The Reverend Dwight “Ike” Reighard of New Hope Baptist Church, Fayetteville, GA, offered the following prayer:

Our Heavenly Father, we pause to give thanks and acknowledge our Creator on this day. We are reminded on this day of J une 6 of the tremendous sacrifice that occurred 51 years ago today on D-day. The price for freedom then and now is eternal vigilance. We pray that we all will be mindful and ever thankful for the men and women who served in our Armed Forces around the world.

We pray on this day for our President, Vice President, and leaders of Congress, that You would endow them with wisdom and insight beyond their human ability.

Grant us, oh Lord, Your patience, mercy and kindness, and gentleness, to touch people, see people, and love people the way You do, and in Your name we pray. Amen.

WELCOME TO THE REVEREND DWIGHT “IKE” REIGHARD

(Mr. GINGRICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, I simply want to take a minute to recognize my pastor, Ike Reighard, who I think has combined the eternal teachings and wisdom of the Bible with the realities of modern life in such a way that I find, at least, and my wife Marian would agree, that he is one of the most inspirational and at the same time most practical preachers. It is a great honor to us to have him here.

New Hope Baptist Church is a tremendous institution with a very strong commitment to outreach and to evangelism. On my behalf, I appreciate very much the House allowing him to lead us in prayer today.

WILDERNESS LEGISLATION PRESERVES UTAH AREA FOR ALL AMERICANS

(Mr. HANSEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, today is a historic time for the State of Utah. In our great State out in the West, we have been told that we can put three different areas into wilderness. One is Forest Service, one is park, and one is different areas into wilderness. One is Forest Service, one is park, and one is Bureau of Land Management.

In 1984 Ronald Reagan signed the wilderness bill for Forest Service, and it was a historic time. We preserved in the State of Utah some of the most beautiful, pristine areas that the people in the world have seen, and people come from all over the world to see this glorious area that will now be untrammeled by man, as if man was never there, as if you were the first person God put on Earth, and you can see it in all its majesty. Now today we are introducing one for the Bureau of Land Management.

The State of Utah has 22 million acres—3.2 is considered fit and worthy of wilderness. This bill is 1.8, which is the most pristine of all this. It is the jewel of our national parks, of which we have five. This will be truly untrammeled by man.

We are going to start the procedure now. It will go through the subcommittee, the committee, and on the floor. I hope the people of the United States, the people of Utah, will realize what a wonderful thing they are going to have, in my opinion, as they see this area put into a wilderness designation. I am grateful for all the help we have had on this particular bill.

AMERICA'S MILITARY ADVENTURES WASTE BILLIONS AND ENDANGER OUR ARMED FORCES

(Mr. DUNCAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, the American people are getting sick and tired of our leaders taking this Nation on military adventures around the world and wasting billions in the process.

I am talking about spending billions in Haiti, Rwanda, Somalia, and other places, and now Bosnia. There is no vital United States interest in Bosnia. There is no threat to our security there.

We should not send young American men and women to fight in foreign countries unless there is a definite and strong U.S. interest in doing so or there is a real threat to our national security.

All Americans support sending some humanitarian aid to help out when international tragedies occur.

But, we cannot continue to try to solve every world problem. We will bankrupt our own Nation if we are not careful. We certainly should not be getting into all sorts of international situations just so our Presidents can prove they are world leaders or make names for themselves in history.

We should be friends with any nation that will let us, but we need to stop trying to buy friendships.

We also need to make common sense. Mr. Speaker, and stop letting people all over this world take advantage of us, in my opinion, as they see this area put into a wilderness designation. I am grateful for all the help we have had on this particular bill.

GETTING DOWN TO BUSINESS

(Mr. GOSS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, as colleagues return from what I hope was a productive work period, I also hope Members got a little chance for a rest, too, because it is now time for this House to get down to the business of reining in specific Federal spending.

We have passed, as everybody knows, the landmark budget blueprint for reaching balance in our budget by the year 2002. That was a big effort. Now our committees are diving into the details, deciding where and how much to cut, to ensure that we fulfill the problem of fiscal sanity does not go on and become fiscal insanity for our children and their children's children.

I am sure this is going to be very hard. There are no easy decisions. There are a lot of tough decisions ahead, and probably some rude awakenings, too. But I think that is the way we are here. I think we have a moral obligation to get it done. The grippers and whiners who have so long defeated the status quo believe they can actually scare people into opposing our agenda for balancing the budget.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment and allow the Bosnians to exercise their right to defend themselves.

REVERSAL ON BOAT PEOPLE: IRRESPONSIBLE AND DANGEROUS

(Mr. BEREUER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BEREUER. Mr. Speaker, when people's lives and safety are involved no one should take pleasure in saying, "I told you so," and I take no such pleasure. But any Member who reads, in an objective manner, this morning's Washington Times article about violence in the refugee camps should feel some remorse for this body's role in the debacle currently unfolding in Southeast Asia.

Let me briefly catalog the damage wrought so far by H.R. 1561, the American Overseas Interests Act and the rejection of my amendment to delete that section.

Two days of rioting by 3,000 boat people in refugee camps in Malaysia have caused at least 12 injuries. Earlier riots in Hong Kong's cause more than 200 injuries; of the 1,400 boat people in Thailand camps who had volunteered to return peacefully to Vietnam, most are now resisting repatriation; 1,000 volunteers at camps in Indonesia have withdrawn their requests to return, and voluntary repatriation has also ceased in Hong Kong with 196 of 200 volunteers now refusing to board a scheduled flight to Vietnam.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees and other objective observers lay the blame squarely on this legislation for this violence and for the collapse of voluntary repatriation.

The repatriation of Indochinese boat people determined by the UNHCR to be economic migrants, not political refugees, was bound to be a contentious process under the best of conditions. But when this body refused to strike this dangerous and irresponsible provision, it gave the 40,000 plus boat people in the camps false hope of resettlement in the United States and, thus, created the conditions for violence that we see unfolding throughout Southeast Asia.

This Member fully understands and shares the desire to provide fair and humane treatment to those in the refugee camps. But instead this legislation has led to violence in the refugee camps, caused the collapse of voluntary repatriation, and will also likely encourage another wave of boat departures from Vietnam, putting people at great risk on the high seas and swell the refugee camp population.

COMMEMDING THE DEFENDING NBA CHAMPION HOUSTON ROCKETS

Mr. BENTSEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Speaker, I stand today to commend the defending NBA champion Houston Rockets for their impressive win over the San Antonio Spurs and soaring back to the NBA finals against the Orlando Magic. The Houston Rockets, who traveled a long journey to this year’s NBA finals have beaten the top three teams in the western conference, Utah, Phoenix, and San Antonio.

I believe there were a number of factors which lead this remarkable team to represent the western conference in the NBA finals, both the coaching staff and the players. However, it all starts with the players, Clyde Drexler, Kenny Smith, Robert Hurry, Mario Elie, Sam Cassell and of course, Hakeem Olajuwon, who are out there day in and day out giving it their all.

I would also like to give ultimate praises to the coach of the Houston Rockets, Rudy Tomjanovich. Although the team went through injuries, trades, and player problems, his leadership has enabled the team to stay focused and keep its eyes on the big prize, another NBA championship.

This will be no easy task for the Rockets for the Orlando Magic pose a credible challenge. The Rockets players have done what it takes to win, either playing good defense, hitting treys or going to its heart and soul, in the middle, center, Hakeem the Dream. Everything the Rockets accomplish starts with that.

Needless to say, my money is on the defending NBA champion Houston Rockets.

CONGRATULATING THE SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY VARSITY LACROSSE TEAM FOR CHAMPIONSHIP VICTORIES

Mr. WALSH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to congratulate, once again, the Syracuse University Varsity Lacrosse Team for its victories over tenacious and skilled opponents from Virginia and Maryland on Memorial Day weekend in the 1995 NCAA Lacrosse Championships. This marks the sixth time that Coach Roy Simmons, Jr., his outstanding coaching staff, and the players from Syracuse University have brought this honor on themselves.

This has been a year of ups and downs for the Syracuse team and those of us in central New York who follow their prowess. The lacrosse program has sustained a national reputation worthy of the SU sports program and of any division I academic institution. We in Syracuse are very proud.

It was a poignant set of victories leading to this championship, in light of the death earlier in the season of Roy Simmons, Sr., a well-known Syracusean, the father of Coach Simmons and himself the only other lacrosse coach at SU since 1931. Additionally, Roy, Sr. was president of the city of Syracuse Common Council earlier in his career.

The sign of a true championship is the ability to overcome adversity. Syracuse University’s team and coaches came through a rough start of the season and finished with a great win against a strong Maryland team on their home field. In the semifinal they eliminated Virginia, a team that conquered the Orange in the earlier in the year. We salute the 16 graduating seniors and thank them and their underclassmates for some wonderful memories.

Good luck and congratulations, national champs.

EPIDEMIC OF DEAFNESS IN RIGHT EAR AMONG REPUBLICANS WHEN IT COMES TO THE ADVOCACY OF VIOLENCE

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I am struck by a terrible national epidemic that appears to have settled on the land. Significant numbers of right-wing thinkers, politicians, and advocates appear to all have gone deaf in one ear.

Recently, we have heard many of the Republicans leaders and conservatives denounce violence, the advocacy thereof. People have talked about movies and other forms of entertainment in which violence occurs. Strangely, however, they only seem to hear one kind of violence. When Gordon Liddy talks about how to shoot Federal law enforcement officials, he gets an award from some of these people. When movie entertainment and Republican leanings make movies in which large numbers of people are shot for no apparent reason, that is apparently good.

When people on the left say things that might be equally offensive to many of us, that draws condemnation. Obviously, those who believe in civil liberties, those who believe in free speech, believe in it no matter what the politics of those who say it, so when we have this one-sided effort to criticize people who advocate violence or do not preach family values, those who believe in free speech, believe in it no matter what the politics of those who say it.

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I am forced to conclude that there is some mysterious ailment in the land which has ended the hearing in the right ear of many of my colleagues.

I hope that the National Institutes of Health, if there is any money left in its budget when the Republicans are through cutting taxes, raising defense, and cutting NIH, I hope they will look at this strange disease which makes it impossible for people to hear the advocacy of violence on the right and condemn it only when it comes from people they disagree with.

TAKING ISSUE WITH STATEMENT THAT U.S. SOLDIERS DIED IN SERVICE OF UNITED NATIONS

Mr. FUNDERBURK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. FUNDERBURK. Mr. Speaker, last year when American soldiers were killed over Iraq, the Vice President of the United States had the temerity to tell the widows and orphans of those men that “they died in the service of the United Nations.” Mr. Speaker, I can’t think of a more outrageous statement made by any American official in years.

American blood has been spilled on countless battlefields around the globe. Americans have died to protect their homes and families and to save the world from communism not for some faceless U.N. bureaucrat. I never read that Douglas MacArthur told the men at Inchon to hit the beach for the United Nations or that marines at Khe Sanh endured hell wearing blue helmets. America must never surrender its sovereignty to the one world fantasies of Mr. Boutros-Ghali and his acolytes in the White House.
Before Mr. Clinton marches into Bosnia for the United Nations, he should remember what Secretary of State John Quincy Adams said: We are the friends of liberty everywhere, the guardians only of our own.

Mr. Speaker, I hope they read those words out loud in the White House before they tell another American family that its husband, father, son, or brother died in the service of the United Nations.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Clerk of the House of Representatives:

OFFICE OF THE CLERK, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Hon. NEWT GINGRICH,
The Speaker, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to the permission granted in Clause 5 of Rule III of the Rules of the U.S. House of Representatives, the Clerk received the following message from the Secretary of the Senate on Wednesday, May 31, 1995 at 3:30 p.m.: that the Senate agreed to the conference report on H.R. 1158.

With warm regards,

ROBIN H. CARLE,
Clerk, U.S. House of Representatives.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CHIEF ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Chief Administrative Officer of the House of Representatives:

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICER, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Hon. NEWT GINGRICH,
The Speaker, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Speaker: This is to formally notify you pursuant to Rule L (50) of the Rules of the House that my office has been served to notify you pursuant to Rule L (50) of the Rules of the House the following communications.

They tell another American family that their relative is consistent with the privilege of the House that my office has been served to notify you pursuant to Rule L (50) of the Rules of the House:

The Board of Visitors to the U.S. Coast Guard Academy

WASHINGTON, DC.

Mr. Speaker, I hope they read those words out loud in the White House before they tell another American family that its husband, father, son, or brother died in the service of the United States.

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, we have just returned from recess, but prior to that we completed a part of a very long process. Most people do not realize it was mentioned in the budget, and the appropriations process begins with the passage of the budget. The House of Representatives and the Senate have passed the budget, and they will soon reach agreement on that budget.

Most people do not realize the President has no veto power over the budget. That budget does forward without the President having a chance to veto it. He must react to the individual appropriation bills now that will be generated under the guidance of that budget.

In other words, the budget sets the overall ceiling for each one of the areas, and the Committee on Appropriations now can go forward to make expenditures, increasing some programs, decreasing some, eliminating some, putting in new programs. That is all up to the Committee on Appropriations.

However, Mr. Speaker, I think it is safe to say that we can expect, with this well-coordinated majority in power presently, that most of the recommendations made by the Committee on the Budget will probably be included in the appropriations process. The Committee on Appropriations will follow through on most of the recommendations. Therefore, we have a good idea of what the pattern is going to be in terms of the kind of expenditures that are going to be made by this Congress, or the kind of appropriations that are going to be presented by this Congress.

Each one of the appropriations bills, however, can be vetoed by the President. The public should realize that, that the appropriations bills have to go to the President. Once the Senate and the House have acted and both have agreed in a conference on a bill, it goes to the President, and the President can veto it. The public should understand that, that the budget process has just begun.

The Committee on the Budget sets the ceiling. The Committee on Appropriations follows through. The President can veto what each Committee on Appropriations sends to him. If the President vetoes an appropriation bill, it will then come back to the House and Senate, and the possibility of an override, Mr. Speaker, I would say is very slim.

I think there are enough people in the House to support the President, to prevent the overriding of a veto of the President. At this moment I am pretty sure there are. Of course, we lose some every day, but even with a few more causalities and a few more Benedict Arnolds deserting the Democratic Party and going over to the Republican Party, we still will have enough to prevent the override of a veto of an outrageous appropriation.

Most of these appropriation bills will be outrageous, because we know they will follow the pattern of the budget. We will have outrageous bills which propose to eliminate the Department of Education. No one industrialized nation, the civil service of any country, can function without a department of education. At a time like this, when we are at a great disadvantage competitively if we do not have the most skilled population, the best educated population we can get, we are proposing to eliminate the Department of Education.

There are numerous other outrageous items in the budget proposals that will be followed through in the appropriations bills, and the President will have to veto them.

Once the House and Senate fail to override a veto, then what happens? I think we are on a course where, by the time we reach September 30, by the end of this budget year—September 30 is the budget year—it becomes necessary to have continuing resolutions. If the Government is to continue functioning, we have to have passed continuing resolutions in order to keep the Government going forward at the same rate of expenditure that it had before. That is the critical point.

If there is deadlock or gridlock, deadlock, however we want to put it, between the President and the Republican-controlled Congress, then where do we go from there? Will the Government have to shut down, as it did for a couple of days under President Bush, because the Republican-controlled House refuses to pass a continuing resolution, or the Republican-controlled House and Senate together refuse to pass a continuing resolution? We will have a gridlock. We will have a set of negotiations which will go forward between the President and the Republican-controlled Congress. I say all this to say it is very important for the American people to understand that the budget process has just begun. It has begun, and... prospects for a gridlock, prospects for a long-term set of negotiations, are obviously there.

I think as we go forward in this process, I would urge that everybody not just read the mainstream papers, not just depend on network television. The usual means of communications have chosen to ignore some of the alternatives and options and possibilities that there are in terms of this budget and appropriations process.

We are into a budget and appropriations process which is driven by the Republican-controlled House. They have dictated that no budget could be brought to this floor and considered unless it showed a balanced budget by the year 2002. In other words, any group or any Congressperson who wanted to at least have the opportunity to bring his idea, his proposal to the floor, had to pass the constraint that were set by the ruling Republicans here on the House floor.

You had to show a balanced budget by the year 2002, which meant that an artificial crisis was created. You have an artificial constraint where you must make drastic cuts in order to bring a bill to the floor and present a balanced budget by the year 2002.

I am happy to say that the Congressional Black Caucus accepted that challenge, and you would not know it by reading the regular papers or checking network news or even CNN. Nobody bothered to pick up on the fact that there was a Congressional Black Caucus budget on the floor of the House of Representatives and it was balanced. It was balanced by the year 2002, and it had some money left over in the year 2002.

What were the basic principles of this balanced budget? We balanced the budget and we did not cut Medicare by one cent; not one cent was cut from Medicare. We balanced the budget and we did not cut Medicaid by one cent; not one cent was cut from Medicaid.

We balanced the budget and we increased the education budget by 25 percent. Not only did we not engage in any foolhardy, stupid, and ridiculous proposals that the Department of Education should be totally eliminated, we proposed to increase the Department of Education budget by 25 percent. Specific programs within the Department of Education are vital to the health and welfare of America. The Department of Education, we feel, should be given priority in this budget.

We have given priority to the Department of Defense and the defense function for the last 30 years. It has always been defense, defense and to some degree we will have to admit that we did that successfully so.

We spent the Soviet Union. Probably we spent more money for defense in fact, we would rather we spent far more than we needed to. We enriched a lot of people with products, by paying for products that we did not really need.

We paid much too much for a lot of products, defense weapon systems, etc. cetera.

Nevertheless, it succeeded. We outspent the Soviet Union. They had their military-industrial complex spending far less than we did, and they are ignoring the needs of the people. We have our military-industrial complex. Since we happened to be the richest Nation in the world, we could outspend them and they caved in first, so we won that cold war.

Nevertheless, we did not have to spend money on defense. So in the Congressional Black Caucus budget, there are two basic principles.

One is to cut the expenditures for defense, and if you do it over a 10-year period instead of a 3-year period, you can certainly do it and satisfy every hawkish person in the country, because over a 10-year period you can make cuts that definitely no one could argue threaten the security of the Nation. You can make those cuts. We make the cuts over a 10-year period, and that helps to balance the budget.

We do one other thing that also is a basic principle of the budget that should not be ignored. We invite everybody to take a look at the other principle that the Congressional Black Caucus pursued. That principle was to close the corporate loopholes and get rid of corporate welfare.

See, we operate primarily in this country on two sets of taxes. Revenue to run the government, taxes that you pay, comes from two basic sources. One is from family income taxes, income taxes levied on families and individuals. That is one source of revenue that keeps our Government going. The other source of revenue that keeps our Government going are the taxes we levy on corporations, corporations or businesses.

In the history of our country, the pattern has been at the beginning that the profits on the economy, that the economy, is in another place. The economy that is making money, the profit economy, the Wall Street economy, is in another place. The correlation, the relationship between booming industries in America and increases in employment, increases in wages, there is no correlation any more. There is no relationship any more. It is a matter of the sector which has the capital gets more, the sector which is dependent upon wages gets less, and the tax burden being paid by these two are totally out of sync with their prosperity.

Individuals are making less money, families are making less money, and yet families and individuals are paying more taxes than they were 50 years ago. The burden of the taxes, the tax burden, is greater now on individuals and families, and the burden on corporations is lower than it has ever been. It is lower now than ever before, because they are the ones making the greatest amounts of money.

Here is the basic situation we are confronted with. As we go forward in this appropriations and budget-making process, are we going to look at the obvious?

I am reading from a chart that was taken from a document, the President's budget has it, I think, the Congress Budget Office has it. Nobody in Washington knows what these figures show. Nobody disputes the accuracy of this chart, which shows the dramatic rise of family income taxes while corporate income taxes were rapidly dropping. Nobody disputes the accuracy of this.

Here is the way the battle shapes up. You have the oppressive elite minority wanting to create a government, wanting to create public policies which only serve a small group of people. They want to make the budget and the appropriations process safe for a handful of people who do not want the nuisance of paying a few more taxes, or do not want the nuisance of paying the taxes they pay now. They want a tax cut.

Here is the way the battle shapes up. I do not want to confuse anybody. What I am saying, to recapitulate and sum up, the basic principles of the Congressional Black Caucus budget, which is based on the President's budget, which has been before the American people, have been ignored by the Congress, the Congress Budget Office, the President, the Members of Congress, ignored by the leadership, should be examined by the American people. The public should take a look at these basic principles.

Principle No. 1 is we can cut defense over a 10-year period. Principle No. 2 is we can close the corporate loopholes, end corporate welfare, and you will thus generate revenue which will help to balance the budget. In the Congressional Black Caucus budget, we raise the revenue from its present level of 11.2 percent to about 16 percent. The percentage of the overall tax burden is raised from 11.2 percent to about 16 percent, a little less than 16 percent. The percentage of the overall tax burden being paid by families and individuals is presently 43 percent.

If the corporations are raised from 11 percent of the total tax burden to 16 percent of the total tax burden, they are still far below the tax burden percentage that is being paid by families and individuals.

Let us balance the budget, ladies and gentlemen. As I said before, you can do it in 7 years, you can do it in 10 years. It will be easier for everybody if we do it in 10 years, but let us balance the budget by raising the percentage paid by the corporations, raise their percentage of the tax burden.

Some people are talking about a flat tax. Some people are now talking in the high places in the House of Representatives about a consumption tax, similar I guess to the European value-added tax. In the Congressional Black Caucus budget, I am making a recommendation that I think should be followed and I hope the President will listen. Let us create a tax commission. We have a base closings commission that was necessary. Why not take the base closings out of politics and put them into a process whereby experts would look at them more objectively and come back with decisions, make recommendations to the Congress and the President that the Congress would act. The President will have the last word either way. But I think the American people deserve to have an objective analysis and examination and review of the tax situation in America.

The revenue-generating situation, what is it? Why do corporations pay so much less now than they did in 1943? Why did we drop from 39.8 percent for corporations in 1943 to 11.2 percent now? Why?

And if we want to balance the budget, how do we raise it back up? If we are going to have a flat tax, are you talking about a flat tax just for families and individuals, or are you talking about a flat tax which also includes corporations? That may not be a bad idea. A flat tax paid by everybody pays the same percentage, including the corporation. But already those who are talking about a flat tax are beginning to find some tricks which will let corporations off the hook. If you have a flat tax that is unconditional, a flat tax with no exemptions, a flat tax that is going to go forward and not to corporations the same that they do to individuals, then you have a fair flat tax. But in no way do the proponents of a flat tax want the corporations across the board. They have no intention of taxing corporations at the same level that they tax families. Here is the issue.
Let us balance the budget by balancing the tax burden. In order to balance the tax burden, you have to close the corporate loopholes, raise the amount of taxes paid by corporations, then you can lower the taxes paid by families and individuals, and at the same time there will be no deficit. Do it in a 10-year span of time, instead of 7 years, you will not create so much pain and suffering. You will create very little dislocation in our economy.

Why have the Republicans who control the House argued that there should be a balanced budget? We have gone for many, many years without balancing the budget, but now in 7 years, by the year 2002, they insist we must balance the budget. Why? Because they want to create an atmosphere of desperation. They want to create a crisis atmosphere. It is an artificially created crisis. It does not exist. America is not in some desperate situation. We are not at war. Our economy is not collapsing. There is no reason to take desperate measures in a situation that is not desperate. But by creating an artificial crisis, creating a desperate situation, a situation that seems to be desperate, they want to maximize power. It is a grab for power. The problem is power.

Most Americans would like to see a situation where we have a government which has two parties, three parties, whatever number of parties, and each party is engaged in a contest, in a contest to determine who can create the best government for the American people, how can we have the best functioning society.

We would like to see that kind of spirit motivating both parties. Most Americans would like to see that. They are not interested in who has the power, power is power. The problem is power.

Most Americans would like to see a situation where we have a government which has two parties, three parties, whatever number of parties, and each party is engaged in a contest, in a contest to determine who can create the best government for the American people, how can we have the best functioning society.

I hope that every American will understand, every citizen, every voter will understand that you have been plunged into a war whether you like it or not.

Last week the Speaker of the House, Speaker GINGRICH in a forum at the Library of Congress made the statement that we all knew was a motivating factor in what has been happening here on the floor of the House and in Washington in general. He came right out and said, politics is war without blood. Politics is war without blood.

Speaker GINGRICH said that at a forum and I do not want to misquote the Speaker, he is a very powerful person, he is the second most powerful person probably in the country, third in line for succession to the Presidency. I would not want to misquote Speaker GINGRICH.

I am not sure why the Speaker GINGRICH even quoted a political leader not previously known to be one of his influences, “War is politics with blood. Politics is war without blood,” said the Speaker.

He cited the late Chinese Communist leader Mao Tse-tung. Mao Tse-tung operated out of a totally different environment. He was in a desperate environment where people were starving, the country was in a state of dislocation, and there was no economy in China. Chaos reigned. So Mao Tse-tung could say that politics is war without blood.

I think it is most unfortunate that the Speaker of this House, in America, would say that politics is war without blood. He sets a wrong tone. We would like to believe that we have a more civilized environment to conduct our politics in. We would like to think that politics is not war without blood. Politics is a contest, a noble contest among competing parties to see who can reach the goal best, who can contribute most to the cause, and the cause in this case is the cause of an America that is here for everybody.

We want to promote the general welfare. Politics is to promote the general welfare. Politics is to secure the Nation. Politics is to do it all by spending the least amount of money and having the most efficient and most effective government. We want to engage in a contest among the parties. We want to engage in a contest between individuals, between caucuses, a contest, a serious contest. But to say that politics is war without blood is to set a whole different tone and to lay out an agenda which every American has to respond to. If politics is war without blood, there have to be casualties. There is more concern about destroying people and destroying ideas and destroying than there is about serving the cause. The cause of America is probably the most noble and majestic cause of any governmental undertaking anywhere in the world ever. That cause can be best served by having everybody assume that they are in a contest that is a contest with no real losers.

When we have a better government, we are all winners, Republicans and Democrats. When we have a more efficient government, we are all winners, Republicans and Democrats. But if you are preoccupied with power, power is the major preoccupation, than politics becomes war without blood.

What is war all about? The way it has been defined by the Speaker cannot ignore, we cannot ignore the fact that the Speaker has declared war. If the Speaker has declared war, the American people cannot sit still and ignore it. We did not want this to happen, we did not want war, we were not interested in it, but we are now engaged in situation where war has been declared. Politics is war without blood. Every American voter has to consider themselves a soldier. Every American voter can no longer be a spectator, the party is in the situation where people are running the Government who consider politics to be war without blood.
A lot of outside things have been proposed. We have said extremism is the problem here in this Congress. It is extreme to say that you are going to save money by taking away lunches from poor children. At the same time you say you are going to increase the budget for that and take away lunches from poor children. That is extreme. That is barbaric. That kind of extreme action, extreme behavior is not consistent with the text of war. If you are really at war, then you are doing those things for reasons that have nothing to do with improving the Government, the efficiency and effectiveness of Government. There is another objective. War is about destruction, war is about gaining power, War is about wiping out your opposition. War has to have enemies. War cannot look forward to a victory that everybody can be proud of. They are all minority, there is an elite oppressive minority, and I have said this before, there is an elite oppressive minority in charge here in Congress now, and they want an America which serves only a small group of America who are at war with a caring majority. The majority of Americans are people who care about other Americans. First of all, they are people who care about themselves and they need the benefits of our great democracy, they need the benefits of our great economy. The majority of Americans know that we are the richest Nation that ever existed on the face of the Earth, and that this was not created by a handful of people. All the scientist that have ever lived made a contribution to the kind of high-technology society that we know enjoy. The fact that Wall Street firms are making billions of dollars and they are doing it with a minimum amount of workers means that computerization, miniaturization of electronic devices that were developed during World War II have been put to use in the civilian sector, in the business sector.

It was the U.S. Government, the taxpayers, who developed radar, who developed computers, who developed many of the kinds of advances that now are driving the industries that are making the greatest amount of money. They are the ones that we should give credit to. Our American taxpayers should take advantage of those. This is science and technology that is driving our economy now. Science and technology are driving the profits of our corporations. Everybody participated in that process of creating a technologically strong America.

Everybody participated in the war effort, which made America safe from tyranny. America is being in World War II. All of the soldiers who went and died on D-day, in Iwo Jima, all of those who participated in the effort in the defense industries, everybody who made America safe, created an atmosphere of order and law which would enable our businesses to benefit from science and technology without the interference of disruption and chaos. So everybody has a part in the building of a technological society. It was the people who were involved in that effort who are the ones that are now getting hurt first, getting hurt first as we downsized the defense industry to some degree.
What has occurred in San Diego, for example, is consolidations have occurred, jobs have been lost, jobs have been moved out of San Diego.

Mr. OWENS. And the industries are making the same amount of money or more than they did yesterday. Therefore:

Mr. FILNER. Then those defense firms bill the Pentagon for savings that have come out and they get big grants for the savings that occurred in that consolidation, their corporate executives get major bonuses, and the people in San Diego or other communities have lost their jobs and no job training funds and no impact on community funds have come back to our community. So again, you have been emphasizing that. We as a Congress have got not only to plug those corporate welfare loopholes but to make sure that the people, the working people who fought that cold war, who fought and in a sense won it, are now losing their jobs as this consolidation occurs. The Defense Department is rewarding those firms for laying off those workers. That is what we have to change too.

So again I appreciate your efforts and we are going to keep working with you on that.

Mr. OWENS. I thank the gentleman.

I would like to say, it cannot be emphasized too much, that the gigantic Department of Defense budget can certainly be cut, it is not going to immedi; ately hurt workers. If you want to pursue a public policy designed to minimize hurting workers, it is possible to do that. Our overseas bases that are not employing American workers, are costing tremendous amounts of money, a little less than $100 billion, money being spent on overseas bases in NATO, etcetera, we could certainly begin to even downsize drastically there and not hurt jobs and bases in local communities where the economy is affected by the bases.

There are ways to do that over a 10-year period which would minimize the pain and suffering. If you accept as policy that defense conversion should create jobs, you can certainly cut defense in a way which creates jobs at the same time, have a conversion where you use the money in ways that create jobs, and this has been all explained and was presented in the Congressional Black Caucus budgets by the gentleman from California (Mr. DELLUMS), who is a former chairman of the House Committee on Armed Services.

To conclude, what I am saying is that we are in the beginning of a budget and appropriations process, the most important activity that takes place in Washington, the most important activity that takes place in our Government anywhere in the United States. This budget process will determine what our priorities are, how we are going to spend the American tax payer's over the next year or so. It will probably set up a pattern which will continue over the next 5 to 7 years. So it is very important.

Everybody should understand the process is just beginning. Understand that the President cannot veto the budget when the Senate and House agree on the budget; the President does not have the power to veto that budget. The President cannot veto the appropriations bills that come out of the budget. We hope the President is going to veto most of those appropriations bills. Those that have the draconian tax cuts, those that have the ridiculous measures like the elimination of the Department of Education, we expect the President to hasten to veto. We do not expect either the House or Senate to have the power to override the veto. Therefore, we are going to have gridlock and the President is going to have to negotiate, our Democratic President will have to negotiate with a Republican-controlled Senate and House.

You should know this and understand that, as a citizen you cannot sit and be a spectator. Get ready to be a soldier. There is a war underway. The budget and appropriations process is a major battle of the war that has been declared by Speaker GINGRICH. Speaker GINGRICH is waging a war without blood. Anybody who does not hear that statement and react is doomed to failure. If we do not gear up for a war, in order to defend Medicare you have to wage a war, in order to defend Medicaid you have to wage a war, in order to defend schools we have to wage a war. In order to keep housing for homeless you have to wage a war. Every citizen has to be a soldier in this war. It is a war against the majority; the majority of our people will be hurt by these cuts. The majority of our people will be hurt by this crisis that has been artificially created.

Can the elite minority win a war against the caring majority? That is the basic question. In America we are a democratic society; use anybody of having subverted our democracy. The people in our House of Representatives got there through a democratic process, the people elected them. Yes, it is true only 38 percent of the people came out to vote. Members of the House of Representatives, and the Republicans got a little more than half of that 38 percent. Therefore we did not have an overwhelming mandate. But it does not matter in our democracy: whoever has the most votes wins. They are in power.

How far will this go? Now that they have revealed that they are going to make war on the majority, the elite minority in order to preserve their privilege, in order to have a situation where the rich can get rich faster, the elite minority in order to have the rich not have to put up with the nuisance of a few more taxes, the elite minority in order to have the power to go into the countryside and cause $200,000 no matter how serious your injury and situation might be, protecting against the elite minority and protecting the corporations, are we going to continue with a situation where the elite minority protects corporations from bearing their fair share of the tax burden? Are corporations going to get away with paying 11 percent of the tax burden while individuals pay 44 percent? Are we as a majority going to allow the elite minority to do that to us?

How long are we going to suffer that? How long are we going to let it go on? That is the question. Can the elite minority win a war against the caring majority? Can the elite minority prevail in a democracy? Can the majority be stampeded into voting against their own interests? In a democracy can the majority be stampeded into voting against their own interests?

In November 1996, and in 6 months before that, are we going to be discussing the tax burden and the fact that corporations are paying so much less of the tax burden than they should be paying while individuals and families are paying so much more of the tax burden than they should be paying? We want to be on the record of whether or not we will probably be discussing diversionary issues. The elite minority will use their power to control the media, and they have launched billions of dollars for this process. They will use their power to control the media to divert the eyes of the minority in discussions of affirmative action, into discussions of abortion, into discussions of prayer in the school, into discussions of a number of items that are important, but they are not at the center of what is going to happen in this society or determine what is going to happen in this society in the next 10 years. They are diversionary, gut, emotional issues that are going to be used to stampede the majority into voting for a prospect in terms of respect to the finances and the budget and the appropriations that favors the elite minority. I hope that every citizen will understand the Speaker has made it quite clear that we are in a war. Politics is not what it used to be. I think Speaker Gingrich said before, should be a noble contest between parties that want to reach the same goal, parties that are interested in promoting the same causes. Politics should be a situation where all America wins. There are no losers in a political process which is conceived of as a noble contest to improve America, as a noble contest to have everybody come out better than they were before. Every citizen should understand that we are in a war that you did not declare. It is not a contest anymore because the Speaker has said so. It is war without blood.

We are in a war without blood. War means that casualties have to be taken. War means destruction, war means inevitable enemies. We are not going to be able to avoid those other much longer except as enemies.

Every American understands this and we understand we are still a free people and still a democracy. You can use ...our society—whether toward greater social justice, enfranchisement and well-being for all, or toward a more oppressive and distressed society with material, cultural and spiritual impoverishment for all but a wealthy few—and an escalating pandemic of illness and violence. At all three levels of government, the quality of life is under assault.

Confronted by this challenge, we have come together on the following principles:

Everyone has a right to an adequate standard of living, including a decent job and income security, sufficient food, safe and affordable housing, access to quality education and health care, and a sound environment. Our tax dollars, collected equitably and distributed fairly, would enable these rights to be realized. In our society, so rich in natural, human and capital resources, we reject as baseless the logic of scarcity.

Our society cannot flourish while many among us lack the basic necessities. All but the wealthiest of us are vulnerable to loss of employment and to costly illness or injury. Entitlements to food, shelter, health care and other basic necessities are essential protections that must remain public priorities, never to be stripped away.

Ours is an interdependent, democratic society, where each of us is secure only as long as the liberty and well-being of all of us are protected. In innumerable ways, we are all in the same boat. We oppose restrictions of our most basic freedoms, the destruction of hard-won safeguards to ensure equal access, and the exclusion of immigrants from our national vision. Governments must be held responsible for protecting and promoting the fundamental human rights, dignity, personal security and welfare of all.

We are a diverse coalition of individuals and organizations, including students, trade unionists and other working people, unemployed, social workers, religious groups, health workers, teachers and professors, community developers, environmentalists, legal services workers, small business people, advocates, people all of all ages, races, ethnicities and religions, lesbian, gay and straight, people with disabilities, mothers, fathers and children. In the face of widespread attacks on these principles, we are united in a struggle to take back our city, our state and our country.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I want to go back to my beginning. We are at the beginning of a process, of a budget and appropriations process, which is the most important process undertaken in our Government each year. The Speaker of the House of Representatives has stated that politics is war without blood. It is important that every American understand that, and come out to participate in the war that is going to decide your fate. You must know what is in the budget, you must insist that the budget can be balanced. The budget can be balanced in 10 years without hardships, without suffering if you balance the tax burden. If you balance the tax burden and have corporations pay as much as families pay, balance the tax burden and you can balance the budget.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we all have known grim days and great days. Some days are filled with strain and stress while on other days everything goes smoothly and successfully. Life can be simply awful or awfully simple. Today, we choose the awfully simple but sublime secret of a great day. Your work, done by Your power, achieves Your results, on Your time. We reject the idea that things work out and ask You, dear Lord, to work out things. Before us is a new day filled with more to do than we can accomplish on our own strength. You have given us the power of sanctified imagination to envision a day in which what is truly important gets done. Help us expeditiously to move through the amendments presented today, to listen to You through Your guidance, by Your power, and for Your glory. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The acting majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, for the information of my colleagues, this morning there will be a period of morning business until the hour of 9:45 a.m. Following morning business, the Senate will resume consideration of the antiterrorism bill, S. 735. By consent, Senator BOXER will be recognized at that time to offer an amendment. A cloture motion was filed on Monday with respect to the Hatch substitute to S. 735. Senators with first-degree amendments listed in the agreement on S. 735 are reminded that they have until 12:30 p.m. today to file amendments in order to comply with rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate.

The Senate will stand in recess from 12:30 p.m. until 2:15 p.m. in order to accommodate respective party luncheons. Senators should be aware that rollcall votes are expected throughout the day and a late-night session may be required in order to complete action on the antiterrorism bill by the close of business today.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. INHOFE). Under the previous order, leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Maine [Mrs. SNOWE] is recognized to speak for up to 30 minutes.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR MARGARET CHASE SMITH

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, it gives me a great deal of honor and privilege to be here today to join some of my female Senators in paying tribute to Senator Margaret Chase Smith, who passed away on Memorial Day, after 97 years of courage, bravery, integrity, and pioneering spirit. I would like to join the people of Maine, the Nation, and my colleagues in saying goodbye to Margaret Chase Smith, forever the Senator from Maine. She lived through two world wars, 17 Presidents, and outlived over 70 years of communism. She was given 95 honorary degrees throughout her life, almost 1 degree for every year of her time on Earth.

She was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom by President George Bush at a White House ceremony in 1989.

She was a teacher, a telephone operator, a newspaperwoman, an office manager, a secretary, a wife, a Congresswoman and, for 24 years, a U.S. Senator. She rose from the humblest of beginnings to the highest corridors of power.

But she was also a leader, an inspiration, a nation’s conscience, a visionary, and a woman of endless-firsts.

She was the first woman to be elected to the U.S. Senate. She was the first woman to be elected to both the House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate. She was the first woman to face another woman in a U.S. Senate election campaign.

She was the first woman to become a ranking member of a congressional committee. She was the first woman to serve on the Armed Services Committee. She was the first woman to serve on the Appropriations Committee. She was the first woman to be elected chair of the Republican Conference.

She was the first woman to have her name placed in nomination for the Presidency by either major political party in 1964. She was the first civilian woman to sail on a U.S. destroyer in wartime. And, not surprisingly, if you knew her, she was the first woman to brush Heaven’s horizon and challenge the skies by breaking the sound barrier in a U.S. Air Force F-100 Super Sabre fighter.

She was a woman of many firsts, a daughter of Maine, a trailblazer for women in public service to the people of Maine and the citizens of America.

Today we come to remember two things: We remember a legend, and we remember history, the history of Margaret Chase Smith of Skowhegan made throughout her 32 years of outstanding public service to the people of Maine and the citizens of America.

From the very first day I met Margaret Chase Smith, I often wondered if she ever knowingly set out to make history in 1940 as she began her service in the House of Representatives. Today, I realize Margaret Chase Smith never charted a course to make history or pursue it. The fact is, history merely followed Margaret Chase Smith.

It was when her husband, Congressman Clyde Smith, died in 1940 that Margaret Chase Smith found herself thrust into political life. Shortly after his death, she won a special election to fill the unexpired term of his late husband, and then went on to win the June Republican primary and, of course, the November general election.

Mrs. Smith was going to Washington, and she would be there for 32 splendid years in both the House and the Senate.

She ran for the Senate when Senate majority leader Wallace White, of Maine, announced that he would retire in 1948. So she decided to run for that vacant seat. After beating both Maine’s incumbent Republican Governor and a former Governor in the June primary, Smith went on to claim victory in the general election, beginning the now famous litany of firsts that would act as proud landmarks and milestones in her life.

It is safe to assume at this point in her life most of Maine knew about their newly-elected junior Senator, although she was not yet a household name anywhere else. But America was about to find out exactly who Margaret Chase Smith was. During one of the Nation’s darkest hours of history, Margaret Chase Smith never shone more brightly as a beacon of reason, fairness, and courage.

The spring of 1950 was a dark and tragic time in American history. They were days of poisonous rhetoric, rage, fear, suspicion, and hate.

Senator Joseph McCarthy had made sensational and unsubstantiated charges that had turned him into a national celebrity and purveyor of blatant opportunism—charges about Communist spies and Soviet-sponsored traitors throughout our Nation’s governing institutions. He held the American consciousness hostage to his hate-filled tactics, and no one dared to stand up to Senator Joe McCarthy. No one, that is, except Maine’s own Senator Smith.

On June 1, 1950, in her first major speech on the floor of the Senate and as a freshman, Margaret Chase Smith spoke out loud the words that much of America had thought quietly to themselves.

A Republican with a strong allegiance to her party, Smith nevertheless joined her independent Yankee spirit and was known as a maverick on some issues important to her as a matter of conscience, rather than as a matter of politics.

So it was that Senator Smith began one of the most famous speeches in American history, the “Declaration of Conscience,” with the words, “I would like to speak briefly and simply about a serious national condition.” I would like to quote from that. She began by saying:

I speak as briefly as possible because too much harm has already been done with irresponsible words of bitterness and selfish political opportunism. I speak as simply as possible because, the issue is too great to be obscured by emotions. I speak simply and briefly in the hope that my words will be taken.

I speak as a Republican. I speak as a woman. I speak as a United States Senator. I speak as an American.

For the next 15 minutes, her words resonated across America and struck a chord with the hearts and minds of all Americans. Senator McCarthy sat directly behind her, a fitting position for him to be shadowed in light of her reason and integrity. She had done in 15 minutes what none of her 94 other colleagues had dared to do for months, and she never mentioned Senator McCarthy’s name in the process.

I should mention that she sat in seat No. 1, where the President sits currently, when she made this most important speech.

In slaying a giant of demagoguery, Margaret Chase Smith stood and courageously defended what she termed “some of the basic principles of Americanism,” and I would like again to quote from her speech. Those principles, she said, were:

The right to think;

The right to be unpopular beliefs;

The right to protest;

The right of independent thought.

She went on to say that:

The exercise of these rights should not cost one single American citizen his reputation or his right to a livelihood nor should he be in danger of losing his reputation or the livelihood merely because he happens to know someone with unpopular beliefs.

Bernard Baruch once said that he made that speech, he would have become the next President of the United States.

Almost exactly 45 years to the date—June 1 of last week—after she spoke those nearly perfect words of reason, she still reaches across the years and follows her spirit skyward.

In 1972, her public service career concluded. When she retired, she left another legacy of her dedication to public service. A near-perfect attendance record in Congress. She held, until 1981, the all-time consecutive rollcall voting record in the entire history of the U.S. Senate with 2,941 consecutive rollcall votes spanning 13 years. Only a much-needed hip operation in September 1968 kept her from casting her vote on the floor of the Senate.

Not known for displaying idleness as a personal legacy, Margaret Chase Smith spent the next 23 years of her life after politics lecturing at dozens of colleges and universities across this country, and worked tirelessly to establish what is now known as the Margaret Chase Smith Library at her beloved home in Skowhegan, a small town where she was born almost a century ago.

I know that I and other women in public service have a very high standard to meet in her wake and some rather large shoes to fill as we walk in the footsteps of Margaret Chase Smith. Fortunately for us, those shoes had heels.

Indeed, Margaret Chase Smith showed how a woman’s place can truly be in “the House * * * and the Senate.” She was an inspiration to millions of young girls and women all across this country who never before thought they could aspire to any kind of public office. She showed through her talents, abilities, and energies that opportunities for women did exist and that the door to elected office could be unlocked and opened to all women. But most importantly, what Margaret Chase Smith’s life proved is it is not necessarily gender which makes a difference in public service, it is dedication, it is energy, perseverance, competence, and the will to get the job done.

At last, she has reached a final resting place amongst the angels. George Bernard Shaw once said, “In Heaven, an angel is no one in particular.” I would have to say George Bernard Shaw never knew Margaret Chase Smith, because she was truly one of the “better angels among us,” to use the words of the President of the United States. But I am sure in Heaven, as on Earth, Margaret Chase Smith will come to be known as someone quite “in particular.”

It is only fitting she requested her epitaph to read: “She served people.”

Well, she certainly served them and she served them well. So it is with a mixture of pride and humility that when I am referred to as “the Senator from Maine,” I know well this is a phrase of honorable and distinguished past. Hearing those words will always evoke images of an individual who gave Maine some of its proudest moments. That phrase is a daily reminder of an individual who had the will and integrity to speak out vigorously when silence was a safer course.

Margaret Chase Smith once said, “If I were to do it all over again, I would change nothing. I am very proud of my public service. I have no regrets * * * No regrets, no changes—I would do it all over again.”

I know I speak on behalf of Maine and my colleagues when I say I wish you could.
Mr. President, I now yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Maryland who is the dean of the Democratic women in the U.S. Senate, who is the first Democratic woman, like Margaret Chase Smith, to have served both in the House and Senate. She was the first woman to be elected to the U.S. Senate from the State of Maryland.

So I am pleased Senator Mikulski could join us today in this tribute to Margaret Chase Smith.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Maine for recognizing me.

I rise today as the dean of the Democratic women to salute a great and grand lady, a daughter of Maine, Senator Margaret Chase Smith.

Growing up as a young girl, there were very few role models that I or women of my generation had for women participating in politics. Certainly, there had been Eleanor Roosevelt, who served as the First Lady of the United States of America. But during the time I was in high school, I admired two great women—Clare Boothe Luce, who was a Congresswoman, and also Margaret Chase Smith from Maine. And going to a Catholic woman’s high school and college, women were always held up as models and examples. In those days, we did not have words like “role models,” but they used terms like “examples,” about how women could retain their femininity and dignity and yet participate in the dynamic world of politics. When I came to the U.S. Senate, I was struck by the many parallels in the lives between Senator Smith and myself. I was deeply honored to follow in her footsteps. Until 1992, only 17 women had served in the U.S. Senate. Only five of those women had been elected in their own right and there was one who served only 1 day, but that was not Senator Margaret Chase Smith. For four distinguished terms, she served in the U.S. Senate and was a woman of many firsts and many accomplishments.

The similarities in our backgrounds were brought to my attention by the Senate Historian when I came here. She and I had the honor to be Senator Mikulski and Senator Snowe and Senator BOXER of California. Senator Margaret Chase Smith, in one of her elections, defeated another woman for the job thatraised eyebrows all over America in that spirited combat. I defeated another woman in my general election, and I must say we not only raised eyebrows but we raised a bit of a decibel level in the debate.

Senator Smith was a member of the Appropriations Committee, and I have the honor to be appointed to that committee as well. Senator Smith was on the Foreign Relations Committee, along with Senator KASSEBAUM of Kansas, the first Republican woman elected in my own right. She was the first woman to be elected to the U.S. Senate, and the first woman to be elected to the Senate without first having been preceded in Congress by a spouse.

Senator KASSEBAUM and I had the pleasure of joining Senator Smith at her home back in October 1992, and I know those were special moments we will always treasure and share. I am pleased that Senator KASSEBAUM could be here today to participate in this tribute.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I thank you for the floor.

Senator Mikulski spoke extraordinarily well about what each of the women who serves here today bring out, which is a culmination of many of the things that Senator Smith stood for in her long career of public service. She was a woman who refused to ever be bound by stereotypes or labels. She was not a woman Senator, she was simply a Senator. Her interests were wide-ranging because they were her own and not a narrow agenda imposed by gender, region, or parochial concerns. She was a true expert on defense matters, missile preparedness, space exploration, and NATO.

She had deep and strongly held concerns about civil rights law, education policy, and the rules of the Senate. She had a high regard for the institutions of Government and a great respect for the people who serve in them.

She also had deep and strongly held concerns about civil rights law, education policy, and the rules of the Senate. She had a high regard for the institutions of Government and a great respect for the people who serve in them.
1960’s. She spoke both gently and forthrightly, but always went from personal conviction and principles. She is right-ly remembered as a Senator with great spunk, intelligence, and commitment. She sought not only to represent the people of Maine, but also to fulfill her responsibilities to the Nation as a whole.

In her 24 years in the U.S. Senate, she spoke always with honesty and clarity, seeking facts and judging each issue on its merits. Those are high standards, Mr. President, a worthy leg-acy to pass on to those who will follow her in this Chamber.

I am honored to be able to pay tribute to a great lady, a fine U.S. Senator and an inspiring legacy.

I yield the floor.

Ms. SNOWE. I thank Senator Kasse-baum for the wonderful statement she made about Margaret Chase Smith. I know from her own recollections and recollections of our visit with her. It was truly inspiring because of what she had accomplished in both the House and the Senate, but I think more signifi-cant is the fact of when she accompl-ished it. Her accomplishments are as remarkable today as they were then in terms of our standards and the ability of women to participate in the public arena. There are still many obstacles, but there is no doubt there were many more in the 1940’s. The fact she was able to have an extremely challenging race in 1948 with an incumbent Gov-ernor and former Governor and still came on top. After attacking Senator Joe McCarthy in terms of what he had done to this country, he got somebody to run against her.

She still came out with 82 percent of the vote as a resounding victory, not only for Senator Margaret Chase Smith but also for a woman who was not yet ready to run for high office. This is some-thing very special about this woman, because we are all firsts here today. Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, she did this at a time when she only had 1 year of experience in the U.S. Senate. She was quick to go to the forefront. She led her colleagues against Senator McCarthy’s inaccuracies when they be-came clear. Senator Smith’s commit-ment to truth and justice made her transcendent partisan considerations, to stand up for what she believed was right.

In order to reflect her distinguished career properly, we should also remem-ber Senator Smith’s many other ac-complishments. Throughout her four terms, one of her primary interests was military readiness of our Nation. She was the first woman to serve on the Armed Services Committee. Women in the Armed Forces will always remem-ber her as the mother of WAVES—the women’s branch of the Navy.

Like many of the senators on this side of the aisle, she worked to protect our technological advantage in the cold war by voting against the Test Ban Treaty of 1963.

In an age when men dominated poli-tics, she was a leader at bringing women into the political process. Sen-ator Smith was the first woman elected to the U.S. Senate in her own right. She was a true leader, Mr. President, she did this at a time when she only had 1 year of experience in the U.S. Senate. She was quick to go to the forefront. She led her colleagues against Senator McCarthy’s inaccuracies when they became clear. Senator Smith’s commitment to truth and justice made her transcendent partisan considerations, to stand up for what she believed was right.

In order to reflect her distinguished career properly, we should also remember Senator Smith’s many other accomplishments. Throughout her four terms, one of her primary interests was military readiness of our Nation. She was the first woman to serve on the Armed Services Committee. Women in the Armed Forces will always remember her as the mother of WAVES—the women’s branch of the Navy.

Like many of the senators on this side of the aisle, she worked to protect our technological advantage in the cold war by voting against the Test Ban Treaty of 1963. In an age when men dominated politics, she was a leader at bringing women into the political process. Senator Smith was the first woman elected to the U.S. Senate in her own right.

It is my pleasure to yield 5 minutes to Senator Hutchison.

Mrs. Hutchison. Mr. President, I do want to thank my friends from California for the tribute that they are giving me today. Senator Boxer has said that Margaret Chase Smith could bring to this Senate floor Republicans and Democrats who speak of her with such fond memories. I think Senator Hutchison found things in Senator Margaret Chase Smith’s record that she can identify with. I certainly find those, as a Democrat. This says something very special about this woman, that she would be so revered on both sides of the aisle.

Obviously, it is in order to send con-dolences to the family—my nieces and nephews, and her sister, Evelyn Williams. I hope that through the sadness of their loss, they certainly can reflect with pride, as we are, on the remarkable life of Margaret Chase Smith.

When you lose someone, whatever age they are, it is still a very painful experience. I am sure they are going through that pain. Just a couple years ago, I read an interview that Margaret Chase Smith gave a major national newspaper. Believe me, she was sharper than many Members are, at the ripe old age of 95. She lived for nearly a cen-tury.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

When we think about it, she lived through World War I, World War II, the beginning and the end of the cold war. She lived through women’s suffrage and through civil rights. She saw her country and her world grow in many amazing ways.

But she never just sat back. She made history herself and, in doing so, touched many lives, including my own. I was a child of the 1950’s—the time of the “Happy Days,” Doris Day movies, the Debbie Reynolds days—when women with personalities glowed and danced their way through the perfect life and right into the arms of Eddie Fisher guys, who would sing to them until their dying days.

Politics was not even in the realm of the possible for women, except for Margaret Chase Smith and just a few others. My mother was an F.D.R. Democrat through and through. Yet, she used to point to Margaret Chase Smith. “Imagine what she must be like,” my mother would say. “One woman among all those men. She must be something!” And she was.

Margaret Chase Smith arrived in Washington in 1935, the wife and secretary of Representative Clyde Smith of Maine. Her career began suddenly in 1940 when her husband died and she won a special election to take his place. She went on to serve four terms in the Senate, making her the first woman as my colleague from Maine has noted, to serve in both Houses of Congress. And I think, more significant than that, was one of the most popular legislators of all times. She earned her reputation as the conscience of the Senate in 1950, when she became the first in her party to attack Senator Joe McCarthy for his politics of hate and fear and, in doing so, she definitely, in my opinion, blazed trails. Because it does not matter what year it is, what century it is, the fact is there are people in politics who will play the politics of hate and fear and it takes courage to stand up to it, and she taught us how. You can imagine the shock in the Senate when she said, “I do not like the way the Senate has been made a rendezvous for vilification, for selfish political gain at the sacrifice of individual reputations and national unity.”

When asked later about the courage she mustered to give that declaration she said, “Oh, my! I’ll say it was difficult! But someone had to do it  . The more I thought of it, the more I thought, someone has to do this.”

I think that is, again, a lesson to us, because sometimes it is very hard to stand up and say something that is unpopular. It is tough to vote for something unpopular, but it is even tougher to stand up and say something unpopular. She was willing to do it and I think, as such, is really a guiding star for both women and men in politics.

That was not the only time Senator Smith defied party unity. She voted for F.D.R.’s New Deal and for Federal support for education, just to name a few. So, therefore, I point out that both Republicans and Democrats can find things in her record that they can identify with.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for just 1 more minute.

Ms. SOWE. Mr. President, I yield an additional minute to the Senator from California.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. Thank you so much. In her own words, Senator Smith served in Congress in a time when “people felt the Constitution says, that people are the Government.” I think this is a time when all of us in this Chamber yearn to see that again. We are the Government. Anyone who attacks the Government, such as the kind of thing we saw in Oklahoma City, is essentially attacking America. In 1975, the long reign of the Lady of Maine—and now we have another Lady of Maine—ended when she was defeated in her fifth run for the Senate. She said, “I hate the Senate when there is no indication another qualified woman is coming in. If I leave and there is a long lapse, the next woman will have to rebuild entirely.” In fact, there was a long lapse, but how proud she must have been to see OLYMPIA SOWE make it and become another Lady of Maine.

I am certainly proud to be one of the many women—and I say there are many of us now, perhaps not enough, but many—to be here today to honor the life of a true pioneer, one who came before and cleared the path for others to follow, one who served as a role model for all of us. Now young women can say: Yes, I can grow up and be a U.S. Senator. I can find the courage to stand up and do what is right.

I again thank my colleague from Maine for giving me this time. Margaret Chase Smith, although she lived 97 years on this Earth, will be missed. But I believe her presence will always be in this Chamber. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to extend, for 5 minutes, morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I just want to finish, before my colleague from Maine sums up this tribute, by thanking the Senator from Maine for doing something very thoughtful. As we go through our workdays and we do not stop to think of some of the important milestones that happened in the world, in the United States, in the Senate, the Senator from Maine has done something very special, and that is to point out that there are so many women, now, in the 15 minutes from the business day to pay tribute to the first woman who led the way for us.

I think, as we heard the remarks that were made, that each person is following in some way a wonderful lead that was given to us by the great service that Margaret Chase Smith gave to our country; that is, to lead with dignity, with class, with continuity through four terms.

I think the tribute today is a wonderful thing to show the first woman, in fact, made it possible for eight women to follow her and to have in our own right a voice at the table on the Armed Services Committee and other states. I think it was wonderful for the Senator from Maine to make this time possible.

Ms. SOWE. Will the Senator yield?

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I will be happy to yield.

Ms. SOWE. I appreciate the comments of the Senator because I think it is true that in no small part it is due to Margaret Chase Smith’s presence here that today we have eight women in the U.S. Senate and a record number in the House of Representatives. She certainly served as an inspiration as we began our political careers. I know the first time I visited with her when I decided to run for the House of Representatives, and then more recently when I did have the opportunity to see her last year after I announced my candidacy for the U.S. Senate, she told me to give it all I had, to work very hard, to leave no stone unturned, which is what we always did. And I think we needed to have role models like Margaret Chase Smith who would blaze that trail for us to make that possible.

After all, she was born 23 years before women had the right to vote in this country. The fact that she was willing to follow through on an extensive political career, 32 years, is remarkable in and of itself.

So I thank Senator KASSELMAN, Senator HUTCHISON, Senator FEINSTEIN, and Senator BOXER.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, 45 years ago last Thursday, Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine rose from her seat in this Chamber and delivered a speech she called a “Declaration of Conscience.”

Many historians believe this speech marked the beginning of the end of the era of McCarthyism. And it also marked the finest hour of the remarkable career of Senator Smith, who passed away last week at the age of 97.

