7 is an essential part of the Republican strategy to force through a series of bills that will gut the chances for many Americans to live the American dream.

A review of the Contract With America's plan to slash domestic discretionary programs reveals that many programs serving the most needy will be cut. Legislation such as H.R. 7, would result in defense spending on Reagan era star wars gimmicks. This misdirection of funds would greatly harm the American people, the strength of our Nation's defense and the future of our Nation.

Mr. Chairman, in closing, I would like to say that while the pursuit of peace is a noble and necessary objective, it is no easy task—especially when certain Members of Congress are determined to promote antiquated notions left over from the cold war. This legislation clearly reflects the new majority's desire to sacrifice the domestic interests of the American people in pursuit of isolationism and star wars.

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 7, the National Security Revitalization Act. I think this legislation is an important step toward restoring America's reputation as a superpower. In addition, this legislation preserves our ability and reaffirms our intent to defend America's national security interests around the globe.

Mr. Chairman, I am especially glad that H.R. 7 includes language restricting the placement of U.S. troops under the control of foreign nationals acting on behalf of the United Nations. The language included in H.R. 7 is almost identical to a bill I introduced last year (H.R. 3334), and reintroduced again this year (H.R. 631).

I strongly believe this legislation is necessary in order to counter the Clinton administration's proposed policy directives that would allow U.S. military forces to be placed under foreign command, on a regular basis, for U.N. peacekeeping operations.

Mr. Chairman, the people in my district, especially the war veterans, demand that when we send our young men and women overseas to battle that they will do so under the American flag, not the blue helmet of the United Nations.

Some argue that this legislation will hamstring the President's ability to act as Commander in Chief. This is simply not true. My proposal, included in H.R. 7, requires the President to certify to Congress that such foreign operational control is necessary to protect vital national security interests of the United States. The President must provide Congress with a report setting forth the following: a description of the interest that requires placing U.S. troops under foreign operational control; the mission and objectives of the U.S. Armed Forces, and an estimate of the duration they will serve under such foreign operational control; the expected size and composition our forces involved; the cost of U.S. participation in the proposed operation; the precise command and control relationship between the U.S. forces and the United Nations; and the extent to which the U.S. forces will rely on non-U.S. military forces for security and self-defense and an assessment of the ability of those forces to provide adequate security to the U.S. forces involved.

In addition to being unconstitutional, Mr. Speaker, putting U.S. troops under U.N. control can be very dangerous as the Clinton administration learned in Somalia.

Last, I would include a letter I received from the commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, Mr. Allen F. "Gunner" Kent. His outstanding organization supports inclusion of my proposal in H.R. 7, as do millions of people across the country.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 7.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS
OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, DC, February 2, 1995.

Hon. JOHN T. DOOLITTLE,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. DOOLITTLE: On behalf of the 2.1 million members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U.S., I want to endorse your proposed legislation, H.R. 631 which would limit the placing of U.S. military forces under command of foreign officers acting for the United Nations.

At our 95th National Convention last August, this issue was considered and the delegates overwhelmingly approved VFW Resolution 437 opposing U.S. forces under foreign command. I have enclosed a copy of this resolution for your information and use.

Also I would urge you and the Congress to examine Presidential Decision Directive 25 to determine if Constitutional authority has been misused and if so, to find an appropriate remedy.

If the VFW can be of any assistance or support in moving H.R. 631 to passage, please feel free to contact our Washington Office Executive Director Bob Currie at the earliest opportunity.

Sincerely,
ALLEN F. "GUNNER" KENT,
Commander in Chief.

Enclosure.

RESOLUTION NO. 437—OPPOSE U.S. FORCES
UNDER FOREIGN COMMAND

Whereas, Presidential Decision Directive 25 states as follows: "The President retains and will never relinquish command authority over U.S. forces. On a case by case basis, the President will consider placing appropriate U.S. forces under the operational control of a competent U.N. Commander for specific U.N. operations authorized by the Security Council;

Whereas, if U.S. military forces were to be placed under foreign command (as they now are in Macedonia) they could be removed from their primary missions of defending the United States, its citizens and its territory;

Whereas, by permitting U.S. military forces to operate under the orders of any international organization, these forces could find themselves executing military operations which are not in the national interest of the United States; and

Whereas, we believe the American people will not support the deployment of American soldiers, sailors, airmen, Marines and Coast Guardsmen in dangerous, life-threatening missions that do affect the security of the United States, its citizens or its territory; Now, therefore, be it:

Be it resolved, by the 95th National Convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, that we oppose any play or directive placing U.S. military forces under the command of foreign military officers including those who are operating exclusively under orders from the United Nations; and

Be it further resolved, that Congress be urged to examine Presidential Decision Directive 25 to determine if any constitutional authority has been misused, and if so, to find an appropriate remedy.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, recent events in Somalia and elsewhere have raised serious questions about when, if ever, members of the United States Armed Forces should be commanded not by fellow Americans but by officials of the United Nations. The surrender of command and control may set a precedent for further diminution of American sovereignty, at a time when most Americans believe that too many decisions affecting their lives are already made by unaccountable institutions in faraway places.

I share these concerns. They are reflected and addressed in sections 401 and 402 of the National Security Revitalization Act, relating to command and control of U.S. forces.

Let us make some crucial distinctions.

First, this legislation would not interfere with U.S. participation in multinational military efforts. Such efforts have a long and honorable history in U.S. foreign policy. For instance, in World War I some 2 million Americans served under the ultimate direction of a great French general, Marshall Ferdinand Foch. In World War II, American units worked under British commanders in Italy, in Normandy, and in the China-Burma-India theatre of operations. In the post-war era several multilateral peacekeeping operations, including some under United Nations auspices, have included U.S. Armed Forces under the temporary and limited operational control of foreign officers. It is a dramatically different matter however, to take the step that has been the subject of recent discussion: that the United States should contribute its soldiers to a standing U.N. army whose commanders, whatever their own national origins, are part of the command structure of the United Nations itself.

It is important to note that sections 401 and 402 allow the President substantial flexibility to act in the national interest. They do not absolutely prohibit the President from placing U.S. forces under the command or control of foreign commanders in U.N. operations, or even under the command and control of the United Nations itself. Rather, they simply require the President to explain the necessity of such arrangements, and to assure the Congress that United States officers involved in the operation will retain sufficient authority to protect their forces and to prevent them from being used illegally or inconsistently with the terms of the U.S. mandate. The requirement of advance certification by the President may be waived in an emergency. Finally, the requirements of sections 401 and 402 did not apply at all to specifically authorized by law. So, in effect, Congress can waive the reporting requirements of sections 401 and 402 whenever it discerns an emergency that makes this prudent.

The role of U.S. troops in U.N. operations is steadily expanding. A year ago we had 15 troops in the post-Desert Storm U.N. peacekeeping operation in Iraq, 29 in the Western Sahara, 647 in former Yugoslavia, 33 in Cambodia, and almost 2,000 in Somalia. Some of these operations have prevented bloodshed. The Somalia operation, which began as a genuine peacekeeping effort, was somehow allowed to become a war. It then claimed the lives of 26 Americans.

Sections 401 and 402 achieve a balance between the need to protect U.S. sovereignty and the need to give the President the necessary flexibility for handling international crises. Section (a) creates a presumption against the legality of placing any elements of our Armed Forces under the command or control of a foreign national acting on behalf of the United Nations. But this presumption is overcome if the President invokes the certification process that is announced in section (b), and for which section (d) gives the substantive requirements. The President is given 15 days before the start of the operation in question to certify to Congress that the operation is necessary to protect our national security interests, and that the arrangements of the operation are such that U.S. sovereignty will be protected. Furthermore, as I noted a moment ago, even this reasonable requirement does not apply when the operation in question is already authorized by law, or when the President certifies that he is acting in response to an emergency that precludes compliance with the 15-day rule just mentioned. In an emergency situation, the certification requirement detailed in section (d) is postponed until 48 hours after U.S. participation in the U.N. operations begins.

Section 402 amends the United Nations Participation Act so that U.S. participation in Security Council "special agreements," as set forth in chapters VI and VII of the U.N. Charter, is subject to the same certification requirements as in section 401.

There must be clear rules governing the exposure of U.S. service personnel to mortal danger. Such exposure should be related to U.S. interests, and the extent and urgency of those interests should be determined by officials who are accountable to the people of the United States. This is not just the principle of sovereignty; it is also the principle of democracy. Sections 401 and 402 are designed to uphold these principles. They would prohibit commitments of U.S. troops only in cases where the President of the United States cannot or will not articulate to the Congress the justifications and the limitations of such commitments.

At U.N. headquarters in New York City, the flags of all the member nations fly proudly over First Avenue. No national flag is higher than any other, signifying that despite diversities of power, wealth, and territory, the principle of sovereignty means that every nation may deal equally with every other under international law.

One flag in front of the U.N. building does fly higher than the national flags: the flag of the United Nations itself. This signifies that in joining together to form the United Nations, the sovereign member states have recognized that the ideals of human rights, peace, and cooperation for which the United Nations stands may in some circumstances transcend national sovereignty itself.

Even a limited surrender of sovereignty, however, is fraught with risks. One of those risks is that this great international body whose flag flies higher than the others may someday cease to be the instrument of its member nations and become instead master of their policies—and increasingly of their destinies.

American participation in multinational military operations is, has been, and will remain a sound policy option for particular cases. But American participation in the standing armies of another power—especially a power that claims to supersede that of the United States—is an abdication of our sovereignty and a threat to the democratic values that our sovereignty ultimately protects.

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. BUNNING) having assumed the chair, Mr. LINDER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 7), to revitalize the national security of the United States, pursuant to House Resolution 83, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment to the amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole? If not, the question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. SKELTON

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit with instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. SKELTON. Absolutely.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. SKELTON moves to recommit the bill, H.R. 7, to the Committee on National Security with instructions to report the same back to the House forthwith with the following amendment:

Strike out the last section of title II (relating to the ballistic missile defense as a component of military readiness) and insert the following:

Section 204. Readiness Certification.

Of the total amount of funds appropriated or otherwise made available for the Department of Defense for fiscal year 1996, the amount obligated for national missile defense programs may not exceed the amount made available for national missile defense programs for fiscal year 1995 until the Secretary of Defense certifies to the Congress that the armed forces are properly sized, equipped, housed, and structured and are ready to carry out the assigned missions as required by the national military strategy.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON] for 5 minutes.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise with this motion to recommit with instructions with a heavy heart. I do so with the background, Mr. Speaker, of having stood with my friends on the other side of the aisle, lo, those many times in the cause of national defense. I stood with those on the other side of the aisle concerning the Nicaragua crisis. I stood with those on the other side of the aisle in the gulf war issue that was so important to our then President George Bush and to the American people and to freedom throughout this globe.

I find, though, there are parts of this bill I would individually vote for; the part concerning the command and control of American troops is to be commended, but the weight of this bill overall, Mr. Speaker, causes me to offer this motion to recommit.

This motion to recommit is in favor of the troops. This morning we had the sad news of 4 soldiers giving their lives in training in Eglin Air Force Base in the Ranger course. The job that we call those in uniform to do is a dangerous job. This is a motion to stand by those young men and those young women from whom we ask so much and who should be given the very best of our efforts.

Mr. Speaker, this is the Montgomery/Skelton language that states that the Secretary of Defense must certify to us, to us the Congress of the United States, that the Armed Forces are properly sized, equipped, housed, structured, and filled with readiness to do the job that the Commander in Chief and our national interest requires of them. This is putting the troops first. This is saying to those young men and women in uniform, "We care for you. We want to stand by you."

This does not cut off national missile defense programs, it allows for the year 1996 to have a $400 million program, where we make sure that those troops are ready and able to do their job.

My case was made by my friends on the other side of the aisle when they said that we are not ready. My friend from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM] spoke eloquently of the need for readiness. That was my speech. That was my point. That is what we need to do to stay ready. We never know how much. It was Winston Churchill who once said that war comes very suddenly. This past year we came within an eyelash of having armed conflict three times, once involving North Korea, once involving Haiti, and one with Saddam Hussein. These young men and young women we send in harm's way should be fully ready and every penny should go toward their training, readiness, their quality of life. We should not, as we have seen, have young men and young women on the rifle range, who do not have enough bullets to fire, cancel training so that they are not able to fulfill their duties.

In Europe we learned just a few weeks ago that the Army had taken from its training account in Europe $300 million to put in the maintenance account. That is a lack of readiness. We need to pay attention to that and not offer these dollars up to something in excess of what we can fairly spend.

I ask everyone here, Mr. Speaker, to vote for this motion to recommit. It will send the message to the young men and young women we are so proud to call Americans, those in uniform that "we want you to get the best training, the best possible advantage should you have to walk onto that battle field." And if there is a lack of training, if there is someone that is injured or sadly loses his or her life because of lack of readiness, let it not be a reflection of today, let us stand with them, let us work with them, let us vote to recommit this with the instructions on the Montgomery-Skelton language. It is the least we can do for those fine young Americans.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman from South Carolina opposed to the motion?

Mr. SPENCE. Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to defeat this motion and vote "yes" on final passage of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, last evening we voted twice on this particular amendment. It was defeated on both occasions. We need not say anything more about that.

I want, just for a minute, Mr. Speaker, to tell this body that in referring to this legislation we are responding, as I have said earlier, to the concerns of the American people. In putting together this contract, we listened to the American people and the concerns they have concerning a number of issues, and then we proceeded to put those things down in the form of a contract.

The American people, for instance, are concerned about the state of our defenses. They think we have cut too much from our defense, readiness is suffering, modernization needs to be fixed, a number of things. We are responding to those concerns because we entitled this legislation the revitalization or the restoration of national security.

The people of this country are outraged when they find that we have no defense against ballistic missiles, protecting them and their families from certain death. They want to know who is responsible for leaving them unprotected. But most of all they want it fixed, and we are trying to fix that for them in this contract, this legislation.

Again, I repeat, we are responding to the concerns of the American people. The American people are concerned about the fact that this administration had a threat assessment conducted after the fact, called a Bottom-Up Review, which is not sufficient. And even if it were, it is underfunded. And so they want to have a new threat assessment of the threats we are facing in this world.

So we are proposing a bipartisan commission advise us as to the course of action to take. Again, we are responding to the American people.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN], chairman of the Committee on International Relations.

(Mr. GILMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GILMAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the motion to recommit and I urge my colleagues to defend this motion and to support this vitally important legislation which we have fully debated in the International Relations Committee and on the House floor over the past 2 days.

Our committee held numerous briefings and hearings on the issues we have debated today.

Contrary to some of the assertions made in this debate, this bill does not end our support for the United Nations and it most certainly does not end our support for the United Nations and it most certainly does not signal a retreat from our security commitments and our international obligations around the world.

The provisions in this bill simply reaffirm that our foreign policy and our role at the United Nations and in all U.N. peacekeeping operations must serve our national interests.

The bill for example, ensures that we receive credit for our ongoing and extensive support for the U.N. peacekeeping operations around the world.

Presently, we are spending several billions a year on direct and indirect costs in support of these peacekeeping operations. To the extent that the Department of Defense is spending a disproportionate share of its declining resources on U.N. peacekeeping we should be recouping some of those costs against our U.N. peacekeeping assessments.

This bill does set strict limits on any U.S. troops serving in U.N. operations and promotes the expansion of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Our provisions on NATO will ensure that all countries in Europe deemed eligible to be included in an expanded NATO will be given the political support and the military assistance they need to join this transatlantic security alliance. Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to join in supporting this bill which provides a strong national defense and a clear foreign policy road map for our Nation.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 831, PERMANENT EXTENSION OF THE HEALTH INSURANCE DEDUCTION FOR THE SELF-EMPLOYED

Mr. SOLOMON, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 104-38) on the resolution (H. Res. 88) providing for consideration of the bill (H.R. 831) to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to permanently extend the deduction for the health insurance costs of self-employed individuals, to repeal the provision permitting nonrecognition of gain and sales and exchanges effectuating policies of the Federal Communications Commission, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF PROCEDURES AND DEADLINE FOR PRINTING OF AMENDMENTS ON H.R. 450, THE REGULATORY TRANSITION ACT OF 1995

(Mr. SOLOMON asked and given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, the Rules Committee plans to meet the week of February 20 to consider a rule for H.R. 450, the Regulatory Transition Act of 1995.

The Rules Committee anticipates reporting an open or modified open rule for the bill. The rule will likely accord priority in recognition to Members who have preprinted their amendments in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, though this would be optional and not mandatory.

If Members wish to avail themselves of this preprinting option, amendments should be titled, "Submitted for printing under clause 6 of rule XXIII," signed by the Member, and submitted at the Speaker's table. Amendments must still be consistent with House rules since neither the rule nor printing in the RECORD will afford any special protection against points of order for such amendments.

It will not be necessary for Members to submit their amendments to the Committee on Rules or to testify on them.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

(Mr. GEPHARDT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of my request is to inquire about the schedule for next week.

I yield to the gentleman from Texas, the distinguished majority leader.

Mr. ARMEY. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

With respect to next week, Mr. Speaker, the House will not be in session on Monday, February 20.

The House will be in session on Tuesday, February 21. Subject to unanimous-consent request, the House will meet at 12:30 p.m. for morning hour and 2 p.m. for legislative business. At 5 p.m., we will take up the rule for H.R. 831, the Permanent Extension of the 25 Percent Health Insurance Deduction for Self-Employed Individuals. We will then move into general debate and complete consideration of the bill. This is important, Mr. Speaker: We expect no votes until 5 p.m. on Tuesday. However, we will complete consideration of H.R. 831 on Tuesday. Members should be advised that the House may work late on Tuesday night.

On Wednesday, February 22, the House will meet at 11 a.m. for the legislative business. We will take up the rule for the Department of Defense supplemental and the rescission package which accompanies it, and then move into general debate. We will complete consideration of the two bills and then possibly take up H.R. 830, the Paperwork Reduction Act, subject to the House's approval of a rule. Members should be advised that the House may work late on Wednesday night.

On Thursday, February 23, the House will meet at 10 a.m. for legislative business, and pending the outcome of the previous day's action on H.R. 830, we will take up the rule for H.R. 450, the Regulatory Transition Act of 1995, and then move into general debate on the measure.

On Friday, February 24, the House will meet at 10 a.m. for legislative business. At that time we will complete consideration of H.R. 450. It is our hope to complete legislation by 3 that afternoon.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, perhaps I could ask a few questions.

First on staying late. The gentleman said perhaps on Tuesday and on Wednesday. By "late," can you give Members a sense of about what time?

Mr. ARMEY. If the gentleman will yield further, these things are always problematic. But I think I generally hope when I say "late," that I mean around 9 p.m.

What we try to do is measure the rate at which we are getting the work done, juxtapose that against what must need be done the next day, and then set a mark as early as we can that will assure us to be able to complete the next day's work. But by "late," I hope that I can always have some confidence that that means 9. As the gentleman knows, that has not always worked out that way.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Can the gentleman say that he expects to start amendments on H.R. 450 on Thursday? Do you intend to get to the amendments on that bill on Thursday?

Mr. ARMEY. If the gentleman will yield, the answer is yes.

Mr. GEPHARDT. The other question really involves the rules and maybe the distinguished gentleman from the Committee on Rules could be involved in this discussion.

We last week met with the requirement to deal with an open rule but in a constrained time period of 10 hours. I don't want to go over that debate again. I think we have well covered that from both viewpoints. But I guess I am asking what we can expect on the rules next week.

What kind of a rule would the gentleman expect on the defense supplemental and the rescission bills? Will they be governed under one rule and will that rule be open and be time limited? And the rule on the regulatory transition moratorium, would that be an open rule and would it be time limited?

Mr. SOLOMON. If the gentleman will yield, the two rescission bills, we have not put out a rule as the gentleman knows and we will not be doing that until a rule meeting that I will call sometime late Tuesday afternoon or evening. We would probably have a time constraint on that.

The rule that we will be putting out as far as the regulatory reform, we have not discussed that yet. I assume there would be an open rule with time constraints, again because of the problem as we approach the April 8 date. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. ARMEY] our majority leader, and the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH] our Speaker, have said we have to stick to the schedule to make sure we are going to get the Members out by that 3-week break period.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Reclaiming my time, you are saying in both the case of the supplemental and the rescission bills and the case of regulatory transition, you are anticipating, and I understand you have not done it yet, but you are anticipating open rules with time restraints?

Mr. SOLOMON. That is what we have in mind. Again, with consultation with the minority, we will keep in touch with you and make that determination early next week.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Finally, maybe I did not hear it. I was asking about whether the defense supplemental and the rescission bills would be governed under one rule.

Mr. SOLOMON. Yes, they will. They will be brought to the floor under one rule, and debated the same day.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KANJORSKI].

Mr. KANJORSKI. For purpose of inquiry to the majority leader, Mr. Leader, as you know last week I expressed my great concern about having mark-ups on very important bills in the committee and having amendments on the floor to legislation going at the same time and I felt that we were losing the benefit of the deliberative nature of the House of Representatives.

I have conceded as I have indicated before that we will probably suffer that as long as we are under the constraints to accomplish something for public relations over 100 days as opposed to substantive legislative purposes.

Knowing that to be the case, however, the rumors circulating in the House, it is the intention of the majority to interfere with what I call communications of representatives with their district, in that you intend to hold the House in session on Saturdays during the month of March. Is that correct?

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GEPHARDT. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. ARMEY. Let me begin by observing that the gentleman's point is taken.

Mr. Speaker, we are working on a March schedule. We have a great deal of work to do and we have, as you know, a very compressed time period in which to do it. We are working on a March schedule. We are trying to consult with everybody and take into consideration a very wide range of concerns, not the least of which are the physical demands of the schedule on our Members. We have every hope and intention of avoiding working on weekends, Saturdays and Sundays in March, or for that matter we would hope at all.

Clearly it is our hope and our design to avoid that. We think that is possible and I am very optimistic.

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman further yield?

Mr. GEPHARDT. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. KANJORSKI. That is not quite the Shermanesque statement I had hoped to get from the majority leader. It seems to me the majority leader is saying that the 100 days is more important than allowing the membership to communicate with our constituents. We have given up the thought process in the House, we have given up our deliberative activity in the House. I do not think it is fair to the American people or the traditions of this institution to give up the ability to communicate with our constituents on weekends.

Is there some magic in this 100 days that we could not continue and not have a 3-week break in April, and make it a 2-week break or a 1-week break so that we could continue over the period of March and April to communicate with our constituents?

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GEPHARDT. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. ARMEY. Again the gentleman's point is taken.

I can only tell the gentleman, we have made it very clear, we have a contract, we feel strongly about our commitment. We are certainly committed to doing a big job, a big change. We know it is hard work. We intend to keep that commitment.

The gentleman should be advised that it should hardly come as any new news to anyone that these circumstances are existent and they will be met.

We intend to meet the completion of this legislative agenda in the appointed time with all due respect and with every bit of sensitive consideration for the needs of the Members.

□ 1440

And we will do the best we can do to get that done. And again, I do the best, if the gentleman will yield further, Mr. Speaker, I do the best I can to control what I can control and to deal with what I cannot control.

Mr. KANJORSKI. Just a final request.

Mr. GEPHARDT. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. KANJORSKI. I indicated about 2 weeks ago on the floor that I do not think there is going to be any surprise that the majority entertains a majority of approximately 240 votes more or less, and that all of the legislation the majority wishes to adopt in the House of Representatives will be able to be completed and concluded to its intentions.

It seems to me that rather than now interfere with our relationship and our communications with our constituents, since the debate process really is not for the purposes of communicating with our constituents, or educating our constituents or ourselves for that matter, why do we not just move along with the 100-day contract over the next 2 weeks, bring it in under an hour closed rule and have it adopted so that we can get this foolishness out of the way and get on to the serious substantial business of the House of Representatives.

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, will the Speaker yield?

Mr. GEPHARDT. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. ARMEY. If the gentleman could get his leadership on his side to endorse his procedural recommendation, I would be happy to take it under consideration.

CONTINUATION OF ORDER OF THE HOUSE RELATING TO MORNING HOUR DEBATE AND SPECIAL ORDER SPEECHES UNTIL MAY 12, 1995

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the order of the House of January 5, 1995, relating to morning hour debates be continued through May 12, 1995, with the understanding that the format for recognition for special order speeches first instituted on February 23, 1994, be continued for the same period.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BUNNING). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

RESIGNATION AS MEMBER AND ELECTION OF MEMBER OF COMMITTEE ON VETERANS' AFFAIRS

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following resignation as a member of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs:

U.S. CONGRESS,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, February 15, 1995.

Hon. NEWT GINGRICH,
Speaker of the House, Capitol Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: As of this date, I hereby submit my resignation as a member of the Veterans' Affairs Committee for the following reason.

Due to the time restraints and heavy work load associated with Banking and Financial Services, along with the Science Committees, I do not have adequate time to meet the demanding work load associated with the duties required of the Veterans' Affairs Committee in a satisfactory manner.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for your time and consideration of my request.

Sincerely,

STEVE STOCKMAN,
Member of Congress.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the resignation is accepted.

There was no objection.

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Republican Conference, I offer a privileged resolution, House Resolution 89, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the following named Member be, and is hereby, elected to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs of the House of Representatives: Representative Dan Schaefer of Colorado.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING THE SPEAKER AND MINORITY LEADER TO ACCEPT RESIGNATIONS AND MAKE AP- POINTMENTS, NOTWITHSTAND- ING ADJOURNMENT

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that notwithstanding any adjournment of the House until Tuesday, February 21, 1995, the Speaker and the minority leader be authorized to accept resignations and to make appointments authorized by law or by the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

DISPENSING WITH CALENDAR WEDNESDAY BUSINESS ON WEDNESDAY NEXT

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule be dispensed with on Wednesday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by one of his secretaries.

REPUBLICAN CONTRACT WITH AMERICA

(Mr. BOEHNER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Speaker, our Contract With America states the following:

On the first day of Congress, a Republican House will: Require Congress to live under the same laws as everyone else; cut committee staffs by one-third; and cut the congressional budget. We have done this.

It goes on to state that in the first 100 days, we will vote on the following items: A balanced budget amendment—we have done this; unfunded mandates legislation—we have done this; line-item veto—we have done this; a new crime package to stop violent criminals—we have done this; and national security restoration to protect our freedoms—we have done this.

In the next 50 days or so we will pass welfare reform to encourage work, not dependence; family reinforcement to crack down on deadbeat dads and protect our children; tax cuts for families to lift Government's burden from middle-income Americans; Senior Citizens' Equity Act to allow our seniors to work without Government penalty;
Government regulatory reform; commonsense legal reform to end frivolous lawsuits; and congressional term limits to make Congress a citizen legislature.
This is our Contract With America.

AMERICA NO LONGER NEEDS STAR WARS

(Ms. LOFGREN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks and include extraneous material.)

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, many Congressmen more senior than I have expressed concern that a topic as serious as the revision of the laws and procedures governing the national security of the United States deserved more than a day and a half of debate. I agree, and last night, after I was recognized to offer an amendment, I was cut off and not allowed to do so.

Consideration of my proposal was prohibited by the majority, but I want to let the American people know what my proposal was.

Many people back home in my district have expressed total amazement to me that we would even consider resumption of the star wars missile defense program. We all remember when the Berlin Wall fell and the cold war ended. In light of that fact, why would we want to spend $30 to $60 billion on star wars now? We've already spent $30 billion and we have nothing to show for it.

With the cold war over, it is time
American families get something concrete and useful for their tax dollars.

For the same amount of money that we would spend on star wars, we could extend the school day to 5 p.m. for every child in America. That would be useful to the families that I represent and to families across the country.

Working parents could stop worrying about their kids at loose ends, unsupervised from the time school is out until their weary parents return home from work.

And wouldn't this help our country immeasurably? We will not be competitive in the global economy unless today's children become the best educated and most productive work force of the future.

We should take the money we would spend on star wars and extend the school day in America to 5.

We do not need star wars—but we do need today's children to become the rocket scientists of the future.

I include for the RECORD a copy of my amendment, as follows:

Amendment to H.R. 872, as Reported Offered by Ms. Lofgren

Page 11, line 12, strike "Title II—Missile Defense" and all that follows through page 13, line 1, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

TITLE II—EXTENSION OF SCHOOL DAY FOR ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION IN AMERICA.

SEC. 201. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) the increasing prevalence of single parents and families with two working parents has forced many of our Nation's children to be at home without supervision after school;

(2) performance of our Nation's schoolchildren must increase markedly in the future for our country to be competitive in the global market;

(3) our economic competitors have significantly longer school days, allowing for greater learning and educational experiences for a child, and making for a higher level of literacy and education in the general population; and

(4) our nation's priorities should focus on the needs of children and of working families.

SEC. 202. EXTENSION OF THE NATIONAL SCHOOL DAY.

(1) To remain eligible for funding pursuant to the Elementary and Secondary Education Act a school must institute a policy whereby its school day will last until 5 o'clock p.m., local time.

(2) In instituting a policy extending the lateness of its school day, no school may begin its school day later than 9 o'clock a.m., local time.

(3) The Secretary of Education shall establish a formula grant program to provide funds to States to carry out section 1 above.

SEC. 203. FUNDING.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, of the funds available to the Department of Defense, $49,000,000,000 shall be made available to the Department of Education to carry out this title.

ANOTHER HOLE PUNCHED IN THE CONTRACT WITH AMERICA

(Mr. GINGRICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, as Members know, the country voted in November for the Contract With America, and I carry with me on a regular basis a copy of the contract. And as we begin to get them completed, I try to have a hole punch here.

No. 6 was strong national defense. We need to ensure a strong national defense by restoring the essential parts of our national security funding. I am delighted that by a bipartisan vote we in fact passed this today.

This is the third part of the contract we have completed, and so I am going to symbolically put a hole in my laminated copy of the contract.

We will be back next week to do another one.

OPENING DAY OF SPRING TRAINING

(Mr. GOSS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, it is official—with or without the first-string players, spring training is now underway in Florida and other warmer climates across the country. This morning's national news featured reports from my home district cities of Fort Myers and Port Charlotte—reports tinged with regret and resentment about the lost opportunities and lost dollars caused by the protracted baseball strike. Americans really are fed up with the fighting and all agree it is time for both sides to come back to the bargaining table and resolve their differences to save the season. But most still think it would be a mistake for Congress to interject itself into this dispute and impose a settlement. I agree—but I believe there are legitimate issues to discuss about whether the antitrust exemption has outlived its purpose—and Congress is reviewing that issue. But in the meantime, we all ask players and owners—can't we just play ball?

REPUBLICAN CONTRACT WITH AMERICA

(Mr. RIGGS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RIGGS. Mr. Speaker, before we leave town for Presidents Day, I just want to reflect on all of the successes we have experienced since we convened the 104th Congress on January 4.

Cutting congressional budgets and staff, making Congress live under the same laws it passes on the private sector, passing a balanced budget amendment, stopping the practice of unfunded mandates, giving the President a line-item veto, passing a tough crime package, and most recently, today, passing a strong national defense bill.

Mr. Speaker, what we have seen in the past 44 days is not only historic but phenomenal. Through the Contract

With America, Republicans are proving that hard work can, indeed, produce real change.

As we approach our 50-day mark, let me assure you that the Republican majority will continue to keep our promises with the people by bringing to the floor regulatory reform, welfare reform, term limits, legal reform, tax cuts for middle-income families, and a senior citizens' equity bill.

WE ARE KEEPING OUR PROMISE

(Mr. FOX of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FOX of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, we made a promise, we signed a contract, and we kept our promise—it is as simple as that.

We just passed the National Security Revitalization Act, a component of our Contract With America. In fact, in the past 44 days, we have been keeping a lot of promises. Congressional reform, a congressional accountability act, a balanced budget amendment, unfunded mandates reform, and a strong crime package. We are working hard to produce real change in Congress and America.

But our hard work does not stop here. After the President's Day recess, we will be bringing to the floor legal reform, regulatory reform, term limits, tax cuts for middle income families, a senior citizens' equity bill, and welfare reform. We are on the road to restoring the long-lost credibility and trust people have in their elected officials.

The Republican majority is moving forward. We are making Government smaller, less costly, and more accountable to the American people. I am proud to be a part of this historic time.

ADJOURNMENT FROM FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1995, TO TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1995

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns on Friday, February 17, 1995, it adjourn to meet at 12:30 p.m. on Tuesday, February 21, 1995, for morning hour debates.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BUNNING). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

REPORT RELATING TO ACTIVITIES AND COSTS PURSUANT TO DECLARATION OF NATIONAL EMERGENCY UNDER INTERNATIONAL EMERGENCY ECONOMIC POWERS ACT FROM SEPTEMBER 29, 1994 TO NOVEMBER 14, 1994—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 104-36)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

On September 29, 1994, in Executive Order No. 12930, I declared a national emergency under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act [IEEPA] (50 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.) to deal with the threat to the national security, foreign policy, and economy of the United States posed by the continued proliferation of nuclear, biological, and chemical weapons, and their means of delivery. Specifically, this order provided necessary authority under the Enhanced Proliferation Control Initiative [EPCI], as provided in the Export Administration Regulations, set forth in Title 15, Chapter VII, Subchapter C, of the Code of Federal Regulations, Parts 768 to 799 inclusive, to continue to regulate the activities of United States persons in order to prevent their participation in activities that could contribute to the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their delivery means.

I issued Executive Order No. 12930 pursuant to the authority vested in me as President by the Constitution and laws of the United States of America, including the IEEPA, the National Emergencies Act [NEA] (50 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.), and section 301 of title 3 of the United States Code. At that time, I also submitted a report to the Congress pursuant to section 204(b) of the IEEPA (50 U.S.C. 1703(b)).

Executive Order No. 12930 was revoked by Executive Order No. 12938 of November 14, 1994. Executive Order No. 12938 consolidates a number of authorities and eliminated certain redundant authorities. All authorities contained in Executive Order No. 12930 were transferred to Executive Order No. 12938.

Section 204 of the IEEPA requires follow-up reports, with respect to actions or changes, to be submitted every 6 months. Additionally, section 401(c) of the NEA requires that the President: (1) within 90 days after the end of each 6-month period following a declaration of a national emergency, report to the Congress on the total expenditures directly attributable to that declaration; or (2) within 90 days after the termination of an emergency, transmit a final report to the Congress on all expenditures. This report, covering the period from September 29, 1994, to November 14, 1994, is submitted in compliance with these requirements.

Since the issuance of Executive Order No. 12930, the Department of Commerce has continued to administer and enforce the provisions contained in the Export Administration Regulations concerning activities by United States persons that may contribute to the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and missiles. In addition, the Department of Commerce has conducted ongoing outreach to educate concerned communities regarding these restrictions. Regulated activities may include financing, servicing, contracting, or other facilitation of missile or weapons projects, and need not be linked to exports or reexports of U.S.-origin items. No applications for licenses to engage in such activities were received during the period covered by this report.

No expenses directly attributable to the exercise of powers or authorities conferred by the declaration of a national emergency in Executive Order No. 12930 were incurred by the Federal Government in the period from September 29, 1994, to November 14, 1994.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON,

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 16, 1995.

REPORT RELATING TO ACTIVITIES AND COSTS PURSUANT TO DECLARATION OF NATIONAL EMERGENCY UNDER INTERNATIONAL EMERGENCY ECONOMIC POWERS ACT FROM NOVEMBER 16, 1990 TO NOVEMBER 14, 1994—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 104-37)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

On November 16, 1990, in light of the dangers of the proliferation of chemical and biological weapons, President Bush issued Executive Order No. 12735, and declared a national emergency under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.). Under section 202(d) of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1622(d)), the national emergency terminates on the anniversary date of its declaration unless the President publishes in the Federal Register and transmits to the Congress a notice of its continuation.

On November 14, 1994, I issued Executive Order No. 12938, which revoked and superseded Executive Order No. 12735. As I described in the report transmitting Executive Order No. 12938, the new Executive order consolidates the functions of Executive Order No. 12735, which declared a national emergency with respect to the proliferation of chemical and biological weapons, and Executive Order No. 12930, which declared a national emergency with respect to nuclear, biological, and chemical weapons, and their means of delivery. The new Executive order continued in effect any rules, regulations, orders, licenses, or other forms of administrative action taken under the authority of Executive Order No. 12735.

This is the final report with respect to Executive Order No. 12735.

This report is made pursuant to section 204 of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act and section 401(c) of the National Emergencies Act regarding activities taken and money spent pursuant to the emergency declaration. Additional information on chemical and biological weapons proliferation is contained in the annual report to the Congress provided pursuant to the Chemical and Biological Weapons Control and Warfare Elimination Act of 1991.

The three export control regulations issued under the Enhanced Proliferation Control Initiative are fully in force and continue to be used to control the export of items with potential use in chemical or biological weapons [CBW] or unmanned delivery systems for weapons of mass destruction.

During the final 6 months of Executive Order No. 12735, the United States continued to address actively in its international diplomatic efforts the problem of the proliferation and use of CBW.

At the termination of Executive Order No. 12735, 158 nations had signed the Chemical Weapons Convention [CWC] and 16 had ratified it. On November 23, 1993, I submitted the CWC to the Senate for its advice and consent to ratification. The United States continues to press for prompt ratification of the Convention to enable its entry into force as soon as possible. We also continue to urge those countries that have not signed the Convention to do so. The United States has remained actively engaged in the work of the CWC Preparatory Commission headquartered in The Hague, to elaborate the technical and administrative procedures for implementing the Convention.

The United States was an active participant in the Special Conference of States Parties, held September 19-30, 1994, to review the consensus final report of the Ad Hoc Group of experts mandated by the Third Biological Weapons Convention [BWC] Review conference. The Special Conference produced a mandate to establish an Ad Hoc Group whose objective is to develop a legally binding instrument to strengthen the effectiveness and improve the implementation of the BWC. The United States strongly supports the development of a legally binding protocol to strengthen the Convention.

The United States maintained its active participation in the Australia Group [AG], which welcomed the Czech Republic, Poland, and Slovakia as the 26th, 27th, and 28th AG members, respectively. The Group reaffirmed members' collective belief that full adherence to the CWC and the BWC provides the only means to achieve a permanent global ban on CBW, and that all states adhering to these conventions have an obligation to ensure that their national activities support these goals.

The AG also reiterated its conviction that harmonized AG report licensing measures are consistent with and indeed actively support, the requirement under Article I of the CWC that States Parties never assist, in any way, the manufacture of chemical weapons. These measures also are consistent with the undertaking in Article XI of the CWC to facilitate the fullest possible exchange of chemical materials and related information for purposes not prohibited by the Convention, as they focus solely on preventing assistance to activities banned under the CWC. Similarly, such efforts also support existing nonproliferation obligations under the BWC.

The United States Government determined that one foreign individual and two foreign commercial entities—respectively, Nahum Manbar, and Mana International Investments and Europol Holding Ltd.—had engaged in chemical weapons proliferation activities that required the imposition of trade sanctions against them, effective on July 16, 1994. A separate determination was made and sanctions imposed against Alberto di Salle, an Italian national, effective on August 19, 1994. Additional information on these determinations will be contained in a classified report to the Congress, provided pursuant to the Chemical and Biological Weapons Control and Warfare Elimination Act of 1991.

Pursuant to section 401(c) of the National Emergencies Act, I report that there were no expenses directly attributable to the exercise of authorities conferred by the declaration of the national emergency in Executive Order No. 12735 during the period from November 16, 1990, through November 14, 1994.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON,

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 16, 1995.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 4, 1995, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

FACTS THAT ARE MISUNDERSTOOD WITH REGARD TO H.R. 7

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. KIM] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. KIM. Mr. Speaker, the people in my district in California do not have any luxury to subscribe to the Washington Post and the Washington Times, which have extensive coverage of what is happening inside the Beltway.

There is a lot of rhetoric, especially about the U.N. peacekeeping mission. This bill that we just passed, H.R. 7, which is named the National Security Revitalization Act, the people are saying if this is passed, that will be the end of the U.N. peacekeeping mission.

I would like to clarify this. I would like to urge all my people in my district, people in California, to contact Mr. Clinton not to veto this important bill.

Let me tell you what this really truly says. In the last year, 1995, fiscal year, our administration came to Congress to ask for $533 million for the U.N. peacekeeping mission, just peacekeeping. That is our assessment. At 6 months later, they come back asking an additional $672 million. Adding it together, our assessment was actually $1.2 billion last year alone, cash assessment to the United Nations.

This year our administration asked again for only $445 million.

Now, who is trying to fool who this time? This is a very unrealistic request to try to trick the system by grossly underestimating our peacekeeping assessment numbers so that the overall budget looks smaller. I can bet you that they are going to come back halfway through this year asking another $1/2 billion.

Anyway, in addition to $1.2 billion we paid to the United Nations, we also paid an additional $75 million last year as a gift, as a gift, voluntary gift. This year they are asking an additional $100 million as a voluntary gift.

It is beyond my comprehension why we are paying gifts in addition to $1.2 billion.

The U.S. Government gets no credit for these voluntary contributions.

Let us talk about other countries. How much do they pay? Ninety countries. How much do they pay? Ninety countries pay less than one-hundredth of 1 percent, 0.01 percent, nothing; 90 countries pay less than that. Only 10 countries pay more than a lousy 1 percent. Let me repeat only 10 countries in the world pay more than 1 percent on this U.N. peacekeeping mission.

How much do we pay? Thirty-two percent.

We used to pay only 25 percent. What happened? Because Russia dissolved and were unable to pay, we have to pick up the tab. Is that not ridiculous?

We are paying 32 percent while only 10 countries pay more than 1 percent. Now, that means we are paying more than 3½ times more than the second largest contributing nation, which is Japan. Japan pays 12.5 percent. Not to mention the gifts and not to mention the in-kind contributions.

Let me tell you what it is. We spent $1.7 billion in-kind contributions to support of this U.N. peacekeeping mission. What are they? Let me give an example: Sending military forces to Somalia, millions and millions of dollars is what it cost us. Also the airlift of supplies to Bosnia.

We are now involved in 13 different places on peacekeeping and humanitarian support in this world.

Altogether we spent $1.7 billion in addition to the $1.2 billion cash assessment, in addition to the gifts.

Now, this $1.7 billion we spent as in-kind contributions was not credited to us. Added altogether we are about $30 billion a year that we are donating to the United Nations under the name of peacekeeping mission.

Now, what this bill will do, let me explain: Under section 509 it says the United States shall not pay more than 25 percent. Is that not fair?

Second, section 506 says that all the in-kind donations shall be credited, credited to the United States. That is exactly what it says.

Section 507, no more voluntary gifts unless it is some kind of emergency or national security interest.

Finally, section 511 says U.N. management must be reformed. You cannot just go around and asking us for money like we were a bottomless pit. They have to reform, they have to shape up. That is what this bill does, asking the U.N. to shape up. We are asking them to hire an inspector general so they can audit the books and find out exactly who pays what and how much.

We are not against peacekeeping. I understand we all believe in human rights, but, by golly, it has to be fair. This bill provides for a more equivalent sharing of the real cost of such activities, something that all the American people deserve. That is what it is all about. We are not talking against peacekeeping. It is about time for us to get a fair share and a better accountability.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BUNNING). Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Ms. DELAURO] is recognized for 5 minutes.

FOREIGN COMMAND OF U.S. TROOPS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. SALMON] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SALMON. Mr. Speaker, one of my staff was in a grocery store, local grocery store, just a few days ago and happened to be in the toy section of the store and lo and behold here is what he found and picked up. These are little toy soldiers, just like we used to play with when we were little boys and girls. It says "U.N. troops."

Mr. Speaker, how far have we gone? How far has this madness gone? It used to be, when I was a little boy, I would play with my G.I. Joe. They were American soldiers we used to play with. They were not United Nations troops.

I think maybe the reason these kinds of toys are being marketed now is because maybe it is becoming acceptable that we no longer have our sovereignty any more, we no longer have control. We have given control of U.S. troops, our young men and young women, put them in harm's way, put them under the direct jurisdiction of the United Nations.

In fact, in 1988, there were only 5 peacekeeping operations being operated by the United Nations across the world. Today the United Nations supports 17 peacekeeping operations. More and more, these missions involved internal unrest, including ethnic clashes as opposed to conflicts between nations.

Mr. Speaker, today is a landmark day. We passed a wonderful piece of legislation that redirects our attention, that refocuses our priority on America, on America's vital interests, what is beneficial to this country and not the world at large.

This is a wonderful day, and I think it was one of the most impactful bills, but unfortunately the media out there has decided to neglect any discussion of this bill. I will not comment as to why. But I will comment that these toy soldiers, they are meaningless, you can throw them away, they can end up in the wastebasket, it does not matter. But young men and young women, their lives do matter. When they are fighting on foreign soil, we have an obligation in this body to be sure they are standing up for our interests, our vital national security interests, and not for some utopian concepts of peacekeeping in areas that we really cannot keep the peace.

This bill, H.R. 7 that we just passed, is very impactful in that it restricts the deployment of U.S. troops to missions that are in our interest. It demands that U.S. troops be commanded by U.S. commanders, not by U.N. bureaucrats.

It reduces the cost to the United States for U.N. peacekeeping missions and demands that the United States Representatives to the United Nations press for reforms in the management practices of the United Nations.

Mr. Speaker, I have also got to mention that I believe we have got to keep our eye on that one big ball that is out there, that $5 trillion Federal debt that we have. Not only do we not have human lives to waste abroad for needless causes, but we do not have the capital as well. We have a debt to pay off. As Mr. KIM pointed out adequately, we have paid a disproportionate share of the cost of peacekeeping. We pay 33 percent. The next highest country, Japan, pays in the neighborhood of 13 percent. That is unreasonable.

We pay 25 percent of the costs for upkeep and maintenance of the United Nations. If we were getting what we paid for, it might be a different story. But I do not think we are.

Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate this body for doing some wonderful work today, and, hopefully, the measure will pass the other body and President Clinton will get significant support from the people out there, the voters, calls from the real people out there, the voters, calls from the real people out there who do not want their young people's lives wasted in the future needlessly.

Maybe these soldiers, these toy soldiers, it is okay to risk their lives because they do not mean much, but our young men and women, they do matter.

President Clinton, please do not veto this legislation.

WITH APOLOGIES TO DR. SEUSS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker and my colleagues, during much of the debate on the defense bill just passed, I listened either here in the Chamber or watched it on television from my office and spent some time between debates composing a little doggerel.

With apologies to Dr. Seuss, I would like to share it with you:

On the eighth of November, Election Day last fall.

The voters decided to take a look over the wall.

At first, Democrats stood silent, but finally we said,

With a very sad shake of our collective head, "On this side of the wall we are all Dems,

But on the far side of the wall live the them.

But the voters said it's high time we knew, What kind of things the them would do.

Even after 40 years, the wall isn't so high.

Why, the voters can look the them square in the eye.

And when the them came close, the voters heard 'em say, "Star Wars, Star Wars, it's up, up and away."

And at that very instant, voters remembered the reason they had stayed on their own side of the wall season after season.

The them love to spend and spend, but only on weapons that skewer.

Not Head Start or Pell grants or highways or sewers.

So, on tiptoe the voters stand quizzically watching the them,

As the them dash about in their 100-day fit, So, on 101 they can at last sit.

And the voters note that the them look frightfully mean,

As they try to spend billions on their Star Wars machine.

Voters had walked to the wall with great vim and vigor,

Only to find the them as always with their hands on the trigger.

For 2 more years the voters will watch and the voters will wonder,

Why the them spend tax money that might blow the world all asunder.

At the end of the time, the voters will step back from the wall,

Hoping a little look didn't hurt much after all.

And then they will remember when all is said and done,

These are the very same them that scared the voters back in 1981.

FRIVOLOUS LAWSUITS IMPACT AMATEUR SPORTS, LEGAL REFORM NEEDED

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BUNNING). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. CHRISTENSEN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I read with great interest an editorial found in Monday's Wall Street Journal article by Creighton Hale.

Mr. Hale is the CEO of Little League Baseball and he made a very good case for the need for legal reform.

One example he gave was this:

Imagine the situation: The batter hits a pop fly to center, but your centerfielder is playing the position for the first time. He moved there because the regular kid has the flu. The pop fly hits him in the eye.

As the coach, what do you do?

Pull the infield in and play for the plate?

Call time and head for the pitcher's mound?

How about try calling a lawyer?

You see, in a real life case similar to the one just described, the centerfielder's parents filed suit against the coach who stationed their child under the ill-fated pop fly. They sought compensation for pain and suffering, as well as punitive damages.

In another case described by Mr. Hale was litigation that resulted from two boys colliding in the outfield.

They picked each other up—and then sued the coach.

Another player sued when a stray dog intruded on the field of play and bit him.

And in one of the most outrageous cases I have heard of a woman won a cash settlement when she was hit by a ball that a player failed to catch.

The irony here is that the player was her own daughter.

The Little League has seen its liability insurance skyrocket 1,000 percent over a 5-year period. From $75 per league annually to $795 per league.

We, in effect, have asked little league coaches to take on major league liability risk.

Our legal reform umbrella must cover civil defendants of all stripes whether it be the Little League team that plays in the park down the street or the large corporation that employs the little leaguer's parents.

Frivolous litigation has reached the point that we cannot even measure it with dollars anymore.

Already the special interests are mobilizing to stop any attempt to help the Little Leaguers and Girl Scouts.

George Bushnell, president of the American Bar Association, has resorted to name calling.

The rules of this body will not even allow me to repeat what he called congressional Members who would dare attempt legal reform of this nature.

I say we have struck a nerve.

We are not here to pander to the special interest within the legal community.

Rather, we are here to enact real legal reform for the American people.

And reform we shall have.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Michigan [Ms. RIVERS] is recognized for 5 minutes.

[Ms. RIVERS addressed the House. Her remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio [Ms. KAPTUR] is recognized for 5 minutes.

[Ms. KAPTUR addressed the House. Her remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS] is recognized for 5 minutes.

[Mr. OWENS addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.]

THE SO-CALLED PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY ACT

The SPEAKER per tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. TUCKER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the so-called Personal Responsibility Act.

For years now, Mr. Speaker, Democrats, Republicans, welfare recipients, and Americans on opposite ends of the political spectrum have all agreed on two things; No. 1: The welfare system is broken, and No. 2: We as Americans must change welfare as we know it.

This bill as I read it, Mr. Speaker, fails in several ways to address the problem.

First, the bill erroneously assumes that the problem with welfare is that these people just do not want to work.

The reality, however, is that 70 percent of those who receive welfare benefits are children. The remaining 30 percent are the mothers of these children and disabled persons.

Second, and most importantly—this body, as it has done in the past, is attempting to base new public policy on the same false premise—that these people just do not want to work! Therefore, to encourage them to work—cut them off.

The reality, Mr. Speaker, is that the problem with welfare is this body's total abdication of its responsibility to deal openly and forthrightly with the cause of welfare—the lack of a real job paying a livable wage.

If we did address this problem openly, Mr. Speaker, we would find that what most welfare recipients want is an opportunity to work—not a welfare check!

This bill, Mr. Speaker, does nothing to empower people. It does nothing to address those very important secondary impediments to welfare mothers going to work, the need for day care for their children so they can go to work, and the need for health care for their children.

Further, Mr. Speaker, the bill fails to invest the resources in job training and education necessary to equip welfare mothers to compete for the jobs that are available.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, the only thing this bill guarantees to our children, is that once their parents have used their allotted benefits—that's it! There is no other safety net for these families or their children.

No matter what happens to the Nation's economy or the economy of your State, no matter what happens with your personal circumstances, regardless of your efforts to secure employment, that is it—no more benefits.

Mr. Speaker, this bill would abolish the entitlement status of those essential programs that protect our children from hunger and homelessness.

What this means, Mr. Speaker, is that no longer are poor children guaranteed that they will grow up with a roof over their head and food in their mouths.

In fact what our children are guaranteed, Mr. Speaker, is that their basic health and nutrition needs will now be subject to individual State priorities and each new Congress views about their mothers and their willingness to work.

What we have done in this bill, Mr. Speaker, is to decide that welfare and single mothers and their children are the root of all evil in this society and if we are to ever balance the budget we must get these pariahs off the rolls.

The reality, Mr. Speaker, is that 70 percent of all welfare recipients are off welfare in 2 years and only 12 percent of all welfare recipients stay on welfare more than 5 years. So why this body would base welfare policy on the 12 percent of people who have not, will not or cannot get off welfare is beyond me.

This bill would require, or as we like to say in Washington—mandate—that States deny AFDC permanently to families where the children were born after this bill's passage to unmarried mothers younger than 18. States would also have the option to deny assistance to children born to unmarried mothers younger than 21.

Mr. Speaker, this bill would allow States to eliminate all cash benefits to families who have received aid for 2 years and—permanently—bar such families from any future aid if the parent had participated in the work program for at least 1 year. After 5 years, States would be required/or mandated to terminate permanently the family from cash assistance.

The State even if it wanted to continue cash payments would be directed by Washington to deny this benefit.

In both of these cases, Mr. Speaker, the Contract on Americans would allow children and families to be left without any cash help or a public service job even when the parent was willing to work but unable to find private sector employment.

An even more ominous provision in this assault on America's children, Mr. Speaker, would take the savings generated by denying assistance to unmarried teens and their children, and use those same funds to build orphanages for those children or group homes for those children and their teen parents rendered destitute by this bill.

Mr. Speaker, it is open season on poor American children and the people sent here to protect them are running roughshod over them with careless indifference or conscious disregard.

My district, Mr. Speaker, has 61,000 children living below the poverty line. I am not interested in orphanages and group homes, I am interested in jobs that will employ the parents of these children.

What is required, Mr. Speaker, is an honest appraisal, free of finger pointing, free of race baiting, free of vitriolic attacks on lobbyless women and children, and most important, Mr. Speaker, a real commitment to creating jobs.

□ 1520

An even more ominous provision in this assault on America's children is that it would take the savings generated by denying assistance to the unmarried teens and their children. As we debate this issue coming up next week on the floor of the House, let's take a hard look at the Personal Responsibility Act and hold it responsible.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF THE 104TH CONGRESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 4, 1995, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SCARBOROUGH] is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, it is certainly exciting to see what has been happening in this town since January 4. It seems for the past 40 or so years we have had an institution in Congress that was not responsive to the needs of Americans across the country; that did not seem to care about what was going on in the lives of middle class Americans, from Maine to California, from Florida to Washington State. In fact, things had gotten so bad that just a few months back only 18 percent of Americans thought Congress was doing a good job.

Today, only a month and a half after the 104th Congress convened on January 4th, almost 50 percent of Americans now believe Congress is doing a good job and we are on the right track. And for good reason. Look what has happened.

Of course, there are things we have not addressed yet. There are problems we have not had time to work out. But let us look at what we have done in just a few short weeks.

We have undertaken real institutional reform, reform that all Americans are in favor of, even the most simple basic reform that Congresses in the past have ignored. They have not listened to what Americans have wanted.

We started with the Shays Act. The first day it was passed, and it is an act that makes Congress abide by the same rules and regulations that they force on individuals, on families, on businesses, on States, on the rest of America. I cannot tell you how many times I heard people across my district and across the country pound their fist into their hands, angry, saying why can they pass laws, and then conveniently exempt themselves from it? What makes Congress and the Members of Congress feel so arrogant that they somehow believe that they are above the law? Why does Congress not do what the overwhelming majority of the American people want them to do. Is this not a representative democracy?

Well, the 104th Congress answered the call quickly, and before we were out the first day, we passed the Shays Act, which pushed forward a very simple proposition, and that is Congress abides by the same laws that the rest of us have to abide by. That was a great first day.

But if that was the only thing we had done the first day, it would have been an unqualified success. But we went further. We also cut staff by one-third. Committee staff was cut by one-third. And we did more than that. We cut congressional staff. Members now were restricted by the number of staff they had working in their offices and back in their individual districts.

We have recently passed regulations that will cut franking by one-third. It is a reform that Americans have called for, for years, and it is a reform that the 104th Congress answered.

We also finally put term limits on committee chairmen. So many people were disgusted with what they saw in the last few Congresses, by the power amassed by the Dan Rostenkowskis of the House, and the people said enough is enough. And once again the 104th Congress answered the people's call and put term limits on committee chairmanships.

But they went a step further. They even put term limits on the Speaker of the House, something that is absolutely unprecedented.

You hear so much from the other side of the aisle, trying to build up these monsters and trying to vilify Members of the 104th Congress. Some have even suggested that our Speaker is setting up this strong Sam Rayburn style speakership, as if he is power hungry. The fact of the matter is Sam Rayburn would have never agreed to put term limits on himself. We have leadership that is moving forward, we have got Members on both sides of the aisle that are moving forward toward institutional reform. And I for one say it is about time.

I know, because this time last year, I was not a Congressman, I was not a State senator, I was not in the State legislature, I was not a county commissioner or a city councilman. I was a citizen. I was a citizen who decided I was sick and tired of what was going on in Washington, DC, and I wanted to be part of a real and dramatic change.

As the election returns came in November 8, 1994, it became clear to everybody across the country that there were a lot of citizens like myself that had gotten off the couch. They did not have special interests behind them; they did not have power brokers behind them; they did not have powerful party leadership behind them. They only had simple ideas behind them. They only had reform on their side. And in 1994 when all Americans got up off the couch and said enough is enough, the ideals that we put forward in our campaign was enough. People called for reform, we got elected, we came to this Congress, and we have put forward great reform.

We also passed a limitation on tax increases. We have to have a three-fifths supermajority now to pass any tax increases on middle class citizens across this country. Let me tell you something: That is incredibly important, when you consider that in 1993 the 103d Congress ignored their constituents and ignored Americans from coast to coast and passed the largest tax increase in the history of this country by one vote.

We now require a supermajority, and because of it, the taxpayers have received what I call a taxpayer protection plan, to make sure that Congress stops stealing money from citizens across the country to feed their own special interest pork-barrel projects. And that was a great step forward, when you consider that the average American spends 50 percent of his or her time working to pay off taxes, fees and regulations imposed on them by Government.

Think about that. When you go to work on Monday morning, you are going to work for the Government to pay off taxes, fees and regulations. When you go to work Tuesday morning, you are still working for the Government.

When you go to work Wednesday morning, you are still working to pay off taxes, fees and regulations put on you by the Government. It is not until you come back from lunch on Wednesday afternoon that you actually start putting money into your own pocket, into your own savings account for what you need to get by.

Let's put it another way. None of us will be working for ourselves until July 1. We will be working to pay off taxes, fees and regulation put on us by the Government until July 1. That means we all have more months to work to pay off taxes, fees and regulations put on us by the Government. Before we are able to put aside 1 cent for ourselves, before we are able to put aside money to pay off our cars, or to pay off our mortgage, or to put money aside for our children's educational plans or, heaven forbid, until we can put aside any money for retirement.

Our tax system is a system that punishes productivity. It is a system that tells individuals and businesses and families, "The harder you work, the more you're going to be punished."

We finally put in a taxpayers' protection plan. Our leader now is talking about a flat tax that will tax all Americans evenly and fairly at the same percentage rate to make sure that you are not punished, that you do not pay at a higher percentage if you dare to be productive, if you dare to invest, if you dare to do things that this country was founded upon.

We are finally moving toward encouraging hard work and productivity and personal sacrifice. I say it is about time, and I am honored to be a part of that process. Again, it is something that we have already passed in this 104th Congress.

We passed a line-item veto. That is something that President Ronald Reagan had been calling for for years. That is something that the American people have been calling for for years. Look at the polls in the USA Today and in Time and Newsweek and these other magazines. They all say an overwhelming majority of Americans have supported a line-item veto so the President can look through these huge budgets filled with pork and be responsible and cut out line items of wasteful spending. It is about time.

Again, it is something Americans have wanted this Congress to do for a long time, and yet it is something that was ignored until the 104th Congress came to town and we have passed it.

Some people have said, "Well, a line-item veto is great, I was for it when Ronald Reagan was President, I was for it when George Bush was President. But now that Bill Clinton is President, I don't know if I'm for the line-item veto anymore or not."

Let me tell you something. It does not matter who the President is. It finally brings accountability to the process.

For too long we have had people on both sides of Pennsylvania Avenue pointing at each other. We have had people from the White House blaming the Congress, saying, "Hey, they've never sent us a balanced budget." The same thing was argued the other way around.

Finally the buck stops at the White House, and we have something in place where the President will finally not be able to blame Congress or blame anybody else if these pork-barrel projects go through. He simply takes out his pen, lines through the appropriation, and we have accountability in the budget process, and we have it because the 104th Congress also passed it.

We have a balanced budget amendment that is passed from this House and is now over in the Senate. That is another thing that Americans have been for for years and another thing that Congress has ignored.

I have got to tell you when you start lining up all these things that Americans have been for and you start realizing that Congresses in the years past have covered their ears and shut their eyes and pretended that Americans did not count, that they were above the law, that they were above public opinion, that they were above being in a representative democracy, a constitutional republic, you can now see why the revolution took place.

People demanded accountability. Republicans and Democrats and Independents demanded accountability. The Republican Party has come to town and with the help of people on both sides of the aisle and Independents across the country, we have passed these reforms through. But this is not simply a Republican revolution.

In my district, 60 percent of the people who voted in the 1994 election were Democrats. Sixty percent. I am a Republican. Yet I received 62 percent of the total vote. That is overwhelming. It is overwhelming because it shows that the issues that unite Americans are not about whether you are Republican or Democrat or conservative or liberal or independent. It is about accountability. It is about listening to Americans and voting your conscience and voting the way Americans want you to vote, the way that our Founding Fathers wanted us to vote. We have done it. We did it today on H.R. 7. We have taken a crucial step forward in once again making our shores safe and our military strong.

There is no doubt we have had the strongest military in the history of the world. But unfortunately we have continued cutbacks. Many believe now that we are close to having a hollow force. Beyond that, there has been another danger. There has been a danger of shifting control from U.S. military men and women, from our generals and admirals and our Commander in Chief to the U.N.

Just think about it. Think about the fact that we have men and women who may go into combat, and when they go into combat, they will not be fighting under American generals or American admirals.

Is there a problem with having them under the U.N. flag? Is there a problem with our service men and women serving under foreign leaders? Yeah, there is.

Our troops fight to protect and defend the Constitution of the United States of America. There is a real problem when the Constitution is bypassed in military exercises. I want to point out what happened in Haiti a few months back.

We had a President who wanted to push for an invasion of Haiti, but he could not get it passed through Congress. He could not garner the sufficient support in this constitutionally elected body to have support to send men and women, mothers and fathers to Haiti into a conflict where they could die.

Our Founding Fathers knew how important it was that our President could not send Americans into war without approval of this Congress. But what did the President of the United States do when he could not do it through constitutional channels, through the Congress? He went to the United Nations. There is a real problem with that as far as I am concerned. It usurps essential powers that were given to this Congress over 200 years ago by the Founders of this great Republic.

You need to go through a democratically elected body if you are going to put Americans' lives at risk. H.R. 7 finally steps up to the plate and puts an end to some of this madness. It is a first step down a road where we will finally consolidate power where it needs to be, and, that is, with American generals, admirals and our Commander in Chief.

But there is more than the U.N. We have the Mexico problem. It does not matter where you stand on Mexico, you have got to look and see what the President did, and it has to cause you a great deal of concern. Because just like in Haiti, when he could not get approval in Congress, he wanted to push this Mexican bailout plan, this loan guarantee. He said he was going to get it approved in Congress. He could not get it approved in Congress, so what did he do? He bypassed Congress again, as if we do not matter, as if the 250 million or so Americans that this institution represents are somehow irrelevant. Instead he turned and used a fund that was set up to keep the dollar strong across the world.

But he did not use it for the dollar. He used it to prop up the peso. It certainly violated the spirit, if not the actual letter of the law, and I would encourage the President of the United States to read his Constitution and once again bring these matters to an elected body so they can be debated and discussed the way they need to, before they are implemented.

H.R. 7 also helps answer a big lie that has been spread, and let me tell you what the big lie is. The big lie has been spread over the past 5 years that somehow this country is safer today than it was before the collapse of the Soviet empire. Even though it sounds great, even though we hear about the demise of the Evil Empire and that somehow is supposed to make us feel that we are in a safer world today, the facts point out something very different.

The fact of the matter is there are still nuclear missiles in Russia, they are still pointed our way, but there is a big difference between now and 5 years ago. Now we have madmen like Zhirinovskiy, a neo-Nazi ascending to power in the former Soviet Union. He is a man who is so unstable that he threatened to nuke Germany after he ascended to power because they would not let him in their country.

We have got economic and political and military and social chaos in the Soviet Union, the former Soviet Union. We cannot afford to let down our defenses because Boris Yeltsin may be in power today, but all indications show that a very powerful totalitarian force could easily overtake the former Soviet Union again and launch us into another cold war.

It is constitutionally our first responsibility as a Government, as a Federal Government, to protect the men and women and children in this country from foreign attack. And that is what H.R. 7 does.

Another fact that concerns all of us, or should concern all of us, is the growth of China. In the 1980's, China was the second fastest growing economy in all of Asia, a region that is booming economically. In fact, last year China's economic growth grew at a staggering 19-percent clip, and make no mistake of it, China is using this new-found economic prowess to develop, build, and export weapons technology to Third World countries. We have got to keep our guard up.

And we have got to keep our guard up because a recent Foreign Affairs article, which I do not subscribe to everything I read in Foreign Affairs, that is for sure, but a recent Foreign Affairs article stated that in 5 years over 20 countries are going to have intermediate missile range capability, and they are not going to be the select nuclear club that we used to have: the United States, England, France, China, India; it is going to expand and all of a sudden we might find 5 years down the road that people like Saddam Hussein and Qadhafi and our North Korean leaders will have this weapons technology and the ability to launch those weapons across continents.

Let me tell you something. The world is more dangerous today than it was 5 years ago, and anybody who tells you anything different is either ignorant of the facts that are out there to be read and studied or else they are glossing over the truth for their own political reasons.

We live in a dangerous world, and H.R. 7 was the first step to answer the call of all Americans across this country who said do not let our forces become hollow like they were in the late 1970's.

We are rebuilding this country because our children's lives are at stake. We have welfare reform coming up, something that all Americans or a majority of Americans have supported for a long time. And more importantly, we are not only talking about these basic reforms in the Contract With America, we are talking about moving beyond those reforms and restructuring the way this government works.

But I want to ask before we talk about our next step, let us examine what we have done in 50 days. Let me read through this again because it is absolutely incredible. In 50 days or less we have made Congress accountable by making them abide by the same laws that all Americans have to abide by. We have cut committee staff by one-third. We have cut congressional staff. We have cut franking by one-third. We have put term limits on committee chairmen, we have put term limits on the Speaker of the House. Actually the Speaker put term limits on himself and adopted that.

We have passed three-fifths tax limitation. I call it the taxpayer protection plan. I do not care what you call it; what it does is it guarantees this Federal Government is not going to be reaching in your pocket for the next 2 years, and when we pass the rest of the three-fifths balanced budget amendment next year we will be protected for years to come.

We have passed line-item veto, we have passed a balanced budget amendment, and we have passed H.R. 7, an act that will once again keep our military strong and guarantee us that we will be able to answer the challenges that are facing us in this extremely dangerous world.

This past week Members of the freshman class stepped forward, some have called us new Federalists and they have called us new Federalists because we have read the Federalist Papers. We have read the writings of James Madison, Alexander Hamilton and John Jay and other Founding Fathers, and we are committed to return this government to be the type of government our Founding Fathers intended it to be.

I am moved by the words of James Madison who over 200 years ago as he was framing this Constitution wrote, "We have staked the entire future of the American civilization not upon the power of government." Did you hear that? "We have staked the entire future of American civilization not upon the power of government, but upon the capacity of each of us to govern ourselves, to control ourselves, and sustain ourselves, according to the Ten Commandments of God." That was James Madison, a man who helped frame the Constitution. And it was Thomas Jefferson who wrote the government that governs least governs best.

And our own tenth amendment, our own tenth amendment, the poor, forgotten tenth amendment says all powers not specifically given to the Federal Government are reserved to the States and to the people. Think about that. Read through your Constitution, I urge all of you. I carry a Constitution. Get a hand copy of the Constitution. If you do not have it call my office, again Congressman JOE SCARBOROUGH. We will get you a copy of the Constitution. Read through it and read the 10th amendment and circle it and look through that Constitution and see what the Federal power is empowered to do and what it is not empowered to do. And if you force your representative to live by the words of the 10th amendment, to live by the constraints of the 10th amendment, then this Federal Government will once again be accountable.

We have started down that path. We need to continue. We need to be constitutionally accountable, and that is what the new Federalists, that is what freshmen reformers have been intending to do this past week when we announced bold proposals to move this Congress forward towards a 10th amendment vision.

I would like to recognize for a few minutes a man who helped lead a very critical portion of the new Federalists agenda, and that is the Honorable SAM BROWNBACK from Kansas. SAM.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman yielding to me for a moment. I would just like to talk to Members, the Chamber and those listening about what we did this past week. It was on Wednesday we came forward with a proposal announcing task forces that would develop the proposals to eliminate 4 Cabinet-level agencies, the agencies of Commerce, Education, Energy, and HUD.

And the proposals are that we would look at these agencies and we would ask the questions: Do they perform essential functions? And if not, can they be eliminated? Can we get many of these solutions and these issues back to the people? Can we give these things back to the people, back to local units of government? Can we consolidate some of these functions? Can we eliminate others? And getting back to what the Founding Fathers had envisioned for our Nation.

It is interesting to me to note Alice Rivlin, the current Director of the Office of Management and Budget, in a 1992 book, said she does not think the Federal Government ought to be involved in education. It should not be involved in economic development. It should not be involved in some of these centralized planning functions that are taking place. And that is what we are talking about here.

You know, most of these Cabinet agencies, three of the four, were created since 1965. Housing and Urban Development was created in 1965. Energy and Education were created in the late 1970's. They were created at a time when we had a crisis. In the urban areas in the mid-1960's, we had a crisis in urban America.

What was our solution in that time period? Our solution was let us build a government bureaucracy. We built one. In the late 1970's we said we have a crisis in energy. What is the solution? Let us build a government bureaucracy. We have a crisis in education. What was the solution? Let us build a government bureaucracy.

So we focused centrally in Washington for all the solutions to these problems, and we put our energy and our focus and our efforts and intensity here when the problem was out there, and our urban cities were decaying in New York and in Washington, DC, as the city, not the capital, and in Los Angeles and in our classrooms is where the problem was. It was not we needed more bureaucracy. It is we needed more help in the classroom, and we needed to liberate and free people.

In housing areas, the problem was not the need for a centralized planning agency. The need was for more housing in communities and to free people up to be able to deal with the problems they had in their communities.

We say these experiments have not worked, that centralized planning, whether in the former Soviet Union or in the United States of America, does not work in a large, diverse nation like the United States.

We think that these agencies, that four things will guide our purposes in developing the proposals to eliminate these four agencies. No. 1 will be to privatize. Wherever we can privatize functions and get them out to the private sector, we will do that in the efficiency of the private sector.

Second will be localize. Anytime we can send these issues to the States or local units of government to handle, closer to the people, closer to the people, that is what we will do.

We will consolidate. Where two agencies grew that we will have one in the future so we can consolidate a number of these functions and that we can eliminate whatever functions are outmoded, outdated, or antiquated, that those would be eliminated.

So at the end of the day that we empower people, we empower communities, we empower the States to be able to really deal with these issues, and we think that is where actual solutions will occur. That is where homes are built. They are built across this Nation. They are not built in bureaucracies in Washington. Kids are taught in classrooms across this Nation. They are not taught in a bureaucracy in Washington. Energy is dealt with in the marketplace and by individual decisions, by 250 million Americans. They are not dealt with by a bureaucracy in Washington.

We will free and liberate people. We will be realigning the relationship of the Federal Government to the people, and it will be a very powerful thing for growth and for actually dealing with our problems, for actually accomplishing solutions to our problems, and it is desperately needed.

You quote one of the early Federalists. I quote Thomas Jefferson. Thomas Jefferson was quoted a saying that moments for great innovation in history are few and far between. We stand at one of those moments of great innovation in the history of this country, of the ability to realign the relationship of the Federal Government to the people, of making the Federal Government the servant once again and not the master of the people. We are supposed to be able to help and encourage, not to direct, command, and control, and that is what we seek to do, and we will be a better country, and we will be a growth country. It will be a better society. It will be a government for the people, not commander of the people. And that is what we seek to do. We will be developing our plans and proposals, bringing those out sometime in the springtime.

I would encourage the American people to contact their Congressmen if they are interested and encouraged about that. It has been interesting to me, the early feedback we have received has not been you cannot do that; it has been, "Well, would you look at the other agencies? What about the Department of Labor? What about some of the other agencies?" I think that is very encouraging to open the floodgate of ideas and liberation for the people in this country and get the Federal Government back to its core functions that it should do rather than all the far-flung areas.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. You mentioned something very interesting. You kept talking about these different agencies and you kept saying it does not work. I never heard you say it is about ideology or some right-wing radical philosophy. I did not hear that at all.

It reminds me of when I wanted to get involved with this. It was not about any deep-seated philosophy or any philosophical ax I had to grind. It was about what works and what does not work.

I have got a 7-year-old boy that is in public schools, and I am very concerned about what type of educational system he is going to be growing up in. You look at the statistics of what has happened since the Department of Education was established in 1979, and every single statistic points to a decay in educational standards across this country. The Department of Education has been an absolute and total abject failure.

You know, they only provide 8 percent of funding to local schools, and yet they dump on them 55 percent of their paperwork. And people talk about, well, what is the problem with having this bureaucracy; gee, it is a great symbolic gesture. It is robbing money from my child, from your children, and from children all across the country.

A perfect example I read on the front of USA Today about a week ago the Department of Education has cut funding by $100 million for the upkeep of public schools to make them safe across the country, by $100 million, and yet at the same time, they are increasing funding on their own infrastructure, their own bureaucracy down the road by $20 million.

So let us get this straight, they take your money and my money and our constituent's money, tax money, they send it up to Washington, they put a brokerage fee on it. Of course, everybody takes their little chunk of the pie out of the brokerage fee, and then they claim to send it back to the States.

But now it has gotten so bad they say, "We are not even sending the $100 million to the States for upkeep of schools to make them safe. Instead, we are cutting that out, and we are going to spend $20 million of those dollars fixing up our bureaucracy in Washington, DC."

Now, that is a sham. That does not work, and it is about what does not work.

You know, Peggy Noonan, who was Ronald Reagan's speech writer, talked about an encounter she had with the President in the early seventies when he was then Governor of California, and she asked the President, she said, "How could you be a conservative?" because she had just gotten out of college, and she was a liberal. I do not know if you would call Peggy Noonan a hippie. I do not know if she is ever capable of being a hippie. Peggy Noonan said, "Mr. Reagan, how can you be a conservative? Why aren't you a liberal?" And Ronald Reagan said, "Because it doesn't work." And that is the truth. It does not work.

This is not about ideology. It is about what works.

Mr. BROWNBACK. If the gentleman will yield further, and that is absolutely what it is. It is not about the ideology or the left or right or center or the middle or whatever the case might be. What this is about is what has failed.

I do not think that we can stand here and at all say to the American people, "Look, we have not tried this. We have not tried centralized planning from Washington on these areas." We have. We have tried it up to 30 years in HUD. We tried it for 15 years in these other agencies. It has not worked. It does not work.

The American people want to be liberated, and I will tell you what will happen when that does occur. If we say, as far as the Department of Housing and Urban Development, look, we are not going to do this in Washington anymore. We have got some funds we are going to block grant to the States, local units of government. We want it generally used for housing, "but you figure out your problems." There will be thousands of different solutions that will come forward because we have millions of different people and thousands of different ideas and how we solve it; Topeka, KS, is different than they solve it in New York City or Austin, TX. It is just we are different people in a different nation, a diverse nation, and will come up with different solutions, because one size does not fit all in America, and the same will work in education. People were saying, well, if we do not have somebody in Washington looking out for our children, well, what is going to happen to them in education. I think what will happen to them in education is things will get better, because parents care more for their children than somebody running a government agency does, and people on a local school board know those families much more than somebody working in a government office building in Washington.

One final point, and then I will yield back the rest of the time.

The final point is that there are a number of good people that work in government, and that is what Jack Kemp said at our press conference, who was the former Secretary of HUD, who is also on board in supporting us. We have former cabinet secretaries of all these agencies working with us to dismantle all these agencies. They run them. They know they do not work.

Jack was saying, "Well, these are good people; there's just too many of them, and we shouldn't be doing this. It should be happening out in the communities and the individuals," and that is what we are about, having people doing these things to where the answers really occur and not just command and control out of Washington.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. You know, again you talked about Jack Kemp and saying that they are good people. I have been asked the question of what is going to happen to all these good workers, especially in the education field because that is what I do. That is a task force I am heading up, the education task force.

I was also struck by Jack Kemp's comments, and I thought, and again getting back to the fact this is not ideological, this is not a battle over ideology. It is a battle over what works and what does not work.

Well, Mr. Kemp's comments remind me of the Alice Rivlin book you cite, and I read the book and I know you have, and I certainly hope the President of the United States reads Ms. Rivlin's book and follows her suggestions because they are great suggestions. But Ms. Rivlin talked about the drain, the talent drain, the brain drain, that this huge bureaucracy has caused, that from 1932 to 1980, when we had this explosion of growth in the government, not only does that suck up all the money across the country to Washington, it also sucked up all the talent we have, extremely talented people working in Washington, DC.

So what happens when we downsize these agencies, when we do away with these bureaucracies that are preventing them even from showing their true talents, stifling them, that are handcuffing them? What happens? They go home, and they enrich their communities, and they enrich the neighborhoods from whence they came. Washington, DC, does not need another bureaucrat, but that bureaucrat in Washington, DC will be a productive member of the community, and that is something Alice Rivlin wrote about in her book. She said, "So much of the talent is now concentrated in Washington, we need to spread it across the country, just like we need to spread the money back across the country and send it back to the people, send it back to the communities, because our Founding Fathers intended us to be a Nation of communities and not a Nation of bureaucracies."

And I am just struck. Let us talk about some of the people briefly that are supporting this. The gentleman mentioned Jack Kemp. We have mentioned Alice Rivlin. I know Leon Panetta once endorsed abolishing some of these agencies.

Who are some of the others?

Mr. BROWNBACK. Secretary Mossbacher that used to run the Department of Commerce was there at the press conference endorsing this. Don Hodel, who used to run the Department of Energy I talked to today is strongly supporting us. Henson Moore that used to be the secretary in command at the Department on Energy, I visited with him today and working with him on this particular project as well. Those are people both at HUD and Energy. At Education, Dr. Bennett and Lamar Alexander have publicly endorsed doing away with the Department of Education as a way we can create better education and innovation across the country. They both have publicly endorsed this as well in that field.

So, you have got secretaries in Commerce, in HUD, in Energy, in Education, all saying "Look, folks. We tried it. We tried it hard. We tried it with billions and trillions of dollars. Centralized planing in the Soviet Union, former Soviet Union or the United States, doesn't work. You got to get it back home, and this is the way you do it."

And we are just starting, and I hope the American people lean in toward this concept and help us move this on forward to get the government back out to the people.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. If I could, and I know the gentleman needs to be going on, but could you just tell me if your experience coming to Washington, DC was the same as mine because I know we were both citizens and removed from this process, but were you not filled with the sense of awe when you came up here and saw freshmen, and sophomores, and so-called old bulls that all want to move in this direction of reform and bringing power back to the States? I never in a million years expected to find so many allies in this cause to downsize the Federal Government, and it just amazes me that we have done more in 50 days than the past Congresses have been able to do in the past 50 years as far as institutional reform, and I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BROWNBACK. That is obviously the case, and that is what I am getting as well, and we had at that same press conference the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON], the chairman of the Committee on the Budget, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KASICH], the chairman of the Committee on Rules, the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], all of which acted as if their soul was having a chorus of angels singing to it, but they were ecstatic that here were people willing to stand up and say, "Enough is enough. We tried it. It doesn't work. It's time to try something else."

And then they were all saying that, and that is what I continue to get from people all across the Government and across the Nation. Look, we have tried it, and we have really tried it. It is time to move on, and let us try something different that we think really can work and can be liberating to the people across the country, and you are seeing it take place from this freshman reform group, 73 of us coming in strong at this time, many of us elected on the type of agenda I was, reduce the Federal Government, reform the Congress, return to the basic values that built the country, those being the watch words for us.

And I cannot help but think the original Federalists are saying, "It's about time."

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. It is about time, and I thank the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. BROWNBACK] for his leadership in this area because it is long overdue, and I hope this Congress will move forward, and more than that I hope that the American people that stood up and said, "Enough is enough," on November 8 will continue to take a proactive role and say, "We're not going to sit back anymore; we are going to change this Government," and they will continue to use whatever means possible, whether it is the fax machine, or talk radio, or mail, or e-mail, or the town hall meetings that we are all doing. I hope they will continue to use that and put external pressure on this institution and their own Representative to say enough is enough.

I yield to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY].

Mr. FOLEY. I wanted to jump in the conversation for a moment because you are hitting on, I think, a nerve out in America. What I found when I went home, the average citizen, not the political pundit, not the editorial writer, the citizen I saw at the south Florida fair came up to me and said, "Keep doing what you're doing. Make Government more accountable." They had their little children with them, and the detailed stories of trying to get information out of the school board or trying to call Tallahassee for information about their student's performance, their child's performance. It was unavailable.

So what I am hearing from the citizenry out there:

It's not about being a Republican or Democrat. It is about being American, about making a Government work.

I served with you both on the restructuring, if you will, of some of these agencies; I am on the Energy Committee, the subcommittee, working on reform. It is ironic in one of the committees the other day I am reading the material about the Energy Department and how they have a clean coal study, and this clean coal study is to allow us to use a variety of fossil fuels to diversify away from just gas, and oil, petroleum, to use coal. Well, clean coal, we are spending millions of dollars on technology to make it available and efficient. At the same time in my district in Florida Carol Browner, who is at EPA, has canceled the program to build a clean coal facility in Okeechobee, so you have one agency making rules saying, "We want to have this technology," and one agency of the same branch of the Government appointed by the same President of the United States and saying, "No, but we don't want to do that."

So the dilemma here for all of us as new Representatives, as freshmen of the 104th Congress, is to figure out how we break down the difficulty that every American faces when they approach Government.

I did not know this job when I came was about running interference for constituents and problems that they were having with agencies regarding laws that we have created. That was not the job that I ran for, to really be a clerk, if you will, of taking their complaints, and running to an agency and saying, "The law that was passed in the 103d, 102d, 101st Congress is now having this onerous burden on business, on the human race."

That is what it has become. So the effort amongst us as freshmen and sophomores and all the Members of the 104th Congress is really about making Government more efficient.

I want to make one other comment, because the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SCARBOROUGH] did such a tremendous job in explaining the issue that is so important on national security. I think probably one of the most passionate speeches I heard on this floor was Mr. DELLUMS from California, about ideas, about making America work, about making our interest, our national interest a priority to this Congress. So I thank the gentleman from Florida, because I think he has capsulized what the debate on national security was about. That is what we are here for in the 104th Congress.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. You bring up Mr. DELLUMS. You talked about your surprises when coming to Congress. I am going to tell you one of my surprises coming to Congress. I had campaigned, I am from northwest Florida, we believe in a very strong national defense down there, and RON DELLUMS has been perceived as a super liberal. And somebody during the campaign, quite frankly I heard a lot of questions about it. People said what is the deal with this RON DELLUMS guy? When I came up and started talking to people on the Committee on National Security, I would be talking about him, and I was amazed that these hawks that were always on the opposite side of RON DELLUMS it seemed like on every issue, spoke in the most glowing terms of Mr. DELLUMS because he is a very articulate speaker, he has very deep convictions, and he says what he means.

That is what I was alluding to before, we can have disagreements on issues, we can disagree on the best way to have welfare reform, we can have disagreements on what is the best way to protect our shores. As long as we keep the debate at the level that Mr. DELLUMS always keeps the debate and other Members on our side of the aisle always keep the debate, we will be fine. Because in the end it is not about an ideological argument. It is not about who is going to win, whether Bill Buckley or Mike Kinsley or whoever is on whatever side of what issue as a commentator. They can do that on TV and they can yell at each other and get high ratings. But we have to hold ourselves to a higher standard. We need to be interested in what works.

Let me tell you, the reforms we have undertaken in the first 50 days have worked, and have put this country back on track for the first time in a very long time. I am hearing that where I am going, and you have alluded to the fact that you are hearing about that where you are going. Are all the constituents you talk to, are they all in one accord about that?

Mr. FOLEY. I don't know if they agree philosophically on everything we are doing, but they agree there is a serious problem. On welfare, they know there is a problem. They know it is not working. They know if you spent $5 trillion and the poverty level is higher than it was when the war on poverty was enacted, they know there is a significant difficulty.

You were talking about education with the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. BROWNBACK]. In Tallahassee, as the gentleman knows, we have a 17-story building designed by I.M. Pei, the internationally renowned architect. That building is as out of character with the landscape of Tallahassee as anything I have seen. It is not about ideas, it is people in that building who have never taught a classroom. That is a fundamental problem with the Department of Education in our State, that people are processing papers about our children. But the results never change for our children. The hands-on experience of the classroom will never get any better if we run it from our capitals of Tallahassee and Washington.

What I am hearing from people again is the fact that they feel that this is the greatest Nation on Earth, but they want to have pride in the people they have sent here. They do not want us yelling across the aisle and screaming at a Democrat. As Mr. DELLUMS said, it is about ideas. I will challenge you on your ideas, on your convictions, on what matters for this Government, but I will not challenge you personally.

What I am hearing when people call when we have been on C-SPAN and have been talking about the very issue of the day, they are delighted we are responding to what is their opinion. Mr. SCARBOROUGH, as you know, we have been accused with the contract of propaganda, of Republican stream-rolling everybody on ideas.

The premises of the contract, the 10 points of the contract were designed from surveys throughout America of what people were asking for, about term limits, about a balanced budget. These are not ideas we sat around at Republican party headquarters and thought up ourselves. This is the American public saying these are the changes we want. We are acting. We are working on an agenda. There is considerable reason for disagreement on some of the premises, but we are working in a collegial body that makes this body so effective and efficient.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Reclaiming the time, anybody who has seen the Department of Education in Tallahassee, as I know you have, knows that that is enough of a bureaucracy for our children in the State of Florida, and I have got to tell you it is a duplication of services, not only in Florida, but all across the country.

It is the same thing with a lot of other departments. We do not need two departments of education to teach our children. We need to free up tax dollars for individuals across this country that educate their children and once again give them choice and give them freedom to have their children taught in the way that they want to have them be taught. And if we listen to the ideas of Madison and Jefferson and the Founders of this great Republic, and if we once again look at the 10th amendment that once again says all powers not specifically given to the Federal Government in the Constitution are reserved to States and citizens, if we follow that path, we will once again become the type of nation we were intended to be, and that is a nation of communities, a nation of families, and a nation of individuals who once again take control of their own lives and can decide the way they want their community to be run, the way they want their family to be protected and taught, and the way they want their own life to be run.

It is a very constitutional premise, and I for one am honored and feel very privileged to be part of this process and to be part of the 104th Congress that actually dares to debate the great issues of the day. If we continue to do this, the second 50 days of our 100-day plan, and of the next 2 years, then this country will see change like it has never seen change before, and citizens across this country, men and women, will be empowered, and once again will have confidence in their country and believe that their elected leaders came here for a reason, and that reason was to serve.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

A DISCUSSION OF THE CRIME PROBLEM IN AMERICA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to request the House for 5 minutes and revise and extend my remarks.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from North Carolina for giving me an opportunity to proceed ahead.

I also want to commend the gentleman from Pensacola [Mr. SCARBOROUGH] for his brilliant testimony before the House and his compassion with which he has brought his efforts from the great State of Florida to this body.

But I want to spend a moment of the discussion on crime. We have had a great deal of debate over the last week and a half on an issue that plagues America, and that is the crime in our country. A murder is committed in the United States every 21 minutes, a rape every 5 minutes, a robbery every 46 seconds, an aggravated assault every 29 seconds, a burglary every 10 seconds, and a larceny theft every 4 seconds.

That is a sad commentary on our country. That is a sad part of America's heritage that we must change.

On average, violent offenders are released from prison, receive a sentence and serve an average of 7.8 years, but they only serve 3.1. More than 40 percent of murderers released from State prisons are arrested for a felony or serious misdemeanor within 3 years. A 40-percent recidivism rate. More than 20 percent are arrested for violent crimes within 3 years, and 1 in 15 is arrested for another homicide. At least 30 percent of murders are committed by people on probation, parole, or bail.

Another sad commentary is violent crimes by juveniles. Of those arrested for violent crimes between 1987 and 1992, 29 percent were under the age of 19. Between 1985 and 1991, the number of 15-year-olds arrested for murder jumped 217 percent. We had the sad tragedy in Florida of a British tourist being killed. The perpetrator, alleged perpetrator, of that crime had been arrested 53 times. Fifty-three times he had been arrested. Sadly enough, the person was 13 years old that is accused of committing the murders on those British tourists.

How are we going to change the statistics in our country? How are we going to ensure that our young people are safe on our street? How can we look at our families and our communities across America and give them some assurance that they can walk to the mall in their local communities, that they can take the dog out for a walk? That they can feel comfortable going to their car in a parking garage in an office structure throughout our cities? How can we be as certain of that safety for America?

We have enacted some very, very strong issues this week on the floor:

H.R. 3, Victim Restitution Act. I told you on the floor of what happened to me when my home was broken into years ago, and the young fellow, the juvenile, had been arrested 17 times, 17 separate occasions. The father came to the courtroom and said, "Your honor, we're trying, our son's a good boy." And each time the judge would allow probation for the child who had robbed 17 homes.

On this particular occasion, the judge looked down from the bench, the father started that same excuse, the judge looked down and said,

Let me make you a deal, sir. Mr. Foley has lost $3,000 because of your son and he can't seem to remember where the merchandise is from his home. I'll make you a deal. You be here with a check made payable to the clerk for $3,000 by noon tomorrow. If you're not here at 12:01, there will be a bench warrant issued for you and your son and I'll put you both in jail until you decide who's going to be boss of the family.

With that the father hits the kid in the head and said, "Look what you got me into." It took money out of the father's pocket to make him recognize he was responsible for his son.

That is what we are doing with victim restitution, making the victim whole from their tragedy, from their loss, having the criminal repay not only their debt to society by serving time but paying the victim back for their losses.

The Criminal Alien Deportation Act is something very important to me, because 5,500 people that are locked in the prisons of Florida are illegally in our country. The bill we passed last week will allow for deportation prior to their sentence completion back to their countries.

What do we do now? We allow them to serve the time in jail, then we release them and give them a hearing date to come back for a deportation hearing. They are criminals, they are not returning to a courtroom to be deported out of this country. They disappear; 48,000 failed to appear last year alone under that scenario.

Our bill provides that they can be deported from inside the jail cell to their countries, not allowed to roam the street, not allowed to commit other crimes. That is going to make big headway in the problems in America. It will also open up beds so that we can keep the rapists and murderers out of our prisons.

Local government law enforcement block grants, sending the money to the States and allowing them to decide what is the most important crime-fighting mechanism within their community.

These are a number of the things that we enacted this week. But something strikes me that we did not discuss what we need to discuss in America and we need to discuss it forcefully, is the protection of our children from sexual exploitation and sexual violence.

Sean from my office told me that there is an incident that is going to be reported tomorrow morning in the paper in our community about child pornography and the people that were involved. Once again we read in the headlines of another child dying or being abused or used in such a nasty and disgusting way that we allow our children to fall prey to these types of people.

These are the things that we must fight as Americans. We must protect our children from sexual violence, sexual abuse. We need to act together as a Congress to make certain that the children today and in the future know that they are safe, know that they will not be abused and feel comfortable in this great country of ours, in America.

FEDERAL FOOD ASSISTANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GOSS). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 4, 1995, the gentlewoman from North Carolina [Mrs. CLAYTON] is recognized for 40 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, there is a provision in H.R. 4, the Personal Responsibility Act of 1995, that is irresponsible. As written, that provision would convert Federal food assistance programs into block grants. Block grant funds are free funds to State and local governments. They may not be used as intended. This irresponsible provision thus puts at risk various nutritional programs, such as food stamps, school breakfast and lunches, Meals on Wheels, and the Commodity Supplemental Program.

When H.R. 4 comes to the floor, I will offer an amendment to restore the Federal food assistance program. The block grant proposal does not take into account increased school enrollments, changing economic conditions, and national food nutrition standards. Confronting hunger in America is a serious matter. It should not be left to artificial time pressures and blind budget bludgeoning. It is not responsible to put the health of our seniors and children at risk. I invite my colleagues to join me in amending H.R. 4 to make it responsible on the issue of hunger. I will say more about that later. On the first day of this, the 104th Congress, I pointed out to my colleagues, that as we begin our work this year, we must remember that our first responsibility is not to the parties to which we belong, but to the people we represent.

It is for that reason that I supported many of the early votes on reform and several parts of the proposed rules package put forth by the new majority party. I believe the majority structured some important changes to the way we function, and those changes should not have been rejected by Democrats simply because they were offered by Republicans. At the same time, I reminded my colleagues that we must be forever mindful that no Member in this Chamber has a premium on what's best for this Nation. We all have a Contract With America. What makes us a great Nation is the compassion we show for those who live in the shadows of life. We are strong because historically we have been able to make a place for all who live here, including those least able to help themselves—the young, the poor, the disabled.

In this time of increased scrutiny, we must examine each and every program, but we must also consider each and every person affected by our changes. We must ask the question: Who is helped and who is hurt? And, at the end of each day, we must be honest about whether our actions helped the many in need or the few in clover. President Kennedy said it best, 34 years ago, when he stated, "A country that cannot help the many who are poor cannot help the few who are rich." The contract to which each Member is bound, is to work in the best interest of the American people. On election day, we offered our services to this great country, and voters accepted our offer, from Rocky Mount, NC, and across the United States.

We all have a Contract With America. That contract involves being open to the challenge of change. We, in the Congress, must get beyond partisan politics and move to the high ground of principle. This is a new day and a new time. There are problems which we face that transcend party and politics. Teenage pregnancies stifle an entire community. Violence of any kind, whether driven by drugs or propelled by deep philosophical differences, can not and must not be tolerated. Economic justice must ring true this Congress. No child and no senior citizen should face hunger in this land of plenty.

If welfare reform is to have any significance, we must combine with it a meaningful jobs program. And, welfare reform without minimum wage reform is no reform. With a meaningful jobs program, there would be less urgency for another crime bill. Instead of calls to take back our streets, there should be calls to give our streets back to the average, hard-working, God fearing citizen. Unfortunately, on this issue, Congress has failed to heed the call. Last week and this week, the majority pushed through radical changes in our law enforcement system. They sliced fourth amendment rights, eliminating habeas corpus protections, cut prevention programs, community cops program eliminated and put money in to build more jails. It is a sad and difficult time for our Nation.

I too believe we can make our Government smaller, yet more efficient and more effective. That is why I applauded and supported several of the reforms offered by the majority. But, real reform must include an end to gag rules. There are important amendments that those of us in the new minority party have wanted to offer, amendments designed to improve and perfect the legislation presented. But Members have been muzzled by a majority determined to press their 100-day agenda under any and all circumstances. I will continue to stand up as part of the loyal opposition when I believe pomposity, audacity, and duplicity confront us. No party or person has an exclusive on such things as family values and personal responsibility. Those are standards I absolutely hold dear. And, no party or person should be able to take the right to speak from any of us. Too many have sacrificed for that precious liberty. Let no one forget. We all have a Contract With America. That is why I support the call of President Clinton for an increase in the minimum wage by 90 cents, over the next 2 years. This increase would raise the minimum wage from its current level of $4.25 to $5.15. This is a much-needed increase.

There has been much talk about welfare reform recently. I support welfare reform. The current system does not work well, and it does not promote self-sufficiency. Reform, however, does not mean change for the sake of change. Reform means change for the sake of improvement. As we move to reform the welfare system, we must make sure that we make a better system, not just a different system. Welfare reform without wage reform will not work. The gap in income is growing between those who have a lot of money and those who have a little money. That is unacceptable. According to Business Week magazine, the income gap "hurts the economy." Almost half of the money in America is in the hands of just 20 percent of the people. That top 20 percent is made up of families with the highest incomes.

The bottom 20 percent has less than 5 percent of the money in their hands. A modest increase in the minimum wage could help the bottom 20 percent, and, it will not hurt the top 20 percent. Without an increase in the minimum wage, those with little money end up with less money. That is because the cost of living continues to rise. By 1993, families in the top 20 percent had an average income of $104,616. Families in the bottom 20 percent in America had an average income of just $12,964.

That is a gap of more than $90,000. That amount of money makes a big difference in the ability of families to buy food and shelter, to pay for energy to heat their homes, and to be able to clothe, care for, and educate their children. That amount of money makes the difference between families with abundance and families in poverty. An increase in the minimum wage won't provide abundance, but it can raise working families out of poverty. As income dropped for low income families during the decade of the 1980's, costs escalated. While the income for the bottom 20 percent was declining, the rate of inflation for food, shelter, heating fuel, clothing, transportation, and medical care, was increasing. In other words, the cost of bread, milk, eggs, a place to sleep, heat, clothing to wear, a bus ride, and a visit to the doctor went up, as the income of poor people went down. The rate of inflation for each of those items increased, on average, 60 percent, with a low of 36 percent and a high of 117 percent. Despite these spiraling prices, Congress did not take any steps to increase the minimum wage, and poor people, the bottom 20 percent of America, became poorer. That deep valley remains with us today.

The bottom 20 percent of our citizens can have a full-time employee in the family, working at least 40 hours a week, and still not be able to make ends meet. The earnings of that family could place them below the poverty line. It makes little sense to discuss welfare reform when working full time does not make a family any better off than being on welfare full time. Work should be a prize. It should not be a penalty. Work is a penalty when, despite an individual's best efforts, living is an unrelenting, daily struggle. Work is a prize when enough is earned to pay for essentials. Other nations, around the world, have been faced with the gap between high- and low-income workers. Those that have been able to close the gap are the nations that have enacted minimum wage increases for their workers.

We can learn from the experience of Germany, Japan, and France, for example. It should be noted that 62 percent of all minimum wage workers are women. Welfare reform, in the absence of minimum wage reform, will hurt women in a lopsided way. The Contract With America proposes to put 1.5 million welfare recipients into below minimum wage jobs by the year 2001. Most of those will be women. The number of working poor increased by 42 percent between 1980 and 1992. Many of those were women. In fact, income inequality in America is higher than it has been since 1947. Forty-eight percent of all poor children have parents who work full time. In addition, a recent study indicates that job growth in America is lowest where the income gap is widest. Closing the gap helps create jobs rather than reduce jobs.

Those who argue that an increase in the minimum wage will cause job losses, fail to look at the facts. First, no increase has caused job losses. But, more importantly, other recent studies have shown that an increase in the minimum wage tends to cause an increase in jobs, rather than a loss of jobs. The States of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, subject of one of those studies, provide a classic example. New Jersey raised its minimum wage to $5.05. Pennsylvania kept its minimum wage at the required level, $4.25. Jobs increased in New Jersey. There were no job increases in Pennsylvania. I want my State of North Carolina to benefit from the New Jersey example. Indeed, a recent survey of employment practices in North Carolina, after the 1991 minimum wage increase, found that there was no significant drop in employment. The survey also found that there was no measurable increase in food prices. In addition, the survey found that workers' wages actually increased by more than the required change.

There are an estimated 117,000 minimum wage workers in North Carolina. Those workers are not just numbers. They are people, with families and children. They are farmers and food service workers, mechanics and machine operators. They are in construction work and sales, health, and cleaning services, and a range of other occupations. Their families helped build America, and they can help rebuild it. They do not need charity, they need a chance. A chance is a reasonable increase in the minimum wage, as proposed by the President. We should reward work. The economy is hurt by the income gap between the rich and the poor in America. If we want to help the economy, help women achieve a level of equality, help our children and help all Americans achieve a better quality of life, we should pass a bill to increase the minimum wage. The best welfare reform is minimum wage reform.

Mr. Speaker, I would like now to turn to the primary topic of my discussion for today. As I indicated at the outset, the Personal Responsibility Act of 1995 [PRA], a part of the Contract With America, would convert all Federal food assistance programs into block grants. I have many concerns with that proposal. My concerns are:

First, providing for block grants for the various nutrition programs would require the development of a formula for the distribution of the block grant funds. Is there a way to develop a formula that is fair and works?

Second, Federal food assistance programs would be cut by $17.5 billion in the first 4 years under the Contract With America. Can those programs sustain such cuts and be effective?

Third, according to a Department of Agriculture study, the formula proposed by the Contract With America resulted in big winners and big losers. Is it possible to develop a formula that meets the needs of the intended beneficiaries?

Fourth, under the block grant program, States could use food assistance funds in any way, including cash grants and for purposes other than food purchases. I have two concerns about that: Won't the use of cash grants make fraud and abuse easier and won't allowing the cash grants to be used for purposes other than food purchases defeat the intent of the program?

Fifth, a major limitation of a block grant program is its inflexibility, particularly when the economy changes. How would such a program compare to the existing Food Stamp Program and other programs, like school breakfast and school lunch?

Sixth, in North Carolina, the nutrition programs serve as an economic stimulus and stabilizer for the State, especially for the farm community. Have changes to these programs taken into account the negative impact such changes might have on State and local economies?

Seventh, what will happen when States use up funds that have been provided under a block grant program?

Eighth, elementary and secondary school enrollments are expected to rise by 8 percent over the next 5 years. What will happen when school populations grow, and the money runs out?

Ninth, will we have waiting lists and lines of people who may have missed an opportunity to participate in a program?

Tenth, can we truly expect administrative savings through block grants when the various nutrition programs are so different that they will need to be administered separately?

Eleventh, the WIC Program has worked and worked well. Why are we trying to fix something that isn't broke?

Mr. Speaker, the Children's Defense Fund has prepared an excellent briefing book on welfare reform, which was published in January of this year. I want to especially draw my colleagues' attention to the section of the briefing book entitled, "Why Safety Net Entitlements Must Not Be Converted Into Block Grants." Let me share with you the findings of the Children's Defense Fund from that section:

WHY SAFETY NET ENTITLEMENTS MUST NOT BE CONVERTED INTO BLOCK GRANTS

A number of proposals are being circulated that would transform key means-tested "entitlement" programs (food stamps, school lunches and other child nutrition programs, Medicaid, AFDC, and Foster Care and Adoption Assistance, among others) into block grants. Such a transformation of these key safety net programs would do incalculable damage to America's children and families, states' finances, and the nation's future.

Mr. Speaker, we must reform our welfare system but we should improve the system for the people and the Nation. We should do more than slogans.

Mr. Speaker, yes, we should reform our welfare system, because our welfare system is not working. But we should not reform the system just for change itself. We should reform the system to make it a better system.

We are called on to have a contract with our citizens that we represent. We were called to be faithful to our promise that we would obey the Constitution. I urge us to go beyond slogans, just slogans. Personal responsibility also takes in responsibility from this Congress. We have a responsibility to make sure these programs are administered efficiently as well as effectively.

Slogans will not feed the poor. Only our working to make sure these programs work will. And I urge my citizens, I urge my colleagues as well as citizens, to understand the nutrition programs have worked well for America.

Vol. 141

WASHINGTON, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1995

No. 31

(Legislative day of Monday, January 30, 1995)

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Today's prayer will be offered by our guest chaplain, the Reverend Barbara D. Henry, of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington.

PRAYER

The guest chaplain, the Reverend Barbara D. Henry, of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray:

Almightly and everlasting God, Creator of the universe with all its marvelous order and complexity; You have made us in Your image and given us dominion over all the Earth. Give us reverence for all Your creation—for the Earth which supports us, for all the myriad forms of life which inhabit this planet, and especially for the wonderful diversity of people and cultures in this world.

Give to all those who hold authority in this land, we pray, an awareness of the many blessings You have bestowed upon them. May our Senators be blessed, in all their deliberations, with ever new insight into Your purposes for the human race, and with wisdom and determination in making provisions for the future of our Nation. Direct and guide them in their words, which are heard by so many, and in their decisions, which will affect so many.

For You, O God, are the source of all wisdom, all power, all grace, and we give You glory for ever and ever. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the acting majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, this morning following the time for the two leaders, the time until 10:30 will be equally divided between the two leaders or their designees for debate on the motion to invoke cloture on the constitutional balanced budget amendment.

For the information of all our colleagues, at the hour of 10:30 this morning, there will be a rolcall on invoking cloture on the balanced budget amendment.

I now ask unanimous consent that at the hour of 10 a.m., Senator DASCHLE be recognized for up to 15 minutes, to be followed by Senator DOLE for up to 15 minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. I further ask, Mr. President, that Senators have until 10:30 this morning to file any second-degree amendments to House Joint Resolution 1, the constitutional balanced budget amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I would like to observe once again, as the leader pointed out last night, he did file cloture motions last night. Two of them were filed. Those would ripen or be available next Wednesday, the 22d, and the leader indicated that we should expect votes on those two cloture motions, if necessary to have the second one, and other amendments during that day unless some other agreement is reached. I yield the floor.

RECOGNITION OF DEMOCRATIC LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Democratic leader is recognized.

Mr. DASCHLE. I thank the President pro tempore. I wish him a good morning.

(Mr. COVERDELL assumed the chair.)

COMMITMENT TO HONEST BALANCED BUDGET AMENDMENT

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, the first legislative action I took when I came to Congress in 1979 was to introduce a constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget.

I believed 16 years ago, as I believe today, that Government must learn to live within its means. I believed then, as I believe now, that we must trim the fat, cut the waste, and make the tough choices necessary to control spending.

I supported a balanced budget amendment then and I remain committed to an honest, fair, and forthright amendment now.

However, I have concluded I cannot support the one which is now being pushed through the body, without amendment or compromise.

The magnitude of the decision about how we propose to amend the Constitution should not be lost on anyone. A balanced budget amendment, if passed and ratified, will have a dramatic effect on the very nature of government and its relationship to the American people in all perpetuity. We cannot come back next year or next Congress and clean up our mistakes.

When we embark on such a path—to amend the Constitution—we must know that it is the best amendment we can write, that it incorporates the best ideas and the most carefully written words we have to offer.

It is critical now, as we contemplate amending the Constitution for only the 28th time, that we refuse to succumb to the notion that what we do is, as the old adage goes, "good enough for Government work."

This effort had a noble beginning. It was the result of the tireless work of the Senator from Illinois, the Senator from Utah, the Senator from Idaho, and many others to enforce fiscal discipline, something we all recognize is necessary.

The refusal to consider legitimate amendments, amendments that would make this constitutional amendment even stronger, has reduced this effort to something far less than our best.

When this debate began I expressed my concerns about the balanced budget amendment proposal before Members. I expressed a sincere hope that we could work together to address them and craft the best constitutional amendment this Senate could write on behalf of all the American people.

First, as many argued last year, Social Security should be viewed as an indelible contract between the Government and the American people, funded by a dedicated trust fund that should be left out of budgetary calculations. As written, it is clear that the current proposal uses the Social Security trust fund to mask the true size of the deficit, something that is patently inconsistent with our goal to balance the budget.

As a result it is estimated that $705 billion of Social Security trust fund revenue will be used to mask the real size of the national deficit between now and the year 2002. In fact, that very issue was confirmed again this morning in the Wall Street Journal.

A speech that the majority leader gave yesterday to a group indicated that he saw the size of the deficit over the course of the next 7 years to be somewhere in the vicinity of $685 billion, which would require some form of health care reductions to reduce that deficit to below the $685 billion mark he suggests. Mr. President, $685 billion, if that is the size of the deficit as my Republican colleagues would see it, clearly implies that the $705 billion for Social Security is still on the table in spite of all of the best efforts made by many Members on the other side to indicate the contrary.

Second, I believe that budgetary discipline, common sense, and our long-term investment goals warrant the establishment of a budget that distinguishes between investment and consumption. We ought to use this opportunity once and for all to establish the same budgetary principles used by businesses and by most State governments.

Finally, as we have argued at some length during this debate, the American people have an absolute right to know how we plan to fulfill the promise of a balanced budget before they are called upon to ratify it. Working with my Democratic colleagues, we have proposed three balanced budget constitutional amendment approaches in a good-faith attempt to address those concerns and make the underlying amendment more sound.

Unfortunately, each of those amendments has been rejected essentially along party lines. The only way I can interpret those votes is that the majority is saying, "We want our balanced budget amendment or no amendment at all." They are telling the American people to put their trust in good intentions and to live with consequences that are yet unknown.

We should support a balanced budget amendment. But we should never violate America's contract with its senior citizens merely because we are unwilling to make the tough choices now. Balancing the budget by cutting Social Security is no balanced budget at all.

Making tough choices is also an important part of what every family and every business must do. When a family balances its budget, we separate investments in our future, our home, our savings for our children's education, from the day-to-day expenditures on things like food and clothing. We are willing to borrow money to buy a home or pay for college but we cannot afford to take on too much debt because the interest is part of our day-to-day expenses and cannot exceed our income.

In short, we separate our capital budget from our operating budget. Nearly every State, nearly every business, small or large, does exactly the same thing. Everybody separates these two budgets except for the Federal Government. Just yesterday we proposed an amendment that said, let's be honest with the American people about the budget process. Separate investment from daily operating expenses. Do at the Federal level what has always been done in the States. But that proposal, too, was rejected.

I support a balanced budget amendment, but I also share the belief that we owe it to the American people to tell them how we will do what the amendment requires. We must not substitute political slogans for straight talk. We must not cover up the reality with rhetoric. We must not ask South Dakotans, or any Americans, to trust us or future Congresses if we are not willing to give them good reason to do so.

We cannot build a house of credibility if we do not produce the blueprint first. Neither can we build that house without knowing what tools to use. The American people have a right to know how we are going to achieve a balanced budget by the year 2002.

Two years ago when a Democratic Congress cut $500 billion from the deficit, we gave the Congress and the country a blueprint of our list of budget-cutting tools—page after page of painful cuts. Everyone recognizes what an unpopular vote that was, how difficult it was to make those choices, to lay out with specificity, line by line, item by item, exactly what we were going to do over the course of the next 5 years to reduce spending by $500 billion. And because it was tough, because it was specific, it passed by a single vote.

Today the American people have the same right to know. They have a right to know what is in the plan. They have a right to know whether the majority plans to cut Medicare, student loans, or veterans benefits.

Our deficit reduction target is at least $1.2 trillion—$1.2 trillion—over the course of the next 7 years. It is not going to get smaller, and with each year of delay, it is going to be exacerbated. It is a daunting goal, we all recognize that, but we all recognize, too, that it must be met.

The question, frankly, is how. How are we going to do it? How are we going to do what the speech by the majority leader yesterday suggested? Are we going to keep Social Security on the table and talk about a debt that is only $685 billion? Are we going to include everything, put it on the table, recognize that if we are going to increase defense spending, if we are going to cut taxes, if we are going to protect Social Security and do all of this in the next 7 years, that we are going to do it using the tools that we have available to us?

Americans have a right to know. We have a responsibility to tell them.

I proposed the right-to-know amendment to the Constitution that would both require a balanced budget and require Democrats and Republicans to work together to draft a plan and make it public. But the amendment was defeated, and the result will be that this Congress will collectively say "no" to being honest with the American people, leaving us with only the hope—only the hope—that we can accomplish our goals. No blueprint, no mechanism in place, no real plan. Just a hope that somehow we can do something in 7 years that we have not been able to do in decades.

Everyone would agree that the idea of a balanced budget in the abstract has universal support. But no budget is balanced in the abstract. Budgets are balanced in the context of existing circumstances. We have a new majority in Congress that claims it will cut taxes, increase defense spending and balance the budget, but refuses to explain how and refuses to guarantee that it will be accomplished fairly.

Last year, I supported a balanced budget amendment. This year, in this context, I cannot.

Last year, a Democratic Congress was committed to protecting Social Security and Medicare. This year, the new majority has been unwilling to do so in law. Last year, Congress honored the people's right to know. Last year, Congress was committed to an open, honest debate about how to reduce Government spending.

Last year, Congress leveled with the American people. This year, the majority refuses to acknowledge Americans' right to know.

This country is in need of a serious, principled debate about our future and our increasing national indebtedness. It should be a debate about the generational debt that we owe our children and how best to discharge it. It should be a debate about the ways past Government commitments to Americans will always be kept. It should be a debate about rational fiscal policy, about consumption versus investment, savings over spending, and all of the elements that together make up a sound basis for future economic growth. It should be a debate about what we hold to be most important now and in the future.

That debate may never come. Yet, I deeply hope it will come, and when it does, I hope we will have an opportunity to write an amendment to the Constitution that represents our best effort, one which will stand the test of time, a balanced budget amendment that honors our past commitments, protects our future investment, and tells the American people the truth. It must be a serious obligation, not merely a statement made of good intentions.

Finally, while I believe we need an honest and fair balanced budget amendment, I know we need an honest and fair balanced budget even more. We can and we must get immediately to the real work of deficit reduction. I know I speak for my Democratic colleagues when I say we are ready to work with the majority right now to develop a budget resolution that cuts spending and balances the budget. It is an effort which requires bipartisan cooperation as well as concentration.

So, Mr. President, whatever the fate of this amendment, it is time for us to work together to fulfill that promise and renew the hope of all American people that at long last—at long last—we can accomplish what we all want and what our children deserve.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LOTT addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to proceed for up to 10 minutes as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

BALANCED BUDGET AMENDMENT

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I listened very carefully to the distinguished Democratic leader's remarks. I know he is very serious about the issue of debts and the deficit that we have each year. I know he is serious about a constitutional amendment for a balanced budget because he voted for it just 1 year ago. And I believe and certainly hope that in the end, he will vote for the balanced budget amendment this year.

I believe this has been a very serious, principled debate. This legislation, which is identical to the balanced budget amendment the Democratic leader voted for last year, has been carefully drafted. I remind my colleagues that it passed the other body by a vote of 300 to 132—an overwhelming bipartisan vote after serious consideration in the debate before the House of Representatives. Our own Senate Judiciary Committee reported it out after careful consideration on a bipartisan vote.

A number of amendments have been offered, considered, debated, and voted on, and all of them have been defeated by bipartisan votes. On one of the votes yesterday, there were actually nine Democrats who voted to table it, while eight Republicans voted against tabling it. So we are having a very serious debate here with Members voting their conscience.

We are now in the 18th day of debate on this constitutional amendment for a balanced budget. Last year, we had an extended floor debate and a vote on this exact amendment. I think the high water mark, up until this year, for debate on a constitutional amendment for a balanced budget has been about 11 days. So we certainly are giving it plenty of time for thoughtful consideration. And because of delays in getting an agreement when we might bring this to a conclusion, we apparently will still be on this amendment next week. It will have been a full month that we have taken to consider this legislation. That is fine because, in the end, I believe we are going to pass it with a good, strong bipartisan vote.

