House of Representatives

The House met at 10 a.m.

PRAYER
The Chaplain, Rev. James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

As we seek to learn the details of the issues before us and as we endeavor to understand all certainties, it is our prayer, O gracious God, that we will also gain a heart of wisdom. For we know that Your spirit is working within us when we have insight and discernment and sound judgment. Remind us always, O God, that it is not wise simply to observe events or to know all the facts, for the scripture proclaims that “the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and the knowledge of the Holy One is insight.” Amen.

THE JOURNAL
The Speaker. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day’s proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE
The Speaker. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Baesler] will lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. BAESLER led the Pledge of Allegiance.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE
A message from the Senate by Mr. Lundregan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a concurrent resolution of the House of the following title:

SUPPORT H.R. 1834, THE OSHA REFORM ACT
(Mr. Norwood asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Secretary of Labor issued a so-called analysis that supposedly showed that Republican OSHA reforms would lead to more workplace injuries. This is outrageous fearmongering. Instead of playing politics, the Secretary should be finding an answer for the question we have asked: Why, after spending over $4 billion, is there so little evidence that OSHA has made a real impact on reducing injuries and deaths?

The Secretary is fond of noting that injury rates have been declining since OSHA’s birth in 1970, but he rarely mentions that those rates have been dropping, indeed, since 1946. Perhaps the Secretary just does not want to consider the real world. Maybe he is just too busy trying to figure out that government can run our lives to think that OSHA really is a failure.

It is time the American taxpayer insists that OSHA spend at least half of its funds on health and safety in the workplace, rather than hiring dictators to fine small businesses.

KEEPING THE EQUAL OPPORTUNITY PROMISE
(Mr. Baesler asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BAESLER. Mr. Speaker, in 1994, the Federal Government spent less than 2 percent of the Federal budget educating the Nation’s children. Now some in Congress are saying on the one hand that American children need to compete with the children of other nations—in other words that education is a national priority. On the other hand they are saying, let’s spend less. I ask my colleagues, “Is education a national priority or not?”

The overwhelming majority of Federal education spending goes toward evening the odds for disadvantaged children in America. Yet some would ask me to support a funding bill that would cut title I funding which helps students from disadvantaged backgrounds with the three R’s. They ask me to support this bill even though it would deny this important funding to 19,100 Kentucky students.

I am not ready to pull the educational rug out from under these kids. I firmly believe that the promise of America is equal opportunity, not equal outcomes. But I also believe title I is the kind of program that provides such equal opportunity and puts the Nation’s money where its mouth is.

EVERY AMERICAN SHOULD KNOW WHAT IS IN THE MEDICARE TRUSTEES REPORT
(Mr. Watts of Oklahoma asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, the Secretary of Health and Human Services met with the bipartisan Commission on Medicare and Long Term Care on the Senate side and the House side met with the Medicare Trustees on the House side.

Mr. WATTS. Mr. Speaker, today the bipartisan Commission on Medicare and Long Term Care presented its report. The Commissioners presented two recommendations: that Medicare be privatized and that the Medicare beneficiaries pay the entire cost of their health care.

The overwhelming majority of Federal education spending goes toward evening the odds for disadvantaged children in America. Yet some would ask me to support a funding bill that would cut title I funding which helps students from disadvantaged backgrounds with the three R’s. They ask me to support this bill even though it would deny this important funding to 19,100 Kentucky students.

I am not ready to pull the educational rug out from under these kids. I firmly believe that the promise of America is equal opportunity, not equal outcomes. But I also believe title I is the kind of program that provides such equal opportunity and puts the Nation’s money where its mouth is.

The current debate over Medicare clearly shows the wisdom of this statement. Here is a copy of the Medicare trustees report. It says that immediate action is needed to save Medicare from bankruptcy. As a Republican, and as a concerned citizen, I want every American to get hold of this report. 202-224-3121 is the number for their representative. They should ask for the Medicare trustees summary report. I want the American people to know what is in this report. It is important that the people decide for themselves if this report is valid.

If this report is true, then we need to get real serious, real quick about saving Medicare. It does not help when Democrats try to politicize and demagog this very important issue.

REPUBLICAN CUTS IN BILINGUAL EDUCATION

(Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD. Mr. Speaker, the Republican Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bills cut bilingual education programs by 75 percent.

This massive cut penalizes and punishes children by robbing them of their constitutional right to equal educational opportunities.

The primary objective of bilingual education is to teach children English while ensuring they do not fall behind in other basic subjects.

Numerous studies have documented that many limited English proficient students simply cannot learn and compete in the classroom without these programs.

As a result, the Republican plan will create a permanent underclass of poorly educated children who will be denied the opportunity to achieve their full potential.

We as a country cannot maintain our competitiveness in an ever-growing, highly technical global economy unless we develop the talents and abilities of all our children.

The virtual elimination of bilingual education programs works against our children and our national interests.

IT IS TIME TO END THE GOVERNMENT FREE-FOR-ALL

(Mr. CHABOT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Speaker, this week Congress will vote to undo some of the damage that previous Congresses caused over the last 40 years. For too long politicians here in Washington assured the American people that they had all the answers to society’s problems.

Since the 1960’s the Federal Government has created so many programs and so many spending plans that it is absolutely mind boggling. I think it is fair to say that there is not one accountant, not one Government bureaucrat who can name all of the programs that the Federal Government—and the American taxpayer—pays for.

And what has all this spending created? Debt, debt, and more debt.

Mr. Speaker, it is time to end the Government free-for-all. It is time to set our priorities straight and work together to balance the Federal budget, if not for our own sake, then for our children and grandchildren.

“THE BUCK STOPS HERE” MEANS IT STOPS WITH THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, the Waco hearings are over. There are two issues. No. 1. Is Janet Reno truly responsible for the most incompetent police maneuver in American history; or is Janet Reno carrying the water, protecting Larry Potts, the FBI, and the ATF for their actions?

Quite frankly, I do not know; but if “the buck stops here” means anything, Janet Reno should be fired and the people of Waco, TX, should petition their county prosecutor to immediately convene a grand jury, because it appeared to me as a former sheriff that FBI and ATF agents were lying through their teeth to the U.S. Congress. “The buck stops here” should mean something.

LIBERAL DEMOCRATS DO NOT WANT THE PEOPLE TO SEE THE REPORT ON MEDICARE

(Mr. HAYWORTH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HAYWORTH. Mr. Speaker, this is the report the liberal Democrats do not want the American people to see. They do not want the American people to know the truth about Medicare.

This report was signed by three of President Clinton’s Cabinet members and shows clearly that unless something is done, Medicare will go bankrupt in 7 years.

Mr. Speaker, every American needs to know the truth about Medicare. I urge all Americans to call their Representative at 202-224-3121 and get a copy of this report.

The American people also need to know that the Democrats do not want to do anything. Their only strategy is to scare senior citizens and bash any attempt to save Medicare from bankruptcy.

What is so very important to Democrats that they would turn Medicare into a partisan issue. This is wrong and only hurts the millions of Americans who depend on Medicare.

FRENCH NUCLEAR TESTS

(Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, one of my dear colleagues from the other side of the aisle said to me, “Ew, if you want to make a point and to make sure that an Embassy here in Washington gets your attention—just make it a point by coming to the well of this Chamber and share your concerns with your colleagues and the American people!”. Mr. Speaker, I have got good news and bad news. The good news is that the President of France and his military advisors are beginning to feel the pinch whereby consumers all over the world are refusing to purchase French goods and products to protest France’s recently announced policy to explode eight more nuclear bombs in the middle of the Pacific Ocean beginning next month on the Moruroa Atoll.

The bad news is that the French Government has now announced it will explode its first nuclear bomb explosion this month because there has been such a tremendous support from ordinary people and leaders of countries throughout the world condemning French nuclear testing.

Mr. Speaker, I suggest that the charismatic and dashing President of France to quit playing God with the lives of millions of men, women, and children who live in the Pacific. President Chirac should spend more time to resolve France’s serious unemployment at 12 percent, rather than proving France’s nuclear capability.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues and our citizens all over America to join other world citizens by refusing to buy French goods and products.

Shame on you France, shame on you for reintroducing a nuclear arms race again—we do not need it and I believe the good people of France do not want it.

SUPPORT RESOLUTION CELEBRATING SOCIAL SECURITY

(Mr. BUNNING of Kentucky asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BUNNING of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, August 14 will mark the 60th anniversary of the signing of the Social Security Act by President Franklin Roosevelt. With his signature and the enactment of the Social Security Act by President Franklin Roosevelt, August 14 will mark the 60th anniversary of the signing of the Social Security Act by President Franklin Roosevelt. With his signature and the enactment of the Social Security Act by President Franklin Roosevelt, a new commitment was established between the American people and their Government.

To mark this anniversary of the signing of the Social Security Act, I along with my colleague, ANDY JACOBS, am introducing, today, a Resolution to celebrate that landmark commitment.

This resolution will celebrate the occasion the best way possible—by letting the American people know that... the House of Representatives still honors that 60-year-old commitment to Social Security and that the House of Representatives intends to make sure that this 60-year-old commitment is honored. I urge my colleagues to join with me and Andy Jacobs and support this resolution.

ONLY A GOOD EDUCATION BRINGS SUCCESS TO AMERICA’S POorest CHILDREN

(Mr. DE LA GARZA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I come from a very low-income area of this country, but it has an obsession with education. We have seen the education of our children, the migrant children, the children of the poor. It could not have been done without the assistance of the Federal Government.

When I came here 30 years ago, the issue was should the Federal Government be involved or not in education. The answer was yes, and I can show Members the difference. There are now doctors, lawyers, engineers, with Spanish surnames that would have never been, relying solely on the income from the local school districts or from the State.

I did not come here to dismantle the educational system of the United States, I came to enhance it. We have enhanced it. I am concerned now that there is a move to dismantle it. It should not be done. We keep hearing about not putting a burden on our children and our grandchildren. The best thing we can do for our children and grandchildren is to give them an education. If we dismantle the Federal part, we would have done wrong to future generations.

THE ISTOOK-McINTOSH AMENDMENT WILL HALT TAXPAYERS’ MONEY GOING TO POLITICAL ADVOCACY GROUPS

(Mr. WHITFIELD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Speaker, one of the most egregious wrongs imposed on taxpayers during the past 40 years has been a policy which gives tax money to various lobby groups that advocate special programs for particular groups. The Istook-McIntosh Federal grant reform amendment to the Labor Appropriation bill would put a halt to taxpayer money going to support political advocacy groups they may not want to support.

Thomas Jefferson said it best when he said: To compel a man to furnish means of support for another against his will is to bind him in the bonds of slavery.

To that fair-haired youth may a pitfall be.

If anyone wants to make sacrifices, not farmers nor big business.

THE HOUSE NEEDS MORE TIME TO CONSIDER VITAL TELECOMMUNICATIONS LEGISLATION

(Mr. HEFLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Speaker, tonight at about 9 p.m. we are going to begin consideration of the telecommunications bill. It is a very important piece of legislation. It affects everybody in the United States, and will for years to come. We have been working on this piece of legislation for at least 10 years, I am told, and yet somebody has decided it must be out before we leave here the first of August.

This bill passed by an overwhelming majority when it came out of committee, a bipartisan majority, and has been taken and rewritten in a back room by a handful of people, and we are going to begin debate on it tonight. Usually when something this important is rushed through in the dark of night, it is because somebody does not want us to know what the real ramifications are. This is no way to do the people’s business.
STRICT.

This is the picture of what we are going to be doing when we get to the Defense Department bill. Yes, it is very historic. For the first time since I can ever remember, and believe me, I am old with this gray hair, for the first time since I can ever remember, we are giving them $8 billion that even the Pentagon did not want.

Yes, the GOP elephant is carrying this pork right into the Defense Department. You do not want it, you get it. You get B-2 bombers, get all sorts of missles, get anything you want. Here it comes. Maybe they will even gift wrap it. Who knows?

I find that absolutely outrageous when at the very same time we are going to be taking up Labor-HHS and in there we are attacking children right and left. We are throwing 60,000 children out of Head Start. This does not make me very proud. We are taking a 60-percent cut in safe and drug-free schools. As a parent I am outraged. I could go on with the whole list. But remember these two pictures. This is the new priority of this new Congress. I am ashamed.

Today in my district an innovative new program is being launched to help kids and families and reduce teen violence.

Two years ago I teamed up with Attorney General Janet Reno, Colorado Gov. Roy Romer, Denver Mayor Wellington Webb and Aurora Mayor Paul Tauer to begin finding innovative solutions to urban violence in the metropolitan Denver area. The partnership is called Project PACT [Pulling America's Communities Together], an initiative being piloted by the U.S. Department of Justice.

In addition to coordinating law enforcement activities throughout the metro area, Project PACT encourages innovative preventive strategies. This summer Project PACT teamed up with Ticketmaster—the Nation's leading ticket sales outlet—and Mile High United Way to create an activities-for-kids hotline.

Starting today, Colorado parents can call the Ticketmaster/PACT safe summer hotline and get a listing of arts, sports, and recreation activities in any metro Denver neighborhood. The hotline will be piloted for the month of August and will run all next summer.

Ticketmaster is interested in replicating this hotline in other urban districts around the country. I encourage you to look into working with your local United Way, Ticketmaster and other public and private partners to create a safe summer hotline. Innovative strategies like this one need to be supported and replicated, and I am proud to have this hotline in my district.

CLINTON ADMINISTRATION ZIGS AND ZAGS ON OSHA

(Mr. BALLenger asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BALLenger. Mr. Speaker, I guess we all know by now that the Clinton administration has made a lot of ziggs and zags and 180-degree turns. Now they are doing their famous "now you see it, now you don't" on OSHA reform.

Two months ago President Clinton made quite a show of going to a small business in northwest Washington and promising that his administration was going to reinvent OSHA. He said that the administration wanted OSHA to be a partner with employers in working toward safety in the workplace. "Prevention not penalties" was going to be the new goal for OSHA, according to the President. Last month, Assistant Secretary for OSHA, Joe Dear, made the same promises to the White House Conference on Small Business. Our goal is not to issue penalties, he said, but to work with employers and employees to improve safety.

Someone must have forgotten to get the script to Secretary of Labor Reich. Yesterday he criticized every effort Congress is making to have a more reasonable approach. That does not make me very proud. We are taking a 60-percent cut in safe and drug-free schools. As a parent I am outraged. I could go on with the whole list. But remember these two pictures. This is the new priority of this new Congress. I am ashamed.

Republican Priorities Are Wrong

(Mr. OLVER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Speaker, the Republicans' defense appropriations bill earmarks $493 million to begin production of the first two unneeded B-2 bombers. But the Republicans' education appropriation bill we debate today cuts funds for education.

Safe and drug-free schools, special education, art in schools, adult education, education for gifted children, and public library funding all will be slashed. Education for homeless children will be eliminated, gone. Dropout prevention, gone. The national writing project, gone. The teacher corps, gone. Workplace literacy programs, gone.

The irony here is that every single one of the cuts I just mentioned, plus many more, added together equals less than the savings of those two unneeded B-2 bombers.

Cuts in education on the one hand, more money to build unneeded B-2 bombers on the other hand. The Republican priorities are wrong.

MEdicare

(Mr. TATE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TATE. Mr. Speaker, it is an undisputable fact that Medicare is going broke. In fact, in this report it states very clearly that under all sets of assumptions, the trust funds are projected to become exhausted. The good news is the Republicans are willing to take this issue head on, to preserve Medicare, to protect Medicare, and to strengthen Medicare. In fact, we plan on increasing the spending from $4,000 this year for a recipient on Medicare to $6,700 per recipient on Medicare, a $1,900 increase per recipient on Medicare.

The bad news is the liberals have a plan for Medicare as well. Their plan is to do nothing; to allow Medicare to go broke within the next 7 years. Even if the budget was balanced today, we would still have this report stating very clearly that Medicare would go broke.

The Republicans have repealed the Clinton taxes on Social Security benefits, raising the senior citizen earning limit. Now we want to allow seniors to keep more of their money and to protect their Medicare. I urge support for these kind of changes.

EDUCATION CUTS

(Mr. MARTINEZ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. Speaker, not even Head Start is safe from cuts.

Although it has enjoyed bipartisan support for years, but now the new majority is cutting $132 million from the program; 60,000 or more children will be denied services.

As you may recall, in 1989, a bipartisan group of Governors, along with President Bush, outlined the national education goals.

First and foremost was—"by the year 2000, all children will start school ready to learn."

Does the new majority leadership no longer believe that such a goal is laudable?

We certainly have not achieved it.

Cutting Head Start is one of many steps that will undermine educational achievement in this country.

Members on the other side of the aisle continually espouse the need for parents to assume responsibility for their children—something many of us already knew was critical. Head Start, in addition to helping prepare children for schooling, encourages parents to become integrally involved in their children's educational achievement.

Do the majority leaders really care about education and parental involvement, or do they only care about tax breaks for their wealthy contributors?
Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call Resolution 208 to order and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 208

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of the resolution the Speaker or, in his absence, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, may direct the House to rise and report the bill to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 2127) making further amendments to the bill for consideration in the Ways and Means Committee to be reported at a subsequent State of the Union message.

Mr. Speaker, I object to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Dickey). The question is on the motion of the Speaker pro tempore.
Ms. JACKSON-LEE, and Ms. FURSE changed their vote from “yea” to “nay.” Mr. WARD changed his vote from “nay” to “yea.” So the motion was rejected. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Providing for Consideration of H.R. 2127, Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1996

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DICK.): The gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, for the purposes of debate only, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FOST], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of the resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

(Mr. SOLOMON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks, and to include extraneous material.)

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 208 is an open rule. It provides for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 2127, which is the fiscal year 1996 Appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education.

The rule provides for 1 hour of general debate, equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority members of the Committee on Appropriations. However, I would hasten to add that I have been authorized by the Committee on Rules to offer an amendment to extend that general debate time from 1 hour to 2½ hours, plus 90 minutes each on the first three titles of the bill. That will total about 8 hours all together.