I was privileged to serve alongside Senator Smith for 4 years in the Senate. She was as she has been described by many others. No nonsense. Fiercely independent. And sometimes as thorny as the red rose she wore every day.

During her 32 years of service in Washington, Senator Smith accomplished many firsts. She was the first woman to be elected to both Houses of Congress. She was the first woman elected to the Senate who did not succeed her husband. She was the first woman to have her name placed in nomination for President by a major political party.
As she made history, Senator Smith became a role model for many women. One of them was my wife, Elizabeth, who has told me of the time in 1960, when, as a young college graduate interning on Capitol Hill, she called upon Senator Smith.

Not many Senators would share an hour with a total stranger seeking advice, but that is just what Senator Smith did. And she advised Elizabeth to bolster her education with a law degree—advice she eventually followed.

What President Bush presented the Presidential Medal of Freedom to Senator Smith in 1989, he said that she “looked beyond the politics of the time to see the future of America, and she made us all better for it.”

President Bush was right. Both this Chamber and America are for the better because of Margaret Chase Smith. I know the Senate joins with me in sending our condolences to the people of Maine.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I wish to join my colleagues today in commemorating Margaret Chase Smith, the Republican Senator who made history as the first woman to win election to both Houses of Congress, and the first woman ever to be elected to the Senate.

It is a privilege to be a U.S. Senator. And I am grateful to Margaret Chase Smith for paving the way for me, and the women before me, to serve in this great Chamber. And more importantly, I salute her for being an inspiration, setting an example by being tough yet compassionate.

Senator Smith’s accomplishments were great. Among them, a long list of firsts, including being the first woman to sit on the Naval Affairs Committee and to have her name advanced for the Presidency at a national convention. But it is here legislative record and her long history of independence—always voting her conscience, that has left a last impression on me.

She was a political independent, voting with her party when she saw fit and standing alone when she felt strongly about an issue. Indeed, in her first major address to the Senate on June 1, 1950, the freshman Senator denounced Joseph McCarthy. She accused the Wisconsin Senator of reducing the Senate to a “forum of hate and character assassination.” In 1954 she voted for his censure.

McCarthy exacted his political payback—expelling Senator Smith from a key committee and, in her next election, leading a vicious campaign against her. Still, it was that speech that was the beginning of the end or his career, and which cemented her place in history.

In 1970, during the Vietnam war, she addressed the Senate again in a speech that was later expanded into a book called “A Declaration of Conscience.” In that speech, the Maine Senator warned Americans that “excessiveness and overreactions on both sides is a clear and present danger to American democracy.” Senator Smith knew that if we did not elevate the level of political discourse beyond mean-spiritedness, that we risked chipping away at the democratic process itself.

Her standing up for what she believed earned her the moniker “the conscience of the Senate.” But she stood her ground without resorting to personal invective or shrill tactics. It is this sort of reasoned debate and moderation—the very principles that this Chamber has always stood for—that should continue to guide those of us who sit here today.

Margaret Chase Smith was born in Skowhegan, ME. Her father was the town barber and her mother was a part-time waitress. She herself earned only a high-school education. She taught grade school, was a telephone operator and the circulation manager for a weekly newspaper where she met her husband, Clyde Harold Smith. When, in 1940, her husband died of a heart attack, she successfully ran for his seat in the House of Representatives. She served four terms in the House. Later, in the Senate, she served on the Appropriations, Aeronautical and Space committees and was the ranking Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee. She also was the chairwoman of the Conference of Republican Senators. Senator Smith served under six presidents—from Franklin Roosevelt to Richard Nixon.

Although she advanced considerably in what was a man’s world, Senator Smith did not consider herself a champion of women’s rights. Yet she wrote legislation that paved the way for women to serve in the military and later voted for the equal rights amendment. By her example, Senator Smith pioneered the way for many women, including myself, to enter the political arena.

Late in her career, Senator Smith said: “I have no family, no time-consuming hobbies to occupy myself and my job as United States Senator.”

It is in her job as a U.S. Senator that Margaret Chase Smith distinguished herself, and that she will always be remembered and honored.

Mr. SNOWE. I thank my colleagues once again for their participation in this tribute to a remarkable woman who led a remarkable life, and all the causes she espoused in her political career would serve us well today. It certainly serves as an important reminder of the standards we should establish as public servants, and hopefully that will carry through the years to come.

With that, Mr. President, I conclude this tribute to Senator Margaret Chase Smith.

WAS CONGRESS IRRESPONSIBLE? THE VOTERS HAVE SAID YES

Question: How many million dollars are in $1 trillion? While you are arriving at an answer, bear in mind that it was the U.S. Congress that ran up the Federal debt that now exceeds $4.9 trillion.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, before contemplating today’s bad news about the Federal debt, let us do that little pop quiz once more. Remember—one question, one answer:

How many million in a trillion? There are one million million in a trillion.

COMPREHENSIVE TERRORISM PREVENTION ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 9:45 having arrived and passed, the Senate will now resume consideration of S. 735, with the clerk's report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: A bill (S. 735) to prevent and punish acts of terrorism, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

Hatch/Dole amendment No. 1199, in the nature of a substitute.

Hatch (for Smith) amendment No. 1203 (to amendment No. 1199), to make technical changes.

Hatch (for Pressler) amendment No. 1205 (to amendment No. 1199), to establish Federal penalties for the production and distribution of false identification documents.

Hatch (for Specter) amendment No. 1206 (to amendment No. 1199), to authorize assistance to foreign nations to procure explosives detection equipment.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

PENDING (Mr. CAMPELL). The clerk will call the roll.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I want to make a brief statement so all my colleagues understand the situation. We were supposed to start this amendment at 9:45. I have been prepared since last night. I was here on the floor at 9:30 this morning and have been here straight through, but I do feel it crucial that the chairman of the committee be here because he and I are trying to work out this amendment.

I think it very important that he hears my arguments. It is a very straightforward amendment that deals with extending the statute of limitations to give our law enforcement people more of a chance to go after and arrest and convict those who would violate some very serious laws that are on our books.

I have brought this amendment to the Senate floor because of Oklahoma City, and I feel it is so important that I have sent a message through the Republican leadership that I will be ready to go the moment that Senator HATCH returns to the floor. He is in a hearing. One of the problems around here is that we have to be in so many places at once.

But I do think it is the right thing for this bill, for the American people that the chairman of the committee be here when I offer this amendment. I do not think it should be contentious, but it may be contentious, and I want to make sure we have a fair debate. That is the reason for the delay.

I thank the Speaker, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, just a few moments ago, I explained to the Senate that I was awaiting the arrival of the chairman of the committee, the Senator from Utah, who is at a hearing at this time. The reason I was waiting for him was that he expressed concern with my amendment and at the same time he expressed an interest in working the amendment out. Therefore, I thought it would save some time if he were present when I went through these arguments. But he has sent a message through the leadership that he would prefer if I lay this amendment down. So with the indulgence of the Senate, I will send the amendment to the desk.

AMENDMENT NO. 121 TO AMENDMENT NO. 119
(Purpose: To increase the period of limitation for violations of the National Firearms Act)

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mrs. BOXER] proposes an amendment numbered 1214 to amendment No. 119.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 17, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

SEC. 108. INCREASED PERIODS OF LIMITATION FOR NATIONAL FIREARMS ACT VIOLATIONS.

Section 6531 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (1) through (8) as subparagraphs (A) through (H), respectively; and

(2) by amending the matter immediately preceding subparagraph (A), as redesignated, to read as follows: "No person shall be prosecuted, tried, or punished for any criminal offense under the internal revenue laws unless the indictment is found or the information is served within 3 years after the commission of the offense, except that the period of limitation shall be—

(1) 5 years for offenses described in section 5681 (relating to firearms and other devices); and

(2) 6 years—'

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, what I plan to do is I want to point out the case for my amendment. I believe it is one that should receive the unanimous agreement of the Senate, both Democrats and Republicans alike. I hope that it will, and if there is still a problem when the chairman of the full committee be present, I will indulge the Senate once again to repeat for him the reasons why I think this amendment is compelling.

Mr. President, this amendment comes as a direct result of the Oklahoma experience. That is why my amendment is supported by the chief of police of Oklahoma City and 44 other chiefs of police around the nation.

The amendment I sent to the desk would extend the statute of limitations for violation of the National Firearms Act from 3 years to 5 years. In other words, it would add 2 years that law enforcement has to complete its case and put the villains away.

This change would equalize the period of limitation for the National Firearms Act with the vast majority of other Federal laws. I think that is the most important point I can make. This is really a conforming amendment. If you look at all the gun laws in the criminal law, they have a 5-year statute of limitation. The NFA is an anomaly. We have a 3-year statute here.

So the amendment is fair. It would give prosecutors a badly needed tool. What is this tool? It is more time. It is more time for law enforcement to build their case against violent criminals and terrorists. I want to make a point here. We are not talking about a little game of cops and robbers. We are talking about terrorists and violent criminals who make bombs, who make sawed-off shotguns, who make fully automatic machine guns.

I want to point out that this provision has been requested by the Justice Department. It was included in the administration's bill, and although the pending bill incorporates many of the administration's antiterrorism provisions, for whatever reason, this section was dropped out of the new bill. I think it is important that we put it back in.

Again, I want to make it clear that this amendment is directly related to preventing terrorism generally and to the Oklahoma City case in particular.

It is likely that when the investigation into the Oklahoma City bombing is completed, the suspects will be charged with illegally manufacturing a bomb. That crime is a violation of the National Firearms Act, and only the National Firearms Act.

We need to give law enforcement more time. There may be one person involved in the Oklahoma City tragedy, or there may be two. There may be 10 or 100. It is complicated to put the case together. We need to give law enforcement time.

The National Firearms Act, the act I am amending, governs some of the most important firearms offenses on the books. The NFA makes it a crime to make a fully automatic machine gun. That is a crime. It makes it a crime to possess a sawed-off shotgun, or to make a homemade silencer.

Now, surely those offenses are serious and complex enough to merit a 5-year statute. In addition, it covers the making of a destructive device, or a bomb. So we have the fully automatic machine gun, a sawed-off shotgun, a homemade silencer, and an incendiary device, or a bomb.

Surely, law enforcement should have 5 years to complete their case, just as they do for all other gun laws.

The NFA, the National Firearms Act which I am amending, is the act which deals with homemade fertilizer bombs, Molotov cocktails. It is the only statute that deals with 5-year to make a bomb, 3-year statute of limitations instead of the 5-year. That means that any charges brought for violations of the NFA must be filed within 3 years from the crime.

To show how important this difference is, I urge my colleagues to consider this: If a terrorist builds a bomb in 1995, but Federal prosecutors are unable to gather enough evidence until 1999, they cannot file those charges. The statute of limitations begins running from the time the bomb is made. I think this is important. For the crime of illegal making a bomb, the statutes of limitations run from the time the bomb is made—not the date the bomb was used.

Theoretically, we could have a terrorist group make a bomb, store it for 2 or 3 years, use it, but by then the statute would have expired. So we could not get the perpetrators. That is why the amendment is so powerful. It is not just a technical change. It is a very substantive change. It needs to be included in this bill.

These investigations are complicated. Yesterday, we were all moved to see the families from Oklahoma City asking Members to make this bill the law of the land in the name of the people who died. I want to see that happen. I want to see that happen. I also want to make sure that the people who perpetrated the crime are caught—each and every one of them.

This investigation may lead in 3,000 directions. We have heard there are thousands of leads. We should get every last individual who participated in this vicious crime.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate be not an academic debate about periods of limitation. This change is badly needed. It has been requested by those who investigate and prosecute criminals.

I have put on Senator BOXER the names of 45 police chiefs who urge support for the Boxer amendment. These police chiefs are from all over the country, from Oklahoma City to the east coast, the West, the South, the North. They are unanimous in this. They need this time. They need this tool.

It could take years to unravel complex criminal conspiracies. Law enforcement should not be faced with an unrealistic demand for the expenses. I want to ask again, this is not an academic debate. I have been told by Federal investigators that the 3-year statute of limitations for the National Firearms Act has stopped actual prosecutions. Indictments that would have been issued in actual explosive cases were not issued because of the NFA’s short statute of limitations. Criminals could go free because the statute of limitations is only 3 instead of the usual 5.

The short statute of limitations is truly an anomaly in Federal law. For example, possessing or manufacturing an assault weapon in violation of the ban passed last year has a 5-year statute of limitations, not a 3-year statute of limitations. Manufacturing cop killers has a 5-year statute of limitations, not a 3-year statute. Manufacturing an undetectable firearm has a 5-year statute of limitations. However, in the National Firearms Act, unless we pass the Boxer amendment, we have a 3-year statute of limitations for crimes like making bombs, silencers, sawed-off shotguns.

No one can explain to me why it makes sense to have a 5-year statute on carrying an assault weapon or manufacturing an assault weapon and only a 3-year statute for a sawed-off shotgun or a bomb. It makes no sense. There is no reason for it.

The Boxer amendment addresses the problem simply. I hope and hope that we can all reach agreement on this and not bicker about it. It is common sense to match the statutes of limitations for the vast majority of Federal crimes. We need a level playing field so Federal law enforcement can prosecute violent criminals more effectively.

Again, I want to stress that this change was requested by the Justice Department and the Treasury Department, and the administration supports this. This is a bill where we see bipartisanship and we approve of it. It is common sense to match the statutes of limitations for the vast majority of Federal criminal laws. We need a level playing field so Federal law enforcement can prosecute violent criminals more effectively.

This amendment, to be offered by Senator Kennedy, will allow local law enforcement to keep a record of multiple handgun sales rather than destroy the forms, as current law requires.

Sawed-off shotguns. This amendment, to be offered by Senator Bradley, will prohibit "cop-killer" bullets based on a performance standard rather than the physical composition of the bullet, as current law requires.

Multiple handgun sales forms. This amendment, to be offered by Senator Kennedy, will allow local law enforcement to keep a record of multiple handgun sales rather than destroy the forms, as current law requires.

Guns for felons. This amendment, to be offered by Senator Tottenburg and Simon, will permanently close the current loophole that allows some violent felons to regain their right to possess firearms.

National firearms act. This amendment, to be offered by Senator Boxer, will increase the statute of limitations for violations of the National Firearms Act from three to five years. These amendments are designed to close current loopholes in federal law. They will provide law enforcement with additional tools to apprehend violent offenders, vigorously prosecute them and combat crime on our streets.

We strongly urge you to demonstrate your unwavering commitment to the protection of law enforcement and the safety of all Americans by supporting these public safety measures.

Sincerely,

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, this amendment should be adopted. It is fair. It levels the playing field for firearms crimes. It is needed. It is not this Senator who says it is needed; it is the people who do the work, the difficult law enforcement work, tracking down these leads, these thousands of leads, have asked for this additional tool, these additional 2 years.

Mr. President, Congress talks a lot about getting tough on crime. There is not one of us I have not heard make a speech about, “Let’s crack down.” There is a difference between talking about getting tough on crime and being tough on crime by providing the law enforcement the tools that they need. This does not cost us any money. They are not asking for more equipment. They are not asking for bigger office space or another computer system. They are asking for time to track down these leads.

We are in a new phase now, unfortunately, in our country. Who ever dreamed that we would have people within America who would build a device, a bomb, and kill innocent people and innocent children; turn on the Government of, by, and for the people, and somehow twist it around as if it was not America?

It is complicated and it is new and it is different and it is frightening, and law enforcement needs this additional time.

I have no other comments at this time. I have not organized a team of speakers because, frankly, I think this amendment is eloquent in its simplicity and very clear in its common sense. I hope we will have bipartisan support for the Boxer amendment, and at this time I yield the floor and reserve my right to regain the floor when the chairman of the Judiciary Committee makes it known to the floor. I understand he is tied up in a committee. We expect him here I think at the top of the hour, and I look forward to debating him on this amendment if in fact he feels it is not appropriate.

But I hope against hope that he will in fact embrace this amendment and we can once again show the Nation we are united across party lines in our desire to go after those terrorists and give law enforcement the tools they need to make sure justice reigns in this great Nation of ours.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?
Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SANTORUM). Without objection, it is so ordered.

FIGHTING CRIME THROUGH TECHNOLOGY

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, as we proceed on this antiterrorism bill, I would like to discuss for a moment one provision of the bill which I believe is very noncontroversial but I think is very significant, and that is the provision of the bill that concerns the increased help, the increased assistance that we are going to give to local law enforcement in regard to giving them the tools they need to fight back, and that is the area of technology. This is one area where I believe it is important for us as a nation to provide the tools they need to fight back against terrorism.

The bill we are discussing today strengthens the ability of local law enforcement officers to use high technology to combat terrorism and, frankly, to fight all types of crime. It provides for the expenditure of $500 million over the next 3 years to develop and upgrade some very important information systems. These systems provide ready access to criminal histories, fingerprints, DNA, and ballistic information.

The terrorism bill will also help local law enforcement agencies connect into these data bases. A data base in Washington, DC, will not do much good if the local communities, the tens of thousands of local law enforcement agencies that are spread throughout this country, cannot access that information. Let us make no mistake about it, this is a very important component of this legislation, just as it has always been a very important component of our fight against crime.

Last Saturday’s Washington Post provided a case in point. It contains a detailed description of how the Oklahoma City bombing suspects were tracked down. Every step of the way, the suspects left a physical trail of evidence that could be fed into the FBI’s computer database. The FBI, according to this story, has set up a very sophisticated computer system to put all kinds of information in, some relevant and some not relevant—you never know until it is put in. You try to make the match and pull it back up and use it. But according to this story, there are now at least 30 million bytes of information just in this database on just this one crime alone, the Oklahoma City bombing.

There were 12,800 pieces of evidence collected in Oklahoma City, almost 13,000 pieces of evidence. The FBI computers are being used to analyze all this evidence. I have already told my colleagues the story of how the apprehension of the key Oklahoma suspect came about. It is truly a compelling story. An Oklahoma City detective found a piece of tattered metal at the crime scene. On this piece of metal, he found a vehicle identification number, or a VIN number—one little piece of evidence. He fed this VIN number into the National Insurance Crime Bureau, and when he tapped into the system, that left a fingerprint into the system. In a moment, we will see the importance of that.

Later on, the FBI, based on the information they had obtained from that VIN number—we will jump forward now to the next stage of looking—were able to get the name of Timothy McVeigh.

Later, when the FBI fed the name Timothy McVeigh into their computers, the computer informed them, based on that fingerprint, that had been placed into the system, of his arrest on these unrelated charges. Thanks to this technological edge, the FBI was able to find out an obscure arrestee was in fact America’s most wanted criminal suspect.

The McVeigh arrest demonstrates how our technological edge can work and how in fact it can help solve crime, how in fact it can and does save lives.

Another story which was in last Friday’s paper shows again the importance of technology. On May 28, a North Carolina State trooper arrested a motorist for speeding. Using established procedure, the trooper ran the motorist’s name in the North Carolina State database. The trooper did not run the motorist’s name in the national database. That was apparently the procedure in the State at that time—just to run it in the State database, but not the national base. The motorist’s name did not show up in the State database. If the trooper had run the motorist’s name in the national database, he would have discovered the driver was wanted for the shooting of two Washington, DC, police officers and the attempted murder of his girlfriend. Earlier that day he was arrested for speeding in North Carolina and released, the suspect killed an FBI agent in a shootout in the Washington, DC, metropolitan area.

My purpose in telling the story is not to put blame on anyone, not to be judgmental, but again to point out how very, very important it is that these databases be used and how they can in fact not only solve crime but how they can save lives.

Mr. President, as a result of this incident, North Carolina has taken, to use the phrase, the “worthy step” of encouraging its troopers to run the names of all out-of-State suspects in the national computer. You never know. It certainly does not hurt to ask.

Last month I introduced a comprehensive crime bill, and one of the key elements of my proposed legislation is a provision that would enhance crimefighting technology on making sure that the local first responders are in fact plugged into a truly all-inspiring national database. Technology is already a proven tool in the fight against terrorism. One of the suspects in the New York Times bombing was tracked down—listen to this—because he left a DNA sample in the saliva he left when he sealed an envelope containing a letter to the New York Times. In that letter he claimed responsibility on behalf of his terrorist group. But unknown to him, he left indelible proof of his own identity in the DNA.

Mr. President, we have the tools to win this fight. Let us use them.

The President. Mr. Senator, thank you. Senator HATCH, two individuals who have worked on this bill, for the job that they have done, and for including my provision that I wrote and put in the crime bill—taking that section and putting it in this antiterrorism bill because it has a lot to do with solving the problem of terrorism in this country and has a lot to do with this technology in solving all crimes.

It would be a crime—if I could use the term—if we did not make sure that every law enforcement in this country was able to tap into this national database. It would be wrong if for a relatively small amount of money we did not make sure that not only did we tap into the information and pull it back out but that we could get information from every local law enforcement agency in the country.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the two articles which I just referred to be printed in the RECORD.

The President. Without objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, June 3, 1995]

HOW DETECTIVES CRACKED OKLAHOMA BOMB CASE

(By Philip Thomas)

OKLAHOMA CITY—Three weeks ago, a 40-foot-long tractor-trailer secretly left here loaded with cargo that holds clues to the deadliest terrorist bombing in U.S. history. The truck carried out the massive bomb that blasted the federal building here April 19 and a yellow Mercury Marquis, the car of prime suspect Timothy James McVeigh. Final destination of the truck was a laboratory at 10th Street and Pennsylvania Avenue NW in Washington, the FBI’s headquarters.

In coming days, forensics experts plan to reconstruct as much of the truck as possible and dust every part of McVeigh’s car for fingerprints, using lasers and the latest in latent fingerprint technology. They also will sweep and vacuum the tiny particles and chemically analyze every bit of soil, hair, fiber and residue in an effort to link McVeigh and others to the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building. While the overall probe has been conducted in the glare of publicity, much of the crucial investigative work involved behind-the-scenes forensics technology and use of computers to a degree never before seen in a criminal inquiry. In much the same way authorities use DNA analysis in the O.J. Simpson murder trial, FBI officials want to be able to provide a jury with reams of precise and detailed evidence tying suspects to the case. “This case is juxtaposition of 21st century technology and tried police work,” a senior enforcement official said.

The 12,800 pieces of evidence collected in the bombing were digitized in the case and immediately turned to computers for help. McPherson called the identification number to the National Insurance Crime Bureau, which has a database of stolen vehicles and stolen licen automobile VINs and other records. In seconds, the computer determined the axle came from a 1993 Ford truck eventually sold to Ryder Van. At the scene, the trooper said, Ryder found the truck had been sent to Elliott’s Body Shop in Junction City, Kan.

The night of the bombing, agents from the FBI’s Salinas, Kan., office contacted Elliott’s and, by morning, had descriptions of two suspects, John Doe No. 1 and John Doe No. 2. When agents called a local news station for help, using computers to make them appear more lifelike. The FBI also took all the documents John Doe No. 1 signed to look for fingerprint that might match McVeigh’s.

“It hit me later that the VIN number was a special number, that this was a very big deal,” McPherson said, noting the computers had saved time, doing in seconds work that earlier might have taken hours.

“From that rental shop, we started to expand out in concentric circles,” one senior law enforcement official said. “We planned to go to every restaurant, gas station, hotel between there and Oklahoma City.”

More than 1,000 FBI and Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents were flown in from around the country, including heads of the FBI’s Phoenix, Dallas, Houston and New Orleans field offices. At sites near the blast, agents requested store video surveillance tapes and used computers to enhance the images, hoping McVeigh or others with him could have stopped at a convenience store in days preceding the bombing.

On Thursday, April 20, FBI agents reached the D.J. Clark Hotel in Junction City. The manager recognized the composite of John Doe No. 1, a young cleanshaven man with a military haircut. The manager said, had stayed in Room 25 and had been driving a large Ryder truck. He also had registered as Timothy McVeigh.

Around the same time, a former co-worker of McVeigh’s saw the composite sketch on television and called the FBI, telling agents McVeigh expressed anger at the federal government because of what he considered the illegal immigration on behalf of farm workers. The manager, Patrick R. McPherson, said, had stayed in Room 25 and had been driving a large Ryder truck. He also had registered as McVeigh.

A day earlier, about 90 minutes after the bombing, a state trooper in McLean, a county near Washington, D.C., pulled over by its troopers. The trooper saw the composite sketch on television and became suspicious. He was polite [and] cooperative, Lee said. “No indication of anything being out of the ordinary. He was in a little bit of a hurry. That’s all that was indicated,” he added.

“By the time we arrived there, we could tell that something was wrong. The trooper had been driving for a couple of hours and then shot himself to death in a wild gun battle early Monday, North Carolina state police said. The trooper was a member of the department’s policy discouraging federal checks on stopped motorists who do not behave in a suspicious manner.

McVeigh then became the investigation’s focal point. Even before bringing McVeigh into custody, agents began to dissect his life and his associations. The plan seemed simple: find out who McVeigh spent time with, and where and if McVeigh was still being held.

Two agents—one FBI, the other ATF—were assigned to track down McVeigh and began calling jails near the location of his arrest. They learned McVeigh was being held at the Noble County Jail and soon would be released.

While the overall probe has been conducted by the FBI, the National Insurance Crime Bureau, which has a database of stolen vehicles and stolen license plate numbers. The FBI has subpoenaed records from telephone companies around the country. It established more than 66,000 calls made by McVeigh, Nichols and others associated. Those calls were punched into the database, allowing investigators to sort for patterns.

The 12,800 pieces of evidence collected in Oklahoma City, including some of the rubble and shrapnel taken from the many victims, are now being analyzed. Much of the work is tedious as experts will try to match the chemical composition of explosive residue found at the scene to that allegedly found on McVeigh’s clothes and in his vehicle. Similar work is being done on items recovered by Terry Nichols and Sherry 0. But the technology has not eliminated the need for a crucial component in most investigations—simple luck. If detective McPherson had not stumbled upon the axle quickly, it could have taken months to track down McVeigh, one law enforcement official noted. But without luck or something else would have mattered, he said.

[From the Washington Post, June 2, 1995]
HOURS later, about 1 a.m. Monday, McLean crept quietly out of his unmarked cruiser in the parking lot of Greenbelt Middle School and fatally shot Christian, one of 27 investigators waiting to surprise him. McLean was hit by seven bullets and then took his own life, the Maryland state medical examiner's office said.

McLean was carrying the semiautomatic assault pistol used to kill Prince George County police Cpl. John J. Novabilski in an April 26 shooting, and he died of a bullet from Novabilski's stolen Beretta 9mm service pistol.

The National Crime Information Center is an FBI office that maintains a database for state and local law enforcement agencies that receives 1.3 million inquiries a day, the FBI said. The computer tracks nearly 400,000 people wanted for crimes, as well as data concerning crime-related categories. Authorities can learn whether a person has significant outstanding warrants or a criminal history.

McLean's name was listed on the computer Saturday when D.C. police obtained a warrant for his arrest in the shooting of city police Sgt. Eric L. Hayes.

Law enforcement specialists said the service was designed to protect not only the public but also the nation's police officers by alerting them to dangerous suspects.

Policies on routine federal checks vary among Washington area departments. Virginia State Police do not require checks on traffic violators. Maryland state troopers are urged to check the driver and the car through the federal system.

"We check for any warrants or wanted alerts for the people or the vehicle," said Mike McKelvin, a Maryland State Police spokesman.

Lee, who retires in 11 days, said the traffic stop was indistinguishable from tens of thousands he had made until Monday afternoon, when a Maryland homicide detective called him after finding the speeding citation he had issued, and the driver had fled.

Lee said he is convinced that he did everything right during his 45-minute encounter with McLean—and that he was lucky things didn't turn out differently after McLean opened the trunk of his car and rooted through luggage to find his driver's license.

"I was just very fortunate the stop ended like it did for myself," Lee said. "Maybe the Lord was looking after me."

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. BIDEN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, let me say to my friend from Ohio that I applaud his efforts. As he knows, in the crime bill that we passed we provided $100 million for just these purposes. As a matter of fact, I remember more than 2 months ago that I initiated an effort in the first crime bill introduced to get the NCIC up to speed to actually make it work. We received some considerable resistance then interestingly enough from the very left and the very right. The right was concerned that the Presiding Officer notes, the right is always concerned about anyone when anything has to do with Government having power, and the left because they are concerned about the Government having power. So it was stalled for a while in the so-called Biden crime bill which passed out of here.

I wanted that number to be higher out of the trust fund. The most we could get to the floor on was $100 million. I do not quibble with the notion that we could effectively spend more money.

The Senator may recall, because he was in the House at the time, that the local authorities thought they could get by with the $100 million as long as the FBI was essentially going to be the purchasing agent for them. What we do not want to have happen is a little police department in central Ohio or southern Delaware—they may be the very people who pick up the McVeigh's of the world—and we do not want them to be in the position where in order for them to purchase this equipment and some of the more automated fingerprinting cars, NCIC, the blood and saliva DNA capability, we do not want them to be out there since they are purchasing a very small quantity of whatever it is that is being purchased having to pay considerably more than the police department in Columbus, or New York, or Wilmington, DE, or Philadelphia has to pay. But as it turns out they have concluded that they need more help.

Again, I look forward to working with my friend from Ohio on this issue as the continuation of an effort that he supported when he was in the House as well. He is not new to this. He knows this area as well as anyone does.

One of the things at some point—I will not take the time now because the distinguished Senator from California who has been waiting since 9:30 to go with her amendment is ready to go now that the chairman of the committee is here. We will have a long day today. We will change the order, as maybe we have to, so we say, can repair to the cloakroom. I would like to talk about his formula which he has built in here which is the distribution based strictly on population which seems at odds with the notion that we acknowledge that these little police departments, and smaller areas in population, also in a strange way need the help more than even the large police departments.

So I acknowledge at the front end the parochial interest in that Delaware is a small State and under the formula would be in a disadvantageous position for this additional funding. I do not expect the Senator to change his formula. I would like to make my case to the Senator that we could work on this.

Mr. DEWINE. If the Senator will yield for a moment, let me congratulate the Senator from Delaware because he really has been a leader in this area. I had the opportunity about 2 months ago to go to the FBI and look at some of the systems that are there. It is amazing the progress that they have made. In the last several crime bills there has been systems in there, and I know particularly that the Senator from Delaware has been a prime leader in this area. Frankly, what the FBI tells me is that they are moving along very, very well.

The background for my writing this section was frankly what the FBI told me, and that is that we need to be able to have the FBI tell us the last time they were able to tell me. That was, look, I say we are moving along very, very well, quite frankly thanks to what the Congress has done. A significant amount of money Congress has put in.

But they said, "Senator, let us tell you that one concern we have; that is, our database is only as good as the information we get. Our concern is that some of these small departments—which the Senator from Delaware is referring to—will not have the resources. They will not have the ability to tap in."

So I look forward to working with the Senator from Delaware in regard to the formula. Our idea, frankly, is to make sure that every police officer in the country—some way, either through him or her own department through a consortium or through the departments going together—has the ability to put that information into the computer and to get it back out. Frankly, my only interest is making it work. So, if we can come up with a formula that works better to do that, I think that is more than happy to work with the Senator to do that.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, that is why I rose to speak to this—it has slightly from the amendment process. I am not being so solicitous. I know of the Senator's interest, knowledge, and genuine concern about this. One thing that he did not mention that he has in the past, but I think it is worth noting here, is this information also has the ancillary benefit of police officers' lives. The Presiding Officer knows that in his State of Pennsylvania he has had a rough year already with loss of police officers' lives. It has not been a good year. The start has not been a good one.

It is very, very, very practical information when that trooper pulls up behind an automobile. If he has the system and equipment in his automobile and the database is real, he literally can, before he gets out of the car, punch in and find out if that automobile is not only stolen but where and when and how.

He also has the capability, if we give him the capability and if the States step up to the ball, of using this portable, automatic fingerprinting machine to actually have that person get out of the car, walk up, stick their thumb or forefinger in this machine in the automobile and determine whether or not the license that they are carrying comports with their identity.
This not only makes a lot of sense in terms of tracking and using it as a device to solve crimes, but it also has the immediate benefit of literally saving lives of police officers. As a former prosecutor, the Senator from Ohio knows this. In my discussions with police—the heads of the Fraternal Order of Police and a number of leading members of the FOP are from the home State of the Senator from Ohio—they know of his work and his interest in this area.

So I compliment him on his initiative and for his willingness to speak with me about the formula. With that, unless the Senator from Ohio wishes to say anything else, I see the distinguished Senator from California is on her feet and is ready to go with her amendment. I think, or is she?

Mrs. BOXER. I am absolutely ready to go with the amendment. My friend, the good Senator from Ohio, has been with me here since 9:30 this morning. I was ready to go at that time. I did lay down my amendment. As my friend from Delaware knows, there is some concern on the other side, although I think it is not all that widely based, that we should narrow the scope of my amendment. It is not my intention to do that.

I am ready to vote on my amendment right now. I say to my friend from Delaware, I would greatly appreciate his views on my amendment because I have expressed mine. If I can have some time at this point, I can summarize, in 5 minutes and then I would love to have my friend from Delaware react to the amendment and perhaps express his view as to whether it is a common-sense amendment.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield for a moment, I am anxious to do that. I sincerely hope she does not amend her amendment. I will, in time, at an appropriate time, explain why I hope that is not the case. I am of the view that the distinguished majority leader is on the floor. I was hopeful that maybe that indicated we could move this along by simply accepting it because it is, in fact, an amendment that really comes to this floor via law enforcement.

On Senators’ desks I have the names of 45 police chiefs who urge support for the Boxer amendment. These police chiefs are from California; Oregon; Washington State; Florida; New Jersey; Arizona; Pennsylvania; Roanoke, VA; Connecticut; Indiana; Illinois; New York; Massachusetts; Maryland; Arkansas; Kentucky; South Carolina; Georgia; Missouri; Alabama, and I do not know whether I mentioned Oklahoma City. The Oklahoma City chief of police wants us to adopt the Boxer amendment.

Just now, I was handed a letter from the Fraternal Order of Police. The Fraternal Order of Police, Dewey Stokes, has sent us a letter that says: "Dear Senator: As the Senate prepares to debate the anti-terrorism bill, on behalf of the 270,000 police officers who are members of the Fraternal Order of Police, I want to strongly urge that you support three pro-law and law enforcement amendments to be offered to the bill. The three amendments concern cop-killer bullets, re-arming felons, and the National Firearms Act. Specifically, the Fraternal Order of Police urges your support for the following: Senator Bradley will offer an amendment to strengthen the current cop-killer bullet law. In 1986, Congress passed and President Reagan signed legislation prohibiting the manufacture, importation and sale of hand-gun ammunition capable of piercing the body armor worn by police officers. Earlier this year, the ‘Black Rhino’ bullet received a lot of publicity for its supposed armor-piercing qualities. While the claims to be exact, free-fire tests of a munition of such a bullet would have been allowed under current law. Because the 1986 law prohibits bullets based on their physical composition, manufacturers currently working to develop ammunition like the “Black Rhino” would be able to manufacture and market them to the public. The Bradley Amendment will close this loophole by prohibiting the manufacture and sale of armor-piercing ammunition based on reasonable performance standards rather than composition. Senators Lautenberg and Simon will offer an amendment that will prevent all persons convicted of a violent felony or serious drug offense from possessing firearms. Even though federal law generally prohibits a convicted felon from possessing a firearm, ATF enforcement actions to restore fire arms rights to convicted felons, the Lautenberg/Simon Amendment will permanently close this loophole by eliminating the waiver procedure. This amendment will also prohibit any individual convicted of a violent felony or serious drug offense from possessing a firearm, even if the state might have restored other civil rights to the individual.
The effect of this amendment, in addition to keeping guns out of the hands of felons, will be to keep out these ATF persons from taking guns out of the hands of criminals, rather than to put them there.
Mr. DOLE. I understand the Senator from California was available earlier. Others were not available. She was here. I think the amendment has been offered.

Mrs. BOXER. Yes. Mr. DOLE. It has been offered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. DOLE. Hopefully, we can dispose of that and move on quickly to the other amendments. It is our intention to finish this bill today. We will be discussing in our conference trying to fur-limit the number of amendments on this side.

Mr. BIDEN. If the Senator will yield, Mr. President, we will make the same effort in our conference.

Mr. DOLE. I think what we are doing is awaiting the return of Senator
HATCH right now and understand it.

Mr. BIDEN. If the Senator will yield, Mr. President, we will make the same effort in our conference.

Mr. DOLE. I think what we are doing is awaiting the return of Senator
HATCH right now and understand it.

Mr. BIDEN. If the Senator will yield, Mr. President, we will make the same effort in our conference.

Mr. DOLE. I think what we are doing is awaiting the return of Senator
HATCH right now and understand it.

Mr. BIDEN. If the Senator will yield, Mr. President, we will make the same effort in our conference.

Mr. DOLE. I think what we are doing is awaiting the return of Senator
HATCH right now and understand it.

Mr. BIDEN. If the Senator will yield, Mr. President, we will make the same effort in our conference.
Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, let me respond to the question posed to me by the Senator from California, Senator

Boxer. There are a couple of things I have observed in the years of working with Senator Boxer, and that is when she thinks she is right, there is nothing more we do than simply defer to the administration is committed to any reform that would assure dramatically swifter and more efficient resolution of criminal cases, while at the same time preserving the historic right to meaningful Federal review. While I do not believe that habeas corpus should be such a right in the case of the counterterrorism bill, I look forward to working with the Senate in the near future on a bill that would accomplish this important objective.

I want to reiterate this Administration's commitment to fashioning a strong and ef-effective response to terrorist activity that substantially weakens our ability to combating terrorism, we must not sacrifice the guarantees of the Bill of Rights, and we will not do so. I look forward to working with the Congress toward the enactment of this critical legislation as soon as possible.

Sincerely,

BILL CLINTON.

Mr. DOLE. I suggest that we hope to finish this bill tonight. I urge my colleagues on the Republican side of the aisle that there are a number of Republican amendments pending, and they are not rushing to the floor to discuss those amendments with the manager and the chairman of the committee, Senator

Hatch.

Now, if we are going to suggest that the Democrats ought to cooperate, then we will suggest that Republicans ought to cooperate, too. So I ask my colleagues on this side of the aisle, or anybody who may be listening in their offices, if you have amendments, please let us know before noon. We would like to find out by noon on this side of the aisle how many amendments we have, serious amendments, and how many are going to be called up. Then we can go to the distinguished Senator from Delaware and say we have x number of amendments that will take x amount of hours. We hope to get time agreements so we can complete action on the bill later today.

I yield the floor.

Amendment No. 124

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, let me respond to the question posed to me by

the Senator from California, Senator

Boxer. There are a couple of things I have observed in the years of working with Senator Boxer, and that is when

she thinks she is right, there is nothing that slows her up. I mean nothing.

Almost without exception, in my dealings with her and the matters we have worked on, she has a commonsense approach to these things that is, quite frankly, sometimes around this place is not factored in. If she had stood up today on the floor of the Senate and said, you know, my colleagues in the Senate, the statute of limitations for rape is 3 years. Yet, the statute of limitations is. The rationale is, the more serious the crime, the more we are committed to finding the perpetrator, and oftentimes that means we need more time.

A second factor that goes into this is that some crimes are more difficult to solve than others because the evidence that is needed to solve the crime sometimes takes a long time to track down.

Third, we have generally tried—in terms of title 18, the criminal code in effect for the Federal Government—to standardize the amount of time we give prosecutors and the Government to find perpetrators.

Now, the fact of the matter is that I do not think this has anything to do with gun control. It happens to be that we are talking about a Firearms Act that affects guns, but it really does not matter. It has everything to do with how the bill is designed to do with with giving the victim and the Government a chance to find the person who did the thing that we think is a very bad thing.

For example, if someone is out there violating the Firearms Act with a machine gun, then we have as a policy, as a nation, for the past several decades said that is a very bad thing. Yet, there is a 3-year statute of limitations for that. Or if we go out and say we do not want people using chemical weapons or making explosives that can do great damage, we said in the first instance that is a bad thing to do. It is unhealthy for Americans, for people to be making these devices or putting si-lers on their guns or building a bomb.

Why do you use silencers? You use a silencer on a gun? Is it because they are target practicing in their basement and they do not want to disurb the folks on the second floor? Or is it because they do not want the deer to hear the bullet coming? Why do you use silencers? You use a silencer to avoid detection. And so if someone is out there violating the Firearms Act with a silencer or machinegun or building a bomb, it seems to me, just on the face of it, that is a bad thing. Yet, we are talking about a Firearms Act

with giving the victim and the Government and the victims enough time

spoken with the NRA in my State and the leadership in my State. I keep in contact with them. As I said yesterday, in my State, the NRA are upstanding citizens. The leader in my State is a member of the ACLU and the NRA and is a pump gun dealer in town. The 2-guy in my State in the NRA is a former captain in a police department in Dover, DE. These guys are not wackos or nuts; they are serious citizens.

Now, I have not spoken to them about this, but I have spoken to them and the national NRA about how we should be dealing with guns and gun offenses. What do they always say to us? They say, look, do not outlaw the gun, increase the penalty. So Senator GRAMM comes to the floor all the time and makes a logical, coherent argument. He says, hey, do not do away with assault weapons, but if you have anybody using one, violating the law in its use, nail them. Minimum mandatory sentences, minimum mandatory imprisonment.

And so the philosophy that the NRA has adopted—and to their credit it is consistent—is that people kill people, guns do not kill people. And only when they get instruments that thing called a gun, and do something bad with it, do you engage the Government.

We have decided as a matter of law under the Firearms Act that it is a bad thing to go around putting silencers on the end of revolvers, or rifles for that matter. We decided that it is a bad thing to tote around a machinegun. We decided that, I do not hear any gun organization saying, by the way, legalize the sale of machineguns again. I do not hear anybody saying silencers are something we should be using. So I am a little surprised that there is any opposition to the initiative of my friend from California. The one thing she is probably I will speak only of the Democratic side, so I do not implicate any of my Republican friends. She is among the four or five most successful legislators. She knows how to get things done. I assume that it comes from her 10 years of experience in the House. I think she is as surprised as I am that this may be resisted, because I cannot figure out why it would be. It is consistent with what—I do not want to put a negative spin on it—the gun proponents say is that the way we should handle the issue of firearms in America. It is consistent. It relates to penalties, not outlawing them. And it is totally consistent with the way in which we decide under title 18 to deal with the vast majority of criminal offenses.

Now, look, this increases from 3 to 5 the statute of limitations for the most serious weapons offenses, specifically those under the National Firearms Act. In doing so, this amendment brings the statute of limitations into line with the vast majority of Federal offenses which have to do with guns and do not have to do with guns. Generally, the statute of limitations is a period which the Government has following the crime to bring an indictment under Federal law. All noncapital crimes are subject to a limitation. The National Firearms Act covers the most dangerous weapons; machineguns, sawed-off shotguns, silencers, and destructive devices which include any explosive or incendiary or poison gas, A, bomb, B, grenade, C, rocket having a propellant of more than four ounces, D, missiles having explosive or incendiary charges of more than one-quarter of an ounce, and E, a mine.

You know, these are not playthings we are talking about. These are serious offenses. Again, I do not know anybody, whether they are the NRA—and I stand to be corrected by anybody else—who says, by the way, you should not outlaw sawed-off shotguns, machineguns, and rockets having a propellant and the charges, grenades, bombs, incendiary devices, a mine. Let me say, one-quarter ounce, and missiles.

So all the Senator is asking for is what the police are asking for. It defies logic to give offenders a break by limiting the statute of limitations to only 3 years. The statute of limitations in other Federal crimes is that, as has been pointed out by the Senator from California, a vast majority of those crimes already are 5 years. Let me give you a few examples. Crimes with a 5-year statute of limitations include assault, 18 United States Code section 111; kidnapping, 18 United States Code section 1201; bank robbery, 18 United States Code section 2113; car robbery, 18 United States Code section 2119; and embezzlement, 18 United States Code section 641.

I also point out that the statute of limitations is also 5 years for illegally importing lottery tickets, impersonating a Federal employee, unlawfully shipping, transporting, receiving, possessing, selling, distributing, or purchasing contraband cigarettes, counterfeiting, forging, or using any counterfeited or forged postal or revenue stamp after it is authorized use of the character Smokey the Bear. It is a misdemeanor, but it is a 5-year statute of limitations. Unauthorized use of the character Woody Owl. That is a 5-year statute of limitations.

Now, look, if we are going to give the Government 5 years to track down the guy who impersonates or uses Woody the Owl, why in the devil would we not give 5 years to the Federal Bureau of Investigation to track down somebody who has violated the most serious weapons offenses that nobody I know of is suggesting we do away with?

Mrs. BOXER. If the Senator will yield, I think there is a crucial point because if people were unhappy with the 5-year statute of limitations, I would assume there could be an amendment to roll it back to 3. All we are saying is that it is an anomaly here that the other firearms laws do not match up with the vast majority. I think my friend has gotten it exactly right, as usual.

If I might just say to my friend, I do not know whether he was aware of this, but there was an article in the New York Times on another matter that relates to my friend’s work here. And that is that under the Violence Against Women Act, the first arrest was made, and there is a matter of State lines to beat his wife. It is a matter of the work of my friend, Senator BIDEN, who, for—I do not know how long—6 years, fought to get the Violence Against Women Act into law. Proudly, I say he is House counsel was there in the House and lived to see the day when it became law here in the Senate.

The reason I bring that up is my friend is a pragmatist. He sees a problem and he solves it. He sticks with it. But my friend from Delaware, the ranking member on the Judiciary Committee, is also somebody who works beautifully with the other side. Senator HATCH worked with him on the Violence Against Women Act, and, in the end, had everybody together. When my friend, Senator BIDEN, stands on this floor and says he does not understand why there is a problem with this on the other side, I think that carries a lot of weight.

Frankly, I say to my friend, I wish we could just have a vote up or down on this amendment. I think it is common sense. We have 45 police chiefs from 24 States who have endorsed this. We have the Fraternal Order of Police.

It may be that the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, my friend from Utah, may wish to lay this aside. We will take a look at it. I certainly hope that the remarks of the Senator from Delaware will be heard by both sides of the aisle, because this is a common-sense amendment. We should not be writing a lot of weight. We should do this in a bipartisan way.

Frankly, it directly relates to Oklahoma City. It directly relates. If we find out that those terrorists made that bomb a year earlier, it would bring the statute down to 2 years. I say to my friend, It is a very serious amendment. It is directly related to Oklahoma City. I want to thank my friend so much. I yield back.

Mr. BIDEN. Let me conclude, Mr. President, because again, it is a little bit like when we first raised the issue of taggants. There was initially—because a lot of people did not understand it—a lot of resistance.

Yesterday, we overwhelmingly passed it because we talked about it. I am sincerely hopeful that as the staff of Senators who were otherwise occupied now in committee hearings and may not be able to hear this themselves will understand that this does not have to do with guns. It has to do with equity.

A person convicted, as I indicated earlier, of impersonating a Federal employee is a Federal offense, while a person convicted under the National Firearms Act can receive up to 10 years in prison.
One has to wonder why a statute of limitations is shorter for the great offense and longer for the shorter offense. It does not seem to make sense.

Again, although I cannot and do not speak for the NRA, it seems to me on its face this is totally consistent with the philosophy that the NRA has adopted relative to gun offenses.

That is, when the law is violated relating to guns and/or explosives, that person should be punished severely. One of the things that we all know in tracking these cases, is the police need time.

It is totally consistent with the way we have dealt with other crimes and totally consistent with the philosophy on the left and the right, it seems to me, to just merely standardize the statute of limitations for these very serious offenses.

I hope, if we are prepared to vote on this or, whatever decision the Senator from California makes. I hope the Senator sticks to her guns here. I am convinced if people understand what the Senator is attempting to do and depoliticize it here and just look at the facts, the facts are it makes no sense not to give the police what they want, the opportunity to track and apprehend people who violate not only the most serious of the laws relating to firearms and explosives.

I yield the floor.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Tennessee has been waiting to speak. I need to take just 1 minute. I think I have worked this out with the distinguished Senator from California.

I ask unanimous consent that the Boxer amendment numbered 124 be laid aside until 2:15 in order for the Senate to consider other amendments, and that no amendments dealing with the same issue as the Boxer amendment be in order prior to 2:15 today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, let me just say, with regard to the Senator’s amendment, that there is a lot of concern because 40 percent of the people in this country are afraid of their Government.

If we extend a statute of limitations from 3 to 5 years, there is an awful lot of worry that official prosecutors will dangle and dangle the accused for the full 5 years to be able to track and apprehend people who violate the law.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL FIREARMS ACT VIOLATIONS—STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS

1. How many cases in the last decade have failed to be prosecuted because of the three year statute of limitations for violations of the firearms provisions?

2. What were the reasons for the failure to prosecute the alleged NFA firearm violations within the three year statute of limitations?

3. How many NFA firearms violators have been prosecuted in the last decade?

4. How many NFA firearms charges were dropped or were reduced by a plea bargain?

5. Has the BATF stated in Congressional testimony, or anywhere, that the three year statute of limitations for firearms violations has been a significant problem for them?

6. Out of all the cases prosecuted for NFA firearms violations in the last five years, what is the percentage of convictions obtained?

7. In the last five years, what percentage of convicted felon for NFA firearm violations are currently serving their sentences in a federal penal institution?

8. Isn’t it a fact under Title I of the Gun Control Act, which is often the subject of indictments also alleging NFA offenses, there is no need for limitations? And isn’t also a fact that the three year statute of limitations is overlooked at times by counsel and others? Isn’t it true that the real reason for any cases lost under the NFA statute of limitations is because of human error?

9. If a potential case is brought to the BATF or other relevant federal officials attention, why would a three year statute of limitations not be sufficient time to bring an indictment against the alleged violator? Shouldn’t the punishment for such a crime be swift and effective?

10. After the passage of over three years, evidence becomes stale and witnesses are lost; a defendant is at a great disadvantage to defend himself against charges, what, in terms of fairness, would mandate an extension of that time for prosecutions of NFA firearms violations beyond three years?

AMENDMENT NO. 1228

(Purpose: To clarify the procedures for deporting aliens)

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Utah [Mr. Hatch] for Mr. Abraham, proposes an amendment numbered 1228.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On p. 36, line 16, strike from “to prepare a defense” through the word “imminent” on p. 37, line 12, and insert in its place the following: “substantially the same ability to make his defense as would disclosure of the classified information.”

(C) The Attorney General shall cause to be delivered to the alien a copy of the unclassified summary approved under subparagraph (B).

(D) If the written unclassified summary is not approved by the court, the Department of Justice shall be afforded reasonable opportunity to correct the deficiencies identified by the court and submit a revised unclassified summary.

(E) If the revised unclassified summary is not approved by the court, the special removal hearing shall be before the court, after reviewing the classified information in camera and ex parte issues findings that:

(i) the alien’s continued presence in the U.S. poses a reasonable likelihood of causing:

(i) serious and irreparable harm to the national security; or

(ii) death or serious bodily injury to any person; and

(ii) provision of either the classified information or an unclassified summary that meets the standard set forth in (B) poses a reasonable likelihood of causing

(i) serious and irreparable harm to the national security; or

(ii) death or serious bodily injury to any person; and

(iii) the unclassified summary prepared by the Department of Justice is adequate to allow the alien to prepare a defense.

(F) If the Court makes these findings, the special removal hearing shall continue, and the Attorney General shall cause to be delivered to the alien a copy of the unclassified summary together with a statement that it is substantially the same ability to make his defense as would disclosure of the classified information in camera and ex parte findings, by clear and convincing evidence, that—

(i) the alien’s continued presence in the United States—

(i) would cause serious and irreparable harm to the national security; or

(ii) would likely cause .

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be set aside. I understand Senator Leahy is coming to the floor with an amendment to take up immediately following, hopefully, Senator Thompson’s remarks.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I know the Senator from Tennessee is waiting, if it allows me 90 seconds to place the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I listened to my friend raise questions about the amendment. My response is that all the questions he raised are totally irrelevant.

Whether or not 40 percent of the American people are afraid of their Government, the idea is that who they should be afraid of is anybody walking around with a bomb, grenade launcher, or a silencer on their gun, or a machine gun. That is who they should be afraid of. Whether there have been prosecutions or not is totally unrelated to whether or not the statute of limitations be 3 or 5 years. The notion of dangling over their head the prospect of prosecution—I have zero sympathy for anyone, whether they are a Mafia don, whether they are a rapist, or whether they are someone walking around with a rocket-propelled device, I could give a darn about their concern, if they violate the law. The question is did they violate it or did they not? They will have a chance to prove it in court. The police should have an obligation to bring them to court. With all due respect, I think his questions raised are irrelevant. I hope my friend from California will not bother to answer them, but that is the right of the Senator from California.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. Hatch.

Mr. HATCH. The President, I ask unanimous consent that immediately after the following section 2 of the bill, add the following new section:

SEC. 610. REPORT ON NORTHERN IRELAND.

The President shall provide a biannual report beginning 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act to the appropriate committees of Congress on:

(1) The remembrance of violence and steps taken toward disarmament by all parties in the Northern Ireland peace process;

(2) Any terrorist incidents in Northern Ireland in the intervening six months, their perpetrators, actions taken by the United States to denounce the acts of violence, United States efforts to assist in the detention and arrest of terrorists and efforts to arrest or detain any elements that have provided direct or indirect support;

(3) Fundraising in the United States by the Irish Republican Army, Sinn Fein or any associated organization and whether any of these funds have been used to support international terrorist activities.

Mr. HATCH. I also unanimously consent this amendment be set aside so we can have another amendment called up, presumably by Senator Leahy, who I understand is coming to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order the Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that he yield me 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. The logic of the argument of my friend from Utah would be to reduce the statute of limitations for embezzlement from 5 to 3 years, reduce the statute of limitations for assault from 5 to 3 years, substitute a full statute of limitations for most crimes from 5 to 3 years. I would stand ready to debate him if he wishes to do that.
Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHcroft). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, what is the parliamentary situation?

AMENDMENT NO. 1238 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1199

(Purpose: To provide assistance and compensation for U.S. victims of terrorist acts, and for other purposes)

Mr. LEAHY. I thank the Chair, and, in a moment, I will offer my amendment.

Let me just mention, Mr. President, we need to look at what happens when we go after terrorists. As a former prosecutor, I feel that if somebody commits a crime, especially serious crimes like this, we ought to be able to have every possible way of going after that person. They ought to be prosecuted. They ought to be brought to justice. They ought to pay for their crime.

But also as a former prosecutor, I have seen so often the person who is neglected is the victim. We can spend sometimes millions of dollars going after somebody who has perpetrated a crime, especially a heinous crime, but nothing is done to help the victim.

We saw in the continuing tragedy of the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, the United States Government had no authority to provide assistance or compensation to the victims of that heinous crime. It was the same thing with the victims of the Achille Lauro Incident. There has been no authority in the law for the Department of Justice to respond to these victims through our crime victims programs. I think it is wrong, and it can be remedied. The amendment I am about to offer would do that.

We had a report to the Congress last summer from the Office for Victims of Crime at the U.S. Department of Justice that identified a related problem. Both the ABA and the State Department have commented on their concern. They said that crime victims’ compensation benefits should be provided to U.S. citizens who have been victimized in another country.

If you are a U.S. citizen and you get hit during a terrorist attack in another country, because you are a U.S. citizen, you ought to at least have the benefit of programs that are already in place in this country. Our citizens are deserving of the same protection whether they are hit by terrorists in Washington, DC, or hit by terrorists in Beirut, Lebanon.

The Victims of Terrorism Act, which I am about to offer as an amendment,
The amendment helps correct a gap in the law for residents of the United States who are victims of terrorism that occurs outside the borders of the United States and who are not in the military, civilian service or civilians in the service of the United States and, therefore, not entitled to benefits in accordance with the Omnibus Diplomatic Security and Antiterrorism Act of 1986.

Thus, this amendment, the Victims of Terrorism Act, adds to the Victims of Crime Act provisions that authorize supplemental grants that allow compensation and assistance to victims of such acts. Likewise, the U.S. victims of the Achille Lauro incident could not be given aid. There has simply been no authority in our law for the Department of Justice to respond to the victims through our crime victims’ programs. This is wrong and will be remedied by this amendment.

In its report to Congress last summer, the Office for Victims of Crime at the U.S. Department of Justice identified problems with the ABA and the State Department have commented on their concern and their desire that crime victims compensation benefits be provided to U.S. citizens victimized in other countries. This is an important step in that direction.

Certainly U.S. victims of terrorism overseas are deserving of our support and assistance.

In addition, this Victims of Terrorism Act provides authority to respond to the consequences of violent extremism here at home. We in this country have been shielded from much terrorism abroad. That sense of security has been shaken by the bombing in Oklahoma City, the destruction at the World Trade Center in New York, and the assaults upon the White House.

The Victims of Terrorism Act adds to the provisions of Crime Act provisions for supplemental grants to States to provide emergency relief in the wake of an act of terrorism or mass violence that might otherwise overwhelm the resources of a State’s crime victims compensation program and crime victims assistance services.

We all applaud the efforts of our Office for Victims of Crime in the wake of the Oklahoma City bombing. It helped to organize a crisis response team of specially trained professionals who were dispatched within hours to the site of the bombing. I am glad that the National Organization for Victims Assistance was critical in providing timely assistance to Oklahoma City victims and thank and acknowledge their heroic efforts.

This amendment will allow them to do more. I want to thank the dedicated officials at the Department of Justice Office for Victims of Crime, John Stein of the National Organization for Victims Assistance, Dan Eddy of the National Association of Crime Victims Compensation Boards, and David Beatty of the National Victim Center for their help, counsel, and suggestions in connection with this amendment.

The amendment builds on the crime victims assistance programs of the States and Federal victims assistance provided through our U.S. attorney’s offices to furnish emergency assistance in times that demand it. I propose that we allow the Attorney General and the Office for Victims of Crime, additional flexibility in its targeting of resources to victims of terrorism, mass violence, and the trauma and devastation that they use.

The Victims of Terrorism Act’s supplemental grants to provide compensation and assistance to victims of terrorism and mass violence are funded through an emergency reserve established as part of the crime victims fund. The amendment would allow funding for the emergency reserve to be established at the expense of our States’ ongoing compensation and assistance programs. Indeed, funds are not available for the reserve until the full annual compensation and assistance grants are funded and the crime victims fund has received in excess of 110 percent of the amount deposited in the previous year so that assistance programs will be adequately funded, as well.