Let me quote some very strong words in support of the balanced budget amendment:

To remedy our fiscal situation, we must stop spending beyond our means. This will not require the emasculation of important domestic priorities as some suggest.

In this debate on a balanced budget amendment, we are being forced to face the consequences of our inaction. Quite simply, we are building a legacy of debt for our children and grandchildren and hamstringing our ability to address pressing national priorities.

Those are the words of the distinguished Democratic leader just last year, February 28, 1994, in support of a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution.

With regard to the right to know, we need to work together on this. We cannot say today everything that we are going to do in a budget resolution this year or next year or in 5 or 7 years. It will depend on the Budget Committee, the vote and actions on the floor of the Senate. It will take all of us working together, no matter where we are from, what party or what philosophy.

With regard to the right to know, this is what the distinguished Democratic leader said just last year:

Congress and the President will have 7 years to address the current deficit and reach a consensus on our Nation's budget priorities. We will have time to find ways to live within our means and still meet existing obligations to our citizens, particularly the elderly.

I agree.

But this year, we debated the right-to-know amendment, and it was rejected with 56 votes against it—again a bipartisan vote.

With regard to protecting our seniors, minority leader DASCHLE last year said:

Requiring the Government to operate within its budget does not mean * * * we would be forced to renege on our current obligations to America's seniors. For my part, such a requirement would not lessen our commitment to * * * protecting Social Security.

I agree. Last year, the minority leader also said:

By the year 2020, most of the baby boom generation will have retired, and those retirees will be supported by a smaller working population. In order to ensure that we can meet our commitments to future retirees without jeopardizing the standard of living of working men and women, we must seek to maximize economic growth during the early 21st century. Our current budget deficit is eating away at that growth and undermining our economic potential.

The point the minority leader made last year is that if we do not have a balanced budget amendment, if we do not get our fiscal house in order, the people who will suffer the most are our seniors. So I think the minority leader's comments—and I have many others—just 1 year ago on the constitutional amendment for a balanced budget were excellent. I agree with them. I voted with him then, and I hope we are going to vote together this time because this is exactly the same amendment we both voted for just last year.

I remind my colleagues, too, that just 1 year ago when I offered an amendment to try to block tax increases on Social Security retirees, some of the same people who are now pleading their concern for our seniors and their Social Security benefits, where were they when we were trying to block on a bipartisan vote tax increases on their retirement benefits? Where were they last year? Why were they not worried about Social Security retirees, Medicare and Medicaid, then?

Where were they last year when the President proposed billions of dollars in cuts in Medicare in his health care proposal? President Clinton proposed to cut Medicare by $124 billion over 5 years in his health care plan. And in 1993, the President cut $53 billion from Medicare as a part of his tax bill. Were they not worried about the seniors then? Were they not worried about Medicare then?

Look, the issue of right-to-know is another red herring; it is simply an attempt to scare seniors about Social Security. It boils down to a very simple question: Are you for a constitutional amendment for a balanced budget or not? If you are, you vote yes. If you are not, vote no. And the people will know how you feel about this. Are you prepared to explain how this year you are against the balanced budget amendment but last year you voted for it? Why? Is it because there is a different majority? I cannot believe that.

We have an opportunity here to do what is right for our country—to have the additional pressure on Congress to control spending, not raise taxes.

Everybody keeps saying, Oh, we reduced the deficit in 1993. The so-called 1993 deficit reduction bill was attempted to reduce the deficit through massive tax increases. We can move this whole debate in a different direction. And I have been here through 22 years of trying to deal with the deficit—through Gramm-Rudman, through the Gang of 17, and through the budget negotiations at Andrews Air Force Base. Congress has tried time and time again to balance the budget, but we never quite carry through with it.

We need this constitutional amendment for a balanced budget. The American people support it overwhelmingly. This is our opportunity. And we must, must find a way to come together to pass it. I know it is going to be a bipartisan vote; one of our key proponents of the balanced budget amendment has been the distinguished Senator from Illinois, Senator SIMON.

The balanced budget amendment has already passed the House. It is up to the Senate. If we vote now, it goes to the States. The people will have a chance to decide. The only thing standing between the people's opportunity to vote on this and its passage is how the Senate will vote.

I urge my colleagues, let us begin to bring this to a conclusion. Let us quit talking about red herrings. Let us face up to the real issue and vote for a constitutional amendment for a balanced budget.

Mr. DASCHLE addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the minority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. My friend, the distinguished Senator from Mississippi, made reference to some comments I made last year. Let me respond briefly because I know there are others waiting.

I made them in earnest last year, and I stand by them this year. Nothing the Senator from Mississippi said with regard to my comments last year are any less true this year. What I said then applies now, and that is my whole point. If we are going to have a balanced Federal budget, good intentions are not enough. It is not enough to just say we are going to do it. We must be serious about it, and that is the question.

When I made those comments last year, we were serious, and we proved we were serious with a $500 billion deficit reduction plan that laid out with specificity exactly what we were going to do.

Where is the plan this year? How are we going to do it this year? On just a hope, somehow the expectation that it is all going to magically come together?

That is what we are saying. That is why this right to know amendment is so important.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair might intervene for a moment to say to the distinguished Democratic leader, his time has expired under the previous order, and the time is now under the control of the acting majority leader. If he chooses to yield time to the minority leader to complete his remarks, up until 10 o'clock, he may do so.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I know our two leaders will be speaking at 10 a.m. for 15 minutes each. Unless there is a problem with his other colleagues, I will be glad to yield the remaining 4 minutes to the leader to conclude his remarks.

Mr. DASCHLE. I appreciate very much the willingness of the whip to do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader may proceed, then.

Mr. DASCHLE. Let me finish very briefly.

Mr. President, I agree with exactly what the distinguished Senator from Mississippi said about what the issue is, with the exception of one word. He said the issue is very simply do we support a balanced Federal budget, a constitutional amendment to balance the budget.

I think that is a legitimate question, and the answer should be yes. But it should not be are we willing to support any constitutional amendment to balance the Federal budget, any constitutional amendment. The answer is no. This is going to be with us for all perpetuity, all posterity, and if it is going to be with us that long and if it is that important and will have that far-reaching a consequence, we had better do it right because we will not get a second chance.

With that, again, I thank the Senator for yielding, and I yield the floor.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, if I may respond.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. LOTT. Again, I refer to the distinguished Democratic leader's comments last year because they were so persuasive then, and I believe they are now. I will just quote these two paragraphs and yield the time for others.

Some of my colleagues feel, as does President Clinton—

This is Senator DASCHLE speaking. that we can make these tough budget choices without amending the Constitution. I wish they were right, but history indicates they are not.

By adding a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, we as a nation are embracing the principle that government should not spend beyond its means. This is a principle worthy of inclusion in the document that sets forth the limits of governmental power and protects the rights of individual citizens.

Those are the words of Senator DASCHLE, the distinguished Democratic leader. They were only 1 year ago. They were right then, and they are right now. We must pass this balanced budget amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. HEFLIN. I ask the minority leader if he will yield me about 6 minutes of time to speak on the Iwo Jima anniversary.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I will be happy to yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, may I inquire whether this would be from the 15 minutes the leader has?

Mr. DASCHLE. That would be my expectation, that I will yield 6 minutes I have available on the cloture vote to the Senator from Alabama to speak on an issue of his choosing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Alabama.

THE DEADLY BATTLE ON IWO JIMA

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I rise today to remind Americans of one of the costliest battles of World War II, and the sacrifices made by the men of the United States Marine Corps. This Sunday will be the 50th anniversary of the Marine Corps landing on Iwo Jima, a place where, as Admiral Nimitz said "Uncommon valor was a common virtue."

After 36 days of fighting and at a cost of 6,821 Americans killed and 19,217 wounded, the island was captured. The cost to the Japanese defenders was over 22,000 lives. Only about 1,000 Japanese survived the battle.

The Japanese had long prepared for the February 19, 1945, invasion. After the battle was over, it was revealed that the enemy had constructed 642 blockhouses, pillboxes, and other gun positions. The marines landing on Iwo Jima were certainly stepping into the very jaws of the enemy—and I might say, the very jaws of hell.

At 9 o'clock in the morning, the massive assault wave of the 4th and 5th Marine Divisions hit the beach at Iwo Jima. A Japanese observer watching the drama unfold from a cave on the slopes of Mount Suribachi reported: "At 9 in the morning, several hundred landing crafts with amphibious tanks in the lead rushed ashore like an enormous tidal wave." Within minutes, 6,000 marines were ashore, and initial casualties were lighter than expected.

Then the pounding started as the Japanese commander unleashed hundreds of heavy artillery pieces, giant mortars, rockets, and antitank weapons that had been carefully arranged around the landing beaches now clogged with troops and materials. The ensuing bombardment was as deadly and terrifying as the marines had ever experienced. Casualties mounted appallingly on what would become the costliest single day in the U.S. Marine Corps history. By the day's end, nearly 2,500 Marines were killed or wounded.

Typical of the marine heroism and sacrifice of that first day on Iwo Jima, and not unlike what I had witnessed while serving in the Marine Corps with the 9th Regiment in the Pacific, were the actions of legendary Marine Gunner Sergeant John Basilone. "Manila John," as he was fondly called by his fellow marines, had been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor in recognition of his outstanding heroism at Guadalcanal. On Iwo Jima, Basilone single-handedly destroyed a Japanese blockhouse while braving the deadly assault of enemy heavy caliber fire. For his exploits he was posthumously awarded the Navy cross.

The battle for Iwo Jima raged for 36 long days, and on many days the advances of the American forces could be measured in yards. Though I was not there because I was recovering from a wound I received during the battle of Guam, my outfit, the 3rd Division, served as the floating reserve for this battle.

Entering the fray on February 21, when the fighting was at its worst, the soldiers of the 3rd Marine Division were tasked with clearing the central plateau of the island. This area held many prepared enemy defensive positions, but very little cover for the advancing Marines. By the time the plateau was taken, the regimental casualties exceeded 50 percent. Some companies suffered casualty rates in excess of 200 percent, including my old company, A Company, of the 9th Regiment.

Considering the magnitude of these casualties, one may wonder what drove these men to carry on. From my own experience, I would say these men drew their strength from the support of their fellow marines, an esprit de corps that is unique in military history, and the knowledge that taking this island was important to the war effort. Most important, however, they fought because they knew they had to fight. They had to take that hill, that they had to take that island. The Commander in Chief had said it, and these men knew it in their hearts, victory was the only way home.

On March 26, 1945, finally, the Japanese were defeated and the island was ours.

On Sunday, the 50th anniversary of the landing on Iwo Jima, approximately 5,000 survivors of the battle will gather at the Iwo Jima Memorial here in Washington to remember and to pay reverence to those who gave their lives.

Mount Suribachi, and the flag raising on that mount, stands as a symbol of the courage of the U.S. Marine Corps. Mount Suribachi was 556 feet high. It bristled with over 200 guns, and 21 blockhouses. It had to be taken, because it was delivering devastating fire on the beaches and to the marines that were below. The marines assigned were willing to risk their lives for the sake of their comrades and their country. So, through personal courage and esprit de corps, on February 23 the Japanese defending Mount Suribachi were overcome and the Stars and Stripes were raised.

And as the flag was raised on that mount, it gave additional strength to the marines below to move forward, on to victory. We salute the survivors of Iwo Jima and wish them well as they commemorate that very important battle of World War II.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. INHOFE). The Democratic leader.

THE CLOTURE VOTE

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, at 10:30, in less than 25 minutes, there will be a vote on the majority leader's cloture motion. I want to take a couple of minutes to comment on that prior to the time we vote.

I regret we have to take a vote at this time. I believe, frankly, as I said the other day, it is unnecessary. I am concerned that it sends the wrong message to the American people about how seriously we consider the process of amending the U.S. Constitution.

The implicit suggestion behind the motion is that shutting off debate on this very serious and complicated issue is necessary because Democratic Senators are filibustering the balanced budget amendment and obstructing the debate, when the truth is just the opposite. There is no filibuster here. There have been very few quorum calls over the last several days. The Senate floor has been busy, virtually every minute. Senators have been on the floor. They have been here offering amendments, debating the issues. They have been busy doing exactly what we are all elected to do, to consider carefully some of the most far-reaching issues that they and the American people face.

Democratic Senators have not employed dilatory tactics. To the contrary, we have offered legitimate and very serious amendments that ought to be given serious consideration by all Senators—several amendments that, in my view, as I said just a moment ago, would have made this particular balanced budget amendment much stronger. Unfortunately, the obstruction has come from the other side. Every Democratic amendment has been tabled—virtually along party lines. Anyone who has been on or watched this debate over the last several days knows very well that the substance of these amendments has been seemingly of little concern. They have been tabled, not because of their content, but simply because they were offered.

This issue is far too serious to simply step aside and avoid the stampede. Amending the Constitution is just about the most serious step the Congress and States can take. It should not be taken lightly. And it should reflect the most thoughtful and inclusive debate that we have to offer. It should reflect the best ideas we have to offer. A vote to cut off this debate artificially is a vote to obstruct that thoughtful and inclusive process. It is premature, it is unnecessary, and, under these circumstances, I view it as a disservice to the American people.

It is also a direct threat to the rights of all Democratic Senators, each of whom have a right to offer amendments. As I said, there have been virtually no quorum calls; virtually every amendment has been relevant. In recent days nearly every Democratic Senator has agreed to a time limit on the debate on his or her amendment. And these have been important amendments.

We debated, as we again talked this morning, about the right to know, and spelling out to the American people how we are going to accomplish a balanced Federal budget—what kind of blueprint we are going to use, what kind of tools we will acquire and utilize to accomplish a balanced budget in just 7 years.

We talked about Social Security and the need to protect it, to take it off the table to ensure that we are not going to mask the size of the debt with the size of the Social Security trust fund.

We talked about enforcement. Simply saying we are going to balance the budget with no legal mechanism in place to ensure that we are going to enforce what we say we are going to do makes anyone wonder just how serious we are about doing it in the first place.

We talked about the need to separate operating capital from investments in the future—how we do that in business, how we do that in State governments, how we need to compare apples and apples when we compare the Federal Government to the State government and how a capital budget would allow us to do that.

We talked about circumstances relating to natural disasters. The Senator from California raised a very difficult issue. How do we address serious problems relating to the disasters that occur in every part of the country all too frequently once we have a balanced Federal budget?

It is very disconcerting that virtually every amendment was defeated on a near party-line vote. Regardless of the vote, there are many more very important, relevant amendments that deserve our careful consideration. Not all amendments that are pending will be offered. I know that mention was made yesterday about how many amendments are still pending. Some of those amendments were offered just to protect Democratic Senators in case there is a cloture vote and it passes. We know what happens when cloture votes are filed. Amendments are also filed simply to ensure that every Senator has a right to protect himself or herself. That is really what has gone on in the last couple of days. Senators want to know that they have the opportunity to be involved in this debate and to commit to a process by which these issues can be raised. That is what filing amendments is all about in situations as we have this morning.

We may be able to come to some agreement. In fact, I would almost ensure, to our colleagues on the other side, that we will come to some agreement with regard to a finite list of amendments and some way with which to work through them as we have done in several of our bills already this year.

The point is no one is trying to delay a final vote. We know that the final vote will come in the not too distant future. But it is absolutely critical, especially on an issue of this importance, that all Members have a right to be heard.

So this cloture vote is not necessarily reflective of how one will ultimately vote on the balanced budget amendment. This vote is about whether Democratic Senators have a right to raise legitimate issues that they believe would improve the amendment before us.

So I certainly urge my colleagues to reject the motion to invoke cloture at this time.

I yield the floor.

Mr. HATCH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I have a great deal of affection for the minority leader, both as a person and as a leader. I think he is doing a very good job for his side of the floor. I understand that this is an important vote and that it is more of a procedural vote this morning. We all know how it is going to turn out. But I will just say this. As someone who has conducted a few filibusters in my 18 years, some of which have been successful and some of which have not, I know a filibuster when I see one. I am sure the distinguished minority leader does not feel that his side is filibustering or the opposition to the amendment is filibustering. But last evening, for instance, we wanted to go to one more amendment before the evening was up. We could not find one person to offer an amendment that we could vote on that evening.

Be that as it may, I am not going to criticize what the distinguished minority leader has said, and we will have more days of debate. That is only fair. This is a very, very important amendment. And it involves the future of our country. It involves the future of our children and our grandchildren. It is going to make a difference, if we pass it, whether our children and grandchildren have a future. If we do not pass it, I just say, "Katie, bar the door."

Just to make that point a little bit better, we are now in our 18th day on this amendment. There are very few things in the history of the Senate that take 18 days. We are now in our 18th day on our balanced budget amendment debt tracker, the increase as we debate. There is a $4.8 trillion national debt that we start with, and we are now in our 18th day. I will put up the information indicating the additional debt that is going to accumulate by the end of this day for the taxpayers to pay and pay interest on it. It is almost $15 billion, just the amount of debt that has accumulated since we started 18 days ago.

Mr. President, what about the vote to bring this debate to a close? I think we need to stop talking and start working on getting our fiscal house in order by passing the balanced budget amendment and working together to balance the budget. The American people want and need us to do this.

Mr. President, our large national debt and the yearly deficits that help it grow hurt real people, average working people all across our country. And continuing down the path we are on will only make matters worse for all of us and our children.

Last week there was an article in the Washington Post by James Glassman, a person I have a great deal of regard for, who I believe did an excellent job of stating in an understandable way how and why the deficit hurts the average working American. He called this discussion "The Plain English Guide to the Federal Budget," and it began with the sage assertion that "Big deficits can make you poor. They tend to retard the growth of the private sector, raise interest rates, and weaken our economy."

We are talking about $15 billion just in the 18 days that we have debated here. We are fiddling while the country is burning. That is really what is happening.

He says, "They tend to retard the growth of the private sector, raise interest rates, and weaken our economy."

This is exactly why we need the balanced budget constitutional amendment—because Congress' fiscal madness is destroying the ability of the working American to make enough money to survive.

Every year hard-working Americans pay the price for our profligacy. The Tax Foundation has calculated that in 1994 the average American worked from January 1 to May 5 just to pay his or her taxes—January 4 to May 5. They did not get to keep 1 cent of the money they earned until May 6. Is not that incredible? Put another way, in an 8-hour work day, the average American works the first 2 hours and 45 minutes just to pay taxes. So for 8 hours we are working almost 3 to pay taxes. This is bad enough. But it is not the end of the story.

The increasing Federal debt will force us to raise taxes to astronomical rates just to keep the country solvent. The National Taxpayers Union has estimated that a child born today, on average, will pay over $100,000 in extra taxes over the course of his or her lifetime just to pay the interest on the national debt which accumulated in the first 18 years of that child's life. Just think, Mr. President. By the time the child becomes old enough to vote—I am talking about our children and our grandchildren—there will be a $100,000 tax bill looming on his or her horizon. And that is only to pay the interest on the debt accumulated in that child's first 18 years. That is pathetic. That is the legacy we are leaving to our children and grandchildren.

The National Taxpayers Union has determined that for every year we endure another $200 billion deficit—and the President's budget says we are going to endure them ad infinitum, $200 billion budget deficits for 12 years—for every year that we endure that, it costs the average child over $5,000 over his or her lifetime—every year we do that.

Mr. President, the budget submitted by President Clinton projects $200 billion deficits for each of the next 5 years—actually, each of the next 12 years. By conceding defeat on deficit reduction, President Clinton is condemning every child in America to an additional $25,000 in taxes racked up just over the next 5 years. There is no refuting that unless we do something about it. We are, too, as a Congress, unless we do something about it and change.

But the bad news about the debt does not end there either. The Competitiveness Policy Council has shown that rising budget deficits have led to a 15 percent decline in real wages in the last 15 years, and the National Taxpayers Union has further calculated that in the next 45 years, unless we get spending under control, after-tax incomes will rise over that 45 years, cumulatively rise, $125—average incomes—unless we get the debt under control or our spending under control. Can you imagine? In 45 years the most you are going to get out of the whole 45 years is an additional $125. That is not a year; that is over 45 years.

These deficits are strangling middle-class Americans throughout our country. How can people expect to bear the burden of stagnating wages and higher tax rates?

We simply cannot continue blindly down this road to economic oblivion. Look at those 18 days on the chart; 18 days, just going up like that. That is the debt that is accumulating while we fiddle here in Washington.

We must get the Government spending under control, and the only way to do that is to change the way Congress does business with a permanent unavoidable rule, and the only rule we can get is the balanced budget amendment. It will force Congress to consider the costs as well as the benefits of every program in the Federal Government. We will lower the unbelievable amount of Government spending and bring the deficit under control.

All other attempts to balance the budget have failed, and they have failed miserably. Over the full 19 years I have been here, we have had attempt after attempt, and they have all failed because they have been statutes and the minute somebody passes a 51-percent majority vote, they are changed. Every year the debt grows, relentlessly sapping the life of the American economy as it does. Under the President's latest plan, the debt is going to grow—under his best assertions, and these are assuming optimistic assertions—another $1 trillion. By the end of the next 5 years we will be over $6 trillion in debt, and we are complaining about $4.8 trillion now. Because it is going up almost $1 billion a day, we will be $6 trillion in debt. His budget is not an attempt to reduce the deficit. It is a recognition that unless we change the budget process to eliminate Congress spending bias, it is going to be impossible to reduce the deficit.

Mr. President, we have the opportunity to make a historic change here.

We can pass the balanced budget amendment and preserve the future for our children, our grandchildren, and this country. We can stop this runaway Federal train of spending and taxing that is out of control right now. I urge my colleagues to support the balanced budget amendment today so that we and our children will have a prosperous tomorrow.

This morning will end our third full week of debate on this amendment. We started debate on the subject matter even before the bill was brought to the floor during the unfunded mandates debate. We have had 11 votes on amendments and spent 14 days on floor debate on this constitutional amendment so far, more than we have ever spent debating a balanced budget amendment before. Back in 1982, which was the next toughest debate, we debated 11 days before passing the balanced budget amendment by 69 votes. I hope that our longer debate this year will mean our margin of victory will be proportionately higher.

As we have said, every day while we talk, the debt we leave our children and grandchildren continues going up to a shocking point. This must end and must end soon. Mr. President, let us tell the American people in this cloture vote when we will stop talking and start acting to bring this country to fiscal sanity. Let us pass the balanced budget amendment to the States for ratification and get on with balancing the budget.

We have had 11 votes, and every one we have won on a bipartisan vote. Democrats and Republicans have voted with us, every one. There is nothing partisan about this. Anybody who tries to say this is a partisan debate just has not watched it and has not looked at the voters and has not realized that this balanced budget amendment is a bipartisan consensus, a Democrat-Republican effort, to save our country, and to help our children and grandchildren have the futures that we all had when we were born.

I was born in poverty. We did not have indoor facilities. We lost our first home shortly after I was born. We did not have indoor facilities in the second home for years. I thought all homes were kind of brown and dark because my dad built our home out of a torn-down old burnt-out building. Frankly, I thought everyone had a Pillsbury flour sign on the side of their home. I thought that was a pretty unique thing, and it really was.

To make a long story short, I had a future even though I was born in the Depression, because Congresses had not run the country totally into the ground from a national debt standpoint. But we have done it now, and we have to change our way of doing things around here.

I emphasize again that the first vote was 56 to 44. There were a number of Democrats voting with us. The Dole amendment passed 87 to 10, a lot of Democrats. The Reid amendment was defeated on a motion to table, 57 to 41, a lot of Democrats with us. The next was 70 to 28, a lot of Democrats. Then 66 to 32, 52 to 45, Senator HOLLINGS, that was a close vote. Still a number of Democrats helped to defeat that. Then 59 to 40, 59 to 40, and 52 to 47 last night; eight or nine Democrats voted with us on that. Then 51 to 38, 61 to 33, the last vote, and a lot of Democrats voted on that. This is a bipartisan effort. There is no reason for a filibuster or delay here. There is no reason not to get about business. There is no reason not to come up with amendments when the time comes.

I am willing to proceed and happy to proceed in any way our colleagues want to do this. But do not try to present this as partisan, a Democrat-Republican difference here. This is a bipartisan effort. We have made it that. I am proud of my Democratic colleagues that are standing up on this amendment. All we need are 15 to stand up and we will pass this, 15 out of 47. That is all we need. Gee, there ought to be 15 Democrats in the Senate out of 47 who will help us. I know of 13. I think I know of 14. Who is going to be that 15th vote, or the one that defeats this, if that is what happens? I do not believe it will.

I do not believe that our colleagues, when we put forth this kind of a bipartisan, heartfelt, eager effort, are going to shoot this down for the one time in history, after the House of Representatives had the guts to pass it, with the help of I believe 78 courageous Democrats in the House. We need 15 courageous Democrats here and I think we will get them. I believe we will get them, because this is the time in history when we can make a statement against what has been going on, this runaway train of Federal spending, this abdication of responsibility, this rejection of our children's and grandchildren's future. Let us do something about it and quit talking partisan politics, and let us work together to get it done.

To the extent that this delay and a final vote will continue after today, let us do the best we can to bring up as many amendments as we can and debate them, and we are happy to do that. I think the debate has been healthy. I commend Senators on both sides of the aisle for the excellent debate they have given to us, and I hope our colleagues will vote for cloture today so that we can end the delay and have the responsible amendments that are left brought up. And let us vote on them and then let us pass the balanced budget amendment for the benefit of everybody—Democrats, Republicans, all loyal Americans—but most of all, for our children and grandchildren.

BALANCED BUDGET AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will resume consideration of House Joint Resolution 1, which the clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution (H.J. Res. 1) proposing a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The Senate resumed consideration of the joint resolution.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise today to oppose invoking cloture on the balance budget amendment. Mr. President, the Senate should not rush to finish this measure—we are amending the Constitution of the United States and there is still much we do not know. We still do not know the impact of the balanced budget amendment on Social Security, Medicare, and many other vital programs. I am voting to continue with robust and vigorous debate so the American people fully understand the ramifications of what we are doing and how it will affect their lives.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 10:30 a.m. having arrived, pursuant to rule XXII, the Chair lays before the Senate the pending cloture motion, which the clerk will state.

The bill clerk read as follows:

CALL OF THE ROLL

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent, the quorum call has been waived.

VOTE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on House Joint Resolution 1, the balanced budget amendment to the Constitution, shall be brought to a close? The yeas and nays are required.

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. LOTT. I announce that the Senator from Kansas [Mrs. KASSEBAUM] is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

NOT VOTING—1

Kassebaum

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 57, the nays are 42. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn, not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected.

Under the previous order, the Senator from West Virginia is recognized to offer an amendment.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair. Mr. President, it is my understanding that the Senator from Nevada [Mr. BRYAN] wishes to speak for not to exceed 7 minutes. I ask unanimous consent that I may yield to the distinguished Senator for that purpose, not to exceed 7 minutes, and that I retain my right to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Nevada is recognized for 7 minutes.

Mr. BRYAN. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. BRYAN pertaining to the introduction of S. 429 are located in today's RECORD under Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. HUTCHISON). The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Madam President, I thank the Chair.

May I take just a moment here to compliment the Republican Senators who have been sitting in the chair from the very beginning of this session. In the main, I think they have done very well. They have presided over the Senate with dignity, except in a few cases when there probably ought to be a little less talking up there at the desk because the cameras are often focused right on that desk. State legislators, professors, students, and the people at large expect this Senate to be the premier deliberative body in the world. It is not a State legislature. And I do not say that to cast any aspersions on State legislatures. I have been a member of both houses many years ago in West Virginia.

Generally speaking, the presiding officers have been alert and have been paying attention to the debate, as they should.

Madam President, the original Constitution and the amendments heretofore adopted serve two basic functions: One, they create a structure of government and establish three departments thereof: the Legislative, the Executive, and the Judicial, and they allocate the powers of government among the three branches of the Federal Government and between the two Houses of Congress.

The Constitution also prohibits the States from taking certain actions, and all powers that are not delegated to the Congress by the Constitution shall be reserved to the States or the people.

So this is a Constitutional system, with checks and balances and a separation of powers, thus establishing an equilibrium between and among the three departments—the Legislative, the Executive, and the Judicial.

Two, the original Constitution and the amendments thereto, protect the most fundamental individual rights, such as life, liberty, and property; free speech; freedom of assembly; freedom of religion; freedom of the press; and equal justice under law.

So the Framers wisely left the determination of fiscal policy to the elected representatives of the people. Deciding when or whether to balance the budget, and whether and when to risk a deficit, calls for a judgment of policy, the kind of political judgment left by the Founding Fathers to the majoritarian processes of representative democracy. The Constitution and the amendments thereto do not undertake to resolve questions of fiscal policy. And for 206 years, that Constitution has not been amended to include fiscal policy.

Under the constitutional amendment that the Senate has been debating, such a judgment of fiscal policy, and when or whether to apply countercyclical measures would, to a considerable degree, be inhibited. Section 3 of the amendment, for example, would fetter and hamstring the President in the proper exercise of his powers.

Let me read section 3 of the proposed amendment to the Constitution.

I quote. This is section 3, from the constitutional amendment to balance the budget.

Section 3. Prior to each fiscal year, the President shall transmit to the Congress a proposed budget for the United States Government for that fiscal year in which total outlays do not exceed total receipts.

I think it is important that we recognize that this amendment to the Constitution, by virtue of section 3, would, if adopted, hamper the President. It would fetter the President. It would hamstring the President in the proper exercise of his powers by requiring him to submit a balanced budget even though he may consider a deficit to be necessary as a countercyclical measure to combat a recession that may be already underway. Countercyclical stabilizers are rendered even more difficult in a period of economic decline by the requirement of a supermajority vote to waive the section 1 mandate for a balanced budget in every fiscal year. Such requirement for a supermajority can prove to be a very troubling recipe for gridlock.

The amendment now being debated by the Senate provides that outlays in any given year shall not exceed receipts; that Congress may appropriate money in excess of anticipated revenues only by a three-fifths vote of the full membership of both Houses, and not by lesser majorities; that Congress may enact revenue increases only by majority votes of the full membership of both Houses on rollcall votes, and not by lesser majorities.

Let me state that again.

The constitutional amendment that is before the Senate requires that Congress may enact revenue increases only by majority votes of the full membership of both Houses—of both Houses—on rollcall votes.

In other words, in the Senate that would mean by no less than 51 votes and in the House that would mean no less than 218 votes.

The amendment also provides that Congress may raise the ceiling on the national debt, but only by a three-fifths vote of the full membership of both Houses, and not by lesser majorities.

Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes was right when he warned that the Constitution ought not "embody a particular economic theory." In keeping with that wisdom, the Framers remitted Federal fiscal policy, not to special supermajorities, but rather to the crucible of ordinary majoritarian democratic politics. Article I, Section 8, Clause 1, gives Congress the power to tax and spend for the common defense and general welfare, and to borrow money on the credit of the United States—all obviously by simple majorities.

So basic is the majoritarian premise of Article I of the United States Constitution that it is barely mentioned, except for the statement in Article I, Section 5, Clause 1, that "a majority of each House shall constitute a quorum to do business." The contemporaneous history supports the majoritarian premise, for the Framers entertained, but rejected, the idea requiring that ordinary legislation on any particular subject matter be passed by a supermajority. For example, Alexander Hamilton, in the Federalist No. 22, warned:

To give a minority a negative upon the majority—

Which is always the case where more than a majority is requisite to a decision—is, in its tendency, to subject the sense of the greater number to that of the lesser number. . . . The public business must in some way or other go forward.

This is Hamilton speaking.

If a pertinacious minority can control the opinion of a majority respecting the best mode of conducting it—the majority, in order that something may be done, must conform to the views of the minority; and thus—the sense of the smaller number will overrule that of the greater, and give a tone to the national proceedings. Hence, tedious delays—continual negotiation and intrigue—contemptible compromises of the public good. . . . For upon some occasions, things will not admit of accommodation; and then the measures of government must be injuriously suspended or fatally defeated. It is often, by the impracticability of obtaining the concurrence of the necessary number of votes—

Meaning the public business.

Says Hamilton.

This is Hamilton speaking. Let me begin again that sentence.

It is often, by the impracticability of obtaining the concurrence of the necessary number of votes, kept in a state of inaction. Its situation must always savour a weakness—sometimes border upon anarchy.

That was Alexander Hamilton. Where are all these Senators who are proponents of this amendment? It would not hurt them to hear the Constitution read today, from the beginning to the end. I do not intend to inflict that kind of punishment on them, but they certainly would do well to read and to hear read those portions of the Constitution which impact upon this constitutional amendment on the balanced budget.

Madison added his warning against supermajorities, in the Federalist No. 58:

It has been said that more than a majority ought to have been required for a quorum, and in particular cases, if not in all, more than a majority of a quorum for a decision. . . . [But] . . . In all cases where justice or the general good might require new laws to be passed, or active measures to be pursued, the fundamental principle of free government would be reversed. It would be no longer the majority that would rule; the power would be transferred to the minority. Were the defensive privilege limited to particular cases, an interested minority might take advantage of it to screen themselves from equitable sacrifices to the general weal, or in particular emergencies, to extort unreasonable indulgences.

This is Madison speaking.

That is Madison.

That is James Madison. He referred to particular emergencies and the supermajorities that are included in this nefarious constitutional amendment to balance the budget to deal with "particular emergencies." I am using Madison's words—"particular emergencies."

Let me read again what Madison said.

Were the defensive privilege limited to particular cases, an interested minority might take advantage of it to screen themselves from equitable sacrifices to the general weal, or in particular emergencies, to extort unreasonable indulgences.

Where are the proponents of this amendment? Why do they not interrogate James Madison? Why do they not hearken to his words and Hamilton's words? No. They do not want to hear. As was said in Homer's Iliad, "Not if I had 10 tongues and 10 mouths, a voice that could not tire, lung of brass in my bosom," would they hear me. They have eyes that cannot see and ears that cannot hear, and minds that are unwilling to comprehend the warnings of the Framers of the Constitution. Should one conclude that they pretend to be wiser men than those who wrote the Constitution?

Mr. President, the balanced budget amendment would reject the wisdom both of Hamilton and Madison by adopting supermajority requirements that would transfer power from majorities to minority factions. And George Washington in his Farewell Address warned against parties and factions. Sections 1 and 2 of the constitutional amendment to balance the budget would require that deficit spending and increases in the statutory debt limit be approved by three-fifths of the whole number of each House. Section 4 would impose a minisupermajority requirement, in that revenue increases must be authorized by a majority of the whole number of each House. Meaning in the Senate, 51 votes would be required to increase revenues, and in the House 218 votes would be required, 217 would not be enough, 218 votes would be required to pass legislation in the House to increase revenues—rather than, as is usual, by a majority of Members present and voting. Were the Framers wise? To ask the question is to answer it. This minisupermajority that is required for revenue increases flies in the face of Madison's warning against a requirement of "more than a majority of a quorum for a decision."

Defenders of the balanced budget amendment often say, what is so bad about supermajority requirements? After all, the Senate in its own rules requires a supermajority for cloture on filibusters. So why is it so bad to have in the Constitution a requirement of a supermajority? The proponents also refer to the supermajorities that are mentioned in the Constitution and the amendments thereto. But these existing supermajority requirements furnish no precedent for those in the balanced budget amendment, for they are fundamentally different in kind.

Rules on parliamentary procedures that the Senate adopts for its own governance are surely no model for an alteration of the Nation's fundamental charter. Anybody who argues that point simply does not, and has not stopped to think, knows very little about the Senate rules, and very little, in all likelihood, about the Constitution. Such rules of the Senate can be changed by the Senate acting itself alone, and are not comparable to an amendment to the Constitution, which requires the support of both Houses of Congress by a two-thirds vote and three-fourths of the State legislatures for adoption.

Although the Constitution does impose some supermajority requirements, it does so quite sparingly, and only for good reasons, namely, to provide one branch a check upon another branch—for example, treaty ratification and veto overrides. In the case of a treaty approval, the legislative branch—one component thereof; namely, the Senate—acts as a check upon the executive, in the ratification of treaties that bind this Nation in its relations with other nations. It is a check and balance. A supermajority is also required for a veto override, and again provides a check and balance between the executive and the legislative branch. One of the Framers stated that the one reason for the veto itself was that the President, the Executive, could provide protection for himself and his office, against the legislative branch. So he was given the veto. That is check and balance. Other supermajorities in the original Constitution were to protect individual rights. For example, in the case of the expulsion of a Member of the Senate or of the House, a Member cannot be expelled by a simple majority. It requires two-thirds of the Senate to expel a Senator, two-thirds of the House to expel a House Member. These supermajorities are provided for the protection of individual rights, the individual rights of the Members of the two bodies, else a simple majority could expel Members of the minority, get rid of them, send them home, expel them by a simple majority. A supermajority is there for the protection of the individual rights of the elected representatives of the people.

The same is the case with impeachment. Were there not a supermajority required, then an impulsive and partisan majority in the Senate could convict a President in an impeachment trial. That almost happened with Andrew Johnson, as we all know. So that supermajority is required to protect individual rights, the rights of a President, the rights of other officers who may be impeached, the rights of Federal judges who may be impeached. The supermajority required in article V is to insure that the fundamental charter of this Republic not itself be too freely amended.

Amending the Constitution is provided for, but the Framers wisely established that amendments not be adopted and ratified too freely. Thus, we have only seen 17 amendments added to the original Constitution and Bill of Rights. They were wise men.

Then there are certain other supermajorities. Amendment XII of the Constitution deals with the election of a Vice President by the Senate. In the 14th amendment, a supermajority is required to waive the disability upon individuals who, having previously taken the oath of office to support the Constitution, later engage in rebellion against the United States. It requires a supermajority in both Houses to lift that disability from such individual. I am not against amending the Constitution. Our forefathers provide for that situation, and I have voted for five constitutional amendments to the Constitution.

Hence, there are nine supermajorities of one kind or another in the original Constitution and the amendments thereto. I think it is very unwise, however, to provide a constitutional amendment that requires a supermajority in the enactment of a fiscal policy.

There is one other supermajority, and that is the supermajority written into the original Constitution that dealt with the matter of a quorum in the election of a President when such election is thrown into the House of Representatives.

So there you have it. These are all structural concerns or, as I say, they provide basic protections for individual rights. They are structural concerns that deal with the structure of this form of government as established by the original Framers—and the States and people thereof, who ratified the Constitution—or they deal with rights of individuals.

The supermajority requirements of this balanced budget amendment embody no such structural concerns and no protections of individual rights. Rather, the supermajority requirements to the balanced budget amendment would for the first time in our constitutional history—the first time in 206 years—inject a minority veto into the ordinary processes of the determination of fiscal policy within the legislative branch. The danger of supermajority requirements in this policy-making context is that a minority of either House can hold the legislative agenda hostage, blocking majority choices until the minority factions obtain the policy concessions that they want. James Madison described this very danger in Federalist No. 58, where he warned that supermajority requirements permit the minority—permit the minority—to “extort unreasonable indulgences” from the majority. In the business of budget balancing, permitting such minority vetoes might actually be counterproductive if it fostered minority demands for expensive pet programs as the price of deficit spending authorizations.

The rules laid down, therefore, are those of parliamentary procedure, which may belong in the rules of the Senate and the House of Representatives, but not in the Constitution. To insert parliamentary rules into the Constitution cheapens—cheapens—that basic charter and erodes the respect upon which its vitality and usefulness depend.

There would be years in which three-fifths majorities of the full membership of both Houses of Congress authorized spending in excess of receipts, and there would be years in which expenditures outran receipts because actual receipts fell short of honest and careful estimates, or because actual expenditures exceeded the best and most careful estimates. As these deficit years occur down the road, what would be the reaction of the citizens who supported this amendment and who were told that the amendment would produce a balanced budget each year? The result surely would be disillusionment, cynicism, distrust of those who govern, and loss of confidence in our basic, fundamental, organic law: the Constitution of the United States.

The operation of the budget, appropriations, and revenue processes are so highly complex that disputes are bound to arise. Forecasts with regard to both receipts and outlays vary so widely that violations of the requirement that outlays shall not exceed receipts in a given year are bound—bound—to occur.

I have shown that. I have shown charts that demonstrate that fact time and time again.

Old disputes about the separation of powers, reminiscent of the impoundment controversy of the Nixon administration, would be reopened.

How many Senators here today were Members of this body when that controversy occurred? Very few.

The powers of the executive vis-a-vis the legislative branch will, in all likelihood, be substantially enlarged.

Who are the proponents of this balanced budget amendment? Are they monarchists? Are they monarchists who want to see the power shifted to the executive? Do they want an all-powerful, imperial President?

To rivet into the Constitution this amendment calling for a balanced budget annually would be to constitutionalize fiscal policy, and would give rise to disputes cast in Constitutional terms, which must either go unresolved or bring the courts into the determination of fiscal policy. Few judges, if any, have expertise in such matters as fiscal policy, budgets, and appropriations, and lack the experience to guide their decisions. The courts would lack judicially manageable standards to guide their decisions, and drawing the Judiciary into budgetary, appropriations, revenue and other fiscal matters would mean an intrusion—an intrusion—into an area that Congress and the President have long regarded as their—exclusive domain. As a result, the stage would be set to injure the prestige and authority of the courts, as well as to impair the effectiveness of the Judiciary in preserving the ancient framework of republican government and protecting the Constitutional liberties of the nation's citizens. The people's faith in both the Judiciary and the Constitution would be seriously damaged.

Hence, the implications of an amendment for the constitutional structure of our Government and for the status of our Constitution as partisan law would be very, very serious.

That is what this amendment is. It is a partisan amendment. It is a political amendment supported by a political party. It is the Republican Party as of today in the Senate and the House that is pressing for this amendment. And they want to do it now, do it here—“Do it now; do it here; we can't wait”—because they have it in their so-called Contract With America. That so-called contract is supposed to supplant the Constitution when it comes to this amendment.

Should the measure be enforced by the judiciary, it would produce an unprecedented restructuring of the balance of power among the three branches of Government. There are no two ways about it. It would produce an unprecedented restructuring of the balance of power among the three branches of Government.

To crucify the Constitution upon the cross of the so-called Contract With America is of little consequence, provided you will give us the Barabbas of temporary partisan and political gain!

That Constitution bears the stains of blood from thousands of men and women throughout the history of this Nation—men and women who gave their lives at Valley Forge, at Saratoga, at Yorktown, at Lexington, and Concord.

Nathan Hale. Who is he? Never heard of him. Who was Nathan Hale?

Well, Nathan Hale was a young man, 21 years of age, who was a school-teacher.

He responded to General George Washington's request for a volunteer to go behind the British lines and to bring back the drawings of fortifications. Nathan Hale responded as that old patriarch did in biblical times, “Speak Lord, thy servant heareth.” Nathan Hale responded, knowing that that task was fraught with danger and might cost him his life.

He went behind the British lines, disguised as a Dutch schoolmaster. His mission was almost finished when, on the night before he was ready to return to the American lines, he was discovered with notes and letters on his person, and he was arrested. The next morning, on September 22, 1776, he was brought before the gallows. He saw before him the gallows. He saw to one side, the wooden coffin which would soon claim his lifeless body. He requested a Bible. His request was refused.

The British officer, who was a major by the name of Cunningham said, “Do you have anything to say?” Nathan Hale replied, “I regret that I have only one life to lose for my country.” The British officer angrily commanded, “String the rebel up,” and Nathan Hale died. He only had one life to give for his country.

Yet, there are some who are unwilling to give one vote for their country—one vote. Not everybody sees this as I do, of course. I see it through the context of many, many years of dedicated service to this institution, having sworn 13 times to support and defend the Constitution—13 times over a period of 48 years. Some of those who support this amendment are undoubtedly—undoubtedly—sincere, and they conscientiously believe that this is the only way to get deficits under control.

But not all, I would say—and I attempt to be the judge of no man and no woman, but I have talked with many Senators around here on this matter, and some have expressed strange reasons for not supporting this amendment. Some think that we ought to just wash our hands of it, let it go to the States. “The States will not ratify it,” they say. Some say if the States ratify it, the backlash will destroy the Republican Party in time.

Madam President, we cannot say, “Let this cup pass from me.” Harry Truman, even if he were in the White House today, could not say, “The buck stops here.” This constitutional amendment does not stop on its way to the President. It does not go to the President’s desk. So where does the buck stop? The buck stops here—right here in the Senate.

I hope that Senators will think again, those who may be guided by political motives to vote for this amendment. I hope they will think again. Nathan Hale gave one life, and thousands have given their lives to sustain the freedoms that are guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States. That Constitution, as I say, is stained with the blood of thousands.

There is not one proponent of this amendment to the Constitution against whom the blood of that Constitution will not cry out as loudly as did the blood of Abel against Cain, if it is adopted. Not one!

There are those who say, “Well, he is the chairman of the Appropriations Committee. He is the chairman of the Appropriations Committee. You would not expect him to do anything else. He is the ‘king of pork.’ No wonder he is against this amendment.”

Fie on such little men who think in such little terms, who have themselves, in all likelihood, never taken an oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. I have taken that oath, and every other Member here—man and woman—has taken that oath.

Montesquieu said when it came to the oath, the Romans were the most religious people on Earth. Marcus Atilius Regulus, a Roman consul, captured by the Carthaginians in the year 258 B.C., was sent by the Carthaginians with an embassy to Rome to plead the case of the Carthaginians before the Roman Senate and to attempt, if possible, to arrange for an exchange of prisoners, also, to endeavor to bring about a truce on terms that would be favorable to the Carthaginians. Marcus Atilius Regulus, however, when he spoke to the Roman Senate, advised the Senate against entering into any such arrangement or agreement or treaty with the Carthaginians, because such an arrangement would not be beneficial to Rome.

Regulus said, “I know that they will know what I have said here and that I will pay with my life.” The Roman Senate offered to protect Regulus against his being returned to Carthage. But Regulus said, “No, I gave them my word. I swore an oath to them, which they made me do. I swore an oath to them that I would return.” And he said, “I will keep my oath, even when given to the enemy.”

Against the pleadings and the tears of his wife and children, Marcus Atilius Regulus returned to Carthage, and he was tortured. He was forced to lie on spikes in a specially-built enclosure from which he could only see the Sun. The Carthaginians cut off his eyelids, and he was forced to look at the Sun all day long. He soon perished!

He was a Roman who believed in keeping his oath. So we can understand what Montesquieu meant when he said that when it comes to the oath, the Romans are the most religious people in the world. I, too, am from a generation that believed in keeping its oath, when sworn before God and with one hand on the Bible.

Mr. President, if this constitutional amendment proves to be unenforceable, it would create an equally troubling hazard; namely, by inscribing an empty promise into the fundamental charter of our Government, thus breeding cynicism both toward our Government and the Constitution as well for the rule of law.

Before I diverted my thoughts to the Romans, I talked about what our constitutional form of Government would suffer in the event that the balanced budget amendment were to be ratified and enforced.

But now I say, on the other hand, if the amendment proved to be unenforceable, it would create an equally troubling hazard; namely, by inscribing an empty promise into the fundamental charter of our Government, thus breeding cynicism both toward our Government and the Constitution, as well as for the rule of law.

Keep in mind that not only would Federal judges—keep in mind that not only would Federal judges—become involved in fiscal policy, but State judges would also be required to make fundamental decisions about taxing and spending. And these are issues, I say to my friend from Georgia, these are issues that judges on both the State and Federal levels lack the institutional capacity to decide in any remotely satisfactory manner.

Some proponents of the amendment may be of the opinion that the “political question” doctrine or limitations on standing would preclude litigation that would ensnare the judiciary in the thicket of budgetary politics.

Some recent decisions of the Supreme Court, however, suggest that the Court is prepared—is prepared—to resolve questions that might once have been considered political. For example, in Missouri v. Jenkins, 1990, the Supreme Court upheld the power of a Federal district court to order a local board of education to levy higher taxes to build magnet schools in order to promote desegregation. And the Court even held open as a last resort the possibility that the district court might itself levy the taxes.

Now get that. “Oh,” they say, “the courts won’t enter that political thicket.” It is not so much that it is a thicket, it is political. It is political. Judges are not elected by the people. Judges are not out there rubbing shoulders and elbows with the American people and hearing from them as to their advice on making law. But it is otherwise with the elected representatives of the people, who daily work and move in a political thicket.

It might not happen, but if the proposed amendment is adopted and ratified, no one, no man, no man—it reminds me, may I say to my good friend, one of the fine Senators who is on the “Republican response team”—and I love him, I think a lot of the senior Senator from New Hampshire, I really do—but it reminds me of Odysseus.

Odysseus, Senators will recall from that great story, the “Odyssey,” written by Homer, who supposedly lived circa 800 years before Christ, was blind, blind like Milton who wrote “Paradise Lost.” Homer was blind. But he went around singing songs and poetry. Perhaps Homer’s words have come down to us through the centuries, the early, early centuries, by repetition, by other men relating, speaking, and conveying the thoughts and words of Homer.

But let us say it was “written” by Homer. I think that is fair enough. The “Odyssey.” In the “Odyssey,” we will remember that Odysseus found himself imprisoned in a cave by the Cyclops, the giant with one eye in the middle of his forehead. He probably still had more vision than some of the proponents of this amendment. In any event, the Cyclopean giant asked Odysseus his name. Odysseus said, “No Man.” His name was Noman. No-man.

Well, I will not proceed with the story, but let me just say that no man, and no woman, no one should be very surprised to find a Federal court made up of unelected judges, appointed for life, enjoining expenditures selected by the court or requiring the levy of a tax. People up in New Hampshire would not stand still for that, for unelected judges levying a tax. We fought one war over taxation without representation, and the people of New Hampshire know about that.

Even if taxpayers and Members of Congress were not granted standing, the amendment could lead to litigation by recipients whose benefits, mandated by law, were curtailed by the President through impoundment of funds or a line-item veto, in reliance upon the amendment. The President might well conclude that the Constitutional command that “total outlays for any fiscal year shall not exceed total receipts” must take precedence over mere statutes, including appropriation bills, entitlement laws, and the Impoundment Act of 1974.

If a Presidential decision were made to order a reduction in pension payments, or in social security payments, or in Medicare payments, or in veterans compensation payments, the President could argue in defense of his action that there was a conflict between the statutes requiring these outlays and the Constitutional provision commanding that "total outlays shall not exceed total receipts," and that to execute the spending statutes would result in the Constitution's being violated.

Assuming that a President concludes that his duty to comply with the Constitutional amendment implicitly includes the impoundment power or enhanced rescissions power or a line-item veto power necessary to ensure that the budget is in fact balanced, the result would be an inevitable shift of power from the Legislative Branch to the Executive Branch. At the very heart of our Constitutional system of government is the proposition that power over the raising of revenues and the appropriation of funds rests with the people's elected representatives in Congress. The shift to unrestrained Presidential impoundment and line-item veto or rescissions authority would effectively take from Congress the "power over the purse" and confer that power on the President.

The placing of the power of the purse in the hands of the Legislative Branch—and not in the hands of the Executive or Judicial Branches—was a decision that was not lightly made by the Framers of the Constitution. James Madison wrote in the 58th Federalist:

This power over the purse may, in fact, be regarded as the most effectual weapon with which any Constitution can arm the immediate representatives of the people, for obtaining a redress of every grievance, and for carrying into effect every just and salutary measure.

That was Madison. Let me state it again. James Madison wrote in the 58th Federalist:

This power over the purse may, in fact, be regarded as the most effectual weapon with which any Constitution can arm the immediate representatives of the people, for obtaining a redress of every grievance, and for carrying into effect every just and salutary measure.

So the Framers, Mr. President, explicitly rejected the notion that such a crucial power should rest either with the Executive or with the Judiciary.

As I have already stated, the Courts lack not only the experience and the resources, but also the close link to the general public needed for responsible budgetary decisions. It would be a profound—a profound—mistake for Congress to adopt an amendment to the Constitution that could transfer such a vital Legislative power to an unelected Judiciary.

The Framers were well acquainted with the history of England. They were very familiar with the long and bloody struggle in which the English people had wrested from tyrannical monarchs the power of the purse and vested that power in the elected representatives of the people in Parliament. The Framers, consequently, considered that the appropriations of money were a bulwark against Executive usurpations, and they, therefore, carefully wrote into the organic law the provisions of Article I, Section 9, which guarantee that no monies shall be drawn from the Treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by the laws of Congress. It is hard to imagine that the possibility of such a dramatic reform of the basic structure of our government would be contemplated in this amendment, by the Members of both Houses of Congress, all of whom have sworn an oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States.

On the other hand, if the amendment is to be only an empty promise welded into the fundamental charter of our government, only to have this new provision of the Constitution routinely violated, it would inevitably make all other provisions of the Constitution seem far less inviolable. Let us soberly reflect on that.

As Alexander Hamilton noted in Federalist No. 25:

Wise politicians will be cautious about fettering the government with restrictions that cannot be observed, because they know that every breach of the fundamental laws, though dictated by necessity, impairs that sacred reverence which ought to be maintained in the breast of rulers toward the Constitution of a country, and forms a precedent for other breaches where the same plea of necessity does not exist at all, or is less urgent and palpable.

Mr. President, unless a Senator has a question of me, I am prepared to yield to the Senator from Arkansas for not to exceed 15 minutes without losing my right to the floor. I do not intend to hold the floor all afternoon, but I do have some other things that I wish to say in opposition to the amendment to balance the budget.

Do not forget, I support a balanced budget. I supported lowering the deficits in the 1993 deficit reduction bill. So I support the goal of achieving balanced budgets. But I do not support the prostitution and rape of the Constitution of the United States by a Constitutional amendment that will not achieve a balanced budget but will destroy the very form of our government with its separation of powers and checks and balances.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may yield to the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. PRYOR], for not to exceed 15 minutes without losing my right to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KEMPTHORNE). Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered. The Senator from Arkansas is recognized.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I thank the Chair, and I thank the distinguished Senator from West Virginia for yielding this amount of time to me.

The other afternoon I was down visiting on the steps, the steps in the Senate where the pages sit. I gathered up four or five of the pages who diligently serve us around here and perform many, many wonderful duties for this institution and for us individually and collectively. I gathered them up and I said:

Ladies and gentlemen, I want you to remember something. When I speak, or when a lot of us speak in the Senate, maybe from time to time you do not have to listen too carefully to what some of us have to say. But remember that when Senator BYRD of West Virginia speaks, you take time, and you listen, and listen intently to what he has to say, because you will learn something. You will learn something about this body, you will learn something about this country, you will learn something about the Constitution, and you will learn something about what makes the Senate one of the unique institutions in the world. I learn from the Senator constantly.

I thank him not only for his message today but his continuing message on this issue, relative to the balanced budget amendment.

When I was young and growing up in Camden, AR, I remember at birthday parties we used to play a game. In fact, when I raised my sons, they played the same game. Perhaps other Members of this body played a game called pin the tail on the donkey. One of us would be blindfolded, and we would be given the donkey's tail and somehow or another we would try to go up to the wall or the board and find the proper place to attach the tail on the donkey. Sometimes, because we could not see it—we were blindfolded—we would not even be near our destination, or near our target.

In the last several weeks, relative to this debate—not only in this Chamber but in the other body and on the talk shows, in the media, in the public, wherever—somehow or another I am reminded of that game once again, of pin the tail on the donkey.

I think there is a lot of blame being passed around—the Democrats blame the Republicans, the Republicans blame the Democrats. We might blame this Senator or that Congressman, we blame this act or this particular time or effort or law or regulation as to why we got to this point and how we got to this point at this time in our country's history.

We are in trouble. We are in deep trouble. And this morning I heard the distinguished majority whip, Senator LOTT, as he quoted a statement that Senator DASCHLE had made 1 year ago in this debate on the constitutional amendment. At that time, Senator DASCHLE voted for that amendment, and Senator DASCHLE was quoted as giving the reasons why he was supporting that amendment.

Mr. President, I invite the distinguished Republican whip to go back to 1982, to go back to 1986, and he can find some statements of this Senator from the State of Arkansas who at that time also not only spoke on this floor but back in my home State, as to why at that moment in our history, that window of opportunity, that I thought we had to support a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution. I believed it then. I believed it in 1982. I believed it in 1986.

Not long after those votes, I also voted for two extremely far-reaching, extremely strict, you might say, proposals that would have frozen spending across the board. In the early 1980's, I supported those particular freezes.

But, Mr. President, something has happened since that period of time. Something has happened to have dramatically and drastically changed the economic and fiscal landscape of America. What has happened is very simple, and I will use the analogy that after the mid-1980's we let the horse get out of the barn.

The horse got out of the barn, and today, we are being asked for support by our wonderful friends, like Senator SIMON of Illinois, who believes with all of his heart that this constitutional amendment is the way to get this horse back in the barn.

Mr. President, I respect my friend from Illinois. I respect my friend from New Hampshire. I respect my friend from Utah—in their belief that a constitutional amendment, where we would balance the budget in the next 7 years is the proper way to get the horse back in the barn. I truly believe it is wrong to attempt to amend the Constitution to bring the horse back in the barn. I think what we are doing, if I may use this analogy, is we are attempting with a constitutional amendment to lasso an elephant with a piece of thread. It cannot be done.

The trouble is not in the Constitution. This is not where the trouble is. It is not in the Constitution that was passed in Philadelphia over 200 years ago. The trouble is in us. That is where the problem lies.

The problem is in me, Senator PRYOR from Arkansas. In 1981, I voted for then-President Ronald Reagan's proposal to increase spending and to decrease taxes. There were 11 Members of the U.S. Senate who voted against that package, and I wish I could say today I had been one of those 11, or that I had made number 12. I was not. I bought on to the idea: We have a new President, let us give him an opportunity to show us what he can do. And I supported President Reagan's package.

In retrospect, I was wrong. So I would like to stand here today and take blame. I will take the blame for making a mistake that helped cause these massive deficits and this gargantuan, absolutely awesome national debt.

So here we are, almost on the eve of voting whether or not we want to refer to the States an amendment to cause, demand, and mandate a balanced budget.

Last Friday morning, I happened to be in this body, fortunately enough, as the Senate was opened with a prayer by Rev. Richard C. Halverson, Jr. I thought the prayer was timely, and I thought it was poignant. I would like to quote, if I might, Mr. President, from that prayer of Dr. Halverson.

Once again, in the urgency of this hour, we beseech Thee for divine assistance. We pray for a hedge of enlightened restraint around this "necessary fence" of the Senate. For through this body, regulations must pass that will either strengthen or weaken our country.

Dr. Halverson's "necessary fence," of course, is a reference to James Madison who called the Senate, this body, this institution, "a necessary fence to protect the rights and property of its citizens against an impetuous public."

Mr. President, James Madison feared that the Congress from time to time might act impetuously to please the public. Reverend Halverson continued in his prayer last Friday morning, and once again I quote.

As pressures mount for instant solutions to complex problems, grant those who hold this "senatorial trust" the calm resolve to be not driven by public restlessness, nor drifting in stubborn idleness, but drawn by Thy vision of righteousness—which upholdeth the Nation.

That was an insightful prayer, Mr. President. I hope that Dr. Halverson's prayer are the words that set the tone for this debate. The public is restless. They are demanding instant solutions. They are demanding action, and one instant answer is this very imperfect balanced-budget amendment is before us today.

It is like a bottle of snake oil because it promises to solve all of our budget problems. But what it delivers are loopholes and false hopes. It gives politicians the easy and the temporary cover to go back home and to say we have voted to balance the budget.

There are loopholes, Mr. President, throughout this proposal. And their inclusion assures that false hopes will be created and this is just what our country and just what Americans do not need right now.

Loophole No. 1. Right at the top of this balanced-budget amendment is the three-fifths loophole. Section 1 says that three-fifths of the House and three-fifths of the Senate can vote to completely waive the balanced-budget requirement for a year. I believe the framers of the Constitution placed provisions in the Constitution which they held inviolate.

For example, in the first amendment of the Constitution, it does not say that "Congress shall make no laws respecting an establishment of religion unless three-fifths of each House passes legislation specifying otherwise."

The 13th amendment, for example, does not provide that slavery or involuntary servitude shall exist in the United States unless three-fifths of each House passes legislation specifying otherwise.

Mr. President, the reason that the three-fifths requirement sounds ridiculous is because it is ridiculous.

I do not believe that we should pass this amendment. I do not believe we should pass it with or without this particular loophole. But if the supporters of the balanced budget amendment think it is the panacea to all of our problems, why create a three-fifths loophole? Why not, if we are going to require a balanced budget? Why do we not require a balanced budget, period?

This is the second loophole, Mr. President. That loophole is the definitions game. Section 6 of the balanced budget amendment provides that estimates of outlays and receipts may be used by Congress when drafting legislation to enforce and implement the provisions of this amendment. Nowhere in this amendment before this body today, and nowhere in the Constitution, are the words "outlays or receipts" defined.

Why would the word "outlays" need to be defined? Because outlays are the moneys that the Government spends. And without an airtight definition of what constitutes spending we had better realize that clever lawyers are going to find many ways to circumvent the intention of this amendment, whatever it may be.

The same goes for the definition of "receipts."

Take the example of sales of Government assets. If someone were to propose that we sell Mount Rushmore, would the money collected when we sold Mount Rushmore represent a receipt under this amendment? It might and it might not.

How about user fees? Will moneys collected from new user fees be considered a receipt? They might. But they might not.

It is no wonder that Judge Bork has recently said that we had better anticipate not only hundreds but perhaps thousands of lawsuits and other forms of litigation in this particular area.

Mr. President, I wonder if the distinguished Senator will yield me perhaps 5 additional minutes?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may yield an additional 5 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Arkansas [Mr. PRYOR] under the same terms as heretofore agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PRYOR. The Senator is very generous. I thank him.

Mr. President, what we are doing today is looking at a possibility of adopting perhaps the greatest sea change in the relationship between the judiciary, the executive branches of Government, and the legislative branches of Government that we have ever concerned ourselves with. The definitional games are going to be played necessarily on what is or is not an outlay or what is or is not a receipt. But the definition games will not be limited to just these issues. And I can say, in my opinion, there are not going to be any winners in this definitional game under these false promises.

Mr. President, there is a third loophole. There are many loopholes. But

No. 3 is, I think, one of the more serious—determining what an estimate is.

Who makes those estimates? If one estimator's "estimate" comes out one way, the budget may be in balance. If we use another estimator's estimate, we will no doubt have different estimates and then be out of balance. More lawsuits will ensue.

It sounds like estimators, not Congress, would control the measure of our outlays and receipts, and ultimately, the decisions effecting our lives.

The point is that estimates can differ, and they can differ drastically. Estimates can be flat wrong. Human nature being what it is, estimates can also be manipulated. In any case, do we really want something as unreliable as economic estimates to become the underpinning of the United States Constitution? I do not believe, notwithstanding that the people of our country want us to balance the budget, that they want to underpin the U.S. Constitution with something this illusory.

The estimation game is one more loophole through which runaway Government spending is going to continue. It will take the decisionmaking process out of the hands of the people and the Congress, and place it in the hands of the economists and the estimators who seldom agree on anything.

The fourth loophole, Mr. President—Let us assume that all of our numbers, estimates, statistics and forecasts are correct, and we are struggling to meet the requirement of a balanced budget. Then what Congress will do is probably start playing budget games.

Is there not one of us who has been here for any length of time who has seen the game of putting certain functions of Government on budget or off budget? Mr. President, I predict under this constitutional amendment, if it were a part of our Federal Constitution, that we would spend the majority of our time not balancing the budget, but figuring out which Government programs were on budget and off budget, which programs raise money, and which programs cost money. And we will have many, many heated debates on what should and should not be included in that budget.

The temptation to take deficit programs "off budget" is going to be great. For example, today under section 13301 of the Budget Enforcement Act, we forbid the use of Social Security trust fund surpluses to offset the Federal deficit.

However, under this constitutional amendment, we are going to apparently use Social Security surpluses for that purpose. Many, many experts are predicting that in the year 2013, Social Security will begin to run its own deficit. At that point, the temptation will be to put Social Security off budget in order to meet the balanced budget constitutional requirement.

Nothing in this amendment prevents this chicanery, and we all know it will occur. Will this inspire confidence? No. Will it balance the budget? No.

Mr. President, there are big questions about this amendment. I have discussed just a few loopholes and gimmicks. This amendment to the Constitution deserves as much time as necessary to clear the air.

I am almost out of time. But I want to simply state that I think this has been a splendid debate. I think that we have not, in any way, caused anyone to truly believe that we are attempting a filibuster on this side of the aisle. We have had very few quorum calls. We have had, in my opinion, a debate that is one that will go down in the record books. I truly believe it is one of the better debates that the U.S. Senate has ever engaged in.

Once again, Mr. President, I do not feel that our situation today with regard to these awesome Federal deficits is the fault of the Constitution. It is our fault and it is our obligation to cure those problems by making the hard decisions, the tough decisions that all of us know we have to make to balance the budget.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the distinguished Senator from Arkansas [Mr. PRYOR] for his lucid, incisive observations.

Mr. President, I yield to the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, [Mr. SMITH] with the understanding that I do not lose my right to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire is recognized.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I do appreciate the Senator yielding briefly to me. In the spirit of friendly debate, I ask the Senator if there was any significance to the fact that when I happened to come on the floor to give relief to Senator HATCH, who has been out here many hours during this debate, he mentioned Cyclops. I wondered whether there was any significance to that fact that when he saw me on the floor, immediately the debate went to Cyclops. I think he is a better expert on history than I am, for sure, but the Cyclops had one eye, as I remember. I suppose there is some relevance here, because it is going to take more than one eye to stay focused on where this debate is going and where this debt is going in this country.

I do not know if the Senator wishes to respond, but I did take notice of that fact that immediately, Cyclops became the topic of discussion when I came on the floor.

Mr. BYRD. If the Senator will indulge me briefly.

Mr. President, I will try to answer the Senator's question. Indeed, the Senator's appearance did not have any part in my reference to the Cyclopean giant. I just wish that, if I ever became involved in a street brawl in this city, the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire would be around close by. If I could have him and Senator HOLLINGS there to help me, I would feel like fighting rather than running. He is a genuinely congenial Senator and I have enjoyed my service here with him. We have often talked and discussed matters together. I value his friendship and his advice and counsel. I do not always follow it, but I certainly listen to what he has to say. I will say that I really was pleased to see him come on the floor, because he is one of those distinguished Members of the "Republican response team," and he is a very worthy one. He has been around here a while. I consider him as a formidable and respectable protagonist of the constitutional amendment to balance the budget.

I think that answers the question, except there is one further matter he mentioned, the matter of having one eye. The giant in the story by Homer had one eye, and the distinguished Senator referred to the national debt, namely that an individual would need more than one eye to see the national debt because it is so high.

I remember that during the early first administration of President Reagan, I saw the President on television. He was very effective. He had a chart and he pointed to that chart which had a line drawn to represent the national debt at that time, in terms of $1,000 bills. He said, if I recall, that if one had $1,000 bills stacked 4 inches high, the stack of $1,000 bills would represent $1 million. Mr. Reagan indicated by the chart that the stack of $1,000 bills necessary to reach the then sum of the national debt, which at that time was just a little under $1 trillion, would require a stack of $1,000 bills 63 miles high.

That was the last time Mr. Reagan ever appeared on television using that chart, because when he left office at the conclusion of his second administration, that stack of bills, using his chart, would by then have reached about 237 or 240 miles into the stratosphere—because the Nation had added to its debt almost an additional $3 trillion during his 8 years in office. And then, of course, under the administration of Mr. Bush, the debt continued to grow.

I thank the Senator for reminding me of that chart.

Mr. SMITH. Will the Senator continue to yield to me?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. SMITH. The Senator mentioned he might like to have me on his side in a fight at some point. This is my fifth year in the Senate. It does not come anywhere near the number of years the distinguished Senator has served here, but I am hoping that someday before either one of our terms is over in the Senate we might be on the same side on an issue, as he is a very worthy adversary.

The Senator referred to a comment that I made a few days ago that made the national press; that it was our goal to wear the Senator from West Virginia out so we could get the balanced budget amendment to a vote. And the Senator is a very worthy adversary, because we have not been able to do that yet. Even though we have had a number of us out here relieving one another, the Senator still stands on his feet and still continues to debate, which is really the great thing about the Senate.

Over behind my desk, there is the desk of Daniel Webster, one of the greatest orators in the Senate. The Senator from West Virginia certainly ranks up there in oratorical skills with those great Senators of that time—Clay, Webster, Calhoun, and so many others.

But it does remind you that the time we spend here is very fleeting; that we are only temporary stewards of this country.

But I think, in that perspective, if the Senator would continue to yield just for a moment, it is important to realize the significance of this debate. I think this is a debate of historical significance.

The Senator from West Virginia and the Senator from Arkansas mentioned the fact that the debt went up significantly during the Reagan years when Reagan was President. That is accurate.

However, during those years, there were a lot in the Senator's party in Congress who certainly contributed to that. All of the Reagan budgets, at least from when I was here from 1985 through 1988-89 during the Reagan years, they were always dead on arrival and so predicted before they got here. And then they were increased by the party in power in the Congress. So the debt went up, true, while Reagan was President, but whether or not it went up all because of Ronald Reagan I think is something that I would take pretty sharp issue on with the Senator.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator yield on that point?

Mr. SMITH. It is the time of the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Number one, the Senator has stated that all of the Reagan budgets were dead on arrival. I call the distinguished Senator's attention to the fact that some of those budgets were subjected to a vote in this body or the other body or both and the Republican Members did not vote for those Reagan budgets. I believe I am correct in that. If I am not, I will be glad for someone to correct me.

Second, the Senator is in error—I know this to be a fact—when he indicated, as I thought I understood him to so indicate, that in the case of all of Mr. Reagan's budgets the Congress increased those budgets. That is not the case, if I understood the Senator correctly.

Mr. SARBANES. The Congress reduced them.

Mr. BYRD. The Congress reduced Mr. Reagan's budgets in some of those years, in some of the Reagan years.

Going back to 1945, the accumulated requests of all the Presidents exceeded the accumulated appropriations by the Congress—exceeded the accumulated appropriations by the Congress—over that same period.

But precisely under Mr. Reagan, I say again, the Congress did not exceed his budgets in every year. In fact, in some years Congress appropriated less than the budget requests.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the leader yield?

Mr. SMITH. But the Senator knows, as an expert on the Constitution, that the Congress of the United States controls the purse strings. The President does not spend any money without the approval of Congress.

So I think, to be fair about it, it would be fair to say that Congress is ultimately responsible, not the President, for increasing the debt. The President's budget is purely advisory. We do not have to agree to it. We can increase it, decrease it, ignore it, kill it, do whatever we want to do with it. But the Congress appropriates the money. The Congress authorizes the spending. And it is the spending that drove the debt up over that period of years.

And I would accept that there is certainly enough blame to go around between the two parties. But my point is, I think it is unfair to say that Ronald Reagan alone was responsible for the debt that we have today.

Mr. BYRD. As the Senator says, there is enough blame to go around. But the President, Mr. Reagan, never once submitted a balanced budget to the Congress.

Mr. SMITH. That is accurate. He should have, but he did not. The Senator is right. And neither did the Congress.

Mr. BYRD. Pardon?

Mr. SMITH. Neither did the Congress.

Mr. BYRD. Well, President Carter did. President Carter once submitted a balanced budget.

I sat right over here in room 211. I was then the majority leader of the Senate. I sat over in room 211 on a weekend, brought my little paper bag, with some coal miner's "steaks"—slices of baloney—in that little paper bag. We had the Secretary of the Treasury, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, and others. We had the President's men in that room, and we sat through Saturday and Sunday—and I believe Senator SARBANES of Maryland, who is now on the floor, was there at that time—and we hammered out a balanced budget.

But, the President also has a veto pen. And Mr. Reagan never once vetoed any appropriation bill for that reason, in particular. He vetoed some bills for other reasons.

Mr. SMITH. Will the Senator yield for just a brief response to that?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. SMITH. That is true. But, as the Senator knows, the Congress during those years rolled these huge continuing resolutions in to the President with everything from Social Security to defense and every little program that could possibly hurt anybody in America all rolled into one, essentially saying, "Well, Mr. President, if you veto this, then we will shut the Government down and stop the Social Security checks."

So, as I say, I think the reason we are here today is because of the irresponsibility, essentially, of the Congress, not any President, over the years.

As we debate today right now on the floor of the Senate, $9,600 a second the national debt increases. It increases $576,000 a minute, $34,560,000 an hour, and $829 million a day—almost a $1-billion-a-day increase as this debate continues.

Mr. BYRD. Senator, "You cram these words into mine ears against the stomach of my sense."

The Senator spoke of the omnibus continuing resolution. I have a little grandson who would say, "Do you know what?"

Well, do you know what? On that continuing resolution that was so heavy and that Mr. Reagan dropped on the table before a joint session of the Congress, do you know what? He asked that those appropriations be sent to him in one bill. I was here. I know. He asked that they be given to him in one bill.

Any further questions?

Mr. SMITH. Well, you did not give him any choice.

(Mr. KYL assumed the chair.)

Mr. BYRD. Oh, yes. He asked for it.

Mr. SMITH. Not really. If Congress controls the purse strings, I say to the Senator from West Virginia, and the national debt increased $3 trillion during those years, how can we blame the President? I mean, whose responsibility is it?

Mr. BYRD. Well, there is enough to go around, but in the case of the 1993 budget deficit reduction package, I would shift the blame in large measure, to those who did not support that deficit reduction package.

They sat here in the Senate. They sat in the House. We had a 1993 deficit reduction package that reduced the deficit over a period of 5 years by $482 billion. Somewhere between $450 and $500 billion. Not one Republican Senator voted for that deficit reduction package.

Actually, the deficits have been reduced more than that. They have come down 3 consecutive years. Not one Republican Senator voted for that package. Why?

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I would be happy to answer on behalf of the Senator from New Hampshire. The Senator from New Hampshire voted against that package for a number of reasons.

One, $250 billion in increased taxes on the American people was in it. No. 2, the projections beyond the 5 years in that budget that the Senator mentioned, the deficits go up. As we see from the follow-on budget that the President has sent, we are looking at an annual average increase of $200 billion a year. And the deficits will add $1.5 trillion more to the debt by the turn of the century. He did not take the corrective action that was necessary to continue the downward spiral.

True, deficits went down for over a 5-year projected period, largely due to the tax increases, not a lot of spending cuts. When we look at the outyears, the six, seventh, the eighth, they go like this, and under the President's projections those deficits will be over $350 billion as we turn into the 21st century.

That is not making the corrective decisions that need to be made to turn the country around, which is why we need the amendment. If Congress had the discipline we would not be here. They do not have the discipline. This chart proves it.

There are a number of attempts at balancing the budget of congressional action over the years that were taken but they never got the job done. One of the more recent ones is Gramm-Rudman-Hollings. Lot of fanfare. What happened? We walked away from it because Congress did not have the discipline to do it.

A comparison or analogy would be the Base Closing Commission. Congress did not have the courage to close bases that we did not need, so they created a commission. Some said we should create a commission to balance the budget. The point is the amendment forces us. It is unfortunate, I agree with the Senator. I wish we would not have to be here saying we needed a balanced budget amendment to clutter the Constitution to balance the Federal budget. We should do it. But we do not do it, and we will not do it until we have the amendment.

That is why we have to have it. If we do not, I would say to the Senator, our grandchildren are going to have a country that I cannot imagine. I can imagine a press conference by a President in the future, maybe not too many years, where he comes on television and says, "My fellow Americans, I have some very dismal news to share. We cannot meet our fiscal obligations, and I will go to Mexico and Japan and China, who knows where, and see if I cannot borrow some money to meet our obligations."

That is going to happen, I say to the Senator from West Virginia, because he knows we have to meet obligations. We are going to get to the point where we cannot. Interest is consuming us. Interest is now 16 percent of our budget. Sixteen percent of our budget, and defense is 16 percent of our budget. Interest is going this way and defense is going this way.

I would say to the Senator, where do we stop it?

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator allow me to answer the question?

Where do we stop? We have to, in order to stop it, we will have to swallow some tough medicine. We have already seen the Republican Senators turn tail and run when it came to tough medicine in the 1993 budget deficit reduction package.

Well, that was tough medicine. I assume, by what my friend has said, it was tough medicine because it raised taxes. The Senator must come to a conclusion at some point in time that this budget cannot be balanced simply by cutting, cutting, cutting. Discretionary spending has been cut to the bone.

There has to be at some point in time, a combination of cuts and tax increases. There has to be.

I heard a Senator on the Republican side of the aisle the other day say he would never, never vote for a tax increase. Well, he has the right to take that position if that is the way he feels.

That kind of an attitude is never going to get this budget in balance. The Senator talks about our children and grandchildren. I suppose then, that rather than vote for a tax increase we should just put this burden of debt over on our children and grandchildren. I have children, I have grandchildren. Are we going to stand here and say to them, "You children, you future generations will have to raise taxes because we do not have the guts to do it"?

We have been on a national credit card since 1981. I can remember those good-feel messages that used to be issued during the Reagan years from the oval office. Every morning, "Good morning in America, everything is fine." There really is a free lunch.

But we say we will not raise taxes. We have more than one tool by which to bring budgets into balance. That effort must not be limited simply to cutting programs. I have voted to cut spending programs. I will vote further to cut spending programs. But we cannot put aside the tool of revenue increases. The men who framed the Constitution provided for revenues to be increased to pay the debts to provide for the common defense and the general welfare.

But if we are going to take the position that the only thing we will support is to cut, cut, cut, programs but we will not raise taxes, then we are cheating our children and grandchildren.

I say we have to combine these tools if we really, really, really mean business.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, would the Senator yield for one more point?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, let me first yield to Mr. SARBANES. He has been asking me to yield, and then I will be happy to yield to the Senator.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I wanted to direct an inquiry to the distinguished Senator from West Virginia with respect to the supermajorities that are provided for in this amendment.

As the distinguished Senator has very ably pointed out, the Founding Fathers rejected supermajorities. Both Hamilton and Madison are very explicit in the Federalist Papers about the dangers of supermajorities and the power we place in the hands of minorities.

The argument has been made here on the floor by proponents of this amendment that they have certain waiver provisions in the amendment and if we ever found ourselves in the difficult circumstance clearly a waiver would be obtained and we would be able to address issues of national importance.

The Senator earlier talked about the fiscal provisions, but I wanted to direct his attention to another section, and that is the national security section. I submit to my colleagues that this is very serious business and it is time to stop playing games. The Senator from West Virginia just pointed out one game. People are for the balanced budget amendment but they will not vote for the deficit reduction package. There is a tough deficit reduction package and they say, "No, I cannot vote for that but I am for amending the Constitution to require a balanced budget."

Let me leave that for a moment and let me talk about the national security section which is section 5. I want Members to stop and think about this very carefully because we obviously need to stop, look, and listen before we place ourself into any framework that could conceivably endanger the national security of our country.

The provision says that Congress may waive the provisions of this article for any fiscal year in which a declaration of war is in effect.

We do not have many declarations of war. We can get involved in a situation we have to deal with, but we do not have a declaration of war. It then goes on to say:

The provisions of this article may be waived for any fiscal year in which the United States is engaged in military conflict which causes an imminent and serious military threat to national security and if so declared by a joint resolution, adopted by a majority of the whole number of each House, which becomes law.

In other words, if you are facing a threat, an imminent threat the amendment may be waived. The amendment does not even address the situation in which we are not yet engaged in military conflict.

I ask the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, who is on the floor, suppose we are not engaged in a military conflict, there is just the danger of a military conflict breaking out which requires us to take action involving the expenditure of moneys. Could you waive that with a joint resolution? I ask the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may yield to the distinguished Senator from Maryland for the purpose of his engaging in a colloquy, if they so wish, with the Senator from New Hampshire, without my losing the right to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SARBANES. I ask the Senator. It says, if engaged in military conflict, you may waive it. Suppose you are not engaged in military conflict but you need to prepare for a possible engagement in military conflict; you need to take actions which will cost money, which will unbalance your budget, in order to deter the potential of a forthcoming military conflict. Can you waive that under this provision?

Mr. SMITH. Would the Senator like me to respond to that?

Mr. SARBANES. Certainly.

Mr. SMITH. The Senator knows very well that this debate is simply an attempt to divert attention from the real problem. You just mentioned a moment ago the tough deficit reduction—

Mr. SARBANES. No, no, I yield to the Senator to respond to my question. The question is on the national security issue. The question is specifically addressed to section 5 of House Joint Resolution 1, and it specifically goes to the question of whether you could have a waiver where we were not engaged in military conflict but needed to take action in order to address a potential military conflict.

Mr. SMITH. Well, since the Senator wants me to respond to certain parameters rather than the parameters I prefer to respond, I say: "Declaration of war is intended to be construed in the context of the powers of the Congress to declare war under article I, section 8. The committee intends that ordinary and prudent preparations for a war perceived by Congress to be imminent would be funded fully within the limitations imposed by the amendment, although the Congress could establish higher level of spending or deficits for these or any other purposes under section 1."

Mr. SARBANES. I know the Senator from New Hampshire is reading the report, but it does not really answer the question. The first provision says that Congress may waive it for any fiscal year in which a declaration of war is in effect. I am addressing a situation in which a declaration of war is not in effect.

Mr. SMITH. I can read it—

Mr. SARBANES. I am addressing a situation in which we are not actually engaged in military conflict, but we want to take actions to forestall a military conflict. Can you waive it?

Mr. SMITH. Is that not ordinary and prudent preparations for war? Yes, that is ordinary and prudent.

Mr. SARBANES. You can waive it?

Mr. SMITH. It did not say waive it. "The committee intends that ordinary and prudent preparations for a war perceived by Congress to be imminent would be funded fully * * *" There is nothing to waive.

Mr. SARBANES. Fully funded; in other words, you can violate the requirements of the balanced budget amendment.

Mr. SMITH. Not at all. That is not what this says. The truth of the matter is, there will not be any funds even to conduct war if we continue along the lines that the Senator from Maryland would like to go, which is literally to bankrupt the United States of America. We will not have any money to spend on defense.

Mr. SARBANES. What does the Senator make of this waiver provision? What is its intention to be in section 5?

Mr. SMITH. This is the time of the Senator from West Virginia. I am not going to engage the Senator on the time of the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. SARBANES. I see. I regret the Senator does not want to respond. If the Senator from West Virginia will continue to yield?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. SARBANES. I regret the Senator from New Hampshire does not want to address that question. Let me just point out to the Senate that when you really get down to some of these hard questions, the proponents of this amendment just slide off them and they say, "Oh, well, we would get a waiver."

The waiver that is required here is declared by joint resolution adopted by a majority of the whole number of each House and, as the very able Senator from West Virginia has pointed out, this is contrary to what the Constitution now requires.

What this waiver means is that you would have to have 51 votes in the Senate and 218 votes in the House. I have heard the proponents stand on the floor and say, "Don't worry, no problem. If a situation arises, clearly the Members will vote for the waiver and we will be able to address it, we will get these votes, there is no problem."

I just want to recount one story, because this is very serious business, I suggest to the Members.

On August 12, 1941, the House of Representatives was confronted with the issue of extending the time of service of those members of the armed services who had been drafted the year before.

In the summer of 1940, the Congress had passed the Selective Training and Service Act, and, under it, people called up were to serve for 1 year—the President could extend the period indefinitely if Congress declared that the national interest is in peril.

On July 21, 1941, with the prospect of war increasing, President Roosevelt acted. In a special message to Capitol Hill, he asked Congress to declare a national emergency that would allow the Army to extend the service of draftees. The President came to the Congress and asked them to make this extension. Everyone is telling us that "if we had a national emergency, surely the Congress would act." The measure regarding the draft for World War II passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 203 to 202. It passed the Senate by a vote of 45 to 30.

Now, just think of this. We are literally a few months away from the outbreak of World War II. The President has said to the Congress, "There is a national emergency. I ask you to extend the time of duty of those who had been drafted the previous year for a 12-month period. The storm clouds are on the horizon for all to see. We need to take action."

In many ways, it is comparable to envisioning a waiver situation for national security under this amendment for which the proponents say, "Oh, if there is a real problem, we'll get the waiver and we'll address our national security situation."

At that time, the vote in the Senate was 45 to 30; in the House of Representatives, 203 to 202. Neither of those votes meets the requirement of section 5 of this balanced budget amendment proposal. Even though in both instances a majority of those voting on this draft question voted to extend it, 45 to 30 in the Senate, 203 to 202 in the House, with Speaker Rayburn going into the well of the House in order to bring about that vote, neither of those votes is a majority of the whole number of each House, which is what this amendment requires.

So I ask my friends, the proponents of this proposition, how have they provided for the national security of the Nation? I am giving you an absolute, specific demonstration of an instance in which anyone looking back upon it would say clearly there was an important national security question that needed to be addressed and yet the vote to address it would not carry the day under the requirements of section 5 of this balanced budget amendment. The section states "So declared by a joint resolution adopted by a majority of the whole number of each House," which means you have to have 218 votes in the House—it carried in the House 203 to 202; it did not have 218 votes—and means you would have had to have 49 votes in the Senate. It carried in the Senate 45 to 30, but it did not have the necessary 49 votes in the Senate. There were 48 states in the Union during World War II and 96 Senators; therefore, the whole number would be 49.

Now, this is the absolute harm which supermajorities can potentially do to the national security of our Nation.

Mr. SMITH. Will the Senator allow me to respond to that?

Mr. SARBANES. Sure.

Mr. SMITH. The point is, it is very clear in the language that I have just indicated on the amendment as well as article I of the amendment. The Senator is correct that it does take a three-fifths vote. Now, the point is—

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield at that point? This requirement, as I understand it, does not take a three-fifths vote.

Mr. BYRD. Right, it does not.

Mr. SARBANES. This requirement requires the supermajority in the sense that it required that it be adopted by a majority of the whole number of each House.

You see, this is very important, and I am glad we are having this discussion because it is important to know exactly what this resolution provides and how it would work in real-life situations. There is a great tendency to just brush it all aside, and in fact I think this exchange illustrates that because I am not now focusing on the three-fifths requirement. That is a different issue.

Mr. SMITH. It is not a different issue.

Mr. SARBANES. I am focusing on the section 5 provision, and its supermajority requirement of the majority of the whole number of each House.

Mr. SMITH. But the Senator is focusing on that and ignoring article I, which allows you to raise the debt if you need to raise the debt in order to deficit spend, in order to deal with the emergency that the Senator is talking about.

Mr. SARBANES. By a three-fifths vote.

Mr. SMITH. That is what the Senator chooses to ignore, because that answers his question.

Mr. SARBANES. By a three-fifths vote.

Mr. SMITH. That is right.

Mr. SARBANES. That underscores my point even more. If the Senator's answer to me is you can waive it on a three-fifths vote, then in neither of these instances in the Senate or the House for the extension of the draft did they come anywhere close to the three-fifths vote. They did not have the three-fifths vote.

Mr. SMITH. It goes right back to the issue of priorities, which is why we are dealing with a balanced budget amendment to begin with, I say to the Senator from Maryland. Priorities are, if you are at war or need to go to war to defend the national interest of the United States of America, and you need a three-fifths vote to do it and you cannot get it, you will cut spending somewhere else; you will take out some pork or some wasteful spending that we never can get out of this budget, which is the reason we are in this mess.

You set priorities. What is more important, the national security of the United States or funding the Education Department or funding the Commerce Department or HUD? You make decisions, just like everybody else has to do in America.

That is the problem. The Senator has gone right to the heart of it. That is exactly why we are here today, because of this mess, because of the point the Senator makes. Nobody wants to set priorities anymore.

You set priorities. If I am a Senator and this happens, and the President of the United States, whoever he or she may be, needs money, needs forces, needs to protect the national security of the United States or the troops in the field, I am going to cut somewhere; you bet I am going to cut somewhere, and I am going to do it quickly if I cannot get the three-fifths.

I say to the Senator, I think we would get the three-fifths because the Senate and the House of Representatives, speaking on behalf of the American people, with our Armed Forces in jeopardy, are certainly not going to deny them the protection they need and the materials they need to protect themselves in the field or the national security interests of the United States.

It is a weak argument, and the Senator knows it. It is just a way to obfuscate this issue, to deny those who are out here saying we need this amendment. We do need it, and that is exactly why we do need it, because nobody wants to set priorities. No priorities can be set here—only in the household budgets, only in business, only in the cities of America, only in the States but not in the Congress of the United States. Oh, no; we have to spend more than we take in, year after year after year after year, $18,500 per American. That is the share of the national debt. It goes up, up, up, up.

The Senator talked about the guts to support the President's budget. The President's budget did not resolve it. If it resolved it, why are we looking at $200 billion more in annual deficits? How are you going to defend America when we get $20 trillion in debt? Where do you draw the line? Where do you draw the line?

The Senators talked about taxes. We can raise the tax rate, the Senator from West Virginia said—36 percent, 50 percent, 70 percent, 100 percent? That is what is going on in Washington, DC, right now. The taxes are so high they cannot pay them anymore. They are asking the Federal Government to come in and take over the city.

Mr. SARBANES. Let me bring the Senator back to the very real-life problem that I wish to discuss with him based on a very clear example in history, because what the Senator has just done is what is consistently done here. If we try to focus, in a tough-minded way, on a particular problem they say, "Oh, well, don't worry about it; somehow or other it is going to be taken care of."

Now, I want the Senator to come with me for just a moment or two and to look at some history, and I want to read from this article that appeared in the summer of 1991.

Fifty years ago last Monday, on August 12, 1941, House Speaker Sam Rayburn saved the draft from legislative defeat and kept the U.S. Army intact to fight a war that was only 4 months away.

The reason I am citing this story is because we are constantly told that if we have an emergency situation, we will get this waiver. The Senator from New Hampshire has just told me we are going to get a three-fifths waiver. He left the section I was focusing on that required a majority of the whole number, namely you had to actually have 218 votes in the House or actually have 51 votes in the Senate, and he has now gone to three-fifths of the whole number. So you have to have 290 votes in the House and 60 votes in the Senate in order to address the crisis. He says if we have a crisis, we obviously will address it. I am going to point to a lesson in history in which I think people would now agree we had a crisis that had to be addressed. We did address it. But if we had been operating with these requirements, either one of them, we would not have addressed it because we would not have gotten the vote that was necessary to do it.

Let me read on from the article.

The margin of victory was a single vote. And the battle could have been lost as easily as won except for Rayburn's personality and leadership and mastery of parliamentary procedure. If Rayburn had failed, the Army stood to lose about two-thirds of its strength and three-fourths of the officer corps. At issue was whether to extend the 12-month service obligation of more than 600,000 draftees already in the Army, thousands of others being inducted every day, and the active-duty term of several thousand National Guardsmen and Reservists who had been called up for 1 year. Without an extension, the obligations of both the draftees and the Guardsmen and Reservists would begin expiring in the fall. The United States had adopted its first peacetime draft during the previous summer after weeks of heated and acrimonious debates in both congressional Chambers.

The article then goes on to point out:

Although the legislation limited the draftees' terms of service to 12 months, it provided that the President could extend the period indefinitely if Congress declared that the national interest is imperiled.

On July 21, 1941, with the prospect of war increasing, Roosevelt acted. In a Special Message to Capitol Hill, he asked Congress to declare a national emergency that would allow the Army to extend the service of draftees, guardsmen and reservists for whatever period the legislators deemed appropriate.

Despite the measure's unpopularity and strong lobbying by isolationist forces, the Senate approved a joint resolution on August 7, declaring the existence of a national emergency and authorizing the President to extend the service of most Army personnel by 18 months.

The vote was 45 to 30, I say to my good friend from New Hampshire; 45 to 30. That vote would not have qualified under the amendment that he is proposing. That vote was inadequate. You needed 49 now you would need 51, if you did it by the whole number, or 60 if you are doing the three-fifths. I am now quoting the article.

In the House it was a different story. The Republican leadership viewed opposition to draft extension as a political opportunity too good to ignore. Others had their own reasons for opposing the measure.

It then discusses what Rayburn went through, and of course the final vote was 203 to 202. Mr. President, I say to the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, 203 votes is not enough under the provisions of the proposal that he is now seeking to place in the Constitution of the United States.

So, here we have a real situation. This is not hypothetical. This was a critical issue. It was carried under the provisions of the Founding Fathers, which the very distinguished Senator from West Virginia has been expounding. Under the provisions of the Founding Fathers, the Congress was able to make a decision. You had a majority in both Houses for it, 45 to 30 in the Senate, 203 to 202 in the House of Representatives. They addressed the situation. Under this proposal, we would not have been able to address that crisis.

Mr. SMITH. If I might just respond to the Senator, his point is well taken.

However we have a situation where I think we are mixing apples and oranges. The Senator is assuming—we did not have an amendment at the time, we did not have a $5 trillion national debt in 1941. We did not have a situation where the Members who were debating knew that they would need a certain number of votes to get over the top to be able to declare war. It is an entirely different situation. You cannot compare 1941 with 1995—you can, but I do not believe it is a fair comparison.

I think things were different then. The situation was different. The debate was different. The issues were different. I think in this particular case if the emergency was such, under the amendment—if the emergency were such that we needed to do something in the area of national security, it could be done either by a three-fifths vote of both parties to deficit spend to take care of it—which is one option. If they do not want to do that, then they have other options. But I think to say 1941 when Roosevelt declared war is the same as it is today is simply wrong.

The issue is, we can deficit spend. That is the first option. Or we can cut spending somewhere else. And that is exactly what most responsible people would do in the future, who are here on the floor of the Senate or in the House, wherever the debate takes place—in both places. They would make the responsible decision, surely, to protect the national security of the United States. They would cut something if they did not agree to go the three-fifths route to deficit spend to do it. I think that is very well protected under the Constitution. It makes complete sense. It is common sense. We are the representatives of the American people. If we decide we cannot muster three-fifths votes then I assume the American people do not feel it is a national security problem for us.

If we still believe that they are wrong, we can then cut spending somewhere else with a simple majority. I do not see what the Senator's problem is.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I say to my colleague we are just being given these kind of bland assurances. "Surely this would happen. No question this would be done. It is common sense that we would respond." Yet I am giving you a real, live, historical example. There was nothing hypothetical about it, nothing conjectural about it. It happened at a critical time in American history. We were faced in the Congress with a very fateful decision. We are talking literally months before Pearl Harbor. Literally months. And the Congress was faced with this difficult decision.

The Congress reacted, I think, appropriately. But by very narrow margins. And neither of the margins in the Senate nor the House are adequate to meet the requirements contained in your proposal, which only dramatizes the point that the Senator from West Virginia has made so effectively here this morning about the danger of going against the Founding Fathers, against Madison and Hamilton, and writing in these supermajority requirements.

The real danger to the Republic is that you will not be able to deal with crisis situations when they emerge.

The Senator says, "Oh, no, we will take care of those. Do not worry about it. Do not worry about it. Surely we would respond."

I am saying to the Senator: I am giving an example right out of history where we, under his standards, would not have taken care of it. Fortunately the standard was the one laid down by the founders, the one that the Senator from West Virginia propounded here. In other words, we decide things by majority. We were able to address the situation. But with your provisions here that situation could not have been addressed. It is clear on its face.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield for a response, there are a couple of points here. First of all, the Senator is assuming something he does not know to be the fact. In 1941 we did not have a three-fifths situation. In 1941, I would assume that the American people would have wanted us to support the President of the United States, which we did, to go to war when we were attacked.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield on that? Is the Senator telling me that on a measure that passed the House 203 to 202, that if at the time there had been a three-fifths requirement of the entire membership of the House of Representatives—which would be 261 votes?

Mr. SMITH. I did not do the math. I will take the Senator's word for it.

Mr. SARBANES. It is 261.

Mr. BYRD. Let me tell the Senator, 175 votes could defeat it; two-fifths could defeat it.

Mr. SARBANES. It is 261. Are you telling me that a good number of the 202 who voted against it then would have voted for it, so you would have had 261 votes? Where are you going to come up with these? You barely got 203 votes. It almost lost. It passed by one vote. And now you are telling me, "They did not have the three-fifths requirements then. If they had the three-fifths requirement somehow, miraculously they would have gotten the other votes in order to do it when they voted against it at the time?" They almost beat it. They almost beat it on a straight up or down vote: 203 to 202. And now you are telling me, "Well, they did not have the three-fifths requirements. If they would have had the three-fifths requirement, namely that he had to get 261 votes then a big chunk of these 202 who voted against it then, to prevent it from happening, would have switched over and voted for it?" Is that what the Senator is telling me? I cannot believe it.

Mr. SMITH. The Senator did not listen to me very carefully. That is not exactly what I said. What I said is there are two options. One, those people, if they had the three-fifths provision, I think, would have looked at it a lot differently, and they may have gotten more votes.

Let us assume the Senator's position and say that did not happen. If it did not happen and this amendment were, in 1941, part of the Constitution, we then would have gone and spent money by taking money from someplace else in the budget because we would have believed that the national security interests of the United States should come first ahead of subsidies to apples or whatever else.

Mr. SARBANES. How do you know they would have done that?

Mr. SMITH. Because it takes 51 percent to do it. That is why.

Mr. SARBANES. My dear friend.

Mr. SMITH. That is exactly why. It is the same numbers.

Mr. SARBANES. The Senator from New Hampshire is my dear friend. But how can the Senator stand here and say, "We easily would have gone somewhere else and found the money" when at the time, on the very issue itself without that constraint, without that additional complication in terms of getting support for the measure, without the further complication of the dynamics of trying to achieve a majority vote, when at the time they only passed it by one vote, 203 to 202? That was the vote.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. SARBANES. Speaker Rayburn walked the Halls of the Congress. I am now quoting this article.

The vote was set for Monday, August 11. But Rayburn put it off for one day out of respect for a Republican Member who had died over the weekend.

I must say those were the days when there was a degree of civility that prevailed in the workings of the Congress.

With the President out of town meeting secretly in New Foundland with British Prime Minister Winston Churchill to frame the Atlantic Charter, Rayburn spent the additional day roaming the corridors of Capitol Hill trying to win over recalcitrant Democrats and wavering Republicans. His lobbying style was like the man himself, honest, direct and intensely personal without a hint of intimidation. The debate went on for 10 hours in the House. Finally at 8:05 p.m. the reading clerk began calling the roll.

I reach back into history to try to bring you a real, live example.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. SARBANES. Certainly.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may yield for such colloquy without losing my right to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATCH. I apologize. I did not realize my distinguished friend from West Virginia had the floor.

Let me just say this. That is what was created 203 to 202. There were times when that could have happened. It was extraordinary. In the Senate, there were only 96 Senators sitting at that time. The vote was 45 to 30. So there were 21 Senators that were missing. We could have had a constitutional majority in this case.

Mr. SARBANES. How could you have had it? Those votes could not qualify under your amendment. Is that correct? Neither of those votes qualifies under your amendment.

Mr. HATCH. You could not with those two votes.

Mr. SARBANES. Either in the Senate or the House.

Mr. HATCH. The Senator was talking about Senators walked. They walked there. There were 30 that walked in the House. There were 21 in the Senate; 96 in the Senate; only 75 voted. So even under a minority vote, people can walk, if they want to.

But the point is we have a constitutional majority in here for one reason, and it has been accepted by both Democrats and Republicans in the House and the Senate; and that is so that we would have tax-limiting effect. I think it is going to be a tax-limiting effect. That is the purpose of it.

Mr. SARBANES. If the Senator will yield, you have it in section 5 to do a waiver for a military conflict you require a whole number of each House.

Mr. HATCH. That is right.

Mr. SARBANES. The whole number.

Let me go back. There were only 48 States then. So there were 96 Senators.

Mr. HATCH. Right.

Mr. SARBANES. The whole number would be 49 in that circumstance. Is that correct?

Mr. HATCH. That is right.

Mr. SARBANES. The vote in the Senate was 45 to 30. That does not qualify. Correct?

Mr. HATCH. Right.

Mr. SARBANES. In the House, they had 218.

Mr. HATCH. 203 to 202.

Mr. SARBANES. 218.

Mr. HATCH. No. It was 203 to 202.

Mr. SARBANES. In any event, it will not qualify there either.

Mr. HATCH. It would have, had they not walked.

My point is the Senator is saying they might walk under this constitutional majority. They walked then under a regular majority vote.

Mr. SARBANES. That is right.

Mr. HATCH. But in both cases, had they not walked, you could have had a constitutional majority. I think these votes are going to be heightened votes, and nobody is going to miss them.

Mr. SARBANES. If I could say to my dear friend from Utah, the Founders specifically discussed this. They debated whether the quorum should be more than a majority of the body and they rejected the notion that it should be more than a majority. They said then that you would prevail on a measure by majority of those present and voting.

Mr. HATCH. That is right.

Mr. SARBANES. Assuming you had a quorum. You have escalated the number, and you have done it in such a way as to negatively effect very critical decisions, as I have indicated by the history of World War II. A measure that was before the body that I would argue very strenuously was needed to provide for the national security of our Nation would have failed, not because a majority of those present and voting did not support it—they did support it—but because you have introduced supermajority requirements. And these votes would not have met your supermajority requirements.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator from West Virginia yield once more to me?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, yes. I do.

Mr. HATCH. Keep in mind, I do not think that we can use votes in 1941. There was not a constitutional amendment in effect then. Keep in mind, one of the other things our Founding Fathers did—they did it very carefully—was to put article V into the Constitution which provides for constitutional amendments, and for changes that are needed. We are asserting that this change is needed because of the way Congress has been profligate over the last 60 years.

But let us say the last 26 years during which time we have—could I finish? Let me finish this one thought. The point is that one of the most important aspects of the balanced budget amendment is that these two votes, if they are taken every year, are going to be the votes nobody is going to be able to miss. If you vote on increasing taxes, there are going to have to be 100 Senators here because it is going to be a vote that everybody in the country is going to pay attention to. If you vote on increasing the deficit, there had better be 100 Senators here. There are not going to be any walks. Anybody who walks is not going to be there in the next Congress.

That is one thing this amendment will do.

Mr. SARBANES. Let us assume that. Let us assume in 1941 in the House of Representatives that everyone who walked would have voted for the measure. It is a big assumption. Let us assume that. Everyone who did not vote would have voted for it.

Mr. HATCH. You would have had a constitutional majority—

Mr. SARBANES. No, you would not have had the three-fifths—

Mr. HATCH. Not to increase spending.

Mr. SARBANES. Which the Senator from New Hampshire was making reference to.

Mr. HATCH. I said a constitutional majority for increasing taxes.

Mr. SARBANES. The point I want to get across to my colleague is that there is the assumption that issues of national security will not be a matter of controversy. In other words, he is saying clearly, if there is a problem, we are going to get these supermajorities in order to do what needs to be done. I am demonstrating that we had an instance in which there was clearly a national security question and you are not commanding the supermajority.

Mr. HATCH. The fact that you cannot command a supermajority is part of what is going to happen here. What we are saying is, look.

I think a better illustration, if the Senator wants me to substitute one for him, would be the vote last year on the tax package which the President brought up here. It is an interesting constitutional question that I know will intrigue my dear friend from West Virginia who has spent a lifetime studying the Constitution—for whom I have a lot of respect—in that area, among many others. That is, that vote last year did not have one Republican. We have been excoriated by Members of the other side of the floor as Republicans because we did not vote for that tax increase, or the deficit reduction part of it either. We did not because we did not want taxes to increase. And some stood up and said, "We stood up and did something about the deficit." Well, I suspect that is true. We just did not happen to agree. But now that vote was a 50-50 tie in the Senate.

I want the attention of my dear friend from West Virginia. It was a 50-50 tie. Had this constitutional amendment been in effect, would that bill have become law today? Or would it have become law at that time? We did not have a majority of the whole number of the U.S. Senate. It took the Vice President to break the tie.

There are two ways of looking at that. One is that 50 of us could have thwarted the tax increase. I think that would have been a terrific thing to do, and that is what we tried to do. We lost because of the fact that under the Constitution the Vice President could vote. But the other point would be—

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. HATCH. Let me finish and I will be glad to. The other point—with the delegation given to me from our colleague—is that, from your standpoint, a simple majority was not allowed to win, and that this would make it even more difficult because you would have to have 51 actual votes of the whole number here.

Mr. SARBANES. Is that your reading of section 4 of this balanced budget amendment?

Mr. HATCH. Not necessarily. I am raising—

Mr. SARBANES. What is your interpretation? What does it mean? Section 4 says, "No bill to increase revenue shall become law unless approved by a majority of the whole number of each House by a rollcall vote." Take the situation you just described. It is a 50-50 split. The Vice President is entitled to cast his vote. Would this negate the vote-casting power of the Vice President?

Mr. HATCH. No. He could cast his vote, but since you did not have 51 votes of the majority of the whole number, the tax bill would have gone down to defeat.

Mr. SARBANES. That is your understanding of the meaning of that?

Mr. HATCH. That is my interpretation. I thought I would give you a good illustration.

Mr. SARBANES. I wanted to have that on the record.

Mr. HATCH. We would not have had that highest tax increase in history had this amendment been in effect.

Mr. SARBANES. That is right. You are saying if this amendment were passed, the August vote would have been negated.

Mr. HATCH. That is my interpretation. It would have meant that we would have had to have gotten that 51 votes to increase taxes, and we probably would have been faced with having to reduce the deficit more.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, what it also means is that in a situation such as the distinguished Senator from Maryland has raised—and he has focused on a section which I am going to reach a little later, but he has done it much better than I would have done it. What my Republican friends are saying—and I hope I will have the attention of both of my friends—what our friends here have just said is that in the event we are in a situation which jeopardizes the national security—

Mr. HATCH. No, that is not what I said.

Mr. BYRD. Wait. That is, in essence, what you are saying. You have not let me finish what I am going to say. How do you know what I am going to say? Be a little patient.

Mr. HATCH. I will.

Mr. BYRD. What they are, in essence, saying is that you have to have 51 votes in the Senate—no matter how many take a walk; you have to have 51 Senators, not including the Vice President, who would be willing to stand up and vote for a resolution which authorizes the Commander in Chief in a situation where there is a declaration of war or—

Mr. HATCH. No, no—

Mr. BYRD. Just let me finish. This is one Senator who is not going to be befuddled or frustrated by interruptions. I will be very happy to yield to my friend when I have finished.

Let me start again. We will learn over a period of time that there are some Senators who will just not be rushed.

“Congress may waive the provisions of this article for any fiscal year in which a declaration of war is in effect.” In the last 48 years, this country has fought three wars and engaged in several military conflicts that were of a lesser nature. Not one time was there a declaration of war. Not one time.

The provisions of this article may be waived for any fiscal year in which the United States is engaged in military conflict which causes an imminent and serious military threat to national security and is so declared by a joint resolution adopted by a majority of the whole number of each House which becomes law.

Therein lies a tale—many tales, as a matter of fact. First, there has to be a resolution passed. There has to be a joint resolution passed, even considering the fact that we might have a filibuster conducted on such a resolution because the opposition could be very strong in the Senate on that occasion

There could be a filibuster. The President could veto the resolution when it reaches him. How much time do we have? My friend from New Hampshire—I believe, if I did not misunderstand him—said in that kind of a situation, we would make cuts, we would make cuts from other programs. We would adjust priorities.

We do not have time to make cuts when the Nation is faced with a military threat. We do not have time to search through various programs and come up with cuts. And besides, the domestic discretionary programs have already been pared to the bone. When the Nation is put in jeopardy, there must be a resolution passed. It must be enacted into law by the President's signature, and the Nation's security is in the balance. We do not have time to make cuts. It takes time.

Secondly, in the event there is a 50-50 tie, under the Constitution as it is written, the Vice President could cast a vote breaking the tie. Under this section of the amendment, the Vice President, representing the President and his administration, is not permitted to cast a vote to break a tie, while the Nation's security is in the balance. No, it has to be a Senator. The amendment says you have to have 51 Senators.

Mr. President, this section 5, plays Russian roulette with the national security of this country. You do not have the time to look at some programs providing research on apples, or mushrooms, or whatever it may be. You do not have time for that. And that is small chicken feed, that is small; you are talking about pennies in comparison with the billions of dollars that military threats to our security will cost. It puts the Nation's security into a gamble.

Mr. President, does the distinguished Senator wish me to yield to him again?

Mr. HATCH. I would appreciate it. I appreciate what the Senator is saying. This amendment is not going to allow business as usual. It is going to require a constitutional majority to increase taxes, which is a tax-limiting approach. I suspect that that will be more difficult to get than a three-fifths majority to increase the debt. I really suspect that that is so.

The distinguished Senator from West Virginia—as he always is—was very accurate in stating that section 5 says that during a declared war, Congress can waive this provision. That only takes a majority vote. However, if you get into a military conflict which causes an imminent and serious military threat, then it will take a constitutional majority.

I cannot imagine any Congress that would not grant a constitutional majority under those circumstances. But be that as it may, if it does not, then that will be the right of the Congress.

(Mr. GREGG assumed the chair.)

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. HATCH. Yes, I will.

Mr. SARBANES. The people who are against it do not even have to show up; is that correct?

Mr. HATCH. Yes.

Mr. SARBANES. Now the way the Constitution is written, if a matter is put to a vote, let us say four or five Members are missing, they may be ill, they may be in the hospital, they may be sick, they may have gone to a family funeral, so they cannot be here. It is not unheard of. In fact, it has happened on occasion. You take a vote amongst those that are here. It passes 47 to 46, and that is that. Under your provision you need 51 votes.

Mr. HATCH. Right.

Mr. SARBANES. Suppose you had a vote 50 to nothing, just to draw the most extreme hypothetical, 50 are for, zero against. The rest are all absent. That does not carry; is that correct?

Mr. HATCH. You would wait until the next day when you had 51. You can come up with hypotheticals in every situation, but that does not change reality. This body has increased the debt ceiling.

Mr. SARBANES. But the people that are against do not have to vote; right?

Mr. HATCH. That is right.

Mr. SARBANES. They are not required to be here to make a difference. Because the standard is not between those that are for and those that are against, you have to get so many affirmative votes; is that correct?

Mr. HATCH. You could use the same logic. It does not—

Mr. SARBANES. Or it could be the three-fifths where you have—

Mr. HATCH. You have to have 51 here to constitute a quorum, so it would not have passed anyway. That could be under any hypothetical.

Mr. BYRD. No, no, no. You can have 51 here, which is a quorum, under the constitutional amendment that presently obtains and 26 Senators would be a majority.

Mr. SARBANES. If you had 51 present so you had a quorum and the vote was say 48 to 3.

Mr. HATCH. Then you would not have the requisite number.

Mr. SARBANES. It would not pass; right?

Mr. HATCH. No.

Mr. SARBANES. You would have a quorum and you would not pass it.

The more you probe into this, the more of a Rube Goldberg contraption it is.

Actually what happens is, the more we debate this section, the more you come to understand and appreciate the perceptions and the wisdom of the drafters of the Constitution.

It is incredible that we are out here playing games with a document that has withstood 206 years of scrutiny and was put together by a group of men whom Gladstone, the great British Prime Minister, regarded as the greatest assemblage of statesmen in the history of the world. That was his comment about them in framing the Constitution of the United States. Yet, we are playing games with it all throughout here.

You have a three-fifths of the whole number requirement, you have a majority of the whole number requirement, you have a waiver requirement. You are negating the tie-breaking vote given to the Vice President of the United States, as I understand it, under another provision of the Constitution.

Mr. HATCH. Not really.

Mr. SARBANES. The Senator told me on a vote of 50 to 50, in which the Vice President sought to cast the tie-breaking vote, would not qualify under your proposal.

Mr. HATCH. Only under that instance. In other instances it who qualify.

Let me make this point. The game that is being played is business as usual. We are running this country right into bankruptcy.

Mr. SARBANES. No, that is not the case.

Mr. HATCH. Let me finish.

Mr. SARBANES. No, I am going to reclaim my time. I am not going to let the Senator—

Mr. HATCH. He yielded to me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from West Virginia yield the floor?

Mr. BYRD. Let me get it perfectly clear. I yielded to both Senators for a colloquy, with the understanding that I would not lose my right to the floor, into which colloquy I presume I can intervene at any point I wish.

Mr. HATCH. That is right.

If I could finish my remarks, I would be happy to allow the Senator from Maryland to respond.

My problem is, you can find fault with almost anything. The reason we brought this balanced budget amendment before us is because we have a runaway train of Federal spending. We have a runaway train that is not treating our taxpayers fairly. The answers always seem to be more spending and more taxing.

This amendment is an amendment that does not require a balanced budget, but it does require us to at least make priority choices.

If we are going to spend, then we are going to have to stand up and vote to do so. You have to vote. We do not have to now. If we are going to tax, then you have to stand up and vote to tax. We do not have to do that right now. We can do it through voice votes.

I just want to add this to it: If you are going to tax more, by gosh, I think you are going to find these two votes—a vote to increase taxes, a vote to increase the deficit—from this point on, if this balanced budget amendment passes both Houses and becomes ratified, you are going to find that those two votes are going to have 100 Senators every time, because nobody could fail to vote on them. And if they do, they are in jeopardy of losing their seat. It is going to highlight the importance of these votes around here. We will not have any more of these 51 votes or 26 to 25. We have not had any of those as long as I have been here.

The point is that when the Senator mentioned that in his hypothetical, he said 50 votes. I am saying that would not have been acceptable; 51, if you have 26 votes, yes.

Mr. SMITH. Will the Senator from West Virginia yield?

Mr. SARBANES. If I could just engage in this colloquy further.

The game that is being played, I say to my friend, is very clear today because the other side has been very clear that they have drafted this in a way that would have knocked out the deficit reduction package of August 1993.

Now, I understand that the Senator was not for that. I was for it. I disagree with him. The Senator portrays it as a tax increase on all the American people. The fact of the matter is, it was a tax cut on the top 2 percent of the income, other than the gasoline tax. But the income tax rates affected the top 2 percent.

Now, I understand the Senators on the other side have a very soft spot for the top 2 percent, but it seemed to me reasonable to do this and to try to address some of our Nation's problems.

In any event, the situation could have been reversed. You could have been trying to push through a deficit reduction package that I opposed for one reason or another.

The question is whether you are going to skew the Constitution in a way that a majority is not going to be able to make decisions. The Founding Fathers very carefully constructed this document and they are very explicit, both Madison and Hamilton in the Federalist Papers, in pointing out in the documents about a supermajority.

Let me just read what Madison said in Federalist 58. Because he is the father of our Constitution and a man of great reason and fairness. He would recognize the other arguments and try to deal with them rationally, which is what we are trying very hard to do here today. Let me just quote him.