Mr. Speaker, the offering of that amendment was contingent on other arrangements being worked out between the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations. However, I would withhold that manager’s amendment until the end of the rule, in hopes that we could get that unanimous consent worked out.

Mr. Speaker, following general debate, the rule first makes in order two manager’s amendments printed in part 1 of the report. The amendments are not subject to amendment and are debatable for 10 minutes each. If adopted, they will become a part of the base text for further amendment purposes.

Mr. Speaker, the rule provides for reading the bill by title rather than by paragraph, with each title considered as read. Members should go back and make sure they know where their amendments come up because of that.

The provisions of clauses 2 and 6 of House rule XXI are waived against provisions in the bill to protect the many unauthorized and legislative provisions in the bill. However, those provisions are subject to cutting and striking amendments under the rule.

In addition to the regular amendment process, the rule makes in order three additional amendments contained in part 2 of the Committee on Rules report, and it waives points of order against them.

Mr. Speaker, the first of those amendments is by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD] that restores $193 million to the Title X Family Planning Program by transferring the funds from the maternal and child health block grant and migrant health centers.

The Greenwood amendment is subject to one amendment, and that is a substitute amendment by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. SMITH] that would terminate funding for the Title X Family Planning Program and would transfer those funds back to the maternal and child health block grant and the migrant health centers.

Both the Greenwood amendment and the Smith substitute are subject to 30 minutes of debate each, divided equally between the proponent and the opponent.

Mr. Speaker, the Labor-HHS-Education Appropriations bill has been a very, very difficult bill to fashion, given our new glide path towards a balanced budget in the next 7 years. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations for all of their assistance and support in producing this consensus approach to the lockbox. I would be remiss if I did not especially single out the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SOLOMON], the gentleman from Florida [Mr. GOSL], my colleagues, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. DICK], the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. LARGENT], the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ZIMMER], the gentleman from California [Mr. ROYCE], and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. NEUMANN] on the Republican side, and a number of colleagues on the Democratic side.

The Committee on Rules has also reported this as a separate bill, H.R. 1162, that we hope to take up on the floor later this fall. So, Mr. Speaker, we will go in a tandem route where we will have not only a bill working its way through Congress, but we will have this amendment attached to this appropriation bill working its way through Congress as well.

That was a commitment that was made to Members who support this, and we are fulfilling that commitment today. In the meantime, this amendment to the Labor-HHS bill will ensure that from now on we will utilize this process.

We are especially grateful to the Committee on the Budget, the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight, and the Committee on Appropriations for all of their assistance and support in producing this consensus approach to the lockbox. I would be remiss if I did not especially single out the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SOLOMON], the gentleman from California [Mr. ROYCE], and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ZIMMER], the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. DICK], the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. LARGENT], the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ZIMMER], the gentleman from California [Mr. ROYCE], and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. NEUMANN] on the Republican side, and a number of colleagues on the Democratic side.

I think we have once again proved this Congress is a reform Congress and that the reform process did not end on opening day but rather is an ongoing process, as well it should be.

Mr. Speaker, the Labor-HHS-Education Appropriation bill has been a very, very difficult bill to fashion, given our new glide path towards a balanced budget in the next 7 years. The chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER], and the ranking member, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY], are to be commended on working together to bring this bill to us today even though they obviously do not agree on all the particulars or priorities in the bill. But we do have the bill here on the floor.

In conclusion, this is a good rule because it is an open and a fair rule that will allow a majority of this House to work its will within the allocations made to this bill and its subcommittee. Therefore, I urge the committees to give their strong support for this rule and the information referred to follows:
Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, today we are considering a rule for a truly terrible bill. The Committee on Appropriations has recommended a bill which decimates nearly every program that affects school children, the elderly poor, working men and women, and the most vulnerable in our society.

The Committee has sent the House a bill which repeals family planning programs when at the same time the Congress has under consideration legislation which will effectively penalize unwed teenage mothers. The Appropriations Committee has sent a bill to the floor which reaches so far into the social safety net that it even cuts the President's request for Head Start by $500 million. And, while all of us certainly agree that there are many governmental programs which may be duplicative or unnecessary, the Appropriations Committee—not the legislative committees with jurisdiction—has sent us a bill which terminates 270 federal programs.

And, Mr. Speaker, to add insult to injury, this appropriations bill can hardly stand on its own by virtue of the fact that it is so loaded with legislative provisions. My friends in the majority party have often used the name of the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. Natcher, to make points in debate; today, let me invoke that fine gentleman's memory to make a point. This bill contains pages and pages of unauthorized provisions, but worse yet, contains a page after page of legislative matters that are in blatant violation of the rules of the House. Mr.
Natcher was chairman of the Labor/ HHS Subcommittee for 15 years and he never came to the Rules Committee to request such a waiver for one of his bills. Mr. Speaker, in my experience I have never seen such a mean spirited piece of legislation and from one of its scarcest sources and preserve and protect the programs that have fought illiteracy, protected workers at their jobs, ensured a decent life for those elderly Americans who were not as fortunate as others, and provided opportunities for countless Americans to secure a place in the middle class through education and training.

Mr. Speaker, surely this is not what the American people voted for last November, and for that reason, the goodness and generosity that characterizes this Nation and all Americans does not condone a bill which abandons those in our society who have only a small or perhaps no voice here in Washington. I think not, Mr. Speaker.

I urge the Appropriations Committee to withdraw this terrible bill. We should not, we cannot, pass legislation that attacks children, women, the elderly, the disabled, and working men and women. I urge defeat of the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SOLomon. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from Sanibel, FL [Mr. Goss], a member of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. Goss. Mr. Speaker, I thank our distinguished chairman the gentleman from Glens Falls, NY [Mr. Solomon] for yielding this time to me. I must commend patience, persistence, and in seeking a reasonable compromise on the host of highly contentious issues that pervade the Labor, HHS and Education appropriations bill. As Members know, while the bats were swinging in Bowie, MD last night for the congressional baseball game, our Rules Committee and Members on all points of the political spectrum were at work in the Capitol seeking common ground on the terms of debate for this bill.

Some might call this bill the “mother of all appropriations bills” since it covers a tremendous scope of topics and allocates more than $600 billion. The sticking points have become highly visible sore thumbs—including the extraordinarily difficult issue of Federal funding for abortion. This rule does about the best it can do to allow for a relatively free and fair debate on the major issues—while keeping within a somewhat manageable time frame. I am particularly pleased that this rule makes in order a lockbox amendment offered by Mr. Crapo. This much-discussed and long awaited amendment commits the House to ensuring that savings agreed to on the floor of the House will indeed be used for deficit reduction and will no longer be permitted to be spent on other spending projects. We have worked hard to translate this amendment into a workable procedural device—one that can accomplish its mission without derailing the entire appropriations process. I think we have done it—and we did so in a bipartisan and deliberative way. Sure, once we would have preferred that we reach this point sooner in the process. But I am convinced it was better to do lock-box right the first time.

Mr. Speaker, we have got a long debate ahead of us on a host of important subjects. I urge support for this rule. I hope to have a dialog with Chairman Biley on the subject of local land use and local ability to earn revenues in the utilities area and some other things as we go along in this and other legislation. There are many things ahead of us in the days ahead.

This is an important appropriations bill. This is an issue which is going to get the full debate it deserves. I urge support for this rule so we can get on with our debate.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY].

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. Mr. Speaker, let me simply say that I am of a split mind on this rule because this bill is so bad. But I guess what I would say is I would like us to pass this rule so that we can just as quickly as possible get to a vote on final passage so we can vote “no.”

I said earlier, when this bill came out of committee, that in my view this bill was the meanest and the most vicious and the most extreme attack on the children of this country, on the dignity and the rights of workers, and on many of our most vulnerable citizens that ever seen proper action of this Committee on Appropriations in all of the years I have had the privilege to serve in this House. I do not believe this bill is fixable.

The basic problem with this bill is that earlier in the year the majority party adopted a budget. And under that budget what is called the 602 allocation was made by the committee, which decided how much would go to each department and this subcommittee is operating under constraints imposed by those 602 budget limitations. That means that even though the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER], who is the subcommittee chairman, has seemingly simply control into his committee, he is constrained by the 602 constraints agreed to on the floor of the House, even though I am sure he would have liked to have done otherwise, he could simply not, under the conditions in which he was operating, produce a bill which meets our national obligations to our children and families, and the most vulnerable among us.

The bill also continues 17 major changes in authorization law, and each of those changes ought to be considered on their own by the committee of jurisdiction. They should not be slipped in as legislative riders in this bill so that the authorizing committees can avoid confronting not only the language that you have for each of these provisions, but also confronting rational amendments to them.

Under the way we work, the way the House governs appropriations bills, or the way the House rules govern appropriation bill consideration, you cannot have a debate on the major language which is in this bill, and because that language makes a wholesale assault on the ability of workers to expect even a reasonable degree of protection and dignity at the bargaining table, because it imposes a set of values on women of this country rather than trying to encourage a set of values, I think that this is a highly illegitimate process, and so I think the bill ought to go down.

But the rule does facilitate our ability to at least address each of these issues in a rational way.

With the amended suggestions of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Solomon], it will be a rational way in which we can focus the debate on education, on what we are doing to the seniors, and we will have an opportunity to at least debate in some fashion the legislative language which has illegitimately been attached to this bill, in my view, so I think the rule is far more legitimate than the bill which has spawned it.

So I would urge Members to vote for the rule, and I would ask the cooperation of Members on both sides of the aisle in helping us to focus the debate on each of these subjects without getting into the constant repetitive offering of individual amendments. This bill is so bad it cannot be fixed by amendment.

The key vote on this, in the end, will be the vote that occurs on final passage.

So I would urge Members of both sides of the aisle to vote for this rule, but when we move on to the bill itself, I would urge Members of both parties who recognize that this is an extreme attack on the education of children, the rights of workers, the rights of women, and the needs of the most vulnerable in our society, to join me in voting against the bill on final passage.

Mr. SOLomon. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to thank the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY].

The truth of the matter is that this is a very controversial bill, and in the first three titles we have, at his suggestion, increased the general debate time for each of those titles. As a matter of fact, 1½ hours each, and that is to lay the groundwork for what is in those titles.

So I want to commend him for his suggestions and for helping us to get this rule through here today.
Having said that, I would like to yield to the gentleman from Claremont, CA [Mr. Dreier], the very distinguished vice-chairman of the Committee on Rules. He was the Chair of the task force, Speaker’s task force, that brought about the most compelling day major changes in this institution that are now coming to fruition, and we are finally able to process legislation the way it should have been. We still have far to go.

The gentleman from California [Mr. Dreier] is still concentrating on that, and he has been very helpful in this lockbox legislation that is going to be in this bill here today.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. Dreier].

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend, the gentleman from Glens Falls, NY [Mr. Solomon] for yielding me this time. I hope the time he used to introduce me does not come out of such a small package.

Let me say, Mr. Speaker, that our former colleague, Dan Rostenkowski, used to always say that if everyone is unhappy with a piece of legislation, it is probably a pretty good bill.

We should try to say that when we are looking at a rule, but we know that it took a great deal of negotiation to get to the point where we are today, and as the chairman of the Committee on Rules has just said, the ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations did have input in determining the time for general debate that was added for these three titles, and virtually everyone has had a hand in this.

If you look at the very beneficial aspects, I believe that it should lead a majority of Members of this institution to support this rule.

Now, one of the items that has been discussed in a bipartisan way consistently is the lockbox, the desire to deal with deficit spending, and Members on both sides of the aisle again have stepped up and said, “We need to deal with the issue of the deficit.” We have had very strong statements made by our colleagues, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Brewer] and the gentlewoman from California [Ms. Harman] consistently before our Committee on Rules on that, and, of course, we have had Members on our side of the aisle, the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. Crapo], and others who have been dealing with the issue of the lockbox. This rule allows us to finally face that question.

Then we look at a number of the other items. Well, it has been stated time and time again the legislation that deals with the Departments of Health and Human Services, and Labor clearly is an overwhelmingly large bill, and there are many items in it, but it seems to me that it is our responsibility to deal, as well as we can, with them, and this rule, while it may not be perfect, is, quite frankly, the best product that can be assembled.

I am disappointed that things like the Riggs amendment were not made in order that would allow us to deal with the issue of illegal immigration, and I can think of no other reason that I believe should have been addressed. But we need to move forward.

This is an extraordinarily important appropriations bill, and I hope very much that our Members will come to the conclusion that providing support for this rule will at least allow us to consider this very important legislation.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. Skaggs].

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Frost] for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, this rule, although touted by the good chairman of the Committee on Rules, as exemplifying yet another instance of reform is this place, really is belied in that regard. It is yet another example of cover and camouflage that has been buried in an appropriations bill 13 pages of the most egregious, wrong-headed legislative language imaginable. Why in the world, Mr. Speaker, this was protected from a point of order is beyond me, but it is. And I would commend everyone’s sense of regular order around this place that without any hearings, without any examination in the normal order of business, we would be putting a bill, an entire bill, dealing with a topic as sensitive as Government restrictions on political activity in this country, putting an entire bill into this appropriations measure. If for no other reason, notwithstanding the reasons that have been outlined by the gentleman from Wisconsin for going ahead with this rule, we ought to seriously consider defeating it because of its protection of this provision. Nonetheless, we will have an opportunity, which I hope my colleagues will avail themselves of to rid this travesty, this frontal, headlong assault on first amendment protected activities in this country.

In any case I wanted my colleagues to be aware of what is probably the singular waiver event of this Congress in protecting the nonsense in this bill.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Gene Green].

Mr. GENE GREEN of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. GENE GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, Members, this rule makes it far too easy for the Republican majority to target seniors, and working families with these cuts. What we are seeing is a finalization, I guess, of the budget resolution we passed here earlier that required this bill to have these substantial cuts in education, senior and targeted for children programs and for working families.

Let me talk about the education cuts since I serve on that committee here in Congress. This bill that this rule will allow us to consider will cut 48,000 children from Head Start programs, cut the Healthy Start in half, it cuts the Safe and Drug Free Schools by 59 percent, it cuts 1 million children that will not get extra help on their reading and math thanks to the 17 percent cut in chapter 1. In my State of Texas we will lose $66 million on summer jobs programs that we restored this summer, but this appropriations bill will not allow it for the summer of 1996, and that is what is wrong with this bill. Chapter 1 funding; it goes to almost every elementary school in my district in the State of Texas, will be cut $97 million. There are school districts, particularly in poorer parts of Texas and all over the country, who depend on that to provide that extra help for these children who need that extra assistance.

Senior citizens’ programs are cut in this bill. The programs that we have to provide heating assistance in the winter, the cooling assistance in the summer are being cut. Take, for example, what has happened in Chicago this last month or what was happening in Texas up until we had the tropical storm come through, Mr. Speaker. Twelve million meals served to seniors each year are eliminated by cuts in Meals on Wheels and meals that are served in senior citizens’ centers that all of us have in all of our districts.

Working families; let me talk about the cuts in just the labor side of it. Working families, the cuts; now we may all agree that we need to look at OSHA and a lot of Federal programs, but to cut 33 percent off of job safety is ridiculous, and cut the pension plans.

Mr. Speaker, I could talk all day, as my colleagues know, and I appreciate my colleagues’ courtesy, and I urge a “no” vote on the bill.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. Schrock].

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Frost] for yielding this time to me, and, as my colleagues know, in 2 minutes I just cannot say enough bad things about this bill.

People are wearing these shame labels because we are really ashamed to be here. The ranking member said over and over again this is the meanest and the most extreme bill we have ever seen. We are picking on people that rally cannot fight back.

I ask my colleagues, “Are you proud today of what we will be doing is kicking 48,000 children out of Head Start? Does that make anybody proud? Is anybody proud today that we’re going to cut Healthy Start for infants and children in half?”

Well, Mr. Speaker, it does not make me proud.

Is there anybody proud that we are going to take Safe and Drug Free School funds and cut them by 60 percent?
Or how about gutting title I, which is where we try and bring children's reading skills up to snuff? What about the whole area of protecting our workers, and their pension programs, and all the things that we have been doing? Or what about what we are doing to seniors?

As I say, this list goes on, and on, and I am ashamed because at the very same time we are gutting all of that, we are going to be backing right up to this bill a Defense Department bill where we are going to give the Pentagon $8 billion more than they asked for, $8 billion more than they asked for. We have never done that. We cannot buy enough B-2's, and apparently we cannot buy enough hardware and all this stuff when they do not even want it, and yet we are saying to little kids, 3-year-olds, out of Head Start, we do not have the money. We are saying to people in Healthy Start get out, we do not have the money for them to have a healthy start.

Mr. Speaker, those are not the priorities for America's future. I am surprised that the leadership of this House who keeps talking about the third ladder, their vision, and all of that; if their vision does not include children, if their vision does not include middle-class families, we are in real trouble. Their vision is a horror show.

Mr. SOLomon. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER].

PERMISSION FOR CHAIRMAN OF COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE TO POSTPONE VOTES ON AMENDMENTS DURING CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 2127

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that during the consideration of H.R. 2127 pursuant to the provisions of House Resolution 208, the Chairmen of the Committee of the Whole may postpone until a time during the consideration in the Committee of the Whole a request for a recorded vote on any amendment, and that the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may reduce to not less than 5 minutes the time for voting by electronic device on any postponed question that immediately follows another vote by electronic device without intervening business, provided that the time for voting by electronic device on the first in any series of questions shall not be less than 35 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DICKEY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

LIMITING TIME FOR DEBATE ON AMENDMENTS AND LIMITING MOTIONS FOR COMMITTEE TO RISE DURING CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 2127

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that consideration of the bill H.R. 2127 in the Committee of the Whole pursuant to House Resolution 208 shall also be governed by the following order:

The following amendments, identified by their designation in the Congressional Record pursuant to clause 6 of rule XXIII, may amend portions of the bill not yet read for amendment, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole, if offered by the Member designated: the amendment by Representative OBEY of Wisconsin numbered 36; and an amendment en bloc by Representative PeLosi of California consisting of the amendments numbered 60, 61, and 62.