The emergency reserve will also serve as a rainy day fund to supplement compensation and assistance grants to the States for years in which deposits to the crime victims fund are inadequate. There have been deep swings in the amount of funding deposited annually and, therefore, available for distribution. This emergency reserve will provide the Director with the means to even out what would otherwise be wide variations in annual grants and allow those providing these critical services some additional confidence that funding will be available even following a year of poor deposits.

The emergency reserve’s ceiling of $50 million is intended to allow confidence in the amount of funding deposited annually and, therefore, available for distribution. This emergency reserve will provide the Director with the means to even out what would otherwise be wide variations in annual grants and allow those providing these critical services some additional confidence that funding will be available even following a year of poor deposits.

I hope through the provisions of this act to provide some greater certainty to our State and local victim’s assistance programs so that they can know that our commitment to victims programs will not wax and wane with events. Accordingly, the amendment would allow grants to be made for a 3-year cycle of programming, rather than the year of award plus one, which is the limit contained in current law. This change reflects the recommendation of the Office for Victims of Crime contained in its June 1994 report to Congress.

Our State and local communities and community-based nonprofits cannot be kept on a string like a yo-yo if they are to plan and implement victims’ assistance and compensation programs. They need to be able to program and hire personnel and have predictability if these measures are to achieve their fullest potential.

I know, for instance, that in Vermont, Lori Haynes and Pat Hayes at the Vermont Center for Crime Victims Services; Judy Rex and the Vermont Network Against Domestic Violence and Sexual Abuse; Karen Bradley from the Vermont Center for Prevention and Treatment of Sexual Abuse; and others, provide tremendous service under difficult conditions. Such dedicated individuals and organizations will be greatly aided by increasing their programming cycle by even 1 year. Three years has been a standard that has worked well.

Unfortunately, even with the recently announced decreases in violent crime, it is certain that we will have too many crime victims who need assistance in the years ahead. While we have made progress over the last 13 years in recognizing crime victims’ rights and providing much-needed assistance, we still have more to do. It is in recognition of these needs and the additional authorities and scope being added to the Victims of Crime Act by this Victims of Terrorism Act that I include a provision to raise the base amount for small States from $200,000 to $500,000 for their assistance programs. This is funding that will be put to good use.

I am proud to have played a role in passage of the Victims and Witness Protection Act of 1992, the Victims of Crime Act of 1994, the Victims’ Rights Restoration Act, and the Victims’ and Witness Assistance Act of 1994. I have been a strong supporter of the Victims of Crime Act (VOCA) and its Crime Victims Fund. Let me give you a sense of the need for such an emergency service from our perspective:

When we tried to assist the relatives of Americans held hostage in Beirut, one service we tried to give them was the wherewithal to make telephone calls to friends and family—a healthy coping device which virtually every hostage family uses extensively, if not daily. To do this, we searched for a charitable businessman who volunteered to organize contributions to a free phone service for a designated member of each hostage family. We systematically tracked the contributions dried up before the hostage crisis ended.

We also tried to help the niece and nephew of Peter Kilbourne return his body from the East Coast for burial in his home state of California (the State Department being authorized to transport the remains of the slain hostage only to the nearest U.S. port of entry). Happily, we connected the relatives to an imaginative victim advocate in Santa Clara County, who persuaded the state victim compensation program to underwrite the transportation and burial costs. Unfortunately, few American victims of terrorism overseas have such a connection to a victim advocate, and very few compensation programs would assume the authority to assist its citizens who are victimized beyond the borders of the United States.

And as the coordinator of NOVA’s Crisis Response Team that arrived in Oklahoma City the same day that its Federal Building was bombed, I sensed immediately that which is now being slowly documented—that those who had experienced significant, immediate emotional crisis numbers in the scores of thousands, that those at risk of experiencing persistent crisis reactions are surely in the thousands, and that those at risk of debilitating number at least in the hundreds. NOVA’s ongoing planning work with just one institution, the city school system shows us that, whatever good has been done by our volunteer crisis counselors and their counterparts in Oklahoma City, the need for caring services over the next year or two far exceeds available resources, and that full-time crisis counselors and post-trauma therapists must be hired for the task if society is to perform the same healing services for these victims as for victims of other violent crimes.

Your proposal to meet this need is not merely timely and compassionate but inspired. It would rename the existing financial reserves in the Crime Victims Fund by calling them an “emergency reserve,” which precisely describes both its original purpose—to cover any shortfall in the Fund’s revenues in a given year—and to circumscribe the purposes for which the new authorization is being created—a class of emergencies for which there are no victim assistance resources at present;

It would raise additional revenues for the Fund to help cover the new expenses;

It would cover domestic acts of “mass violence” so that one need not immediately ascertain the motives of a terror-inducing criminal before acting to assist the affected community; and

It would place on the Director of the Office for Victims of Crime the task of devising appropriate regulations, presumably in consultation with the State Department and administrators of state victim assistance and compensation programs, among others, so that the emergency authority can be invoked quickly, frugally, and imaginatively.

Let me add a final thought: in our ongoing work with “Operation Heartland” in Oklahoma City—the cooperative enterprise of city, county, state, and federal agencies to ease the pains of thousands of victims of the Murrah Federal Office Building bombing—we have seen just how the resources of your amendment would be put to use—quickly and effectively. The same is true of the monumental task that will someday face city, county, and federal criminal justice agencies, in a most, of preserving the victims’ rights when prosecuting a crime which, by design, produced thousands of anguished and grieving victims of violence.

For these reasons, we very much hope that your amendment will enjoy bipartisan support and speedy enactment.

Sincerely,

JOHN H. STEIN,
Deputy Director.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I see the distinguished chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee on the floor, who is seeking recognition. I will yield to him for whatever purpose he may need.

Mr. HATCH. I thank my colleague. I wonder if we can defer further debate on his amendment, so that I can file a bill and make a speech on the bill.

Mr. LEAHY. Of course.

Mr. HATCH. Senator BENNETT is coming over as well. Maybe we can do it right after lunch.

Mr. LEAHY. I also have an amendment somewhat related that I was going to offer on behalf of Senator MCCAIN and myself. I will withhold doing that so that the Senators from Utah can offer their bill.

Mr. HATCH. Why do you not call it up and then we will set it aside.

AMENDMENT NO. 1290 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1199

(Purpose: To increase the special assessment for felonies and extend the period of obligations)

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of Senator MCCAIN and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from Vermont [Mr. LEAHY], for Mr. MCCAIN, for himself and Mr. LEAHY, proposes an amendment numbered 1290 to amendment No. 1199.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place insert the following new section:

SEC. 2. SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS ON CONVICTED PERSONS.

(a) INCREASED ASSESSMENT.—Section 3010(b)(2) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (A), by striking “$50” and inserting “not less than $100”; and

(B) in subparagraph (B), by striking “$200” and inserting “not less than $500”.

Mr. LEAHY. I am pleased to cosponsor this amendment, which mirrors provisions contained in legislation previously introduced by the Senator from Arizona [Mr. MCCAIN], and provisions contained in the amendment I had filed to this bill.

In 1984 when we established the crime victims fund to provide Federal assistance to State and local victims compensation and assistance efforts, we funded it with fines, penalties, and assessments from convicted Federal crime. The level of required contribution was set low; 10 years have passed and it is high time to adjust the assessments.

The amendment serves to double the assessments under the Victims of Crime Act against those convicted of Federal felonies. This should provide critical additional resources to assist all victims of crime, including those who are victims of terrorism or mass violence.

I do not think that $100 is too much for those individuals convicted of a Federal felony to contribute to help crime victims.

I do not think that $500 is too much to insist that corporations convicted of a Federal felony contribute to crime victims.

The amendment would raise these to be the minimum level of assessment against those convicted of such crimes and provides judges with the discretion to assess higher levels when appropriate.

In connection with these provisions, I acknowledge the work of our colleague, the senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. MCCAIN]. I know that he has been actively seeking to raise these special assessments for some time and I am glad that we are able to join together in this effort. He deserves much credit for his ongoing efforts on behalf of crime victims.

I look forward to our continuing to cooperate in additional efforts on behalf of victims of crime, terrorism, and mass destruction. We have much to do if we are to improve collections for the crime victims fund and if we are to augment the critical resources needed by our victims compensation and assistance programs. This is an amendment that will help provide additional resources for meeting critical needs.

Mr. HATCH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah is recognized.

The remarks of Mr. HATCH and Mr. BENNETT pertaining to the introduction of S. 884 are located in today’s RECORD under “Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.”

COMPREHENSIVE TERRORISM PREVENTION ACT

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I will just take a moment. I want to get an update on where we are on the pending legislation.

We hope to finish this today. I appreciate the President’s efforts, along with the Democrat leader and the manager on the other side, to reduce the number of amendments on that side of the aisle. We have been making the same effort here.

I wonder if the distinguished chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Senator HATCH, might be in a position to indicate how many amendments are remaining on this side or on both sides, if he knows.

Mr. HATCH. We have only disposed of three amendments. We have disposed of a few others by unanimous consent. But of the 32 GOP amendments, only 1 has been accepted; 5 are pending. I expect the most, over 3 more. We are basically down to a very few on the Republican side. On the Democrat side, they have only offered five amendments. We voted on one of them. That was the taggants amendment. That would leave over 60 unknown or unoffered Democrat amendments.

We have to, it seems to me, if we are going to finish tomorrow, we have to break those down and come up with a limited list, as the Republicans are doing.

Mr. DOLE. It is my understanding that maybe after the policy lunchees that we have every Tuesday that maybe there will be an announcement on the other side that a number of the amendments have been dropped.

This seems to me, and I have not seen the list that may be remaining, a number of these amendments are not directly related to antiterrorism or what happened in Oklahoma City or anywhere else.

If there will be a pattern of amendments offered just for the purpose of making points which we believe can be made at another time—I do not suggest people should not have a right to make whatever point they want to make—this is legislation that the President has asked for. It is nonpartisan. It is bipartisan. We have worked together on it. It is part of Senator HATCH’s efforts, part of my efforts, part of the President’s efforts, part of the efforts of my colleague on the other side. We want to pass it.

The President complains about delay in the Senate. Much of the delay is because of a number of amendments on the other side. It may be the only way we can finish this bill is A, to start dropping the amendments that are not directly related to this bill, and B, I will let the chairman of the committee, Senator HATCH make that decision. That would be one way to expedite passage, to table those amendments which can be offered at a later time, or, B, to invoke cloture. A cloture petition has been filed, and the cloture vote will occur if for some reason we do not finish the bill late in the evening, early in the morning. By 8:30 or 9 o’clock, we will have a cloture vote.

Hopefully, that would eliminate a lot of the nongermane amendments. I urge my colleagues on both sides, not just one side, both sides of the aisle, if there are amendments that are somewhat related or Members would like some political point or some other point, let Members pass this legislation.

The other bill is up this year and those amendments can be offered. This legislation is important. We would like to dispose of it today. I hope we can have the cooperation of Members on both sides of the aisle.

I ask that the Senate stand in recess according to the previous order.

RECESS UNTIL 2:15 P.M.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now stand in recess until the hour of 2:15 p.m.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 12:43 p.m., recessed until 2:15 p.m.; whereupon, the Senate reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer [Mr. GRAMM, for Senator Durbin].

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMPREHENSIVE TERRORISM PREVENTION ACT

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 1214

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, what is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business is the Boxer amendment, No. 1214.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

So, at this point, if it is urged I will accept it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I thank my friend from Nebraska. I wanted to make sure some people had some problems with the amendment, at least parts of the amendment. I just want to say to my friend, to me this is a very important amendment because it really does relate to the Oklahoma City incident and that is my major purpose here. If we have a 5-year statute of limitations so the police can catch someone who impersonates Smokey the Bear, we should have a 5-year statute to be able to close a case against people who would make a bomb and break other portions of this law.

So I want to say to my friend that I am most appreciative. I know it was contentious on his side. I look forward to following this bill through and seeing this when the bill comes back from conference.

Would it be in order to now ask for the amendment to be voted on?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from California.

The amendment (No. 1214) was agreed to.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HATCH. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, what is the pending business before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business is now amendment No. 1240 offered by the Senator from Vermont, [Mr. Leahy].

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I understand that the distinguished Senator from Nebraska is about to call up an amendment. So I yield the floor.

Mr. KERREY addressed the Chair.

AMENDMENT NO. 1208 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1199

(Purpose: To authorize funding for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the U.S. Secret Service)

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I offer this amendment on behalf of myself and Senator SHELBY of Alabama, Senator D’AMATO of New York and Senator MIKULSKI of Maryland.

The amendment that I am offering authorizes funding of $352 million over 5 years for the U.S. Secret Service and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Of this, $100 million goes to BATF and $162 million goes to the U.S. Secret Service.

The substitute we are considering contains an authorization of $1.779 billion from the Violent Crime Act, the Reduction of Violence Act, the reduction trust fund for the various law enforcement agencies. Over 5 years, it authorizes $1.226 billion for the FBI, $400 million for the Drug Enforcement Administration, and $100 million for the U.S. attorneys, $25 million for INS, and $28 million for the U.S. Customs Service.

I trust the evaluation of how allocations occur across various law enforcement agencies was done in a very thoughtful and deliberative fashion. However, I believe the exclusion of ATF and the Secret Service from the allocation of resources inside of this antiterrorism bill will impair Treasury’s capacity to engage in antiterrorism efforts. Thus, I offer this amendment to authorize resources for both the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the Secret Service.

Since 1970, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has been mandated to enforce the criminal and regulatory provisions of the Federal explosives laws.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. KERREY], for himself, Mr. D’AMATO, Ms. MIKULSKI, and Mr. SHELBY, proposes an amendment numbered 1208 to amendment No. 1199.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

SEC. 3. AUTHORIZATION OF ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY

(a) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated for the activities of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, to augment counter-terrorism efforts—

(1) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1996;
(2) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1997;
(3) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1998;
(4) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1999; and
(5) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 2000.

(b) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated for the activities of the United States Secret Service, to augment White House security and expand Presidential protection activities—

(1) $62,000,000 for fiscal year 1996;
(2) $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1997;
(3) $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1998;
(4) $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1999; and
(5) $25,000,000 for fiscal year 2000.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I offer this amendment on behalf of myself and Senator SHELBY of Alabama, Senator D’AMATO of New York and Senator MIKULSKI of Maryland.

The amendment that I am offering authorizes funding of $352 million over 5 years for the U.S. Secret Service and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Of this, $100 million goes to BATF and $162 million goes to the U.S. Secret Service.

The substitute we are considering contains an authorization of $1.779 billion from the Violent Crime Act, the Reduction of Violence Act, the reduction trust fund for the various law enforcement agencies. Over 5 years, it authorizes $1.226 billion for the FBI, $400 million for the Drug Enforcement Administration, and $100 million for the U.S. attorneys, $25 million for INS, and $28 million for the U.S. Customs Service.

I trust the evaluation of how allocations occur across various law enforcement agencies was done in a very thoughtful and deliberative fashion. However, I believe the exclusion of ATF and the Secret Service from the allocation of resources inside of this antiterrorism bill will impair Treasury’s capacity to engage in antiterrorism efforts. Thus, I offer this amendment to authorize resources for both the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the Secret Service since 1970, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has been mandated to enforce the criminal and regulatory provisions of the Federal explosives laws.

ATF has regulatory oversight of the legal explosives industry in excess of 10,000 licensees and permittees. ATF personnel have unequalled experience in identifying the postblast explosive devices, components, and logistics involved in investigating postblast crime scenes of any size.

The fiscal year 1995 supplemental and rescissions conference report, just approved, provides quarter-year funding for the hiring of 175 new agents, inspectors, and intelligence analysts for ATF, as requested by the administration.

These positions will be used to form four new national response teams for the purpose of responding within 24 hours to assist State and local law enforcement and fire service personnel in on-site investigations in the event of an explosion or fire. Each team is composed of veteran special agents having postblast, fire cause and origin expertise, forensic chemist and explosive technology expertise. The 59 inspection and intelligence analyst positions will be devoted to the inspection and investigation of groups and/or individuals in violation of Federal explosives laws.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has been much maligned over the years. Much of this criticism, in my view, has been unjustified. I am quick to point out, some of the criticism is valid. This is an agency, like virtually any other in Government, that has not been operated in a perfect fashion. Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms does not enact the laws related to guns, but is instead sworn to execute the laws which originate from this body, that is the U.S. Congress. In my opinion, if we do not like the laws, we ought to change them rather than taking, in this case, action that might make it difficult for ATF to carry out the intent of the law.

On those occasions when mistakes may have been made in the execution of laws, Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has undergone extensive independent review by a diverse group of respected professionals. An important lesson learned is that the credit for successful prosecutions cannot be shared by the ATF without due credit. The World Trade Center bombing serves as the most recent example. While that investigation was a massive joint law enforcement effort, it was an ATF agent's determination and ingenuity that resulted in the discovery of one of the most significant pieces of evidence in what was a tedious investigation. The vehicle ID number.

ATF's contributions to cases of great notoriety, ATF rarely receives its due credit. The World Trade Center bombing serves as the most recent example. While that investigation was a massive joint law enforcement effort, it was an ATF agent's determination and ingenuity that resulted in the discovery of one of the most significant pieces of evidence in what was a tedious investigation. The vehicle ID number.

ATF's contributions to the investigations of over 1,600 arson cases last year were not realized by the majority of the American people. Again, ATF just did its job.

Turning to the Secret Service, Mr. President, the White House complex symbolizes the executive branch of Government. More than 1 million American citizens a year tour the White House, and tens of thousands of White House complex appointments are processed during that same period of time. With the recent closing of Pennsylvania Avenue to vehicular traffic, pedestrian traffic will increase above and beyond the thousands of people who view the White House and surrounding areas.

The White House carries with it both national security and symbolic value which must be protected. Publicized threats of the White House complex in the past several years have caused us to be not just concerned about the safety of the President and the President's family, but also concerned about the executive branch personnel that very often operate the White House, as well as other individuals operating and doing business at the White House.

The April 19 Oklahoma City tragedy served to heighten the collective awareness and is, in part, the catalyst to which the closing of Pennsylvania Avenue is generally attributed. I know from personal experience that what many people saw with the Oklahoma City bombing is the idea that it would be relatively easy now to take a different approach if they had a desire to attack the White House, attack the President, or attack other personnel. Thus, the closing of Pennsylvania Avenue, though it is, in my judgment, an appropriate action, it is just one step in trying to make sure we do all we can to protect this symbol of the United States of America and protect the people who work and do business in it.

Consistent with the recommendations from a recently completed review of White House security, the amendment I am offering will authorize security enhancements at the White House to help the Secret Service ensure that the White House and the First Family are not at risk.

Press reports I have seen since the Oklahoma City bombing indicate threats to the President have increased by 100 percent.

The amendment I am offering as well, Mr. President, authorizes funding for the construction of additional presidential protection positions for the Presidential protection division, uniformed division officers, countersniper teams, foot and vehicular patrols, canine officers, and intelligence and physical security specialists.

In addition, it authorizes the purchase of technical security equipment and devices and will permit physical security structural enhancements around the White House complex.

The Secret Service is comparable as well for the protection of foreign heads of state and Presidential candidates. This October, the U.N. General Assembly is projected to have its largest gathering of heads of states, including a Papal visit. All these will require increased Secret Service personnel.

In approximately 7 months, the Secret Service will begin the year-long task of protecting Presidential candidates. How can these challenges and responsibilities not be addressed in any discussion of terrorism?

The Secret Service has for over 125 years been responsible for the integrity of our currency. Counterfeiting of U.S. currency has in recent years shifted dramatically from domestic to foreign production and trends point toward the distribution of high-quality counterfeit U.S. currency by terrorist organizations, as well as arms traffickers and drug dealers.

Pursuing these investigations related to foreign production of counterfeit U.S. currency by such groups should also be a focus in counterterrorism legislation.

The Secret Service possesses unique forensic capabilities relating to handwriting, fingerprinting, ink and paper, just to name a few. They have in the past and will continue in the future to provide these capabilities to assist the investigative efforts of other Federal, State, and local agencies. While I do not argue that the FBI holds much of the responsibility in combating terrorism, it seems to me the challenges and responsibility of Treasury law enforcement agencies have been overlooked.

The bill we are considering is entitled the "Comprehensive Terrorism Prevention Act of 1995," but I do not believe it can be comprehensive unless we include funding for both the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the Secret Service.

Mr. President, I appreciate the manner of the bill allowing me to offer the amendment at this particular time. I urge the adoption of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any further debate?

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that John Libonati, a legislative fellow with the Appropriations Committee, be permitted the privilege of the floor during the remainder of the debate on S. 735, The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I support the amendment offered by my colleague, Senator KERREY. This amendment would provide an oversight in the authorization for Federal law enforcement. The current antiterrorism bill, S. 735, while providing substantial funding for some Federal law enforcement entities, overlooked the responsibilities and jurisdictions of the U.S. Secret Service.

The U.S. Secret Service is responsible for the protection of the President of the United States, the Vice President of the United States, and their families. The U.S. Secret Service is responsible for protecting Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates as well as any head of state visiting the United States. This vast cross... section of political entities, that fall within the protective realm of the U.S. Secret Service, continues to attract the interest of numerous terrorist and antigovernment organizations. Due to the recent bombings of the World Trade Center and Oklahoma City, the air intrusion of the White House, and the several shootings directed at the White House, additional security measures have been instituted by the Secret Service, while the funding levels have remained the same. One of the most publicized extra-territorial security measures that was instituted was the closing of Pennsylvania Avenue to vehicular traffic. This, while being the most visible security enhancement was merely one of dozens that have been effected by the Secret Service without any increase in their funding.

The Secret Service is in need of increased resources to cover expenses in several areas: First, an increased presence of U.S. Secret Service Uniform Division agents on an ongoing basis. The agents will reinforce the current patrol capabilities and insure greater safety not only for the President, employees of the White House complex, and visiting dignitaries, but for the thousands of citizens who visit the White House and our nation’s capital on a daily basis. The Secret Service also needs to increase their personnel levels within their intelligence branch as well as their protective details. And finally, several of the physical and technological security features that the White House needs to be upgraded to deal with the increased and organized threats emanating from these terrorist entities.

The U.S. Secret Service has been recognized as the preeminent law enforcement agency in the world for its protective expertise. This funding will help insure that these capabilities are not diminished, and their vital mission is not impeded due to a lack of funding.

Mr. KERREY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for that provision in current law, however. State and local police are required to destroy the records after 20 days. As a result, the notification system is largely useless to State and local authorities. In 20 days, it is impossible to detect purchasing patterns which might indicate that particular individuals or groups are stockpiling weapons, amassing arsenals, or engaging in illegal gun trafficking. An amendment to the bill states that the requirement that these important records be destroyed. There is no reason to handicap the police by requiring them to destroy information that can help prevent or solve crimes, especially terrorist crimes. As under existing law, this information potentially will remain confidential and be used only for legitimate law enforcement purposes.

There are obvious law enforcement needs for this information, especially in the wake of the Oklahoma City bombing and the disclosures that some militant groups have been acquiring weapons at an alarming rate. According to Daniel Welch, director of the Southern Poverty Law Center’s Klanwatch, “[t]here has been an arms race within the white supremacy movement as to who can stockpile the most weapons.” In addition, some anti-Government militia groups are also racing to acquire weapons for the avowed purpose of engaging in combat with the Government of the United States.

According to the Anti-Defamation League, “[t]hese militia members are not talking about change from the ballot box alone, many are enamored of the prospect of change through bullets, explosives, and heavy armaments.”

Recent law enforcement investigations demonstrate the extent to which militias are arming themselves.

A decade ago, in 1985, FBI agents discovered a compound owned by the Covenant, the Sword, and the Arm of the Lord, a paramilitary survivalist group operating along the Missouri/Arkansas border. The group’s literature demonstrated it to be strongly anti-Semitic, and its leaders believed they were preparing troops for the coming war through paramilitary training. In the raid, agents recovered lists of weapons, bombs, an antitank rocket, and quantities of cyanide apparently intended to poison the water supply of a city.

In 1993, law enforcement officials discovered that at least 6 separate weapon arsenals and 13 separate explosives arsenals linked to militant extremist groups across the country.

In July 1994, Federal authorities found 13 guns, homemade silencers, explosives, blasting caps, fuses, and hand grenades belonging to James Roy Mullins, the founder of an anti-Government militia group in Virginia.
In September 1994, three members of the Michigan Militia were stopped by police for a routine traffic violation. Inside the car, police discovered three military assault rifles, three semiautomatic handguns, a revolver, 700 rounds of ammunition, in a 24-count box, and several knives and bayonets. All of the firearms were loaded. And handwritten notes found in the car indicated that the militia members were conducting surveillance of local police departments.

Militia members have been shown on television marching with rifles, but they have not limited their arsenals to such weapons. According to the Treasury Department, anti-Government militia members have acquired a wide array of weapons including .22 caliber, 45 caliber, and 9mm pistols, .357 revolvers, and a variety of military-style assault weapons.

There are some who say that militias are harmless. Some ask why the Government should care if some citizens want to spend their weekends marching in the woods wearing camouflage fatigues as a hobby.

The answer is that not all militias are harmless. The events in Oklahoma City and elsewhere have focused public attention on a small group of Americans who are convinced that the Federal Government is the enemy and who may be preparing for a war against the Government. These groups pose a terrifying threat to Federal agents, Federal workers, and other law-abiding citizens. We cannot afford to ignore that threat.

As a result of lax Federal gun laws, it is relatively easy for anti-Government extremist groups to stockpile arsenals of massive destructive power. Many of the semiautomatic handguns and revolvers recovered from these extremists are legally available at gunshops and gun shows. We do not have Federal licensing or registration requirements in this country. It is perfectly legal for anyone except felons and the mentally ill to possess hundreds or thousands of guns.

I believe we should have tougher, more sensible gun laws, but I do not seek to accomplish that goal on this bill. This amendment does not prohibit the manufacture or prohibit the manufacture or possession of any guns. It does not ration guns, as the NRA has falsely charged. Legitimate sportsmen and gun collectors have absolutely no reason to fear this amendment.

It is the recordkeeping requirement so that local law enforcement agencies will not be required to destroy potentially useful records after 20 days. In light of recent events, this amendment would allow law enforcement personnel to keep track of individuals or groups in a community who may be stockpiling weapons or engaging in illicit gun-trafficking. This amendment is a necessary measure in the battle against terrorism and I urge the Senate to approve it.

Mr. President, this amendment is supported by 47 police chiefs, including the police chief of Oklahoma City, Sam Gonzales. And I have other letters of support.

I ask unanimous consent that the names of the police chiefs be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

\[U.S. SENATE, SENATE OFFICE BUILDING, WASHINGTON, DC, JUNE 6, 1995.\]

DEAR SENATOR: In the wake of the Oklahoma City bombing and the recent shootings of police officers around the country, we, as police chiefs, strongly urge you to support the upcoming anti-terrorism bill: Cop-killer bullets—This amendment, to be offered by Senator Bradley, will prohibit "cop-killer" bullets based on a performance standard rather than the physical composition of the bullet, as current law requires.

Multiple handgun sale forms—This amendment, to be offered by Senator Kennedy, will allow local law enforcement to keep a record of each purchase in multiple states if the state requires the forms, as current law requires.

Guns for felons—This amendment, to be offered by Senators Lautenberg and Simon, will allow the law enforcement personnel the ill to possess hundreds or thousands of weapons. According to the Treasury Department, anti-Government militia members have acquired a wide array of weapons including .22 caliber, 45 caliber, and 9mm pistols, .357 revolvers, and a variety of military-style assault weapons.

enforcement, as well as others who have a responsibility in this area, that this requirement for the destruction of this information hinders their opportunity to make judgments about the growth of the illegal gun trade.

I will continue with the Paul Evans letter.

Congress, unfortunately, requires local police to destroy those forms within 20 days. Many gun traffickers, in an effort to avoid suspicion, made several multiple purchases over the course of several days and weeks, rather than one large purchase of firearms. Can the amendment eliminate this? In this case, it would boost police efforts to develop proactive policies around this information.

This is a viewpoint which is shared by the other police officials who support this amendment.

Mr. President, it is a simple concept. It is a needed provision, and I hope that we might have acceptance of this amendment.

I yield the floor.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, we brought this bill to the floor, and it has taken a large effort to get it here. We have worked very hard with the administration. We have worked with Senator BIDEN and the Justice Department. We have worked with the President called for last night. The President has called for us to pass this bill. He has called for us to pass habeas corpus reform on this bill.

A while back, he did not feel he wanted it on this bill, but last night he did call for it. It is the appropriate time to get it done.

I am disappointed to say that we are in the middle of making this a gun control bill. I hate to say it, but we are going to have another opportunity on the floor when it comes to the floor of debating these gun issues. Why should we gun up the antiterrorism bill with a bunch of gun provisions?

When it comes to addressing our Nation's crime problems, the liberals in Congress and the media have proposed gun control. When the Nation calls on us to get tough on criminals, the liberals drag out the carcass of gun control. The fact is that when the going got tough, the liberals would embrace gun control over tough reform. That is nothing new. What I find shocking here is that they would attempt to turn this bipartisan, antiterrorism bill into an antigun bill, or into a political document.

We have worked hard to try to accommodate everybody on this bill. Frankly, I am amazed that some of my colleagues would use the tragic events of Oklahoma City to push totally unrelated politically motivated gun control legislation.

I have worked long and hard to bring this bill to the floor, as I said. After the President's call for prompt action on meaningful terrorist legislation, we bypassed the normal committee process in order to ensure swift action. We still worked with Senator BIDEN, who has worked well on this bill, the Department of Justice, other members of the Judiciary Committee, and other Members of Congress.

We have incorporated almost all of President Clinton's legislative proposals. We have been in the front of efforts to provide assistance to the people of Oklahoma. I sought the counsel of the Oklahoma State attorney general, Drew Edmondson, who is a Democrat, who supports much of what we are doing here.

In fact, I have praised President Clinton for his leadership and the effectiveness of his Department of Justice in handling these issues involved in this matter.

In short, we endeavor to do what is right and the right thing in the wake of this atrocity at Oklahoma City. That is why I am so disappointed that all of a sudden we are going down the spirit of bipartisanship, and even though some of the amendments sound reasonable, they are not in the eyes of a number of people on both sides of the aisle. I think it is becoming too partisan on this issue. We have worked hard to try to cast a tough antiterrorist bill that delivers most of what the President has called for.

It appears that some here have spent the last several weeks again trying to fiddle with the explicit rights of the Constitution. While I was working to deliver the President his bill, some of the more liberal persuasion have been honing gun control designs they wished to wield in their ongoing onslaught against the second amendment rights of freedom, rights of honest, law-abiding citizens. There are two points of view on the second amendment. The distinguished Senator from Delaware shares; I share the other.

My colleagues may think they have a good political issue on these gun control issues, but I do not think they do. In the court of public opinion, gun control is a big loser. A new U.S. News & World Report poll shows 75 percent of all American voters believe that the Constitution guarantees them the right to own a gun. The poll found voters are less willing today, even after Oklahoma City, to accept restrictions on their constitutional rights in order to feel a bit safer.

Rather than create schemes that are constitutionally questionable, this body should concentrate on the real measures that will limit terrorist atrocities. These measures are outlined in this bill in great detail. I have to say they should not be part of an attempt to impose restrictions on second amendment rights. We can agree and disagree on what those second amendment rights are. I tried to become a gun flight as much as I possibly could, in the whole process, from committee to the floor and on the floor.

But now we have a series of amendments that are nothing more than amendments to try to bring up the whole gun issue again on something that needs to be passed now, that the President has asked us pass now, that the majority leader said that we pass now, that the majority of Americans in this country would like to have passed.

I am concerned about it. I think both sides know that we have problems on these issues. I hope that we can work on the things that we agree on and reserve the gunfights for the crime bill when it comes up and face them at that time.

It will come up. There will certainly be a crime bill, either before the end of this year or next year. We are going to do everything we can to try to get that done.

In that regard, I want to personally express appreciation to Senator BIDEN for his efforts in trying to work with me on this issue, trying to get time agreements on these amendments. He is representing his side in a very responsible way. I personally appreciate it. I want him to know, he has a great deal of knowledge in this area, and I hope we can somehow be a crime bill, either before the end of this year or next year.
amendments have agreed to use a total of 190 minutes, an hour and a half. I have proposed a time agreement. I certainly hope the Republicans will not filibuster this bill. I hope they will not enter into the mode that I have been arguing with Democrats not to enter into.

There are several Democrats who feel very strongly about habeas corpus. I have gotten an agreement that we will limit the amount of time on the five habeas corpus amendments that we have out there. We have agreed on this side, even though several Members find the habeas corpus provision in this terrorism bill so repugnant that they may not be able to even vote for the bill, they have agreed to a time agreement, and they have agreed, in turn, therefore, not to filibuster or delay this bill.

I hope that my Republican friends will not filibuster the bill, either. The way to deal with this is Senator Kennedy agreed to 20 minutes equally divided on the amendment. He has made his statement. All we have to do is agree to 10 minutes in response to the statement and vote.

We can do the same thing with regard to the Lautenberg amendment, the same with regard to the Keating amendment, and the same thing with regard to the Bradley amendment. That is a totality of the amendments arguably related to firearms. One relates to cop killer bullets, one relates to machine gun purchases and record-keeping, one to the civilian marksmanship program, and one relates to the gun-free school zone which passed here almost unanimously. The Supreme Court concluded that it was not constitutional. It has been altered and reintroduced. That was overwhelmingly passed.

Mr. HATCH. Would the Senator yield?

Mr. BIDEN. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. I think the problem is we have a lot of nongermane amendments that do not belong in this bill, and there are people on this side who do not want them.

Frankly, we have a cloture vote tomorrow morning, and nobody will filibuster it on this side. There is a feeling over here by some that we have a bunch of nongermane amendments that gum up this bill, and we may have to wait until cloture tomorrow on some of those amendments. Maybe we can move ahead on some that are germane, like the habeas amendments. They are germane. Habeas is a big part of this bill. We have kept all the gun fight amendments away on our side because we want to pass the President's terrorism bill. The President of the United States has called for habeas corpus in this bill. We are going to give it to him if we can. I believe we can.

Now, we are getting into extraneous matters that are not even germane to antiterrorism, are not germane to this bill, that should not be in this bill, that could be brought up on any number of following pieces of legislation and be germane, especially the crime bill, and the only purpose is to make this bill a more political exercise than it should be.

I would like to worry a little bit more about those victims of the Oklahoma bombing and others who are potentially victims if we do not do something about this antiterrorism legislation as quickly as we can.

Now, nobody wants to filibuster this bill, we have to go to cloture to establish that we are not going to gum this bill up with a bunch of extraneous, nonpartisan, nongermane, inappropriate amendments for this, then I do not know if I can stop that.

I am willing to proceed on germane amendments. I suggest we spend the rest of the day working on all the germane amendments that we can, and go forward.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, the way that translates to me is that the Republicans have concluded they are not going to allow Senators Kennedy, Lautenberg, Kohl, or Bradley to have a vote on their amendments.

I understand that, I am a big boy. I understand that, that is what they have decided to do. To suggest that we wait until cloture, by definition, cloture means these would not be in order.

Now, every single bill that I know of that goes to a vote on their amendments. That is the practice. That is the rule. That is the way we proceed. And the theoretical reason for cloture is that people are taking too much time on this bill.

I have time agreements on all these amendments. Before the next half-hour is up, every Democratic amendment on any subject that is in this bill, we can get a time agreement on. We can settle this thing tonight. We can get this done.

I thought the reason for cloture was worry on the part of the majority leader that we would never get to a final vote on this bill. I am telling you I can get a time agreement on all of the Democratic amendments. We can get to a vote on this bill tonight.

But what we have here is, we can only get to a vote on this bill tonight if we only vote on the things the Republicans want to vote on. That is what this translates to.

I understand that, I accept that. But let us understand what we are talking about here. This is not about delay. Democrats are willing to vote. We are willing to give time agreements. On this amendment, the Senator spoke for 10 minutes. Ask for 10 minutes and then vote. If they do not even want to respond—vote. We are ready to vote. This is not about delay. This is about the Republicans wishing to dictate what they will and will not allow to be offered as an amendment on a bill. I understand that. That is their right. I do not quarrel with that right. But let us make this thing real clear. That is what it is about.

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BIDEN. I will be happy to.

Mr. KENNEDY. Was the Senator familiar with the Hatch resolution for the Director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms with respect to the security process in Northern Ireland? It is a sense-of-the-Senate about the parties involved in the peace process in Northern Ireland.

Is the Senator familiar with the other provisions, even in the Hatch substitute, that talk about the conditions of eligibility for States being able to receive any funding under this? There is the requirement that, in terms of the American Aid Act, the money be spent in a way that promotes democratic peace and the peace process in Northern Ireland. It is the Senator familiar with the other provisions, even in the Hatch substitute, that talk about the conditions of eligibility for States being able to receive any funding under this?

I hope that my Republican friends do not want them.

We have spent, now, an hour talking about whether or not we can proceed. We could have already disposed of my colleague’s amendment and the Bradley amendment by now. They would be over, finished, either in the bill or out. And I have a feeling unless I can get agreement—although I agree with the Senator from Massachusetts—I have a feeling he would be out if they let us vote on this just because of the way the votes have stacked up.

But this is not about moving the bill along. This is about several Republican Senators wishing to filibuster indirectly this bill by not allowing my colleague to introduce his amendment, or the other three amendments, for which we have time agreements if they would agree.

Mr. KENNEDY. If the Senator will yield, is the Senator aware that there are 47 police chiefs across the country who have urged the Senate, from their point of view, to accept this amendment that they believe is important, and also that the language, which is included, was basically the majority leader’s language to have preservation of these records up to 20 days and then have them eliminated? The Senator is probably aware that it has been the judgment of law enforcement officials, now, that the 20 days is too short and the longer period of time would serve the security of American citizens. I wondered if he was prepared to move forward. We could accept this amendment. I would welcome the opportunity to do so, and to move on to the other items.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, Senator BIDEN and I have been through this before. We might feel differently about things. We want to pass a bill. We know how important it is. But some on the other side desperately want to make this a gun fight and frankly we have done everything on our side to keep it out of there. Habeas is one reason why our side is willing to keep it out of it, because they recognize that for the first time in years in this country we can correct the habeas corpus problem in this country, of incessant liberal appeals—incessant frivolous appeals. To make a long story short, that should not be allowed.

I have a letter from President Clinton. President Clinton knows I have been trying to accommodate him. He knows I have done everything I possibly can to try to accommodate him on this bill, even though he has had to be dragged along on habeas corpus, he now admits he wants that in this bill. I hope the people on the other side, who are of the same persuasion and party, would support the President. But there is nothing in this letter, three-page letter, single-spaced, from the White House, that would indicate that he wants this in this bill—that we are trying to solve and we can meet every one of those problems, it seems to me, one way or the other—there is nothing in here about making this into a gun fight or making it into a fight over gun control.

I have to say I am very concerned about it because I want this bill to pass. The vast majority of it I believe is acceptable to virtually everybody in this body. The few things that are controversial I think a vast majority will support. I believe the President will support this bill and he will sign it into law.

Here we are, spinning our wheels, talking about gun control. That could be brought up on the crime bill where it should be brought up. It should not be used to delay this bill because these folks on the other side know that there are folks on this side who cannot allow the right to keep and bear arms to be diminished by some of these gun control amendments, as seemingly simple as some of them seem, as complex as they really are.

I have to say personally I would be willing to meet anything on this bill. But I have to live within constraints, too. I am calling on my colleagues to accept the gun control amendments and either let us go to cloture and let us get rid of them that way. Because they are not germane.

We have been on this bill 3 days. We have had five amendments that we have disposed of in 3 days. Now we are in the middle of a gun control fight instead of passing what needs to be done, and that is the day after the people from Oklahoma, who pinned this ribbon on me that I am wearing in honor and memoriam because of what happened there—the day after they came and said pass this bill the way it is.

As you can see, I am worked up but I have to say I understand the sincerity on the part of my friend from Oklahoma. He wants to see this bill passed. I understand the sincerity on the part of my friend from Massachusetts. I respect it, especially in his case. He and I both know what suffering is all about.

I expect him to bring these amendments to the floor, but not on this bill. His amendment is probably less offensive to some on our side than some of the others that are going to be brought here. I do not want to see this bill turned into a gun control fight when we have people out there in this country who are just waiting to commit more terrorist acts and when we all know that we should act. We all know we ought to do what we can to try to bring some peace and solace to those who suffered in Oklahoma City as well as others in this country.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the letter be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEAR MR. LEADER: I write to renew my call for a tough, effective, and comprehensive antiterrorism bill, and I urge the Congress to quickly pass such a bill. The Executive and Legislative Branches share the responsibility of ensuring that adequate legal tools and resources are available to protect our Nation and its people against threats to their safety and well-being. The tragic bombing of the Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City on April 19th, the latest in a disturbing trend of terrorism, makes clear the need to the Federal government’s ability to investigate, prosecute, and punish terrorist activity.

The Omnibus Counterterrorism Act of 1995 and the Antiterrorism Amendments Act of 1995. In addition, the Senate has under consideration your bill, S. 735, the Comprehensive Terrorism Prevention Act of 1994, and S. 736, the Antiterrorism Amendments Act of 1994. The Senate has under consideration your bill, S. 735, the Comprehensive Terrorism Prevention Act of 1994, and S. 736, the Antiterrorism Amendments Act of 1994. Incorporating many of the features of the two Administration proposals, will be offered in the near future. I also understand that the substitute contains admissions that raise significant concerns. We must make every effort to ensure that this measure responds forcefully to the challenge of domestic and international terrorism. I look forward to working with the Senate on the substitute and to supporting its enactment, provided that the final product addresses the concerns of those proposals in an effective, fair, and constitutional manner. The bill should include the following provisions:

Provide clear Federal criminal jurisdiction for any international terrorist attack that might occur in the United States, as well as provide Federal criminal jurisdiction over terrorists who use the United States as the place from which to plan terrorist attacks overseas.

Provide a workable mechanism to deport alien terrorists expeditiously, without risking the disclosure of national security information or techniques and with adequate assurances of fairness.

Provide an assured source of funding for the Administration’s digital telephony initiative.

Provide a means of preventing fundraising in the United States that supports international terrorist activity overseas.

Provide access to financial and credit reports in antiterrorism cases, in the same manner as banking records can be obtained under current law through appropriate legal procedures.

Make available the national security letter process, which is currently used for obtaining certain categories of information in terrorism investigations, to obtain records critical to such investigations from hotels, motels, common carriers, and storage and vehicle rental facilities.

Approve the implementing legislation for the Plastic Explosives Convention, which requires a chemical in plastic explosives for identification purposes, and require the inclusion of taggants—microscopic particles—on standard explosive device raw materials which will permit tracing of the materials post-explosion.

Expand the authority of law enforcement to fight terrorism through electronic surveillance, by expanding the list of felonies that could be used as the basis for a surveillance order, applying the standards in national security cases that is currently used in routine criminal cases for obtaining permission to track telephone traffic with “pen registers” and “trap and trace” devices; and authorizing multiple-point wiretaps where it is impractical to specify the number of the phone to be tapped (such as when a suspect uses a series of cellular phones).

Criminalize the unauthorized use of chemical weapons in a solid and liquid form (as they are currently criminalized for use in gaseous form), and permit the miliatry to provide technical assistance when chemical or biological weapons are concerned, similar to previously authorized efforts involving nuclear weapons.

Make it illegal to possess explosives knowing that they are stolen; increase the penalty for anyone who transfers a firearm or explosive materials, knowing that they will be used to commit a crime of violence; and provide enhanced penalties for terrorist attacks against all current and former Federal employees, and their families, when the crime is committed because of the official duties of the federal employee.

In addition, the substitute bill contains a section on habeas corpus reform. This Administration is committed to any reform that would assure dramatically swifter and more efficient resolution of criminal cases while at the same time preserving the historic right to meaningful Federal habeas. While I do not believe that habeas corpus should be addressed in the context of the counterterrorism bill, I look forward to working with the Judiciary Committee and the House of Representatives on a bill that would accomplish this important objective.

I want to reiterate this Administration’s commitment to fashioning a strong and effective response to terrorist activity that preserves our civil liberties. In combating terrorism, we must not sacrifice the guarantees of life, liberty, and property; and we will not do so. I look forward to working with the Congress toward the enactment of this critical legislation as soon as possible.

Sincerely,
BILL CLINTON.
Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I do not want to lecture to my colleagues on the other side. They all are sincere. They all have their own ideas. But I think they ought to support their President, and I quote: "The President recognizes the importance of this legislation, and he is willing to bend a bit. Tragically enough, his own Senators are not.

So I appeal to his Democrat Senators at this time to support their President, to support a quality piece of work coming from the Judiciary Committee that has avoided the very concern that many of us have had about trampling on the edge, if not boldly in the center of some of the civil liberties of the citizens of this country. We ought to be able to do that, and we can do that, and to do so, I hope we can resolve this issue.

Mr. CRAY. Mr. President, I thank my chairman for yielding. Let me make it a gun control fight over. I have to say, I don't want to use that or any other legis-

Mr. HATCH. I yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Massachusetts.

I will object to any effort to propose a unanimous consent, whether it is in the guise of limiting time, all in the name of comity. That is not comity at all. It is called comity in the lowest form. We decided after Oklahoma City that this ought not be politics as usual. It would be unfair to the citizens of our country, and it would be unlike the nature of the Congress of the United States in light of a dramatic human tragedy of the kind that occurred in Oklahoma City to play politics. And we walked away from that opportunity, and the Judiciary Committee, under ORRIN HATCH’s leadership, stayed away from it and produced a bill that was critical to our country.

The President did not originally agree with habeas corpus. But last night he said on the Larry King Show, and I quote: "And that ought to be done in the context of this terrorist legislation.

This President recognizes the importance of this legislation, and he is willing to bend a bit. Tragically enough, his own Senators are not.

So I appeal to his Democrat Senators at this time to support their President, to support a quality piece of work coming from the Judiciary Committee that has avoided the very concern that many of us have had about trampling on the edge, if not boldly in the center of some of the civil liberties of the citizens of this country. We ought to be able to do that, and we can do that, and to do so, I hope we can resolve this issue.

So I hope we can move in that direction. I hope we can resolve this issue. There are a lot of issues before the Senate that deserve to be resolved, and this one should be handled in a timely amount of time.

Mr. KENNEDY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Massachusetts.
Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I have listened to the great eloquence of my friends and colleagues on the other side. I do not know whether they understand what this is really all about.

All it is saying is that the requirement that they have to destroy all they are saying is just lift the requirement that was introduced by the majority leader said that in order to work out the compromise at that particular time, there was going to be the requirement of keeping those records for multiple purchases of handguns for a period of 20 days. Now we find out from law enforcement officials that there are multiple purchases of many of those that are collecting these arsenals of handguns within that 20-day period. All they are saying is just lift the requirement that they have to destroy it—not that they keep it, just lift the requirement that they have to destroy it. We hear, “Well, you are playing politics on this.” This is politics.

Let me just review a little bit for the Members of the Senate some of what has been happening because of the accumulation. Also, I point out to our friends and colleagues who were talking about Oklahoma City that this provision by the police chiefs, the wider purchasing practices of many of those that are collecting these arsenals of handguns within that 20-day period. All they are saying is just lift the requirement that they have to destroy it—not that they keep it, just lift the requirement that they have to destroy it. We hear, “Well, you are playing politics on this.” This is politics.

We said we would agree to a short time limit. It is not a very complicated issue. It is either can you vitiate that requirement that exists in law in 20 days or not? We can understand that. People can understand that very quickly. We do not need a long time to debate cop-killer bullets. We debated that issue at the time. But the majority said no; we are not going to be able to do it.

Mr. President, I see the majority leader on the floor. I will just take a few moments before yielding the floor to give some idea about what Members of the Senate are saying. But certainly, our American citizens ought to be reminded of it. I refer to an excellent article from the Anti-Defamation League about the growth of weapons stockpiles in the various militias that are taking place across the country. I will include selected parts of it in the Record.

“Civil war could be coming, and with it the need to shoot Idaho legislators,” so said Sam Sherwood, leader of the backwoods Idaho-based U.S. Militia Association of March 2, 1995, after meeting with the Idaho Lieutenant Governor.

Sherwood amplified his views in a conversation with the Associated Press on Friday, March 10, 1995. According to the AP:

Sherwood believes that some Idaho lawmakers may . . . come to Washington, DC, and, hence . . . the need to shoot them,” he said. “Get up and look legislators in the face because someday you may have to blow it off.” Sherwood said.

Then they continue along.

“Judge’s have been threatened with death, as have police workers and even a State legislator’s 7-year-old son. County workers have been instructed to drive under their desks with a telephone in hand if anyone storms their offices,” reports the Missoulian.

According to one researcher, militia members on the Internet “at one point said they were going to march on Washington and arrest Congress,” and in fact an alert was issued by a militia group which called not only for the arrest of Members of Congress but also their “trial for treason by citizen courts.”

“Blood will be spilled in the streets of America,” said a militia leader. It is inevitable.

According to the Arizona Republic, “Militia groups obtained the names and home addresses of all Federal officers in Mississippi, prompting U.S. agencies to post a nationwide alert.”

According to the same article:

A Tennessee man who anticipated an armed battle with one-world government amassed an arsenal. When local police pulled up, he had State workers and even a State legislator in his sights. He not only threatened his neighbors, but he had formed the club to arm its members in paramilitary fashion in preparation for war with the Government.

What are they arming themselves with? Guns. Guns.

On these issues, the group formed earlier in 1994 had as many as 15 members. They are said to have met three times before Mullins’ arrest. While members of the group say that their purpose is to lobby against gun control laws, Federal law enforcement officials describe Mullins’ group as a militia. An ATF official who investigated the case said Mullins’ organization has a group of confederates to be armed and trained in paramilitary fashion in preparation for armed conflict with Government authorities should firearms legislation become that restrictive. Evidence of such preparation is substantial. In searches of members’ homes and storage facilities, Federal agencies found a stockpile of weapons—a stockpile of weapons. This is just to be able to have in stockpile what is being sold, what is actually threatening Federal officials and have demonstrated, at least in the tragic incidents of Oklahoma, their willingness and ability to use deadly force.

In Mullins’ home, agents found 13 guns, several of which had homemade silencers. They found explosives, hand grenades, fuses, and blasting caps.

Even pretrial incarceration has not stopped Mullins from threatening violence. While in jail, he wrote a letter to a friend saying that he wanted to borrow a machine gun in order to “take care of unfinished business” with prosecution witnesses.

The strongest indication of the group’s goal was the draft of a portion of a newsletter the group obtained from a computer disk obtained by Federal agents. “Hit-and-run tactics will be our method of fighting. We will destroy targets, such as telephone relay centers, bridges, storage tanks, radio towers, airports. Human targets will be engaged when it is beneficial to the cause to eliminate particular individuals who oppose us—troops, police, political figures, snitches,” et cetera.

In one particular rally that they had in Lakeland, FL, in October 1994, there was distributed a flier urging that at the rally a flier urging that “All gun owners should fire a warning shot as a signal to the Congress” on November 11 at 11 p.m. “Congress has failed to safeguard the Bill of Rights * * * especially the second amendment.”

A warship will fire a warning shot across a bow, a rattlesnake will sound off; these warnings are never ignored. It is time to warn politicians that if they do not respect the Bill of Rights, they should at least fear the wrath of the people. Congress is forcing the country into a civil war.

Mr. President, all this amendment does is ensures that the reporting conditions do not have to be destroyed after 20 days. This does not say the Federal Government goes out and takes away the arms. It does not restrict people’s right to own them. It does not restrict those people’s right to purchase. It does not restrict those individual’s rights at all to multi-gun purchases. It does not do that all.

All it says is the requirement that after 20 days, those who are going to sell those kinds of weapons do not have to destroy the record of who they sell them to. That is all. They no longer are mandated to destroy the bill of sale; who they sold it to.

The question is why? And the answer is from those 47 police chiefs. They believe that the maintenance of those can be an important and significant weapon in dealing with violence, existing violence and potential violence of the type at which this legislation is directed.

I daresay that this particular provision is as relevant as any other provision that is before the Senate to deal with violence in our society. As I mentioned before, as Senator Biaggi has said, without a large number of people entering into a time agreement. I am not going to take the time of the Senate to review other provisions that have been included, accepted and supported by other Members that have virtually nothing to do with the fundamental issues of violence and terrorism, but the Members understand that and know it and the RECORD reflects it. This is dealt with in an instrument which law enforcement officials believe can be extremely important and significant in helping to protect American citizens. It is a simple concept to continue those kinds of records so that law enforcement, both local and State officials, in investigating crimes and violence will have an additional tool to make these kinds of arrests and prosecutions and to keep this country a safer place.

Mr. President, I hope that we would at least be given the opportunity to have a vote on this measure. I just point out this issue is not going to go away. I also take umbrage with the fact that we have been on this for 2½ days. We spent this morning debating another issue where the Republicans could not decide whether they wanted to vote for it, against it, or accept it. And then after they had their caucus, they decided that they would go ahead and accept it.

I take umbrage with the fact that this is a desire to delay by any of us. The measures which have been debated have been extremely important. We are prepared to cooperate with the managers in any way to get an early resolution. But this matter is of importance to law enforcement officials and to the safety and security of the American people. That is what this measure is about—terrorism. This amendment, a modest amendment, ought to be accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the majority leader.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, it had been my hope following the policy luncheon that we would have a major shortening of the length of amendments on the other side of the aisle. As I understand, there has been really no effort to limit the amendments, except they picked out five or six amendments which are not germane and suggested time agreements on the nongermane amendments. I do not know the merits of this amendment. It may be a very good amendment. I do not debate the Senator from Massachusetts. I do not believe it was suggested in the President’s bill—in any of the President’s bills. Against this President sent a letter on May 25 outlining his objectives for an antiterrorism bill. There is nothing with reference to this amendment in it.

The President did change. We had a vote on the taggants amendment yesterday. We accepted another gun amendment. I think what this has become is the Democrats are bringing up all the gun amendments they have been keeping in their closet.

Mr. President, we are not going to play that game. I made the best effort I could to work with the White House in an effort to pass antiterrorism legislation, but the Democrats just insist they do not want to do that. They do not want to pass antiterrorism legislation. They have already forgotten what happened in Oklahoma City. They want to have a big debate out here, a big political debate to try to secure a few political points, and that is not going to happen.

If we want an antiterrorism bill, we will vote for cloture tomorrow morning. If we get that, we will go on to telecommunications. The majority is not going to play this game for the benefit of a few Democrats who want to continue to try to make political points. It is almost impossible to work with the White House when you have Democrats in the Senate not willing to work with the White House. How do they expect Republicans in the Senate to work with the White House?

We are not going to play these games. We were afraid we were going to get a big list of amendments that were going to be eliminated. None has been eliminated. So I am going to suggest that we have a period for the translation of tomorrow for the next 45 minutes, and we are going to try to determine what is going to happen. If nothing is going to happen, then we will just recess for the day, have a cloture vote tomorrow, and if the Democrats vote against cloture, that is fine. I want all of them to explain to the President why they did not support an antiterrorism bill, a bipartisan antiterrorism bill.

We began this bill on Thursday. We were delayed 1 day because the Democrats had 60 some votes on the budget bill. We have had filibuster by amendment around here all year long, bill after bill after bill. “Oh, do not file cloture, we will just propose 50 or 60 amendments.” We had a vote in 1 day on amendments on everything they could think of.

So we began on Thursday, and we were on it on Friday and Monday, and now it. They understand they do not want to do anything tomorrow. They want to wait and get all these time agreements on habeas corpus. Tomorrow is Wednesday. We are just eating into the August recess day by day, and if nobody cares, it does not make any difference to this Senator, because I assume we will probably be here in any event.

Either we are going to get cooperation on the other side of the aisle or we are going to sit here and play games. I think the best thing to do is wait and have a cloture vote. Stop playing the game. Let us have a cloture vote tomorrow morning, and if Members on that side want to support their President with an antiterrorism bill, they will vote for cloture. If they do not want to support their President, they will vote against cloture. It is all right with this Senator, but we will have kept our word with the President of the United States to deliver him an antiterrorism bill, not a bill with a lot of amendments on it to make a political point for somebody on the other side.

So I have just reached the limit of my patience on this particular measure.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for the transaction of morning business until the hour of 4:30, with Members permitted to speak therein for 5 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

UNITED STATES POLICY TOWARD BOSNIA

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, at this moment, several thousand United States troops and their equipment are headed for Europe to positions near Bosnia and Herzegovina. Today the Armed Services Committee will hold hearings on this deployment and U.S. policy. On Thursday the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will also conduct hearings to learn about current United States policy toward Bosnia.

These hearings are of critical importance—not only because of the seriousness of sending American ground forces into harm’s way, but because of the continued confusion over U.S. policy.

So I have just reached the limit of my patience on this particular measure.

The first question each of the committees must ask is what is U.S. policy today. Is it to help strengthen and reconfigure U.N. forces, or is it to assist in “emergency extraction”? Furthermore, what is the difference between reconfiguring forces and emergency extraction? What is the relationship between emergency extraction and total U.N. withdrawal? Would such an extraction be a prelude to full withdrawal? In other words, what is the mission of U.S. ground forces if they are deployed for contingencies other than participating in a complete withdrawal of U.N. forces.

Then the committees will need to turn to basic operational questions: What is the NATO-U.N. relationship? When does NATO command begin? How far does it extend—to all air and ground forces in Bosnia?
What is the command structure and its relationship with U.N. commanders?

What are the rules of engagement? Are they robust?

What are the threats to our forces? How do we respond?

What is the estimated duration of the operation? Last August during DOD authorization conference former U.S. Envoy Chuck Redman told conferees that Pentagon estimates were that a without withdrawal or not? If not, why not?

This bigger picture should be the focus of administration consultations with the Congress. We should not only be informed about NATO planning and operations. We should be engaging in a dialog about where we are going. Are we at last going to lift the unjust and illegal arms embargo on Bosnia?