This is Madison now, in the Federalist 58:

It has been said that more than a majority ought to have been required for a quorum; and in particular cases, if not in all, more than a majority of the quorum for a decision. That some advantages might have resulted from such a precaution cannot be denied. It might have been an additional shield to some particular interests, and another obstacle generally to hasty and partial measures. But these considerations are outweighed by the inconveniences in the opposite scale. In all cases where justice or the general good might require new laws to be passed, or active measures to be pursued, the fundamental principle of free Government would be reversed. It would be no longer the majority that would rule; the power would be transferred to the minority. Were the defensive privilege limited to particular cases, an interested minority might take advantage of it to screen themselves from equitable sacrifices to the general weal, or, in particular emergencies, to extort unreasonable indulgences.

Now, I agree with Gladstone's evaluation of the Founding Fathers. This amendment is fraught with peril. The more we go into it and the more we develop it and the more we measure it against historical experience, the more I find wrong with the amendment.

The Senator asserted earlier that surely three-fifths would vote to raise the debt limit. I invite my colleague to go back through the votes on raising debt limits in the past to spot the ones where three-fifths did not. It is not so obvious.

In many of these issues it is a struggle to get the simple majority to make the decision. These are controversial issues. They are recognized as controversial. The August 1993 package was controversial. You disagreed with it. I supported it. I think it has proven itself out. I think all the subsequent history supports a decision to have passed it.

Those decisions ought to be made by majority vote. That is what the Founding Fathers intended. That is what I think we should stick with.

I yield the floor.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, will the Senator from West Virginia yield?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I yield.

Mr. SMITH. The Senator has been very generous for all Members here on his time for which this Senator is grateful.

I would like to pick up on something that Senator HATCH said, and say to the Senator from Maryland, the Senator has pointed out some points which are well taken regarding this debate and this amendment. I would also say to the Senator that Winston Churchill once said, "Democracy is not perfect, but it is the best thing going."

The issue here is the Founding Fathers were not infallible. We are not infallible. There are reasonable decisions that have to be made from time to time. The Dred Scott decision in 1857 when a Supreme Court said a slave was property and therefore could not sue in Federal court. That came in under the Constitution. Is that right? No. But it happened. So we are an infallible people.

So my point is, what Senator HATCH was alluding to, if we look at what is happening we are talking about a situation where a national emergency might emerge. The Senator is correct. He made some very good points about what might happen if that national emergency were to come about.

The other point is, if we are looking at where the debt is going and how much of the debt is being consumed, how much of the budget is being consumed by interest on the debt, and looking at where it is today, 16 percent roughly of that budget is interest on the debt and 16 percent is national defense.

I would say to the Senator, with all due respect, if we did not stop it, if we do not stop this runaway train of debt and deficit spending, we are not going to have any money for national defense. We are not going to have any money for any emergency under any situation because, and the Senator knows, that the commission, which was a bipartisan commission, on entitlements headed by Senator Bob KERREY, Democrat, and Senator Jack DANFORTH, Republican, said by the year 2013 at the latest, this country will be spending 100 percent of its budget on interest on the debt and entitlements. There is not going to be any money for defense.

I would just say to the Senator if this is fallible, this amendment, then tell me what the alternative is when we get to 2013 and we do not have any money—none, zero—to defend our national security or our national interests.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I will tell the Senator. First of all, it boggles the imagination that we are hearing this argument from someone who voted against the 1993 deficit reduction package. All of the situation that the Senator is talking about would be far worse had the Senator prevailed on that vote.

There are tough decisions to be made. Everyone recognizes that. Because they are tough to make it is very difficult to get a majority for them. What the Senator is doing is escalating the standard from a majority to a supermajority. So the Senator is making it even tougher to make the tough decisions, not easier. The Senator is putting more power into the hands of the minority to frustrate or to thwart the effort.

Where I disagree with the Senator is, in his assumption, that all of these waivers will be granted in a time of crisis. If we go back through our history, it does not support the Senator. Historically, when we come up against these situations they are often very divisive and very controversial and action in the end is taken by a bare majority. I went through at great length earlier the example of the extension of the service requirement under the draft in 1940.

Clearly, that was important to the national security of the country. I am quoting from that article:

In an effort to depoliticize the issue as much as possible, Roosevelt and Secretary of War Henry Stimson designated Army Chief of Staff George Marshall as the administration's point man on the Hill. Marshall worked tirelessly but found converts difficult to come by despite his tremendous prestige on Capitol Hill. "You put the case very well," one Republican Congressman told him, "but I will be damned if I am going to go along with Mr. Roosevelt."

The vote was set for Monday August 11, but Rayburn put it off for one day out of respect for a Republican Member who had died over the weekend. With the President out of town meeting secretly in Newfoundland with British Prime Minister Winston Churchill, to nail the Atlantic Charter, Rayburn spent the additional day roaming the corridors of Capitol Hill trying to win over recalcitrant Democrats and wavering Republicans. His lobbying style was like the man himself, honest, direct, and intensely personal without a hint of intimidation.

Here is Rayburn himself, walking the corridors. Here is General Marshall, one of the really great statesmen of American history, a man for whom I have enormous respect and admiration, working—as they say here "Worked tirelessly but found converts difficult to come by despite his tremendous prestige on Capitol Hill." When the vote came, it was 203-202. That vote would not qualify under the provisions of your balanced budget amendment proposition here.

We would not have been able to respond to this national crisis. The Senator earlier said to me if they had known they needed a three-fifths requirement they would have gotten more votes. I said to the Senator, it defies belief that a sizable chunk of the 202 who voted against it would switch over because they knew there was a three-fifths requirement. They voted against it when there was a simple majority requirement and the thing would have gone down, and it would have been a disaster for the Nation had it happened.

All I am saying is that these tough decisions need to be made by majority vote just as is provided for in the Constitution. The Founding Fathers could foresee these things and that is why they provided it. This is, as the distinguished Senator from West Virginia said, playing Russian roulette with the national security of the United States.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, if I could have a last response, I promise the Senator from West Virginia.

The Founding Fathers also provided for an amendment process to the Constitution because they knew that it would need that flexibility, because it could not predict the future nor foresee the future. The Senator knows that. That is why we are here.

I also would respond to the Senator on the point of the budget agreement of 1993. This debate is, essentially, a nonpartisan debate on the issue of whether or not we need an amendment, constitutional amendment, to balance the Federal budget. But the Senator introduced a partisan matter on the issue of the budget agreement.

Just because this Senator and the remaining Republican Senators in the Senate at the time did not agree with the Senator from Maryland that the way to bring the deficit down was to increase taxes $250 billion, but rather bring spending down $250 billion to move the budget deficit down, that does not make me opposed to bringing the deficit or the debt down.

The truth of the matter is, those on this side who voted against that wanted to cut spending, not raise taxes.

The second point is, which we have already gone into on the floor many times before, not only during this debate, but the truth of the matter is the correction that needed to be taken to reduce the debt was not taken with that budget agreement, for the same reason it was not taken with any of these other agreements that are on this chart from 1921 all the way up to Gramm-Rudman-Hollings and the budget agreement of 1993. The truth of the matter is, Congress walks away from them.

The President of the United States, President Clinton, just submitted a budget, the follow-on to this budget, which increases the national debt by $1.6 trillion over the next 5 years. Since this agreement has been passed, we have increased the national debt another one-half trillion dollars. So where is the progress?

This Senator fails to understand where the progress is being made. I hear about all these great agreements, we have had all these budget agreements, we are bringing the debt down, bringing the deficit down. We are not bringing it down. It is going up, up, up, up, and the reason why is because we need this amendment because Congress will not do it without it. That is absolutely evident.

The Senator talks about a national emergency. I do not know whether he has a commission out there somewhere that defines a national emergency or whether he has to read it in the newspaper that it is a national emergency. If the Congress of the United States does not think it is a national emergency or the President does not think it is, I do not know how you define a national emergency.

So I assume, by definition, if the Congress does not vote to say it is a national emergency and provide the funding to go to war, maybe they do not think we should go to war. That is the prerogative of the U.S. Congress. That is the prerogative. That is exactly what the Founding Fathers meant that "Congress shall have the power to declare war."

This argument that somehow we are going to defend the right of the United States to protect itself by voting against the balanced budget amendment is the most nonsensical thing I heard since I have been here.

By the time this debate is over, we are going to add tens of billions, hundreds of billions of dollars to the national debt; $9,600 per second as we debate the debt goes up. Interest on the debt is now going to pass defense. What we spend on defense and interest is going this way, just like that, and defense is going this way. And by the year 2013, by most admissions of a bipartisan commission, we will be spending 100 percent on interest and 100 percent on entitlements.

Mrs. BOXER. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. That is what is going to threaten the national security of the United States of America, not a constitutional amendment to balance the budget.

Mrs. BOXER. Will the Senator yield to me to ask a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia has the time.

Mrs. BOXER. If the Senator will yield for a short period of time.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask that I may continue to yield with the understanding that I not lose the floor for the purpose of a colloquy to include now the distinguished Senator from California [Mrs. BOXER].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank you very much. I was not planning to participate, but something the Senator said makes me want to, and that is during the discussion with the Senator from Maryland on the vote on the deficit reduction package, which the Senator from New Hampshire says is, in fact, not working, every expert in the country says that the deficit would have been $500 billion higher. But let us not even get into that because what I want to ask the Senator are two basic questions.

First of all, the Senator said at that time he did not like the package that the President sent over, the deficit reduction package, because it contained some tax increases of which he did not approve. We also know it contained a large tax cut for the working poor and far many more people are affected in a positive way from that tax cut. But let us put that aside.

The Senator said he would have preferred instead of raising taxes—and he puts it at $250 billion—he would have cut spending $250 billion.

So my question is, did the Senator offer an amendment to cut $250 billion and show us how he was going to cut $250 billion from the deficit? I do not recall it.

Mr. SMITH. If the Senator will allow me to respond, you know the situation as well as I do with regard to the debate and the politics, what was going on. The truth of the matter is, there were many discussions on our side, many attempts to redirect that in committee. The distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, who is in the chair, was involved in a number of efforts in the Budget Committee to reprioritize that whole budget, and the Senator from California knows that.

The truth of the matter is, the position of the President and the majority in the Senate at the time, and in the House, was that the best way to deal with the deficit was to raise taxes on the American people. My point is, the best way to deal with the deficit would be to reduce spending and to continue that spending on a downward trend.

Mrs. BOXER. So the answer to my—

Mr. SMITH. My final point. My only point is we did not do what we needed to do to correct it. Even with the tax increase you did not correct it. If you want to take the position, which I happen to disagree with, that we can continue to raise taxes forever until we balance the budget, you have a right to that position. But there is only so much you can get.

Mrs. BOXER. My question to the Senator was, he said at the time he would have preferred to cut spending $250 billion instead of raising the taxes. The President's plan did raise taxes on the wealthy, and it also cut taxes much more broadly on the working poor.

Mr. SARBANES. It also cut spending.

Mrs. BOXER. And it cut spending the other $250 billion. But the point I want to make, in conclusion, and then I will yield back the time to the good Senator and thank him once again for his leadership on this: The Senator himself said he was working on some plans. I am sure he is. I have never seen that plan.

I wrote to every single Republican who is in the leadership, heads committees when this debate started. I said, "Show me your plan. You want this balanced budget to go into effect. I want to know if it is going to hurt the people of California, the people I represent. I want to know what is going to happen if there is a disaster or a war."

You have a three-fifths supermajority built into this, as the Senator from West Virginia and the Senator from Maryland have stated. They do not agree with it. I do not agree with it. I think it shows a mistrust for the people, that is what I think about supermajorities. They show a mistrust for the people. They give too much power to the minority, and I do not think that is what America is all about.

But putting all that aside for this conversation, I have to stand up and say to my friend from West Virginia that when Senators on that side criticize those of us on this side for voting for deficit reduction, which was the largest package in history and it is working, for them not to show what their plan is and to hide behind this figleaf of a balanced budget amendment, trying to tell the American people, because of that, they are going to be the ones to balance the budget, I find it very problematical. And I rose today to add my voice.

They did not vote for the right to know. They did not vote to exclude Social Security. I think this is a dangerous, dangerous balanced budget amendment.

By the way, I wanted to vote for a balanced budget amendment. I wanted to vote for one over on the House side, I say to my friend from West Virginia. He would not have agreed with me. I did, in fact, do that because it was flexible, it took Social Security off the table, it did not have a supermajority, and we tried to fix this amendment.

As the Senator from Maryland has stated so eloquently, the more you look at this amendment—and that is why I appreciate the time we have here in the Senate to do that—the worse it gets for the American people and the people that I came here to fight for, the people of California.

Mr. SMITH. May I ask the Senator one question?

Mrs. BOXER. Does the Senator continue to yield?

Mr. SMITH. One final question. Under your definition of "exemption," if Social Security and other entitlements get to 100 percent of the budget, do you still support the exemption?

Mrs. BOXER. Let me say to—

Mr. SMITH. Answer yes or no.

Mrs. BOXER. I will answer it. I agree with the Republicans who have said over and over again by vote, "You're not going to touch Social Security."

Mr. SMITH. But when you exempt it—

Mrs. BOXER. The answer is I am not for touching Social Security either, and because I believe that, I think it is a compact with the people who paid into it.

Mr. SMITH. You are going to destroy it without the—

Mrs. BOXER. No.

Mr. SMITH. You certainly are.

Mr. SARBANES. If the Senator will yield, the Social Security System is paying its way.

Mrs. BOXER. Exactly right.

Mr. SARBANES. The Social Security System is not only paying its way, it is, in fact, running a surplus.

Mr. SMITH. And the Treasury is borrowing all the money to fund the debt, and the Senator knows it.

Mr. SARBANES. That has nothing to do with the Social Security System. It is terribly important for the American people to understand this because a game may well be played with the Social Security trust fund, as was just indicated, in effect, by my colleague from New Hampshire, if they do not understand.

The Social Security trust fund is more than paying for itself. People receiving Social Security owe no apology on the deficit question, because the trust fund currently is not only paying its way, it is running surpluses, which in an accounting sense are used to offset the size of the deficit.

Now, the other side would obviously want to use those, and many of us feel that should not be done. In the 1980's, when the Social Security trust fund ran into some difficulties, we took the measures of reducing benefits and raising Social Security taxes in order to put the Social Security trust fund back into a healthy position.

That is exactly what we did. This is an effort to raid the Social Security trust fund. It is implicit in this balanced budget amendment, and to some extent was made explicit the other day with the tabling of the Reid amendment, which sought to make it very clear that it could not be tapped or drawn on. It needs to be understood the Social Security system is paying its way. We have other so-called entitlements that are not, but the Social Security trust fund is more than paying its way. That needs to be understood, and this assault on the Social Security system needs to be repudiated.

Mrs. BOXER. I say to my friend—and I thank him for continuing to yield—the reason I answered the question the way I did to my friend, the good Senator from New Hampshire, is because the Republicans are trying to have it both ways.

It is really extraordinary, and I am glad we have this chance, because on the one hand they have passed motion after motion stating that they will never touch Social Security or the benefits and it is off the table and they are not going to look at it. On the other hand, they vote against the Reid amendment, the Reid-Feinstein amendment, which would have clearly taken Social Security out of this balanced budget requirement.

So they are talking two ways. And what was so interesting right here this afternoon just a few minutes ago is the good Senator from New Hampshire says to me, Senator, are you saying that even if Social Security and the other entitlements are 100 percent of the problem, that you are not going to touch them?

Well, that is what they have been saying. They have been saying they are not going to touch them. But if you listen very carefully, it is a very clear threat to Social Security, as clear as the nose on your face.

I say that this amendment is very dangerous. It is very dangerous to the stability of this Nation because it is so inflexible, and my Republican friends have voted almost unanimously—we came close on the Johnston amendment on the Court issue, but basically they have walked down the aisle with this rigid supermajority requirement amendment that puts Social Security in jeopardy, it puts our States in jeopardy, and it puts our people in jeopardy.

I wish to thank the Senator from West Virginia for his generosity in yielding to me.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the distinguished Senator from California [Mrs. BOXER].

Mr. President, when all is said and done, our friends on the other side of the aisle have not answered the question put to them by Senator SARBANES. He brought up the language in Section 5 of the constitutional amendment to balance the budget:

The Congress may waive the provisions of this article for any fiscal year in which a declaration of war is in effect. The provisions of this article may be waived for any fiscal year in which the United States is engaged in military conflict which causes an imminent and serious military threat to national security and is so declared by a joint resolution, adopted by a majority of the whole number of each House, which becomes law.

Of course, then the proponents of the amendment, not wishing to focus on section 5 and the questions asked by the distinguished Senator from Maryland related thereto, wish to talk about the seriousness of the budget deficits and the seriousness of the debt, and so on.

We are all concerned about those deficits and the debt. There is no disagreement as to the desired goal to reach a balanced budget and to reduce the deficits and ultimately to begin paying the principal on the debt and hopefully reducing the interest that is paid on that debt.

The proponents do not want to focus on this section 5. I will ask the question: If the country "is engaged in a military conflict," short of a war that has been declared, "engaged in a military conflict that causes an imminent and serious military threat to national security and is so declared by a joint resolution, adopted by a majority number of the whole number of each House, which becomes law," does that language mean that once the joint resolution referred to in that section is adopted by a majority of the whole number of each House and becomes law, and in the event that the military conflict which causes an imminent and serious military threat to national security continues over a period of another year or 2 years or subsequent years, does this language mean that Congress will have to waive the provisions of this article by way of a joint resolution in each and every subsequent fiscal year in which that threat to the national security exists? Does that mean we have to do it over and over again?

I am waiting on the Republican response team to respond. Does that mean that we have to go through this obstacle course every year, every subsequent year after that first year, or that first occasion in which the joint resolution is adopted by a majority of the whole number of each House? Do we have to do that over and over again?

Suppose the support for the Commander in Chief's position, suppose the national support wavers?

Initially, people having been supportive, through their representatives, of adopting the joint resolution are—suppose that threat to the national security continues into a subsequent fiscal year, and then again into another fiscal year? Does this language make it incumbent upon the Congress to continue, with each new fiscal year, to pass a joint resolution by a majority of the whole number of each House? What does this mean?

The Commander in Chief and the military forces which he may have committed as he did in Desert Storm, or as President Truman did in Korea—suppose that initial support of the people lessens? What does the Commander in Chief do? He is left out there hanging. He has men on distant battlefields. He has ships plying the waves of the several seas. He has planes transporting Marines and soldiers. He has an Air Force out there that is flying in various areas of the world. What does it mean? Do we have to pass another joint resolution in the next fiscal year?

Suppose this emergent situation should arise in August, with the close of the fiscal year imminent on September 30. There is not time to pass a joint resolution and look for cuts in other areas of the budget, to which my friends on the other side of the aisle have alluded. What happens? The fiscal year is closed on September 30 and the total outlays have exceeded the total receipts for that fiscal year. You have men out there in the field facing danger. Their lives are on the line, their lives are in jeopardy, and the security of this country is in jeopardy. What are we going to do? Are we going to be entertained by a wide-ranging debate in both Houses on a joint resolution every fiscal year that that situation continues? And, in addition, we have to have a majority of the whole number elected to each House for passage.

Mr. THOMAS. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BYRD. Yes, I yield.

Mr. THOMAS. Senator, I am not as familiar as you are with the process, but it seems to me that now there has to be approval, there has to be approval annually for the budget, there has to be approval for the President's move in terms of military activities.

Mr. BYRD. There was not any approval in the case of his invasion of Haiti. The invasion actually started.

Mr. THOMAS. There was in Desert Storm, as you will recall.

Mr. BYRD. Wait just a second. The invasion of Haiti started. The President called it off—in midair, almost. I was not supportive of that invasion.

Mr. THOMAS. Nor was I.

I guess further I would say, I am not sure I am confounded by the Congress each year approving this. I do not think that is an unusual kind of thing. Do you not think the Congress represents the people—

Mr. BYRD. When the Senator is around here long enough he may find himself confounded. If we get into a situation where the Nation's security is in the balance, we may all feel confounded by the necessity of acting expeditiously, because we have the lives of men and women in dire peril. And then, under this amendment, we are going to require a majority of the Senators who are chosen and sworn to pass a resolution in a situation like that—we are going to explain that away by talking about the budget deficits?

Mr. THOMAS. I have a little more confidence in the Members of this body than to ignore an issue of that kind. It just seems to me that the evidence is that we need to do something different than we have been doing. I constantly hear we cannot change things. But the record is, we have to if we want different results.

Mr. BYRD. Senator, I am talking about section 5.

Mr. THOMAS. I understand.

Mr. BYRD. Let us stay with it. Let us not talk about, at the moment—I will be glad to yield later to the Senator, if he wants to broaden the discussion.

We are talking about section 5. As Napoleon said, there were men on his council who were far more eloquent than he, but that he won every argument simply by saying 2 plus 2 equals 4. It is pretty simple.

So I want to say to my friend, as Napoleon might have, he would say let us stick with the question. Let us stick with section 5. That is the question that has been raised this afternoon, in the main, on this floor.

So, is the Senator telling me that we should run the risk of adopting a joint resolution each fiscal year in which our national security is in jeopardy? We should run the risk of adopting a joint resolution and that he is willing to subject this country's security to the necessity of a supermajority vote—a mini-supermajority vote, a majority of those Senators chosen and sworn?

Mr. THOMAS. I have, I guess—and I do not suggest I know the answers—but I have a good deal of confidence. What does it say? It says, “* * * this article may be waived for any fiscal year in which the United States is engaged in military conflict which causes an imminent and serious military threat * * *” I have a hunch that most of us, a supermajority of us, would respond to that.

Mr. BYRD. Is that the Senator's answer?

Mr. THOMAS. Yes, sir.

Mr. BYRD. Well, Mr. President, that is the kind of answer that the proponents of this ill-advised constitutional amendment continue to make. “Well, I have confidence that the Congress would do thus and so.” Or “The intent of the proponents of this constitutional amendment is thus and so—the intent.” Or “That would never happen.” Or “I am sure that the Senate and House will rise to meet the needs of providing—by providing supermajorities.”

Senators do not know that. Senators do not know what the intent of a future Congress may be. Senators do not know with enough certitude to give me confidence that Congress will act in a given situation that may be years away, as it might act at this moment or in this year of Our Lord 1995.

Mr. President, this is the typical response: “I have confidence.” That is it. “I have confidence. I am willing to trust our colleagues.” Well, I am willing to trust colleagues also. I am willing also to trust the good judgment of a majority of the representatives of the people, if the people are adequately informed. I am willing to trust the opinions of the American people if they are properly informed. But we cannot cavalierly push away this sobering question nor the serious questions that arise with respect to this Constitutional amendment simply by saying, “Well, I am sure it won't happen,” or “I am willing to trust” so and so and “a future Congress” and “this is not the intent.”

Read what the amendment says. That is what the court is going to go by. It is going to first look at the four corners of the document.

Section 1:

Total outlays for any fiscal year shall not exceed total receipts for that fiscal year.

Then in section 5:

The provisions of this article—

Meaning section 1.

may be waived for any fiscal year in which the United States is engaged in military conflict which causes an imminent and serious military threat to national security.

Who is going to determine what is an “imminent and serious military threat” to the national security? Obviously, there are going to be differences of opinion.

Mr. THOMAS. That is what I am suggesting; that is, that is the role of Congress, and I think it is a legitimate role and one that is not unusual, one that I have perceived has been done for a number of years.

Mr. BYRD. Absolutely. But for a number of years it has not been required.

Mr. THOMAS. It should be required.

Mr. BYRD. For 206 years it has not been required that there be a majority of the whole number in each House to pass a resolution.

Mr. THOMAS. Where does the President get the money, if the majority of the Congress does not agree?

Mr. BYRD. Where does he get the money?

Mr. THOMAS. Yes.

Mr. BYRD. Let me ask the Senator. Suppose the President needs a new tax. Suppose he needs to raise taxes to meet that serious military conflict, that serious military threat to the United States. Suppose he needs to increase taxes. Then what? Would the Senator be willing to raise taxes?

Mr. THOMAS. The President does not raise taxes.

Mr. BYRD. That is not the question which I asked the Senator.

Mr. THOMAS. I think there is a system in which the President can move. But the President then comes to the Congress for either a declaration or for the money, or he, as he is doing now, comes for a supplemental budget. The Congress has to be involved to make this decision.

Mr. BYRD. Of course. This Senator has never said the Congress should not be involved. This Senator is saying simply that the Congress ought to continue to be involved under the present Constitution which has provided very well for congressional actions to meet all emergencies that have occurred throughout the 206-year history of this country.

Mr. THOMAS. I understand that.

Mr. BYRD. But now we are going to be in a very different situation if this Constitution is going to be amended. And it will not be amended for just a year or so; it will be changed from now until kingdom come, unless the American people and Congress repeal this amendment once it is in the Constitution. The Senator knows that. It is not easy once it is in there. It is not like a statute which can be repealed by the same Congress that enacted it in the first place.

I am asking the Senator. Suppose we get into a situation where this Nation's security is in peril and more money is needed and the necessity arises for an increase in taxes. Then what are my friends on the other side going to do in that situation?

Mr. THOMAS. That is why this provision is there to waive.

Mr. BYRD. Yes. By what vote?

Mr. THOMAS. By a supermajority vote.

Mr. BYRD. Yes. That is just the question. Why subject this country's security to the necessity of a supermajority vote when the Nation's very life is in danger, the security of the American people are in danger, the security of the troops in the field are in danger, and the security of the planes in the air is in danger? Why subject a decision at that critical moment to a supermajority? The Framers, in their wisdom, did not do it. And we have fought a good many wars.

Mr. THOMAS. I understand. This is the basis of what we are talking about. Of course, the Senator says leave it as it is. Others say we need to change it. That is what it is, whether we change or whether we do not. Many people think that there needs to be a change. Many people think the performance is such that there needs to be a change. And I respect greatly the Senator's wisdom and knowledge. But that is the issue. And the Senator does not want it changed. I understand that. Others do. That is what it is all about.

Mr. BYRD. It is about more than that. That is why we need to take the time to probe and to explore these provisions that are in this amendment to balance the budget. We are all in agreement, I say to the Senator, with the goal of a balanced budget. We are all in agreement. I am in agreement that we need to reduce the deficits. And I agree that it is going to require some pain. I also am of the opinion that we do not need to wait 7 years. We started in 1990. We took a great step beyond that in 1993. We need to do more.

Why cannot we continue on that course of enacting multiyear budget deficit reduction bills? Do you know why? Because of the pain, and part of that pain may just have to be an increase in taxes. I do not like to vote to increase taxes. I have been in political office 48 years, and I know it is not easy to vote to increase taxes. It is always easy to cut taxes. It was easy to cut taxes in 1981 when Mr. Reagan asked for a tax cut in one package involving 3 successive years of cuts, 5 percent the first year, 10 the next, and 10 the next. It does not take courage to vote to cut taxes.

But in a situation—I keep getting back to this section 5. What is the Senator's answer? Is he willing to put this Nation's security in peril by requiring a supermajority consisting of a majority of the Senators and House Members elected? The Framers did not think that was wise. We had just come through the Revolutionary War. We had still ahead of us the War of 1812. We had ahead of us the Mexican War of 1848, the Civil War, the war with Spain in 1898, the First World War, the Second World War, Korea, Vietnam, and the Persian Gulf. In addition to these, there were several military conflicts that were not wars, of that magnitude, by any stretch of the imagination.

There was never, until this amendment comes along, any thought of requiring a mini-supermajority to pass a resolution in a moment of dire peril to deal with our Nations's security. We get nothing from the proponents when we direct the question at them, "Would you be willing to raise the revenues to meet the needs in that moment of peril?" "Would you be willing to raise taxes?"

Mr. LEVIN. Will the Senator yield for a question.

Mr. BYRD. Yes, shortly. What we get is what the Senator from Maryland got a while ago when he tried to pin Senators down on the other side of the aisle with his questions concerning section 5. Section 5 has not been talked about much in the Senate. It needs to be talked about. What we get are speciocities, irrelevancies, platitudes, well-wishes, and expressions of good intent. We do not know what the "intent" of the Senators who sit at these desks will be 2 years from now, 3 years from now. Perhaps they will be the same Senators. How can we say what their intent will be? We need to read the words of the amendment. They speak for themselves when they say "total outlays shall not exceed total receipts in any fiscal year." That does not leave any wiggling room. The proponents say, yes, it does, because you can waive that by a three-fifths majority.

It is a dangerous amendment. Section 5—I would not want to risk the lives of my grandsons on that kind of language, requiring 51 Senators in this Chamber to pass such a resolution, denying the Vice President of the United States his vote to break a tie, if there should be a tie. This amendment would deny the Vice President of his vote that is accorded him in the current Constitution—

Mr. LEVIN. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. To vote to break a tie. I yield.

Mr. LEVIN. I understand that the Senator from Utah said that the Vice President would be denied, in his opinion, a vote to break a 50-50 tie. But he also said it was an "open question." I do not think we ought to have an open question in a constitutional amendment, because this is a life and death matter.

Mr. BYRD. You have a constitutional crisis when you have this open question.

Mr. LEVIN. It will, in fact, plunge this constitutional amendment into the courts to interpret as to whether or not he Vice President can break a tie. It should not be left open. It should be resolved in this amendment as to whether or not the Vice President's vote counts to break a 50-50 tie. I think it is irresponsible to write a constitutional amendment knowing that that question is left open.

By the way, that is not some theoretical question. Last year's deficit reduction bill, as it has been debated here this afternoon, was a 51-50 vote, based on the Vice President's vote. So this is not some theory that we are arguing here in a civics class. This is the reality of the U.S. Senate, and life and death matters can be resolved on whether or not the Vice President's vote counts to break a tie.

It was the opinion of the Senator from Utah, as I understand it, stated earlier this afternoon, that the Vice President's vote would not count in this provision. And yet, the chief sponsor of this language that is in front of us, Representative DAN SCHAEFER of Colorado, says the Vice President's vote would count. Yesterday, we had the same problem. We had, on this side, the chief sponsor saying that there would be no standing, do not worry about it. We had the chief sponsor on the other side—this is the Schaefer-Stenholm substitute. Representative SCHAEFER has said that there would be standing for Members of Congress to sue. I had a big board up, and my friend from Pennsylvania who is managing the bill now saw where we had the prime sponsor of this language quoted in a very formal document, by the way. These were not casual comments. These were questions and answers he submitted for the RECORD, in the HOUSE CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, where he made statements which were exactly contrary to what the opinion of the Senator from Utah is—exactly contrary on critical issues on the role of the court.

Representative SCHAEFER said, in a formal answer, that a court could throw out an appropriations bill or a tax bill, as being unconstitutional. But we were told by the Senator from Utah that it was his opinion that a court could not involve itself in the budgetary process.

My question of my friend from West Virginia is this—and I want to read now into the RECORD the statement of Representative SCHAEFER on the question of whether or not the Vice President's vote counts. It is on page 758 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of January 26. This is a formal interpretation of section 4. And, again, this is a formal question and answer presentation that was supplied for the RECORD by Representative SCHAEFER:

This language is not intended to preclude the Vice President in his or her constitutional capacity as President of the Senate from casting a tie-breaking vote that would produce a 51-50 result.

He goes on to say:

Nothing in section 4 of the substitute takes away the Vice President's right to vote under such circumstances.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEVIN. I do not have the floor, but—

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the courts are going to decide that. It does not make any difference what my intent is or what the intent of the House Member was who was addressing himself to that question, or what he intent of any other Senator is. It is the court, and it will be a constitutional crisis. Once we constitutionalize this fiscal policy by writing this amendment into the Constitution, it is an open invitation to the courts to come into this equation. There is nothing in this amendment that prohibits or forbids the courts from intervening.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield on that point?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. SARBANES. I think the Senator from West Virginia is absolutely correct. But what is going to draw the court in even more is the fact that two principal sponsors of this measure give absolutely contrary views as to the meaning of this clause, as the Senator from Michigan has pointed out. One of the chief House sponsors says that under section 4 the Vice President would have the tie-breaking vote. The distinguished Senator from Utah, chairman of the Judiciary Committee and the lead manager for this bill, very explicitly stated on the floor of the Senate not too long ago that you would have to produce 51 votes out of 100 in this body in order for section 4 to apply. A 50-50 vote with the Vice President supposedly casting a tie-breaking vote would not work. In effect, you have negated the tie-breaking vote of the Vice President.

This is important in underscoring all of the pitfalls that are contained in this provision. I am certain it will bring about what the Senator from West Virginia has just stated, and that is the involvement of the courts, because the legislative history on this is absolutely contradictory on the part of its proponents.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the Senator from Maryland. My point here is that this is being left—

Mr. BYRD. I ask unanimous consent that I may continue to yield the floor, retaining my rights to the floor, for colloquies. I do not intend to hold the floor all afternoon. My feet are getting tired.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. I call attention to the fact that we have a fresh new Member here from the Republican response team. They are sending them in in relays.

Yes, I would be glad to yield.

Mr. LEVIN. The Senator has eloquently pointed out the reasons why we should not require majorities, and on that there is a difference of opinion. I happen to share the opinion of the Senator from West Virginia for the reasons that he has given that we should not require a supermajority.

But the issue that I raise, the Senator from Maryland has raised, and the Senator from Utah has raised relates to that question. It is, what is a supermajority and whether the Vice President's vote counts? And on that one, I think 100 of us ought to agree.

Maybe there is a disagreement as to whether or not we should have a supermajority—and there is a disagreement—but there should be no disagreement, there ought to be absolute unanimity on a determination that this constitutional amendment be clear on the question as to whether or not the Vice President can break a tie and count towards the 51 votes. We should not leave that ambiguous.

This is not a matter where there is a difference of opinion as to whether or not a supermajority is appropriate in order to raise revenues or not. This is a question of writing a constitutional amendment, knowing that a question, a critical question, is left open. It should not be left open.

Because if it is, this constitutional crisis, which the Senator from West Virginia and the Senator from Maryland talked about, is something that we are inviting. And we should not only not invite it, we should close the door on any such constitutional crisis by making that clear.

That will not resolve the question that the Senator from West Virginia has raised as to whether or not it is desirable that there be a requirement for a supermajority, and I happen to, again, share his view on that. But, again, we should clarify the question.

I ask unanimous consent at this point, Mr. President, that the statement of the prime sponsor of the joint resolution in front of us, Representative SCHAEFER, that appears on page H758 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of January 26 of this year, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

This language is not intended to preclude the Vice President, in his or her constitutional capacity as President of the Senate, from casting a tie-breaking vote that would produce a 51-50 result. This is consistent with Article I, Section 3, Clause 4, which states: "The Vice President of the United States shall be President of the Senate, but shall have no Vote, unless they be equally divided." Nothing in Section 4 of the substitute takes away the Vice President's right to vote under such circumstances.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I do not have the floor, but I think it would be very desirable for the Senator from Pennsylvania to respond, should the Senator from West Virginia so yield.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, of course, I would not want to shut out from this electrifying moment in this very illuminating debate a Member of the "Republican response team."

I ask unanimous consent that my previous request include the Senator from Pennsylvania and any other Member of the response team.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SANTORUM. I thank the Senator and I thank the Chair.

I was going to refer you to the 12th amendment that uses the same language that is used in section 5 and section 2, which refers to the whole number of the Senate. In one case, it says the whole number or two-thirds of the whole number of the Senators, the same language that we use here only we say in each House.

If you have questions about the ability of the Vice President to cast votes with respect to this, then I suspect you have questions as to whether the Vice President can cast votes under the 12th amendment, because it is word for word what is put in this document.

Mr. LEVIN. If the Senator will yield, I do not have a question about it.

The Senator from Utah, who is the principal sponsor on that side, said that the Vice President's vote would not count. Now that is coming from a pretty authoritative source here.

Senator HATCH said—and I was not on the floor, but I understand that he said—two things about this question. Number one, it is an open question. That means what it says. It is an open question, presumably left for the courts or left for somebody to decide. But then Senator HATCH said—it was reported to me, and I was not on the floor; I believe the Senators from West Virginia and Maryland were here—Senator HATCH apparently then said that, in his opinion, in his opinion, the Vice President's vote would not count toward the 51 votes. And I think that is what the Senator from West Virginia reflected in his statement.

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. LEVIN. So it is not the Senator from Michigan who is raising the question—I think we ought to button down the issue—it is the principal sponsor of the amendment here in the Senate who has rendered that opinion.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield to me? Because the analogy—

Mr. BYRD. Before I yield, may I point out to the Member of the response team who just, I believe, indicated that the supermajority in amendment No. 12 would be a parallel to the situation which we have been discussing—namely, as the Vice President's vote would be involved—I point out to the junior Senator from Pennsylvania, who perhaps has not read the 12th amendment lately, that that is what that amendment is all about. There is no Vice President.

Mr. SANTORUM. Right.

Mr. BYRD. There is no Vice President to cast a vote under the 12th Amendment. The reason for that amendment is to provide for the election of a Vice President by the U.S. Senate when the Vice President's seat is vacant.

Mr. SARBANES. If the Senator will yield, that was exactly the point I was going to make.

The Senator from Pennsylvania got up and said, "Well, if you want to know what this language means here of the majority of the whole number, just refer to amendment 12."

Now, amendment 12 has to deal with picking the Vice President. There is not a Vice President. And it says—

Mr. SANTORUM. Does that not make it obvious.

Mr. SARBANES. It says:

The Senate shall choose the Vice President; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice.

But the choice is picking the Vice President. It does not answer the question that the Vice President can cast the tie-breaking vote.

Mr. SANTORUM. If the Senator will yield, I think it makes that very point. Obviously, the Vice President is not considered part of it because there is no Vice President. So the whole number must mean that it is the Members of the Senate, absent the Vice President. Otherwise, this would make no sense. I mean, I think that is the reason I used it, because it is apparent.

Mr. SARBANES. Once a Vice President has been chosen—

Mr. SANTORUM. The Vice President is a Member of the Senate.

Mr. SARBANES. Once the Vice President has been chosen—

Mr. BYRD. He is not a Member of the Senate. The Vice President is never a Member of the Senate.

Mr. SANTORUM. I rest my case.

Mr. SARBANES. We take a vote—

Mr. BYRD. That is not the case.

Mr. SARBANES. Once the Vice President is chosen and we take a vote, a 50-50 vote, can the Vice President break the tie?

Mr. LEVIN. Under this amendment.

Mr. SANTORUM. If we compare it to the language in the amendment it parallels, my opinion would be no.

Mr. LEVIN. He cannot?

Mr. SANTORUM. Correct.

Mr. LEVIN. So you disagree with Congressman SCHAEFER?

Mr. SANTORUM. I do.

Mr. LEVIN. Then in that case, we have the prime sponsors in the Senate and we have the prime sponsor in the House, whose name is on top of this constitutional amendment—this is the Schaefer amendment—we have the sponsors here and the sponsor there in total disagreement on an absolutely fundamental question as to whether or not the Vice President's vote can be counted to break a 50-50 tie. And that determines the outcome of the whole deficit reduction package last year.

That should not be an open question. Whatever side of this issue you are on, whether or not you believe in supermajorities or you do not, we should not leave an ambiguity that huge in the Constitution as to whether or not the Vice President's vote counts. And I think it ought to be clarified. It ought to be clarified one way or the other, but it ought to be clarified because, otherwise, it is an invitation for a constitutional crisis.

I yield the floor and I thank my friend.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I have been unable to get a question answered here, and perhaps the Senator from Pennsylvania can answer it.

My question being: If the threat to our national security should continue into the next fiscal year, or the next calendar year after the year in which the joint resolution referred to in this section is adopted by a minimajority of a majority of all the Members of the Senate and all the Members of the House chosen and sworn, if that threat continues, and we are in a second fiscal year does such a joint resolution have to be passed again by both Houses?

If not, do both Houses have to waive the requirements of section 1, which requires a three-fifths majority? Does Congress have to continue to waive for each fiscal year during which we have the military threat? Does that mean that every new fiscal year in which the threat continues, we have to have three-fifths to waive the requirements of section 1? Or does it require that every fiscal year we pass another joint resolution requiring a majority of the total membership of both Houses as referred to in section 5? Or does it require that both sections be waived?

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may propound a question to the Senator, even though I hold the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, section 5 reads: "The Congress may waive the provisions of this article for any fiscal year in which a declaration of war is in effect." So it would seem very obvious to me the Congress has the availability to raise it for the fiscal year or any subsequent fiscal year in which the war is in effect.

That is pretty much what it says.

Mr. BYRD. I am glad we are going by what the amendment says for once.

Now, what do you think it says? What does the Senator think it says?

Mr. SANTORUM. I think that is what it says.

Mr. SARBANES. I ask the Senator, what does it mean? What is your understanding of the meaning? Would you have to have a waiver for each fiscal year?

Mr. SANTORUM. I am stupefied that the plain reading of this language is not apparent to the Senator from Maryland. I think it is very serious.

Mr. SARBANES. I have to say to the Senator from Pennsylvania perhaps I am not as quick as he is to pick up the plain language. I thought the question was a good question. The question, as I understood it is, must you have a waiver in each fiscal year since?

Mr. SANTORUM. It says, "The Congress may waive in any year."

Mr. SARBANES. For any fiscal year in which the United States is engaged. So, we may waive it for that fiscal year.

Mr. SANTORUM. Or next fiscal year.

Mr. SARBANES. The next fiscal year comes along. Then what?

Mr. SANTORUM. It says we may waive for any fiscal year. It does not say we have to waive for this fiscal year. We could pass—it says "any fiscal year." It could be for next fiscal year, the one afterward, as long as the declaration of war is in effect, we can raise for any fiscal year.

Mr. SARBANES. So you think it means any and all?

Mr. SANTORUM. As long as the declaration of war is continuing, I assume that is what the Congress can do.

Mr. SARBANES. What about the next sentence?

Mr. BYRD. There are two different situations there.

Mr. SARBANES. What about the next sentence? Same interpretation.

Mr. SANTORUM. Obviously, in one case we have declaration of war. That is, a declaration of war has a certain time limit, then the declaration of war ceases.

In this case—

Mr. BYRD. Would the Senator say that again?

Mr. SANTORUM. The declaration of war at some point ends.

Mr. BYRD. What causes it to end? What terminates a war?

Mr. SANTORUM. A signing of a treaty to end the war.

Mr. BYRD. What terminates the declaration of war?

Mr. SANTORUM. I ask the Senator, since I was not around the last time we declared war, I assume it would be some act of Congress to end the declaration.

Mr. SARBANES. But it was the Senator that asserted that the declaration of war would end. How does that happen?

Mr. SANTORUM. I just responded.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator was responding to a question. His response, I do not understand.

Mr. SANTORUM. As long as a declaration is in effect, however long that may be, that Congress can, under this provision, waive this amendment.

Mr. BYRD. How long was the declaration of war in World War II in effect?

Mr. SANTORUM. I yield to the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. I am asking a question. I want to be informed.

Mr. SANTORUM. I do not know the answer.

Mr. BYRD. The ready response team should have all the answers.

How long was the declaration of war in World War I in effect? The war is over. Suppose declaration of war is still in effect. What happens in a situation like this?

Mr. SANTORUM. I think it would be apparent that at some point the Congress would rescind the declaration of war and then this article would no longer be operative.

Mr. BYRD. Congress did not rescind all previous declarations of war. Why does the Senator not help me find the answer to that question?

Mr. SANTORUM. I will do my best.

Mr. SARBANES. Would the Senator address the second question? Let us move beyond the declaration of war. What is your understanding of the second sentence? This is not a declaration of war in which the United States is engaged in military conflict, so declared by a joint resolution. Would we have to get a joint resolution the following year?

Mr. SANTORUM. My opinion on that is that the—according to the plain reading of the constitutional amendment—Congress would have to, each year, go through the process of exempting itself from this provision because of that conflict.

Mr. SARBANES. How can the phrase "for any fiscal year," which is identically the same phrase in sentence 1 and sentence 2, be given diametrically opposite definitions?

You just told me that the phrase "for any fiscal year" in sentence 1, linked to a declaration of war, means that it can be waived for not only the current fiscal year but fiscal years beyond that.

Now the Senator tells me in sentence 2, "waive for any fiscal year" means only the fiscal year in which you find yourself and not subsequent fiscal years.

Now, how can the Senator give that phrase an entirely different interpretation?

Mr. SANTORUM. Let me give you the committee report which says: "For any fiscal year, in effect, is intended in the first sentence of this section to require a separate waiver of the provisions of any amendment each year."

Mr. SARBANES. For which sentence?

Mr. SANTORUM. For the first usage.

Mr. SARBANES. In section 5.

That is not what you told me a few minutes ago.

Is that right?

Mr. SANTORUM. That is correct.

Mr. SARBANES. Which is correct then, your answer or the committee report?

Mr. SANTORUM. I refer to the committee report.

Mr. SARBANES. So, the answer you gave me earlier is not correct?

Mr. SANTORUM. According to the committee report, that is correct.

Mr. SARBANES. Well, what is your view? Is your view the committee's report or is your view the answer which you gave yourself just a couple minutes ago?

Mr. SANTORUM. My view is that the committee report, having had the time to study it longer than I, is probably the accurate view.

Mr. BYRD. Was there a minority view on this particular question in that report?

Mr. SANTORUM. Not that I am aware. I will have someone check.

Mr. BYRD. Let me ask the Senator.

Mr. SANTORUM. By the way, I would further read that the meaning in the second sentence, the second use, is also the same, that in every fiscal year the Congress would have to extend this waiver.

Mr. SARBANES. I say to the Senator that is certainly a consistent reading of the meaning "for any fiscal year." At least it is being read the same way in the second sentence as it was read in the first sentence according to the committee report.

Now, that is not the answer the Senator was giving us because he was giving a completely opposite view of the meaning "any fiscal year" in sentence

1 and in sentence 2. But it only underscores the problems with this amendment.

The distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania came to manage the bill during this time period. The Senator had—I assume now it has changed—a perception of the meaning of this proposed amendment to the Constitution which I am now told he is withdrawing.

Mr. SANTORUM. If the Senator will yield, that is why it is very important to have committee reports and implementing legislation that is called for in the article; that we have implementing legislation to clear up these kinds of doubts that may exist with respect to specific provisions of the act.

So I suggest to the Senator that a lot of this debate is useful. In fact, it is illuminating. I find it to be such, not just on this point, but on many others.

But what is important to note is the ability of this Senate to come back, as it will, and implement this act and further specify the meanings of how this constitutional amendment will be implemented.

Mr. SARBANES. I ask the Senator from Pennsylvania, do you think that the implementing legislation could be used to clarify the discrepancy in view that was outlined here earlier on the floor as to whether a Vice President has the power to break a tie? Could that be clarified by the implementing legislation?

Mr. SANTORUM. I guess I would defer to answer on that. I do not know whether the implementing legislation would do that or not, to be honest. I think that would be a matter of interpretation.

Mr. SARBANES. Let me just carry the question a step further. Do you think that implementing legislation can rewrite provisions of a constitutional amendment?

Mr. SANTORUM. Obviously not, but they certainly can clarify points of a constitutional amendment. Obviously, constitutional amendments, particularly of this nature, are not meant to stand on their own. There has to be some legislation that is going to allow this to be complied with.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator allow me on that point?

Mr. SARBANES. Certainly.

Mr. BYRD. Implementing legislation may be repealed in the very same session—for that matter, in the very same month—in which the original legislation was enacted. Does this mean then that we are going to trust to the hands of shifting opinions in the country and in this body the interpretation of the amendment if we are going to do it by implementing legislation?

Does this mean that we are going to put at risk the Nation's security by leaving this up to the implementing legislation, which can be changed, as I say, by even the same Senators in a subsequent year? Are we going to place the Nation's security at risk by falling back on the language that talks about implementing legislation?

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. SARBANES. He is making an extremely important point. Suppose one Congress comes along and passes implementing legislation saying that the Vice President cannot cast a tie-breaking vote. Then a new Congress comes in and they pass implementing legislation saying the Vice President can cast a tie-breaking vote.

I say to the Senator from Pennsylvania, I do not see how this particular provision can bounce back and forth with the implementing legislation. I just do not understand how that could happen. It is obvious that a court would have to come in to decide it if it is not decided here, and we have directly conflicting views.

Let me just read you—I do not know whether the Senator is acquainted with what Congressman SCHAEFER on the House side said about this.

Mr. SANTORUM. If the Senator will yield, again, I am a little bit perplexed. I look at, for example, section 8 powers under article I that are given to the Congress to borrow money, to regulate commerce. Does it say how we regulate commerce or do we leave that to implementing legislation? And if we do change that, does that mean we somehow violate the Constitution, or is that somehow dangerous upon our society? The Constitution, as the Senator will tell you, is a contract of principles, not as to how to.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield on that very point?

Mr. SANTORUM. We continually change how to.

Mr. SARBANES. That is absolutely wrong. That is absolutely wrong. The Constitution is very specific in describing how, in terms of the process, decisions will be made. It is not specific about the substance of the decision to be made, but it is very specific about how we are to do our business. The Framers were very careful about that. They spelled out what would be a quorum, then a majority of the quorum could pass the legislation. It is all laid out.

I want to give you a real-life situation. A bill is before this body. It is a controversial, closely fought bill. We take a vote on it. The vote is 50-50, and the Vice President is sitting in the chair.

Now, it is very clear under current procedure in that circumstance, the Vice President can cast a tie-breaking vote. It does not have to be 50-50, it can be 48-48, whatever. And I have been in this body when that has happened, not only on the 1993 deficit reduction bill, but on other measures as well. I have seen the Vice President in the chair casting a tie-breaking vote.

What is the outcome in that situation?

Let me read to you what Congressman SCHAEFER says the outcome would be. This is the Republican lead sponsor on the House side:

This language is not intended to preclude the Vice President in his or her constitutional capacity as President of the Senate from casting a tie-breaking vote that will produce a 51-to-50 result. This is consistent with article I, section 3, clause 4 which states: "The Vice President of the United States shall be President of the Senate but shall have no vote unless they be equally divided." Nothing in section 4 of the substitute takes away the Vice President's right to vote under such circumstances.

The Senator, I take it, has told us that he disagrees with that; is that correct? That is not his view of the meaning of article 4.

Mr. SANTORUM. It is apparent from the committee report that refers to, as I did, the 12th amendment and refers to that being similar to what the 12th amendment would be. That would be my answer.

Mr. BYRD. In the 12th amendment there is no Vice President—

Mr. SANTORUM. It is obvious as to what—

Mr. BYRD. To cast any kind of vote, whether it is a deciding vote or anything else. That is why we have the 12th amendment, to fill the vacancy in the Vice Presidency.

Mr. SARBANES. What is the reference in the committee report to which the Senator is referring?

Mr. SANTORUM. Page 15, about three-quarters of the way down, "the whole number of each House."

Mr. SARBANES. That does not answer the question. That just makes a statement.

The whole number of each House is intended to be consistent with the phrase "the whole number of Senators" in the 12th amendment to the Constitution * * *

But that does not answer my question, since the 12th amendment to the Constitution was a situation in which there was no Vice President. It addresses a situation in which you are choosing a Vice President, not the situation after which the Vice President has been chosen. And once the Vice President is chosen under article I, section 3, clause 4 of the Constitution, he has a vote in an equally divided situation.

So what the Senator from Pennsylvania is doing is drawing an analogy from a situation that governs circumstances in which a Vice President has not been picked and you are picking a Vice President. It does not then answer the question of the vote-casting power of the Vice President once he has been chosen.

Mr. SANTORUM. If the Senator will yield, I think the Senator from West Virginia, in fact, helped me answer this question when, if you look at, again, what the committee report says, "The whole number of each House is intended to be consistent with the phrase 'the whole number of Senators * * *'"

The Vice President is not a Senator. I quote the Senator from West Virginia, just a few minutes ago. So it would be obvious to any reader that a whole number of Senators must be 51, assuming there are 100 Senators.

Mr. SARBANES. I just make this observation to my friend.

You must be desperate about the 1993 legislation to be so driven that you want to deny the Vice President of the United States his tie-breaking power to cast a vote which has been in the Constitution from the very beginning.

Now, I know Members on the other side are unhappy about that legislation, but it seems to me it is carrying your differences over the substance of a piece of legislation much too far when you start tinkering, really assaulting, the Constitution of the United States in this fashion. We end up getting two completely differing interpretations of the application of this provision as interpreted by the lead House Republican sponsor of this measure and by the answers that I am now receiving in the Chamber of the Senate.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that notwithstanding the fact that I have the floor, I may propound a question to another Senator without losing my right to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Let me ask the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania, in a situation in which in a given fiscal year the United States is engaged in military conflict which causes an imminent and serious military threat to national security, and that threat continues into the next fiscal year, is it section 1 that would have to be waived in the subsequent fiscal year or years? Would section 1 have to be waived in the subsequent fiscal year or years?

Mr. SANTORUM. I am not too sure—if the Senator is asking for an answer, I am not too sure I understand what the question is. Is he suggesting that the second year would be treated differently than the first year of the conflict?

Mr. BYRD. Why would it not? It is a new fiscal year. And the constitutional amendment on the balanced budget requires that the outlays not exceed receipts in any fiscal year. So we are into a new fiscal year. And yet the threat to the security of this country is still in effect. What do we do? Do we have to waive section 1 again in the new fiscal year?

Mr. SANTORUM. According to the committee report, a joint resolution of Congress would be required in order to have this provision be eligible to be waived, this amendment to be waived.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator is talking about two things there. The Senator is talking about the joint resolution in section 5 that would have to be enacted into law which would require a majority of the whole number of Members in each House. But section 1 requires a vote, in order to be waived, of three-fifths of the whole number of each House.

Mr. SANTORUM. And section 5 provides an exception to section 1.

Mr. BYRD. To section 1.

Mr. SANTORUM. In other words, section 1 binds us with the exception of, as outlined in section 5, when we have a declaration of war or—

Mr. BYRD. But my question is, if that military threat continues into a second fiscal year—

Mr. SANTORUM. We would be required then to pass a separate waiver of this amendment.

Mr. BYRD. Congress would have to pass a joint resolution in each and every fiscal year that ensued following the fiscal year of the first joint resolution?

Suppose there is not a declaration of war in effect. The first sentence of section 5 addresses the situation in which there is a declaration of war. Now, I will read it:

Congress may waive the provisions of this article—for any fiscal year in which a declaration of war is in effect.

Meaning section 1—

Now, the country has fought three major wars and engaged in several military conflicts during the past 48 years without declaring any war. Suppose there is not a declaration of war in effect. Then let us see what it says.

Provisions of this article may be waived for any fiscal year in which the United States is engaged in military conflict which causes an imminent and serious military threat to national security and is so declared by joint resolution, adopted by a majority of the whole number of each House, which becomes law.

Now, I have two or three questions I wish to ask the Senator. I will ask them singly or I will ask them en bloc.

One. Does this mean that in each subsequent fiscal year—let us imagine that a military threat develops in August, which is only 2 months preceding the close of the fiscal year. A threat is imminent. The Commander in Chief asks for a resolution, and Congress, notwithstanding the rules providing for unlimited debate in the United States Senate, quickly passes such a joint resolution for that fiscal year.

Then let us imagine that the threat continues over into the next fiscal year, January, February, March, April. Is another joint resolution required by the Congress?

Third question. Suppose that the response of the Congress to the President's request is favorable and the President launches his planes and ships, his troops, and vast expenditures of money are entailed. The fiscal year ends. The outlays exceed the receipts. The threat continues throughout the next fiscal year. There is no declaration of war but expenditures run into the billions of dollars—billions. What are we going to do?

This amendment says outlays shall not exceed receipts in any fiscal year. What are we going to do about the fact that the deficits rose greatly in the previous fiscal year, the one in which the threat first made itself clear and the deficit of the second year amounted to billions of dollars? What are we going to do? And suppose that passions within the Congress and in the country in the early-on support for the war dwindled away and left the Commander in Chief out there with his men in far-flung seas and lands, with their lives on the line. What do we do? No war has been declared.

Do we require that in order to waive—in order to waive section 5 there must be a majority of the Members elected in both bodies to waive. And you do not have that majority. What are you going to do? You have already run in excess, many—$10 billion, $15—who knows what? It cost billions, the Persian Gulf War, what do you do, Senator?

Mr. SANTORUM. I would answer the question—

Mr. BYRD. Are you going to raise taxes?

Mr. SANTORUM. I would answer that question the same as I would with any war. The Congress has the responsibility of funding the war and appropriating the dollars. The President cannot continue to execute a war if the Congress does not provide the funds to do so by a majority vote. So we already have, already, an existing requirement that Members of Congress vote by a majority to fund the war.

So I guess I do not see the complication. If we are going to go ahead by a majority vote and fund the war through an appropriations process, and we have the support to do that, why would we not continue very consistently, almost an afterthought, to go ahead and waive this provision of the Constitution, recognizing the imminent threat to our national security?

Mr. BYRD. Except that a majority is not a majority is not a majority, under this new amendment to the old Constitution. A majority under the current Constitution is not a majority under this constitutional amendment to balance the budget.

So the deficits have been increased, the debt has gone through the stratosphere, and we have people overseas with their lives on the line. What are we going to do?

You have an administration under the control of one party and the leadership of the Congress under the control of the other. You are putting our Nation's security in peril—

Mr. SANTORUM. Senator, what you are suggesting—

Mr. BYRD. Requiring a mini-super-majority for such a critical time.

Mr. SANTORUM. Is what the Senator is suggesting that this body or the other body would pass appropriations bills to fund the conflict, our participation in the conflict, and then not come back and waive the requirement for a balanced budget to allow us to do that? Is that what the Senator is suggesting?

Mr. BYRD. I am not suggesting it. The Senator—

Mr. SANTORUM. Same vote—

Mr. BYRD. The amendment the Senator is so avidly supporting requires that in each fiscal year—

Mr. SANTORUM. As we do with appropriations—

Mr. BYRD. Outlays shall not exceed receipts.

Mr. SANTORUM. Except—

Mr. BYRD. Suppose that in order to make that work, we had to have a tax to fund this threat—to protect us against the threat to the security of the Nation. I have heard Senators on that side of the aisle say they will not vote for a tax, ever. What about the deficits that have already been run up in the previous fiscal years, for which a majority of the Members chosen and sworn have voted to waive? Does that mean we have to go back and put on a retroactive tax? How would the Senator feel about that?

Mr. SANTORUM. How I would feel about it is, as you know, every year we have to appropriate money for the Defense Department. Particularly in time of war we would have to appropriate money through an appropriation process; we would have to go through both sides, it would have to be passed by a majority vote. In addition, we have put an additional hurdle—yes, of this section—which requires a simple majority, not a three-fifths or constitutional majority, but a majority of the whole number of each House—

Mr. BYRD. That is not a simple majority.

Mr. SANTORUM. A majority of the whole number of each House.

Mr. BYRD. Which is not a simple majority.

Mr. SANTORUM. Which would be slightly higher, possibly slightly higher burden in the House, and potentially higher, depending on interpretation, vote here in the Senate. But certainly consistent with the passage of the appropriations bill.

Mr. BYRD. Slightly higher, but it does not necessarily mean it would be slightly easier.

Would the Senator recommend that in order to deal with the deficits that had been built up as a result of the waiver of the article in previous fiscal years—does he suggest there might have to be a retroactive tax?

Mr. SANTORUM. There is nothing here in this constitutional amendment that requires us to pay back deficits that have been incurred since the enactment of this constitutional amendment, that have occurred as a result of a waiver of this amendment. So there is no requirement in the constitutional amendment to require the payment of existing debt.

Mr. BYRD. Oh, there is not? There is not?

The other day, the Senator from Pennsylvania stated with reference to dealing with the deficit for a year that has ended, the Senator stated: "We could, as has been done here, retroactively tax." I do not believe the Senator would have made that statement without having given it long and serious thought. So the question that naturally occurred to me today, again, is would the Senator be willing, in that situation, to vote for a retroactive tax? We are talking about a fiscal year or fiscal years that have ended and the estimate for the deficits for that year or those years have gone wrong by virtue of the sudden imminence of a serious military threat to our national security.

Is the Senator willing—he would not be willing, I do not believe, to vote for a package to reduce the deficits, such as the one we enacted in 1993. But in a situation like this, in which the Nation's security is imperiled, would he be willing to vote to increase taxes? I heard a Republican Senator stand over there on the floor and say he would not vote to increase a tax, ever.

I do not believe the Senator from Pennsylvania's feet are in such concrete. But I am just wondering, in the light of what he said about a retroactive tax the other day, whether or not he would suggest that, in a situation like this? In order to go back and wipe out those deficits?

Mr. SANTORUM. Would I in fact vote for a retroactive tax? If we needed to tax in order to meet the needs of war, I think we would have broad bipartisan support, as we would—as we do now, with appropriations bills.

Mr. BYRD. And he would vote for a retroactive tax?

Mr. SANTORUM. I do not know what the need would be for a retroactive tax but if that is what would be required, I would certainly consider it, if our country was at war. Certainly.

Mr. BYRD. How would the taxpayers of this country ever know how to fill out an income tax form, if we are going to go back and enact retroactive taxes? How are they going to know what the tax requirements are when they fill out their income tax forms and whether they may have to pay back taxes?

Mr. SANTORUM. That was our argument against the retroactive tax in 1993.

Mr. BYRD. But the other day—I am talking about the Senator's statement the other day, when he suggested there might be a retroactive tax.

SANTORUM. I said that is an option available to future Congress, if necessary.

Mr. BYRD. And I am asking the Senator.

Mr. SANTORUM. I would not recommend that option.

Mr. BYRD. But you would be willing—

Mr. SANTORUM. In a time of war, Senator, I would be willing to do things that otherwise I would not be willing to do at other times.

Mr. BYRD. What I am concerned about is in a time of serious military threat to this country, under this amendment a majority of the Senators and House Members elected and sworn would be required in order to waive the requirements of this amendment, under such dire extremities, and could not do so by a simple majority vote.

May I say, for the information of the Senate, I have an amendment which is at the desk.

I would be willing to agree to a vote on that amendment on the day that the Senate returns following this week-end—be willing to agree to a vote on or in relation to the amendment. I say "in relation" because the amendments around here to this constitutional amendment do not get up-or-down votes. Motions to table are made. There have been several amendments offered and debated to this constitutional amendment. There have been no up-or-down votes, and all of the amendments succumbed to the motion to table. That certainly is within the right of Senators to move to table.

I would be willing to offer my amendment, and it will be germane, if cloture is invoked. I would be willing to offer that amendment today, and agree to a time on it for debate and vote on or in relation to it, which includes the tabling motion, to take place on next Wednesday. I have not offered the amendment yet. So it cannot be tabled today. But I can offer it. So if the manager of the bill would like to respond, I will yield.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will my dear friend yield?

Mr. BYRD. Yes. I am happy to yield.

Mr. HATCH. As I understand it, the Senator from West Virginia is willing to lay down his amendment as long as it is not tabled today, and willing to have the vote on it at a time certain when we get back on Wednesday.

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. HATCH. Can the Senator tell me what time the distinguished Senator would desire? Could we keep it short?

Mr. BYRD. Let me modify my request. Let me offer this modification, or possible modification. I believe a unanimous-consent order was entered for the recognition of the Senator from West Virginia immediately upon the disposition of the cloture vote today to call up amendment No. 252, and that amendment would eliminate the three-fifths supermajority contained in section 1.

I would like to have the privilege of calling up that amendment, laying it down today, or calling up instead an amendment which is equally germane, in the event cloture is invoked, to deal with section 5, which the Senators from Maryland and Michigan and I and other Senators have been discussing this afternoon—with the understanding that there would be no tabling motion offered today, and that the vote on or in relation to that amendment, whichever of the two it is, would not occur until next Wednesday.

There is a cloture vote, I believe, that will occur, possibly even two of them, on that day. As I understand it, the majority leader laid down two cloture motions last night—say 2 hours of debate, equally divided. Of course, if cloture is invoked, we will operate under the rule.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator be willing, if our side takes only 15 minutes, to reduce that time to an hour? He would almost have the same amount of time as 2 hours equally divided. It would be 15 minutes less. But I would be 45 minutes less.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator is most generous.

Mr. HATCH. I have tried. What I am trying to do with my dear colleague is get moving on the amendment process, face whatever we have to face on this amendment, and try to bring this matter to a close sometime within the near future so that we can alleviate delays as much as possible. We are willing. As the Senator from West Virginia can see, we have been willing to take very little time on our side and allow plenty of time on the opposite side of this issue as an accommodation to try to move things along.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, accommodations do not matter to this Senator—

Mr. HATCH. I understand that. It is just a request.

Mr. BYRD. —when it comes to amending the Constitution. There is probably too much accommodation around here, in any event. But, nevertheless, it is characteristic of the distinguished Senator to want to accommodate.

What I was amused about was the offer to let the proponents of my amendment have 1 hour of debate and the opponents have 15 minutes. That is an indication to me that there is not much serious thought being given to my amendment. It is going to suffer the same fate as have other amendments around here—that they have been debated a little bit, and a motion to table is then made. They are not accorded serious debate.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield on that?

Mr. BYRD. I am not directing this at the Senator. I am simply saying that it says something about the debate on this constitutional amendment.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. HATCH. No, it does not, because the amendment the Senator is going to call up we are fully cognizant of. We spent a lot of time analyzing it. We believe we can answer it in a reasonable period of time. I feel we can answer it in 15 minutes. If we cannot, I would be happy to—but I think we can.

On the second amendment, I do not know what amendment that would be. So we might have to grant some more time on that. But our problem is not so much that we do not want to give enough time on this. We have been giving hours and hours. We have given. It is now 14 days of Senate floor time; long hours. I am not complaining. I am willing to be here as long as the distinguished Senator wants to debate any of these issues. But we have spent 14 days, which is 3 more than was spent on any balanced budget amendment in history.

Like I say, I am willing to spend more, but it is to accommodate my colleagues who are on the other side of this issue. So it is not a matter of giving a short shrift. We believe some of the amendments in the past have not deserved a lot of consideration from a constitutional standpoint. And we felt as though we had full debate, even with the limited amount of time we have allocated to ourselves, and we felt as if we made the case enough. But so far, we have been successful in tabling motions.

One last thing. Every amendment that has been brought forth has been a significant amendment, in my eyes.

I have wondered why some were brought forth, perhaps, but I still hope that they are substantively significant amendments. We cannot constitutionally answer some of them in less time than it takes for others. We are hopeful that on the amendment that we believe the Senator will call up before the end of today we can shorten the time. If the Senator wants 2 hours equally divided, I am not sure that the majority leader would not grant him that. But I am trying to accommodate the Senate and accommodate the opponents so they can bring up their amendments and yet still make sure that the record is made constitutionally on these important issues.

I add that the distinguished Senator from West Virginia always brings up important, substantive issues that are important not only to himself but to others as well, and they are certainly important to me. I admire and appreciate his desire to at all times uphold the Constitution and at all times do what is right, in his view, under the Constitution. That is all we are trying to do here—to do what is right.

We have spent 14 days of full Senate floor time, and compared to other balanced budget amendment debates, we have had far less amendments. So we have given adequate time to these amendments, and we have spent far more time than on prior amendments. But we cannot be governed just by prior debates. I am happy to spend whatever time it takes. I am sure the Senator understands the majority leader is asking me to try to move it along as fast as I can.

Mr. BYRD. Let me say—

Mr. HATCH. I am trying to accommodate the Senator. I will have to ask the majority leader. I felt like it was an attempt to accommodate by giving the Senator most of the time, almost as much as he would get with 2 hours equally divided, while we would try to make our arguments—as feeble as they might be—in a shorter time.

Mr. SARBANES. Why could the Senator not—if the request was 2 hours equally divided and the Senator's suggestion is that the Senator from West Virginia have 1 hour and he have 15 minutes, why would the Senator not agree to the 2 hours and not use all his time if it was not necessary in the debate? I mean, give the Senator from West Virginia time to debate at the time, and you might discover on that occasion that you might need more than 15 minutes. You can always yield back your time.

Mr. HATCH. This is not a demand. This is a suggestion. If the Senator from West Virginia does not agree—

Mr. SARBANES. I was just seeing a way where you could get where you want to go.

Mr. HATCH. Anything that will move the debate forward I am happy to try to do. In any event, we will have to see what the majority leader wants to do next Wednesday. We have that cloture vote, and I am not sure when he is going to have that cloture vote; I am not aware. But we will have to put in a quorum call and decide. I understand the Senator's request, that he would like to bring up one of two amendments—

Mr. BYRD. At this point.

Mr. HATCH. Could the Senator inform us what the other amendment is? I believe you said it is No. 252.

Mr. BYRD. I said it pertained to section 5. That has been discussed all afternoon here.

Mr. HATCH. I thought you mentioned there might be two amendments and you would make your choice between the two.

Mr. BYRD. I mentioned amendment No. 252 and an amendment No. 256. Amendment No. 256 deals with section 5. I believe I have 7 or 8 or 9 or 10 amendments at the desk.

Mr. HATCH. You would choose whichever one you want, but there would be no amendments to the amendment in order by either side?

Mr. BYRD. Well, if cloture is invoked, I suppose if I were able to qualify, or if other Senators were able to qualify, they could have second-degree amendments at the desk.

Mr. HATCH. Unless we agree to a time agreement with those terms. That is what I am asking.

Mr. BYRD. I am not quarreling with the hour that I am to be given. I have had a good bit of time this afternoon. But I think it is indicative of the lack of interest on the part of the proponents in seriously trying to improve the constitutional amendment that is before the Senate when they say, well, we will take 15 minutes, you can have your hour. I know what is going to happen; the amendment is going to be tabled. That is certainly the right of the manager of the resolution, or the leader, or any other Senator.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

Mr. HATCH. Surely, I do not believe the Senator is suggesting that I am not taking his amendment seriously or that I have not taken any amendment seriously, is he? I have taken them all extremely seriously. This is the Constitution we are working on and nobody takes it more seriously than the distinguished Senator from West Virginia, unless it is the Senator from Utah. I would not claim to take it more seriously than the Senator, but I do not think anybody takes it more seriously than either of us. I will try to do my best to answer.

Mr. SARBANES. If the Senator will yield, can I be included in that duo, to make it a trio of people who take the Constitution seriously?

Mr. HATCH. We just do not feel that people on the east coast—I am kidding. Yes.

Mr. SARBANES. Let us make it a trio.

Mr. HATCH. Let us make it 100 of us. We are all serious. The fact of the matter is let us see what we can do to get Senator DOLE to resolve this.

Will the Senator yield for a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

PROVIDING FOR AN ADJOURNMENT OF THE TWO HOUSES—HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 30

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate temporarily lay aside the pending business and turn to the consideration of House Concurrent Resolution Res 30, the adjournment resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the concurrent resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that concurrent resolution be agreed to and that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

So the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 30) was agreed to; as follows:

H. CON. RES. 30

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That when the House adjourns on the legislative day of Thursday, February 16, 1995, it stand adjourned until 12:30 p.m. on Tuesday, February 21, 1995, or until noon on the second day after Members are notified to reassemble pursuant to section 2 of this concurrent resolution, whichever occurs first; and that when the Senate recesses or adjourns at the close of business on Thursday, February 16, 1995, pursuant to a motion made by the Majority Leader or his designee, in accordance with this resolution, it stand recessed or adjourned until noon, or at such time on that day as may be specified by the Majority Leader or his designee in the motion to recess or adjourn, on Wednesday, February 22, 1995, or until noon on the second day after Members are notified to reassemble pursuant to section 2 of this concurrent resolution, whichever occurs first.

SEC. 2. The Speaker of the House and the Majority Leader of the Senate, acting jointly after consultation with the Minority Leader of the House and the Minority Leader of the Senate, shall notify the Members of the House and Senate, respectively, to reassemble whenever, in their opinion, the public interest shall warrant it.

BALANCED BUDGET AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION

The Senate continued with the consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. HATCH. I ask that the Senate resume the pending bill.

Mr. BYRD. While the distinguished Senator is making an inquiry of the majority leader, let me just say for the RECORD that the distinguished Senator from Utah talks about this amendment that is presently before the Senate as having had 14 days of debate.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield, and I will make a unanimous consent request on the Senator's request, if it is all right?

Mr. BYRD. On the request that we have been discussing, yes.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time prior to a motion to table amendment No. 252, the Byrd amendment, be limited to 2 hours to be equally divided, and that no amendments be in order prior to the motion to table. As I understood it, the Senator wanted it after the cloture vote?

Mr. BYRD. Yes. Would the Senator provide for the alternative of amendment No. 256, either/or?

Mr. HATCH. Could the Senator give me a copy of amendment No. 256?

Mr. BYRD. I ask that the clerk state, for the edification of the Senate, amendment No. 256.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMITH). The clerk will report the amendment for the information of the Senate.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

Amendment 256: On page 2, lines 24 and 25, strike "adopted by a majority of the whole number of each House."

Mr. HATCH. Would the Senator agree to bring up the amendment and have the 2 hours, if there are two cloture votes, after the second cloture vote, if necessary?

Mr. BYRD. Yes. I have no desire to interfere with cloture votes.

Mr. HATCH. Then let us add either No. 252 or No. 256 to the request. The Senator will have his choice on amendments.

Mr. BYRD. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the distinguished Senator.

May I say briefly that I want to yield to Senator PELL for 10 minutes and then I am going to yield the floor.

The distinguished Senator from Utah—and he is a distinguished Senator—has talked about the 14 days that we have spent on this constitutional amendment. Well, so what? The constitutional Framers spent 116 days—116 days in closed session at the Constitutional Convention—116 days. And now we have spent, the Senator said, 14 days. So what? What is 14 days as between us Senators, 14 days to amend the Constitution in a way which can destroy the separation of powers and checks and balances—14 days.

The other body spent all of 2 days on this constitutional amendment. I believe that is right, 2 days. What a joke! Two days in adopting this constitutional amendment. Why, any town council in this country would spend 2 days in determining whether or not it should issue a permit to build a golf course.

Two days to amend the Constitution. I will not say any more than that now.

I ask unanimous consent that I may yield to the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island. He has an ambassador waiting on him in his office. I understand he wishes 10 minutes.

Mr. PELL. Thank you very much.

Mr. HATCH. Reserving the right to object, would the distinguished Senator allow me just a few seconds to just make a closing comment on what the distinguished Senator just said?

Yes, they did spend over 100 days to arrive at the full Constitution, without the Bill of Rights. And we have spent 19 years working on this amendment. This amendment is virtually the same as we brought up in 1982, 1986, and last year. We have had weeks of debate on this amendment. It is a bipartisan amendment. It has been developed in consultation between Democrats and Republicans in the House and in the Senate. It has had a lot of deliberation, consideration, negotiation, and debate on the floor.

Admittedly, I am sure the distinguished Senator from West Virginia would agree that the constitutional convention did not debate this on the floor of the Senate at the time, nor would it have taken that much time had there been a debate on the floor of the Senate. But be that as it may, if it had, we are living today with an amendment that is one amendment to the whole Constitution that, if adopted, would become the 28th amendment to the Constitution.

We have spent 14 days on the floor. I am willing to spend more. I am not complaining, and I do want to have a full and fair debate, but I also believe that we are reaching a point where there is deliberate delay here, not by the distinguished Senator from West Virginia necessarily, but I believe reasonable people can conclude that there is a desire to delay this amendment for whatever purpose that may be and that is the right of Senators if they want to do it.

The majority leader has filed a cloture motion which we voted on today. We had 57 Senators who wanted to end this debate and make all matters germane from this point on. Next Wednesday, we will vote on cloture again. And if there are 60 Senators who vote for cloture, then that will bring a large part of this debate to a closure.

I think I would be remiss if I did not say, on behalf of the majority leader and others on our side who are working hard to move this amendment, that we believe that is a reasonable period of time and we believe that every person here has had a chance to bring up their amendments.

We tried to get to an amendment up last night. We were willing to work later. We could not get one person to put up an amendment.

So we have reached a point where we can go along with more amendments. But once cloture is invoked then only those that are germane will be considered and then only for a limited period of time.

But I just want to make the record straight that this is not a rewriting of the whole Constitution, although it is important and it will have a dramatic imprint and impact on how we spend and how we tax in America from that point on if this amendment is passed through both Houses of Congress by the requisite two-thirds vote and ratified by three-quarters of the States. It is very important. Those who are for it are very concerned about it and those who are opposed are rightly very concerned about it.

We have had a very healthy debate. We intend to continue as long as is necessary to bring this matter to closure. But I do not want anybody thinking that anybody has been cut off here or that anybody has been mistreated or that anybody has not been given their chance to bring up amendments, because they have. We have tabled those amendments. We feel that that is certainly within our right to do that. We have tried to treat every amendment with the dignity and the prestige that it deserves.

Finally, I would like to encourage my colleagues next Wednesday to vote for cloture. Because we all know where it stands. We all know the arguments on both sides. This is not just 14 days. Since I have been here, we are in our 19th year debating this matter, in the Judiciary Committee now four times and stopped a number of other times in the Judiciary Committee before we could even get it to the floor.

So this is not an unusual situation. We actually have worked hard. Everybody here knows what is involved in this amendment. Everybody here knows the arguments against it. And everybody here knows that we voted on some very substantial and very important amendments thus far, and those who are in a bipartisan way thus far have been successful in maintaining the integrity of the House-passed amendment; I might add just one more time, a House-passed amendment for the first time in the history of this country. And I have to say that is historic.

Now we have the opportunity of passing it through here and submitting it to the States. And those of us who support it hope that 38 States will ratify it. We hope all 50 will, but at least 38, three-quarters. And if they do, then this will become the 28th amendment to the Constitution.

But I just wanted to make those points. I am sorry I delayed the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I do not want to leave the record standing as the distinguished Senator from Utah has left it. I believe he indicated he thought there was a deliberate effort to delay.

Mr. HATCH. I said not by the distinguished Senator from West Virginia. I would not impute that to you and I hope that is not the case.

But I do not think many reasonable people would conclude that we have not given an extensive amount of time to this debate. And I think people might conclude that now that we have gone through one cloture vote that there may be a desire of some here to delay this matter from a filibuster standpoint. I hope that is not true. But that is the way it looks to me.

I admit that I am not nearly as experienced here as the distinguished Senator from West Virginia, but I have been here 19 years and I have observed. I can remember the majority leader, Senator Mitchell, calling filibusters filibusters in less than a day. And here we have had 14 days, so it is 3 solid weeks of Senate debate on this, and extensive amendments, although not as many as the 1982, where there were 31 amendments. But we did that in 11 days. I think people could reasonably conclude that there is a filibuster going on.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I disagree with that statement.

The Senator from Utah was not here during the debate on the Civil Rights Act, which lasted 103 days, covered a total of 103 days between the date of the motion to proceed on March 9, 1964, and the date on which the final vote occurred on the civil rights bill on June 19. March 9, June 19th—103 days transpired. The Senate was on the bill itself 77 days and debated the bill 57 days in which there were included six Saturdays.

The Senator implies that there may be a deliberate effort here to delay this measure. Nobody has engaged, that I know of, in obstructionist tactics. Imagine what one could do if he wanted to. There have been no dilatory quorum calls. There have been no dilatory motions to reconsider, and the asking for the yeas and nays on a motion to reconsider, and then put in a quorum call and send for the Sergeant at Arms and have the Sergeant at Arms arrest Members, as I had to do. Nothing dilatory has been done.

Nobody has objected to any time limits on amendments. Not one objection that I know about. I have had every amendment that has been called up here and time request that has been brought to me, brought to me because I am a Senator. I have not objected to any such request.

The majority leader has a right to offer cloture motions. I think he has been fairly reasonable in this situation. He has not been pressing out here daily for action on this constitutional amendment.

I am not against Senator HATCH. I am not against Senator DOLE. I am just against this amendment. Nobody has attempted to deliberately delay this. Let me debunk that idea from any Senator's mind.

I want to see this come to an end. It is going to come to an end. I will have no more to say unless the Senator wants to carry on this bit of subject matter further.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I appreciate my colleague offering that opportunity. All I have to say is that the rules today are considerably different than they were during the civil rights debates when they went 103 days. Cloture can be invoked. There is no such thing as a postcloture filibuster today.

Mr. BYRD. There could be.

Mr. HATCH. But a lot different from the old days.

Mr. BYRD. Does the Senator know why it is different? Because I, as majority leader, laid down certain points of order that were upheld by the then Presiding Officer, and we established precedents that make it much more difficult to carry on a postcloture filibuster.

Mr. HATCH. How well aware I am, and I compliment the distinguished Senator from West Virginia for his knowledge of the rules.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator for that compliment. I hope I have a little knowledge of a few things other than just the rules of the Senate.

Mr. HATCH. I have to confess that I think the distinguished Senator is a fine Senator, a great Senator.

I know that he knows the rules very well and I think he knows the Constitution quite well, although I do think earlier in the day he said there were no amendments dealing with the economy.

Mr. BYRD. No, no. I said no amendments dealing with fiscal policy.

Mr. HATCH. I believe the contract laws, I believe the 16th amendment do deal with fiscal policy.

Mr. BYRD. It does not attempt to write fiscal policy, fiscal theory, about which Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes said there is no place in the Constitution for fiscal theory.

Mr. HATCH. I agree with that, if you consider that fiscal policy.

Mr. BYRD. I consider this amendment which, by the way, I think contains about 465 words.

Mr. HATCH. It does.

Mr. BYRD. The entire first 10 amendments in the Bill of Rights contain only about 385 words. This amendment alone contains about 465 words. The entire 10 amendments in the Bill of Rights contained only around 385.

What I am saying is this nefarious amendment that is proposed here has only about 80 fewer words than do the 10 amendments to the Bill of Rights. The 10 amendments contain, I think, about 465 words, and this monstrosity contains about 385. So there are only about 80 words difference.

My math may be off a little bit this afternoon. I have not had any lunch, and my feet are getting a little tired.

Mr. HATCH. I am happy to yield the floor.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Mr. PELL be recognized for 10 minutes, and that he be followed by Senator MURRAY, not to exceed 5 minutes.

I thank Senator HATCH for his gracious manner and his characteristic friendliness and conviviality. He is a fine Senator. I enjoy working with him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MAJORITY RULE

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the distinguished and learned Senator from West Virginia [Mr. BYRD] to amend the proposed constitutional amendment to allow a majority, rather than a supermajority to determine when a deficit can be incurred.

The concept of majority rule is so deeply embedded in our society and in almost every organized group proceeding—from fraternal and social groups to corporations large and small and government at the village, county, city, and State level—that many Americans might be very surprised to realize the extent to which the Congress of the United States is sometimes ruled by a minority, and could become more so in the future.

We have before us the balanced budget amendment which contains not just one but two supermajority requirements—one requiring a three-fifths vote of the entire membership of each House to permit outlays to exceed receipts and the other a three-fifths vote of the entire membership of each House to increase the public debt limit.

And we may soon have before us a line-item veto proposal which would subject congressional disapproval of a rescission to a two-thirds supermajority veto override, as opposed to an alternative plan under would a simple majority could block a rescission.

If approved, these supermajority requirements would join others already in place: the Senate cloture rule, the new rule of the House of Representatives on votes of that body to raise income taxes, and the statutory supermajority requirement for waiving points of order under the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, better known as Gramm-Rudman-Hollings.

Mr. President, these flirtations with supermajorities are leading us astray from the apparent intent of the wise men who wrote the Constitution two centuries ago. For them the principle of majority rule was so self-evident that they apparently saw no need to state it explicitly.

Since the Constitution provides for supermajorities only in specific instances—such as overriding vetoes, Senate consent to treaties, Senate verdicts on impeachment, expulsion of Members, determination of Presidential disability and amending the Constitution itself—it seems clear that the Framers intended that all other business should be transacted by a majority.

And since the Constitution gives the Vice President the power to break ties when the Senate is “equally divided,” Framers again evidenced a clear intent that business was to be transacted by a majority. We carry forward that intent in the structural organization of Congress itself, whereby the party that controls 50 percent plus one seat assumes control.

The time may be coming when the only way to prevent further violence to the Framers intent will be to enshrine this most basic principle of governance—majority rule itself—as a constitutional provision.

Mr. President, I offer these reflections today from the vantage point of 34 years service in this body. As I stated here a few days ago, I have cast 327 votes for cloture during those years, so I am no stranger to the impact and consequences of a supermajority requirement in the Senate.

I would point out, in that regard, that cloture by majority rule would not cancel out rule XXII of the Senate—it would simply lower the margin for invoking cloture to the threshold envisioned by the Founding Fathers for the transaction of business. And we should make no mistake about the fact that the rules of proceedings now have such sweeping substantive effect that they do in fact constitute an important element in the business of the Senate.

Mr. President, in the haste to fulfill the expectations and promises of this new Congress, many of which are of great merit, we must take special care to preserve basic principles of our democracy which may be brushed aside in the rush to reform. The principle of majority rule is the basic cornerstone of the edifice, whether it applies to rules of proceedings or the substance of legislation. It must be preserved and protected from all assaults. Perhaps the time is coming when it too should be enshrined in the Constitution.

I ask unanimous consent that three articles entitled “The Three-Fifths Rule: A Dangerous Game” by David Broder, “Super-Majority Simple-Mindedness” by Lloyd N. Cutler, and “On Madison’s Grave” by Anthony Lewis, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the articles are ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times, Jan. 30, 1995]

ON MADISON’S GRAVE

(By Anthony Lewis)

BOSTON.—“Miracle at Philadelphia,” Catherine Drinker Bowen called her book on the Constitutional Convention of 1787. And it was a political miracle. The delegates produced a document that has ordered a huge country for 200 years, balancing state and nation, government power and individual rights.

The Constitution has been amended 27 times. Some of the changes have been profound: the Bill of Rights, the end of slavery. But none has altered the fundamental structure, the republican systems designed by James Madison and the others. Until now.

Now the House of Representatives has approved an amendment that would make a revolutionary change in the Madisonian system. It is call the Balanced Budget Amendment. A more honest name would be the Minority Rule Amendment.

The amendment does not prohibit unbalanced budgets. It requires, rather, that a decision to spend more in any fiscal year than anticipated receipts be made by a vote of three-fifths of the whole House and Senate. The same vote would be required to increase the debt limit.

The result would be to transfer to minorities effective control over many, perhaps most, significant legislative decisions. For the impact would not be limited to the overall budget resolution. Most legislation that comes before Congress bears a price tag. If a bill would unbalance a budget, a three-fifths vote would be required to fund it.

In short, a minority of just over 40 percent—175 of the 435 representatives, 41 of the 100 Senators—could block action. It takes no great imagination to understand what is likely to happen. Members of the blocking minority will have enormous power to extract concessions for their votes: a local pork project, a judgeship for a friend. * * *

Just think about the debt-ceiling provision. Even with the best of intentions to stay in balance, the Government may find itself in deficit at any moment because tax receipts are lagging. Then it will have to do some short-term borrowing or be unable to meet its obligations. Instead of a routine vote for a temporary increase in the debt ceiling, there will be a session of painful bargaining for favors.

The amendment is also a full-employment measure for lawyers. Suppose the figures that produce a balanced budget are suspect, or suppose the demand for balance is ignored. How would the amendment be enforced? Sponsors say it would be up to the courts. So this proposal, labeled conservative, would turn intensely political issues over to judges!

It is in fact a radical idea, one that would subvert majority rule and turn the fiscal debates that are the business of democratic legislatures into constitutional and legal arguments. How did a conservative polity like ours ever get near the point of taking such a step?

The answer is plain. The enormous Federal budget deficits that began in the Reagan years have frightened us—all of us, conservative and liberal. We do not want our children and grandchildren to have to pay for our profligacy. We are not strong-minded enough to resist deficit temptation, so we are going to bind ourselves as Ulysses did to resist the lure of the Sirens.

The binding would introduce dangerous economic rigidities into our system. In times of recession government should run a deficit, to stimulate the economy. But the amendment would force spending cuts because of declining tax receipts, digging us deeper into the recession.

The rigidities of the amendment would also inflict pain on millions of Americans. The target year for balancing the budget, 2002, could not be met without savage cuts in middle-class entitlements such as Social Security and Medicare.

“It’s a bad idea whose time has come,” Senator Nancy L. Kassebaum, Republican of Kansas, said. “It’s like Prohibition; we may have to do it to get it out of our system.”

If someone as sensible as Nancy Kassebaum can succumb to such counsels of despair, we have truly lost Madison’s faith in representative government. Madison knew that majorities can go wrong; that is why he and his colleagues put so many protections against tyranny in their Constitution. But they also left government the flexibility to govern.

Their design, the miracle that has sustained us for 200 years, is now at risk.

SUPER-MAJORITY SIMPLE-MINDEDNESS

(By Lloyd N. Cutler)

The Republican majority has proposed amending House Rule XXI to require the affirmative vote of three-fifths of the members present to pass a bill "carrying a federal income tax rate increase." If all 435 members show up, 261 votes would be needed for passage. As Post columnist David Broder and Rep. David Skaggs (D-Colo.) have already observed, such a rule would be unconstitutional. Even if it were constitutional, it would still be unworkable.

It would be unworkable because tax bills usually contain multiple provisions reducing some rates of tax, increasing other rates and adjusting the base numbers—e.g., wages, profits and capital gains less various credits, exemptions and deductions—to which these rates are applied. Almost every two-year Congress enacts major tax revision laws to close loopholes, correct inequities, adjust rates, hold down the budget deficit and manage the economy for noninflationary growth.

If the rules are changed to require a three-fifths affirmative vote, it may not be practicable to pass any major tax bill. Any such bill is bound to contain some provisions that can be called tax rate increases. What about a tax bill that reduces rates for incomes below, say, $200,000 and raises rates for incomes above that figure? What about tax bill provisions eliminating charitable or home mortgage interest deductions, or reducing the allowed exemptions for dependents or lengthening the required holding period for long-term capital gains? Any one of these would have the same effect on many taxpayers as an increase in income tax rates. As a result, the proposed three-fifths requirement could well apply to any major income tax revision bill that follows adoption of the proposed rules change.

Let us suppose that a stubborn minority of 175 members will be mustered to prevent a three-fifths majority and thus defeat any bill including some income tax increases. Let us also suppose that a simple majority (218 if all 435 are present) will vote against an amendment that eliminates any such increase. There is still a budget deficit to contend with, and 218 members may think that a broad reduction in income tax rates should be at least partially offset by some tax increases. In that event, no major tax bill could be passed at all, and the government would be unable to make needed changes in national fiscal policy.

With the House floor debate on the proposal about to begin, it may also be useful to spell out the main reasons why a super-majority requirement for the vote on passage of a bill is unconstitutional. In United States v. Ballin, decided a century ago, the Supreme Court said that a simple majority governs "all parliamentary bodies," except when the basic charter requires some form of super-majority, which our Constitution does in five cases (plus two added by subsequent amendments) and no others. The seven exceptions are: the overriding of a presidential veto, the Senate's consent to a treaty, the Senate's verdict on an impeachment, the expulsion of a senator or congressman, an amendment of the Constitution, the 14th Amendment vote on removing the disqualification for office of participants in a rebellion and the 25th Amendment vote on whether to allow a disabled president to resume his office. All of these are special cases, not involving the mere passage of a bill or resolution for presentation to the president.

Except in these cases, the Framers were against allowing a minority of either house to block legislative action. That is the reason why Article I, Section 5, states that "a Majority of each [house] shall constitute a quorum to do Business." As James Madison explained, the Framers rejected a proposal that a super-majority be required for a quorum because: "In all cases where justice or the general good might require new laws to be passed, or active measures to be pursued, the fundamental principle of free government would be reversed. It would be no longer the majority that would rule: the power would be transferred to the minority." (The Federalist Papers, No. 58.)

The vote of the House on whether to pass a bill is certainly the doing of "Business." And contrary to the Framers' intent, a super-majority requirement would certainly give a minority the power to rule over such business.

Another constitutional provision confirms this understanding of the Framers. Article I, Section 3, states that the vice president shall be the president of the Senate, "but shall have no vote unless they be equally divided." The Framers must have intended that in the Senate at least, a simple majority was sufficient to pass a bill. The Federalist Papers strongly support this view. According to Hamilton, the vice president was given the tie-breaking vote in the Senate "to secure at all times the possibility of a definitive resolution of that body." (Federalist No. 68.) There is no logical reason why the Framers would have thought differently about the House. And a "definitive resolution" of the House could not be "secured" under the proposed three-fifths rule.

Proponents of a super-majority requirement will make two points in rebuttal. One is to say that they are following a precedent of Senate Rule XXII, which has long required super-majority votes to close debate and proceed to a vote on a bill or an amendment of a Senate rule. As I have argued on a previous occasion, Rule XXII itself is constitutionally suspect. But even if Rule XXII passed constitutional muster, that would not save the proposed House rule. It applies to the up-or-down vote on a bill, while Senate Rule XXII, as its defenders take pains to point out, applies only to a procedural motion to close debate on a bill. Here is arch-defender George Will, writing on this page in April 1993:

"The Constitution provides only that, other than in the five cases, a simple majority vote shall decide the disposition by each house of business that has consequences beyond each house, such as passing legislation or confirming executive or judicial nominees."

Will Newt Gingrich flout George Will?

The proponents' second point will be that the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act includes Senate and House rules changes that require a super-majority to pass any bill that "breaks" a budget law or resolution previously enacted. This provision is also constitutionally suspect, but at least it lacks the critical vice of making it impossible to enact any budget resolution in the first place. This still requires only a simple majority.

The biggest question of all is why a majority party with 230 of the 435 seats would want to adopt a super-majority rule requiring 261 votes to pass a tax bill. Such a rule could prevent the Republicans from passing a major tax bill favored by a simple majority it could readily muster, even though it might be unable to muster a super-majority of 261. One is tempted to conclude that the present majority party does not expect to keep its majority for very long.

The Republicans have also proposed an even more egregious change in House Rule

XXI, one that would prevent the House from even considering any measure that would retroactively increase tax rates, even if three-fifths of the members were in favor. This would deprive the House, and therefore the entire Congress, of its most fundamental express power under the Constitution, the power to lay and collect revenues including taxes on income. It would also have the effect of overruling the numerous Supreme Court decisions upholding the constitutionality of retroactive tax laws, subject only to a due-process standard.

Both of these proposed rules changes are so manifestly unconstitutional that they should not be adopted. If the Republicans use their majority to adopt them anyway, the courts would have ample reason to set them aside.

[From The Washington Post, Dec. 18, 1994]

THE THREE-FIFTHS RULE: A DANGEROUS GAME

(By David S. Broder)

Among many useful and well-designed reforms proposed by the new Republican majority in the House, one suggested change bespeaks neither confidence nor foresight. It is the proposal that future income tax rate increases would require a three-fifths vote for passage.

The purpose is plainly to make it harder for Congress to boost taxes. Since revenue measures must originate in the House of Representatives, the three-fifths rule would hamper future majorities in both the House and Senate from enacting such measures.

Some question the constitutional propriety of such a rule. Rep. David Skaggs (D-Colo.) has circulated a letter to his colleagues arguing that "the principle of majority rule has governed this nation for over two centuries and is fundamental to our democracy." Skaggs asserts that the three-fifths rule is unconstitutional. Bruce Ackerman, a professor of law and political science at Yale, has expressed the same view in a New York Times op-ed article. Common Cause and congressional scholar Norman Ornstein also have taken up that side of the argument.

Others disagree. Rep. Jerry Solomon (R-N.Y.), who will be the new chairman of the Rules Committee, argues that when the Constitution says that "each house [of Congress] may determine the rules of its proceedings," the authority is intentionally broad. Lawyers and experts inside congress and out, to whom I put the question, say it would be difficult to predict how the courts would regard such a rule—or even whether they would accept jurisdiction if its constitutionality were challenged.

The experts I consulted agree that there is no precedent for Congress requiring a super-majority for final action on any measure, except where specified by the Constitution. The Constitution says it takes a two-thirds majority to override a presidential veto, ratify a treaty, remove an official from office, expel a representative or senator or propose an amendment to the Constitution.

The other instances in which Congress itself has required more than a majority for some action all involve procedural matters. The House requires a two-thirds vote to suspend the rules and pass a measure without delay; the Senate requires a three-fifths vote to impose cloture or end debate. In the last decade, budget resolutions have required a three-fifths vote to override a point of order against any change that would increase the deficit beyond the agreed-upon target for the year. This is a procedural motion, but it clearly affects the substance of economic policy decisions, and sponsors of the new House rule claim it as a model for their proposal.

But abandoning the principle of majority rule on final passage of a bill is not something the House should do lightly—or rest on a questionable precedent. If the three-fifths rule is intended as a safeguard against rash tax-raising by this incoming Congress, it seems unnecessary. Republicans will have a 25-seat majority in January and they have promised tax cuts, not increases. The president has joined them and so has the leader of House Democrats, Rep. Richard Gephardt (Mo.). So where is the threat?

Fiddling with the rules always arouses suspicion. Two years ago, when the majority Democrats changed the rules to allow the delegates from the District of Columbia, American Samoa, Guam and the Virgin Islands and the resident commissioner from Puerto Rico (all Democrats) to vote on the House floor on everything but final passage of bills, I said they were tampering with the game. Such criticism forced the Democrats to agree that there would be another vote—without the five delegates—on any issue where their votes decided the outcome. The federal courts upheld that version of their rule, saying that the change the Democrats had made was merely “symbolic” and essentially “meaningless.”

That cannot be said of the proposed three-fifths rule. It is consequential—and unprincipled. The Republicans themselves juggled the wording to create loopholes for shifting other tax rates by simple majority.

The precedent they will set is one they will come to regret. If this Congress puts a rules roadblock around changes in income rates, nothing will prevent future Congresses with different majorities from erecting similar barriers to protect labor laws, civil rights laws, environmental laws—or whatever else the party in power wants to put off-limits for political purposes.

There is something fundamentally disquieting and even dishonorable about the majority of the moment rewriting the rules to allow a minority to control the House's decisionmaking. You can easily imagine future campaigns in which politicians will promise that if they gain power, they will abolish majority rule on this issue or that—a whole new venue for pandering to constituencies that can be mobilized around a single issue.

This is a dangerous game the Republicans are beginning. And it raises questions about their values. Let them answer this question: Why should it be harder for Congress to raise taxes than declare war? Does this proud new Republican majority wish to say on its first day in office: We value money more than lives?

Mr. PELL. I yield the floor.

Mrs. MURRAY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By a previous order of the Senate, the Senator from Washington is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

DR. HENRY FOSTER, SURGEON GENERAL NOMINEE

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, Dr. Henry Foster has been nominated by President Clinton to be the U.S. Surgeon General. I rise today to express my support for Dr. Foster, and to urge my colleagues to give him a full and fair hearing.

Yesterday, I had the pleasure of meeting with Dr. Foster, and I am very impressed.

Dr. Foster is a physician with vast experience who has dedicated his life to maternal and child health. He is a man who speaks from the heart, a person who cares deeply about the health of families across this Nation.

Dr. Foster is one of the country's leading experts on preventing teen pregnancy and drug abuse, as well as reducing infant mortality. He is a public health professional with vision.

I urge my colleagues to meet with Dr. Foster, to talk with him, to ask him tough questions. I have. I believe they too will be very impressed.

Dr. Foster has tested his ideas about public health interventions that can greatly benefit this Nation. He wants to continue his career-long focus on maternal and child health, on adolescents, and the on prevention of teen pregnancy. He wants to fight AIDS, and combat the epidemic of violence that has taken hold across our Nation.

I also want to stress the importance and relevance of Dr. Foster's practice area. For far too long, women's health concerns have been neglected by this Nation. I am heartened that our next Surgeon General can be a physician who has dedicated his life to women's health—an obstetrician/gynecologist.

Women's health is critical to every family—every man, woman, and child—in this Nation. As a woman, and a mother with a son and daughter, I find the selection of Dr. Foster reassuring. I urge my colleagues to stop and think about the importance of women's health to families everywhere.

I look forward to working with my colleagues on the Labor Committee as they prepare hearings for Dr. Foster. I believe when my colleagues and the American public get to know Dr. Foster, they will be as excited as I am to have him as our Nation's next Surgeon General. You, too, will recognize his honesty, his passion, and his commitment to children and families.

I thank you and yield back the remainder of my time.

BALANCED BUDGET AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION

The Senate continued with the consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, we are now in our 14th day of debate. I was very interested in the chart of the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, “Statutes Don't Work.”

I hear people on the other side constantly saying we ought to just do it; we ought to just balance the budget; we ought to have the guts to do it. Almost invariably they are the people who are the biggest spenders around here. Almost invariably.

It is the biggest joke on Earth, after 26 straight years of not balancing the budget, to have these people tell us, we just have to do it ourselves. That is the biggest joke around here to everybody who knows anything about budgetary policy in the Federal Government.

Do not think the people are stupid out there. They know what is going on. They know doggone well that if we do not have this balanced budget amendment, we will never get fiscal control of this country, we will never make priority choices among competing programs, and we will just keep spending and taxing like never before.

I have heard Senators on the other side of this issue, and some who even support us, beat their breast on how they voted for that large tax increase last year, and that deficit spending thing they did. Anytime you increase taxes, if you can hold on to spending at all, you are going to bring down the budget deficit. The problem is that at best, their approach starts up dramatically in 1996 and really dramatically at the turn of the century to a $400 billion annual deficit.

These people are always saying we just have to do it. They are the same people who say we could do it with the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921, the Revenue Act of 1964, the Revenue Act of 1968, Humphrey-Hawkins in 1978, the Byrd amendment in 1978. I was here for most of those. From 1978 on, I was certainly here, and I have to tell you, I voted for that Byrd amendment and I was really thrilled. Here is the U.S. Senate, this august body of people who mean so much to this country, voting to say that in 1980, we are going to balance this budget.

Back then, we probably could have if we had really gotten serious about it. But it was almost the next bill that came up that a 51 percent majority vote changed that. The distinguished Senator from New Hampshire really makes a great point here.

The debt limit increase, why, I was here for that, too. We promised, “Boy, we're going to balance the budget.”

The Bretton Woods agreement; again, Byrd II; recodification of title 31; Byrd III; Gramm-Rudman-Hollings, I remember what a fight that was to get that through. My gosh, at last we are going to do something for this country; we are going to get spending under control; we are going to help our country. It helped a little bit, darn little.

We had to go to Gramm-Rudman-Hollings II, II because the little it did help was just too much for these people around here, just too much for these budget balancers who say we simply ought to do it.

Let me tell you, I am tired of saying we simply ought to do it. I heard it from the White House. What do we get from the White House? A budget for the next 5 years that will put us over $6 trillion; that the annual deficits for the next 12 years are $190 billion a year plus.

Now tell me they mean business. No way in this world. This game is up. Those who vote for this are people who are serious about doing something for our country, about getting spending and taxing policies under control. I said spending and taxing. We are not just worried about spending, we are worried about these people who think the last answer to everything is to tax the American people more. And anybody who thinks that last tax policy was just the upper 2 percent, they just have not looked at what they have done. They even taxed Social Security.

People just do not realize because sometimes the big lie is told around here so much that people cannot figure out what is going on. That is why baseball is the No. 1 issue in this country right now. I happen to know. I happen to be in the middle of that one, too. But I have to tell you, as important as baseball is, it is not a fly, a flea on the backside of an elephant compared to what this problem is.

When we went to Gramm-Rudman-Hollings II, that did not work, either. It was a simple statute that we just amended and amended.

We have done some things here. There are some heroes here to me on both sides of the floor who are trying to do their best. I do not mean to find any fault with any individual Senator. We all have our problems. But, by gosh, the point I am making is, we are not going to do it unless we have a fiscal mechanism in the Constitution that requires us to at least make priority choices among competing programs before we spend this country into bankruptcy. That is what this amendment will do. This chart is a beautiful illustration of why statutes do not work. They may work for a short period of time, but sooner or later we are going to spend us just blind again.

In fact, there are those who worry even if we put the balanced budget into the Constitution, there will be some in this body and certainly some in the other who will try to find every excuse they can to get around it.

That is fine. But they are going to have a rough time because a lot of us are going to be here to make sure that there are no ways of getting around it; that we have to face the problems of this country. And right now I have to say we are not facing them. As much as people feel they are, we are not. We are with $200 billion deficits ad infinitum, well into the next century, and we are selling our kids into bankruptcy. It just makes me sick.

Elaine and I have six children and 15 grandchildren—the 15th is on its way, but I count that child as if it has been born. It is only a month or so away—15 grandchildren. The fact of the matter is every one of those kids is going to be saddled with irresponsible debt because we keep fiddling while Rome is burning. Our balanced budget tracker poster sure shows that. We are now up to $15 billion in increased debt just in the 18 days we have been on this amendment—18 days.

We have runaway spending in this country. We have a destructive welfare system that is tearing the fabric of our country apart, our families apart, that encourages immorality and promiscuity and children born out of wedlock to the point where today in this country in some cities there are more children born out of wedlock than there are in. As a matter of fact, in some cities in this country there are more kids aborted than there are kids that are born. And you wonder why we are losing our moral fiber? You wonder why this country has problems?

We have a Tax Code that does not work. Everybody knows it. We all feel picked on. Most people in this country hate the IRS. Those are loyal, dedicated public servants just trying to enforce what is a ridiculous set of incomprehensible, massive laws. We can make it simpler. We could put a lot of the tax lawyers out of business and a lot of the tax accountants out of business and get more revenues in the process because people would feel more like paying them because they would be treated fairly.

However, we will not do it because we do not have a fiscal mechanism in the Constitution that requires us to do it, or at least point us in the right direction.

This Washington bureaucracy has grown every year. I get a kick out of some saying how much they are going to cut it back. It just goes on and on at tremendous cost, to the point where welfare in this country, by the time we get our tax dollars set aside for welfare to the people who need them, you have 28 percent of the dollar left, 28 cents on a dollar because it is eaten up right here in the bureaucracy because we will not do anything about it. We have these people standing around saying we will do it; we have the guts to do it. And invariably they are the very same people who are against this amendment. They do not want to do it.

Oh, I should not be so harsh. There are some who really do want to do it, but they just do not have the capacity to do it, and I think we all know who they are. We have to get Washington put together. We have to restore the American dream and give our kids a chance. We have to give our grandchildren a chance.

If there is any big, bloated, amorphous mass I would like to put on a diet, it would be this Federal budget, and I think we would all be better off. We would have more money with which we would be able to do more things. We could expand businesses, have more jobs, actually have more revenues if we just got incentives restored again.

I said early in the debate that the Federal Government could really stand being anorexic for a while. It would probably do this country good. We could cut the fat, cut the waste, get rid of a lot of things that really do not work, and reform and improve those things that do.

Now, if people do not think I know what I am talking about, when I became chairman of the Labor Committee back in 1981, the youngest committee chairman in the history of a major committee, my ranking member was none other than Ted KENNEDY, the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts, with six other very liberal Senators. So there were seven liberals on the Democrat side. We had seven conservatives on my side, plus two liberal Republicans whose hearts, in many ways, were with the liberal Democrats on the committee.

But we were challenged to cut back on the most liberal committee in the Senate's jurisdiction, the most liberal committee in the Senate. We were challenged to cut back on spending. We went to work. We block granted in part six of the seven block grants. We worked to refine and reform the thousands of programs that they had in that committee. We cut that committee's multibillions of dollars of budgetary jurisdiction by 25 percent in real terms over the 6 years I was chairman, with all of those liberals on the committee. And I have to give Senator KENNEDY and others a lot of credit for helping us to do it. They were willing to work with us. They knew we had the majority and they were fair. But we cut that jurisdiction 25 percent in real terms over those 6 years. And if every other committee in the Congress had done that, we would have had a $150 billion surplus by the end of those 6 years.

So I know what I am talking about. It can be done. And do you know what else? Even though we cut the jurisdiction 25 percent in real terms, because we went to work and reformed the system, reformed those thousands of programs, we actually got more money to more people in better ways than ever before. You cannot tell me we could not do with a good haircut of the Federal Government today in all of these programs.

Almost all of them are well intentioned, almost all of them are well meaning. The fact of the matter is that we are unwilling to do what needs to be done, and the reason we are is not because we are awful people or we are not good people or that it is just Democrats or just Republicans. It is both of us. Frankly, it is because we do not have a fiscal mechanism that encourages us to do it.

Now, this balanced budget amendment is that fiscal mechanism. It is not perfect. I have said it is not. There is nothing that is perfect in the eyes of all 535 Members of Congress. There is no way you can do that. But it is as perfect as we can get—worked on for a decade or more, about 14 years, by Democrats and Republicans. I know; I have been right in the middle of those negotiations every step of the way. And nobody in particular should be able to take complete credit for it or blame for it.

Mr. President, I have to tell you something. It is the hope of millions out there in America, a high percentage of people who may be with the balanced budget amendment and we can get this mess under control.

I just hope with everything I have that we can get those 15 Democrats that we need to vote with us—15 out of 47. That is all we need. Go ahead, 32 of you vote against it, but 15 of you need to pass this balanced budget amendment. That is all; 52 out of 53 Republicans are going to vote for this. That is really something. I think we will get those 15, and we may even get more. I am going to do everything in my power to see that we do so that we have to face the music, so that we have to face reality, so that we have to understand more than ever before it is time to quit selling the future of our children and our grandchildren down the drain. I want them to have at least close to the opportunities that our generation had when we were coming up and not born in poverty. I just want them to have the same chance.

I notice the distinguished Senator from New Mexico is here. I did not mean to take so much time. I will be happy to yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BENNETT). The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I spoke yesterday about my concerns regarding the context in which we find ourselves debating the constitutional amendment to balance the budget this year. I would like to take a few minutes of the Senate's time to elaborate on those concerns and to announce how I will vote when this matter comes to a vote, finally, next week.

Mr. President, during the time I have served here in the Senate, from January 1983 until the present, one of the great shortcomings in our national policy has been our failure to pursue sound fiscal policy. During the 1980's and continuing now into the 1990's the Federal Government, each year, has operated substantially in deficit.

During the last 12 years there have been several serious efforts to deal with that problem and I have supported each of those. The deficit reduction efforts in 1987, 1989, 1990, and 1993 have all had my support. Those were deficit reduction efforts under President Reagan and President Bush, and now under President Clinton.

If another serious deficit reduction effort occurs, as I hope it will during this term of my service in the Senate, I expect to support that as well. I share the goal of most Americans to reach a balanced budget at the earliest possible date.

But the question we have to answer is: Will the passage of this amendment in the context it is presented today advance our prospects for achieving sound and fair fiscal policy, or retard those prospects?

As I stated yesterday, the amendment comes to us in a very politicized environment where many of its proponents clearly see the amendment as a way to advance their political agenda of less taxation for certain taxpayers.

In the much discussed Contract With America the Republican leadership in the House of Representatives promised to pass the balanced budget amendment with a three-fifths supermajority requirement for any tax increase. That supermajority requirement was not in fact included in the amendment sent to the Senate by the House in the form of House Joint Resolution 1. However, those who put the Contract With America together have not abandoned their commitment.

There are troubling indications that the effort still goes forward not only to reach a balanced budget, which we all support, but to reach it in a particular way, and to reach it in a way that shields certain Americans from sharing equitably in that pain.

I discussed at length yesterday the House rule adopted before the balanced budget amendment was sent to the Senate—which requires three-fifths supermajority vote to raise income tax rates and income tax rates alone.

Under the House rule other taxes can still be raised by a simple majority—taxes that impact many of the people I represent most heavily—the working families of my State.

The gas tax, for example, the social security tax, various excise taxes. In order for a bill to become law it must pass in both houses.

This House rule gives the minority in the House a veto over efforts by either house to use the income tax our most progressive tax to raise revenues for deficit reduction.

This rule undermines genuine efforts at deficit reduction. The purpose of this rule is clearly to protect individuals and corporations in the upper tax brackets and to regain any increases in revenue to occur by increases in regressive taxes that affect middle income families most directly.

I proposed yesterday to amend the proposed constitutional amendment to correct this problem—but unfortunately my amendment was defeated.

So with that defeat, we are faced with a proposed constitutional amendment being presented while the House has in place a rule which makes it clear that middle-income families will likely see their taxes raised to balance the budget—but unlike that wealthy individuals and corporations will share in that sacrifice to the same extent.

A second troubling indication that the balanced budget amendment is seen by its proponents as a device to pursue a political agenda to advantage certain groups in our society—is the commitment of the Republican leadership in the House to bring the proposed constitutional provision four three-fifths supermajority requirement for tax increases to the House floor for a vote prior to April 15 of next year.

And in fact yesterday there was a colloquy here on the Senate floor where the Senator from Utah agreed to proceed here in the Senate with hearings on a constitutional amendment imposing that same supermajority requirement for tax increases.

So the context in which we are considering this amendment has changed from what it was in previous Congresses. We now are not just talking about how to balance the budget, we are now talking about writing into the constitution, provisions which will determine whose ox will be gored as we proceed to balance the budget. In this context and with these ground rules in place the people whose ox will be gored are the working people—those who pay the most gas taxes, the social security taxes, and those who pay excise taxes.

What are the consequences that would flow from the balanced budget amendment in this new environment with this new change in the House rules.

I believe we can predict 3 consequences from proceeding with the amendment given percent ground-works.

First, with a three-fifths supermajority requirement in place to raise income taxes it will be much more difficult for us to reach the goal of a balanced budget by 2002. As I stated yesterday, almost all the experts who have looked at the issue seriously agree that a balanced budget will only be reached as other deficit reduction efforts have been achieved, with a combination of spending cuts and revenue increases. And with this provision in place those revenue increases will come from regressive taxes, rather than from the only progressive tax we have, the income tax.

Second, if we do take steps to reach a balanced budget, with that supermajority for income tax increases in place, most of the burden of deficit reduction will fall on working families who can least afford to carry that additional burden.

And the third consequence is that States like my home State of New Mexico with relatively low per capita income will be those most badly hurt.

At this very time our State legislature in Santa Fe is struggling with the question of a gasoline tax. A balanced budget amendment adopted, with the House Rule in effect protecting incomes taxes from change, almost certainly insures that we in Washington will be adding substantially to the gas tax as one of the only available sources of revenue. The same can be said of Social Security taxes and other regressive taxes.

Mr. President, if I represented a wealthy State with many high income taxpayers, I could see an argument for why I should vote for the amendment—in spite of the House rule. But my State is not wealthy and we have very few taxpayers who will be treated fairly under this new set of ground rules.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President when the final vote is called on the balanced budget amendment next week I will vote "no."

I will do so because I believe we should leave the question of how to achieve sound fiscal policy to a vote of a majority here in Congress at any particular time. We should not try, by rule or other provision, to determine how future Congresses choose to reduce the deficit: We should not dictate whether they cut spending or raise taxes. We should not try to predetermine for future Congresses which group of taxpayers will pay the taxes and which group will suffer the spending cuts.

The Framers of the Constitution were wise to limit the use of the supermajority requirement in the Constitution. They chose to leave the Constitution neutral as to how we accomplish sound fiscal policy at any particular time in our history. We are well advised to defer to their good judgment on that subject, to cease our efforts to solve this problem by changing the Constitution, and, instead, to solve it as all previous generations have, by demonstrating the political courage to make unpopular decisions about spending cuts and taxes.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DORGAN addressed the Chair.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator withhold his quorum call request?