The time for debate on each of the following amendments to the bill, identified by their designation in the Congressional Record pursuant to clause 6 of rule XXIII, unless otherwise specified, and any amendments thereto shall be limited to 40 minutes equally divided and controlled by the proponent of the amendment to the bill and an opponent: the amendment by Representative OBEY of Wisconsin numbered 36; the amendment by Representative Stokes of Ohio numbered 70; the amendment by Representative Lowey of New York numbered 30; the amendment by Representative Kolbe of Arizona proposing to strike section 509 of the bill; the amendment by Representative Skaggs of Colorado numbered 64; the amendment by Representative Sabo of Minnesota or Representative OBEY of Wisconsin proposing to amend title VI of the bill; and the amendment by Representative Solomon of New York relating to the subject of political advocacy.

Except as otherwise specified in House Resolution 208, the time for debate on each other amendment to the bill and any amendments thereto shall be limited to 20 minutes equally divided and controlled by the proponent of the amendment to the bill and an opponent.

After a motion that the committee rise has been rejected on a day, the chairman may entertain another such motion on that day only if offered by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations or the majority leader or the ranking member of the committee to which at this point I would object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. GUNDERSON. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, the concern I have is the preclusion of Members offering a motion for the Committee to rise because this is one of the few opportunities where member of the committee, where there are time controls, have any access to get heard.

Mr. Speaker, there is a lot of controversy on this bill on both sides of the aisle, and I have got to tell my colleagues that if we are going to preclude people in Healthy Start from moving that the Committee rise so that we might be heard for 5 minutes, it is something to which at this point I would object.

Can we delete that section from the motion?

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GUNDERSON. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. OBEY. Let me point out that the language on that was specifically requested by the gentleman's party leadership.

Mr. GUNDERSON. It does not get any better.

Mr. OBEY. I was most reluctant to agree to it because I think it can put them procedurally in the driver's seat, but I am sure I am persuaded to accept it on two grounds.

Mr. GUNDERSON. Further resolving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, my concern is that we are going to enter into a whole series of time agreements to expedite business over the next couple of days. I understand that, and I respect that, but, if we have time agreements, and the time is controlled, and we only allow one motion to rise during that day, then everybody else on the floor outside of the chairman and ranking member is precluded from getting heard if they feel strongly.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GUNDERSON. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. OBEY. Let me explain the process under which we are going to proceed. I think it will alleviate the concerns of the gentleman.

What we are doing is we are starting with 2½ hours of general debate under the rule. Gonsos, which is being offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Solomon].

We are trying to group debate so we can have a focused discussion title by title on Labor, on HHS, and on Education. We will also then have a focused discussion on a number of the language amendments. We have, for instance, the Istook amendment, the rape incest provision, we have a number of those.

We have tried to structure a good deal of debate time so that Members on and off the committee will be able to participate. I know we certainly worked out a very large number of participants on this side of the aisle, and I would be very surprised if the gentleman from Illinois has not done the same thing.

So speaking as a Member of the minority who used that right the other night in order to make a point, I am very reluctant to give that up. If you ask the Speaker's representative, he will tell you we had a quite heated discussion on it. But I think the rights of Members to be able to participate meaningfully are being protected by the rule.

I do not have a dog in this fight. This is your leadership's request, but it is our efforts to try to accommodate them.

Mr. GUNDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to make it clear that I need to correct my own language. It is the motion to strike the enacting clause that I wanted to preserve, not the motion to rise, so everybody understands what I am trying to preserve here.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PORTER. Yes.

Mr. GUNDERSON. Mr. Speaker, in addition to the motion to rise by the manager of the bill, the gentleman would be entitled to one motion to strike the enacting clause.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, is it one per Member? For example, if the gentlewoman from Florida wanted to move to strike the enacting clause and get recognized for 5 minutes and that has been done, under this agreement do I have the right to strike the enacting clause?

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, you would have a choice between the two of you. But what is allowed, so that the gentleman may be heard, is that you are allowed to strike the last word at any time when an amendment is not pending. So one cannot be precluded from speaking for 4 minutes or even longer than that point of view. The gentleman is protected under this arrangement.

Mr. GUNDERSON. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, that is the concern. The gentleman knows we are going to move this bill. When we have amendments thereto, such as the Greenwood amendment and the Smith amendment thereto, and if I have Members here who feel strongly about this issue, myself or others, who want to be recognized, and we are told you only have 30 seconds under the time agreement, that is not acceptable.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GUNDERSON. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, this is an open rule. That means that any Member can simply offer another amendment and get time under the 5-minute rule to pursue it. I do not think anyone would be shut off from debate or further expressing themselves in any way they want.

We are trying, obviously, to pack a lot of work into the last few days before the August district work period, and that is to allow Members to debate that work. I do not think it will cut anybody’s rights. I urge the gentleman to withdraw his reservation.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, the gentleman under all circumstances would be allowed 5 minutes by striking the last word. He might be precluded from an additional 2 or 3 or 5 minutes if someone objected to a unanimous consent request.

Mr. GUNDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I think it is important that people understand that members of the committee get recognized before anybody else. Second, we are doing things in this bill that do not belong in the Committee on Appropriations or the appropriations bill. Third, we are going by strict time controls on the debate on most of these amendments.

What the gentleman is telling a Member, me, who is a member of the authorizing committee, who sees all of these things done that we have had no input on, who feels very strongly about the question of human investment, is that I am going to be controlled by somebody else’s time agreement and would lose time, and now the gentleman is going to take away from me the one opportunity I have during the course of that debate to make points I feel strongly about, which is the motion to strike the enacting clause.

I would plead with the gentleman, delete that, so I do not have to object. I would not get recognized. One would not be able to get recognized to strike the requisite number of words. Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, under protocol and precedents of the House, the Speaker would recognize members of the committee first. Certainly in this case, with the authorizing committee being involved, I am sure that the gentleman’s committee would come second in the eyes of the Speaker. The gentleman is protected.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman would further yield, if we were to remove that last sentence of the request, would the gentleman then not object?

Mr. GUNDERSON. That is right.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to strike the last sentence of my earlier unanimous-consent request.

Mr. GUNDERSON. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I want to make sure that is the sentence regarding the enacting clause?

Mr. PORTER. Yes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER] modifies his request. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I do not intend to object, I just wanted to pose a question to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER]. The gentleman listed several sentences, each of which there would be a 40-minute limitation on debate, including, I believe, one attributed to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] on political advocacy.

My review of what is preprinted did not show such an amendment. Is this one that is yet to be drafted?

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, apparently it is not preprinted. It was printed this morning.

Mr. SKAGGS. So it has been submitted and is available for review. It is that amendment that is contemplated by that 40-minute restriction?

Mr. PORTER. Yes.

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I simply want to make sure I understand what has been suggested by the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, yes.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, if that is satisfactory to the majority, we have no objection.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBRY. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, yes.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, if that is satisfactory to the majority, there is no objection.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the original request of the gentleman from Illinois, as modified?

There was no objection.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Florida [Mrs. FOWLER].

Mrs. FOWLER. Mr. Speaker, it is with a heavy heart that I rise today in strong opposition to this rule. This rule does not make in order an amendment offered by Mr. KOLBE, Ms. PRYCE, and myself, which would have provided a commonsense solution to the issue of Medicaid-funded abortions in the cases of rape and incest.

In 1993, the Hyde amendment, which was overwhelmingly supported by pro-life Members, included language allowing Medicaid-funded abortions in the cases of rape and incest. As we all know, Medicaid is funded jointly by the States and the Federal Government. Because some States prohibit funds from being used for rape and incest abortions, many States’ laws are in conflict with the current Hyde language.

This bill includes a provision which attempts to remedy that situation by allowing States the option of not funding such abortions. While the bill protects States’ rights, it would result in instances where a young woman who has become pregnant from rape or incest would have to travel across State lines to get a Medicaid-funded abortion.

The Kolbe amendment would solve the dilemma by maintaining States’ rights not to fund such abortions, but would have the Federal Government cover the entire cost. Last year, there were only two—let me repeat that—only two Medicaid abortions because of rape or incest.

I do not support Federal funding of abortion, one in the cases of rape, incest, or life of the mother. But I feel very strongly about those exceptions. As the mother of two daughters, it is horrifying to me to think of anyone’s daughter having to suffer the consequences of rape or incest without recourse. The Kolbe amendment was not radical and it was not about funding abortion on demand. It was a commonsense solution. But it was not made in order by a committee.

Under this rule, we have two choices: either we accept the bill language, or we move to strike the provision. While I do not support the current bill language, the motion to strike fails to address the problem of States’ rights.

It is to understand why our leadership has a problem with an open debate on this issue and an up or down vote on the Kolbe-Pryce-Fowler amendment. I am extremely disappointed that our leadership has ignored Members’ concerns and I am voting against this rule.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. RICHARDSON].

Mr. RICHARDSON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this bill. I think if we want to get a clear view of the new priorities in Washington, we need to take a look at this bill.

First of all, it is antieducation. Our educational system, which is the truest test of what we are and where we are going, is going to be cut nearly 20 percent. These cuts affect 14,000 school districts, and are going to deny 1 million children the help they need in reading and math.

Vocational programs, which are key to ensuring that young adults and children keep step with a rapidly changing economy, are cut by one-third. Apparently, we are willing to tell children who simply must have vocational programs to rise above the poverty line that they are expendable.

Head Start, one of the Nation's most successful school programs for 700,000 disadvantaged and disabled children, is a target for cuts. At least 48,000 children will no longer get the community-based health and education programs they need to do well in school.

Programs for the mentally ill, which are already underfunded, take a 20 percent cut. In this country, 63 million children suffer from mental disorders. Severe mental illness is more prevalent than cancer, diabetes, or heart disease, yet this vulnerable population is apparently not a priority.

Rural health programs that assist doctors, local hospitals, and migrant workers are no longer necessary or important by the cuts of this bill. Protection for workers' bill. These are cuts that affect 55,000 people die and another 60,000 are permanently disabled on the job, but OSHA, the agency responsible for dramatically reducing worker injuries in the last 20 years, has been slashed rather drastically. This bill.

Mr. Speaker, there is a need to read between the lines with this appropriation bill. However, many of my constituents and working families all over the country seem to be less of a priority now.

Mr. Speaker, it is critically important that we also recognize the damage to seniors. The low income assistance which provides heat in the winter and cold in the summer for thousands of low income elderly people is totally eliminated. Twelve million meals served to seniors each year are eliminated by cuts in Meals on Wheels and meals served to senior centers.

I have already talked about Head Start. The Head Start Program, which is safe and drug-free schools cut by 59 percent; 48,000 children eliminated from Head Start; 1 million children will not get the extra help they need in reading and math thanks to the 17 percent cut in Title I education.

Again, as I mentioned, enforcement of health and safety protections in the workplace for working families is cut by 33 percent. Pension protection is cut. Enforcement of the minimum wage law is cut by 12 percent.

Mr. Speaker, this is not a good bill, and it should be defeated.

Mr. SOLoman. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute and 30 seconds to the gentleman from Fullerton, CA [Mr. ROYCE].

Mr. ROYCE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule of the Labor-HHS bill. In particular, I support the provision in the rule which permits the offering of an amendment by my colleague, Mr. CRAPO and myself, requiring that any savings realized in the bill from amendments either in committee or on the floor below the 602(b) budget allocation, be specifically earmarked for deficit reduction.

This is the so-called deficit reduction lockbox provision, which Mr. CRAPO, Mr. SOLomon, and others, myself included, have supported and worked for in the past. The Speaker, our majority leader, Mr. ARMY, and many of our colleagues from the other side of the aisle, especially Mr. BRESTWELD, all support this provision, which will insure that any savings we make below the budget allocation for this bill will go directly to debt reduction, rather than for other programs.

I think this amendment is also supported by the American people, who deserve to know that we are working to reduce the national debt while still providing essential services. A child born today faces a tax bill of $187,000 over his or her lifetime just to pay their share of interest on the national debt. I urge adoption of this rule, which will allow us to make sure our votes go to deficit reduction.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY].

Mr. OBEY. COOL. Mr. Speaker, I rise because of the statement just made by the last speaker to simply point out that the lockbox provision being attached to this bill is a king-size joke.
violence that we see, the kind of despair that so many young people feel in our inner cities today. It cuts backs on the Drug-free Schools Program by 60 percent.

It cuts $1 billion out of the job-training programs for our country. It cuts 50 percent out of the Healthy Start Program. There are parts of this country, parts of my district where we have more infant mortality rates than the poorest countries in our hemisphere.
The one program that works, it works, is Head Start, which dramatically brings down the infant mortality rates;
the Republicans are going to cut it. It cuts back the opportunities for college education. It undermines the bargaining rights for the working people of our country.

It undermines the bargaining rights of working people. Somehow we are told that the Republicans, again, are not trying to enforce an authorizing provision in an appropriations bill.
That is just a put on around here, but basically what it means is they write laws when they are supposed to be appropriating money. It eliminates the striker replacement bill in this legislation.

What we have here is an attempt by Republicans to go about their business of trying to balance the budget, at the same time providing an enormous tax cut and going through the back door of undercutting and slashing the most vulnerable people in this country. I do not understand it. If we are really, truly considering the future needs of Americans, why go and hurt the most vulnerable people in this country? Why go after our children? Why go after our senior citizens? It just is not right.

Find some heart, find some conscience in what you are doing. Do not just be mean-spirited to line your pockets and the pockets of wealthy contributors today. Go after a more balanced approach in terms of finding the ways to balance the budget of this country. We can do it, but not in this mean-spirited way.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to just propropound a question to everyone: What is compassionate about running up a huge Federal deficit that is literally going to rob my children, my grandchildren, my great-grandchildren and your children’s in this race?

We have a Federal deficit today that is approaching $5 trillion. When you look at the pie that makes up the Federal budget, about 16 percent of that pie goes to pay the interest, each year, on that Federal deficit that has now reached $5 trillion.

If we continue down the path that was presented by the President, we would have added another trillion dol-ars to that. In other words, at the end of 5 years we would then have a $6 trillion debt.

Do you know how much the interest is that we pay to foreign countries who own the Treasury notes that go to finance that debt? Now it is only $250 biion, which is almost equal to what we spend on the first priority of our budget, national defense. The interest alone each year almost equals that national defense budget. If we continue down that path, then it will not be just $250 billion; it will be $350 billion. That is an additional $100 billion that has to take from the rest of the pie, which is national defense, which is discretionary programs, which is entitlement programs. You will have to take $100 billion more from the money you currently spend on the truly needy in this country.

What is compassionate about that?
Now, we are not going to raise taxes another dollar. We are not going to do it. Because young people today, including my five children, find it difficult to save enough money for a downpayment on something that the gentleman sends so much fighting for on this floor, and the right for decent human beings to own their own home, not a public home, but their own home.
My children have difficulty saving minute amount of money for that downpayment.

They would have more difficulty even if they could take that money to make the mortgage payments because interest rates are so high. We cannot let this deficit continue to burgeon, to continue to go up and up and up. Those interest rates go up and up and up, and young people today are not going to have the ability to do what we all wanted to do so much 45 years ago.

When I first got married, we scrimped and we saved and we had not enough money because the Federal Government did not take that much out of our take-home pay. We were able to save a little bit. We were able to make those mortgage payments, and we suffered, but we did it. We cannot continue to be noncompassionate on those people today.

That is what we are talking about in this debate. Sure, it is tough. You have got to have cuts. But you have got to continue to be noncompassionate on
those people today.

Mr. KENNEDY of Massachusetts. Mr.
Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SOLOMON. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY of Massachusetts. Mr.
Speaker, I stand second to no one in wanting to do so much 45 years ago.
We spent money like there was no tomorrow. We did not understand it. If we are really,
Mr. Speaker, let me just say to my good friend, we can argue about the national defense budget. If we continue that path, then it will not be just
is another $100 billion more.
That is what we are talking about in this debate. Sure, it is tough. You have got to have cuts. But you have got to continue to be noncompassionate on
those people today.

That is what we are talking about in this debate. Sure, it is tough. You have got to have cuts. But you have got to cut somewhere. We have cut everywhere and it has been fair.

Mr. KENNEDY of Massachusetts. Mr.
Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. FROST of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I would like to say to the gentleman, we need to get the $20,000-a-year tax break. I appreciate the gentleman talking about the fact that he is interested in having his kids own a home. I wonder whether or not the gentleman might have taken ad-advantage of the VA loan program when he got out of the military. I know that the gentleman served the country very well, but the fact is that he probably got some Government help and assistance when he needed to buy a home.

I do not know that for sure, but there is certainly a large number of veterans that do it. All that I am trying to suggest is that there are ways to invest in our country’s future, and there are ways to frivolously throw money around today. This bill cuts the very heart out of the poorest people, the American citizens, fuel assiduous, summer jobs for our kids, protections in our work force, which I think are a short-sighted way of going.

Mr. SOLOMON. Reclaiming my time,
Mr. Speaker, let me just say to my good friend, we can argue about the national defense budget. If we continue that path, then it will not be just
is another $100 billion more.
Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY of Massachusetts. Mr.
Speaker, I yield to the gentleman
from Massachusetts.

Mr. FROST of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New York
[M. SOLOMON] has 7 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] has 7 minutes remaining.

Mr. FROST of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield
2 minutes to the gentleman from New York
[M. FRANK].