I believe that the United States has interests in Bosnia and Herzegovina. As George Will said this week in Newsweek in response to the charge made by some that the United States has no “dogs in this fight,” that, and I quote, “But those in the fight are not dogs and by the embargo to make the fight grotesquely unfair. What would be the consequences on our national self-respect—our Nation’s soul—of a preventable Serbian victory followed by “cleansing” massacres? Bosnian Serbs have seized 70 percent of Bosnia but they are not a mighty military force and will become even less so if the Serbian Government in Belgrade can be pressured into leaving Bosnia’s separatist Serbs isolated in combat with a Bosnian army equipped with tanks and artillery. The Serbs fighting in Bosnia are bailiffs led by war criminals collaborating with a dictator. If we don’t have an interest in this fight, what are we?”

Mr. President, I believe that we need to assist our NATO allies in the event of U.N. withdrawal. However, I also believe that we need to recognize that U.N. efforts in Bosnia have failed—failed to stop aggression, failed to bring peace, and failed to protect the Bosnians.

The New Republic in its June 19 editorial states that, and I quote, “There is another Bosnian crisis this week. Not in Bosnia. In Serbia things are the same, only more so. A greater Serbia is slowly and steadily emerging by means of a genocidal war. No, the crisis is taking place in the capitals of the Western powers, which are finding it harder and harder to escape the consequences of their policy of appeasement.”

The European decision to create a quick reaction force (QRF) is in itself an admission of failure. The QRF is intended to protect UNPROFOR, not the Bosnians. And the very tasks the QRF envisions being engaged in, such as securing the Sarajevo Airport, are tasks that are not within the power of a QRF. The only power given to UNPROFOR by the U.N. Security Council. Therefore, there is a real question of whether or not sending more forces—even with more equipment—will do anything more than supply the Bosnian Serbs with more potential hostages.

The bottom line is that keeping UNPROFOR on the ground indefinitely will not bring us to a solution in Bosnia. Indeed it will prevent a solution by reinforcing the failed status quo. As the New Republic points out, and I quote, “It cannot have escaped the notice of our policymakers that the U.N. is providing cover for our policymakers, too. It saves them from the prospect of action.”

Mr. President, withdrawing the U.N. force is the first step away from failure and toward a solution. I support United States participation, to include ground troops, in a NATO operation to withdraw U.N. forces from Bosnia provided certain conditions are met.

Therefore, sometime over the next few days I intend to introduce a resolution to authorize the President to use United States ground forces to assist in the complete withdrawal of U.N. forces from Bosnia under the following conditions:

First, NATO command, from start to finish, no U.N.-NATO dual-key arrangement;
Second, robust rules of engagement which provide for massive response to any provocation or attack on U.S. forces;
Third, no risking U.S. lives to rescue equipment; and Fourth, prior agreement on next steps, to include lifting the arms embargo on Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Mr. President, we must maintain our allies. But we must make sure that in doing so, we are neither prolonging a failed policy or leaping into a quagmire. I believe that this resolution will provide the President with essential support of the Congress and will help put us on the right policy track.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the complete article by George Will and the article in the New Republic be printed in the RECORD.

Where being no objection, the materials ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

“A DOG IN THAT FIGHT?” The Secretary of State, A Sweet Man Sadly Miscast, Is Puzzled

(9 By George F. Will)

When Hitler sent Ribbentrop to Moscow in August 1939 to sign the nonaggression pact with the Soviet Union, he sent along his personal photographer with instructions to obtain close-ups of Stalin’s ear lobes. Hitler wondered whether Stalin had Jewish blood and wanted to see if his ear lobes were “in-tern and Jewish, or separate and Aryan.”

This historical nugget from Alan Bynock’s “Hitler and Stalin: Parallel Lives”) is offered at this juncture in America’s debate about Bosnia, as a reminder of a quality European politics has sometimes had in this century. Some American policymakers need to be reminded.

When Serbs took hostages from U.N. personnel in Bosnia and chained them to military targets as human shields, Warren Christopher was puzzled: “It’s really not part of a reasonable story, I’m not going on there.” While the Secretary of State, a sweet man sadly miscast, searches for reasonableness amid the Balkan rubble, there are “peacekeepers” where there is no peace to be kept and “safe zones” where slaughter is random. UNPROFOR (the U.N.
Protection Force) is akin to the Holy Roman Empire, which was neither holy nor Roman nor an empire. The U.N. force isn’t forceful, so it needs more protection than it offers.

This is described as Europe’s first civil war since that in Greece in the 1940s and the most portentous civil war since republics existed in Spain in the 1930s. Actually, this war now churning into its fourth summer is a war of Serbian aggression. It has been a war of aggression since 1992. In 1992, the European Community recognized Bosnia as a sovereign state, and since Bosnia became a member of the United Nations. Perhaps Bosnia’s inconvenient existence is why Serbia wants Bosnia to be sovereign, yet be sullied by partition. But it is a state and that is why Pat Moynihan, carrying Woodrow Wilson’s torch for international law and morality, says it so.

“Everything is at stake here, if principle is everything,” says Moynihan, if neither NATO nor the United Nations can summon the will to cope with Serbia, “what have we gone through the 20th century for?” We went through it because we had no choice, but you know what he means: A century that began, in effect, in 1945, and ended with the taking of Auschwitz is ending with a wired world watching rapacious camps used in the service of the embodi-ment. “All this” 80 minutes by air from Rome.

Europe’s first war between nations since 1945 illustrates an astounding fact: In this century, fighting falls not to Communism, fascism, socialism, pan-Germanism, pan-Slavism and more—one hardest to extinguish turns out to be the variant of fascism-fueling the drive for Greater Serbia. Like pure fascism it asserts the primacy of the primordial and the goal of perfect national unity achieved by the expulsion or murder of minorities. This is the violent Serbian loathing of Sarajevo, where Christians and Muslims have peace-fully coexisted. Hitler and Mussolini thought they were defeating old Europe against the modern menace of Bolshevism. The Serbs think this is the year 732 and they are with Charles Martel saving Christian Europe by stopping the Moslem advance at Tours. Or it is 1529 and they are stopping Suleiman at the gates of Vienna. The Ottoman Empire is long gone, but the gunners in the hills surround Sarajevo, where they never saw Serbs dashing from doorway to doorway—as Turks.

Serbs is a raw reassertion of pre-modern-ity, the idea that uniform ethnicity and shared myths are essential to a political community. This war, which mocks the notion that Europe has become a supranational society, began in 1992, the year the European Community was pronounced by the Bosnian foreign minister. The Serbs fighting in Bosnia are bullies with tanks and artillery. The Serbs fighting in Bosnia are bullies—led by war criminals collaborating with a dictator. If we do not have an interest in this fight, what are we?

THE AMERRICATION AGAIN

This year is the fiftieth anniversary of the United Nations. The celebrations will go on and on, as politicians make banal speeches to command-performance audiences. It is un-likely that the Europeans among their banalities. For it is in Bosnia that the debili-ty of the United Nations has finally been re-vealed.

There is another Bosnian crisis this week. Not in Bosnia, of course. In Bosnia things are the same, only more so. A Greater Serbia is slowly and steadily emerging by means of a genocidal war that is taking place in the capitals of the Western powers, which are finding it harder and harder to escape the consequences of their policy of appease-ment, a policy that is coming home to roost. And they still don’t get it. When the Serbs made hostages of hundreds of United Nations troops last week, a spokes-man for the Serbs said that the Bosnian Serb army is behaving like a terrorist organization.” But the Bosnian Serb army is a terrorist organization, unless you wish to include in your definition of terrorism rape among the terms of military engagement. And the general in command of the U.N. forces in Bosnia de-manded of General Ratko Mladic “that he seat peacekeepers in a manner becoming a professional soldier.” But General Mladic is not a professional soldier. He is a man wanted for war crimes.

Here is what happened last week. The Serbs moved heavy weapons closer to Sarajevo and fired upon it. They have done so be-fore, NATO issued warnings. It has done so before. The Serbs ignored the warnings. They have done so before. NATO launched a trivial attack against a Serb position. It has done so before. The Serbs responded by taking NATO down to the ground. The only thing that changed last week, in short, was that the latent became mani-fest. De facto hostages became de jure hos-tages.

Also the iconography of the conflict was enriched. There have been many indelible images of the slaughter in Bosnia; last week’s pictures of the scattered limbs in the Tuzla café were only the most recent ones. What was lacking, until last week, were im-pertinent photographs of those U.N. soldiers chained to those poles. Not exactly a picture of a helicopter lifting off the roof of an American embassy. Also not exactly a picture of our humiliation, of the forces of order flouted, of the triumph of tribalism over pluralism, of the lupine post-cold war world we have believed in. But (to the devising of bold foreign policy) will erase these images of Western impotence from the memories of warlords and xenophobes around the world. They have been instructed that this is their time.

Two conclusions are being drawn from the success of the Serbs. The first is that the use of force has failed.” “The Bosnian Serbs have now trumped our ace,” as former Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger told The Washington Post. Eagleburger’s pronounce-ment is utterly correct. It is one of the architects of American appeasement in the Bush administration. Still, the Clinton administration gave an analysis from a nation that refuses to entertain the serious use of real force. For this reason, it is important to understand that we did not play a role in Palestine.

Though the West has occasionally acted militarily against the Serbs in Bosnia, the West’s response has been fundamentally unmilitary. No sustained air campaign against the war-making ability of the Serbs in Bosnia was ever really considered. (The precision of the wee assault on Pale. by the West is all that can be a pure air power.) Like NATO’s previous strikes, NATO’s strike last week was more a demonstra-tion of inhibition than a demonstration of the lack of it. This was not what the Serbs were fearing. It was what they were counting on. This trifling retool to the Serbs’ violation of the Sarajevo arrangement played right into the Serbs’ hands: it was a military campaign so predictably puny that it could serve only as a pretext for a Serb provocation. It also reassured the Serbs that the West would not sacrifice pro-portionate to their crimes, and they assas-sinated the Bosnian foreign minister.

So what must the West now do? It must act forcefully against the Serbs to help . . . the United Nations. The ministers of the Contact Group (including the foreign minister of Rus-sia, who must have been chuckling) an-nounced at The Hague that they intended to expand the size of the U.N. mission and to fortify it with heavier weapons. They said nothing about the nature of this mission itself. For all with eyes to see, of course, the essential absurdity of the U.N. mission was made brutally plain last week. The blue hel-mets, the peacekeepers, the “peacekeepers” that are peace in “safe areas” that are not safe. They have not impeded the war or the genocide. They have impeded only a powerful and de-cadent response.

Recall that the “safe areas” of Bosnia were supposed to be made safe by the U.N. There are six such enclosures: Sarajevo, Bihać, Mostar, Željezna, Zepa, and Gorazde. The list of their names is a litany of lament. The U.N. has brought them little respite. When the Serbs attack, the blue helmets retreat. On May 18, the New York Times described a vid-eotape that captured a Serb atrocity on a Sarajevo street: “The crack of a shot echoes in Sarajevo’s valley. He [a young Bosnian] lies on the ground. He is in an almost fetal position. A United Nations soldiers looks on.” In Bosnia, a U.N. soldier... always looks on. Bystanders or hostages: that is what the “peacekeepers” really are.

It cannot have escaped the notice of our policymakers that the U.N. is providing cover for the Serbs, except that the U.N. is providing cover for the Serbs, to save them from the prospect of action. That is why the plight of the U.N. stirs them more than the plight of Bosnia. And nobody is less stirred than the Serbs about what is happening in Bosnia than Boutros Boutros-Ghali, who put an early damper on international outrage when he called this a “rich man’s war.” The Bosnians are less deserving than those under siege, by hunger and by arms, in Africa. And the United States followed the secretary general’s recommendation. We sent troops to Somalia and we sent no troops to Bosnia.

It is hard to think of a major crisis since the Second World War in which the president of the United States has wielded less moral and political authority. There are 22,470 U.N. troops in Bosnia, from eighteen countries. Britain has 3,365 men under arms; France has 3,935; Pakistan has 2,976. The United States has 825. Boris Yeltsin administration, the same administration that denounced the Republicans as isolationists, regularly boasts about it. In such circumstances, it is impossible for the president of the United States to lead. But he is not chauvinist. He does not wish to lead it. He is not terribly interested. When his national security advisers met last week in the West Wing, he stayed in the East Wing. He did tell a reporter, though, that “the taking of hostages, as well as the killing of civilians, is totally wrong and inappropriate.” And also that “I would ask him [Boris Yeltsin] to call the Serbs and tell them to quit it, and tell them to behave themselves. And if that fails, to go to their room. Does Clinton grasp that there is evil in the world? And does he understand that he is not the governor of the United States? Is it a requirement of his job that he care about matters beyond our borders, matters such as war and genocide and the general collapse of America’s role in the world, matters that will not gain him a point in the polls. The joke on Clinton is that he is almost certainly about to be hoist by his own isolationism. The result of the Bosnia policy is to spare the United States all costs in lives and dollars may be a U.N. “extraction operation” that will require the deployment of many thousands of American military personnel at the expense of many millions of American dollars. And Bosnia will have been destroyed. Nice work.

It is time to conclude this sinister farce. The U.N. should get out of the way. It’s forces must be withdrawn, so that the Serbs may no longer hide behind them, and then the Bosnians must be armed, so that they can fight their own fight, which is all that they can do to withdraw the protection of the United States from their lives, lift and strike. Obviously this is not as simple as it sounds. The withdrawal of the U.N. will mean war; and unless NATO provides protection from the air, for the departing U.N. troops and for the training of Bosnian troops, the U.N. withdrawal will expose the Bosnians to the Serbs as brutally as it will expose the Serbs to the Bosnians, and Bosnia will fall. But there already is war and Bosnia already is failing. Anyway, Bill Clinton and Boutros Boutros-Ghali and John Major and the rest of the anti-terrorism militarism the United States to spare it horror. They can live with its horror. They are keeping the U.N. in Bosnia to spare themselves a reckoning with their own failure. We are being ordered to bear the costs of Bosnia become a place where it is always too late for justice.

THE ANTITERRORISM BILL

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I did not get the opportunity to respond to the majority leader prior to the time he made his statement on Bosnia.

Let me say I am disappointed that the majority leader would come to the floor and make the statement that our policy in Bosnia has not care about what happened in Oklahoma. I hope he does not mean that. I hope he did not really mean to say that, because that is wrong and in my view it is uncalled for.

We care just as deeply as anybody on the other side about what happened in Oklahoma. I hope we do not have to hear a statement like that again on the Senate floor. We care just as deeply about responding to this issue, and we will respond to it. But we also care very deeply about our right to offer some fundamental amendments to this bill.

Let me remind everyone this bill did not go through. This bill was not the subject of hearings. We went straight to the floor, brought this bill up on Friday, offered some amendments and took a week’s break. If we care so much about this legislation, why in the world did we have to take a week off before we came back? Now we are on it, and this is the third day.

Mr. President, I have worked on our side to bring the list of amendments down, as I said I would. We have gone from over 60 amendments to, as I understand, we now have to a point where we can finish this entire bill—and we can stay on as long as necessary to do it—in less than 12 hours. We will get all of the amendments up. We will have votes on them and very short time agreements. We will finish this bill tomorrow at whatever time we want to. We can do it.

Everybody can respond. We can make our political points on both sides, if we have to, but we are going to complete action on this bill.

But let me tell you, if we do not have a right to offer amendments on this bill, if in some way we are prevented from doing so tomorrow and the next day, and this bill is pulled from the floor, I want to put everybody on notice that we will offer it to the telecommunications bill and every other single piece of legislation that comes on this floor until we resolve it. So this is not going to go away. Our rights are going to be here. I want everybody to understand that.

So, Mr. President, I hope we can work through this and I believe we can. I hope that in the course of the next hour or two, we can work through this. We are doing an agreement, resolve our differences on procedure here, and finally come to a point where we can vote on final passage. We can do it. We need to work together.

I know it has strained on both sides. But I believe we have to accommodate Senators’ rights here, and a Senator has a right to offer an amendment on this bill, as we have attempted to do. We are down to a short list, and I believe we ought to work through the amendments on it.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, well, we had hearings on wiretap authority, and we had general hearings before the FBI Director Freeh. We have had numerous hearings on habeas corpus in recent years. We have had hearings on alien terrorist removal and posse comitatus. We have had a lot of hearings. But, again, I remind the Democratic leader that the President of the United States, who is taking credit for the antiterrorism bill, would ask him to be a hero to get this bill passed. Does he want 16 amendments or 26 amendments or 36 amendments? He wants the bill passed.

You cannot have it both ways. You cannot criticize Members on weekends for not passing a bill, saying there are too many amendments, and saying he wants to cooperate and have 16 amendments. Members do not need 16. They probably do not need six. They probably do not need five amendments.

This happens to be your administration, your President, who is taking credit for the antiterrorism bill, and the Democrats will not let it pass because they have to have all of their amendments. They have to have 16 amendments. Why do they need 16 amendments?

This is an antiterrorism bill, not a gun bill and not any other kind of bill. We ought to pass it. We ought to pass it in the next couple of hours. We probably will not. We probably will not pass it at all. We will have a cloture vote tomorrow. If the Democrats vote against cloture, that is fine. Then they will have spoken. They will have made a statement on how they feel about antiterrorism legislation.

If the President were on their side saying, “Gentlemen, we have to have all of these amendments,” I can understand. But he is on our side. He is on our side. He said he was last night on Larry King. He wants habeas corpus reform. He wants what is in this bill. He wants the terrorism bill. ‘The majority leader is right saying there are too many amendments, but if they have gone back to our people and said they cannot offer these amendments, offer them some other time. We will be in session a long, long time. I was told we should have stayed here during the week. So give me that stuff. Sixty-seven amendments offered by the Democrats, and I was told by the manager on the other side they would work all these things out over the recess. In fact, I asked the question. Let Members not come back on Monday and say we just got back from recess, we have not made any headway.

It is very frustrating. I know the Senate is a different place. I know one Senator can delay as long as they can, and two or three Senators can delay for days.

This is something that the President of the United States wants very badly. It is something I assume that the Democrats want badly. If they want it badly, they will stop offering amendments. These amendments have nothing to do with terrorism. They were not in the President’s bill.

Why not get on with it and pass the bill? We have a terrorism bill. We can take care of habeas corpus and go final. We have three or three amendments on a side and get it done.

We have taken the taggants, that amendment that the President was concerned about. We worked it out. We worked it out on both sides. We accept ed that amendment and another amendment that we thought had merit, extending the statute of limitations from 3 to 5 years. We have done that. We will not continue this game. I do not care whether they offer it on tele-communications or not. That is a right they have.

The time is running out. The time is running out for this bill to be on the floor. Make no mistake about it. If they want to do business, we will do business. If not, it is fine with this Senator.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, let me just briefly respond to a couple of points.

First of all, the majority leader filed cloture before the first amendment was offered. I do not know what kind of good faith effort there had been to try to work on both sides to accommodate the interests that Senators have with regard to amending this bill. It did not appear to be much.

Second, as I said, there is a very lim ited timeframe within which all of these amendments could be disposed of. Let no one confuse the issue. We are not trying to prolong debate on this bill. We are not trying to keep it from coming to final passage. We can do that tonight. We can do that before 8 o’clock tomorrow morning.

All we have to do is work through the amendments. We have already agreed to a cloture limit. Indeed, we can have it both ways. We can accommodate all of those Senators who specifically said, “I have a very important amendment relat ing to this legislation, and I will do it in a very short timeframe, and I want to vote for final passage.”

So, it is very clear. No one should be confused about it. No one is trying to delay it. If it is pulled, we will have plenty more opportunities to vote on this legislation on whatever other bills come up before the Senate in the coming weeks. I yield the floor.

Mr. BIDEN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMPSON). The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I realize the majority leader is very busy, and he has a lot of pieces of legislation he has to deal with and a lot of other matters relating to national responsibilities and the Republican Party.

However, I want to point out to him, he keeps talking about 60-some amendments. It is down to 16 amendments, No. 1. No. 2. of the 16 amendments, there are only 4 amendments that there is a problem with here. The four amendments relate to guns.

That is what this is about. The Presi dent wanted wiretapping authority in this. We have an amendment for that. The President wants to get tough on those terrorists and allow the Government to wiretap them. I understand that. It is a civil liberties issue from their perspective. I understand it. But the President wanted it.

The President wanted posses comitatus, but apparently some of the posses out West do not want posses comitatus change, so we will have a vote on it.

The President also wants it in this bill. He wanted some authority relating to immigration that the other side does not want. It was in his bill. They took it out. I understand. That is one of the amendments in here.

There are four amendments, five amendments—time agreements—the longest 90 minutes, the shortest 20—relating to habeas corpus. The President says he wants habeas corpus. He did not say he wants the Republican habeas corpus; he says he wants habeas corpus. We want to give the time the President wants, not the one the Republicans want. We want to debate it.

So, look, the amendments we are talking about here, all of which have time agreements on them, all of which, even our amendments on them, are amendments—but for four of them—that the President does want or wants a version of them different than the one in the Republican bill.

So I would like to ask this question: Why do we not have a cloture vote on those four gun amendments, because that is what this is about. Why not have a cloture vote on those? And why do we not move on with the rest of these? And if we get cloture on those four amendments, fine. No problem. They are gone. I am sure they will come back. But they are gone. I do not want them on this bill. I did not want any of these on this bill.

But we should get something straight here. This is an interesting way to pro ceed. There was a bill that was brought up, not out of committee—which I understand and I am not being critical of—and it gets brought up on the floor, everybody not having not had a chance to read it, because it is a Republican bill that was not finalized on the day we started to debate it, and I understand that, too.

Everybody put all these place holder amendments out there. There were 60, 70, 80, 100. I do not know what the number was, a humongous number. So we stayed here late 1 day, Senator HATCH and I, to get a finite list so no one could add more amendments. So we get a finite list and we list them. And then the leader comes back before we voted on any of them and he files a cloture petition.

Now, I realize this will be lost on the public, and I understand this is inside baseball. I understand this is the Senate. I hope the press understands it, though. Then the leader looks down and says, “OK, you now have shown me your list. You have agreed this is a limited list. Now I want to go down the line like that one, that one, that one, that one, so I’m filing clo ture. Gotcha.”

Look, whether there is a time agreement, we walked out of here and came out of a caucus. I did what I committed to, and the leader did what he com mitted to do. I came out here and I said, “OK, here is a time agreement with these four. Can we move them right away?”

I thought the Republican side was for it because they printed up a unani mous-consent agreement. All of a sudden, boom. We cannot debate them. Or we cannot vote on them. We have a Kenney amendment. The President wanted the ATF involved. Apparently, the ATF is like having a cross to Dracula to some folks around here. He stood up and gave a time agreement of 30 minutes. He made his pitch on ATF, why they should be included the way the President wants them included. All of a sudden, thrill is gone. The other side, not a response, no question, just so we cannot vote on it.

What is this, legislation by fiat? Now, look, if this is about getting the bill done, which I thought that is what the cloture thing was about, getting it done, in the 2 hours we have wasted, we could have disposed of at least four of these amendments already. We can get this done.

But what is not what this is about. This is about making sure that the Republican bill stays the way they wrote it. And they are using legitimate pro cedural approaches under Senate rules—this is about making sure we cannot offer other amendments.

As a matter of fact, one of the four amendments that are about to be offered relative to guns, I am voting against. I do not think we should take away the civil liberties money. Why can we not even allow the guy to raise it?

I tell Members, this is not about time, folks. Understand, this is not about time. This is not about anything other than making sure that the major ity can dictate to the minority what they can bring up and under what circumstances they can bring it up. I sus pect they would be very satisfied—I am sure they would be satisfied—if they brought up all the amendments that would not fall when cloture was invoked, vote on them, and then try to make the rest of them fall.

I cannot think of any major bill—I am sure there is a line of people to this—off the top of my head, any major bill, that did not have nongermane amendments in a technical sense attached to it. I cannot think of any. It is possible. I am sure there are some, but I cannot think of any. And we are acting like this is some kind of unusual procedure.

Look, we can give a time agreement on all the 16 amendments. It can all be
Mr. HATCH. It is up to the leader but I certainly believe we could if we drop the gun issue.

Mr. BIDEN. I ask the leader, will he be willing to continue on the bill if we drop the four gun amendments and vote on the last amendments?

Mr. DOLE. I do not know if those are gun amendments or not. I have not looked at the amendments. I want to stick to terrorism. I want to see what the end result is, when we finish the bill. I want to underscore what the Senator from Utah said. I attended the White House meeting. Everybody was saying “They are going to make this a big gun fight.” We said “No, we are not going to do that. We are not going to offer any of the so-called gun amendments.” And then we have them all offered on the other side, or many offered on the other side.

We say no. We accommodate the President. He wants to get the bill passed. The president was at the Air Force Academy and blasted Congress for not passing a bill. Mr. President, 67 amendments were filed by Democrats. We only saw seven of those amendments before Monday. We did not know where we were. We did not know what the other 60 were.

I just suggest we are going to either complete this bill or we are going to have a cloture vote in the morning. If we do not get cloture it is out of here. It is gone.

Mr. HATCH. Could I add one other thing in response to my good friend from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. Surely.

Mr. HATCH. My partner in the Judiciary Committee. We do not even know what some of the other amendments are because nobody has given us any language. But I think there might be a way of resolving this if we got rid of the gun fight and reserve that for the crime bill.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield?

Mr. HATCH. We would like to see what the other amendments are before we move any of the language. But I think there might be a way of resolving this if we got rid of the gun fight and reserve that for the crime bill.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield?

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield?

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield?

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield?

Mr. BIDEN. If the Senator will yield, they were all filed by noon today.

Mr. HATCH. We do not know what Senator Kerry’s amendment is. I am talking about Senator John Kerry from Massachusetts.

Mr. BIDEN. No, my question was about Senator Kerry from Nebraska. Are we ready to vote on that amendment?

Mr. HATCH. I am trying to get that cleared on our side. The amendment I am concerned about is Senator John Kerry from Massachusetts. We do not have any language on that.

Mr. BIDEN. If it is not filed—

Mr. HATCH. You said you would get back to us on that.

Mr. BIDEN. I am told the amendment was filed at noon.

Mr. HATCH. The Democrats have 20 amendments. Before Monday we had language on only seven of those amendments. We certainly do not know what the John Kerry amendment is.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Kerrey of Nebraska amendment, No. 1208.

Mr. BIDEN. The Kerrey of Nebraska amendment 1208?

Mr. KERREY exhausted his argumentation on it and is ready to vote on it.

Mr. DOLE. We are ready to take it.

Mr. HATCH. We are very close to taking that amendment. I just have to clear one or two more people, and we are working on it. Let me suggest the absence of a quorum.

Before I do, let me suggest let us work on this, let us see if we can get together. There is good will on both sides here. We want to get this resolved. But we just do not want the gun fight on this bill. It is a reasonable request. I understand the sincerity of people on the other side who do want it. There are people on our side who did, and we kept them off. We fought them and said you cannot do it. We told them what we would not do it. Now all of a sudden we are in the middle of a gun fight and we just do not want to do it on this bill. This bill is too important.

Frankly, I think we can battle out these types of things. The questions on habeas we will fight it out here on the floor and let the chips fall where they may. We have been willing to do that from the beginning.

I see the majority leader wishes to speak.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I wonder if the two managers might go off somewhere and try to see if they cannot put together something. Better than do it out here in the open.

Mr. BIDEN. You do want us to come back, do you not?

Mr. DOLE. It is like making sausage out here.

It may be we can work it out. I do not see much problem with the Kerrey amendment. We might be able to accept that with some modification. But we want to finish the bill. I promised the President we would finish it before Memorial Day. I like to keep my word. That was not possible. But the President did not know it was not possible and he said some things I did not like.

So I am going to finish this bill. If I do not finish the bill it will not be my fault. Because we could not get cloture or we could not get cooperation on the other side. That is his side, not my side. We are ready. We are ready to do habeas corpus and have final passage before 6 o’clock. That would be an antiterrorism bill. All these other things are going to be around here a long time, this year and next year. We can offer all the amendments we wish. This came to us as an emergency. This was an emergency. We were all called to the White House. We do not do this on every bill. This is very important to the President of the United States. He has been to Oklahoma City. He saw the need. He met with the Attorney General. He met with leaders of Congress and said, "Let’s do it." We did not say let us see how many amendments we can offer, who can outpoint each other, make some political points on some issue, what we will do. That is what we are about to get into here, and I do not think I want to be any part of that. I want to try to keep my word to the President. If we cannot, we cannot. We will do the best we can. I think he will understand. If he does not understand, I will write him a letter. But that is the way it goes.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, in response to the leader’s suggestion that Senator Hatch and I go off, I am always happy to go off with Senator Hatch. What I would like to suggest is that in the meantime we move on an amendment that the President wants in this bill, the wiretap amendment, while he and I are off. We can continue to make progress. I just think we should debate it in case we do not even get close.

Mr. DOLE. We are close on that amendment, too. If the Senator and Senator Hatch could go off somewhere for 10 minutes they could probably get back, pretty much with an agreement.

Mr. HATCH. We have been trying to get an answer to that one for the last 36 hours.

I intend to accept that amendment.

Mr. BIDEN. Good. I urge the amendment.

Mr. HATCH. I have to check one or two more people. I am personally doing the best I can. It is an amendment that really would allow wiretaps following the criminal. In other words, instead of having to follow the phone they follow the criminal who might use multiple phones. I personally have no objection to that and think it is a wise amendment. The President wants it. I support the President.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I think—

Mr. HATCH. But I have to deal with my side, too.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, my experience is not as extensive as the leader’s and slightly more extensive than the Senator from Utah’s here, but it seems to me we waste a whole lot of time working out whether we can work things out rather than just bringing them up and voting on them. By the time we get a vote on it, we are slowing things up.

I have another amendment we can move to, then.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield before he does? We have a bunch of pending amendments that we have asked you to accept. The Smith amendment, which would set a floor.

Mr. BIDEN. We cannot, but let us vote on Smith. We are ready to vote.

Mr. HATCH. We have McCain-Leahy. We have the President’s amendment. Mr. BIDEN. McCain-Leahy is cleared.

Mr. HATCH. Then I urge McCain-Leahy—oh, we are still in morning business. I am ready to move here. We have Senator Specter’s amendment.

Mr. BIDEN. We are ready to vote on the Specter amendment. We would agree to a 10-minute time agreement.

Mr. DOLE. You cannot take it? You do not want to take it or you cannot take it?

Mr. BIDEN. We cannot take it now so let us just vote on it. Look, in 10 minutes—the whole thing is over in 25 minutes rather than spending 45 minutes deciding whether we can take it.

Mr. DOLE. We would like to take a number of back-to-back votes if we are going to do that.

Mr. HATCH. We have the Brown amendment?

Mr. DOLE. Why cannot you take any of our amendments and we are taking your amendments? Because we are Republicans?

Mr. BIDEN. We can take Hatch. We can take the Hatch amendment, and we are happy to do that. We are ready to accept the Hatch amendment. We have already taken the McCain amendment. That is two out of six. That is about what your average is.

Mr. DOLE. You are getting better.

Mr. BIDEN. The Pressler amendment; three out of seven. That is better than your average.

Mr. HATCH. How about Abraham? Can you take Abraham?

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. SNOWE). Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS

Mr. DOLE. Madam President, I will just announce, the Senator from Delaware and the Senator from Utah have been meeting. We now have a list of amendments, but I think we need time to determine whether or not we are going to proceed, because there are 24 amendments now. There were not that many when they went into the meeting, but they came out with 24 amendments. The time agreements just on the Democratic side would take 9 hours.

I think I need to meet with Senator Hatch to see whether there is any other option, other than waiting and having the cloture vote tomorrow morning.

So, Madam President, I move that the Senate stand in recess until the hour of 6:10 p.m.

The motion was agreed to, and at 5:36 p.m., the Senate recessed until 6:08 p.m.; whereupon, the Senate recessed when called to order by the Presiding Officer [Mr. BURNS].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.
Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as I understand it, the Senator from Illinois wanted to speak in morning business. Mr. SIMON. That is correct.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent there now be a period for the transaction of routine morning business not to extend beyond the hour of 6:30 p.m., with each Senator to be allowed to speak for 5 minutes—or whatever.

Mr. SIMON. I would like to take about 20 minutes?

Mr. DOLE. OK, you can give him the whole 20 then.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Illinois.

THE DOLLAR, THE YEN, AND THE DEFICIT

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, this is the third in a series of commentaries I am making on our Nation’s condition, a series suggested to me by President Clinton after I announced my future retirement from the Senate.

One of the major economic events of this year is the recent decline of the dollar against the Japanese yen and the German mark. Though this slippage was arrested temporarily a few days ago, the long-term trend is clear. We know that the drop in the value of the dollar will affect our future, but we are not sure how. We know that we should do something about it, but we are not sure what.

At a White House press conference on Tuesday evening, April 18, a reporter asked President Clinton about the sinking dollar, and the President responded: “In the present climate, the ability of governments to affect the strength of their currency . . . in the short run may be limited.” If that is an excuse for inaction, it is wrong. But the President is right in saying:

So what you have to do is work over the long run. The United States does want a strong dollar. We believe in the importance of fundamentals in our economy. We believe in getting the deficit down, getting jobs up and pursuing a responsible course.

The Washington Post had an editorial that observed:

Anger and frustration in their voices, Japanese and German officials have been calling on the United States publicly to do something about the [falling] dollar . . . . The United States is likely to offer sympathy but little more. There’s nothing useful that the United States can do.

The Post is wrong. A few blamed our $20 billion loan guarantee to Mexico, and while it could have altered behavior slightly in an uneasy market, a $20 billion multyear loan guarantee is not something major for a nation that has a $6 trillion national income, if it has its economic house in order.

There are two basic questions: What does the fall of the dollar mean? What can we or should we do about it? I shall address both.

What does the fall of the dollar mean?

It is significant, both for our Nation and the world. Since two-thirds of the world’s trade is in our dollars, the erosion of the dollar can destabilize economies far from us. But the British publication, the Economist, is correct:

In the long run, the biggest loser from the neglect of the dollar will be America itself.—April 15, 1995.

A Journal of Commerce columnist accurately noted on April 17: “The weak dollar will decrease U.S. political influence abroad.” Peter Passell wrote in the New York Times, on May 7: “No indicator of the American economic decline stands out quite like the fallen dollar.”

Paul Volcker, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, is quoted in the New York Times on May 2: “If you think American leadership is important, then a cheap dollar is a negative.” Time magazine, in its March 20 issue, quoted financial analyst Felix Rohatyn: “We are gradually losing control of our own destiny. The dollar’s decline undercuts American economic leadership and prestige. It is perhaps the most serious economic threat we will face in the long term because it puts us at the mercy of other countries.”

Van Ooms, economist for the Committee for Economic Development and former chief of staff of the House Ways and Means Committee: “If the pages of the Chicago Tribune on April 13 that Europeans will take this country less seriously on foreign policy ‘when it can’t run a credible economic policy.’ As if to underscore all of this, the April 12th Wall Street Journal had a heading about the fastest growing economic part of the world: ‘Asia’s Central Banks Unloading Dollars in Shift Toward Yen as Trade Currency.’

Short-term, Americans will see little change. Yes, if we are traveling in the other nations, we will be hurt a little by the foreign exchange rates. Our balance of trade with other nations may be helped a little, because U.S. products can be secured for less money, though foreign businesses—like their American counterparts—rarely immediately drop their prices, both because they want to make some additional profit and because there is a reluctance to adjust prices until the currency changes. In the long run, the only way to salvage confidence is helped because U.S. businesses that buy component parts from overseas producers will suddenly find them more expensive and will shift to a U.S. manufacturer of the same product, if one is available. But that is not always the case. For example, a patent—Inventor—developed and, at one time, entirely manufactured here—now has no U.S. manufacturing source.

Little-noticed economic consequences will gradually affect us. For example, as right in Japan, the VCR, for example—invented, developed and, at one time, entirely manufactured here—now has no U.S. manufacturing source.

Little-noticed economic consequences will gradually affect us. For example, as right in Japan, the VCR, for example—invented, developed and, at one time, entirely manufactured here—now has no U.S. manufacturing source.

Little-noticed economic consequences will gradually affect us. For example, as right in Japan, the VCR, for example—invented, developed and, at one time, entirely manufactured here—now has no U.S. manufacturing source.

From time to time, minor adjustments will occur and frequently are healthy. But the fairly consistent pattern of the drop in our dollar against the yen and the mark has major long-term consequences for our citizens that are not good.

I read an exchange that took place between two economists some years ago when the dollar brought 262 yen. In 1968, incidentally, 1 dollar equaled 360 yen. Here we can see in this graph what has happened to the dollar versus the yen. The one discussant predicted that if our policies were not altered, the dollar would eventually slide to 180 yen. If our policies were not altered, the dollar would eventually slide to 180 yen. The other economist predicted, confidently, that this would never happen. Presumably, the one would fall to 22 yen and the other would rise to 70 yen.

Recently the Washington Post published a column noting the opinion of an economist and an economic observer who suggest we may have to think about issuing U.S. Treasury notes in yen rather than dollars to attract buyers and save on interest. The reasoning is simple: The financial markets want a stable currency, and they will be more willing to invest in yen-denominated financial instruments, particularly long-term investments. The yen has shown itself much more stable than the dollar. To continue to sell in dollars will require higher interest rates. Therefore, they argue, we should issue yen-denominated notes and pay less for interest. It would be politically unsettling to many Americans to see our bonds being sold in yen, but that is where we are headed.

There are better alternatives.

What can we do about the fall of the dollar?

It is not difficult to diagnose much of the problem. But once the illness is diagnosed, the patient has to take the medicine, and that is much more difficult with a patient that is not accustomed to taking distasteful medicine.

The basic problem is that the confidence in the dollar has diminished. Neither reassuring by United States officials nor efforts by the central banks of Japan, Germany, and other countries will do more than temporarily heal the wound. Confidence-building measures have to be substantial. Those who now hold U.S. dollar-denominated financial certificates, who are uneasy, are not going to be assured by cosmetic actions.

Four steps can strengthen our economy and solidify the dollar. First, get rid of our Government deficit. This is, by far, the most important of the four actions, and it will help the next three. It is no accident that the most recent slide of the dollar began the day after the Senate rejected the balanced budget amendment by one vote.

The Federal Government has been in a deficit situation for 26 years, and for 25 years, the dollar has been in a slide against the mark. Who can take an Einstein to understand there is a relationship. But it is not a straight line, and other factors are also present. Sometimes when the deficit was high, interest rates were high, increasing the value of the dollar. It is an over-simplification to attribute all of the dollar’s decline to the deficit. But it is a major cause.

“The Germans and the Japanese say the basic problem is America’s budget deficit,” writes Times reporter Trudy Rubin. “The Germans have never missed a budget deficit year, and their currency has always been strong. The Japanese, who have been blamed for the sudden plunge in the value of the dollar and pointedly warned Congress that the currency will remain under long-term pressure until Washington tackles the deficit. The newspaper called its comments “extraordinary because he so rarely gets involved in political disputes over tax and budget policies.” —March 9, 1995.

Business Week, in its March 2 issue, commented on the dollar slide: “What the [international] market wants is simple: less debt or higher interest rates.” The same article noted “that sense of unease [caused by] the narrow budget deficit problem has disappeared,” argues Jonathan H. Francis, head of global strategy at Boston’s Putnam Investments. "The story concludes: “Unless the U.S. catches on, even more trouble lies ahead.”

Paul McCraken, economist at the University of Michigan and former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors under President Nixon, had a guest column in the Wall Street Journal of April 13, titled: “Falling Dollar! Blame the Budget.” In the article, he says that the deficits have caused a decline in productive capital investment and that this “is not trivial. If gains in real income had continued at a pace more in line with our long history, average family income in real terms would be almost 25 percent higher than our economy is now delivering.” The bipartisan Concord Coalition recently issued a study suggesting that family income would be $15,000 higher today if we had not had a deficit. On April 17, Trudy Rubin wrote prophetically in the Journal of Commerce: “If there were signs that Washington were cutting the deficit, the dollar would probably stabilize.”

Lawrence Thimerene, chief economist for the Economic Strategy Institute, wrote in the New York Times on March 23 that, to stabilize the dollar, Congress and the President must “demonstrate real seriousness on deficit reduction.” To the credit of President Clinton, he did that with his March 1 budget. It must be politically, but it benefited the Nation. To the credit of our colleagues, Senator Pete Domenici, chair of the Budget Committee, he has proposed that we balance the budget by the year 2002. Now, it is my way of getting there, I applaud his courage in proposing this. The Senate and the House have passed different budget blueprints. During the Senate debate, several of us on the Democratic side of the aisle proposed a different budget plan, but with significantly different priorities. We need bipartisan efforts in that direction.

But our task is made more difficult than the one vote we failed to get in the Senate for a balanced budget amendment. I hope that 1 of the 34 Senators who voted against it—DALE BUMPERS, DAVID PHYOR, BARBARA BOXER, DIANE FEINSTEIN, CHRIS DODD, JOE LIEBERMAN, PETE DOMENICI, WENDELL FORD, BENNETT JOHNSTON, BARBARA MIKULSKI, PAUL SARBANES, EDWARD KENNEDY, JOHN KERRY, CARL LEVIN, PAUL WELLSTONE, BOB KERREY, HARRY REID, BILL BRADLEY, FRANK LAUTENBERG, JEFF BINGAMAN, PAT MOYNIHAN, KENT CONRAD, BYRON DORGAN, JOHN GLENN, MARK HATFIELD, CLAIBORNE PELL, FRITZ HOLLINGS, TOM DASCHLE, PAT LEAHY, PATTY MURRAY, HERB KIMMEL, JAY ROCKEFELLER, and RUSSEL FEINGOLD—will take the issue in light of what has happened to the dollar, and in light of the action taken by Senator Domenici and the Budget Committee.

Even Budget Committee action alone tells the fiscal balancing impact. The heading on the New York Times story of Friday, May 12, was: “The Dollar Surges On New Plan To Cut Deficit.” The story, written by Peter Truell, begins: The dollar staged its biggest one-day rally in nearly four years, rebounding against the German mark and the Japanese yen on speculation that Washington might do more in the past to cut the federal budget deficit.

The difficulty with the Budget Committee acting alone, much as its goal is to be applauded, is that financial markets will remain somewhat skeptical, as I am, about whether Congress will follow through in the remaining 6 years. Financial savings from interest that could be applied to things like social programs and Medicare, and should be applied there rather than for a tax cut, will not be fully achieved. On the basis of estimates made by Data Resources and other forecasters, my guess is that with the same goal of balancing the budget and the firm wall of a constitutional amendment, there would be an additional interest savings of at least 1 percent. That would mean an extra $170 billion over 7 years for needed programs like education and a stimulated U.S. economy in areas that are interest-sensitive, such as home construction, car purchases, and industrial investment.

Washington Post columnist James K. Glassman recently had a column under the heading, “Year of the Balanced Budget.” While whoever wrote the headline for the column may have intended it, there is fear on the part of many that the use of the singular, “year,” is what will happen. We need “Years—plural—of the Balanced Budget.” Our experience with legislative solutions, such as Gramm-Rudman-Hollings, an earlier balanced budget try, is that they have an impact for a year or two, but when the public squeeze is felt, it is much easier politically to create additional deficits than to make the tough decisions. The best where the constitutional amendment would help.

But unless we confront our fiscal problems, the day will come when we will look back with longing to the day when the yen was 84 to a dollar.

Second, our trade imbalances must be addressed. A report from the Congressional Research Service says that studies show 37 to 55 percent of our trade deficits are caused by the budget deficit.
But there are other causes, varying from our neglect to aggressively market, to our weakness over the decades in trade negotiations. The latter deficiency is caused in part by not having a cadre of professionals handling our negotiations, particularly when compared often to Japan. The United States culture is not dramatically different from that of Canada and other Western industrialized nations, but our savings rate is significantly lower. We save only 4.8 percent of GNP, Canada saves 9.1 percent, Germany 10.7 percent, and 19.7 percent in Japan. Because of the low savings rate, the United States is much more dependent on others buying our debt paper.

By making some changes in our Tax Code, we can reward savings rather than debt. Our Tax Code, for example, rewards businesses that create debt to finance growth, rather than financing growth through the thrift of the financial system. A corporation that buys another corporation by borrowing money can write off the interest payments even through the debt may create hazards for the purchasing company. But if a corporation prudently issues stock, the dividends are not deductible. If we changed the tax laws to permit 80 percent of interest to be deductible and 50 percent of dividends to be deductible, the net result would be a wash in Federal revenue, but many corporations would have a more solid base, and our corporate debt base would decline. Similarly, we should create tax incentives for individual Americans to save that would not add to the Nation’s debt but would add to our productivity by making investment capital more available. Our people do not have the incentives to save that citizens of many nations have.

Shifts in our culture will not be brought about quickly, but we must work to bring about change. Fourth, we must do more long-term thinking and face our deficiencies frankly. The fiscal deficiency is an example we have already discussed. We have ducked telling people the truth because it is politically more convenient to duck.

But there are many more examples. Can we expect to build the kind of a nation we should have if we continue to have 23 percent of our children living in poverty? Can we expect to build a nation that can lead and compete in the future if we continue to neglect the need for quality education in all of the nation? Financial markets look at our deficits and worry about long-term inflationary pressures. When our fiscal policy does not address the deficits, the Federal Reserve Board is forced to look at the long-term implications of inflation. That is why the quality of appointments to the Federal Reserve Board are so significant. If we in Congress and the Clinton administration addressed our long-term fiscal problems more directly, the pressure would be removed for Federal Reserve Board action.

Germany and Japan are far ahead of the United States on nondefense research—and probably even further ahead of us in applying their research to productivity and output.

Governmental America tends to live from election to election and, even worse, from poll to poll. Corporate America too often lives from quarterly report to quarterly report. Unless we do more long-term planning and acting in both the public and private sectors, our future performance as a nation will be less than outstanding.

Others understand this about us. We must understand this about ourselves. If we were to address these four areas with courage, not only would the dollar continue to rebound, our hopes and spirit would rebound also. The cynicism and negative attitudes that are a concomitant of the Star Wars program are viewed only by the haters and those who see only the worst in our Government and public officials. The depth of public concern that results in hostility rather than activity is also caused by good, decent public officials of both political parties who do not have the courage to face our fundamental problems or who see an opportunity for partisan advantage rather than an opportunity to lift the Nation.

Yes, we can save the dollar. We can also save the Nation.

Mr. President, if no one else seeks the floor, I question the presence of a quorum.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I understand morning business has ended.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time for morning business has closed.

COMPREHENSIVE TERRORISM PREVENTION ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the pending business.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 735) to prevent and punish acts of terrorism, and for other purposes.

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, can I just indicate to my colleagues on both sides, I thank the managers of the bill. They have been spending the last hour or so trying to work on some amendments. They are ready to accept a number of amendments. There will probably be a vote on the amendment about to be offered by the Senator from Connecticut. We hope to get a short time agreement on that amendment and finish all the amendments, except the habeas corpus amendments, tonight. So there will be votes tonight. I advise and urge my colleagues, if they have to leave the Capitol, to take their beepers so we can notify them when the votes will occur.

Mr. HATCH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah is recognized.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the pending amendment.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, we are prepared to accept that amendment.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, we are prepared at the same time to accept Hatch amendment No. 1233, the airline carriers amendment, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is as follows:

The Senator from Utah [Mr. HATCH] proposes an amendment numbered 1233 to amendment No. 1199.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 166, between lines 11 and 12, insert the following:

SEC. 901. FOREIGN AIR TRAVEL SAFETY.

Section 44906 of title 49, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 44906. Foreign air carrier security programs

The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall continue in effect the requirement of section 129.25 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, that a foreign air carrier must adopt and use a security program approved by the Administrator. The Administrator shall only approve a security program of a foreign air carrier under section 129.25, or any successor regulation, if the Administrator decides the security program provides passengers of the foreign air carrier a level of protection identical to the level those passengers would receive under the security program of air carriers serving the same airport. The Administrator shall prescribe regulations to carry out this section."

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, first, let me state my support for the amendment being offered concerning aviation security requirements to the substitute to S. 735, the terrorism prevention bill, offered by Senator HATCH. I know that Senator Hatch has worked hard to include aviation safety issues in the bill, and I appreciate the chance to express my support for those efforts.

On December 21, 1988, Pan Am flight 103 was blown up over Lockerbie, Scotland, killing 270 people. This terrorist act triggered an immense consuming all-out effort to find the people responsible. It also triggered legislation enacted in 1990, to improve security for international and domestic air travelers.

Unfortunately, during negotiations over one particular provision, we were unable to get the Department of Transportation on ensuring that all international passengers traveling to and from the United States would have the same types of protection. As a result, section 105 of the Aviation Security Improvement Act of 1990, Public Law 101-604, required the Administrator to develop a system of protection for U.S. carriers and a similar system for foreign carriers. In using the word "similar," I do not intend that there would be enormous disparities in security programs between U.S. and foreign airlines serving the United States. The security protection sought was intended to be as close to the same for all passengers, regardless of who actually provides the service. However, the administration, at the time, insisted that section 105 use the word "similar" to give the FAA some discretion to address possible differences between foreign carrier requirements and U.S. carrier requirements.

Unfortunately, the regulations issued by the Department and FAA to implement section 105 were not stringent enough. As a result, what we have seen is a widespread disparity in how foreign carriers screen passengers and how U.S. carriers screen passengers.

Let me give my colleagues an example to show that disparities exist. Let us say that Mr. and Mrs. Jones from Lexington, KY want to go to Germany for a vacation. They decide to take two different carriers. Mr. Jones takes a United States carrier, and Mrs. Jones takes a German carrier. Both leave from Cincinnati. Mr. Jones has to get to the airport at least 2 hours in advance to go through all of the U.S. air carrier security requirements, including security interviews, searches of baggage, x-rays of baggage, and additional security questions at the gate. On average, these types of procedures can take anywhere from 90 to 120 minutes. Mrs. Jones, however, does not have to go through most if not all of those procedures. Her process time takes on average 20 to 30 minutes. Certainly, Mr. Jones wants the highest level of protection reasonably necessary, but why should the procedures be different? They should not, and Senator HATCH is attempting to correct this imbalance.

Over the last several years, we have seen numerous terrorist incidents against U.S. airlines, while the number against U.S. airlines has dropped. It seems the procedures may be working for our airlines. We now should extend those same types of protection to other airlines that transport U.S. citizens to and from our country. The goal of the legislation was to protect all of our citizens and all of those people traveling to and from our country. The amendment restates and restores that goal.

Senator HATCH has addressed the imbalance by requiring the same types of security screens for U.S. airlines and for foreign airlines for U.S. citizens traveling to and from the United States. I support the change and appreciate his willingness to address the issue in a nonaviation bill.
However, what I have agreed to do is to introduce this in the form of a bill. The Senator from Utah has agreed that the committee would hold hearings into this bill and I thank him for that. I thank the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. President, I introduced today a bill on behalf of myself, Senator Nunn, and Senator Inouye to strengthen Congress’ ability to investigate terrorism. The purpose of this legislation is to ensure that Congress has the tools needed to investigate terrorist acts. It is an important public policy and obtains truth—full testimony.

The bill would accomplish four specific goals.

Let me discuss briefly each of the four provisions.

First, the bill would make it clear that false statements to Congress are a criminal offense under 18 U.S.C. 1001. This clarification is needed because a recent Supreme Court decision, Hubbard versus United States, overturned decades of case law including its own precedent. United States versus Bramblett, and held that the plain wording of section 1001 limits it to false statements made to the executive branch. The bill would make it clear that the statute prohibits false statements to the “executive, legislative or judicial branch of the United States,” including “any department, agency, committee, subcommittee or office thereof.”

Second, the bill would make it clear that obstruction of a congressional inquiry by an individual acting alone is a criminal offense under 18 U.S.C. 1505. This clarification is needed because a 1991 D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals decision, United States versus Poindexter, held that section 1505 “is too vague to provide constitutionally adequate notice that it prohibits lying to the Congress.” The decision reasoned, that by using the term “corruptly,” section 1505 may prohibit only those actions which induce another person to obstruct congressional inquiry, and not those which, in themselves, obstruct Congress. In other words, the court held that a person who induces another to lie to obstruct Congress under section 1505, but a person who alone obstructs Congress is outside the reach of the statute.

No other Federal circuit has taken a similar approach. In fact, other circuits have interpreted “corruptly” to prohibit false or misleading statements not only in section 1505, but in other Federal obstruction statutes as well, including section 1503 prohibiting obstruction of a Federal grand jury. These circuits have interpreted the Federal obstruction statutes to prohibit the withholding, concealing, altering, or destroying documents.

Our bill would affirm the interpretations of these other circuits. Specifically, the amendment would include a definition of “corruptly” in section 1515 of title 18 which provides definitions for the entire chapter of Federal statutes prohibiting obstruction of Federal inquiries. This definition would make it clear that section 1505 is intended to prohibit the obstruction of a congressional investigation by a person acting alone as well as when inducing another to obstruct Congress, and that this prohibition includes making false or misleading statements to Congress as well as withholding, concealing, altering, or destroying documents requested by Congress.

This bill is not intended to expand section 1505, but to clarify the conduct it was always meant to prohibit. Moreover, by limiting the definition of “corruptly” to how it is used in section 1505, we are not intending to limit how it is used in other chapters of the Federal obstruction statutes or any other Federal obstruction statute.

Third, the bill would make it clear that any Federal employee or officer, acting in an official capacity, who resists a Senate subpoena under 28 U.S.C. 1365 by claiming some type of privilege must have the written approval of the Attorney General and relevant agency head in order to avoid enforcement. This issue arose in one past congressional investigation, for example, when a Federal employee attempted to assert executive privilege without having any authorization to do so. That’s why, in the Senate, the Senator from Vermont, Senator Moynihan consented to a bill authored by Senator Rudman and Senator Inouye, S. 2350, containing this clarification. That bill was never taken up by the House—now is a good time to resurrect it.

The Senate currently has explicit statutory authority under 18 U.S.C. 1365, to obtain court enforcement of subpoenas issued to private individuals and State officials. This statute does not, however, provide for enforcement of subpoenas to Federal employees or officers acting in an official capacity, in order to keep what may be political disputes between the legislative and executive branches out of the courtroom. The problem has been to determine when an employee is acting within his or her official capacity. Requiring written support for the employee’s actions from the Attorney General and agency head ensures that the individual is acting in compliance with and not contrary to the decisions of his or her superiors.

By establishing this procedural requirement, the bill does not address the underlying issue of which executive branch officials have the authority to assert particular types of privilege—it simply says that without having at least the written authorization of the Attorney General and agency head, no subpoenaed Federal employee, acting in his official capacity, has a legal basis for resisting enforcement of that subpoena. In the case of executive privilege, for example, I and other colleagues believe that the President may assert that privilege. On the other hand, it is possible that other statutory privileges may provide grounds for resisting a subpoena, such as the Privacy Act, and may be properly asserted without the President’s personal involvement. The bill to section 1365(a) does not attempt to resolve these types of issues. Rather it says that a Federal employee can avoid enforcement of a Senate subpoena only by having the written authorization of the Attorney General and agency head to assert any privilege in opposition to that subpoena.

The fourth and final provision of the bill is also taken from the Rudman-Inouye bill that passed the Senate. This provision would make it clear that Congress can compel an immunized individual to provide truthful testimony in depositions as well as hearings. In the past, some individual granted immunity from criminal prosecution by Congress have refused to provide testimony in any setting other than congressional hearings. The relevant statute, 28 U.S.C. 6005, was limited to appearances “before” a committee, while the comparable judicial immunity statute applied to proceedings “before or ancillary to” court or grand jury appearances. The bill would reword the congressional immunity statute to parallel the language in the judicial immunity statute, and make clear that Congress can grant immunity and compel testimony not only in proceedings before a committee but also in depositions conducted by committee members of staff. Again, this provision was approved by unanimous consent as part of the Rudman-Inouye bill that passed the Senate in 1988, but was never considered by the House.

If Congress is to investigate terrorism or any other issue important to the public, congressional committees must have clear authority to punish false statements and obstruction, enforce subpoenas and compel truthful testimony. Our bill would help provide that clear authority.

The text of the amendment is printed in today’s RECORD under “Amendments Submitted.”

AMENDMENT NO. 1205

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I believe there is a Pressler amendment No. 1205 that has been called up but set aside: is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is correct.

Mr. HATCH. I have been authorized by the distinguished Senator from South Dakota, Senator PRESSLER, to withdraw that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment No. 1205 is withdrawn. So the amendment (No. 1205) was withdrawn.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, for the benefit of my Democratic colleagues, I believe that we will be able to accept—and we are clearing this now—the Brown amendment No. 1229, as amended, and the McCain-Leahy amendment No. 1240 that relates to special assessments, and the Shelby amendment No. 1230.

It is my hope and expectation that the distinguished manager of the bill may be able to accept, with some possible modification, Senator NUNN’s amendment No. 1213 on pose comitatus, and Senator LEAHY’s amendment No. 1247 on foreign policy.

But while we are trying to work that out, I suggest that maybe it is appropriate for the Senator for Connecticut to proceed. Mr. President, if I have not already, I ask unanimous consent to be added as a primary cosponsor to the Senator’s amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I spoke to this amendment at length earlier today and yesterday. I yield the floor.

AMENDMENT NO. 1205, AS MODIFIED TO AMENDMENT NO. 1206

(Purpose: To give the President authority to waive the prohibition on assistance to countries that aid terrorist states; to direct the President to provide periodically an explanation of how the assistance is furnished; and to require that the President and appropriate congressional committees have access to information relating to the furnishing of assistance.)

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I send to the desk on behalf of Senator Leahy a modification to the Leahy amendment No. 1247.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment will be so modified.

The clerk will report the amendment. The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Utah (Mr. Hatch), for Mr. BIDEN, asks unanimous consent to an amendment numbered 1247, as modified.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 18, strike lines 18 through 24 and insert the following:

SEC. 620G. PROHIBITION ON ASSISTANCE TO COUNTRIES THAT AID TERRORIST STATES.

“(a) Prohibition.—No assistance under this Act shall be provided to the government of any country that provides assistance to the government of any other country for which the Secretary of State has made a determination under section 620A.

“(b) Waiver.

“Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the President may authorize assistance to a country which the Secretary of State determines is a country to which a waiver may be granted under section 620A(b) if—

“(1) a statement of the determination;

“(2) a detailed explanation of the assistance to be provided;

“(3) the estimated dollar amounts of the assistance; and

“(4) an explanation of how the assistance furthers United States national interests.”

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I urge adoption of the amendment, as modified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment, as modified.

The amendment (No. 1247), as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BIDEN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, we are just awaiting the modification language on Senator Brown’s amendment 1229. As soon as we have that and have a chance to look at it, it will be sent to the desk. We will ask that it be considered and we will accept that as well.

We will also accept in a moment, I believe, Senator SHELBY’s amendment relating to fertilizer research, amendment No. 1230.

Now that we have interrupted the Senator from Connecticut 12 times—but we are making progress here—we are accepting important amendments— I will at the end of the comments by my friend from Connecticut urge we accept additional amendments.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we proceed to the Lieberman amendment No. 1215, pursuant to a 20-minute time agreement to be divided equally between both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Connecticut is recognized.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I thank the Chair. Let me express my thanks and gratitude to the Senate majority leader, to the Democratic leader, the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, and to the ranking Democratic member for breaking what looked to be the coming of gridlock on an issue and a problem on which none of us want gridlock, and we should not allow it to exist. I think we have now limited the number of amendments, and we have clearly accepted some across party lines. And we are quite appropriately moving toward doing something to put us squarely against those who would terrorize America.

Mr. President, when I came to the Senate, I got interested in this threat of terrorism because it seemed to me, particularly after the cold war ended, that we in America might surprisingly find our security threatened more directly, our lives threatened more directly by terrorists than we had enduring the long years of the cold war by a heavily armed enemy. The reason is that there are extremist movements throughout the world. There are, sadly, extremist movements within our own country who practice acts of terrorism either to carry out a political purpose or to create panic and insecurity and chaos in our society.

I thought we ought to begin to act and do something about that. We conducted hearings and we visited with experts. Mr. President, these inquiries into the problem of terrorism led me to this sad conclusion, which is that it is very difficult to defend against terrorists in a way that gives absolute security in the sense that they, by their nature, as we have seen in our time, will strike at undefended targets. In the aftermath of the events in Oklahoma City, we might increase security at Federal and public buildings, and one could imagine that we can surround every public building in America with security guards, and yet the terrorist bent on destruction and chaos will tragically go down the street and strike at a public building or an office building or a place where people gather.

So it seems to me that the best defense against terrorism, international and domestic, is an offense. And the offense is to be prepared, to keep an eye and an ear out for those who would commit terrorist acts.

None of us wants to stop people from saying what they believe in this great democracy and writing and demonstrating what they believe. But when some group has indicated or given reason to law enforcement authorities to believe that they are capable of, or are planning or considering a criminal act, I believe our Government should want our Government to be listening. I want our Government to have undercover agents there so that we can strike to stop those terrorist acts, those violent acts, such as the awful assault in Oklahoma City, before they occur.

Mr. President, that is the purpose of this amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 125 TO AMENDMENT NO. 119
(Purpose: To amend the bill with respect to revisions of existing authority for multipoint wiretaps)

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LIEBERMAN], for himself and Mr. BIDEN, proposes an amendment numbered 125 to Amendment No. 119.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Insert at the appropriate place in the amendment the following new section:

SEC. 2. REVISION TO EXISTING AUTHORITY FOR MULTIPoint WIRETAPs.

(a) Section 2518(11)(b)(ii) of title 18 is amended by deleting "of a purpose, on the part of that person, to thwart interception by changing facilities," and inserting "the judge finds that such showing has been adequately made.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, this amendment deals with what is law enforcement circles is called a multipoint wiretap. It is a very rare kind of electronic surveillance that is tied to the movements of the suspected criminal rather than to the particular telephone line he or she is using.

For all other wiretaps except these rare multipoint taps, law enforcement officers have to convince a court that there is probable cause to believe that a specific phone is being used to facilitate an ongoing crime, where a judge is persuaded that a criminal is moving around and using different phones or locations for the purpose, on the part of that person, to thwart interception, which is the wording in the law today. However, the judge may authorize a multipoint wiretap. With such a court order, the criminal’s conversations can be listened to through wiretaps on those telephones that the criminal actually ends up using.

Let me point out again that what has to be shown here is that the person is moving around and using different phones or locations for the purpose of thwarting electronic interception. Now, no interceptions may take place until a specifically named individual is using the phone. So law enforcement officials establish, through physical surveillance, through observation during the 30-day life of these orders—they are limited to 30 days—that the targeted individual is actually using the phone. If someone else begins to use the phone and the targeted individual is not part of that conversation, the wiretap must stop—even, surprisingly, if other criminal activity is being discussed.

Now, because of these standards, these obstacles, these requirements, multipoint wiretaps are actually quite rarely used. They have, however, proved, according to testimony submitted by Deputy Attorney General John Gorelick to the Senate Judiciary Committee, highly effective tools in prosecuting today’s highly mobile criminals who may switch phones frequently for many reasons. Some may move from one cellular phone to another in order to defraud the phone company. Others may switch from phone to phone because it is consistent with the kind of ruthless lives they lead. Others may be changing phones to avoid being tapped, and those are the people—that enforcement can establish that criminals are switching phones with the specific intent to thwart interception, surveillance, or communication. If law enforcement determines that a criminal may be switching phones frequently for the purpose of avoiding interception, or if other criminal activity is being discussed by changing facilities.

Under current law, unless law enforcement can establish that criminals are switching phones with the specific intent to thwart detection, surveillance, or communication, a standard wiretap cannot be obtained from a court. That is the law. Proving specific intent in such a situation is very difficult—even where someone may be moving so frequently that a standard wiretap on a particular phone is effectively useless. So my amendment would allow courts to authorize multipoint wiretaps, either where law enforcement could persuade a judge that a criminal was changing phones frequently for the purpose of avoiding consultation, or because they are aware from where the very fact that the criminal was moving around and changing phones had the effect of thwarting surveillance, regardless of why he or she is doing it. And that would ease the difficult task of proving the intention of the criminal to thwart detection. It captures situations where the target is frequently moving and changes phones for any reason.

Mr. President, my amendment does not establish new protections in existing law against abuse of these multipoint wiretaps. For instance, no application for a multipoint wiretap may be filed by any Federal law enforcement officer without the approval of the appropriate Justice Department officials. They have to go right to the top for approval. And, of course, a judge cannot authorize a multipoint tap without finding probable cause that a specific person is committing a crime or criminal act.

So this is not going to invite any wanton abuse of wiretap authority. The wiretap cannot begin until law enforcement has verified that the target— even after the court orders it—is using the particular phone and only the communications of that person can be intercepted. If other conversations are heard and a conversation involving a target person, for instance, turns out to be personal, the tap has to be turned off. Given the highly secretive nature of most terrorists, given the fact that they are operating in a sophisticated way, and just as all the rest of us, moving around using phones, cellular phones, electronic surveillance is one of the best tools enforcement has to help.

Mr. President, how much of the 10 minutes remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DeWINE). The Senator has 3 minutes and 50 seconds.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, finally, under current law, let me say that these tools are used very sparingly but effectively. I certainly do not anticipate their being used very often in our battle against terrorism, whether the terrorists be domestically or internationally inspired.

However, I do want to be sure that when our law enforcement officials—fighting and working to protect our safety—need these tools, that they will be ready and waiting so that swift and certain preventive action can be taken.

We owe that to our law enforcement officials. But truly more to the point, we owe it to the millions and millions of Americans, innocent people going about their daily lives, who deserve as best we are able to be protected from the hard and thoughtless hand of death that terrorism would wreak upon them.

Mr. President, that concludes my statement.

I yield so much of the remainder of my time as desired by the distinguished ranking Democrat of the Judiciary Committee, the Senator from Delaware [Mr. BIDEN].

Mr. BIDEN. I thank my friend from Connecticut.

The way I look at this, this is real simple. Real simple and basic. There is nothing real complicated about this. Right now, this can be done. Right now, all that has to be proven is there is an intent to evade. All we are saying is if the effect is evasion, and the effect is avoiding the tap on the phone that they think may be tapped, they are able to do it based on the effect, not having to prove an intent to thwart eavesdropping. I want to make that clear to everyone here.

This still requires an initial finding that this guy is probably a bad guy. It still requires a judge to say that there is probable cause to look at this guy. This is no great leap in anything. Civil libertarians should not worry, law enforcement should be encouraged, and the American people should feel some mild additional sense of security in being able to do what the Senator from Connecticut suggested that the President very badly wants, and that was deleted from the bill.

It is my hope that our friends on the Republican side may be able to accept this amendment. If there is any time left, I ask that it be reserved.

Mr. President, I rise in support of Senator LIEBERMAN’s amendment, which I believe will improve the current authority for what are known as roving, or multipoint, wiretap orders. This provision was proposed by the President, but is not included in the Republican substitute.

Multipoint wiretaps allow law enforcement officers to obtain a judicial order to intercept the communications of a person—not just for one specified phone, as with most wiretap orders, but on any phone that person may use.

A recent prosecution will help illustrate how multipoint wiretaps work. In that case, involving one of the world’s biggest international drug traffickers, agents determined that a courier was contacting his bosses by using a number of randomly chosen public phones around his home.

A multipoint wiretap was obtained and up to 25 phones were identified to prepare for the chance that the target would use one of them. Anytime he used one of those phones, the agents were able to initiate a wiretap. Interceptions obtained in this way led to 53 Federal indictments and a 19-ton co-conspirators obtained in this way led to 53 Federal indictments and a 19-ton cocaine seizure.

Under current law, the Government can get a multipoint wiretap order only if it can show that the defendant is intending to thwart surveillance—usually by switching from phone to phone.

The Senator’s amendment would allow multipoint wiretaps where the defendant’s conduct has the effect of thwarting surveillance—regardless of the defendant’s intent.

This small change is desperately needed by law enforcement—because while officers will often be able to show that the individual is changing telephones frequently enough to make a standard wiretap impossible, it may be difficult to prove that he is doing so with intent to thwart a wiretap.

Changes in technology have made this proof even more difficult. A target may use more than one phone for reasons other than evading surveillance. The current intent requirement virtually requires an officer to wait to apply for a multipoint wiretap until the officer somehow hears the target say “I am changing phones because I don’t want the cops to tap this conversation.”

Let me give you an example of an ongoing case in which a multipoint wiretap order could not be obtained because of the requirement to prove intent to thwart surveillance.

In this case, the targets are using electronic scanning equipment to capture cellular phone and identification numbers from unsuspecting and innocent phone users.

The particular targets in this case are cloning a new phone number—allowing them to use it without authority—every 2 weeks or so and thereby effectively avoiding surveillance.

The officers are hard-pressed to prove that every time the target clones a new number, he did so for the purpose of thwarting interception—rather than simply to avoid paying for the calls. Because wiretaps are extraordinarily powerful and intrusive, the law contains numerous protections against abuse.

The Government must, of course, prove probable cause that a specific person is committing a crime—as with any wiretap application.

The application must be approved by a top Justice Department official—the Attorney General, the Deputy Attorney General, the Associate Attorney General, an Assistant Attorney General, or an Acting Assistant Attorney General;

The judge must find that the standard for issuing a multipoint order has been met;

The application must identify the person believed to be committing the offense and whose communications are to be intercepted;

The Government must minimize the intrusiveness of a wiretap—by turning the wiretap off when the conversation is personal, for instance; and

Any interception cannot begin until law enforcement has clearly determined that the target is using that particular phone. And once the target is off the phone, the interception must end.

In practice, this latter requirement means that the agents are out on surveillance and they see their target move to a new phone, they can begin interception of the new phone. It also means that if their target hands the phone to his buddy, they must stop the interception immediately.

A multipoint wiretap order does not allow the police to intercept a slew of different telephones in a number of places and monitor every conversation on those phones.

The amendment proposed by the administration, and offered in modified form by Senator LIEBERMAN, would not change any of the basic protections in the current multipoint wiretap statute.

The narrow, but necessary change that the Senator’s amendment would make is not intended to make this authority a run-of-the-mill everyday surveillance technique.

I understand that multipoint wiretaps are used sparingly—and in fact, the Justice Department has approved to date this year only 10 multipoint wiretaps were conducted and that only 4 have been approved to date this year.

The new authority provided by this amendment must be utilized responsibly. And I reiterate that Senator LIEBERMAN’s amendment will not change any of the protections built into the multipoint wiretap statute besides broadening the intent standard to include an effective in order to upset the balance.

We must provide law enforcement with the tools they need to meet the demands of an ever-complex and changing criminal element. In today’s increasingly mobile and high-technology world, we need the law enforcement with the ability to move with the criminals. It is now simply too easy for law enforcement to get left behind as the criminals move from place to place and from phone to phone.

At the same time we must be cautious not to infringe on civil liberties. I believe the amendment Senator LIEBERMAN offers today accomplishes both of these goals.

It is a narrow but necessary expansion to the multipoint wiretap authority—but one that also includes protections against abuse.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, how much time remains on both sides?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah has 10 minutes; the Senator from Connecticut has 1 minute and 6 seconds.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, initially I opposed the President’s version of this amendment. It is a fundamental tenet that the right of the people to be secure in their persons, house, papers, and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures limit the permissibility in Government interception of electronic communications.

In other words, the Government cannot listen to our private telephone conversations whenever it feels like it.

Indeed, because wiretaps are so intrusive, conducting them secretly and under circumstances in which the subject generally has a reasonable expectation of privacy, the courts and Congress have required that Federal law enforcement officers meet a heightened burden of necessity before using a wiretap.

At the same time, we have to recognize that no one has a right to engage in illegal activity. Criminals consistently adapt the latest technology to further the aim of completing their illegal acts without detection.

As the criminal use of technology has evolved so, too, must we, enhancing the capabilities of law enforcement who, after all, must protect our citizens from these types of crimes.

The balance between a person’s right to be free from unreasonable searches and his or her expectation to live free from crime is a delicate one. We have to consider seriously any proposal with the potential to upset the balance.

Now, I believe that the President’s language could very well have done that. Briefly, the President’s original proposal would have provided law enforcement with an expanded authority to tap phones in a narrow subset of cases in which the target would be subject to a normal wiretap, but changes phones so quickly it is difficult to get a separate wiretap order for each phone.

These are the so-called roving wiretaps. Essentially, this enables the Government to follow a person around and listen to that person’s telephone conversation regardless of where the phone person is using.

I think this is problematic. So, our staff has worked with Senator Biden and his staff to narrow the provision considerably.

Now, under this provision, the Government can receive a court-ordered wiretap if the suspect knows he is under surveillance and intentionally thwarts that surveillance. That is country law.

The proposed amendment, which is substantially different from the President’s language, permits law enforcement to obtain a multipoint wiretap if the suspect intends to thwart surveillance, or if by the course of his conduct he effectively thwarts surveillance.

I think this is a reasonable compromise. It is important that we give law enforcement the critical tools it needs to combat terrorism and protect our free society, but because we are a free society we must be leery of expanding the surveillance powers of law enforcement interminately. We must not, even in the aftermath of tragedy such as Oklahoma City, trade off our constitutional protections for a generic promise of increased security.

I, personally, am confident that the proposed amendment by my friend and colleague from Connecticut satisfies civil liberty concerns and meets the needs of law enforcement at the same time.

I intend to vote for this amendment. I know there are others who feel deeply that they do not want to vote for it. As manager of the bill on our side, I intend to vote for it. I would encourage others to do so, as well.

I am prepared to yield back the balance of my time and to stack the vote at some later time at the decision of the majority leader.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, first let me thank my friend from Utah for his support of the amendment. I appreciate the terms at which the support was given, that this is a balanced amendment.

It gives extra authority to law enforcement to protect the rest of us, but does so in a way that gives proper regard to the liberties that we all cherish.

Again, this extra wiretap authority cannot be used unless such judge has concluded there is probable cause to believe that the individual who will be the target of this multipoint tap is, in fact, committing a criminal act.

Mr. President, I would be happy to yield back the time that I have remaining.

Mr. HATCH. I yield back the balance, and I ask unanimous consent that the vote on or in relation to the pending Lieberman amendment occur later this evening at a time to be determined by the two leaders.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATCH. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to modify my amendment No. 1210. I send the modification to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1210, AS MODIFIED

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to modify my amendment No. 1210. I send the modification to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 1210), as modified, is as follows:

At the appropriate place in the amendment, insert the following new section:

SEC. 6. PROOF OF CITIZENSHIP.

PROHIBITION ON VOTER REGISTRATION AS PROOF OF CITIZENSHIP.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a Federal, State, or local government agency may not use a voter registration card (or other related document) that evidences registration for an election for Federal office, as evidence to prove United States citizenship.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, I ask for its immediate consideration.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, on this side, we find this a good amendment. We are prepared to accept it. I understand the other side is acceptable to that, as well.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, after consulting with Senator Ford and others, I am prepared to accept the modification. We thank the Senator from Georgia for so modifying. We accept the amendment as sent to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Georgia, as modified.

The amendment (No. 1210), as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1230 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1199

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, we are prepared to accept Shelby amendment No. 1230, the fertilizer research study, and I understand that the Republican side is willing to accept the Heflin amendment numbered 1241 related to sarin gas.

I ask unanimous consent that both of them be called up, and then at the appropriate time, I am willing to accept them both en bloc.

Mr. HATCH. We are prepared to accept both of those amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendments will now be considered en bloc.

The clerk will report.

The bill clerk reads as follows:

The Senator from Delaware (Mr. BIDEN), for Mr. Heflin and Mr. Shelby, proposes an amendment numbered 1230 to amendment No. 1199, and for Mr. Heflin, proposes an amendment numbered 1241, en bloc.

The amendments are as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 1230

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

‘‘In General.—Section 3003(e) of the Solid Waste Disposal Act (42 U.S.C. 6922(e)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

‘‘(c) NERVE GASES.—

‘‘(A) LISTING.—The Administrator shall list under subsection (b)(1) the nerve gases sarin and VX.

‘‘(B) APPLICATION OF REGULATORY REQUIREMENTS.—Standards and permit requirements under this Act and regulations issued under this Act relating to the nerve gases sarin and VX shall not apply to—

‘‘(i) any sarin or VX production facility of the Department of Defense; or

‘‘(ii) the storage of sarin or VX at any Department of Defense designated chemical weapons stockpile in existence prior to the date of enactment of this Act.’’

AMENDMENT NO. 1241

At the end of the bill, add the following:

SEC. 7. LISTING OF NERVE GASES SARIN AND VX AS A HAZARDOUS WASTE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 3001(e) of the Solid Waste Disposal Act (42 U.S.C. 6921(e)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

‘‘(3) NERVE GASES.

‘‘(A) LISTING.—The Administrator shall list under subsection (b)(1) the nerve gases sarin and VX.

(b) IMMEDIATE ACTION.—The listing of the nerve gases sarin and VX required by the amendment made by subsection (a) shall be deemed to be made immediately on enactment of this Act.

SEC. 8. LISTING OF NERVE GASES SARIN AND VX.

The listing of the nerve gases sarin and VX is required by the amendment made by section 3006 of this Act relating to the nerve gases sarin and VX.

MR. BIDEN. Mr. President, while I have strong reservations about the amendment offered by Senators Heflin and Shelby, I have also been informed that the amendment has been cleared by all other Senators—including Senators from both sides, representing the committee of jurisdiction, the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

For these reasons, I will not object to the amendment offered by Senators Heflin and Shelby and require a roll-call vote on this amendment, as well.'
call vote. But, I would simply note my opposition for the RECORD.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I urge adoption of the amendments.

Mr. BIDEN. We urge the adoption of both amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendments. The amendments (Nos. 1230 and 1241) were agreed to.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendments were agreed to.

Mr. BIDEN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1230

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, on behalf of Senators MCCAIN and LEAHY, I call up an amendment numbered 1240 and ask for its immediate consideration.

Mr. HATCH. Has that amendment been accepted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is advised that it has not been agreed to.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 1240) was agreed to.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BIDEN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I understand that the distinguished chairman of the Judiciary Committee is working on the possibility of accepting or working out an agreement on the Nunn-Biden amendment on posse comitatus. Is that correct?

Mr. HATCH. That is correct. There is some language difficulty. We are trying to work it out. We hope that we can.

Mr. BIDEN. I say to the Senator from Michigan that I would like to accept his amendment No. 1228. We are attempting to find out whether that can be cleared. If we can clear that amendment, it will take another few minutes to determine that.

I suggest, with the majority leader here, that while we are clearing some of these additional amendments, if there is anyone who has an amendment that we cannot clear who is ready to go with their amendment, I would encourage them to move on their amendments.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATCH. Parliamentary inquiry: Is the LEAHY amendment No. 1238 at the desk?

AMENDMENT NO. 1238

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I believe both sides are in a position to accept that. Our side will accept it if the distinguished Senator from Delaware will. Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, we are prepared to accept it as well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 1238) was agreed to.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BIDEN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1236, AS MODIFIED, TO AMENDMENT NO. 1199

(Purpose: To authorize assistance to foreign nations to procure explosives detection equipment and other counterterrorism technologies.)

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, the Senator from Pennsylvania is here. He has an amendment, No. 1206, relating to foreign assistance. We have been discussing this with him. We think it is a good amendment. We have suggested a few minor changes relative to the amount of distribution under the amendment.

I understand the Senator from Pennsylvania is prepared to send his amended amendment to the desk, and we are prepared to accept it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, the referenced amendment would provide U.S. assistance to other countries to procure explosives detection devices and other counterterrorism technologies. At the request of the State Department, it has been broadened to include support for joint counterterrorism research and development with allied countries.

This amendment would be very effective for counterterrorism internationally by providing up to $3 million in assistance to foreign governments to work on counterterrorism technologies. Obviously, when you talk about counterterrorism and explosives detection devices at airports, U.S. citizens, for that matter citizens and residents all over the world, will be affected by the availability of the sort of counterterrorism technology that will be supported under this amendment.

It has very broad support. I am pleased that the distinguished chairman of the committee and the distinguished ranking member are prepared to accept it.

The amendment has been modified to limit the amount of support to $3 million annually because the total authorization under the program is $15 million. I urge the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, does the Senator need to send that amendment to the desk?

Mr. SPECTER. I send the modification to the desk. Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is so modified.

Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 1206), as modified, was agreed to, as follows:

(1) Assistance to foreign countries to procure explosives detection devices and other counterterrorism technologies—Subject to section 576(b), up to $20,000 on fiscal year may be made available—

(A) for joint counterterrorism research and development projects on such technologies conducted with NATO and major non-NATO allies under the auspices of the Technical Support Working Group of the Department of State.

(2) As used in this subsection, the term ‘‘major non-NATO allies’’ means those countries designated as major non-NATO allies for purposes of section 2350a(i)(3) of title 10, United States Code.

On page 22, line 19, strike ‘‘(b)’’ and insert ‘‘(c)’’.

Mr. HATCH. Parliamentary inquiry: Has the amendment been adopted, because we still have a problem on this side, I have been informed, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment still be considered pending.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATCH. The amendment is cleared. I urge adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

So the amendment (No. 1206), as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BIDEN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. I am one Senator who is wondering what is going on here. I do not know if there are going to be votes or not. We have been here all day. What is happening? Can I go home and have dinner with my kids? That is what I wanted to know. Are we really going to stay and vote, or are we going to walk them?

Mr. DOLE. We are going to vote tonight. We worked out about a dozen amendments. We have made a lot of progress in the last 2 or 3 hours. We hope to dispose of all of the amendments, with the exception of the habeas corpus amendment, which we will do tomorrow morning. We will vitiate the cloture vote and do habeas. We need to complete action tonight. I think it may be another hour before the votes are taken. If you eat fast, you might make it.

Mr. HARKIN. Well, I ask the distinguished majority leader, if we are going to have votes, why not stack them in the morning?

Mr. DOLE. I hope to do that every day around here and we never finish anything. I would like to do the voting tonight on all but habeas and vitiate the cloture and finish habeas and start on telecommunications sometime tomorrow morning.

We have some momentum now that we do not want to lose. A lot of people may not be willing to do this in the morning.

Mr. HARKIN. If this is momentum, I would hate to see this place really move.

I just wanted to know if we could stack them in the morning.

Mr. DOLE. You could try to go home, but you probably would not be able to eat much.

Mr. BIDEN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. We started off about 4 hours ago with 80-some amendments. We are down to—not counting the habeas—about four or five. So we really have been working in his absence. I wanted to assure him of that.

Mr. HARKIN. I appreciate that.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I understand that, and I think the progress is commendable. I think the Senator from Iowa and others would appreciate knowing if we are going to stack votes. Do we have any notion of when the votes might be stacked?

Mr. DOLE. We hope that by 9 o'clock we will start voting. There will probably be three or four votes.

Mr. DORGAN. But that is not locked in at this point?

Mr. DOLE. One vote has been ordered.

Mr. BIDEN. Yes. No time is set. It was tonight. I believe we are going to have several more votes. We are waiting for a couple Senators to come and offer their amendments. There are very tight time constraints on each of the amendments. If they get here—quite frankly, what happened is we have come over here and people have started to offer amendments and they have ended up being accepted. So that seems to work as a catalyst to get them accepted too.

There is one vote ordered for tonight without a time certain on it. There are probably going to be two or three additional votes.

Mr. DOLE. If the Senator will yield. If the managers continue to work as they have, and we only had one vote left, I would put that off until tomorrow. But I am not certain when we are going to be able to tell people that. If we have two, three, or four, I would like to complete the votes tonight. That will save us a couple of hours in the morning. I think if the managers will continue to be flexible on these amendments, and we will avoid a lot of votes.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I have expressed in the past concern about the provisions of the pending legislation which authorize secret proceedings in certain instances. It had been my hope we would be able to deal with the problem of suspected terrorists without being involved in secret proceedings.

I had been working on an amendment which would have dealt with people who were in the United States illegally, who could be proceeded against and deported because of their illegal status without the need for the government to rely on secret evidence.

I have very grave concerns about the constitutionality of any deportation proceeding in which secret evidence is allowed and there is not a right of confrontation. Technically, deportation proceedings are civil in nature and therefore do not require the full scope of confrontation rights which are available in criminal cases.

Notwithstanding the fact that deportation proceedings are civil in nature, the courts have held that due process does attach to a deportation proceeding. It may well be that when the case reached the United States Supreme Court of the United States that this due process requirement will be found to pick up the right of confrontation under the sixth amendment.

Certainly, the due process clause of the 14th amendment, which is applied to the States, does pick up the confrontation provision of the sixth amendment. By analogy, it may well pick up confrontation rights as it applies to deportation proceedings, as well.

But in reviewing the existing deportation laws, there would be a much broader change necessary to deport those who are here illegally without getting into the question of evidence as to terrorism.

There is obvious a grave concern about disclosure of confidential information involving terrorism, because sources and methods could be compromised. I understand the Senator from Illinois, Senator Simon, is going to offer an amendment which will require a summary of the classified information being relied on by the government in the deportation proceeding. Frankly, that does not go as far as I would like to see the protections go, but that may be all that can be accomplished under the current bill.

I will subsequently be taking up the immigration laws generally and it may well be that at that time we can craft procedures which will protect the public interest of getting out of the country people who are known terrorists, where there is substantial evidence to that effect, even though that evidence cannot be produced in a context of confrontation. Which means that we would be entitled to under a criminal proceeding.

I am also concerned about the reliance on classified evidence in cases involving the Secretary of the Treasury’s designation of foreign organizations as terrorist organizations. The substitute represents a substantial improvement to the bill as introduced. Under the procedures in the substitute, there is a de novo review by the courts of the Secretary’s designations. It means a court will take a fresh look to see if the designation by the Secretary of the Treasury of an organization as a terrorist organization is, in fact, well founded.

Under the provisions which have been added to the substitute, a summary of the classified evidence presented to the judge will be provided to the organization, and in such cases there will be a requirement that the evidence be clear and convincing that the organization is, in fact, a terrorist organization. The summary will have to be sufficient to allow the organization an opportunity to defend.

I think that these provisions have gone about as far as is possible with the practicalities at hand, and that they would really be risking very sensitive information and sources and methods if full confrontation was possible where someone is to be deported, and require the witness to be produced where there is a designation by the Secretary of the Treasury of an organization as being engaged in or supporting terrorist activities.

I think, Mr. President, we really are dealing as much as we can under the present legislation. A good bit of this bill will have to be tested in court, and I do express these concerns about the constitutionality of some of these provisions.

I yield the floor.

AMENDMENT NO. 128 WITHDRAWN

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I would like to resolve one of the issues that I think is resolvable, on the Smith amendment.

What the Senator is concerned about is he wanted a floor on the amount of damage, so that incidental damage by citizens who are engaged in peaceful or nonviolent demonstrations or protests would not trigger the antiterrorism language of this bill.

I ask my colleague from Delaware if he would agree that a definition of “terrorist” in this legislation is not intended to apply to American citizens engaged in a nonviolent or peaceful demonstration, or demonstrations or protests where incidental damage to property may occur.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I agree with the Senator from Utah that that is not the intention.

Mr. HATCH. I think the real thing the Senator has been worried about is whether if pro-choice and right-to-life people are picketing and exercising their rights of free speech, and some incidental damage occurs—just to choose two examples in society—that if there is no intention to commit terrorist actions, and if the demonstrations are intended to be peaceful and nonviolent, that somehow or another this law would not be triggered.

Mr. BIDEN, Mr. President, I say to my friend, this is not intended to capture incidental damage. Say someone in a peaceful protest trips over a hedge or trumps on a flowerbed. That is not the intention here. The key here is "incidental damage" that is not intended. That would not be captured by this legislation, as I read the legislation.

Mr. SMITH. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. HATCH. I am happy to yield to the distinguished Senator.

Mr. SMITH. I thank the Senator from Utah and the Senator from Delaware. They have alleviated my concerns. We talked about this quite some period of time, and I very much appreciate it. We have gone now to the spirit and intent of what we mean by "terrorist," and I am satisfied and more than delighted to withdraw the amendment.

I thank my colleagues.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHcroft). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 1203) was withdrawn.

Mr. HATCH. I thank the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire for what he said. We are making a great deal of headway here. If we can just continue for a short while, we might be able to finish this phase of the bill within a relatively short period of time.

Mr. BIDEN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1239 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1199
(Purpose: To amend the penalty provisions for the use of explosives or arson crimes)

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, it is my understanding that both sides are willing to clear the Levin amendment No. 1243. So, on behalf of the Senator from Michigan, I call up that amendment, No. 1243, at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk reads as follows:

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

AMENDMENT NO. 1250

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I have an amendment. I am working with Senator Specter on his version. I think we will have a Specter-Simon amendment very shortly.

What it does is it changes the provision if an alien is to be deported. Under the present bill, if there is classified information that alien is not informed of anything. That is a clear violation of due process and I think the courts would toss it out.

What we have suggested, and we are working on the precise language now, but what we are suggesting is that the Attorney General would provide an unclassified synopsis and the court would provide the access to the declassification to make sure the unclassified synopsis is accurate. And then that would be given to the person who is charged with being deported. That gives some reasonable access. We provide for review and appeal procedures. We are still working on some details.

Senator Specter may want to comment on this. We may offer the amendment tomorrow or later tonight, I am not sure, but I think we are very close to an accord.

I might add the accord is in line with the original draft of the legislation that is before us. But I think the legislation, if it is not amended, frankly, the courts would toss it out as violating due process.

My colleague from Pennsylvania may want to comment on that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, in comments a few moments ago before the distinguished Senator from Illinois came to the floor, I had referred to my concerns about deportation with secret evidence. I had referred at that time to an amendment which Senator Simon was considering. We have since conferred and are now discussing the provisions in the amendment which I had filed with the amendment which Senator Simon has just referred to.

I believe this amendment goes a substantial distance in protecting the rights of someone who is subject to deportation. As I had said earlier this evening, I have great concerns about the fairness of the procedure where there was not confrontation, that is where the evidence is alleged to be present that the person is a terrorist but that evidence is not presented because it would disclose a source very injurious to the Government. So what we are trying to do here is to find an accommodation.

If this were a criminal proceeding, there is no doubt that there would be a requirement of confrontation under the U.S. Constitution. But deportation proceedings are classified as civil proceedings. But, notwithstanding the classification of deportation proceedings as civil, the courts have also said that there has to be due process even in a civil proceeding. It is entirely possible when this provision is reviewed in court that it may be determined that due process will require confrontation just as the due process clause of the 14th amendment is applicable. The States picks up the requirement of confrontation applicable to the Federal Government in a criminal proceeding. But I think that the amendment which Senator SIMON and I will be offering will go a long way to raising the standard of fairness.

The one item which we are still wrestling with in drafting is whether there will be a requirement that the evidence be clear and convincing in order to deport someone without confrontation on the evidence which is presented as to terrorism. However we work out that last detail, we are in the process of having the drafting finalized now.

We are doing this because Senator SIMON and I have just put these two amendments together trying to work them out. Perhaps it might even be acceptable to the managers. But that remains to be seen. But that is the sense of what we are doing at this moment.

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, my hope is that it would be acceptable to the managers. I think this is in the line of the spirit of what is being offered. It is in line with the original draft. It certainly is in line with the sentiments over the years that I have worked with Senator BIDEN, and I also believe Senator HATCH also would find this acceptable.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I would like to speak very briefly to the point.

First of all, I would like to thank both parties for moving such an important amendment in this hour, and at a time in which I do not think people fully understand how significant this amendment is. Our adversarial system of justice requires that defendants be given evidence to be used against them so that they can prepare a defense. It is kind of a basic element of our entire system. At trial that is what cross-examination is all about, to test the reliability and the basis of information given by a witness. The right of a defendant to confront the person against oneself is I think a fundamental premise of the due process clause of the Constitution. Unseen and unheard evidence simply cannot be defended against. How does one defend themselves? The courts have recognized that fact time and again.

The Supreme Court has said that secrecy is not congenial to truth seeking. No better instrument has been devised for arriving at the truth than to give a person in jeopardy every serious notice of the case against him and an opportunity to meet that. That was in the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee versus Senator Wagner.

The court also said:

Certain principles have remained relatively immutable in our jurisprudence. One of these is that where the Government action seriously impinges an individual and the reasonableness of the action depends on fact-finding, the evidence used to prove the Government's case must be disclosed to the individual so that he has an opportunity to show that it is untrue.

That was in Green versus McGlory, 1959.

So to sum it up, all the dangers posed by secret evidence are neither hypothetical nor are they imagined. Shortly after World War II an American soldier sought to bring his German bride back to the United States. She was excluded at the border on the grounds that she was a security risk. The Supreme Court concluded secret evidence could be used against her since persons first entering the United States do not have the same right. However, the public outrage forced the Government to give her a hearing. And the supplier of the secret evidence turned out to be a jilted lover and not a terrorist.

Secret evidence runs counter to all the principles underlying due process of law and our judicial system, and it cheapens our system by placing in doubt the accuracy of its decision.

So I urge my colleagues to reject the secret evidence and to vote to return this provision to the form in which Senators Dole and Hatch first introduced it.

I urge my colleagues to support the Specter-Simon amendment.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as I understand it, on the Democratic side there are four nonhabeas corpus amendments remaining including the one that is pending. So that would be three. On Senator Kennedy's amendment there is an effort to try to reconcile that. Also, Senator LIEBERMAN is to be voted on. SIMON; immigration; KENNEDY; immigration; LIEBERMAN; and the others are all habeas.

On the Republican side, how many amendments? Senator ABRAHAM; Senator BROWN; Senator KYL; Senator SMITH has been resolved; and two Specter amendments. But I understand that one of those may have been drafted and is the pending amendment, and the other one may not be offered.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, that is my understanding. I ask my friend from Pennsylvania, amendment No. 1237, secret proceedings, has been folded into the Specter-Simon amendment. Is that correct?

Mr. SPECTER. That is correct.

Mr. BIDEN. So the only one is the terrorist organization amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania, No. 1239. Is that correct?

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, as I had commented earlier, I am satisfied now that the revision of the bill is about as far as we can go in providing the addition of the de novo hearing by the court, that the classifications of terrorist organizations is well-founded factually, and there again that the evidence which is not subject to confrontation meets a similar standard with respect to Specter-Simon.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I understand the Senator will not move his terrorist organization amendment because he is now satisfied.

Mr. SPECTER. That is correct.

Mr. BIDEN. If I could respond to the hope of the Senator on this amendment, in all probability we are prepared to accept the Abraham amendment, and I would urge Senator BROWN to come and offer his amendment on Ireland now.

Senator NUNN has just come in the Chamber. Hopefully, he can work out with the Republicans their concerns, and if not I hope we would be prepared to move that.

So as I look down the Republican list, the only nonhabeas amendments left—because we have accepted most of them—are the Abraham amendment, which I believe we can accept, and the Brown amendment, which I hope Senator BROWN will come and offer. There are no other nonhabeas amendments on that side.

On the Democratic side, the Kennedy immigration deportation proceeding, I hope we will be able to accept, and hopefully the Nunn provision will be accepted. And they are the only two nonhabeas amendments that we have left after we vote on Specter-Simon and Lieberman. I guess that is it. They are the only two we have—and BROWN. If I could get Senator BROWN to come and offer his amendment, it will be very helpful.

Mr. DOLE. Let me indicate to Senator BROWN, wherever he may be, that we would very much appreciate his coming to the floor and offering his amendment.

Senator NUNN is here so maybe we can negotiate, if he is willing to negotiate that amendment, or if not have a debate on that amendment.

I understand SPECTER and Senator SIMON will be ready momentarily to offer their amendment.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, again to review the bidding, the only amendment that Senator SPECTER has remaining is the one that he and Senator SIMON just debated. The Simon amendment listed as S. 1234 also drops because that has been merged. So Senator SIMON has no other amendment, other than the pending amendment, and if that would leave, as I said, again only for debate Brown and possibly Nunn, Biden, and possibly Kennedy, but I hope we can accept the TRIP TO GUATEMALA, COLOMBIA, HAITI

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, during the period of May 26-29, 1995, my colleague on the Senate Intelligence Committee, MICHAEL DEWINE, and I traveled to Guatemala, Colombia, and Haiti for a firsthand view on matters of concern to the Intelligence Committee and to the Senate. The following represents my own personal impressions of the facts learned and my own judgments.

Our first stop was Guatemala. On April 5, 1995 the Senate Intelligence committee held an open hearing on the role of the CIA in two human rights cases. In one case, the committee learned that a Guatemalan, Col. Roberto Alpirez, might be implicated in the murder of American farmer and innkeeper Michael DeVine on June 8, 1990. During the open hearing, Acting Director of Central Intelligence, Adm. Bill Studeman acknowledged that the CIA received information in October 1991 that shed light on the possible presence of Alpirez in the interrogation of Mr. DeVine. Admiral Studeman also acknowledged that the CIA failed to inform the intelligence committees of the House and the Senate regarding this information which should have been done.

In the second human rights case, Ms. Jennifer Harbury, the widow of a Guatemalan guerrilla Commander, Efraim Bamaca, repeatedly sought to learn the fate of her husband. Both Jennifer Harbury and Carole DeVine, the widow of Michael DeVine, were eloquent and dynamic hearing witnesses. They pleaded for our assistance to learn the facts of their husband’s deaths, and, in the case of Ms. Harbury, the location of his remains. We were also interested to learn what happened in the cases of Nicholas Blake, Sister Diana Ortiz and Helen Mack.

While the committee’s staff is analyzing many documents pertaining to these cases, we traveled to Guatemala to learn firsthand from the Guatemalan authorities what happened to determine the willingness of the Guatemalan government to prosecute anyone legally responsible for these deaths. Our visit also sought to convince the Guatemalan Government that human rights are a top United States Government priority.

Our first meeting was with Guatemala's President Ramirez de Leon. We expressed our concern with the Guatemala peace process and pressed hard on human rights, particularly the DeVine and Bamaca cases. President de Leon is the former human rights ombudsman in Guatemala.

We explained to the U. S. wish to assist the peace process and our strong interest in resolving the DeVine and Bamaca cases. President de Leon responded by noting the serious challenges his government has had to face since he took power. He also stated he had confronted serious corruption in the Congress and the Courts by changing them through legal means. Finally he noted that he had succeeded in achieving a 5 percent economic growth and he had to persevere in a confrontation with the private sector to achieve major fiscal reform which he characterized as being tougher than dealing with the Army, the guerrillas, and corrupt politicians combined.

When we pressed on the DeVine and Bamaca cases, President de Leon said that both represented part of the general problem of impunity in Guatemala. He noted a difference between the cases. He characterized the DeVine case as a common crime and Bamaca as a common crime. It is widely believed that Captain Contreras was the leader of the group that murdered Michael DeVine, but after his sentencing to 20 years in jail, he escaped, perhaps with the complicity of the Guatemalan Army which had him in custody. Therefore, to cast this as strictly a common crime appears inaccurate in that the involvement of the Guatemalan military points to a common crime.

In my view, not enough has been done to apprehend him in spite of the fact the government of Guatemala had placed a $17,000 reward for the Captain’s recapture.

President de Leon stated that he would be calling Venezuelan President Caldera about the possibility that the Captain is a fugitive in that country and that the FBI and Interpol have been asked to join in the search for him abroad. The President added that he expected a formal commission to Venezuela to pursue this and thought that President Caldera would be willing to cooperate.

Later we met with Defense Minister General Mario Enriquez. The DeVine and Bamaca murders figured prominently in our discussions. We underscored several times the importance of the cases to bilateral relations. General Enriquez stated investigations into both killings were going forward, but he drew a distinction between Bamaca and DeVine.

General Enriquez also reported to us that he was hopeful that Captain Contreras had been captured just prior to our meeting. The next day, May 27, the newspapers were filled with front page stories of the capture of Captain Contreras. But a check with our Embassy in Venezuela did not shed any more light in the veracity of this report.

The capture of Captain Contreras would be a critical element in the resolution of this crime. It might shed light on why and whether other military officers were involved. President de Leon noted that he had suspended Colonels Catalan and Alpirez pending investigation of their involvement in a crime, a step basically unprecedented in Guatemala. We also learned of the rumored existence of a tape reportedly held by Colonel Alpirez which allegedly recorded instructions to him to cover up the DeVine case.

President de Leon asserted that he would go as far as necessary in pursuing the DeVine case which he added would benefit the army as an institution in Guatemala.

In regard to Guatemalan guerrilla commander, Efraim Bamaca, President de Leon made the same distinction between the two cases and the DeVine matter as did General Enriquez. In President de Leon’s view Bamaca was a product of war and to push prosecution of that case would de-stabilize the army. He felt the Bamaca case should be referred to the Historical Clarification Commission “a step basically unprecedented in Guatemala” established by agreement between the government of Guatemala and the URNG guerrillas to deal with the many abuses committed during the war once it was over.

Nonetheless, we continued to press hard. We asked the President to make as a sample of the rights of a Guatemalan as a human rights violation. It was important to the relations between the government of the United States and the government of Guatemala. I noted that this is a special case and added that if the story of Efraim Bamaca wound, it would represent a big step forward.

I noted how the testimony of both Jennifer Harbury and Carole DeVine to the Intelligence Committee on April 5th had been very moving and, how Colonel Alpirez was linked to both cases. President de Leon acknowledged that as former human rights ombudsman he knew that there was no excuse for torture even in war. Many priests had also been murdered. He stated he wished to strengthen the bi-lateral relations with the U.S. and improve Guatemala’s image. However to pursue the Bamaca case would threaten the peace process and the stability of the government. In his words, it would put a “sword of Damocles” over the head of all 2,500 Guatemalan military officers who had seen hundreds of their comrades die in the conflict.

What was needed, he added, was a peace agreement and genuine reconciliation, not recriminations.
We also met with human rights activists, including Ronald Ochaeta, Director of the Archbishop’s Human Rights Office; Helen Mack, sister of the slain Myrna Mack; and Karen Fisher de Carpio, the daughter-in-law of the slain two-time Presidential candidate and newspaper publisher Jorge Carpio. Jorge Carpio was a cousin of the Presidente de Leon Carpio. They requested that the United States government reveal all the intelligence about Guatemalan military people who may have been involved in human rights crimes. They also expressed the fear that, after the Guatemalan army returns Captain Contreras to justice in Guatemala, that the United States Government and human rights pressure will diminish; and absent that pressure, the Guatemalan Army will no longer even remotely respond to human rights concerns. They termed the Guatemalan justice system as being dysfunctional. Within the Army, they felt that there is a large number of individuals who only serve themselves. Individual members are involved in a variety of illegal activities: human rights violations; stealing of cars; and drug trafficking, etc. They expressed the view that while most members of the army have never been involved in these activities, all have taken “a blood pact” not to disclose any details on their fellow military comrades.

I agree with the human rights activists and monitors that only with the pressure of the United States Government the international community will cause the Army to improve its human rights performance in the future and to shed light and sanctions on past crimes.

Our next stop took us to Colombia where we met with President Ernesto Samper, his Foreign Affairs Minister, Rodrigo Pardo, and his Defense Minister, Fernando Botero. We met the leaders of this country in Cartagena. Our discussions centered on narcotics trafficking and terrorism. While the United States has been riveted for years over the taking of hostages in the Middle East, scant attention has been paid to hostage-taking in South America, particularly in Colombia where presently seven Americans are being held by the terrorist group known as FARC. I raised these issues with our Ambassador Myles Frechette and with President Samper. The view of both of them is this hostage-taking is different in the sense that it is financially motivated. Terrorists have been taking Americans and other foreign nationals captive for ransom purposes.

In meetings with President Samper, Senator DeWine and I pressed for more action to prevent the taking of these hostages and greater efforts to release them. In my view, not enough has been done in this area.

Of paramount importance were our discussions regarding narcotics trafficking. The conditional certification of Colombia by the President on February 28, 1995 has clearly had an impact on the government on Colombia. Prior to February 1995, there had been sporadic support by some quarters of the Colombian political establishment in preventing significant damage to the Colombian drug syndicates. For example, in 1994 the government of Colombia had no legislative intent to reverse its 1993 criminal procedures code which made it very difficult to bring mid-level and senior syndicate heads to justice. As a result, following the trend set in 1993, there were no arrests, incarcerations, or fines imposed on such traffickers. For example, a number of frequently convicted traffickers were able to benefit in significant reductions to their sentences pursuant to Colombia’s woefully inadequate sentencing laws.

In 1994, total drug seizures through interdiction efforts were above those of 1993 but didn’t reach the levels accomplished in 1991 as the U.S. Government has recommended. Performance on eradication efforts has supposedly improved; but results have not met expectations. In 1994 there were no senior government officials indicted for corruption. The Colombian Congress did not pass bills introduced by the Samper administration to counter money laundering, a number of traffickers were able to benefit in significant reductions to their sentences pursuant to Colombia’s woefully inadequate sentencing laws.

On September 19, 1994 over 21,000 U.S. troops were deployed there without any loss of life. Paramilitary forces of Haiti were disbanded and its leaders were arrested. General Cedras departed in exile on October 13, 1994. President Aristide returned on October 15, 1994.

General Kinzer noted that he is operating under Presidential Decision Directive 25. U.N. Security Council Resolution 940 and Chapter 6 of the U.N.’s charter which technically limits him to observing, reporting, and verifying. It does not give him full authority to carry out peacekeeping. Nonetheless, General Kinzer has set up rules of engagement which, in essence, give him the ability to carry out peacekeeping. General Kinzer did point out the importance of intelligence support to the U.S. forces there and also to the United Nations forces. While such intelligence was not as critical as in Somalia, he warned that any efforts to restrict the flow of intelligence of U.N. forces would not be in the best interests of U.S. forces who are participating.

Ambassador Swing emphasized the serious challenges which lie ahead. First, there is a need to create a credible Peace Force by February 1996 when the mandate for U.N. forces ends. There is a need to stimulate badly needed economic development in the country. Third, the electoral process must be fair for the parliamentary elections in June and the Presidential elections in December. Finally, there needs to be improvement in Haiti’s justice system.

We met with President Aristide who pointed out the need for security forces in the source support to Colombia which he expects to have ready by February 1996. Given the rate of training timetable, it is dubious that this can be achieved. President Aristide represented that the machinery is in place for a fair and democratic process for the forthcoming elections.

There are some rumors that President Aristide may not comply with the Haitian Constitution and step down when his term expires in February. We questioned him on this. When asked if there were any circumstances under which he would stay on as President, his response was “no.” He stated that the Constitution requires him to leave no matter what the majority of Haitians might say. In response to what more he would want from the United States, he responded by saying he would be ashamed to ask for more money. What is needed, in his view, is more economic development, more job opportunities, and a need for a free market.

Mr. President, in the absence of any further proceedings on the pending legislation, I thought this might be a good time to make a brief report on a trip which I made on behalf of the Senate Intelligence Committee to Guatemala, Colombia, and Haiti over a 4-day period, May 26 through May 29, with the principal focus in Guatemala being to determine the civil rights abuses on the murder of an American innkeeper, Mr. Michael DeVine, and a Guatemalan soldier, Commander Bamaca.

These deaths had been the subject of an Intelligence Committee hearing where there were very, very substantial questions of violations of human rights. At that Intelligence Committee hearing in April, Mrs. Carol DeVine testified about the brutality with respect to her husband, Michael DeVine, and the perpetrators have not yet been brought to justice. Ms. Jennifer Harbury, the wife of Commander Bamaca, testified as to the dolor of determining what had happened to her husband and even to finding his body.

On our trip, we talked about the matter with President deLeon of Guatemala and also with the Minister of Defense and urged that every effort be made by the Guatemalan Government to find out exactly what had happened to the American citizen, Michael DeVine, and Commander Bamaca.

President deLeon pledged the full efforts of the Government as to the murder of Mr. DeVine but had a difference of opinion with respect to Commander Bamaca, which he classified as a military incident. We urged in the strongest possible terms President deLeon proceed to vindicate human rights and make an investigation as to both of their matters.

In Colombia, we had extensive discussions with ranking Colombian officials, including President Samper, principally on the issues of terrorism and narcotics traffic.

I must say, Mr. President, that there is insufficient evidence being taken by the Colombian Government on the very serious problems of narcotics traffic which comes to the United States. Since efforts had been undertaken with some success in the mid to late 1980’s, those efforts have materially decreased with Colombia now refusing to have extradition. It is my judgment that our efforts in interdiction and the funds which we are expending in that direction could much more usefully be placed on the so-called demand side in the United States on education and on rehabilitation. It seems that the more acreage or hectares of ground taken away from the growth of cocaine or drugs in Latin America, in Colombia, illustratively, or Ecuador or Peru, the more replacement drug growth occurs in those States. Although we are spending a tremendous sum of money, there has been no meaningful reduction of the source of supply. We have to maintain a very active and vigorous law enforcement program in the United States to combat supply. But our efforts of international interdiction have been largely unsuccessful, and I think the Government of Colombia is doing much less than ought to be done.

Senator DeWine and I finished our short trip with a one-day stay in Haiti, where we had an opportunity to visit with President Aristide and visit with General Kinzer. There a real effort has been made by the U.N. forces to establish order, and U.N. forces are scheduled to leave in February of next year. There will have to be significant accomplishments by the Haitian Government to have a local police force to handle the issue.

Rumors had come to our attention that there might be a question as to whether President Aristide would step down after a new President is elected late this year when his term is set to expire in February. Senator DeWine and I were very direct and blunt in asking the question as to whether he did intend to step down, and he was unequivocal in stating that he would do so. We noted that a real sign of progress in Haiti would be whether there would be an orderly transition of government from one elected President to his successor. In light of what has happened in Haiti historically, that would really be a remarkable achievement.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded. The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SANTORUM). Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1259

(Purpose: To ensure due process in deportation proceedings)

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, we have now completed the drafting of the amendment which had been discussed earlier. I now send this to the desk on behalf of myself, Mr. SIMON, and Mr. KENNEDY.

This amendment provides that under circumstances where the Department of Justice is unwilling to present a witness or witnesses to establish that an alien is a terrorist, that there will be an unclassified summary presented, sufficient to enable the alien to prepare a defense.

It has provisions which protect the government in a number of directions, and ultimately in the situation where there is a threat that the alien’s continued presence in the United States would likely cause serious or irreparable harm to the national security, or death or serious bodily injury to any person, and the provision of either classified information or classified summary that meets a higher standard would cause, again, irreparable harm or the possibility of death or serious injury, then there may be an unclassified summary prepared by the Justice Department sufficient to allow the alien to prepare a defense.

There is a provision here for an interlocutory appeal. It would be my hope this might be acceptable on both sides, or if not, that it would receive an affirmative vote by the Senate. I send the amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

SENATE—S7765
The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. SPECTER], for himself, Mr. SMITH, and Mr. KENNEDY, proposes an amendment numbered 1250.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent further reading be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Strike page 36, line 13, through page 38, line 20, and insert the following in lieu thereof:

“(B) The judge shall approve the summary within 15 days of submission if the judge finds that it is sufficient to inform the alien of the nature of the evidence that such person is an alien as described in section 241(a), and to provide the alien with substantially the same ability to make his defense as would disclosure of the classified information.

“(C) The Attorney General shall cause to be delivered to the alien a copy of the unclassified summary approved under subparagraph (B).

“(D) The written unclassified summary is not approved by the court pursuant to subparagraph (B), the Department of Justice shall be afforded 15 days to correct the deficiencies identified by the court and submit a revised unclassified summary.

“(E) If the revised unclassified summary is not approved by the court within 15 days of its submission pursuant to subparagraph (B), the special removal hearing shall be terminated unless the court, within that time, after reviewing the classified information in camera and ex parte, issues written findings that—

“(i) the alien’s continued presence in the United States would likely cause serious and irreparable harm to the national security; or

“(ii) provision of either the classified information or an unclassified summary that meets the standard set forth in subparagraph (B) would likely cause serious and irreparable harm to the national security; or

“(iii) death or serious bodily injury to any person; and

“(iv) serious and irreparable harm to the national security; or

“(v) death or serious bodily injury to any person; and “(vi) the unclassified summary prepared by the Department is adequate to allow the alien to prepare a defense.

“(F) If the court issues such findings, the special removal proceeding shall continue, and the Attorney General shall cause to be delivered to the alien within 15 days of the issuance of such findings a copy of the unclassified summary together with a statement that it meets the standard set forth in subparagraph (E).

“(G)(i) Within 10 days of filing of the appealable order the Department of Justice may take an interlocutory appeal to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit of—

“(I) any determination made by the judge concerning the requirements set forth in subparagraph (B), and “(II) any determination made by the judge concerning the requirements set forth in subparagraph (E).

“(ii) In an interlocutory appeal taken under this paragraph, the entire record, including any proposed order of the judge or summary of evidence, shall be transmitted to the Court of Appeals under seal, and the matter shall be heard ex parte. The Court of Appeals shall consider the appeal as expeditiously as possible, but no later than 30 days after filing of the appeal.

AMENDMENT NO. 1218 AND 1225, EN BLOC

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent further reading be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendments en bloc are as follows:

(Purpose: To require the same procedures for the use of secret evidence in normal deportation proceedings as are accorded to suspected alien terrorists)

AMENDMENT NO. 1218

On page 48, line 12, before the period insert the following: “, except that any proceeding conducted under this section which involves the use of classified evidence shall be conducted in accordance with the procedures of section 501.”

AMENDMENT NO. 1225

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. 40A. TRANSACTIONS WITH COUNTRIES NOT FULLY COOPERATING WITH UNITED STATES ANTI TERRORISM EFFORTS.

“(a) Prohibited Transactions.—No defense article that may be sold or licensed for export under this Act to a foreign country in a fiscal year unless the President determines and certifies to Congress at the beginning of that fiscal year, or at any other time in that fiscal year before such sale or license, that the country is cooperating fully with United States antiterrorism efforts.

“(b) Waiver.—The President may waive the prohibition set forth in subsection (a) with respect to a specific transaction if the President determines that the transaction is essential to the national security interests of the United States.”

AMENDMENT NO. 1255

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the bill before the Senate contains a procedure to permit the use of secret evidence in deportation proceedings for suspected terrorists. Many Members have reservations about this procedure, and I believe the sponsors have made a genuine attempt to strike a balance between our concerns about terrorism and the fundamental requirements of due process.

However, another section of the bill, section 303, contains no such balance. It permits the use of secret evidence in any deportation case, without any due process safeguards at all. The amendment I am offering would extend the special safeguards to these proceedings that are available in terrorist cases, in the rare situations in which classified evidence must be protected.

The terrorist deportation procedure in section 301 acknowledges the sensitive issues surrounding the use of classified evidence. It requires a special designation by the Chief Justice of five Federal judges to keep the evidence secure and ensure due process.

However, section 303 allows secret evidence to be used in normal deportation cases before any of scores of low-level immigration judges in the Justice Department, with no protection for either the classified evidence or the immigrant.

While this provision exempts permanent residents from its broad reach, there are others who reside in the United States under legal immigration status who also deserve protection, including the new spouses of American citizens. If we are to take the extraordinary step of permitting the use of secret evidence in general deportation proceedings, I believe the evidence and the immigrant should be afforded at least the same protections that we give to terrorists.

This can be done without unduly burdening the courts. The number of cases which rise to the level of requiring secret evidence to justify deportation is extremely small.

The kinds of cases which could be subject to this procedure would have substantial equities. The use of secret evidence should not be taken lightly.

Under this procedure, the immigrant spouses of American citizens could be deported with secret evidence. By law, these spouses are “conditional residents,” not permanent residents, during their first 2 years of residence.

The same sort of equities apply to refugees. A Vietnamese refugee who fought on our side in Vietnam, who experienced years of re-education in Communist concentration camps, and who has now lived here for many years, but does not have permanent residence, would be subject to secret deportation with illegally obtained evidence. His only offense could be that he rescued a fellow soldier from our frontline by allowing him to pose as a relative.

There are also 14,000 Chinese students in this country, many of whom were activists in the democracy movement in China. They qualify for permanent residence, but they have not yet received their green cards. They could be subjected to this procedure.

There are 85,000 individuals whom the Immigration Service has allowed to remain in the United States because of special circumstances surrounding their cases. They may have American citizen children with disabilities requiring special attention that cannot be offered in their parents’ home country. These families have not been given permanent residence, but the courts have declared them “permanent residents under color of law.”