Mr. BINGAMAN. I withhold.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I understand the Senate is near the completion of its business today. I will not take a great length of time, I was intending to offer today an amendment but I was intending to offer an amendment today and now obviously I intend to offer an amendment when we reconvene, whenever that might be, on this constitutional amendment to balance the budget.

I spoke the other day on the floor of my concern about the process by which we are selecting a new Director of the Congressional Budget Office. I made it clear when I spoke that it is not my intent to tarnish the image of the person who apparently has been advanced as the one to be selected. I do not know the person. I do not have a judgment about the person's qualifications because I have not met with that person. But I certainly have a judgment about the way this process has worked and I am concerned about it, and sufficiently concerned that I want the Congress to be able to evaluate this appointment in a more considered way.

This is not just the usual appointment. It is not just a run-of-the-mill appointment. The head of the Congressional Budget Office, in effect, becomes the referee on a wide range of budget questions and on a wide range of scoring issues. As all of us know, how a proposal is scored can have an enormous impact on whether or not that proposal meets with favor or disfavor in the U.S. Senate. For example, one might say, "I have a certain budget proposal that recommends certain things." And CBO says, "Well, we would score that in a dynamic way, or a static way." You would reach very different results perhaps. So you develop scoring rules, and how you select the people to perform these duties is very, very important.

I can remember in 1981, the first year I served in the Congress, in which we had some very dynamic scoring by the Office of Management and Budget. David Stockman, a fresh, new face, was selected to head the Office of Management and Budget. They came up with a strategy that said, "Well, if we do the following things, we will produce enormous new revenue, and we will balance the budget by 1984." He subsequently wrote a book after he left the Government that said none of that was realistic and it was a horrible mistake. I have sometimes used quotes from his book because he gave an interesting insight into what the mindset was when they were using these dynamic scoring approaches to come up with these results. It seemed wildly unrealistic at the time anyway. But, nonetheless, dynamic scoring was used to justify a new fiscal policy.

The point is we have been through periods where people have developed new scoring approaches, new devices, that have been unrealistic and have caused this country great problems and left us with significant debt and deficits. Especially given this constitutional amendment to balance the budget and the vigorous battles that will occur, I am sure, over budget resolutions that come before the Senate, our referee, the Congressional Budget Office, must be led by someone who commands universal respect, someone whose methods do not lead to questions about judgment.

Again, I do not know the circumstances of the person who has apparently been tapped to be the new Director of the CBO. So I do not know whether that person meets this test. But I do know this: We have had people who have led the Congressional Budget Office—Alice Rivlin, Rudy Penner, Bob Reischauer—all of whom, Members of the Senate would almost universally say, are people at the top of their field whose impartiality allows them to call them as they see them. These previous Directors have, I think, received nearly universal respect and support.

The selection of these three Directors was generally a process in which the two parties together make a judgment. In fact, I am told—I will not recite the chapter and verse on this, I will do that later—that previously the minority had difficulty with several candidates, and really, said, "Well, this is not acceptable to us." And that just meant that candidate did not go forward. That was the way it was because there was a need to develop a consensus on a candidate.

I am told that this process on this candidate resulted in an announcement in the House of Representatives, of who the appointee would be, prior to the ranking minority member in the House Budget Committee ever meeting the person. That is not a process, it seems to me, that is consultative. That is not a process in which both sides have come together to jointly figure out who has the stature and the ability and the authority to do this job.

So I am concerned about the process. I do not think this is the right process.

I really think with the Director of the Congressional Budget Office, there ought to be a resolution of approval by both the House and the Senate. I know that is not the current circumstance. But I intend to offer an amendment that would require that. I hope very much that at this juncture the majority would not appoint a Director at this point until I have had an opportunity to offer the resolution. I probably will offer it and discuss it on this amendment, although it would be better to offer it to the very next bill that comes to the floor of the Senate after the balanced budget amendment.

But I, as others, am concerned and want to speak on it. I want to make a case about the process. My case is not a case that says this person is the wrong person. I do not know. But I know that whoever heads CBO is going to have an impact on my legislative life and an impact on the legislative life of everyone in this body and in the House. And I would like very much for the selection of the new head of the CBO to be a selection that represents a consensus between the majority and the minority; a consensus on two points:

First, that this person is someone of great quality, who is at the top of the field and has the credentials to command respect;

And, second, that this person is someone who will provide an impartial analysis of the type that we have been used to.

I must admit that I, like probably the Senator in the chair, have from time to time had to hold my brow as I received something from CBO. I have said, "Lord, I do not agree with that. That is not the answer I was looking for." But I respect Mr. Reischauer. I respect Mr. Penner. I respect Alice Rivlin. I do not know the current candidate. And I am not making judgments here. But I am making judgments about the process. This process is wrong. It is a flawed process when we have circumstances where the appointment is announced prior to the minority ranking member even being able to discuss particulars with the candidate.

I am not going to talk about the process on the Senate side. But I do know that the minority on the Senate side of the Budget Committee sent a letter saying we think we should look further for other candidates. So they obviously were making some kind of a judgment. I think that we ought not proceed until we have responded to this as a body. I hope very much that prior to my offering the amendment when we return, that the majority will not proceed to make this appointment.

Again, let me emphasize for the third time as I take the floor that I do not intend to make a judgment about this candidate at this point. I may at some point. But I do not know enough to make a judgment. I know what I have read in the papers. I have been in politics long enough to understand that that is not enough. I want to understand the facts. I want to understand the circumstances and the quality of this candidate. But I also want to understand that when we finish this process the selection of this very important person will be a selection by consensus among the majority and minority of the House and the Senate. I do not think that is the case today.

So, I had intended to offer this amendment today and because other amendments took most of the day, this will be put over until next week, or whenever we return—I guess the first legislative day when we return. But I wanted to take the floor at this moment to alert my colleagues that I intend to do this, and to urge the majority not to proceed until we have had a chance to express ourselves on this issue.

Mr. President, I appreciate the Senate's indulgence.

I yield the floor.

Mrs. HUTCHISON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I would like to talk as we end this third week of debate on the balanced budget amendment about the importance of this vote and what it really means to America.

I have listened for the last 3 weeks to the debate, and I want to say that I think we are in a filibuster. I think there can be no doubt of it. Our leader has been patient. Senator DOLE wanted everyone to have an opportunity to have his or her say to talk about the issue, because it is a major issue. It is probably the most important vote I will ever make in my career.

I think the leader has given ample time for every person to talk about views, to differ on views, and to put in amendments. I think Senator HATCH and Senator CRAIG, who are the distinguished managers of this joint resolution, have been very patient. But this is a filibuster, and there is a fundamental difference about whether we should move forward with the mandate that we have to change the things we have been doing in Washington, or whether we are in fact doing what we have been doing year after year after year in this Congress—that is, spending beyond our means. That is what has been happening.

We are at the end of the third week of debate. All of us who support the balanced budget amendment thought we would be finished, thought we would leave town for a 3-day recess knowing that we had done the most important thing we could do for the future of our children and grandchildren. But we are not there yet. We are not there because there is a fundamental difference and because many who disagree with the balanced budget amendment have decided to delay it through filibuster.

I support the right of everyone to delay. That is part of the Senate rules. But I think it is time to call it what it is. I think it is time that people realize this is a delaying tactic, that we are no longer into substantive differences—and reasonable people can differ—we are into trying to delay what clearly the majority of this body wants to do, and that is to say that we are going to amend this Constitution and say to future generations: You are not going to have to pay our bills.

Every baby that is born into this country has an $18,000 debt to pay. That is what we have racked up with our over $4 trillion of debt. Some people say, "Let us do it by statutes. We can pass laws, we can act responsibly." And, of course, we point out that over the last 30-plus years we, in fact, have not been able to do that. So if you put the practical experience in the mix, it is clear that we are not going to do it by statute.

But let us talk about what is the role of the Constitution of our country. The Constitution of our country should not be something that we can do by statute. It should be the framework of our Government. It should be what we think the parameters of our Government should be, not for the 104th Congress, but for all the Congresses in the future—something that is so well settled in our policies that it should not be subject to change. That is what we are debating, whether we will amend our Constitution with a fundamental policy decision that should not be changed by future generations.

Mr. President, that is what a balanced budget amendment is, and it does meet the test. It should be a fundamental policy of this country that we will not spend money we do not have, unless we are in a crisis, in a war, and that is the exception—the one exception—that all of us would agree to. Other than that, we are not going to spend money we do not have for programs that we would like, for programs that are good programs, but programs we do not have the money to pay for.

It comes down to the fundamentals that every State, every city, every business, and every household in America understands, and that is: I would like to take my family to dinner tonight, but maybe I do not have the money to do it and I have to make that decision based on whether I have the discretionary money to do it. I would like to send my child to college. Do I have the funds to do it? I would like to have many things that, perhaps, I cannot afford and therefore I do not acquire. That is a fundamental decision that every American makes every day. The only American institution that really does not is the United States Government. That is a fundamental policy that we must put in place that should not change with the wind or the times—that is, that my priorities are more important than the priorities of future Congresses.

I think it is very important, as we leave today for this recess, that the people of America understand that this is a filibuster. The people who are doing it have the perfect right to do it, but they are delaying this vote; they are delaying what I think the people of America want, what they have said repeatedly they want, and that is for us to start the very tough process of balancing our budget over the next 7 years, so that by the year 2002, if we start right now, we will be able to then begin the adventure of being able to pay back the $4 trillion debt, so that we will not be in that continuing deficit position.

In fact, I think that if we do not act on this in the next week when we get back, it is not that it will pass in time and we will not pass it ever again. I disagree with people that say this is our only chance. I think if we do not pass it this time, we will have a bigger mandate in 1996 and we will pass it. The difference will be, Mr. President, that we will have two more years of accumulating debt, and we have seen the charts for the last week showing every day that we have been debating and talking and talking in the Senate debating society, the debt has gone up because we have not begun to turn that ship on a different course.

So if we do not do it this year, we will do it 2 years from now, 3 years from now, because we will have the mandate. But we will have missed 2 years of opportunity to begin this process of responsibility for our future generations. That is what we will miss if we fail to do so.

So as we leave these hallowed halls, I hope all of us will think carefully about the monumental decision that we will make next week to stop this filibuster, to stop the delays, to stop the nuance differences and say that we are going to take this first step of amending the greatest Constitution that has ever been written in any society in all of civilization; that we are going to amend it with a fundamental policy decision of responsible spending, to protect our future generations from our decisions, which may not be theirs.

So it is a great opportunity for us, and I hope all of us will go home and come back next week ready to make the decision that is ours to make, to change the course of this country and begin the process of responsible governing.

Thank you, Mr. President.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

OIL RELIANCE THREATENS NATIONAL SECURITY

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, and my colleagues, I would think that if any government is presented with evidence that their country is under a national security threat that they would institute immediately a full-scale investigation to determine what the threat is and what action is needed to prevent that threat from becoming an all-out emergency, or a conflict that we could not ultimately solve. That is the purpose of government. Ultimately to protect the security of the citizens of our country.

Therefore, when I read a release that I received today from the U.S. Department of Commerce which clearly states that they have made a finding that growing U.S. reliance on oil imports threatens the national security of the United States by making it vulnerable to interruptions in foreign oil supplies, I would immediately gather all of my advisers around me and say, "All right, what are we going to do about this?"

I am deeply disturbed that as I read the release and talk to people who know about this problem and find that, essentially, nothing is being done. I think we as a nation are making a terrible mistake.

Let me try and point out what I think the problem is in a very clear fashion. If we in this Nation were suddenly told that we are now importing 50 percent of all of the food that we consume in this country, and much of it from nations that are very undependable as far as being allies of the United States, I would predict that the next day there would be lines of people surrounding the White House and surrounding this Capitol saying, "My goodness, this is a terrible threat that we are now having to import half of the food that we consume from countries that are not dependable as allies of the United States."

Yet this is exactly what is happening when it comes to energy security. I will tell Members how this came about, Mr. President. That is, that the Department of Commerce, under existing rules and regulations, were responding to a petition that was filed by the Independent Petroleum Association of America that was filed on March 11, 1994, alleging that "Increasing U.S. dependence on foreign oil threatened the national security of the United States."

They pointed out in their request that imports of crude oil products were estimated through 1994 to average 8.8 million barrels of foreign oil coming into the United States every day. This represents a 200,000-barrel-a-day increase compared to 8.6 million barrels a day in 1993.

The estimated import ratio has now, for the first time ever, broken the "peril point level" of 50 percent of foreign imports coming into this country.

There is no dispute about that fact. The IPAA presented information. No one objected to that. The Commerce Department finds, after looking at all this information, clearly that U.S. reliance on oil imports now threatens national security by making us vulnerable to interruptions in foreign oil supplies.

The Commerce Department recommended, however, that the President not use his authority that he has under section 232 of the Trade Expansion Act of 1962 to adjust these foreign oil imports through the imposition of tariffs, because the economic costs of such a move outweigh the potential benefits and because current administration energy policies will limit the growth of imports.

Mr. President, I disagree with that, and I disagree with it strongly. I think current administration energy policies in this administration, in the last administration and in the administration before that, in Republican administrations and in Democratic administrations, have clearly allowed us to get to the point where today we are importing half of the oil that we use in this country.

I guess it has been an easy thing for administrations to do because we have been getting cheap oil, but does anybody remember what happened in the early 1970's when we had lines of Americans sitting in their cars waiting to buy the precious gas that was left at the stations to run their cars and run this country? Because at that time, the Middle Eastern oil suppliers turned the faucets off just a little bit and literally brought this country to our knees, because at that time, we were importing about 30 percent of the oil we use.

Today, we are importing 50 percent, and just turning that faucet a little bit in 1995 will bring this country to our knees in a much more serious fashion than we were brought to our knees in 1973.

Unfortunately, it seems that all the administrations since then did not learn the lesson, and the lesson is very simple: That we should never be dependent on something that is important to our national security; we should never be dependent on other nations to supply it, particularly nations that are not necessarily our friends nor our allies, that we cannot trust to be reliable when we have a need for a product that they have, whether it be food, as I mentioned earlier, or whether it be energy to run our plants, our factories, to heat our homes, to cool our homes in the summer, to run our cars, to run our trucks, to keep up with the commerce demands of a great Nation.

Yet today, for all of those needs, we are now dependent on foreign nations for over half of those energy needs. And the thing that bothers me the most is that after recognizing that there is a national security threat—and these are not my words, these are the words of the Commerce Department when they made the findings—that the situation today presents a national security threat to the United States but we are not going to do anything in terms of setting a tariff to try and reduce the amount of imports coming in in order to encourage greater domestic exploration and production right here in this country.

I think that that is something that is not acceptable, because there are some things that we can do. I do not suggest that maybe oil import tariffs are the only answer. I have advocated them for a number of years. But there are a lot of other things that they could have said we are going to recommend that needs to be done, other than just saying we are going to rely on current policy. Because, folks, it is clear that current policy has us in the predicament we are in. Current policy has allowed us to have imports increase up to the point where they now constitute 50 percent of all the energy we have in this country.

Imports increased this year from last year by 200,000 barrels a day more than the year before. That is under current policy. And to say that we are going to continue to stay with current policy, there is no trend line to suggest that is going to solve the problem. The trend line is that imports will continue to increase under current policy.

So I suggest to my friends in this administration that they take the Commerce Department's findings that there is a national security threat to make some recommendations on new things that should be done in order to prevent a national catastrophe from falling on this country.

I suggest that there are a number of things that I would have hoped that the administration would have been able to say we are recommending instead of maintaining the status quo.

First, they could have recommended that the administration will actively support what the industry calls geological and geophysical expensing, which simply says that oil and gas operators in this country would be able to expense the cost of exploring and producing a well, whether that well is a dry well, a dry hole, which they can do now, or whether it is a producing well. That would encourage a substantial increase in domestic production in this country to reduce that 50 percent number to what would be a more acceptable number.

I look over the recommendations and that is not there.

They could have, second, suggested that we move toward and support OPRA 90 reform. OPRA is the Oil Pollution Act that this Congress passed in 1990, but the way it is being implemented is not the way this Congress intended it to be implemented, and legislation is necessary to clarify what we meant. Here is the simple problem:

Congress never intended when we passed that Oil Pollution Control Act that onshore facilities would have to carry insurance of $150 million per well. We were talking about major offshore activity that had the potential to pollute if a catastrophic event occurred. We never intended that any facility onshore that may be very, very small, with only very limited potential to cause any pollution, would also have to have $150 million of liability insurance. But that is how our folks in the bureaucracy have interpreted it.

An amendment, a legislative fix for this problem would allow independent operators who produce oil onshore to do it in a fashion that they could afford. We are going to run independents out of business if we do not do something legislatively to fix this problem. That would have been the second thing that could have been recommended and should have been recommended.

The third is to have recommended some type of broad-based royalty reform to encourage exploration and production in difficult areas where it is more expensive to find oil, where many times a day it costs more to explore than it would pay them if they found a producing well, because the price of oil per barrel, partly because of cheap foreign imports, is less than it costs to find that oil. Broad-based royalty relief would have made a major impact on helping to increase domestic production. But there is no recommendation for that type of activity.

The fourth is to do something about the Alaska export ban on oil that is produced in Alaska. When Congress passed that law saying that oil that is found in Alaska could never be exported outside the United States, it probably made sense at that time. But it does not make sense today.

If oil from Alaska can be sold in other areas at a higher price, it would give companies greater amounts of money to explore for and find additional fields domestically in North America—in Alaska, in the gulf coast area—which would increase the domestic production and thereby lower that 50 percent import figure that we have.

Mr. President, not one of those proposals, not one of those initiatives is found in the Commerce Department's finding and recommendation as to what should be done.

I will just close by saying that it is insufficient, in my opinion, for a department of our Government to make a finding that there is a national security threat to this Nation, which they have made, and then to say we are not going to recommend anything new to address that threat. That is an abdication of responsibility. It is unacceptable. This Member, and I know other Members, will take their finding and offer constructive suggestions to, in fact, address what is now clearly established as a national security threat to the United States of America.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

BALANCED BUDGET AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

The Senate continued with the consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I will be very brief so that colleagues will know that we can end the day, especially the desk staff will know that they can get home to their loved ones.

I did want to bring to the attention of my colleagues that yesterday in the Budget Committee, when Secretary Christopher was there, inadvertently a Republican staff document was attached to part of his testimony and was handed out. I might say that it is a very interesting document. The document that has been prepared by the majority on the Budget Committee shows function 150, International Affairs. It is headlined, "Fiscal Year 1996 Balanced Budget Resolution." Down in the corner it says, "For Internal Purposes Only." But it was handed out inadvertently.

What I think is interesting about this document is it suggests that the majority has a plan to move towards a balanced budget, and I commend them for that. I hope they do have a plan. But I would say to my colleagues that if they have a plan, then we should revisit the question of the right to know provision that we sought to add to the balanced budget amendment.

We sought to add a provision that called on the Republican majority to produce their plan on how they intended to balance the budget so that the States could be advised of that before they had to vote to ratify it, and so that our colleagues who are about to vote on a balanced budget amendment could know what was the outline of the plan.

The Republican majority resisted that right-to-know effort by saying they could not say what a long-term plan was because there were so many things, it would be hard to determine and hard to project and hard to forecast. And yet we find in this document, which was released inadvertently, that at least with respect to one function of the budget they do have a detailed plan, very specific as to what they have in mind; terminating a set of programs, reducing other programs in order to reduce the 150 function, which, of course, is the international affairs function.

This suggests at the very least that other functions for other areas have a plan, something that is in the works, something that is available, that could provide some guidance as to where the majority is going with respect to a plan to balance the budget over the next 7 years.

I would just say to my colleagues that if in fact there are plans for other functional areas, as there clearly is for the international affairs section, we ought to have a chance to see it. We ought to have a chance before we vote on a balanced budget amendment. The American people ought to have a chance to see what the plan is.

What does the Republican majority have in mind for how they intend to balance this budget? I think that would certainly influence some votes in this debate.

Let me just say that I am one Member who is undecided on the question of how I will vote on a balanced budget amendment. I am not being coy. I am seriously undecided at this point. I want to see what is the final provision on which we will vote.

Let me just add that I am absolutely convinced we must balance the budget in the next 7 years. It is absolutely imperative that we do so. Whether we have a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution or not, this Senator believes we have to balance the budget because we have a window of opportunity here before the baby boomers retire, at which time Government spending will skyrocket. And that will put enormous pressure on the economy of this country.

So we have a chance here in the next 7 years to get our fiscal house in order. That must be done. But I have reservations about the elements of this constitutional amendment in terms of the provision that would provide for looting the Social Security trust fund in order to balance the operating budget, the involvement of courts. The last thing I wish to see happening is the Supreme Court of the United States writing the budget of the United States. No judge was ever elected to do that.

I am also concerned about the lack of a capital budget. The vast majority of States that have a balanced budget requirement provide for a capital budget. You can pay for big investments over a period of time. That is what State governments do. That is what we do in our own personal lives. I know very few people who buy a house for cash. Most people take out a mortgage.

So those are, I think, legitimate concerns. But beyond that, I think we also have the question of how we do it. How do we balance the budget? And if our Republican colleagues, in fact, have a plan, one that they have not released and not revealed—and I think the fact that they clearly have one with respect to one function of the budget suggests they probably have it for other functions of the budget—that is something that could form the basis for an important discussion and debate about how we accomplish a balanced budget.

Let me just conclude by saying I would very much like to see us structure a means to require both sides to put down a plan to balance this budget simultaneously.

What is going on is we have a bit of Alphonse and Gaston, the chicken and the egg; nobody wants to go first. And I am working on legislation now that would require us, if the balanced budget amendment fails, to have the budget committees of both Houses and the President put down a plan to balance the budget over the next 7 years and to lay it down by May 1—have both sides be required to come to the table and lay down their plans to balance the budget. It is clear to me now the Republican majority is working on such a plan. Perhaps they have one completed, at least in preliminary outline. I think it would be very important for that to be shared with our colleagues and with the rest of the country as we consider this very important matter of a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

SENATOR J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I was sworn in as a Member of this body on January 7, as I recall, 1959, the 1,579th Member to have been elected or appointed to the Senate since its beginning on March 4, 1789. As of today, 1,826 men and women have borne the title of United States Senator. When I came to the Senate, some of the other Members were Clinton P. Anderson of New Mexico, Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, Paul Douglas of Illinois, Allen Ellender of Louisiana, Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, Lyndon Johnson of Texas, Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, Richard Russell of Georgia, Lister Hill of Alabama, George Aiken of Vermont, Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois, Carl Hayden of Arizona, Wayne Morse of Oregon, Harry Flood Byrd, Sr. of Virginia, Spessard Holland of Florida, Henry Jackson of Washington, John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, William Langer of North Dakota, Robert Kerr of Oklahoma, and others, including J. William Fulbright of Arkansas.

All of these men have now passed from this earthly stage and gone on to their eternal reward. The last of these whom I have mentioned, Bill Fulbright, died last week.

J. William Fulbright was born in Sumner, MO, on April 9, 1905, and moved with his parents to Fayetteville, AR, the following year. He attended the public schools in Arkansas and graduated from the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville in 1925; as a Rhodes Scholar from Oxford University, England, in 1928, and from the Law Department of George Washington University, here in Washington, DC, in 1934. He was admitted to the District of Columbia Bar in 1934, and served as an attorney in the U.S. Department of Justice, Antitrust Division, in 1934-1935. He was an instructor in law at the George Washington University in 1935, and he was a lecturer in law at the University of Arkansas during the years 1936-1939. He served as President of the University of Arkansas from 1939 to 1941. He was engaged in the newspaper business, in the lumber business, in banking, and in farming, and was elected as a Democrat to the 78th Congress, where he served from January 3, 1943, to January 3, 1945. He was not a candidate for renomination to the House, but was elected to the United States Senate in 1944, and re-elected in 1950, 1956, 1962, and in 1968, where he served until his resignation on December 31, 1974. He was an unsuccessful candidate for renomination in 1974. He served on the Committee on Banking and Currency in the Senate and on the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Bill Fulbright was an outstanding Senator. He served with many other outstanding Senators, some of whom I have named as having ended their sojourn in this early life, and there were other extraordinary men such as John Pastore of Rhode Island, Mike Mansfield of Montana, and Russell Long of Louisiana, all of whom are still among the living. But I have taken the floor today to say that one by one, the old landmarks of our political life have passed away. One by one, the links which connect the glorious past with the present have been sundered.

“Passing away!

’Tis told by the leaf which chill autumn breeze,

Tears ruthlessly its hold from wind-shaken trees;

’Tis told by the dewdrop which sparkles at morn,

And when the noon cometh

’Tis gone, ever gone.”

It was my pleasure to serve with Senator Fulbright. I always held him in the highest esteem. He was a gentleman with great courage and unwavering patriotism, a wise and courageous statesman, affable in his temperament, and regarded as one of the outstanding lawyers in the Senate and one of the best informed upon questions regarding international affairs. He was both morally and intellectually honest, simple in his habits, and devoid of all hypocrisy and deceit. He never resorted to the tricks of a demagog to gain favor and, although he was a partisan Democrat, he divested himself of partisanship when it came to serving the best interests of his country. Peace to his ashes!

The potentates on whom men gaze

When once their rule has reached its goal,

Die into darkness with their days.

But monarchs of the mind and soul,

With light unflinching, and unspent,

Illumine flame’s firmament.

Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, Cicero, and other great Grecian and Roman philosophers, by pure reason and logic arrived at the conclusion that there is a creating, directing, and controlling divine power, and to a belief in the immortality of the human soul. Throughout the ages, all races and all peoples have instinctively so believed. It is the basis of all religions, be they heathen, Mohammedan, Hebrew, or Christian. It is believed by savage tribes and by semi-civilized and civilized nations, by those who believe in many gods and by those who believe in one God. Agnostics and atheists are, and always have been, few in number. Does the spirit of man live after it has separated from the flesh? This is an age-old question. We are told in the Bible that when God created man from the dust of the ground, “He breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul.”

When the serpent tempted Eve, and induced her to eat of the forbidden fruit of the tree of knowledge, he said to her, “ye shall not surely die.”

Job asked the question, “If a man die, shall he live again?” Job later answered the question by saying, “Oh, that my words were written and engraved with an iron pen upon a ledge of rock forever, for I know that my redeemer liveth and someday He shall stand upon the Earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins”—meaning my heart, my kidneys, my bodily organs—“be consumed within me.”

Scientists cannot create matter or life. They can mould and develop both, but they cannot call them into being. They are compelled to admit the truth uttered by the English poet Samuel Roberts, when he said:

“That very power that molds a tear

And bids it trickle from its source,

That power maintains the earth a sphere

And guides the planets in their course.”

That power is one of the laws—one of the immutable laws, the eternal laws—of God, put into force at the creation of the universe. From the beginning of recorded time to the present day, most scientists have believed in a divine creator. I have often asked physicians, “Doctor, with your knowledge of the marvelous intricacies of the human body and mind, do you believe that there is a God?” Not one physician has ever answered, “No.” Each has answered, readily and without hesitation, “Yes.” Some may have doubted some of the tenets of the theology of orthodoxy, but they do not deny the existence of a creator. Science is the handmaiden of true religion, and confirms our belief in the Creator and in immortality.

“Whoever plants a seed beneath the sod

And waits to see it break away the clod

Believes in God.”

Mr. President, as Longfellow said, “It is not all of life to live, nor all of death to die.” Rather, as Longfellow says:

“There is no death! What seems so is transition;

This life of mortal breath

Is but a suburb of the life Elysian,

Whose portal we call death.”

Mr. President, life is only a narrow isthmus between the boundless oceans of two eternities. All of us who travel that narrow isthmus today, must one day board our little frail barque and hoist its white sails for the journey on that vast unknown sea where we shall sail alone into the boundless ocean of eternity, there to meet our Creator face to face in a land where the rose never withers and the rainbow never fades. To that bourne, from which no traveller ever returns, J. William Fulbright has now gone to be reunited with others who once trod these marble halls, and whose voices once rang in this Chamber—voices in this earthly life that have now been forever stilled. Peace be to his ashes!

I recall the words of Thomas Moore:

“Oft, in the stilly night,
Ere slumber’s chain has bound me,
Fond Memory brings the light
Of other days around me:
The smiles, the tears
Of boyhood’s years,
The words of love then spoken;
The eyes that shone,
Now dimm’d and gone,
The cheerful hearts now broken!
Thus, in the stilly night,
Ere slumber’s chain has bound me,
Sad Memory brings the light
Of other days around me.
When I remember all
The friends, so link’d together,
I’ve seen around me fall
Like leaves in wintry weather,
I feel like one
Who treads alone
Some banquet-hall deserted,
Whose lights are fled,
Whose garlands dead,
And all but he departed!
Thus, in the stilly night,
Ere slumber’s chain has bound me,
Sad Memory brings the light
Of other days around me.”

INCREASED DEPENDENCE ON IMPORTED OIL

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Madam President, I just have been advised of the release by the White House of the Department of Commerce’s findings concerning the question of our increased dependence on imported oil. Today in that report, our President reported to the Congress that, indeed, our growing dependence on imported oil is a threat to our national security. However, it is rather disturbing to note that the President failed to propose any new action, direct or indirect, to alleviate this threat. It is the opinion of this Senator from Alaska that such action is unprecedented and wholly unacceptable.

I ask unanimous consent that the press release be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the White House, Office of the Press Secretary, Feb. 16, 1995]

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

I am today concurring with the Department of Commerce’s finding that the nation’s growing reliance on imports of crude oil and refined petroleum products threaten the nation’s security because they increase U.S. vulnerability to oil supply interruptions. I also concur with the Department’s recommendation that the Administration continue its present efforts to improve U.S. energy security, rather than to adopt a specific import adjustment mechanism.

This action responds to a petition under Section 232 of the Trade Expansion Act of 1962, which was filed by the Independent Petroleum Association of America and others on March 11, 1994. The Act gives the President the authority to adjust imports if they are determined to pose a threat to national security. The petitioners sought such action, claiming that U.S. dependence on oil imports had grown since the Commerce Department last studied the issue in response to a similar, 1988 petition.

In conducting its study, the Department led an interagency working group that included the Departments of Energy, Interior, Defense, Labor, State, and Treasury, the Office of Management and Budget, the Council of Economic Advisers, and the U.S. Trade Representative. The Commerce Department also held public hearings and invited public comment. Following White House receipt of the Commerce Department’s report, the National Economic Council coordinated additional interagency review.

As in the case of its earlier study, the Commerce Department found that the potential costs to the national security of an oil import adjustment, such as an import tariff, outweigh the potential benefits. Instead, the Department recommended that the Administration continue its current policies, which are aimed at increasing the nation’s energy security through a series of energy supply enhancement and conservation and efficiency measures designed to limit the nation’s dependence on imports. Those measures include:

- Increased investment in energy efficiency.
- Increased investment in alternative fuels.
- Increased government investment in technology, to lower costs and improve production of gas and oil and other energy sources.
- Expanded utilization of natural gas.
- Increased government investment in renewable energy sources.
- Increased government regulatory efficiency.
- Increased emphasis on free trade and U.S. exports.

Maintenance of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve.

Coordination of emergency cooperation measures.

Finally, led by the Department of Energy and the National Economic Council, the Administration will continue its efforts to develop additional cost-effective policies to enhance domestic energy production and to revitalize the U.S. petroleum industry.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Madam President, if we look at the specifics of the recommendation, as indicated in the press release, the specific highlights include increased investment in energy efficiency, certainly a worthy and laudable goal; increased investment in alternative fuels, likewise; increased Government investment in technology to lower costs and improve production of gas and oil and other energy resources; expanded utilization of natural gas; increased Government investment in renewable energy sources; increased Government regulatory efficiency; increased emphasis on free trade and U.S. exports; maintenance of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve which, obviously, is there for emergencies; and coordination for emergency cooperation measures.

Notable by its absence is any mention of efforts to stimulate domestic drilling and production in the United States. I find that extraordinary. I wonder just who is advising the President. I cannot believe that the President himself does not support domestic exploration, development, the creation of jobs. One of the bases of America’s industrial might has been our ability to produce energy sources, specifically oil and gas. But there is no mention of exploration for oil. There is no mention of stimulating exploration in the Gulf of Mexico where a good portion of our current resources are coming from.

As we go deeper out in the gulf and invest in new technology, it requires greater engineering, greater risk, but, obviously, the industry is willing to make those commitments and that investment. This is what we call deep-water drilling. It requires substantial capital and substantial incentives.

Furthermore, we have frontier areas where onshore there are no pipelines, no infrastructure, and to encourage the industry to go in those areas and explore, again, may require some concessions, some type of moratorium relative to the application of taxation.

None of these are mentioned, and I find that rather curious. We have the overthrust belt; no mention of opening up areas for oil and gas exploration.

It is rather curious, and I guess it is appropriate, that I be a little sensitive on this because my State of Alaska has been supplying this country with about 24 percent of the total crude oil that is produced in the United States for the last 16 to 17 years. That area where most of that oil comes from is called Prudhoe Bay. It is a huge investment by three major international companies—Exxon, BP and ARCO. They operate the fields. They produce about 1.6 million barrels of oil per day. That is down from approximately 2 million barrels a few years ago. The field is declining. But the significance is, as it declines we are increasing our imports.

Where do our oil imports come from? Why, it comes from the Mideast. It comes to our shores in foreign flag ships, manned by foreign crews. Many of the corporations that operate those ships are relatively alike in their corporate structure. Some suggest they are even shell corporations.

It is interesting to look at our trade deficit, Madam President, of about $167 billion. A good portion of that is Japan, a portion of it is China, but almost half is the price of imported oil. So we are exporting our dollars, exporting our jobs and becoming more and more dependent on other parts of the world.

I find this trend relatively unnerving; that we should have to depend to such an extent on imported petroleum products and then recognize that it is called to our attention by this special study done by the Department of Commerce that we have been waiting for an extended period of time to identify that, indeed, our national security interests are at stake.

I look at my State of Alaska with the potential to supply more oil as Prudhoe Bay declines, and it is rather ironic, Madam President, that on this floor today was a bill to take the most promising area in North America, namely ANWR, and put it in a permanent wilderness.

We have always had a difficult time trying to keep Alaska in perspective relative to its size and the type of development and the control that our State as well as the Federal agencies have in developing the resources from the North Slope and the Arctic. And as we reflect on that, the technology that developed Prudhoe Bay is now 20 to 25 years old, but some new technology came along about 10 years ago and resulted in the development of a field called Endicott. Endicott was an expansion of Prudhoe Bay in one sense, but the technology was entirely new. It came on as a production facility, the tenth largest producing field in the United States at about 107,000 barrels a day. Today it is the seventh largest at about 120,000 barrels a day. But that technology, Madam President, resulted in a footprint of 56 acres. That is a pretty small area. That is the size of the footprint. But the contribution to our energy security, our jobs, was significant.

The last area that has been identified by geologists as potentially carrying the capability of a major discovery is ANWR, but what are the parameters of ANWR?

First of all, there are about 19 million acres in the area. Over 17 million acres are basically set aside in wilderness in perpetuity. That is a pretty good-sized chunk of real estate. We are looking at an area the size of Oregon and Washington put together. Industry tells us that if they can find the oil necessary to develop the field—and they have to find a lot of oil because you do not develop small fields in the Arctic—the footprint would be about 12,500 acres. To put that in perspective, that is about the size of the Dulles International Airport complex in Virginia, assuming the rest of Virginia were a wilderness.

The arguments against opening ANWR are the same arguments that prevailed nearly 20 years ago when we talked about opening Prudhoe Bay: What is going to happen to the caribou? What is going to happen to the moose? What is going to happen to the wildlife?

Well, we have had some 17 or 18 years to observe the process. The caribou herds in Prudhoe Bay were 4,000 to 5,000; now they are 17,000 to 18,000. The growth of those herds is as a consequence of the realization that those areas are absolutely off limits to subsistence hunting of any kind. The Eskimo people in the region do not hunt in those areas, and caribou is a very adaptable animal. If chased down by a snow machine or hunter, obviously it runs away. The common sight of modest activity associated with exploration and development has absolutely no effect. A person can go up there today and observe this process.

So as we reflect on what some of the alternatives are, I wonder if we are really not selling America short. As I said before, they are the same arguments of 17 years ago we are hearing today, that somehow this is the Serengeti of the Arctic—12,500 acres out of 19 million acres is what we are talking about—somehow the native people of the area will be affected. But I can tell you, Madam President, the native people of the area have been given an opportunity that they never had before, and many of them have chosen the opportunity to have gainful employment, have a tax base, have first-class schools. Schools in Barrow, AK, are the finest schools in the United States bar none. In areas where we have intense climates, we have indoor play areas. As a consequence of the contribution of oil and the fact that the native people have been able to tax the oil, have been able to tax the pipeline, they have been able to have an alternative to a subsistence lifestyle which jobs offer but never would have been prevalent in the area.

I think we are shortchanging America's ingenuity to suggest we cannot open it safely. There is absolutely no scientific evidence to suggest that we cannot open it safely. The technology is advanced. The footprint is smaller. The environmental concerns, the restoration, are all set in place by the State and the Federal Government. So the risk is diminished dramatically. So why the hesitation?

Well, to some degree, Madam President, it is associated with a cause, and that cause is that Alaska is far away. ANWR has been identified by many of the national environmental groups as an issue where they can challenge; people cannot go up there and see for themselves. It generates revenue. It generates a cause. And as a consequence, they would suggest to you that this area cannot be opened up safely. They do not address the opportunities for employment, the opportunities for new engineering technology and expertise but, rather, that Americans cannot meet a challenge. I find this very, very distressing, but it is something that perhaps Alaskans and others who come from energy States have become uncomfortably accustomed to.

Now, where do we go from here, Madam President? Well, I happen to be chairman of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, and we are going to hold a number of hearings on this matter as we look at our growing dependence on imported oil and the effect that it has on our national security and look to alternatives.

But, Madam President, we are not going to look to the alternatives suggested by the White House, which are nothing but words.

I can remember coming into this body in 1981 when we were running in the high 30's, low 40's percentile dependence on imported oil. There was concern then. There was an expression if it ever got to the area where it would be approaching 50 percent we would have to do something drastic, we would have to stimulate our industry somehow with incentives. But we went on and on and became more dependent and now 51 percent of our total consumption is imported oil. And now we are told that our national security is at stake.

Out of these hearings I hope we get the experts—not the wordsmiths from the White House who are simply selling America short, relative to its capability to produce additional discoveries of oil and gas within the United States. It is truly distressing to read this report. We knew it was coming. We suspected what it said. And each time we made an inquiry we were advised that the report was still under review because the administration chose, for obvious reasons, to put it off as long as they could. I find it rather coincidental that it comes in at a time when we are almost out for the Presidents' Day extended weekend.

But I think it is time for this body and the other House to reflect on the reality associated with a segment of America's traditional industrial might that the administration proposes to remove from the passing scene and become more dependent on imports and export more dollars and more jobs offshore.

This is not unique to the oil industry. To some extent it follows with the administration's attitude towards domestic mining. But I will save that analysis for another day.

I am pleased the Independent Petroleum Association of America has pursued this matter. I think their President, Mr. Dennis Bode, has made a very commendable and meaningful contribution to bring this report before us. I hope the Energy Coalition, that is made up of both Members of the House and Senate, will reflect upon this report in the very near future. I know they will.

It is interesting to look at the attitude of other nations as they observe our increasing dependence on imports. My many friends in Japan cannot understand. They simply say how unfortunate it is that Japan has no natural resources and must import its entire resources, whether energy or mineral. They only have the human work ethic and the efficiencies associated with Japanese industry that have been perfected over an extended period of time, since the Second World War. We helped them basically during the reconstruction period. They simply cannot understand our mentality and lack of our commitment to use our resources wisely, for the benefit of our people and our economy.

In summary, Madam President, I am disappointed. It is ironic that we should be confronted on the same day with a bill to close the most promising area in North America from exploration and put it into an additional permanent wilderness—and I might add, Madam President, we have 56 million acres of wilderness in our State. There are some who would like to put the whole State in a wilderness. There are others who would like to buy the State back from the United States and go it alone. But that is probably another story, for another day as well. To suggest this is the time to put it in wilderness when we get a report that says our national security interest is at stake is, indeed, ironic.

I know Senator STEVENS will be joining me in commenting on the significance of this report and the lack of responsible—and I stress responsible—analysis of the alternatives that we have available to us, alternatives that are practical, and certainly in the national security interest.

I think that is enough for tonight, Madam President. I wish you a good holiday and I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Madam President, in a move that defies principle and logic, the Clinton administration has proposed lifting the sanctions on Serbia and Montenegro, while it maintains an illegal and unjust arms embargo on Bosnia and Herzegovina. As the Washington Post editorial page put it today, "the United States and its partners in dealing with the old Yugoslavia have got it upside down."

For 7 months, the Bosnian Serbs have said "no" to the contact group peace plan. Despite their promises last summer of tough measures, the contact group countries have pursued a concessions only approach. And so, instead of putting on more pressure on Serbia and its allies in Bosnia and Croatia, the contact group is now ready to offer an enormous concession to Serbia by agreeing to remove the only real leverage we still have, that is, sanctions. Sanctions provide leverage not only on the situation in Bosnia, and in Croatia, but in Kosova—where Albanians are the latest victims of ethnic cleansing.

Sure, the administration says that Serbian President Milosevic will have to make promises in return. We have seen what his promises are worth. Last August Milosevic promised to cut off the Bosnian Serbs, but what really happened is that support was reduced, not ended. Yes, the administration has managed to see that conditions are attached to this lifting of sanctions, noting that the Europeans and Russians would make such a deal even sweeter for Milosevic. But the bottom line is that this is an ill-conceived policy and any tinkering by the administration on the margins does not change that fact.

The message this action sends is that the contact group countries are incapable of pressuring anyone but the victims of this brutal aggression. That message is a green light to the Bosnian Serbs and to the Krajina Serbs. There are warnings of a wider war, but now we see how the contact group hopes to avoid such a scenario, namely by withholding the Bosnians' right to self-defense. Anyone outside the contact group can see clearly that this is a formula for wider war, not a formula for preventing wider war. As the Washington Post concluded, "seeking a phony peace, the United States and its partners may be stoking a greater war."

Madam President, this is a policy of desperation. This is a policy that highlights the lack of American leadership. This is a policy that puts the United States on the side of rewarding aggression and against the forces of freedom and democracy.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the Washington Post editorial be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, Feb. 16, 1995]

PHONY PEACE

The United States and its partners in dealing with the old Yugoslavia have got it upside down. What they should be doing is putting more pressure on Serbia and the Serb rebels it supports in Bosnia and Croatia. What they actually are doing is putting on less pressure by prematurely opening up the possibility of ending the already partly suspended, porous sanctions on Serbia that are in place.

This new sweetener concocted by the five-nation Contact Group takes as its stated purpose to draw the Serbian regime of Slobodan Milosevic into formal acceptance of international peace plans for Bosnia and Croatia. But it was always implicit anyway that if Mr. Milosevic decided to rein in his wild ambitions for a Greater Serbia, the sanctions on him would fade away. Now to make it explicit—while he still cheats on his pledges, before he has shown a commitment to restraint—is to invite him to bargain the Contact Group down; to extract a large concession for a minimal policy change.

It is easy enough to grasp why the Contact Group finds itself in the weird position of proposing to suspend not the military embargo on the chief victim, Bosnia, but the economic sanctions on the chief offender, Serbia. It's because none of the group's five members (United States, Russia, France, Britain, Germany) has a taste for employing the force it would take to stiffen their lowest-common-denominator collective diplomacy. To prevent their diplomacy from becoming altogether laughable, they should at the least be stiffening it with tougher sanctions on Serbia. But this they decline to do.

A tragic irony is building. The danger now perceived by the Contact Group is that the war will spread. But the burden of constraining it is being put largely on the Muslims and, to a lesser extent, the Croats. They can fairly wonder whether they are not being asked to swallow huge Serb incursions on their territory, viability and sovereignty for the geopolitical convenience of states far from the battlefield and substantially unaffected by its flows. Feeling abandoned even as their fundamental interests are threatened, Muslims and Croats may yet be confirmed in a judgment that they can satisfy their legitimate political goals only by military means. Seeking a phony peace, the United States and its partners may be stoking a greater war.

(Mr. DEWINE assumed the chair.)

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, it is my hope that we will be able to complete our business in the next few minutes. We are trying to reach some agreement.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

50TH ANNIVERSARY ASSAULT ON RIVA RIDGE

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, 50 years ago tomorrow, the legendary 10th Mountain Division successfully assaulted Riva Ridge in northern Italy's Appennine Mountains. Tomorrow, 12 of my World War II comrades from the 10th Mountain Division will stage a 50th anniversary climb of Riva Ridge to reenact the division's historic capture of this heavily fortified German stronghold.

Using ropes, pitons, and other mountaineering equipment to scale the cliffs, and wearing replicas of our World War II white camouflage suits, this team of ski troop veterans will follow the same route used by 10th Mountain Division units in seizing the strategic 4,500-foot peak a half century earlier.

This assault group of World War II combat veterans—all of whom are now in their early seventies—will be joined in the commemorative operation by mountain soldier veterans of the German gebirgstruppe and the Italian Alpini. This peaceful ascent of Riva Ridge reflects the founding purposes of the International Federation of Mountain Soldiers, an eight-nation organization which represents more than 500,000 mountain soldier veterans, many of whom fought on opposing sides during World War II. Tomorrow's climb is actually a coming together of wartime foes on a rugged mountain summit in Italy.

In addition, these climbers will be joined by today's soldiers. During recent years, we veterans of the wartime 10th Mountain Division have established close bonds of friendship with our young counterparts of today's 10th Mountain Division—light. Following their recent return from Haiti, 10 young soldiers of the 10th Mountain—light—from Fort Drum, NY, will be participating in the reenactment climb. Joining these active duty soldiers will be two climbing experts from the 172d Mountain Battalion, Vermont National Guard.

The reenactment teams are headquartered in the small mountain village of Lizzano, which was the scene of intense fighting during my division's breakthrough from the Apennines northward into the Po River Valley and the Dolomite Mountains. During the 10th Mountain Division's decisive combat operations in northern Italy, nearly 1,000 of my fellow soldiers lost their lives to enemy action, another 4,000 were wounded.

As our Nation observes the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II during 1995, I am tremendously proud to know that a handful of my fellow 10th Mountain Division veterans have undertaken such a meaningful way of commemorating one of their victories in the final months of the war. I salute them for their endeavor, and I am sure that all other Members of the Congress will do the same.

Mr. PRESSLER addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota.

TRIBUTE TO DONALD "COOTIE" MASTERS

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to Donald "Cootie" Masters, the newspaper publisher in my hometown, who recently passed away. D.J. Masters was not only a publisher of a weekly newspaper, he was also a State legislator. He was a fine man, and an inspiration to me.

I think that the role of the weekly editor in America has been overlooked. The importance of the women and men who run our smalltown newspapers is seldom recognized.

Our weekly newspapers have almost been forgotten in this telecommunications age, when we have satellite TV, when we have all the various modern technologies. But our weekly newspapers are still there at the heart of their communities.

I received the Humboldt Journal even when I was in the Army in Vietnam. My mother bought me a subscription and sent it. I received the Humboldt Journal when I was away at the University of South Dakota and later when I was a student at Oxford University in England, and then at Harvard Law School. I still get the Humboldt Journal at home.

You cannot get the weekly hometown paper out of the boy, I suppose you could say.

D.J. Masters was a true South Dakotan. He took great pride in his work, his family, his community, and his faith. He was an example and inspiration to many.

I do not know if many people really understand the positive impact on the lives of South Dakotans that the editors of our weekly papers have.

As the editor of my hometown newspaper, the Humboldt Journal, Cootie Masters was part of the lives of thousands of South Dakotans.

Born on July 7, 1906, Cootie began his rich and fulfilling life in the town of Humboldt, SD. This small town upbringing and his strong family ties instilled in him a deep respect for traditional values. He graduated from Humboldt High School in 1924 and went on to attend the University of South Dakota. I would like to note that in 1924 it was quite an accomplishment for a young student from a small town to attend college. This was only the beginning of Cootie's many achievements.

In addition to his studies at USD, Cootie participated in basketball and was a fraternity brother in Delta Tau Delta. He demonstrated at a young age the importance in life of social involvement and balance between intellectual and physical pursuits.

After Cootie graduated from college, he became involved in his family business. His father owned and operated the Humboldt Journal and passed on his business knowledge to Cootie. Cootie's father died suddenly in 1936, leaving Cootie as the sole owner and editor of the Journal. Anyone you may know in a family business will tell you that successfully passing on a family business to the next generation is much more difficult than most people realize. Cootie not only succeeded in taking over the Journal in 1936, but also was successful in operating it until well after his official retirement. That is no small feat.

Cootie's life involved much more than his newspaper work. He contributed to the whole State of South Dakota by serving in the State house as a representative from Minnehaha County from 1936 to 1941.

Cootie balanced his successful business and political careers with devotion to his family and friends. On June 12, 1933, he began his family by marrying Mildred Newton. Cootie and Mildred had three sons: Neal, Tom, and Bob. Today, the Masters family includes 7 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren. I know that Cootie considered his family to be the most precious blessing in his life.

Aside from his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, what may have kept Cootie young for so long was his robust enjoyment of life. After college, he continued to participate in baseball and basketball. He also loved the outdoors. An avid sportsman, Cootie enjoyed fishing and hunting. He certainly picked the right State for enjoying the great outdoors.

What is most impressive about Cootie is that with all of his public activities, he is still described as a man with not one enemy.

Cootie was a true friend to me, to our community, and to our State. I will always remember him fondly.

I extend my deepest sympathies to the Masters family on the loss of their beloved Cootie.

Mr. President, I pay tribute not only to him but to the weekly newspapers of South Dakota and to the South Dakota State House of Representatives from which he served during his career.

BALANCED BUDGET AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION

The Senate continued with the consideration of the joint resolution.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following be the only amendments or motions in order to House Joint Resolution 1 and that all amendments or motions be subject to relevant first and second degree amendments and all first-degree amendments or motions on the list must be filed at the desk with the bill clerk by 12 noon Wednesday with the exception of first-degree amendments to motions. I will submit the list. I will not read the list. I think both the distinguished Democrat leader and I have the same list. I will submit that list.

I further ask that no further amendments be in order to the joint resolution after 3 p.m. on Friday February 24, and that any amendments, motions, or motions pending at that time be disposed of without debate in a stacked sequence beginning at 2:15 p.m. on Tuesday, February 28.

MORNING BUSINESS

INDIAN EDUCATION

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Indian Affairs Committee be discharged from consideration of S. 377, a bill relating to Indian education and that the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 377) to amend a provision of part A of title IX of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, relating to Indian education, to provide a technical amendment, and for other purposes.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be deemed read a third time, passed and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

So the bill (S. 377) was deemed read the third time and passed, as follows:

S. 377

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.

Section 9112(a)(1)(A) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (as added by section 101 of the Improving America's Schools Act of 1994 (Public Law 103-382)) is amended by striking "and" and inserting "or".

S. 377

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, S. 377 is a technical corrections bill in its truest form. S. 377 would amend section 9112(a)(1)(A) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965. S. 377 would amend section 9112(a)(1)(A), otherwise referred to as the Indian Education Act, by striking the word "and" and inserting the word "or." This technical change would correct an oversight that occurred during the conference of the bill.

Last Congress, the Committee on Indian Affairs received testimony from both Indian educators and tribal organizations on proposals for the reauthorization of the Indian Education Act. These proposals were integrated into the Improving America's School Act of 1994. Among these proposals was a program providing formula grants to schools enrolling Indian children.

During the House and Senate conference regarding this particular section of the act, discussions ensued on whether a minimum of 10 or 20 Indian children would be required in order to be eligible for these programs. The House bill would have required that a school have at least 20 Indian children or that the Indian children make up at least 25 percent of the student body of the school. The Senate bill would have required that a school have a minimum of 10 Indian children or that Indian children make up 25 percent of the student body of the school. The House and Senate Conferees agreed upon the Senate version which required a minimum of 10 Indian students or that Indian students make up 25 percent of the school's enrollment.

The congressional intent behind section 9112 clearly supports the enactment of this technical amendment. The House and Senate debate on this section only contemplated the number of Indian children that would be required for funding pursuant to this section. The conferees did not debate over the conjunction "or." The side-by-side analysis used by both the Senate and House conferees supports this point. However, an apparent error occurred in the redrafting process of the conference approved bill. The drafters inadvertently substituted the word "and" for "or." As a result, the law currently states that "in order for a school to be eligible for an Indian Education Act formula grant, it must have 10 eligible students and have 25 percent of its student population eligible for the program." among these proposals.

This minor oversight will have major ramifications in the education of American Indian and Alaska Native children. The current language unnecessarily restricts a schools eligibility for grant funding by requiring schools to meet both criteria. Consequently, the existing language will result in the disqualification of many schools that serve American Indian and Alaska Native children. The Department of Education is in the process of promulgating regulations which do not accurately reflect the true intent of the Congress. Therefore, it is imperative that this amendment be promptly enacted to clarify and fulfill the true intent of the act, to improve schools for all Americans, including Indians and Alaska Natives.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Thomas, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

REPORT RELATIVE TO CHEMICAL AND BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS— MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 19

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

To the Congress of the United States:

On November 16, 1990, in light of the dangers of the proliferation of chemical and biological weapons, President Bush issued Executive Order No. 12735, and declared a national emergency under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.). Under section 202(d) of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1622(d)), the national emergency terminates on the anniversary date of its declaration unless the President publishes in the Federal Register and transmits to the Congress a notice of its continuation.

On November 14, 1994, I issued Executive Order No. 12938, which revoked and superseded Executive Order No. 12735. As I described in the report transmitting Executive Order No. 12938, the new Executive order consolidates the functions of Executive Order No. 12735, which declared a national emergency with respect to the proliferation of chemical and biological weapons, and Executive Order No. 12930, which declared a national emergency with respect to nuclear, biological, and chemical weapons, and their means of delivery. The new Executive order continued in effect any rules, regulations, orders, licenses, or other forms of administrative action taken under the authority of Executive Order No. 12735.

This is the final report with respect to Executive Order No. 12735.

This report is made pursuant to section 204 of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act and section 401(c) of the National Emergencies Act regarding activities taken and money spent pursuant to the emergency declaration. Additional information on chemical and biological weapons proliferation is contained in the annual report to the Congress provided pursuant to the Chemical and Biological Weapons Control and Warfare Elimination Act of 1991.

The three export control regulations issued under the Enhanced Proliferation Control Initiative are fully in force and continue to be used to control the export of items with potential use in chemical or biological weapons (CBW) or unmanned delivery systems for weapons of mass destruction.

During the final 6 months of Executive Order No. 12735, the United States continued to address actively in its international diplomatic efforts the problem of the proliferation and use of CBW.

At the termination of Executive Order No. 12735, 158 nations had signed the Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC) and 16 had ratified it. On November 23, 1993, I submitted the CWC to the Senate for its advice and consent to ratification. The United States continues to press for prompt ratification of the Convention to enable its entry into force as soon as possible. We also continue to urge those countries that have not signed the Convention to do so. The United States has remained actively engaged in the work of the CWC Preparatory Commission headquartered in The Hague, to elaborate the technical and administrative procedures for implementing the Convention.

The United States was an active participant in the Special Conference of States Parties, held September 19–30, 1994, to review the consensus final report of the Ad Hoc Group of experts mandated by the Third Biological Weapons Convention (BWC) Review conference. The Special Conference produced a mandate to establish an Ad Hoc Group whose objective is to develop a legally binding instrument to strengthen the effectiveness and improve the implementation of the BWC. The United States strongly supports the development of a legally binding protocol to strengthen the Convention.

The United States maintained its active participation in the Australia Group (AG), which welcomed the Czech Republic, Poland, and Slovakia as the 26th, 27th, and 28th AG members, respectively. The Group reaffirmed members' collective belief that full adherence to the CWC and the BWC provides the only means to achieve a permanent global ban on CBW, and that all states adhering to these conventions have an obligation to ensure that their national activities support these goals.

The AG also reiterated its conviction that harmonized AG export licensing measures are consistent with and indeed actively support, the requirement under Article I of the CWC that States Parties never assist, in any way, the manufacture of chemical weapons. These measures also are consistent with the undertaking in Article XI of the CWC to facilitate the fullest possible exchange of chemical materials and related information for purposes not prohibited by the Convention, as they focus solely on preventing assistance to activities banned under the CWC. Similarly, such efforts also support existing nonproliferation obligations under the BWC.

The United States Government determined that one foreign individual and two foreign commercial entities—respectively, Nahum Manbar, and Mana International Investments and Europol Holding Ltd.—had engaged in chemical weapons proliferation activities that required the imposition of trade sanctions against them, effective on July 16, 1994. A separate determination was made and sanctions imposed against Alberto di Salle, an Italian national, effective on August 19, 1994. Additional information on these determinations will be contained in a classified report to the Congress, provided pursuant to the Chemical and Biological Weapons Control and Warfare Elimination Act of 1991.

Pursuant to section 401(c) of the National Emergencies Act, I report that there were no expenses directly attributable to the exercise of authorities conferred by the declaration of the national emergency in Executive Order No. 12735 during the period from November 16, 1990, through November 14, 1994.

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 16, 1995.

REPORT RELATIVE TO NUCLEAR, CHEMICAL AND BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 20

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

To the Congress of the United States:

On September 29, 1994, in Executive Order No. 12930, I declared a national emergency under the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (IEEPA) (50 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.) to deal with the threat to the national security, foreign policy, and economy of the United States posed by the continued proliferation of nuclear, biological, and chemical weapons, and their means of delivery. Specifically, this order provided necessary authority under the Enhanced Proliferation Control Initiative (EPCI), as provided in the Export Administration Regulations, set forth in Title 15, Chapter VII, Subchapter C, of the Code of Federal Regulations, Parts 768 to 799 inclusive, to continue to regulate the activities of United States persons in order to prevent their participation in activities that could contribute to the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their delivery means.

I issued Executive Order No. 12930 pursuant to the authority vested in me as President by the Constitution and laws of the United States of America, including the IEEPA, the National Emergencies Act (NEA) (50 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.), and section 301 of title 3 of the United States Code. At that time, I also submitted a report to the Congress pursuant to section 204(b) of the IEEPA (50 U.S.C. 1703(b)).

Executive Order No. 12930 was revoked by Executive Order No. 12938 of November 14, 1994. Executive Order No. 12938 consolidates a number of authorities and eliminated certain redundant authorities. All authorities contained in Executive Order No. 12930 were transferred to Executive Order No. 12938.

Section 204 of the IEEPA requires follow-up reports, with respect to actions or changes, to be submitted every 6 months. Additionally, section 401(c) of the NEA requires that the President: (1) within 90 days the end of each 6-month period following a declaration of a national emergency, report to the Congress on the total expenditures directly attributable to that declaration; or (2) within 90 days after the termination of an emergency, transmit a final report to the Congress on all expenditures. This report, covering the period from September 29, 1994, to November 14, 1994, is submitted in compliance with these requirements.

Since the issuance of Executive Order No. 12930, the Department of Commerce has continued to administer and enforce the provisions contained in the Export Administration Regulations concerning activities by United States persons that may contribute to the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and missiles. In addition, the Department of Commerce has conducted ongoing outreach to educate concerned communities regarding these restrictions. Regulated activities may include financing, servicing, contracting, or other facilitation of missile or weapons projects, and need not be linked to exports or reexports of U.S.-origin items. No applications for licenses to engage in such activities were received during the period covered by this report.

No expenses directly attributable to the exercise of powers or authorities conferred by the declaration of a national emergency in Executive Order No. 12930 were incurred by the Federal Government in the period from September 29, 1994, to November 14, 1994.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 16, 1995.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Ms. SNOWE:

S. 427. A bill to amend various acts to establish offices of women's health within certain agencies, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

THE WOMEN'S HEALTH OFFICES ACT OF 1995

• Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation to focus attention on the special health needs of women by establishing offices of Women's Health within the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Health, the Centers for Disease Control, the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, the Health Resources and Services Administration, and the Food and Drug Administration.

The directors of these offices of women's health will assess the current level of activity regarding women's health within their respective agencies, established short-range and long-range goals and objectives for women's health, identify projects in women's health that should be conducted or supported, consult with health professionals, non-governmental organizations, consumer organizations, and other appropriate groups on their agency's women's health policies, and coordinate agency activities on women's health.

Congress has already taken a first step in recognizing that women's unique health needs should be addressed separately. In the 103d Congress, the 1993 NIH revitalization bill established an Office of Woman's Health within the National Institutes of Health. We must build upon that progress in the 104th Congress.

For too long, women have been systematically excluded from medical research studies, received less aggressive treatment for heart disease and other serious ailments, and lacked access to important preventive services. By statutorily establishing offices of Women's Health in Federal agencies which research and disseminate information about health, we ensure that women's needs and concerns will be given the consideration they deserve. •

By Mr. ROTH (for himself, Mr. BAUCUS, Mr. BIDEN, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. DODD, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. KERRY, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. PELL, and Mr. WELLSTONE):

S. 428. A bill to improve the management of land and water for fish and wildlife purposes, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

THE FISH AND WILDLIFE MANAGEMENT ACT OF 1995

• Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I read recently that "the best thing we have learned from nearly 500 years of contact with the American wilderness is restraint," the need to stay our hand and preserve our precious environment and future resources rather than destroy them for momentary gain.

With this in mind, I offer legislation today that designates the coastal plain of Alaska as wilderness area. At the moment this area is a national wildlife refuge, one of our beautiful and last frontiers. By changing its designation, Mr. President, we can protect it forever.

And I can't stress how important this is.

The Alaskan wilderness area is not only a critical part of our earth's ecosystem—the last remaining region where the complete spectrum of arctic and subarctic ecosystems comes together—but it is a vital part of our national consciousness. It is a place we can cherish and visit for our soul's good. It offers us a sense of well-being and promises that not all dreams have been dreamt.

The Alaskan wilderness is a place of outstanding wildlife, wilderness and recreation, a land dotted by beautiful forests, dramatic peaks and glaciers, gentle foothills, and undulating tundra. It is untamed—rich with caribou, polar bear, grizzly, wolves, musk oxen, Dall sheep, moose, and hundreds of thousands of birds—snow geese, tundra swans, black brant, and more. In all, about 165 species use the coastal plain. It is an area of intense wildlife activity. Animals give birth, nurse and feed their young, and set about the critical business of fueling up for winters of unspeakable severity.

The fact is, Mr. President, there are parts of this Earth where it is good that man can come only as a visitor. These are the pristine lands that belong to all of us. And perhaps most importantly, these are the lands that belong to our future.

Considering the many reasons why this bill is so important, I came across the words of the great western writer, Wallace Stegner. Referring to the land we are trying to protect with this legislation, he wrote that it is "the most splendid part of the American habitat; it is also the most fragile." And we cannot enter "it carrying habits that [are] inappropriate and expectations that [are] surely excessive."

The expectations for oil exploration in this pristine region are excessive. There is only a one-in-five chance of finding any economically recoverable oil in the refuge. And if oil is found, the daily production of 400,000 barrels per day is less than .7 percent of world production—far too small to meet American's energy needs for more than a few months.

In other words, Mr. President, there is much more to lose than might ever be gained by tearing this frontier apart. Already, some 90 percent of Alaska's entire North Slope is open to oil and gas leasing and development. Let's keep this area as the jewel amid the stones.

What this bill offers—and what we need—is a brand of pragmatic environmentalism, an environmental stewardship that protects our important wilderness areas and precious resources, while carefully and judiciously weighing the short-term desires or our country against its long-term needs.

Together, we need to embrace environmental policies that are workable and pragmatic, policies based on the desire to make the world a better place for us and for future generations. I believe a strong economy, liberty, and progress are possible only when we have a healthy planet—only when resources are managed through wise stewardship—only when an environmental ethic thrives among nations and only when people have frontiers that are untrammelled and able to host their fondest dreams.●

By Mr. BRYAN (for himself and Mr. REID):

S. 429. A bill to amend the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982 to allow commercial nuclear utilities that have contracts with the Secretary of Energy under section 302 of that act to receive credits to offset the cost of storing spent fuel that the Secretary is unable to accept for storage on and after January 31, 1998; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

THE INDEPENDENT SPENT NUCLEAR FUEL STORAGE ACT OF 1995

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce again legislation I have introduced in each of the past two Congresses, the Independent Spent Nuclear Fuel Storage Act.

As many of my colleagues are aware, since 1987, contrary to Nevada State law, and against the wishes of the vast majority of Nevadans, Nevada has been the sole site considered for the ultimate disposal of the United States' high-level nuclear waste.

Today, in spite of the expenditure of billions of dollars, the Yucca Mountain site is no closer to accepting waste from our Nation's nuclear reactors than it was 13 years ago, when the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982 was enacted.

I strongly oppose the purely political decision made by Congress in 1987 to identify Yucca Mountain as the sole site to be characterized for a permanent repository. Now that the permanent repository program is an obvious failure, with the Department of Energy saying there is no hope of opening any type of storage facility before 2010, the nuclear power industry and its allies have conceived a new strategy.

Contrary to all objective scientific judgment, and general common sense, the nuclear industry's new effort is to instruct the DOE to build an interim storage facility at the Yucca Mountain site. As offensive as the 1987 act, commonly referred to in Nevada as the "screw Nevada bill," was, the new effort of the nuclear power industry is even more of an outrage to Nevadans.

The nuclear power industry's newest proposal is nothing less than a direct assault on the health and safety of Nevadans. Frustrated by its inability to overcome the insurmountable safety concerns raised in relation to a permanent repository, the industry is now seeking to circumvent the objections of credible, objective scientists to a permanent repository at Yucca Mountain.

I am convinced, like many others, that any centralized interim storage facility will become the de facto permanent repository.

Funding for an interim storage program will necessarily come at the expense of the permanent repository program. The expression "out of sight, out of mind" could not be truer. Once the waste is removed from the reactor sites, the nuclear industry's commitment to finding a permanent solution to the waste problem will vanish. And since it is the nuclear power industry's obsession with moving this waste off the reactor sites that drives the Federal Civilian Nuclear Waste Program, the Federal commitment to permanent storage will vanish as well.

The nuclear power industry as much as concedes this—every version of their interim storage legislation I am aware of provides for licensing the interim site for 100 years, subject to renewal.

The permanent repository program is a failure. The nuclear power industry and its advocates, including the Department of Energy, have created a program which was bound to fail. Careless science, poor management, unreasonable deadlines and timetables, and the ill-fated decision to pursue only one site for characterization, thus leaving the program with no options or alternatives, have all contributed to the failure of the program.

The industry's suggestion to build an interim storage facility in Nevada is simply one more in a long series of irresponsible and ill-founded proposals by the nuclear power industry to solve their high level waste problem at the expense of the health and safety of all Nevadans.

I will concede that the nuclear power industry has a waste problem. I strongly object, however, to the industry's solution, which is simply to send their problem, their waste to Nevada.

The question arises, do we need a centralized interim storage site? If we are truly talking about interim storage, the answer is obviously no.

A few nuclear utilities, looking at the future uncertainty of the Federal nuclear waste program, have done the responsible thing and built interim dry cask storage at the reactor site. In dry cask storage, spent fuel assemblies are removed from the reactor pools and stored in various systems of canisters, casks, and concrete shells.

I recently visited one of these dry cask storage facilities, at Calvert Cliffs in Maryland, and, I must say, I was impressed by the simplicity and efficiency of the spent fuel management operation. It is a responsible action taken by the industry, and I commend their example to others. The Calvert Cliffs dry cask storage program provides a reasonable solution to the interim storage problem, the spent fuel is stored on site, where security and safety precautions already exist, until a safe plan for the long-term disposition of the waste can be finalized.

A centralized interim storage facility is simply not needed, or desirable. The original Nuclear Waste Policy Act recognized this fact, and placed restrictions on the DOE's authority to accept responsibility for interim storage. The nuclear power industry, faced with the reality of the failure to build a permanent repository at Yucca Mountain, is now engaged in yet another exercise of political muscle with one purpose: to make Nevada the final destination for their toxic and highly dangerous waste.

Even if we concede, which we do not, that there is a need for a centralized interim storage facility, there is no defensible reason to site the facility in Nevada. A simple look at a map easily shows that Nevada is one of the least central sites to store nuclear waste. The great majority of the reactor sites producing high-level waste are east of the Mississippi—93 reactors out of the U.S. total of 118.

Shipping thousands of tons of high level waste to Nevada will create dramatic threats to the safety of communities throughout the United States. An analysis of one proposal supported by the nuclear power industry reveals that interim storage in Nevada will require 15,000 shipments by rail and truck through 43 States to begin as early as 1998 and continue for 30 years.

Interim storage in Nevada is not the answer to the nuclear power industry's waste problem. The responsible answer to the waste problem, if the nuclear utilities choose to continue to run their reactors, is on-site, dry cask storage.

Unfortunately, most nuclear utilities appear to be unwilling to develop dry cask storage facilities for a variety of reasons, both political and financial.

There is not much we can do about the local political opposition faced by utilities. The utilities, and communities, that benefited from the operation of the powerplant should bear responsibility for their own waste. High-level waste storage is not popular, and there are political costs to the utilities for living up to their responsibilities.

Asking Nevada to solve the political problems in the communities they serve places the nuclear utilities on completely indefensible ground. The outright hypocrisy of the nuclear power industry's advocates, and their shameless attempts to exert political influence to solve complex scientific and environmental problems, has created an atmosphere of complete distrust and antagonism for the industry in Nevada.

There are also financial barriers to on-site, dry cask storage. Ratepayers have been making contributions to the nuclear waste trust fund with the exception that the Federal Government will dispose of their nuclear waste. I am somewhat sympathetic to the ratepayers' concerns. The Federal disposal program is a failure.

The civilian nuclear waste program has been so poorly managed, and so misguided, that Congress has had good reason not to release the full balance of the trust fund to the program. The ratepayers deserve some financial relief while the Federal Government attempts to meet its obligations, and while the utilities invest the needed capital to store their own waste.

The legislation I am introducing today recognizes the nuclear power industry's need for interim storage, as well as the financial impact on ratepayers caused by delays in the repository program. The legislation provides credits against utilities' payments to the nuclear waste trust fund for costs incurred for on-site, dry cask storage.

The legislation provides an equitable solution to a difficult problem. It recognizes the financial contributions of the utilities' ratepayers to the trust fund, and recognizes the reality that a permanent repository will not be available to meet the needs of the nuclear power industry.

Mr. President, together with their advocates in Congress and the Department of Energy, the nuclear power industry has spared no expense or effort in moving its waste to Nevada. I have attempted to fight the industry at every turn.

I hope that Congress will not take the failure of the permanent repository program as a signal to bow to the nuclear power industry once again, and accelerate plans to store nuclear waste in Nevada, but instead to take this opportunity to find an equitable solution to a difficult problem which does not threaten the health and safety of future generations of Nevadans.

I urge my colleagues to support the legislation I am introducing today.

By Ms. SNOWE:

S. 430. A bill to amend title XIX of the Social Security Act to require States to adopt and enforce certain guardianship laws providing protection and rights to wards and individuals subject to guardianship proceedings as a condition of eligibility for receiving funds under the Medicaid Program, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

THE GUARDIANSHIP RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES ACT

• Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Guardianship Rights and Responsibilities Act of 1995, which establishes a bill of rights for adults who, because of physical or mental incapacity, become wards of the courts.

Wards are individuals whose legal rights, decisionmaking authority and possessions have been transferred to the control of a guardian or conservator based on a judgment that the person is no longer capable of handling these affairs. This legal system severely limits an individual's personal autonomy and has considered problems and widespread abuses. Horror stories abound about guardians who force unnecessary nursing home care, embezzle assets, or otherwise abuse their wards.

The Guardianship Rights and Responsibilities Act of 1995 would require States to adopt and enforce laws to provide basic protection and rights to wards as a condition of receiving Federal Medicaid funds. It would assure due process protections such as counsel, the right to be present at their proceedings and to appeal decisions. Also required would be: clear and convincing evidence to determine the need for a guardianship; adequate court monitoring; and standards, training and oversight for guardians.

This legislation will help to protect the most vulnerable elderly and disabled from exploitation, and will help to assure them the highest possible autonomy. I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting this bill.●

S. 431. A bill to amend the Magnuson Fishery Conservation and Management Act to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to prepare fishery management plans and amendments to fishery management plans under negotiated rulemaking procedures, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

S. 432. A bill to amend the Magnuson Fishery Conservation and Management Act to require the Secretary of Commerce to prepare conservation and management measures for the northeast multispecies—groundfish—fishery under negotiated rulemaking procedures, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

NEGOTIATED RULEMAKING FOR FISHERIES LEGISLATION

• Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, as many stories in the national media have reported, the New England groundfish industry is now facing the most difficult challenges in its long history. Scientists report that once plentiful stocks of cod, haddock, flounder, and other fish species have reached historic lows. In response to these stock assessments, the New England Fishery Management Council has approved severe restrictions on fishing that will probably force many fishermen out of business. These restrictions include a 5-year program to cut fishing efforts in half, mandatory use of large-mesh nets, a moratorium on new entrants into the fishery, and the emergency closure of large areas on the George's Bank fishing grounds off Massachusetts.

Most fishermen in Maine recognize that the groundfish stocks are low and that effective conservation measures are needed to help rebuild the fishery. But too many fishermen also believe that the specific program approved by the council will not succeed at restoring groundfish populations, and will place unnecessary economic burdens on working fishermen. In their view, the council, despite public hearings, dismissed too many of their recommendations despite the fact that they and others before them have been fishing the waters off New England for three centuries. In short, they have no support for or confidence in the council-developed management program under which they must operate.

The success of any regulatory program depends in large part on the confidence of the regulated community that the action takes their views into account, will achieve its ends, and is sensible and necessary. I am introducing legislation today that aims to restore the confidence of New England fishermen in the credibility of the Federal fisheries management process by giving them and other citizens with an interest in fisheries the ability to participate directly in that process.

My bills bring the concept of negotiated rulemaking or regulatory negotiation to fisheries management. The concept was established in Federal law by the negotiated Rulemaking Act of 1990. Under negotiated rulemaking, representatives of all stakeholder groups involved in a dispute negotiate directly on the regulatory solution with the aid of a professional facilitator. It provides a collaborative, consensus-based dispute resolution tool that agencies can use to develop potentially controversial regulations. If the negotiating group can reach consensus, then the agency can propose the agreement as a new regulation or rule. Negotiated rulemaking has been used—sometimes successfully, sometimes unsuccessfully—by other Federal agencies, and it is time that this tool be made available in the fisheries management process.

The first bill that I have introduced today gives the Secretary of Commerce explicit authority to use negotiated rulemaking to develop fishery management plans or plan amendments. Under the Magnuson Act, the Secretary can only submit management plans or plan amendments under limited circumstances which preclude his flexibility in using this important tool effectively. Also, negotiated rulemaking is specifically used to develop rules, but fishery management plans are not technically rules. My bill removes these potential obstacles and clears the way for the Secretary to use this dispute resolution tool on controversial issues.

The second bill directs the Secretary to use negotiated rulemaking in the specific case of the New England groundfish fishery. Alternative dispute resolution is used more and more commonly in lieu of the traditional adversarial regulatory process, and I believe that it should be tried in the case of the New England groundfish issue.

These bills do not directly affect any existing fisheries management programs, or impose new management measures. They only offer an alternative route for devising plans that will restore fish stocks off the coast of New England and other parts of the country. They could lead to new management measures that not only do a better job of rebuilding fish stocks, but do so in a manner that minimizes the economic impact on fishermen and coastal communities, and in a manner that gains the confidence and support of most fishermen. Surely, given the extremely high stakes in an area like New England these days, we must explore every opportunity, every possibility, for achieving such critically important results.●

By Mr. KERRY:

S. 433. A bill to regulate handgun ammunition, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

THE AMMUNITION SAFETY ACT OF 1995

• Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, no gun works without a bullet. Yet for no good reason, Congress in the early 1980's repealed laws that regulate ammunition. And while a background check is required to stop felons from purchasing guns, no such background check is required to stop them from buying ammunition for the guns they may already have.

In the meantime, bullets are getting meaner and more deadly. Law enforcement officers know all too well of the danger they face each and every time a gun is pointed at them.

Advances in technology only promise to make matters worse. When a large percentage of gun-related deaths involve handguns, and a large percentage of gun related deaths is accidental, it is insane for the public to fear the creation of new, more destructive bullets.

The fact is 157 police officers and State troopers were killed in this country last year. Five lost their lives in my home State of Massachusetts.

And more than 200 people die from the accidental use of handguns every year. In 1992 alone, 233 accidental deaths occurred because of handguns. This included 6 babies, 36 kids under the age of 14, and 8 senior citizens, 2 of whom were over the age of 80.

In light of these sad and disturbing facts, there is no good reason to have ever more dangerous bullets on the market. And there is every good reason to keep off our streets and out of our homes bullets that supply handguns with the destructive power of assault weapons.

That is why the Ammunition Safety Act of 1995 does two things: it reestablishes reasonable regulations for the sale of handgun ammunition, and it outlaws all exceedingly destructive handgun ammunition—whether or not such ammo has been invented yet—by expanding and updating the ban on armor-piercing handgun ammunition.

This bill would provide a weapon for law enforcement to crack down on crime and would make ordinary people safer from handgun violence and accidental shootings. The bill accomplishes these goals in three steps.

First, the bill reinstates and strengthens ammunition control language that Congress repealed during the Reagan era. It would require dealers of handgun ammunition to be licensed by the Federal Government. It would restrict interstate sale and transportation of handgun ammunition to licensed dealers. And it would double the maximum penalties for sale to and for possession of handgun ammunition by felons and persons under age 21.

Second, the bill would apply Brady bill provisions to handgun ammunition. To prevent the sale of handgun ammunition to felons, once the nationwide, instantaneous background check the Brady bill created is in place, every purchaser of ammunition will have to pass a background check before ammunition could be sold to him or her. These regulations would be a vital tool to law enforcement in investigating crime, and would provide equity to a system that currently monitors and restricts the flow of guns, but—inexplicably—not of ammunition.

Third, the bill expands the definition of illegal armor-piercing handgun ammunition to include any new conceivable kind of armor-piercing bullet. The bill establishes a new method to accomplish this goal.

To date, no law has been able to effectively ban all armor-piercing bullets. You can't ban what you can't define because vague laws are constitutionally void—and definitions to date have failed to cover all armor-piercing bullets. All that existing law does is ban bullets based on the materials of which they are made—consequently, bullets made of hard metals are illegal—in the hope that this definition will blanket most armor-piercing bullets. But the existing composition-based definition fails to prevent the sale of certain bullets that pierce armor—like large lead bullets that aren't intended for handguns but can be used in them—or the invention of new armor-piercing bullets—for example, a plastic bullet hard enough to pierce armor.

This bill calls on the Treasury Department to define armor-piercing bullets not by what they are but by what they are not. Fulfilling this new responsibility would entail four steps.

First, within 1 year, the Treasury Department is charged with determining a standard test to ascertain the destructive capacity of any and all bullets. This will probably result in something along the lines of a rating system equal to the width times the depth of the hole a projectile bores in a block of gelatin when it is shot with no extra powder from a standard Colt .45 at a distance of 10 feet.

Second, utilizing this destructive rating test, the Treasury Department would then determine a rating threshold which would be the rating of the least destructive bullet to pierce today's standard body armor.

Third, all manufacturers of bullets for sale in the United States would be required to cover the costs incurred by the Treasury Department in testing and determining the destructive rating of every existing bullet available on the market.

Fourth, this bill would make it illegal to manufacture, sell, import, use, or possess any bullet—existing or newly invented—that has a destructive rating equal to or higher than the armor-piercing threshold. This would be in addition to the existing composition-based definition.

This bill contains reasonable exemptions. Those bullets exclusively manufactured for law enforcement would be exempt; so would be those bullets designed for sporting purposes that Congress specifically exempts by law; and those bullets that are proven by their manufacturer at its expense to have a destructive rating below the armor-piercing threshold.

By setting the legal standard at the armor-piercing threshold, all armor-piercing bullets would be illegal. And there is an additional advantage to setting a legal threshold in this fashion: The threshold would ban more than armor-piercing bullets. It would ban any new, sick, perverse bullet that has yet to be invented that explodes on impact, that turns to shrapnel, that does things today's technology cannot yet fathom, or that by any other means is exceptionally destructive.

Setting a legal standard this way draws a hard and fast line between those bullets currently on the market and future bullets that do more damage than we can imagine today. This bill says that America is satisfied that the bullets of today are dangerous enough, and America will tolerate no greater likelihood of accidental death as a result of new bullets.

This bill recognizes the fact that regulating only weapons is naive. Among other reasons, guns last centuries, but ammunition has a shelf-life of not much more than 20 years. Felons who want to kill will always be able to find guns, but have to come out of the woodwork to purchase ammunition. When they do, this bill will be there to stop them.

Of course, felons can make bullets at home, but it isn't easy, it isn't cheap, and it isn't safe. Mr. President, I recognize that there is a limit to what the Government can do to stop gun violence and accidental death. But today, the Government is shirking its responsibility. This bill is a vital first step toward ensuring that the Government does what is necessary to save lives.

The law enforcement community and the public will never again have to react to advertisements like the one for the infamous Rhino bullet. This ad states:

The Rhino inflicts a wound of 8 inches in diameter. Each of these fragments becomes lethal shrapnel and is hurled into vital organs, lungs, circulatory system components, the heart and other tissues. The wound channel is catastrophic. * * * Death is nearly instantaneous.

If this bill is enacted, opportunistic manufacturers like the man who created the Rhino will have nothing to gain from advertising the dramatic innovations of their bullets. If an advertisement claims that a new bullet is unusually destructive, the public will know that the advertisement is either an outright lie or that the product is illegal. Either way, the public will know in advance that no such bullet will ever hit the street, and the public will have no cause for hysteria.

When this bill becomes law, no new bullets that are more dangerous than those of today will make it to market. When this bill becomes law, those bullets that are on the market won't end up in the wrong hands.

This bill is a solid step toward returning sanity and safety to our Nation's streets and household. The Government has no greater responsibility than to work toward this goal.

I welcome the support of colleagues who share my concerns, as many do. I urge them to join me in sponsoring this legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the legislation appear in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

By Mr. KOHL:

S. 434. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to increase the deductibility of business meal expenses for individuals who are subject to Federal limitation on hours of service; to the Committee on Finance.

THE BUSINESS MEAL DEDUCTION FAIRNESS ACT
OF 1995

• Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, in 1993, the 103d Congress took a crucial and difficult stand on the deficit. In August of that year we passed the omnibus budget reconciliation bill. I am proud to stand here today and say that that legislation has helped to produce falling deficits and sustained economic growth.

As my colleagues know, I am one of this body's strongest advocates for deficit reduction. I attribute much of my deep commitment to this goal to my days in business. As a businessman, I learned that you must balance your books and live within your means. I also learned that you must treat people fairly, and admit when you make a mistake. I have come to the floor today to once again acknowledge that a mistake was made in the 1993 reconciliation bill; a mistake which must be corrected.

During consideration of the reconciliation bill, I opposed tax increases on working middle- and lower-income Americans. However, in fighting to eliminate increases in broad taxes on middle- and lower-income Americans, Congress overlooked a provision which places a hidden tax on those hard-working Americans who work in the transportation sector. It is for this reason that I rise today to reintroduce the business meal deduction fairness bill.

Included in the 1993 reconciliation bill was a provision which lowered the deductible portion of business meals and entertainment expenses from 80 to 50 percent. On the surface, this seems only a tax on those rich enough to spend their lunchtimes in luxury restaurants and their nighttimes on luxury yachts. But contrary to popular belief, the business meal deduction is not only used by lobbyists and fat cats for three-martini lunches. Due to regulations limiting travel hours, many transportation workers must eat out. That means the reduced business meal deduction is a tax on workers who have no control over the length of their trips, the amount of time they must rest during a delivery, or, in many cases, the places they can stop to eat.

Let me provide you with a brief example to illustrate my point. The average truck driver earns approximately $30,000 a year. The reduced deduction will cost that driver between $750 and $1,000 per year. This is just one of many examples I could give to demonstrate the burden this change has placed on hard-working, middle-income Americans. The legislation I am introducing today, will lift this burden and restore some common sense to the tax code.

Mr. President, the business meal deduction fairness bill repeals the hidden tax created last year by restoring the business meal deduction to 80 percent for those individuals covered by the Department of Transportation hours-of-service limit. This legislation is simple, straightforward, and most importantly, fair.

Mr. President, I would like to remind my colleagues of a similar bill we worked on to correct another mistake which hurt tens of thousands of hard-working, middle-income Americans. As my colleagues remember, the 1990 deficit reduction bill imposed a surtax on specific luxury items. At the time, it was argued that the surtax would only affect the wealthiest segment of society. However, after it went into effect, it became clear that, instead of paying the tax, the wealthy decided not to buy the new boat or the diamond ring. As a result, the middle- and lower-income Americans producing and selling those luxury items ended up bearing the burden of the tax through lost wages and jobs.

Once it was apparent that the luxury tax was not achieving its intended goal, I began working with a number of my colleagues to repeal it. Fortunately, we were successful in getting a repeal in the 1993 reconciliation bill. Unfortunately, far too many people were hurt by this mistake because we did not correct it quickly enough. We cannot let that happen again. Therefore I am requesting the support and assistance of my colleagues to ensure that the business meal deduction fairness bill becomes law. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of my legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 434

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. INCREASED DEDUCTIBILITY OF BUSINESS MEAL EXPENSES FOR INDIVIDUALS SUBJECT TO FEDERAL LIMITATIONS ON HOURS OF SERVICE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 274(n) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to only 50 percent of meal and entertainment expenses allowed as deduction) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(3) SPECIAL RULE FOR INDIVIDUALS SUBJECT TO FEDERAL LIMITATIONS ON HOURS OF SERVICE.—In the case of any expenses for food or beverages consumed by an individual during, or incident to, any period of duty which is subject to the hours of service limitations of the Department of Transportation, paragraph (1) shall be applied by substituting ‘80 percent’ for ‘50 percent.’”

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1994.●

By Mr. FAIRCLOTH:

S. 435. A bill to provide for the elimination of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

LEGISLATION TO ABOLISH HUD

Mr. FAIRCLOTH. Mr. President, today I am pleased to introduce legislation that will abolish the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Mr. President, HUD was created in 1965. When it was created, the purpose of this Department was to revitalize our urban areas and provide more housing for America.

Mr. President, in short, HUD has been a colossal failure. Since 1965, HUD has spent hundreds of billions of dollars—that adjusted to inflation—probably exceeds a trillion dollars. Yet today, despite this massive spending, our Nation’s urban areas are more decayed and more dangerous today than ever. Homelessness, hardly a problem 30 years ago, is now a major concern.

Public housing has been a disaster and home ownership is down.

Solving these problems was supposed to be HUD’s mission. In each, it has failed miserably.

Imagine if we applied a performance standard like this to other Federal agencies. Suppose that when we created NASA with the purpose of putting a man on the Moon, that 30 years later, they still had not done it. We might consider abolishing them. That is exactly what we should do with HUD because they failed to accomplish their mission.

Suppose that instead of creating HUD, we had given a trillion dollars to an entrepreneur like Bill Gates. Do you think our inner cities would be any worse off, or do you think that they would be more livable places today? I think the answer is clear.

Take Fannie Mae for example. Fannie Mae plans to spend $1 trillion on affordable housing before the end of the decade. The plan will finance homes for 10 million people. This would provide a home to one in three renters in America. This plan, however, unlike HUD, won’t cost American taxpayers one cent, and yet it will provide homes for millions of Americans.

Mr. President, I have no faith that HUD can be reinvented. Thirty years of failure is too much. Since the November 8 election, HUD Secretary Henry Cisneros has put on a masterful public relations plan to save his Department. I for one am not fooled. If he really believed in what he was doing, he would have done it 2 years ago.

Most importantly, what are the savings from the Cisneros plan? There are none. The only clearly identified savings will amount to one-half of 1 percent over 5 years. Mr. President, let me repeat that, the total savings in the Cisneros plan amount to only one-half of 1 percent over 5 years.

Of course, there are promises of more savings, but they are just that—promises.

Actually, if you look at the projected outlays by HUD in the fiscal year 1996 budget for the years 1995–99, spending is $3 billion more than was projected in last year’s budget. Yes, that’s right, spending will actually increase despite the reorganization.

Furthermore, my favorite line from the President’s budget is on page 190. It is a chart about HUD’s program consolidation. It says:

“Net impact, HUD consolidations”—spending of $29.4 billion in 1995 to $30.3 billion in 1996.

Yes, that’s right. Spending will actually go up by $1 billion because of HUD’s consolidations—not down.

The Wall Street Journal reported on February 15, 1995, that HUD’s projected savings may have been oversold, and that down at HUD they knew this before they submitted their plan to Congress.

For these reasons, I am introducing a bill to abolish HUD. The bill will abolish HUD, effective January 1, 1998. The bill will direct the Secretary to make one housing block grant available to States and localities; transform all rental assistance into vouchers; and make FHA a Government-controlled corporation with income targeting and risk sharing.

By Mr. CAMPBELL (for himself, Mr. INOUE, Mr. MCCAIN, and Mr. DASCHLE):

S. 436. A bill to improve the economic conditions and supply of housing in native American communities by creating the Native American Financial Services Organization, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

NATIVE AMERICAN FINANCIAL SERVICES ORGANIZATION ACT

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation entitled the Native American Financial Services Organization Act. I am pleased to add my distinguished colleagues, the chairman and vice-chairman of the Indian Affairs Committee, Senators MCCAIN and INOUE, and Senator DASCHLE, as cosponsors of this important legislation.

Mr. President, there is a continued need for assistance to improve the housing conditions that exist in many Indian reservation communities, Alaska Native villages, and native Hawaiian communities. Statistics from the Bureau of Indian Affairs estimated in 1993 that as many as 90,000 native American families were in need of improved housing and nearly 50,000 families need new homes.

Further, a study completed by the Commission on American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian Housing, found that housing shortages and deplorable living conditions are at crisis proportions in many native American communities. In its study the commission documented several obstacles that stand between Indian people and affordable, adequate, and available housing.

The Commission found there is currently little, if any, conventional lending available to native people seeking to purchase a home.

In addition, many Indian housing authorities lack the expertise to manage, coordinate, and maintain viable programs.

And importantly, tribal governments have had to rely primarily on Federal Government grant and loan programs to finance housing and economic development projects.

As a result of the study, the Commission recommended the creation of an entity that could serve as an intermediary financing institution with the authority to package mortgage loans, provide technical assistance, and serve as a clearinghouse of information for alternative financing programs.

Mr. President, the Native American Financial Services Organization Act is the culmination of extensive deliberations between officials from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Department of Treasury, the USDA, members of my staff, and staff of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs. The purpose of this legislation is to create a financial infrastructure for commercial financing opportunities by and for Indian people. The primary mechanism that will bridge Indian tribes with the commercial lending markets will be the creation of a Native American Financial Services Organization.

The Native American Financial Services Organization would establish a limited Government-chartered corporation. A Federal grant would capitalize the federally chartered organization, which would cease to exist upon a designated date. At that point the charter would become a private corporation.

More specifically, the legislation is designed to:

First, establish and organize native American community lending institutions, that will be called Native American Financial Institutions. These lending institutions could be any type of financial institution, including community banks, credit unions and saving banks, that together, could provide a wide range of financial services;

Second, develop and provide financial expertise and technical assistance to the Native American Financial Institutions, including methods of underwriting, securing, and selling mortgage and small commercial and consumer loans; and Third, develop and provide specialized technical assistance on how to overcome barriers to primary mortgage lending on native American lands, including issues related to trust lands, discrimination, and inapplicability of standard underwriting criteria.

Importantly, this legislation will work in conjunction with the Community Development Financial Institutions [CDFI] fund established in the Reigle Community Development Banking and Regulatory Improvement Act, signed into law by the President last year. Under a cooperative agreement with the CDFI fund, this legislation will provide technical assistance and other services to Native American Financial Institutions.

This week, Secretary Cisneros testified before the Committee on Indian Affairs. In his remarks, he stated that this legislation will "neither conflict nor duplicate the functions of CDFI or any other Government-sponsored enterprise, but is intended to supplement the efforts of existing organizations."

In short, the Native American Financial Services Organization would help provide financial independence to the native American community and would begin to address the housing deficiencies by working to attract private capital into the Indian housing market.

Mr. President, I would like to conclude my remarks by making reference to a letter I recently received from the chairperson of the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe, that I believe illustrates the great necessity for this legislation. The letter states that the shortage of housing in the community is so severe that among the approximately 1,500 tribal members, 400 are without a permanent home and that a waiting list for new housing approaches 300 people.

It is for this reason, that I believe the Native American Financial Services Organization is much needed. Statistics such as this merit the need for an innovative financing mechanism the Native American Financial Services Organization can provide.

Mr. President, in closing, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD immediately following the full text of my statement and that the statements of Senators MCCAIN and INOUE, who are both original cosponsors, appear in the RECORD immediately following the bill.

I also ask unanimous consent to include letters from the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe, the Native American Indian Housing Council, and HUD's Secretary Henry Cisneros to be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UTE MOUNTAIN UTE TRIBE
TOWAOC, COLORADO,
January 26, 1995.

Senator BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL,
Russell Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CAMPBELL: Thank you for your letter of January 25, 1995 requesting my comments on the draft Native American Financial Services Organization Act (NAFSO) attached thereto. Based on this Tribe's experience and on the House Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs report referenced in the draft, this type of assistance to Tribes is desperately needed. Your efforts to remedy the current housing situation for Native Americans is greatly appreciated.

After a brief review of the draft NAFSO, I have some initial observations. First, with respect to governance of NAFSO, it will be important to ensure that financial services experts are either on the Board of Directors or in a position to directly advise them. The issue here is that such experts will be required for a successful NAFSO and to assist in the establishment of NAFIs. Experts are necessary for the fiscal management of NAFSO itself.

Second, along these same lines, there probably should be some federal oversight, but not necessarily regulatory control, consistent with the United States's trust responsibility, to make sure NAFSO and NAFIs are properly established and operated. This oversight would be in addition to that required by the draft if NAFSO is authorized to purchase and sell Native American mortgages. Please advise if NAFIs would be subject to banking and lending laws as other such institutions are. Third, a more detailed explanation of what the "tribal contribution" will amount to in NAFSO's future would be beneficial. Many tribes with limited financial resources will have concerns about this facet of the legislation and some indication of what such contributions will entail may help to alleviate apprehension about them. Nevertheless, some tribes may oppose any tribal contributions at all. One would hope that the NAFSO could operate on its own resources if it is indeed successful.

To sum up, my primary concern involves ensuring that NAFSO will be successful, particularly considering it will be up to the Tribes in large part to do so. Some expert or federal representation on the Board of Directors would be helpful in this regard.

Coupled with this consideration is the importance of oversight for operations of NAFIs. This seems appropriate since the draft implies these institutions will be very similar to banks, institutions which are already highly regulated.

As you may be aware, the Department of Veteran's Affairs entered into a Cooperative Agreement with the Tribe on November 15, 1993 to assist us in obtaining home loans for veteran tribal members. To date, no loans have been processed under this Cooperative Agreement. At the same time, I have some concern about HUD's involvement in this program based on their inability to resolve this problem on its own. Nevertheless, surely HUD has learned much from its mistakes and should add to the process. Whether that agency should be a majority voice in the decision-making or policy formulating process is something that should be examined.

The shortage of suitable housing on this Reservation is severe. We currently have close to 400 individuals without a permanent home and near 300 which have placed themselves on the waiting list for housing. Out of the 1500 or so tribal members which reside here, this means over 25% of our people are without a permanent home. We also have information which indicates that upwards of 200 families are forced to share their homes with other families to provide the most basic of human needs, shelter. As you can understand, this desperate situation seriously affects tribal member's sense of self-worth and self-esteem.

Although this Tribe operates a Casino as well as other successful enterprises, we must utilize those funds for operation of the Tribal budget and economic development to keep our people working and reduce unemployment. It is for this reason that your draft NAFSO/NAFI legislation is urgently needed.

Again, I cannot stress enough how much your efforts in this regard are appreciated. The Tribe acknowledges this efforts and will endeavor to help where we can.

Thank you very much for the opportunity to comment. Please contact my office if you require anything further.

Sincerely,

JUDY KNIGHT FRANK,
Chairperson.

NATIONAL AMERICAN INDIAN HOUSING COUNCIL,

Washington, DC, January 24, 1995.

Hon. BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR: On behalf of the NAIHC's Board of Directors and membership, I am writing to thank you for supporting legislation that is very important to the Native American community. In particular, your support for the Native American Financial Services Organization (NAFSO) is greatly appreciated as NAIHC believes this legislation will bring much needed relief to solving the housing problems for Native Americans.

The housing needs in Indian Country remain acute and we recognize that we must move beyond housing assistance from the federal government. NAFSO will help us do so. We believe that allowing the creation of Native American Financial Institutions (NAFIs) will also stimulate local economies and encourage privately financed housing.

Your recognition that NAFSO will have a positive affect on Indian Country is appreciated and valued. Please feel free to contact me if I can be of further support regarding this legislation.

Sincerely,

RUTH A. JAURE,
Executive Director.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT,

Washington, DC, September 22, 1994.

Hon. ALBERT GORE, JR.,
President of the U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I am pleased to transmit to you the "Native American Financial Services Organization Act of 1994." For the past several months, the Department of Housing and Urban Development has been working with the Departments of the Treasury, the Interior, Agriculture and Veterans' Affairs, in consultation with the Native American Community to develop this bill.

Based upon the findings and recommendations of the Commission on American Indian, Alaska Native and Native Hawaiian Housing, established by Public Law 101-235, HUD believes that housing shortages and deplorable living conditions have reached crisis proportions in Native American communities throughout the United States.

Historically, financing for most Native American housing and economic development has been provided through government programs. These federal programs, however, do not fully meet the needs of Native American communities. Furthermore, there are few financial institutions that provide financial services to these communities.

To begin to address this crisis, the Department is proposing this legislation to improve the conditions and supply of housing in Native American communities by creating the Native American Financial Services Organization. This legislation would establish a limited government-chartered corporation to be known as the Native American Financial Services Organization (NAFSO). A Federal grant would capitalize the federally-chartered, for-profit NAFSO through a cooperative agreement. Under the agreement, NAFSO could assist Native Americans in creating local financial institutions to address their capital needs. The Federal NAFSO charter would cease to exist upon a designated date, by which time it would be merged into a private corporation. The legislation also provides for an "asset cap" that is designed to limit the size of the NAFSO to $20 million. It is anticipated that the NAFSO will be privatized in order to grow beyond this limit. It also is anticipated that tribal contributions would assist the NAFSO in becoming self-sufficient over time.

The governance of the NAFSO would be vested in a Board of Directors that would be representative of the Native American community. Shares would be equitably distributed among federally-recognized tribes; the Board could elect to distribute additional shares on an investment basis.

It is the purpose of this Act—

(1) to help serve the mortgage, economic development, and other lending needs of Native Americans by assisting in the establishment and organization of Native American community lending institutions that would be called Native American Financial Institutions (NAFIs); NAFIs would be any type of financial institution, including community banks, credit unions and savings banks, and therefore could provide a wide range of financial services;

(2) to develop and provide financial expertise and technical assistance to NAFIs, including assistance on how to overcome barriers to lending on Native American lands, and the past and present impact of discrimination;

(3) to promote access to mortgage and economic development credit throughout Native American communities by increasing the liquidity of financing for housing and improving the distribution of investment capital available for such financing, primarily through NAFIs;

(4) to direct sources of public and private capital into housing and economic development for Native American individuals and families, primarily through NAFIs; and,

(5) to provide ongoing assistance to the secondary market for residential mortgages and economic development loans for Native American individuals and families, NAFIs, and other borrowers by increasing the liquidity of such mortgage investments and improving the distribution of investment capital available for such residential mortgage financing.

At the outset, it is contemplated that the NAFSO itself will not purchase and sell Native American mortgages originated by the NAFIs, but rather will work with the existing secondary market for residential mortgages to increase the liquidity for such investment. However, if it is later determined that the secondary market is not meeting reasonable mortgage purchase goals established by this department, the NAFSO will be authorized to purchase and sell such mortgages.

The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development would be authorized to provide up to $10 million, subject to appropriations, for the funding of a cooperative agreement for technical assistance and other services to be provided by the NAFSO to NAFIs. In addition, there would be authorized, without fiscal year limitation, $20 million to provide financial assistance through the NAFSO to NAFIs. Funding would be made available from the Community Development Financial Institution (CDFI) fund. NAFIs are not eligible for additional funding under the CDFI fund if the NAFI elects to receive funding under this Act.

This legislation further provides that the Office of Federal Housing Enterprise Oversight would regulate matters pertaining to the financial safety and soundness of the NAFSO in the event that the NAFSO is authorized to purchase and sell Native American mortgages and the Department of Housing and Urban Development would have general regulatory authority.

The "Native American Financial Services Act of 1994" would provide financial independence to the Native American community that has never been enjoyed before. It provides the structure to marry private financial resources with Federal and tribal resources in a way that benefits all parties. The creation of the NAFSO would have the ripple effect of opening avenues to economic development and housing that have not been available heretofore.

The Office of Management and Budget has advised that it has no objection to the transmittal of this legislation to Congress.

I request that the bill be referred to the appropriate committee and urge its early consideration. I am sending a similar letter to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, Thomas S. Foley.

Sincerely,

HENRY G. CISNEROS,
Secretary.

Mr. INOUE, Mr. President, I rise today to express my support for a measure being introduced by my esteemed colleague from Colorado, Senator BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL. This measure, the Native American Financial Services Organization Act of 1995, is being introduced at the request of the administration. It is the end-product of a multiagency Federal working group whose goal was to craft a legislative proposal which would encourage, promote, and foster the delivery of housing and economic development financing to native American families and communities.

Mr. President, it is difficult for many of us here to comprehend the sheer magnitude of the housing needs of this Nation's native communities. In 1993, the Bureau of Indian Affairs of the U.S. Department of Interior estimated that 88,689 native American families were in need of housing assistance. But anyone familiar with Indian country would agree that these figures reflect a gross underestimation. I am pleased to note that in the next few months, the Department of Housing and Urban Development will be releasing the results of an assessment of Indian housing needs and programs. This survey is one of the most ambitious and comprehensive ever undertaken, and it is my hope that we in the Congress will finally be provided with a more accurate picture of the housing needs and conditions of native American families.

The Native American Financial Services Organization Act has its genesis in the finding and recommendations of the National Commission on American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian housing. The Commission, established pursuant to Public Law 101-235, documented that native American families and communities were overwhelmingly and consistently access to conventional financing mechanisms, often due to the unique legal status of Indian trust lands. The Commission recommended the creation of a Native American Finance Authority to direct sources of capital to native Americans, native American families, and other eligible mortgagors in order that they might meet their housing and related infrastructure needs.

Mr. President, this administration heeded the Commission's call for action. The Department of Housing and Urban Development spearheaded a multi-departmental effort, which included representatives for the Department of the Treasury, the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and the Office of Management and Budget. The working group began with the Commission's legislative proposal, and ended with the measure which I am honored to be co-sponsoring today. This administration deserves to be commended for recognizing the distressed housing conditions under which many of our native American families live and for taking deliberate and meaningful steps to change and improve these circumstances.

In many, many respects, the measure being introduced today addresses the concerns of the National Commission on American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian Housing and embodies the spirit of the Commission's recommendations. But Mr. President, I wish to point out one very fundamental difference between this measure, and the Commission's legislative proposal. The omission—one which I have just cause to be concerned about—is a glaring one, for while the original proposal included native Hawaiians, the bill before us today does not.

Mr. President, the Commission's final report documented that native Hawaiians are among the neediest in the State of Hawaii—they have the worst housing conditions and the highest percentage of homelessness, representing over 30 percent of the State's homeless population. Under any circumstances, the figures would be deplorable, but the truth is that this situation can only worsen. I surely do not need to point out that Hawaii is one of the most expensive States in which to build, rent, or purchase a home, and that, according to a recent survey conducted by the National Association of Home Builders, Honolulu ranked 179th out of 185 places in home affordability.

Mr. President, I stand here, not only as a co-sponsor, in support of this measure, but as the senior Senator from the State of Hawaii and one who has long sought to address the housing needs of the native Hawaiian people. I must express for the record my disappointment that this bill departs from the recommendation of the very Commission which was the genesis for the concept of a financial service organization—namely that native Hawaiians should be included in this measure. I assure you that I will seek to honor the Commission's recommendations.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, today I am pleased to join as an original co-sponsor of a bill to establish a Native American Financial Services Organization [NAFSO] that will provide financial incentives to increase homeownership opportunities in Indian and Alaska Native communities.

Indian housing problems have reached crisis proportions with seriously deteriorating conditions and severe overcrowding. The latest U.S. Census report indicates that 18 percent of Indian reservation homes are overcrowded, while the comparable data for the Nation as a whole is 2. The shortage of housing is made even more acute by the deplorable condition of existing housing in native American communities. Many Indian homes lack running water, indoor bathrooms, sufficient heat, or weatherization.

To date, most of the housing construction done on reservations has been financed directly by the U.S. Government. But Indian housing needs have far out-stripped the capacity of Federal housing construction efforts. Everyone who has looked at the problem agrees that one main reason for the Indian housing disaster is an absence of private capital participation in financing housing in Indian and Alaska Native communities.

The bill I am cosponsoring today would begin to change the Federal role in Indian housing in ways that strengthen and empower local tribal governments in their efforts to increase housing opportunities in their communities. The bill would do this by federally chartering a limited, for-profit corporation to be known as the Native American Financial Services Organization [NAFSO]. NAFSO would assist Indians and Alaska Natives to create local financial institutions that will attract capital investment in housing in Indian communities. It would also work within the existing secondary market to increase the liquidity of mortgages placed on housing located on land held in trust for Indians by the United States. If sufficient levels of private lending are not achieved, at a later date NAFSO could enter the secondary market itself to purchase and sell mortgages.

I am particularly pleased that the bill contains a sunset-type provision under which the Federal charter would cease and NAFSO would be merged into a private corporation to permit further growth and attract private contributions, including those of tribes with funds to invest in Indian and native American housing.

I look forward to a hearing on this bill because it will provide an opportunity for the Committee on Indian Affairs to evaluate this proposal to ensure that it is properly designed to accomplish its goals. While a commission on Indian and native American housing recommended the concepts underlying this bill, and while many tribal governments already are on record in support of the bill as introduced, I will ask tribes and tribal organizations to scrutinize the bill and provide the committee with recommendations to improve it and sharpen its focus on the serious problems plaguing Indian housing.

I commend HUD Secretary Cisneros for his increased support for Indian housing efforts, one of which is reflected in the Department's development of this NAFSO proposal, and I look forward to working with the administration to enact this important legislation.

S. 437. A bill to establish a Northern Border States-Canada Trade Council, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A NORTHERN BORDER STATES COUNCIL ON UNITED STATES AND CANADIAN TRADE

• Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation that would establish the Northern Border States Council on United States-Canada Trade. The purpose of this Council is to oversee cross-border trade with our Nation's largest trading partner—an action that I believe is long overdue. The Council will serve as an early warning system to alert State and Federal trade officials to problems in cross-border traffic and trade. And the Council will help the United States more efficiently manage the administration of its trade policy with Canada by applying the wealth of insight, knowledge and expertise that resides in our northern border States on this critical policy issue.

Yes, we already have the Department of Commerce and a U.S. Trade Representative. But the fact is that these both are federal entities, responsible for our larger, national U.S. trade interest. Too often, they do not look after the interests of the 12 Northern States that share a border with Canada. The Northern Border States Council will provide State trade officials a mechanism to share information about cross-border traffic and trade. The Council will then advise the Congress, the President, the United States Trade Representative, the Secretary of Commerce, and other Federal and State trade officials on United States-Canada trade policies, practices, and relations.

Canada is America's largest trading partner. Trade with Canada accounts for approximately one-fifth of total United States exports and Canada is the top purchaser of U.S. exports. Canada is also the largest supplier of United States imports. Canada needs to maintain close trade ties with the United States to assure its survival. The Canadian economy is heavily oriented on exports, and most—roughly 75 percent—of that trade is directly with the United States.

Over the last decade, Canada and the United States have signed two major trade agreements—the United States-Canada Free-Trade Agreement in 1989, and the North American Free-Trade Agreement in 1993. Notwithstanding these trade accords, numerous disagreements have caused trade negotiators to shuttle back and forth between Washington and Ottawa. Most of the more well-known trade disputes with Canada have dealt with agricultural commodities such as durum wheat, peanut butter, dairy products, and poultry products, and these disputes have impacted more than just the 12 northern border States.

But each and every day an enormous quantity of trade and traffic crosses the United States-Canada border. There are literally thousands of businesses, large and small, that rely on this cross-border traffic and trade for their livelihood. Any disruption in that flow of traffic and trade, whether intentional or not, would have traumatic economic consequences on hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of people in the 12 northern border States.

The people best qualified to monitor that cross-border traffic and trade live in the States along our northern border—States that share that border with Canada. This is why it is important that the members of this Council be from those States.

My own State of Maine has had a long-running dispute with Canada over that Nation's unfair policies in support of its potato industry. Specifically, Canada protects its domestic potato growers from United States competition through a system of nontariff trade barriers, such as setting container size limitations and a prohibition on bulk imports from the United States. This bulk import prohibition effectively blocks United States potato imports into Canada. At the same time, Canada artificially enhances the competitiveness of its product through domestic subsidies for potato growers.

Another trade dispute with Canada, specifically with the province of New Brunswick, served as the inspiration for this legislation. In July 1993, Canadian Federal Customs Officials began stopping Canadians returning from Maine and collecting from them the 11-percent New Brunswick provincial sales tax [PST] on goods purchased in Maine. Canadian Customs Officers had already been collecting the Canadian Federal sales tax all across the United States-Canada border. The collection of the New Brunswick PST was specifically targeted against goods purchased in Maine—not on goods purchased in any of the other provinces bordering New Brunswick. The premier of New Brunswick even admitted that his province had no intention of trying to collect the PST along any of its provincial borders. Only along the border with Maine.

After months of imploring the United States Trade Representative to do something about the imposition of the unfair tax, Ambassador Kantor agreed that the New Brunswick PST was a violation of NAFTA, and that the United States would include the PST in the NAFTA dispute settlement process. It has languished in that process for almost a year because Canada and Mexico have been stubbornly refusing to finalize the details of the NAFTA dispute resolution process.

Throughout the early months of the PST dispute, we in the State of Maine had enormous difficulty convincing our Federal trade officials that the PST was in fact an international trade dispute that warranted their attention. We had no way of knowing if the PST was a national problem, or a localized one. If a body like the Northern State Trade Council had been in existence when the collection of the PST began, it would have immediately started investigating the issue to determine its causes and make recommendations on how to deal with it.

In short, the Northern Border States Council will serve as the eyes and ears for our States that share a border with Canada, and are vulnerable to fluctuations in cross-border trade and traffic. The Council will be a tool for Federal and State officials to use in monitoring their cross-border trade. It will help ensure that national trade policy regarding America's largest trading partner will be developed and implemented with an eye toward the unique burdens and opportunities present to the northern border States.

The Northern Border States Council will be an advisory body, not a regulatory one. Its fundamental purpose will be to determine the nature and course of cross-border trade issues or disputes, and to recommend how to resolve them.

The duties and responsibilities of the Council will include, but are not limited to, providing advice and policy recommendations on such matters as taxation and the regulation of cross-border wholesale and retail trade in goods and services; taxation, regulation and subsidization of food, agricultural, energy, and forest-products commodities; and the potential for Federal, State, and Canadian provincial laws and regulations—including customs and immigrations regulations—to act as nontariff barriers to trade.

As an advisory body, the Council will review and comment on all Federal and/or State reports, studies, and practices concerning United States-Canada trade, with particular emphasis on all reports from the dispute settlement panel established under the North American Free Trade Agreement. These Council reviews will be conducted upon the request of the U.S. Trade Representative, the Secretary of Commerce, any Member of Congress from a Council State, and the Governor of a Council State.

If the Council determines that the origin of a cross-border trade dispute resides with Canada, the Council must determine, to the best of its ability, if the source of the dispute is the Canadian Federal Government or a Canadian provincial government.

My goal is not to create another Federal trade bureaucracy. The Council will be made up of individuals nominated by the Governors and approved by the Secretary of Commerce. Each Northern border State will have two members on the Council. The Council members will be unpaid, and serve a 2-year term.

The Northern Border States Council on United States-Canada Trade will not solve all of our trade problems with Canada. But it will ensure that the voices and views of our northern border States are heard in Washington by our Federal trade officials. For too long their voices were ignored, and the northern border States have had to suffer severe economic consequences at times because of it. This legislation will restore our northern border States to their rightful position as full partners in administering and managing cross-border trade and traffic with America's largest trading partner.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this important legislation.●

By Ms. SNOWE:

S. 438. A bill to reform criminal laws, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

LEGISLATION TO STRENGTHEN AMERICA'S ANTI-CRIME LAWS

● Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation to address the serious problem of crime in America, while offering stronger protection to the victims of crime. My legislation will propose mandatory minimum sentences for criminals who use a firearm while committing violent State crimes; require truth-in-sentencing provisions so that criminals complete at least 85 percent of their sentences; eliminate prison luxuries that coddle prisoners, and require courts to order restitution for the victims of crimes.

Many of these proposals—which are designed to strengthen the crime package passed by Congress last year—are not new. Some have already won passage in the Senate as part of the Senate-passed crime bill. But they are important proposals—and it is important for our citizens and especially for our children—that we include these plans to get tough on crime.

When 23 million households will suffer from crimes this year, it is no wonder that crime is the number one concern of most Americans, whether in a relatively safe State like Maine, or here in the District of Columbia. As Americans scan the front page of the newspapers every morning, word of crimes right in our own neighborhoods catches our eye, puts us on guard—and keeps the American people on edge. We have been raised in a humane and advanced nation—and our citizens place a premium on safety, security. For too many Americans, the home is no longer a castle. Too many Americans must lock up their homes like a fortress, and walk through our streets with fear because of the scourge of violent crime.

Indeed, Americans no longer feel safe in their own neighborhoods. In the 35 years since 1960, the population of the United States has increased by 44 percent. Over that same time, violent crime in America has increased by more than 500 percent. Our Nation has lost its edge in law enforcement and in humane social efforts that meet the root causes of crime. Indeed, according to a recent study published in Business Week, crime bears an enormous cost: The total direct and indirect cost of crime in America is a staggering $425 billion.