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr.
Speaker, the last interchange between my colleague from Massachusetts and the gentleman from Texas, I think, indicates the problem that now faces the House. We are about to make the most important decisions a civilized democrat can make in about 2 days. We are being told that we will appropriate the two largest amounts, the Defense Department appropriations bill and the Labor-Health and Human Services appropriations bill, totaling more than $500 billion, more than $300 billion discretionary, more than half of the discretionary account. Plus we will deal with the telecommunications future of this country in about 2 days. Nothing better illustrates the absolute incompetence with which the majority is now running the House.

This is not the fault of the Committee on Rules. They have been given an impossible job. We have heard Members on the other side, the gentleman from Wisconsin, the gentlewoman from Florida, objecting at the contricted nature of the debate that faces them. It happens because we have a Republican leadership that has so mishandled things that we come to 2 days before a recess, having taken time out for Republican fund raisers and other things, and we are told that we will go all night, if necessary, we will do the most fundamental decisions.

Yes, we will take money away from the poor and the needy and the elderly and give it to the B-2 bomber, and give it to defense. We will make all these decisions on American telecommunications.

There is a kind of a book that comes to mind. When the Mets played their first year, somebody wrote a book about the Mets and they quoted Casey Stengel having said, as he looked at his team, “Can’t anybody here play this game?” This is not a game, this is more serious; but can not anybody on this team play this game? This is not a game, this is more serious.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 30 seconds.

Mr. Speaker, let me just say to my good friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK], he should have included the Democrat leadership in the incompetency that he mentioned, because they have conspired to limit the time for consideration of the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to tell you that last year we did Labor-HHS, DOD, and VA-HUD in 2 days. That was under the Democratic leadership of the Congress. That was a far bigger bite to take on than what the gentleman suggested that the Republican leadership has given. I just thought we ought to correct the record.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Idaho Falls, ID [Mr. CRAPO], a distinguished Member of this Congress. He is the father of lockbox, and boy, we are going to get this deficit spending under control because of people like him.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, before we talk about lockbox, I have to respond also. As a freshman last year, I remember many times when we wanted to have a lot of time where we had a lot of bills pushed through here in a short time, sometimes in a matter of hours. For the arguments to be made here, I think we should look back and see what the practice has been in this House.

Mr. Speaker, I came to talk about a very critical issue, and I want to thank the Committee on Rules for making this in order, the lockbox amendment. We have been fighting now for close to 2 years to make one of the most important reforms in our budget process that we will address in this Congress. That is the lockbox.

I can still remember as a freshman in this Congress when I found that after we had fought on bill after bill, motion after motion, to reduce spending here and to pare spending down there and to try to bring control to our budget, all we had been doing was eliminating various programs; or Manhattan projects; but the money was still getting spent.

Why? Because we were just cutting the programs or projects, and what was happening to the money is it was simply unallocated. When it went into the conference committee, those in the conference committee sat down, pulled out special projects of their own interest or concern, put them back into the bill and used the unallocated money on those projects.

The reason it happens, Mr. Speaker, is because our budget system does not mandate that when we vote on this floor to cut budgets, that the cuts go to deficit reduction. That is what the lockbox will do. The lockbox will mandate that the money will go into these lockbox accounts, and there will then be a corresponding reduction in our Federal deficit spending, as we end each bill.

Mr. Speaker, this is a critical reform of our budget process, and I again want to thank the Committee on Rules for making it in order. I look forward to this evening’s debate on this critical issue.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Speaker, the charade being engaged in by the other side on the lockbox provision is really quite extraordinary. As a member of the Committee on Rules, I have offered an amendment in recommittee on Rules to essentially appropriate this bill up to this point, trying to get the lockbox provision added so we could vote on it, so we could have some savings.

The majority members of the Committee on Rules, day after day, bill after bill, rejected my amendment in the Committee on Rules, and only at this late date, with the final appropriation bill working its way through, did they deign to add the lockbox provision.

Mr. Speaker, the charade they are engaging in is extraordinary: crocodile tears. If they wanted this lockbox provision all they had to do was make it in order a month ago when I offered it to one of the other appropriation bills; but every time they rejected it, so we cannot take them seriously on this matter.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. MALONEY].

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this amendment and the underlying bill. I would like to respond to my good friend and colleague, the gentleman from New York, and agree with him on one point: that this bill is about priorities.

Mr. Speaker, as was pointed out by my colleagues earlier, this body voted for $8 billion, roughly $8 billion in additional spending to the defense budget that the President did not want, the Vice President did not want, the Joint Chiefs of Staff did not want, and the Pentagon said it did not need. However, in this budget we are slashing programs that are important to this Nation’s children, seniors, and workers. We are slashing, really, programs that assist and help this Nation’s cities.

Education cuts make up half of the cuts in the bill. Title I, which provides the extra support that millions of disadvantaged children need to get off to a good start, is slashed to ribbons. I represent a portion of Manhattan, Queens, and Brooklyn. These counties will lose $48 million in title I funding alone.

These are not just numbers, these cuts have real consequences. This bill will force thousands of New York City children, and children across this Nation who receive the extra push in reading and math that they need this year, to go it alone next year. That is not fair. Neither is the 60-percent cut in the SAFE and Drug-Free Schools Act, nor are the cuts that will eliminate thousands of Head Start slots across the Nation; the healthy start program; the job training and seniors programs. And the bill eliminates the summer jobs program. We are blocking young children from the path to learning, and young adults from the path to opportunity.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I cannot abide the outrageous assaults on a woman’s constitutional right to reproductive freedom that are contained in this bill.

The Istook amendment, which would prevent States from using Medicaid funds to provide abortions in the case of rape and incest, represents the rankest attack on or most vulnerable citizens.
August 2, 1995

This provision renders the right to choose meaningless since it denies women the means to choose. It must be stricken from the bill. I also oppose the assault on title X funds. It is hard to understand why the new majority wants to cut a program that saves the Government $5 for every dollar invested and that prevents half a million abortions each year.

Finally, the egregious language on accreditation standards for graduate medical education is an unwarranted back door attempt to advance the anti-choice agenda. There is no place in this funding bill for wanton Government interference in residency requirements for obstetrics and gynecology.

The bill undermines the constitutional rights of women.

The bill will make it harder for women to stay healthy.

The bill degrades the programs that have proven most successful in educating our children.

I ask for a "no" vote on the rule and a "no" vote on the bill.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Speaker, one reason Congress is held in such low esteem by the American people is because some politicians have a tendency to say one thing back home and then come down here and vote a different way. I would just ask the viewers of C-SPAN, maybe they want to write in for the National Taxpayers Union's list of big spenders. I have it here in front of me.

I hate to even bring this up with my good friend, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Frost], but he says he has fought for this lockbox time in and time out. We have to live by our voting record. The name of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Frost] appears here as one of the biggest spenders in the Congress, year in and year out. People ought to pay attention to this when they hear people on the floor get up and pretend to be fiscal conservatives. This will clarify the matter for the American people.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Speaker, I would only point out to the gentleman on the other side that I have offered this amendment on every single appropriation bill, and the gentleman who holds himself out as the defender of the taxpayers has led the fight to prevent this amendment from being offered on every single appropriation bill up until this point.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Frank].

Mr. Frank of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I would address the Members on the other side. We did three appropriation bills in 2 days last year. There is a difference. Last year we did not have the systemic abuse of authorizing process. We did not have appropriations that preempts totally the authorizing process. We have a senior Republican from one of the authorizing committees today complaining about this.

Those three bills that only took 2 days last year all had completely open rules with no restriction, and they were done easily because they were appropriations bills, and they only dealt with the money. They did not, as this side often tries to rewrite the legislation. What they have done is they have been unable to have the authorizing committees function. The Republicans control the authorizing committees, but they have not been able to get them to function. They have not been able to get them to function. They have, therefore, used the appropriations bills to a degree unprecedented in my experience as legislative vehicles, and then we run into this terrible problem. It is one thing to deal simply with the money. It is another to get into the degree of legislative that they have gotten into.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself my remaining time.

Mr. Speaker, this is an absolutely terrible bill. This is a piece of legislation that the other side should be ashamed of. Quite the contrary, they seem to take great pride in cutting programs that affect women, cutting programs that affect children, cutting programs that affect the neediest in our society. This bill should be defeated, and I urge a "no" vote on this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I have here the committee report on this bill. I would just point out to the previous speaker, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Frank], and to my good friend, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Frost], that in just 3 days that were brought before the House last year, all of the appropriation bills, all of them contained unauthorized and legislative language. All of them contained unauthorized programs.

As a matter of fact, let me just point out what will happen if this rule goes down. In this bill are literally dozens and dozens of programs, like the Older Americans Act, that have not been reauthorized. If we let this rule go down, there is going to be a heyday on this floor when we bring the bill back without a rule, and any Member can stand up, if you are a conservative you can stand up and wipe out all of these programs that the moderates in the House strongly support. It would be a field day.

By the same token, we have moderates who do not like a lot of the legislative language that is in there. They can stand up and, one by one by one, they can knock them all out on a point of order. We will end up with precisely what is in VA-HUD this year. Try to not have taken care of those programs that truly help the needy. I do not think we want to do that. That would be terribly embarrassing to both sides of the aisle if we let that fiasco take place.

Mr. Speaker, this is a rule that has been negotiated for hours with moderates and conservatives by the droves, sometimes 35 or 40 of each, sitting down and working out the rule. It was a compromise that we were in agreement. Then suddenly, because somebody smells blood, we are going to have a vote on this rule, and some are going to try to defeat the rule. I think that the American people would not like that to happen.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. SOLOMON

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment suggested by my good friend, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Obey], where we are going to extend the debate time on general debate from 1 hour to 2 1/2 hours. We are then going to set up general debate time on the first three titles, so we can actually have good give and take. We are going to give 90 minutes on each of those titles of general debate before we get into the amendment process. This was suggested by the gentleman from Wisconsin. We are going to go along with it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Dickey). The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk reads as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SOLOMON: Page 2, line 6, strike "one hour" and insert "two and one-half hours".

Page 3, beginning on line 5, strike "It shall be in order at any time to consider" and insert "Consideration of each of the first three titles of the bill shall begin with an additional period of general debate, which shall be confined to the pending title and shall not exceed 90 minutes equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations. It shall be in order at any time during the reading of the bill for amendment to consider..."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Solomon] has 10 seconds remaining.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the amendment and on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Solomon].

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution, as amended.

DEPARTMENTS OF LABOR, HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, AND EDUCATION, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1996

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 2127) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1996, and for other purposes, with Mr. WALKER in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, as amended, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER] and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Obey] will be recognized for 1 hour and 15 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER].

(Mr. PORTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, this is obviously a very difficult and contentious bill. It cuts $6.3 billion from the discretionary budget authority of $67.2 billion, reducing it to $60.9 billion.

It is a 9.7 percent overall cut. It is a cut that is necessary to help bring down deficits and bring our budget as close as possible into balance.

The cuts range from a high of 15 percent for funding for the Department of Education to cuts in discretionary spending in the Department of Health and Human Services, which is 3.5 percent.
May I suggest to my colleagues on the other side of the aisle that cuts of 9 percent in a bill of this magnitude are not cuts that will cause the sky to fall. They are moderate cuts that allow the departments and agencies and programs under our jurisdiction to contribute to deficit reduction and ensure that we help bring the deficits down and stop asking our children and grandchildren to pay for what we receive.

Mr. Chairman, we worked very hard on the bill. We attempted to use intelligence and thoughtfulness in addressing the priorities for spending for our country under our jurisdiction, and we looked very carefully at every single line item starting with the premise that everything in the bill must contribute something to helping us to reduce the deficit.

We asked ourselves, Mr. Chairman, whether a particular program needed to be a Federal responsibility or could it be done better in the private sector or by State government or local government?

We asked ourselves, does the program actually work? In other words, is it actually helping people, or is it simply providing work to the people in the departments either at the State, Federal, or local level?

We asked whether it met a national need, whether the administrative costs were too high in respect to the benefits to be derived.

We asked ourselves, was it duplicative of other programs?

Every single line item was measured against those criteria, and we undertook to reduce the discretionary spending under our jurisdiction and, at the same time, give commitments to national priorities that should be funded at a higher level.

For example, we provided $11.9 billion to the National Institutes of Health, the NIAID research done in teaching institutions across our country as well as intramurally at the NIH facility in Bethesda, Maryland. It provides research to combat disease and injury, helping people to live longer and healthier lives.

On the economic side, the United States leads the world in biomedical research and development. Federally supported biomedical research creates high-skilled jobs for our people and supports the biotechnology industry, which also leads the world in helping to generate a positive balance of trade for our country. The increase for fiscal year 1996 is $642 million, an increase of 5.7 percent.

We, at the same time, removed numerous earmarks and instructions that placed political considerations ahead of scientific decisions as to the most promising avenues of research. We end earmarking of research funding and leave the funding priorities not to political considerations, but to science.

We increase funding for prevention programs by $63 million, including funding for childhood immunization, sexually transmitted diseases, chronic and environmental diseases, breast and cervical cancer screening, and infectious diseases. Programmatic levels are maintained for programs such as the preventive health block grant, the AIDS prevention activities, tuberculosis, lead poisoning and epidemic services.

We increased, Mr. Chairman, funding for the Job Corps program, which will permit the opening of four newly authorized centers, and, Mr. Chairman, we support student assistance very strongly by providing the largest increase in maximum Pell grants in history, and by funding the maximum grant at $2,440, also the highest level in history.

We provide level funding for Federal supplemental educational opportunities grants, the work study programs and the TRIO program, which we consider a very high priority.

We do terminate 170 programs originally funded in fiscal 1995 at $4.9 billion. Among those terminated are many of the 163 separate job training programs in the Department of Labor and the Department of Education and over 50 programs in the Department of Education that provide no direct services to students but instead fund research, technical assistance, information dissemination, or demonstration funds.

We terminate Goals 2000. Mr. Chairman, a program that also provides no direct assistance whatsoever to students but instead funds a variety of administrative and planning activities that school districts and States can well do without billions of dollars of Federal funding.

We focus OSHA funds more towards compliance assistance to prevent worker injury and away from enforcement, an after-the-fact solution.

We abolish the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Health with its allocation of 14 deputy assistant secretaries and six special assistants at a grade 15 or 14 deputy assistant secretaries and six special assistants at a grade 15 or above, which the Department itself is in the process of reforming.

We increase assurance that Federal funds are not being used to support the advocacy of public policy. We reduce administrative costs by cutting overall administrative budgets in every single department, program, and agency by 7.5 percent and for congressional and public affairs offices by 10 percent.

Mr. Chairman, for the Department of Labor, we cut discretionary spending by $1.1 billion, or 11.4 percent. This includes substantial reductions in certain job training programs, including the elimination of funding for the summer jobs programs, also previously rescinded because of their general lack of effectiveness. This decision reflects the need to prioritize or reduce spending as well as the fact the Committee on Economic and Educational Opportunities is in the process of consolidating these same programs.

As I mentioned, Job Corps is increased, one-stop career centers are level funded, Bureau of Labor Statistics is funded almost at level at $347 million, a reduction of 1.3 percent, OSHA funds are shifted, as I mentioned, and the bill directs more of the Community Service Corps for Older Americans spending to local providers rather than to national contracts.

The bill also contains language to prevent implementation of the President’s Executive order on strike replacement and to end pressure on pension funds to invest in economically targeted investments.

For the Department of Health and Human Services, the funding declines by $1 billion, a 3.5-percent cut.

The bill funds the health centers activities at $77 million above last year’s level, $756.5 million, and provides an increase of $116 million for the maternal and child health block grant to $900 million.

The bill presently funds the family planning programs into the community and migrant health programs and the maternal and child health block grant, an idea that I do not support and I will oppose when the amendment comes before the floor for our consideration.

We do provide level funding, maintenance funding, for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention programs support, supporting a broad range of education programs in many others at last year’s level, including the CDC AIDS prevention program.

Funding for breast and cervical cancer screening is increased by 25 percent to $125 million.

We provide level funding for community service block grants at $390 million, for child care and development block grants at $935 million.

For the Ryan White AIDS program, funding is increased by $23 million to a level of $186 million, and NIOSH funding, Mr. Chairman, is reduced by 25 percent to $99 million.

Funding for the Agency of Health Care Policy and Research declines by 21 percent to $125.5 million.

We provide level funding for the mental health and substance abuse block grants at $275 million and $1.23 billion, respectively.

Funding for the LIHEAP program, low-income home energy assistance, is increased by 8 percent to a level of $1.96 billion, and NIOSH funding, Mr. Chairman, is reduced by 25 percent to $99 million.

Funding for the Agency of Health Care Policy and Research declines by 21 percent to $125.5 million.

that we expect in a program that is well run. The bill also changes current law by providing the States with the option of providing Federal Medicaid funds for abortion in cases of rape or incest and prohibits the use of Federal funds to discriminate against medical schools who do not include abortion training as part of their overall Ob/Gyn training and bans embryo research by NIH. I might say, Mr. Chairman, I do not agree with these provisions and will address them when we come to that section of the bill where amendments are being offered.

Mr. Chairman, overall, we have a 9 percent reduction. The largest departmental reduction is at 13 percent; the lowest is at 3.5 percent. This is a responsible bill that chooses priorities for our country, funds those programs that are essential and working well to help people in our country. It is a bill that contributes its share for the expansion and the need for us to put our fiscal house in order.

Let me say in closing Mr. Chairman, I believe we have done our job in a very thoughtful and responsible manner. I believe that we have made the reductions to deficit reduction and to deficit reduction in a way that preserves essential and good programs.

To say that the sky is falling because we have reduced spending in this area is simply to vastly overstate the case. The Federal Government has grown for 40 years. It has grown without any control. It has grown on deficit spending that has raised our national debt to nearly $5 trillion. These departments have grown hugely. In the last 10 years alone, the Department of Education has gone from 120 programs to 240 programs, just in the last 10 years. We must get control over this process. We must get back to the core programs that serve people and must trim the tree. Every once in a while you have to do that.