Some may argue that these are unlikely victims of this procedure. But there is nothing in this language that prevents immigrants and refugees with substantial ties to this country from being deported using secret evidence. Under this procedure, they may never know they are deported.

A long line of judicial decisions requires the protection of immigrants under the fifth amendment from due process violations in the deportation process.

The fifth amendment states that no person shall be “deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law.” The Supreme Court has consistently ruled that this protection means what it says, it extends to all persons within the United States, not just citizens.

As the Supreme Court stated in the Japanese Immigrant case in 1903, this court has never held, nor must we be understood, that administrative officers, when executing the provisions of a statute involving the liberty of persons, may disregard the fundamental principles that inhered in “due process of law” as understood at the time of the adoption of the Constitution.

In 1915, in Whitfield versus Hanges, the Court outlined the requirements of a fair deportation hearing, including the right to be notified of charges, to cross-examine witnesses, and to see the evidence and have fair opportunity to rebut it.

To underscore the gravity of deportation, the Supreme Court in 1921, in Ng Fung Ho versus White, observed that not only does deportation deprive a person of liberty, but “[I]t may result also in loss of both property and life; or of all that makes life worth living.” Again in 1948, in Tan versus Phelan, the Court characterized deportation as “a drastic measure and the equivalent of banishment or exile.”

In 1976, Mathews versus Diaz, the Court noted, “There are literally millions of aliens within the jurisdiction of the United States. The fifth amendment, as well as the 14th amendment, protects every one of these persons from deprivations of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.”

In Landon versus Plascencia in 1982, the Court stated that the interest of an immigrant facing expulsion from the United States “is, without question, a weighty one. She stands to lose the right to stay and live and work in this land of freedom. Further, she may lose the right to rejoin her immediate family, a right that ranks high among the interests of the individual.”

We are all concerned about addressing terrorism and expediting legitimate deportation cases. This bill before us contains a procedure in section 301 which permits our courts to handle classified evidence to decide the deportability of aliens suspected of terrorism.

At a minimum, other deportees should be given the same protections as terrorists when it comes to using secret evidence against them. For this reason, my amendment says that the use of evidence in other deportation settings must follow what is being proposed in this amendment. This means the evidence must be handled by designated Federal judges. And before the deportation proceeding is allowed to continue on the basis of the secret evidence, the judges must weigh the threat to America of the person, which opposes against the likely consequences of revealing the classified information. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 122

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, today I offer an amendment that establishes a clear standard of behavior for other countries must meet in order to be eligible to purchase military equipment from the United States.

It amends the Export Control Act by adding a section which states that no defense article or defense service may be sold or licensed for export to a country unless the President has certified to Congress that the country is cooperating fully with the United States, or taking adequate steps on its own, to help achieve U.S. antiterrorism objectives.

This amendment does recognize that certain transactions of military equipment do have a bearing on our national security, so it allows the President to waive the prohibition with respect to specific transactions if he determines that they are essential to the national security interests of the United States.

The United States is the leading exporter of military equipment in the world. In fiscal year 1994, the United States sold some $12.86 billion worth of defense equipment and services around the world. By and large, these exports serve the interests of the United States by helping to build up the security of our allies. Improving our allies’ abilities to defend themselves is one of the most effective ways we can advance and protect our own interests abroad.

It is not unreasonable to expect a certain level of cooperation from countries to whom we sell military equipment. Obviously cooperation in defense matters is taken into consideration, as it should be, because of the clear benefit it brings to United States security interests.

But our security these days is affected by other, less conventional problems. Today, terrorism poses a major threat to U.S. security interests, and to our way of life. Because of that, we must demand and expect cooperation from our allies to help us achieve our antiterrorism objectives. When we share our most advanced military technology with our allies, we should be able to expect full cooperation in these crucial areas.

For the most part, the commitment to combat terrorism is strong among our allies who purchase U.S. military equipment. Many of them know firsthand the scourge of terrorism, and have been deeply affected by it. Indeed, the State Department’s 1994 Patterns of Global Terrorism report describes some 321 international terrorist attacks in 1994 in Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin America, and the Middle East. Occasionally, however, we have been disappointed by the cooperation we have received in our antiterrorism efforts.

This amendment is designed to add an additional incentive for those states to cooperate with U.S. antiterrorism efforts. We need their full cooperation in: Apprehending, prosecuting, and extraditing suspected terrorists; sharing intelligence to deter terrorist attacks; pressuring state sponsors of terrorism to change their behavior; curbing private fundraising efforts for terrorist organizations within their country; and, taking actions to prevent or deter terrorist attacks. Where we have signed agreements and treaties, they should be fulfilled in both letter and spirit. Where we do not have such agreements, our allies should work with us to put them in place as quickly as practicable.

The threat of international terrorism demands that the civilized nations of the world band together to defend against those who would use violence for political ends. This amendment will help ensure that the United States gets the cooperation it needs from our allies to fight this threat.

Mr. BIDEN. For the sake of clarification, I would ask the Senator from California if the certification requirement in her amendment means that a separate certification of a country’s cooperation with U.S. antiterrorism objectives must accompany every notification of an arms sale sent to Congress under section 36(b) of the Arms Export Control Act.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. No, the certification procedure is designed to require certification of each country that purchases defense articles or defense services, or has them licensed for export, from the United States in a given fiscal year. Most certifications will probably be provided at the beginning of the fiscal year, but a country that is not certified at that time may, if eligible, be certified at any time prior to the first sale or export license to it in the fiscal year.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment en bloc.

The amendments (Nos. 1218 and 1225) were agreed to.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

*Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, we are perilously close to finishing all but the habeas amendments. The Nunn-Biden amendment on posse comitatus is either going to be debated very shortly or accepted very shortly. That leaves, I think, after the vote on the Specter-Simon amendment, we will know then on the outcome of that vote, whether or not the Abraham amendment is still relevant. If Specter-Simon prevails, as I hope it does, then the Abraham amendment would be dropped. The only amendment I am aware of on the Republican side which we do not have an order on at this point we thought we did—was the Brown amendment. If Senator Brown is available, we are ready to enter into a very short time agreement and debate that amendment tonight. Mr. DOLE. Have the yeas and nays been ordered? Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second. The yeas and nays were ordered. Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, again I think we are going to know in a moment whether we will need to debate the Nunn-Biden posse comitatus amendment in the meantime while that is being ironed out. I ask my friend from Utah whether or not Senator Brown is available to introduce his amendment. I think that is the only thing we have left. Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the Lieberman amendment numbered 1215. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second. The yeas and nays were ordered. Mr. HATCH. I understand that Senator Brown is on his way over, and I will chat with him. Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I say to the majority leader that I think when we drop the Brown amendment and we dispose of the Nunn-Biden amendment, that other than habeas amendments, there is nothing left. It is my understanding that the leader, at an appropriate time this evening, if we complete action on Nunn-Biden and Brown, would move to vitiate the cloture vote tomorrow. I would assure the Senator, as well, we would withdraw all 5 amendments relating to firearms or ammunition. They would not be considered on this bill. Mr. DOLE. I have not discussed that with the Democrat leader. That would be my intention. They would be germane, in any event. No need to have a cloture vote. So, if we can complete action on all except habeas corpus, we would like to start fairly early in the morning on the habeas corpus amendments. Is there anybody who has amendments? I guess Senator Brown is the only one on this side? Mr. BIDEN. Senator Brown is the only one who has a nonhabeas amendment on the Republican side and the only one we have left on the Democratic side, as I understand it, is Nunn-Biden. Mr. HATCH. You have Abraham as well. Mr. BIDEN. The Senator points out the Abraham amendment is still on the Republican side, and I have discussed this with Senator Abraham and he points out to me that if Specter-Simon passes, then his amendment is redundant, is no longer necessary. It is only if Specter-Simon fails would it still go to the Abraham amendment, in which case we could accept the Abraham amendment. Mr. DOLE. So we are waiting on Senator Brown. Mr. BIDEN. And waiting on a decision by our Republican colleagues whether or not they can accept the Nunn-Biden posse comitatus amendment. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah... Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll. Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. AMENDMENT NO. 1229 WITHDRAWN Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I am very grateful to our distinguished Senator from Colorado, Senator Brown. Because, as much as he likes his amendment regarding terrorist countries, it has hit a snag where it has had an objection from both sides of the aisle. In the interests of moving this bill forward he has authorized me to withdraw that amendment at this time. I ask unanimous consent the Brown amendment be withdrawn. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The amendment (No. 1229) was withdrawn. Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, let me say I know he has decided not to run again, and this will probably hurt his reputation, but it is a pleasure to work with the Senator from Colorado. He is always reasonable. I thank him very much. As Senator Eastland once said to me, “I will come and campaign for you or against you, whichever will help the most.” Maybe if I said something negative it would help more but I really mean it, I thank him for his cooperation. This is the second time he has moved this legislation along. I truly appreciate it. I want to correct something I said earlier. I referred to the posse comitatus amendment as the Nunn-Biden amendment. That is not accurate. This is not a minor point. It is the Nunn-Thurmond-Biden amendment. Senator Thurmond has been a leader in this issue and I did not mean in any way to leave him out. It is the Nunn-Thurmond-Biden amendment. I yield the floor. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia. AMENDMENT NO. 1213 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1199 (Purpose: To authorize the Attorney General to assist law enforcement officials to provide, Department of Defense assistance for the Attorney General in emergency situations involving biological or chemical weapons of mass destruction) Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, I am going to start with the explanation of the amendment which I hope we will be voting on this evening. If the majority leader would like to interrupt at any point in time, I will be other things that will be coming up, I will be glad to yield and I invite that. I am pleased to propose on behalf of myself, Senator THURMOND, Senator Dole, and Senator Warner, an amendment to address a significant gap in the law regarding the use of chemical and biological weapons of mass destruction in criminal terrorist activities. The Armed Forces have special capabilities to counter nuclear, biological, and chemical weapons. They are trained and equipped to detect, suppress, and contain these dangerous materials in hostile situations. Most of our law enforcement officials do not have anything like the capability that our military does in these unique circumstances. At the present time the statutory authority to use the Armed Forces in situations involving the criminal use of these weapons of mass destruction extends only to nuclear materials. In my opinion, chemical and biological attacks on the United States, terrorist attacks, are much more likely than nuclear, although all would be horrible. Section 831 of title 18, United States Code, permits the Armed Forces to assist in dealing with crimes involving nuclear materials when the Attorney General and the Secretary of Defense jointly determine that there is an emergency situation requiring military assistance. There is no similar authority to use the special expertise of the Armed Forces in circumstances involving the use of chemical and biological weapons of mass destruction. In the wake of the devastating bombing of the Federal building in Oklahoma City, with its tragic loss of life and disruption of governmental functions, I think it is appropriate to reexamine Federal counterterrorism capabilities, including the role of the Armed Forces. I would also add that the Tokyo chemical attack in the subway is the kind of situation that very well could happen, also, in this country. For more than 100 years, military participation in civilian law enforcement activities has been governed by the Posse Comitatus Act. The Act precludes military participation in the prosecution of laws expressly authorized by Congress. That landmark legislation was the result of congressional concern about increasing use of the military for law enforcement purposes in post-Civil War era, particularly terms of enforcing the Reconstruction laws in the South in and suppressing labor activities in the North.

There are about a dozen express statutory exceptions to the Posse Comitatus Act, which permit military participation in arrests, searches, and seizures. Some of the exceptions, such as the permissible use of the armed forces to protect the discoverer of guano islands, reflect historical anachronisms. Other authorities to suppress domestic disorders when civilian officials cannot do so, have continuing relevance—as shown most recently in the 1992 Los Angeles riots.

It is important to remember that the Act does not bar all military assistance to civilian law enforcement officials, even in the absence of a statutory exception. The Act has long been interpreted as not restricting use of the armed forces to prevent loss of life or want of property in event of sudden and unexpected circumstances. In addition, the Act has been interpreted to apply only to direct participation in civilian law enforcement activities—that is, arrest, search, and seizure activities. But the loan of equipment, have been viewed as not within the prohibition against using the armed forces to execute the law.

Over the years, the administrative and judicial interpretation of the Act, however, created a number of gray areas, including issues involving the provision of export advice during investigations and the use of military equipment and facilities during ongoing law enforcement operations.

During the late 1970's and early 1980's, I became concerned that the lack of clarity was inhibiting useful direct assistance, particularly in counterdrug operations. I initiated legislation, which was enacted in 1981 as chapter 18 of title 10, United States Code, to clarify the rules governing military support to civilian law enforcement agencies.

We not have, as a matter of fact, and have had since 1961 military ships in the Caribbean—and other places for that matter where we have heavy drug traffic—where the military, the Navy, has the right to intercept vessels, but the power of arrest is reserved for Coast Guard personnel that are on the Navy ships. That purpose suggests we have been very careful about how we approach this matter.

The administration has requested legislation that would permit direct military participation in specific law enforcement activities related to chemical and biological weapons of mass destruction, similar to the exception under current law that permits direct military participation in the enforcement of the laws concerning improper use of nuclear materials.

We had a hearing under the auspices of Senator HATCH and Senator BIDEN. During that hearing it came to the attention of the committee—and the Armed Forces Committee was also invited to participate in that hearing, and I was there—that, although the overall direction that the President was laying out seemed to me to make sense, I thought the statute that had been written properly drawn. It used the words “technical assistance” without defining that term properly; used the term “disabling and disarming” but precluded the power of arrest.

In effect, I reached the conclusion that the military would be in a position where they were basically able to disable and disarm, which would include the use of force, and perhaps even the use of fatal force, but not have the power of arrest, which did not make sense.

I think the ultimate depriving of civil liberties is when you kill someone. If you can kill them without arresting them you are not really protecting property. So we decided to carefully reconstruct that statute to try to deal with chemical and biological weapons, and we worked diligently to do that, and are continuing to work on possible amendments that continues on both sides. Senator HATCH has participated in that. Senator THURMOND and I have worked hard on it. Senator BIDEN has participated, and others. Senator Dole and others have been involved in trying to make sure we know exactly what we are doing. I hope we can work it out this evening. But, if not, we will certainly have to vote on the matter at some point.

In my judgment, Mr. President, the question of whether we should create a further exception for chemical and biological weapons should be addressed in light of the two enduring themes reflected in the history and practice of the Posse Comitatus Act and related statutes.

First, the strong and traditional reluctance of the American people to permit any military intrusion into civilian affairs.

Second, the concept that any exceptions to the Posse Comitatus Act should be narrowly drawn to meet specific needs that cannot be addressed by civilian law enforcement authorities and that pose a grave danger to the American people.

As I previously mentioned, these issues were examined at a hearing before the Judiciary Committee on May 10, led by the chairman of the Committee, Senator HATCH, and the ranking minority member, Senator BIDEN. At their invitation, I participated in the hearing, and I am grateful for the courtesies extended to me.

At the hearing, we heard from former Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, and from current representatives of the Departments of Justice and of Defense. I was solicited to hear the hearing, five major themes emerged:

First, we should be very cautious about establishing exceptions to the Posse Comitatus Act, which reflects enduring principles concerning historic separation between civilian and military functions in our democratic society.

Second, exceptions to the Posse Comitatus Act should be centered on the purposes of using the armed forces to routinely supplement civilian law enforcement capabilities with respect to ongoing, continuous law enforcement problems.

Third, exceptions may be appropriate when law enforcement officials do not possess the special capabilities of the Armed Forces in specific circumstances, such as the capability to counter chemical and biological weapons of mass destruction in a hostile situation.

Fourth, any statute which authorizes military assistance should be narrowly drawn to address with specific criteria to ensure that the authority will be used only when senior officials, such as the Attorney General and Secretary of Defense, through the Attorney General, determine that there is an emergency situation which can be effectively addressed only with the assistance of military forces.

Fifth, any assistance which authorizes military assistance should not place artificial constrains on the actions military officials may take that might compromise their safety or the success of the operation.

In other words, Mr. President, as a result of that hearing, I came to the conclusion that in this area we ought to set a very high threshold for participation by the military and define those terms very carefully. Once the military is involved and, for example, they have on chemical gear, they are in a very difficult situation. Law enforcement may not even be able to be on the scene because of the heavy presence of chemical or biological agents. Once that happens, we do not want to put our 19-, 20-, 21-, 22-, 23-, 24- or 25-year-olds out there without having enough authority to go ahead and do the job.

So we have tried to draft this authority with a very high threshold for any involvement of this military and to make that authority very limited, very carefully drawn. Once they are involved, then we want to give the military personnel authority to protect themselves and to take action as required by the circumstances, the emergency type of circumstances we are talking about.

The amendment that Senator THURMOND, Senator BIDEN and I are sponsoring has been drafted to reflect the traditional purposes of the Posse Comitatus Act and the limited nature of the exceptions to this Act.

Under the amendment, the Attorney General may request DoD assistance to enforce the prohibitions concerning biological and chemical weapons of mass destruction in an emergency situation. The Secretary of Defense may provide assistance if there is a joint determination by the Secretary of Defense and the Attorney General that there is an emergency situation, and the Secretary of Defense determines that the provision of such assistance will not adversely affect military preparedness.

Military assistance could be provided under the amendment only if the Attorney General and the Secretary of Defense jointly determine that each of the following five conditions is present:

First, that the situation involves a biological or chemical weapon of mass destruction.

Second, that the situation poses a serious threat to the interests of the United States.

Third, that civilian law enforcement expertise is not readily available to counter the threat posed by the biological or chemical weapon of mass destruction.

Fourth, that Department of Defense special capabilities and expertise are needed to counter the threat posed by the biological or chemical weapon of mass destruction.

Fifth, that enforcement of the law would be seriously impaired if the DoD assistance were not provided.

The types of assistance that could be provided during an emergency situation would involve operation of equipment to monitor, detect, contain, disable, or dispose of a biological or chemical weapon of mass destruction or elements of such a weapon. This includes the authority to search for and seize the weapons or elements of the weapons.

This authority must be given. I do not know of any way to avoid that because what you have to do is stop the possibility or the probability in some cases of massive death of American people.

The Attorney General and the Secretary of Defense would issue joint regulations defining the types of assistance that could be provided.

The regulations would also describe the actions that Department of Defense personnel may take in circumstances incidental to the provision of assistance under this section, including the collection of evidence. This would not include the power of arrest except in exigent circumstances or as otherwise authorized by law.

Now, that word “exigent” is one we are now considering, whether there are other words that would more precisely define the kind of circumstances we are talking about...

I repeat, Mr. President, there can be many circumstances, a subway, for instance, involving chemical agents, just like the situation in Tokyo, or a situation similar to that where chemical agents are present, where law enforcement people are not even able to go into the area, where the only people who can go into the area are the military.

In that situation, we do not want to put handcuffs on the military and say you are going into this dangerous situation but you cannot take steps necessary to protect not only your lives but the lives of the people who are in the area.

In such circumstances, the safety of the military personnel involved, and the safety of others, and the law enforcement mission cannot be compromised by precluding the military from exercising the power they need, including the use of force.

The amendment requires the Department of Defense to be reimbursed for assistance provided under this section in accordance with section 377 of title 10, the general statute governing reimbursement of the Department of Defense for law enforcement assistance.

This means that if DoD does not get a training or operational benefit substantially equivalent to DoD training, the DoD must be reimbursed.

Under the amendment, the functions of the Attorney General and the Secretary of Defense may be exercised, respectively, by the Deputy Attorney General and the Deputy Secretary of Defense, each of whom serves as the alter ego to the head of the Department concerned. These functions may be deleged to another official only if that official has been designated to exercise the general powers of the head of the agency. This would include, for example, an Under Secretary of Defense who has been designated to act for the Secretary in the absence of the Secretary and the Deputy.

Mr. President, I will not go into more detail at this time, but the limitations set forth in this amendment are designed to address the appropriate allocation of resources and functions within the Federal Government and are designed to avoid providing a basis for excluding evidence or challenging an indictment.

Current law contains offenses involving the unlawful use of nuclear and biological weapons. The amendment sets forth the administration’s proposal for a similar offense concerning the unlawful use of chemical weapons which is not now on the books.

Mr. President, this is a prudent and narrowly drafted amendment. It is consistent with the traditional separation of civilian and military functions and the exceptions for unusual and unique circumstances which require the special expertise of the Armed Forces to address serious threats to the national interest.

I might add there is an amendment that is incorporated in this amendment as it now stands, or it will stand when it is sent to the desk, proposed by the Senator from Maine [Mr. Cohen], basically saying that the Government should take every step possible to get the law enforcement community in a position where we can in the future reduce the need for using military personnel.

So we are not saying this is going to be here for all time. We are saying we need it now, and as the months go by there would be the goal in this amendment to reduce the need to rely as much on the military as we must necessarily rely on them now in the chemical and biological area where they do have extensive training and equipment and are virtually the only ones who are able to deal with certain circumstances that could be enormously dangerous to the American people.

Mr. President, I will be glad to yield the floor. I know the Senator from South Carolina, the cosponsor of this amendment, would like to be heard.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, as chairman of the Armed Services Committee of the Senate, I was pleased to work with Senator Nunn, the ranking member of the Armed Services Committee, along with Senators Hatch, Dole, Breaux, and Craig to draft this amendment.

The purpose of this amendment is to have military assistance available to help Federal law enforcement in emergency situations that involve chemical and biological weapons of mass destruction.

In 1982, the Congress passed and then President Reagan signed into law a bill to authorize military assistance in instances involving nuclear devices. I supported that bill and believe it is now appropriate to extend that law to cover chemical and biological weapons of mass destruction.

We have been careful to limit military assistance to circumstances that pose a serious threat to the interests of the United States and where civilian expertise is not readily available to provide the required assistance to counter the threat posed by the chemical and biological weapons of mass destruction.

Mr. President, I believe this amendment will provide valuable assistance to law enforcement to protect the American people should we face terrorists with chemical and biological weapons. We have been careful to include safeguards to ensure that the military is not involved in routine law enforcement.

I would encourage my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. BIDEN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, the amendment that the Senator from Georgia [Senator Nunn], and I have proposed would create a narrow exception to the Posse Comitatus Act in order to permit the use of the military to assist law enforcement in emergency situations involving chemical and biological weapons.

Before describing the amendment in detail, let me briefly review the origins of the Posse Comitatus Act and the existing exceptions to it.

The term "posse comitatus" means literally the "power of the county." Its roots go back to English common law, where the sheriff, obligated to defend the county against any of the king's enemies, was empowered to summon every person above 15 years old for this purpose.

The First Congress provided similar power to Federal marshals in 1789—authorizing the marshals to command all necessary assistance in the execution of their duty.

Three years later, Congress explicitly authorized marshals to use the militia in assisting their posse.

In the first half of the nineteenth century, the practice of using both the militia and regular military to assist law enforcement became commonplace.

Although whenever military personnel were called into service as a part of a posse, they were subordinated to civilian authority.

Following the Civil War, Federal troops were often used extensively in the South, as well as to quell labor unrest in the North.

Dissatisfaction with this practice led to pressure from Congress for explicit restrictions on the use of the military in law enforcement operations.

The result was the Posse Comitatus Act, enacted in 1878.

The Act is brief and straightforward:

Whoever, except in cases and under circumstances expressly authorized by the constitution or act of Congress, willfully uses the armed forces to assist law enforcement in violation of this act, shall be fined not more than $250,000 or imprisoned not more than two years, or both.

Over the past century, Congress has enacted numerous exceptions to this general principle.

Many of these exceptions are for emergency circumstances, or where the need for use of the military is obvious. For example, the law permits use of the military: to suppress insurrections; to protect foreign officials and official guests; to enforce the neutrality laws and customs laws; and to assist in investigations of murderers of Members of Congress or Cabinet.

Congress has also provided some less compelling exceptions to the Posse Comitatus Act.

For instance, the President is empowered to use the military: to protect certain Federal parks and timber on Federal land in Florida; to assist States in enforcing quarantines and health laws; and to remove any unlawful inclosures on public lands.

Most relevant to our present inquiry is an exception which permits the use of the military to assist law enforcement in countering the illegal possession or use of nuclear materials.

This provision, enacted in 1982, gives the military broad authority to assist in the enforcement of the law. The provision explicitly provides that the armed forces may be used to arrest persons and conduct searches and seizures.

The military has unique expertise concerning nuclear materials, which in my view would be impractical and expensive to duplicate in civilian law enforcement.

Should this Nation ever be faced with terrorists armed with nuclear materials—of whatever grade—I believe the Department of Justice and FBI should be able to draw on this expertise.

I hold a similar view of the President's request for analogous authority with regard to chemical and biological weapons.

The military's expertise with chemical and biological weapons give it special knowledge which would be impractical and expensive to duplicate in civilian law enforcement.

The provision we have introduced is not—not the proposal sent to us by the Administration.

Both Senator Nunn and I believed that, as drafted, the administration bill would have presented many practical problems.

Instead, we have drafted a new version which reads the following:

DESCRIPTION OF THE AMENDMENT

It permits the use of the military to assist law enforcement to respond to emergency situations involving biological or chemical weapons.

This assistance can only be provided if certain conditions are met: (1) civilian expertise is not readily available; (2) defense department assistance is needed; and (3) enforcement of the law would be seriously impaired if the Department of Defense assistance were not provided.

Finally, the amendment requires the Attorney General and the Secretary of Defense to joint issue regulations concerning the types of assistance that may be provided.

The provision permits the regulations to authorize arrest or search and seizure only in instances for the immediate protection of human life.

We share the concern of many of our colleagues about using the military to enforce the law.

And we do not want the military to have carte blanche to arrest suspects or engage in search or seizure.

But once called in to assist law enforcement, we do not want to create the ludicrous circumstance where a soldier called in to assist law enforcement stands immune where his safety—or the safety of others—is at risk.

Mr. President, the issue comes down to this: Do we want to authorize the limited use of the military to combat chemical and biological weapons terrorism, or do we want to spend scarce resources duplicating this capability in law enforcement?

Mr. President, I am under the impression that our distinguished Republican colleague is likely to accept this amendment. I hope that is the case.

Mr. CRAIG addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, let me thank Senator Thurmond and Senator Nunn for their cooperation in resolving some concerns in the posse comitatus amendment and the effort that they took in a most serious and appropriate way to cause the military to be involved in the areas of biological and chemical warfare and weaponry of mass destruction, that it might be applied against civilian populations in this country.

Many of us expressed some very real concern because of what has been debated here tonight, the very important separation of the military and civilian population which is rooted in our history and that we have cautiously and appropriately guarded throughout our country's existence with few exceptions.

And so it was with that background we watched this amendment most closely, and I must say that in the end I can now support it because of some changes that have been made which I think we can all be very comfortable with, and that is to narrow this to not allow arrests, to prohibit those but to allow action where there is the exception for the immediate protection of human life. We think that narrows it and properly defines it, clarifies it so it is not ambiguous and so that it can be interpreted in the appropriate way by the Attorney General and the Secretary of Defense in their joint responsibility in the issue of regulations concerning the implementation of the statute.

Mr. HATCH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I compliment the distinguished Senator from Georgia and the distinguished Senator from South Carolina for the extra efforts they have put into trying to resolve the problems on this posse comitatus issue.

Everybody knows I was not very enthusiastic about changing the emergency powers of the President or by changing the current posse comitatus law. But after having worked with these two great Senators, and seeing the compromises that have been worked out to try to resolve the problems with this issue that have existed in the minds of a number of Senators on the Senate floor, I am happy to say I believe we are in a position to accept the amendment, and if the distinguished Senator from Delaware is also in the same position, I think we can urge passage of this amendment at this time.

Mr. BIDEN. I would so urge, Mr. President. If I could have the attention of the Senator from Georgia, if he would send the amendment to the desk, I guess we can agree on it.
Mr. NUNN. I say to my friend from Delaware I have just taken the amendment to the desk, and it reflects all those changes that we worked out, and I would ask that the previous amendment not be called up but the one I just brought be called up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending Specher amendment is set aside for consideration of the amendment of the Senator from Georgia. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows.

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. NUNN], for himself, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. BIDEN, and Mr. WARNER, proposes an amendment numbered 1213.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 160, between lines 11 and 12, insert the following:

SEC. 901. AUTHORITY TO REQUEST MILITARY ASSISTANCE WITH RESPECT TO OFFENSES INVOLVING BIOLOGICAL AND CHEMICAL WEAPONS.

(a) BIOLOGICAL WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION.—Section 175 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(c)(1) MILITARY ASSISTANCE.—The Attorney General may request that the Secretary of Defense provide assistance in support of Department of Justice activities relating to the enforcement of this section in an emergency situation involving biological weapons of mass destruction. Such regulations shall also describe the assistance that may be provided under this subsection. Such regulations shall not authorize arrest or any assistance in conducting searches and seizures that seek evidence related to violations of this section or the immediate protection of human life.

"(2) As used in this section, "biological weapon of mass destruction" means a circumstance involving biological weapons of mass destruction exists; and

"(b) CHEMICAL WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION.—The chapter 113B of title 18, United States Code, that relates to terrorism, is amended by inserting after section 3232a the following:

"§ 3232b. Use of chemical weapons

"(a) OFFENSE.—A person who without lawful authority uses, or attempts or conspires to use, a chemical weapon—

"(1) against a national of the United States while such national is outside of the United States;

"(2) against any person within the United States; or

"(3) against any property that is owned, leased or used by the United States or by any department or agency of the United States, whether the property is within or outside of the United States, shall be imprisoned for any term of years or for life, and if death results, shall be punished by death or imprisoned for any term of years or for life.

"(b) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) the term "national of the United States" has the meaning given in section 101(a)(22) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101); and

"(2) the term "chemical weapon" means any weapon that is designed to cause widespread death or serious bodily injury through the inhalation or inhaled absorption of toxic or poisonous chemicals or their precursors.

(2) CIVILIAN EXPERTISE.—The Attorney General may request that the Secretary of Defense provide assistance in support of Department of Justice activities relating to the enforcement of this section in an emergency situation involving chemical weapons of mass destruction. Such regulations shall not authorize arrest or any assistance in conducting searches and seizures that seek evidence related to violations of this section, except for the immediate protection of human life.

(3) The Attorney General may request reimbursement as a condition for providing assistance under this subsection in accordance with section 377 of title 10.

(4) The Secretary of Defense shall jointly issue regulations concerning the types of assistance that may be provided under this subsection. Such regulations shall also describe the assistance that Department of Defense personnel may take in circumstances incident to the provision of assistance under this subsection. Such regulations shall not authorize arrest or any assistance in conducting searches and seizures that seek evidence related to violations of this section or the immediate protection of human life.

(5) The Secretary of Defense may exercise the authority under this subsection only to the extent otherwise provided by the Secretary of Defense, the Deputy Secretary of Defense, or any Assistant Secretary to whom delegated has been designated by the Attorney General to act for, and to exercise the general powers of the Secretary.

(6) The Attorney General and the Secretary of Defense shall jointly issue regulations concerning the types of assistance that may be provided under this subsection.

(7) The Secretary of Defense shall provide assistance in support of Department of Justice activities relating to the enforcement of this section in an emergency situation involving chemical weapons of mass destruction. Such regulations shall not authorize arrest or any assistance in conducting searches and seizures that seek evidence related to violations of this section, except for the immediate protection of human life.

(8) The Attorney General and the Secretary of Defense may exercise the authority under this subsection only to the extent otherwise provided by the Attorney General, the Deputy Secretary of Defense, or any Assistant Secretary to whom delegated has been designated by the Attorney General to act for, and to exercise the general powers of the Secretary.

(2) The Attorney General may request that the Secretary of Defense provide assistance in support of Department of Justice activities relating to the enforcement of this section in an emergency situation involving chemical weapons of mass destruction. Such regulations shall not authorize arrest or any assistance in conducting searches and seizures that seek evidence related to violations of this section, except for the immediate protection of human life.

(3) The Attorney General or an Assistant Attorney General or an Associate Attorney General to whom delegated has been designated by the Attorney General to act for, and to exercise the general powers of the Secretary.

(4) The Attorney General and the Secretary of Defense shall jointly issue regulations concerning the types of assistance that may be provided under this subsection. Such regulations shall also describe the assistance that Department of Defense personnel may take in circumstances incident to the provision of assistance under this subsection. Such regulations shall not authorize arrest or any assistance in conducting searches and seizures that seek evidence related to violations of this section, except for the immediate protection of human life.
(A) ninety days after the date of enactment of this Act, a report describing the respective policy functions and operational roles of Federal agencies in countering the threat posed by the use or potential use of biological and chemical weapons of mass destruction within United States;

(B) one year after the date of enactment of this Act, a report updating the information provided in the reports submitted pursuant to subparagraphs (A) and (B), including measurements taken pursuant to paragraph (1); and

(C) three years after the date of enactment of this Act, a report updating the information provided in the reports submitted pursuant to subparagraphs (A) and (B), including measurements taken pursuant to paragraph (1).

(d) CHERNOBYL AMENDMENT.—The chapter analysis for chapter 113B of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 2333a the following:

"2332b. Use of chemical weapons."

(e) USE OF WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION.—Section 2332(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting "without law enforcement agencies."

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I urge acceptance of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment. So the amendment (No. 1213) was agreed to.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. BIDEN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, it appears to me that we are down to the votes on Senator Lieberman’s amendment and the Specter-Simon amendment. We are prepared to vote.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, that is my understanding. I have been informed by staff of the Democratic leadership it would be helpful if we did not start the vote for about 5 minutes, so we give people enough notice that we are about to start the vote.

Mr. HATCH. Why not start the vote and add 5 minutes to it. Start it at 9:45.

Mr. BIDEN. For the purpose of parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President. Have the yeas and nays been ordered on both amendments?

Mr. BIDEN. And the first amendment will be?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Specter amendment.

Mr. BIDEN. The second one is Lieberman and vote on the Specter amendment will start at 9:45? I ask unanimous consent that the vote on the Specter amendment begin at 9:45.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote on the Lieberman amendment be immediately following that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BIDEN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the question occurs on agreeing to amendment No. 1250, offered by the Senator from Pennsylvania, Mr. SPECTER. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. LOTT. I announce that the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI], and the Senator from Texas [Mr. GRAMM] are necessarily absent.

Mr. FORD. I announce that the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. CONRAD], and the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. PAYOR] are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 77, nays 19, as follows:
Midwest. In fact, in 1993 a group of Palestinian immigrants, linked to the infamous Abu Nidal terrorist organization, actively raised money here for terrorism abroad. Surprisingly, this terrorist cell extended from St. Louis, MO, to Pontiac, IL, to Racine, WI.

After their arrest, three of the men were accused of plotting to blow up the Israeli Embassy in Washington. They admitted to smuggling money and information, buying weapons, and planning terrorist activities. In July 1994 they pleaded guilty to Federal Racketeering charges.

Given these growing threats to American lives, both at home and abroad, it makes sense for Congress to create a comprehensive Federal criminal statute to be used against domestic and international terrorists, and to choke off fundraising by terrorist organizations. Such legislation is not a panacea but, by clarifying and elaborating on our current laws it could provide the tools to fight with more effective tools in their fight to protect us.

Unfortunately, while S. 735 accomplishes some of these laudable goals, it moves far beyond areas directly affecting terrorism and into issues—such as habeas reform—that fray the consensus that Americans expect from us when their safety is at risk. Now, let us be clear: Many criminal appeals are frivolous, and the often convoluted habeas process is in need of reform. But habeas reform, like any other divisive issue should be thoroughly debated on its own—not as a last minute attachment to a 160-page terrorism proposal.

Moreover, attaching habeas reform to this bill opens the door to other issues that should be considered elsewhere. For example, others seem encouraged to offer amendments relating to arms sales, perjury, identification cards, and immigration. If these amendments are attached, this bill will become a Christmas tree. And if these proposals are accepted, then I will consider offering my amendment to address the Supreme Court’s concerns regarding gun free school zones. After all, this is one bill that will certainly be signed into law quickly.

Beyond these concerns regarding habeas corpus reform, I also have some substantive concerns regarding the core antiterrorism provisions of this bill, just as I had with the Clinton bill. Specifically, the provisions of S. 735 may undermine the due process rights of legal resident aliens. Specifically, these aliens should have some right to review—and challenge—evidence that the Government has marshalled against them. After all, they are caught up in a Kafkaesque procedure that takes place entirely behind closed doors. In the words of Benjamin Franklin, “They that give up essential liberty to obtain a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety.”

In closing, Mr. President, we should not use this antiterrorism bill as a vehicle for moving a partisan agenda forward, destroying a rare consensus in the process. Moreover, in fighting terrorism we must not sacrifice the Constitution that we have sworn to uphold. Therefore, I hope we agree to several amendments to address these problems, so that we may present the American people with legislation that strengthens our defenses against terrorism, without weakening our commitment to the Constitution.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I rise in support of S. 735, the Dole-Hatch Terrorism Prevention Act of 1995. I thank Senator Hatch for introducing this legislation. The provision in the bill my provision, which strengthens the protection of Federal computers against terrorism.

Mr. President, the Internet is a worldwide system of computers and computer networks that enables users to communicate and share information. The system is comparable to the worldwide telephone network. According to a Time magazine article, the Internet connects over 4.8 million host systems, including educational institutions, Government facilities, military bases, and commercial businesses. Millions of private individuals are connected to the Internet through their personal computers and modems.

Computer criminals have quickly recognized the Internet as a haven for criminal possibilities. During the 1980’s, the development and broad-based appeal of the personal computer sparked a period of dramatic technological growth. This has raised the stakes in the contest of the Internet and all computer systems.

Computer criminals know all the ways to exploit the Internet’s easy access, open nature, and global scope. From the safety of a telephone in a distant location, the computer criminal can anonymously access personal, business, and Government files. And because these criminals can easily gain access without disclosing their identities, it is extremely difficult to apprehend and successfully prosecute them.

Prosecution of computer criminals is complicated further by continually changing technology, lack of prece-
The President’s proposal also provides additional investigative tools for Federal law enforcement officials. These include a judicial order to review reports, telephone bills and other records in foreign counterintelligence investigations. Because these investigations are not always based on criminal offenses, it can be difficult for law enforcement to protect the Nation from gaining access to FBI files on international terrorists from gaining control of telephones and break into Government computers.

The article also mentioned that Government reports further reveal that foreign intelligence agencies and mercenary computer hackers have been breaking into America’s computers. For example, a hacker is now awaiting trial in San Francisco on espionage charges for cracking an Army computer system and gaining access to FBI files on former Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos. According to the 1993 Department of Defense report, such a threat is very real: “The nature of this changing motivation makes computer intruders’ skills high-interest targets for criminal elements and hostile adversaries.”

Mr. President, the September 1993 Department of Defense report added that, if hired by terrorists, these hackers could cripple the Nation’s telephone and other critical public health and safety problems, and cause serious economic shocks.” The hackers could bring an entire city to a standstill. The report states that, as the world becomes wired for computer networks, there is a greater threat that the networks will be used for spying and terrorism. In a 1992 report, the President’s National Security Telecommunications Advisory Committee warned, “known individuals in the hacker community have ties with adversarial organizations. Hackers frequently have international ties.”

Mr. President, section 527 of this bill will deter terrorist activity and enhance national security.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, the brutal and vicious bombing of the Federal building in Oklahoma City continues to tear at the Nation’s soul. We are still mourning the loss of so many innocent lives, and asking ourselves how anyone could act with such savagery. The toll from this terrible tragedy would have been even worse, if so many rescue workers and volunteers who had not acted so heroically. Their courageous and tireless efforts inspired the Nation. We should all take a minute to commend these heroes.

The many law enforcement officials who worked so hard on this case should also be commended. Their efficient apprehension of suspects and witnesses has impressed everyone. We can all be proud of their efforts.

As we continue to deal with this terrible tragedy—the deadliest terrorist attack on American soil—we must find ways to prevent such acts in the future. While no one will argue that we can end terrorism, we can take steps to deter terrorists, make it more difficult for them to kill and injure, and ensure that they are brought swiftly to justice.

The President deserves commendation for moving forcefully in that direction with a comprehensive proposal to crack down on terrorists. That proposal, introduced by the Congress shortly after the Oklahoma bombing, establishes new Federal offenses to ensure that terrorists do not escape through the gaps in current law. FBI director Louis Freeh explained the importance of closing these gaps in recent testimony before the Judiciary Committee.

The President’s proposal also provides additional investigative tools for Federal law enforcement officials. These include a judicial order to review reports, telephone bills and other records in foreign counterintelligence investigations. Because these investigations are not always based on criminal offenses, it can be difficult for law enforcement to proceed in certain cases.

Overall, the President’s proposal will help the Nation prevent terrorism and help bring terrorists to justice. The bombing in Oklahoma made clear just how vulnerable we all are to terrorism, and we ought to move this proposal forward in an efficient, bipartisan way.

To their credit, Senators DOLE and HATCH have incorporated most of the President’s proposal into the bill we are considering today. I commend them for negotiating with the democratic leadership and attempting to narrow differences.

However, there are a few important Presidential proposals that are not in the Republican bill. The President has had access to judicial reports, telephone bills and other records in foreign counterintelligence investigations. Because these investigations are not always based on criminal offenses, it can be difficult for law enforcement to proceed in certain cases.

However, there are a few important Presidential proposals that are not in the Republican bill. The President has had access to judicial reports, telephone bills and other records in foreign counterintelligence investigations. Because these investigations are not always based on criminal offenses, it can be difficult for law enforcement to proceed in certain cases.

Overall, the President’s proposal will help the Nation prevent terrorism and help bring terrorists to justice. The bombing in Oklahoma made clear just how vulnerable we all are to terrorism, and we ought to move this proposal forward in an efficient, bipartisan way.

To their credit, Senators DOLE and HATCH have incorporated most of the President’s proposal into the bill we are considering today. I commend them for negotiating with the democratic leadership and attempting to narrow differences.

I would ask whether the chairman agrees with my assessment of the jurisdictional situation and whether he would be willing to stipulate as much for the record?

Mr. HATCH. I understand and appreciate the concern of the chairman of the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation has always provided strong leadership on air passenger safety and security issues. Let me make it clear that my friend from South Dakota is absolutely correct. Aviation security is not in the jurisdiction of the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation. It is not my intention that this amendment will affect in any way that committee's jurisdiction over airline security matters in the future.

Mr. PRESSLER. I thank my friend from Utah for clarifying this point. Having put my jurisdictional concern to rest, I join in supporting the amendment and urge my colleagues to support it. We must travel in the same direction to do what is right for foreign carriers should have the same level of protection they have when traveling on U.S. passenger carriers. Moreover, U.S. passenger carriers should not be put at a competitive disadvantage vis-a-vis foreign competitors whose relaxed security standards are less expensive.

Mr. HATCH. I thank the chairman. I very much appreciate his support for this amendment and thank him for agreeing to proceed to its consideration.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, yesterday the Senate voted 90 to 0 to approve an amendment I authored to the counterterrorism legislation. Because of the importance of this amendment, I want to clarify its intent and language.

This amendment makes it easier for law enforcement officials to trace the origins of bombs used for violent or criminal purposes. The legislation specified that the Secretary of the Treasury would conduct a study within 12 months on the use of taggants in all explosive materials, including black or smokeless powder. Once that study is completed, the Treasury Department must enforce the use of taggants in explosive materials within 6 months, depending on the study's findings and other factors. In addition, this amendment instructs the Treasury Department to also study ways of making common chemicals, such as fertilizer, inert in explosive uses.

This amendment exempts putting taggants in black or smokeless gun powder when that powder is used for small arms ammunition, but bullets—an exemption that already exists under current law. In addition, black or smokeless powder used in black powder ammunition for recreational purposes is also exempted from this amendment. The amendment does allow for the use of taggants in black or smokeless powder produced for sale in large quantities or for other uses.

I want to clarify that this amendment extends the existing exemption under current law. Under sections 845 (a)(4) and (5) of Title 18, United States Code, small arms ammunition and antique weapons used for recreational purposes are exempt from all explosive regulations, except for a few specific circumstances. This amendment simply reiterates and reinforces these current exemptions.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, it is my understanding, after visiting with the managers, that the only amendments left are habeas corpus amendments.

I want to reach time agreements on both sides of the aisle for their hard work and cooperation for the last 6 hours, and also the Democratic leader, Senator DASCHELLE, for his cooperation.

So we are to the habeas corpus amendments. We disposed of virtually everything, 80, 90 amendments. We are down to about six, five on the Democratic side and one on the Republican side.

I think we have agreed that we come in at 9:30, have 15 minutes of morning business, and at 9:45 we are on the bill. And Senator BIDEN will bring up the habeas corpus Federal prisoners, No. 1217, with 30 minutes of debate equally divided.

Then there would be a vote at 10:15 which would accommodate two Senators who are going to the Base Closure Commission, and one Senator who has someone in the hospital. Then we would proceed to the remaining amendments, and if possible stack all of those votes so we can complete action probably sometime like 1 o'clock. We would have votes on those, plus final passage, unless there is a motion to reconsider a vote, or something like that.

I think that is satisfactory. I wish to check with Senators.

So we will proceed on that basis.

ORDERS FOR WEDNESDAY, JUNE 7, 1995

Mr. DOLE. I would ask unanimous consent that the Senate convenes tomorrow at the hour of 9:30 a.m., with 15 minutes of morning business, 10 minutes to the Senator from Louisiana, Senator BREAUX; that at 9:45 we return to the consideration of S. 735, and that the amendment No. 1217, to which the Federal prisons, be in order, 30 minutes equally, controlled by the managers on each side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. And then we will try to work down to the time limits on the following amendments. I think we will pretty much stick to the times we have pointed out here.

I would also ask, since we have completed action on every amendment that has been affected by cloture, that the cloture motion filed yesterday be voided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. As I indicated earlier, there is no reason for a cloture vote because we have taken care of all the amendments that might have been affected by invoking cloture with the exception of five so-called gun or gun-related amendments which have been or will be withdrawn.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, if the leader will yield, each of the authors of the gun amendments has agreed to withdraw their amendments, and I am authorized to do that and I would do that at this moment if that is appropriate.

There are five amendments: Bradley, Lautenberg, Kohl, Levin, and Kerry of Massachusetts. Each had amendments. All there was an amendment which we never intended on bringing up on guns, and a second Lautenberg amendment. We were not going to do those anyway.

To put it another way, Mr. President, whatever there will be no gun amendments offered from the Democratic side. The only amendments that would be in order are the habeas corpus amendments that have been referenced by the leader already.

Mr. DOLE. Right. That would be Biden No. 1224, Biden No. 1216, Biden No. 1217, Levin No. 1245, Gaham of Florida No. 1242, Kyl No. 1211, and then there is the managers' amendment.

Mr. BIDEN. Yes. And that would not be a gun amendment.

Mr. President, that is correct. They would be the only amendments that would be in order. So there is no intention to raise any gun issue.

Mr. HATCH. I think we have agreed that we come in at 9:30, have 15 minutes of morning business, and at 9:45 we are on the bill. And Senator BIDEN will bring up the habeas corpus Federal prisoners, No. 1217, with 30 minutes of debate equally divided.

Mr. DOLE. Again, let me thank the managers and the Democratic leader, Senator BIDEN and Senator HATCH, Senator DASCHELLE, and also thank the President and Pat Griffin at the White House, who has been helpful throughout the day.
MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Thomas, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

REPORT ON NUCLEAR PROLIFERATION—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 54

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

To the Congress of the United States:

WILLIAM J. CLINTON.

By Mr. LEVIN (for himself, Mr. NUNN, and Mr. INOUYE):

S. 887. A bill to prohibit false statements to Congress, to clarify congressional authority to obtain truthful testimony, and for States of Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions

By Mr. D’AMATO (for himself and Mr. SARBANES):

S. 883. A bill to amend the Federal Credit Union Act to enhance the safety and soundness of federally insured credit unions, to protect the National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

The Credit Union Reform and Enhancement Act

Mr. D’AMATO. Mr. President, I have always strongly supported credit unions. But I am disturbed by the increasingly risky activities of some of our Nation’s largest credit unions. Speculative investments by these large credit unions have already caused millions of dollars of losses—losses that have been passed on to smaller credit unions.

Congress, the National Credit Union Administration [NCUA] and credit unions must work together to preserve the safety and soundness of the credit union industry—an industry primarily consisting of small, healthy credit unions that avoid such speculative investments.

Therefore, with my distinguished ranking minority member—Senator SARBANES—I am introducing today the Credit Union Reform and Enhancement Act. This bill would strengthen the credit union movement by protecting smaller credit unions and the taxpayer-backed National Credit Union Share Insurance Fund (“Share Insurance Fund”) from losses caused by high risk activities.

Mr. President, let me explain why I have been—and remain—one of the strongest supporters and defenders of the credit union movement.

Credit unions have a special character. Unlike banks and thrifts, credit unions are cooperative not-for-profit associations in which members, who are the owners, a common bond, deposit funds, and obtain credit.

Credit unions also have a unique mission. Credit unions were created in the early 20th century specifically to provide credit to people of smaller means and to promote thrift among their members and the early credit union philosophy was closely connected with moral and humanitarian goals.

Today, many credit unions remain committed to these lofty goals. For example, the Residents Community Development Credit Union in Binghamton, NY provides vital financial services to the residents of three low-income housing communities. In Manhattan, the Lower East Side People’s Federal Credit Union offers savings accounts, credit card, and deposit boxes to the homeless, in addition to providing more traditional financial services to more than 2,000 lower income residents.

Finally, credit unions generally have avoided high risk activities. As a result, the financial health of most credit unions is very good. Capital at the Nation’s 12,000 federally insured credit unions is at a record high of 10.4 percent, and the Share Insurance Fund has—which is the maximum possible under the Federal Credit Union Act.

Mr. President, because of my commitment to the credit union movement, I am very disturbed by the increasingly risky activities of a few large credit unions. High risk investments recently caused the largest failure by a credit union in American history—the $1.5 billion failure of Capital Corporate Federal Credit Union [Cap Corp].

Cap Corp invested almost 70 percent of its total assets—over $1 billion—in highly interest rate sensitive derivatives, called collateralized mortgage obligations [OMOs]. As interest rates rose during 1994, the market value of these CMO’s dropped steeply. When Cap Corp was finally taken over by the NCUA, the market value of its investments had dropped by over $100 million.

The failure of Cap Corp is particularly disturbing because it was a corporate credit union—a special type of credit union that serves other credit unions, not individuals. Federally insured credit unions invest a significant portion of their assets in large corporate credit unions—over $24 billion as of December 31, 1994. The failure of a corporate credit union can result in the loss of these funds and the domino-like failure of many smaller credit unions. Due to Cap Corp’s failure, for example, over 250 credit unions will lose almost $25 million.

Mr. President, corporate credit unions were created to provide liquidity and sound investment advice to smaller credit unions. However, some corporate credit unions are increasingly investing taxpayer-backed credit union funds in high risk securities, and the potential losses are mounting. At the Senate Banking Committee’s hearings on the Cap Corp failure, for example, we learned that:

Corporate credit unions reported unrealized investment losses in 1994 totaling about $900 million.

While some of those unrealized losses were quite small, others amounted to between 19 and 40 percent of total capital. One corporate credit union had unrealized losses that were 77 percent of its total capital.

Like Cap Corp, some other corporate credit unions have invested heavily in CMO’s that have declined in market value. As of December 31, 1994, 23 corporate credit unions reported aggregate CMO investments with a book value of over $8 billion. That is equal to about 24 percent of total corporate assets and 32 percent of total corporate capital.

Some of these corporate credit unions have much higher than average concentrations of CMO’s. For example, three corporate credit unions held more than 40 percent of their assets in CMO’s and four others held between 20 and 32 percent of their assets in CMO’s.

It is also clear from testimony at the Banking Committee’s hearings that the NCUA’s supervision and regulation of corporate credit unions is seriously deficient. The NCUA should have recognized sooner that a problem existed at Cap Corp and should have taken prompt corrective action. However, the NCUA reviewed Cap Corp’s records in September 1994—and prior to its failure—and did not discover any serious problems. Shockingly, after that review, Cap Corp’s rating remained a “1”—the highest rating possible for credit unions.

Mr. President, these developments are very disturbing to Members of Congress, the National Credit Union Administration [NCUA] and I are introducing the Credit Union Reform and Enhancement Act [CURE]. This bill would grant the NCUA limited powers to prevent significant risks to credit unions, the Share Insurance Fund and, ultimately, our Nation’s taxpayers from the increasingly risky investment practices of a few large credit unions.

First, CURE would limit the ability of federally insured, State-chartered credit unions to engage in certain high-risk activities that are risked under Federal law. One important lesson of the savings and loan debacle was that federally insured, State-chartered institutions can, with broad and risky powers granted by State legislatures and regulators, pose serious risks to a Federal insurance fund.

Forty-three States currently grant credit unions broader and potentially riskier powers than those granted to federally chartered credit unions. For example, California allows credit unions to invest in Mexican bonds, and Arizona has liberalized its restrictions on credit union investments in real estate, with no set limits on such investments or purchases of real estate for rental income.

CURE would grant the NCUA the authority to limit such powers unless it believes they pose no significant risk to the Share Insurance Fund or unless the power was authorized pursuant to the laws of the chartering State and being utilized by at least one credit union on May 1, 1995. CURE would put in place a tripped wire against future high-risk activities. It would allow the NCUA to prevent losses from such activities—instead of reacting to those losses.
Second, CURE would prohibit federally insured credit unions from investing in nonfederally insured credit unions. Under current law, federally insured credit unions can, and do, invest in nonfederally insured credit unions that are not under the full authority of the NCUA.

Five of the forty-five corporate credit unions—some of the largest credit unions in the Nation—are outside the full supervisory and regulatory authority of the NCUA because they are not federally chartered or insured. A federally insured credit union can escape full Federal regulation by investing in one of these nonfederally insured credit unions.

CURE would bring all investments in corporate credit unions under the jurisdiction of the NCUA and, thus, would reduce the potential for appropriately risky investing that may put the Share Insurance Fund at risk.

Third, CURE would grant the NCUA the ability to place a federally insured, State-chartered credit union that is insolvent or bankrupt, after prior consultation with the State regulator. This bill would help protect the Share Insurance Fund, which would ultimately have the responsibility for any losses resulting from such a liquidation.

Under current law, the NCUA must wait until the State regulator closes the credit union and appoints the NCUA as the liquidating agent—often at a time when the liquidation process has already begun. The need for regulators to act quickly to seize control of failed financial institutions is well documented. During the savings and loan crisis, for example, institutions attempted to avoid insolvency and bankruptcy by making increasingly risky investments as losses from previous high-risk investments mounted.

Fourth, CURE would increase the NCUA’s ability to institute a timely conservatorship. Currently, the NCUA can be forced to wait 30 days before placing a federally insured, State-chartered credit union into conservatorship, if the State regulator does not approve of the conservatorship. This bill would eliminate the 30-day waiting period and simply require the NCUA to carry out prior consultation with the state regulator.

Because the health of a credit union can deteriorate rapidly, the NCUA must have the power to act quickly to limit losses to the Share Insurance Fund. Even brief delays in the implementation of Cap Corp’s conservatorship, for example, could have resulted in millions of dollars of additional losses. This bill would help to limit such losses.

Finally, CURE would update the terminology concerning corporate credit unions in the Federal Credit Union Act. It would remove outdated references to central credit unions, which once formed functions similar to corporate credit unions. CURE would also require the NCUA to establish limits on loans to a single borrower and to set minimum capital requirements. Since the NCUA has already set such standards by regulations, CURE would simply prevent the NCUA from eliminating those standards. Moreover, this legislation does not specify what these standards should be, so the NCUA would be free to adjust its current standards.

In sum, CURE would grant the NCUA limited powers to protect smaller credit unions and the Share Insurance Fund from losses caused by high-risk investing. If the NCUA determines that the losses to the NCUA are not extraordinary. Indeed, they are much more limited than the powers already granted to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) over federally insured, State-chartered banks and thrifts. The FDIC, for example, can close federally insured, State-chartered thrifts and banks even prior to insolvency or bankruptcy—when their capital is less than 2 percent.

Nevertheless, some will argue that this legislation would remove much authority from the NCUA at the expense of the States. It is important to remember, however, that State-chartered credit unions are only subject to this legislation if they voluntarily choose—or are required by their State legislatures—to have Federal insurance. If the States want broader powers for credit unions, they can establish their own insurance funds and allow State taxpayers to pay for State credit union excesses.

Most recognize that this legislation is a step in the right direction. The NCUA and the Government Accounting Office (GAO) strongly support this legislation, as does the Credit Union National Association (CUNA) and the National Association of Federal Credit Unions [NAFCU].

Like Senator SARBANES and I, they recognize that this legislation would strengthen the credit union movement. It would protect credit unions, the Share Insurance Fund and, ultimately, our Nation’s taxpayers from the high-risk activities of a few large credit unions.

Mr. President, I request unanimous consent that the full text of the bill and the letters of support from the NCUA, the GAO, CUNA, and NAFCU be included in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 883
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Credit Union Reform and Enforcement Act”.

SEC. 2. INSURED CREDIT UNION INVESTMENTS IN OTHER CREDIT UNIONS.
(a) AMENDMENTS TO SECTION 109.—Section 109(7) of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 U.S.C. 1765(7)) is amended—

(1) by striking subparagraph (G); and

(2) by redesignating subparagraphs (H) through (K) as subparagraphs (G) through (J), respectively;

(b) AMENDMENTS TO SECTION 205.—Section 205 of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 U.S.C. 1785) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(j) INSURED CREDIT UNION INVESTMENTS IN OTHER CREDIT UNIONS.—An insured credit union may invest in another credit union if the Board determines that the credit union is insolvent or bankrupt, in any such case, the Board shall have all of the rights, privileges, and powers specified in this section as applicable to the liquidation of Federal credit unions.”
SEC. 6. CONSULTATION FOR CONSERVATORSHIPS OF FEDERALLY INSURED STATE-CHARTERED CREDIT UNIONS.

Section 4(b)(2) of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 U.S.C. 1786(h)(2)) is amended to read as follows: ``(2) In the case of a State-chartered insured credit union, the authority conferred by paragraph (1) shall not be exercised without prior consultation with the appropriate State credit union supervisory authority.

NATIONAL CREDIT UNION ADMINISTRATION, ALEXANDRIA, VA, MAY 24, 1995.

Senator ALFONSE M. D’AMATO, Chairman, Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN D’AMATO: Thank you for giving me the opportunity to comment on your proposed legislation, the Credit Union Reform and Enhancement Act.