Sadly, crime does not discriminate across regional or social boundaries. Crime reaches to us all—and exacts a devastating personal toll on its victims and their families and loved ones. Few among us have escaped the devastating impact of crime. Every day, 14 Americans are murdered, 48 are raped, and 578 are robbed. In our lifetimes, one-third of all Americans will be robbed. Three-fourths will be assaulted.

In the course of the average day in America, there is a murder every 21 minutes. Rape is committed once every 5 minutes. Robberies occur every 46 seconds. Burglaries occur every 10 seconds. Imagine: A boy born in 1978 stands a greater chance of being murdered in the United States than one of our brave soldiers in World War II stood of dying in combat.

Last year, Congress passed the President's crime bill—a package that took steps to punish violent criminals and keep them off the streets, and to address the root problems of crime. Unfortunately, however, the President's bill stopped short of proposals that I believe will give our Nation's anticrime laws teeth.

My legislation includes tough provisions to provide mandatory minimum sentences for violent State crimes, or State drug trafficking crimes involving the use or possession of a firearm. Clearly, we must crack down on the violent offenders who have been proven responsible for the vast majority of crimes.

Studies by the criminologist Marvin Wolfgang show that just 7 percent of each age group was responsible for two-thirds of all violent crime, including three-fourths of all rapes and robberies—and virtually every murder. According to Mr. Wolfgang's study—conducted in Philadelphia over a 13-year period—this 7 percent of the population had five or more arrests by the age of 18. For every arrest, each individual had gotten away with another dozen crimes.

Indeed, it is estimated that last year, more than 1,100 convicted murderers did not go to prison; more than 6,900 convicted rapists did not go to prison; more than 37,000 individuals convicted of aggravated assault did not go to prison.

My proposal will impose tough mandatory minimum sentences on violent criminals. For first-time offenders, we will direct the courts to impose sentences of 10 years for those who possess a firearm; 20 years if they discharge that firearm with the intent to harm another person; and 30 years for possession of a machine gun or other weapon equipped with a firearm silencer or muffler.

Too often, however, even a tough first sentence is not enough to stop the endless cycle of crime. More than 40 percent of murderers released from State prisons are re-arrested for a felony or serious misdemeanor within 3 years—more than 20 percent for another violent crime. Of the 50,000 violent criminals who are put on probation this year, more than 9,000 will not learn their lesson. They will be re-arrested in the same State within 3 years for another violent crime. An astonishing 10 percent of America's jail population—39,000 people in 1989—committed their current crime while out on parole.

So for second-time offenders, we will make our mandatory minimum sentences tougher; 20 years for possession of a firearm, 30 years for discharge of a firearm with the intent to injure another person, and life in prison for possession of a machine gun.

And for a third offense? Three strikes and they're out—for life imprisonment for any violent offender.

My provisions for mandatory minimum sentences will prohibit States from offering probation or suspended sentences, and we will direct the courts that sentences cannot run concurrently. This legislation also provides for Good Samaritans or for citizens who act in self-defense: the provision will not apply to those acting in defense of person or property during the course of a crime committed by another person.

Criminals have also learned, over times, that the odds in sentencing are in their favor. For every 100 violent crimes reported, only 4 criminals go to prison. The risk of punishment for a serious criminal offense has declined by two-thirds since 1950, while the annual number of serious crimes is seven times greater than it was then. This fact is not lost on criminals, who know that if they scoff at the criminal justice system—and hire a good lawyer—they can go free in little, if any time. Even when criminals are convicted and sent to prison after appeals, they know that the average violent offender—who in 1990 received a sentence of 7.8 years—will serve just over 3 years in jail.

To make sure that convicted criminals serve their time, my legislation will enact truth-in-sentencing provisions. In order to be eligible for prison funding under the 1994 crime bill, this legislation will require that States change their laws to require violent offenders to serve a minimum of 85 percent of their required sentence.

Prison is not meant to be a pleasant experience: it is meant, instead, to serve as both a deterrent to crime and to rehabilitate criminals so that they can again become productive members of society. Too often, however, our criminal justice system has coddled prisoners with luxury items that even hard-working Americans can not afford. Indeed, our Federal prison system has earned the nickname "Club Fed" because of its luxury. I believe our Federal prison system must instead address the root causes of crime as it rehabilitates prisoners. We should eliminate the luxuries in our prisons from expansive weight lifting equipment to X-rated movies, cable television, computer, even miniature golf.

Instead, we should require every able-bodied prisoner to work, and begin to return to society part of what the prisoner has taken. My legislation will give the Attorney General 120 days to implement and enforce regulations mandating prison work for able-bodied inmates in Federal penal and correctional institutions.

In addition to these provisions that get tough on criminals and make our tough sentences stick, my legislation includes provisions to require increased fairness—and awareness—of the victims of crimes. For the 5 million people each year who are victims of violent crimes—such as rape, murder, robbery or assault—these provisions will provide increased security and peace of mind. While criminals can pursue one legal remedy after another, victims of crimes quickly exhaust their options and are frequently forced to quietly bear the brunt of the crime, alone, and without restitution.

Victim restitution presently can be ordered by courts, at the discretion of the court. My legislation will require courts to order restitution, and extends to the victims of crimes the same sort of safeguards that we extended to women in the Violence Against Women Act, which I cosponsored in the House.

This legislation will state that victims should be reimbursed for all necessary expenses related to the investigation and prosecution of crime, whether child care, transportation or other expenses. No longer will the economic cost of prosecution serve as a deterrent that could keep victims from vigorously pursuing justice.

This legislation also will require reimbursement to the victim for medical services resulting from physical, psychiatric or psychological care, physical and occupational therapy costs due to rehabilitation, and all other losses suffered by the victim because of the crime. I believe that these provisions provide basic fairness for the victims of crime, and begin to balance our criminal justice system again by keeping in mind the needs of crime victims.

Mr. President, the people of Maine and America have a right to be personally secure, free from the fear of violent crime. My legislation combines positive steps that punish criminals and keep them off the streets, and to meet the often-overlooked needs of the victims of crime. This is legislation that is overdue, and will improve our nation's crime-fighting efforts.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation.●

S. 439. A bill to direct the Director of the Office of Management and Budget to establish commissions to review regulations issued by certain Federal departments and agencies, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

REGULATORY REFORM COMMISSION ACT

● Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, it is well known that Federal regulations stifle economic growth. The cost of complying with Federal regulations alone is estimated to be between $300 and $500 billion per year—$4,000 to $6,000 for every working man and woman in America. The private sector spends 6.6 billion hours year complying with Federal paperwork requirements. The number of pages in the Federal Register last year was 45 percent higher than the number in 1986—without the Clinton health care bill going anywhere.

These excessive and misguided mandates impose enormous economic costs that limit economic growth and job creation. Small and medium-sized businesses—which are the businesses in my State of Wyoming—are disproportionately hurt by overregulation because they have fewer resources to allocate for compliance.

Mr. President, the 1994 elections were about change. The American people want less government in their lives. They don't want OSHA inspectors breathing down their necks, they don't want to pay for unnecessary EPA mandated facilities and they don't want Washington bureaucrats telling them how to live their lives.

That is why I am introducing the Regulatory Reform Commissions Act. This measure is designed to look back, review, and reduce existing regulations. My legislation would establish three bipartisan Regulatory Review Commissions, one for each selected Federal department or agency. Initially, I have selected the Departments of Interior, Labor, and the Environmental Protection Agency [EPA]. Over a 2-year period, the commissions will examine all regulations within the selected Federal department or agency and determine if the regulations are justified and report all appropriate changes to Congress, the department, and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget [OMB]. The commissions will examine the department's or agency's rules based on the following criteria: Whether the regulations are within the scope of authority of the statutes under which the regulations were issued; whether the regulations are consistent with the original intent of Congress; whether the regulations are based on cost/benefit analysis; and whether the regulations are subject to judicial review.

There have been several different proposals, which I support, to prevent new onerous regulations. This legislation is a perfect fit with those efforts, because it reviews the rules already on the books.

I urge my colleagues to join me in the effort against overregulation.●

S. 440. A bill to amend title 23, United States Code, to provide for the designation of the National Highway System, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

THE NATIONAL HIGHWAY SYSTEM DESIGNATION ACT OF 1995

• Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I am pleased to be joined today by Chairman CHAFEE, Senator BAUCUS, Senator LAUTENBERG, Senator BOND, and others.

We are here today to provide assurances to the States, to commercial activities dependent on a viable transportation system, and to the motoring public that the Congress will enact the National Highway System legislation this year.

The legislation I am introducing to designate the National Highway System is sponsored by 14 of my colleagues.

The National Highway System is the cornerstone of the 1991 ISTEA statute which preserves a Federal role in a core surface transportation network.

As we come to the completion of the Eisenhower Interstate System, the NHS is the next generation of Federal focus to meet transportation challenges into the 21st century.

This system of 159,000 miles—although only a small fraction of highways in this country—consists of the 44,000-mile Interstate System and other primary routes.

Today, we affirm that Federal responsibility by ensuring a consistency of road engineering and safety among the States to provide for the free flow of commerce and to efficiently move people.

Ideally, Congress has only to approve the map which is the product of a joint effort between the Department of Transportation and our States. But, pragmatically, we all know that this legislation will be the 18-wheeler that will carry other issues.

We must not, however, be detoured from our mission.

Without passage of this bill, we know that our States will be crippled by the sanction of a loss of $6 billion until Congress does its job.

The NHS also will allow States to benefit from the flexibility and intermodalism which is the hallmark of ISTEA.

For the first time, States will focus their investments on connecting our rail, air, commercial water ports, and highways so that performance of the entire system can be maximized.

The NHS also provides an opportunity for States to target their future investments on these routes which carry high volumes of commuter traffic and commercial truck traffic.

Improving the safety of the motoring public must remain a Federal priority.

Routes on the NHS must be among the first to benefit from the application of new and emerging technologies to improve safety and reduce congestion.

In Virginia, the twin problems of congestion and safety in major urban/suburban areas have been the focus of our transportation policies for some time.

We only need to look at Sunday's Washington Post to remind us of the dangers of driving on the Capital Beltway.

Again this morning, our commuters and commerce suffered extensive delays on the Capital Beltway when a tractor-trailer accident at the Cabin John Bridge closed a large segment of the beltway for hours.

As a result of this gridlock, commuters cannot get to work and interstate commerce is delayed. That translates into reduced productivity and wasted resources for all Americans.

The legislation we are introducing today also includes modest provisions to provide uniformity and flexibility to States as they continue to implement ISTEA.

As States enter the fourth year of ISTEA and we have sufficient information and experience to support these modifications.

As we move this legislation forward, my focus will be to reduce mandates on our States, without jeopardizing the safety of the traveling public, and to increase flexibility for States to allocate funds to meet their own needs.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that additional material be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL HIGHWAY SYSTEM DESIGNATION ACT OF 1995—SECTION BY SECTION ANALYSIS

Sec. 1: Short Title.

Sec. 2:

Section 2 approves the most recent National Highway System submitted to Congress by the Secretary of Transportation. The section also specifies the procedure for future changes and modifications to the NHS after Congress has adopted the initial system. At the request of a State, the Secretary may add a new route segment to the NHS or delete an existing route segment and any connection to the route segment, as long as the segment or connection is within the jurisdiction of the requesting State and the total mileage of the NHS (including any route segment or connection proposed to be added) does not exceed 165,000 miles.

If a State requests a modification to the NHS as adopted by Congress, the State must establish that each change in a route segment or connection has been identified by the State in cooperation with local officials. This cooperative process between the State and local officials will be carried out under the existing transportation planning activities for metropolitan areas and the statewide planning processes established under ISTEA.

Congress will not approve or disapprove any subsequent modifications made to the NHS. The cooperative planning process between State and local officials, along with the approval of the Secretary, is the appropriate forum for considering modifications to the NHS following enactment of this legislation.

Sec. 3:

Section 3 amends section 103(i) of title 23 to permit States to use National Highway System and Congestion Mitigation and Air Quality funds for operational expenses of Intelligent Vehicle Highways System (IVHS) projects for an unlimited period of time rather than the two years currently stipulated.

Sec. 4:

Section 4 amends section 104 of title 23 to permit a State to transfer 60 percent of its bridge apportionments to its National Highway System or Surface Transportation Program categories.

Sec. 5:

Section 5 amends section 129(a)(5) of title 23 to provide that the Federal share for participation in toll highways, bridges, and tunnels shall be a percentage as determined by the State but not to exceed 80 percent. Depending on the facility, the federal share currently ranges from 50 to 80 percent.

Sec. 6:

Section 6 amends 217(f) of title 23 to permit states to apply the federal lands sliding scale match to bicycle and pedestrian projects.

Sec. 7:

Section 7 amends section 323 of title 23 to allow private funds, materials and services to be donated to an activity eligible under title 23 and permits a state to apply 100 percent of such donated funds, materials or services to the State's matching share under title 23.

Sec. 8:

Section 8 states that notwithstanding any requirements of the Metric Conversion Act of 1975, no state is required to erect signs which establish speed limits, distance or other measurements using the metric system. If a state chooses to use its federal-aid highway funds for such a purpose, it may do so.

Sec. 9:

Section 9 requires states to receive U.S. Department of Transportation approval for Intelligent Vehicle Highway System (IVHS) projects within two years of receiving funds for this purpose. If after two years the Secretary has not approved a plan, the DOT may redirect unobligated funds to another IVHS project. Prior to such redirection, the Secretary shall notify the intended recipient that they are in danger of losing their funds.●

• Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I am pleased to join Senator WARNER in introducing legislation today that will approve the designation of the National Highway System.

As my colleagues will remember, the Environment and Public Works Committee fashioned what I believe is a landmark surface transportation bill now known as the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 or ISTEA. The purpose of this surface transportation law is to provide mobility for all our citizens, to enable our country to be competitive internationally, to promote economic development, and to provide transportation facilities that are sensitive to the environment and the communities they pass through.

The National Highway System, established by the surface transportation law, is an important part of our country's National Transportation System.

The National Highway System, which includes the Interstate System represents 4 percent of the highway system but carries 40 percent of the Nation's highway travel. Even more importantly, it connects intermodal and strategic facilities including our ports, airports, train stations, and military bases.

The U.S. Department of Transportation worked with the States and local governments to develop the National Highway System. In December of 1993 the Department transmitted the proposed System to Congress. Congress must approve the National Highway System by September 30 of this year, or States will not receive over $6 billion in highway funds.

The NHS legislation we are introducing today maintains the important principles that ISTEA established for the National Highway System.

First, it maintains the flexibility of the NHS so that the System can change as our transportation needs change. The legislation enables States, in consultation with local officials, and the Secretary of Transportation to add to and delete routes from the System.

Second, the amount of funding a State receives for the NHS program is not tied to the number of miles it has on the NHS System. There is no incentive to pad the System with a lot of miles in hopes of receiving more of the Federal money.

And third, the NHS funds retain their flexibility. States continue to have the ability to transfer NHS funds to other categories to target their highest priority needs.

In addition to the approval of the National Highway System, the legislation we are introducing today includes several other provisions that are in keeping with the principles of ISTEA to provide flexibility wherever possible.

Stability is very important in the Federal-aid highway program. States need the assurance of long-term funding to efficiently manage their transportation programs. As the NHS legislation makes its way through Congress this year, there may be a temptation to reopen the surface transportation law and debate items that are controversial. To disrupt this program and make significant changes in midstream will damage the transportation program. If we are to meet the September 30 deadline for approval of the National Highway System, contentious issues must be postponed until ISTEA is reauthorized in 1997.

I am pleased to join my colleagues in introducing the National Highway System bill and will work with them for its early approval. ●

By Mr. McCAIN:

S. 441. A bill to reauthorize appropriations for certain programs under the Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

THE INDIAN CHILD PROTECTION AND FAMILY VIOLENCE PROTECTION ACT

● Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, today I am introducing a bill to reauthorize

Public Law 101-630, the Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention Act. This bill will provide a 2-year reauthorization of appropriations pursuant to sections 409, 410, and 411 of the act. These sections are critical to Indian tribal governments in preventing and treating incidents of child abuse and family violence at the local level. Specifically, section 409 requires the Indian Health Service [IHS] and the Bureau of Indian Affairs [BIA] to cooperatively establish an Indian Child Abuse Treatment Grant Program, section 410 requires the BIA to establish Indian child resource and family services centers to provide technical assistance, training, and to develop policies and procedures on child abuse for Indian tribes, and section 411 requires the BIA to establish an Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention Program.

Mr. President, the Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention Act was enacted into law on November 28, 1990 to address concerns raised by the findings of the Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs and the Special Committee on Investigations. What these committees found through public hearings was that Indian country was literally a safe haven for child abuse perpetrators to prey upon Indian children. I'm sure that many of my colleagues in the Congress will recall the notorious cases of multiple child sexual abuse that rose within the Hopi, Navajo, and Cherokee Indian reservations. These crimes were perpetrated over the course of many years, and in some cases, the crimes were perpetrated upon generations of families. The Federal investigation and prosecution of these crimes provided insight into the purposeful plan of the perpetrators in committing their crimes in Indian communities. Child abuse perpetrators were aware that the conditions of detecting, reporting, investigating, and preventing crimes upon children were in such a sorry state that there crimes would rarely be detected. As a result, hundreds of Indian children, their families, and communities needlessly suffered.

Both the Special Committee on Investigations and the Committee on Indian Affairs held numerous hours of testimony in which both tribal and Federal witnesses testified about the serious deficiencies in the Federal Government's efforts to assist tribal governments in preventing and treating child abuse and family violence. The hearings disclosed that the BIA's failure to implement effective background checks on potential employees having contact with children resulted in negligent hiring practices, and child abuse reporting procedures deterred employees from reporting suspected child abuse. Tribal witnesses testified that law enforcement and social services lacked coordinated approaches to address child victimization. As a result, victims were often further traumatized by repeated interviews by physicians, social workers, investigators, and prosecutors. The hearings also revealed that due to scarce resources, tribal social workers and mental health professionals experienced case loads exceeding national standards. It also became very clear that both the IHS and the BIA lacked the professional experience necessary to treat incidents of child sexual abuse.

The Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention Act was intended to give the Federal Government an opportunity to meet its responsibility to Indian children and families by establishing policies and programs which would prevent the tragedies of child abuse and family violence. To accomplish the goals of the act, appropriations were authorized per fiscal year from 1990 through 1995 to establish prevention and treatment programs within the BIA and IHS. The act also authorize the BIA and IHS to assist tribes in establishing on-reservation child abuse prevention and treatment programs. The act also created mandatory Federal child abuse reporting and prescribed a process by which child abuse allegations would be handled to prevent further trauma to a victim.

Mr. President, the implementation of this act has had positive results in Indian country. Indian tribal governments have initiated local public education programs on the prevention and detection of child abuse and domestic violence. However, these local efforts have been so successful that reports of child abuse and domestic violence incidents have increased substantially. Therefore, the need for funding for treatment of these victims has also substantially increased. Last Congress, the Committee on Indian Affairs received testimony from tribal governments which documented these needs, and which called for more vigorous implementation of the act by the Federal agencies.

Finally, I believe that the possible benefits of the act have not been fully realized. Neither the BIA nor the IHS have successfully requested or received appropriations to fully implement the programs that are so critical to the protection of vulnerable Indian children and families. As a result, Indian tribal governments that are in desperate need of these services have had to rely on special appropriations and congressional earmarks to fund their efforts. Those tribes that are unable to obtain earmarks must struggle to provide child abuse and family violence prevention and treatment services using existing resources and piecemeal grants.

Mr. President, I strongly believe that extending the authorization of appropriations for the Indian Child Protection and Family Violence prevention act will enable the Federal agencies and Indian tribal governments the opportunity to continue and enhance the work that has begun on behalf of Indian children and families.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 441

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. REAUTHORIZATION OF PROGRAMS.

Sections 409(e), 410(h), and 411(i) of the Indian Child Protection and Family Violence prevention Act (25 U.S.C. 3208(e), 3209(h), and 3210(i), respectively) are each amended by striking "and 1995" and inserting "1995, 1996, and 1997".●

By Ms. SNOWE (for herself and Mr. DOLE):

S. 442. A bill to improve and strengthen the child support collection system, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

THE CHILD SUPPORT RESPONSIBILITY ACT OF 1995

● Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce, on behalf of myself and Senator DOLE, the Child Support Responsibility Act of 1995.

This bill improves upon existing child support enforcement mechanisms and establishes new enforcement systems where none currently are in place. Furthermore, it recognizes that the issue of child support enforcement goes far beyond parochial interests or state lines, that as a national problem for our children and their families, child support enforcement merits a national solution.

When two people, whether married or not, have a baby, they incur an obligation to provide for and care for their child. When parents live apart, the parent not living with, and providing day-to-day care for, the parent is expected to provide financial assistance for the child.

Consider the facts: millions of American single parents and children continue to suffer from the consequences of a parent who financially and emotionally abandons them. For mothers who have obtained a child support order—and more than 40 percent have not—only half of those actually receive what is owed—the other half receives partial payments or nothing. Never-married single parents have a particularly difficult time obtaining child support—1990 census data indicates that of all never-married custodial mothers, 75 percent did not have child support orders and more than 50 percent had household incomes below the poverty line. These statistics add up to significant economic and emotional burdens for single parents and their dependent children.

The Child Support Enforcement Program was first created in 1975 and significantly modified in 1984 and 1988. The program's purpose is to strengthen existing State and local efforts to locate noncustodial parents, to establish paternity for them, to obtain child support orders and collect child support payments. My proposed legislation, a companion to the House bill introduced by Congresswomen JOHNSON and ROUNKEMA, would assist the Child Support Enforcement Program with each of these goals.

To strengthen efforts to locate parents, it expands the Federal parent locator system and provides for State-to-State access of the network. To increase paternity establishment, the bill simplifies paternity procedures, facilitates voluntary acknowledgment, and encourages outreach. To facilitate the setting of effective child support orders, it calls for the establishment of a National Child Support Guidelines Commission to develop a national child support guideline for consideration by Congress, and provides for a simplified process for review and adjustment of child support orders. And to facilitate child support enforcement and collection, the bill expands the penalties for child support delinquency to include the denial of professional, recreational, and driver's license to deadbeat parents, the imposition of liens on real property, and the automatic reporting of delinquency to credit unions. It also grants families who are owed child support the right of first access to an IRS refund credited to a deadbeat dad and permits the denial of a passport for individuals who are more than $5,000 or 24 months in arrears.

Other provisions include developing a national registry of child support orders, developing centralized State registries, and requiring States to adopt the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act, as approved by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws in August 1992.

Through the enactment of this child support legislation I would like to begin to ease, and eventually lift, the economic and emotional burdens caused by delinquent child support payments. Noncustodial parents must begin to accept and bear responsibility for their children, who will reap the support they so justly deserve and desperately need.●

By Mr. MURKOWSKI (for himself and Mr. STEVENS):

S. 444. A bill to amend the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act to provide for the purchase of common stock of Cook Inlet region, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

THE ALASKA NATIVE CLAIMS ACT AMENDMENT
ACT OF 1995

● Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce a bill to amend the Alaska Native Claims Act of 1971 at the request of Cook Inlet Region, Inc. [CIRI] to allow CIRI to purchase stock from their shareholders and retire the stock.

Congress enacted the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act [ANCSA] in 1971 to address claims to lands in Alaska by the Eskimo, Indian, and Aleut Native people. Lands and other benefits transferred to Alaska Natives under the act were conveyed to corporations formed under this act. CIRI is one of the corporations formed under ANCSA and has approximately 6,262 Alaska Natives enrolled, each of whom were issued 100 shares of stock in CIRI, as required under ANCSA.

ANCSA stock, unlike most corporate stock, cannot be sold, transferred, or pledged by the owners of the shares. Rather, transfers can only happen through inheritance, or in limited case, by court decree.

To date, no Native corporation has sought to lift the restriction. For the most part, this is because Native shareholders continue to value Native ownership of the corporations and Native control of the lands and other assets held by them. These shareholders, whose numbers consistently register at the 70-80-percent level, see economic benefits in the continuation of Native ownership, and also value the important cultural goals, values, and activities of their ANCSA corporation. However, a minority of shareholders favor assessing some or all of the value of their CIRI stock through the sale of that stock. These shareholders include, but are not limited to, elderly shareholders who have real current need yet doubt that sale of stock will be available to them in their lifetime; holder of small, fractional shares received through one or more cycles of inheritance; non-Natives who have acquired stock through inheritance but without attendant voting privileges; and shareholders who have few ties to the corporation or to Alaska, 25 percent of CIRI shareholders live outside of Alaska.

Under current law, these two legitimate but conflicting concerns cannot be addressed, because lifting restrictions on the sale of stock in an all or nothing proposition. In order to allow the minority of shareholders to exercise their desire to sell some or all of their stock, the majority of shareholders would have to sacrifice their important desire to maintain Native control and ownership of CIRI.

CIRI believes this conflict will eventually leave the interests of the majority of its shareholders vulnerable to political instability. In addition, CIRI recognizes that responding to the desire of those shareholders who wish to sell CIRI stock is a legitimate corporate responsibility. CIRI believes there is a way to address the needs and desires of both groups of shareholders, those who wish to sell stock and those who desire to maintain their Native ownership. The method embodied in this legislation is one that other companies routinely use, buying back of its own stock. The acquired stock would then be retired.

Mr. President, I have discussed this bill at length with CIRI and I am convinced this is the best solution. This bill is identical to one that passed the House, and was approved by the Senate Energy Committee last session, and I look forward to its passage.●

By Mr. D'AMATO (for himself, Mr. MACK, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. FAIRCLOTH, and Mr. BRYAN):

S. 445. A bill to expand credit availability by lifting the growth cap on limited service financial institutions, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

THE LIMITED-PURPOSE BANK GROWTH CAP
RELIEF ACT

• Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I am today introducing the Limited-Purpose Bank Growth Cap Relief Act with Senators MACK, BENNETT, FAIRCLOTH, and BRYAN as cosponsors.

Mr. President, this bill would lift the 7-percent cap on the annual asset growth of limited-purpose banks. This growth cap, which was imposed temporary under the 1987 Competitive Equality Banking Act [CEBA], imposes an arbitrary and unnecessary regulatory burden. The removal of this cap would enhance the ability of limited-purpose banks to serve their customers, increase the availability of credit, and allow such banks to maintain assets on their balance sheets.

By way of background, the ownership of limited-purpose banks by certain non-banking holding companies was protected by a grandfather provision in CEBA. A grandfathered non-bank holding company was permitted to maintain its ownership of limited-purpose bank if the bank, first, did not both accept demand deposits and engage in commercial lending; second, limited its cross-marketing of financial services with affiliates; third, did not participate in activities in which the bank did not already engage prior to the passage of CEBA; fourth, did not provide daylight overdrafts to affiliates; and fifth, limited its annual asset growth to 7 percent. Except for these restrictions, limited-purpose banks were subjected to the same capital requirements, regulatory supervision, community reinvestment obligations, consumer protection laws and banking laws as full-service banks.

Mr. President, Congress intended these CEBA restrictions on limited-purpose banks to be only a temporary measure coexistent with the moratorium on the ability of the bank regulators to permit banks to engage in additional securities, insurance and real estate activities. The legislative history is clear that these restrictions would be reconsidered as part of comprehensive banking legislation. The overall purpose of CEBA was merely to preserve the opportunity for Congress—not the regulators or the courts—to define more precisely regulatory supervision over financial service institutions and competition among financial service providers.

Mr. President, Congress has not enacted comprehensive banking legislation, although I am hopeful this important national policy objective can be accomplished in this Congress with the enactment of S. 337, the Depository Institution Affiliation Act of 1995, which I introduced on February 2. Despite the significant changes in the laws and regulation governing the financial services industry over the past 8 years that have enhanced the diversification opportunities of banks, securities firms, insurance companies and other financial providers, the temporary and arbitrary restrictions CEBA imposed on limited purpose banks remain in place. The number of limited-purpose banks has sharply dropped from nearly 160 to only 23. And the remaining institutions are forced to labor under severe restrictions that cannot be justified from a regulatory, public policy, or competitive standpoint.

Mr. President, limited service banks have been frozen in time. Congress has enacted numerous laws to render full-service banks more competitive, efficient and financially strong. The growth cap is no longer necessary from a regulatory perspective. In 1989 and 1991, Congress enacted legislation to increase the ability of regulators to ensure that all banks are run in a safe and sound manner, including the authority to freeze bank asset growth if capital levels decline significantly. And the restriction is not necessary from a competitive standpoint. The 103d Congress enacted interstate banking legislation. Finally, bank regulators and the courts continue to approve a growing list of securities, insurance, and other financial services activities for banks.

Mr. President, only a small category of specialized and limited purpose banks remain subject to onerous limitations on their growth, activities, products, and customer relationships. This situation is both unfair and unnecessary.

Mr. President, the Limited-Purpose Bank Growth Cap Relief Act would lift the 7-percent asset growth cap for limited-purpose banks. It would not remove any of the other CEBA restrictions and it would not allow the chartering of additional limited-purpose banks from a statutory requirements that has outlived its usefulness.

Mr. President, the repeal of the growth cap is entirely consistent with the objectives of the Depository Institutions Affiliation Act, which I introduced several weeks ago. Both bills seek to enhance the global competitiveness of the U.S. financial services industry and to ready the regulation of that industry for the next century.●

• Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation which repeals a restriction on the ability of limited-purpose banks to increase their assets by more than 7 percent per year. I believe that a removal of this restriction will promote increased credit availability, and will enhance the safety and soundness of the 22 institutions that are subject to the growth limitation.

This asset growth limitation was adopted in 1987, in legislation which stated that the restriction was being imposed temporarily. It remains in place nearly 8 years later, although the objectives it was intended to accomplish have been achieved by subsequent legislation, regulatory act on and judicial decisions. For example, supporters of this limitation said that it would help offset full-service banks' inability to establish interstate branches, an issue that has now been addressed.

Today, the growth restriction is not needed to protect the banks, their customers, or competitors. To the contrary, the growth cap harms these banks, by imposing enormous and unnecessary compliance costs and by forcing them to dispose of assets despite adverse marketplace conditions and negative safety and soundness implications. It hurts their depositors and borrowers—and other consumers—by reducing limited-purpose banks' ability to offer competitive banking services. And it provides no legitimate benefit to full service banks, whose ability to compete will not be impaired if a small number of limited-purpose banks are permitted to grow assets on their balance sheets rather than outside of the banks.

The legislation I am introducing addresses only one of the restrictions on limited-purpose banks: The 7-percent asset growth cap. These banks will continue to be subject to the same requirements as other banks, including the provision enacted in 1991 requiring the asset growth of any undercapitalized institution to be curtailed. And they will remain subject to additional restrictions unique to limited-purpose institutions, such as a limitation on engaging in new banking activities, and a restrictions on cross marketing with affiliates. The need to retain these restrictions is an issue that should be addressed in the near future, as we consider broader legislation addressing bank ownership, affiliations and permissible powers. But the asset growth restriction is a regulatory burden unrelated to these issues, and needs to be addressed now.

In the last Congress, a number of my colleagues on both sides of the aisle supported the removal of the 7-percent growth cap. I am especially pleased that the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs and others are joining me today as original cosponsors of their bill. I look forward to prompt action on this legislation.●

S. 446. A bill to require the Secretary of the Treasury to mint coins in commemoration of the public opening of the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial in Washington, DC; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

THE FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT COMMEMORATIVE COIN ACT

• Mr. INOUE. Mr. President, today, I introduce the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Commemorative Coin Act. I am joined by Senator HATFIELD, Cochair of the FDR Memorial Commission, Senators LEVIN and D'AMATO, FDR Memorial Commissioners, and Senators AKAKA, COCHRAN, DODD, GRASSLEY, HATCH, HEFLIN, HOLLINGS, KENNEDY, MIKULSKI, MOYNIHAN, ROBB, and SIMON.

The Franklin Delano Roosevelt Commemorative Coin Act authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to mint 500,000 half dollar silver coins bearing the likeness of our great leader, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, in the year 1997, to celebrate the public opening of the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial in Washington, DC.

A surcharge of $3 will be applied to each coin. Proceeds from the sale of the coin will be used to finance the construction of the memorial. In 1992, the Congress mandated the FDR Memorial Commission to raise $10 million in private funds to supplement the Federal appropriations for the memorial.

The American people are deeply indebted to Franklin Delano Roosevelt for his leadership in America's struggle for peace, well-being, and the assurance of human dignity. Personally, I will never forget the pride I felt in looking to President Roosevelt as my Commander in Chief as he led us in the worldwide struggle for freedom during World War II.

All Americans enjoy more secure lives and a higher standard of living because of this great President. The Civilian Conservation Corps helped restore America's forests and land; the National Rural Electric Cooperative gave farmers a decent life; the Federal Highway Program developed a national system upon which the automobile and the trucking industries depend; the Works Progress Administration built schools and hospitals throughout the country and every American who receives Social Security owes a debt of gratitude to President Roosevelt.

The commemorative coin will do more than honor one of our greatest Americans; it will also help ensure that an extraordinary era of our Nation's history will live on as a legacy for future generations. I want to assure my colleagues that this bill will not place any burden on the American taxpayer. The profits generated by the sale of this coin will cover all costs incurred by the Department of the Treasury.

I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation which will honor one of America's greatest Presidents by establishing a magnificent and historic national memorial in our Nation's Capital.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 447. A bill to provide tax incentives to encourage production of oil and gas within the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

THE DOMESTIC OIL AND GAS PRODUCTION TAX INCENTIVES ACT

● Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I introduce legislation that is designed to help the domestic oil and gas industry not only in my own State of Oklahoma, but also the multitude of energy producing States throughout the United States. We are all very much aware that a healthy and competitive oil and gas industry is critically important to the U.S. economy. The petroleum industry alone is burdened with the highest tax rates in corporate America. Changes fostered by this bill only level the playing field with businesses throughout the United States that are trying to attract capital.

Through tax incentives for new and existing marginal wells, small producers in Oklahoma, as well as throughout the United States, will be the primary benefactors of my legislation. Independents find more than half of all new oil and natural gas reserves, and they drill almost 85 percent of all domestic wells—both exploratory and development—onshore and offshore.

The U.S. oil and gas industry is one of the Nation's major economic assets and has long been recognized as a world leader in size, scope, and technology. As such a vital national industry, we cannot afford to continue down the road we have become accustomed to for so long. We need to focus our energies inward and try to help the industry restimulate its growth. As a nation we must face up to the threat posed by mounting U.S. dependency on foreign energy imports from such regions as the Middle East.●

By Mr. GRASSLEY (for himself, Mr. PRYOR and Mr. REID):

S. 448. A bill to amend sections 118 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide for certain exceptions from rules for determining contributions in aid of construction, and for other purposes, to the Committee on Finance.

THE CONTRIBUTIONS ON AID OF CONSTRUCTION LEGISLATION

● Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, today I am here to reintroduce revenue neutral legislation to reinstate the exclusion from gross income of contributions in aid of construction—known as CIAC—to a water or wastewater utility. Joining me as cosponsors are Senators PRYOR and REID. Senator REID has taken the lead on this issue for a number of years.

This legislation has passed as an amendment in the Senate on two occasions. It is my hope that this year we will finally be successful in passing this legislation and having the President sign it into law.

Utilities are capital-incentive industries. Historically, they have received the capital for the construction of a utility extension directly from new customers, either through the developer or small municipality. The customer contributes this property, or a cash equivalent, to the utility. In this manner, existing customers will not face rate increases every time the utility gains new customers.

Prior to enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, CIAC were not included in the gross income of an investor-owned utility and therefore were not subject to Federal income tax. In addition, utilities could not take tax depreciation or investment tax credits on CIAC. The 1986 act repealed section 118(b) of the Internal Revenue Code and thus subjected CIAC to tax as gross income. As we all remember, the 1986 act had two basic premises as its core. One, the tax base would be broadened and rates would be lowered. Two, cuts in individual rates would be offset by increases in the corporate tax burden. Clearly the authors of the 1986 act intended to ensure that the burden of corporate taxes was spread to all industries including utilities.

The removal of the exclusion from gross income of CIAC was intended as a tax on utilities. In practice, the CIAC tax is not a tax on utilities, but a tax on utility customers, primarily on developers and home buyers. State utility regulatory bodies, referred to as PUC's, generally require utilities to pass tax costs onto their customers. This is done in one of two ways. The most common approach is to require the new customer to pay the cost of the tax. But this is not a simple dollar-for-dollar charge. In order for utility to be made whole, it must pay on the CIAC, plus a tax on the tax. The phenomenon is known as gross-up. Depending on the State, a gross-up can add as much as 70 percent to the customer's cost of the contributions. In other words, a contribution of water mains valued at $100,000 would cost a customer $170,000.

Alternatively, the PUC's may allow the utility to recover the tax cost from existing customers or over a period of time from the new ratepayers. Not only does this defeat the purpose of a contribution, it also means a rate increase. And with many water utilities seeking rate increases of as much as 25 percent in order to pay for Safe Drinking Water Act requirements, additional rate increases can lead to calls for condemnation.

Whichever method is chosen, utilities do not pay the tax, they pass it on. Passing the tax on has detrimental effects, not only on the utility's ability to bring in new business, but on the environment, and most significantly, on the price of new housing.

Any developer faced with a large gross-up will have to evaluate its effect on the bottom line. Depending on conditions in the local housing market, a developer will ultimately pass the cost of the CIAC and the gross-up on to the new home buyer. The National Association of Home Builders has estimated that the CIAC tax can increase the cost of new housing by as much as $2,000 a unit. This additional cost is enough to end the dream of home ownership for a young couple.

The CIAC tax also has some important environmental effects. New customers can avoid paying the CIAC tax by building their own independent water systems. This leads to a proliferation of systems that may not have the financial, technical, or managerial ability to comply with the rigorous requirements of the Safe Drinking Water Act. Such systems are referred to as nonviable. According to the EPA, in fiscal year 1990, more than 90 percent of the violations of the Safe Drinking Water Act were made by systems serving less than 3,300 individuals. By encouraging the proliferation of nonviable systems, the CIAC tax frustrates the environmental policy goal of consolidating these systems into already existing, professionally managed systems.

Mr. President, section 118(b) of the Internal Revenue Code, exempting CIAC from the gross income, should be restored. It is a tax on capital, not income. It is not a tax on utilities, it is a tax on their customers. The CIAC tax increases the price of new homes, leads to the development of environmentally unsound water and sewage facilities, and reduces the tax base for all levels of government.

Most important in my opinion, elimination of the CIAC tax will help home buyers, not by fueling real estate speculation, but by removing another barrier to the purchase of a new home. Anyone who has bought a house recently knows you don't just pay the price of the house. You pay closing costs, title costs, title insurance fees, attorney's fees, and points. And when you buy a house hooked up to privately owned utilities, you also pay the CIAC tax—as much as $2,000 per unit.

This legislation was most recently estimated to cost $106 million over 5 years. I have included a revenue offset in the bill as introduced that raises $140 million over the same period, thus netting $34 million for the Federal Government. The offset extends depreciation on new water utility plant from 20 to 25 years and switches from 150 percent declining balance to straight-line depreciation. This offset was suggested by the investor-owned water industry and is indivisible from the substance of the legislation which is the restoration of the exclusion of CIAC from gross income. The industry suggested it only for the purpose of repealing the CIAC tax, and that is its only intended use.

Mr. President, repeal of the tax on CIAC for water and wastewater utilities will have a noticeable effect on both housing prices and environmental policy. It is supported by the National Association of Water Companies, the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners, and the National Association of Home Builders. I urge my colleagues to cosponsor this important legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

By Mr. SIMON (for himself and Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN):

S. 449. A bill to establish the Midewin National Tallgrass Prairie in the State of Illinois, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

ILLINOIS LAND CONSERVATION ACT

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a most unique piece of legislation—the Illinois Land Conservation Act. This bill is the result of a broad-based, bipartisan consensus involving Federal, State, county and municipal concerns. It is a model for the land reuse challenges faced by so many communities throughout the country who are impacted by military base closures. I believe this to be one of the most significant conservation and economic development efforts ever attempted.

The closing of the Joliet Army Ammunition Plant in northeastern Illinois has provided a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to recapture and preserve the tallgrass prairie that once covered most of the Prairie State.

The Illinois Land Conservation Act will create the Midewin National Tallgrass Prairie. The term “Midewin” commemorates the grant medicine society of the Potawatoni Indian Tribe—the original inhabitants of this area of Illinois. This prairie will comprise 19,000 acres of land, which is home to 16 State endangered and threatened species, all within an easy drive of metropolitan Chicago.

A 910-acre tract adjacent to the Midewin Prairie will become our country’s largest national veterans’ cemetery. Under the auspices of the Department of Veterans Affairs, this long-awaited site will provide a dignified place of rest for the many veterans in this region who sacrificed so much for our country.

The remaining acreage will be developed as an industrial park and a county landfill by the local communities.

Mr. President, the impact of the Joliet Arsenal closing has been profound on the entire region—particularly the small communities. The municipalities surrounding the arsenal have sustained the military presence here for the last 50 years, with several generations of families involve in the important work of defending our freedom. The Illinois Land Conservation Act is our opportunity to provide a true peace dividend to those who have supported this vital facility over the years.

I hope all my colleagues will support this innovative effort that recaptures an important part of our past, and addresses our needs for the future.●

● Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN. Mr. President, I am pleased to join the distinguished senior Senator from Illinois, Senator SIMON, in introducing the Illinois Land Conservation Act of 1995.

This bill transfers land from the former Joliet Army Ammunition Plant to the Forest Service in order to establish a national grasslands. This bill also turns over land to the Veterans Administration for a new national veterans cemetery, and converts a number of former munitions production areas at the arsenal to local purposes.

Illinois is known as the Prairie State. This name commemorates a younger Illinois, a region of rolling prairies, seas of butterflies, grazing wildlife, and pioneers seeking out new lands to settle. At one time, more than 43,000 square miles of prairie existed in Illinois.

Over the course of 175 years, however, development has crept over these open lands. Farms, highways, and cities have been built to such an extent that today, only .01 percent of original prairie is left. Little evidence remains of, in the words of Charles Chamberlain, the author of the Illinois State song, this "wilderness of prairies."

That is one reason why the bill we are introducing today is important, Mr. President—so important that it has attracted support from a broad, bipartisan array of Illinois groups, from industrialists to environmentalists, and from researchers to hunters.

The Illinois Land Conservation Act is more than just a bill to create a national veterans cemetery, although it will address critical needs long awaited by Chicago veterans. It is more than just a bill to create a conservation area, although it will establish the largest in northern Illinois.

The Illinois Land Conservation Act, once enacted, gives Illinois a rare opportunity to preserve one of the last remaining areas of natural prairie. It's a once-in-a-lifetime chance to set aside such a large, undeveloped tract of property for environmental and recreational purposes. In a sense, this bill helps to protect a slice of ecological history, and in doing so, creates a legacy for future generations of Illinoisans to study and enjoy.

In April 1993, the U.S. Army, after announcing its intentions to close the Joliet Arsenal, approached former Illinois Congressman George Sangmeister to develop a concept plan for reutilization of the property. Congressman Sangmeister formed a commission of 24 local and Federal representatives, who, after several years of detailed planning, countless meetings, and extensive negotiations, carefully formulated and unanimously adopted a land reuse plan. The Illinois Land Conservation Act is the culmination of the commission's work.

At the heart of this bill is the creation of a 19,000-acre national grasslands, to be known as the Midewin National Tallgrass Prairie.

Located approximately 60 miles southwest of the Chicago metropolitan area, the grasslands will be a recreational treasure for city residents, accessible to millions for outdoor activities such as camping, horseback riding, hunting, hiking, and environmental education.

The grasslands designation also will help to protect and improve upon what already is considered an ecological wonderland. Hundreds of types of plants and animals are found here, including plants indigenous to the area for more than 10,000 years, and many threatened and endangered species. Many future projects are under consideration for the grasslands, such as the restoration of wetlands and the re-introduction of bison.

Another cornerstone of this bill is the establishment of a 1,000-acre national veterans cemetery. Identified as the leading location by the Veterans Administration, this cemetery, proposed for the center of the arsenal property, will be a landscape rich in streams, marshes, and hardwood forests—a magnificent and tranquil setting for veterans. When complete, the cemetery will honor over 92,000 Chicago veterans through the year 2030.

Mr. President, the Illinois Land Conservation Act is based upon a plan that has been carefully crafted by key representatives of the local community who have worked closely with Federal agencies and the State of Illinois. It deserves to move forward quickly.

This bill is an excellent opportunity to establish a monument to the fertile soils which cultivated the agricultural and commercial prosperity Illinois enjoys today.

It's an excellent opportunity to create the first and the largest tallgrass prairie ecosystem east of the Mississippi River.

And, most importantly, this bill is the last opportunity of our lifetimes to preserve a largely untouched, expansive tract of ecologically unique land in the State of Illinois. In the words of the Chicago Tribune, this is our chance to "save Joliet Arsenal land for the ages." I agree, and urge the quick approval of this bill.●

By Mr. NICKLES (for himself,
Mr. INHOFE, and Mr. DOLE):

S. 451. A bill to encourage production of oil and gas within the United States by providing tax incentives and easing regulatory burdens, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

THE DOMESTIC OIL AND GAS PRODUCTION AND PRESERVATION ACT

● Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, today I am introducing The Domestic Oil and Gas Production and Preservation Act along with Senators INHOFE and DOLE. A companion bill is also being introduced in the House by Congressman LUCAS and the rest of the Oklahoma delegation. We are introducing this bill today in an effort to help revive our domestic oil and gas industry which plays such a vital role in our national security. If our domestic industry is to survive domestically, then Congress needs to act now to provide incentives and regulatory reforms to encourage production in America.

Since the early 1980's oil and gas extraction employment has been cut in half. Employment in the oil and gas industry has declined by 500,000 since 1984. Imports of crude oil products have increased by 200,000 barrels a day over the last year and the import dependency ratio now exceeds 50 percent. In December 1994, crude oil production dropped to 5 million barrels per day in the lower 48 States which is the lowest level since 1946. We must take action now to save domestic production not only for the sake of the oil and gas industry but for the sake of the national security of this Nation.

I understand that today the administration released an investigative report conducted under section 232 of the Trade Expansion Act of 1962 on the threat to national security from the rising tide of oil imports. I have not yet seen this report but previous Commerce Department reports have found that oil imports threaten the national security and they were conducted when our foreign oil dependence was much lower. The question now is not whether oil imports threaten national security; everyone agrees that is the case. The question now is what are we going to do about it.

To date, the Clinton administration has done nothing to encourage domestic production. In fact, in 1993, crude oil reserves continued to decline by 788 million barrels. Natural gas reserves fell by 2,600 Bcf to 162,415 Bcf. I have been asking the Secretary of Energy for 3 years now, what she intends to do to help preserve the domestic oil and gas industry. In the President's 1996 budget there is nothing to aid this industry. That is why I am introducing this bill today.

The Domestic Oil and Gas Production and Preservation Act is intended to do just what its name implies—encourage oil and gas production and preserve and revitalize the domestic oil and gas industry. This bill would accomplish these goals in several ways. In title 1, we provide for tax incentives. One of the cornerstone pieces of this legislation is a tax credit to preserve marginal production and to encourage new drilling. This provision would make it more economical to keep a marginal well producing during times of low prices and would provide incentives to producers not to shut in their marginal wells due to economics resulting in a permanent loss of the remaining unproduced reserves.

This legislation also includes a tax credit for production from new wells that have been drilled after June 1, 1995. This provision is meant to encourage domestic exploration which has fallen dramatically in recent years. During the early 1980's the average rig count was around 2,929. In 1994 the rig count averaged 775. This is less than one-third the average during the boom years of the 1980's. If domestic production does not increase, our reliance on imported oil will only continue to grow.

In addition to the tax credit, this bill provides for several depletion reforms. There are provisions to repeal the net income limitation for computing percentage depletion, exclude marginal production from the current 1,000 barrels per day limitation, repeal the property allocation rule for computing depletion, and freeze the percentage depletion rate at current marginal levels.

Until 1976, percentage depletion was designed to operate as risk-weighted depreciation for mineral properties. Since then, the multiple limitations on the availability of percentage depletion as an effective capital cost recovery provision has diminished our proven reserves. The time has come to revise U.S. energy depletion policy. The circumstances that prevail in today's crude oil market are precisely the opposite of those that led to change to the depletion deduction in 1976. The world crude oil market is now glutted with overproduction from Kuwait and unsold Iraqi supplies are threatening another oil market crash. When prices decline, many wells are lost forever and many other wells cannot be drilled.

Percentage depletion should be reformed so that more U.S. production qualifies. Ensuring an adequate depletion allowance can reverse the falling U.S. energy resource base. These reforms will encourage new technology investments, provide economic stimulus to a major U.S. industry and create new, high-quality jobs.

In addition to the tax credit and the percentage depletion reforms, this legislation provides that geological and geophysical expenditures shall be treated as deductible expenses, it expands the existing enhanced oil recovery tax credit and makes it AMT creditable, it provides an election for optional 5-year write-off of intangible drilling costs, and it increases the amount of intangible drilling costs that can be expended without being treated as a preference item for AMT purposes. All these provisions will help encourage continued production from marginal wells, thus saving a valuable national resource from being lost.

Title II of this legislation calls for several regulatory reforms. It has provisions that address the enormous and unnecessary financial responsibility provisions of the Oil Pollution Act of 1990 [OPA '90]. This bill clarifies that the definition of "navigable waters" under OPA '90 only applies to true "off-shore facilities," not facilities onshore. It also changes the amount of financial responsibility required under OPA '90 from $150 to $35 million with discretion given to the Secretary to establish a higher amount (but not higher than $150 million) taking into account factors relevant to risks posed by a facility.

This legislation also addresses two oil and gas royalty issues. First, it establishes a 6-year statute of limitations on actions commenced by the United States for recovery of royalties due under an oil and gas lease on Federal lands unless a lessee has made a false or fraudulent statement with the intent to evade the payment of royalties due. This provision is intended to give some finality to the royalty collection process and require the government to be prompt and timely in their pursuit of any underpayment of royalties. Second, it provides the Secretary discretion to lower royalties on oil and gas leases on Federal lands. This is intended to be used to help marginal wells, when prices are low, from being shut in as uneconomical.

In addition to the aforementioned regulatory reforms, this bill addresses two critical areas of reform, private property rights and risk assessment. Private property rights are protected by the fifth amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Unfortunately, the Federal bureaucracy has increasingly used environmental laws to trample on these rights. Two of the worst offenders are the Endangered Species Act and the wetlands permitting program established by section 404 of the Clean Water Act. This legislation incorporates the provisions of a separate bill that I have introduced for the last 3 years entitled the Property Owners Bill of Rights. The provisions of this bill require a landowner's written consent before Federal agents could enter private property, guarantee a landowner's access to information gathered about their property, guarantee a landowner's right to dispute that information's accuracy, guarantee a landowner's right to appeal decisions made under endangered species or wetlands law, and guarantee that a landowner be compensated if federal actions under the Endangered Species Act or wetlands permitting program devalue their property by 33 percent or more.

The risk assessment provisions of this bill requires Federal agencies to use sound scientific data when risk criteria and benefits are determined. It also requires the agencies to make public the scientific basis for each risk criteria and full disclosure of all assumptions and uncertainties. It also provides for a petition process to require an agency to review an existing regulation to ensure that benefits exceed the costs.

Finally, title III of this bill abolishes the existing prohibitions against the export of domestic crude oil production. This provision would also help encourage production in the lower 48 States.

Together, the provisions of this bill provide much needed incentives and regulatory relief to an industry that is vital to our national security. The sooner the administration and Congress acknowledge the critical importance of the domestic oil and gas industry and stop burdening this industry with high taxes and regulatory obstacles, the sooner we can take the necessary actions to preserve and revitalize this important sector of our economy.●

By Mr. MOYNIHAN (for himself and Mr. DASCHLE) (by request):
S. 452. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide tax relief for the middle class; to the Committee on Finance.

THE MIDDLE-CLASS BILL OF RIGHTS TAX RELIEF
ACT OF 1995

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, as ranking member of the Committee on Finance, I am today joining with the Democratic leader in introducing a bill, at the request of the administration, containing the statutory provisions that implement the middle-income tax cuts contained in the President's fiscal year 1996 budget submission. Secretary Rubin appeared before the Finance Committee last week to testify concerning these proposals.

By making statutory language available early in the legislative process, the administration has aided the process of Senate consideration of these provisions. This legislation also will serve to answer many of the questions that the public may have with respect to the President's tax proposals.

I want to thank the administration for providing this level of detail in so timely a fashion, and I look forward to working with them on these proposals in the coming months.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill and additional material be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

“(ii) section 72(t) shall not apply to such amount.

“(B) TIME FOR INCLUSION.—In the case of any qualified transfer which occurs before January 1, 1997, any amount includible in gross income under subparagraph (A) with respect to such contribution shall be includible ratably over the 4-taxable year period beginning in the taxable year in which the amount was paid or distributed out of the individual retirement plan.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to contributions (and earnings allocable thereto) which are made after December 31, 1995.

PRESIDENTIAL MESSAGE REGARDING THE MIDDLE-CLASS BILL OF RIGHTS

To the Congress of the United States:

I am pleased to transmit today for your immediate consideration and enactment the “Middle-Class Bill of Rights Tax Relief Act of 1995.” I am also sending you an explanation of the revenue proposals of this legislation.

This bill is the next step in my Administration’s continuing effort to raise living standards for working families and help restore the American Dream for all our people.

For 2 years, we have worked hard to strengthen our economy. We worked with the last Congress to enact legislation that will reduce the annual deficits of 1994-98 by more than $600 billion; we created nearly 6 million new jobs; we cut taxes for 15 million low-income families and gave tax relief to small businesses; we opened export markets through global and regional trade agreements; we invested in human and physical capital to increase productivity; and we reduced the Federal Government by more than 100,000 positions.

With that strong foundation in place, I am now proposing a Middle Class Bill of Rights. Despite our progress, too many Americans are still working harder for less. The Middle Class Bill of Rights will enable working Americans to raise their families and get the education and training they need to meet the demands of a new global economy. It will let middle-income families share in our economic prosperity today and help them build our economic prosperity tomorrow.

The “Middle-Class Bill of Rights Tax Relief Act of 1995” includes three of the four elements of my Middle Class Bill of Rights. First, it offers middle-income families a $500 tax credit for each child under 13. Second, it includes a tax deduction of up to $10,000 a year to help middle-income Americans pay for post-secondary education expenses and training expenses. Third, it lets more middle-income Americans make tax-deductible contributions to Individual Retirement Accounts and withdraw from them, penalty-free, for the costs of education and training, health care, first-time home-buying, long periods of unemployment, or the care of an ill parent.

The fourth element of my Middle Class Bill of Rights—not included in this legislation—is the GI Bill for America’s Workers, which consolidates 70 Federal training programs and creates a more effective system for learning new skills and finding better jobs for adults and youth. Legislation for this proposal is being developed in cooperation with the Congress.

If enacted, the Middle Class Bill of Rights will help keep the American Dream alive for everyone willing to take responsibility for themselves, their families, and their futures. And it will not burden our children with more debt. In my fiscal 1996 budget, we have found enough savings not only to pay for this tax bill, but also to provide another $81 billion in deficit reduction between 1996 and 2000.

This legislation will restore fairness to our tax system, let middle-income families in our economic prosperity, encourage Americans to prepare for the future, and help ensure that the United States moves into the 21st Century still the strongest nation in the world. I urge the Congress to take prompt and favorable action on this legislation.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 13, 1995.

GENERAL EXPLANATION OF THE MIDDLE-CLASS
BILL OF RIGHTS TAX RELIEF ACT OF 1995

TAX CREDIT FOR DEPENDENT CHILDREN

Current law

A tax exemption, in the form of a deduction, is allowed for each taxpayer and for each dependent of a taxpayer. A dependent includes a child of the taxpayer who is supported by the taxpayer and is under age 19 at the close of the calendar year or is a student under age 24. The deduction amount is $2,500 for tax year 1995. This amount is indexed annually for inflation.

In addition to an exemption for each child, three other tax benefits may accrue to taxpayers with dependent or otherwise qualifying children: the credit for child and dependent care expenses, the exclusion for employer-provided child and dependent care benefits, and the earned income tax credit (EITC).

The EITC is a refundable tax credit based on the earnings of the taxpayer. The EITC is restricted to lower-income taxpayers and is phased out when earnings exceed specified levels. Although the EITC is available for taxpayers without dependents or otherwise qualifying children, the credit rate and income range of the credit are far greater when the taxpayer has one or more qualifying children. In addition, the rate and income range are higher for taxpayers with two or more qualifying children than for taxpayers with only one qualifying child.

Reasons for change

Tax relief for middle-class families has been and continues to be an important goal of this Administration. In 1993, the Administration faced a projection of ever-increasing deficits. Bringing the deficit under control and providing tax relief for the working poor through an expansion of the EITC were the first priorities. Having achieved more favorable than projected results from the deficit reduction program introduced in 1993, the Administration can now turn to providing tax relief to middle-income families.

Tax relief to taxpayers with children is needed to adjust the relative tax burdens of smaller and larger families to reflect more accurately their relative abilities to pay taxes. Available resources should be targeted to those in greatest need and at greatest risk.

Proposal

A nonrefundable tax credit, which would be applied after the EITC, would be allowed for each dependent child under age 13. It would be phased in, at $300 per child for tax years 1996, 1997, and 1998, and $500 per child for 1999 and thereafter. The credit would not reduce any alternative minimum tax liability. The credit would be phased out for taxpayers with adjusted gross income between $60,000 and $75,000. Beginning in the year 2000, both the amount of the credit and the phase-out range would be indexed for the effects of inflation.

Taxpayers claiming the dependent child credit would be required to provide valid social security numbers for themselves, their spouses, and their children who qualify for the credit. The procedures that would apply for determining the validity of social security numbers under the EITC, discussed below, would apply for purposes of the dependent child credit.

EDUCATION AND JOB TRAINING TAX DEDUCTION

Current law

Taxpayers generally may not deduct the expenses of higher education and training. There are, however, special circumstances in which deductions for educational expenses are allowed, or in which the payment of educational expenses by others is excluded from income.

Educational expenses may be deductible, but only if the taxpayer itemizes, and only to the extent that the expenses, along with other miscellaneous itemized deductions, exceed two percent of adjusted gross income (AGI). A deduction for educational purposes is allowed only if the education maintains or improves a skill required in the individual's employment or other trade or business, or is required by the individual's employer, or by law or regulation for the individual to retain his or her current job.

The interest from qualified U.S. savings bonds is excluded from a taxpayer's gross income to the extent the interest is used to pay qualified educational expenses. To be qualified, the savings bonds must be purchased after December 31, 1989, by a person who has attained the age of 25. Qualified educational expenses consist of tuition and fees for enrollment of the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse, or the taxpayer's dependent at a public or non-profit institution of higher education, including two-year colleges and vocational schools.

Reasons for change

Deductions for educational expenses combine needed tax relief with preparation for new economic imperatives. The expenses of higher education place a significant burden on many middle-class families. Grants and subsidized loans are available to students from low- and moderate-income families; high-income families can afford the costs of higher education.

Well-educated workers are essential to an economy experiencing technological change and facing global competition. The Administration believes that reducing the after-tax cost of education for individuals and families encourages investment in education and training while lowering tax burdens for middle-income taxpayers.

Proposal

A taxpayer would be allowed to deduct qualified educational expenses paid during the taxable year for the education or training of the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse, or the taxpayer's dependent. The deduction would be allowed in determining AGI. Therefore, taxpayers could claim the deduction even if they do not itemize and even if they do not meet the two-percent AGI floor on itemized deductions.

Qualified educational expenses would be defined as tuition and fees charged by educational institutions that are directly related to an eligible student's course of study (e.g., registration fees, laboratory fees, and extra charges for particular courses).

Charges and expenses associated with meals, lodging, student activities, athletics, health care, transportation, books and similar personal, living or family expenses would not be included. The expenses of education involving sports, games, or hobbies would not be qualified educational expenses unless the education is required as part of a degree program or related to the student's current profession.

Qualified educational expenses would be deductible in the year the expenses are paid, subject to the requirement that the education commences or continues during that year or during the first three months of the next year. Qualified educational expenses paid with the proceeds of a loan generally will be deductible (rather than repayment of the loan itself). Normal tax benefit rules would apply to refunds (and reimbursements through insurance) of previously deducted tuition and fees.

In 1996, 1997, and 1998, the maximum deduction would be $5,000. In 1999 and thereafter, this maximum would increase to $10,000. The deduction would be phased out ratably for taxpayers with modified AGI between $70,000 and $90,000 ($100,000 and $120,000 for joint returns). Modified AGI would include taxable Social Security benefits and amounts otherwise excluded with respect to income earned abroad (or income from Puerto Rico or U.S. possessions). Beginning in 2000, the income phase-out range would be indexed for inflation.

Any amount taken into account as a qualified educational expense would be reduced by educational assistance that is not required to be included in the gross income of either the student or the taxpayer claiming the deduction. Thus, qualified educational expenses would be reduced by scholarship or fellowship grants excludable from gross income under section 117 of the Internal Revenue Code (even if the grants are used to pay expenses other than qualified educational expenses) and any educational assistance received as veterans' benefits. However, no reduction would be required for a gift, bequest, devise or inheritance within the meaning of section 102(a).

An eligible student would be one who is enrolled or accepted for enrollment in a degree, certificate, or other program (including a program of study abroad approved for credit by the institution at which such student is enrolled) leading to a recognized educational credential at an eligible institution. The student must pursue a course of study on at least a half-time basis (or be taking a course to improve or acquire job skills), cannot be enrolled in an elementary or secondary school, and cannot be a nonresident alien. Educational institutions would determine what constitutes a half-time basis for individual programs.

"Eligible institution" is defined by reference to section 481 of the Higher Education Act. Such institutions must have entered into an agreement with the Department of Education to participate in the student loan program. This definition includes certain proprietary institutions.

This proposal would not affect deductions claimed under any other section of the Code, except that any amount deducted under another section of the Code could not also be deducted under this provision. An eligible student would not be eligible to claim a deduction under this provision if that student could be claimed as a dependent of another taxpayer.

EXPANDED INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS
Current law

Under current law, an individual may make deductible contributions to an individual retirement account or individual retirement annuity (IRA) up to the lesser of $2,000 or compensation (wages and self-employment income). If the individual (or the individual's spouse) is an active participant in an employer-sponsored retirement plan, the $2,000 limit on deductible contributions is phased out for couples filing a joint return with adjusted gross income (AGI) between $40,000 and $50,000, and for single taxpayers with AGI between $25,000 and $35,000. To the extent that an individual is not eligible for deductible IRA contributions, he or she may make nondeductible IRA contributions (up to the contributions limit).

The earnings on IRA account balances are not included in income until they are withdrawn. Withdrawals from an IRA (other than withdrawals of nondeductible contributions) are includable in income, and must begin by age 70½. Amounts withdrawn before age 59½ are generally subject to an additional 10 percent penalty tax. The penalty tax does not apply to distributions upon the death or disability of the taxpayer or withdrawals in the form of substantially equal periodic payments over the life (or life expectancy) of the IRA owner or over the joint lives (or life expectancies) of the IRA owner and his or her beneficiary.

Reasons for change

The Nation's savings rate has declined dramatically since the 1970's. The Administration believes that increasing the savings rate is essential if the United States is to sustain a sufficient level of private investment into the next century. Without adequate investment, the continued healthy growth of the economy is at risk. The Administration is also concerned that many households are not saving enough to provide for long-term needs such as retirement and education.

The Administration believes that individuals should be encouraged to save, and that tax policies can provide a significant incentive. Under current law, however, savings incentives in the form of deductible IRAs are not available to all middle-income taxpayers. Furthermore, the present-law income thresholds for deductible IRAs and the maximum contribution amount are not indexed for inflation, so that fewer Americans are eligible to make a deductible IRA contribution each year, and the amount of the maximum contribution is declining in real terms over time. The Administration also believes that providing taxpayers with the option of making IRA contributions that are nondeductible but can be withdrawn tax free will provide an alternative savings vehicle that some middle-income taxpayers may find more suitable for their savings needs.

Individuals save for many purposes besides retirement. Broadening the tax incentives for non-retirement saving can be an important element in any proposal to increase the Nation's savings rate. Expanding the flexibility of IRAs to meet a wider variety of savings needs, such as first-time home purchases, higher education expenditures, unemployment and catastrophic medical and nursing home expenses, should prove to be more attractive to many taxpayers than accounts limited to retirement savings.

Proposal

Expand Deductible IRAs: Under the proposal the income thresholds and phase-out ranges for deductible IRAs would be doubled; therefore, eligibility would be phased out for couples filing joint returns with AGI between $80,000 and $100,000 and for single individuals with AGI between $50,000 and $70,000. The income thresholds and the present-law annual contribution limit of $2,000 would be indexed for inflation. As under current law, any individual who is not an active participant in an employer-sponsored plan and whose spouse is also not an active participant would be eligible for deductible IRAs regardless of income.

Under the proposal, the IRA contribution limit would be coordinated with the current law limits on elective deferrals under qualified cash or deferred arrangements (sec. 401(k) plans), tax-sheltered annuities (sec. 403(b) annuities), and similar plans. The proposal also would provide that the present-law rule permitting penalty-free IRA withdrawals after an individual reaches age 59½ does not apply in the case of amounts attributable to contributions made during the previous five years. This provision does not apply to amounts rolled over from tax-qualified plans or tax-sheltered annuities.

These provisions would be effective January 1, 1996.

Special IRAs: Each individual eligible for a traditional deductible IRA would have the option of contributing an amount up to the contribution limit to either a deductible IRA or to a new "Special IRA." Contributions to a Special IRA would not be deductible, but if the contributions remained in the account for at least five years, distributions of the contributions and earnings thereon would be tax-free. Withdrawals of earnings from Special IRAs during the five-year period after contribution would be subject to ordinary income tax. In addition, such withdrawals would be subject to the 10-percent penalty tax on early withdrawals unless used for one of the four purposes described below.

The proposal would permit individuals whose AGI for a taxable year did not exceed the upper end of the new income eligibility limits to convert balances in deductible IRAs into Special IRAs without being subject to the 10-percent tax on early withdrawals. The amount transferred from the deductible IRA to the Special IRA generally would be includable in the individual's income in the year of the transfer. However, if a transfer was made before January 1, 1997, the transferred amount included in the individual's income would be spread evenly over four taxable years.

The Special IRA provisions would be effective January 1, 1996.

Penalty-Free Distributions. Amounts could be withdrawn penalty-free from deductible IRAs and Special IRAs within the five-year period after contribution, if the taxpayer used the amounts to pay post-secondary education costs, to buy or build a first home, to cover living costs if unemployed, or to pay catastrophic medical expenses (including certain nursing home costs).

a. Education expenses:

Penalty-free withdrawals would be allowed to the extent the amount withdrawn is used to pay qualified higher education expenses of the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse, the taxpayer's dependent, or the taxpayer's child or grandchild (even if not a dependent). In general, a withdrawal for qualified higher education expenses would be subject to the same requirements as the deduction for qualified educational expenses (e.g., the expenses are tuition and fees that are charged by educational institutions and are directly related to an eligible student's course of study).

b. First-time home purchasers:

Penalty-free withdrawals would be allowed to the extent the amount withdrawn is used to pay qualified acquisition, construction, or reconstruction costs with respect to a principal residence of a first-time home buyer who is the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse, or the taxpayer's child or grandchild. A first-time home buyer would be any individual (and if married, the individual's spouse) who (1) did not own an interest in a principal residence during the three years prior to the purchase of a home and (2) was not in an extended period for rolling over gain from the sale of a principal residence.

c. Unemployment:

Penalty-free withdrawals could be made by an individual after the individual is separated from employment if (1) the individual has received unemployment compensation for 12 consecutive weeks and (2) the withdrawal is made in the taxable year in which the unemployment compensation is received for the succeeding taxable year.

d. Medical care expenses and nursing home costs:

The proposal would extend to IRAs the present-law exception to the early withdrawal tax for distributions from tax-qualified plans and tax-sheltered annuities for certain medical care expenses (deductible medical expenses that are subject to a floor of 7.5 percent of AGI) and expand the exception for IRAs to allow withdrawal for medical care expenses of the taxpayer's child, grandchild, parent or grandparent, whether or not such person otherwise qualifies as the taxpayer's dependent.

In addition, for purposes of the exemption from the 10 percent tax on early withdrawals for distributions from IRAs, the definition of medical care would include expenses for qualified long-term care services for incapacitated individuals. Qualified long-term care services generally would be services that are required by an incapacitated individual, where the primary purpose of the services is to provide needed assistance with any activity of daily living or protection from threats to health and safety due to severe cognitive impairment. An incapacitated individual generally would be a person who is certified by a licensed professional within the preceding 12-month period as being unable to perform without substantial assistance at least two activities of daily living, or as having severe cognitive impairment.

These provisions would be effective January 1, 1996.

Expanded individual retirement accounts	0	0.4	-0.3	-0.8	-1.0	-2.0	-3.8

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my distinguished colleague from New York, the ranking member of the Finance Committee, in introducing the President's Middle-Class Bill of Rights, a modest package of measures that will make it easier for middle-income Americans to raise their children, educate themselves and/or their children, and save for retirement.

These proposals are in stark contrast to the tax cut proposals advanced by Republicans. The tax cuts in the Republican Contract With America would cost four times as much as the President's tax cuts over the next 10 years, with the overwhelming majority of the benefit going to those making more than $100,000.

According to a recent report prepared by the Joint Committee on Taxation, while the Republican tax cuts would cost $200 billion over the first 5 years, that cost would balloon to $704 billion over 10 years. The President's Middle-Class Bill of Rights would cost less than a quarter of that amount—$171 billion—over a 10-year period.

In other words, Republicans are proposing tax cuts that will benefit the middle class, while at the same time asking those same middle-income Americans to pay for tax cuts for high-income taxpayers that are three times as large. That doesn't sound like a fair deal to me.

While there are some similarities between the President's tax cuts and those contained in the Contract With America, the principal difference is that the contract includes tax cuts for high-income people and large corporations. And, as far as their impact on the budget and middle-income taxpayers is concerned, it is an exceedingly large difference.

Another way the President's tax cuts can be distinguished from Republican proposals is that the President would provide middle-income tax relief specifically for higher education and job training. Education and job training expenses are among the largest costs faced by middle-income families. Yet, education and job training are critical tools needed by middle-class Americans to build more quality of life for themselves and their children.

Mr. President, I understand that the Finance Committee already has held hearings on the President's proposal, and I look forward to reviewing the committee's report on the testimony presented at those hearings.

By Mr. MOYNIHAN (for himself and Mr. DASCHLE) (by request):

S. 453. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to modify the eligibility criteria for the earned income tax credit, to improve tax compliance by U.S. persons establishing or benefiting from foreign trusts, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

THE TAX COMPLIANCE ACT OF 1995

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, as ranking member of the Committee on Finance, I am today joining with the Democratic leader in introducing a bill, at the request of the administration, containing the statutory provisions that implement the tax compliance proposals in the President's fiscal year 1996 budget submission.

By making statutory language available early in the legislative process, the administration has aided the process of Senate consideration of these provisions. This legislation also will serve to answer many of the questions that the public may have with respect to the President's tax proposals.

I want to thank the administration for providing this level of detail in so timely a fashion, and I look forward to working with them on these proposals in the coming months.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill and additional material be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

“(2) SPECIAL RULE.—A foreign trust which appoints an agent described in paragraph (1)(A) shall not be considered to have an office or a permanent establishment in the United States solely because of the activities of such agent pursuant to this section. For purposes of this section, the appearance of persons or production of records by reason of the creation of the agency shall not subject such persons or records to legal process for any purpose other than determining the correct treatment under this title of the activities and operations of the trust.

“(d) ANNUAL RETURNS AND STATEMENTS.—The requirements of this subsection are met if—

“(1) the trust makes a return for the taxable year which sets forth a full and complete accounting of all trust activities and operations for the taxable year, and contains such other information as the Secretary may prescribe; and

“SEC. 6677. FAILURE TO FILE INFORMATION WITH RESPECT TO CERTAIN FOREIGN TRUSTS.

“(a) FAILURE TO REPORT CERTAIN EVENTS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a reportable event described in any subparagraph of section 6048(a)(3) for which a responsible party does not file a written notice meeting the requirements of section 6048(a)(2) within the time specified in section 6048(a)(1), the responsible party shall pay a penalty of $10,000. If any failure described in the preceding sentence continues for more than 90 days after the day on which the Secretary mails notice of such failure to the responsible party, such party shall pay a penalty (in addition to the $10,000 amount) of $10,000 for each 30-day period (or fraction thereof) during which such failure continues after the expiration of such 90-day period.

“(2) 35-PERCENT PENALTY.—In the case of a reportable event described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C) of section 6048(a)(3) (other than a transfer by reason of death), the aggregate amount of the penalties under paragraph (1) shall not be less than an amount equal to 35 percent of the gross value of the property involved in such event (determined as of the date of the event).

If any failure described in the preceding sentence continues for more than 90 days after the day on which the Secretary mails notice of such failure to such grantor, such grantor shall pay a penalty (in addition to any other penalty) of $10,000 for each 30-day period (or fraction thereof) during which such failure continues after the expiration of such 90-day period.

“(c) REASONABLE CAUSE EXCEPTION.—No penalty shall be imposed by this section on any failure which is shown to be due to reasonable cause and not due to willful neglect. The fact that a foreign jurisdiction would impose a civil or criminal penalty on the taxpayer (or any other person) for disclosing the requested documentation is not reasonable cause.

“(d) DEFICIENCY PROCEDURES NOT TO APPLY.—Subchapter B of chapter 63 (relating to deficiency procedures for income, estate, gift, and certain excise taxes) shall not apply in respect of the assessment or collection of any penalty imposed by this section.”

“(2) EXCEPTION.—

For this purpose, a nonresident alien shall be treated as becoming a resident of the United States on the residency starting date (within the meaning of section 7701(b)(2)(A)).

“(b) BENEFICIARIES TREATED AS TRANSFERORS IN CERTAIN CASES.—For purposes of this section and section 6048, if—then, for purposes of this subtitle, the transferor shall be treated as having received as an accumulation distribution taxable under subpart D an amount equal to the undistributed net income (as determined under section 665(a) as of the close of such immediately preceding taxable year) attributable to the portion of the trust referred to in subsection (a).

“(d) TRUSTS TREATED AS HAVING A UNITED STATES BENEFICIARY.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, a trust shall be treated as having a United States beneficiary for the taxable year unless—

“(A) under the terms of the trust, no part of the income or corpus of the trust may be paid or accumulated during the taxable year to or for the benefit of a United States person, and

“(B) if the trust were terminated at any time during the taxable year, no part of the income or corpus of such trust could be paid to or for the benefit of a United States person.

To the extent provided by the Secretary, for purposes of this subsection, the term ‘United States person’ includes any person who was a United States person at any time during the existence of the trust.

“(2) SPECIAL RULE.—In the case of beneficiaries whose interests in a trust cannot be determined under paragraph (1)—

“(A) the beneficiary having the closest degree of kinship to the grantor shall be treated as holding the remaining interests in the trust not determined under paragraph (1) to be held by any other beneficiary, and

“(B) if 2 or more beneficiaries have the same degree of kinship to the grantor, such remaining interests shall be treated as held equally by such beneficiaries.

“(3) CONSTRUCTIVE OWNERSHIP.—If a beneficiary of a foreign trust is a corporation, partnership, trust, or estate, the shareholders, partners, or beneficiaries shall be deemed to be the trust beneficiaries for purposes of this section.

“(4) TAXPAYER RETURN POSITION.—A taxpayer shall clearly indicate on its income tax return—

“(A) the methodology used to determine that taxpayer's trust interest under this section, and

“(B) if the taxpayer knows (or has reason to know) that any other beneficiary of such trust is using a different methodology to determine such beneficiary's trust interest under this section.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Any property (including money) that is purportedly a direct or indirect gift by a partnership or a foreign corporation to a person who is not a partner of the partnership or a shareholder of the corporation, respectively, may be recharacterized by the Secretary to prevent the avoidance of tax. The Secretary may not recharacterize gifts made for bona fide business or charitable purposes.

“(b) STATEMENTS ON RECIPIENT'S RETURN.—A taxpayer who receives a purported gift subject to subsection (a) shall attach a statement to his income tax return for the year of receipt that identifies the property received and describes fully the circumstances surrounding the purported gift.

“(c) EXEMPTION.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to purported gifts received by any person during any taxable year if the amount thereof is less than $2,500.

“SEC. 6039F. NOTICE OF LARGE GIFTS RECEIVED FROM FOREIGN PERSONS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—If the value of the aggregate foreign gifts received by a United States person (other than an organization described in section 501(c) and exempt from tax under section 501(a)) during any taxable year exceeds $100,000, such United States person shall furnish (at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe) such information as the Secretary may prescribe regarding each foreign gift received during such year.

SEC. 207. MODIFICATION OF RULES RELATING TO FOREIGN TRUSTS WHICH ARE NOT GRANTOR TRUSTS.

(a) MODIFICATION OF INTEREST CHARGE ON ACCUMULATION DISTRIBUTIONS.—Subsection (a) of section 668 (relating to interest charge on accumulation distributions from foreign trusts) is amended to read as follows:

“(a) GENERAL RULE.—For purposes of the tax determined under section 667(a)—

“(1) SUM OF INTEREST CHARGES FOR EACH THROWBACK YEAR.—The interest charge (determined under paragraph (2)) with respect to any distribution is the sum of the interest charges for each of the throwback years to which such distribution is allocated under section 666(a).

“(2) INTEREST CHARGE FOR YEAR.—Except as provided in paragraph (6), the interest charge for any throwback year on such year’s allocable share of the partial tax computed under section 667(b) with respect to any distribution shall be determined for the period—

“(A) beginning on the due date for the throwback year, and

“(B) ending on the due date for the taxable year of the distribution, by using the rates and method applicable under section 6621 for underpayments of tax for such period. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term ‘due date’ means the date prescribed by law (determined without regard to extensions) for filing the return of the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year.

“(3) ALLOCABLE PARTIAL TAX.—For purposes of paragraph (2), a throwback year’s allocable share of the partial tax is an amount equal to such partial tax multiplied by the fraction—

“(A) the numerator of which is the amount deemed by section 666(a) to be distributed on the last day of such throwback year, and

“(B) the denominator of which is the accumulation distribution taken into account under section 666(a).

“(4) THROWBACK YEAR.—For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘throwback year’ means any taxable year to which a distribution is allocated under section 666(a).

“(5) PERIODS OF NONRESIDENCE.—The period under paragraph (2) shall not include any portion thereof during which the beneficiary was not a citizen or resident of the United States.

“(6) THROWBACK YEARS BEFORE 1996.—In the case of any throwback year beginning before 1996—

“(A) interest for the portion of the period described in paragraph (2) which occurs before the first taxable year beginning after 1995 shall be determined by using an interest rate of 6 percent and no compounding, and

“(B) interest for the remaining portion of such period shall be determined as if the partial tax computed under section 667(b) for the throwback year were increased (as of the beginning of such first taxable year) by the amount of the interest determined under subparagraph (A).”

(b) RULE WHEN INFORMATION NOT AVAILABLE.—Subsection (d) of section 666 is amended by adding at the end the following: “In the case of a distribution from a foreign trust to which section 6048(b) applies, adequate records shall not be considered to be available for purposes of the preceding sentence unless such trust meets the requirements referred to in such section. If a taxpayer is not able to demonstrate when a trust was created, the Secretary may use any reasonable approximation based on available evidence.”

(c) ABUSIVE TRANSACTIONS.—Section 643(a) is amended by inserting after paragraph (6) the following new paragraph:

“(7) ABUSIVE TRANSACTIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this part, including regulations to prevent avoidance of such purposes.”

(d) TREATMENT OF USE OF TRUST PROPERTY.—Section 643 (relating to definitions applicable to subparts A, B, C, and D) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(i) USE OF FOREIGN TRUST PROPERTY.—

“(1) GENERAL RULE.—For purposes of subparts B, C, and D, if, during a taxable year of a foreign trust a trust participant of such trust directly or indirectly uses any of the trust’s property, the use value for such taxable year shall be treated as an amount paid to such participant (other than from income for the taxable year) within the meaning of sections 661(a)(2) and section 662(a)(2).

“(2) EXEMPTION.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any trust participant as to whom the aggregate use value during the taxable year does not exceed $2,500.

(3) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this subsection—

“(A) USE VALUE.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the term ‘use value’ means the fair market value of the use of property reduced by any amount paid for such use by the trust participant or by any person who is related to such participant.

“(B) SPECIAL RULE FOR CASH AND CASH EQUIVALENT.—A direct or indirect loan of cash, or cash equivalent, by a foreign trust shall be treated as a use of trust property by the borrower and the full amount of the loan principal shall be the use value.

“(C) USE BY RELATED PARTY.—

“(i) Use by a person who is related to a trust participant shall be treated as use by the participant.

“(ii) If property is used by any person who is a related person with respect to more than one trust participant, then the property shall be treated as used by the trust participant most closely related, by blood or otherwise, to such person.

(D) PROPERTY INCLUDES CASH AND CASH EQUIVALENTS.—The term ‘property’ includes cash and cash equivalents.

(E) TRUST PARTICIPANT.—The term ‘trust participant’ means each grantor and beneficiary of the trust.

(F) RELATED PERSON.—A person is related to a trust participant if the relationship between such persons would result in a disallowance of losses under section 267(b) or 707(b). In applying section 267 for purposes of the preceding sentence—

“(i) section 267(e) shall be applied as if such person or the trust participant were a pass-thru entity,

“(ii) section 267(b) shall be applied by substituting ‘at least 10 percent’ for ‘more than 50 percent’ each place it appears, and

“(iii) in determining the family of an individual under section 267(c)(4), such section shall be treated as including the spouse (and former spouse) of such individual and of each other person who is treated under such section as being a member of the family of such individual or spouse.

(G) SUBSEQUENT TRANSACTIONS REGARDING LOAN PRINCIPAL.—If any loan described in subparagraph (B) is taken into account under paragraph (1), any subsequent transaction between the trust and the original borrower regarding the principal of the loan (by way of complete or partial repayment, satisfaction, cancellation, discharge, or otherwise) shall be disregarded for purposes of this title.”

(e) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) INTEREST CHARGE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to interest for throwback years beginning before, on, or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 208. RESIDENCE OF ESTATES AND TRUSTS.

(a) TREATMENT AS UNITED STATES PERSON.—Paragraph (30) of section 7701(a) is amended by striking subparagraph (D) and by inserting after subparagraph (C) the following:

“(D) any estate or trust if—

Such an election, once made, shall be irrevocable.

(3) by striking “750,000” and inserting “1,000,000”.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, DC, February 15, 1995.
Hon. DANIEL PATRICK MOYNIHAN,
Ranking Democratic Member, Committee on Finance, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR MOYNIHAN: I am pleased to transmit the enclosed Tax Compliance Act of 1995 for your immediate consideration. The provisions contained in this bill, which were described in the budget submitted by the President to Congress February 6, 1995, include a number of compliance and related measures. Several proposals are aimed at curbing offshore tax abuses. One proposal would close a tax loophole that allows wealthy Americans to renounce their citizenship and avoid paying tax on appreciated assets. Another would tighten tax rules governing foreign trusts set up by U.S. taxpayers and foreigners. In addition, the earned income tax credit would be denied to undocumented workers and individuals whose interest and dividend income exceeds $2,500. Finally, the bill would authorize the designation of two additional urban empowerment zones.

An identical bill has been sent to Representative Gibbons of the House Ways and Means Committee, Senate Democratic Leader Daschle, and House Democratic Leader Gephardt. I urge Congress to give the attached bill prompt and favorable consideration.

The Office of Management and Budget advises that there is no objection to the presentation of this proposal to the Congress, and that its enactment would be in accord with the program of the President.

Sincerely,
ROBERT E. RUBIN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

GENERAL EXPLANATION OF THE TAX COMPLIANCE ACT OF 1995 EARNED INCOME TAX CREDIT COMPLIANCE PROPOSALS
Current law

to be eligible for the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC), a taxpayer must reside in the United States for over six months. Non-resident aliens are not entitled to the EITC beginning in 1995. Other non-U.S. citizens are eligible for the EITC if, among other things, they meet a six-month residency requirement and do not file an income tax return as a non-resident alien.

To claim the higher EITC amounts available to taxpayers with qualifying children, those taxpayers are required to provide taxpayer identification numbers (TINs) for each qualifying child. Unless otherwise proscribed by regulation, social security numbers serve as TINs. Some taxpayers are unable to obtain social security numbers. Under section 205(c) of the Social Security Act, social security numbers are generally issued only to individuals who are citizens or who are authorized to work in the U.S. Undocumented workers may not be able to obtain social security numbers.

The IRS must follow deficiency procedures when investigating questionable EITC claims. First, contact letters are sent to the taxpayer. If the necessary information is not provided by the taxpayer, a statutory notice of deficiency is sent by certified mail, notifying the taxpayer that the adjustment will be assessed unless the taxpayer files a petition in Tax Court within 90 days. If a petition is not filed within that time and there is no other response to the statutory notice, the assessment is made and the EITC is denied.

Reasons for change

The Administration believes that the EITC should not be available to individuals who are not authorized to work in the United States. During the past year, the Administration and Congress have taken steps to improve the administration of the EITC. Further steps are desirable to ensure that only the intended beneficiaries receive the EITC.

Proposal

Only individuals who are authorized to work in the United States would be eligible for the EITC. Taxpayers claiming the EITC would be required to provide a valid social security number for themselves, their spouses, and qualifying children. Social security numbers would have to be valid for employment purposes in the United States. Thus, eligible individuals would include U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents. Taxpayers residing in the United States illegally would not be eligible for the credit.

In addition, the IRS would be authorized to use the math-error procedures, which are simpler than deficiency procedures, to resolve questions about the validity of a social security number. Under this approach, the failure to provide a correct social security number would be treated as a math error. Taxpayers would have 60 days in which they could either provide a correct social security number or request that the IRS follow the current-law deficiency procedures. If a taxpayer failed to respond within this period, he or she would be required to refile with correct social security numbers in order to obtain the EITC.

These provisions would be effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 1995.

INTEREST AND DIVIDEND TEST FOR EARNED INCOME TAX CREDIT
Current law

To be eligible to receive the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC), an individual must have earned income. To target the EITC to low-income workers, the amount of the credit to which a taxpayer is entitled decreases when the taxpayer's earned income (or, if greater, adjusted gross income (AGI)) exceeds certain thresholds. The earned income and AGI thresholds are indexed for inflation and are also adjusted to take into account qualifying children. In 1995, a taxpayer with two or more qualifying children will not be eligible for the EITC if his or her income exceeds $26,673. The income cut-offs decline to $24,396 for a taxpayer with one qualifying child and $9,230 for a taxpayer with no qualifying children.

Reason for change

Under current law a taxpayer may have relatively low earned income, and therefore may be eligible for the EITC, even though he or she has significant interest and dividend income. The EITC should be targeted to families with the greatest need. Most EITC recipients do not have significant resources and must rely on earnings to meet their day-to-day living expenses, but taxpayers with high levels of interest and dividend income can draw upon the resources that produce this income to meet family needs.

Proposal

Beginning in 1996, a taxpayer would not be entitled to the EITC if his or her aggregate interest and dividend income during a taxable year exceeds $2,500. This threshold would be indexed for inflation thereafter.

TAX RESPONSIBILITIES OF AMERICANS WHO RENOUNCE CITIZENSHIP

Current law

Under current law, worldwide gains realized by U.S. citizens and resident aliens are subject to U.S. tax. Existing rules recognize that the United States has a tax interest in preventing tax avoidance through renunciation of citizenship. These rules continue to tax former U.S. citizens on U.S. source income for ten years following renunciation of citizenship if one of the principal purposes of the renunciation was to avoid U.S. income tax. A similar rule applies to aliens who cease to be residents.

Reasons for change

Wealthy U.S. citizens and long-term residents sometimes abandon their U.S. citizenship or status as residents. Existing rules to prevent tax avoidance through expatriation have proven largely ineffective because departing taxpayers have found ways to restructure their activities to avoid those rules, and compliance with the rules is difficult to monitor. Consequently, existing measures need to be enhanced to ensure that gains generally accruing during the time a taxpayer was a citizen or long-term permanent resident will be subject to U.S. tax at the time the taxpayer abandons citizenship or residency.

Proposal

Existing rules would be expanded to provide that if a U.S. person expatriates on or after February 6, 1995, the person would be treated as having sold his or her assets at fair market value immediately prior to expatriation and gain or loss from such sale would be recognized and would be subject to U.S. income tax. A U.S. citizen would be considered to expatriate if the citizens renounces or abandons U.S. citizenship. A resident alien individual would be taxed under this proposal if the alien has been subject to U.S. tax as a lawful permanent resident of the United States in at least ten of the prior fifteen taxable years and then ceases to be subject to U.S. tax as a resident.

For this purpose, a taxpayer would be treated as owning those assets that would be included in the taxpayer's gross estate (determined as if the taxpayer's estate had been created on the date of expatriation) as well as, in certain cases, the taxpayer's interest in assets held in certain trusts (defined below in Section II of the foreign trust discussion). Exceptions to the tax on expatriation would be made for most U.S. real property interests (because they remain subject to U.S. taxing jurisdiction) and interests in qualified retirement plans. An expatriating individual also would be entitled to exclude $600,000 of gain as determined under the proposal.

The IRS may allow a taxpayer to defer payment of the tax on expatriation with respect to interests in closely-held businesses. In those cases, the taxpayer would be required to provide collateral satisfactory to the IRS. Payment of tax could not be deferred for more than five years, and an interest charge would be imposed on the deferred tax.

Solely for purposes of determining gain or loss subject to the tax on expatriation, a resident alien individual would be permitted to elect to determine basis using the fair market value (instead of historical cost) of assets owned on the date when U.S. residence first began. If made, this election would apply to all of a taxpayer's property.

This proposal would replace existing income tax rules with respect to expatriations on or after February 6, 1995. Existing rules that apply to taxes other than income taxes would continue to apply.

REVISE TAXATION OF INCOME FROM FOREIGN TRUSTS

U.S. tax rules applicable to foreign trusts have not been revised for nearly two decades. New rules are needed to accommodate changes in the use and incidence of foreign trusts and to limit the avoidance and evasion of U.S. taxes. The Administration proposals would reform the taxation of foreign trusts in five respects.

I. Information reporting and foreign trusts

Current law

Under current law, most foreign trusts established by U.S. persons are grantor trusts, the income of which is taxed to the grantor. U.S. persons who create or transfer property to foreign trusts are required to report transactions with the foreign trust to the IRS.

Reasons for change

The existing information reporting statute predates the significant expansion of the foreign grantor trust rules in 1976. In general, penalties for noncompliance with reporting requirements are minimal. U.S. grantors of foreign trusts often do not report the income earned by foreign trusts and often do not comply with required information reporting. These foreign trusts are frequently established in tax haven jurisdictions with stringent secrecy rules. Consequently, the IRS's attempts to verify income earned by foreign trusts are often unsuccessful. Existing penalties have not proven adequate to encourage some U.S. taxpayers to comply with existing rules.

Proposal

Notice of Transfer: Section 6048 would require U.S. persons transferring property to foreign trusts to notify the IRS. This notice would identify the trustee of the foreign trust, indicate the property transferred to the trust, and identify the trust beneficiaries.

If a transferor did not file the required notice, a penalty would be imposed equal to 35 percent of the gross value of the property transferred, valued as of the date of transfer. This penalty would not be less than $10,000, and could be further increased for continuing noncompliance.

Trustee Statements: Section 6048 would require trustees of any foreign trust with a U.S. grantor or a U.S. beneficiary to file two types of statements: a "Section 6048 Statement" and an annual information return. In the Section 6048 Statement, the trustee would be required to:

- (1) appoint a U.S. agent (whether or not a trustee) who has the ability to provide any information that reasonably should be available to the trust in response to requests by the IRS; and
- (2) agree to file an annual information return for the foreign trust.

The annual information return would be required to include a full accounting of trust activities, including separate schedules (K-1s) for income attributable to U.S. grantors or U.S. beneficiaries, as appropriate. The foreign trust would not be considered to have an office or permanent establishment in the United States merely because of the section 6048 activities of its U.S. agent.

There would be two consequences if the trustee of the foreign trust did not file a Section 6048 Statement or the required annual information return. First, the U.S. settlor of a foreign trust would be subject to a $10,000 penalty for each failure to file a Section 6048 Statement or annual information return. This penalty would be increased for continuing noncompliance. Second, the IRS would be authorized to determine, in its discretion, the tax consequences of any trust transactions or operations to a U.S. grantor or U.S. beneficiary. Thus, for example, the IRS could impose a gift tax on property transferred to the foreign trust. In appropriate circumstances, the IRS could also impute taxable income to the U.S. settlor based on the value of assets transferred to or held in the foreign trust. A distribution to a U.S. beneficiary could be deemed to come from income accumulated in the year the trust was organized (or an alien beneficiary's first year of U.S. residence, if later). Although the trustee would have an incentive to file the trustee statements to avoid adverse U.S. tax consequences to U.S. grantors and U.S. beneficiaries, there would be no penalties directly imposed on a trustee for the failure to file those statements.

The Secretary would be authorized to waive any information reporting requirements when there was no significant U.S. tax interest in obtaining the information. Penalties would not be imposed if the taxpayer acted with reasonable cause and not willful neglect.

These proposals generally would be effective for trust taxable years beginning after the date of enactment.

II. Outbound foreign grantor trusts

Current law

Under section 679, a foreign trust established by a U.S. person for the benefit of U.S. persons generally is a "grantor trust", and the grantor is treated as owner of property transferred to the trust. There are, however, some transfers that are not covered by this general rule. First, transfers by reason of death are not subject to section 679. Second, sales of property to a foreign trust at fair market value are not subject to section 679. Third, if a foreign person transfers property to a foreign trust for the benefit of a U.S. person and then becomes a resident of the United States, section 679 does not apply to the transfer. Finally, current rules do not clearly address the tax consequences for a domestic trust that becomes a foreign trust.

Reasons for change

Tax planning to avoid or defer recognition of income from foreign trusts often utilizes the exceptions to section 679. For example, a foreign trust may be established by will upon the death of a U.S. person for the benefit of U.S. persons. Because the trust is not a grantor trust, the income of the trust is not subject to U.S. tax until distributed to a U.S. person, even though the trust was created by a U.S. person for the benefit of a U.S. person.

U.S. persons also sometimes attempt to avoid section 679 by selling property to a foreign trust in exchange for a note from the trust. Often, the U.S. transferor does not intend to collect on the note. In such a case, the purported seller of the assets should be treated as owning the assets transferred to the trust. (If there is no bona fide debt, these transactions are subject to challenge under current law, because the exchange would not be at fair market value.)

Prior to becoming residents of the United States, foreign persons often put their assets into irrevocable trusts in tax haven jurisdictions for the benefit of U.S. persons. As a result, the trust income escapes U.S. tax until distribution.

Further, as tax haven jurisdictions enact legislation to enable U.S. trusts to move to those jurisdictions, trust migrations are becoming more common. Taxpayers should not be able to achieve tax results through migration of a domestic trust that they could not achieve directly by creating a foreign trust.

Finally, the inadequacy of the existing attribution rules as they apply to discretionary beneficiaries encourages taxpayers to avoid the appropriate tax consequences of their transactions by disguising true economic ownership of assets through the use of foreign discretionary trusts.

Proposal

The Administration proposes several changes to section 679, described below.

Transfers at Death: Property transferred to a foreign trust at the death of a trust grantor (including property in a foreign grantor trust at the grantor's death) would be treated as having been transferred to the trust by the beneficiaries in accordance with their respective interests in the trust (described below) in a transaction in which no gain or loss would be recognized. U.S. beneficiaries therefore would become grantors for purposes of section 679. These proposals would be effective for assets transferred to foreign trusts after the date of enactment.

Sales to Foreign Trusts: The sale of property to a foreign trust by a U.S. person would be considered a transfer to a grantor trust under section 679 unless the trust pays the grantor full fair market value for the property without regard to any debt obligation received by the transferor issued by the trust, the grantor, a beneficiary, or a person related to the grantor or beneficiary or guaranteed by any such person. Exceptions would be provided for legitimate commercial transactions, such as credit extended by unrelated persons. A transferor would not be treated as receiving fair market value for property transferred in a deemed sale (pursuant to an election under section 1057 or otherwise). These proposals would be effective for assets transferred to foreign trusts on or after February 6, 1995.

Pre-immigration Trusts: If a foreign person transfers property to a foreign trust and becomes a U.S. person within five years of the transfer, the trust would be considered a grantor trust under section 679 with respect to such transferred assets if the trust has U.S. beneficiaries after the grantor becomes a U.S. person. This proposal would be effective for assets transferred to foreign trusts on or after February 6, 1995.

Outbound Trust Migrations: For purposes of section 679, if a domestic trust becomes a foreign trust, the trust assets would be deemed to have been transferred to the trust by the beneficiaries in accordance with their respective interests in the trust (defined below) in a transaction in which no gain or loss is recognized. Thus, any U.S. beneficiaries would be considered to be grantors of their respective interests in the foreign trust for purposes of section 679. However, if the IRS determines that the domestic trust was established pursuant to a plan to retransfer assets to a foreign trust, the IRS would be permitted to treat the U.S. settlor of the domestic trust as grantor of the foreign trust for purposes of section 679. The proposal would be effective for assets transferred to foreign trusts on or after February 6, 1995.

Determination of Respective Interests: For purposes of presenting abusive transactions designed to avoid section 679 and the tax on expatriation, a beneficiary's respective interest in a trust would be based on all relevant facts and circumstances, including the terms of the trust instrument. Other relevant factors may include letters of wishes or similar documents, patterns of historical trust distributions, and the existence of and functions performed by a trust protector or any similar advisor. If the respective interests of beneficiaries in a discretionary trust cannot otherwise be determined, those beneficiaries with the closest degree of family affiliation to the settlor could be presumed to have equal proportionate interests in the trust.

The proposed would apply the attribution rules of discretionary beneficiaries only to the abusive situations under section 679 described above and to the tax on expatriation of U.S. citizens and residents, but would not directly apply the attribution rules for other purposes (e.g., to determine if a discretionary beneficiary is a U.S. shareholder of a controlled foreign corporation that is owned by the trust). The determination of respective interests for purposes of the tax on expatriation by U.S. citizens and residents would be effective for expatriations occurring on or after February 6, 1995.

III. Inbound foreign grantor trusts

Current law

The United States disregards certain "grantor" trusts for income tax purposes. This treatment is designed to prevent abuses arising from attempts to shift income to beneficiaries who are likely to be paying taxes at lower rates than the grantor of the trust. Consequently, under existing anti-abuse rules, the grantor of such a trust is taxed as if he owned the trust assets directly. Trusts generally are considered grantor trusts if (1) the grantor has a reversionary interest in trust income or corpus, (2) the grantor or a nonadverse party holds certain powers over the beneficial enjoyment of trust income or corpus, (3) certain administrative powers are exercisable for the grantor's benefit (e.g., the grantor can reacquire trust assets by substituting assets of equivalent value), (4) the grantor or a nonadverse party has the power to revest trust assets in the grantor, or (5) trust income may be paid or accumulated for the benefit of the grantor or the grantor's spouse in the discretion of the grantor or a nonadverse party. A person other than the grantor is treated as owning trust assets if that person has the power to withdraw trust income or corpus.

The IRS has issued a revenue ruling in which a foreign person funded a foreign grantor trust for U.S. beneficiaries. The ruling holds that since the foreign person is treated as the owner of the grantor trust, a U.S. beneficiary is not taxable on trust distributions.

Reasons for change

Existing law inappropriately permits foreign taxpayers to affirmatively use the domestic anti-abuse rules concerning grantor trusts. Although current law treats a foreign grantor as the owner of the trust assets, the foreign grantor generally is not subject to U.S. tax on income of the trust. These rules therefore permit U.S. beneficiaries, who enjoy the benefits of residing in the United States, to avoid U.S. tax on trust income. U.S. beneficiaries should be appropriately taxed in the United States.

Proposal

Under the proposal, a person would be treated as owning trust assets under the grantor trust rules only if that person is a U.S. citizen, U.S. resident, or domestic corporation. The IRS may prescribe rules for applying the grantor trust rules to settlors that are partnerships, trusts, and estates to the extent that the beneficial interests in such entities are owned by U.S. citizens, U.S. residents, or domestic corporations. A U.S. person receiving distributions of trust income as result of this provision would be allowed to claim a foreign tax credit for foreign taxes paid on trust income by the trust or the foreign grantor.

Several related provisions are proposed to enforce these rules. First, enhanced authority would be granted to the IRS to prevent the use of nominees to evade these rules. For this purpose, a bona fide settlor of a trust with power to withdraw income or corpus from the trust would normally not be considered a nominee. Second, new rules would harmonize the treatment of purported gifts by corporations and partnerships with the new foreign grantor trust rules. Third, U.S. persons would be required to report the receipt of what they claim to be large gifts from foreign persons in order to allow the IRS to verify that such purported gifts are not, in fact, disguised income to the U.S. recipients.

If a trust that is a grantor trust under current law becomes a nongrantor trust pursuant to this rule, the trust would be treated as if it were resettled on the date the trust becomes a nongrantor trust. Neither the grantor nor the trust would recognize gain or loss. If a resettled domestic trust that has a foreign grantor became a foreign trust before December 31, 1995, the section 1491 excise tax on outbound transfers of assets would not be applied to the transfer by the domestic trust to the new foreign trust. Otherwise, this proposal would be effective on the date of enactment of this provision. These rules would not apply to normal security arrangements involving a trustee (including the use of indenture trustees and similar arrangements).

IV. Foreign nongrantor trusts

Current law

Accumulation distributions: U.S. beneficiaries of foreign trusts are subject to a nondeductible interest charge on distributions of accumulated income earned by the trust in earlier taxable years. The charge is based on the length of time the tax was deferred by deferring distributions of accumulated income. Under existing law, the interest charge is equal to six percent simple interest per year multiplied by the tax imposed on the distribution. If adequate records are not available to determine the portion of a distribution that is accumulated income, the distribution is deemed to be an accumulation distribution from the year the trust was organized.

Constructive Distributions: The tax consequences of the use of trust assets by beneficiaries is ambiguous under current law. Taxpayers may assert that a beneficiary's use of assets owned by a trust does not constitute a distribution to the beneficiary.

Reasons for change

Accumulation distributions: Interest paid by U.S. beneficiaries of foreign trusts should reflect market rates of interest.

Constructive distributions: If a corporation makes corporate assets available for a shareholder's personal use (e.g., a corporate apartment made available rent-free to a shareholder), the fair market value of the use of that property is treated as a constructive distribution. Further, if a controlled foreign corporation makes a loan to a U.S. person, the loan is treated as a deemed distribution by the foreign corporation to its U.S. shareholders. The use of foreign trust assets by trust beneficiaries should give rise to tax consequences that are similar to those associated with the use of corporate shareholders.

Proposal

Accumulation distributions: For periods of accumulation after December 31, 1995, the rate of interest charged on accumulation distributions would correspond to the interest rate taxpayers pay on underpayment of tax. If a trust does not provide information required under section 6048, the distribution would be deemed to be from income accumulated in the year the trust was organized (or an alien beneficiary's first year of U.S. residence, if later). If a taxpayer is not able to demonstrate when the trust was created, the IRS may use any approximation based on available evidence.

Taxpayers have used a variety of methods (e.g., tiered trusts, divisions of trusts, mergers of trusts, and similar transactions with corporations) to convert a distribution of accumulated income into a distribution of current income or corpus. The proposal would authorize the IRS to recharacterize such transactions, effective for transactions or arrangements entered into after the date of enactment. Transactions that may be entered into to avoid the interest charge on accumulation distributions (e.g., excessive "compensation" paid to trust beneficiaries who are directors of corporations owned by the foreign trust) may be subject to recharacterization.

The proposal also clarifies existing law by providing that if an alien beneficiary of a foreign trust becomes a U.S. resident and thereafter receives an accumulation distribution, no interest would be charged for periods of accumulation that predate U.S. residency.

Constructive distributions: If a beneficiary uses assets of a foreign trust, the value of that use would be a constructive distribution to the beneficiary. Thus, if a foreign trust made a residence available for use by a beneficiary (or a related person), the difference between the fair rental value of the residence and any rent actually paid would be treated as a constructive distribution to that beneficiary. If a foreign trust purported to loan cash (or cash equivalents) to a U.S. beneficiary, the loan would be treated as a constructive distribution by the foreign trust to the U.S. beneficiary. These provisions would not apply if constructive distributions did not exceed $2,500 during a taxable year. The provisions would be effective for taxable years of a trust that begin after the date of enactment.

V. Residence of trusts

Current law

Under current law, a "foreign estate or trust" is an estate or trust the "income of which, from sources without the United States which is not effectively connected with the conduct of a trade or business within the United States, is not includable in gross income under subtitle A" of the Internal Revenue Code. This definition does not provide criteria for determining when an estate or trust is foreign.

Court cases and rulings indicate that the residence of an estate or trust depends on various factors, such as the location of the assets, the country under whose laws the estate or trust is created, the residence of the fiduciary, the nationality of the decedent or settlor, the nationality of the beneficiaries, and the location of the administration of the trust or estate. See e.g., B.W. Jones Trust v. Comm'r, 46 B.T.A. 531 (1942), aff'd, 132 F.2d 914 (4th Cir. 1943).

Reasons for change

Present rules provide insufficient guidance for determining the residence of estates and trusts. Because the tax treatment of an estate, trust, settlor, or beneficiary may depend on whether the estate or trust is foreign or domestic, it is important to have an objective definition of the residence of an estate or trust. Reducing the number of factors used in determining the residence of estates or trusts for tax purposes would increase the flexibility of settlors and trust administrators to decide where to locate and in what assets to invest. For example, if the location of the administration of the trust were no longer a relevant criterion, settlors of foreign trusts would be able to choose whether to administer the trusts in the United States or abroad based on non-tax considerations.

Proposal

An estate or trust would be considered a domestic estate or trust if two factors were present: (1) a court within the United States is able to exercise primary supervision over the administration of the estate or trust; and (2) a U.S. fiduciary (alone or in concert with other U.S. fiduciaries) has the authority to control all major decisions of the estate or trust. A foreign estate or trust would be any estate or trust that is not domestic.

The first factor would be fulfilled only if a U.S. court had authority over the entire estate or trust, and not if it merely had jurisdiction over certain assets or a particular beneficiary. Normally, the first factor would be satisfied if the trust instrument is governed by the laws of a U.S. state. One way to satisfy this factor is to register the estate or trust in a state pursuant to a state law which is substantially similar to Article VII of the Uniform Probate Code as published by the American Law Institute. The second factor would normally be satisfied if a majority of the fiduciaries are U.S. persons and a foreign fiduciary (including a "protector" or similar trust advisor) may not veto important decisions of the U.S. fiduciaries. In applying this factor, the IRS would allow an estate or trust a reasonable period of time to adjust for inadvertent changes in fiduciaries (e.g., a U.S. trustee dies or abruptly resigns where a trust has two U.S. fiduciaries and one foreign fiduciary).

The new rules defining domestic estates and trusts would be effective for taxable years of an estate or trust that begin after December 31, 1996. The delayed effective date is intended to allow estates and trusts a period of time to modify their governing instruments or to change fiduciaries. Moreover, taxpayers would be allowed to elect to apply these rules to taxable years of an estate or trust beginning after the date of enactment.

INCREASE IN NUMBER OF EMPOWERMENT ZONES

Current law

The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 (OBRA '93) authorized a federal demonstration project in which nine empowerment zones and 95 enterprise communities would be designated in a competitive application process. Of the nine empowerment zones, six were to be located in urban areas and three were to be located in rural areas. State and local governments jointly nominated distressed areas and proposed strategic plans to stimulate economic and social revitalization. By the June 30, 1994 application deadline, over 500 communities had submitted applications.

On December 21, 1994, the Secretaries of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Department of Agriculture designated the empowerment zones and enterprise communities authorized by Congress in OBRA '93.

Among other benefits, businesses located in empowerment zones are eligible for three federal tax incentives: an employment and training credit; an additional $20,000 per year of section 179 expensing; and a new category of tax-exempt private activity bonds. Businesses located in enterprise communities are eligible for the new category of tax-exempt bonds. OBRA '93 also provided that federal grants would be made to designated areas.

Reasons for change

Because of the vast number of distressed urban areas and the need to revitalize these areas, the Administration believes that the number of authorized empowerment zones should be expanded, subject to budgetary constraints. Extending the tax incentives to economically distressed areas will help stimulate revitalization of these areas.

Proposal

The proposal would authorize the designation of two additional urban empowerment zones and would be effective on the date of enactment. No additional federal grants would be authorized. The sole effect of the proposal would be to extend the empowerment zone tax incentives to two additional areas.

By Mr. McCONNELL (for himself, Mr. LIEBERMAN, and Mrs. KASSEBAUM):
S. 454. A bill to reform the health care liability system and improve health care quality through the establishment of quality assurance programs, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

THE HEALTH CARE LIABILITY REFORM AND QUALITY ASSURANCE ACT OF 1995

• Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce the Health Care Liability Reform and Quality Assurance Act of 1995. Last year, Congress spent many days and weeks considering a dramatic overhaul of the finest health care system in the world. But the vast majority of Americans concluded we didn't need to reinvent our medical system. So, Congress, with good reason, laid aside health care and vowed to come back this year and make some needed incremental changes to the health care system.

Health care liability is one issue on which there was bipartisan consensus about the need to make some significant change. This bill which I am introducing today with the co-sponsorship and assistance of Senators LIEBERMAN and KASSEBAUM represents this bipartisan effort.

The purpose of our bill is to promote patient safety, compensate those who suffer injuries fully and fairly, without enriching lawyers and bureaucrats, make health care more accessible, gain some cost containment in health care, strengthen the doctor-patient relationship and encourage medical innovation. Our present system, unfortunately, does none of the above.

First of all, patients don't get compensated. The Rand Corp. has reported that only 43 cents of every dollar spent in the liability system goes to the injured party. That means lawyers, experts, and court fees eat up 57 percent of all dollars spent in the liability system.

Second, the prohibitive cost of liability insurance means some doctors won't provide care to those in our society who need it most. Half a million rural women can't get an obstetrician to deliver their babies. Because of high malpractice premiums, African-American doctors are avoiding the practice of medicine in high-risk areas—generally urban areas, making it more difficult for minority communities to get necessary care.

Third, companies that invent new products are discouraged under the current system from putting them on the market. Medical device manufacturers are finding it more difficult to get raw materials to produce life saving devices because of the risk of lawsuits.

Fourth, doctors are less likely to explore risky treatment because of the proliferation of lawsuits. A doctor has a better than 1 in 3 chance of being sued during his practice years. And the likelihood of suit has nothing to do with whether the doctor was negligent. GAO reports that almost 60 percent of all suits are dismissed without a verdict or even a settlement.

So, something is very wrong with our liability system and our bill will help solve the problem. It contains many of the provisions that were considered, on a bipartisan basis, in the Finance Committee last year, during the health care debate. I have included a summary of the bill's provisions and I ask that the full text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. President, I am hopeful that health care liability will get full consideration and action in this Congress. There will be at least two opportunities—when we consider some targeted health care reform and when we consider legal reform. It is very important that we tackle this issue and I look forward to prompt action.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill and additional material be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 454

Subtitle A—Liability Reform

SEC. 101. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) EFFECT ON HEALTH CARE ACCESS AND COSTS.—That the civil justice system of the United States is a costly and inefficient mechanism for resolving claims of health care liability and compensating injured patients and that the problems associated with the current system are having an adverse impact on the availability of, and access to, health care services and the cost of health care in this country.

(2) EFFECT ON INTERSTATE COMMERCE.—That the health care and insurance industries are industries affecting interstate commerce and the health care liability litigation systems existing throughout the United States affect interstate commerce by contributing to the high cost of health care and premiums for health care liability insurance purchased by participants in the health care system.

(3) EFFECT ON FEDERAL SPENDING.—That the health care liability litigation systems existing throughout the United States have a significant effect on the amount, distribution, and use of Federal funds because of—

(A) the large number of individuals who receive health care benefits under programs operated or financed by the Federal Government;

(B) the large number of individuals who benefit because of the exclusion from Federal taxes of the amounts spent to provide them with health insurance benefits; and

(C) the large number of health care providers who provide items or services for which the Federal Government makes payments.

(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this Act to implement reasonable, comprehensive, and effective health care liability reform that is designed to—

(1) ensure that individuals with meritorious health care injury claims receive fair and adequate compensation, including reasonable non-economic damages;

(2) improve the availability of health care service in cases in which health care liability actions have been shown to be a factor in the decreased availability of services; and

(3) improve the fairness and cost-effectiveness of our current health care liability system to resolve disputes over, and provide compensation for, health care liability by reducing uncertainty and unpredictability in the amount of compensation provided to injured individuals.

SEC. 102. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this subtitle:

(1) CLAIMANT.—The term “claimant” means any person who commences a health care liability action, and any person on whose behalf such an action is commenced, including the decedent in the case of an action brought through or on behalf of an estate.

(2) CLEAR AND CONVINCING EVIDENCE.—The term “clear and convincing evidence” is that measure or degree of proof that will produce in the mind of the trier of fact a firm belief or conviction as to the truth of the allegations sought to be established, except that such measure or degree of proof is more than that required under preponderance of the evidence, but less than that required for proof beyond a reasonable doubt.

(3) HEALTH CARE LIABILITY ACTION.—The term “health care liability action” means a civil action in a State or Federal court—

(A) against a health care provider, health care professional, or other defendant joined in the action (regardless of the theory of liability on which the action is based) in which the claimant alleges injury related to the provision of, or the failure to provide, health care services; or

(B) against a health care payor, a health maintenance organization, insurance company, or any other individual, organization, or entity that provides payment for health care benefits in which the claimant alleges that injury was caused by the payment for, or the failure to make payment for, health care benefits, except to the extent such actions are subject to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

(4) HEALTH CARE PROFESSIONAL.—The term “health care professional” means any individual who provides health care services in a State and who is required by Federal or State laws or regulations to be licensed, registered or certified to provide such services or who is certified to provide health care services pursuant to a program of education, training and examination by an accredited institution, professional board, or professional organization.

(5) HEALTH CARE PROVIDER.—The term “health care provider” means any organization or institution that is engaged in the delivery of health care items or services in a State and that is required by Federal or State laws or regulations to be licensed, registered or certified to engage in the delivery of such items or services.