Mr. Chairman. You have to look at all that has grown up and, however worthy it may be, it is very costly to administer. We do not need programs that are very tightly targeted with their own separate staff and administrator. We need to get back to core programs that really help people. That has been the thrust of our thinking in this bill. I think we have done a responsible job. I commend the bill to all of the Members.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 17 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I have a great deal of respect for the gentleman from Illinois, as he knows. He has worked very hard, and he has dealt with all of us in a very fair way. But he is, frankly, caught in a maelstrom not of his own making. This is not a bill which he would have produced had he been able to control events.

Mr. Chairman, this is the worst appropriation bill that I have seen come out of the Committee on Appropriations in the 25 years that I have had the privilege to serve the Seventh District of Wisconsin in this House.

Mr. Chairman, the public, in the last election, tried to send us a message. I think that election begins with the idea that it is working people for more than a decade saw their living standard fall. They have seen costs slowly rise, while their incomes have stood still or even declined in real dollar terms after you adjust for inflation. Young workers take two workers per family to maintain the same kind of living standards that you could maintain a generation ago with one person in the workplace.

You have what many people call the sandwich generation. They are desperately worried about how to take care of their retired parents at the same time that they are trying to find enough money to send their kids to school. And I think for many years individuals have been looking in the mirror when they get up in the morning and saying, "Hey, what am I doing wrong?"

But in the 1990's I think they have come to understand that it is not just the dollars and cents, it is understanding that everybody is being squeezed. And in 1992, President Clinton was elected because I think the public wanted him to pursue a solution to fundamental problems.

In 1994, the Republicans were not satisfied with the progress that they thought had been made. They saw a national failure on health care. They saw too much being devoted to marginal issues, and so they put our Republican friends in charge. And I think what they were hoping was that by doing so, that would force both parties to work together to produce a common agenda on common ground for the common good of the greatest number of people in this country. We thought we could deliver a dollar's worth of service for a dollar's worth of taxes. They wanted programs that were as well managed as they were well meaning, and I think they wanted us to weed out unnecessary spending and make Government smaller and make Government work better at the same time.

I think they also wanted a war on special interest domination of the Congress and the Government. Now, clearly, many of us in the Democratic Party got the message. If we did not, we would have had to be deaf. And I think many of us are willing to work to try to pursue that kind of agenda. But this bill goes far beyond that.

This bill eliminates a number of unnecessary and duplicative programs. I say "good." It makes additional cuts in the name of deficit reduction. Maybe we are not thrilled about that because some of these programs provide deeply caring services that we understand is necessary. But it goes far beyond that, and, in doing so, becomes the meanest and the most vicious and extreme attack on women and kids and workers of any appropriation bill in the postwar era.

It reveals in the process enormous differences between my party and the Republican majority about the priorities that ought to be given to raising the quality of our education. It is to protect the health and dignity of workers, both in the workplace and at the bargaining table, and to provide the skills necessary for workers to compete in a changing world economy. And it shreds the vulnerable and those whose life opportunities are often cruelly neglected in a materialist society.

Next to the fight over Medicare, this bill is the epicenter of what I call the Gingrich counterrevolution. As I said, some of the cuts are necessary to help reduce our Federal spending, but this bill goes far beyond that because the economic game plan, of which this bill is a part, is insisting that we provide, among other things, some very large tax cuts for some very rich people.

"Look at the tax cuts being prescribed, you understand what I mean. We are being told by our Republican friends that we need to eliminate the corporate minimum tax. This is a list of companies who, from 1962 to 1989, despite the fact that they made one whale of a lot of money. We are going to return to those good old days because our majority party friends want us to eliminate the minimum tax that those corporations have to pay. We will go back to the good old days when AT&T, DuPont, Boeing, General Dynamics, PepsiCo, General Mills, Trans America, Texaco, International Paper, Greyhound, you get the idea, all the way down. You see, those corporations, during the 1982 to 1985 period, made $59 billion in profits, $59 billion in profits. Yet in many of those years they escape paying a dime in taxes. We are going to give corporate friends and friends in industry in this bill to help finance that kind of nonsense.

If we take a look at the Federal Reserve studies which have been done on what happened in the 1980's, this shows who has gotten what and what has happened to the American dream in the 1980's.

The Federal Reserve shows that from the end of World War II to roughly 1975, beginning of 1979, people's incomes rose, even after inflation. And that is before the corporate minimum tax. This is a list of companies who, from 1982 to 1985, made $59 billion in profits, $59 billion in profits. Yet in many of those years they escape paying a dime in taxes. apart. I say to my colleagues, If you’re in the bottom 20 percent of income, you have lost a bundle since 1979. If you’re in the middle, you have lost ground. Only if you’re in the top 20 percent of income earners in this country have you even held your own, and especially the richest 1/2 million families in this country have done exceedingly well because the new Federal Reserve study shows that the richest 1/2 million families in this country, about 1/2 percent of the total family number, have increased their share of national wealth from 24 percent of the Nation’s wealth to 31 percent.

Mr. Chairman, that is a huge expansion of wealth for the wealthiest people in this society who already had a awful lot. The wealth for those few families increased by a greater amount, by almost twice as much as the entire nation, not increased during that period. And yet our Republican friends on this side of the aisle think that that is not enough disparity, that is not enough trickle-down which starts by taking care of the needs of people in the top 5 percent.

So they have produced a tax package which has a distribution table roughly this way: The average tax cut per family from the House tax bill is mighty slim for someone in the bottom 40 percent, or even in the middle of this society, but, oh man, someone in that top 1 percent, $20,000 in a tax cut. So we are going to chisel on programs for poverty-riden senior citizens, and we are going to chisel on the aid that we provide local school districts to help educate the most difficult to educate kids in this society in order to provide those folks a $20,000 tax cut.

Mr. Chairman, that is what is behind this bill, and that is why this bill is so wrong.

If we take a look at what is happening, the biggest cut in this bill is aimed at the aid that we have traditionally provided local school districts, some $26 billion. Going to clobber chapter 1. Going to clobber Drug-Free Schools" that helps schools teach kids to avoid drugs before they get hooked. Going to clobber vocational education. Going to lay it to the School to Work Program which makes sure that what we produce our college-bound kids do not move out of high school into the world of work and helps them to try to find a place that will give them a good bit of training to transition into the work force. The main results from that, my colleagues can be assured, will be a declining quality and higher property taxes.

For the first time in 34 years the Federal Government is not going to make a contribution to the Stafford student loan program. I would bet my colleagues that a good third of the people in this Chamber, if they are 30 years of age or older, used that Stafford program when they went to college, but now we are going to have an awful lot of folks who have climbed the economic ladder of opportunity pulling that ladder up after them by not making a contribution to that program. Goals 2000 to improve educational quality: participation in the report put out under George Bush, wiped out under this bill.

The next biggest hit comes on the vulnerable, the seniors, the disabled, and the poor kids in this society. In the late 1970’s Senator Muskie and I started a program to help low-income people, pay their fuel bills, heat their houses in the wintertime, cool them in the summertime, because we got awfully tired of seeing senior citizens who had to choose between paying their prescription drugs and keeping their house warm in the winter. So we passed a low-income heating assistance program.

We just had almost 800 people in this country die in a heat wave 3 weeks ago, and lots of Governors put out press releases saying they would release emergency money under the Low-Income Heating Assistance Program that the Federal Government has just given us so that we could help people in that situation. “Guess what? Under this bill we are going to cut more money being available to provide that kind of emergency relief because the program is wiped out. Eighty percent of the people who use that program make less than $10,000 a year, one-third of them are disabled, so that is just another one of the grace notes in this bill.

Under this bill we are going to have thousands of students who are learning to teach handicapped kids who are going to lose their scholarships to do that.

Under Healthy Start; it was started under George Bush, wiped out under this bill. Thirty-six thousand babies are going to die in this country this year. Head Start, which the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Hoyer] and others will talk about later: 45,000 to 55,000 kids going to be tossed out the window on that program, and we are essentially going to be saying to local school districts, “You find a way to take care of it, kiddo. We’re not going to do that anymore.”

Both parties talk a grand game on bipartisanship, started under George Bush, aimed at increasing a common cause. We are ceasing to be a country with a large and growing middle class. Instead we are accepting the fact that we are going to have fewer and fewer tickets into the middle class, and we are accepting the fact that we are going to have a level of insecurity for those in the middle class that used to be associated with being poor. We are becoming in my view a society with a very rich people and a great number of people trying desperately to hang on to some semblance of what is left of a middle-class living standard, and not many people in between, and this bill makes all of that worse.

Mr. Chairman, this bill savagely cuts financial support for crucial programs that have been used by millions of Americans to help work themselves up the economic ladder. And the New Conrusions who are running this House, I think, after having made it themselves are perfectly willing to pull that ladder up after them, and my response is, Shame on you, shame on you. You ought to know better.

This bill also contains a number of legislative riders which are slipped into this bill literally in the dead of night because that is when we met, from 9:30 at night until 3 in the morning. And those provisions rip into the protections that we provided workers and working families for decades. We will be offering amendments to try to strip that language out, but we will not be offering amendments to fix this bill financially because this bill is beyond repair. And we have already cast in this House which locks this subcommittee into an allocation of resources which will allow this Congress to continue to fund the B–2, for instance, over $1 billion a plane. That is the cost of the B–2, just one of those B–2 programs. More than the Pentagon asked for, more than the President asked for, more than the Joint Chiefs of Staff asked for. Just one of those babies would pay the tuition costs of every single kid at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, for the next 12 years, to put it in perspective.

While we are going to be gutting the programs for the people in this bill, Mr. Chairman, we are going to continue the production, or we are going to begin production, of the F-22 in the Speaker’s home State; $70 billion for that airplane to complete production. That is more than we have spent in this entire bill in discretionary spending, for everything that this bill is supposed to do for education, and workers and seniors.

So we will be trying to make people understand, as we go through the amendment process, what is at stake, not inside the beltway, but for people out there in the country, and we will be trying to focus people’s attention on the vote on final passage. There are going to be a lot of Members offering amendments, what I call get-off-the-hook amendments, or what I call holy picture amendments to try to pose for holy pictures and look good on a little narrow issue on this bill, hoping then people would not notice that they voted for this legislation. The only way to correct the gross injustices in this bill is to vote the bill down, send it back to the committee, insist that the committee redo its budget allocation process so that we do not have to gauge seniors; I want our future education prospects in order to provide a big tax cut for some of the richest people in this country.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBEY. I yield to the gentlewoman from Colorado.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. One of the most profound and thoughtful statements I have ever heard, I say to the gentleman.

I wanted to talk about the gentleman’s charts for a moment because I thought they were so ominous. The way I read the gentleman’s tax-cut chart, that last one is for the upper 1 percent, is that correct?

Mr. OBEY. Yes, 1 percent.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. The upper 1 percent, and the reason I thought it was important to point it out is, as I understand the chart before that, it is broken into 20 percent.

Mr. OBEY. That is right.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. So what the gentleman is saying there is while the upper 20 percent had been doing much better, obviously, than the lower 20 percent, with this tax cut we are forgetting even the upper 19 percent of that 20 percent. We are just going for the 1 percent; we are going for the really fattest of the fat cats.

Mr. OBEY. Well, I guess what I would say is we have been told that this bill represents payback time, and I guess when we see this chart, we can see who is getting paid back.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, let me say about the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] that I appreciate his contributions in working with the majority and the Members on our excellent members of our subcommittee as well. He has contributed throughout the process in marking up and reporting the bill. It has not been easy for any of us, and I appreciate his kind remarks, and I feel that we have worked very well together and have done our best in addressing the difficult problems in the bill.

I might say regarding his chart, the one that shows the quintiles of income for people in the country, that that chart is completely misleading because it deals only with income. Income used to be a very easy quantifiable measure, but the difficulty was that the very times he worries that the income has gone down, we began a process in our nation of better benefits through employment health benefits, pension benefits and the like that are not reflected in his chart.

Mr. Chairman, he also ignores Government transfer programs. There is nothing in the chart that takes account of food stamps, Medicaid and like programs. So the chart measuring only income does not measure the well-being of families at all, and I believe that no one should believe that the chart really reflects the condition of families across this country.

I might say about the tax package, Mr. Chairman, that I agree with what the gentleman said about taxes. We should not be making tax cuts at this time. I did not support the tax cut provisions. I believe we should make tax cuts when we have balanced the budget and not before. A question of timing. I certainly think that they are not appropriate right now, and I might agree with this is not the time to provide huge funding for the B-2. Even though it is wonderful technology to have, we do have other problems that have to be addressed. I have never supported funding for the B-2 bomber.

Mr. Chairman, let me talk about some of the other things the gentleman has talked about and set the record straight. On Perkins loans, which he called Stafford loans, the Perkins Loan Program is already funded at $6 billion. Is that correct?

Yes, it is true we did not add $158 million of new capital to that account, but the account is a revolving account with $6 billion out there. I might say that if every person who borrowed a Perkins loan repaid it, we would never need to add capital to the account except as the number of students rise that might need it. There is a very adequate fund available to students who need help in this country. We have not cut that at all. We simply were not able, in this budgetary environment, to add to it.

We talked about the LIHEAP Program earlier. I would have supported it in 1979 because Federal policy caused the second Arab oil embargo. It did raise prices unconscionably, and the poor were terribly affected by the fact that heating oil and energy costs generally went through the roof. Today, however, energy costs and heating oil are at historic lows. The Federal policy has changed since gone. There is no crisis, and yet the program continues on and on.

Do we have needs in this country among the poor? Of course, we do. Is it the Federal responsibility to address every one of those problems to me it is the responsibility of the utilities and the States which regulate them to handle that problem, as they always did in the past, and not for the Federal Government to create a program that simply is unending. A very expensive program indeed.

The gentleman talked about chapter 1, title I, the program for economically disadvantaged students. It would be wonderful to fund that forever, except for one thing: The program does not work. The very schools that the program sends its money to in the inner cities are failing our students. All the money in the world is not going to change that and it has not changed that.

In fact, the schools are in awful condition. What is going to change it is the very thing my State is doing. If I can say to the gentleman, we have said to the city of Chicago, which has among the poorest public schools in America, end it. Get rid of your board of education, get rid of all your bureaucracy and levels of administration.

We are turning over to the mayor of the city of Chicago the entire responsibility for the schools; and, believe me, the mayor will straighten them out. One of the great problems with school funding is that it supports huge bureaucracies that do not help students one whit. All you have to do is look to our major cities and see that that money is money truly down a rat hole. It is not working to educate kids.

Healthy Start. Healthy Start is a demonstration program. We support that program. It is going to terminate this year. We did cut the funding for it to terminate it a little earlier, but it is not an ongoing program. It is not any thing other than a demonstration program. We think it works well, and maybe should be reauthorized, but that is not up to the Committee on Appropriations.

Head Start I addressed earlier. Let me say once again we strongly support Head Start, but we do not support sending money into new Head Start programs where it is poorly administered and we are not getting value for the money. That is why we made a very small cut in a program of over $3 billion. The very schools that the program going but send a message that we want that money spent well and wisely.

Job training: 163 programs. The gentleman talks about the dislocated
Mr. MILLER. The gentleman from California [Mr. PORTER], the ranking gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. DICKIE], the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY], the chairman of the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies, for his very kind remarks and for his outstanding efforts on behalf of this very difficult and complex bill. It was a hard task for him to approach preparing and presenting this bill because he does care so deeply about each and every one of the items that are the subject matter of the bill. He has done a splendid job. This bill meets our budget targets, and I commend him, all of the staff, and all of the members of the committee on both sides of the aisle.

I want to say to my friend, the ranking minority member of the committee and the subcommittee, that I have enjoyed working with him through this very rigorous process. He and I do not agree on every single issue, and, as you will soon hear, certainly not on the issues involving this bill or his last statement, but we have had a good working relationship.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, would the gentleman yield?

Mr. LIVINGSTON. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin briefly.

Mr. OBEY. As the gentleman knows, Will Rogers said once that when two people agree on everything, one of them is unnecessary. Mr. LIVINGSTON. I would hope the gentleman has just proved that neither one of us is unnecessary. One of us will win, and I hope it is me.

At any rate, I want to commend him for the way he has handled his business on the subcommittee and on the committee. He is a great Member of Congress. He believes deeply in the institution, and I personally enjoy working with him very much, and would say to the Members: I think he is totally wrong on this bill.

In fact, Mr. Chairman, I think his statement on the floor is a representation, a very good representation, of a very failed and flawed philosophy that has been the case for the last 60 years. It has ended. Socialism does not work, and it is a very failed and flawed philosophy that has been very dry over the last 60 years. It has gone dry over the last 60 years. It is a very failed and flawed philosophy that the Members that I think he is totally wrong.

The fact is we have to rein in spending. We have to start saving and economizing. Government spending is not the be-all end-all to all of our problems. We have thrown money for too long at too many problems and gotten too little result. Now we realize if we do not start balancing our books, just like the debt on your credit cards, is gathering interest at a rapid rate. So rapid in fact, that within a year and a half, the interest on the debt that we pay will exceed what we spend on the National defense of this country.

The fact is we have to rein in spending. We have to start saving and economizing. Government spending is not the be-all end-all to all of our problems. We have thrown money for too long at too many problems and gotten too little result. Now we realize if we do not start balancing our books, just like every family in America has to do and every business in America has to do, that this Nation will, like many other nations, go bankrupt.

Mr. Chairman, I do not think that is a legacy we want to leave our children or grandchildren. Even with the Republican budget, that does not mean we have totally balanced our books, but what it does mean is that that balanced budget that President Reagan signed with the American people last November. That mandate is to balance the budget, to end duplication and federal programs, and to emphasize government agencies. To paraphrase the debate earlier in the year on the Republican budget: Why do we need to balance the budget? The chairman of the Federal Reserve, Alan Greenspan, said it best: So that our children will have a higher standard of living than their parents.