This bill will greatly strengthen NCUA’s ability to preserve the safety and soundness of federally-insured credit unions. You have my full support for its speedy enactment.

I also want to express my sincere thanks for your leadership in support of NCUA’s efforts to improve and strengthen both our supervisory efforts and our regulation of corporate credit unions. Your backing has been crucial to the progress we are making toward insuring a healthy and safe future for both corporate and natural person credit unions.

I look forward to continuing to work with you on this important legislation.

Sincerely,

NORMAN E. D’AMOURS,

Hon. ALFONSE M. D’AMATO,
Chairman, Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, U.S. Senate.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: This letter responds to your request for our views on proposed legislation entitled the “Credit Union Reform and Enhancement Act.” Overall, we believe that the bill would enhance the safety and soundness of federally insured credit unions and is consistent with the principles upon which credit unions were founded.

Section 2 of the bill would confine federally-insured credit unions’ investments in corporate credit unions to those that are federally regulated. This provision would bring all investments in corporate credit unions under the jurisdiction of the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA) and, thus, could reduce the potential for inappropriate risk investing that may put the Share Insurance Fund at risk. In our 1991 report, Credit Unions: Reforms for Ensuring Future Soundness (GAO/GGD–91–20), we made a similar recommendation, and we continue to support it.

Section 3 limits the powers of state-chartered credit unions. This provision, particularly in the area of so-called “nonconforming” investments, to those allowable to federally chartered credit unions. The concern is that certain investments, such as commercial bonds, could create undue risk. This provision would grant NCUA the authority to limit investment activities unless it believes they pose no significant risk to the Share Insurance Fund or unless the power was authorized pursuant to the laws of the chartering state and being utilized by at least one credit union. In our 1991 report, we recommended that NCUA should be authorized and required to compel a state credit union to follow federal regulations in any area in which powers go beyond those permitted federal credit unions and are considered to constitute a safety and soundness risk.

Section 4 updates terminology concerning corporate credit unions in the Federal Credit Union Act by removing outdated references to “central credit unions,” which often per- formed functions similar to those of corporate credit unions. The section also requires NCUA to establish limits on loans to a single obligor and to set minimum capital requirements. Our report made similar recommendations and we believe they remain valid.

Section 5 grants NCUA authority to place a federally insured, state-chartered credit union into liquidation after consulting with the state regulator. Currently, NCUA must wait until the state regulator closes the credit union and appoints NCUA as the liquidi- quating agent. This measure would help protect the Share Insurance Fund, because the Fund would ultimately be responsible for any losses resulting from such a liquidation.

We believe such powers are appropriate given NCUs’s responsibilities.

Section 6 imposes NCUA’s ability to institute a timely conservatorship. It does this by eliminating the requirement for NCUA to wait 30 days before placing a state-chartered credit union into conservatorship. In the event that the state regulator does not approve the conservatorship, this require- ment would be modified so that NCUA would need to carry out prior consultation with the state authority. Because financial institutions’ financial health can deteriorate rapidly in some circumstances, NCUA needs to have the power to expedite such a conservatorship to prevent losses to the Share Insurance Fund.

This enhanced authority contributes to that objective and we support the provision.

Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the opportu- nity to comment on your proposed legisla- tion. In the event you or your staff have further questions, please contact me at 202-512-8678.

Sincerely yours,

JAMES L. BOTHWELL,
Director, Financial Institutions and Markets Issues.

Hon. ALFONSE M. D’AMATO,
Chairman, Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN D’AMATO: On behalf of the Credit Union National Association (CUNA), I am writing to inform you that CUNA supports your proposed legislation, the Credit Union Reform and Enhancement Act. We would like to thank you and your staff for addressing many of the concerns that we had with the earlier draft.

We appreciate your efforts to improve the bill and hope there will be an additional opportunity to consider the provisions after it is introduced. In the end, we are confident that any credit union legislation reported by the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs will allow credit unions to retain legitimate business activities that do not threaten their safety and soundness.

I also thought you may be interested to know that we met recently with representa- tives of the National Credit Union Administration and the National Association of Fed- eral Credit Unions, who strongly agreed upon several possible regulatory relief amend- ments to the Federal Credit Union Act. Per our discussion with you last week, we look forward to working with these amend- ments or others to relieve credit unions of some of the unnecessary regulatory burden which inhibits their ability to fully serve their members.

Thank you again for your support of the credit union movement. We look forward to working together in the coming weeks on these issues and in the years to come on many more.

Sincerely,

CHARLES O. ZUVER,
Executive Vice President and Director, Governmental Affairs.

Hon. ALFONSE M. D’AMATO,
Chairman, Committee on Banking and Urban Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR D’AMATO: Thank you very much for taking the time to sit down and discuss with us your thoughts on a variety of issues of interest to credit unions. As you know, the National Association of Federal Credit Unions recognizes your long-standing commitment to credit unions and the principles upon which credit unions were founded.

We have had an opportunity to review in detail a draft of your proposed “Credit Union Reform and Enhancement Act.” Based upon our analysis, it is quite clear that your bill is designed to enhance the safety and sound- ness of federally-insured credit unions and to protect the National Credit Union Share In- surance Fund. After consultation with the board of directors of the National Associa- tion of Federal Credit Unions, I am pleased to lend NAFCU’s unqualified support to your measure. Our Association would be pleased to stand shoulder-to-shoulder with you in support of this sound and rational proposal as you know, there are other areas which NAFCU believes merit congressional review and reform—particularly in regard to the regulatory burden to which our nation’s member-owned credit unions are subject. We look forward to working with you and your staff to address these serious issues in the weeks and months ahead as well. If I or my staff may be of assistance to you or the Com- mittee in any way please do not hesitate to contact Bill Donovan, Vice President for Government Affairs, at 703–522–4770, ext. 203.

Sincerely,

KENNETH L. ROBINSON,
President.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I am pleased today to join with Senator D’AMATO in cosponsoring the Credit Union Reform and Enhancement Act.

Earlier this year Capital Corporate Federal Credit Union of Lanham, MD failed, the largest credit union failure in U.S. history. Cap Corp, as it was known, had invested nearly 70 percent of its $1.5 billion in assets in a form of derivative instrument called fixed-rate mortgage obligations, or CMO’s. These highly interest rate sen- sitive instruments experienced significant losses in value as interest rates rose in 1994. The losses became so severe that the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA) took over Cap Corp’s operation by placing it into conservatorship on January 31, and ultimately placed it into liquidation.

On April 13, NCUA announced that the remaining assets, liabilities, and field of membership of Cap Corp had Changes are needed to augment credit unions. The 1991 report stated:

In an extensive 1991 report on the credit union system, the General Accounting Office [GAO] carefully defined asset and liability constraints placed on State chartered credit unions. Among the findings of the hearings that NCUA was in the process of developing a new set of regulations that would raise capital requirements, tighten investment authority, and raise management standards for corporate credit unions. The purpose of this provision is to ensure that NCUA can act in an expeditious manner if a federally insured, State chartered credit union gets into difficulty. Delay in acting decisively in such cases can result in larger losses to the deposit insurance fund.

The bill would also make two other changes of a technical nature to the Federal Credit Union Act. It makes explicit NCUA’s authority to provide limits on loans and investments by a corporate credit union to a single obligor, and to provide minimum capital standards for corporate credit unions. The bill would provide NCUA such statutory authority.

In addition, the bill would amend the Federal Credit Union Act to replace the term “central credit union” with the term “corporate credit union.” The purpose of this change is to avoid any confusion between the 44 corporate credit unions and the single U.S. Central Credit Union.

Mr. President, I believe this is a carefully crafted piece of legislation that will bring greater safety and soundness to our credit union system, and I am therefore pleased to be an original co-sponsor.

By Mr. HATCH (for himself and Mr. BENNETT): S. 884. A bill to designate certain public lands in the State of Utah as wilderness, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

THE PUBLIC LANDS MANAGEMENT ACT OF 1995

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, along with my colleague, Senator BENNETT, I rise today to introduce S. 884, the Public Lands Management Act of 1995. This bill would designate approximately 1.8 million acres of land managed by the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) in Utah as wilderness and release another approximately 1.4 million acres of land as wilderness study areas (WSA) for nonwilderness multiple uses. With this bill, the requirements of the BLM under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 to study and recommend to Congress those lands worthy of wilderness designation, as defined by the Wilderness Act of 1964, are met so far as it concerns the agency in our State of Utah. Identical legislation is being introduced in the House today by Representatives Jim Hansen and Enid Waldholtz, Utah Gov. Mike Leavitt is supportive of this measure.

Some may find it surprising that I am recommending more wilderness lands in Utah. The fact of the matter is that I am not antienvironment. Like any grandparent, I want to preserve nature’s legacy in Utah for my 15 grandchildren to experience, learn from, and glory in. I believe, along with the English poet John Milton, that the right of all men to inherit and partake bliss.

I plan to fight for this new wilderness in Utah. I will also fight for balance. Nature is a balanced ecosystem. We work in wondrous ways to perpetuate this, and partaken bliss."

As I mentioned, the bill designates 1.8 million acres of Utah’s BLM land as wilderness contained in 50 specific areas. These areas include what I consider to be the Crown Jewels of Utah’s public lands—those areas so rich in beauty and grandeur that there can be no question that they meet the wilderness criteria.

Let’s face it—not every acre of BLM land is deserving of protection as wilderness. But, our bill captures those acres in wilderness that are well known to Utahns and most Americans, and that are fast becoming recognized by millions of international visitors every year. Photographs of these areas are found in most nature books; and they form the background for many commercial activities, such as TV commercials, still photographs, and movies.

They are the Grand Gulch area of San Juan County; Desolation Canyon, through which the Green River runs; and the Little Cottonwood, the Black Box, and Sid’s and Mexican Mountains of the San Rafael Swell. They include the Escalante Canyons of Garfield County, once proposed to be a national park; Westwater Canyon, through which the mighty Colorado River flows; and the canyon area of the Dirty Devil River.

Numerous ecosystems are represented in this bill to be designated as wilderness. These areas include the high mountain ranges of the Deep Creek and Henry Mountains; river canyons through which the San Rafael River, the Dirty Devil River, the Escalante River, and the East Fork of the Virgin River flow; the desert regions of western Utah that encompasses Notch Peak, Fish Springs, and the Ceder Mountains; Utah’s red rock region of Red Mountain, Canaan Mountain, and Crack Canyon; and contiguous areas that constitute several large and dramatic blocks of wilderness, such as Kane County’s Fifty-Mile region, the Escalante Canyons region, and the Desolation Canyon/Book Cliffs complex, which in itself would total more than 300,000 acres.
These names may not be recognizable to my colleagues, but they are truly the golden nuggets of Utah’s public lands that are deserving of being called wilderness. I certainly encourage my colleagues to visit Utah and feast on these magnificent panoramas.

But it is not enough to accomplish a balance in our legislation. As Milton said, “Nature’s coin must not be hoarded.”

We do not recommend, for example, wilderness designation for those Utah lands that are high in resource development potential, and these are many. We are not interested in locking out these lands that someday may provide the resources our State and this Nation will need to maintain our economic stability. These resources include deposits of oil and gas, coal, uranium, all kinds of precious metals, and other natural elements found in abundance within Utah’s boundaries. While the specific boundaries of our proposed wilderness are modified during the legislative process, we have attempted to craft boundaries that avoid any conflicts associated with existing rights and intrusions.

While our bill will designate certain lands as wilderness, it also contains language necessary to protect Utah’s interests from the ramifications of this designation. This is not an attempt to lessen the validity of wilderness in anyway, or to erase with one hand what we are witting with the other. The proposed language is simply a recognition that wilderness designation can, and most likely will, affect valid existing rights or the historic uses of an area, and which, if allowed to occur unrestrained, would have a devastating impact on the economies of many rural Utah communities.

Obviously, this is not our intent, which is why we have included language that protects existing water rights, without express or implied Federal reserved water right; allows grazing to continue in wilderness areas without any diminution; prohibits the reclassification of an airshed due to wilderness designation; and protects the practice of native Americans to gather wood for personal use and to collect plants or herbs for religious or medicinal purposes within a designated wilderness area. We have included other language that is appropriate and necessary to recognize the unique situations existing throughout our State associated with this effort to create more wilderness.

In addition, we have included language that releases all of BLM’s lands, with a few minor exceptions listed in the bill, from any further study or management for wilderness character or values, and returns them to the full range of non-wilderness multiple uses in accordance with already approved management plans. Adoption of this language will obviate the need for a provision in this bill. To me, it is the key to resolving this issue. Without this provision, this bill would be very difficult for me to support. Let us be clear about one point: if those acres now being managed as wilderness are not returned to multiple use, it is not the wilderness concept that would shun them, it is the concept of representative and participatory democracy.

Finally, the bill contains language to effectuate an exchange between the State of Utah and the Secretary of the Interior of approximately 140,000 State school and institutional trust lands that would otherwise be in wilderness in part, by the areas designated as wilderness. These lands and their inherent economic value can only be utilized to provide revenues to Utah’s public education system, and the only method of ensuring that our school children benefit from each acre of these trust lands is to trade them to the Secretary for available Federal lands located in Utah. In 1993, Congress adopted, and President Clinton signed into law, my legislation to add of the similar lands located within Utah’s forests, national parks, and Defense and native American reservations. The process outlined in that bill has proven to be rather cumbersome and thus frustrating to those officials. We are therefore attempting to learn from this prior experience by authorizing a more sensible, reasonable, and quicker process for the exchange of school inholdings in this legislation. Again, this is not an attempt to short-cock, direct, fair, and prompt exchange of captured school trust lands is pivotal to many of us in Utah.

Mr. President, I realize this bill would not be satisfactory to everyone in Utah or to those watching what we are doing from outside our State. Our bill contains an acreage figure that is 80 percent greater than the recommendation submitted by the affected counties, and 70 percent less than that adopted by one wilderness advocacy group. Maybe with such a wide expanse between these proposals, the acreage in our bill can be looked upon as a compromise proposal that merits consideration.

I am aware that some advocate a total of 5.7 million BLM acres as wilderness because they believe this generation should preserve and protect at least 10 percent of Utah’s approximately 55 million acres for those generations to come. This message has been stated for times in recent months, especially during our five regional meetings last April.

An ad published in the Salt Lake Tribune on May 29 stated that “protecting 10 percent [of Utah’s land] won’t cost a single job in southern Utah,” and that “90 percent of the land will be left for houses, roads, farming, mining, logging, tourist facilities, and the host of activities already there and yet to come.” If those opponents of this position are serious about preserving 10 percent of Utah’s land mass from the laundry list of activities mentioned in the ad, then they should support our bill and rally behind it. Utah already has approximately 800,000 acres of wilderness managed by the U.S. Forest Service, which is ironically almost 10 percent of the total forest lands in Utah, and approximately 2 million acres of land in the form of national parks, monuments, and recreation areas that are restrictively managed by the National Park Service. The large majority of the activities listed in the ad are already prohibited for these lands. These two figures, added to the amount of land to be designated in our bill—1.8 million, or roughly 8.2 percent of the BLM land in Utah—would mean that approximately 4.6 million acres of land in Utah, or 8.36 percent of Utah’s total land mass, will be preserved, protected, and managed by one Federal land agency or another from any future intrusions or conflicts.

We have heard the voices of those advocating this position who truly want to pay back, or tithe, to God for the beauty He has created in Utah’s rural country by setting one-tenth of Utah’s land. That is why our bill would add BLM’s Crown Jewels in Utah to the Crown Jewels already designated by the Forest Service and the National Park Service. I do not accept the argument that this gesture must be made entirely with only BLM land when there is so much splendor and natural peace contained in Utah’s other 33 million acres.

Mr. President, during the Memorial Day recess I visited several of the sites to be designated as wilderness in our bill. It was a magnificent journey through Utah’s backcountry, and the trip helped me appreciate even more the beauty of our great State. I also came to a better understanding of the areas listed in our bill and why I can affirmatively state today that they are worthy and deserving of wilderness designation.

At the same time, I came to a clearer understanding of the conflicts that will arise once this designation becomes final, and why we need to take reasonable steps to remediate, if not completely avoid, these potential conflicts. Our bill is an attempt to take these justifiable, yet reasonable, steps.

I recognize that some modifications in our bill may occur during the upcoming legislative review of this bill. I truly recognize that the inevitability if this bill is to pass the Senate, pass the House, and eventually be signed by the President. But, I need to clearly and emphatically state that despite my strong desire to create this new wilderness and to close this issue in Utah, I am not willing to accept any concession that is not in the best interests, both short- and long-term, for my State. This bill represents a consensus package of ideas and proposals arrived at through a painstaking process.

I urge my colleagues to consider this bill carefully, and I look forward to
To the Senator from Utah:

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the bill of Senator Bennett and myself be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I appreciate the leadership shown on the wilderness issue by my senior colleague from Utah. He carries tremendous responsibility in this body by virtue of his elevation to the chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee, and there are some political opponents who would have suggested that by virtue of that responsibility he might be less attentive to Utah issues than he might otherwise be.

I assure the people of the State and the people of the Nation that that is not true. He is very attentive to Utah issues and he has demonstrated that in his leadership of this matter. All Members are grateful to him and to our Governor, Michael O. Leavitt, for the work they have done on this issue.

Senator HATCH has outlined the details of this proposal. I would like to make a few additional points for those that may not understand some of the factors relating to the Utah wilderness question.

The Utah wilderness issue is the premier environmental issue of this Congress, and they are prepared to fight to the last possible breath in order to set aside 10 percent of the State in BLM wilderness. They say we need to set aside 10 percent for our children. Those who are unfamiliar with the State of Utah might be impressed by this argument, because after all, 10 percent seems like a relatively small amount to set aside for future generations for some kind of preservation.

I have a map here, Mr. President, that I think will put this argument in its proper perspective. If we look at the portion in the map that is in green, it amounts to approximately 5 million acres. This is land in the National Forest Service. That which is in dark green has already been designated as wilderness in Forest Service land, but 8 million acres will not get that in the future. We have set aside 10 percent, and there will be no McDonald’s hamburger stands. There will be no strip malls. There will be no Marriott hotels built in these 8 million acres.

During the hearings, we were threatened with all of those things. If we do not set aside wilderness we will have McDonald’s hamburger stands and strip malls all over the State. Here are 8 million acres that will not get that.

In addition, we see this dark purple area in various places on the map. Those are national parks and recreation areas with set-asides for fish and wildlife preservation, comprising over 2 million acres. So when we add those to the green, we get a 10 million acre set-aside.

Now, if we add the additional 1.8 million that Senator HATCH’s and my bill calls for in BLM wilderness, that is shown here in the green area, the total comes to approximately 12 million acres.

That, Mr. President, is not 10 percent of the State set aside for the future generations, making sure that there will be on these 12 million acres no economic development other than that which is already permitted in the Wilderness Act, which is to say, grazing, minerals, and other multiple uses of the public licenses.

The additional land that is shown in yellow, Mr. President, is BLM land. Once again, the BLM will not allow the building of a strip mall or a McDonald’s hamburger stand or a hotel on these 22 million acres.

The amount of acreage left to private hands, when we take the military reservations—that is what this is—and the Indian reservations—that is what this is—the amount left to private hands in the State of Utah is shown in white.

In the demagoguery around this issue, some people have said that is not set aside 10 percent of the land? Is not 90 percent enough for the developers? I show this chart, and just say that which is in white is what is available to developers. Frankly, it is located upon the corridors of highways that are already in place.

What we have proposed, Senator HATCH and I, is perfectly proper, legitimate, wilderness use. However, it will not freeze out the multiple use that could take place in this BLM land.

People say that wilderness calls for multiple use. Wilderness calls for grazing if it is already established. Wilderness calls for mineral exploration if the leases have already been signed.

I close with this example of what has happened to that truth. That is, it is true the wilderness bill calls for this multiple use on wilderness land if it has already been established. We have a prime example of what the 1964 Wilderness Act had in mind down in southern Utah on the Kaiparowits Plateau.

Out of the roughly 300,000 acres that would be considered part of a wilderness activity, and we have set aside a good portion of that in our bill.

In that acreage, there is an existing mineral lease, a coal lease. It is owned by a company called Andalex, named after the two children of the owner of the company, Andrew and Alexander. The company is named Andalex. The Andalex coal leases have existed for years.

Under the Wilderness Act, a careful reading of it, they can continue to exist, and Andalex can extract coal from that area. Those people who are insisting on heavier acreage have said over their dead bodies will they allow Andalex to rape the wilderness for the sake of the coal. That is the kind of rhetoric that has surrounded this debate.

Mr. President, over the last week, during the recess, I went to the Andalex coal facility. What did I find? Out of the roughly 300,000 acres of the Kaiparowits, the Andalex coal mine would require 40 acres. Not 40,000—40. Four-zero, with no zeros after.

The 40 acres, by happy coincidence, happen to be at the bottom of a circular canyon, so if you are not standing on the edge of the canyon looking down, you cannot see it from anywhere in this entire area.

The Wilderness Act of 1964 says anything, it says that the Andalex proposal should go forward. Yet the people who are saying that Senator HATCH and I are not taking care of future generations are turning around and putting the Wilderness Act on its head by saying we will not permit a coal operation on 40 acres because somehow it would destroy the wilderness experience the surrounding 300,000 acres.

Mr. President, I focus on that because it demonstrates the degree to which we have gotten away from reality in this debate. I hope the Congress in its wisdom will come back to reality and intelligence on this issue.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I rise to congratulate the Senator on his leadership outside the Senate as well as in it. The Senator’s efforts on the wilderness issue and other important issues in the West are well known and appreciated.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I appreciate the praises of the Senator from Idaho. This is a great issue, but it is a very difficult issue. The Senator is a great Senator and a great Senator for Wilderness.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I am sure that the Senator from Idaho appreciates Senator Bennett’s leadership on this issue as well. I thank the Senator from Idaho for his comments and his work on this issue. Thank you.
TITLE I—COMMEMORATIVE COIN PROGRAMS

SEC. 101. COMMEMORATIVE COIN PROGRAMS.

In accordance with the recommendations of the Citizens Commemorative Coin Advisory Committee, the Secretary shall mint and issue the following coins:

(1) BICENTENNIAL OF UNITED STATES.—On or before December 31, 1995, the Secretary shall mint not more than $35 per coin with specifications to be determined by the Secretary.

(2) UNITED NATIONS AND PRESIDENT TRUMAN.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—To commemorate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the United Nations and the role of President Harry S. Truman in founding the United Nations, during a 1-year period beginning in 1996, the Secretary shall issue:

(i) not more than 75,000 $5 coins, each of which shall—

(I) weigh 8.359 grams;

(II) have a diameter of 0.850 inches; and

(III) contain 90 percent gold and 10 percent alloy; and

(ii) not more than 350,000 $1 coins, each of which shall—

(I) weigh 26.73 grams;

(II) have a diameter of 1.500 inches; and

(III) contain 90 percent silver and 10 percent alloy.

(B) SURCHARGES.—All sales of the coins issued under this subsection shall include a surcharge of $35 per coin for each $5 coin, and a surcharge of $10 per coin for each $1 coin.

(C) DISTRIBUTION OF SURCHARGES.—All surcharges received by the Secretary from the sale of coins issued under this subsection shall be promptly paid by the Secretary in accordance with the following:

(i) Fifty percent of the surcharges received shall be paid to the Harry S. Truman Library Foundation.

(ii) Fifty percent of the surcharges received shall be paid to the United Nations Association.

(3) SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION.—To commemorate the 150th anniversary of the founding of the Smithsonian Institution, during a 1-year period beginning in 1996, the Secretary shall issue:

(i) not more than 100,000 $5 coins, each of which shall—

(I) weigh 8.359 grams;

(II) have a diameter of 0.850 inches; and

(III) contain 90 percent gold and 10 percent alloy; and

(ii) not more than 800,000 $1 coins, each of which shall—

(I) weigh 26.73 grams;

(II) have a diameter of 1.500 inches; and

(III) contain 90 percent silver and 10 percent alloy.

(B) SURCHARGES.—All sales of the coins issued under this subsection shall include a surcharge of $35 per coin for each $5 coin, and a surcharge of $10 per coin for each $1 coin.

(C) DISTRIBUTION OF SURCHARGES.—All surcharges received by the Secretary from the sale of coins issued under this subsection shall be promptly paid by the Secretary in accordance with the following:

(i) Fifty percent of the surcharges received shall be paid to the National Park Foundation to be used for the support of national parks.

(ii) Fifty percent of the surcharges received shall be paid to Yellowstone National Park.

(4) NATIONAL LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS MEMORIAL.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—To commemorate the 125th anniversary of the establishment of Yellowstone National Park as the first national park in the United States, and the birth of the national park idea, during a 1-year period beginning in 1997, the Secretary shall issue not more than 500,000 $1 coins, each of which shall—

(I) weigh 26.73 grams;

(II) have a diameter of 1.500 inches; and

(III) contain 90 percent silver and 10 percent alloy.

(B) SURCHARGES.—All sales of the coins issued under this subsection shall include a surcharge of $10 per coin.

(C) DISTRIBUTION OF SURCHARGES.—All surcharges received by the Secretary from the sale of coins issued under this subsection shall be promptly paid by the Secretary to the Secretary of the Interior an amount equal to the surcharges received from the sale of the coins issued under this subsection, which amount shall be deposited in the Fund established under section 201.

(D) AVAILABILITY.—The coins issued under this subsection shall be available for issuance not later than May 1997.

SEC. 102. DESIGN.

(A) IN GENERAL.—The design for each coin issued under this Act shall be—

(1) selected by the Secretary after consultation with the appropriate recipient organization or organizations and the Commission of Fine Arts; and

(2) reviewed by the Citizens Commemorative Coin Advisory Committee.

(B) DESIGN AND INSCRIPTIONS.—On each coin issued under this Act there shall be—

(1) the term ‘‘Fund’’ means the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial Maintenance Fund established under section 201.

(2) the term ‘‘recipient organization’’ means an organization described in section 101 to which surcharges received by the Secretary from the sale of coins issued under this Act shall be deposited.

(3) the term ‘‘Secretary’’ means the Secretary of the Treasury.

(4) FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT.—
(1) a designation of the value of the coin;
(2) an inscription of the year; and
(3) inscriptions of the words “Liberty”, “In God We Trust”, “United States of America”, and “E Pluribus Unum”.

SEC. 103. LEGAL TENDER.
The coins issued under this Act shall be legal tender, as provided in section 5101 of title 31, United States Code.

SEC. 104. SOURCES OF BULLION.
(a) Gold.—The Secretary shall obtain gold for minting coins under this Act pursuant to the authority of the Secretary under other provisions of law.
(b) Silver.—The Secretary shall obtain silver for minting coins under this Act from sources that determines to be appropriate, including stockpiles established under the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act.

SEC. 105. SALE PRICE.
Each coin issued under this Act shall be sold by the Secretary at a price equal to the sum of—
(1) the face value of the coin;
(2) the surcharge provided in section 101 with respect to the coin;
(3) the cost of designing and issuing the coin (including labor, materials, dies, use of machinery, overhead expenses, marketing, and shipping); and
(4) the estimated profit determined under section 106.

SEC. 106. DETERMINATION OF COSTS AND PROFIT.
(a) DETERMINATION OF COSTS.—With respect to the coins issued under this Act, the Secretary shall, on an ongoing basis, determine—
(1) the costs incurred in carrying out each coin program authorized under this Act; and
(2) the allocation of overhead costs among all coin programs authorized under this Act.
(b) DETERMINATION OF PROFIT.—After the sale of each coin issued under this Act, the Secretary shall calculate the estimated profit to be included in the sale price of the coin under section 105.

SEC. 107. GENERAL WAIVER OF PROCUREMENT REGULATIONS.
Section 5112(j) of title 31, United States Code, shall apply to the procurement of goods or services necessary to carrying out the programs and operations of the United States Mint under this Act.

SEC. 108. JUDICIAL REVIEW.
Each determination made by the Secretary in implementing a commemorative coin program under this Act shall be made in the sole discretion of the Secretary and shall not be subject to judicial review.

SEC. 109. AUDITS.
The Comptroller General of the United States shall have the right to examine such books, records, documents, and other data of each recipient organization as may be related to the expenditures of amounts paid under this Act.

SEC. 110. FINANCIAL ASSURANCES.
It is the sense of the Congress that each coin program authorized under this Act should be self-sustaining and should be administered so as not to result in any net cost to the Numismatic Public Enterprise Fund.

TITLE II—NATIONAL LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS MEMORIAL MAINTENANCE FUND

SEC. 201. NATIONAL LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS MEMORIAL MAINTENANCE FUND.
(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—
(1) IN GENERAL.—There is established the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial Maintenance Fund, which shall be a revolving fund administered by the Secretary of the Interior (or the designee of the Secretary of the Interior).

(2) FUNDING.—Amounts in the Fund shall include—

Radar Bomb Scoring Site Land Conveyance

By Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, today, I am introducing a bill which directs the Secretary of the Air Force to convey to the city of Forsyth, MT, the radar bomb scoring site operated by USAF Detachment 18 at Forsyth.

(c) BUDGET AND AUDIT TREATMENT.—The Fund shall be subject to the budget and audit provisions of chapter 91 of title 31, United States Code.

By Mr. BAUCUS:
S. 886. A bill to provide for the conveyance of the radar bomb scoring site, Forsyth, MT, to the Committee on Armed Services.

Radar Bomb Scoring Site Land Conveyance

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, today, I am introducing a bill which directs the Secretary of the Air Force to convey to the city of Forsyth, MT, the radar bomb scoring site operated by USAF Detachment 18 at Forsyth.

The purpose of the legislation is to allow the land, housing units, and facilities supporting the detachment to be turned over to the city of Forsyth to serve the elderly.

The Air Force has decided to close its facility at Forsyth. Because of the base’s small size, the closure is not part of the Base Realignment and Closure Commission process. The city of Forsyth is eager to acquire the facility as soon as possible to help alleviate an elderly housing shortage.

This bill contains special procedures for turning the facility over to the city of Forsyth so that we believe it offers the best solution. If the normal process is followed, continued maintenance and upkeep of the facility could be a serious burden. Inattentive maintenance could result in serious deterioration of the facility by the time the normal property disposal process finally ends. Obviously, this would not benefit the U.S. Government or the elderly who will live there. The city of Forsyth is prepared to accept the responsibility for the detachment 18 facility and rapidly transform it into much needed housing for the elderly.
256, a bill to amend title 10, United States Code, to establish procedures for determining the status of certain missing members of the Armed Forces and certain civilians, and for other purposes.

KOHLS AMENDMENT NO. 1216

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. KOHL submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to amendment No. 1199, proposed by Mr. DOLE, to the bill, S. 735, supra, as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. 109. GUN-FREE SCHOOLS.

Section 922(q) of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(q)(1) The Congress finds and declares that—

(A) crime, particularly crime involving drugs and guns, is a pervasive, nationwide problem;

(B) crime at the local level is exacerbated by the interstate movement of drugs, guns, and criminals;

(C) firearms and ammunition move easily in interstate commerce and have been found in increasing numbers in and around schools, as documented in numerous hearings in both the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives and the Judiciary Committee of the Senate;

(D) in fact, even before the sale of a firearm, the gun, its component parts, ammunition, and the raw materials from which they are made have considerably moved in interstate commerce;

(E) while criminals freely move from State to State, ordinary citizens and foreign visitors may fear to travel to or through certain parts of the country due to concern about violent crime and gun violence, and parents may decline to send their children to school for the same reason;

(F) the occurrence of violent crime in school zones as resulted in a decline in the quality of education in our country;

(G) this decline in the quality of education has an adverse impact on interstate commerce and the foreign commerce of the United States;

(H) States, localities, and school systems find it almost impossible to handle gun-related crime by themselves; even States, localities, and school systems made strong efforts to prevent, detect, and punish gun-related crime find their efforts unavailing due in part to the failure or inactivity of other States or localities to take strong measures; and

(I) Congress has power, under the Interstate Commerce Clause and other provisions of the Constitution, to enact measures to ensure the integrity and safety of the Nation’s schools by enactment of this subsection.

(2) It shall be unlawful for any individual knowingly to possess a firearm that has moved in or that otherwise affects interstate or foreign commerce at a place that the individual knows, or has reasonable cause to believe, is a school zone.

(3) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to the possession of a firearm—

(i) on private property not part of school grounds;

(ii) if the individual possessing the firearm is licensed to do so by the State in which the school zone is located or a political subdivision of the State, and the law of the State or political subdivision requires that, before an individual obtains such a license, that the law enforcement authorities of the State or political subdivision verify that the individual is qualified under law to receive the license;

(iii) if the special law enforcement officer acting in his or her official capacity;

(iv) if the individual is unloaded and is possessed by an individual while traversing school premises for the purpose of gaining access to public places; and

(v) if the entry in school premises is authorized by school authorities.

(3)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), it shall be unlawful for any person, knowingly or with reckless disregard for the safety of another, to discharge or attempt to discharge a firearm that has moved in or that otherwise affects interstate or foreign commerce at a place that the person knows is a school zone.

(B) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to the discharge of a firearm—

(i) on private property not part of school grounds;
“(ii) as part of a program approved by a school in the school zone, by an individual who is participating in the program;
“(iii) by an individual in accordance with a contract entered into between a school in a school zone and the individual or an employer of the individual; or “(iv) by a law enforcement officer acting in his or her official capacity.

“(4) Nothing in this subsection shall be construed as preempting or preventing a State or local government from enacting a statute establishing gun-free school zones as provided in this subsection.”.

BIDEN AMENDMENT NO. 1217
(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. BIDEN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill, S. 735, supra, as follows:

Delete Title 6, subtitle A and insert the following:

SUBTITLE A—COLLATERAL REVIEW IN FEDERAL CRIMINAL CASES

SEC. 601. FILING DEADLINES.
Section 2255 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—
(1) by striking the second and fifth paragraphs; and
(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“A one-year period of limitation shall apply to a motion under this section. The limitation period shall run from the latest of—

“(1) the date on which the judgment of conviction becomes final;
“(2) the date on which the impediment to making a motion created by governmental action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States is removed, if the movant was prevented from making a motion by such governmental action;
“(3) the date on which the right asserted was initially recognized by the Supreme Court, if that right has been newly recognized by the Supreme Court and is made retroactively applicable; or “(4) the date on which the facts supporting the claim or claims presented could have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence.

“In a proceeding under this section before a district court, the final order shall be subject to appeal by the court of appeals for the circuit in which the proceeding is held only if a circuit justice or judges issues a certificate of appealability. A certificate of appealability may issue only if the movant has made a substantial showing of the denial of a constitutional right. A certificate of appealability shall indicate which specific claim or issue shows such a denial of a constitutional right.

“A claim presented in a second or successive motion under this section that was presented in a prior motion shall be dismissed unless—

“(A) a court of appeals for the circuit in which the proceeding is held determines that the claim satisfies the requirements in this section; and “(B) the claim or issue shows such a denial of a constitutional right.

“Before a second or successive motion under this section is filed in the district court, the movant shall move in the appropriate court of appeals for an order authorizing the district court to consider the second or successive motion shall be determined by a three-judge panel of the court of appeals. The court of appeals may authorize the filing of a second or successive motion only if it determines that the motion satisfies the requirements in this section. The court of appeals shall grant or deny the authorization to file a second or successive motion not later than 30 days after the filing of the motion.

“The grant or denial of an authorization by a court of appeals to file a second or successive motion shall not be appealable and shall not be the subject of a petition for rehearing or a writ of certiorari.

“A district court shall dismiss any claim presented in a second or successive motion that the court of appeals has authorized to be filed unless the applicant shows that the claim satisfies the requirements of this section.”.

(3) by striking the second sentence and inserting the following new subparagraph:

“(C) A conviction shall not be considered to be a conviction for purposes of this chapter if—

(i) the conviction is reversed or set aside based on a determination that the conviction is invalid;

(ii) the person has been pardoned, unless the authority that grants the pardon expressly states that the person may not ship, transport, possess or receive firearms;

(iii) the person has had civil rights restored, or the conviction is expunged, and—

(I) the authority that grants the restoration of civil rights in a written statement expressly authorizes the person to ship, transport, receive, and possess firearms and expressly determines that the circumstances regarding the conviction and the person’s record and reputation are such that the person is not likely to act in a manner that is dangerous to public safety, and the granting of the relief is not contrary to the public interest; and

(II) the conviction was for an offense other than serious drug offense (as defined in section 922(c)(2)(A)) or violent felony (as defined in section 922(c)(2)(B)).”.

D’AMATO AMENDMENT NO. 1223

Ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. D’AMATO submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to amendment No. 1199, proposed by Mr. DOLCE, to the bill, S. 735, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following new section:

SEC. 4. FICTITIOUS FINANCIAL INSTRUMENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the “Financial Instruments Anti-Fraud Act of 1995”.

(b) INCREASED PENALTIES FOR COUNTERFEITED FINANCIAL INSTRUMENTS.—Sections 747 and 754A of title 18, United States Code, are amended by striking “class C felony” each place such term appears and inserting “class B felony”.

(c) CRIMINAL PENALTY FOR PRODUCTION, SALE, DISTRIBUTION, POSSESSION OF FICTITIOUS FINANCIAL INSTRUMENTS PURPORTING TO BE THOSE OF THE STATES, OF POLITICAL SUBDIVISIONS, AND OF PRIVATE ORGANIZATIONS.

(i) In General.—Chapter 27 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 513, the following new section:

SEC. 514. FICTITIOUS FINANCIAL INSTRUMENTS.

(a) Whoever, with the intent to defraud—

(1) draws, prints, processes, produces, publishes, or otherwise makes, or attempts or causes the same, within the United States;

(2) passes, utters, presents, offers, brokers, issues, sells, or attempts to cause the same, or with like intent possessives, within the United States; or

(b) The ineffectiveness or incompetence of counsel during Federal or State collateral post-conviction proceedings shall not be a ground for relief in a proceeding arising under section 2254.

SEC. 605. SECTION 2255 AMENDMENTS.

Section 2255 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking the second and fifth unnumbered paragraphs; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new unnumbered paragraphs:

“A 1-year period of limitation shall apply to a motion under this section. The limitation period shall run from the latest of—

(i) the date on which the judgment of conviction becomes final;

(ii) the date on which the impediment to making a motion by governmental action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States is removed, if the movant was prevented from making a motion by such governmental action;

(iii) the date on which the right asserted was initially recognized by the Supreme Court, if that right has been newly recognized by the Supreme Court and made retroactively applicable to cases on collateral review; or

(iv) the date on which the facts supporting the claim or claims presented could have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence.

In all proceedings brought under this section, and any subsequent proceedings on review, appointment of counsel for a movant who is or becomes financially unable to afford counsel shall be in the discretion of the court, except as provided by a rule promulgated by the Supreme Court pursuant to its statutory authority.

A second or successive motion must be certified as provided in section 2244 by a panel of the appropriate court of appeals to contain—

(i) newly discovered evidence that, if proven and viewed in light of the evidence as a whole, would be sufficient to establish by clear and convincing evidence that no reasonable factfinder would have found the movant guilty of the offense; or

(ii) a new rule of constitutional law, made retroactive to cases on collateral review by the Supreme Court, that was previously unavailable.

SEC. 606. LIMITS ON SECOND OR SUCCESSIVE APPLIC.

(a) CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO SECTION 2244.

Section 2244, United States Code, is amended by striking “and” and inserting “the petition” and all that follows through “by such inquiry,”.

(b) LIMITS ON SECOND OR SUCCESSIVE APPLICATIONS.—Section 2244(b) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

“A claim presented in a second or successive habeas corpus application under section 2244 that was presented in a prior application shall be dismissed.

(2) A claim presented in a second or successive habeas corpus application under section 2254 that was not presented in a prior application shall be dismissed unless—

(A) the applicant shows that the claim relies on a new rule of constitutional law, made retroactive to cases on collateral review by the Supreme Court, that was previously unavailable; or

(B) the factual predicate for the claim could not have been discovered previously through the exercise of due diligence; and

(c) the facts underlying the claim, if proven and viewed in light of the evidence as a whole, would be sufficient to establish by

(1) the authority that grants the restoration of civil rights in a written statement expressly authorizes the person to ship, transport, receive, and possess firearms and expressly determines that the circumstances regarding the conviction and the person’s record and reputation are such that the person is not likely to act in a manner that is dangerous to public safety, and the granting of the relief is not contrary to the public interest; and

(II) the conviction was for an offense other than serious drug offense (as defined in section 922(c)(2)(A)) or violent felony (as defined in section 922(c)(2)(B)).”.

BIDEN AMENDMENT NO. 1224

(Ordained to lie on the table.)

Mr. BIDEN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill, S. 735, supra; as follows:

FEINSTEIN AMENDMENT NO. 1225

(Ordained to lie on the table.)

Mrs. FEINSTEIN proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 735, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. 40A. Transactions with Countries Not Cooperating Fully with United States Antiterrorism Efforts.

(1) newly discovered evidence that, if proven and viewed in light of the evidence as a whole, would be sufficient to establish by clear and convincing evidence that no reasonable factfinder would have found the movant guilty of the offense; or

(2) a new rule of constitutional law, made retroactive to cases on collateral review by the Supreme Court, that was previously unavailable.

SEC. 606. LIMITS ON SECOND OR SUCCESSIVE APPLIC.

(a) CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO SECTION 2244.

Section 2244, United States Code, is amended by striking “and” and inserting “the petition” and all that follows through “by such inquiry,”.

(b) LIMITS ON SECOND OR SUCCESSIVE APPLICATIONS.—Section 2244(b) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

“A claim presented in a second or successive habeas corpus application under section 2244 that was presented in a prior application shall be dismissed.

(2) A claim presented in a second or successive habeas corpus application under section 2254 that was not presented in a prior application shall be dismissed unless—

(A) the applicant shows that the claim relies on a new rule of constitutional law, made retroactive to cases on collateral review by the Supreme Court, that was previously unavailable; or

(B) the factual predicate for the claim could not have been discovered previously through the exercise of due diligence; and

(c) the facts underlying the claim, if proven and viewed in light of the evidence as a whole, would be sufficient to establish by clear and convincing evidence that, but for constitutional error, no reasonable factfinder would have found the applicant guilty of the underlying offenses.

(2) A court of appeals may authorize the filing of a second or successive application only if it determines that the application makes a prima facie showing that the applicant satisfies the requirements of this subsection.

(3) The court of appeals shall grant or deny the authorization to file a second or successive application not later than 30 days after the filing of the motion.

(4) The court of appeals may authorize the filing of a second or successive application if the court determines that the application satisfies the requirements of this subsection.

(5) The court of appeals shall grant or deny the authorization to file a second or successive application if the court determines that the application satisfies the requirements of this subsection.

SEC. 607. DEATH PENALTY LITIGATION PROCEDURES.

(a) ADDITION OF CHAPTER TO TITLE 28, UNITED STATES CODE

(b) This chapter is applicable if a State establishes by rule of its court of last resort a mechanism for the appointment of counsel upon a finding that the prisoner is indigent and accepted the offer or is unable competently to decide whether to accept or reject the offer.

(c) When a State law, a mechanism for the appointment of counsel upon a finding that the prisoner is indigent and accepted the offer or is unable competently to decide whether to accept or reject the offer, or the execution date for a State prisoner shall have been set, the court shall have the authority to enter a stay of execution for a State prisoner shall have been set, the court shall have the authority to enter a stay of execution.

(d) No counsel appointed pursuant to subsection (b) and (c) to represent a State prisoner under capital sentence shall have previously represented the prisoner at trial or on direct appeal in the case in which the appointment is made unless the prisoner and counsel expressly request continued representation.

(e) The ineffectiveness or incompetence of counsel during State or Federal post-conviction proceedings in a capital case shall not be a ground for relief in a proceeding arising under section 2254. This limitation shall not preclude the appointment of different counsel, on the court's own motion or at the request of the prisoner, at any phase of State or Federal post-conviction proceedings on the basis of the ineffectiveness or incompetence of counsel in such proceedings.

§ 2262. Mandatory stay of execution; duration; limits on stays of execution; successive petitions

(a) Upon the entry in the appropriate State court of record of an order under section 2261(c), a warrant or order setting an execution date for a State prisoner shall be stayed upon application to any court that would have jurisdiction over any proceedings under subsection (b) of this section. The application shall recite that the State has invoked the procedures of this section and that the supervised execution is subject to stay.

(b) A stay of execution granted pursuant to subsection (a) shall expire—

(1) A State prisoner fails to file a habeas corpus application under section 2244(b) within the time required in section 2263;

(2) Before a court of competent jurisdiction, in the presence of counsel, unless the prisoner has knowingly and intelligently waived such counsel, and after having been advised of the consequences, a State prisoner under capital sentence waives the right to pursue habeas corpus review under section 2254; or

(3) A State prisoner files a habeas corpus petition under section 2254 within the time required by section 2263 and fails to make a substantial showing of the denial of a Federal right or is denied relief in the district court or at any subsequent stage of review.

(c) If an application under subsection (b) has occurred, no Federal court thereafter shall have the authority to enter a stay of execution in the case of a State prisoner when the court of appeals approves the filing of a second or successive application under section 2244(b).

§ 2263. Filing of habeas corpus application; time requirements; tolling rules

(a) Any application submitted for habeas corpus relief under section 2254 must be filed in the appropriate district court not later than 180 days after final State court affirmance of the conviction and sentence on direct review or the expiration of the time for seeking such review.

(b) The time requirements established by subsection (a) shall be applied to an application submitted for habeas corpus relief under section 2254(b).

(c) Any application submitted for habeas corpus relief under section 2254 must be filed in the appropriate district court not later than 180 days after final State court affirmance of the conviction and sentence on direct review or the expiration of the time for seeking such review.

(d) The time requirements established by subsection (a) shall be applied to an application submitted for habeas corpus relief under section 2254(b).

(e) Any court that has received an application for habeas corpus relief under section 2254(b) shall have jurisdiction over the case upon the filing of the application and shall have the authority to enter a stay of execution.

(f) Any court that has received an application for habeas corpus relief under section 2254(b) shall have jurisdiction over the case upon the filing of the application and shall have the authority to enter a stay of execution.

(g) Any court that has received an application for habeas corpus relief under section 2254(b) shall have jurisdiction over the case upon the filing of the application and shall have the authority to enter a stay of execution.

(h) Any court that has received an application for habeas corpus relief under section 2254(b) shall have jurisdiction over the case upon the filing of the application and shall have the authority to enter a stay of execution.
sections shall be understood as referring to unitary review under the State procedure. The reference in section 2266(a) to ‘an order under section 2266(c)’ shall be understood as referring to the petitioner order under subsection (b) concerning representation in the unitary review proceedings, but if a transcript of the trial proceedings is unavailable at the request of such applicant or in the appropriate State court, then the start of the 180-day limitation period under section 2263 shall be deferred until a transcript is made available to the prisoner or counsel of the prisoner.

§2266. Limitation periods for determining applications and motions

(a) The adjudication of any application under this chapter that is subject to this chapter, and the adjudication of any motion under section 2255 by a person under sentence of death, shall be given priority by the district court and by the court of appeals over all noncapital matters.

(b)(1)(A) A district court shall render a final determination and enter a final judgment on any application for a writ of habeas corpus brought under this chapter in a capital case not later than 180 days after the date on which the application is filed.

(B) A district court shall afford the parties at least 120 days in which to complete all actions, including the preparation of all pleadings and briefs, and if necessary, a hearing, prior to the submission of the case for decision.

(C)(i) A district court may delay for not more than one additional 30-day period beyond the period specified in subparagraph (A), the rendering of a determination of an application for a writ of habeas corpus if the court issues a written order making a finding, adequate for the finding, that the ends of justice that would be served by allowing the delay outweigh the best interests of the public and the applicant in a speedy disposition of the application.

(ii) The factors, among others, that a court shall consider in determining whether a delay in the disposition of an application is warranted are as follows:

(I) Whether the failure to allow the delay would be likely to result in a miscarriage of justice;

(II) Whether the case is so unusual or so complex, due to the number of defendants, the nature of the prosecution, or the existence of questions of fact or law, that it is unreasonable to expect adequate briefing within the time limitations established by subparagraph (A); and

(III) Whether the court is not in a position to determine whether a delay in the disposition of an application would be likely to result in a miscarriage of justice; and

(iv) The court shall transmit a copy of any order issued under clause (i) to the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts for inclusion in the report under paragraph (5).

(2) The time limitations under paragraph (1) shall apply to:

(A) an initial application for a writ of habeas corpus;

(B) any second or successive application for a writ of habeas corpus; and

(C) any determination of an application for a writ of habeas corpus following a remand by the court of appeals or the Supreme Court for further proceedings, in which case the limitation period shall run from the date the remand is ordered.

(3) The time limitations under this section shall not be construed to entitle an applicant to a stay of execution, to which the applicant would otherwise not be entitled, for the purpose of litigating any application or appeal.

(4)(A) The failure of a court to meet or comply with a time limitation under this section shall not be a ground for granting relief from a judgment of conviction or sentence.

(B) The State may enforce a time limitation under this section by petitioning for a writ of mandamus to the court of appeals. The court of appeals shall act on the petition for a writ or mandamus not later than 30 days after the filing of the petition.

(c)(1)(A) The Administrative Office of United States Courts shall submit to Congress an annual report on the compliance by the courts of appeals with the time limitations under this section.

(b) Technical amendment—The part analysis for part IV of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding after the item relating to chapter 153 the following new item:

‘‘5. Special habeas corpus procedures in capital cases .......... 2261.’’

(c) Effective date—Chapter 154 of title 28, United States Code (as added by subsection (a)) shall apply to cases pending on or after the date of enactment of this Act.

BOXER AMENDMENT NO. 1227

(6) Mrs. BOXER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to amendment No. 1199, proposed by Mr. DOLE, to the bill, S. 735, supra; as follows:

At the end of title IX, insert the following new section:

SEC. 5. STUDY OF LAWS REGULATING PARAPRILITARY ACTIVITIES.

Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall prepare and submit to Congress a report that—

(1) describes all Federal and State laws in effect on or before the date of enactment of this Act that ban or regulate the paraprilitary activities of privatized or independent contractors:

(2) includes the recommendations of the Attorney General for a Federal law or model statute to regulate such paraprilitary activities.

ABRAHAM AMENDMENT NO. 1228

Mr. HATCH (for Mr. ABRAHAM) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 735, supra; as follows:

On p. 36, line 16, strike from ‘‘to prepare a defense’’ through the word ‘‘imminent’’ on p. 37, line 12, and insert in its place the following: ‘‘substantially the same ability to make his defense as would disclosure of the classified information.’’

(c) The Attorney General shall cause to be delivered to the alien a copy of the unclassified summary approved under subparagraph (B).

(E) If the written unclassified summary is not approved by the court, the Department of Justice shall be afforded reasonable opportunity to correct the deficiencies identified by the court and submit a revised unclassified summary.

(F) If the revised unclassified summary is not approved by the court, the special reeal hearing shall be terminated unless the court, after reviewing the classified information in camera and ex parte issues findings that—

(i) the alien’s continued presence in the United States poses a reasonable likelihood of causing—

(ii) serious and irreparable harm to the national security; or

(iii) death or serious bodily injury to any person; and

(ii) provision of either the classified information or an unclassified summary that meets the standards set out in (B) poses a reasonable likelihood of causing—

(i) serious and irreparable harm to the national security; or

(ii) death or serious bodily injury to any person; and

(iii) the unclassified summary prepared by the Department of Justice is adequate to allow the alien to prepare a defense; and

(F) If the Court makes these findings, the special removal hearing shall continue, and...

HEFLIN (AND SHELB)Y
AMENDMENT No. 1230
(Ordersd to lie on the table.)
Mr. HEFLIN (for himself and Mr. SHELB)Y) proposed an amendment to amend No. 1199, proposed by Mr. DOLE, to the bill, S. 735, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following: "In conducting any portion of the study which concerns the use of violence and use of fertilizer as a pre-explosive material, the Secretary of the Treasury shall consult with and receive input from non-profit fertilizer research centers and include their opinions and findings in the report required under subsection (c).”.
“(d)(1) Not later than 45 days after the date on which the determination was issued.

“(5) DEPORTATION.—An alien who is ordered to be deported under this subsection shall not be permitted to apply for asylum, suspension of deportation, or waiver of removal on any grounds within the discretion of the Attorney General.”

LEAHY AMENDMENT NO. 1238

Mr. LEAHY proposed an amendment to amendment No. 1199, proposed by Mr. DOLE, to the bill, S. 735, supra; as follows:

On page 160, after line 19, insert the following:

SEC. 1001. TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Victims of Terrorism Act of 1996”.

SEC. 1002. AUTHORITY TO PROVIDE ASSISTANCE AND COMPENSATION TO VICTIMS OF TERRORISM.

The Victims of Crime Act of 1984 (42 U.S.C. 10601 et seq.), is amended by inserting after section 1404A the following new section:

“SEC. 1404B. COMPENSATION AND ASSISTANCE TO VICTIMS OF TERRORISM OR MASS VIOLENCE.

“(a) VICTIMS OF ACTS OF TERRORISM OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.—The Director may make supplemental grants to States for eligible crime victim compensation and assistance programs to provide emergency relief, including crisis response efforts, assistance, training, and technical assistance, for the benefit of victims of terrorism or mass violence occurring within the United States and may provide funding to United States Attorney’s Offices for use in coordination with State victims compensation and assistance effort in providing emergency relief.”

SEC. 1003. FUNDING OF COMPENSATION AND ASSISTANCE TO VICTIMS OF TERRORISM, MASS VIOLENCE, AND CRIME.

Section 1402(d)(4) of the Victims of Crime Act of 1984 (42 U.S.C. 10601(d)(4)) is amended to read as follows:

“(d)(4) If the sums available in the Fund are sufficient to fully provide grants to the supplemented pursuant to section 1404(a)(1), the Director may retain any portion of the Fund that was deposited during a fiscal year that was in excess of 110 percent of the total amount deposited in the Fund during the preceding fiscal year as an emergency reserve. Such reserve shall not exceed $50,000,000.

“(b) Emergency reserve may be used for supplemental grants under section 1404B and to supplement the funds available to provide grants to States for compensation and assistance in accordance with sections 1403 and 1404 in which supplemental grants are needed.”

SEC. 1004. CRIME VICTIMS FUND AMENDMENTS.

UNOBLIGATED FUNDS.—Section 1402 of the Victims of Crime Act of 1984 (42 U.S.C. 10601) is amended—

(1) in subsection (c), by striking “subsection” and inserting “chapter”; and

(2) by amending subsection (e) to read as follows:

“(e) AMOUNTS AWARDED AND UNSPENT.—Any amount awarded as part of a grant under this chapter that remains unspent at the end of a fiscal year in which the grant is made may be expended for the purpose for which the grant is made at any time during the 2 succeeding fiscal years, at the end of which period, any remaining unobligated sums shall be returned to the Fund.”

Strike page 36, line 13, through page 38, line 20, and insert the following in lieu thereof:

"(B) The judge shall approve the summary within 15 days of submission if the judge finds that it is sufficient to inform the alien of the nature of the evidence that such person is an alien as described in section 241(a), and to provide the alien with substantially the same ability to make his defense as would disclosure of the classified information.

(C) The Attorney General shall cause to be delivered to the alien a copy of the unclassified summary approved under subparagraph (B).

(D) If the written unclassified summary is not approved by the court pursuant to subparagraph (B), the Department of Justice shall be afforded 15 days to correct the deficiencies identified by the court and submit a revised unclassified summary.

(E) If the revised unclassified summary is not approved by the court within 15 days of its submission pursuant to subparagraph (B), the special removal hearing shall be terminated unless the court, within that time, after reviewing the classified information in camera and ex parte, issues written findings that:

(i) the alien’s continued presence in the United States would likely cause

(1) serious and irreparable harm to the national security; or

(ii) death or serious bodily injury to any person; and

(iii) provision of the information contained in the unclassified summary that meets the standard set forth in subparagraph (B) would likely cause

(1) serious and irreparable harm to the national security; or

(II) death or serious bodily injury to any person; and

(iii) the unclassified summary prepared by the Justice Department is adequate to allow the alien to prepare a defense.

If the court approves the revised unclassified summary, the special removal proceeding shall continue, and the Attorney General shall cause to be delivered to the alien within 15 days of the issuance of such findings a copy of the unclassified summary together with a statement that it meets the standard set forth in subparagraph (E)(ii).

(9) Within 19 days of filing of the appealable order the Department of Justice may take an interlocutory appeal to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit.

The Court of Appeals shall consider the appeal as expeditiously as possible, but no later than 30 days."

NUNN (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1251

Mr. NUNN (for himself, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. BIDEN, and Mr. WARNER) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 735, supra; as follows:

SEC. 901. AUTHORITY TO REQUEST MILITARY ASSISTANCE WITH RESPECT TO OFFENSES INVOLVING BIOLOGICAL AND CHEMICAL WEAPONS.

(A) Biological Weapons of Mass Destruction.—Section 175 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(c)(1) Military Assistance.—The Attorney General may request that the Secretary of Defense provide assistance in support of Department of Justice activities relating to the enforcement of this section in an emergency situation involving biological weapons of mass destruction. Department of Defense, may be used to provide such assistance if—

(A) the Secretary of Defense and the Attorney General determine that an emergency situation involving biological weapons of mass destruction exists; and

(B) the Secretary of Defense determines that the provision of such assistance will not adversely affect the military preparedness of the United States.

(2) As used in this section, ‘‘emergency situation involving biological weapons of mass destruction’’ means a circumstance involving a biological weapon of mass destruction—

(A) that poses a serious threat to the interests of the United States; and

(B) in which—

(i) civilian expertise is not readily available to provide the required assistance to counter the threat posed by the biological weapon of mass destruction involved;

(ii) Department of Defense special capabilities and expertise are needed to counter the threat posed by the biological weapon of mass destruction involved; and

(iii) the Department of Defense would be seriously impaired if the Department of Defense assistance were not provided.