(6) HEALTH CARE SERVICES.—The term “health care services” means any services provided by a health care professional or health care provider, or any individual working under the supervision of a health care professional, that relate to the diagnosis, prevention, or treatment of any disease or impairment, or the assessment of the health of human beings.

(7) INJURY.—The term “injury” means any illness, disease, or other harm that is the subject of a health care liability action.

(8) NONECONOMIC LOSSES.—The term “noneconomic losses” means losses for physical and emotional pain, suffering, inconvenience, physical impairment, mental anguish, disfigurement, loss of enjoyment of life, loss of consortium, and other nonpecuniary losses incurred by an individual with respect to which a health care liability action is brought.

(9) PUNITIVE DAMAGES.—The term “punitive damages” means damages awarded, for the purpose of punishment or deterrence, and not for compensatory purposes, against a health care provider, health care organization, or other defendant in a health care liability action. Punitive damages are neither economic nor noneconomic damages.

(10) SECRETARY.—The term “Secretary” means the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

SEC. 103. APPLICABILITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (c), this subtitle shall apply with respect to any health care liability action brought in any Federal or State court, except that this section shall not apply to an action for damages arising from a vaccine-related injury or death to the extent that title XXI of the Public Health Service Act applies to the action.

(b) PREEMPTION.—The provisions of this subtitle shall preempt any State law to the extent such law is inconsistent with the limitations contained in such provisions. The provisions of this subtitle shall not preempt any State law that—

(1) provides for defenses in addition to those contained in this subtitle, places greater limitations on the amount of attorneys’ fees that can be collected, or otherwise imposes greater restrictions on non-economic or punitive damages than those provided in this subtitle;

(2) permits State officials to commence health care liability actions as a representative of an individual; or

(3) permits provider-based dispute resolution.

(c) EFFECT ON SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY AND CHOICE OF LAW OR VENUE.—Nothing in this subtitle shall be construed to—

(1) waive or affect any defense of sovereign immunity asserted by any State under any provision of law;

(2) waive or affect any defense of sovereign immunity asserted by the United States;

(3) affect the applicability of any provision of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976;

(4) preempt State choice-of-law rules with respect to actions brought by a foreign nation or a citizen of a foreign nation; or

(5) affect the right of any court to transfer venue or to apply the law of a foreign nation or to dismiss an action of a foreign nation or of a citizen of a foreign nation on the ground of inconvenient forum.

(d) FEDERAL COURT JURISDICTION NOT ESTABLISHED ON FEDERAL QUESTION GROUNDS.—Nothing in this subtitle shall be construed to establish any jurisdiction in the district courts of the United States over health care liability actions on the basis of sections 1331 or 1337 of title 28, United States Code.

SEC. 104. STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

A health care liability action that is subject to this Act may not be initiated unless a complaint with respect to such action is filed within the 2-year period beginning on the date on which the claimant discovered or, in the exercise of reasonable care, should have discovered the harm and its cause, except that such an action relating to a claimant under legal disability may be filed within 2 years after the date on which the disability ceases. If the commencement of a health care liability action is stayed or enjoined, the running of the statute of limitations under this section shall be suspended for the period of the stay or injunction.

SEC. 105. REFORM OF PUNITIVE DAMAGES.

(a) LIMITATION.—With respect to a health care liability action, an award for punitive damages may only be made, if otherwise permitted by applicable law, if it is proven by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant—

(1) intended to injure the claimant for a reason unrelated to the provision of health care services;

(2) understood the claimant was substantially certain to suffer unnecessary injury, and in providing or failing to provide health care services, the defendant deliberately failed to avoid such injury; or

(3) acted with a conscious disregard of a substantial and unjustifiable risk of unnecessary injury which the defendant failed to avoid in a manner which constitutes a gross deviation from the normal standard of conduct in such circumstances.

(b) PUNITIVE DAMAGES NOT PERMITTED.—Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a), punitive damages may not be awarded against a defendant with respect to any health care liability action if no judgment for compensatory damages, including nominal damages (under $500), is rendered against the defendant.

(c) REQUIREMENTS FOR PLEADING OF PUNITIVE DAMAGES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—No demand for punitive damages shall be included in a health care liability action as initially filed.

(2) AMENDED PLEADING.—A court may allow a claimant to file an amended complaint or pleading for punitive damages in a health care liability action if—

(A) the claimant submits a motion to amend the complaint or pleading within the earlier of—

(i) 2 years after the complaint or initial pleading is filed, or

(ii) 9 months before the date the matter is first set for trial; and

(B) after a finding by a court upon review of supporting and opposing affidavits or after a hearing, that after weighing the evidence the claimant has established by a substantial probability that the claimant will prevail on the claim for punitive damages.

(d) SEPARATE PROCEEDING.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—At the request of any defendant in a health care liability action, the trier of fact shall consider in a separate proceeding—

(A) whether punitive damages are to be awarded and the amount of such award, or

(B) the amount of punitive damages following a determination of punitive liability.

(2) ONLY RELEVANT EVIDENCE ADMISSIBLE.—If a defendant requests a separate proceeding under paragraph (1), evidence relevant only to the claim of punitive damages in a health care liability action, as determined by applicable State law, shall be inadmissible in any proceeding to determine whether compensatory damages are to be awarded.

(e) DETERMINING AMOUNT OF PUNITIVE DAMAGES.—In determining the amount of punitive damages in a health care liability action, the trier of fact shall consider only the following:

(1) The severity of the harm caused by the conduct of the defendant.

(2) The duration of the conduct or any concealment of it by the defendant.

(3) The profitability of the conduct of the defendant.

(4) The number of products sold or medical procedures rendered for compensation, as the case may be, by the defendant of the kind causing the harm complained of by the claimant.

(5) Awards of punitive or exemplary damages to persons similarly situated to the claimant, when offered by the defendant.

(6) Prospective awards of compensatory damages to persons similarly situated to the claimant.

(7) Any criminal penalties imposed on the defendant as a result of the conduct complained of by the claimant, when offered by the defendant.

(8) The amount of any civil fines assessed against the defendant as a result of the conduct complained of by the claimant, when offered by the defendant.

(f) LIMITATION AMOUNT.—The amount of damages that may be awarded as punitive damages in any health care liability action shall not exceed 3 times the amount awarded to the claimant for the economic injury on which such claim is based, or $250,000, whichever is greater. This subsection shall be applied by the court and shall not be disclosed to the jury.

(g) RESTRICTIONS PERMITTED.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to imply a right to seek punitive damages where none exists under Federal or State law.

SEC. 106. PERIODIC PAYMENTS.

With respect to a health care liability action, no person may be required to pay more than $100,000 for future damages in a single payment of a damages award, but a person shall be permitted to make such payments of the award on a periodic basis. The periods for such payments shall be determined by the adjudicating body, based upon projections of future losses and shall be reduced to present value. The adjudicating body may waive the requirements of this section if such body determines that such a waiver is in the interests of justice.

SEC. 107. SCOPE OF LIABILITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—With respect to punitive and noneconomic damages, the liability of each defendant in a health care liability action shall be several only and may not be joint. Such a defendant shall be liable only for the amount of punitive or noneconomic damages allocated to the defendant in direct proportion to such defendant's percentage of fault or responsibility for the injury suffered by the claimant.

(b) DETERMINATION OF PERCENTAGE OF LIABILITY.—The trier of fact in a health care liability action shall determine the extent of each defendant's fault or responsibility for injury suffered by the claimant, and shall assign a percentage of responsibility for such injury to each such defendant.

(c) PROHIBITION ON VICARIOUS LIABILITY.—A defendant in a health care liability action may not be held vicariously liable for the direct actions or omissions of other individuals.

SEC. 108. MANDATORY OFFSETS FOR DAMAGES PAID BY A COLLATERAL SOURCE.

Subtitle B—Biomaterials Access Assurance

SEC. 121. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Biomaterials Access Assurance Act of 1995".

SEC. 122. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) each year millions of citizens of the United States depend on the availability of lifesaving or life-enhancing medical devices, many of which are permanently implantable within the human body;

(2) a continued supply of raw materials and component parts is necessary for the invention, development, improvement, and maintenance of the supply of the devices;

(3) most of the medical devices are made with raw materials and component parts that—

(A) are not designed or manufactured specifically for use in medical devices; and

(B) come in contact with internal human tissue;

(4) the raw materials and component parts also are used in a variety of nonmedical products;

(5) because small quantities of the raw materials and component parts are used for medical devices, sales of raw materials and component parts for medical devices constitute an extremely small portion of the overall market for the raw materials and medical devices;

(6) under the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 301 et seq.), manufacturers of medical devices are required to demonstrate that the medical devices are safe and effective, including demonstrating that the products are properly designed and have adequate warnings or instructions;

(7) notwithstanding the fact that raw materials and component parts suppliers do not design, produce, or test a final medical device, the suppliers have been the subject of actions alleging inadequacy—

(A) design and testing of medical devices manufactured with materials or parts supplied by the suppliers; or

(B) warnings related to the use of such medical devices;

(8) even though suppliers of raw materials and component parts have very rarely been held liable in such actions, such suppliers have ceased supplying certain raw materials and component parts for use in medical devices because the costs associated with litigation in order to ensure a favorable judgment for the suppliers far exceeds the total potential sales revenues from sales by such suppliers to the medical device industry;

(9) unless alternate sources of supply can be found, the unavailability of raw materials and component parts for medical devices will lead to unavailability of lifesaving and life-enhancing medical devices;

(10) because other suppliers of the raw materials and component parts in foreign nations are refusing to sell raw materials or component parts for use in manufacturing certain medical devices in the United States, the prospects for development of new sources of supply for the full range of threatened raw materials and component parts for medical devices are remote;

(11) it is unlikely that the small market for such raw materials and component parts in the United States could support the large investment needed to develop new suppliers of such raw materials and component parts;

(12) attempts to develop such new suppliers would raise the cost of medical devices;

(13) courts that have considered the duties of the suppliers of the raw materials and component parts have generally found that the suppliers do not have a duty—

(A) to evaluate the safety and efficacy of the use of a raw material or component part in a medical device; and

(B) to warn consumers concerning the safety and effectiveness of a medical device;

(14) attempts to impose the duties referred to in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (13) on suppliers of the raw materials and component parts would cause more harm than good by driving the suppliers to cease supplying manufacturers of medical devices; and

(15) in order to safeguard the availability of a wide variety of lifesaving and life-enhancing medical devices, immediate action is needed—

(A) to clarify the permissible bases of liability for suppliers of raw materials and component parts for medical devices; and

(B) to provide expeditious procedures to dispose of unwarranted suits against the suppliers in such manner as to minimize litigation costs.

SEC. 126. PROCEDURES FOR DISMISSAL OF CIVIL ACTIONS AGAINST BIOMATERIALS SUPPLIERS.

(a) MOTION TO DISMISS.—In any action that is subject to this subtitle, a biomaterials supplier who is a defendant in such action may, at any time during which a motion to dismiss may be filed under an applicable law, move to dismiss the action on the grounds that—

(1) the defendant is a biomaterials supplier; and

(2)(A) the defendant should not, for the purposes of—

(i) section 125(b), be considered to be a manufacturer of the implant that is subject to such section; or

(ii) section 125(c), be considered to be a seller of the implant that allegedly caused harm to the claimant; or

(B)(i) the claimant has failed to establish, pursuant to section 125(d), that the supplier furnished raw materials or component parts in violation of contractual requirements or specifications; or

(ii) the claimant has failed to comply with the procedural requirements of subsection (b).

(b) PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The procedural requirements described in paragraphs (2) and (3) shall apply to any action by a claimant against a biomaterials supplier that is subject to this subtitle.

(2) MANUFACTURER OF IMPLANT SHALL BE NAMED A PARTY.—The claimant shall be required to name the manufacturer of the implant as a party to the action, unless—

(A) the manufacturer is subject to service of process solely in a jurisdiction in which the biomaterials supplier is not domiciled or subject to a service of process; or

(B) an action against the manufacturer is barred by applicable law.

(3) AFFIDAVIT.—At the time the claimant brings an action against a biomaterials supplier the claimant shall be required to submit an affidavit that—

(A) declares that the claimant has consulted and reviewed the facts of the action with a qualified specialist, whose qualifications the claimant shall disclose;

(B) includes a written determination by a qualified specialist that the raw materials or component parts actually used in the manufacture of the implant of the claimant were raw materials or component parts described in section 125(d)(1), together with a statement of the basis for such a determination;

(C) includes a written determination by a qualified specialist that, after a review of the medical record and other relevant material, the raw material or component part supplied by the biomaterials supplier and actually used in the manufacture of the implant was a cause of the harm alleged by claimant, together with a statement of the basis for the determination; and

(D) states that, on the basis of review and consultation of the qualified specialist, the claimant (or the attorney of the claimant) has concluded that there is a reasonable and meritorious cause for the filing of the action against the biomaterials supplier.

(c) PROCEEDING ON MOTION TO DISMISS.—The following rules shall apply to any proceeding on a motion to dismiss filed under this section:

(1) AFFIDAVITS RELATING TO LISTING AND DECLARATIONS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The defendant in the action may submit an affidavit demonstrating that defendant has not included the implant on a list, if any, filed with the Secretary pursuant to section 510(j) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (21 U.S.C. 360(j)).

(B) RESPONSE TO MOTION TO DISMISS.—In response to the motion to dismiss, the claimant may submit an affidavit demonstrating that—

(i) the Secretary has, with respect to the defendant and the implant that allegedly caused harm to the claimant, issued a declaration pursuant to section 125(b)(2)(B); or

(ii) the defendant who filed the motion to dismiss is a seller of the implant who is liable under section 125(c).

(2) EFFECT OF MOTION TO DISMISS ON DISCOVERY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—If a defendant files a motion to dismiss under paragraph (1) or (3) of subsection (a), no discovery shall be permitted in connection to the action that is the subject of the motion, other than discovery necessary to determine a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction, until such time as the court rules on the motion to dismiss in accordance with the affidavits submitted by the parties in accordance with this section.

(B) DISCOVERY.—If a defendant files a motion to dismiss under subsection (a)(2) on the grounds that the biomaterials supplier did not furnish raw materials or component parts in violation of contractual requirements or specifications, the court may permit discovery, as ordered by the court. The discovery conducted pursuant to this subparagraph shall be limited to issues that are directly relevant to—

(i) the pending motion to dismiss; or

(ii) the jurisdiction of the court.

(3) AFFIDAVITS RELATING STATUS OF DEFENDANT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clauses (i) and (ii) of subparagraph (B), the court shall consider a defendant to be a biomaterials supplier who is not subject to an action for harm to a claimant caused by an implant, other than an action relating to liability for a violation of contractual requirements or specifications described in subsection (d).

(B) RESPONSES TO MOTION TO DISMISS.—The court shall grant a motion to dismiss any action that asserts liability of the defendant under subsection (b) or (c) of section 125 on the grounds that the defendant is not a manufacturer subject to such subsection 125(b) or seller subject to subsection 125(c), unless the claimant submits a valid affidavit that demonstrates that—

(i) with respect to a motion to dismiss contending the defendant is not a manufacturer, the defendant meets the applicable requirements for liability as a manufacturer under section 125(b); or

(ii) with respect to a motion to dismiss contending that the defendant is not a seller, the defendant meets the applicable requirements for liability as a seller under section 125(c).

(4) BASIS OF RULING ON MOTION TO DISMISS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The court shall rule on a motion to dismiss filed under subsection (a) solely on the basis of the pleadings of the parties made pursuant to this section and any affidavits submitted by the parties pursuant to this section.

(B) MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if the court determines that the pleadings and affidavits made by parties pursuant to this section raise genuine issues as concerning material facts with respect to a motion concerning contractual requirements and specifications, the court may deem the motion to dismiss to be a motion for summary judgment made pursuant to subsection (d).

(d) SUMMARY JUDGMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—

(A) BASIS FOR ENTRY OF JUDGMENT.—A biomaterials supplier shall be entitled to entry of judgment without trial if the court finds there is no genuine issue as concerning any material fact for each applicable element set forth in paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 125(d).

(B) ISSUES OF MATERIAL FACT.—With respect to a finding made under subparagraph (A), the court shall consider a genuine issue of material fact to exist only if the evidence submitted by claimant would be sufficient to allow a reasonable jury to reach a verdict for the claimant if the jury found the evidence to be credible.

(2) DISCOVERY MADE PRIOR TO A RULING ON A MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT.—If, under applicable rules, the court permits discovery prior to a ruling on a motion for summary judgment made pursuant to this subsection, such discovery shall be limited solely to establishing whether a genuine issue of material fact exists.

(3) DISCOVERY WITH RESPECT TO A BIOMATERIALS SUPPLIER.—A biomaterials supplier shall be subject to discovery in connection with a motion seeking dismissal or summary judgment on the basis of the inapplicability of section 125(d) or the failure to establish the applicable elements of section 125(d) solely to the extent permitted by the applicable Federal or State rules for discovery against nonparties.

(e) STAY PENDING PETITION FOR DECLARATION.—If a claimant has filed a petition for a declaration pursuant to section 125(b) with respect to a defendant, and the Secretary has not issued a final decision on the petition, the court shall stay all proceedings with respect to that defendant until such time as the Secretary has issued a final decision on the petition.

(f) MANUFACTURER CONDUCT OF PROCEEDING.—The manufacturer of an implant that is the subject of an action covered under this subtitle shall be permitted to file and conduct a proceeding on any motion for summary judgment or dismissal filed by a biomaterials supplier who is a defendant under this section if the manufacturer and any other defendant in such action enter into a valid and applicable contractual agreement under which the manufacturer agrees to bear the cost of such proceeding or to conduct such proceeding.

(g) ATTORNEY FEES.—The court shall require the claimant to compensate the biomaterials supplier (or a manufacturer appearing in lieu of a supplier pursuant to subsection (f)) for attorney fees and costs, if—

(1) the claimant named or joined the biomaterials supplier; and

(2) the court found the claim against the biomaterials supplier to be without merit and frivolous.

SUMMARY OF MCCONNELL-LIEBERMAN-KASSEBAUM HEALTH CARE LIABILITY REFORM AND QUALITY ASSURANCE ACT OF 1995TITLE I—LIABILITY REFORMSubtitle A—Health Care Liability Reform1. Scope:

a. Applies to any action, filed in federal or state court, against a health care provider, professional, payor, hmo, insurance company or any other defendant (except vaccine-related injuries);

b. Preempts state law to the extent it is inconsistent with the provisions herein; no preemption for state laws which:

- (1) provide additional defenses;
- (2) greater limitations on attorneys' fees;
- (3) greater restrictions on punitive or non-economic damages;
- (4) permit state officials to institute action;
- (5) permit provider-based dispute resolution.

c. Does not create federal jurisdiction for health care liability actions.

2. Uniform Statute of Limitations:

Two years from the date injury discovered or should have been discovered, except that any person under a legal disability may file within two years after the disability ceases.

3. Limit on Punitive Damages:

a. Awarded if proved by clear and convincing evidence defendant:

- (1) intended to injure;
- (2) understood claimant was substantially certain to suffer unnecessary injury and deliberately failed to avoid injury; or
- (3) acted with conscious disregard of substantial and unjustifiable risk which defendant failed to avoid in a way which constitutes a gross deviation from the normal standard of conduct.

b. No punitive damages where compensatory damages of less than $500 are awarded.

c. Punitive damages may not be pleaded in original complaint. A complaint may be amended within, the earlier of, 2 years of original complaint or 9 months before the case is set for trial, and after court finds substantial probability that claimant will prevail on the claim for punitive damages.

d. At the defendant's request, punitive damages must be considered in a separate proceeding and, if so requested, no evidence relevant to the claim for punitive damages may be admitted in the proceedings for compensatory damages.

e. In determining the amount, court must consider only:

- (1) severity of harm;
- (2) duration of defendant's conduct and any concealment;
- (3) profitability of defendant's conduct;
- (4) number of products sold/procedures rendered which caused similar harm;
- (5) similar awards of punitive damages in similar circumstances;
- (6) prospective awards of compensatory damages to similarly situated persons;
- (7) criminal penalties imposed on defendant;
- (8) civil fines imposed.

f. No award may exceed the greater of 3 times the amount of economic damages or $250,000.

4. Periodic Payment of Damages:

No more than $100,000 may be required to be paid in one single payment. The court will determine the schedule for payments, based on projection of future losses and reduced to present value. This requirement may be waived, in the interests of justice.

5. Several, not Joint, Liability:

Defendant liable only for the amount of non-economic and punitive damages allocated to defendant's direct proportion of fault or responsibility. The trier of fact determines percentage of responsibility of each defendant. No vicarious liability for direct acts or omissions.

6. Collateral Source:

Total damages must be reduced by payments from other sources made, or to be made, to compensate individual for injury that is the subject of the health care liability action. The offset is reduced by any amount paid by the injured party (or family member) to secure the payment. The reductions must be determined by the judge in a pretrial proceeding.

7. Attorneys' Fees:

Limits attorney contingent fees to 33½% of the first $150,000 and 25% of any amount in excess of $150,000.

8. Obstetric Cases:

No malpractice award against a health care professional relating to delivery of a baby, if the health care professional did not previously treat the woman during the pregnancy, unless malpractice proved by clear and convincing evidence.

9. State Based Alternative Dispute Resolution:

a. Prior to the filing, or immediately following the filing of the action, the parties must participate in a state administered alternative dispute resolution system.

b. The Attorney General will develop adr methods for use by the states, including arbitration, mediation, early neutral evaluation, early offer and recovery. The parties may elect binding arbitration.

c. Adr must promote resolution of health care liability claims in an affordable, timely, fair and convenient manner. States may be granted waivers if they have programs that meet these standards.

d. Any party dissatisfied (except where binding arbitration selected) may continue the action in court and may prevail only if each element of the case is proved beyond a reasonable doubt, including that the defendant was grossly negligent or intentionally caused injury. State law governs the admission of adr proceedings.

10. Certificate of Merit:

Requires that, prior to bringing a lawsuit, an individual (or his or her attorney) to submit an affidavit declaring that the individual reviewed the facts with a qualified specialist and that the specialist has concluded the claim is meritorious. A qualified specialist means a health care professional with expertise (the specialist practices or teaches or has experience or demonstrated competence) in the same or substantially similar area of practice as that involved in the case. A court may impose sanctions for the submission of a false affidavit.

*Subtitle B—Biomaterial Access Assurance1. Summary:

The Biomaterial Access Assurance Act would allow suppliers of the raw material (biomaterial) used to make medical implants, to obtain dismissal, without extensive discovery or other legal costs, in certain tort suits in which plaintiffs allege harm from a finished medical implant.

The Act would not affect the ability of plaintiffs to sue manufacturers or sellers of medical implants. It would allow raw materials suppliers, however, to be dismissed from lawsuits if the generic raw material used in the medical device met contract specifications, and if the biomaterial supplier cannot be classified as either a manufacturer or seller of the medical implant.

2. Scope:

a. Establishes that any biomaterial supplier may seek its dismissal from a civil action within the parameters of the Subtitle.

b. Applies to any civil action brought by a claimant in Federal or State court against a manufacturer, seller, or biomaterial supplier, on the basis of any legal theory, for harm allegedly caused by an implant.

c. Preempts State law to the extent the bill establishes a rule of law.

3. Grounds for Dismissal:

a. Requires dismissal of a biomaterial supplier unless the claimant establishes that the supplier:

(1) was itself the manufacturer of the implant;

(2) was itself the seller of the implant; or

(3) furnished raw materials that failed to meet applicable contractual requirements or specifications.

b. A supplier may be deemed to be a manufacturer only if the supplier registered as such with the FDA pursuant to medical device requirements or if the HHS Secretary issues a declaration that the supplier should have registered as such. Establishes a procedure for the Secretary to issue such a declaration.

c. A supplier may be deemed to be a seller if the supplier itself resold the implant after it had been manufactured and had entered the stream of commerce.

d. With respect to contractual requirements, a supplier may be liable for harm only if the claimant shows that the biomaterial were not the actual product for which the parties contracted or the biomaterial failed to meet certain specifications and that failure was the cause of the injury. The relevant specifications are those:

(1) provided to the supplier by the manufacturer,

(2) provided by the manufacturer (either published, given to the manufacturer, or included in an FDA master file), or

(3) included in manufacturer submissions that had received clearance from the FDA.

4. Procedures for Dismissal:

a. A supplier named as a defendant or joined as a co-defendant may file a motion to dismiss based on the defenses set forth above.

b. A plaintiff must sue a manufacturer directly whenever jurisdiction over the manufacturer is available. A plaintiff must submit an expert's affidavit certifying that the biomaterial were actually used and were the cause of the alleged harm and that the case has merit.

c. Specific rules are established for the handling of a motion to dismiss, including discovery limitations, summary judgment procedures, and staying the proceedings.

d. The manufacturer, not the supplier, may conduct the proceeding on the motion if an appropriate contractual indemnification agreement exists. The possibility of frivolous claims against a supplier is reduced by permitting the court to require the plaintiff to pay attorney fees if the plaintiff succeeds in making the supplier a defendant, but ultimately is found to have a meritless claim.

5. Effective Date: The bill will apply to civil actions commenced on or after the date of enactment.

TITLE II—PROTECTION OF PATIENT HEALTH AND SAFETY

1. Quality Assurance:

Requires each state to establish a health care quality assurance program and fund, approved by the Secretary of HHS. Allocates 50% of all punitive damage awards to be transferred to the fund for the purpose of licensing and certifying health care professionals, implementing programs, including programs to reduce malpractice costs for volunteers serving underserved areas.

2. Risk Management Programs:

Professionals and providers must participate in risk management program to prevent and provide early warning of practices which may result in injuries. Insurers must establish risk management programs and require participation, once every 3 years, as a condition of maintaining insurance.

3. National Practitioner Data Bank:

Requires that information on the discipline of health care practitioners, including suspension or revocation of licenses or hospital privileges, be accessible to the public.●

● Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I am pleased to join Senators MCCONNELL and KASSEBAUM today in introducing the Liability Reform and Quality Assurance Act of 1995. I thank Senator MCCONNELL for his leadership on the bill.

Mr. President, our present system for compensating patients who have been injured by medical malpractice is ineffective, inefficient, and in many respects, unfair. The system promotes the overuse of medical tests and procedures, and diverts too much money away from victims. The Rand Corp. has estimated that injured patients receive only 43 percent of spending on medical malpractice and medical product litigation. And victims often receive their awards after many years of delay.

Our medical malpractice system is a stealth contributor to the high cost of health care. The American Medical Association reports that in the 1980's liability insurance premiums grew faster than other physician practice expenses. The cost of liability insurance has been estimated at $9 billion in 1992.

So called defensive medicine costs are an even greater concern. The Office of Technology Assessment has found that as many as 8 percent of diagnostic procedures are ordered primarily because of doctors' concerns about liability. These defensive practices present a hidden but significant burden on our health care system. The health care consulting firm, Lewin-VHI, has estimated that physician and hospital charges for defensive medicine were as high as $25 billion in 1991.

Taxpayers and health care consumers bear the financial burden of these excessive costs. Liability insurance and defensive medicine premiums drive up the cost of Medicare and Medicaid and of private health care premiums. Further, in some specialties, such as obstetrics, where malpractice premiums have skyrocketed, malpractice liability may be reducing access to quality health care. The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists report of that malpractice costs for ob/gyns increased 350 percent between 1982 and 1988, and that by 1988, 41 percent of those ob/gyns surveyed indicated that they had made changes in their practice patterns, such as ceasing to serve high-risk patients, because of malpractice concerns.

The bill we're introducing today will begin to address these inefficiencies and perverse effects of our malpractice system by directing a greater portion of malpractice awards to victims, by discouraging frivolous law suits, and by enhancing quality assurance programs. Key provisions of this malpractice reform bill include:

Establishing a uniform statute of limitations, 2 years from the date the injury was discovered.

Allowing periodic payments for awards greater than $100,000.

Applying several, not joint and several liability for noneconomic and punitive damages.

Limiting attorneys' contingency fees to 33⅓ of the $150,000 of an award and 25 percent of any amount above $150,000.

Establishing a clear and convincing evidence standard for doctors delivering a baby who had not previously treated the pregnant women.

Requiring States to establish mandatory alternative dispute resolution.

Strengthening the standard for awarding punitive damages and establish State health care quality assurance programs funded with 50 percent of punitive damage awards.

Requiring providers and insurers to participate in risk management programs every 3 years to better detect and prevent practices which may result in patient injury.

Increasing consumer access to the National Practitioner Data Bank which contains information on disciplinary actions against health care providers.

The bill also incorporates legislation I introduced earlier this year with Senator MCCONNELL and others, S. 303, the Biomaterials Access Assurance Act of 1995. That bill seeks to ensure that raw materials continue to be available for use in life-saving medical devices. It allows suppliers of raw materials or biomaterials used to make medical implants to obtain dismissal, with minimal legal costs, from certain tort suits in which plaintiffs allege harm from a finished medical product containing the biomaterial.

Many of the reform ideas in the legislation we are introducing today were proposed or cosponsored by Democrats and Republicans in the last Congress as part of comprehensive health care reform bills. A number of these ideas were embraced last year by a group of us participating in the bipartisan Senate mainstream coalition. But we had little chance to debate these issues in the last Congress. I am optimistic that we will have the opportunity in this Congress to pass a bipartisan medical malpractice reform bill. I encourage my colleagues to consider this legislation and join Senator MCCONNELL, Senator KASSEBAUM, and me as we seek to improve our medical malpractice system.●

By Mr. KEMPTHORNE (for himself and Mr. CRAIG):

S. 455. A bill entitled the "Consultation Clarification Act"; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

CONSULTATION CLARIFICATION ACT

Mr. KEMPTHORNE. Mr. President, today I am introducing a bill to amend the Endangered Species Act. I am introducing a bill critical to the people of this country who are held hostage by the inappropriate implementation of a provision of the Endangered Species Act.

One abuse in particular has caused me to rise today with an urgent need to make a clarification to the Endangered Species Act.

Late last month a Federal judge issued an injunction to protect an endangered strain of salmon. This action resulted in the shutting down of all mining, logging, and grazing in six Idaho National Forests. It didn't cover just the activities that would affect the salmon, it included all activities on lands that represent 30 percent of the land in the State of Idaho. And worse, it adversely affected people lives and jobs in half of the States.

Mr. President, this is the area of the State of Idaho where people's jobs are needlessly at risk because of the vagaries of the courts and Federal agencies. The court imposed a 5-day injunction on all activities on the national forests covering 30 percent of the area of the State of Idaho and jeopardizing the jobs of nearly 5,000 workers, workers on projects that have been in continuous operation that the Forest Service has determined will not jeopardize the endangered salmon runs. And adding uncertainty to another 5,000 workers whose jobs are influenced by the project work.

Mr. President, 2,500 people rallied in Challis, ID, January 21 to let their Government know that they are frustrated that no one is considering their plight. They are facing loss of jobs, not having money for food and clothing, and the uncertainties of having to move from their homes. I got a letter from Russell Ebberts who is an eighth grader in Challis, ID. He's facing having to move if his Dad loses his job. And Danny Fisher and Karen Turpin were planning on getting married in June. Their wedding and future plans have been shattered. And as long as there is a threat of a recurrence of that injunctions, they must continue to be worried.

The current injunction, when it was in effect, affected mainly mining operations, but future injunctions, when they come will affect grazing, timber harvest including salvage, and other activities. We have estimated that if the injunction is put in place again in March, it will cost $65,000 per day in the loss of folks' wages across Idaho. That is intolerable.

The insanity of this injunction was that many of the projects that would be shut down had already been the subject of consultation under the Endangered Species Act and had been determined to not harm the salmon.

Let me repeat that important point, Mr. President. These are projects that had already been the subject of consultation, and had been found to have no effect on the salmon. Nonetheless, just because these projects were contained within a national forest management plan, and the plan had not yet been consulted upon for the salmon, the projects were subject to immediate cessation.

Why, you ask, had the plan not been made subject to consultation? That is the irony of this judge's order. The plans in the six national forests had been consulted upon, in addition to the projects within the plans. The problem was that the salmon was listed under the Endangered Species Act after the forest plans had been consulted upon.

Well, Mr. President, the injunction was temporarily lifted, until March 15. Hopefully this will be enough time for the National Marine Fisheries Service to complete consultation on the forest plans. But, if anything goes wrong, the injunction may be imposed again. As the year progresses, more and more people's jobs will be at risk. These uncertainties in folks' lives are not necessary.

The legislation my colleague from Idaho and I are sponsoring does only one thing, it clarifies that it has never been the intent of Congress to give the regulatory agencies two opportunities to consult on the same project. It was never the intent to cause a project that has already been approved under the Endangered Species Act to come to a halt while the plan of which it is a part goes through a second review.

Since the enactment of the Endangered Species Act, Congress has enacted laws requiring agencies to do broad plans for their activities. These agencies are required by Federal law to have different levels of planning—a broad scale long term plan and then site specific plans.

Court decisions like this one have begun to force an interpretation that there must be consultation on both levels of planning and that both these plans and the resulting projects may be held up if the consultation on both has not been completed.

This is double jeopardy. We cannot afford to allow our Federal Government to waste taxpayers dollars in essentially looking at the same project twice. We can no longer throw out years of planning and community involvement on these plans every time a new species is listed. The laws and regulations for both the Forest Service and the BLM allow for these kinds of updates—they are called amendments and require the kinds of public involvement that put people back into the management of their public lands.

Mr. President, it is time that Congress is clear about what we intended for the consultation process. My bill amends section 7 of the Endangered Species Act to clarify that when a consultation has been completed on a project, the project does not need to stop while consultation is done on the overriding plan.

This is a necessary clarification of the intent of Congress on this issue. Its intent is to avoid unnecessary multiple consultations on a project. We envision that it will help with existing situations in Oregon, Idaho, New Mexico, and California and it will prevent many other States from getting in the same situation that we are currently facing in Idaho.

Mr. President, I want to make it clear that we are not intending to reform the Endangered Species Act with this bill. That reform effort is one that I feel needs careful consideration, constructive debate, and substantive suggestions over the months ahead. We are planning hearings on this broader reform bill and are looking to submit a comprehensive reauthorization bill in the fall.

Mr. President, my bill will fix a small, but critical part of the frustrations caused by liberal interpretations of the Endangered Species Act. And, it will head off potential catastrophes in the short run that will bog down the kind of innovative discussions that are needed to bring forth the best possible bill reauthorizing the Endangered Species Act, to benefit the species truly at risk and to help, not hinder the American people.

DORGAN, and Mr. KENNEDY):

S. 456. A bill to improve and strengthen the child support collection system, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

THE INTERSTATE CHILD SUPPORT RESPONSIBILITY ACT

• Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, the crucible of American society is the family. Today the family faces stresses and injuries that we have never seen before in this country. Almost every child is affected by these pressures: the 40 percent of children who go home to an empty house every afternoon because both parents work as well as the 27 percent of children who live with only one parent. Our efforts as a nation must address these stresses by seeking to recouple sexual behavior and child-bearing with family responsibility. That responsibility involves giving time, love, care, and attention, but it also includes food, clothing, and medical care. We should send a clear message, above all to young men: If you father a child, whether or not you are married to the mother of that child, be prepared to set aside one-sixth or more of your earnings every year for 18 years to help that child grow up healthy, educated, and responsible.

That's the principle of child support. Today, Mr. President, I rise to introduce a bill that will reinforce that principle by repairing all the holes in the tattered, State-based system of child support enforcement. That system has not worked well. It left $5.1 billion in court-ordered child support uncollected last year. It succeeds in establishing paternity for less than 40 percent of out-of-wedlock births. Still, the complex Federal-State system succeeds in collecting $3.98 for every dollar spent on enforcement. We face a choice. We can throw out the State system and replace it with a Federal bureaucracy, which might be more cumbersome but would be as hard to run away from as the IRS. Or, we can try to repair the State system, help States work together better, require some uniformity, and help the States by creating national databases of child support orders and new hires. That is the path that I and a number of my colleagues of both parties have chosen in developing the bill we introduce today.

About 17.6 million children live with just one parent. There are almost 10 million women who are raising children on their own. Almost one-third of them live below the poverty level. Less than 60 percent have child support orders. Only half of those who have child support orders receive the full amount due.

Mothers who do not receive child support do all they can to remain off of welfare. By definition, almost every family receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children should be receiving child support, except in cases where one parent is deceased or in the small number of two-parent families participating in the AFDC-UP program. When we talk about welfare, we have to recognize that for every woman who is raising children, receiving welfare and not working, there is a father who is not raising the children and who may or may not be working. Either way, he is exploiting welfare as much or more than the mother who is receiving welfare. Tougher child support enforcement has resulted in collections for 873,000 families on welfare in 1993, and much of that money went back to the taxpayers to make up for welfare payments already made.

If this Congress undertakes a serious effort at welfare reform, child support enforcement along the lines we propose today must be a part of it. I am very pleased that my colleagues in the House of Representatives, especially Congresswomen MARGE ROUKEMA and NANCY JOHNSON, were able to persuade the leadership of the Ways and Means Committee to expand the Contract With America's welfare reform bill to include comprehensive child support reform. But as I said last year, if welfare reform continues to be delayed by controversy, we must not allow child support to be delayed along with it. There is consensus on child support, and there are also three times as many mothers due child support who are not eligible for welfare as are. They should not have to wait until we fix the welfare system before they receive the support due them.

The link to welfare makes child support a valid concern of the Federal Government, but it is also a Federal concern because one-third of all child support cases are interstate cases, which means that the parents live in different States. These cases are the most difficult to resolve. By moving from State to State and changing jobs, parents can systematically avoid paying child support, or even being located so that their wages can be withheld, for about a year at a time. These deliberate evasions occur against a backdrop of inconsistent State laws, inadequate staff and computer resources, and a continually growing caseload due to the tremendous rise in out-of-wedlock births.

Expanded paternity establishment is key to improving interstate child support enforcement. Every year more than 1 million children are born to unmarried women, about one-fourth of all births that year. About 57 percent of black children, 23 percent of Hispanic children, and 17 percent of white children born in 1990 were born to unwed mothers. In 1990, 68 percent of all births to women between the ages of 15 to 19 were out of wedlock.

Out-of-wedlock births need not automatically consign a mother and children to poverty. They can be handled like a divorce; support can be ordered and enforced. But in about one-quarter of the cases, the State cannot even get started, because they cannot obtain any information about the father.

Many of the paternity establishment provisions of my earlier bill were passed in the 1993 budget package, which required States to establish hospital-based paternity establishment programs. These programs are now up and running, and are demonstrating a significant increase in the number of child support cases in which the father can be identified, so that support can be ordered and the other enforcement mechanisms can kick in. About 85 percent of fathers are in touch with the child and mother at, or soon after, the birth. Many fathers visit their children in the hospital or birthing center. Programs that target these fathers and provide opportunities for them to acknowledge paternity can do a lot to cut down on the number of children for whom paternity has not been established.

For the situations where the father was not targeted at the hospital, this bill contains provisions which would make it easier for paternity to be established by courts or administrative agencies. It makes it less difficult to locate out-of-State fathers by expanding the locate information and services available to custodial parents and child support professionals. It mandates changes in evidence standards which remove many of the obstacles that now exist to paternity establishment across State lines. It provides State child support agencies for the first time with a Federal incentive to work on establishing paternity, not just collecting child support that has already been ordered.

Even when parentage is established, custodial parents always seem to be one step behind noncustodial parents. If a noncustodial parent gets a job in another State, child support officials do not usually learn about the job change until the next quarter in which the employer has to report payroll information. By the time child support officials in the custodial parent's State learn the information, the noncustodial parent has often moved to another job. A year can pass. This scenario is played out over and over in interstate cases.

This bill requires information on every new hire to be filed in a national database, which States can regularly search for the names or Social Security numbers of parents who owe support to children in their States.

To eliminate the problems associated with establishing a support order across State lines, my bill requires the States to expand their long-arm statutes to reach more out-of-State noncustodial parents. It requires States to recognize and enforce child support orders from other States, and it also requires all States to adopt the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act, adopted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, verbatim so that inconsistencies between the States in case processing and enforcement can be eliminated.

Even where a support order has been established, custodial parents still have problems collecting money, especially in interstate cases. In response, this bill requires the States to take tougher measures against parents who do not pay their child support. It requires them to pass laws making it possible for delinquent parents to lose their professional and occupational licenses, hitting them in a sense at their livelihood. It requires the States to hold off issuing driver's licenses to delinquent parents. It calls for the expanded use of credit reporting—it is interesting that a noncustodial parent can be delinquent on a car loan and that fact can be reported on a credit report, but the fact that he or she is delinquent on child support might not be reported. In addition, this bill requires the States to intercept lottery winnings, money judgments, and other income of noncustodial parents who owe child support. This bill also requires the States to make it easier to freeze the bank accounts of delinquent parents, and requires the States to make it a State crime to willfully fail to pay child support.

Finally, this bill responds to staffing the training issues which have plagued child support professionals for decades. In a GAO report I and the other congressional members of the commission requested, it was reported that the average caseload per child support case worker is 1,000 cases. Can you imagine, Mr. President, 1,000 cases? This bill requires the Department of Health and Human Services to conduct staffing studies in every State and report such findings to this body and the States. It also requires the Office of Child Support Enforcement to make training assistance available to State child support agencies.

Mr. President, this bill represents a consensus, an overdue consensus, about the kinds of repairs that are needed in the child support system. It began with the recommendations of the U.S. Commission on Interstate Child Support Enforcement, of which I was a member. I put those recommendations forward as legislation in 1992, as did my colleagues on the commission, Representatives MARGE ROUKEMA and BARBARA KENNELLY. Last year, the administration took those central recommendations and added some detail about the national databases of child support orders and new hires. Late last year and early this year, the House Caucus on Women's Issues took up the subject, and earlier this month introduced a bill modeled on the administration's and my earlier bill. The bill we introduce today is intended to be the Senate companion to H.R. 785, the Johnson bill in the House, with only minor differences.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill and a summary be inserted in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 456

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

INTERSTATE CHILD SUPPORT RESPONSIBILITY ACT OF 1995—BILL SUMMARY

The Interstate Child Support Responsibility Act of 1995 is a comprehensive effort to repair the state-based system of child support. It would establish uniform procedures among states; create state and national databases to locate absent parents and garnish the wages of parents who owe child support; improve paternity establishment; and make it easier to modify child support orders as necessary.

The legislation is based on recommendations of the U.S. Commission on Interstate Child Support Enforcement, the Office of Child Support Enforcement at HHS, and child support administrators from many states. Its provisions are comparable to those of S. 689 in the 103d Congress (the Bradley bill) and the child support section of S. 2224, the Work and Family Responsibility Act, updated to account for more recent innovations in enforcement at the state level. It also parallels H.R. 785, with exceptions as noted below.

STATE UNIFORMITY

States would be required to adopt the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act (UIFSA) in its entirety. This model legislation, already adopted by 20 states, sets a framework for determining jurisdiction of interstate cases, and governs the relationship among states.

The Full Faith and Credit Act, signed into law last year, which requires every state to respect child support orders from other states, would be modified to follow UIFSA.

States would establish administrative procedures for paternity establishment, subpoenas, liens, access to financial information, and suspension of drivers' and professional licenses for parents in arrears on child support. Custodial parents would not have to go to court.

ENFORCEMENT OF SUPPORT ORDERS

Outlines the procedures by which a state may suspend the licenses (including driver's, professional and occupational) of delinquent non-custodial parents, as well as procedures through which the state may place liens on the delinquent parent property.

Requires states to report to credit bureaus delinquencies that exceed 30 days.

Grants families who are owed child support the right to first access to an IRS refund credited to a delinquent non-custodial parent, except for amounts due from time the family received AFDC.

Subjects federal employees to the same withholding and enforcement rules as other workers. Clarifies rules for active-duty military personnel.

Extends the statute of limitations for the collection of child support arrearage to the child's 30th birthday.

Permits the denial of a passport for individuals who are more than $5,000 or 24 months in arrears.

Establishes state-based demonstration projects to address non-custodial parents' visitation and custody issues.

STATE AUTOMATED SYSTEMS

Each state would establish a database of basic information about every child support order opened in that state. This data would be sent to a national registry on a regular basis to aid in enforcement of interstate cases.

States would centralize the collection and disbursement of information and payments. Employers would be able to send withheld income to one state location, even if a county has jurisdiction over the child support order. States may contract the collection and distribution system out to private firms.

NATIONAL SYSTEMS—EXPANDED FEDERAL PARENT LOCATOR SYSTEM

The modified Federal Parent Locator System would contain three components: a databank of Child Support Orders; directory of new hires, and expanded locator.

The Databank of Child Support Orders contains information on child support orders, as obtained from the individual states.

The Directory of New Hires will record basic information supplied by employers. This data will be compared against the child support data in order to better track down parents evading payment of child support, especially on the interstate level.

The expanded locator component allows states to access federal information to not only enforce orders, but also to establish paternity and establish and modify orders.

VOLUNTARY PATERNITY ESTABLISHMENT

The process of determination of paternity would be simplified, and voluntary paternity processes enhanced. These provisions would strengthen the hospital-based paternity establishment provisions enacted into law in the 1993 budget reconciliation.

For parents who voluntarily acknowledge paternity, a signed affidavit would be presumed to be a final judgement of paternity 60 days after signature. Both parents must be informed of their rights and responsibilities before signing the acknowledgement. Exceptions to the final judgement status include fraud, duress, or material mistake of fact.

Minor parents who sign the voluntary acknowledgement not in the presence of a parent or guardian may rescind that acknowledgment at any time until turning 18, or until court proceedings in which the teen and his or her attorney, parent or guardian is present.

At state option, states may waive fees charged to fathers who cooperate with the state, e.g. for genetic testing.

MODIFICATION AND ESTABLISHMENT OF SUPPORT ORDERS

Requires that child support orders may be reviewed by a state at the request of either parent every three years or when there is a substantial change in the financial circumstances of either parent.

Requires parents to exchange financial information annually.

Establishes a National Child Support Guidelines Commission, which will develop support order guidelines which states may adopt of Congress may consider adopting nationally.

PROGRAM ADMINISTRATION AND FUNDING

Increases the base federal matching rate for child support services from 66% to 75%. Creates an incentive payment to state of up to 15% for paternity establishment and overall performance of a state IV-D program. Strengthens penalties on states for failure to comply with program requirements.

COSTS

Increased match rate will cost approximately $300 million over five years. Other costs to federal and state taxpayers have not been scored by CBO, but all will be offset by increased collections. (The existing program, despite flaws, collects $3.98 for every $1 spent.)

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN SENATE BILL AND H.R.

785

Senate bill authorizes a demonstration in several states of innovative procedures to mediate disputes over visitation and custody.

Senate bill is slightly less prescriptive to states.

Senate bill includes more specific instructions to the Commission on Child Support Guidelines, and permits the Commission to conclude that national guidelines are not needed.

• Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I am pleased to support the Child Support Act of 1995, introduced by Mr. BRADLEY.

With over half of our marriages ending in divorce in the United States, and more and more children being born out-of-wedlock, single parent households have become more and more common. Most of the children in these homes grow up to be healthy and happy contributors to our society. Too many, however, are abandoned by a parent at a young age and struggle into adulthood. Mom or Dad, while raising a child, is working to make ends meet—without the help of the child's other parent.

We have spent a great deal of time talking about family and the role of the State in preserving traditional families. We have talked at great length about how to help poor unwed and single mothers become independent from government handouts. Certainly, a central factor as to why these mothers are on welfare in the first place and may not be able to get off, is because of the lack of support coming from their child's father.

Only 58 percent of single mothers had a child support order in 1990—the vast majority of single mothers had applied for such an order but were unsuccessful in receiving one. The numbers are quite stark: over half of the 17.2 million children in single parent homes in our Nation are living in poverty.

I think there is consensus on this issue—Republican or Democrat, Rhode Islander or Mississippian—we all agree that the time has come for Congress to become more involved in ensuring that children are not cheated out of a healthy childhood. This legislation does an admirable job of addressing the problems of “dead-beat” parents.

Currently, States have a rather haphazard way of collecting child support. With the ease in which citizens move from one State to another, there is a real need to have strong and efficient communication between the States in collecting child support. This legislation addresses this problem through the creation of a national data base of child support orders. States will be required to periodically contribute new child support orders to this registry which may then be accessed by other states. Clearly, such a program aids greatly in tracking down interstate cases. In addition, by requiring parents to exchange financial information annually and streamlining the collection and distribution policy of the States, this legislation will make it far less complicated to ensure that those families deserving of child support moneys will get it.

I would urge my colleagues to support this crucial legislation. By some estimates, in 1990, if we had enforceable child support orders reflecting ability to pay, single mothers and children would have received nearly $50 billion in child support. I am sure that you would agree that such a number is astounding. This money is wilfully being kept from the children who need it. We cannot, in good conscience, talk about reforming our welfare system without discussing more effective ways to ensure that poor children are in fact receiving the fiscal and emotional support that they need in order to grow and to thrive. Thank you very much for your time and consideration.●

● Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I am pleased to join Senator BRADLEY today as a cosponsor of the Interstate Child Support Responsibility Act of 1995. My esteemed colleague from Connecticut, Representative JOHNSON, introduced a similar bill in the House, and I thank them both for their leadership on this issue. The bill will greatly strengthen our child support enforcement system. This year, as Congress debates dramatic changes to our welfare system, we should make child support enforcement a key part of our welfare reform agenda and should pass the comprehensive reforms set forth in this act.

A tough child support enforcement system has three far-reaching benefits for our society. First, child support directly improves the lives of millions of children. An increasing number of our children depend on child support. Thirty years ago the vast number of children lived with both of their parents. But an astounding 50 percent of all children born in the 1980's will spend some time in a single-parent family. Children living with only one parent are all too likely to experience poverty. In 1992, half of the children living in single-parent families—over 8 million children—were poor. Improving child support enforcement will directly improve the quality of these children's lives and their chances for a bright future.

Second, enhancing child support enforcement will help keep families off of public assistance. About 45 percent of families enter our welfare system as a result of a divorce or separation, and another 30 percent seek welfare assistance after having a child out-of-wedlock. Receiving support from the absent parent can make the difference for many families between self-sufficiency and dependency.

Third, strengthening child support enforcement sends a critical message of responsibility to parents. The decision to have a child has profound moral content. Our child support policies must clearly signal that our society will hold all parents accountable for their children. In an era of skyrocketing out-of-wedlock births and rising teen pregnancy rates, child support enforcement payments must become a well known and unavoidable fact of life for absent fathers and mothers. Would-be “dead-beat” dads must know that they can't simply cross a State border to escape support payments.

For too many parents today, child support collection is not a certainty. Less than 60 percent of custodial mothers establish a child support order. And only half of support orders are paid in full. The Urban Institute estimates that the gap between the amount of child support parents should be paying and the amount we are actually collecting is $34 billion a year.

The bill we are introducing today will help close that child support collection gap. It will help States at each step of the child support collection process. The bill will make it easier for States to locate absent noncustodial parents; establish paternity; establish a court order; and enforce payment of court orders.

To help States locate parents and collect child support the bill, among other things: Requires States to automate and centralize child support order data to aid in enforcement of interstate cases; requires employers to notify States of new hires and establishes a Federal directory of new hires to aid in locating parents; streamlines procedures for voluntary paternity establishment; provides States with greater financial incentives to establish paternity; requires more frequent modification of child support orders so awards will increase with parents' earnings; requires States to have procedures for suspending drivers licenses and professional licenses of deadbeat parents; and provides greater incentives for States to increase child support collection.

The bill will also support State demonstration projects to address an underlying cause of some parents' failure to pay child support because access or visitation rulings limit their involvement in their children's lives. The bill will help States try new ways of working with families to increase noncustodial parents' visitation privileges and their financial commitment to their children.

While the bill will impose modest administrative costs on States and the Federal Government, it will also save both levels of government money over the long term. That is why State welfare administrators support it. The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services Reports that for every $1 spent on child support enforcement, $4 is collected. The collected funds are delivered to families and are used in part to reimburse Federal and State governments for welfare expenditures. This bill's provisions will increase the rate of return on our investment, benefiting children, families, and taxpayers.

Mr. President, let me reiterate that child support enforcement must be a part of our welfare reform strategy. Last month I introduced S. 246, the Welfare Reform That Works Act—a bill that would help States make bold changes to their welfare systems to move welfare recipients into the work force and strengthen families. I stated when I introduced the bill, and I want to reiterate now, that the States ability to achieve our welfare reform goals will be limited if we do not improve our child support enforcement programs. States' welfare caseloads will be higher and their budgets lower if deadbeat parents can continue to evade their responsibilities, if teenagers know that they can continue to have babies without consequences.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to join Senator BRADLEY and the bill's other cosponsors in supporting the act.●

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 8—RELATIVE TO MAMMOGRAPHY SCREENING GUIDELINES

Ms. SNOWE submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources:

S. CON. RES. 8

Whereas the National Cancer Institute is the lead Federal agency for research on the causes, prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of cancer;

Whereas health professionals and consumers throughout the Nation regard the guidelines of the National Cancer Institute as reliable scientific and medical advice;

Whereas it has been proven that intervention with routine screening for breast cancer through mammography can save women's lives at a time when medical science is unable to prevent this disease;

Whereas there are statistical limitations to evaluating the efficacy of mammography in a 5-10 year age range of women, using existing studies designed to test the efficacy of mammography in a 25-30 year age range of women;

Whereas there were numerous shortcomings identified in a Canadian study designed to address reduction of mortality from breast cancer in the 40-49 age range;

Whereas to date, it is not possible to have the same degree of scientific confidence about the benefit of mammography for women ages 40-49 as exists for women ages 50-69 due to inherent limitations in the studies that have been conducted;

Whereas meta-analysis (combining the results of several studies) is sometimes useful, and the studies used to reach the National Cancer Institute's conclusions were not easily combined because of variations in design, technology, screening interval, the inclusion or exclusion of clinical breast examination, and quality;

Whereas the existing clinical trial data are inadequate to provide a definite answer to the efficacy of early detection in the 40-49 age group and there has been a dramatic change in technology during the 30-year period since the initiation of the first study of breast cancer screening;

Whereas the majority, approximately 80 percent, of women who are diagnosed with breast cancer have no identifiable risk for this disease;

Whereas breast cancer is the leading cause of cancer death among women in the age group 15-54;

Whereas the American Cancer Society and 21 other national medical organizations and health and consumer groups are at variance with the recently rescinded guideline of the National Cancer Institute for mammography for women ages 40-49; and

Whereas the statement of scientific fact on breast cancer screening issued by the National Cancer Institute on December 3, 1993, will cause widespread confusion and concern among women and physicians, erode confidence in mammography, and reinforce barriers and negative attitudes that keep women of all ages from being screened: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That it is the sense of Congress that—

(1) adequately designed and conducted studies are needed to determine the benefit of screening women ages 40-49 through mammography and other emerging technologies;

(2) the National Cancer Institute's statement of scientific fact on breast cancer screening should clearly state that the uncertainty of evidence for women in this age group is due to the limitations of existing studies (as of the date of issuance of the statement); and

(3) the National Cancer Institute should reissue the recently rescinded guideline for mammography for women ages 40-49 or direct the public to consider guidelines issued by other organizations.

• Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, breast cancer is the most common form of cancer in American women. One out of every eight women in the United States will develop breast cancer in her lifetime—a staggering increase from the 1-out-to-14 rate in 1960. An estimated 2.6 million women in America are living with breast cancer—1.6 million who have been diagnosed and an estimated 1 million do not yet know they have the disease. And every 12 minutes, a woman will die from breast cancer.

We do not know what causes breast cancer, or how to cure it. Women with breast cancer are dying at the same rate today as they did in the 1930's, and the same basic methods of treatment are being used—surgery, chemotherapy, and radiation. Clearly, we need to promote research into the cause of, optimal treatment of, and cure for breast cancer.

However, another important weapon in fighting the battle against breast cancer is detecting breast cancer in its early stages. Survival rates drop dramatically the later the disease is diagnosed. And one of the most important tools for early detection is mammography, a low-dose x ray used to examine a woman's breasts.

Recognizing the importance of consistent guidelines on breast cancer screening, the American College of Radiology convened a series of meetings in 1987. As a result of those meetings, in June 1989, 12 U.S. medical organizations including the American Medical Association, the American Cancer Society, and the National Cancer Institute endorsed breast cancer screening guidelines which advised that asymptomatic women should begin having mammograms at age 40.

However, in 1993, the National Cancer Institute rescinded its guidelines stating that there was no evidence that the examinations significantly reduced breast cancer deaths in that age group. It seems clear, upon closer inspection, that studies used to reach the National Cancer Institute's conclusions did not warrant a rescission of the guidelines because there were significant variations in design, technology, screening intervals, the inclusion or exclusion of clinical breast examination, and quality between studies. Furthermore, the National Cancer Institute's statement has caused widespread confusion and concern among women and physicians, eroded confidence in mammography, and reinforced barriers and negative attitudes that discourage women from seeking mammograms.

Consequently, I am introducing this resolution expressing the sense of the Congress that adequately designed and conducted studies are needed to determine the benefit of screening women ages 40 to 49 through mammography and other emerging technologies, that the National Cancer Institute's statement on breast cancer screening should clearly state that the uncertainty of evidence for women in this age groups is due to limitations of studies conducted prior to the rescission of its guidelines, and that the National Cancer Institute should reissue its guidelines.

Hopefully, by reducing the barriers which presently discourage women from seeking mammograms, the adoption of this resolution will add to our limited arsenal of weapons to fight breast cancer. ●

"Sense of the Congress that the Congress of the United States currently possesses all necessary power and authority to adopt at any time a balanced budget for the United States Government, in that its outlays do not exceed its receipts, and to pass and submit to the President all legislation as may be necessary to implement such a balanced budget, including legislation reducing expenditures for federally-funded programs and agencies and increasing revenues.

"It is further the Sense of the Congress that it is the responsibility of members of the House of Representatives and the Senate to do everything possible to use the power and authority the Congress now possesses in order to conduct the fiscal affairs of the nation in a prudent fashion that does not permit the federal government to provide the current generation with a standard of services and benefits for which that generation is unwilling to pay, thereby passing the responsibility for meeting costs of those services and benefits to later generations, which is the result of approving budgets which are significantly deficit financed.

"It is further the Sense of the Congress that all members of the House and the Senate who vote to approve submission to the states of a proposed amendment to the United States Constitution requiring a balanced budget, have a responsibility to their constituents to support a budget plan to balance the budget by no later than 2002.

"It is further the Sense of the Congress that the Congress should, prior to August 15, 1995, adopt a concurrent resolution on the budget establishing a budget plan to balance the budget by fiscal year 2002 consisting of the items set forth below:

"(a)(1) a budget for each fiscal year beginning with fiscal year 1996 and ending with fiscal year 2002 containing—

"(A) aggregate levels of new budget authority, outlays, revenues, and the deficit or surplus;

"(B) totals of new budget authority and outlays for each major functional category;

"(C) new budget authority and outlays, on an account-by-account basis, for each account with actual outlays or offsetting receipts of at least $100,000,000 in fiscal year 1994; and

"(D) an allocation of Federal revenues among the major sources of such revenues;

"(2) a detailed list and description of changes in Federal law (including laws authorizing appropriations or direct spending and tax laws) required to carry out the plan and the effective date of each such change; and

"(3) reconciliation directives to the appropriate committees of the House of Representatives and Senate instructing them to submit legislative changes to the Committee on the Budget of the House or Senate, as the case may be, to implement the plan set forth in the concurrent resolution, with the cited directives deemed to be directives within the meaning of section 310(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, and with the cited committee submissions combined without substantive revision upon their receipt by the Committee on the Budget into an omnibus reconciliation bill which the Committee shall report to its House where it shall be considered in accord with procedures set forth in section 310 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

"(c) the budget plan described in section (a)(1) shall be based upon Congressional Budget Office economic and technical assumptions and estimates of the spending and revenue effects of the legislative changes described in subsection (a)(2)."

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

EROSION OF U.S. ELECTRONIC WARFARE CAPABILITY

• Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, the Air Force and Navy are quietly scrapping our electronic warfare [EW] squadrons. At best, the Services are making penny wise and pound foolish decisions. At worst, the Air Force and Navy are attempting to force Congress into funding an all-stealthy tactical aviation fleet. Either way, America is on the verge of losing its decisive edge in EW. Reviewing the "Conduct of the Persian Gulf War," one is struck by the crucial role EW played in achieving air superiority:

The attacks on the Iraqi electronic order of battle [EOB] affected every aspect of [the] air supremacy operation. Coalition aircraft conducting air defense suppression missions saturated Iraqi airspace with jammers, shooters, and bombers. Iraqi defense that attempted to engage were disrupted, and risked being destroyed. EF-111A's and EA-6B's were used in stand-off and close-in orbits to jam early warning, acquisition, and [Ground Control Intercept] GCI radars. EC-130H Compass Call aircraft jammed radio communications, data links, and navigation systems. F-4G's, F-16's, EA-6B's, A-6E's, A-7E's, and F/A-18's used [High-Speed Anti-Radiation Missiles] HARMs to destroy acquisition, GCI, and target tracking radars. Various aircraft dropped bombs on air defense emplacements and control facilities. [Suppression of Enemy Air Defenses] SEAD forces and bomb droppers caused confusion, hesitation, and loss of capability, which degraded Iraqi air defense capability.

This confusion, hesitation, and loss of capability was directly responsible for the spectacular success of our air and ground campaigns. More importantly, air superiority was a key element in reducing Coalition losses in men and material. Yet, a mere 4 years since Desert Storm, our EW capability is rapidly wasting away for lack of funds.

The most immediate dilemma facing Congress is the proposed termination of the EF-111A System Improvement Program (SIP). EF-111 performance, pre-SIP, was described in glowing terms in the "Conduct of the Persian Gulf War:"

[EF-111As] were part of the initial surge of aircraft across the Iraqi border the first night of the war, and established orbits to escort strike packages into the H-3 and Baghdad areas. They jammed EW, height finder, GCI, and target-acquisition radars, and were effective in tricking the enemy into opening fire at fake radar returns in areas where there were no Coalition aircraft.

It should be noted that only F-117's were cleared for Baghdad, a point that I will return to in a moment.

The SIP will significantly enhance the effectiveness, reliability, and maintainability of the already proven EF-111. Unfortunately, the Air Force proposed, and the Office of the Secretary of Defense accepted, the termination of the SIP in fiscal year 1996 for budgetary reasons preparatory to retiring the aircraft in fiscal year 1997.

To compensate for the loss of EW capability that will result from the termination of the SIP and retirement of the EF-111A, the Air Force has suggested a number of alternatives:

Navy EA-6B's can handle EW duties: Jointness at its most cynical. The EA-6B Advanced Capability (ADVCAP) upgrade was cancelled by the Navy in February 1994. The future of Navy EW is in disarray, and it is likely that EA-6B modernization will be limited to safety of flight improvements until the retirement of the aircraft;

Stealthy aircraft require less EW support: Perhaps, but, as mentioned before, F-117's benefited from EW support in the skies over Baghdad. Stealth is actually an EW force multiplier, because the jamming power and techniques needed to hide an aircraft with the radar cross section (RCS) of a B-52 will be many times more effective hiding an aircraft with the RCS of a sparrow; and, Jamming pods can replace stand-off jammers: This is, at best, only a partial solution. Pods provide only self-protection, frequencies, power output, and techniques are limited, man-in-the-loop responsiveness is lost, and aircraft maneuverability, payload, speed, and range are reduced.

The menu of options presented by the Air Force is hardly ideal, and, taken separately, or in some combination, represent a significant diminution of U.S. EW capability. Worse yet, the use of prior year EF-111A SIP funds as a source for the supplemental by the House Appropriations Committee may foreclose our opportunity to debate the wisdom of the EF-111A SIP cancellation. If prior year EF-111A SIP funds are rescinded, the termination of the program will be irreversible.

So what do we do? First, drop EF-111A SIP funds as a source for the supplemental. Second, pry loose the congressionally mandated Joint Tactical Electronic Warfare Study. Third, if the study says what I think it will, ensure that the fiscal year 1996 defense authorization and appropriations bills include funds to maintain and modernize the EF-111A, EA-6B, and F-4G ("Wild Weasel") fleets.

The alternative is to let the services have their way, and let America's EW advantage erode. This erosion will have profound implications for Congress. Without proper EW support, conventional aircraft are almost immediately obsolete. For Members vaporlocking over the cost of the F-22, it is worth considering that the 442 F-22's proposed will only fill out 4 of the 20 Fighter Wing Equivalents (FWE's) in the Bottom Up Review Force. That means one of two things: First, we buy 17 more FWE's worth of stealthy tactical aircraft, or second, we accept considerably higher losses among conventional aircraft in the next conflict. For Congress, an ugly choice.●

Mr. President, in accordance with rule XXVI(2) of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I ask that the Rules of Procedure of the Select Committee on Ethics, which were adopted February 23, 1978, and the Interim Procedures for Requests for Review Under Section 308 of the Government Employee Rights Act of 1991 be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for the 104th Congress.

If the Member agrees that he or she is ineligible, the Member shall so notify the Chairman or Vice Chairman. If the Member believes that he or she is not ineligible, he or she may explain the reasons to the Chairman and Vice Chairman, and if they both agree that the Member is not ineligible, the Member shall continue to serve. But if either the Chairman or Vice Chairman continues to believe that the Member is ineligible, while the Member believes that he or she is not ineligible, the matter shall be promptly referred to the Committee. The Member shall present his or her arguments to the Committee in executive session. (1) sworn complaints that do not satisfy all of the requirements of Rule 2;

(2) anonymous or informal complaints, whether or not satisfying the requirements of Rule 2;

(3) information developed during a study or inquiry by the Committee or other committees or subcommittees of the Senate, including information obtained in connection with legislative or general oversight hearings;

(4) information reported by the news media; or

(5) information obtained from any individual, agency or department of the executive branch of the Federal Government.

(c) Preliminary Inquiry:

(1) When information is presented to the Committee pursuant to paragraph (a), it shall immediately be transmitted to the Chairman and the Vice Chairman, for one of the following actions:

(A) The Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly, may conduct or may direct the Committee staff to conduct, a preliminary inquiry.

(B) The Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly may present the allegations or information received directly to the Committee for it to determine whether an initial review should be undertaken. (See paragraph (d).)

(2) A preliminary inquiry may include any inquiries, interviews, sworn statements, depositions, and subpoenas that the Chairman and Vice Chairman deem appropriate to obtain information upon which to make any determination provided for by this Rule.

(3) At the conclusion of a preliminary inquiry, the Chairman and Vice Chairman shall receive a full report of its findings. The Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly, shall then determine what further action, if any, is appropriate in the particular case, including any of the following:

(A) No further action is appropriate, because the alleged improper conduct or violation is clearly not within the jurisdiction of the Committee;

(B) No further action is appropriate, because there is no reason to believe that the alleged improper conduct or violation may have occurred; or

(C) The unsworn allegations or information, and a report on the preliminary inquiry, should be referred to the Committee, to determine whether an initial review should be undertaken. (See paragraph (d).)

(4) If the Chairman and the Vice Chairman are unable to agree on a determination at the conclusion of a preliminary inquiry, then they shall refer the allegations or information to the Committee, with a report on the preliminary inquiry, for the Committee to determine whether an initial review should be undertaken. (See paragraph (d).)

(5) A preliminary inquiry shall be completed within sixty days after the unsworn allegations or information were received by the Chairman and Vice Chairman. The sixty day period may be extended for a specified period by the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly. A preliminary inquiry is completed when the Chairman and the Vice Chairman have made the determination required by subparagraphs (3) and (4) of this paragraph.

(d) Determination Whether To Conduct an Initial Review: When information or allegations are presented to the Committee by the Chairman and the Vice Chairman, the Committee shall determine whether an initial review should be undertaken.

(1) An initial review shall be undertaken when—

(A) there is reason to believe on the basis of the information before the Committee that the possible improper conduct or violation may be within the jurisdiction of the Committee; and

(B) there is reason to believe on the basis of the information before the Committee that the improper conduct or violation may have occurred.

(2) The determination whether to undertake an initial review shall be made by recorded vote within thirty days following the Committee's receipt of the unsworn allegations or information from the Chairman or Vice Chairman, or at the first meeting of the Committee thereafter if none occurs within thirty days, unless this time is extended for a specified period by the Committee.

(3) The Committee may determine that an initial review is not warranted because (a) there is no reason to believe on the basis of the information before the Committee that the improper conduct or violation may have occurred, or (b) the improper conduct or violation, even if proven, is not within the jurisdiction of the Committee.

(A) If the Committee determines that an initial review is not warranted, it shall promptly notify the complainant, if any, and any known respondent.

(B) If there is a complainant, he or she may also be invited to submit additional information, and notified of the procedures for filing a sworn complaint. If the complainant later provides additional information, not in the form of a sworn complaint, it shall be handled as a new allegation in accordance with the procedures of Rule 3. If he or she submits a sworn complaint, it shall be handled in accordance with Rule 2.

(4)(A) The Committee may determine that there is reason to believe on the basis of the information before it that the improper conduct or violation may have occurred and may be within the jurisdiction of the Committee, and that an initial review must therefore be conducted.

(B) If the Committee determines that an initial review will be conducted, it shall promptly notify the complainant, if any, and the respondent, if any.

(C) The notice required under subparagraph (B) shall include a general statement of the information or allegations before the Committee and a statement that the Committee will immediately begin an initial review of the complaint. A copy of the Rules of the Committee shall be supplied with the notice.

(5) If a Member of the Committee believes that the preliminary inquiry has provided sufficient information for the Committee to determine whether there is substantial credible evidence which provides substantial cause for the Committee to conclude that a violation within the jurisdiction of the Committee has occurred, the Member may move that the Committee dispense with the initial review and move directly to the determinations described in Rule 4(f). The Committee may adopt such a motion by majority vote of the full Committee.

RULE 4: PROCEDURES FOR CONDUCTING AN INITIAL REVIEW

(a) Basis for Initial Review: The Committee shall promptly commence an initial review whenever it has received either (1) a sworn complaint that the Committee has determined is in substantial compliance with the requirements of Rule 2, or (2) unsworn allegations or information that have caused the Committee to determine in accordance with Rule 3 that an initial review must be conducted.

(b) Scope of Initial Review:

(1) The initial review shall be of such duration and scope as may be necessary to determine whether there is substantial credible evidence which provides substantial cause for the Committee to conclude that a violation within the jurisdiction of the Committee has occurred.

(2) An initial review may include any inquiries, interviews, sworn statements, depositions, and subpoenas that the Committee deems appropriate to obtain information upon which to make any determination provided for by this Rule.

(c) Opportunity for Response: An initial review may include an opportunity for any known respondent or his designated representative, to present either a written or oral statement, or to respond orally to questions from the Committee. Such an oral statement or answers shall be transcribed and signed by the person providing the statement or answers.

(d) Status Reports: The Committee staff or outside counsel shall periodically report to the Committee in the form and according to the schedule prescribed by the Committee. The reports shall be confidential.

(e) Final Report: When the initial review is completed, the staff or outside counsel shall make a confidential report to the Committee on findings and recommendations.

(f) Committee Action: As soon as practical following submission of the report on the initial review, the Committee shall determine by a recorded vote whether there is substantial credible evidence which provides substantial cause for the Committee to conclude that a violation within the jurisdiction of the Committee has occurred. The Committee may make any of the following determinations:

(1) The Committee may determine that there is not such substantial credible evidence. In this case, the Committee shall report its determination to the complainant, if any, and to the respondent, together with an explanation of the basis for the determination. The explanation may be as detailed as the Committee desires, but it is not required to include a complete discussion of the evidence collected in the initial review.

(2) The Committee may determine that there is such substantial credible evidence, but that the alleged violation is inadvertent, technical, or otherwise of a de minimis nature. In this case, the Committee may attempt to correct or to prevent such violation by informal methods. The Committee's final determination in this matter shall be reported to the complainant, if any, and to the respondent, if any.

(3) The Committee may determine that there is such substantial credible evidence, but that the alleged violation, if proven, although not of a de minimis nature, would not be sufficiently serious to justify the severe disciplinary actions specified in Senate Resolution 338, 88th Congress, as amended (i.e., for a Member, censure, expulsion, or recommendation to the appropriate party conference regarding the Member's seniority or positions of responsibility; or for an officer or employee, suspension or dismissal). In this case, the Committee, by the recorded affirmative vote of at least four Members, may propose a remedy that it deems appropriate. If the respondent agrees to the proposed remedy, a summary of the Committee's conclusions and the remedy proposed and agreed to shall be filed as a public record with the Secretary of the Senate and a notice of the filing shall be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

(4) The Committee may determine, by recorded affirmative vote of at least four Members, that there is such substantial credible evidence, and also either:

(A) that the violation, if proved, would be sufficiently serious to warrant imposition of one of the severe disciplinary actions listed in paragraph (3); or

(B) that the violation, if proven, is less serious, but was not resolved pursuant to the procedure in paragraph (3). In either case, the Committee shall order that an investigation promptly be conducted in accordance with Rule 5.

RULE 5: PROCEDURES FOR CONDUCTING AN INVESTIGATION

(a) Definition of Investigation: An "investigation" is a proceeding undertaken by the Committee, by recorded affirmative vote of at least four Members, after a finding on the basis of an initial review that there is substantial credible evidence which provides substantial cause for the Committee to conclude that a violation within its jurisdiction has occurred.

(b) Scope of Investigation: When the Committee decides to conduct an investigation, it shall be of such duration and scope as is necessary for the Committee to determine whether a violation within its jurisdiction has occurred. In the course of the investigation, designated outside counsel, or if the Committee determines not to use outside counsel, the Committee or its staff, may conduct inquiries or interviews, take sworn statements, use compulsory process as described in Rule 7, or take any other actions that the Committee deems appropriate to secure the evidence necessary to make this determination.

(c) Notice to Respondent: The Committee shall give written notice to any known respondent who is the subject of an investigation. The notice shall be sent to the respondent no later than five working days after the Committee has voted to conduct an investigation. The notice shall include a statement of the nature of the possible violation, and a description of the evidence indicating that a possible violation occurred. The Committee shall offer the respondent an opportunity to present a statement or to respond to questions from Members of the Committee, the Committee staff, or outside counsel.

(d) Right to a Hearing: The Committee shall accord a respondent an opportunity for a hearing before it recommends disciplinary action against that respondent to the Senate.

(e) Progress Report to Committee: The Committee staff or outside counsel shall periodically report to the Committee concerning the progress of the investigation. Such reports shall be delivered to the Committee in the form and according to the schedule prescribed by the Committee, and shall be confidential.

(f) Report of Investigation:

(1) Upon completion of an investigation, including any hearings held pursuant to Rule 6, the outside counsel or the staff shall submit a confidential written report to the Committee, which shall detail the factual findings of the investigation and which may recommend disciplinary action, if appropriate. Findings of the fact of the investigation shall be detailed in this report whether or not disciplinary action is recommended.

(2) The Committee shall consider the report of the staff or outside counsel promptly following its submission. The Committee shall prepare and submit a report to the Senate, including a recommendation to the Senate concerning disciplinary action, if appropriate. A report shall be issued, stating in detail the Committee's findings of fact, whether or not disciplinary action is recommended. The report shall also explain fully the reasons underlying the Committee's recommendation concerning disciplinary action, if any. No recommendation or resolution of the Committee concerning the investigation of a Member, officer or employee of the Senate may be approved except by the affirmative recorded vote of not less than four Members of the Committee.

(3) Promptly, after the conclusion of the investigation, the Committee's report and recommendation shall be forwarded to the Secretary of the Senate, and a copy shall be provided to the complainant and the respondent. The full report and recommendation shall be printed and made public, unless the Committee determines by majority vote that it should remain confidential.

RULE 6: PROCEDURES FOR HEARINGS

(a) Right to Hearing: The Committee may hold a public or executive hearing in any inquiry, initial review, investigation, or other proceeding. The Committee shall accord a respondent an opportunity for a hearing before it recommends disciplinary action against that respondent to the Senate. (See Rule 5(d).)

(b) Non-Public Hearings: The Committee may at any time during a hearing determine in accordance with paragraph 5(b) of Rule XXVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate whether to receive the testimony of specific witnesses in executive session. If a witness desires to express a preference for testifying in public or in executive session, he or she shall so notify the Committee at least five days before he or she is scheduled to testify.

(c) Adjudicatory Hearings: The Committee may, by majority vote, designate any public or executive hearing as an adjudicatory hearing; and, any hearing which is concerned with possible disciplinary action against a respondent or respondents designated by the Committee shall be an adjudicatory hearing. In any adjudicatory hearing, the procedures described in paragraph (j) shall apply.

(d) Subpoena Power: The Committee may require, by subpoena or otherwise, the attendance and testimony of such witnesses and the production of such correspondence, books, papers, documents or other articles as it deems advisable. (See Rule 7.)

(e) Notice of Hearings: The Committee shall make public an announcement of the date, place, and subject matter of any hearing to be conducted by it, in accordance with Rule 1(f).

(f) Presiding Officer: The Chairman shall preside over the hearings, or in his absence the Vice Chairman. If the Vice Chairman is also absent, a Committee Member designated by the Chairman shall preside. If an oath or affirmation is required, it shall be administered to a witness by the Presiding Officer, or in his absence, by any Committee Member.

(g) Witnesses:

(1) A subpoena or other request to testify shall be served on a witness sufficiently in advance of his or her scheduled appearance to allow the witness a reasonable period of time, as determined by the Committee, to prepare for the hearing and to employ counsel if desired.

(2) The Committee may, by majority vote, rule that no Member of the Committee or staff or outside counsel shall make public the name of any witness subpoenaed by the Committee before the date of that witness' scheduled appearance, except as specifically authorized by the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly.

(3) Any witness desiring to read a prepared or written statement in executive or public hearings shall file a copy of such statement with the Committee at least two working days in advance of the hearing at which the statement is to be presented. The Chairman and Vice Chairman shall determine whether such statements may be read or placed in the record of the hearing.

(4) Insofar as practicable, each witness shall be permitted to present a brief oral opening statement, if he or she desires to do so.

(h) Right To Testify: Any person whose name is mentioned or who is specifically identified or otherwise referred to in testimony or in statements made by a Committee Member, staff Member or outside counsel, or any witness, and who reasonably believes that the statement tends to adversely affect his or her reputation may—

(1) Request to appear personally before the Committee to testify in his or her own behalf; or

(2) File a sworn statement of facts relevant to the testimony or other evidence or statement of which he or she complained. Such request and such statement shall be submitted to the Committee for its consideration and action.

(i) Conduct of Witnesses and Other Attendees: The Presiding Officer may punish any breaches of order and decorum by censure and exclusion from the hearings. The Committee, by majority vote, may recommend to the Senate that the offender be cited for contempt of Congress.

(j) Adjudicatory Hearing Procedures:

(1) Notice of hearings: A copy of the public announcement of an adjudicatory hearing, required by paragraph (e), shall be furnished together with a copy of these Rules to all witnesses at the time that they are subpoenaed or otherwise summoned to testify.

(2) Preparation for adjudicatory hearings:

(A) At least five working days prior to the commencement of an adjudicatory hearing, the Committee shall provide the following information and documents to the respondent, if any:

(i) a list of proposed witnesses to be called at the hearing;

(ii) copies of all documents expected to be introduced as exhibits at the hearing; and

(iii) a brief statement as to the nature of the testimony expected to be given by each witness to be called at the hearing.

(B) At least two working days prior to the commencement of an adjudicatory hearing, the respondent, if any, shall provide the information and documents described in divisions (i), (ii) and (iii) of subparagraph (A) to the Committee.

(C) At the discretion of the Committee, the information and documents to be exchanged under this paragraph shall be subject to an appropriate agreement limiting access and disclosure.

(D) If a respondent refuses to provide the information and documents to the Committee (see A) and (B) of this subparagraph), or if a respondent or other individual violates an agreement limiting access and disclosure, the Committee, by majority vote, may recommend to the Senate that the offender be cited for contempt of Congress.

(3) Swearing of witnesses: All witnesses who testify at adjudicatory hearings shall be sworn unless the Presiding Officer, for good cause, decides that a witness does not have to be sworn.

(4) Right to counsel: Any witness at an adjudicatory hearing may be accompanied by counsel of his or her own choosing, who shall be permitted to advise the witness of his or legal rights during the testimony.

(5) Right to cross-examine and call witnesses:

(A) In adjudicatory hearings, any respondent who is the subject of an investigation, and any other person who obtains the permission of the Committee, may personally or through counsel cross-examine witnesses called by the Committee and may call witnesses in his or her own behalf.

(B) A respondent may apply to the Committee for the issuance of subpoenas for the appearance of witnesses or the production of documents on his or her behalf. An application shall be approved upon a concise showing by the respondent that the proposed testimony or evidence is relevant and appropriate, as determined by the Chairman and Vice Chairman.

(C) With respect to witnesses called by a respondent, or other individual given permission by the Committee, each such witness shall first be examined by the party who called the witness or by the party's counsel.

(D) At least one working day before a witness' scheduled appearance, a witness or a witness' counsel may submit to the Committee written questions proposed to be asked of that witness. If the Committee determines that it is necessary, such questions may be asked by any Member of the Committee, or by any Committee staff Member if directed by a Committee Member. The witness or witness' counsel may also submit additional sworn testimony for the record within twenty-four hours after the last day that the witness has testified. The insertion of such testimony in that day's record is subject to the approval of the Chairman and Vice Chairman acting jointly within five days after the testimony is received.

(6) Admissibility of evidence:

(A) The object of the hearing shall be to ascertain the truth. Any evidence that may be relevant and probative shall be admissible unless privileged under the Federal Rules of Evidence. Rules of evidence shall not be applied strictly, but the Presiding Officer shall exclude irrelevant or unduly repetitious testimony. Objections going only to the weight that should be given evidence will not justify its exclusion.

(B) The Presiding Officer shall rule upon any question of the admissibility of testimony or other evidence presented to the Committee. Such rules shall be final unless reversed or modified by a majority vote of the Committee before the recess of that day's hearings.

(C) Notwithstanding paragraphs (A) and (B), in any matter before the Committee involving allegations of sexual discrimination, including sexual harassment, or sexual misconduct, by a Member, officer, or employee within the jurisdiction of the Committee, the Committee shall be guided by the standards and procedures of Rule 412 of the Federal Rules of Evidence, except that the Committee may admit evidence subject to the provisions of this paragraph only upon a determination of a majority of the Members of the full Committee that the interests of justice require that such evidence be admitted.

(7) Supplementary hearing procedures: The Committee may adopt any additional special hearing procedures that it deems necessary or appropriate to a particular adjudicatory hearing. Copies of such supplementary procedures shall be furnished to witnesses and respondents, and shall be made available upon request to any Member of the public.

(k) Transcripts:

(1) An accurate stenographic or recorded transcript shall be made of all public and executive hearings. Any Member of the Committee, Committee staff Member, outside counsel retained by the Committee, or witness may examine a copy of the transcript retained by the Committee of his or her own remarks and may suggest to the official reporter any typographical or transcription errors. If the reporter declines to make the requested corrections, the Member, staff Member, outside counsel or witness may request a ruling by the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly. Any Member or witness shall return the transcript with suggested corrections to the Committee offices within five working days after receipt of the transcript, or as soon thereafter as is practicable. If the testimony was given in executive session, the Member or witness may only inspect the transcript at a location determined by the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly. Any questions arising with respect to the processing and correction of transcripts shall be decided by the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly.

(2) Except for the record of a hearing which is closed to the public, each transcript shall be printed as soon as is practicable after receipt of the corrected version. The Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly, may order the transcript of a hearing to be printed without the corrections of a Member or witness if they determine that such Member or witness has been afforded a reasonable time to correct such transcript and such transcript has not been returned within such time.

(3) The Committee shall furnish each witness, at no cost, one transcript copy of that witness' testimony given at a public hearing. If the testimony was given in executive session, then a transcript copy shall be provided upon request, subject to appropriate conditions and restrictions prescribed by the Chairman and Vice Chairman. If any individual violates such conditions and restrictions, the Committee may recommend by majority vote that he or she be cited for contempt of Congress.

RULE 7: SUBPOENAS AND DEPOSITIONS

(a) Subpoenas:

(1) Authorization for Issuance: Subpoenas for the attendance and testimony of witnesses at depositions or hearings, and subpoenas for the production of documents and tangible things at depositions, hearings, or other times and places designated therein, may be authorized for issuance by either (A) a majority vote of the Committee, or (B) the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly, at any time before a preliminary inquiry, for the purpose of obtaining information to evaluate unsworn allegations or information, or at any time during a preliminary inquiry, initial review, investigation, or other proceeding.

(2) Signature and Service: All subpoenas shall be signed by the Chairman or the Vice Chairman and may be served by any person eighteen years of age or older, who is designated by the Chairman or Vice Chairman. Each subpoena shall be served with a copy of the Rules of the Committee and a brief statement of the purpose of the Committee's proceeding.

(3) Withdrawal of Subpoena: The Committee, by majority vote, may withdraw any subpoena authorized for issuance by it or authorized for issuance by the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly. The Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly, may withdraw any subpoena authorized for issuance by them.

(b) Depositions:

(1) Persons Authorized To Take Depositions: Depositions may be taken by any Member of the Committee, designated by the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly, or by any other person designated by the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly, including outside counsel, Committee staff, other employees of the Senate, or government employees detailed to the Committee.

(2) Deposition Notices: Notices for the taking of depositions shall be authorized by the Committee, or the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly, and issued by the Chairman, Vice Chairman, or a Committee staff Member or outside counsel designated by the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly. Depositions may be taken at any time before a preliminary inquiry, for the purpose of obtaining information to evaluate unsworn allegations or information, or at any time during a preliminary inquiry, initial review, investigation, or other proceeding. Deposition notices shall specify a time and place for examination. Unless otherwise specified, the deposition shall be in private, and the testimony taken and documents produced shall be deemed for the purpose of these rules to have been received in a closed or executive session of the Committee. The Committee shall not initiate procedures leading to criminal or civil enforcement proceedings for a witness's failure to appear, or to testify, or to produce documents, unless the deposition notice was accompanied by a subpoena authorized for issuance by the Committee, or the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly.

(3) Counsel at Depositions: Witnesses may be accompanied at a deposition by counsel to advise them of their rights.

(4) Deposition Procedure: Witnesses at depositions shall be examined upon oath administered by an individual authorized by law to administer oaths, or administered by any Member of the Committee if one is present. Questions may be propounded by any person or persons who are authorized to take depositions for the Committee. If a witness objects to a question and refuses to testify, or refuses to produce a document, any Member of the Committee who is present may rule on the objection and, if the objection is overruled, direct the witness to answer the question or produce the document. If no Member of the Committee is present, the individual who has been designated by the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly, to take the deposition may proceed with the deposition, or may, at that time or at a subsequent time, seek a ruling by telephone or otherwise on the objection from the Chairman or Vice Chairman of the Committee, who may refer the matter to the Committee or rule on the objection. If the Chairman or Vice Chairman, or the Committee upon referral, overrules the objection, the Chairman, Vice Chairman, or the Committee as the case may be, may direct the witness to answer the question or produce the document. The Committee shall not initiate procedures leading to civil or criminal enforcement unless the witness refuses to testify or produce documents after having been directed to do so.

(5) Filing of Depositions: Deposition testimony shall be transcribed or electronically recorded. If the deposition is transcribed, the individual administering the oath shall certify on the transcript that the witness was duly sworn in his or her presence and the transcriber shall certify that the transcript is a true record of the testimony. The transcript with these certifications shall be filed with the chief clerk of the Committee, and the witness shall be furnished with access to a copy at the Committee's offices for review. Upon inspecting the transcript, within a time limit set by the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly, a witness may request in writing changes in the transcript to correct errors in transcription. The witness may also bring to the attention of the Committee errors of fact in the witness's testimony by submitting a sworn statement about those facts with a request that it be attached to the transcript. The Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly, may rule on the witness's request, and the changes or attachments allowed shall be certified by the Committee's chief clerk. If the witness fails to make any request under this paragraph within the time limit set, this fact shall be noted by the Committee's chief clerk. Any person authorized by the Committee may stipulate with the witness to changes in this procedure.

RULE 8: VIOLATIONS OF LAW; PERJURY; LEGISLATIVE RECOMMENDATIONS; AND APPLICABLE RULES AND STANDARDS OF CONDUCT

(a) Violations of Law: Whenever the Committee determines by majority vote that there is reason to believe that a violation of law may have occurred, it shall report such possible violation to the proper state and federal authorities.

(b) Perjury: Any person who knowingly and willfully swears falsely to a sworn complaint or any other sworn statement to the Committee does so under penalty of perjury. The Committee may refer any such case to the Attorney General for prosecution.

(c) Legislative Recommendations: The Committee shall recommend to the Senate by report or resolution such additional rules, regulations, or other legislative measures as it determines to be necessary or desirable to ensure proper standards of conduct by Members, officers, or employees of the Senate. The Committee may conduct such inquiries as it deems necessary to prepare such a report or resolution, including the holding of hearings in public or executive session and the use of subpoenas to compel the attendance of witnesses or the production of materials. The Committee may make legislative recommendations as a result of its findings in an initial review, investigation, or other proceeding.

(d) Applicable Rules and Standards of Conduct:

(1) No initial review or investigation shall be made of an alleged violation of any law, rule, regulation, or provision of the Senate Code of Official Conduct which was not in effect at the time the alleged violation occurred. No provision of the Senate Code of Official Conduct shall apply to, or require disclosure of any act, relationship, or transaction which occurred prior to the effective date of the applicable provision of the code.

(2) The Committee may conduct an initial review or investigation of an alleged violation of a rule or law which was in effect prior to the enactment of the Senate code of Official Conduct if the alleged violation occurred while such rule or law was in effect and the violation was not a matter resolved on the merits by the predecessor Committee.

RULE 9: PROCEDURES FOR HANDLING COMMITTEE SENSITIVE AND CLASSIFIED MATERIALS

(a) Procedures for Handling Committee Sensitive materials:

(1) Committee Sensitive information or material is information or material in the possession of the Select Committee on Ethics which pertains to illegal or improper conduct by a present or former member, officer, or employee of the Senate; to allegations or accusation of such conduct; to any resulting preliminary inquiry, initial review, or investigation by the Select Committee on Ethics into such allegations or conduct; to the investigative techniques and procedures of the Select Committee on Ethics; or to other information or material designated by the staff director, or outside counsel designated by the Chairman and Vice Chairman.

(2) The Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Committee shall establish such procedures as may be necessary to prevent the unauthorized disclosure of Committee Sensitive information in the possession of the Committee or its staff. Procedures for protecting Committee Sensitive materials shall be in writing and shall be given to each Committee staff Member.

(b) Procedures for Handling Classified Materials:

(1) Classified information on material is information or material which is specifically designated as classified under the authority of Executive Order 11652 requiring protection of such information or material from unauthorized disclosure in order to prevent damage to the United States.

(2) The Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Committee shall establish such procedures as may be necessary to prevent the unauthorized disclosure of classified information in the possession of the Committee or its staff. Procedures for handling such information shall be in writing and a copy of the procedures shall be given to each staff Member cleared for access to classified information.

(3) Each Member of the Committee shall have access to classified material in the Committee's possession. Only Committee staff Members with appropriate security clearances and a need-to-know, as approved by the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly, shall have access to classified information in the Committee's possession.

(c) Procedures for Handling Committee Sensitive and Classified Documents:

(1) Committee Sensitive and classified documents and materials shall be segregated in secure filing safes. Removal from the Committee offices of such documents or materials is prohibited except as necessary for use in, or preparation for, interviews or Committee meetings, including the taking of testimony, or as otherwise specifically approved by the staff director or by outside counsel designated by the Chairman and Vice Chairman.

(2) Each Member of the Committee shall have access to all materials in the Committee's possession. The staffs of Members shall not have access to Committee Sensitive or classified documents and materials without the specific approval in each instance of the Chairman, and Vice Chairman, acting jointly. Members may examine such materials in the Committee's offices. If necessary, requested materials may be taken by a Member of the Committee staff to the office of a Member of the Committee for his or her examination, but the Committee staff Member shall remain with the Committee Sensitive or classified documents or materials at all times except as specifically authorized by the Chairman or Vice Chairman.

(3) Any Member of the Senate who is not a Member of the Committee and who seeks access to any Committee Sensitive or classified documents or materials, other than documents or materials which are matters of public record, shall request access in writing. The Committee shall decide by majority vote whether to make documents or materials available. If access is granted, the Member shall not disclose the information except as authorized by the Committee.

(4) Whenever the Committee makes Committee Sensitive or classified documents or materials available to any Member of the Senate who is not a Member of the Committee, or to a staff person of a Committee Member in response to a specific request to the Chairman and Vice Chairman, a written record shall be made identifying the Member of the Senate requesting such documents or materials and describing what was made available and to whom.

(d) Non-Disclosure Policy and Agreement:

(1) Except as provided in the last sentence of this paragraph, no Member of the Select Committee on Ethics, its staff or any person engaged by contract or otherwise to perform services for the Select Committee on Ethics shall release, divulge, publish, reveal by writing, word, conduct, or disclose in any way, in whole, or in part, or by way of summary, during tenure with the Select Committee on Ethics or anytime thereafter, any testimony given before the Select Committee on Ethics in executive session (including the name of any witness who appeared or was called to appear in executive session), any classified or Committee Sensitive information, document or material, received or generated by the Select Committee on Ethics or any classified or Committee Sensitive information which may come into the possession of such person during tenure with the Select Committee on Ethics or its staff. Such information, documents, or material may be released to an official of the executive branch properly cleared for access with a need-to-know, for any purpose or in connection with any proceeding, judicial or otherwise, as authorized by the Select Committee on Ethics, or in the event of termination of the Select Committee on Ethics, in such a manner as may be determined by its successor or by the Senate.

(2) No Member of the Select Committee on Ethics staff or any person engaged by contract or otherwise to perform services for the Select Committee on Ethics, shall be granted access to classified or Committee Sensitive information or material in the possession of the Select Committee on Ethics unless and until such person agrees in writing, as a condition of employment, to the non-disclosure policy. The agreement shall become effective when signed by the Chairman and Vice Chairman on behalf of the Committee.

RULE 10: BROADCASTING AND NEWS COVERAGE OF COMMITTEE PROCEEDINGS

(a) Whenever any hearing or meeting of the Committee is open to the public, the Committee shall permit that hearing or meeting to be covered in whole or in part, by television broadcast, radio broadcast, still photography, or by any other methods of coverage, unless the Committee decides by majority vote that such coverage is not appropriate at a particular hearing or meeting.

(b) Any witness served with a subpoena by the Committee may request not to be photographed at any hearing or to give evidence or testimony while the broadcasting, reproduction, or coverage of that hearing, by radio, television, still photography, or other methods is occurring. At the request of any such witness who does not wish to be subjected to radio, television, still photography, or other methods of coverage, and subject to the approval of the Committee, all lenses shall be covered and all microphones used for coverage turned off.

(c) If coverage is permitted, it shall be in accordance with the following requirements:

(1) Photographers and reporters using mechanical recording, filming, or broadcasting apparatus shall position their equipment so as not to interfere with the seating, vision, and hearing of the Committee Members and staff, or with the orderly process of the meeting or hearing.

(2) If the television or radio coverage of the hearing or meeting is to be presented to the public as live coverage, the coverage shall be conducted and presented without commercial sponsorship.

(3) Personnel providing coverage by the television and radio media shall be currently accredited to the Radio and Television Correspondents' Galleries.

(4) Personnel providing coverage by still photography shall be currently accredited to the Press Photographers' Gallery Committee of Press Photographers.

(1) The Committee shall render an advisory opinion, in writing within a reasonable time, in response to a written request by a Member or officer of the Senate or a candidate for nomination for election, or election to the Senate, concerning the application of any law, the Senate Code of Official Conduct, or any rule or regulation of the Senate within the Committee's jurisdiction, to a specific factual situation pertinent to the conduct or proposed conduct of the person seeking the advisory opinion.

(2) The Committee may issue an advisory opinion in writing within a reasonable time in response to a written request by any employee of the Senate concerning the application of any law, the Senate Code of Official Conduct, or any rule or regulation of the Senate within the Committee's jurisdiction, to a specific factual situation pertinent to the conduct or proposed conduct of the person seeking the advisory opinion.

(b) Form of Request: A request for an advisory opinion shall be directed in writing to the Chairman of the Committee and shall include a complete and accurate statement of the specific factual situation with respect to which the request is made as well as the specific question or questions which the requestor wishes the Committee to address.

(c) Opportunity for Comment:

(1) The Committee will provide an opportunity for any interested party to comment on a request for an advisory opinion—

(B) when the Committee determines that comments from interested parties would be of assistance.

(2) Notice of any such request for an advisory opinion shall be published in the Congressional Record, with appropriate deletions to insure confidentiality, and interested parties will be asked to submit their comments in writing to the Committee within ten days.

(d) Issuance of an Advisory Opinion:

(1) The Committee staff shall prepare a proposed advisory opinion in draft form which will first be reviewed and approved by the Chairman and Vice Chairman, acting jointly, and will be presented to the Committee for final action. (2) An advisory opinion shall be issued only by the affirmative recorded vote of a majority of the Members voting.

(1) Any advisory opinion issued by the Committee under Senate Resolution 338, 88th Congress, as amended, and the rules may be relied upon by—

(A) Any person involved in the specific transaction or activity with respect to which such advisory opinion is rendered if the request for such advisory opinion included a complete and accurate statement of the specific factual situation; and

(B) any person involved in any specific transaction or activity which is indistinguishable in all its material aspects from the transaction or activity with respect to which such advisory opinion is rendered.

(2) Any person who relies upon any provision or finding of an advisory opinion in accordance with the provisions of Senate Resolution 338, 88th Congress, as amended, and of the rules, and who acts in good faith in accordance with the provisions and findings of such advisory opinion shall not, as a result of any such act, be subject to any sanction by the Senate.

(2) A ruling on any request taken to the Committee under subparagraph (1) shall be adopted by a majority of the Members voting and the ruling shall then be issued by the Chairman and Vice Chairman.

(d) Publication of Rulings: The Committee will publish in the Congressional Record, after making appropriate deletions to ensure confidentiality, any interpretative rulings issued under this Rule which the Committee determines may be of assistance or guidance to other Members, officers or employees. The Committee may at any time revise, withdraw, or elaborate on interpretative rulings.

(e) Reliance on Rulings: Whenever an individual can demonstrate to the Committee's satisfaction that his or her conduct was in good faith reliance on an interpretative ruling issued in accordance with this Rule, the Committee will not recommend sanctions to the Senate as a result of such conduct.

(f) Rulings by Committee Staff: The Committee staff is not authorized to make rulings or give advice, orally or in writing, which binds the Committee in any way.

RULE 13: PROCEDURES FOR COMPLAINTS INVOLVING IMPROPER USE OF THE MAILING FRANK

All such complaints will be processed in accordance with the provisions of these Rules, except as provided in paragraph (b).

(b) Disposition of Complaints:

(1) The Committee may dispose of any such complaint by requiring restitution of the cost of the mailing if it finds that the franking violation was the result of a mistake.

(2) Any complaint disposed of by restitution that is made after the Committee has formally commenced an initial review or investigation, must be summarized, together with the disposition, in a notice promptly transmitted for publication in the Congressional Record.

(3) If a complaint is disposed of by restitution, the complainant, if any, shall be notified of the disposition in writing.

In the case of a request submitted by an employee, the views of his or her supervisor (as determined under paragraph 12 of Rule XXXVII of the Standing Rules of the Senate) should be included with the waiver request.

(c) Ruling: The Committee shall rule on a waiver request by recorded vote, with a majority of those voting affirming the decision.

(d) Availability of Waiver Determinations: A brief description of any waiver granted by the Committee, with appropriate deletions to ensure confidentiality, shall be made available for review upon request in the Committee office. Waivers granted by the Committee pursuant to the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, as amended, may only be granted pursuant to a publicly available request as required by the Act.

complaint or allegation, initial review, investigation, or other proceeding, which in the determination of the Committee, is more appropriately conducted by counsel not employed by the Government of the United States as a regular employee. The Committee shall retain and compensate outside counsel to conduct any investigation undertaken after an initial review of a sworn complaint, unless the Committee determines that the use of outside counsel is not appropriate in the particular case.

No. 102-166, 105 Stat. 1088, to review hearing board decisions in employment discrimination cases filed with the Office of Senate Fair Employment Practices (the Office) under the Act, and by section 307(f) (2) and (3) of the Act to receive referrals for rulings on testimonial objections arising in connection with such cases, and to recommend to the Senate civil or criminal enforcement of hearing board subpoenas.

RULE 2. TIME

(a) Counting days. A day means calendar day. In computing the time for taking any action required or permitted under these rules to be taken within a specified time, the first day counted shall be the day after the event from which the time period begins to run and the last day counted is the last day for taking the action. When the last day falls on a Saturday, Sunday, or federal government holiday or any other day, other than a Saturday or a Sunday, when the Office is closed, the last day for taking the action shall be the next day that is not a Saturday, Sunday, or federal government holiday or a day when the Office is closed. Where a prescribed time period is less than seven days, then Saturdays, Sundays, and federal government holidays shall be excluded from the computation of the time period. Federal government holiday means New Year's Day, Birthday of Martin Luther King, Jr., Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Columbus Day, Veterans' Day, Thanksgiving Day, Christmas Day, any other day appointed as a holiday by the President or Congress of the United States.

(b) Added days for mail. Whenever a party or the Office has the right or is required to do some act within a prescribed period after the date of service of a notice or other paper and the notice or other paper is served upon the party by mail through the United States Postal Service, 3 days shall be added to the prescribed period. This additional 3 days does not apply to the request for Committee review under Rule 3.

2.2 Service and filing. Except as otherwise provided in Rule 3.1, a document required under these rules to be submitted to or filed with the Committee or the Office, or served on a party or the Office within a specified time shall be deemed timely submitted, filed, or served if it is received by the Committee, the Office or the party, or if mailed, it is postmarked, on or before the last day of the applicable time period.

2.3 Extension of time. Upon written request of the Office or a party, the Committee may extend the time for taking action under these rules, except that the Committee may not extend the time for taking any action for which the Act specifies a time limit.

2.4 Where to file. Documents required to be filed with the Committee shall be filed at the offices of the Senate Select Committee on Ethics, Hart Senate Office Building, Room 220, Washington, D.C. 20510. RULE 3. REQUESTS FOR COMMITTEE REVIEW OF HEARING BOARD DECISION

3.1 Requirements for Filing a Request for Review.

(a) Who May Request Review of a Hearing Board Decision. An employee or the head of an employing office with respect to whom a hearing board decision was issued is a party entitled to request Committee review of that decision. The Office may also request review of a decision.

(b) Request by a party. Not later than 10 days after receipt of a decision of a hearing board, including any decision following a remand of the case as provided in Rule 4.2(c), a party may file with the Office a request that the Committee review the decision. A request for review shall specify the party requesting review, and shall designate the decision, or part thereof, for which review is requested. A request for review must be received in the Office not later than the 10th day after the date of receipt of the hearing board decision [a postmark on the 10th day will not satisfy this timeliness requirement.] Within 24 hours after receipt of a request for review, the Office shall transmit a copy of such request to the Committee and serve a copy on any other party.

(c) Request by the Office. The Office, at the discretion of its Director, on its own initiative and for good cause, may file with the Committee a request for review of a hearing board decision, including any decision following a remand of the case as provided in Rule 4.2(c), not later than 5 days after the time for the parties to file a request for review with the Office has expired. A request for review shall specify that the Office is requesting review, shall designate the decision, or part thereof, for which review is requested, and shall specify the circumstances which the Office asserts constitute good cause for the request. A request for review by the Office must be received in the Committee's office not later than the 5th day after the time for the parties to file a request for review with the Office has expired [a postmark on the 5th day will not satisfy this timeliness requirement.] Within 24 hours after filing a request for review with the Committee, the Office shall serve a copy of such request on all parties.

3.2 Transmittal of Record. As soon as possible, and in no event later than 10 days after receipt by the Office of a request for review or the Office's filing of a request for review with the Committee, the Office shall transmit to the Committee the full and complete record of the hearing board connected with the decision for which review has been requested. The Chief Clerk of the Committee shall promptly serve notice of the Committee's receipt of the record on all parties.

RULE 4. PROCEDURES UPON RECEIPT OF A REQUEST FOR REVIEW OF A HEARING BOARD DECISION

4.1 Briefs and Arguments.

(a) Petitioner brief. A party who filed a request for review, or the Office if it requested review, may file a brief in support of its position. The brief shall be filed with the Committee and a copy served on any other party and the Office, if it requested review, within 10 days of the filing of the request for review with the Office, or the Committee if the Office requested review.

(b) Respondent brief. A party may file a brief in response to a petitioner's brief. Such respondent brief shall be filed with the Committee and a copy served on any other party and the Office, if the Office filed a request for review, within 15 days after service of the petitioner brief. If no petitioner brief is filed, such respondent brief shall be filed within 20 days of filing of the request for review. The Office may file a respondent brief only if it failed a request for review.

(c) Reply brief. Any reply brief shall be filed with the Committee and served on all parties and the Office if it requested review, within 5 days after service of the respondent brief to which it replies. No one may file a reply brief who did not file a petitioner brief.

(d) Alternative briefing schedule. With notice to all parties and the Office, if it requested review, the Committee may specify a different briefing schedule than that prescribed by subsections 4.1 (a), (b) and (c).

(e) Additional briefs. At its discretion, the Committee may direct or permit additional written briefs.

(f) Requirements for briefs. Briefs shall be on 8½ inch by 11 inch paper, one side only, and 15 copies shall be provided. No brief shall exceed 50 typewritten double spaced pages, excluding any table of contents, list of authorities, or attached copies of statutes, rules, or regulations. Footnotes shall not be used excessively to evade this limitation. All references to evidence or information in the record must be accompanied by notations indicating the page or pages where such evidence or information appears in the record.

(g) Oral argument. At the request of a party or the Office, the Committee may permit oral argument in exceptional circumstances. A request for oral argument must specify the circumstances which are asserted to be exceptional.

4.2 Remand.

(a) Only one Remand. There are two kinds of remand. The Committee may remand the record respecting a decision, or it may remand the case respecting a decision, but in no event can there be more than one remand with respect to a decision of a hearing board. If the Committee remands the record respecting a decision, there can be no further remand of any kind with respect to such decision. If the Committee remands the case respecting a decision, there can be no remand of any kind with respect to a hearing board decision issued following remand. A Committee decision remanding to the hearing board shall contain a written statement of the reasons for the Committee decision.

(b) Remand of the Record. Within the time for a decision under subsection 308(d) of the Act, the Committee may remand the record of a decision to the hearing board for the purpose of supplementing the record. After the hearing board has supplemented the record as directed by the Committee, the hearing board shall transmit the record to the Office, and the Office shall immediately notify the parties of the hearing board's action and transmit the supplemented record to the Committee. The Committee retains jurisdiction over a request for review during remand of the record, and no new request for review is needed for further Committee consideration under section 308 of the Act. A record shall be deemed remanded to the hearing board until the day the Committee receives the supplemented record from the Office, and the Committee shall transmit a written final decision to the Office not later than 60 calendar days during which the Senate is in session after receipt of the record as supplemented on remand. The Committee may extend the 60 day period for 15 days during which the Senate is in session.

(c) Remand of the Case. Within the time for a decision under subsection 308(d) of the Act, the Committee may remand the case to the hearing board for the purpose of further consideration. After further consideration, the hearing board shall issue a new written decision with respect to the matter as provided in section 307 of the Act. If the Committee remands the case to the hearing board, the Committee does not retain jurisdiction, and a new request for review, filed in accordance with Rule 3, will be necessary if a party or the Office seeks review of a decision issued following remand.

4.3 Final Written Decision. All final decisions shall include a statement of the reasons for the Committee's decision, together with dissenting views of Committee members, if any, and shall be transmitted to the Office not later than 60 calendar days during which the Senate is in session after filing of a request for review. The period for transmission to the Office of a final decision may be extended by the Committee for 15 calendar days during which the Senate is in session. A final written decision of the Committee with respect to a request for review may affirm, modify, or reverse the hearing board decision in whole or in part. The Committee may decide not to grant a request for review of a hearing board decision. The Committee will serve a copy of any final decision on all parties.

RULE 5. HEARING BOARD REFERRAL OF TESTIMONIAL OBJECTIONS

5.1 Procedure for Ruling on Testimonial Objections. If any witness to a hearing board proceeding appearing by subpoena objects to a question and refuses to testify, or refuses to produce a document, a hearing board may refer the objection to the Committee for a ruling. Such referrals may be made by telephone or otherwise to the Chairman or Vice Chairman of the Committee who may rule on the objection or refer the matter to the Committee for decision. If the Chairman or Vice Chairman, or the Committee upon referral, overrules the objection, the Chairman or Vice Chairman, or the Committee as the case may be, may direct the witness to answer the question or produce the document. The Committee, or the Chairman or Vice Chairman, shall rule on objections as expeditiously as possible.

5.2 Enforcement. The Committee may make recommendations to the Senate, including recommendations for criminal or civil enforcement, with respect to the failure or refusal of any person to appear or produce documents in obedience to a subpoena or order of a hearing board, or for the failure or refusal of any person to answer questions during his or her appearance as a witness in a proceeding under section 307 of the Act. The Office shall be deemed a Senate committee for purposes of section 1365 of Title 28 of the United States Code.

RULE 6. MEETINGS AND VOTING

6.1 Quorum, Proxies, Recorded Votes. A majority of the members of the Committee shall constitute a quorum for purposes of issuing a decision under section 308 of the Act, and for purposes of hearing oral argument if such argument is permitted. Proxy votes shall not be considered for the purpose of establishing a quorum, nor for purposes of decisions under section 308 (c) and (d) of the Act. Decisions of the Committee under section 308 (c) or (d) of the Act shall be by recorded vote.

6.2 Meetings. Meetings to consider matters before the Committee pursuant to the Act may be held at the call of the Chairman or Vice Chairman, if at least 48 hours notice is furnished to all Members. If all Members agree, a meeting may be held on less than 48 hours notice.

RULE 7. CONFIDENTIALITY OF PROCEEDINGS

Confidentiality. The final written decision of the Committee shall be made public if the decision is in favor of a Senate employee who filed a complaint or if the decision reverses a decision of the hearing board which had been in favor of the employee. The Select Committee may decide to release any other decision at its discretion. All testimony, records, or documents received by the Committee in the course of any review under these rules shall otherwise be deemed "Committee Sensitive Information" and subject to the "Non-Disclosure Policy and Agreement" as prescribed in Rule 9 of the Committee's Supplemental Rules of Procedure.

RULE 8. AUTHORITY TO DISCIPLINE

Official Misconduct. None of the provisions of the Act or these rules limit the authority of the Committee under S. Res. 338, 88th Cong., 2d Sess. (1964), as amended, to otherwise review, investigate, and report to the Senate with respect to violations of the Senate Code of Official Conduct, or any other rule or regulation of the Senate relating to the conduct of individuals in the performance of their duties as members, officers, or employees of the Senate.●

VIOLENCE ON TELEVISION INITIATIVE

● Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, a recent report by the Journal of American Medicine estimates that the average American child has watched 100,000 acts of violence by the end of elementary school—including 8,000 murders. By 18, the average child has watched 200,000 acts of violence and 40,000 murders.

Parents are rightly concerned. As a father of four and a grandfather of four, with four more on the way, I am concerned.

Over the past year, Congress has begun to respond. We are asking whether it is appropriate to get involved on behalf of the interests of Children. Broadcasters are also beginning to pay attention. Last year, cable and broadcasting outlets agreed, with encouragement from Congress, to allow an independent monitor to review their programming for violence. While the monitoring project is underway, the debate continues over whether Congress should regulate violence on television.

I believe that if the Federal Government plans to become involved in this issue—which may be appropriate—the Federal Government must first lead by example.

That's why I have asked the three agencies, or federally related companies, that spend the most money per year on TV advertising, to join me in developing a uniform policy regarding advertising on violent television programming.

The three groups are the Department of Defense, which spent $37.3 million last year on television advertising, the U.S. Postal Service, which spent $22.9 million on television advertising last year, and Amtrak, which spent $8.1 million.

I was glad to learn that the Department of Defense, the Postal Service, and Amtrak all have existing policies in place to monitor their advertising. Our goal in asking these three entities to sign this pledge is to reaffirm their commitment by agreeing on a uniform policy defines violence and establishes a common goal for spending their advertising dollars.

We define violence as "an act perpetrated on another person or persons with the specific intent to cause physical harm, injury and/or death."

And we consider programs violent if they contain violence which is inappropriate or unnecessary to the story.

Generally, our definition excludes documentary programs, including news and sporting programs.

This is not censorship. This is a voluntary agreement among Federal, or federally related entities to act in the best interest of Americans.

In voluntarily signing this pledge, the Department of Defense, the Postal Service, and Amtrak are sending an important message—that various elements of the Federal Government can work effectively together in the best interests of Americans. And they are saying we can accomplish worthwhile goals—such as limiting violence on television—without new legislation and regulations.

Our next goal is to encourage other agencies, and private companies to follow this example, and to take responsibility for the placement of their television advertisements.

Four reputable groups with an interest in the TV violence issue support our initiative. They are: Americans for Responsible TV; the National Coalition on TV Violence; the National Education Association; and the National PTA.

Finally, Mr. President, I would like to thank the representatives from the Department of Defense, the Postal Service, and Amtrak for attending this morning's announcement. Their cooperation and leadership in this initiative testifies to their concern about violence on television.●

TRIBUTE TO KELLER GEORGE

● Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to Keller George, who was recently elected president of the United South and Eastern Tribes.

Mr. George, a resident of Oneida, NY, is a member of the Onieda Indian Nation, a nation whose triumphant history includes playing an integral part in the victory of the colonists during the American Revolutionary War. Onieda Indians brought food to the American Army during the harsh winter at Valley Forge, and fought by their side at the Battle of Oriskany. The epic battle that took place at Oriskany represented a partnership between native Americans, Europeans, and Americans for freedom and self-determination. The battle was the bloodiest in the revolution.

Mr. George has quite an impressive and extensive résumé in serving both the United States of America and the Onieda Indian Nation. For over 20 years he was a member of the U.S. Air Force. Mr. George has been a businessman, managing the Onieda Nation's first smokeshop. He currently holds the position of special assistant to Onieda Nation representative Ray Halbritter. But that only scratches the surface of Mr. George's substantial role as a leader in the Onieda Nation. He is also first representative for the Onieda Nation's sovereign housing authority, first representative and treasurer for the Onieda Indian Nation Gaming Commission, a member of the Onieda Nation's men's council, a member of the board of directors for the National Indian Gaming Association, and vice president of the northeastern area of the National Congress of American Indians.