Now, Mr. Chairman, how long can we really expect to continue to strap American citizens with a national debt that is approaching $5 trillion, a debt that equates to over $18,000 for every man, woman, and child in America? That debt, just like the debt on your credit cards, is gathering interest at a rapid rate. So rapid in fact, that within a year and a half, the interest on the debt that we pay will exceed what we spend on the National defense of this country.

The fact is we have to rein in spending. We have to start saving and economizing. Government spending is not the be-all end-all to all of our problems. We have thrown money for too long at too many problems and gotten too little result. Now we realize if we do not start balancing our books, just like every family in America has to do and every business in America has to do, that this Nation will, like many other nations, go bankrupt.
In this bill, after the cuts that have been described by the gentleman from Wisconsin who preceded me, we still provide $68.1 billion in discretionary outlay spending for hundreds of domestic programs. We still provide a total of $278 billion in spending when you include mandatory programs under this committee's jurisdiction.

We provide $11.9 billion for the National Institutes of Health; $642 million over last year's level, which represents a 6.6 percent increase in the NIH budget for this fiscal year. We provide $2.16 billion for the Centers for Disease Control programs, an increase of $39 million over last year, and $302 million for the maternal and child health program, which is $116 million over last year's level.

We increased the Job Corps funding to open four new centers; total spending for the Job Corps is $1.1 billion in this bill. In this bill we provide the largest increase in history for the maximum Pell grant, $2.4 million per individual.

This bill providing $6.9 billion for funding for student financial assistance, and combined with the carry-over Pell grant funding, the total is $7.7 billion for student assistance, an increase of $103.9 million over last year's level, and they say the sky is falling. We are not giving enough to students.

The bill provides, among other things—here is a good one. We have heard the President, we have heard those in Congress who decry the cuts, say the sky is falling, the Sun is rising in the West. Head Start, the one they talk about so much, we are cutting it all the way back from $3.5 billion to $3.4 billion; $3.4 billion will be spent on Head Start alone, up from $2.2 billion in 1995. Mr. Chairman, we have got to get our priorities straight.

We have increased funding for preschool programs, or 24 education programs, or at least six different programs funding family planning.

We can hone these down. We can separate these programs, these redundancies and these inefficiencies, and we can have fewer programs with less bureaucracy and still provide probably more money to the people who are really in need. We can do without this wasteful idea of simply raising money from the American taxpayer and throwing it at good ideas.

In fact, there has been some talk about those tax benefits. I have another chart, not blown up unfortunately, but here is the Republican tax proposal. People whose income is under $20,000 get 5 percent of the proposed tax benefit. The people making between $20,000 and $30,000 get barely more than 1 percent. People making over $30,000 get only 10 percent of the proposed tax benefit. The people making between $30,000 and $40,000 get 15 percent of the benefit. Those making between $40,000 and $50,000 get 15 percent of the benefit.

The point is, all these people are helping the people making under $75,000, all of these people get 65 percent of the tax benefits. For the $500 child credit proposal, 75 percent of this tax benefit goes to those making under $75,000 in the aggregate.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I will have to tell you that there has been a lot of hype. There has been a lot of overplay, a lot of scare mongering. People say that this bill should not be adopted because it is cut too deep. It spends $278 billion for good causes, and that is $278 billion from the American taxpayer. It is not unfair, it is not unwise, it is not devastating. It is a good bill, it is a critical bill, it should be passed, and I urge its adoption.

Mr. Obey. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3½ minutes.

Mr. Chairman, just very briefly to respond to the previous two gentlemen, I would say first to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Porter], he suggests that our tax charts are not accurate. Is the gentleman truly suggesting that the middle-class families in this country have done better the last 10 years than the super rich? If he is, I would respectfully suggest somebody is smoking something that is not legal. I do not think anybody else sees it that way.

The gentleman says that the Perkins loan is amply funded. All I can tell you is there are going to be 500,000 students who will not be helped by the Perkins loan program this year if we do not make a contribution to it.

The gentleman says in terms of low-income heating assistance, there is no crisis. Good gravy, 600 people died in Chicago just 2 weeks ago because they were overcome by heat. The low-income heating assistance program is the program that is supposed to help folks like that. No crisis?

Mr. Porter says that because schools are in trouble, we ought to cut back on chapter I. To suggest you ought to cut back on the major programs we have to help local school districts educate the toughest to teach kids in their districts, to suggest we ought to cut that back and somehow that is going to improve education performance is, I think, backward.

The gentleman says that we should not worry about the dislocated worker programs. 193,000 families aren't going to be able to get help on job training after they have lost their jobs, through no fault of their own. Is that the answer America is going to give to the workers?
who have fallen victim to programs like NAFTA and GATT? I hope not.

With respect to the gentleman from Louisiana, he recites a great number of small programs that ought to be eliminated. He is beating a dead horse. We have already said 15 times we support the elimination of those programs. Fine.

The gentleman says that this bill is an end to socialism. Well, with all due respect, I do not think helping kids to get an education is socialist. I do not think helping workers to get job training is socialist.

I ran into one young woman in the community of Rhinelander in my district, 22 years old, I think she was. She was in school, in a 2-year school. She had a couple of kids. She and her husband split because her husband had beaten the living devil out of her time after time after time. She was homeless for 2 months last year, yet she kept going to school every day trying to make of her life, and she was using a Perkins loan and other educational help. Is it socialism to help a person like this? Nonsense.

The gentleman says we should stop throwing money at programs. I agree. Why don't you join us in eliminating the B-2 and the F-22? We will save a whole lot more money than we are spending in this bill.

The gentleman says that we are going to provide plenty of money for the truly needy. Here is a list of the truly needy giant corporations in this country who are going to wind up again paying no taxes whatsoever because of the Republican party insistence on eliminating the corporate minimum tax.

The gentleman says you are going to have some benefits to lower income people in the tax bill. Undoubtedly. But they will be table scraps in comparison to the caviar given to the people at the higher income scale.

The gentleman says we should not worry because this bill is spending $68 billion in discretionary funds. It is not. It is spending $62 billion. If it was spending $68 billion, we would not be having this fight.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. Livingston], the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I point out, as regretful as that incident was when all those people died because of the heat, not one of them was saved by the existing LIHEAP program which is in full operation today. The LIHEAP program did not do them any good.

Second, the B-2 bomber, a $33 billion investment, is estimated may end up saving us well over $650 billion over the long haul because of its payload. This is the weapons system for the future. It really has no place in this debate, because we are not talking about the defense of this Nation.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds.

Mr. Chairman, with all due respect, it does have a place in this debate, because your allocation gave the Pentagon $7 billion more than the President asked for. You have cut at least $7 billion out of this bill. That is the problem.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield 6 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Horner], a member of the subcommittee.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Thomas Jefferson said that the nation that is enthralled with untruths and untruth is destined to perish. I, therefore, have made a commitment to doing exactly what is necessary to assure this is not the case.

The chairman of our committee, Mr. Livingston, on this bill, I think 15 times now, I think I have seen it. He loves that chart. It is his Head Start chart. It shows how much money we are spending.

My colleagues, the reason that escalated in 1993, and 1990, and 1991, and 1992 and 1993 is because the Congress and President George Bush agreed, we were not doing enough. The bill was not vetoed. In fact, President Bush suggested increases. What the gentleman from Louisiana tells his colleagues is that more than 50 percent of the young people in America eligible for Head Start are falling through the cracks, that we are not investing in the over 50 percent of the young people for whom there are no seats in Head Start.

All of us in this Nation lament the fact that so many young people are falling into lives that are negative, that are going to make them tax takers rather than taxpayers. They will be part of a generation of people who don't want to participate citizens in our community. We see them on television. And we lament and we get angry, and we say, what is happening? Government clearly cannot do it all. We have got to have parents do a better job in education. We have got to have our schools doing a better job. But we will not solve the problem by disinvestment. A party that believes in socialistic.

We urge you to reject this bill. that is a different view than the subcommittee and committee took.

Listen, my colleagues, what Terrel Bell says: "The education of our children is too important to fall victim to this attack against education that serves a narrow agenda not supported by those who know and care about education."

He concludes with this: "The American people support educational excellence, not political extremism."

My colleagues, the person calling for the rejection of this bill and opposition to political extremism was Secretary Terrel Bell of the Reagan administration. Reject this bill.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Goodling].

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I would like to pick up on the last couple words that were just mentioned: educational excellence. I want to stand here today to take partial responsibility for the slowing down of the growth. of funding of Head Start and chapter 1. It is based specifically on what the gentleman just said: educational excellence.

That is not what we have been getting in Head Start in many instances. That is not what we have been getting in chapter 1 in many instances. Anything other than educational excellence. And I have crossed this country for 20 years telling these people we want excellence. We do not want to just do something new just because you added. We do not want to know how much more money we spent. We want to know what the results are. And we do not have any studies that show us anything to indicate that $40 billion in one program and $20 billion in another program have done great things to improve the lives of those young people and make them productive citizens.

But what has happened every time I have spoken all over this country about insisting on educational excellence? Those who run the programs say, not face to face but behind my back: We do not have to pay any attention to you. We know the Congress of the United States is going to give us more money. We know that every President, it does not matter which President, will not matter which side of the aisle they come from, are going to ask for more money, and so we are going to get more money and we do not have to worry about excellence. And what a disadvantage we have done to disfavored children in this country in Head Start in many instances and in chapter 1 in many instances.

What we are saying with this slight decrease is, now is the time to step forth and offer programs that are based on quality, that offer programs that will show us that in their third year, fourth year, fifth year of school, they have made dramatic increases and the Head Start has remained. The only studies we have to show that we have moved these children from community college towns, where the mentors are college students who are out there doing what we should have been doing in Head Start and what we should have been doing in many of the chapter 1 programs. That is teaching parenting skills and improving the literacy skills of the parents so when the child goes home from a Head Start or a chapter 1 experience, they have someone to help them to improve, not just a couple hours they may be in a school setting.

So I am not ashamed that I am one who has asked us to slow down temporarily these increases until we get the kind of quality that will give disadvantaged students an opportunity to be advantaged. In many instances, that is not happening today. Very few Members have spoken out, in all of these years of $40 billion of spending in the one program and $20 billion is not what we all we have ever heard about is, we need more money because we are not covering enough people; we should be covering more. I have always said, covering them with what? If you are not covering them with quality, you are doing them a disservice.

So I would hope that we would use those two words, educational excellence, to frame this discussion, not how much money we can spend, not how many people we can cover, but how much we can do to help them get a piece of the American dream. We have not been doing that successfully in many of these programs throughout the United States.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Stokes].

(Mr. STOKES asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I thank my distinguished ranking minority member, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Obe] for yielding time to me. Mr. Chair, as well as the leadership opposition to H.R. 2127, the bill establishing fiscal year 1996 appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education. For many years, one of the members of this subcommittee who have put this particular bill together. Until now, I have always taken pride in this bill which our beloved deceased chairman, Bill Natcher used to call the people's bill. This is the first time that I have come to the floor opposing the Labor-HHS-Ed appropriations measure. I oppose H.R. 2127 because of the devastating physical, social, and economic burden it places on the backs of our children, the elderly, and hard working families.

Nevertheless, I want to acknowledge the leadership and fairness of our distinguished subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. PORTER, as well as the leadership of the distinguished ranking member, Mr. OBEY of Wisconsin.

The 602(B) allocation for this bill is $9 billion, or 13 percent, below the fiscal year 1995 level. While some of the cuts can be justified, far too many of them will create critical quality of life problems for the people for whom this bill is intended.

Within the Department of Labor account, in overall discretionary programs, funding is cut 24 percent, or $2.7 billion, below the fiscal year 1995 appropriation level. More specifically, funding for summer jobs is eliminated, denying jobs to over 600,000 young people who need and want to work. The $446 million cut in the dislocated workers program will deny re-employment services to hundreds of thousands of laid-off workers.

Within the Department of Health and Human Services account, funding for the LIHEAP is eliminated. The $55 million, or over 50 percent cut in the Healthy Start Program means that over 1 million women would be denied critical prenatal health care. Funding for family planning is completely eliminated.

Within the Department of Education account, funding is cut 16 percent, or $4 billion. The $1 billion cut in title I concentration grants means that more than 1 million educationally disadvantaged students would be deprived of the academic assistance they require in reading and math. Funding for safe and drug free schools is cut by $266 million, or nearly 60 percent below the fiscal year 1995 funding level. Critical cuts are also made in funding for Howard and Galaudet Universities.

Of the 1 million women who would be denied critical prenatal health care, the measure also takes extensive liberties with respect to authorizing legislation. An unbelievable number of authorizing provisions are contained in this appropriations bill—ranging from abolishing the Office of the Surgeon General, to restricting women's rights, to gagging political advocacy, to denying worker protections.

Mr. Chairman, I can understand and support a balanced approach to deficits. But, I cannot support balancing the needs of the wealthy on the backs of our children, the elderly, and families. I urge my colleagues to defeat H.R. 2127.
Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. MORELLA. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I would tell the gentlewoman that our subcommittee is aware of the important work performed by the men and women of the Office of Emergency Preparedness. The subcommittee’s action is in no way a devaluing of their efforts and of the need to respond to national emergencies. The subcommittee only removed the Office as a line item in the agency’s budget. The Secretary of Health and Human Services still has the discretion to keep this operation functioning if she deems it a priority.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman very much for that clarification. I would also like to engage the chairman in a colloquy with my colleague, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. DAVIS].

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. MORELLA. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding to me, Mr. Chairman. I understand that the chairman of the committee and the assistance of the chairman of the Committee on National Security, the gentleman from Florida, BILL YOUNG, in continuing funding for the DOT extramural AIDS prevention programs, the labor-HHS-education appropriations bill. As we know, the Army Research and Development Command was originally tasked by Congress in 1996 as lead DOD command for HIV-AIDS research. This research has focused on the practical aspects of screening, prevention, and early-stage treatment affecting military readiness and national security. The Army Medical Corps has a long history of battling infectious diseases that threaten military personnel, and the success of the Army’s program has been due largely to the unique character of military life.

Mrs. MORELLA. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, I also want to thank the chairman of the committee for so wisely continuing this program. I also want to thank the gentleman from Florida [Mr. Young] for his assistance.

Mr. Chairman, it is our understanding that the Army is interested in only focusing research on finding a vaccine for HIV-AIDS. However, with the 10- to 20-year validation period for a suitable vaccine, the importance of maintaining a vigorous research treatment program for those military personnel who are already infected is obvious.

I would ask the chairman of the committee, is it his intention that the $25 million provided for DOD AIDS research in the bill is to continue the natural history cohort and the domestic chemotherapeutic program, including the chemotherapeutic and the immune reconstitution program?

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, if the gentlewoman from Maryland will continue to yield; yes, it is our intention to fund the continuation costs of the DOD research project. I agree it is an important research and treatment program and should be continued.

Mrs. MORELLA. I thank the gentleman from Missouri this regard and I reiterate my thanks to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. Young].

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes and 10 seconds to the distinguished gentlewoman from California [Ms. PELOSI], a member of the subcommittee.

Mrs. PELOSI. Mr. Chairman, I thank our ranking member for yielding time to me, and also for his leadership on this legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the bill, with the greatest respect for our colleague, the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER], but I oppose the bill and hope that all of our colleagues will oppose it. It is fundamentally flawed and must be rewritten.

Mr. Chairman, this is a sad day for the Congress, and, therefore, for the country. It has always been a great privilege for me on the Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education of the Committee on Appropriations, a place where a bill is developed to provide the funds and directions for America’s future.

I thank the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. Natcher, and, I am sure they will, Mr. Conte, but as Chairman Natcher would always say, “If you educate your children and take care of the health of your people, you will live in the strongest country in the world.” Mr. Conte agreed. That definition of strength is one that we should keep before us as we establish budget priorities in this Congress.

Mr. Chairman, our budget should be a statement of our national values, and our natural resources which we should measure our strength, not only in our military might, which is very important to our country, but also in the health, education, and well-being, as Mr. Natcher said, of our people.

While there was often controversy over the Hyde amendment, issues like the Hyde amendment, in the past there was no question about the broad bipartisan support for the programs in this bill. For many years, our subcommittee operated on the basis of consensus, without even taking a vote. Both parties worked constructively to fashion a truly bipartisan statement of priorities for these programs. The bill was a unifying factor between our two parties in this Congress.

All that has changed. This bill has become an ideological battleground. It has driven a wedge into this Congress, because it declares war on American workers, it erodes decades of progress in education, it targets for punishment the most vulnerable people in America.

Some argue that this bill is just part of the pain associated with balancing the Federal budget. If that is all that was going on here, then the bill would be at least understandable, but this debate is about priorities within the budget limitations, as I mentioned earlier.

Mr. Chairman, while recognizing the need for us to have the strongest possible defense, it is hard to understand why we are moving more than $5 billion more into the defense and military construction projects, funds that were not even requested. The Republicans decided to focus the dramatic cuts on the Labor-HHS-Education and VA-HUD bills. Even if the defense-related programs were frozen rather than taking the same proportional hit as other bills, we would have about $4 billion more for this bill, enough to make it a much better bill.

I remind my colleagues that this bill takes a hit of $10 billion. We go from $70 billion to $60 billion. On top of all of this, the Republican leadership is insisting on a tax break for the wealthy Americans, putting pressure on the most defenseless in our population. We want to give more money to defense and take money from the defenseless. I think it is wrong.

I think the bill started out bad, it was a very dark night, as our ranking member, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] mentioned, in the dark of night when this bill came out of subcommittee then it got even worse as it moved through 3 days of full committee markup. By adopting five amendments which were part of the issues alert of the Christian Coalition, the bill became worse. Those included attempting to gag public interest advocacy, limiting further a woman’s right to choose, prohibiting human embryo research, interfering with the private sector’s accreditation of graduate medical education, and eliminating, if Members can imagine this, Mr. Chairman, title X, family planning. In doing that, the majority has made a bad bill terrible.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to vote against this most unfortunate legislation.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4½ minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. LOWEY].