SMITH AMENDMENT NO. 1248

Mr. SPECTER (for himself Mr. SMITH) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to amendment No. 1199 proposed by Mr. DOLE to the bill, S. 735, supra; as follows:
“(3) The assistance referred to in paragraph (1) includes the operation of equipment (including equipment made available under section 372 of title 10) to monitor, contain, destroy, or disable any weapon that is designed to cause widespread death or serious bodily injury through the release, dissemination, or impact of toxic or poisonous chemicals or their precursors.

“(4) The Attorney General and the Secretary of Defense shall jointly issue regulations concerning the types of assistance that may be provided under this subsection. Such regulations shall also describe the actions that the Department of Defense personnel may take in circumstances incident to the provision of assistance under this subsection. Such regulations shall not authorize arrest or any conducting searches and seizures that seek evidence related to violations of this section, except for the immediate protection of human life.

“(5) The Secretary of Defense shall provide reimbursement as a condition for providing assistance under this subsection in accordance with section 377 of title 10.

“(6)(A) Except to the extent otherwise provided by the Attorney General, the Deputy Attorney General may exercise the authority of the Attorney General under this subsection only to the Associate Attorney General for Civil Rights, Assistant Attorney General, and any and only if the Associate Attorney General or Assistant Attorney General to whom delegated has been designated by the Attorney General to act for, and to exercise the general powers of the Attorney General.

“(B) Except to the extent otherwise provided by the Secretary of Defense, the Deputy Secretary of Defense may exercise the authority of the Secretary of Defense under this subsection only to the Associate Secretary of Defense for Civil Rights, Assistant Secretary of Defense, and any and only if the Under Secretary or Assistant Secretary to whom delegated has been designated by the Secretary to act for, and to exercise the general powers of the Secretary.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

TRIBUTE TO SISTER RUTH GEHRES

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize an outstanding Kentucky educator who has dedicated her life to serving the Catholic Church. Sister Ruth Gehres is retiring as president of Brescia College on September 15, 1995.

Sister Gehres is in her 10th year as president of the 4-year Catholic liberal arts college. She first came to Brescia College in 1967 as a teacher, a job that kept her extremely busy. She taught English, journalism, literature, linguistics, and elementary German to the hundreds of students enrolled at the campus. In 1986, her hard work and dedication paid off, she was named president of Brescia College, the third in the school’s history.

Sister Gehres has seen many changes at Brescia College over the years. During her tenure, she was responsible for the new campus center, the acquisition of the Northern Kentucky Gas headquarters for the Lechner Graduate Center, the creation of a master’s degree in management program, and a partnership with Mercy Hospital to create a wellness center.

The Evansville, IN, native is a graduate of Mount St. Joseph Academy and Brescia College. She has a doctorate from St. Louis University. She also spent several years teaching elementary school in Hodgenville and Owensboro, KY.

While Brescia College will miss Sister Gehres after her departure, the Catholic Church will remain a big part of her life. She plans to take a sabatical year now ministry. While she is unsure what field she will pursue, Sister Gehres recently told Owensboro’s Messenger Enquirer she plans to seek a field that “engages my gifts and serves the church which also allows time for reflection and—I would hope—writing.”

Mr. President, I ask you and my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to Sister Ruth Gehres. I commend her for her outstanding service to Brescia college. She has played a major role in making the Catholic college the quality institution that it is today. Her hard work, expertise, and kindness will certainly be missed by students, faculty, and fellow administrators.

JUSTIN TYLER CARROLL—NATIONAL SPELLING BEE CHAMPION

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, it is my pleasure today to commend a bright young citizen of Arkansas, Justin Tyler Carroll. Last week Justin was crowned champion of the 67th annual National Spelling Bee.

Justin, a student at Wynne Junior High School, bested 247 contestants at the competition at the Capitol Hilton. The bee consisted of 835 difficult words such as “smaragdine,” “frugivorous,” and “syncretize.” Justin successfully made it through the closing rounds and received his championship cup after spelling “xanthosis,” which means a yellow discoloration of the skin.

Not only is Justin the winner of the National Spelling Bee, but he is the holder of several other outstanding awards as well. He is the recipient of the All-American Scholar Award, National Science Merit Award, National Leadership Merit Award, and National Mathematics Merit Award.

At the young age of 14, this straight A student has already earned many prestigious titles that promise a bright future indeed.

Being the winner of the National Spelling Bee is a tremendous achievement. I commend Justin’s numerous accomplishments and praise his hard work. It is gratifying to those of us who were taught the importance of spelling to see that younger generations also take it seriously.

TRIBUTE TO CHARLES H. LAND

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I rise today to bring to the attention of my Senate colleagues the retirement of Charles Land, publisher of the Tuscaloosa News. After 40 years of service to the News, the city of Tuscaloosa, and the State of Alabama, Charlie has decided to turn over the job of publishing the Tuscaloosa News, and hopes to spend more time working in the community, fishing, and hunting. I would like to take just a few moments, Mr. President, to recognize the outstanding professional and community leadership Charlie has provided over the years.

A native of Memphis, TN, Charlie Land grew up in Tuscaloosa, attended Tuscaloosa public schools and the University of Alabama, and served his country for 3 years in the U.S. Army. Charlie’s newspaper career began in high school, where he covered sports for the school paper—an experience that helped prepare him for his first position at the Tuscaloosa News as a sportswriter. In 1966, he was named Alabama Sportswriter of the Year, and his success led to a series of promotions.

In 1978, Charlie was named publisher of the Tuscaloosa News, and since then he has been a leader in the newspaper industry not only in Alabama, but throughout the southeast. He has served as president of the Alabama Press Association, a board member of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association, president and board member of the Alabama Press Association Journalism Foundation, and several State writing awards from the Associated Press and the Alabama Press Association.

In addition to his professional success, Charlie Land has been an outstanding civil leader, dedicating his time and energy to many worthy causes. He is currently the chairman of the President’s Cabinet at the University of Alabama as well as a member of the National Steering Committee and chairman of the Journalism Department division for the University of Alabama Capital Campaign. In the past, Mr. Land has served as board member of Crimestoppers, president of the United Way of Tuscaloosa County, president of the Greater Tuscaloosa Chamber of Commerce, and a board member of the Society of Fine Arts.

Mr. President, Charlie Land’s dedication to his community and his professional abilities are apparent, and I mention his many awards and honors he has received in recognition of his work. But, as much as Charlie is a business and community leader, he is also a friend and advisor to many organizations and individuals in Tuscaloosa and the State of Alabama.

Recently, the Chamber of Commerce of West Alabama organized a tribute in honor of Charlie Land. The people who have worked with him over the years praised him for having done so much for Tuscaloosa. ‘When Charlie is your friend, you need few others,’ one attendee said. Others commented on his extraordinary insight and great skills as a listener and advisor.
Charlie Land's insight, dedication, attitude, and abilities have made him an invaluable member not only of the Tuscaloosa News, but also of the greater Tuscaloosa community. His retirement may mark the end of a remarkable newspaper career, but the contributions he has made to the newspaper industry, the arts, and Tuscaloosa area business and development will be his legacy.

Mr. President, I would like to thank Charlie Land for many years of dedication and work on behalf of the people of Tuscaloosa and the State of Alabama. I know that the leadership and advice he provided the Tuscaloosa News will be missed, but I am confident that he will continue his involvement in community and civic activities. I thank him for his work, and wish him the best in his retirement.

RECESS UNTIL 9:30 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. DOLE. If there is no further business to come before the Senate, I move we stand in recess under the previous order.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate, at 10:35 p.m. recessed until Wednesday, June 7, 1995, at 9:30 a.m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate June 6, 1995:

C. Richard Allen, of Maryland, to be a Managing Director of the Corporation for National and Community Service. (New Position.)

Chris Evert, of Florida, to be a Member of the Board of Directors of the Corporation for National and Community Service for a term of 3 years. (New Position.)

IN THE AIR FORCE

The following-named officer for appointment in the U.S. Air Force to the grade of major general under the provisions of title 10, United States Code, section 624:

To be major general

Brig. Gen. John B. Hall, Jr., 000-00-0000
MADRIT AREA TODAY, JUNE 6, 1995.

The Chinese-American community is honoring Mr. Chang by hosting a banquet at the Golden Harvest in Warren, MI. The community is pleased to have Mr. Chang as a guest because he is largely responsible for establishing a Chinese cultural service center that is located in Troy, MI. This center serves approximately 30,000 Chinese who call Metropolitan Detroit their home.

On behalf of the Chinese-Americans that reside in Michigan, and as the Representative of the 10th Congressional District of Michigan, I am pleased to officially welcome Mr. Chang to our community. I know that the Macomb County Board of Commissioners is preparing a resolution to welcome Mr. Chang and I applaud their hospitality. We are all encouraged by the level of importance demonstrated by Mr. Chang’s visit that the Republic of China places on its relationship with the Chinese community in Michigan.

I ask that my colleagues join me in offering a warm welcome to Hsiao-Yen Chang.

The United Nations’ Inspector General

HON. LEE H. HAMILTON
OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
TUESDAY, JUNE 6, 1995

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, many Members have been concerned about improving the efficiency and effectiveness of the United Nations. That concern was reflected in section 401 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act for fiscal years 1994 and 1995 (Public Law 103-236). In that law, the Congress withheld significant funds from the U.S. contribution for the United Nations until the United Nations established an independent office of inspector general.

The Office of Internal Oversight Services was established by the United Nations in the fall of 1994. The first report of that office was issued recently. On May 5, I wrote to U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali raising my concerns about this report. I would ask that my letter, his reply, and the reply of Mr. Karl Paschke, the Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services, be included in the record.

Mr. LEE H. HAMILTON, Ranking Democrat, Member, Congress of the United States, Committee on International Relations, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. HAMILTON: Thank you for your letter of May 5, 1995 with reference to the MINURSO report issued on April 5, by the United Nations Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS).

I immediately transmitted your remarks about the report to Under-Secretary-General Paschke and requested him to reply to you. The resolution establishing the OIOS stipulates that his office has operational independence. The Secretary-General may comment on, but may not change the contents of OIOS reports.

In assessing the MINURSO report it should be borne in mind that MINURSO must carry out its mission in a politically sensitive and difficult environment which include operational problems which have been alleged to be political in nature and cannot be dealt with in an audit report. Such matters are not within the purview of the Security Council. In this context, I want to emphasize that Mr. Erik Jensen, my Special Representative for MINURSO, has my full confidence for his performance in a delicate and complicated mission.

With regard to the issuance of other OIOS reports, which you raise in the last paragraph of your letter, delays have been caused by the UN requirement to translate every document addressed to the General Assembly into all six official languages prior to release. In view of the volume of some of the OIOS reports and the unusual workload the UN translating services have been facing because of the non-proliferation treaty conference, it has taken an unusually long time to complete the required translations. The reports you mention are being published this week and should reach you shortly.

With best regards, yours sincerely,

management of procurement of spare parts for vehicles and irregularities in regard to staff costs were earlier noted in the internal audit during September-October 1994 and followed upon my February visit (see copy of the audit referenced above).

Complaints of anti-Americanism were lodged with the Chief Administrative Officer (CAO) of MINURSO. When the auditors met with a number of officials and queried them on anti-Americanism, they were told that the CAO had used such expressions against certain other nationals as well. No evidence was found of discriminatory practice against either Americans or others. The CAO had in the meantime left the mission.

In my view, this MINURSO report effectively addresses the allegations made by Mr. Ruddy and finds that the CAO had been overzealous in his determinations to be well documented in the working papers of the auditor-in-charge and I have personally seen to it that the final version of the report was worded with the discretion and caution which the political sensitivity of the matter, as well as Mr. Ruddy's interests, require. In short, I stand firmly behind this OIOS report on MINURSO.

Let me take this opportunity to inform you about the start-up phase of OIOS in general. A first important task was to establish Internal Oversight as an independent and credible component of management culture at the United Nations Organization. This was not easy, because an effective internal control mechanism had never existed in the UN before. I had to strengthen the Audit Division and redefine its scope. The Investigation Unit had to be created. The working and reporting procedures for the entire office had to be established. A mechanism to ensure compliance with our recommendations had to be set up. The General Assembly Resolution 42/138 also mandated me to move this office from a mere control function to a more proactive role to "advise" and "provide assistance to programme managers". Such a profound change in the corporate culture of an international organization requires more than six months, but I am encouraged by clear signs that OIOS is beginning to have an impact on the UN, in its detergent as well as its advertising. I hope that the United States Congress will understand the complexity of my task and not judge the success of this new office on the basis of a rather short period of time.

Shortly after the publication of the MINURSO report, two in-depth evaluation reports were issued which I am attaching to this letter for your reference. Two more reports were issued on 16 May which are also enclosed.

Regarding the issuance of reports, let me assure you that the time needed between submission and release of reports is not a reflection of any lack of independence of my office. It is my belief that the United States Congress will understand the time needed to prepare reports and the working time at the time of submission. As you will note from the attached reports, the time was also taken to include a status report on the implementation of recommendations, as the original reports were done some months ago.

I am quite confident that my work will be beneficial to the UN and will eventually be appreciated by those in the United States Congress who, like you, believe in the usefulness of the World Organization. In a recent speech at Harvard's John F. Kennedy School, I have lauded the philosophy I bring to this office. Please find a copy of this speech enclosed. It would be my pleasure to come to your office at your convenience to tell you more about my mission. Very sincerely yours.

KARL TH. PASCHKE, Under-Secretary General.
A TRIBUTE TO LITERARY SCHOLAR AND CIVIL RIGHTS LEADER, BERNARD BARSHAY

HON. CHARLES E. SCHUMER
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, June 6, 1995

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor and pay tribute to an extraordinary citizen, Mr. Bernard Barshay. His literary accomplishments and social contributions have truly made a significant impact on the lives of millions. Like many poor Jewish immigrants who worked hard to achieve the American dream, Professor Barshay survived on meager resources while growing up in Brooklyn. However, these circumstances did not prevent Barshay's remarkable determination to succeed and overcome impossible odds.

Throughout his life, Professor Barshay struggled with his vision, eventually becoming legally blind. He continued to pursue his literary goals and at the age of 28, became the youngest syndicated writer in America. After winning several academic scholarships, Barshay continued to prove himself as a writer, playwright, storyteller, and novelist despite his failing eyesight. Even as his doctors urged him to discontinue his journalistic career, Barshay began teaching, and soon after became the chairman of the journalism department at Long Island University. At LIU, he was a member of the Journalism Honor Society, and a member of the Polk Committee, which awards outstanding individuals on newspaper writing. Later Barshay went on to produce dramatic readings and plays for radio broadcast programs. His love of writing and reading developed into yet another successful career as a mystery storyteller, poet, and oral dramatist. His works were recorded in an album titled "Four American Murder Mysteries."

At the height of his teaching and broadcast career, Barshay paid a visit to Louisiana to report on voting rights for blacks. He was then arrested and jailed with other civil rights supporters. Inspired by the voting rights struggle of African-Americans, Barshay began devoting his work toward community activism and educational empowerment. He requested a volunteer in Harlem and continued reading his poetry and children's stories on radio programs. Ever since he moved to the Kensington section of Brooklyn, Professor Barshay has worked tirelessly to promote racial harmony between the Jewish and black residents. The positive impact he has made through his schoolwork is worthy of national recognition. I am proud to have such an insightful and courageous activist residing in Brooklyn.

A TRIBUTE TO THE HOWARD MARTIN RICHARDSON VFW POST 5394

HON. WALTER R. TUCKER III
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, June 6, 1995

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to an organization that continues to make a difference. I rise today to pay tribute to the Howard Martin Richardson VFW Post 5394.

During the 30 years of its existence, Post 5394 has labored toward its goals and objectives of serving the Compton and surrounding communities, veterans of the United States, their widows and orphans; all this while remaining solvent and self-supporting.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to stand before you today to recognize the significant contributions and the 30th anniversary of the Howard Martin Richardson VFW Post 5394.

A TRIBUTE TO CORRINE WILLIAMS DUNN

HON. CARRIE P. MEEK
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, June 6, 1995

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring to the attention of my colleagues one of my constituents who exemplifies what it means to be a concerned community leader and activist—Corrine Williams Dunn.

Mr. Speaker, great neighborhoods don't just happen. They are created through the vision and hard work of hundreds and thousands of community members joining together in common cause.

Bunche Park, Opa-Locka, and Carol City in North Dade are just such neighborhoods and Corrine Dunn is one of the major reasons why. She is one of the most dedicated, most caring members of the community who has helped to make life better for generations of North Dade residents through her extensive community involvement.

Mrs. Dunn has been a major mover in helping to bring much needed county services to North Dade neighborhoods through her pioneering work with Bunche Park Elementary, North Dade Social Services, and the North Dade Health Improvement Association. Mrs. Dunn helped to create a community credit union for local residents.
The bill offers authority and strong encouragement to the Agency to use third parties—unbiased, independent panels under FDA supervision—to approve and oversee early stage trials of new drugs and devices.

The bill relaxes some restrictions now barring the exchange of scientifically legitimate material—especially journal articles, medical textbook excerpts, research compendia—between manufacturers, clinicians, and health insurers. This change will make it easier for knowledgeable observers to receive information on promising, though unapproved, new uses of drugs and devices at lower cost, through the modest reform proposals contained in this legislation.

The bill fundamentally revamps and modernizes FDA review processes for biologics, therapeutic agents which are manufactured or propagated through bioengineering.

The bill offers reasonable relaxation on current restrictions on the export of drugs or devices which are not approved by the FDA, but which meet the importing nation’s approval regime. This flexibility would be limited to exports to member nations of the World Trade Organization.

The bill modifies current reporting and approval requirements for minor manufacturing changes in devices of low to moderate risk. In essence, a manufacturer would be required to report, but not obtain prior approval for manufacturing changes which would improve the product’s quality. This would allow manufacturers to make swift, useful, and perhaps even lifesaving changes in products without having to wait out an FDA approval decision.

Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt in my mind that the FDA is a premier public health care agency with many extraordinarily dedicated employees. This Agency has a crucial health and safety mission that this Congress must not allow to be undermined.

But I firmly believe that these vital safety missions can be preserved, and better products can be brought to consumers more rapidly and at lower cost, through the modest reform proposals contained in this legislation.

It’s time to make a good agency better. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 1742, the FDA Modernization Act of 1995.

TRIBUTE TO MARY CAPERTON BINGHAM
HON. MIKE WARD OF KENTUCKY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, June 6, 1995

Mr. WARD. Mr. Speaker, it is a distinct honor for me to pay tribute today to a truly remarkable individual who recently passed away, Mary Caperton Bingham of Louisville, KY.

Mary Bingham and her husband Barry Bingham, Sr., met in their college days at Radcliffe and Harvard, respectively, and together built a media powerhouse which included The Courier-Journal and The Louisville Times, purchased by the Bingham empire, which began in 1918 with the purchase of The Courier-Journal and The Louisville Times by Robert Worth Bingham, is not the most remarkable aspect of Mary Bingham’s life—the attribute which most accurately describes the way she lived her life is her generosity.

In only a 9-year timespan, from the sale of the Bingham newspaper properties, Mary and Barry Bingham, in contributing almost $60 million to education and arts funds throughout Kentucky, came close to achieving their goal of “giving it all away” before their deaths. In rural Kentucky, Mary Bingham founded bookmobiles to encourage children to read, and educational investments and the arts were central to Mary Bingham’s philosophy of what made a civilization great, and to this end she dedicated many years of her life. She donated money to many social causes, environmental funds, historic preservation, health care facilities, and community developments. Along with this money came her insightful wisdom and expert counsel. Throughout her life, Mary Bingham was a woman far ahead of her time who did not hesitate to let her views be heard and you could rest assured that when she spoke people listened and they appreciated her advice.

My hometown city of Louisville now offers one of the most extensive arts programs in the Nation, including the Kentucky Center for the Arts and the Actors Theatre of Louisville, which could not have been possible without the efforts of Mary Bingham.

The city of Louisville, the Commonwealth of Kentucky, and indeed the entire Nation lost one of our most dedicated and generous citizens and we will truly miss her civic contributions, her insightful knowledge and counsel, her dedication and endurance, and her grace and beauty.

TRIBUTE TO MARY CAPERTON BINGHAM

IN RECOGNITION OF THE CARMEL REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE’S BALANCED BUDGET RESOLUTION
HON. SUE W. KELLY
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, June 6, 1995

Mrs. KELLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend to my Republican colleagues the following resolution of support issued by the Carmel Republican Committee.

The resolution demonstrates the strong public support for Republican-elected officials who are working to achieve the important goals of the Contract With America. Our fight to reduce the Federal budget deficit, to have a balanced budget and reduce and consolidate Government services has not gone without recognition from the American people.

Therefore, I join with the spirit of this resolution in applauding the energy put forth by my colleagues in addressing the many reformed issues facing this Congress. Mr. Speaker at this time, I insert the full text of the Carmel resolution into the RECORD.

Whereas, through liberal reporting by TV and newspaper media an obvious attempt has been made to undermine the energy and public support held by our Republican State and Federal Officials on issues of budget deficit reduction, balanced budgets, consolidation of government services and welfare reform; and

Whereas, due to media’s liberal reporting of these issues the Town of Carmel, Putnam County, State of New York, Republican Committee desires to counteract effects of said liberal reports supporting special interest groups; now,

Therefore, be it resolved, the Town of Carmel Republican Committee membership of ninety-two hereby pledges its support to NYS Governor George Pataki, Senate Majority Leader Joseph Bruno, Assembly Minority Leader Joseph G. J. G. Giaimo, Senator Vincent Leibell, III; 37th District, Assemblyman William Stephens, Jr.; 91st District, and U.S. Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, U.S. House Majority Leader Dick Armey and Speaker Newt Gingrich, NYS U.S. Senator Alfonse D’Amato and NYS U.S. 19th District Congresswoman Sue Kelly toward achieving their goals to alleviate the growing Federal tax burden through enactment of balanced budgets, consolidation and reduction of government services and welfare reform and

Be it Further Resolved, that the Chairman of the Town of Carmel, Putnam County, New York, Republican Committee is hereby directed to forward this resolution to the above named State and Federal Officials.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to my good friend, John Schemmel. John was honored by the members of the German-American Cultural Center this past Sunday during the 45th anniversary banquet. He was named German American of the Year at the Carpathia Hall in Sterling Heights, MI.

John is a first generation German-American. His parents immigrated from Siebenbuergen before he was born in 1920. From an early age, John developed an appreciation of his heritage. He attended St. Thomas German Lutheran School as an elementary student. His German roots were rapidly becoming intertwined with America by the time he became a teenager. He was first baseman in the Transsylvania Saxonia Fastpitch softball league and, as team manager, he and his teammates won the championship in 1939.

In 1942, John found himself in the U.S. Army as an infantryman. He served in the Aleutian Islands and eventually in France and Germany. After returning to the States, John worked for Chrysler Corp., the Detroit Police Department, and he attended the Michigan Technical School for electrical study. He eventually joined the engineering staff at General Motors where he worked for 33 years. John also became one of the first trustees of UAW Local 160 at the General Motors Technical Center.

Long before John began engineering world class quality cars, he was active in organizations that celebrate and commemorate his German heritage. He has been a member of the Alliance of Transylvanian Saxons since 1937 and has served in every office of the Siebenbuerger Sachsien Verein. He sang tenor with the GBU-Saxonia Gemischterchor. The members of the German American Cultural Center are well aware of John’s efforts to preserve the rich German heritage that exists in the metropolitan Detroit area. He served as the center’s president for 4 years and is currently the group’s first vice president.

In addition to his involvement with cultural organizations, John is a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, the Unitas Lions, the Fraternal Order of Eagles and, the United Automobile Workers Local 160, and the Roseville Democratic Committee.

John’s pride in his German heritage is only equaled by his pride in being American. He has always cherished the values, traditions, and integrity of America.

To the German-American community, I urge my colleagues to join me in saluting John Schemmel, German-American of the Year.

Mr. PICKETT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize and honor a truly outstanding naval officer and physician, Vice Adm. Donald F. Hagen, for his devoted and distinguished service as the Surgeon General of the Navy. It is a privilege for me to recognize his many outstanding achievements and commend him for the superb service he has provided to the Department of the Navy and to our great Nation as a whole.

During his 30 year Navy career, Vice Adm. Hagen has served our Nation in a variety of roles, ranging from combat surgeon to the chief executive of a unique, worldwide health care system dedicated to providing health care and related medical services to Navy and Marine Corps members, retirees, and their families.

Upon commissioning as a lieutenant in the U.S. Navy Medical Corps in 1964, Vice Adm. Hagen assumed his first assignment as a battalion surgeon with the Marines in Chu Lai, Republic of Vietnam. He returned to Vietnam twice more, serving aboard the hospital ship U.S.S. Repose and then as staff surgeon with the Riverine Assault Forces in the Mekong Delta.

Vice Admiral Hagen’s experiences as a primary care physician under combat conditions led him to seek a career in surgery. His surgical training took him to Naval Hospital, St. Albans, NY, and Naval Hospital, Portsmouth, VA. He then served as staff surgeon at Naval Aerospace and Regional Medical Center, Pensacola, FL; Naval Hospital Yokosuka, Japan; and Naval Regional Medical Center, Jacksonville, FL. During these years, Vice Admiral Hagen gained not only critical expertise, but became proficient in all aspects of hospital medical staff leadership.

Due to his extensive combat experience aboard hospital ships and service with the Marine Corps, Vice Admiral Hagen was selected to head the Contingency Planning Division at the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery where he served from 1981–1984. Returning his energies to peacetime clinical medicine in 1984, he assumed command of Naval Hospital, Camp Pendleton, CA. During this tour, Vice Admiral Hagen’s broadly based record of excellence was recognized by his selection to flag rank. As a rear admiral, Dr. Hagen returned to the Department of the Navy to serve as the Director, Health Care Operations, Navy Medical Command and Chief of the Medical Corps. In December 1988, he assumed command of the National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, MD. On June 28, 1991, Dr. Hagen took command of all aspects of the Department of the Navy Medical Corps with the rank of vice admiral as the 31st Surgeon General of the Navy.

Vice Adm. Donald F. Hagen will complete his tour as the Surgeon General of the Navy in July 1995, concluding more than 30 years of Federal service. Vice Admiral Hagen has provided the broad vision, innovation, and leadership that have resulted in the Navy’s current high state of medical excellence. A man of Vice Admiral Hagen’s talent and integrity is rare indeed and while his honorable service will be genuinely missed, it gives me great pleasure to call upon my colleagues from both sides of the aisle to wish him and his family every success as well as fair winds and following seas.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, June 4 will mark the 75th anniversary of the Roman Catholic parish of St. Margaret Mary in Manhattan Beach. Though small in membership, the church of St. Margaret Mary remains one of the largest parishes in the Dioceses of New York. This church has provided strong leadership to the community of Manhattan Beach, while serving as a role model to other small Catholic churches within the dioceses. Since 1928, the families of Manhattan Beach have maintained an active membership to St. Margaret Mary’s Church. In honor of this anniversary celebration, I rise to salute the generations of parishioners who have made St. Margaret Mary’s Church a valuable addition to New York’s spiritual community.

The history of St. Margaret Mary’s Church is characterized by courage, strength, and a will to survive during difficult times. For over 75 years, parishioners have overcome severe financial obstacles, often threatening the very existence of the church. Yet, the church and its members fought hard to keep it functioning. By maintaining a strong sense of unity throughout the years, the parishioners of St. Margaret Mary’s Church have successfully preserved the character and vitality of the Manhattan Beach community.

On this most joyous anniversary celebration, the Church of St. Margaret Mary remains a beacon of strength and hope for every Catholic church in New York. May the families and future parishioners of St. Margaret Mary’s be blessed with the good fortune of celebrating many more anniversary celebrations well into the future.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to recognize the collaborative efforts of two institutions in my district, whose achievements are helping to rebuild and restore hope in south St. Louis. DeSales Community Housing Association and Equality Savings and Loan Association have been recognized by the Social Compact in the 1995 Outstanding Community Investment Awards for their partnership achievement: the creation of an innovative housing program that allows residents to participate in the decisions that are shaping their community.

The Social Compact is a national coalition of leaders from the financial services industry and the nonprofit sector, dedicated to increasing private investment in low-income communities, both rural and urban. To achieve this mission, they lead by example, recognizing successful and innovative partnerships between financial services institutions and neighborhood nonprofit organizations that are working toward vulnerable neighborhoods. As a result of the Outstanding Community Investment Awards, DeSales Community Housing and Equality Savings were chosen out of 160 applicants as a model partnership. DeSales are being recognized for the creation of the DeSales Mutual Housing Association. This kind of development represents the first step toward home ownership for life-long renters. Mutual housing associations encourage community-based ownership of affordable rental properties. Neighborhood residents and project tenants actively participate in ownership and management decisions of their buildings, including site selection, design, construction, and organizational structure.

DeSales began working with residents on the mutual housing association model in the early 1990’s. Today, thanks to the dedication of 30 neighborhood residents, the Iowa Avenue Townhouses and the California Townhouses have taken the place of nine vacant buildings sold to St. Louis as models of affordable, resident-controlled housing.

Equality Savings and Loan Association assumed a critical leadership role in making this project happen. The small thrift took charge of convincing the financial community, businesses, foundations, and the major office of the credibility of the project. Equality also helped enlist additional investors to provide permanent financing and, equally important, they convinced St. Louis residents and others that this innovative approach could work.

Thanks to the first mutual housing association model ever enacted in Missouri, neighborhood residents are taking on leadership responsibilities in their community. Small-scale rehabilitation is happening everywhere, and the community’s church and elementary school are coming into townhomes for stabilizing their surroundings.

I applaud DeSales Community Housing Corporation and Equality Savings and Loan Association as a replicable example of a public-private partnership that empowers residents to reclaim their neighborhoods.

MEDICAL SAVINGS ACCOUNTS

Many Members of Congress believe that Medical Savings Accounts (MSAs) have the potential to reduce health care costs and increase the options with insurance. There have been suggestions that MSAs be implemented not only in the private sector but in the Medicare program as well.

The Consortium for Citizens with Disabilities Task Force has major concerns with the emphasis presently being placed on Medical Savings Accounts as a solution to our health system’s problems of access and affordability. The use of MSAs is not only untested, but also has the very strong potential for making health insurance less affordable for persons with disabilities and serious chronic illnesses. Because of our many concerns, which are discussed below, and in the absence of other reforms, the CCD Task Force does not support the establishment of MSAs as either an incremental reform or as a solution to the health care crisis.

MSAs will allow employers to provide health-related expenditures. State MSA laws generally create tax deductible MSAs in conjunction with high deductibles often do not provide the comprehensive coverage needed by persons with serious illnesses or conditions. Some of these plans only have lifetime or per condition limits of only $100,000.

The American Academy of Actuaries has estimated that persons with high health expenditures will have out-of-pocket costs with MSAs. MSAs may also increase out-of-pocket costs if the amount employers contribute to the MSA is insufficient to cover the catastrophic deductible. Additionally, the combined cost to the employer of an MSA contribution and the catastrophic health plan may not be less than the cost of a standard health plan.

If large numbers of individuals choose MSAs plus catastrophic health plans, the health insurance market will be further segmented, reducing the size of the population pool needed to spread risk adequately.

MSA will likely lead to adverse selection because they will be utilized primarily by younger, healthier people who do not anticipate a need for health care. Persons who anticipate health care expenditures, those who need comprehensive coverage, and those who are older and at higher risk for needing health care are likely to remain in standard low deductible health plans. Individuals with MSAs could also change to a low-deductible plan when they become sick or anticipate medical bills (e.g., childbirth expenses) or exacerbating the problem of adverse selection.

Adverse selection will lead to higher premiums for persons in standard, low deductible health insurance plans. Depending on the number of individuals with MSAs, it is estimated that if MSAs are widely adopted, the cost of a standard, low deductible health insurance policy would rise by as much as 28%.

Increases of this magnitude will make comprehensive, low deductible insurance unaffordable both for employers and individuals who want to purchase these policies. There is no evidence that MSAs will make consumers more cost conscious when they are seriously ill. Physicians—not consumers—determine what treatment is needed. If surgery is recommended, consumers don’t look for the cheapest surgeon, they look for the best surgeon.

Individuals may forgo preventive and early intervention services if they are allowed to use money left in their MSAs at the end of the year for personal expenses other than health care. There is also the question of whether it is appropriate to allow pre-tax dollars to be used for non-health expenses.

It is likely that catastrophic health plans will restrict the type of health care expenditures that will count towards the deductible. For example, if an individual spends $3000 on mental health care, the insurance plan may not cover the additional costs required to administer MSAs. There is no evidence that MSAs will make consumers more cost conscious when they are seriously ill. Physicians—not consumers—determine what treatment is needed. If surgery is recommended, consumers don’t look for the cheapest surgeon, they look for the best surgeon.

A majority of Americans are enrolled in some form of managed health care plan. It is uncertain what savings will be derived from these plans. Those opposed to managed care view MSAs as a means to maintain the market for indemnity insurance and fee-for-service health care delivery.

Experience with MSAs is very limited. It is not clear whether they will result in savings. Some analysts predict that any potential savings will be offset by the additional costs required to administer MSAs.

Most importantly, the CCD Task Force believes that allowing employers to take advantage of the self-employed the option of establishing tax deductible MSAs in conjunction with high deductible catastrophic insurance coverage is not the solution to our nation’s health system problems because:

- MSAs do not address the need for insurance by millions of working Americans whose employers will not contribute to the cost of health insurance; and
- MSAs do not address the need for insurance by millions of low-income individuals who are self-employed or unemployed and who cannot afford to buy health insurance.

THE ADVANCED MEDICAL DEVICE ASSURANCE ACT OF 1995

HON. WILLIAM M. THOMAS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, June 6, 1995

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased today to introduce the Advanced Medical Device Assurance Act of 1995 in order to clarify the scope of coverage and amount of payment under the Medicare Program of items and services associated with the use of certain medical devices approved for investigational use.

Questions have been raised as to whether Medicare should reimburse for hospital and physician services when procedures involving a medical device approved for use by the Federal Drug Administration [FDA] under the Investigational Drug Device [IDD] is used. Our Nation’s leading clinical researchers and doctors, and the patients who depend on these improved medical technologies are losing because of this confusion. Additionally, the use of these advanced devices is dramatically declining around the country. Many of the medical technology companies are moving all of their research out of the United States to Europe, Canada, and Japan where payment policy is not an issue.

These advanced medical devices reduce length of surgical procedure, hospitalization, patient mortality, and the need for repeat procedures. All of these patients, whether they get an advanced device or not, would be in the hospital anyway receiving medically indicated care. Clarifying the policy to provide coverage for newer devices would not increase costs because the DRG pays a set rate for care regardless of whether there is a clinical trial involved.

The American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons, American College of Cardiology, American Hospital Association, American Medical Association, Association of American Medical Colleges, Association of Professors of Medicine, California Health Institute, Catholic Health Association, Cleveland Clinic, Coalition of Boston Teaching Hospitals, Federation of American Health Systems, Greater New York Hospital Association, Health Industry Manufacturers Association, Mayo Clinic, North American Society for Pediatric Radiology, and the Society of Thoracic Surgeons all believe we need to clarify this policy. These are all well-regarded health care organizations and I believe this bill brings about the clarity that is needed.

I strongly encourage my colleagues to co-sponsor this important, cost-neutral legislation and to work for its prompt enactment so that Medicare beneficiaries will have access to safe and high-quality medical care.

STATEMENT IN RECOGNITION OF 2D LT. REBECCA E. MARIER

HON. SUE W. KELLY
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, June 6, 1995

Mrs. KELLY. Mr. Speaker I rise to acknowledge and salute the outstanding achievements of 2D Lt. Rebecca E. Marier. This impressive young woman recently graduated from the U.S. Military Academy in West Point, NY at the top of her class—top of her class academically, physically, and militarily.

Second Lieutenant Marier opted to forgo an education at prestigious Harvard University, in order to pursue her dream of a degree from an institution which has a proud tradition of molding our Nation’s leaders. Marier is unquestionably a role model for all of our Nation’s young people, men and women alike.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that you and all my colleagues join me in not only commending Second Lieutenant Marier’s achievements, but more importantly, commending her relentless dedication to the service of our country. I would also ask, Mr. Speaker, that the New York Times’ article which appeared this past Sunday, noting Second Lieutenant Marier’s achievements, be inserted at this point in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

From the New York Times, June 4, 1995

WOMAN IS NO. 1 IN WEST POINT CLASS
WEST POINT, NY—For the first time in the United States Military Academy’s 193-year-old history, a woman took the No. 1 class slot as the top student of the 988 new members of the Army officer corps today.

The woman, Second Lieut. Rebecca E. Marier, 21, of New Orleans, was the head of her class in the school’s three programs—military, academic and physical.

“It was the greatest feeling in the world, throwing up that white hat,” Lieutenant Marier said after the ceremony. “I’m just glad to be part of the progress women are making all over the country.”

Four years ago, she started her family and friends of her family together over Harvard University for her undergraduate work because she wanted the all-around challenge and leadership training West Point offered.

But she plans to get to Harvard, after all, becoming the second cadet in West Point history to go on to medical school there, said Andrea Hamburger, an Academy spokeswoman.

Women began attending West Point in 1976, and with today’s class, more than 1,400 women will have been commissioned second lieutenants.

At the ceremonies, the Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Gordon Sullivan, addressed graduates, telling them that in an age of changing circumstances, there was no way to predict where they might serve.

General Sullivan omitted remarks about a possible United States role in Bosnia, which had appeared in an advance version of his address received by reporters.

In the prepared text, General Sullivan reviewed the American role as a member of NATO and said the United States was “prepared to act with NATO should the need arise.”

Pressed afterward for an explanation of the omission in his speech, he replied: “I felt I had made the point of the uncertainty of the world. I don’t think I needed to go into the details.”

General Sullivan’s advance text read:

“In response to the appalling Bosnian Serb behavior over the past week, we have been meeting with our NATO allies to consider the next steps to keep the U.N. protection force in place, because it remains our best insurance against an even worse humanitarian disaster there.

“Although our policy remains that we will not become combatants in the conflict, we are prepared to act with NATO should the need arise.”

ACDA IS ESSENTIAL FOR OUR NATIONAL SECURITY

HON. JAMES P. MORAN
OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, June 6, 1995

Mr. MORAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my support for the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency as an independent agency and to urge that we consider how important arms control continues to be for our national security. This is also the conclusion of a recent editorial from the News & Observer, from Raleigh, NC. H.R. 1561 would abolish this agency, which has proven itself to be an economic bargain. Not only does the operation of the agency come with a modest price tag of under $50 million, its efforts have saved the Government millions, if not billions, of dollars in defense outlays over its 30-plus years of existence.

I urge a “no” vote on final passage of H.R. 1561. We should not merge ACDA and the other separate foreign service agencies with separate missions into the State Department. The U.S. ACDA is pursuing the biggest and broadest arms control and nonproliferation agenda in history. As the following article makes clear, now is not the time to be dismantling the agency that is charged with getting these agreements negotiated, implemented and verified.

From the News & Observer, May 30, 1995

FOREIGN POLICY MEETING

A proposal to reorganize foreign affairs agencies has consequences beyond mere streamlining. Some in Congress would like excessive control over foreign policy, a bad idea in today’s unstable world.

Overhauling the nation’s foreign policy agencies, as proposed by Senator Helms, seems on first glance to make sense. Separate organizations tend to be inefficient, and as long as the rest of government is being “reinvested,” foreign affairs shouldn’t be exempt.

But a closer look unvels flaws in the proposal, which is advanced in pending legislation in both the Senate and the House.

For one thing, the assorted foreign services agencies don’t all have the same mission; merging them into the State Department risks diluting their influence in the sea of a single mighty bureaucracy. In a recent visit to The N&O, John Holum, director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, made a strong argument along this line for preserving his office as a separate expert voice.

As Holum pointed out, the agency’s advocacy of arms control and nonproliferation is crucial in the face of new threats from the spread of weapons. His worry, and it comes across as legitimate, is that the arms-control quest could become secondary to the State Department’s concerns for smooth diplomacy and maintaining good relations with other countries.
Voluntary return to their countries of origin is neither the sole option available, it is also the humane option.

Mr. Speaker, this Member would ask to insert into the Record an article from the May 24, 1995 edition of the New York Times, entitled, "U.N. Links G.O.P. to Boat People's Riots." The article analyzing the problems in section 2104 from the Refugee Policy Group, a nongovernment organization with much experience dealing with Indochinese refugees.

U.N. Links G.O.P. to Boat People’s Riots (By Phillip Shenon)

Bangkok, Thailand, May 23—United Nations officials asserted today that a Republican-sponsored proposal to offer asylum to thousands of Vietnamese boat people in the United States set off riot last weekend that left more than 200 wounded in Hong Kong.

They also warned that the bill could lead to a new exodus from Vietnam. Refugee officials say the riots last Saturday began when 1,500 Vietnamese, many of them carrying handmade metal spears, refused to be transferred from a detention camp in Hong Kong to another in preparation for their deportations to Vietnam. It was the most violent clash in years between the boat people and local police.

The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, which oversees the detention camps, said the Vietnamese were emboldened to riot by the recent move by Republicans in the House of Representatives to offer asylum to as many as half of the 40,000 Vietnamese still held in detention camps in Asia.

"Absolutely," said Jahanshah Assadi, head of mission for the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, when asked if there was a connection between the legislation and the riots. During the riots, he said, "you saw thousands of people with S. flags, with pictures of President Clinton all over the place."

At least 130 Hong Kong firemen, police and corrections officers were hurt in the clashes on Saturday in the Whitehead detention center, the largest of the Hong Kong camps used to detain the Vietnamese. Dozens of Vietnamese were injured, too, in which the camp was blanketed by thick clouds of tear gas.

Representative Chris H. Smith, a New Jersey Republican who is a key sponsor of the legislation, said in a statement today in Washington that there was no evidence of a connection between the Riots in the camps and the violence in Hong Kong. It is "grossly unfair to blame resistance to forced repatriation on the very people who are trying to come up with a peaceful and gentle solution to the problem of these refugees," he declared.

Mr. Smith has said that many of the Vietnamese residents of the camps, including Buddhist monks and former soldiers of the American-backed South Vietnamese Government, are legitimate political refugees who could be persecuted by Vietnam’s Communist Government if sent home.

While the Republican-drafted legislation is opposed by the Clinton Administration and faces an uncertain fate in Congress, word of the Republican plan is already circulating in the camps in Hong Kong, where nearly 21,000 Vietnamese were recently detained. Mr. Assadi said in a telephone interview that the Vietnamese who took part in the riots "have the false hope of going to the United States."

Even if the bill is defeated in Congress or vetoed by Mr. Clinton, he said, "the damage has been done," since many Vietnamese now believe they can resist deportation because "they have strong support from influential people." Mr. Assadi said the American asylum proposal could also lead to a new exodus of Vietnamese, taking to rickety boats and pushing off into the dangerous waters of the South China Sea in the hope of becoming one of the lucky 20,000 who might be offered resettlement in the United States.

"That risk is definitely there now," he said. The $30 million asylum plan is part of a foreign affairs appropriations bill now before the full House of Representatives. The bill, opposed by the Clinton Administration, has already been approved by the House International Relations Committee.

While some of the Vietnamese rioters waved photographs of President Clinton last weekend, the Clinton Administration is in fact a strong advocate of a United Nations-sponsored

While some of the Vietnamese rioters waved photographs of President Clinton last weekend, the Clinton Administration is in fact a strong advocate of a United Nations-sponsored plan to send virtually all of them home to Vietnam. While the United States granted asylum to most of the more than one million Vietnamese who fled their homeland after the Vietnam War, sympathy for the boat people has mostly run out. The State Department says that virtually all of the Vietnamese who remain in Asian detention camps are economic migrants who have no legitimate fear of persecution in Vietnam and are not entitled to asylum.

The deportation program, known as the Comprehensive Plan of Action, was supposed to empty most of the detention camps in Asia—there are large camps in Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines and Thailand—by the end of the year.

The Hong Kong Government clearly outraged that the moves in Congress may have contributed to the violence in the camps.

While this Member fully understands and shares the desire to provide fair and humane treatment for the Indochinese boat people in Southeast Asian refugee camps. This Member’s effort, along with Mr. Obey of Wisconsin and Mr. LAMAR Smith of Texas, to strike this dangerous and irresponsible provision was unsuccessful.

While Mr. Speaker, this Member would ask to insert into the Record an article from the May 26, 1995.

Mr. Speaker, this Member believes that, for the 40,000 camp residents whom the United Nations has determined to be economic migrants rather than political refugees, voluntary return to their countries of origin is not only the sole option available, it is also the humane option.

Mr. Speaker, this Member would ask to insert into the Record an article from the May 24, 1995 edition of the New York Times, entitled, "U.N. Links G.O.P. to Boat People’s Riots." The article analyzing the problems in section 2104 from the Refugee Policy Group, a nongovernment organization with much experience dealing with Indochinese refugees.

While Congress of course should have a say, carried too far this becomes a dangerous proposal put forward by the American-backed plan to send virtually all of them home to Vietnam.

Mr. Speaker, this Member would ask to insert into the Record an article from the May 26, 1995.
On the humanitarian front this policy reversal would represent a death knell to future efforts on the part of the U.S. to get the U.N. and other countries to cooperate with us in creating a migration flow. There is belief that some, but not all, the members of that population may be refugees. This belief is based on a misapprehension that the screening procedures in the region have been basically flawed. The fact is that massive international effort and resources have gone into screening the applicants in this region. Indeed, more effort has been made in southeast Asia to determine whether someone meets the refugee definition than in any other part of the world. The international standard of who is a refugee is incorporated in this review process. This international standard was incorporated in the Refugee Act of 1980 into U.S. law and in turn into the Worldwide Processing Guidelines of the INS.

The implementation of this standard is subjective. In order to protect against errors reviews of problematic cases are possible under current arrangements. If there is reasonable doubt regarding some of the recent decisions, more effective way to address these concerns would be to encourage a review of the few cases where there is an issue. It is an overreaction to scuttle the CPA where a returnee has returned or the asylum seeker has been persecuted or been maltreated. The effects of this provision, of course, would be to cut funds which can support the return, monitoring, and assistance to the Vietnamese who go back either voluntarily or involuntarily.

The intention may be to reserve funds for the resettlement of a larger number of Vietnamese or Laotians. So long, however, as the refugee definition is the standard that is used to adjudicate claims, the reality is going to be that very few of the people in the camps will meet the standard.

While I would be against it, we can, of course, validly, to admit Vietnamese and Laotians under the terms of the Lautenberg Amendment. It is, however, unreasonable to expect that the countries in the region would be as effective in identifying these claimants with UNHCR oversight would be willing to apply this standard to their own review of these cases.

Given strong sentiments in this country to restrict the numbers of new immigrants, my guess is that there would be strong opposition to bringing substantial numbers of Vietnamese and Laotians to the U.S., even as refugees or special humanitarian entrants. It is also unlikely that normal immigration numbers would be allocated to this group as there has been an effort to get Vietnamese to apply for immigration to the U.S. from within Vietnam. If these assumptions are true then the result of this expression of sympathy for the Vietnamese in the camps that have been screened out can be to provide them with a false hope. At best, it could lead to a situation where people who were becoming reconciled to returning to their country would re-commit themselves to remaining in the camps. Worse outcomes could be a renewed wave of violence and even more riots or other disruptions and violence in the camps.

As a fellow official with the Office of Refugee Resettlement during the peak of the Indochinese refugee resettlement program, I cannot personally be accused of lack of sympathy or concern for the plight of the Indochinese. I feel the decisions made around the Comprehensive Plan of Action were the right decisions, both for the countries concerned and the migrants involved. To reverse course now will have negative effects on efforts to address the plight of refugees everywhere.

Thank you for seeking my comments on this matter.

Sincerely, DENNIS GALLAGHER, Executive Director.

THE TAX FAIRNESS FOR FARMERS, RANCHERS, AND SMALL BUSINESSES ACT

HON. TIM JOHNSON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, June 6, 1995

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased today to introduce legislation that will provide for tax changes to benefit farmers, ranchers, and small businesses. This legislation is entitled the “Tax Fairness for Farmers, Ranchers, and Small Businesses Act.”

This bill contains three major changes in Federal tax policy which will help to support farmers and ranchers through bad years, support the beginning of new farmers and small businesses, and place family farmers, ranchers, and small businesses on a level playing field with their corporate counterparts.

The first change this bill would make is to create a form of income averaging under which farmers and ranchers would be permitted to carry forward any standard deductions and personal exemptions that go unused during a low-income year. This would help farmers and ranchers even out the cycle of ups and downs in agricultural income caused by the weather, giving them increased ability to recover after a devastating year.

Second, this bill would help promote beginning farmers and ranchers by allowing a one-time capital gains exemption up to $500,000 for farmers and ranchers over 55 who sell their farm or ranch to a qualified beginning farm or ranch and small businesses, and place family farmers, ranchers, and small businesses on a level playing field with their corporate counterparts.

Third, this legislation would establish and make permanent a 100-percent deduction of health insurance premiums for self-employed persons. Corporations have the ability to deduct the full cost of their health insurance premiums, and it is only fair for farmers and small business owners to have the same right. It is time for this inequity to end.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that you and the rest of my colleagues join me in supporting this legislation, and work with me to bring tax fairness to our Nation's family farmers, ranchers, and small business owners.

TRIBUTE TO A 31ST DISTRICT VOLUNTEER

HON. ANO HOUGHTON
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, June 6, 1995

Mr. HOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I’d like to take a minute to make a few remarks in recognition of a very special lady. Dorothy Brownell is a remarkable woman. She has a wonderful blend of energy, wit, and commitment. She keeps everyone around her on their toes.

A former school dental hygienist, she officially retired in 1976. I got to know her during her second career—as a volunteer. For more than 7 years, she has been the cornerstone of our Jamestown district office. She could write the book on volunteerism—that is, if she ever slowed down long enough to put pen to paper.

Let me recap just a few of her interests. She has dished up food at a local food bank; is an officer with the local chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons, Foster Grandparents Program, and the United Senior Council; worked with the United Way; has been an ombudsman for long-term care at an area nursing home, and worked on the county Veterans Listing Program. You’ll have to take my word for it—this litany only scratches the surface. Other activities have been sandwiched between trips to Ireland, Italy, and any number of our own States.

Dorothy has been recognized for her efforts. She received the New York State Legislative Achievement Award; was named United Senior Council’s 1990 Senior Citizen of the Year; received a Certificate of Achievement from Manor Oak Nursing Home and another for her work with Catholic Charities Outreach for the Aging. On top of that, Dorothy took a silver medal for swimming in the 1990 Senior Olympics.

What prompts my remarks today is that Dorothy, at the tender age of 77, is calling it quits. She’s launching her second retirement with a train trip across Canada and following up with courses at Elderhostels. To record that she will be missed is small—this little lady with the great big heart deserves the very best life has to offer.

SALUTE TO DR. RAYMOND M. OLSON

HON. ELTON GALLEGGY
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, June 6, 1995

Mr. GALLEGGY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to salute a selfless community leader and educator who has spent his life helping those around him find strength and guidance through two principal sources—education and religion.

Dr. Raymond M. Olson was born nearly 85 years ago on a farm near Eagle Grove, IA. But those of us who make our homes in Ventura County are grateful for the fact that he found his way out West and has selflessly dedicated himself to improving the lives of the people around him.

In his long, distinguished and varied career, Dr. Olson has served as a teacher, a pastor... in the Lutheran Church, president of the National Lutheran council and president of the California Lutheran College in Thousand Oaks. He now holds the title of president emeritus of California Lutheran university and continues to maintain his ties to the school.

Dr. Olson’s impressive career accomplishments are rivaled only by a tireless dedication to his community and extensive record of public service.

He has served on the Ventura County grand jury, the board of directors of the Conejo Valley Historical Society, the United Fund of Ventura County, various boards of education with the Cultural Center Planning Committee and has been a member of the Thousand Oaks Rotary Club since 1963.

In addition to these numerous professional and philanthropic commitments, Dr. Olson and his wife of nearly 60 years, Helen, have raised two daughter and a son.

In short, Mr. Speaker, I believe that Dr. Raymond M. Olson has truly served his family and his community through a lifetime of service and selflessness.

He was recently selected as the 1995 Patriotic Citizen of the Year by the Conejo Valley chapter of the Military Order of the World Wars and was presented with the Chapter’s Silver Patrick Henry Medallion. This recognition was truly appropriate, because one of the basic tenets of the organization is that it is better to serve than to be served.

Dr. Olson has lived his life in strict adherence to this belief and has backed up this opinion with an unparalleled record of action and dedication to others. I commend him to all in this body and congratulate him on his award.

STATEMENT RECOGNIZING NORENE COLLER THE 1995 REGION 2 EPA ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY AWARD RECIPIENT

HON. SUE W. KELLY
OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 6, 1995

Mrs. KELLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to offer my congratulations to Norene Coller, a constituent of mine who was recently awarded an Environmental Protection Agency [EPA] Environmental Quality Award for region 2 which includes New York, New Jersey, and Puerto Rico.

Over the past 20 years, Ms. Coller has devoted herself to improving the quality of the environment in region 2, and to increasing public involvement in environmental action. As a biology teacher in Hyde Park, NY, Ms. Coller has involved her eighth grade students in innovative environmental brainstorming exercises. A renowned volunteer of the Dutchess County Environmental Management Council (EMC), Ms. Coller has served as the council’s chairperson since 1982. And under her direction, EMC has fulfilled the needs of the community by formulating a comprehensive agenda to battle the growing problems associated with hazardous and solid waste management.

Ms. Coller’s energetic direction, as both an educator and public servant, has increased the quality of the environment of region 2.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that you join me in recognizing the fine achievements of Ms. Coller.

She is to be commended for her dedicated service to the community, and should be noted as a true friend of the environment.

HOOSIER FARMERS URG CONTINUING SUPPORT FOR EXPORTS AND RESEARCH

HON. LEE H. HAMILTON
OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 6, 1995

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to call attention to the results of my 1995 farm bill questionnaire. The questionnaire responses indicated that Hoosier farmers are willing to accept less funding for farm programs, but only in the context of broader spending reductions. While farm programs should not be singled out for funding cuts, I am pleased—but not surprised—that Hoosier farmers are willing to do their fair share to balance the budget. Among the different agricultural programs, cuts in crop support payments received the broadest acceptance, with nearly 63 percent favoring reductions.

Hoosier farmers gave their strongest support to funding for promoting U.S. exports and agricultural research and education. I agree with this shift in priorities. The 1995 farm bill should be more market-oriented while preserving our competitive edge in world markets.

Of those responding, 64 percent had participated in Federal farm programs in the last 5 years, 75 percent of whom received 10 percent or less of their yearly farm revenue from direct payments. Farmers also expressed their support for limiting farm payments for wealthier farmers, while rejecting proposals to guarantee all farmers a minimum income. Hoosiers also support Congress’ decision last year to abolish the Disaster Assistance Program.

I thank the many Hoosiers who answered the questionnaire, and I appreciate their careful consideration of these important agricultural issues.

QUESTIONNAIRE RESULTS
(The results may not add up to 100 percent due to rounding and multiple responses.)

1. What general policy direction do you favor for the 1995 farm bill? (percent)
   - Do not change current policy .................... 32.8
   - Modify the current crop insurance program decreases soil erosion, encourages wildlife protection, and adds more incentives for alternative farming practices ............. 35.7
   - Establish more controls over pesticide use ................ 8.7
   - Produce more incentives for alternative farming practices ......... 35.3
   - Do not favor this concept .......................... 21.9

2. Are you willing to accept less funding for Federal farm programs? (percent)
   - Yes .............................................. 49.7
   - No .................................................. 19.2
   - Don’t know ...................................... 31.1

3. If commodity programs must be reduced, which of the following deficit-cutting options would you favor? (percent)
   - Cutting target prices .............................................. 12.1
   - Raise acreage reserve program (ARP) levels .................. 11.0
   - Raise loan rates .............................................. 12.9
   - Reduce $50,000 payment limitation cap ....................... 38.8
   - Establish income ceiling ................................... 48.7
   - Some farm groups have suggested abolishing all current farm programs and using the funds for an income support level of 70 percent of each farmer’s historical income. Farmers would then be free to farm according to their interpretation of the markets, with the assurance that in a bad year they would receive no less than 70 percent of their usual income. Do you: (Percent)
     - Favor this concept ...................................... 21.9
     - Favor this concept with changes .................. 16.6
     - Oppose this concept .................................. 60.4

4. The Conservation Reserve Program [CRP] pays farmers a yearly fee per acre to keep certain land out of production. The program decreases soil erosion, encourages wildlife and life and boosts the value of property by controlling supply. CRP expires this year. Should Congress: (Percent)
   - Continue CRP as is .................. 26.2
   - Focus payments on more environmentally sensitive areas .......... 22.6
   - Phase out CRP .............................................. 35.3
   - Allow more acres in CRP with reduced payments .......... 15.9

5. There are growing concerns among consumers about the possible effects of pesticide use on the environment and public health. If pesticide use should be monitored, which of the following proposals would you most support? (Percent)
   - Promote extension programs to curb pesticide use .......... 22.5
   - Establish more controls over pesticide use ............... 36.1
   - Provide more incentives for alternative farming practices .... 8.7
   - Do not change current policy .......................... 32.8

6. The Ad Hoc Disaster Assistance Program has been replaced by a much broader Federal crop insurance program. Instead of irregular and expensive disaster payments, farmers in USDA programs will now enroll in a basic catastrophic insurance system with incentives to provide more comprehensive insurance. Which of the following options do you favor? (Percent)
   - Keep the current system .................................. 33.9
   - Return to the ad hoc disaster payments .................. 5.6
   - Modify the current crop insurance system .......... 35.7
   - Eliminate all federal emergency assistance .............. 24.8

7. The Uruguay round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade [GATT] reduces agricultural subsidies in foreign countries. Because U.S. subsidies are already far lower than our competitors’, other countries will make larger cuts in their farm programs. Would you favor further reductions in worldwide farm subsidies, even if some commodity prices and U.S. farm programs might be reduced? (Percent)
   - Yes .............................................. 49.7
   - No .................................................. 19.2
   - Don’t know ...................................... 31.1

8. Food and nutrition programs are often described as “indirect” farm programs because they increase food purchases by some $30 or $60 billion per year. They are also a source of urban support for the farm bill. Which of the following food and nutrition proposals do you most favor?