Now Mr. George has risen to the position of president of the United South and Eastern Tribes. The United South and Eastern Tribes is composed of 21 tribes whose purpose is to provide leadership for its member tribes and to advance the causes of all native Indians. Mr. President, all Americans can relate to these causes. They include providing educational opportunity and promoting understanding among the general public of the achievements of their member tribes. I can think of no other person who is more qualified and more deserving of such a position as Keller George.

I congratulate him on this tremendous achievement, and wish him the best of luck in his new position.●

PUBLIC BROADCASTING CLARIFICATION

• Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I wish to correct an error in my statement from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of January 24, 1995. In a discussion of the financial potential of public broadcasting, my statement as published stated that, according to the viewer magazine of WETA Washington, this public television station's viewers have an average household net worth of $627,000 plus an average investment portfolio of $249,000. My statement should have been recorded as saying WETA's contributors, not its viewers, have that financial status.●

MORNING BUSINESS

SENATE RESOLUTION 78—RECOGNIZING HALEYVILLE, AL, THE BIRTHPLACE OF "911"

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, since communication is crucial to acting in any emergency, the familiar 911 emergency telephone system has been recognized throughout the country as a key factor in fire, police, medical, and rescue personnel being able to respond quickly. Often, there are only a few precious minutes separating life and death. In many cases, quick action means life.

Back on February 16, 1968, a historic first test call of the 911 system was made to a red telephone located at the Haleyville, AL, police dispatch office, a call that marked the beginning of a service that has helped save lives and protect property for 27 years. The call was answered by Congressman TOM BEVILL. The town's 911 system has been in continuous service ever since, longer than anywhere else in the Nation.

Haleyville's telephone switching wiring, which required little modification in order to accommodate 911, was the main reason it worked here first. Haleyville is located in Winston County, in the northwest corner of Alabama.

Alabamians are justifiably proud of the contribution they have made to public safety, and the resolution I introduced commends Haleyville for its unique place in the history of the 911 service that we often take for granted today.

I thank my colleagues for their support of this resolution.

THE U.N. CONVENTION ON THE RIGHTS OF THE CHILD

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, this afternoon, in New York, Ambassador Madeleine Albright will sign the U.N. Convention on the Rights of the Child. This marks a small, but long overdue step toward improving the lot of the world's children. I urge the President to take a much larger, and equally overdue step, and submit the convention at once to the Senate for advice and consent to ratification.

I have stood on the Senate floor many times over the past 6 years to discuss the importance of this convention and to urge its ratification. There are many arguments in favor of the convention, but they all boil down to one basic point—children in less-fortunate circumstances deserve the same rights and protections we demand for our own kids.

In addition, whether we ratify it or not, the convention is a reminder that we ourselves have much to do to make sure that every American child enjoys the full benefits of the principles enshrined in this convention. It is a standing reproach to our own unsuccessful efforts to end the tragedy of infant mortality, the terror of child abuse, the scourge of drugs, and the wasted potential of school dropouts.

The U.N. Convention on the Rights of the Child recognizes, as does U.S. law, that children need special protections. It states that every child has the right to a name and nationality, stresses the importance of child survival measures, pledges the signatories to work to abolish traditional practices harmful to children's health, recognizes the importance of education, and prohibits sexual exploitation.

Opponents of the convention argue that it would insert government into the parent-child relationship. They assert that it would take children away from parents. This simply is not true. The convention is explicit on the primacy of the parents in the life of the child. For example, article 5 states:

States Parties shall respect the responsibilities, rights and duties of parents . . . to provide, in a manner consistent with the evolving capacities of the child, appropriate direction and guidance in the exercise by the child of the rights recognized in the present Convention.

But, as a practical document, the convention also recognizes that there will be times when the parents are unable to fulfill their responsibilities. In these cases, the convention requires the State to step in, in accordance with the best interests of the child. This is already the practice in the United States. But, for the first time, the convention lays down commonsense guidelines to make sure that, in those extraordinary cases in which the State must intervene, its actions are in fact in the best interests of the child.

So far, 176 nations have ratified the U.N. Convention on the Rights of the Child. The list of countries that have not is a rogue's gallery of international pariahs such as Libya and Iraq. It is an embarrassment to the United States to be on this list.

But ratification is more than a matter of appearances. The lives of children are at stake. Until we ratify this convention, we will be unable to exert the leadership necessary to make a difference in the lives of the world's children. President Clinton has done the right thing by instructing Ambassador Albright to sign the convention. He should now submit it to the Senate, and we should ratify it without delay.

WAS CONGRESS IRRESPONSIBLE?
THE VOTERS HAVE SAID YES!

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I doubt that there have been many, if any, candidates for the Senate who have not pledged to do something about the enormous Federal debt run up by the Congress during the past half-century or more. But Congress, both House and Senate, have never up to now even toned down the deficit spending that sent the Federal debt into the stratosphere and beyond.

We must pray that this year will be different, that Federal spending will at long last be reduced drastically. Indeed, if we care about America's future, there must be some changes.

You see, Mr. President, as of the close of business Wednesday, February 15, the Federal debt stood (down to the penny) at exactly $4,828,675,772,079.58. This means that on a per capita basis, every man, woman and child in America owes $18,329.74 as his or her share of the Federal debt.

Compare this, Mr. President, to the total debt about two years ago (January 5, 1993) when the debt stood at exactly $4,167,872,986,583.67—or averaged out, $15,986.56 for every American. During the past 2 years (that is, during the 103d Congress) the Federal debt increased over $6 billion.

This illustrates, Mr. President, the point that so many politicians talk a good game (at home) about bringing the Federal debt under control, but vote in support of bloated spending bills when they get back to Washington. If the Republicans do not do a better job of getting a handle on this enormous debt, their constituents are not likely to overlook it 2 years hence.

WILLIAM F. LACKMAN, JR. (1929–1995)

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I rise today to pay respect to the memory of William F. Lackman, Jr., a resident of Middleburg, VA, who died last week at the age of 65. Mr. Lackman was a distinguished public servant to whom the Nation owes its most profound respect and gratitude.

Bill Lackman served his country for more than 40 years—first as an Army officer and then as a distinguished civilian member of the Defense Intelligence community. Graduating from West Point in 1951, Mr. Lackman served in the Army for 22 years, retiring in 1973 with the rank of colonel. He was a battle-hardened officer who led soldiers in combat during two different wars, Korea and Vietnam. Among a number of other prominent decorations, he won the Silver Star and twice earned the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

Of profound significance is the fact that he was twice felled by battlefield wounds, meriting two awards of the Purple Heart. Nevertheless, he continued his military service because he was dedicated to the ideals embodied in the United States Constitution to which he had sworn an oath to support and defend.

In addition to his wartime uniformed service, Mr. Lackman worked in a number of diversified and important military assignments. He held policy-related positions in both the Office of the Secretary of Defense and the Joint Staff. He also had the unusual distinction of having instructed cadets at both the U.S. Military Academy and at the U.S. Air Force Academy. Long before the Goldwater-Nichols Act officially recognized the need and codified a requirement for outstanding officers to serve in joint positions, Bill Lackman was walking point as a "purple suit" officer.

Starting in 1976, Bill Lackman continued his devoted service to the Nation as a Department of Defense civilian. He worked in positions of increasing responsibility within the Defense Intelligence network culminating with his service, from 1992 to 1994, as the Director of the Central Imagery Office in the Department of Defense. In that capacity, he was responsible for all aspects of imagery reconnaissance, including satellite photography, for the Department of Defense and various other national intelligence agencies. The importance and complexity of that position in this high tech age, replete with numerous and diverse threats to our security, is unmistakable. Yet Bill Lackman was more than worthy of the job and he accomplished his mission with integrity, dedication and professionalism.

Over the years, I had a number of opportunities to work with Bill. Particularly in my capacity as a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, I often sought out insights and advice from him on a variety of intelligence matters. In every instance, his input was thorough and accurate. Suffice it to say that my respect for Bill Lackman, as both a person and an intelligence adviser, was profound.

Mr. President, I believe my colleagues will agree that William F. Lackman, Jr., was an extraordinary public servant whose dedicated service to the people of the United States, spanning more than 40 years, is worthy of our eminent praise and respect. On behalf of all Virginians and a grateful Nation, I wish to extend my sympathies and gratitude to Bill's wife, Anne, his seven children, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Lackman.

TRIBUTE TO VIRGINIA'S AIR FORCE RESERVE

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to nearly 900 Virginians who are some of the most dedicated members of our society. They voluntarily serve our Nation as individual mobilization augmentees in the Air Force Reserve. Virginians have always served our Nation in times of peace and war. I take pride in these Air Force reservists because they are twice serving our country, as productive citizens and as citizen airmen. There are 12,000 individual mobilization augmentees in the Air Force Reserve. They serve with the active Air Force for their training, bringing the expertise from their civilian jobs to the military. Most served on active duty, so we are keeping this valuable, experienced investment in trained people for about 10 cents on the dollar.

I am especially proud to recognize the 900 individual mobilization augmentees of the Commonwealth of Virginia because of their dedicated service. They balance family, civilian career, and military service in a manner in which we can all take pride and carry on traditions that go back to George Washington and Lighthorse Harry Lee. It is an honor to commend these Air Force reservists and thank them for their service to the United States.

RETIREMENT OF MILTON H. HAMILTON ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT TO THE SECRETARY OF THE ARMY

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, the Secretary of the Army has announced the retirement of a dedicated public servant, Mr. Milton H. Hamilton, Administrative Assistant to the Secretary of the Army, at the end of February. Mr. Hamilton has distinguished himself throughout his long career with the Army, especially during the last 15 years when he served as the Administrative Assistant. The Army and the Nation will miss him.

Mr. Hamilton became the Administrative Assistant to the Secretary of the Army, the Army's senior career civilian position, on March 31, 1980. The position of Administrative Assistant is established by statute and dates back to 1789 when the only other civilian position authorized for the War Office was that of Secretary of War.

As the Administrative Assistant, Mr. Hamilton has been responsible to the Secretary for the administration of the Department of the Army; served as a focal point for transitions between administrations; and, authenticated all departmental regulations and related publications. During a vacancy in the Office of the Secretary, he has had charge and custody of all records, books, and papers of the Department.

Mr. Hamilton was born June 17, 1925, in Elkins, WV. He graduated from the U.S. Military Academy in 1946 with a B.S. in military engineering. He earned an M.B.A. from Syracuse University in 1959 and an M.S. in international affairs from George Washington University in 1965. Mr. Hamilton has completed the residence requirements for a Ph.D. in business administration at American University; is a graduate of the Army War College (1965); the Federal Executive Institute (1978); and, Senior Managers in Government Program, Harvard University (1983). He has been awarded the Army's Decoration for Distinguished Civilian Service; Decoration for Exceptional Civilian Service; the Meritorious Civilian Service Award; as well as DOD's highest award, the DOD Medal for Distinguished Public Service. Mr. Hamilton has also been twice awarded the Presidential Ranks of Distinguished Executive and Meritorious Executive.

Before leaving active military service as a colonel in 1972, Mr. Hamilton served in a wide variety of command and general staff positions, to include brigade commander, comptroller, program/budget manager, researcher in personnel management, service school instructor, and politico-military policy formulator at the national level. He served in combat with the 3d Infantry Division in Korea, and the 25th Infantry Division in Vietnam.

From 1972 to 1975, Mr. Hamilton was a project manager/principal scientist with General Research Corp. in McLean, VA. In this capacity, he directed research and analyses pertaining to: organizational effectiveness and program evaluation; manpower utilization and development; resource allocations for forces and systems; national security policy; military readiness; and planning, programming, and budgeting.

Returning to Government service in December 1975, Mr. Hamilton was the principal adviser in the Department of Defense on political military economic aspects of United States relations with southern and western African countries. In May 1977, he became the Deputy Director for Programming, Office of the Chief of Staff, U.S. Army, and served in that capacity until his appointment as Administrative Assistant to the Secretary of the Army. As the Army's top civilian programmer, he had a major role in the shaping and resourcing of the Army's Future Years Defense Program which underlies the readiness of today's Army.

We honor Mr. Hamilton's selfless service, in peace and war, to the Nation and the U.S. Army. We wish him and his family Godspeed and a healthy and rewarding retirement.

THE 75TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I am proud to join my distinguished colleagues in honoring the 75th anniversary of the founding of the League of Women Voters of the United States of America this week. This organization has a tremendous record of encouraging women to be active in their communities and involved in promoting good public policy. The League of Women Voters can be very proud of its history of public education and leadership that has helped to strengthen our Government and country over the years.

I also am extremely proud that a native West Virginian and a good friend of mine, Becky Cain, is president of the league during its 75th anniversary celebration.

As we all know, the League of Women Voters is a nonpartisan political organization with 1,100 chapters and over 150,000 members and supporters around the country. Open to both women and men, the league encourages the informed and active participation of citizens in Government through education, advocacy, and organization at the local, State, and national levels.

I know how important the league is for America. I have seen how their grassroots efforts helped pass legislation such as the 1993 National Voter Registration Act, the historic motor-voter bill, which is making it easier for more Americans to register to vote and perform one of the essential acts in a democracy. Helping to enfranchise millions of Americans is a fundamental effort to strengthen the fabric of our country.

In addition, the league has launched national campaigns such as the 1992 Take Back the System Program that actively sought to increase voter confidence and involvement in the electoral system. And as we all know, the league is active at the State and local level in educating voters and getting people involved in Government.

On many occasions, I have been proud to work with league, join in their nonpartisan debates, and participate in their events in West Virginia and Washington to debate the issues.

As we think about our country and the future, I believe that Americans need organizations like the League of Women Voters more than ever to help develop the links and communication between people and public servants that are so essential for our government to be responsive and effective. The league and its members deserve our deep appreciation for their steadfast commitment to educating voters in a nonpartisan way about the tough choices and issues that we all must face and should try to resolve together.

WILLIAM LACKMAN

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I cannot allow the passing of an American whose unsung contributions over 44 years have served to enhance, in ways that cannot be measured, the national security and well-being of this country. I speak of Bill Lackman.

The name Bill Lackman is not known to the American public. But in the intelligence community, his is a household name. I know Bill only from his many trips to the Senate Intelligence Committee to testify on the complex and necessary business of intelligence programs and budget. If I were asked to select one word which would best describe Bill, it would be a professional—in the finest sense of the word. Bill knew his business better than anyone and he was an articulate spokesman. It goes without saying that his wife Anne and his family will miss him. It will also go without commentary that the intelligence community and his country will miss him.

At this point, I can think of no greater tribute to Bill than to recount his career and contributions to his country.

Bill graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, NY, in 1951 and served in the U.S. Army from 1951 to 1973, rising to the rank of colonel in the Infantry. During his military career, he served combat tours in Korea and Vietnam. He served as assistant professor of Russian history at the U.S. Military Academy, and he also served as assistant professor of international relations at the U.S. Air Force Academy. His military decorations include the Silver Star, three awards of the Legion of Merit, four Bronze Stars, the Army and Air Force commendation medals, two Purple Hearts, and two awards of the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

In 1976, Bill joined the intelligence community staff and rose to become the principal spokesman for the entire national intelligence community budget. In 1986, he became deputy director of the intelligence community staff. For this service and his many contributions, Bill was awarded the National Intelligence Distinguished Service Medal in January 1993.

Bill was appointed the first Director of the Central Imagery Office by Secretary of Defense Cheney on May 22, 1992, where he pioneered many management innovations in the provision of imagery to national defense.

Bill gave unselfishly to a country he loved. His contributions can never be adequately repaid. He shall be missed.

ORDERS FOR WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1995

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today it stand in adjournment until the hour of 10:30 a.m. on Wednesday, February 22, 1995, that following the prayer, the journal of proceedings be deemed approved to date, no resolutions come over under the rule, the call of the calendar be dispensed with, the morning hour be deemed to have expired, and the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day; and immediately following the prayer, the Senator from Wyoming, Senator THOMAS, be recognized to read Washington's Farewell Address pursuant to the consent agreement of January 20, 1995. I further ask that immediately following the conclusion of the reading, the Senate immediately resume consideration of House Joint Resolution 1, the Constitutional Balanced Budget Amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I further ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess between the hours of 12:30 and 2:15 p.m. on Wednesday in order for the weekly party caucuses to meet.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, let me thank the distinguished Democratic leader. I think we worked out an arrangement that will be accommodating to many of the desires of our Members on both sides of the aisle with reference to amendments and the scheduling problems that we have on both sides of the aisle, in some cases.

I would just state for the information of all of my colleagues, under the provisions of the agreement reached earlier, any Senator intending to offer an amendment or motion from the list must do so by 12 noon on Wednesday; also, Senators should be aware that although no further amendments will be in order after 3 p.m. on Friday, February 24, it is my intention not to have any rollcall votes on Friday, February 24th, or Monday, February 27th.

It will be my intention to stack votes ordered on Friday, February 24, to occur at 2:15 on Tuesday—it will be Friday or Monday—to occur at 2:15 on Tuesday prior to the vote on final disposition of the constitutional amendment for a balanced budget.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I also want to commend the majority leader for cooperation over the last several hours as we have negotiated this agreement. It is a fair agreement. It gives Senators an opportunity to present their amendments.

We have two days with which to present these amendments, and I hope Senators will avail themselves of the opportunities. We will have rollcall votes throughout those two days and certainly on Tuesday. So I hope that we can maximize the use of this time, and I am sure that all Senators will take advantage of the opportunity that this accords it.

I think it is a good agreement and I hope we can get to work on Wednesday.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, again, I thank the democratic leaders and all others on both sides of the aisle who have been involved in working on the agreement.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 10:30 A.M., WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1995

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, if there be no further business to come before the Senate, I now ask unanimous consent the Senate stand in adjournment until 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, February 22nd, under the provisions of H. Con. Res. 30.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 8:07 p.m., adjourned until Wednesday, February 22, 1995, at 10:30 a.m.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

COMMEMORATING BLACK HISTORY MONTH

HON. MIKE WARD

OF KENTUCKY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. WARD. Mr. Speaker, in recognition of February as Black History Month, a tradition dating back to 1926 when Carter C. Woodson set aside 1 week in February in order to honor the contributions and achievements of African-Americans, I would like to take this opportunity to honor the African-American men and women who have contributed so much to my hometown of Louisville, KY, our Nation, and to the world.

In Louisville, there have been many in the African-American community who have made invaluable contributions not just to their community, but to society as a whole. Judge Janice R. Martin, appointed to the bench by Governor Jones in March 1992, is the first African-American woman jurist to serve in the Commonwealth of Kentucky. Judge Martin brings to the court a long history of involvement in many organizations, including: the Metro United Way; the Kentucky Women's Leadership; the Urban League; Dare to Care; and the Kentucky Task Force on Racial Fairness in the courts.

Dr. Joseph H. McMillan, a professor in the University of Louisville's Department of Early and Middle Childhood Education, has contributed greatly to educating all Kentuckians on matters of racial tolerance and understanding. In 1950, Dr. McMillan began his teaching career in Lake County, MI, and later became the first African-American principal in the Grand Rapids Public Schools system. Dr. McMillan has been active with the Annual National Black Family Conference in America. He has also served as chairman of the Louisville/Jefferson County Human Relations Commission, president of the Louisville Urban League, and as chairman of the Kentucky Rainbow Coalition. Dr. McMillan currently serves as a commissioner to the Kentucky State Human Rights Commission under Governor Jones.

Eleanor Forman, one of Louisville's first African-American real estate agents, focused her efforts on integrating the Louisville real estate market. At the time Ms. Forman entered the real estate profession, the white-dominated real estate market, for Ms. Forman, was a hostile environment in which to work. Prior to Ms. Forman's work, areas of the city were marked as being reserved for white real estate agents or African-American real estate agents only. Ms. Forman was also recognized as the 1994 Women of Achievement by the Business and Professional Women's group.

Other individuals who, through civic participation and education, have strived to ease tensions and empower others to follow their example include: Lyman T. Johnson, the first African-American ever to graduate from the University of Kentucky, whose case for admittance was argued by former Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall; Ann Elmore, who, in 1994, became the first African-American woman elected to the Jefferson County Board of Education; and Evelyn L. Waldrop, whose work with the NAACP, the Urban League, the Public Works Association, and the National Council of Negro Women has set the standard for community involvement.

History shows us that as our Nation was struggling for freedom and democracy, African-Americans played invaluable roles and contributed greatly to our efforts. These contributions have been largely overlooked and such recognition is long over due.

When our Nation was in the midst of a Revolutionary War, African-Americans, such as Crispus Attucks, who died in the Boston Massacre, heeded the call to arms and did so without reservation—these men and women served as infantryman, laborers, cooks, and also as part of the Minutemen brigade. African-Americans, such as Sgt. William H. Carney, who was the first African-American to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor for his efforts in the Civil War. Again, in World War I, World War II, in Korea, and in Vietnam, African-Americans served their country with honor and dedication. The memories of these men and women who have served so dutifully must never be forgotten.

Throughout our history as a nation, African-Americans answered our Nation's call to arms; however, in the area of civil rights, it took our Nation a longer period of time to answer their calls for justice and equality. Throughout the civil rights era of the 1950's and 1960's, our Government created roadblocks in the path of equality for African-Americans. These roadblocks were in the overt form of "whites only" signs in bus stations, restaurants, theaters, and hotels; in the overt form of denying African-Americans the right to vote; in the overt form of segregated schools; in the overt form of African-Americans being forced to ride in the back of the bus.

Through such legislation as the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which prohibited any public establishment from discriminating on the basis of race, and the Voting Rights Act of 1965, we, as a nation, have reached a greater level of equality among all people; however, we do have far to go in this effort.

Today, we do not see the overt forms of racism and discrimination that we saw in the 1950's and 1960's, rather, we see a more covert form of discrimination in the form of glass ceilings in hiring practices and a vast disparity between African-Americans and whites in the areas of income, education, and crime statistics. We also see this covert discrimination in the efforts of many to defeat a minimum wage increase. The current minimum wage of $4.25 per hour provides the full-time worker an annual salary of $8,500, which is less than one-half the current poverty line for a family of four. With inflation, the minimum wage has decreased almost fifty cents since 1991 and is currently three-quarters of what it was in 1979.

How can we encourage people to get off welfare when we do not provide a decent wage for them to live? How can we say that we reward work over welfare when we do not provide the means by which an individual can achieve this goal.

Today, it is an honor to pay tribute to these African-Americans, who serve as testament to the fact that as a nation we have come far. However, I believe that is also appropriate to remind ourselves how much further we must go in order to achieve total equality among all in our richly diverse society. I hope that we all can make this journey together.

THE PRESIDENT'S 1996 BUDGET

HON. LEE H. HAMILTON

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to insert my Washington Report for Wednesday, February 15, 1995 into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

THE PRESIDENT'S 1996 BUDGET

President Clinton recently sent to Congress his $1.61 trillion budget for 1996. The President says his budget will allow simultaneously leaner government and sufficient funds for popular and expensive social programs. He claims it cuts middle-class taxes, keeps the deficit down, and does not cut education, Social Security, or Medicare. The budget has come under fire on Capitol Hill.

SUMMARY

The President's budget calls for $1.612 trillion in spending and $1.415 trillion in revenues. That leaves a $197 billion deficit, up slightly from the $192 billion he projects for 1995. The biggest spending goes for Social Security ($315 billion), Medicare and Medicaid ($270 billion), defense ($262 billion), and interest on the national debt ($257 billion). The budget proposes few new initiatives. The most important is the middle-class tax cut, which is actually three cuts: a children's tax credit, a college tuition deduction, and a liberalization of individual retirement accounts. On the spending side, the President seeks to eliminate 131 programs and reduce funding for another 86. He calls for the restructuring of five agencies: Housing and Urban Development, Transportation, Energy, General Services Administration, and Office of Personnel Management. He also proposes merging 271 separate programs into 27, including the consolidation of 69 job training programs. The number of federal employees will continue to decline under the President's budget. The total reduction will reach 173,300 in 1996, nearly two-thirds of the 272,900 required by 1999 under existing law.

He requests increases in discretionary spending for crime reduction, national service, Goals 2000, education, Headstart, and WIC. His budget only includes limited changes in entitlement programs and makes no changes in Social Security and only modest changes in Medicare. He calls for a slight reduction in defense spending in 1996 but increases starting in 1998. He keeps foreign aid at current levels (1% of budget) to help maintain U.S. commitments overseas.

CHALLENGE TO CONGRESS

Members from both sides of the aisle have taken aim at President Clinton's budget for not being aggressive enough in reducing federal spending and reducing the deficit. The argument of the President that the deficit is now under control because it has shrunk by $100 billion over the past two years has not been well received. The President did not identify deep spending cuts for the new leadership in Congress, and in a sense his budget challenges them: "It's your turn, show me where you're going to cut the budget."

The big question now is what the budget of the new congressional leadership will look like. We may not know for another few months. The leadership's strategy seems to be to keep everything very quiet and secret and then spring a surprise on the country and the interest groups that might be affected. It remains to be seen whether Congress will be serious about eliminating the deficit.

DEFICIT REDUCTION

The good progress that has been made on deficit reduction in the first two years of the Clinton administration seems to be replaced by a strategy of deficit control. The President and Congress were right to attack the budget deficit in the last two years, and the reasons for doing so are still compelling today. The key issue here is the country's future standard of living. The deficit preempts investment that would otherwise go into expanding the economy. That is one major reason for the stagnation of wages and incomes for many Americans since the mid-1970s.

I believe that any serious effort to cut the deficit will inevitably have to deal with health care costs. The political judgement behind the President's budget is that the electorate offers little thanks to those who make a serious run at deficit reduction. Many Members of Congress continue to play on the overwhelming belief among the public that the budget can be balanced just by cutting out waste, fraud, and abuse, and that all it takes is cutting foreign aid, taking young mothers off welfare, and ending congressional perks. At some point we will have to be honest and specific with the American people. Difficult choices are needed, and anyone who takes a hard look at the budget knows it. One of the most important things that has to happen in this country is improving public understanding about the budget.

Too many Members of Congress favor a balanced budget but are unwilling to offer any specifics. Indeed many go in the opposite direction. They want larger tax cuts and more spending on defense and other popular programs. They list only the spending they will not cut, like Social Security. They also try to assure the governors and mayors that they will be held harmless in the process. I do not want to repeat the experience of the 1980s when the country was told it was possible to cut taxes and balance the budget by cutting domestic spending. The spending cuts were never found and the national debt, as well as our interest payments, quadrupled.

TAX CUTS

Basically I believe that for the sake of our children we should cut the deficit first and then cut taxes, not the other way around. At the same time, I am prepared to support tax cuts that are deficit neutral—cuts that are offset with spending reductions so there is no impact on the deficit. I would target tax cuts to savings and investment because that is what the country really needs to grow and to increase standards of living.

I am inclined to think the tax cuts are being oversold to the American people. Middle-class Americans are in economic pain, but I doubt the tax cuts being proposed are a genuine cure for their afflictions. And unless offset by equivalent reductions in government spending, the measure might end up costing middle-class taxpayers more money in the form of higher interest rates on their mortgages, credit cards, and loans.

CONCLUSION

A President's budget is simply the opening ante in an annual game between Congress and the President. President Clinton's budget comes to a hostile Congress. It is not a dead-on-arrival budget, but a document for bargaining. Congress understands that. Significant changes are expected in the weeks and months ahead.

THE SPRATLY ISLAND GRAB

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I was alarmed but not surprised to read in Saturday's Washington Post that Communist China used its growing military strength to take over a large area of disputed territory in the Spratly Islands.

Many of our friends in that region, including our important Filipino allies, have been warning us of the dangers of understating the People's Republic of China [PRC] military buildup as a moderate modernization program. As anyone knows who seriously studies the issue, the PRC's military budget, recent acquisitions, technology transfers—legal and otherwise—and their expanded espionage program in the United States is a cause for the highest concern.

The Spratly Island grab occurred just 2 days after the Wall Street Journal reported that the PRC raised tensions in the region by buying four Russian submarines. The PRC already has over 100 submarines. Taiwan has only two and yet our State Department will not allow our democratic friends on Taiwan to purchase any submarines from the United States.

Time and time again the Communist leaders have refused to work with the ASEAN nations to defuse the Spratly tensions. All attempts to get Beijing to address specific issues such as: A regional arms registry, maritime surveillance, various military transparency proposals, and contentions regional security and territorial disputes have been ignored. The result is that Beijing's rulers incrementally grab what it wants and without a peep from the State Department.

Some 40 years ago, when the Communists sought to create a buffer between themselves and democratic India, it expanded its territory by swallowing up Tibet, a country the size of Western Europe. In 1989, when the Communists felt threatened by a possible democracy emerging on its border with Burma, it sent $1.4 billion in military assistance to the State Law and Order Restoration Council [SLORC] in Rangoon. Due to SLORC's rule, opium production has doubled and perhaps quadrupled in Burma and New York's streets are awash in cheap, almost pure heroin.

Taiwan, Tibet, the Philippines, India, New York—people all over the world, including the United States, have good reasons to be concerned about the PRC's aggressive acts. Regrettably, the State Department does not have any strategy for dealing with it other than to enhance its trading capacity in the hopes that its economic growth will bring about positive political changes. In the meantime, the PRC uses its booming economy fueled by its exports to the United States to make bold and substantive strategic gains.

The basic lesson that some policy makers in the State Department have yet to learn is that if you give in to a bully he will keep coming back for more.

CRIMINAL ALIEN DEPORTATION
IMPROVEMENTS ACT OF 1995

SPEECH OF

HON. C.W. BILL YOUNG

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, February 10, 1995

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 668) to control crime by further streamlining deportation of criminal aliens.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 668, the Criminal Alien Deportation Act. This legislation represents title VIII of the Taking Back Our Streets Act, one of the 10 points of the Republican Contract With America, and continues our efforts here in the House to address our Nation's crime problem.

The legislation we consider today makes several amendments to the Immigration and Nationality Act and other immigration laws to address the problem of aliens who commit serious crimes while they are in the United States, and gives federal law enforcement officials additional tools with which to combat organized immigration crime.

The most significant provisions of H.R. 668 are intended to accomplish one or both of two broad goals. First, the bill strengthens the Government's ability to efficiently deport aliens who are convicted of serious crimes. Second, the legislation adds immigration crimes to those crimes that the Federal Government may investigate under the Racketeering Influenced Corrupt Organization [RICO] law, and adds certain other crimes to the definition of "aggravated felonies," thereby expanding the number of criminal aliens who can be deported. The bill makes it clear that expedited deportation procedures that currently apply to nonresident aliens also apply to aliens who have been conditionally granted permanent residence.

Finally, in an effort to identify criminal aliens who may flee jurisdiction to avoid deportation, the bill directs the Criminal Alien Identification System, formerly the Criminal Alien Tracking Center created by the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act, to assist Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies in identifying and locating criminal aliens who may be deported.

Mr. Speaker, the passage of proposition 187 in California in 1994, was indicative of the frustration of the American people with the number of illegal aliens in this country. Ironically, under the California law, a 7- or 8-year-old child can be deported, yet the Federal Government still has difficulty deporting some criminal aliens. Under current law we may not deport aliens who have been convicted of crimes such as serious bribery, counterfeiting and forgery, perjury or bribery of a witness, or trafficking in stolen vehicles. In addition, aliens who have been sentenced to 5 or more years in prison, but have not served a full 5 years may not be deported. Sometimes they have been released early simply because of prison overcrowding. Furthermore, the INS may not initiate deportation proceedings against a criminal alien in prison until he has served 5 years, which means that sometimes, the criminal alien is released before the deportation order is ready and cannot be captured to be deported.

The costs to States for incarcerating these criminal aliens is a serious matter for our consideration as well. Yesterday, the House, with my strong support, approved an important amendment which would reimburse States with large immigration populations for these costs. The provision, approved as part of our crime legislation, sets aside a total of $650 million annually for the next 5 years. My State of Florida houses over 5,500 criminal aliens within its correctional system. Consequently, criminal aliens are approximately 10 percent of the near 57,000 inmates in Florida's 50 correctional centers. Under this plan, Florida will be eligible to receive more than $80 million to offset these costs.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday we took the first step in paying for the costs incurred by States to house criminal aliens. However, many aliens who commit serious crimes are released into American society before even serving out their sentences—where they continue to pose a threat to the American people. Today we provide our Nation with the means to remove these individuals from our society altogether, and I urge support for this legislation.

HON. CASS BALLENGER

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, on February 3, 1995, I was absent for rollcall vote No. 90. Had I been present, I would have voted "no" to this substitute amendment that would have allowed a simple majority approval vote to override a Presidential line-item veto.

On February 10, 1995, I was absent for rollcall vote No. 118. Had I been present, I would have voted in favor of final passage of H.R. 668, the Criminal Alien Deportation Improvements Act.

ISCC AWARDS

HON. THOMAS M. DAVIS

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. Speaker, It gives me great pleasure to rise today and pay tribute to some very special people in Virginia's 11th District. These are individuals who put the good of their community above their own needs. These people will be receiving awards from the Springfield Inter-Service Club Council ISCC on February 15, 1995.

The Inter-Service Club Council of Springfield, Virginia was established in 1986 to coordinate the good works of the numerous service clubs and civic organizations in the community. Today there are more than 60 clubs, groups, organizations and agencies from Springfield, Franconia, Annandale, Burke, Lorton, and Fairfax Station affiliated with the Inter-Service Club Council.

Since 1987 the ISCC of Springfield has honored individuals for their exceptional service to the community. On Wednesday, February 15, 1995, eight outstanding citizens of "Greater Springfield" will be awarded honors for their distinguished service.

Receiving certificates for their distinguished service to the community are:

Karen and Bill Brown, Rotarian Bill Brown and his wife Karen have dedicated themselves to helping children of the community in need at Christmas. Their efforts, in memory of their daughter Kristi who died in a tragic automobile accident, bring joy and giving to disadvantaged children of the community. The Breakfast Rotary, the Springfield K-Mart, and Student Volunteers from West Springfield High School assist in this project.

The Central Springfield Little League, the Central Springfield All Star Team are recognized for their remarkable advance to the Little League World Series in 1994. Their exceptional abilities, their team spirit, and their high degree of sportsmanship was an inspiration to all and a credit to the community.

Jerry Corbin, as the president of the Springfield Plaza Merchants Association, Jerry has been instrumental in the organization of the Springfield Days Weekend and the annual Halloween Parade for Children. Jerry's leadership and ability serves as an inspiration to a corps of volunteers and has been instrumental in attracting thousands of participants to these fine community activities. An active member of the Central Springfield Area Revitalization Committee [C-SPARC] and the Springfield-Franconia Midday Lions, Jerry is always helping people with his guidance, resources and funds; however he gives the credit to others.

The Springfield-Franconia Host Lions Club, for 40 years, our Host Lions have been raising money for charity, supporting sight and hearing programs, supporting the youth programs of Hayfield and Lee High Schools, and supported ECHO and Kolonia.

Honored as people of the year for 1994 are: Kari Colburn, local business leader, and member of the Springfield Rotary Club, Kari has been instrumental in leading the efforts of the Rotary Club in service to the Fairfax County Women's Shelter for abused women and their children.

Captain Frederick E. Ellis, Fairfax County Police Department. In addition to the stellar leadership that Captain Ellis has provided as the chief of the Franconia Station FCPD, he has served our community as a volunteer leader in Boy Scout Troop 1343. In 1994 he served as the chairman of the Scouting for Food Drive conducted by the George Washington District, National Capital Area Council, Boy Scouts of America. Under his leadership the Scouts collected more than 70 tons of food for the less fortunate citizens of the Washington area. Through his leadership our streets are safe, our homes secure, we enjoy an atmosphere of fair play and citizen's rights, and our hungry are fed.

Beth Smith, a member of the Friends of Pohick Regional Library, Beth has been personally responsible for coordinating and performing all landscape maintenance for the Pohick Regional Library since the summer of 1993. Stepping in as a volunteer, in the face of the severe cutbacks in county funding, Beth recruited a corps of volunteer labor, attracted the efforts of five Eagle Scout candidates, and inspired an entire community. The results of Beth's effort have brought prominence to the Burke-Springfield area by proclaiming to the world that our citizens care about their public facilities and are willing to maintain them, without using public funds.

John Sustar, a Knight of Columbus, John has served many years as an outstanding volunteer in Boy Scouts, youth sports, and in his church. A community leader, John has organized joint contracting for driveway and roofing repairs, and led the effort to install natural gas lines in this neighborhood. He is a former Grand Knight and is the editor of the monthly newsletter.

Mr. Speaker, I know my colleagues join me in congratulating these fine citizens on their outstanding work. It is citizens like these, scattered across America, that provide this country with our margin for excellence, in providing services to those in need, keeping our communities clean and beautiful and restoring the American dream to our young people. The Springfield Inter Service Club Council and its member organizations deserve our thanks and efforts.

IN HONOR OF WARREN FLOWERS

HON. RALPH M. HALL

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. HALL of Texas. Mr. Speaker, it is a privilege for me today to honor Warren Flowers of Gainesville, Cooke County, TX, who recently announced his retirement as publisher of the Gainesville Daily Register following 58 years of service to the newspaper. I join his many friends in Gainesville in paying tribute to his distinguished career and to the many contributions that he has made to his community.

Warren Flowers was born in Shattuck, OK, on August 3, 1922, the oldest of six children born to Charlie and Hallie Flowers. His family moved to Texas when he was 4, and 9 years later, at the age of 13, he began his career at the Register as a paperboy. He later worked in the pressroom for 10 cents a day and, by his senior year in high school, he was the city circulation manager.

A graduate of Gainesville public schools and Cooke County College, Warren met his wife, Quade Little, while in college, and they were married September 1, 1942. He joined the Army Air Corps in October of 1942 and served with Archie Bunker and others in World War II until 1946. Warren then returned to the newspaper as circulation manager, a position he held until 1976, when he took the publisher's job.

Donrey Media Group purchased the Register in 1973, which resulted in the newspaper beginning to update its printing process. Warren watched the paper progress from an 8-page flatbed printing press that printed off hotlead type to its current 24-page electronic offset printing press with heated aluminum page plates, and from manual typewriters and linotype machines to video display terminals and computerized typesetters.

Warren helped celebrate the newspaper's 50th anniversary edition in 1940 and also its 100th anniversary edition in 1990. Throughout this time he has played a role in chronicling the news events in his town and county and in promoting projects that would benefit his community.

Over the years Warren has been active in many civic organizations—as a charter member of the Gainesville Optimist Club, a charter member of Scottish Rite Valley of Fort Worth, 32nd degree, and a life member of the Texas Circulation Managers Association. He also has been active in the PTA, Commander, American Legion, Chamber of Commerce, Little League baseball, Girl Scouts and Camp Fire Girls, Cooke County College Ex-Students Association, and Gainesville Shrine Club.

Warren credits his wife, Quade, for supporting him through good times and bad for 52 years—almost as long as he worked for the Register. He also gives much credit for his successful tenure to his associates on the newspaper. In 1993 he received the Sam C. Holloway Memorial Award from the North and East Texas Press Association and also received the Golden 50 Award from the Texas Press Association in commemoration of 50 years of service to journalism.

He and Quade have three children—Janice of Wharton, Donna of Sherman, and Max of Oklahoma City, and seven grandchildren—six boys and a girl, who will occupy some of his retirement time. He also plans to do some traveling and a little fishing and hunting along the way.

More importantly, Mr. Speaker, as he begins this new phase of his life, he can look back with satisfaction on a lifetime of accomplishments in his hometown of Gainesville. His efforts on behalf of his hometown newspaper and on behalf of his community will always be appreciated. As his friend and admirer for many years, I commend his many successes, his distinguished career, and his civic contributions. I join many other friends in Gainesville and in Cooke County who wish him well.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. RANDY "DUKE" CUNNINGHAM

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably detained and missed the vote on final passage of H.R. 666, the Exclusionary Rule Reform Act. As a strong supporter of H.R. 666, had I been present, I would have voted in favor of the bill.

BEREUTER AMENDMENT TO H.R.

728

HON. DOUG BEREUTER

OF NEBRASKA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, this Member would like to express his dissatisfaction with the rule granted for consideration of H.R. 728. This rule placed a 10-hour time limit on debate on any amendments. According to the rule, preference was to be given to amendment preprinted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. Preference was also given to members of the Judiciary Committee, whether their amendments had been printed in the RECORD or not. Over 1 hour and 47 minutes were taken for votes, leaving many Members who are not members of the Judiciary Committee without an opportunity to offer their amendments. If the time for votes had not been included in the 10 hours for debate, many other Members would have been able to offer amendments.

Specifically, this Member tried throughout the day on Tuesday, February 14, to offer his amendment No. 22, which was printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on February 13. A copy of the amendment follows:

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 728, AS REPORTED,
OFFERED BY MR. BEREUTER OF NEBRASKA

"(10) the unit of local government will spend not more than 50 percent of the funds received under this title to purchase law enforcement equipment and hardware, including but not restricted to vehicles, machinery, communications equipment, and computer equipment, that assist law enforcement officials in reducing or preventing crime and improving public safety unless the Attorney General certifies that extraordinary and exigent circumstances exist that make the use of more than 50 percent of such funds for such purposes essential to the maintenance of public safety and good order in such unit of local government.

The Bereuter amendment was simple and straightforward. It would have prohibited the use of more than 50 percent of the grant for law enforcement equipment and hardware, including but not restricted to vehicles, machinery, communications equipment, and computer equipment. This amendment also had a waiver provision so that in extraordinary circumstances a local government may make a request to the Attorney General for an exemption from the 50-percent restriction.

The 50-percent restriction would be a very minimal requirement. It was not unreasonable in any way and would not have imposed a burden or hardship on local governments. It is interesting to note that a 1976 study of the LEAA grants indicates that the percentage of LEAA grants spent on equipment from 1969 to 1971 range from 39.2 to 22.2 percent. The Bereuter amendment was very generous perhaps to a fault, by limiting equipment expenditures to 50 percent.

The Bereuter amendment would have gone a long way to improve H.R. 728 by placing greater emphasis on funding for personnel and locally supported and locally effective crime programs. This amendment also provided some answer and some assurance to those concerned that there would be a decrease in the numbers of new cops on the street by ensuring that only half of the funds could be used for equipment and hardware. This restriction also provided some restraint against excesses by local governments.

The Schumer amendment accept in the Judiciary Committee would not have been affected by this amendment. The prohibition on the use of grant funds for tanks, limousines, planes, real estate, and yachts would have remained in place. Another Schumer amendment offered during Floor debate added the prohibitions on the use of funds for consultants and for vehicles not intended for police use.

The last general block grant program to fight crime was the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration block grant program in the 1970's. There were many documented cases of outright abuse and waste of taxpayers' funds. During debate on H.R. 728, many examples were given and many comparisons were made to that now defunct program. LEAA was gratefully revised in 1979, and eventually eliminated during the Reagan administration in 1982.

This Member has first-hand knowledge of some of the excesses of the LEAA grants as a result of his service on the Nebraska State Crime Commission from 1969 to 1971. While there were many criticisms of the LEAA program, the source of the most flagrant abuses of Federal funds was the use of the LEAA grants for crime fighting equipment and hardware. For example, LEAA funds were used to purchase a tank in Louisiana, an airplane for the personal use of the Governor of Indiana, a $2 million prototype that did not work, and $1.3 million fingerprint computer never used in the 7 years it was owned by the State of Illinois.

In 1979, the House and Senate prohibited the use of grant funds for the purchase of equipment or hardware, except for information and telecommunications systems and bullet proof vests. Hardware and equipment could only be purchased if the purchase or payments are incurred as a incidental and necessary part of an of improvement program or project. This allowed an exception for necessary purchases but indeed it was a very wide loophole.

This Member's amendment to H.R. 728 would have allowed local communities to use no more than 50 percent of the grant for equipment and hardware; this limitation would have precluded the use of a disproportionate share of funds for equipment and hardware.

The Bereuter amendment was necessary to assist in avoiding the mistakes made during the existence of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. We should have learned those lessons before through the LEAA experience, after millions of taxpayer dollars were wasted. We have the power to establish a new grant program that effectively fights crime, is a formula that would reduce waste and abuse. This Member believes it is most unfortunate that this Member was not allowed to offer his amendment for a vote. It would have greatly improved the block grant program created by H.R. 728 and answered numerous arguments that personnel needs like cops on the beat and local attuned prevention programs would not be ignored or downgraded.

CONGRATULATIONS TO JERREL D. SMITH ON HIS RETIREMENT

HON. RICHARD A. GEPHARDT

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to recognize the contributions and work of Jerrel D. Smith of St. Louis, MO, on the occasion of his retirement.

Jerrel Smith, vice president—Environmental, Safety, and Health for the Union Electric Co. of St. Louis, MO, retired on January 31. He will assume a new role as environmental policy consultant to the senior management of the Union Electric Co.

In his 37 years of service to Union Electric Co., Mr. Smith has played an active role in assisting Federal, State, and local legislative and regulatory entities in establishing environmental protection. During his career, he has participated in the formation and implementation of many environmental laws. Of particular note was his work with us on the Clean Air Act, which will help us achieve reductions in air pollution in a way that achieves tough new standards in a cost-effective manner. This work will save ratepayers in eastern Missouri many millions of dollars.

The 104th Congress acknowledges the many achievements of Jerrel Smith. We thank him for his continuing contributions to the development of effective national policies—and wish him best of luck in his new endeavors.

GAO REPORT—FORMER SOVIET UNION

HON. LEE H. HAMILTON

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, on February 7 the GAO issued Report GAO/NSIAD-95-10, entitled "Former Soviet Union: U.S. Bilateral Program Lacks Effective Coordination." As the report puts it:

[w]hile the Freedom Support Act gives the State Department Coordinator broad responsibility for U.S. bilateral programs with the Former Soviet Union . . . We found that, in practice, the Coordinator's role is much more limited. Other groups within the executive branch have equal or greater influence and authority over assistance to the FSU or function autonomously outside the Coordinator's purview.

A new Coordinator has now been named to replace Ambassador Simons. While his charter will be signed by the President instead of the National Security Advisor, and he will report directly to the Secretary of State instead of the Deputy Secretary, it is not clear that his legal authority has been broadened.

I believe the GAO report is evidence that the coordinator of aid to the former Soviet Union should be in the White House and should have authority over all agencies involved in assistance to the FSU. The text of the report's Results in Brief follows:

RESULTS IN BRIEF

This report points out that the coordination process has not always worked smoothly—as could be expected for an undertaking of this magnitude. Disputes have arisen between the Coordinator, USAID, and other federal agencies over the appropriateness of various projects. We have not judged the appropriateness of positions taken by various agencies in these disputes. Although the various parties agree that problems exist in the coordination process, there is no consensus as to how the coordination process should change. We are not making any recommendations in this report.

For fiscal years 1990 through 1993, 19 U.S. government agencies committed a total of $10.1 billion for bilateral grants, donations, and credit programs to the FSU. During the period, federal agencies obligated $1 billion and spent $434 million of the $1.8 billion authorized by Congress for grant programs, obligated $1.6 billion, and spent $1.22 billion for the donation program, and made $6.7 billion available for direct loans, guarantees, and insurance agreements.

The structure for coordinating and managing U.S. bilateral programs for the FSU starts with the National Security Council's Policy Steering Group chaired by the Deputy Secretary of State. This is the only place where all U.S. government policies and programs involving the FSU come together and where all agencies report. The National Security Council Directorate for Russian, Ukrainian, and Eurasian Affairs, which provides staff support to the Policy Steering Group, has itself played a coordinating role and was key in developing the U.S. package of assistance first presented at the 1993 Tokyo Economic Summit. The Policy Steering Group approved the package but has very limited involvement in grant and credit program implementation.

Pursuant to the Freedom Support Act, in May 1993, the President designated a Coordinator within the Department of State and charged him with (1) designing an overall assistance and economic cooperation strategy for the FSU; (2) ensuring program and policy coordination among agencies implementing the act; (3) pursuing coordination with other countries and international organizations with respect to assistance to the FSU; (4) ensuring proper management, implementation, and oversight by agencies responsible for assistance programs for the FSU; and (5) resolving policy and assistance program disputes among U.S. agencies participating in the assistance program. The Coordinator reports to the Deputy Secretary of State.

While the Freedom Support Act gives the State Department Coordinator broad responsibility for U.S. bilateral programs with the FSU—and calls on him to coordinate with other countries and international organizations on aid programs to the FSU—we found that, in practice, the Coordinator's role is much more limited. Other groups within the executive branch have equal or greater influence and authority over assistance to the FSU or function autonomously outside the Coordinator's purview. In addition, the Coordinator has limited or no authority to direct activities of the Cooperative Threat Reduction program or worldwide programs with the FSU components, such as those of the Export-Import Bank, the Overseas Private Investment Corporation, and Department of Agriculture, and thus has no way of ensuring that all programs for the FSU complement one another.

The only bilateral program wholly within the Coordinator's purview is the program funded by the Freedom Support Act. All agencies, even those with programs that are not under the purview of the Coordinator, generally report on their activities in the FSU to the Assistance Coordination Group, which the Coordinator chairs. However, the Group is not a decision-making body but is essentially a forum for sharing information and giving greater transparency to the program.

Although the Coordinator has issued strategy papers on assistance to and economic cooperation with the FSU and Russia, these documents focus primarily on technical assistance. They do not develop a clearly articulated strategy for achieving the overarching goals of the Freedom Support Act or for helping the countries of the FSU achieve their reform objectives. For example, the strategy papers do not discuss what role programs of the Export-Import Bank, the Overseas Private Investment Corporation, or the Department of Defense will play in achieving U.S. objectives in the FSU.

Other participants involved with U.S. assistance to the FSU have at times resisted, hindered, or overruled the Coordinator's efforts to develop a coherent and comprehensive assistance program for the FSU. These include Cabinet and other agencies, the Gore-Chernomyrdin Commission and Congress through congressional earmarks. Regardless of the merits of individual cases, the numerous efforts to work outside the coordination process dilutes the Coordinator's ability to coordinate the broad range of the bilateral program and to develop a strategy that covers the full scope of U.S. economic cooperation activities. (See apps. I and II for further information on the coordination structure and process.)

The Coordinator's role has been further complicated by the existence of serious disagreement between agencies over various aspects of the program. USAID, a primary implementing agency for Freedom Support Act programs, has been involved in numerous disputes with other government agencies over money and policy.

Agencies complained that USAID often attempted to hinder their participation in the program despite the Coordinator's instructions, would not cooperate with them, and often ignored or overlooked experience other government agencies had with the issues at hand.

USAID officials disagreed with this characterization. They said that other agencies often want to use Freedom Support Act assistance funds for purposes that are not consistent with priorities USAID believes are appropriate. USAID believes it is responsible for maintaining accountability over the program; however, USAID officials said that sometimes other agencies do not understand USAID's accountability requirements.

According to an official at the Coordinator's Office, disputes between USAID and other agencies have required the Coordinator's Office to spend an excessive amount of time dealing with high-level political battles over small amounts of money instead of spending time developing program goals and objectives. (See app. III for information on implementation problems and app. IV for the status of program obligations and expenditures.)

LOCAL GOVERNMENT LAW ENFORCEMENT BLOCK GRANTS ACT OF 1995

SPEECH OF

HON. C.W. BILL YOUNG

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, February 13, 1995

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 728) to control crime by providing law enforcement block grants.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 728, the Local Government Law Enforcement Block Grants Act. This legislation represents the final piece of the Taking Back Our Streets Act, 1 of the 10 points of the Republican Contract With America. Passage of today's bill marks the completion of this important legislation, and continues our efforts to radically rejuvenate our Nation's fight against crime.

Today's legislation replaces major portions of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994, which set up a variety of categorical grants and programs intended to ameliorate poverty and prevent crime. Instead, the present bill establishes block grants to help units of local government improve public safety. Use of the funds can include, but is not limited to, hiring, training, and equipping law enforcement officers and support personnel; enhancing school security, and establishing crime prevention programs involving law enforcement officials. The grant money must not supplant State or local funds, but unlike last years legislation, the States and local governments are not required to provide matching funds.

H.R. 728 authorizes $10 billion for law enforcement block grants over 5 years, with $2 billion to be distributed in each of fiscal year 1996 through 2000, and it specifies criteria for eligibility and distribution of the grants. In contrast to the 1994 Crime Control Act, H.R. 728 allows localities greater flexibility in responding to their own crime problems.

Mr. Speaker, statistics paint a grim picture, illustrating clearly that the United States has failed to get a handle on its growing crime problem. According to the FBI, the rate of violent crime in the United States is worse than in any other Western developed country, with a murder occurring every 21 minutes, a rape every 5 minutes, a robbery every 46 seconds, and an aggravated assault every 29 seconds. Violent crime or property crime victimizes one in four U.S. households. Every year, nearly 5 million people are victims of murder, rape, robbery, or assault, and 19 million Americans fall victim to theft, burglary, or arson. Juvenile crime increased by 60 percent between 1981 and 1990, compared to an increase of 5 percent among adults, and the number of inmates convicted of drug offenses rose 14 percent from 1983 to 1989. On all fronts, the problem has become epidemic.

This crime crisis is particularly severe among minorities and the poor. The U.S. homicide rate for black males between the ages of 15 and 24 is 283 times that of males homicide rates in 17 other nations. Homicide is now the leading cause of death for blacks aged 15 to 34. One expert has estimated that a 20-year-old black male stands a greater chance of being murdered on the streets than a soldier in World War II stood of dying in combat.

These figures are frightening, and proof positive that the current approach to battling this epidemic is a dismal failure. Last year's crime bill did little to address the fundamental crime problem in our country. Relying on expensive "Great Societiesque" programs, the bill attempted to do what all other big government social programs have failed to do; make individuals responsible for their actions and instill a sense of right and wrong in those with a propensity to commit a crime.

Mr. Speaker, the overwhelming incidence of crime occurs within State and local jurisdictions, so State and local authorities bear the primary responsibility for combating this mounting crisis. They need help and support from the Federal Government, but not mandated prevention programs. The best thing the Federal Government can do is to try to assist State and local crime-fighters without getting in their way. This legislation will go along way toward that goal and I urge its support.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, CA: SAFEST CITY U.S.A.

HON. DANA ROHRBACHER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. ROHRBACHER. Mr. Speaker, for the past several years, the great State of California has seen a series of unparalleled disasters, both natural, manmade, and economic. These have included earthquakes, floods, fires, civil unrest, and even bankruptcy. Even my own constituency in Orange County has been dramatically affected by recent floods and economic reversals. All of this has led to the impression that the State and the county's once great image of prosperity and a high quality of life has diminished.

Despite all of this, I am pleased to report that my home town of Huntington Beach was recently honored as America's "Safest City." The Morgan Quitno Publishing House of Lawrence, KS, in its book "City Crime Rankings" looked at the 100 largest cities in America and discovered that Huntington Beach was the safest place to live. It is with great pride and honor that I commend and applaud each and every citizen and employee in the city of Huntington Beach for their efforts at crime reduction. We are all aware that no one person or event could ever be singled out as a deciding factor in receiving such an award. It takes the patience and commitment of everyone within the community.

For several years, now, the city of Huntington Beach has progressed in exciting and new directions. The advent of Community Oriented Policing, downtown redevelopment, and many other progressive concepts have helped to insure a low crime rate and high quality of life.

Congratulations to Huntington Beach for your efforts! It is nice to have factual verification of what I have known all along, that the Orange County and Huntington Beach area is a great place to live and work.

The police department in Huntington Beach is obviously one of the finest in the Nation. Also important is that the community likes and supports their police and consider law enforcement every citizen's job. So the city, the police, and the people of Huntington Beach have every reason to be proud of their designation as the country's safest city.

1994 TOP 10 LIST OF INSURANCE FRAUD

HON. ROBERT W. NEY

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I commend the following top 10 list of insurance fraud to my colleagues. However, before I proceed, I would like to thank the Coalition Against Insurance Fraud for their hard work and unwavering dedication in bringing insurance fraud to the public's attention.

As a State senator and cochair of the Ohio Insurance Fraud Task Force, I was active in fighting fraud in Ohio. Insurance fraud cost American consumers more than $68 billion last year. That's more than $800 a year out of each family's pockets in higher insurance premiums.

In order to give my colleagues a better understanding of the scope and breadth of insurance fraud, I submit the following "1994 Top Ten" list of insurance fraud cases in the United States.

1994 TOP 10 LIST OF INSURANCE FRAUD

1. Stable Slaughters. Hired killers destroyed an unknown number of show horses. Owners collected on insurance policies which usually covered a horse for more than it was worth—$25,000 and up. The scheme had been going on for decades, and some top names in the horse world are alleged to be involved. Twenty-three people were indicted in Chicago in July for their roles: 17 pled guilty, three were jailed and fined, and six await trial.

2. Minus One. Dr. John Rende, a 38 year-old Florida dentist, agreed to allow two brothers, Kenneth and Robert Alberton, to cut off a finger with an axe and claim it was an accident. He collected a $1.3 million lump sum settlement through one brother's homeowner policy. He also filed under his practice's disability policy. Rende used some of the money to buy a boat he named "Minus One." Rende and the Albertons pled guilty. All are in jail and under orders to make restitution. Mary Rende, John's wife, is expected to plead guilty soon.

3. An Empire of Scams. William Loeb set up a phony labor union to sell health insurance from Empire Blue Cross/Blue Shield in 1988. When Empire terminated the insurance contract two years later, the union moved the policies to bogus insurers. More than 8,000 consumers lost $43 million in premiums on worthless policies. Total unpaid claims could be as much as $24 million. Insurers for more than 600 agents named as defendants in the case have agreed to pay out more than $8 million to settle unpaid claims. More settlements may come in March. Loeb is serving seven years in jail.

4. Coker's Coveted. Stephen D. Coker is on the run following his September indictment in Alabama on 35 fraud-related counts. He's accused of siphoning at least $30 million in premiums, passing them through a network of offshore insurers and reinsurers. Coker's accused of looting a British Virgin Islands insurer via a sham reinsurance agreement, filing false financial statements with regulators, selling policies on behalf of bogus insurance companies run by the late fraud artist Alan Teale, and reinsuring several of Teale's own sham operations, taking in at least another $4 million.

5. The Eye's on Him. Dr. Jeffrey J. Rutgard, a San Diego eye surgeon, was indicted in March on 217 counts alleging he bilked Medicare and private insurers out of millions of dollars. He allegedly performed unnecessary operations on mostly elderly patients who were often unable to give informed consent. He was paid $20.8 million over five years.

6. A Blue Bel-Aire. Arthur Blumeyer III was convicted of 27 counts of conspiracy, money laundering and fraud in February. Blumeyer was accused of using St. Louis based Bel-Aire Insurance Co. to bilk policy holders out of about $43.5 million over six years. He pocketed at least $4.9 million. Blumeyer's conviction was overturned on a technicality and he's currently in the insurance business awaiting a new trial.

7. Gypsy Truckers. Ronnie Lee Johnson of Fort Myers, Florida, pled guilty to two felonies for his role in a multi-state insurance fraud case involving the diversion of at least $7 million in premiums. The scammers obtained minimal insurance policies by misrepresenting the firms as small ones with only a handful of trucks. The operators then charged hundreds of unwary independent truckers as much as $5,000 a year to use fraudulently obtained liability insurance.

Johnson currently is serving a 46 month prison term and cooperating with a expanded investigation.

8. Senior Swindlers. Retired Floridians William and Phyllis Lenahan were convicted of conning workers' compensation and physicians' malpractice insurance for $3 million. William claimed surgery for a work-related back injury was botched, leaving him totally dependent on his wife. In an investigation initiated and paid for by the surgeon, William was videotaped dancing, among other activities. The two each were sentenced to seven year prison terms and ordered in June to pay $1.6 million in restitution.

9. Chiropractic Couple. A Boston chiropractor, Dr. Alan Rosenthal, and his wife, Caterina, were charged with 36 counts as part of a scheme worth an estimated $2 million. They allegedly made false or inflated claims, subjected clients to unnecessary tests, required a minimum number of visits, and engaged in other conduct. Dr. Rosenthal and his wife's trial is scheduled for February 13 in federal court.

10. The Atlanta 57 and Counting. Georgia officials in September arrested 57 people in two counties on 258 counts of insurance fraud. Included in the arrests were two "major runners" (those who refer patients in staged accidents) and a chiropractor. At least 150 false or inflated claims were filed with 15 insurers and costs more than $1 million. Officials are continuing the investigation and more arrests are expected.

COMMEMORATION OF THE 97TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE DESTRUCTION OF THE BATTLESHIP U.S.S. "MAINE" AND RECOGNITION OF THE CREATION OF THE U.S.S. BATTLESHIP "MAINE" CENTENNIAL COMMISSION IN KEY WEST, FL

HON. PETER DEUTSCH

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. DEUTSCH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask that my colleagues in the House join me in commemorating the 97th anniversary of the destruction of the battleship U.S.S. Maine in Havana Harbor, Cuba, on this day, February 15, 1898.

Today in the city of Key West, FL, a prominent group of citizens has gathered to announce the formation of the U.S.S. Battleship Maine Centennial Commission. They are meeting at the historic Key West Custom House where on the second floor a naval court of inquiry convened by President William McKinley met to hear testimony from all the survivors, officers and crew, of the U.S.S. Maine, on several occasions in March 1898.

The centennial commission, under the sponsorship of the Key West Art & Historical Society, and Richard Warren, chairman, City Commissioner Joseph Pais, vice chair, and Radm. Ret. Nick Gee, vice chair, wish to call to the attention of all Americans the importance of commemorating the 100th anniversary of this tragic event that destroyed the proud battleship, that killed 260 crew and officers out of 350, and that propelled this great Nation into a war with Spain to the cry of "Remember the Maine." This war, the Spanish-American War, that "splendid little war," would lead to the freedom of the Philippines, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the island of Cuba.

Today in Key West, this group of citizens prepares to honor the men of the Maine who died without the ability to defend themselves in Havana Harbor on February 15, 1898. They will honor that great steel battleship that had celebrated Christmas of 1897 in Key West Harbor and been ready to sail forth to Cuba on January 24, 1898, to assist, if necessary, Americans in the city on Havana, Cuba. These citizens will proudly remember the Maine and all of the great naval vessels that have visited the port of Key West and the near waters. Today they will recall the great Cuban patriots that gathered in Key West throughout the 1890's in the long struggle to cast off the yoke of Spanish tyranny that had laid waste to Cuba. Key West will remember those days in which journalists, war correspondents, Members of Congress, and military leaders strode to the dusty streets following the story that war always unfolds. These were people like Frederic Remington, Robley D. Evans, Stephen Crane, Randolph Hearst, Richard Harding Davis, Admirals Sampson and Schley, and Clara Barton of the Red Cross.

Presidents Bill Clinton and Jimmy Carter have, thus far, joined me as honorary members of the U.S.S. Maine Centennial Commission. During the next several months the commission will be seeking members from throughout the United States, the great State of Florida, and that little bit of paradise called Key West. I call on all of us here assembled to join Key West and the centennial commission in recognizing their proud efforts. And, together, let us all remember that battleship U.S.S. Maine and her crew.

FACTS CONGRESS SHOULD NOT IGNORE

HON. ANDREW JACOBS, JR.

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, when the Congress acts on factual information, it usually does a pretty good job.

Here are some facts which Congress would be ill-advised to ignore.

CHARITIES CANNOT FILL THE GAP THAT SUBSTANTIAL CUTS IN FEDERAL FUNDING OF SOCIAL PROGRAMS WOULD CREATE

We, the 116 undersigned organizations, urge you to consider the following facts carefully and fully before taking any actions that would make charitable organizations responsible for filling the gap that substantial cuts in federal funding of social programs would inevitably cause.

Independent Sector is a national coalition founded 15 years ago, comprised of over 800 voluntary organizations, foundations, and corporate-giving offices with national interest and impact in philanthropy and voluntary action.

We are deeply concerned about suggestions, originating in Congress, that charities fund a substantial share of some of the social programs now financed by the Federal government.

While we would welcome additional tax incentives to stimulate private giving, the increase in gifts they would generate—even by the rosier projections—would do precious little to offset huge cuts being suggested in the funding of social programs.

SPENDING BY CHARITIES ON SOCIAL PROGRAMS IS ONLY A FRACTION OF GOVERNMENT SPENDING

Government spending on social welfare programs at the federal, state, and local levels totals about $950 billion a year. Charities as a whole—excluding only churches—spend approximately three-eighths the sum of government outlays: about $360 billion.

Since the 1960s, charities and government agencies have often worked as partners in addressing critical social needs. In fact, charities receive roughly 30 percent of their revenues—about $105 billion—from government sources.

If governments were suddenly to stop their funding of social programs through nonprofit charities, the $105 billion cutback would amount to less than one-eighth of total government spending of $950 billion. But if the charities as a result were forced to cut their budgets by $105 billion, it would amount to a drastic nearly one-third reduction in their spending.

Alongside the 30 percent of total revenues that charities receive from government, they receive only 22 percent—about $80 billion—from private contributions. To offset the loss of all their government funding, the charities would have to increase private gifts to 230 percent of present levels. To offset the loss of half their government funding—$52 billion—they would have to increase giving to 165 percent of present levels.

Assuming that government agencies slashed their budgets for direct funding of social programs as well as their $105 billion of indirect funding through charities, the charities would be further burdened in trying to aid former recipients of those direct government services.

CHARITIES WILL NOT BE ABLE TO REPLACE LOST FEDERAL REVENUE AND MEET NEW NEEDS

As for increasing private giving through tax incentives, one major proposal—to restore the charitable deduction for non-itemizing taxpayers—is expected to increase individuals giving by only about $3 billion a year, or less than 5 percent.

Recent trends in charitable giving offer little basis for optimism. Government reports tell us that individual giving from 1963 to 1993 rose an average 2.4 percent, or $2.6 billion, a year after inflation. But between 1988 and 1993 the average annual increase was only 1.2 percent. Including contributions by foundations and corporations and individual bequests as well as gifts of living individuals, the average increase between 1988 and 1993 was still only 1.2 percent.

While the percentage of American households giving to charity has remained steady over the years at close to 75 percent, average household contributions dropped between 1989 and 1993 by a disturbing 23 percent after inflation. Likely reasons were worries about the national economy and personal financial security.

Private foundations, which mostly make grants from their endowment incomes, provide about $10 billion a year to charitable purposes—a relatively small portion of total charity revenues. Moreover, foundations tend to use grants as risk capital to underwrite innovations rather than for general operating purposes. Many must limit their funding to special types of projects.

HIGHER FEES AND DUES WILL PUT CHARITABLE SERVICES BEYOND THE REACH OF THOSE THEY ARE SUPPOSED TO SERVE

Charities receive about 40 percent of their revenues—double what they get from private giving and one-third more than they get from government—through dues, fees, and other charges. Relentlessly rising costs and dwindling government revenues have forced many charities to charge more for services, or start charging for formerly free services.

Charities cannot increase their charges above certain levels, however, without putting their services beyond reach of the very people whose needs they serve. Moreover, in some sectors at least, efforts to begin or expand the sale of related goods and services may encounter complaints from for-profit suppliers claiming unfair competition.

IN SUMMARY

Certainly, charities and their donors will do whatever they possibly can to increase gift revenues and services to compensate for reduced government spending.

But we can only do so much. We cannot begin to do it all.

These are facts of life. We, the undersigned organizations, urge you to take these facts carefully and fully into account in your deliberations, decisions, and votes.

TRIBUTE TO THE LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

HON. JOHN D. DINGELL

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to rise today in recognition of the 75th anniversary of one of this Nation's most unique and venerable political institutions—the League of Women Voters. Founded in 1920, 6 months prior to passage of the 19th amendment, the League of Women Voters is dedicated to furthering the active and informed participation by citizens in the democratic process.

Today, the League of Women Voters boasts more than 1,100 chapters and 150,000 members, men and women. The hallmark of this nonpartisan organization, which does not support political parties or their candidates, is its grassroots approach to action. Official policy positions advocated by the league are based upon the collective ideas and opinions of its members. In addition, individual chapters consistently put forward innovative community-based strategies to encourage citizen participation at the local level.

As we look back on many of the most important legislative accomplishments of the past 75 years, it is clear that the involvement of the League of Women Voters has had a lasting impact. Individuals such as Eleanor Roosevelt, who was a very active member of the New York League, have fought on countless occasions for the enactment of measures to improve working conditions for the American worker; ensure that our children are well fed and properly educated; guarantee equal rights for all; strengthen our health care system; and protect our environment for this and future generations.

I am pleased to join with my colleagues in honoring this exceptional organization committed to responsible citizenship. By encouraging the enlightened debate of vital national, State, and local issues, the League of Women Voters has contributed greatly to the representative system of government envisioned by our Founding Fathers.

THE ENERGY EFFICIENCY AND CONSERVATION ACT OF 1995

HON. JIM McDERMOTT

OF WASHINGTON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. McDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing the Energy Efficiency and Conservation Act of 1995. This is the same legislation that I introduced in the 103d Congress as H.R. 784.

Energy experts across the Nation recognize conservation as the most environmentally responsible and cost-effective source of energy available today. Under the direction of the Northwest Power Planning Council, the States of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, and Montana are committed to achieving 1,500 megawatts of energy conservation over the next decade. This effort will save enough energy to meet the electricity demands of a city half again as large as Seattle.

This legislation will overturn the Internal Revenue Service practice that discourages private utilities from pursuing the kind of effective conservation programs that are vital to the Nation's energy future. Longstanding IRS policy has allowed electric and gas utilities to deduct from their tax liabilities the costs of their energy conservation programs in the year incurred. However, the Service has begun to pressure private utilities to spread these deductions over a period of several years. The Puget Sound Power & Light Co. estimates that this could reduce its annual conservation expenditures by up to 10 percent. That amount is equivalent to the loss of electricity conserved when 4,500 homes participate in the company's residential weatherization program.

I want to emphasize that this legislation is nothing more than an affirmation of longstanding tax policy, and a rejection of the Service's recent attempts to modify it. Utilities have deducted conservation expenditures in the current year since the beginning of these programs in the 1960's. As recently as 1991, the IRS acknowledged in a technical memorandum that conservation expenditures are, in fact, allowable as a current deduction.

Investor owned utilities are the key to the success of conservation programs across the country. Of the 1,500 megawatts of energy savings the Pacific Northwest has committed to achieve in this decade, over half of that will come from private utilities. I am committed to supporting these companies in this important effort, and this legislation is a vital first step.

CONTRIBUTIONS IN AID OF CONSTRUCTION

HON. NANCY L. JOHNSON

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing revenue neutral legislation to reinstate the exclusion from gross income of Contributions In Aid of Construction—known as CIAC—to a water or wastewater utility. Joining me as original co-sponsors are Representatives ROBERT MATSUI, RICHARD NEAL, ANDY JACOBS, and WILLIAM JEFFERSON.

Utilities are capital intensive industries. Historically, they have received the capital for the construction of a utility extension directly from new customers—typically through the developer or small municipality. The customer contributes this property, or a cash equivalent, equaling the cost of the extension to the utility. In this manner, existing customers will not face rate increases every time the utility gains new customers.

Prior to enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, CIAC were not included in the gross income of an investor-owned utility and therefore were not subject to Federal income tax. On the other hand, utilities could not take tax depreciation or investment tax credits on CIAC.

The 1986 act repealed Internal Revenue Code section 118(b) and thus forced utilities to include CIAC in gross income and pay Federal income tax on them. Removing the exclusion from gross income of CIAC was intended as a tax on utilities. In practice and by regulation in most States, the CIAC tax is not a tax on utilities, but a tax on utility customers, primarily developers, home buyers, small municipalities, and even the Federal Government.

State utility regulatory bodies, referred to as PUC's, generally require utilities to pass tax costs onto their customers. This is done in one of two ways. The most common approach is to require the new customer to pay the cost of the tax, plus the tax on the tax known as the gross-up. Depending on the State, a gross-up can add as much as 70 percent to a customer's cost of the contribution. Alternatively, the PUC's may allow the utility to recover the tax cost over a period of time from the new rate base.

Whichever method is chosen, utilities do not pay the tax, they pass it on. But passing the tax on has detrimental effects, not only on the utility's ability to bring in new business, but on the environment and—most significantly—on the price of new housing.

A developer ultimately will pass the cost of the CIAC and the gross-up on to the new home buyer. The National Association of Home Builders has estimated that the CIAC tax can increase the cost of new housing by as much as $2,000 per unit. This additional cost is enough to end the dream of homeownership for a young couple.

The CIAC tax also has some important environmental effects. New customers can avoid paying the CIAC tax by building their own independent water systems. This leads to a proliferation of systems that may not have the financial, technical, or managerial ability to comply with the rigorous requirements of the Safe Drinking Water Act. Such systems are referred to as nonviable. According to the EPA, in fiscal year 1990, over 90 percent of the violations of Safe Drinking Water Act were made by systems serving fewer than 3,300 individuals. By encouraging the proliferation of nonviable systems, the CIAC tax frustrates the environmental policy goal of consolidating these systems into exiting, professionally managed systems.

Mr. Speaker, repeal of the tax on CIAC for water and wastewater utilities will have a noticeable effect on both housing prices and environmental policy. It is supported by the National Association of Water Companies, the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners, and the National Association of Home Builders. I urge my colleagues to co-sponsor this important legislation.

50TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BATTLE OF IWO JIMA

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I want to take this opportunity to call to the attention of my colleagues the upcoming 50th Anniversary of the Battle of Iwo Jima.

Fifty years ago this month, our American Marines from the Third, Fourth, and Fifth United States Marine Divisions courageously battled in a struggle which lasted 30 days, to capture the Japanese occupied island of Iwo Jima. With over 25,000 American casualties, including over 6,000 killed, the Battle of Iwo Jima was one of the bloodiest battles in all of American history. This Pacific island later provided bases for fighter support for raids over Japan, as well as an emergency landing field for damaged aircraft. It was planned that Iwo Jima would be used as a major launching facility for the Allied invasion of Japan. The invasion, of course, never took place because the atomic bomb brought about a rapid surrender of Japan prior to any invasion being necessary.

However, I can attest from my own personal experience that the capture of Iwo Jima, although extremely dear, resulted in the saving of countless American lives and hastened the end of the war.

Joe Rosenthal's Pulitzer Prize winning photograph of five men raising the American flag on Suribachi summarizes the spirit of the battle. Some authorities believe that this is the most duplicated photograph in all of history. In the classic words of Fleet Admiral Chester Nimitz: "Uncommon Valor Was a Common Virtue".

As a World War II staff sergeant stationed at Guam, I flew many missions over Tokyo. On several of these missions our aircraft was hit by enemy fire. We were forced on several occasions to make emergency landings, and were extremely grateful that the base on Iwo Jima was available to use. If these courageous Marines had not captured this island from Japan, myself and thousands of other American Marines would not have survived.

The capture of Iwo Jima made it possible for the United States to successfully protect bombers flying from Saipan, Tinian, Guam and other points to Japan. The airfields at Iwo Jima provided an important emergency landing field for 2,251 damaged Superforts carrying 24,761 crewmen. Thousands of American veterans, including myself, owe our lives to those who courageously captured the island of Iwo Jima.

Few battles in our history have captured the imagination of the public as has Iwo Jima. Immortalized in movies, novels, and other productions, all Americans are well aware that the name of Iwo Jima is emblazoned forever in the pantheon of glory. Unfortunately, few Americans are aware of why the courage of the Iwo Jima heroes was so significant to all of us.

It is in the spirit of gratitude and patriotism, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to call to the at-ention of my colleagues a Reunion of Honor for the 50th Anniversary of Iwo Jima. The reunion will take place March 10–16, 1995. The surviving veterans of Iwo Jima, among the greatest heroes in our history, will be returning to Iwo Jima, Guam, and Saipan.

Mr. Speaker, this is an appropriate time to salute the brave dedicated men who fought in the Battle of Iwo Jima.

OPEN FOREIGN CAPITAL MARKETS
TO U.S. AIRLINES

HON. WILLIAM F. CLINGER, JR.

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, during the three previous Congresses I served as the ranking member of the Aviation Subcommittee. While in that role it became very clear to me that U.S. carriers had tremendous difficulty raising capital to sustain their operations as well as meeting the high cost of acquiring expensive new equipment. Over the past 5 years the commercial air carrier industry has lost $12.5 billion. That number far exceeds all profits earned by the industry since the Wright Brothers first flew.

High taxes, fare wars, burdensome regulations have all taken their toll. A lingering aftereffect of this bloodletting has been an inability on the part of most carriers to attract new capital. One of the biggest problems now facing the airlines is the dearth of available capital. This is a capital intensive industry. One step we can take to help assure their future is to address this capital crisis.

Under current law, foreign investors cannot hold more than a 25 percent stake in the voting stock of a U.S. carrier. The bill I am introducing today would be more favorable to foreign investment while retaining enough discretion with the Secretary of Transportation so that deals that were clearly not in the public interest could still be blocked.

Under my bill, foreign investments below the current 25 percent threshold could continue as before without restriction. Investments above 25 percent would be permitted as long as: first, the key officers and two-thirds of the airline's board of directors would still be U.S. citizens; second, U.S. citizens would still control at least 51 percent of the airline's stock; and third, the Secretary found that the investment would be in the public interest.

The first two requirements are objective standards that should be easy to apply in specific cases and would give some assurance of continued U.S. control. The third requirement, the public interest test, is intended to give continued discretion to the DOT Secretary.

In applying the public interest test, the Secretary is directed to consider seven factors. No one factor is meant to be an absolute bar to the transaction. Rather, the Secretary is to give the proper weight to each factor in each individual case in deciding whether the deal should be consummated.

Under the bill, the Secretary would be expected to look favorably upon an investment that would help a weak carrier survive and effectively compete, that would help preserve U.S. jobs, or that would enhance domestic or international competition.

In addition, the Secretary would consider whether the foreign country would allow a similar investment in one of its airlines. If so, that would be a plus. On the other hand, if the foreign investor was controlled or subsidized by a foreign government, that would be a minus as it could tend to distort competition.

Another factor the Secretary must consider is the issue of foreign control. I share the desire of many of my colleagues to prevent our airlines from falling under the control of foreign nationals. But I am also mindful that a recent GAO report indicated that continuing the current control restrictions would discourage foreign investment and limit the benefits that might otherwise be achieved by this legislation. The issue of foreign control would be one factor among the others mentioned for the Secretary to consider.

The final factor for DOT to consider would be whether the foreign investor's home country has a procompetitive bilateral with the United States. While this is clearly important, it should not be the controlling factor as it seems to have been in recent transactions. Proponents of open skies should keep in mind that more liberal foreign investment rules may be the best way to achieve their goal. Only when the nationality lines of carriers are blurred so that it is not clear which nation is benefiting from a negotiation will some of the protectionist countries be willing to remove their aviation trade barriers and allow free competition on international routes.

In evaluating these factors, the bill gives the Secretary 90 days. A time limit is important so that investors do not have to deal with the uncertainties of Government approved for an unreasonable length of time.

The issue of national security has also been raised with respect to foreign investment. Clearly we do not want an enemy of the United States taking control of one of our airlines. Moreover, our experience with Operation Desert Shield and Desert Storm demonstrated that U.S. carriers play an important role by ferrying troops and supplies to a war zone under the Civil Reserve Air Fleet (CRAF) program. It is important that the viability of this program be preserved.

My bill would address the national security issue by giving the President 30 days to review a DOT-approved foreign investment. The President could disapprove an investment only on national security grounds such as a transaction that would undermine the CRAF program. Limiting the President's authority in this way is similar to his role in the awarding of international routes under section 801 of the Federal Aviation Act. This portion of my bill is patterned after that provision.

Mr. Speaker, I am aware that there are airlines who would like to close the door on foreign investment. Some have already themselves taken advantage of that source of capital and would now deny it to others. Others can still access the U.S. capital markets and would probably be just as happy to see their competitors wither and die.

But I believe they are being short-sighted. The airline industry is becoming increasingly global. I do not think an arbitrary 25 percent limit on foreign investment in U.S. carriers any longer makes sense in a worldwide economy where capital flows freely across borders.

Moreover, it should be noted that foreign investment is nothing new in the airline industry. Several foreign airlines now have substantial financial stakes in U.S. airlines. In addition, there are foreign banks, leasing companies, and other entities that hold debt obligations or other financial interests in our airlines. In some cases, these interests may be substantial. So we have already crossed the bridge on the foreign investment issue. Now it is time to raise the artificial limit on foreign investments in U.S. airline voting stock so that capital can more freely flow to U.S. airlines.

Accordingly, I am pleased to introduce this bill that would allow foreign investment in airlines up to 49 percent. Perhaps some day we can go further. For now I invite my colleagues to join me in supporting this measure.

INTRODUCTION OF THE CLEAN WATER AMENDMENTS OF 1995

HON. BUD SHUSTER

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, with several of my colleagues, I introduce the Clean Water Amendments of 1995.

The bill is based on last year's draft legislation known as the bipartisan alternative. As many of you know, a large coalition of Members of the Public Works and Transportation Committee developed this alternative in response to other Clean Water Act proposals that were either unnecessary or unnecessarily prescriptive. We worked closely with State and local officials and the regulated community to develop the alternative bill.

Original cosponsors of today's bill include some of the key supporters of the bipartisan alternative. We envision adding many more cosponsors after the bill's introduction and after our series of hearings with the Water Resources and Environment Subcommittee of the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee.

Let me emphasize the legislation to be introduced today is only a starting point. It does not represent extensive negotiation among or input from all the key interests to reflect new developments or positions since circulation of the bipartisan alternative last year. Nor is it meant to frame the debate in such a way as to prevent other issues or initiatives from arising. Instead, its purpose is merely to start the debate and to focus testimony and input from Members and interests over the coming weeks.

For example, we anticipate significant revisions to the bill's provisions on unfunded mandates, risk assessment, and cost benefit analysis. We developed these provisions before circulation of the Contract With America, H.R. 5, and other proposals pending in Congress. We will certainly want to revisit some of these issues to reflect more current thinking.

We also anticipate significant revisions to last year's provisions on nonpoint source pollution and stormwater. In fact, Mr. Speaker, some of the provisions could be viewed as unfunded or unfunded mandates. We plan to review more comprehensive proposals to overhaul the programs, remove redtape and unnecessary requirements, and increase flexibility for State and local governments.

With regard to wetlands, we have followed the same approach as in last year's bipartisan alternative: Include as a separate title provisions from H.R. 1330, the Comprehensive Wetlands Conservation and Management Act.

This, too, is not meant as the final, consensus approach. We anticipate debate over various alternative approaches and revisions. However, we do not expect meaningful debate over the bill's underlying premise: The current section 404 wetlands program is broken and needs to be fixed.

We also anticipate new proposals and initiatives in other areas. For example, we want to maximize flexibility for State and local governments, minimize Federal redtape and command-and-control regulations, and pursue market-based and risk-based approaches to efficient and effective water quality measures. Innovative technologies and pollution prevention efforts, as well as nonregulatory approaches to watershed planning and protection, also offer great promise.

In the area of funding, we expect various proposals and revisions. We all know the value of clean water and the public and private costs in not having it. We also know the Federal Government has an important role in providing and maintaining this Nation's clean and safe drinking water infrastructure. What we don't know at this point is how best to meet those needs when Federal fiscal constraints are greater than ever before. We hope today's bill will serve as a starting point to identify answers in the end.

I urge my colleagues to cosponsor this legislation and to become actively involved in the debate. Congress needs to renew and reform the Clean Water Act this year. The Clean Water Amendments of 1995 will get us started. Let me reiterate again, however, that we are not embracing any particular provisions in the bill. We are simply using today's bill as a starting point. All reasonable suggestions and revisions, both large and small, are on the table for consideration.

INTRODUCTION OF HOME OFFICE DEDUCTION LEGISLATION

HON. NANCY L. JOHNSON

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, today, I am introducing legislation to restore the home office deduction for taxpayers who work out of their homes. I am pleased to note that this measure is included in the Republican Contract With America and, additionally, has been introduced in the other body of Senator ORRIN HATCH—S. 327.

This legislation is made necessary by a 1993 Supreme Court decision, Commissioner v. Soliman (113 S.Ct. 701), that greatly reduced the availability of the deduction. Previously, home office expenses were deductible if the space in the home was devoted to the "sole and exclusive use" of the office; the taxpayer used no other office of business; and, the business generated enough income to cover the deduction. The Court, in effect, added two additional conditions: the customers of the home-based business must physically visit the home office, and the business revenue must be produced within the home office itself.

Clearly, these requirements are excessive and prior law must be reinstated and clarified.

I believe today's bill helps achieve that goal and I look forward to prompt approval of this measure in the Committee on Ways and Means.

150 YEARS OF PUBLIC SERVICE

HON. MICHAEL P. FORBES

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, this Saturday, February 18, 1995 marks the 150th Annual Greenport Fire Department Celebration. Eastern Long Island is proud of the many years of dedicated service by the 190 volunteers of the Greenport Fire Department, and it is an honor to tell my colleagues in the House about their big day on Saturday. These volunteers are the essence of good citizenship, ready with a helping hand no matter how large the task. Organized in 1845, the department was formed after incorporation of the Village of Greenport and it represents all that is good about Greenport. Today, it is always on call for fires and local disasters. Since the village of Greenport is a waterfront community, the men and women of the department are also well skilled at emergency evacuation. Their selfless work as volunteers has been the backbone of the entire community. The department has held an annual celebration for 150 years, and it includes the inspection of members and equipment, parade, tournament, and firemen's ball.

I take this opportunity to salute the wonderful volunteers of the Greenport Fire Department and extend the respect of the whole community.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR ROBERT PRESLEY 36TH SENATORIAL DISTRICT—RIVERSIDE, CA

HON. KEN CALVERT

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. CALVERT. Mr. Speaker, I take to the floor of the House today to praise a great legislator, a lifelong public servant, a combat veteran, and a personal friend. It may come as a surprise to those listening here in Washington, DC, but I am talking about one man—Senator Robert Presley of Riverside, CA.

Senator Presley represented the 36th State senatorial district of the great State of California. He was first elected to the senate in 1974. To give an idea of the span of his career, I note that I have staff in my office who were just learning to walk then, a first-class stamp cost about 15 cents, and the State budget was at the incredible level of $20 billion.

Having graduated from the FBI Academy, Senator Presley went on to a successful career in law enforcement. He maintained that interest in protecting and serving the public in the senate by concentrating on anticrime legislation, prison construction, and child-protective services. Though that is not all, Mr. Speaker. Bob authored major legislation on clean air, wildlife conservation, toxic-materials control, education reform, attorney discipline, parks and recreation, and domestic violence.

Known as one of the hardest-working legislators, Senator Presley's committee service was comprehensive. He was chairman of the senate appropriations committee and the senate select committee on children and youth. He served on and was chairman of the senate natural resources and wildlife committee. He sat on the judiciary local government and agriculture and water resources committees. He also headed the joint committee on prison construction and operations. Not only did Bob work hard, he worked openly and fairly with all, regardless of party affiliation. He was, and is, interested in the improvement of California as his first, second and third priorities.

Knowing that the wellspring of leadership is found in the local community, Bob is a member of the Riverside Lions, Elks and Moose lodges, American Legion, Air Force Association, and VFW.

Mr. Speaker, people here in Washington will often be introduced as the member from the "great State of California." Yet, who is it that makes California great? Who is it that makes our State that wonderful place in which we want to raise our families, grow our businesses, build our dreams.

It is citizen leaders like Bob Presley who consistently listen and learn, and then lead our communities to reach their full potential. It is the personal friend who without regard to mere party, will gladly and fruitfully guide younger politicians and community leaders. It is the decorated combat veteran who returns victorious, only to dedicate himself to keeping the peace at home. It is the enlightened legislator who serves his fellow citizens for two decades in the senate. It is Senator Robert Presley, a true original who is worthy of the sincerest form of flattery—imitation. Fortunately, we will still enjoy the expertise and concern of Senator Presley. He is now affiliated with our wonderful University of California, Riverside. We all look forward to working with Bob in this next chapter of his public service.

Thank you Bob for all you've done and the example you've set. All of your neighbors and fellow citizens owe you more than we can say.

VOICE OF AMERICA ANNIVERSARY

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, on February 24th the Voice of America begins its 54th year on the world's airwaves. From its first broadcast in 1942—begun with the words "The news may be good; the news may be bad. We shall tell you the truth—through to today, VOA has been a beacon of hope and constant source of reliable information to people around the world.

The past year was no exception. From Rwanda to Haiti, Bosnia to Chechnya, Washington Beijing, and from Northridge to Kobe, the Voice of America was there providing a uniquely American perspective in 47 languages. The year also saw the important new connection of VOA and the Internet.

VOA is still needed as democratization unevenly proceeds in several countries. The world is smaller than ever for those on the information superhighway. While CNN reaches some parts of the world, it does not reach VOA listeners—in places such as Chechnya, Rwanda, Iraq, Iran, Tibet, Nigeria, China, Burma, and North Korea—who don't understand English, have no access to cable or satellite TV, the Internet or fax machines, or for whom democracy remains only a dream.

VOA reaches these people every day, some 100 million each week, in their homes and in their languages. As they have since 1942, these listeners tune in for news of the United States, clear explanations of its policies and information about their own countries. VOA broadcasts are valuable proponents of our democratic values reaching people with the story of America and our own struggle for democracy. These broadcasts are a way to try to promote peaceful solutions through information and bridging of cultures.

Listeners have told VOA that they want practical "how to" advice on grass roots democracy, the free market economy, and the protection of human rights as they nurture their own fledgling democracies. VOA has responded. These are staples of its programming, along with science and health, agriculture, American society and culture, and the enormously popular English teaching programs. And VOA is a promoter of free enterprise, free trade and tourism, in the United States. It reports every day about American products and services.

In an era of turbulence, where the world is torn by ethnic and religious and nationalistic hatred, there is a need for an honest and credible voice of sanity and reason.

At our best that can be our voice. At our best that is the voice of America. I salute the Voice of America as it begins year 54.

CONGRATULATIONS NICHOLE HOLMES, MISS USA SECOND RUNNER-UP

HON. GLENN POSHARD

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. POSHARD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Nichole Lynn Holmes of Marion, Illinois. Nichole was named second runner-up in the 1995 Miss USA Pageant which was held in South Padre Island, Texas. One of twelve finalists, Nichole was selected by a panel of celebrity judges from the fields of acting, athletics and psychology. The judges saw what people in Marion have known for years: Nichole is a talented young woman from whom we will hear great things in the future.

Nichole is a graduate of Marion High School, John A. Logan College, and presently attends Southern Illinois University at Carbondale. The people of southern Illinois are proud to have one of the area's best and brightest represent the entire state in this prestigious event. Since being crowned Miss Illinois USA on November 27, 1994, she has been busy fulfilling the duties of her position and preparing for the 1995 Miss USA pageant. Obviously the long hours of preparation and dedication to achieving her goals have paid off for Nichole and her family. She has accomplished this with the continued love and support of her parents, Lynn and Mikie Holmes, who are understandably proud of with Nichole's achievements.

I am honored to represent the Holmes family in Congress and congratulate them for achieving this recognition.

TRIBUTE TO LAUREN A.
HOROWITZ

HON. ANNA G. ESHOO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to an outstanding young woman and a prized constituent, Lauren Horowitz.

Lauren is a student at La Entrada School and recently played the lead role of Diana in the production of "Anne of Green Gables."

This outstanding performance was put on by the California Theatre Center in Sunnyvale—the only child-centered theater program in the region—and exemplifies the very best of what the arts have to offer our young people. Lauren was inspired to pursue her interest in acting by her teachers. Several little girls attending the play were inspired, in turn, by Lauren's ability to bring the role of Diana to life and asked for her autograph—the highest form of appreciation for any artist. By showing succeeding generations of young Americans a productive way to use their talents, energy, and self-discipline, the arts have proven to be a valuable asset for our children, our community, California, and our country.

Mr. Speaker, Lauren Horowitz is a young woman with a bright future ahead of her in whatever profession she may choose. I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating her for her winning performance and showing all of us the true value of the arts.

DAVIS-BACON ACT REFORM

HON. WILLIAM (BILL) CLAY

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, today I am reintroducing legislation to reform the Davis-Bacon Act. The bill I am introducing is identical to legislation reported by the Committee on Education and Labor in the 103d Congress.

When Government enters the construction industry through federally funded contracts, its monopoly risks skewing this unique market unfairly. Construction wages vary greatly across the country, reflecting differences in communities' cost of living and business environments. The uncertain nature of construction work, however, where employees move constantly from job to job and employer to employer and regularly face periods of unemployment, makes the industry more susceptible to cutthroat business practices than most. The Davis-Bacon Act was enacted in 1931 by a Republican Congress in order to correct a procurement system that otherwise disrupted local employment practices and encouraged the exploitation of workers.

By law, the Federal Government awards contracts on the basis of the lowest qualified bid. Absent the protection of prevailing wage statutes, such as the Davis-Bacon Act and the Service Contract Act, the requirement that contracts be awarded on a low-bid basis, particularly in labor intensive economic sectors such as the construction industry, would inevitably result in contracts being awarded to the contractor bidding the lowest wages. In effect, Government procurement policy would act to undermine locally prevailing labor standards and reward those employers who pay the least to their employees. The Davis-Bacon Act serves the vital function of ensuring that Federal procurement policy does not act to drive down the wages of working Americans.

Opponents of the Davis-Bacon Act have created a number of inaccurate and misleading myths about the law. The most outrageous myth is that minority workers will somehow benefit from repeal. Our colleague from Texas, Mr. DELAY, has contended that repeal of the Davis-Bacon Act will "reduce discrimination against women and minorities that so often occurs within the construction industry." George Will has purported similar nonsense in his column. Mr. Will begins this fabrication by misrepresenting the circumstances that led to enactment of the Davis-Bacon Act, contending the law was enacted "to impede blacks competing for federally funded construction jobs." In fact, the law was supported by and enacted to protect contractors from the exploitative and predatory practices that were driving legitimate contractors out of the Federal construction market. Mr. Will goes on to claim that the law has a "disparate impact disadvantageous to minorities." The plain and simple truth is that the disadvantage under which minorities typically suffer is not that they are paid the prevailing wage, the same money for the same work that most workers receive, but that historically and continually they have been paid less. Implicit in both Mr. Will's and Mr. DELAY'S assumptions are that minority workers are not as productive and therefore not worth the same wages as white, male workers.

The second myth that opponents of the law have perpetuated is that the law requires union wages or somehow protects unions. In fact, the law requires employers to pay the same wages that are found to be prevailing in the local area. A union wage prevails only if most workers in the area are union employees. Seventy-one percent of all wage-based determinations issued by the Department of Labor in 1994 were based on nonunion scales.

The final falsehood being perpetuated by opponents of the Davis-Bacon Act is that repeal is sound Government fiscal policy. As leading construction industry economists have recognized, however, there is a direct correlation between wage levels and productivity. Well-trained workers produce more value per hour than poorly trained workers, low wage workers. Economic studies have demonstrated that construction projects built by under-trained and under-paid workers cost more to build than those using trained workers. Recent studies clearly illustrate the impact that repeal of the Davis-Bacon Act will produce. When Utah's prevailing wage law was repealed, there was a decrease in apprenticeship training, the availability of skilled workers, and a decline in average construction wages. More importantly, lowering the standard of living of American workers by cutting their wages and fringe benefits will not translate to lower costs for any government, be it Federal, State or local.

The legislation I am introducing strikes a balance between two important goals. While retaining the protection the law affords to ensure that the Government policy does not undermine the living standards of our citizens, it also updates and modernizes several provisions of the Davis-Bacon Act, including limiting some of its reporting requirements and raising the coverage threshold. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation.

RECOGNITION OF THE 75TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

HON. THOMAS M. BARRETT

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. BARRETT of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I am honored today to commemorate the 75th anniversary of the League of Women Voters and to express my pride and appreciation for the organization's work. The league was founded in 1919 by Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the American Women's Suffrage Association, at the organization's final convention.

The league's history actually began in 1948 at Seneca Falls, NY, the site of the first women's rights convention and the beginning of the struggle for women to obtain the right to vote.

As president of the Women's Suffrage Association, Carrie Chapman Catt led the final fight for the 19th amendment. Her brilliant strategy enabled women to receive the right for which they had fought so hard and so long. After 75 years, women won the right to vote.

Ms. Catt is a fitting symbol of the league, which is known for its outstanding research and commitment to keeping voters informed. Voters in my home town of Milwaukee and throughout the country depend on the league's information to make informed voting choices. It is said, "If you have a question, ask a member of the league."

The league continues to keep alive the legacy of Ms. Catt and the thousands of men and women who worked for women's suffrage. In Ms. Catt's words: "Winning the vote is only an opening edge * * * but to learn to use it is a bigger task."

FRIENDS OF BOSNIA

HON. JOHN W. OLVER

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to call the attention of my colleagues to the efforts of the people of western Massachusetts to alleviate the suffering of the Bosnian people, who are the victims of a vicious war waged by the last Communist regime in Europe, while the United Nations, European Community, and even the United States Government has stood idly by and engaged in a disgraceful policy of appeasement.

I am very proud to be a part of this community which is reaching out to the people of Bosnia in every way which it can. Friends of Bosnia is a local group which has been active in trying to make people aware of what has happened, to call for greater international action to prevent genocide in Bosnia, and to provide concrete help to the people in Bosnia who have been forced from their homes, or as in Sarajevo, have lived in constant fear of death at the hands of Serbian artillery and sniper fire.

Friends of Bosnia has collected 9 tons of food, clothes, and medical supplies which, working with the Scottish humanitarian group Edinburgh Direct aid, they are attempting to deliver to Sarajevo and Bihac. These cities, as my colleagues may recall, are two of the so-called safe havens which the UN and the international community have promised—and failed miserably—to protect.

This trip is anything but a vacation or a junket. Edinburgh Direct Aid supplies its volunteers with flack jackets and helmets and has suffered sniper fire during a past trip out of Sarajevo. During the time this group has been crossing the countryside of this bitterly divided area, there has remained the possibility that Serbian troops would not allow them entry into the "safe havens." In spite of the danger and the uncertainties, Sharon Webb and Glenn Ruga, cofounders of Friends of Bosnia, are traveling with the caravan in an effort to get the supplies to the people who need it the most.

Mr. Speaker, Edinburgh Direct Aid is today preparing to enter Sarajevo to distribute food and supplies. The 9 tons of food, clothes, and medical supplies from western Massachusetts will be used to meet a small part of the deep need for relief supplies in the safe havens. I am proud of the support from Friends of Bosnia. These efforts remind us of the best America has to offer, as well as the continuing suffering of the people of Bosnia. In contrast to the disgraceful dithering and appeasement of the international community, the efforts of the people of western Massachusetts give me a small measure of hope that we can learn from the past, and better our future.

A SPECIAL TRIBUTE TO BISHOP
PHILLIP A. BROOKS

HON. JAMES A. BARCIA

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Bishop Phillip A. Brooks. Bishop Brooks, Pastor of the New Saint Paul Tabernacle Church of God in Christ, has touched many lives nationally, locally and personally. Through his commitment to community service his contributions to the State of Michigan have pronounced him one of Detroit's most influential church leaders. He ministers to the poor, the rich, the elderly, the young, the homeless, and the jobless, improving the quality of their lives.

Bishop Brooks will be a guest speaker at Delta College on February 20, 1995 in celebration of African American History Month. He will speak on, "The Impact of the Black Church on Social, Political, and Economic Change—1895–1995," an issue on which Bishop Brooks has had great impact. He will be honored for his contributions to the community of Saginaw, and will be recognized for his contributions to the whole State of Michigan.

Since founding the New Saint Paul Tabernacle Church of God in 1956, Bishop Brooks has reached out to people throughout Michigan. The Bishop helped the St. Paul Tabernacle apply for a Head Start Grant and under his leadership and guidance the New Saint Paul Head Start Agency was bought to life in 1993. As a result of this effort, four satellite centers in West Detroit assist needy families by providing over 340 children with educational instruction and hot meals. The program provides children with almost one third of their nutritional needs.

In order to promote African-American business ownership, Bishop Brooks joined with prominent African-American business and religious leaders to seek half ownership in channel 62, a historically black owned station established in 1975. The African-American community wanted channel 62, which was being sold to CBS, to remain in their hands.

Bishop Brooks is concerned about the spiritual, physical and mental wellbeing of his church, his neighbors, his friends and strangers. The Bishop transformed a 32-year-old building, threatened with destruction, into a first class senior citizen home. Attempts to revive the building by prominent business leaders failed, but under the leadership of Bishop Brooks, a $3.6 million grant was awarded to the group from the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Today, the home provides seniors with a safe and secure living environment.

Bishop Brooks opened his arms to the young by establishing the Grandmont-Rosedale Park Christian Day School in 1990. The school provides a Christian education to students from preschool through 12th grade. Bishop Brooks also operates a private school to train African-American entrepreneurs. Both of these are nonprofit organizations which demonstrate his commitment to education.

Mr. Speaker, as you can see, Bishop Phillip A. Brooks is not just a leader in his church—providing family counseling, tutoring, singles ministry and senior outreach programs for congregation—but in his community and throughout the State. His generous contributions in a society fraught with growing social and economic difficulty should be applauded. I commend Bishop Brooks for his many accomplishments. He has truly made our world a better place.

INTRODUCTION OF BUSINESS MEALS DEDUCTION FAIRNESS LEGISLATION

HON. RICHARD E. NEAL

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. NEAL. Mr. Speaker, today Mrs. JOHNSON, Mr. JEFFERSON, and I are introducing legislation which will repeal an unintended tax on hard-working, middle income Americans—truckers, long-haul bus drivers, train conductors, and other people regulated by the Department of Transportation.

The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 [OBRA] contained a provision which reduced the deductible portion of business meals and entertainment expenses from 80 percent to 50 percent. This legislation would allow employees who are required by Federal law and regulations for safety reasons to make mandatory rest periods away from home. Simply, this legislation restores the deduction to 80 percent for truckers, long-haul bus drivers, train conductors, and others regulated by the Department of Transportation.

When the meals deduction was reduced from 100 percent to 80 percent, the crews of commercial vessels and people working on oil rigs were exempted. The reason for this exemption was that these individuals are required by law to be away from home and "eat out." This reasoning should continue to apply because those required by Federal law and regulations for safety reasons to take mandatory rest benefits away from home should be allowed to deduct these expenses. These meals are for safety reasons, not social reasons.

We need to pass this legislation to correct this tax injustice. This legislation allows the deduction of legitimate expenses required by Federal regulations. These are ordinary and necessary businesses, not lavish or extravagant expenses. I urge you to support this legislation.

SMALL BUSINESS ASSISTANCE
ACT OF 1995

HON. NANCY L. JOHNSON

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to introduce today legislation to give small businesses greater incentive through the Internal Revenue Code to purchase equipment and machinery.

Under current law, section 179 of the Tax Code allows a deduction of up to $17,500 for certain depreciable assets used in a trade of business. In view of the enormous costs encountered by businesses in these competitive times, this deduction is far too low.

I have pressed for increases in section 179 expensing for the last several years and believe that, as the cost of productivity-improving devices like machine tools and sophisticated testing equipment grows, the ability to deduct those costs should be enhanced.

My bill is very straightforward in increasing section 179 deductibility to $50,000. Though it probably should be much higher to reflect its job-creating possibilities, its impact on tax revenues is not insignificant and must be dealt with in the Ways and Means Committee. I look forward to prompt action in the committee and trust that my colleagues will consider this measure during the upcoming debate.

77TH ANNIVERSARY OF LITHUANIAN INDEPENDENCE

HON. PETER J. VISCLOSKY

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, January 15, 1995

Mr. VISCLOSKY. Mr. Speaker, it is my distinct honor to congratulate the Lithuanian American Council of Lake County, IN, and the Lithuanian community on the 77th anniversary of Lithuanian independence.

The Lithuanian American Council will celebrate Lithuanian independence, which occurred in 1918 as the Lithuanians were freed from the Soviet Union. They will mark this joyous occasion on Sunday, February 19, 1995, at St. Casimir's Church in Gary, IN. Following tradition, the anniversary ceremony will begin with a church service starting at 11:30 a.m. After the church service, the Lithuanian American Council will hold a flag raising ceremony outside of St. Casimir to honor those Lithuanians who pledged their allegiance to independence for their people. The event will then conclude with a dinner in the church hall.

I would like to take this opportunity to commend the Lithuanian American Council of Lake County's officers, including: Vincent J. Gumulauskis, who has been president for 3 years; Pete D. Auksel and Casimir Balt, both of whom are vice presidents; Birute Vilutis, secretary; and Walter Ruzga, treasurer. Allow me to also commend the board of directors, whose members include Rev. Ignatius Urbonas, Aleksas Degutis, Alex Navardauskas, Dan Pauls, Frank Petrites, Brone Tampuskas, and Izidorius Tavaras. Finally, I would like to commend every member of the Lithuanian American Council for the loyalty and enthusiasm they have displayed toward their ethnicity.

The Lithuanian American Council of Lake County, IN is a branch of the Lithuanian American Council. It was founded in 1940 and originated in large cities such as Boston, Chicago, and New York. The organization in Lake County initially was headquartered at St. Francis in East Chicago, IN, until recently when the building was demolished. The organization was then moved to St. Casimir where its home is today.

It is my sincere hope that 1995 will bring renewed prosperity for all members of the Lithuanian community and their families. May this 77th anniversary celebration prove to be a most joyous occasion.

JESSIE WILLIAMS PRIDDLE

HON. BILL EMERSON

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, there are so many who serve on Capitol Hill who contribute to the fabric of what this place is, but who never receive a great deal of public attention or acclaim.

For 18 years Jessie Williams Priddle, remembered by most of us as "Miss Williams," taught English in the Page School at the Library of Congress. Several of us serving here now, who had the privilege of having been pages in the House in our youth, have fond memories of Miss Williams as one who left a positive, good, and enduring mark on our lives.

She was a terrific teacher and had a sparkly personality, and was one of those teachers you never forget because she made it all so interesting.

Miss Williams passed away several days ago. She had a long and fruitful life and touched so well and favorably so many people, especially her students.

Her nephew, Paul Hays, the House Reading Clerk, has shared with me a brief biography of Miss Williams, which I in turn wish to share for the benefit of her former students and all who knew her.

JESSIE WILLIAMS PRIDDLE

Jessie Lutetia Williams Priddle, 90, a former teacher at the Capitol Page School, died February 4 of heart and lung ailments at an Alexandria nursing home. Born in Hutchinson, KS, she attended public schools there, graduated from Southwestern College in Winfield, KS, and earned a masters degree in education from Columbia University.

She taught in elementary and secondary schools in Kansas and New York, and worked for the United Nations Works and Relief Agency [UNWRA] following the Second World War.

She moved to Washington in 1948, and with the exception of 1 year, taught English at the Page School in the Library of Congress until her retirement in 1967. Among her many students over the years were BILL EMERSON, PAUL KANJORSKI, JIM KOLBE, and TOM DAVIS among sitting Members, as well as former Members Bob Bauman and Doug Bosco, and the former Clerk of the House, Donn Anderson. She was granted a Fulbright fellowship for the 1955-56 school year to teach English as a foreign language in the southern Netherlands towns of Goes and Middelburg.

During her teaching years in Washington she was an active member of the National Presbyterian Church, singing regularly in its choir, and played violin with the Washington Civic Orchestra.

After her retirement from the Page School, she donated one semester of service as a visiting professor of English at her alma mater, Southwestern College. At the end of the semester the college hired her for the balance of the school year.

Returning to Washington in 1968, she became active in the D.C. League of Republican Woman. She recalled her election to the league's board as having been the result of the organization's desire for some "younger" officers. She also volunteered in the local Daughters of the American Revolution chapter's program of teaching English to the predominantly Spanish-speaking foreign nurses in several local hospitals.

In 1973, she married Horley Priddle, a high school classmate with whom she had renewed her acquaintance at their class 50th reunion the previous summer. It was her first marriage. They traveled together widely, including an around-the-world tour shortly after their marriage.

Mr. Priddle died last July. She is survived by several nieces and nephews, including Paul Hays, the House Reading Clerk. Private services were held on February 11 in Clarksville, TN.

TRIBUTE TO BRYAN WITTMAN

HON. JACK QUINN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. QUINN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of Mr. Bryan Wittman of Hamburg, NY.

It gives me great joy to share with everyone in the Congress the outstanding achievements of one of my constituents. Bryan is the son of Mrs. Norma Wittman of North Hampton Brook Drive.

Bryan, a native of my hometown of Hamburg, NY, attended St. Peter and Paul Grade School and St. Francis High School. He graduated from Ashland University with a bachelor of arts degree in radio and television.

Bryan began his career in 1976 for the Erie County Fair and as entertainment director of the Darien Lake Theme Park in New York. He then moved on to become promotions director for the Ice Capades.

In 1985 Bryan began his adventure with Disney. While serving as manager of advertising and promotions for Marriott's Great America Theme Park in Chicago, IL, Wittman was recruited to Disney World in Orlando, FL, as senior promotions representative. In 1988 he was relocated to Disneyland in Anaheim, CA, where he became manager of promotions.

Continuing in his career advancement in 1991, Bryan became director of marketing for Disney.

As of February 2, 1995, he has been promoted to vice president for promotions, publicity, and special events.

Bryan's energy and imagination have been praised by Disney executives as his hard work and abundant successes are a testament to his strong character.

Speaking as a President of western New York, and as a Member of Congress, I applaud the outstanding accomplishments of Bryan Wittman.

THE MISSING SERVICE
PERSONNEL ACT OF 1995, H.R. 945

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to introduce the Missing Service Personnel Act of 1995, an important bill for those who care deeply about the POW/MIA issue.

This legislation will make important changes to sections 555 and 556 of the Missing Service Personnel Act of 1942 by reforming the Department of Defense's process for determining whether any member of the Armed Forces should be listed as missing in action. In so doing this bill will unveil the curtain of secrecy which currently surrounds any DOD decision concerning a person's status as missing in action.

Mr. Speaker, legislation pertaining to those missing in action have not changed over the past 50 years. As all of us who care dearly about this important issue know, the Department of Defense and the U.S. Government have been continually criticized for their handling of the POW/MIA issue since the Vietnam war. Accordingly, the time has come to make appropriate corrections in how the Government determines who in the Armed Forces should be classified as missing in action.

The bill I am introducing today will, in turn, ensure fairness to all concerned by involving family members, requiring legal representation, and by permitting Federal court review of all determinations. These significant changes will ensure that no soldier or sailor, currently listed as missing in action, will be declared dead without a full and fair review of all available evidence and until all possible considerations have been examined.

Accordingly, I urge my colleagues who share their concern with the POW/MIA issue to support this important and fair legislation. This legislation is supported by the American Legion, by the Vietnam Veterans of America, the National Alliance of Families, and other POW/MIA organizations.

Mr. Speaker, I am submitting supporting letters from these organizations to be printed in the RECORD following by statement.

THE AMERICAN LEGION,

Washington, DC, February 1, 1995.

Hon. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN,
U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE GILMAN: The American Legion is extremely appreciative of your past efforts and actions to obtain the fullest possible accounting of American prisoners of war and those missing in action from previous conflicts and the Cold War. We are pleased to hear that you are again leading an effort to introduce legislation that will go even further toward addressing the plight of the missing and the concerns of their families.

The American Legion has supported the POW/MIA issue as a matter of the highest priority for many years. Your sponsorship of such a bill is significant for all who served in the past, those who now serve and those who will serve in the future. It also comes at a time when concern for our missing is becoming obscured by potentially lucrative business contacts with former adversaries. We must not let those who are missing be forgotten.

We recognize that the families of the missing and other veterans organizations have pertinent and valid views that may be considered for incorporation into any legislation dealing with the missing. It is also the opinion of the Legion that it is most imperative a bill be introduced as soon as possible on this issue.

The American Legion believes such legislation will provide a more equitable basis for making status determinations for all who are missing, and those who may be captured or otherwise become missing in future military operations.

Sincerely,

JOHN F. SOMMER, JR.,
Executive Director.

VIETNAM VETERANS OF AMERICA, INC.,
Washington, DC, February 6, 1995.

Hon. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN,
House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE GILMAN: Vietnam Veterans of America (VVA) salutes you for introducing "the Missing Service Personnel Act of 1995." VVA's Board of Directors voted unanimously to put the full force of our organization in support of this legislation.

No group of veterans knows more about how divisive and bitter the unsettled questions about the fate of missing-in-action military personnel can be. Had such a law been in place during the Vietnam War, many of the over 2,200 unresolved POW/MIA cases would have been resolved long ago, and their families allowed a sense of closure and dignity for the loss of their loved ones.

Because the Missing Service Personnel Act of 1995 would spell out in law a procedure for handling the very delicate question of how and when a member of the Armed Forces considered missing in action can be declared legally dead, we believe this legislation will correct mistakes realized in past wars. Although the new procedure could take a year, it is a relatively short time compared to the decades of uncertainty MIA families have experienced in the past. We believe the process is not excessively complex, and does not create undue burdens upon the Department of Defense. Most importantly, families would know what to expect and would be spared years of turmoil and pain.

Quick action on the Missing Service Personnel Act of 1995 will assure that the men and women of our nation's Armed Forces will not be subjected to the mistakes of the past. Vietnam Veterans of America will lobby actively in support of this bill, and we appreciate your introducing it.

Sincerely,

JAMES L. BRAZEE, JR.,
President.

Re letter of support for your introduction of the Missing Service Personnel Act of 1995.

Hon. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN,

Representative SUSAN MOLINARI,
Representative LEE HAMILTON,
Representative KAREN THURMAN.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVES GILMAN; MOLINARI; HAMILTON; and THURMAN: On behalf of the members and supporters of the N.Y. State POW/MIA Action Group, I extend to you all our profound gratitude for your bipartisan sponsorship and cosponsorship, of the Missing Service Personnel Act of 1995.

This Act is both long overdue, and well crafted. The MIA and their families deserve the peace of mind, and respect, that the Act provides.

Our support for this legislation is long-standing and we look forward to the entire New York State delegation's support, if not cosponsorship, for the Act.

We stand ready to assist you in your efforts on behalf of the Act, and hope and expect swift passage of this most important legislation. Thank you again.

MR. JOSEPH AMEROSA,
President.

AMERICAN DEFENSE INSTITUTE,
January 19, 1995.

Hon. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN GILMAN: The Missing Service Personnel Act of 1995 is the most important piece of legislation written to comprehensively protect service members from wars past and future. Passage of this legislation, which you, Senator Dole, and Senator Lautenberg are sponsoring in the House and the Senate, will protect the service member's legal status from arbitrarily being changed from POW to MIA to "presumptive finding of death." This measure will also permit families to be better informed and give them authority to challenge adverse decisions in court.