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Chairman, I want to say at the outset that I have great respect for the attention of the committee, and we have worked together on many of the issues in this bill, and also, of course, for the ranking minority on this committee. I understand the terrible choices that our chairman and our ranking minority had to face with us, because this bill, the bill that really reflects the priorities of this Nation, was cut $10 billion. Therefore, although I am rising in strong opposition to the bill, it has no reflection on the chairman’s commitment to some of the issues we face.

Mr. Chairman, this piece of legislation has always been called the people’s bill, but today the people will find out whether Congress truly understands their needs and the needs of their families. They will find out how serious we are about making investments in our most precious resource, our children. The people of this Nation will weigh very seriously its priorities. If elderly Americans have the means to heat their homes in the winter and cool them in the 100-degree summer heat, or we are going to just stand by when elderly people lose their lives; 100, 200, 300, 400, 500. These are people with families. They will discover if we are truly committed to giving young people with little hope and laid-off workers with few opportunities the means to find a job.

Today the American people will find out whether Congress is willing to disregard our children and make unprecedented cuts in education, cuts which will deprive local schools of billions of dollars and hardworking college students of the aid they need to have a shot at the American dream. Mr. Chairman, as a mother of three and a former PTA president, I can tell the Members that this bill will have a devastating impact on America’s children and our community schools. Let us not mistake about this bill. This bill will lead to increased local property taxes, because our mothers, our parents, will not stand for their children not having the best education they can. Therefore, if we cut, guess where it is going to come from? Cut here, pay at the other end.

We will also vote on whether to force poor women who are the victims of rape and incest to carry those pregnancies to term. We will vote to eliminate an unprecedented intrusion in this bill into medical school curriculum which will endanger the health of women. We will have an opportunity to restore critically needed family planning funds.

It is truly shameful, and I am embarrassed to serve on this committee where I was once so proud, to be at a place in history where we are zeroing out family planning funds. Make no mistake about it, that is exactly what is happening in this bill. Members are going to hear all kinds of alibis, but we are zeroing out family planning funds.

Yes, I am pleased that the increases at the NIH were not on the Christian Coalition agenda. I am pleased that important investments in breast cancer research will continue. I am pleased that the CDC breast and cervical cancer screening program is still alive. But this bill takes women backward. The GOP leadership has proudly touted its plan to reduce the deficit.

Today we are seeing, Mr. Chairman, we are seeing what that plan will mean, what GOP priorities really are. This bill cuts spending, but it does it on the backs of the Nation’s most vulnerable citizens. These cuts in education, training, student loans, low-income energy assistance, are being made to finance the Republicans’ proposal to provide a tax cut for the most privileged, and to build new weapons that the Pentagon did not even ask for.

As I sat in committee and subcommittee, Mr. Chairman, two things became very clear: first, this bill was deeply flawed from the start, because it was a direct outgrowth of mixed-up Republican budget priorities. We need to go back to scratch. We need to fix this bill.

Then the bill was made even worse as the Christian Coalition sent their legislative language and had everyone dutifully follow it, passed that legislative language, passed that special interest language that hurt workers and flies in the face of basic constitutional rights.

Mr. Chairman, I cannot support this bill. Let us send it back and do it right.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 5 minutes to one of the new and very able members of our subcommittee, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to put this bill in its proper context. The 104th Congress is in the midst of the most important debate about America’s domestic future since the New Deal. The debate is not about accounting numbers and line items; it is about what much of the public will hear in this debate. In fact, at its core, the debate is about what kind of America we want to be in the 21st century.

Mr. Chairman, America is at a crossroads. As we close the 20th century, we are faced with one great battle. The American people have defeated fascism and communism and spread democracy around the world. Now we are faced with the threat of the national debt. The challenge is to leave our children a legacy of both economic prosperity and security and Medicare and to the American taxpayer. That is what this debate is about. We are making the tough choices to start on a glide path to a balanced budget.

The most obscene thing we have done in this Congress is to build up these horrendous deficits and the national debt. Let me put in perspective what this is. The national debt is $4.9 trillion. Now, if you divide that by the population of the United States, that amounts to $1,180 per every man, woman, and child in the United States; $18,800 for every man, woman, and child.

We have a Congresswoman on the Republican side who is going to have a baby next year. When that child is born, that child immediately inherits an $18,800 debt. My wife and I, we have two children. For a family of four, that means I have a $75,000 debt that the Federal Government has spent that I have inherited. The interest on that debt amounts to $5,264 a year. It takes $439 a month for my family to pay for the interest on the national debt.

Mr. Chairman, next year, and in 2 years, and in 10, and in 15, we are going to have to spend more money on interest on the national debt than we do for the entire national defense. That is insane, and it makes no sense. And that is what the real debate is about today, the fact that we have a debt that we need to clear up and begin to think about some fiscal sanity in our process.

Mr. Chairman, solving this problem does not mean 7 years of pain and sacrifice. Far from it. If we can balance the budget in 7 years, Alan Greenspan says, that will lead to a 2 percent reduction in interest rates. Let me explain what a 2 percent reduction in interest rates might mean.

For a family having a $75,000 mortgage, if they refinance it or get a new mortgage that is $100 less than that, they have to spend on that $75,000 mortgage. For small business, that is going to give an incentive for them to invest more, to create jobs, and to improve our economy.

As we get this budget moving and moving on that glide path, we are going to stimulate the economy and help restore the American dream. We need to stop spending more money here in Washington.

Mr. Chairman, in 1990, the average American family spent 5 percent of their wages in Federal taxes. Now we are spending 24 percent to send to Washington for a bloated Federal Government. Unless we cut spending and eliminate the deficit, the tax burden will continue to grow.

Mr. Chairman, the President has offered an alternative vision of America in the 21st century: $200 billion deficits as far as the eye can see. He says the only way to get less than that is to balance the budget and move to some fiscal sanity in our process.

First of all, the more debt we build up, the more interest rates payments will grow. In other words, we lock in more and more spending. But more importantly, starting in the year 2008, the first of the baby boom generation begins to retire, and the costs of Social Security and the Medicare programs explode. How can we justify putting off the day of reckoning on this budget?

Mr. Chairman, I believe this is a moral issue. We all know the challenge we face. The facts are the facts. We have a moral obligation to meet this challenge now, and we know the problem becomes virtually insurmountable in 10 or 15 years. If we fail, we will have failed to keep our promise to future generations.
Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY], the ranking member of the Committee on Economic and Educational Opportunities.

(Mr. CLAY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I rise to condemn this bill as the meanest, most vicious, most inhumane appropriations bill I have seen in my 40 years of service in the Congress. I implore my colleagues, on both sides of the aisle, to reject this cruel legislation and send it back to the Appropriations Committee with an instruction to produce a much more compassionate and fair-minded bill.

Mr. Chairman, once there was a time, when Democrats and Republicans worked together to expand access to education. There was a time when Democrats and Republicans supported efforts to help children raised in poor communities get a head start in life. Once there was a time when Democrats and Republicans believed that the role of Government was to protect the weak—from unsafe working conditions, oppressive employers, and dishonest pension managers.

That time has passed. To the Republican leadership in this House, people do not matter, profits do. To the Republican leadership, the role of Government now is to enhance the privileged and the powerful at the expense of the poor.

Mr. Chairman, the corporations and individuals unfairly enriched by this bill read like Who's Who among Fortune 500. The Republicans all but placed an ad in the Wall Street Journal that reads: "This House is for sale! And, if you've got a gripe with OSHA, let the Republicans know; they'll gut funding for OSHA inspectors and render the agency impotent."

The Republicans are now abusing the appropriations process to carry out the political agenda of the radical right. This bill is polluted with the legislative wish list of the Christian Coalition. Through massive, unconscionable cuts in education, public education is being seriously crippled. These cuts support the thinking of religious extremists. Ralph Reed of the Christian Coalition is telling us that the Christian Coalition is to abolish the Department of Education."

And, Jerry Falwell said recently "I hope to see the day when * * * we won't have any public schools. The churches will have taken them over again and Christians will be running them. What a happy day that will be." These cuts in this bill will have Falwell dancing in his pulpit.

Mr. Chairman, this is a critical time in our Nation's history, a time to better equip our Nation to compete in the world economy; a time to expand, not cut, job training opportunities for displaced workers; a time to expand, not cut, college financial aid. This is no time to destroy the bridges to prosperity and opportunity.

Mr. Chairman, in the final analysis this bill is so bad it is beyond repair, and I urge my colleagues to vote against it.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Connecticut [Ms. Delauro].

Ms. DELAUNO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to this legislation which attacks children, seniors and working families to pay for a tax cut for the wealthy. I call it the American Dream Destruction Act.

The American Dream promises our people that if you work hard, if you play by the rules, this country will provide you with opportunity and with security. This bill betrays that promise. It betrays the promise of educational opportunity; the promise of funding for education, from Head Start to safe and drug-free schools. It betrays the promise of opportunity for our workers by cutting crucial health and safety protections that help them on their job, and by cutting retraining, and that help could be provided to them if they lose that job.

This bill also betrays the promise of security for our seniors by cutting energy assistance and nutrition programs that help seniors to pay for their heating bills and to stay healthy.

Mr. Chairman, my colleagues from across the aisle say that they are only making these cuts to balance the budget. They would like you to believe that this is a shared sacrifice with a noble purpose. But folks, this is not a shared sacrifice, and there is nothing noble in making these cuts to balance the budget only happens as this bill was being drafted. Why is this happening? Because they are afraid that the American people may see one thing and doing another, and really discover the truth about what is going on around here.

Mr. Chairman, this bill makes tough choices. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Porter] has done so much work on this bill, and has produced a bill that I am strongly supporting. This is a proud day for America, to be able to take one appropriations bill, cut $9 billion out of it, and still preserve good programs in this country, like Head Start, community and migrant health care centers, TRIO, and programs like the National Institutes of Health. Imagine that.

We are hearing a lot of Members come forward today with the same old song and dance that we have cut education to give a tax cut to the rich. Other days before today we have heard them say that we are trying to help the military to provide tax cuts at the expense of the poor, and we are adding tax cuts for the rich to cut volunteers in the park. You name it, everything is being tagged for the same reason, and we all know that this is not true. These are all lies that are just continuously being repeated, and we are priding that the American people want us to move forward.

So instead, let us talk about the truth. In the dark of the night, there was an attempt to take away Medicaid for poor States. However, today, when the cameras are on and the lights are shining and C-SPAN is broadcasting, there will not be a single Member to come forward and offer an amendment like that to see what really happened as this bill was being drafted. Why is this happening? Because they are afraid that the American people may see one thing and doing another, and really discover the truth about what is going on around here.

of discretionary spending in this bill. For some Members, it is never enough. If Members want to take pot shots at this bill, go right ahead. We do not claim to be perfect. We know that adjustments can be made to improve on what is here. But we are trying the best we can as a Republican majority to make the tough choices necessary that the American people are calling for.

Mr. Chairman, with over $60 billion in discretionary spending, let me give you two examples of how much $1 billion is. One billion seconds ago this country was in the middle of the Bay of Pigs. One billion minutes ago the world went from BC to AD on a calendar. In this bill we have over 60 of those billions. Again, for some Members, that is not enough; it is never enough.

If Members would not support a rescissions bill that cut only 1 percent of Federal spending this year that we proposed earlier this year, I do not anticipate that Members when we want to cut 13 percent out of a spending bill. If Members would not support a rescissions bill that restored some fiscal sanity, they will not support a bill that tries to cut and consolidate 163 Federal programs, 266 Federal youth-at-risk programs, 90 Federal early childhood programs, 340 Federal families and children’s programs, and 86 Federal teachers training programs.

How much is enough? It is never enough for the opposition.

I guess the dollar figure like that is whatever it takes to bow down to those special interest liberal groups.

Members will make all kinds of complaints against this bill, some based on facts and some are not based on facts. Either way, I am reminded of the old saying that says, “It takes a carpenter to build a house but just one jackass can knock it down.”

There is a new way of thinking in Congress. After 40 years of the same old “throw money at the problem and pose for holy pictures,” let us have just 1 year to try it our way. What do my colleagues say? Give us a chance to do it one year our way and see what happens.

The President made a statement last week saying that he would not allow our people to be sacrificed for the sake of political ideology. I agree with him. Our people are the taxpayers of this country that sent us here last November to get our fiscal house in order.

We must reject those who are slaves to the National Education Association, slaves to the American Bar Association, and other special interest groups, and others who always want more money, more money, more money, more money, without ever spending their money for the betterment of their country.

So, Mr. Chairman, if my colleagues favor this new philosophy that we are bringing forth, I ask them to please support this bill. It is a good bill. It is a bill that is the result of many tough decisions.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I yield myself this time to answer the nonsense that I just heard from the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BONILLA]. The gentleman from Texas is objecting to the fact that we are not offering the amendments on the House floor that we offered in the subcommittee. The answer is, we cannot do that because the rules of the House prevent that kind of en bloc transfer.

I would be happy to do that if the gentleman wanted to vote on them, but he does not want to. I do not blame the gentleman for being sensitive on the issue of surplus Medicaid compensation in some States.

To correct the gentleman, we did not cut Medicaid. What we tried to do is take into account the fact that my State winds up getting from the Federal Government only 55 cents out of every dollar for the cost of dealing with a Medicaid patient. Texas only gets from the Federal Government 64 cents out of every dollar for dealing with a Medicaid patient, but the State of Louisiana gets 75 cents out of every dollar.

The gentleman from Texas consistently, in the subcommittee, voted to take money out of the State of Texas and give it to Louisiana, because he voted against amendment after amendment to try to equalize the formula between States.

So, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman voluntarily, in his own committee, voted to give away from the State of Texas $66 million for summer jobs. He voted to take away $21 million from Texas for dislocated worker training. He voted to take away $29 million under Goals 2000. He voted to take away Texas’ money for the cost for dealing with a Medicaid patient, but the State of Louisiana gets 75 cents out of every dollar.

The gentleman from Texas consistently, in the subcommittee, voted to take money out of the State of Texas and give it to Louisiana, because he voted against amendment after amendment to try to equalize the formula between States.

Mr. Chairman, this chart demonstrates the promise versus what happened. These bars demonstrate that in 1981, President Reagan said: Pass our package, the deficit will go down from what was then $55 billion to zero over 4 years’ time.

Guess what? The Congress did it the gentleman’s way. The Congress swallowed the whole package, the deficit went down from what was then $55 billion to zero over 4 years’ time.

Mr. Chairman, I urged my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Hawaii [Mrs. MINK].

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.

Mrs. MINK. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong opposition to the Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education Appropriation. This bill demonstrates the most significant difference between the Democrats and the Republicans. We seek to invest in the people of this Nation, they seek to destroy that investment, not only through elimination and cutting of programs, which this bill does with unmeasured precedent, but by using this bill to push through their legislative agenda to weaken the rights of workers, women, and the most vulnerable in our Nation. Never before have we had such a systematic abuse of the legislative process in order to get the agenda of the majority passed.

At every turn this bill attacks long-held rights and protections for people in our country including provisions which weaken workers’ rights. It weakens enforcement rights for low-income women, even if they were raped or a victim of incest, and weakens enforcement of equity for women in intercollegiate sports.

A legislative rider in this bill attempts to weaken the enforcement of title IX of the Education Act Amendment of 1972. Title IX is the law which prohibits sex discrimination in federally funded educational institutions. As one of the coauthors of this legislation I am proud of title IX and its success in protecting equal rights for women in education and in increasing intercollegiate athletic opportunities for women. I am deeply disturbed that the Appropriations Committee would allow a provision in their bill which circumvents the legislative process, and is clearly intended to weaken the enforcement of title IX.

The rider prohibits the Department of Education Office of Civil Rights from enforcing title IX after December 31, 1995, unless the Department has issued objective policy guidance on complying with title IX in the area of intercollegiate sports.

While on its face this provision may seem harmless—a simple request for clarification on how to comply with title IX—do not be fooled. This provision pushed by opponents of title IX is simply an attempt to force the Office of Civil Rights to weaken its enforcement standards, because of a misperception that men’s sports are being hurt by overly aggressive enforcement of title IX.
Political activity is defined as including publishing and distributing statements in any political campaign, or any judicial litigation in which Federal, State, or local governments are parties, or contributing funds to any organization whose expenses in political advocacy exceed 15 percent of its total expenditures. This provision is clearly totally and completely unconstitutional. It is a blatant unlawful effort to stifle dissent and advocacy. It is contrary to basic principles of our democracy. It is a gag law. It must be defeated.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. ISTOOK], another able member of our subcommittee.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Chairman, the public is demanding that the Congress reduce Federal spending. The message from the elections was clear, the constant messages we receive from our constituents are clear; they are demanding that we do so. They realize that we have built a gigantic Government bureaucracy of social programs that are the cause of their cruel. They are cruel because they are killers of initiative, killers of self-reliance, and destroyers of the family.

Do the American people lack compassion because they want to bring down the budget? Absolutely not. Do Members of Congress, whether they be on this side of the aisle or on that side of the aisle, lack compassion because they see the necessity to reduce Government spending and to do it in a socially responsible manner? Of course not.

Mr. Chairman, we all prove our individual compassion by what we do with our own time, our own efforts and our individual dollars. We do not prove we have compassion by reaching into the wallets of the American taxpayers and extracting, under force of law through the tax system, more and more money. That proves that we believe in taking personal compassion.

Compassion is measured by what we do individually and what we help people to be able to do for themselves, not with the Government programs that destroy initiative, that have brought down this country, that have generated the national debt that will be the ruin of the next generation of our children and our grandchildren, if we do not bring spending under control and do it now.

Mr. Chairman, this bill, compared to the last one we have, is easy. The spending reductions in this bill are about $6.5 billion below what was spent last year and about $10 or $11 billion below what the President wanted to spend. But even after the reductions are made, the budget will still be almost $200 billion out of balance in the next fiscal year.