Congressman, I want to thank you for introducing this bill, which is near and dear to my heart. I have personally seen many friends from years past "written off" by our government, despite their families' objections. You have performed a valuable service to the families of our missing men and to those members of the armed forces who are or will be missing in action. This bill has my full support.

Sincerely,

EUGENE "RED" MCDANIEL,
CAPT, USN (Ret).

VIETNOW,
Rockford, IL, December 23, 1994.

Hon. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN,
Rayburn House Office Building, Washington,
DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN GILMAN: We, as Veterans of the Armed Forces of the United States of America, realize the importance and the immediate need for "The Missing Service Personnel Act," which is long over due.

The practice of changing the classification of those listed as Prisoner of War or Missing In Action to Killed In Action based on the presumption of death, due solely to the passage of time, is an outrage! In the proposed "Missing Service Personnel Act," "conclusive proof of death" is required to be established and based upon evidence that death is the only plausible explanation for the absence of the missing person.

Important provisions of this legislation, are the inclusion of family members in the review process, their access to information gained during the investigation and a set time frame for the review process.

Passage of the "Missing Service Personnel Act" is vital and will restore a sense of confidence not only to those effected by previous wars, but to those who may become Prisoner Of War or listed as Missing In Action as a result of future wars.

Congressman Gilman, we thank you for your support and would encourage you to re-introduce the "Missing Service Personnel Act" as one of the first items to be introduced before the House Of Representatives of the 104th Congress.

Sincerely,
RICH TEAGUE,
ViewNow National POW/MIA Chairman.

Re: Support for the Missing Service Personnel Act of 1995

DEAR MEMBERS GILMAN, MOLINARI, HAMILTON, and THURMAN: The Marines and Auxiliary of the Department of New York, want to make clear our deep and widespread thanks to you all for your introduction of the Act of 1995. Individually, you are to be congratulated for your vision and courage to address this element of the POW/MIA issue.

We are aware of all the work put into developing the language of this bill and salute you for an excellent piece of legislation. This Act of 1995, must pass as introduced. We also recognize the work by staff and veteran and POW/MIA organizations.

On behalf of those who have worn the uniform of the United States, those who wear it today, and those who will wear it in the future, and their families, may I express my sincere gratitude for the introduction of the Act of 1995, and your efforts to secure passage. We stand ready to assist you in this effort.

Yours truly,

Hon. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN,
Rayburn House Office Building, Washington,
DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN GILMAN: The purpose of this letter is to thank you for agreeing to re-introduce The Missing Service Personnel Act in the House of Representatives and to encourage you, in the strongest possible terms, to introduce the bill early this legislative year.

I am the father of an Air Force pilot, Lt. Col. Earl P. Hopper, Jr. who became Missing in Action in North Vietnam on 10 January 1968—27 years ago this day. Statements of pilots who were escorting him and his crippled aircraft out of North Vietnam towards Laos verify that he safely ejected from his aircraft and was alive when he reached the ground. There is other information to support the fact that my son survived his incident and was captured to become a Prisoner of War. In fact, a three-man Commission of the Department of Justice reviewed my son's case in 1982 and ruled that he was captured and was a Prisoner of War based upon information provided by it by the United States Air Force and other Government agencies.

I gave 30 years of my life to my country in the United States Army. I am a veteran of World War II, Korea and Vietnam. Until I became involved actively in the POW-MIA issue upon my retirement in November 1969, I had never witnessed the military services nor the United States Government treat its service men and women, and their families, in such a blatant—and openly perfidious—manner as they have the Prisoners of War and Missing in Action of the Vietnam War.

In February 1980 I represented my son before a Status Review Hearing Board at Randolph Air Force Base, Texas. In order to represent my son at this hearing, I had to pay for the travel, meals and lodging for my civilian attorney, my wife and myself. Across the table I faced three Air Force Colonels, each of whom had set on a minimum of twelve previous Status Review Boards. In each of the previous Status Review Board hearings in which these Colonels participated, each of them voted in favor of changing the man's status from a living category of Prisoner of War or Missing in Action to a deceased category of Killed in Action. Interestingly, in every status review case, none of the Colonels ever voted to keep the man in a POW-MIA status. In each of the hearings, including my son's, there was never any presentation of "proof of death" by the Air Force.

In my son's case, it is a matter of record that classified documents/information were provided to the three Board members, but neither I nor my attorney were allowed to see them. This was also true at those Status Review Board hearings held by the other branches of the service.

The ruse of the military services to have Status Review Board hearings was simply to meet the minimal requirements set down by the First Federal District Court of New York in 1975 when it ruled that the old Missing Persons Act of 1942 was unconstitutional—both on its face and in the manner in which it was being implemented by the military services. The burden to prove a man is alive rested upon the shoulders of the primary next of kin of the POW-MIA. There is no requirement, under the old act, to force the military service to prove the individual is dead before his status is changed to Killed in Action. This action constitutes a procedure wherein an individual is legally dead but could very well be physically alive—a major violation of the individual Prisoner of War or Missing Person's civil rights.

Further, the old law does not provide the next of kin the right to appeal an adverse ruling by the military services. This violates the principle used in the civilian justice system, therefore the 1942 Act is prejudiced against the POW-MIAs (a living category) and their next of kin.

The manner in which the military services have administered the Missing Persons Act of 1942, and the Act itself, is arbitrary, capricious and very biased against the missing Serviceman. In each case, without exception, the Status Review Boards have recommended a change of status for each and every one of the POWs and MIAs from the Vietnam War. (Note: One man was maintained in a POW status by the direction of the Secretary of the Air Force only for "symbolic" purposes after the review board recommended a change in his status.) These decisions were made with complete disregard of the great volume of intelligence available to—and presented to—the Review Boards before and during these individual hearings.

Your bill, The Missing Service Personnel Act, allows all of the direct next of kin, wives, mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters, sons, and daughters the rightful access to government information and intelligence which it receives on their respective loved one. This is only correct and logical since each of the principal relatives has the right to know and to receive information on their family member as well as the privilege—and responsibility—to seek that knowledge.

The bill also brings into line the protection of the civil rights of a military person equal to that provided to civilian citizens of the United States. The Missing Persons Act of 1942 does not provide that protection, therefore it is unconstitutional and must be changed.

I can safely say that this bill, and its counterpart in the United States Senate, would be enthusiastically supported by a vast majority of the POW-MIA families. I also can safely state that a large majority of the veterans of this country would support these Bills.

Rescinding the old law and the passage of a new one by Congress would not only right a wrong which has hovered over the heads of military personnel since 1942, but would also provide an assurance that the rights of a serviceman or woman would be equal to that granted to the civilian citizens of the United States.

In view of the above, Congressman Gilman, again I strongly urge you to re-introduce The Missing Service Personnel Act in the House of Representatives.

Respectfully,

EARL P. HOPPER, Sr.,
Colonel, United States Army, Retired.

LIVE POW LOBBY OF AMERICA,
Stewartstown, PA, December 21, 1994.
Re the Missing Service Personnel Act.

Representative BEN GILMAN (NY),
Longworth HOB, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. GILMAN, I understand that you are prepared to introduce in 1995, The Missing Service Personnel Act. My organization completely and 100% supports and induces The Missing Service Personnel Act, as we are a membership advocacy group, for a full accounting of the POWs, who were captured alive, but not released or accounted-for. Our 3,000 members, all, have asked me to forward this letter request to your help in changing the way in which we declare dead the once captured prisoner cases.

The 83 U.S. Senators signed a letter to the Postmaster General requesting that he have a POW/MIA POSTAGE STAMP approved and issued by May 1995—Memorial day. And, several veterans groups, MIA family groups and POW/MIA advocacy groups have asked that a POW/MIA POSTAGE STAMP be issued.

The current Administration and the Department of Defense have made the accounting for the POW/MIA's a matter of the Highest National Priority and are committed to all efforts to show the American voters—that not all of the Americans who went missing, are yet accounted-for. The Department of Defense employs over 250 people, who work full time on trying to find missing Americans, lost in wars. The Russians and Americans have set up a task force that is working to find missing Americans, who after capture, ended up in the old Soviet Union. There are about 2,200 from Vietnam, 8,100 from Korea and 76,000 from WWII who are still missing—all who have been declared dead under an old out dated process. To honor the price POWs paid for freedom and their country, a more effective way of changing their status needs to be approved. Please feel free to share the Live POW Lobby of America's views with other Congressmen and Senators, so that they might take our views into consideration in support of this bill.

Sincerely,

MICHAEL VAN ATTA,
Chairman.

Hon. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN,
U.S. House of Representatives, Rayburn House

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE GILMAN: Thank you for your support of the Missing Service Personnel Act of 1995. I believe that this important legislation will greatly improve the availability of information to the families of our M.I.A.'s both in the past and in the future.

We, as a government, owe to our armed forces the knowledge that any and all information on an M.I.A. will be communicated to that person's family. I urge you to please bring this bill to the House floor for a vote as soon as possible.

Sincerely,

DAVID E. BEGLEY,

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE GILMAN: It is with great relief and pleasure that I write this short letter to you sir.

I want to thank you for being a champion to our cause and supporting the "Missing Service Personnel Act of 1995". Without you and your help to introduce this important bill, it might have gone by the wayside.

As a member of a Viet Nam Veterans Organization in Pennsylvania, I would like to extend our heartfelt thanks and gratitude on behalf of all of us.

God bless you.

Sincerely yours,

GEOFFREY BRUEN.

TASK FORCE OMEGA OF COLORADO,
Colorado Springs, CO, January 31, 1995.

Hon. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN,
Chairman, International Relations, Rayburn
House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN GILMAN: The membership of Task Force Omega of Colorado is made up of veterans, family members of those still listed as missing in action during the Vietnam War, and concerned citizens. Many of the members live in the Colorado Springs area, home of the U.S. Air Force Academy, Ft. Carson Army Base, Peterson Air Force Base and U.S. Space Command and the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD).

Your efforts introducing the "Missing Service Personnel Act" to the 104th Congress are most appreciated by all of us here. We are proud of our men and women who currently serve in the military and want to see their rights protected, if ever any of them goes missing in defense of our Country.

The provisions of this piece of legislation will guarantee them their individual rights as members of this Nation's military force and as citizens of the United States of America. We applaud your diligence and express our gratitude for the work accomplished by you and your staff on this critical bill.

Thank you, congressman Gilman.

Very truly yours,

DAWN D. LINDSEY,
Chairman.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT LAW ENFORCEMENT BLOCK GRANTS ACT OF 1995

SPEECH OF

HON. MARTIN R. HOKE

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, February 14, 1995

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 728) to control crime by providing law enforcement block grants.

Mr. HOKE. Mr. Chairman, my amendment simply requires local governments to assess the impact of school security measures, crime prevention programs and juvenile crime prevention programs funded under this bill, and to submit their findings to the Bureau of Justice Assistance.

Much has been made of the effectiveness of prevention programs, however, Mr. Chairman there is little empirical evidence of their effect on crime. This amendment provides a mechanism by which Congress can assess such programs and make more informed decisions in future crime legislation.

While opponents might argue that this is another unfunded mandate, I believe that the legislative language is broad enough to assuage these fears. By merely requiring that localities have an adequate process, the amendment provides wide latitude in carrying out this directive.

I urge its adoption.

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 728, AS REPORTED OFFERED BY MR. HOKE OF OHIO

Page 12, line 4, strike "and".

Page 12, line 7, strike "101(a)(2)." and insert "101(a)(2); and".

"(10) the unit of local government—

"(A) has an adequate process to assess the impact of any enhancement of a school security measure that is undertaken under subparagraph (B) of section 101(a)(2), or any crime prevention programs that are established under subparagraphs (C) and (E) of section 101(a)(2), on the incidence of crime in the geographic area where the enhancement is undertaken or the program is established;

"(B) will conduct such an assessment with respect to each such enhancement or program; and

"(C) will submit an annual written assessment report to the Director.

MISSING SERVICE PERSONNEL ACT

HON. KAREN L. THURMAN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mrs. THURMAN. Mr. Speaker, because I proudly display a POW/MIA flag outside my office door, I am reminded on a daily basis of the importance and immediate need for the Missing Service Personnel Act. This bill is long overdue.

This legislation will provide a procedure for handling the difficult question of how and when a member of the Armed Forces who is considered missing in action can be declared legally dead.

Important provisions of this legislation include: bringing family members into the review process; giving families access to information gained during the investigation; and establishing a definite timeframe for the review process. Families will know what to expect from the process and would be spared years of waiting under this legislation.

The evidence is clear that soldiers from past wars were declared dead when they were very much alive. This act will assure that our military personnel will be accounted for without question.

There is strong bipartisan consensus in support of this bill. I look forward to working with my colleagues in assuring that this legislation quickly becomes law. Finally, the hard work of many fine people and veterans' groups have gone into creating this legislation. We should all be working for the welfare of the men and women in our armed services. By supporting this bill we are telling them that yes, the time has come to answer the tough questions that the families of missing members of the Armed Forces face every day.

TRIBUTE TO COL. ALBERT S. WYNOT

HON. JOHN JOSEPH MOAKLEY

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to share with my colleagues some sad news from my district in Massachusetts. Retired Army Col. Albert S. Wynot passed away on January 27, 1995. Colonel Wynot, a resident of Walpole, MA, served in the Army from 1938 until his retirement in 1950, and then continued his service as a member of the Army reserves until 1980. A graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology [MIT], Colonel Wynot fought in World War II with the 329th Engineering Battalion and was intimately involved in the planning and execution of the D-day invasion in Normandy on June 6, 1944.

Colonel Wynot was the proud recipient of the Purple Heart, the Bronze Star, the Bronze Star Cluster, the American Defense Medal, Distinguished Unit Medal, the Order of the French Army, and the United States Victory Medal.

I last saw Colonel Wynot during a district swing this fall when I visited him in the New Pond Village residences in Walpole, MA. Even then, during a question and answer session that I hosted with the residents, Colonel Wynot had strong opinions about national issues ranging from the collapse of the Soviet Union and its empire in Eastern Europe to the local sludge issue in the town of Walpole. Colonel Wynot loved debate and discussion and was, in every sense of the word, a colonel until the end.

I extend my sympathies to his wife Dorothy, his family and all of his friends and neighbors at New Pond Village.

CLARIFY THAT VETERANS' BENEFITS ARE TAX-EXEMPT

HON. G.V. (SONNY) MONTGOMERY

OF MISSISSIPPI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing H.R. 972 to clarify that veterans benefits are not taxable. A number of members of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs have joined me as cosponsors of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, as far as we know, veterans' benefits have never been subject to taxation, either at the Federal or the State level. We have long had laws which prohibited these benefits from being taxed. However, over the course of the last several years, some doubt about the tax-exempt status of veterans' benefits has arisen. In 1992, the IRS Chief Counsel's office concluded that some benefits might be taxable under amendments made to the Internal Revenue Code in 1986.

To its credit, this administration responded to this possibility by proposing that new language be enacted exempting all veterans' benefits and allowance from taxation. The Subcommittee on Select Revenue Measures of the Committee on Ways and Means received favorable testimony on a proposal which I introduced last Congress, H.R. 786, which would have done the same thing as the administration proposal. However, the committee failed to act on any technical tax bills last Congress.

I think that we should clear up any remaining confusion on this issue by enacting this legislation, and the administration has indicated its support for my position in the past. Since there is no tax now being collected on veterans' benefits, there shouldn't be any revenue loss from its enactment. I urge all my colleagues to support this measure.

BAN SMOKING ON INTERNATIONAL FLIGHTS

HON. JAMES L. OBERSTAR

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, today I have introduced the Airliner Cabin Air Quality Act of 1995, to prohibit smoking on international flights to and from the United States. Congress banned smoking on all domestic flights of 6 hours or less in 1990. However, smoking is still legal on U.S. carriers on international flights. Most foreign carriers serving the U.S. permit smoking as well.

To protect flight attendants and passengers, I introduced similar legislation last year—H.R. 4495. The bill passed the House on October 4, under Suspension of the Rules. The bill I introduce today is identical in intent to the one passed by the House last fall.

Briefly, the bill requires the Department of Transportation to issue regulations requiring U.S. and foreign air carriers to prohibit smoking in passenger cabins and lavatories on flights between points in the United States and foreign points, that is, the last point of departure prior to landing in the U.S., and the first point of arrival when leaving the U.S. Additionally, the bill would prohibit smoking in the cockpits of U.S. airliners.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is extremely timely. International flights between the United States and Canada are already smoke-free. Three U.S. carriers, Delta, American and Northwest, offer nonsmoking flights on some international routes. Our Government is negotiating with others to arrange bilateral or multilateral smoking bans.

The latest sign of progress came last month, when the Department of Transportation gave the green light to eight airlines—six U.S. carriers and two foreign—to discuss a mutual ban on smoking on transatlantic flights without fear of antitrust action being taken against them. Those airlines are American, Continental, Northwest, Trans World, and United Airlines, USAir, British Airways and KLM Royal Dutch Airlines.

Finally, the nations belonging to the International Civil Aviation Organization [ICAO], which includes most countries, have agreed to end smoking on airlines by July 1996.

With all these moves to ban smoking, why is my bill needed?

Simply, because relief can not come too fast for flight attendants and passengers who without my bill will have to fly for another year and a half in those cabins where smoking is still permitted.

Flight attendants assigned to long international smoking flights are forced to spend their working lives in smoke-filled galleys at the back of aircraft. At hearings the Subcommittee on Aviation held last year, flight attendant representatives detailed ailments which they and their colleagues incur in the small, enclosed, smoke-filled cabin environment. They described health problems ranging from eye, nose and throat irritation, headache, nausea, dizziness, blurred vision, shortness of breath, and heart palpitations to permanent disability and even death for the occupational hazards of their jobs in airplanes. Nonsmoking flight attendants are suffering and dying from diseases common to smokers—the penalty of an honest day's work.

Equally unacceptable is the plight of children stuck in the smoking section with their parents. And businessmen who must be at their peak when they arrive at their destination, but stagger off, jet-lagged and debilitated by smoke-caused allergies and sensitivities. And pleasure travelers whose vacations are ruined by smoke-induced illnesses. And the millions of nonsmoking passengers who cannot really get away from the smoke, no matter where they sit in the airplane.

This bill is also needed from a safety standpoint. At our hearing, flight attendant witnesses showed us photographs of cigarette butts all over the floor of the airplane. They testified to passengers falling asleep in their seats, dropping lighted cigarettes on the floor. More than one attendant has thrown coffee on a smoldering butt to escape the horror of an in-flight fire.

Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased that airlines have decided to take dramatic action on their own. In banning smoking they have shown great courage, and I believe will be rewarded with increased passengers. And I commend the Department of Transportation for granting them antitrust immunity to discuss the issue. I believe these airlines, and others, would like to go farther than ban smoking on all routes and flights. They cannot, in some cases, for competitive reasons. Therefore it makes eminent sense to ban smoking on all flights, now, to protect the health of flight attendants and passengers alike.

Another year and a half can make a lot of difference in the lives of many, many, people. I believe that airlines, as well as the vast majority of their employees and passengers, will welcome enactment of this bill.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT LAW ENFORCEMENT BLOCK GRANTS ACT OF 1995

SPEECH OF

HON. JACK REED

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, February 14, 1995

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 728) to control crime by providing law enforcement block grants.

Mr. REED. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to offer this amendment en bloc with my colleagues; Mr. WYNN of Maryland, Mr. BALDACCIO of Maine, and Mr. SANDERS of Vermont. I have shared it with my friends on the other side of the aisle, and I believe it has their support.

This issue was recently brought to my attention by Colonel Culhane, chief of Rhode Island's State Police, who told me that State law enforcement agencies would not be eligible to receive any of the funding earmarked for police in cities and towns. Yet, Mr. Speaker, the State police provide many of the small and rural towns in New England, including Vermont and Maine, with critical police protection.

For example, in Exeter, RI, a small town in my district, there is no local police force. When a person dials 911, the State police receive the phone call, and State officers respond. In other towns like Richmond, RI, the local government cannot afford to operate a police force 24-hours a day, and the State police are called upon to fill the void.

Under current law, State police forces are eligible for COPS and prevention grant programs. According to the Justice Department, several State police agencies, including the Maine State Police, have applied for and received COPS funding.

We ought to be consistent in making these funds available for all law enforcement agencies that provide protection to our cities and towns. That is what my amendment would do. My amendment would restore eligibility for those State agencies that perform the same role as the local police departments that are eligible to receive funds under the block grant. It would give State law enforcement agencies a fair shake at getting the funding they deserve.

Although this amendment does not solve the problem completely, I believe it is a step in the right direction, and I hope to continue to work with Mr. MCCOLLUM as this bill goes to conference.

C-17 WINS COLLIER TROPHY

HON. STEPHEN HORN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. HORN. Mr. Speaker, the McDonnell Douglas C-17 Globemaster III transport plane has again received recognition in the aeronautical community for its extraordinary capabilities.

The C-17 has been awarded the prestigious Collier Trophy, symbolizing the top aeronautical achievement of 1994. The trophy is awarded by the National Aeronautic Association [NAA] for "the greatest achievement in aeronautics or astronautics in America, the value of which has been demonstrated by actual use in the previous year."

This award is yet another reaffirmation of the commitment to excellence on the part of the dedicated craftsmen and women who manufacture the C-17 at McDonnell Douglas' plant in Long Beach, CA. These talented individuals, through their efforts, are directly contributing to the Nation's defense—as well as to the ability to provide humanitarian assistance to those in need throughout the world.

The NAA, in announcing the award, said it was bestowed "for designing, developing, testing, producing and placing into service the C-17 Globemaster III whose performance and efficiency makes it the most versatile airlift aircraft in aviation history."

The C-17 has already demonstrated its tremendous value, and it will continue to do so well into the 21st century. I am proud to represent the district in which it is built.

At this point in the Record, I would like to include a McDonnell Douglas news release telling of the award and outlining some of the extraordinary capabilities of this remarkable aircraft.

The news release follows:

C-17 WINS COLLIER TROPHY

LONG BEACH CA., February 15, 1995.—The U.S. Air Force/McDonnell Douglas C-17 Globemaster III transport has been awarded the prestigious Collier Trophy, symbolizing the top aeronautical achievement of 1994.

The trophy, established in 1911, is awarded each year by the National Aeronautic Association (NAA) for "the greatest achievement in aeronautics or astronautics in America, the value of which has been demonstrated by actual use in the previous year."

The NAA said the award was bestowed "for designing, developing, testing, producing and placing into service the C-17 Globemaster III whose performance and efficiency make it the most versatile airlift aircraft in aviation history."

Named as recipients of the 1994 Collier Trophy were the U.S. Air Force, McDonnell Douglas Corporation, and the C-17 industrial team of subcontractors and suppliers. The C-17 was nominated for the award by the Air Force Association (AFA).

"We are highly honored that the C-17 has been selected by the NAA for this most famous of all aviation awards," said Harry Stonecipher, McDonnell Douglas president and chief executive officer. "This honor recognizes the dedication and commitment at our company and its employees—along with our supplier teammates—in designing, producing and delivering to the Air Force the best military transport plane ever built."

In its nomination, the AFA cited the McDonnell Douglas C-17 as "the linchpin airlift modernization" and said that it "demonstrated in 1994 that it had the versatility to create a new era in military airlift." AFA pointed out that the C-17 landed four times the payload of the C-130 into less than 3,000 feet of runway and carried large Army equipment only the large C-5 could carry.

While approximately the same external size of the C-141B, the C-17 carries twice the payload. It also exceeded "demanding reliability and maintainability standards during an intensive two week test period in November 1994," AFA said.

"These remarkable achievements prove that the C-17 is the world's most versatile airlift aircraft and will be the new core airlifter to support the U.S. national security needs in war and peace," the association said.

The first test flight of the C-17 was on Sept. 15, 1991. The C-17's developmental flight test program was completed in December 1994 as scheduled.

Eight production C-17s were delivered to the Air Force in 1994, the last five ahead of schedule. A total of 18 C-17s have been delivered to the Air Force to date.

The McDonnell Douglas C-17 is the only transport aircraft in the world that can provide direct, long-distance delivery of large combat equipment and troops, or humanitarian aid, across intercontinental distances and land at small, unimproved airstrips. It offers strategic and theater lift, and is the only aircraft that can airdrop large armored vehicles and engineering equipment.

The first production aircraft delivered to an operational unit arrived at the 437th Airlift Wing, Charleston AFB, S.C., on June 14, 1993. The unit's first squadron of 12 C-17s were declared ready for worldwide operations in January 1995. To date, the C-17 Globemaster III fleet has accumulated 10,000 flying hours.

TRIBUTE TO WILLIAM P. JOYCE, SR.

HON. JOSEPH P. KENNEDY II

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. KENNEDY of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, this weekend a native of my home city of Boston, Mr. William P. "Bill" Joyce, marks a special milestone in his life as he celebrates his 80th birthday with family and friends.

One of six children, Mr. Joyce graduated from South Boston High School and went on to study at Boston University. He was devoted to his wife, Joanna, whose tragic loss at an early age left him with a young son to raise alone. He faced the challenges that life presented him with great courage and determination, and today his son, Bill, Jr., serves as a special assistant U.S. attorney.

Mr. Joyce moved to Washington, DC in the early 1960's, during the Kennedy administration. Proud of his Irish and south Boston roots, he made many friends and found abundant compatriots here during that era. In recent years, he had the privilege of escorting the Grand Marshal of the St. Patrick's Day Parade in Washington. Trained as a certified public accountant, his long career included service in both the government and the private sector. Although he retired from the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology in recent years, he now volunteers his time at the Touchdown Club in Washington, where he is an active member.

In Boston and Washington, Mr. Joyce is known as a generous, outgoing man who loves people and makes friends easily. Whenever he walks into any of his favorite haunts, he is greeted by a chorus of "Hi, Bill!" He is especially proud of his 7-year old granddaughter, Laura, who will celebrate with him this weekend.

Mr. Speaker, I know my colleagues join me in wishing Bill Joyce a very happy birthday and many more to come.

A SPECIAL SALUTE TO MARTHA E. BOLDEN: CELEBRATING A LIFE OF ACTIVISM

HON. LOUIS STOKES

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Speaker, I take pride in rising today to salute a resident of my Congressional District, Mrs. Martha E. Bolden, who was recently profiled in the Plain Dealer newspaper. In the article which is entitled, "Four Score and Ten: A Life of Activism," the reporter explores the life of this outstanding individual and her contributions to our city. Mrs. Bolden is well known for her commitment to improving the lives of others. I want to share with my colleagues and the Nation some information regarding this outstanding individual.

Mrs. Bolden was the operator of a beauty shop in Mobile, AL, during the 1930's when she was encouraged to vote because she was a business owner. Her $200 poll tax fee was paid by one of the city's black physicians. In order to register to vote, Mrs. Bolden was also required to memorize the Seventh Amendment to the Constitution. With determination, she overcame this obstacle and became a registered voter, achieving celebrity status in the black community. This action and determination on the part of Martha Bolden represented the beginning of a lifetime of activism.

Mr. Speaker, Mrs. Bolden moved to Cleveland, OH, in 1953. Over the years, the Cleveland community has benefited greatly from her strong leadership. Upon arriving in Cleveland, Mrs. Bolden immediately became active in the Hough community, encouraging her neighbors to vote and work in political campaigns. When riots destroyed city neighborhoods in the mid-1960's, Mrs. Bolden was instrumental in helping to rebuild the city. She was a founding member of the Hough Area Development Corp., which was one of the first community-based development corporations in the country. The organization played a key role in revitalizing the neighborhood, including the development of shopping facilities and housing estates for residents.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to salute Martha Bolden on the House Floor today. I can recall that she was one of my first clients when I began practicing law in Cleveland. As an attorney, I represented her when she purchased her home in the city. I also recall that Mrs. Bolden was an active worker in my political campaigns. At the age of 90, she is still politically involved as one of the "101 Women for Stokes."

Mr. Speaker, Martha E. Bolden is a hero to many, and an inspiration to all of us. Throughout her life, she has given unselfishly of her time and talent in an effort to make our city better and empower the community. Her political activism has made the difference in the lives of many. We salute her for her dedication and commitment. I want to share with my colleagues the article regarding Mrs. Bolden which appeared in the Plain Dealer. I ask them to join me in paying tribute to this exceptional individual.

FIGHT CUTS IN STUDENT FINANCIAL AID

HON. PATRICIA SCHROEDER

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to take note of the article in the February 15, 1995, Washington Post entitled, "College Students Spending More Time Earning Than Learning." I include a copy of the article for the RECORD.

At a time when education is more necessary than ever to compete for good jobs, financial aid is failing to keep pace with steadily rising college costs. As a result, an increasing number of students are forced to work more. While a certain amount of work can be valuable, as the article points out, it also can detract from studies and drag out the time it takes to complete an education, at additional expense to the students and their parents.

Now comes the Republicans, saying they want to eliminate the government subsidy for interest on tuition loans while students are in college, which would burden students and their families with additional debt.

Republicans also say they want to either abolish direct lending or limit it. Meanwhile, I have students telling me they love the program because it cuts out the middlemen, delivers the money fast and helps prevent defaults. Under guaranteed student loans, students have a hard time keeping track of which bank owns their loan this week. Republican efforts in this area fly in the face of their rhetoric about listening to the grassroots and simplifying bureaucracy. They seem to be listening to the bankers and loan guarantors instead of the middle class.

COLLEGE STUDENTS SPENDING MORE TIME EARNING THAN LEARNING

(By Fern Shen)

Steve Long started school at the University of Maryland in College Park with an ambitious, 17-credit course load and a goal of graduating in less than four years.

The Richmond native never imagined that he would have to spend so much time working—cataloguing books at the school library, writing tickets in campus parking lots, driving campus shuttle buses—that it would take him seven years to get his bachelor's degree.

"It got so bad one semester that I had to drop out of all my classes. I was working 30 hours a week driving the bus and taking five classes," said Long, 25, a full-time shuttle bus supervisor and part-time student who hopes to graduate this year with a degree in government and politics. "It's tough. I learned you can work so hard to pay for school that you don't do well in school."

During the last decade, the number of students working on and off campus has steadily increased, a stark contrast to the stereotype of today's twentysomethings as latte-sipping slackers.

And according to students and college officials in the Washington area and nationwide, an increasing number of students are working more hours, often holding down two and even three jobs because they must make money while pursuing college credits.

Figures from the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics show a significant increase in the proportion of full-time college students ages 16 to 24 who work, from 35 percent in 1972 to 51 percent in 1993. Full-time students now work an average of 25 hours a week.

The reasons for the rise are varied, but most observers blame the way tuition increases have outpaced inflation while financial aid, loans and grants have become more difficult to obtain.

"We have shifted so much of the financial burden to students [who] know they have to get that degree, that college is a life preserver, the difference between a comfortable life and a considerably rougher one," said Rick Kincaid, coordinator of student employment at the State University of New York at Brockport and editor of the Journal of Student Employment. "So they work, and they struggle to do it all. It's really pretty grim."

The trend has extended the time it takes students to obtain their degrees. It also has fueled fears among college administrators that students' academic and personal lives are suffering, though there is contradictory evidence on whether and how much grades fall when students work.

College presidents are using work statistics to buttress their pleas to Congress against cutting student loan funding.

"If we don't sustain the current aid program, students are going to have to work even more hours, and they'll be more likely to drop to part-time or just drop out," said David L. Warren, president of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities.

Jeff Blundin, 23, a full-time student at College Park who works 40 hours a week, said he recently had to financially "cut myself off from my parents so I could qualify for a loan."

Blundin attends classes during the day, and at 5 p.m., he puts on a green apron and waits on tables at a restaurant in a nearby shopping center. After finishing his shift about midnight, he comes home to read, study and write papers. On Saturdays, he often works double shifts.

"I know my grades would be better if I could stop working, but I just don't have that luxury," said Blundin, who said he came to college resigned to the prospect of working long hours to pay for tuition, rent, books and other expenses. As for maintaining a social life or strolling under the elms discussing philosophy, Blundin said dryly, "That would be great, but college hasn't been like that for a long time."

Many parents "start out planning to pay for college but lose their jobs, and then they just can't do it," said Patricia T. van der Vorm, executive director of the Career Center at American University.

Yomphana Adams, 20, a University of Maryland student, said her family recently had just such a "run of bad luck." Her stepfather lost his job as an air traffic controller at Andrews Air Force Base, and her mother, who has poor English skills, also lost a manual labor job recently because her employer moved, she said.

Adams, like Blundin, has cut herself off financially from her parents in hopes of qualifying for loans.

"It's a gigantic Catch-22: Either you don't have enough money to make it or you make the money but then your grades stink," said Adams, who takes four classes, works 22 hours a week at the information desk at the student center and rises at 5 a.m. to catch a train to College Park from Baltimore. When she first came to the college, she worked as many as three jobs, including a stint as a telemarketer. Her grades dipped, "and I became this massive introvert."

"In high school, I graduated with a 3.5 [grade-point] average, and I was involved in all these clubs," she said. "Coming here, I really had to learn how to manage my time. I go to sleep earlier than most people's grandparents."

The student employment picture has changed so much in recent years that students laugh when they learn that school counselors traditionally recommend that students seek career-related (but lower-paying) internships and limit their work to 20 hours a week.

"Yeah, right—do they also 'recommend' that I eat nothing but Minute Rice and rob banks?" asked Jason Putnam, 21, a full-time student at College Park, as he stocked the shelves of a College Park liquor store. Between that job and a side enterprise, doing automotive repairs for students, he figures he works 30 hours a week.

At College Park, there were so many complaints last year about how jobs were interfering with academics, prolonging college careers and making students' lives miserable, that President William E. Kirwan ordered a committee to study the problem.

"I see it all the time," said committee member Barbara Jacoby, director of commuter affairs and community service programs. "I teach French from 2 to 4 on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and last semester this student came to me and said she needed to leave at 3:45 because it took her that long to get across campus to her car and make it in time for her shift at the restaurant at 4:30."

"This priority is just wrong. It's the kind of thing that really raises faculty ire," Jacoby said.

As a result of the study, the school is creating a Student Employment Center designed in part to advocate for students with off-campus jobs. The center might persuade employers, for instance, to adjust students' hours to coordinate better with class schedules and the academic calendar.

Acknowledging those problems represents a change for college administrators, who have been arguing for years that holding down a job during college enhances students' character, academic progress and future job marketability.

"Yes, students are working for the money, but they get so much more out of it. They learn job skills, improve their résumés, learn how to budget their time," said Dennis Chavez, director of the student employment program at Cornell University. In 1992, Chavez conducted a study of 4,500 students at 18 colleges and universities and found little difference in the grades of working and non-working students. Kincaid said he'd seen studies "that found that if a student gets a job, the first thing they reduce is the hours spent watching TV."

University of Maryland officials agree that work is valuable, but they are trying to balance school and work demands and to steer students toward fewer hours and more on-campus and career-related jobs.

Many students there and at other U.S. colleges are taking advantage of programs in which their salaries from campus jobs are credited directly to their college tuition accounts. Lori Spevak, for instance, whose family income makes her ineligible for loans, is paying her $1,700-a-semester tuition primarily out of her 16-hour-a-week job driving a shuttle bus. One night a week, she doesn't sleep, working the graveyard shift. The 19-year-old sophomore from Bowie also works 20 to 25 hours selling musical instruments and sheet music at a Bowie store.

"I'm doing it right now to give my parents a break. My sister will be starting school, and they're going to have that expense," Spevak said.

Will she be able to keep up that pace and finish in four years? Spevak said she hopes to, but perpetual sleep-deprivation and granola-bar suppers sometimes get her down. Hers is the kind of situation that worries school officials.

"I know they need that paycheck," said John van Brunt, who directs the student counseling center. "I know they've got to work, but if it undercuts their whole experience of school, what's the point?"

JAMES P. GRANT

HON. ANDREW JACOBS, JR.

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, the world has lost one of the noblest of God's noblemen, James P. Grant, executive director of UNICEF until his untimely death on January 28.

UNICEF, I dare say, is the least controversial of all United Nations functions. There are many religions represented in the United Nations but none is represented better than the Sermon on the Mount when it comes to UNICEF. All thoughtful Americans will mourn the passing of Mr. Grant.

CROATIA ACTS TO REINVIGORATE PEACE PROCESS

HON. GEORGE P. RADANOVICH

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, on December 11, 1991, in response to Serbian aggressions against the neighboring Republic of Croatia resulting in Serbian occupation of one quarter of Croatia, the international community put forward the Vance plan, a framework to work toward peace in the region. Since that time, more than 3 years ago, Croatia has continuously cooperated with the United Nations and, along with Bosnia, has accepted numerous peace initiatives. The Serbian side, on the other hand, has rejected repeated offers of peace and remains recalcitrant in progress toward further peaceful negotiations.

The Vance plan, confirmed by U.N. Resolution 724 and 740, had six major goals: First, the cessation of hostilities and demilitarization of regions where military conflict had taken place; second, the withdrawal of the Yugoslav Army from Croatia; third, the maintenance of public order by supervision of local police made up based on prewar ethnic percentages; fourth, the protection of minorities in these areas; fifth, the placement of military observers along Croatia's border with Bosnia and Herzegovina; and sixth, the facilitation of the return of displaced persons and refugees. Pursuant to the Vance plan, the United Nation created protection areas [UNPA's] in Serb-occupied areas of Croatia, and introduced a protection force [UNPROFOR] in those UNPA's in order to carry out the objectives of the Vance plan and reestablish peace in the region.

During the more than 3 years since the institution of the Vance plan, the Republic of Croatia has renewed and extended the original 12-month mandate seven separate times. While some sort of public order has been maintained and the Yugoslav Army has partially departed, the UNPA's have not been demilitarized. Heavily armed Serbian paramilitary units remain, the local non-Serbian population continues to be expelled and in some cases killed, and it has not been possible for a single displaced person to return to these areas. According to the 1991 census, there were 261,942 non-Serbs in the UNPA's. Since the arrival of UNPROFOR at least 39,000 non-Serbs have been forced to flee, 347 have been killed, 26 women raped, and 1,618 tortured at the hands of the Serbian occupiers. This is an intolerable situation.

With the intransigence of the Serbs to engage in serious discussions of peace, Croatia's mandate renewals have amounted to no less than tacit U.N. support for the indefinite continued Serb occupation of Croatian lands seized by aggression. In real terms, the positive economic contributions of the U.N. presence in the occupied territories have actually provided support for the Serbian occupiers and proven a major hindrance to forcing the Serbs to the negotiating table.

In this light, I ask my colleagues to review Croatia's U.N. Ambassador Nobile's discussion reprinted below about Croatia's refusal to renew the UNPROFOR an eighth time, and invite Members to take a good hard look at some of the causes of the deadlock and suffering which Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina have endured for too long. Moreover, my colleagues, this action by the Croatian Government is completely supported by the Croatian people as evidenced by two resolutions by the Croatian Parliament authorizing the Government's decision and a third binding the Government to this course.

[From the Washington Post, Feb. 3, 1995]

CROATIA'S MOVE TOWARD PEACE

(By Mario Nobile, Croatian Ambassador to the U.N.)

Last month, the Republic of Croatia decided to terminate the mandate of the United Nations Protection Force (UNPROFOR) in the occupied territories of Croatia. The decision is designed to reinvigorate the negotiating process and to reach a peaceful settlement of the territories, which are internationally-recognized as part of Croatia but illegally occupied by Serbia, with the cooperation of local Serbs.

Contrary to the views held by some, including speculation in The Post's editorial of Jan. 18 ("Another Balkan War?") Croatia did not take this action in order to pursue war with the local Serbs or their patrons in Belgrade. Our objectives are the exact opposite.

The departure of UNPROFOR will shift the total cost of Serbian occupation from the international community to the Belgrade government. The $1 billion per year cost of maintaining UNPROFOR in Croatia has essentially become an "occupation fee" paid by U.N. member nations, including the United States, which itself contributes about $300 million.

The presence of UNPROFOR provides the occupying forces with economic sustenance through a continued stream of hard currency, through aid deliveries, through UNPROFOR-paid rents, through fuel brokering, and through infrastructure maintenance and development. UNPROFOR is probably the largest employer in the occupied territories.

Because Serbia is weakened from the effect of international sanctions, it cannot afford to fund both its activities in Bosnia and its support of Serbs occupying parts of Croatia. That makes it more likely that Serbia's President Milosevic will be compelled to work with the international community and Croatia to reach a negotiated settlement regarding Croatia's occupied territories.

It is clear that UNPROFOR is not a real deterrent to war, in Croatia or in Bosnia and Herzegovina. If Croatia were indeed intent on reintegrating its occupied territories by force, it could have done so already.

Croatia is further convinced that solving the problem of its occupied territories first can greatly improve the chances of a settlement in Bosnia along with the lines of the internationally-accepted Contact Group proposals. Here's why: A strong, reintegrated Croatia can better assist the Bosnian government through the Federation of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats, thus forging a more effective balance of power in the region.

Additionally, without having to maintain a 15,000-troop presence in Croatia, UNPROFOR can transfer resources to Bosnia and Herzegovina, where they are badly needed. U.N. Secretary General Boutros-Boutros Ghali has recently called for an additional 7,000 UNPROFOR troops for Bosnia. He is unlikely to meet that need without tapping existing U.N. assets.

There are risks associated with our decision regarding UNPROFOR. But Mr. Milosevic and his dependents in Croatia's occupied territories have used U.N. soldiers as a buffer to reaching an expeditious settlement of a situation which could go unsolved for years to come under the current circumstances. Croatia views such a statement as far more dangerous than taking a pragmatic, albeit dramatic, action that we are confident will result in an accelerated peace in the entire region of southeastern Europe.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT LAW ENFORCEMENT BLOCK GRANTS ACT OF 1995

SPEECH OF

HON. MARTIN R. HOKE

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, February 14, 1995

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 728) to control crime by providing law enforcement block grants.

Mr. HOKE. Mr. Chairman, my amendment is designed to address the problem of inaccurate reporting of crime statistics.

We all know that many localities do not make crime data gathering a top priority. However, under this bill their financial award will be based on their reported data. I am sure we all agree on the importance of making sure accurate data is used when the Bureau of Justice Assistance calculates awards.

My amendment states that if the director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance believes that the reported rate of violent crimes for a local unit of government is inaccurate, he must investigate the methodology used by the locality to determine the accuracy of the submitted data. If he determines that the submitted data is inaccurate—for whatever reason—he is to use the best comparable data available instead.

The amendment places no additional burden on the localities and gives the director the discretion to determine which cases deserve investigation.

Mr. Chairman, this is a common sense amendment. Local units of government should not benefit financially—at the expense of other localities—for inaccurately reported crime data.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman, for allowing me to explain my amendment. I urge its adoption.

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 728, AS REPORTED,
OFFERED BY MR. HOKE OF OHIO

Page 18, strike line 23 through "poses" on line 24, and insert the following:

"(C) UNAVAILABILITY AND INACCURACY OF INFORMATION.—

"(1) DATA FOR STATES.—For purposes".

Page 19, after line 4, add the following new paragraph:

"(2) POSSIBLE INACCURACY OF DATA FOR UNITS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT.—In addition to the provisions of paragraph (1), if the Director believes that the reported rate of part 1 violent crimes for a unit of local government is inaccurate, the Director shall—

"(A) investigate the methodology used by such unit to determine the accuracy of the submitted data; and

"(B) when necessary, use the best available comparable data regarding the number of violent crimes for such years for such unit of local government.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. KAREN L. THURMAN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mrs. THURMAN. Mr. Speaker, during rollcall vote No. 138 on H.R. 7, I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present I would have voted "no."

SUMMARY OF RULES COMMITTEE VOTES

HON. JOHN JOSEPH MOAKLEY

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, on January 4, 1995, the House adopted a new rule, clause 2(1)(2)(B) of rule XI, which requires that committee reports on any bill or other matter include the names of those voting for and against on rollcall votes taken on any amendment and on the motion to report. During consideration of the rule on the first day of the 104th Congress, an explanation included in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD by Chairman SOLOMON states:

It is the intent of this rule to provide for greater accountability for record votes in committees and to make such votes easily available to the public in committee reports. At present, under clause 2(e)(1) of rule XI, the public can only inspect rollcall votes on matters in the offices of the committee. It is anticipated that with the availability of committee reports to the public through electronic form the listing of votes in reports will be more bill-specific than earlier proposals to publish all votes in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD twice a year.

Upon examining the Rules Committee report to accompany House Resolution 44, the rule for House Joint Resolution 1—balanced budget constitutional amendment, I found it lacking in the type of information which I believe is vital for public understanding of what the members of the committee were actually voting on. The report under the heading of "summary of motion" gives so limited an account as to be almost meaningless. While the rule does not explicitly require the report to contain a description of the motion and amendment being offered, the intent of better informing the public seems to have been lost. The lack of information will force the public to search in other publications for information vital to understanding what the issue is for which the votes are being cast. There is no way that the public, unless present at the Rules Committee markup, could understand what, for example, "Make in order Frank amendment No. 27 from Record" means without going to the Rules Committee transcript or other informational sources such as the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. How would anyone know which CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the amendment was printed in? There is no date indicated. Also, the public would never know from the report that the Frank amendment would protect Social Security from cuts. The public would be better served if adequate information were included in the committee report.

With that in mind, I am, for the benefit of the public and the membership of this body, including the following summary of the rollcall votes which were taken in the Rules Committee on January 24, 1995:

LIFELONG INVOLVEMENT, DEVOTION, AND COMMITMENT DURING A DISTINGUISHED CAREER HAVE RESULTED IN A MAJOR AWARD FOR DR. DONALD CUSTIS

HON. G.V. (SONNY) MONTGOMERY

OF MISSISSIPPI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, my good friend and former Chief Medical Director of the VA, Dr. Donald Custis, was recently honored by the American Medical Association. On February 7, 1995, Dr. Custis received the prestigious Nathan Davis Award at a gala AMA presentation dinner at the Mayflower Hotel, attended by a large number of family, friends, and colleagues.

Although our work in the House prevented me from attending the dinner ceremony, I did have the great honor and pleasure to be one of those who recommended that Dr. Custis be considered for the award.

There follows an articles that appeared in the February issue of PN/Paraplegia News highlighting the distinguished career of this great American public servant:

[From the PN/Paraplegia News, February 1995]

THE CONSUMMATE ADVOCATE

The American Medical Association (AMA) has selected PVA Senior Medical Advisor Donald L. Custis, M.D., as a 1994 recipient of its prestigious Nathan Davis Award. A former surgeon general of the U.S. Navy and chief medical director of the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA), Dr. Custis joined PVA as director of medical affairs in 1984. He served as associate executive director of the Health Policy Department and continues as a consultant on a wide variety of healthcare issues. PVA Immediate Past President Richard Johnson nominated Dr. Custis for the AMA award in August 1994.

The Nathan Davis Award is given in the name of the founder of the approximately 290,000-physician member organization. It is presented each year to leaders in Congress and federal, state and local governments for outstanding contributions "to promote the art and science of medicine and the betterment of the public health." Dr. Custis received the award in the category of "Lifetime Service in Federal Government Executive Branch Career Public Service." Senator John Chafee (R-R.I.), Congresswoman Nancy Johnson (R-Conn.), and Governor Michael O. Leavitt (R-Utah) were selected in other categories.

On February 7, members of PVA's Executive Committee and invited guests from the U.S. House of Representatives, Senate, and Departments of Veterans Affairs and Defense attended a gala AMA presentation dinner to honor Dr. Custis and his family.

The AMA award is one more achievement in Dr. Custis's career, which has spanned 50 years and included numerous honors and distinctions in federal medicine. Following the outbreak of World War II in Europe, he registered early for the draft and applied for a Naval Reserve commission while attending Northwestern University Medical School in Chicago. He completed his internship and residency in general surgery at Presbyterian Hospital, Chicago, in 1944, entered active duty, and served in the Pacific Theater of Operations for the duration of the war, most notably on hospital ships during the Okinawa campaign and the initial occupation of Japan.

After a brief period of private practice following the war, Dr. Custis reentered active duty to pursue a career as a Navy surgeon and quickly rose in the ranks of executive medicine. He was appointed executive officer at the Philadelphia Naval Hospital (1967); commanding officer of the Naval Combat Hospital, Danang, Vietnam (1969); commanding officer of Bethesda Naval Hospital in 1970; and surgeon general of the Navy (Navy medicine's top post) in 1973. He retired with the rank of vice admiral in 1976.

In 1976, Dr. Custis continued his commitment to federal medicine by joining VA. He served as deputy assistant chief medical director for academic affairs, deputy chief medical director in 1978, and chief medical director from 1980 to 1984. He assumed this latter position at a crucial point in the VA healthcare system's history. Cumulative shrinking budgets in the Carter and Reagan administrations placed considerable strain on VA, the nation's largest healthcare provider—a trend that continues today.

Still, Custis's goal was to streamline. He strove to find ways to "do more with less" while gaining a reputation as a real fighter for every dollar he could find in the budget battles with Congress and the Office of Management and Budget. His skill and tenacity as an advocate for the VA health-care system—and the veterans it was designed to serve—won lasting admiration from friend and potential foe alike in the so-called "iron triangle" of veterans affairs: the House and Senate Committees on Veterans Affairs, VA itself, and the veterans' service organizations (VSOs). These friendships last to this day.

On August 19, 1994, in support of Dr. Custis's nomination for the AMA award, Senator Jay Rockefeller (R-W.VA), then chairman of the Senate Committee on Veterans Affairs, wrote, ". . . I rely on Dr. Custis' advice and counsel on a regular basis. . . . His insights and understanding about the Federal Government's role in health care, especially as a provider of care . . . have been invaluable to me. . . . He studies and analyzes, writes and speaks, leads, persuades, cajoles, and makes a difference on the role of the Federal Government in health care. And through all of his work, he remains the quintessential gentleman and professional."

Despite tight budgets, Dr. Custis drove VA—long centered on the traditional bearing of providing services for World War II and Korea War—veterans—to adapt itself to respond more readily to the needs and expectations of the new generation of service men and women from the Vietnam War. The Readjustment Counseling Program for Vietnam Veterans (Vet Center Program) was designed and implemented under his tenure.

In his farewell remarks to the VA Department of Medicine and Surgery, Dr. Custis wrote about his fellow Vietnam veterans: "My memories are made of this. I'll remember Vietnam. The brave men who fought and so often died there remain indelible on my mind. Not that their sacrifice exceeded those in previous conflicts, but because there was so little unity of national purpose to sustain them. How sad. It was the poignancy of that recall which brought me into VA as I left the Navy. How crass and cruel the accusation that we who care for him who has borne the battle, do so without empathy!"

Responding to the obvious needs of a rapidly aging veteran population, Dr. Custis nurtured the beginnings of VA's well-suited foray into geriatric medicine; he instituted training programs, research, education, and long-term-care services that have made VA the leader in geriatric medicine in the United States today. He strengthened the agency's long-standing role as the nation's largest partner in academic medicine through its affiliations with 126 medical schools. He expanded its award-winning research programs and saw the department's duty as backup to Department of Defense medicine in time of national emergency or crisis codified by Congress.

Dr. Custis remains an active, consummate advocate for the men and women who have served in defense of the United States. On joining PVA's staff, he conceived, directed, and implemented The Independent Budget Project, which publishes yearly detailed analyses of VA budget trends and needs. He forged the unprecedented coalition of VSOs (AMVETS, Disabled American Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and PVA) to draft

"The Independent Budget" and disseminate the document on Capitol Hill and to federal budget policymakers. The report continues to be published each year and is widely respected as a definitive statement of VA budget policy and needs.

In the early 1990's, Dr. Custis foresaw the battles that would be waged over national reform. He judged that sweeping changes calling for universal health-care, or even state reforms, could impose a direct threat to the survival of the VA system unless the department was allowed to compete and interact with those new national forces of change. To prepare PVA and the entire veterans' community for the storm that was coming, Dr. Custis convened a blue-ribbon panel of nationally recognized health-policy experts to review various scenarios for national reform and identify the appropriate VA response to those changes. Published in 1992, "Strategy 2000: The VA Responsibility in Tomorrow's National Health Care System" was a "first-of-its-kind" analysis showing that unless VA reformed itself in light of national changes, the department could lose its traditional reason for existence.

"Strategy 2000, Phase II: Meeting The Specialized Needs of Americans Veterans," the sequel published in 1994, challenged this same theory against the pending national reforms under consideration by Congress. The document's message, however, stated that with or without major congressional reforms and because of rapidly changing healthcare systems in the public and private sectors, VA should move swiftly to streamline and improve its own systems—or face the consequences. At risk were most VA healthcare programs, especially specialized services such as spinal-cord-injury medicine, advanced rehabilitation, prosthetics, mental health, long-term-care, and others that had been designed to meet the unique needs of the veteran population.

While veterans' needs may change along with VA's ability to meet those requirements, Dr. Custis has remained an alert watchman and a tenacious advocate. Writing of his commitment, Representative G. V. (Sonny) Montgomery (D-Miss.), long-time chairman of the House Committee on Veterans Affairs and currently ranking minority member of the committee, said, "Don Custis has dedicated his life to helping those who served in our armed forces. His work as a physician in the Navy and his involvement both as Surgeon General of the Navy and Chief Medical Director (of VA) allowed him to be involved in every major healthcare-policy decision in recent years."

Fortunately for PVA members (and all veterans) that involvement, level of devotion, and commitment continues.

MORRIS K. UDALL WILDERNESS ACT

HON. BRUCE F. VENTO

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join with Senator ROTH and other "true" conservatives who want to preserve our natural heritage in introducing the Morris K. Udall Wilderness Act. This legislation is needed to provide permanent wilderness designation and protection for Alaska, a magnificent and special place, the Northern Coastal Plain, the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge [ANWR].

The ANWR coastal plain is a unique ecosystem, long recognized for its rich biological diversity. Today over 200 notable species of wildlife depend upon the coastal plain for survival. The conspicuous—Muskoxen, wolves, polar and grizzly bears and the countless inconspicuous yet complex fauna and flora create a web of life, a substrata, like no place else on the face of the Earth.

One of my first assignments in Congress was to serve on the Alaska Lands Subcommittee with then-Chairman Mo Udall and John Seiberling. Over a 4 year period, Congress debated the appropriate disposition, designation and use of the Federal land in Alaska.

The final version of H.R. 39, signed into law by President Carter, is one of the most significant pieces of environmental laws ever enacted. While this legislation protected many of Alaska's unique resources, the final disposition of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge [ANWR] was left with limited safeguards, but not resolved. The House of Representatives strongly supported wilderness designation for ANWR, however, the compromise left open the possibility that this area could be opened for further exploration and development.

For the past 14 years the coastal plain has been in a twilight zone enjoying the status of wilderness without the full force and protection of the law. Today, the failure to designate the coastal plain as wilderness haunts us and places this unique ecosystem at risk. Opening the coastal plain is a top legislative priority for the oil and mineral industries and their advocates in the U.S. Congress. The developers have kept the pressure on today to proceed and are mounting an aggressive offensive to enact legislation which would open this special area. If we allow such a policy to be implemented, the unique ANWR ecosystem will be irreparably harmed. America's natural legacy would be significantly diminished by such a policy path.

The wilderness legislation which Senator ROTH and I are introducing today is intended to challenge and defeat the concerted effort for a short term boom and bust exploitation policy. Our initiative is certainly the policy path supported by the American people. The public recognizes and supports a strong national stewardship role by our Federal Government to save our natural legacy, our future generation's inheritance.

The American people want adequate protections for those special natural resources such as ANWR. The Udall Wilderness Act finally provides sound protection for ANWR.

Serving with Mo Udall was a distinct pleasure and honor. Chairman Udall was dedicated to protecting our Nation's crown jewels for future generations. He took such responsibilities seriously but always had a knack for making his points with wit and poignancy. In talking about the Alaska lands legislation, Mo spoke eloquently to all Americans: "not in our generation, not ever again, will we have a land and wildlife opportunity approaching the scope and importance of this one. In terms of wilderness preservation, Alaska is the last frontier. This time, given one great final chance, let us strive to do it right."

We couldn't do better than to honor Chairman Udall with this designation that he fought so hard to achieve. The American reservoir of values, vision and inspiration that Mo Udall evoked will be enlisted today as the 104th Congress acts to determine the fate of ANWR.

The wilderness designation of ANWR is indeed our last chance. Hopefully we will follow Mo's wise counsel and do it "right", as real conservatives.

EXTENSION OF COPYRIGHT TERM

HON. CARLOS J. MOORHEAD

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I am today introducing legislation which would extend the term of ownership of a copyrighted work from the life of the author plus 50 years to the life of the author plus 70 years. I am pleased that the gentlelady from Colorado, Mrs. SCHROEDER and Messrs. COBLE, GOODLATTE, BONO, GEKAS, BERMAN, NADLER, and CLEMENT are cosponsoring this legislation. This change will bring U.S. law into conformity with that of the European Union whose member states are among the largest users of our copyrighted works.

The last time the Congress considered and enacted copyright term extension legislation was in 1976. At that time the House report noted that copyright conformity provides certainty and simplicity in international business dealings. The intent of the 1976 act was twofold: First, to bring the term for works by Americans into agreement with the then minimum term provided by European countries; and second, to assure the author and his or her heirs of the fair economic benefits derived from the author's work. The 1976 law needs to be revisited since neither of these objectives is being met.

In October 1993, the European Union [EU] adopted a directive mandating copyright term protection equal to the life of the author plus 70 years for all works originating in the EU, no later than the first of July this year. The EU action has serious trade implications for the United States.

The United States and EU nations are all signatories of the Berne Copyright Convention which includes the so-called rule of the shorter term which accords copyright protection for a term which is the shorter of life plus 70 years or the term of copyright in the country of origin. Once this directive is implemented, U.S. works will only be granted copyright protection for the shorter life plus 50 year term before falling into the public domain. The main reasons for this extension of term are fairness and economics. If the Congress does not extend to Americans the same copyright protection afforded their counterparts in Europe, American creators will have 20 years less protection than their European counterparts—20 years during which Europeans will not be paying Americans for their copyrighted works. And whose works do Europeans buy more of than any other country? Works of American artists. This would be harmful to the country and work a hardship on American creators. I intend to schedule hearings on this issue in early summer.

EAGLE SCOUT HONORED

HON. WILLIAM O. LIPINSKI

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to bring to the attention of my colleagues an outstanding young individual from the Third Congressional District of Illinois who has completed a major goal in his scouting career. Douglas Pratt of Chicago, IL, has completed the requirements required to attain the rank of Eagle Scout. Douglas will be honored at an Eagle Scout Court on February 26, 1995.

The eagle rank is one of the highest and most prestigious ranks a Boy Scout can earn. It is important to note that less than 2 percent of all young men in America attain the rank of Eagle Scout. This high honor can only be earned by those Scouts demonstrating extraordinary leadership abilities. Douglas worked long and hard to learn and perform all the skills necessary to achieve this rank.

Douglas has been active in Scouting for several years at St. Mary Star of the Sea. In addition to being an outstanding member of Boy Scout Troop 1441, Douglas served as a den chief for the younger Cub Scout troops for 2 years. Because of his patience and skill with the younger boys, Douglas proved to be a natural leader and an excellent role model.

Douglas has also excelled in activities outside of Scouting. He is currently a sophomore at the Illinois Math and Science Academy. He is a writer on the school paper and editor for the satire paper. In the spring, he plans to join the basketball team. At the Ted Lenard Gifted Center, he graduated with honors and an impressive list of achievements. For example, in eighth grade, he was a member of the Academic Olympics team and also won the City Competition Science Fair.

For his Eagle Scout project, Douglas did an excellent job cleaning and repairing the area around Bachelor's Grove cemetery. In fact, Douglas in such an ambitious and talented Scout that has earned enough merit badges to attain the honor of Eagle Palm, a honor even more prestigious than the Eagle Scout. Douglas is an outstanding young man who deserves to be commended for his leadership, hard work, and service. I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating Douglas on his achievement as Eagle Scout. Let us also wish him the very best in all his future endeavors.

THE DOMESTIC OIL AND GAS PRODUCTION TAX INCENTIVE ACT

HON. STEVE LARGENT

OF OKLAHOMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. LARGENT. Mr. Speaker, today, I am pleased to introduce along with my Oklahoma colleagues the Domestic Oil and Gas Production Tax Incentive Act.

Recently, the Secretary of Commerce reported the results of an investigation conducted, under the Trade Expansion Act, into the impact of crude oil imports on the national security of the United States. The investigation determined that oil imports threaten to impair the national security of the United States. Clearly, it is vital that we take immediate action to remove this threat to our national security. By removing unnecessary impediments to domestic exploration and development we can fortify our domestic oil and gas industry and begin to correct this dangerous oil trade deficit.

The preservation of marginal well production and the encouragement of new oil and natural gas production provides a blueprint for fast, effective action to protect our Nation's vital economic and security interests.

Currently, nationwide we plug a marginal well about every 30 minutes. Since 1983, some 450,000 petroleum jobs have been lost, and nearly half of our independent oil companies have gone out of business during the same time period. In 1993, nearly 17,000 domestic oil wells were abandoned, an average of 46.3 per day. Plugging an oil well is permanent. After a well has been plugged it is then cost prohibitive and not always technically feasible to re-lease and reequip the well to recover the remaining oil and gas.

It is my belief that this bill provides a positive first step toward revitalizing our Nation's dwindling energy industry. I encourage my colleagues to join me in this effort to decrease our reliance on foreign crude imports and reinvigorate a vital component of our economy—the domestic oil industry.

RICHARD DEMARY: A FLIGHT ATTENDANT ON USAIR FLIGHT 1016

HON. BUD SHUSTER

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, sometimes, when confronted with appalling circumstances beyond our most ardent imagination, individuals summon forth courage and fortitude that nearly defies belief.

Such is the case of Richard DeMary, a flight attendant from Coraopolis, PA, who was aboard the doomed USAir Flight 1016 which crashed near Charlotte, NC, on July 2, 1994.

Flight 1016 took off from Charlotte/Douglas International Airport in heavy rain and wind. Moments later, the DC-9 plummeted into the woods, broke apart, and burst into a fireball.

No Hollywood screenwriter could devise a more compelling story than what Mr. DeMary did in the next few minutes. An official account later read:

After the aircraft came to a rest, DeMary first freed a severely injured fellow flight attendant from her seat and carried her from the wreckage. Despite the threat of secondary explosions, DeMary returned to the aircraft and rescued a small child from the tail section. He re-entered the torn fuselage to pull the child's injured mother to safety and returned a third time to rescue another passenger.

His efforts did not stop there. He kicked open the door of a house in which part of the aircraft was embedded and attempted to reach other trapped passengers until heavy smoke forced him to withdraw. Despite burns on his arms and an injured ankle . . . DeMary helped move a downed telephone pole that was blocking a street and preventing fire fighting equipment from getting closer to the wreckage.

Through the sound and fury, Richard DeMary was brave and selfless; for his actions, he was awarded the Flight Safety Foundation's Heroism Award.

Deeds such as this summon within all of us a feeling of elation and humility. They are deeds that ask us to pause a moment and attempt to truly grasp the heights of human pathos and its deliverance, human courage.

SEVENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS
OF THE UNITED STATES

HON. NITA M. LOWEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the League of Women Voters on 75 years of extraordinary service to our democracy.

In 1920, women throughout the Nation cast their first ballot for Congress and President of the United States, forever changing the character of our country and of our politics. It was the League of Women Voters which informed and engaged these millions of newly enfranchised citizens.

Today, the League of Women Voters has over 1,000 chapters with some 150,000 members, both women and men. It continues to shape our public dialogue through study of major policy questions, and through the encouragement of community service and participation.

In Westchester County, where I live, the League of Women Voters is a leading sponsor of progressive reforms. Each year, the league produces thousands of voter guides to help us make informed decisions, publishes a directory of elected officials, and sponsors scores of debates with ample opportunity for citizen involvement.

That vibrant tradition has helped produce leaders such as Ruth Hinerfeld, who rose to lead the national league organization after a long and successful experience with the Westchester chapter.

I am also very proud to say that the founder of the League of Women Voters, Carrie Chapman Catt, chose to spend the last decades of her life in New Rochelle. Today, the city of New Rochelle and its local league chapter are temporarily renaming Paine Avenue, where Mrs. Catt lived, League of Women Voters Avenue. It is a fitting tribute to a leader whose remarkable works continue to shape our lives.

Mr. Speaker, 75 years after its founding, the league's mission is as essential as ever. For though the right to vote is secure, the responsible exercise of that right remains an ideal for which we shall ever strive.

It is a pleasure to thank the league for all it has done, and all it will do.

THE MADISONVILLE METEOR'S CENTENNIAL

HON. JOHN BRYANT

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. BRYANT of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to call to this body's attention the history of one of the most enduring institutions in the Fifth Congressional District of Texas, which I am privileged to serve in this House of Representatives.

For the last century one of the major agricultural centers of this district has been Madison County and its county seat of Madisonville. And, not coincidentally, during the last 100 years that beautiful section of our State has been served, informed, and led by the Madisonville Meteor.

The Meteor publishes its centennial edition on the very appropriate date of February 22. That is, of course, the birthday of George Washington, the father of our country. While this part is pure coincidence, I am proud to note that George Washington, the Madisonville Meteor and I share the observance of the same birth date; however, I do stipulate that my birthday was several decades later than the Meteor's and a full 215 years after President Washington's.

Despite all of its accomplishments under the leadership of a century of dedicated publishers, editors, and staffers, the Meteor could be most proud of its biggest and longest-running error—the mistake it made in selecting its own name.

The story goes that the newspaper's founder, Thomas J. Stevens, showed up amid the rolling, tree-lined hills of Madison County with a wagon full of printing equipment and a plan to produce a newspaper that would be so full of local news and advertising that area residents would find it indispensable. Maybe so, Mr. Stevens' first hired man observed, but he personally figured the paper would be a short flash and then disappear, leaving no more than a footnote to the history of Madison County. Kind of like a meteor causing a quick flash, then disappearing forever, he reckoned.

So why not call it the Madisonville Meteor, reasoned the amused publisher?

A succession of publishers have enjoyed the irony of the name and the call to civic duty. Edna Keasling now publishes this venerable weekly that manages to retain its down-home charm and interests, while more than holding its own on the electronic lanes of the post-nuclear information superhighway.

Publisher Keasling has noted that of more than 5,000 issues of the Meteor, the two most popular and most consulted are the ones marking the centennial of Madison County, created in 1853 and organized in 1854, and the 50th anniversary of the Meteor.

There will be a strong new light glowing at the Meteor as Ms. Keasling, editor Daniel Humphries, sports editor Mark Kuchera, typesetter Melissa Fautheree, compositor Marta Nichols, bookkeeper-circulation staffer Deenna Tobias, circulation staffer Carolyn Standley and darkroom operator Martha Fautheree pool their talents on Wednesday, February 22, to present Volume 101, No. 1, of the Madisonville Meteor.

I join the Meteor's many other friends in anticipating the first edition of the misnamed but well-placed newspaper's second century.

As an enduring example of our Nation's unique marriage of free speech and the free market, the meteor has earned our thanks and congratulations. Just as it will when our descendants celebrate Volume 201, No. 1, of the Meteor as it begins its third century.

BIPARTISAN INITIATIVE TO REAUTHORIZE THE CLEAN WATER ACT

HON. JAMES A. HAYES

OF LOUISIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to be a part of a bipartisan coalition of Members who have come together to present a balanced and reasonable strategy to reauthorize the Clean Water Act.

The legislation we are introducing today is the consequence of months of hard work last year building consensus among disparate parties to this debate. The States, cities, and counties, and the business and agricultural communities had significant input into our development process. The resultant product for the most part tracks language circulated as an alternative to last year's failed attempt to reauthorize, and just like our effort last year, its intent is to open up an honest dialog to draft a progressive and pragmatic plan. This proposal is just the starting point, and the continued participation and thoughtful analysis of all of the interested players is critical to helping us perfect this important legislation as it moves through the committee markup process.

This bill seeks to address the shortfalls as well as enhance the strengths of the current CWA programs. First and foremost, our proposal provides an affordable authorization level of $10 billion for the State revolving fund over the next 6 years. In doing so, we propose, in a fiscally responsible manner consistent with the current budgetary climate, to provide needed funds to States to improve water quality, presenting a more accurate picture of what the Federal Government can afford in these areas, while maintaining high enough allocations to allow the programs to remain viable.

Another crucial area that this bipartisan initiative also intends to address is the nonpoint source section 319 program. Developing innovative strategies to address our nonpoint source problems without the onerous and often-counterproductive command and control regulatory overkill will be important to the future effectiveness of the entire Clean Water Program.

Finally, among the other important provisions of the bill is a long overdue effort to comprehensively resolve the enigma that is our Federal Wetlands Program. The obscure and burdensome section 404 permitting program would be revised to establish a system of multiclassifications that protects the most pristine wetlands and coastal marshes, while also preserving the rights of property owners to utilize those lands that are less valuable.

I firmly believe that too often—and the section 404 wetland permit program is a prime example—the institutional arrogance and ignorance of bureaucrats and government agencies has spawned ineffective and inflexible programs beyond the scope of their intended authorizations. These programs are neither cost effective nor improve the quality of our waters. We have forgotten that properly motivated individuals and businesses, rather than bureaucrats and politicians, are much better equipped to efficiently allocate financial and human resources toward the economic and environmental well-being of their land. We must give them the tools to do so.

Therefore, I welcome my colleagues and the affected parties to the clean water debate to comment on this legislation because only with substantive and constructive deliberation will the right balance between the economy and the environment be reached.

LEGISLATION AUTHORIZING SALE OF ALASKA POWER ADMINIS-TRATION

HON. DON YOUNG

OF ALASKA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I rise to introduce legislation to sell the Alaska Power Administration's two hydroelectric projects.

This legislation will authorize the sale of the Alaska Power Administration. The Alaska Power Administration is different from the other Federal Power Marketing Agencies of the Department of Energy. Its two hydroelectric projects, Eklutna and Snettisham, were never intended by Congress to remain indefinitely under Federal control. The Eklutna Project Act, for example, states that "Upon completion of amortization of the capital investment allocated to power, the Secretary is authorized and directed to report to the Congress upon the feasibility and desirability of transferring the Eklutna project to public ownership and control in Alaska." Moreover, these two projects were created specifically to promote economic and industrial development in Alaska, and they are not the product of a water resource management plan.

I am a strong advocate of insuring that Alaskans control their own destiny, which is what this bill is all about. It will put the management of these two hydroelectric projects into the hands of those who best know Alaska. One project will be sold to the State of Alaska, and the other will be sold to a group of three Alaskan public electric utilities.

Equally as important, this legislation will relieve the Federal Government of the expense of operating and maintaining these two projects. It also provides for the termination of the Alaska Power Administration once the sale is complete, further saving money for taxpayers.

It is important to note that this legislation provides necessary safeguards for the environment. It requires the State of Alaska and the Eklutna purchasers to abide by the memorandum of agreement they entered into regarding the protection and enhancement of fish and wildlife. The legislation makes this legally enforceable.

Last year a similar provision was included in the H.R. 300, the Re-inventing Government package and the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources reported S. 2383, the Alaska Power Administration Sale Authorization Act. The administration testified in strong support of this legislation. Unfortunately, there was little time to consider them late in the session. With early introduction this Congress, I am hopeful that we will see this legislation enacted into law.

There is one provision which needs to be included in the Alaska Power Administration legislation before it is sent to the President for signature, but I have not included it because it addresses the Internal Revenue Code. I hope to have that issue addressed in other legislation.

TRIBUTE TO THE CITIZENS OF MARFA, TX

HON. HENRY BONILLA

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Speaker, I stand before my colleagues today to pay a tribute to the citizens of Marfa, TX for their courage and commitment in the face of adversity. Recently, the community suffered a tremendous loss when an important, historical building on Marfa's main street was devastated by fire.

For more than half a century, the old building was part of Marfa's landscape. At the time of the fire, the city hall, the police department and emergency medical services were located in the building. It also housed most of Marfa's important records. Not only did the fire ruin these important offices and documents, but it also destroyed a piece of the town's history.

Although most of you have never been to Marfa, you might recall the town as the setting of the famous silver-screen classic, "Giant." One of the landmarks from the movie, the Palace Theater, also suffered extensive smoke and water damage. However, the destruction this fire caused hasn't slowed the town down one bit.

The fire occurred even as Marfa was preparing for a big spring festival celebrating "Giant." Yet, instead of letting the fire ruin their celebration, the citizens of Marfa have pulled together to repair and restore the Palace Theater in time for the May event.

Since the fire, the town has pretty much returned to business as usual, although that business is being taken care of in temporary offices. This would not have been possible without the outpouring of help and generosity from so many Marfa citizens. Special thanks goes to Marfa Mayor Fritz Kahl, whose leadership and determination helped the folks of Marfa pull together to get through this sad situation. In addition, such people as County Judge Jake Brisbin Jr., Glenn Garcia, Abe Gonzalez, David and Ellen Kimble, Judy Ledbetter, Charles Mertz, Teryn Muench, Floyd Neal, Carolyn and Bill Renfro, Blaine Shuffield, Rusty Taylor and many others have made this situation a lot more bearable for the town. The services offered by the Big Bend Regional Medical Center and the Marfa Border Patrol Sector were also very helpful.

And the generosity didn't stop at the Marfa City limits. Folks from other west Texas towns came to lend a helping hand and bring extra emergency equipment. Firefighters from Alpine, Fort Stockton, and Fort Davis valiantly fought the blaze right alongside the Marfa Volunteer Fire Department. The spirit of comradery in west Texas is unmatched.

I salute the citizens of Marfa for preserving their history and protecting their future. Although a fire destroyed documents and a historical building, it could never shatter the spirit of pride and optimism which runs deep in the hearts of Texans.

THE DOMESTIC OIL AND GAS PRO-DUCTION AND PRESERVATION ACT

HON. FRANK D. LUCAS

OF OKLAHOMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to bring my colleagues' attention to a growing threat to our national security—our increased reliance on foreign oil. Last year, for the first time in the history of our Nation, we imported over half the oil that we consumed. By the year 2010, the Department of Energy [DOE] estimates that imports could make up as much as 60 percent of our Nation's petroleum needs.

While imports are rising, U.S. oil production is on a drastic decline. Crude oil production in 1994 averaged 6.6 million barrels per day, in comparison to the 6.8 million barrels per day in 1993—this represents one of the lowest oil production levels in the history of our country. Oil prices continue to fluctuate and natural gas prices are on a steady decline.

The truth is, that it's just plain tough for domestic oil and gas producers to operate in today's market. The cost of operation, high taxes, and costly environmental regulations make it difficult to continue to drill for oil and gas. It's time for us to start paying attention and provide some relief and incentives for the American energy industry. Everyone talks a good game about "America first" * * * "buy American products" * * * "hire American labor" * * * and I agree. But, those same people don't seem to have a problem pouring foreign gasoline in our American cars.

Earlier today I, along with Representatives COBURN, BREWSTER, ISTOOK, LARGENT, and WATTS, introduced a plan that would help boost domestic production and lessen our reliance on foreign oil. The Domestic Oil and Gas Production and Preservation Act, would provide tax incentives for new and marginal well production; relief from burdensome Federal regulations; and would abolish existing bans on the export of U.S. crude oil. This bill will put people back to work, boost revenues, and help make the domestic oil and gas industry more competitive in world markets.

According to a recent investigation conducted by the U.S. Department of Commerce, this bill is needed now more than ever. The Commerce investigation, conducted under the Trade Expansion Act, apparently determined that increased oil imports could impair the national security of the United States. The Trade Expansion Act requires the President to respond to the report within 90 days of the Commerce Department's findings. It is imperative that Congress and the President take action to alleviate this threat to our national security.

Many of my colleagues will turn a blind eye to this report. However, I believe it is a warning signal that we must not ignore. This is not just an oil State problem, the energy crisis is a national concern that everyone should be worried about.

U.S. marginal wells—or low-income wells—are particularly at risk. Most people don't understand that each time a marginal well is plugged, jobs are lost and we increase our reliance on foreign oil and run the risk of losing one of our Nation's natural resources forever. Plugging a well is like shutting down a small business. When we plug marginal wells, we also lose jobs in our communities back home. Plugging a well is permanent. The only way to recover these resources is to drill a new well, which is extremely costly.

Nationally, we plug a marginal well every 30 minutes. In Oklahoma, we plug eight marginal wells per day. In 1993, the State of Oklahoma had over 70,000 marginal wells in operation. The same year, nearly 1,356 marginal wells were abandoned. As a result, my State of Oklahoma lost nearly $20 million in gross revenues.

This bleak situation has forced businesses to close, imperiled thousands of jobs, and caused States to lose large amounts of production and income taxes. Over the last decade, this country has lost nearly 500,000 jobs as a result of low domestic oil and gas productivity.

It's time for the U.S. Government to open its eyes and support a plan to help restore our domestic industry. I believe that the bill we introduced today marks the first step in this plan. It will help stop the abandonment of wells, pump revenues back into State and Federal budgets, and preserve our Nation's natural resources.

It is in the best interest of our country to support this bill and protect our Nation's oil supplies. It would be one of our Nation's darkest days should we awaken to find ourselves with a depleted oil supply, leaving us totally at the mercy of the world's unstable oil producing nations. Our Nation's oil and gas supplies are a national treasure that must be preserved and maintained. I look forward to working with my colleagues and I urge them to support this critical legislation.

LONG ISLAND'S OWN EINSTEINS

HON. MICHAEL P. FORBES

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, it is quite an honor for any Representative to have one finalist from the Westinghouse science competition from their district. I have the unique honor to represent two budding scientists recently named finalists for the Westinghouse science competition.

Neil Catillo Srivastava, 17, of Ward Melville High School in East Setauket researched nitric oxide and its effect on cell movement and wound healing.

Debleena Sengupta, 17, also of Ward Melville High School, completed a project in biochemistry that was designed to remove toxic metals, such as uranium, cost-efficiently from water.

Their outstanding results were made possible by the effort of local high schools to establish and maintain intensive research courses, staffed by experienced teachers. Since the 1980's the number of high schools on Long Island offering such research courses have more than tripled; now 40 of 114 public high school are in my eastern Long Island district.

High-technology medicine and environmental sciences are the wave of the future. On eastern Long Island, from Smithtown to Montauk and across the Nation, parents and teachers are working together to foster and support student's natural interest in the sciences. It is this natural interest that we must cultivate for the future of this Nation. Budding young scientists, like Neal and Debleena, illustrate the possibilities for years to come.

Please, join me in recognizing the incredible success not only of Neil and Debleena, but also their teachers and all of eastern Long Island's quality schools. I submit for the RECORD an article in Newsday from January 25, 1995, that details their accomplishments.

[From Newsday, Jan. 25, 1995]

LONG ISLAND'S EINSTEINS

(By John Hildebrand)

Long Island led the nation yesterday in the number of students named finalists in the Westinghouse science competition, capturing nine slots out of 41, nearly double the number produced by traditional powerhouse New York City.

Honored for their research in fields ranging from genetics to treatment of municipal wastewater, the Long Island high-school seniors were hailed by teachers and principals as persistent, self-motivated students who had helped their schools "come of age." The nine finalist positions are the most ever won by students on the Island, and surpassed the city's total for the first time.

Three of the Island's schools produced two finalists each—the same number as New York City's legendary Bronx High School of Science. Island schools with twin finalists were Ward Melville High School in East Setauket, John F. Kennedy High School in Bellmore and Paul D. Schreiber High School in Port Washington.

Three other Island schools—Jericho, Long Beach and Lawrence High Schools—had one finalist each. Jericho's Soo Yeun Kim, who died in a car crash Nov. 28, was honored posthumously—the first such award in the competition's history.

Results were announced yesterday from the science competition's Washington, D.C., headquarters. All finalists will receive cash awards of at least $1,000, and the top 10 will receive larger scholarships including a first prize of $40,000.

As news of the latest honors swept through school hallways, results were attributed to efforts by local high schools to establish intensive research courses, staffed by teachers experienced in prepping students for competition. Since the 1980s, the number of high schools in the region offering such opportunities to students has more than tripled, to a total of about 40 of 114 public high schools on the Island.

"This says something about the caliber of Long Island schools—we've come of age here in terms of the programs we're offering," said Steven Kussin, principal of Lawrence High School. He formerly taught at Brooklyn's Midwood High School, another city school that traditionally excels in the Westinghouse contest.

Lawrence High School's winning student, Joel Wollman, 18, had submitted a project involving extensive psychological research.

Like many colleagues, Kussin views the focus on science research in his school as part of a broader movement that also involves encouraging larger number of students to take college-level Advanced Placement courses. "Standards are back, and the proof is in the pudding," the principal added.

Local educators say this year's Westinghouse results are all the more remarkable since the national contest has grown increasingly competitive. Since 1985, the number of science projects submitted by high-school seniors nationwide has jumped more than 60 percent, to 1,660 this year. Local teachers and principals generally voice satisfaction over results, though some worry the competition and publicity surrounding it could put undue pressure on some students.

Finalists themselves accepted the backslaps of classmates and teachers yesterday, while also trying to focus their attention on midterm exams that are being administered this week across New York State. Many school authorities said official recognition would be extended to finalists as soon as normal classes resume.

"I was just totally shocked," said one winner, Supinda Bunyavanich, 17, of Port Washington, who received the news by phone on Monday afternoon. "I was having a snack and watching TV, and then I was nearly screaming."

Another finalist, Daniel Sims, 17, of Bellmore said that school officials "went nuts" when he called them with the news after being notified himself by contest officials.

For Lawrence's Joel Wollman, finalist status brought special satisfaction. The teenager long had endured good-natured ribbing from classmates over his psychological research, which involved efforts to discover why one person's yawning prompts the same behavior in others. "Once I entered the finals, all that stopped," the teenager said.

Finalists were drawn from 300 national semifinalists, including 41 on the Island. They will be flown to Washington in March to compete before panels of eminent researchers for $205,000 in scholarships. The competition, known as Science Talent Search, draws funding from a foundation established by Westinghouse Electric Corp.

New York City, as usual, produced far more semifinalists than the Island this year, with 84. But the advantage shifted with the announcement of finalists—New York had five—an irony not lost on educators who have seen Long Island schools draw upon the experience of city high schools.

"What suburban schools are beginning to understand is that if you want to win, you have to give teachers enough time to work with students on their projects," said Stan Teitel, coordinator for student research at Manhattan's Stuyvesant High School. Stuyvesant produced 29 semifinalists, the highest number for any school. It had two finalists.

Directors of school research programs on the Island acknowledge their debt to the city's schools, while adding that their recent success is due to other factors as well. Among these are the support of parents with enough money to send their teenagers to summer research institutes on college campuses, and the presence of local research centers, such as the State University at Stony Brook, which supplement the training provided by high schools. A majority of the Long Island finalists attended such summer programs.

"It's Long Island coming into its own," said Melanie Krieger, research coordinator at Ward Melville High School, which produced 12 semifinalists this year. The schools' finalists are Debleena Sengupta, 17, whose project dealt with removal of metal contaminants from wastewater, and Neil Castillo Srivastava, 17, who examined the use of nitric oxide in healing wounds.

Some of this year's local finalists drew on personal experience for their projects. Reed Levine, 17, of Bellmore, did an extensive study of ski accidents in an attempt to improve safety, after a neighbor died in an accident. Tracy Phillips, 17, of Long Beach, developed an electronic sensor to help the sight-impaired count currency, in memory of a brother who was blind and died young.

But there was no award more poignant than that given posthumously to Jericho's

Soo Yeun Kim. Jericho High School will receive a special $5,000 grant in her name. The school's principal, Mathew Mandery, said the news of Soo's award was welcome, but it also brought back the sadness of her loss.

"I guess in moments like this, we are undeniably proud of her accomplishments, but just wish she were here for us," he said.

As the number of students entering the Westinghouse competition has mounted, teachers in both city and suburban schools have tried to encourage students to look upon research as an activity to be enjoyed for its own sake, rather than for winning prizes. Ward Melville High School's research program has adopted the motto, "To Be In It Is to Win It." The Bronx High School of Science takes a similar approach.

Some educators worry, nonetheless, that students who don't win at least semifinalist status might become discouraged, especially in light of the fact that many devote two or more years to their projects. "Kids who might have the potential to be wonderful researchers later on might come away from this experience with a bad taste in their mouth," said Carole Greene, an assistant principal at Bronx Science.

Others insist that most students involved in Westinghouse competitions have wide enough interests that they are unlikely to become unraveled over a single contest.

TRIBUTE TO MARIA VICTORIA

HON. SOLOMON P. ORTIZ

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend and pay tribute to Ms. Maria Victoria, the newly selected Mr. Amigo.

Every year, members of the Mr. Amigo Association, who represent the city of Brownsville, TX, travel to Mexico City to select a new Mr. Amigo to serve as honored guest of the Mr. Amigo festivities in Brownsville, TX. The Mr. Amigo festivity is a 4-day international event in which the United States and Mexico are joined in celebration of the cultures of these neighboring countries. During the Mr. Amigo celebration, which originated as a pre-Lenten festival, Brownsville citizens participate in a series of parades, dances, and parties to demonstrate the goodwill of both countries. It is a well planned, major function which is enjoyed and eagerly anticipated by many south Texans as well as our winter visitors.

Ms. Maria Victoria is the 31st Mexican citizen to be honored by the Mr. Amigo Association. She has been a successful artist whose talent dates back to the Golden Cinema Era of Mexican music and films. At the tender age of 9, with the encouragement of her two sisters, Maria debuted in "La Carpa Mexico" for which she was paid 9 pesos. In 1949, however, she launched her enormously successful adult career at the Teatro Margo in Mexico City. Her first hit, "Soy Feliz", catapulted her to the top of the popularity charts. Then there followed an avalanche of musical hits, to name but a few: "Esta Sellado", "Eso", "Como un Perro", "Mi Ultimo Fracaso", "Mil Besos", "Sabes Que Te Tengo Ganas" . . . She has appeared in such classic Mexican films as: "Serenata de Acapulco", "Sí mi Vida", "Mujeres de Teatro", "No me Vuelvo a Enamorar", "Monte De Piedad". For 14 uninterrupted years, Maria Victoria has turned to comic roles such as TV series, "La Criada Bien Criada". Maria Victoria has made 48 movies, turned out more than 100 albums, starred in numerous TV programs, and has made five theater performances on the stage of Mexico City.

Ms. Maria Victoria is the perfect recipient of the Mr. Amigo award, for she has, over the long period of her career, taken her unique song, screen, and stage performances to numerous countries, including sold-out performances in the United States. A true ambassador of her country and her culture, she has been praised by numerous organizations for her unconditional commitment to improve mutual understanding and cooperation between Mexico and the United States. Ms. Maria Victoria should be recognized for both her artistic ability, and for her contribution to the commitment of understanding between nations.

Mr. Amigo, Ms. Maria Victoria, will receive the red-carpet treatment when she visits Brownsville as the city's honored guest during the upcoming Mr. Amigo celebration. During her stay on the border, she will make personal appearances in the parades and at other fiesta events. Official welcome receptions will be staged by organizations in Cameron County, TX, and the cities of Brownsville, TX, and Matamoros, Tamaulipas, Mexico.

I ask my colleagues to join me in extending congratulations to Ms. Maria Victoria for being honored with this special award.

IN HONOR OF SGT. LEWIS J.
PERRY, JR.

HON. ROSA L. DeLAURO

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Ms. DeLAURO. Mr. Speaker, today I'm pleased to honor a distinguished citizen from Hamden, CT, Sgt. Lewis J. Perry, Jr. After 25 years of exemplary service, Sergeant Perry will retire this week from the Hamden Police Department.

I have known Lew Perry for many years and have always found his dedication and compassion inspiring. Lew is well known to our community for his extraordinary commitment to his public responsibilities. An exemplary police officer and a caring individual, Lew finds the time to help at every level. During his long career, Sergeant Perry has received over 35 commendations and letters of recognition for exemplary performance.

In 1982, he was honored as the Police Officer of the Year and earned the respect of his superiors who promoted him in September 1992 to administrative assistant to the chief of police. Lew Perry stands out as a shining example of the positive effect that one person can have in his community.

Sergeant Perry is also a prominent leader in his hometown of Clinton, CT. He serves as a selectman and as chairman of the Democratic Town Committee. He has given of his time in the past as a member of the Board of Finance and the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Lew Perry has compiled a remarkable public record and I know that his wife, Pamela, and his two sons, Michael and Lewis, take great pride in his many accomplishments. Sergeant Perry is admired by all who benefit from his work and his public commitment.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to salute and honor Sgt. Lewis J. Perry, Jr. I commend him on a lifetime of invaluable service to the citizens of our community and wish him well in his new position as associate director of public safety at Southern Connecticut State University.

GO AFTER THE CROOKS AND CHISELERS WHO ARE DEFRAUDING THE FEDERAL FOOD STAMP PROGRAM; SUPPORT THE FOOD STAMP TRAFFICKING AND PENALTY ACT OF 1995

HON. RON WYDEN

OF OREGON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. Speaker, today I introduce the Food Stamp Trafficking and Prevention Act of 1995, a measure which will step up the penalties levied on criminals intent on tearing large holes in this Nation's most valuable social safety net.

Each year, waste, fraud and abuse in the Food Stamp Program costs taxpayers as much as $2 billion. Laundering for cash, or exchanging food stamps for contraband items such as guns or drugs, accounts for hundreds of millions of dollars of that total. Occasionally, this activity occurs through retailers who have been initially certified as bona fide grocery stores, but which are, in effect, no more than fronts for the processing of illegal stamp transactions.

This activity not only denies fundamental nutrition to some of our Nation's most vulnerable citizens. It also destroys public confidence crucial to the continuation of a very valuable program.

I have long been a critic of our Government's lackluster efforts to investigate food stamp fraud, and bring to justice persons who are ripping off the system. Our investigative strength at the Food and Consumer Services Division, for example, is about half of what it was a dozen years ago—despite steady growth in food stamp use and fraud. These personnel cuts make no sense. We need more cops on the beat. Improvements in anti-fraud technology such as the electronic benefits transfer program will not produce maximum results until we have more people to make cases and bring the crooks to trial.

I have recently pressed my case on this subject with White House domestic advisors. I am hopeful that the administration's welfare reform efforts will improve our capacity to police fraud in this important program. I believe my position has strong, bi-partisan support in this House.

Beyond increasing our investigative effort, we must also look to establishing real penalties that will cause real pain for the chiselers who are, quite literally, taking food from the mouths of this Nation's poverty-stricken elderly, working poor and defenseless, destitute children.

The Food Stamp Trafficking Prevention and Penalty Act has three important elements.

First, we will strengthen current forfeiture provisions to allow the Government to take all assets resulting from, or involved in the commission of food stamp trafficking. I have devised this language in close cooperation with the inspector general of the Department of Agriculture. We are both convinced that this toughened penalty is absolutely necessary to discourage trafficking, and close down what amounts to a nearly no-fault avenue to criminal success now present in the system.

Second, we allow the Secretary of Agriculture to require that owners of food stores certified to exchange food stamps submit a valid business license. The intent of this section is to verify that persons in the food stamp networks are actual retailers, and not criminal fronts set-up primarily to illegally launder the stamps.

Third, the bill requires periodic reporting by certified stores to ensure that they are indeed in a bona fide business, and are not merely fronts for laundering. This can be accomplished in a user-friendly way by requesting copies of Federal tax forms which delineate volume and scope of business activity.

Again, the inspector general has argued that this verification procedure is crucial to the program's sound and honest functioning, and I believe my bill creates a system that will be relatively easy and inexpensive for retailers certified for food stamp business.

Mr. Speaker, as Congress moves forward with the welfare reform debate, the holes in system integrity must be closed. Effective welfare reform must be built on a strong foundation in order to guarantee taxpayer support and ensure that resources go not to the crooks but to the people who are most in need.

NATIONAL SECURITY REVITALIZATION ACT

SPEECH OF

HON. FLOYD SPENCE

OF SOUTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 15, 1995

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, we are here today considering H.R. 872. This legislation responds to the concerns of the American people. We on this side of the aisle listen to the American people in many ways. We listen and we learn, and we are trying to respond to their concerns.

The American people want to restore and revitalize our national security. They are outraged when they find that we have no defense against ballistic missiles, which could do irreparable harm to them and their loved ones in our country.

They cannot understand why we do not have a national missile defense. They want to know who is responsible. We are trying to respond to those concerns and tell them who is responsible, and we will try to fix this. They do not want and do not deserve to be unprotected and naked to something that could destroy all their lives.

I understand that our liberal friends on the other side of the aisle have a real problem with what we are about. Because we are trying to protect the American people, it is difficult for them not to join in with us. So they have to resort to all kind of tactics.

I have always been amazed at the liberal mind, what it can conjure up with a limited vocabulary and fantasize, turn night into day and day into night, wrong into right, right into wrong by using words and smoke screens.

They would have you believe, for instance, that what we are doing is harmful to national security. People who have dedicated their lives to tearing down our national security are now telling us that what we are doing is harmful to national security.

A while ago, I went down in the well, I was sitting back in the back of the Chamber, because down home we have got a saying that "when people say outrageous things, don't stand too close to them because lightning might strike." I don't want to be too close when it strikes.

Mr. Chairman, we are about doing our duty to protect the American people and we are going to do it. We want our colleagues on the other side of the aisle, liberal as they might be, and how they play their game, I do not care. We want their help in protecting the American people. We want them to join us. If they do not want to do it, that is their problem. We are going to do it, anyway. And it is going to be done here on this floor.

WASHINGTON MONUMENT FLAGS OF THE STATES ACT

HON. PAT WILLIAMS

OF MONTANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I am today introducing legislation to assist in the observation of the Washington Monument's 110th anniversary. My legislation would ring the Washington Monument with the flags of each of our 50 States. This was the original intent of the planners of the Mall and I believe an appropriate way of demonstrating our unique Federal and State partnership.

All Americans are rightfully proud of the beauty and symbolism of the Nation's Capital and its national monuments. The designers of our Capital City, from L'Enfant since, have sought not only to present our national monuments but also to present with them expression of American ideals. For example, as one stands in the Jefferson Memorial one has an unobstructed view of the White House. This symbolizes that Jefferson is considered to have given the Presidency the context it has held since his time. As one stands at the feet of Lincoln in the Lincoln Memorial, one can see the U.S. Capitol, as a symbol of the necessary linkage of the executive with the legislative branch of Government.

The Capitol grounds are rich with this type of symbolism, adding to each American's understanding.

I have noted that the flags of our 50 States are not exhibited together anywhere within the Capitol or monument grounds. Around the base of the Washington Monument, one finds 50 flag poles. However, the poles, not inappropriately, fly American flags. Flying State flags would provide the symbolism of the cooperation between and among the various States and the Federal Government.

Americans owe our stability and strength to our system of government—a system that clearly established a constant dynamic between local and Federal jurisdiction. It is the defining and reexamining of these basic strengths which provides the appropriate tension to our system. The foundation of our Democracy is in the understanding that folks from Butte, MT to Charlottesville, VA, from Hillsboro, OR to Greenville, MS sustain a common bond: Through the orderliness of representative government they can truly determine their own destiny; and that of their country.

I urge my colleagues to join me in this celebration of the 110th anniversary of the Washington Monument by having the flags of their States flown at the base of the monument to America's first President.

MIDDLE-CLASS TAX RELIEF AND JOB CREATION ACT

HON. NEIL ABERCROMBIE

OF HAWAII

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today with the cochairs of the Tourism Caucus, Mr. OBERSTAR and Mr. ROTH, to introduce legislation based on a commitment to fairness for the working people of this Nation and a sense of the profound need for job creation. Specifically, this legislation would restore a 100-percent deduction for business meals and entertainment [M&E] and the spousal travel deduction.

The decision to cut the M&E deduction and the spousal travel deduction is one of those fair-sounding ideas that can have unintended and undesirable consequences.

Travel, tourism and entertainment constitute the third-largest industry in the United States. Its 1990 payroll was $83 billion and it is an industry that employs 6 million people. This is an industry whose growth Washington should support and promote.

The next time you are eating lunch in a restaurant, take a look around at the business types. Here's what you probably won't see: the stereotype of obscenely rich tycoons sipping three-martini lunches. What you will see are sober, serious middle-class people doing business the American way: in face-to-face meetings.

Meetings are a legitimate cost of doing business. And until 1986, the cost was fully tax-deductible. At that time, the deduction was reduced to 80 percent. The effect that has on a business may be as simple as making phone calls instead of airline flights. Yet, the ramifications are enormous.

After all, when business takes its act on the road, there's a big supporting cast: airline pilots, mechanics, luggage handlers, flight attendants, waiters, waitresses, cooks and restaurant owners, food service companies and truck drivers, convention caterers and service employees, and hotel bell captains and reception clerks.

They're all middle-class working people. The people who have been victims of misguided economic policy since the 1980's.

Furthermore, we don't want to give our foreign competitors an advantage over American workers and American businesses. Thousands of foreign travelers criss-cross the country every day. They and their employers know they've got to talk to Americans face-to-face to make sales here. That's why their governments—Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, France—permit 100-percent deductibility for business expenses. If we're to be competitive, we must level the playing field for our own businesses.

In September 1994, a survey conducted on behalf of American Express examined the impact of the M&E deduction on company spending, and the ultimate impact on the restaurant industry. The study was taken among small and mid-sized companies where the impacts would be more pronounced.

The findings indicated there is a high propensity or willingness to enforce behavioral change as the financial impact of the tax law is felt.

I am sure that if a study was conducted on the spousal travel deduction the results would be similar.

I ask my colleagues to support us in this effort and work with us to ensure that it is included in any middle-class tax relief legislation that comes before the 104th Congress.

CAROLINE COX AND CHRISTIAN SOLIDARITY INTERNATIONAL BRINGING HOPE TO THE SUFFERING

HON. FRANK R. WOLF

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I commend to our colleagues' attention a speech given recently by Baroness Caroline Cox, Deputy Speaker of Britain's House of Lords, when she received the William Wilberforce Award.

The award, named after the great 19th century political reformer who dedicated his career to outlawing the slave trade in England, is given to a person who exhibits moral witness and willingness to stand up for unpopular causes.

Lady Cox is a woman with a heart for the suffering, the oppressed, and the persecuted. Her work and that of Christian Solidarity International, an interdenominational Christian human rights organization, has brought hope to thousands. I have travelled with Lady Cox and have been a witness to the way she ministers—showing love, respect, and compassion equally for the little children and high-level government officials. She is a woman who lives out her faith in Jesus Christ by doing what He admonishes in Matthew 25:

When I was hungry you gave me something to eat, I was thirsty and you gave me something to drink, I was a stranger and you invited me in, I needed clothes and you clothed me, I was in prison and you came to visit me. * * * Whatever you do for the least of these, you also do for me.

The work of Christian Solidarity International may not be well-known to us here, but it is well-known to the Armenians in war-torn Nagorno-Karabakh who had their pain relieved when CSI brought desperately needed medical supplies to the tiny beleaguered enclave. It is well-known to the thousands of Russian orphans who without the help of CSI would have been left in mental institutions devoid of hope for a productive future. It is well known to the suffering people in southern Sudan whose voice has been heard due to the constant advocacy of Baroness Cox and the CSI team. And it is well-known to the Karen Christians in Burma who, as I am speaking, are fighting for their lives against the military junta that is battling for control in that country.

Baroness Cox responds in faith to bring hope to countless millions. She stands up for justice for the persecuted. In the words of Prison Fellowship founder Chuck Colson, "As William Wilberforce was a voice for the voiceless and stood against his party and fellow Parliamentarians in his campaign to end the slave trade in eighteenth-century England, so is Baroness Cox. With Christian compassion fused with fierce courage, Lady Cox continues to shun mere observation for frontline participation." William Wilberforce would have been proud.

WILBERFORCE AWARD BANQUET—PRESENTED BY CHUCK COLSON, PRISON FELLOWSHIP

The following speech was given by the Baroness Caroline Cox of Queensbury, Deputy Speaker of Britain's House of Lords, on February 1, 1995 in Washington, DC, during the events surrounding the National Prayer Breakfast. Baroness Cox was honored for her courageous acts and stand for justice on behalf of the suffering and oppressed people of the world. In the words of Chuck Colson: "As William Wilberforce was a voice for the voiceless and stood against his party and fellow Parliamentarians in his campaign to end the slave trade in eighteenth-century England, so is Baroness Cox. With Christian compassion fused with fierce courage, Lady Cox continues to shun mere observation for frontline participation."

Mr. Chairman, Distinguished Guests, Brothers and Sisters in Christ,

I stand before you this evening filled with deep emotions. First, I feel both humble and proud to be associated with the name of William Wilberforce. Wilberforce used to be described as a "shrimp"; I feel about the same size as a shrimp in comparison with him and also with the distinguished predecessors who have been honored with the Award in previous years.

But I am also full of gratitude for the opportunity this occasion gives me to pay tribute to those in Christian Solidarity International (CSI) who make my work possible and, above all, I value the opportunity to honour the suffering people whom it has been our privilege to be with in dark and difficult days—people suffering from oppression, persecution, slavery and attempted genocide.

I would therefore like to spend some of my allotted time saying a few words about the work of CSI, without whom I would not be here tonight, and then to spend the rest of my time honouring those people whom we try to serve, who always inspire us with their courage, generosity, graciousness, faith and dignity.

CSI is an interdenominational Christian human rights organization which tries to help victims of repression, regardless of their colour, creed or nationality. But as Christians, we have an additional concern; we are reminded of St. Paul's message to the church in Corinth, that when one part of the body of Christ suffers, all suffer.

CSI's particular focus is on forgotten peoples in forgotten lands; on places which do not appear on your TV screens or the front pages of newspapers. We try to be with those who feel—and are—forgotten by the rest of the world, including often, by the rest of the Christian church.

Many of the big humanitarian organizations have to respect political constraints, in order to accomplish their work. This means there are some people who are suffering in repressive regimes whom they cannot help. But we are free to put human rights and humanitarian need before political constraints and to go where others may not. This may involve some unorthodox behavior and some unofficial travel—but it gives us the priceless privilege of, as the British advertisement for a certain brand of lager beer claims, "Reaching those parts where others cannot reach."

Thus it is that CSI has made it possible for us to make several visits, for example, to some of the people of Southern Sudan, many of them have been cut off from other aid organizations by the brutal policies of the fundamentalist Islamic Government in Khartoum. The magnitude of the sufferings of the Sudanese people must rank amongst the greatest in the world today: with perhaps 1.5 million killed and over 5 million displaced by civil war. Many Southerners have been captured and enslaved by Northerners—so I believe the spirit of Wilberforce would be striving for their freedom as much as he strove for those who suffered as slaves in his own day. Just 2 Weeks ago, CSI organized another mission to people so cut off that they had absolutely no medicines; many were literally starving, many were naked and very cold as the temperatures fall steeply at night. We took medicines and we plan to return with more urgently needed supplies. We were also able to take with us the exiled Roman Catholic Bishop of El Obeid; I am not a Catholic, but I wish you could have shared with me the happiness of seeing the rejoicing of people who had not seen a Bishop or been able to celebrate mass for 20 years.

It was CSI who made it possible for me to visit the Karen people of Burma last November, an ethnic minority ferociously persecuted by the SLORC regime. Many have been forced into slave labour, others live as stateless, displaced people, trapped in the jungle. Recently, the SLORC Regime has stepped up its military offensive against the Karen, forcing tens of thousands more to flee as refugees to Thailand, and trapping many more behind their own lines, where capture will mean a fate worse than death.

It was CSI which reached the Armenian people in January 1992, when they were blockaded, besieged, bombarded in their ancient homeland of Nagorno Karabakh, a beautiful part of historic Armenia cruelly relocated by Stalin as an isolated enclave in Azerbaijan. Azerbaijan has adopted an explicit policy of ethnic cleansing of the Armenians from Karabakh. Karabakh is a beautiful land with some of the most ancient Christian churches in the world, the Armenians being the first nation to accept Christianity. The Armenians who live there have been fighting for the survival of their families, homes, homeland and their—and our—Christian heritage. It has been a battle against impossible odds, like David and Goliath. 150,000 Armenians are defending their land against 7 million-strong Azerbaijan, helped by Turkey and literally thousands of mujahadeen mercenaries. In that bitter January, we found the besieged and blockaded Armenians suffering casualties caused by constant bombardment, without any anesthetics or pain-killing drugs, with only vodka to try to relieve the suffering. Returning to Britain, I could not sleep thinking about their predicament; and it was CSI which, without the requisite money, responded in faith and enabled us to obtain supplies of morphine, cocaine powder (for eye injuries), omnopon and fentanyl. The challenge of taking this consignment of drugs, street value incalculable, across Europe to the depths of Karabakh was rather daunting. God sometimes asks us to do strange things: I had to turn myself into an unofficial drug runner! But we were able to return to Karabakh within 12 days with those desperately needed supplies. If anyone would like to know how we did it, I am prepared to tell you the secret, for a contribution to our next consignment to Karabakh—our 24th—when we will be taking a team of Christian volunteers to build a rehabilitation center for amputees, because there are no facilities for artificial limbs in Karabakh, for the hundreds of people, including children, with amputations caused by the war.

And it was CSI which reached another, different kind of forgotten people: orphans suffering in the Soviet Union. During a Human Rights Conference in Leningrad in 1990, newly elected Russian Deputies asked us to investigate the plight of children taken into care, whom they suspected were incorrectly diagnosed as mentally handicapped or “oligophrenic”. Once classified, they were shut away in special orphanages, deprived of a proper education, often abused physically and by drugs. As they grew up, they were denied all basic human rights, could not vote or drive, and were forced to work in conditions which were, in effect, slave labour.

Children who resisted or ran away were sent to psychiatric hospitals, where they were often subjected to torture by drugs. I visited some of these children and returned to Britain full of anguish. Many seemed to be bright, able youngsters, but doomed to lives without hope. I will never forget the pale, haunted faces of Serge and Dmitri, two articulate 14-year-old boys in a grim psychiatric hospital, not mentally ill, but tanked-up with drugs and Dmitri's heart-breaking plea, ‘Please will you find me a mother? I want to get out of here!’

It was CSI who again reacted in faith and responded to a request from Russian colleagues who were deeply worried about the situation, by funding a visit by a multidisciplinary team to undertake research in orphanages in Moscow and St. Petersburg. The findings shook the system; over 2/3 of those classified and treated as “oligophrenic” were of average or above average mental ability. We published the findings in a report called ‘Trajectories of Despair: Misdiagnosis and Maltreatment of Soviet Orphans.’ This has since been translated into Russian and is serving as a basis for policy reform. Many children previously classified as oligophrenic have now been reclassified and can lead normal lives. We are also trying to establish projects in Moscow, with Russian colleagues, to help change the policy of child care throughout the Russian Federation.

So I would like to emphasize that I am honored to receive this award, not for myself, but on behalf of CSI. I was recently reading a biography of William Wilberforce and was struck by this sentence: “The man who resembled a shrimp . . . had shown the world that a righteous cause, coupled with determination and motivated by faith in a loving God, can produce miracles.” (He Freed Britain's Slaves', Charles Ludwig, p. 203.)

We in CSI always feel so inadequate; we are inadequate. But we hope God can use our efforts. I remember on my way into Burma, I was feeling acutely depressed as I thought, “What on earth can we do with our meager resources to begin to help the Karen people with their massive problems?” Then in my morning Bible reading I found the message in Second Kings 4:42-44, the Old Testament forerunner of the parable of the loaves and the fishes. A man with 20 loaves of bakery barley bread was told by Elisha to distribute them to feed a crowd of 100 hungry people. In a crisis of confidence, he asked what use they could be among so many; but Elisha replied, “Give it to the people to eat. For this is what the Lord says: They will eat and have some left over.” And indeed they did eat and some left over. That message was a comfort. We in CSI hope that God can use our pathetic, meager resources in ways we cannot understand. At times it seems that the message on a notepad given me by my daughter could be our motto, “I do not believe in miracles, I rely on them.”

Before I conclude, I wish to pay especial tribute to those whom we have been privileged to meet and to be with in their dark and difficult days. I wish I had longer to tell you about their courage, generosity, graciousness and dignity. A few examples must speak for many more.

Come with me to Southern Sudan, where the people are dying around us from starvation and disease; those who are still alive are suffering from hunger, thirst, nakedness and the constant fear of attack and enslavement. But despite their suffering, they still smile with the famous Sudanese smile. Join me as the Bishop speaks to his people at mass in what they called their “cathedral” under a tamarind tree:

“This most beautiful cathedral, not built with human hands, but by nature and by God, is filled with the people of God, and especially with children.

“We must tell our brothers and sisters that the people here are still full of hope and that they still smile in spite of suffering and persecution.

“Those smiles put us to shame. Your people have suffered slavery, but you are not slaves to the world but children of God, our God who has told us we can call Him “Abba” or “Father”. Christianity gives us liberty; therefore we are no longer slaves but free: children of liberty, freedom and truth. But we live in a bad world. Many of your people have been sold into slavery. But for me that is not to become a slave. Slavery is not a matter of the colour of the skin. The real slave is a person who lives in sin; who does injustice to brothers and sisters; and who kills them. That person is a slave to sin.

“Some people feel naked because they have no clothes and they try to cover themselves because of their embarrassment. But this is not real nakedness. True nakedness is to be without love. Therefore to be clothed in love: this is Christianity. It is not a shirt that you can take on or take off; but to wear the faith and love of the Christian faith is as a way of life and witness to it, even to those who do not believe in Christ.

“So as we go away, do not think we leave you or forget you. There are still many good people in the world and you will be remembered as people who are closest to God because you are carrying the cross, every day obeying Christ's command to take up His cross and to follow Him. We will pray for you. But prayer without action is dead, as faith without deed is dead. Our love will be in action for you. I came, saw, heard, touched, and I am enriched.”

Now please come for a brief glimpse of the Christian church amongst the persecuted Karen people of Burma. Just one image: I and my CSI colleagues (a splendidly inter-denominational mixture of Pentecostal, Evangelical, Russian Orthodox and myself (Anglican ‘Unorthodox’), went to worship at the nearest church in the jungle—a Baptist church. A Bell was sounding out—a bell made from a Burmese bomb. A modern-day symbol: instead of swords into ploughshares, bombs into bells. But sadly, now, the bombs are raining down on the Karen and they need our prayers as many suffer the afflictions of war, or as slaves inside Burman, or as refugees in Thailand.

Finally, our Armenian Christian brothers and sisters in Karabakh. Those who have heard me speak before will have heard examples of their faith and their witness to a love which transcends suffering. I only have time for one vignette. At the beginning of the process of attempted ethnic cleansing, Azerbaijan undertook a series of deportations of entire villages. They were brutal operations, in which innocent villagers were rounded up, many were maltreated, some murdered; homes were ransacked; then the people were forcibly driven off their land, unable to take anything with them. After one of these terrible events, at Getashen, a farmer managed to escape into the mountains. On top of a hill there he saw a fruit tree in blossom and looked for solace under this tree; only to find as he approached the tree a little five year old girl hanging from its branches, her tiny body cut in two. As he looked upon the little girl, he swore revenge. Two years later, he and his comrades had the opportunity to take back an Armenian village taken by the Azeris. He now had the opportunity for revenge. With tears steaming down his face, he told me: “But I couldn't make myself harm a child—I failed and was unable to keep my vow.” I replied, your reward will be crown of glory. He in turn replied, “That crown we wear is a crown of thorns.”

Those whom we are privileged to meet during CSI's ministry are indeed wearing their crown of thorns with great dignity. They suffer from man's inhumanity to man, like those for whom William Wilberforce felt so deeply and for whom he fought so valiantly. These words of the Bishop of Karabakh speak for them all, with their affirmation of faith, their challenge to us, and their magnificent, resounding commitment to that love which must be the hallmark of Christian faith and witness:

“The help of God is great and immeasurable when the human heart turns to Him with fervour. Our nation has again begun to find its faith and is praying in churches, cellars and in the field of battle, defending its life and the life of those who are near and dear. It is not only the perpetrators of crime and evil who commit sin, but also those who stand by—seeing and knowing—and who do not condemn it or try to avert it. Blessed are the peacemakers, for they will be called sons of God. We do not hate: we believe in God. If we want God's victory, we must love. Even if there are demonic forces at work, not only in this conflict, but in other parts of the world, we must still love.”

So, I finish by thanking you for the great honour you have given me, and for the opportunity to honour others who carry forward the spirit of William Wilberforce. May I leave you some lines by John Harriott, SJ, quoted by Max Warren in an article in ‘New Fire’ (Winter, 1975, p. 453):

Let us open the clenched fish and extend the open palm.

Let us mourn till others are comforted, weep till others laugh.

Let us be sleepless till all can sleep untroubled.

Let us be frugal till all are filled.

Let us give till all have received.

Let us make no claim till all have had their due.

Let us be slaves till all are free.

Let us lay down our lives till all have life abundantly.

FIFTY YEARS OF RESEARCH ON THE MINIMUM WAGE

HON. JIM SAXTON

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, February 16, 1995

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Speaker, for many years it has been a matter of conventional wisdom among economists that the minimum wage causes fewer jobs to exist than would be the case without it. This is simply a matter of price theory, taught in every economics textbook, requiring no elaborate analysis to justify. Were this not case, there would be no logical reason why the minimum wage could not be set at $10 or $400 per hour.

Historically, defenders of the minimum wage have not disputed the disemployment effects of the minimum wage. Rather, they argued that there was a redistributive effect that left the working poor better off. In other words, the higher incomes of those with jobs offset the lower incomes of those without jobs, as a result of the minimum wage.

Now, the Clinton administration is advancing the novel economic theory that modest increases in the minimum wage will have no impact whatsoever on employment. Some administration officials have even hinted that raising the minimum wage can raise employment. This proposition is based entirely on the work of three economists: David Card and Alan Krueger of Princeton, and Lawrence Katz of Harvard. Their studies of increases in the minimum wage in California, Texas, and New Jersey apparently found no loss of jobs among fast food restaurants that were surveyed before and after the increase.

It is not yet clear how or why Card, Katz, and Krueger got the results that they did. It is clear, however, that their findings are directly contrary to virtually every empirical study ever done on the minimum wage. These studies were exhaustively surveyed by the Minimum Wage Study Commission, which concluded that a 10-percent increase in the minimum wage reduced teenage employment by 1 to 3 percent.

The following survey of the academic research on the minimum wage is designed to give nonspecialists a sense of just how isolated the Card, Krueger, and Katz studies are. It will also indicate that the minimum wage has wide-ranging negative effects that go beyond unemployment. For example, higher minimum wages encourage employers to cut back on training, thus depriving low-wage workers of an important means of long-term advancement, in return for a small increase in current income. For many workers this is a very bad tradeoff, but one for which the law provides no alternative.