Even after these cuts that some people think will make the sky fall, it is still going to take years and years of effort to make our target of balancing the budget by the year 2002.

Mr. Chairman, any Member who thinks that this bill contains tough decisions should not come back for another term in the next few years, because the decisions will only get tougher. It is a choice: Cut spending now or visit ruin upon our children with a bankrupt Federal Government and a Federal Government that, according to figures released by the Clinton administration, is spending 83 cents out of every dollar that our children make in their future, over their lifetimes, in the amount of taxes they have to pay if we do not get spending under control, if we do not balance the budget.

The overall spending reductions in this bill, Mr. Chairman, are only 11 percent. Yet, we are told it will be the ruin of American civilization. That is hogwash, and people know it.

What my colleagues on the other side of the aisle want is a system of more personal dependency upon Government bureaucracy. I disagree with them on that. I believe the American people disagree with them.

Governor J. B. Pritzker of the State of Illinois [Mr. PORTER] has done this. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER] has done this bill that frankly he does not want to do. The gentleman has programs that he likes, that he thinks are good programs, and he would like to have them. For the good of the entire country, he has been willing to put them forward to reduce and even zero out programs that he individually likes because he recognizes the scale of the problem. I applaud the fashion which the gentleman from Illinois has handled it, the fairness to all sides on the issues.

I applaud the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON], chairman of the full committee, and I note, for the benefit of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY], the very charts that he has had published in the report show that the State of Louisiana will have almost $100 million less coming to it in Federal spending under the bill already. In fact, if my rough figures are correct, I believe Louisiana takes a greater dollar hit than the State of Wisconsin does under this bill.

Mr. Chairman, that is not the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations trying to protect people back home; it is the chairman working for the common good of the entire country, and I applaud those efforts.

It is tough, but it is going to get tougher. This bill is important toward balancing the budget, toward correcting mistakes that have been made in the growth of the Federal bureaucracy and the duplication.

Mr. Chairman, I certainly urge support of this entire bill.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. COLEMAN].

(Mr. COLEMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. Chairman, first of all, President Clinton 2 weeks ago said that he would veto this bill because the Republicans have approved $36 billion in cuts in education and training over 7 years. In contrast, the President's proposal balances the budget while increasing investment in education and training by $40 billion over that same 7 years.

In my State of Texas, Republican cuts of $2.5 billion will harm working families. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. ISTOOK] used the term "hogwash." I agree with him.

Statements of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations seem to indicate that he believes that the philosophy here is one of socialism, if we do not do what the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. ISTOOK] and the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGTON] say we need to do.

Second, the gentleman from Pennsylvania stands up and says we need educational excellence, and the gentleman speaks all over the country about it.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Dickey], a member of the subcommittee.

Mr. DICKEY. Mr. Chairman, cut spending first; that is the mandate first opportunity for many low-income students nationwide and 99,600 students in Texas funding affecting as many as 1,428 schools.

Safe and drug-free schools: While President Clinton strongly supports Safe and Drug-Free Schools, Republicans want to gut the program, which 1,043 out of 1,053 school districts in Texas use to keep crime, violence, and drugs away from students and out of schools.

Increasing access to college: President Clinton would increase annual funding for Pell grants by $3.4 billion and raise the top award to $5,500. Republicans want to deny Pell grants to 23,400 students in Texas in 1996 alone, possibly forcing them to drop out of college.

National service: AmeriCorps offers young people a hand in paying for their education if they lend a hand to their communities. Republicans would eliminate AmeriCorps and deny 3,171 young people in Texas the chance to serve in 1996.

Job training: President Clinton's GI bill for America's workers would streamline Federal job training efforts and provide skill grants for dislocated and low-income workers. The President would provide 800,000 skill grants of up to $2,620 in 1996. Republicans would cut funding by $68.3 million and would deny training opportunities to 28,686 dislocated workers in Texas in 1996.

Summer jobs: Summer jobs are an important first opportunity for many low-income youth to get work experience. President Clinton wants to finance 600,000 jobs this summer. Republicans would slash the President's job-to-work initiative and eliminate summer jobs, denying jobs to 42,491 Texas youths in 1996 and 297,437 Texas youths over 7 years.

Student loans: While the President strongly supports the student loan program, Republicans want to raise student costs for loans by as much as $9,424 for 37,200 graduate students and as much as $2,111 for 260,700 college students and would deny Pell grants to 23,400 students in Texas in 1996 alone.

Mr. Chairman, President Clinton's budget completely protects title I, which helps students from disadvantaged backgrounds read, write, math, and advanced skills. Republicans would cut funding by $1.1 billion in 1996, denying this crucial assistance to 1.1 million students nationwide and 99,600 students in Texas.

Goals 2000: With strong bipartisan support, the President created Goals 2000 to help communities train teachers, encourage hard work by students, and upgrade academic standards in schools. The President calls for almost $700 million in 1996. Republicans would eliminate Goals 2000 and deny to Texas funding affecting as many as 1,428 schools.

Republican leadership tells us, "We are going to have to cut money for more than $100,000 off-farm income. The very people who are the architects of this are complaining all the way and criticizing us for doing what they know in their hearts, and it shows in their eyes, what is right, and that is we cut spending, we are making a sacrifice of our country in a patriotic way.

We are going to make mistakes because the deck is stacked against us. Those of us who want this, the deck is stacked up here against us. We are going to make mistakes, so what we have to do now is do the best we can conscientiously, do the best we can to cut spending, to be obedient to the mandate from the American people and then, when things are calmed down, go back to these agencies and say, "Now will you, please, help us?" "You all know better. Do not leave it to laymen. Will you, please, help us?" "Help us find the right way to cut, the best way to cut."

But right now all we are trying to do is just to shrink it. Without money, there has to be something that is done by the agencies that is efficient, efficiency is in place. I call upon this body, the American people, all of these agencies, the opposition, to work together, get in alignment.

We are in a step process right now, and we are willing to take the heat. We are willing to take the criticism. We are willing to take that which is really contradictory when the opposition says that you all are mean-spirited and do not care and are not compassionate. We are willing to take that for your sake and for our sake. But what I hope is that we have enough of a conversation, enough of a relationship so we can get together with these agencies and with the opposition when this is all over and we do our job and do a better job of spending cuts for the sake of the American people and in love of the American people.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN].

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Chairman, life and politics are a matter of choices. This Congress has made spending choices and is about to make one today.

Let me tell you some of the choices this Congress has made. Under Republican leadership, this Congress has decided we will continue to give farm payments to wealthy individuals with more than $100,000 off-farm income.

The same Republican leadership comes to us today and says, "But we are going to have to cut money for tobacco, reducing the funds now instead of expecting that investment in those children, we are cutting off our nose to spite our face. It is amazing that we are willing to waste millions of dollars on war stars, a welfare program for defense contractors."

Then they come to us today and say, "We are going to have to cut LIHEAP, the program that provides some assistance to the poorest, usually elderly, who are trying to survive in the cold of winter and in the heat of summer."

The Republican leadership comes and tells us we have to give $300 billion in tax breaks, mostly to the wealthiest people in this country, and yet we have to turn around and cut the money that is available for the agencies that make it possible for all of the people in America to have the schools and the hospitals and the best possible medical care that we can provide for our military families who are deployed around the world.

The Republican leadership tells us we have to turn around and tell us we cannot afford Head Start to take kids in the toughest family situations in America and give them a chance. The Republican leadership tells us we have to waste millions of dollars on war stars, a welfare program for defense contractors.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GENE GREEN].

Mr. GENE GREEN of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GENE GREEN of Texas. Mr. Chairman, like a lot of the other colleagues on this side of the aisle, I think this today is a defining moment in our short term in the 104th Congress. We have dealt with a great many of the appropriations bills, but when we see what is happening to the education and job training provisions and the Department of Labor, we see where the intent really is.

Like my colleague from Arkansas, who is on the other side of the aisle, I would like to balance the budget and aim for that glide path to a balanced budget. But the way this bill is doing it is the wrong way to do it.

We hear every morning in our 1-minute and all during these appropriations bills how we need to balance the budget, to save our children's futures so our grandchildren will not be going to have to pay off the debt.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. VELAZQUEZ].

Ms. VELAZQUEZ. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to the Labor-HHS appropriation bill. This destructive legislation takes aim at the people to even afford themselves much less pay off the debt.

We have to look to the future in our country. That is the beauty of our Nation. We have children that are in elementary school now who are utilizing chapter I funding to be a better citizen 150,000 young men and women across the United States we cannot help them pay for their college expenses, kids from working families denied the opportunity to go to college.

By voting for this bill today and cutting the funds now instead of expecting that investment in those children, we are cutting off our nose to spite our face. It is amazing that we are willing to take the criticism. We are going to make mistakes, so what we are going to have to have from what they are going to have to pay, and yet we are cutting public education funding and we are cutting student loans.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. BECERRA].

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Chairman, we hear in this debate that we are being told that some programs have to be trimmed. We have got to trim Head Start, for example, is being penalized because some programs apparently did not run or were not managed as well as they should have been.

Yet I remember $500 toilet seats. I remember $100 screw drivers. I remember the costly travel junkets, and I remember the heavy cost overruns in the Department of Defense, and I see that they do not get penalized. In fact, they are rewarded. They are rewarded with $8 billion more in funding than they ever requested.

Tree trimming? I call it butchering. When we go out there and tell our children in our schools that their programs will not be there, those are being hacked; when we tell our workers that safety for all of our middle-income workers has been axed; when we tell our senior citizens section 8 housing subsidies will not be there to help them pay for their high cost of living and their rent, that is being sacrificed, what we are telling people is that the American families have for their children is just that, it is just a dream.

Let us be serious. We are not putting money into deficit reduction when we make these cuts. You could save every single penny we are cutting out of education by just cutting a fraction of the tax cuts that are going to go to the wealthiest of Americans in this country in this House's tax bill. We do not come even close with all the cuts we have made in education in paying for those wealthy tax cuts.

Let us be serious, let us let America know where we are heading in this Congress. It is not for the American family.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. VELAZQUEZ].

One of the most devastating parts of this legislation is the $3.8 billion that is cut from educational spending. Even more alarming, bilingual and immigrant educational programs stand to lose some funding. I wonder which one of my Republican colleagues would like to explain to the thousands of bilingual students like those at Public School 169 in my district, why the programs that serve to educate them deserve a 50 percent cut?

It's ironic that this Congress is lecturing the Nation on welfare reform, yet systematically denying every opportunity for people to become self-sufficient.

Another terrible blow will come from the elimination of the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program. Many seniors in the Lower East Side of my district depend on this program to survive. Have we already forgotten last month's episode in which hundreds of seniors died senselessly because they were unable to afford the costs of an electric fan? If we do not maintain funding for this critical program, the next time the temperature climbs into triple digits or drops below zero more people will die.

Then there will be no one to blame for these shameful cuts but ourselves. By then, it may be too late. Shame, shame, shame on all of us. I urge my colleagues to vote against it.

Mr. OBERRY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. WOOLSEY].

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Chairman, I compliment the leader, the ranking member of the Committee on Appropriations, for his leadership.

If this bill passes, Mr. Chairman, the Gingrich Republicans will be showing a triple feature down at your local movie theater. It will be "Dumb and Dumber," with sick and sicker and poorer and poorer, and let me tell you, folks, it is not going to be a bargain matinee. No, with 72 other freshmen Republicans to require Congress to live under the same laws as everyone else to ensuring that the young men and women in our Armed Forces will never again serve under foreign generals. I am proud to be a part of this freshman class which I believe has forever changed the way Washington works.

But, Mr. Chairman, while we have taken many steps to restore the American people's belief in Congress, I believe the most important step is our commitment to balance the budget, and this Labor HHS, Education appropriation bill is an important part of that commitment.

Over the last 40 years our Government in Washington has grown out of control. Today the national debt is $4.8 trillion, and the President will soon ask the Congress to raise the ceiling to enable us to borrow even more money; that is, more money to pay for a spiraling bureaucracy today that will be paid for by our children tomorrow, by the very children that are shown in this photograph that I have with me today. At the current rate of federal spending the national debt for these children will rise to $6½ trillion in 5 short years.

Now, these figures are incomprehensible. In more digestible terms, a child born today will pay over $387,000 in his lifetime in principal and interest on the national debt. Would you knowingly hand one of these children a bill for $387,000 to pay for our own excesses? I think it is fair to ask, Mr. Chairman, are our children really getting their money's worth? Let us look at the Federal Department of Education, for example. Since its creation the Department of Education has more than doubled its budget, from $15 billion to over $31 billion. More than 240 programs exist within the Department today, nearly doubling in size since 1980. Yet the uncontrolled growth of the Department of Education has not increased our children's test scores. Sadly, we have seen a steady decline in student performance as parents and local communities have less control over the children's education.

No doubt, Mr. Chairman, when we get to the title of the bill dealing with education spending, we will see opponents of this bill parading with charts and perhaps dressed in Save the Children neckties claiming to be advocates on behalf of children. The truth is that many will hide behind the children to make their case for Federal bureaucrats who are in danger of losing their jobs. I would submit to my colleagues that those of us who are interested in balancing the budget and reducing the national debt on these children are the real advocates of children in today's current debate.

Mr. Chairman, it is also important to point out that we can balance the budget by the year 2002 by slowing the rate of growth of Federal spending. While people talk about cuts, the truth is that we will spend $1.8 trillion more over the next 7 years than we are spending today. $1.8 trillion more than we are spending today. This bill is a prime example of the fact that we can balance the budget by funding programs that work and by cutting redundant, wasteful programs. This bill takes a myriad of duplicative and intertwining programs and reshapes them into a leaner and smarter Government.

For example, the Federal Government now funds 163 job training programs, over 15 departments and agencies, with 40 inter-departmental offices. Each of these programs has its own bureaucracy swallowing tax dollars which never make it outside the Beltway. Equally astounding is the fact that these 163 Federal programs, which currently funds over 266 programs, which currently funds 119 housing programs across 10 different departments and agencies; which currently funds 86 federal teacher training programs across 9 departments and agencies; which currently funds 266 programs to help youth at risk across 8 departments and agencies; which currently funds 340 programs for families and children across 11 departments and agencies to the tune of $60 billion annually.

Mr. Chairman, I urge a "yes" vote on the bill.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield a minute and a half to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAWYER].

[Mr. SAWYER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.]

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] for yielding this time to me.

I have been listening with care to the remarks we have heard from the other side. They talk about the importance of looking to the future, and I agree that we must look to the future, we must recognize the imperative that we all face to reduce the debt that we face as a nation. That debt will come down on our children. But in understanding where we need to go in the future, we also sometimes can learn important lessons from our past. No lesson has been more important than the last two times we have been in this level of indebtedness.

In the period following the Civil War, the most devastating conflict this Nation has ever faced and in the period following the Second World War when our level of indebtedness compared to our economy was even more devastating than we face today, both were times of industrial transition, much like what we face across this Nation, a time in which people's jobs are less secure than they were in the past, in both circumstances we need to learn the lesson that took place in both of those times. In the period following the Civil War we put in place the Land Grant Colleges Act. We turned 200 small institutions into 3,500 institutions of higher education, and job development and nation building in this country that not only helped us grow, but helped us grow beyond the level of debt that we faced at that time. Again, at the end of the Second World War we invested in the education and training of an entire work force as a million men came back from that conflict. We put them to work at building their skills so that they could go to work building the industrial productivity of an entire nation.

Those are the lessons from the past that we need to learn as we address a bill that fails to take advantage of them in building for our future.

Mr. Bonilla, Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI].

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Chairman, I was going to offer six amendments today, one on Head Start, Healthy Start, dislocated workers, summer jobs, School-to-Work Program, and Foster Grandparents Program, putting money back in, but then I realized, even if all of those amendments had passed, I could not vote for this bill. This bill is so outrageously bad that I could not support it. It devastates education and job training.

Mr. Chairman, since I can only speak for a short time, I came to speak about Head Start. I know about Head Start. I have been listening with care to the remarks we have heard from the other side. They talk about the importance of looking to the future, and I agree that we must look to the future, we must recognize the imperative that we all face to reduce the debt that we face as a nation. That debt will come down on our children. But in understanding where we need to go in the future, we also sometimes can learn important lessons from our past. No lesson has been more important than the last two times we have been in this level of indebtedness.

In the period following the Civil War, the most devastating conflict this Nation has ever faced and in the period following the Second World War when our level of indebtedness compared to our economy was even more devastating than we face today, both were times of industrial transition, much like what we face across this Nation, a time in which people's jobs are less secure than they were in the past, in both circumstances we need to learn the lesson that took place in both of those times. Those are the lessons from the past that we need to learn as we address a bill that fails to take advantage of them in building for our future.

Mr. Chairman, I yield a minute and a half to the distinguished gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI].

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Chairman, in the bill that has been at stake today I would like to speak about the increases in funding that the Labor-HHS bill before us provides, recognizing, and gratefully so, the increasing trend of violence against women. This bill provides, as my colleagues know, an increase of over $40 million from last year's spending just on the Labor-HHS side, the majority of it, $35 million, going to rape-prevention programs. We had $400,000 for a domestic violence hotline, $400,000 for youth education, $4 million for domestic violence, $100,000 for a Center for Disease Control domestic violence study, and an equal amount of $32.6 million for a battered women's shelter. This billion under this year's spending provides $72.5 million to complete our contract with the Violence Against Women bill.

Now add that to the additional funding that we provided in State, Commerce, and Justice where we sent from $25 million in last year's funding request to $125 million in this year's funding request, and I am extremely proud of the work that has been done under the Republican Party to fulfill our commitment in the Violence Against Women Act. I want to thank Chairmen PORTER, ROGERS, LIVINGSTON, and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN], for bringing this to our attention, and also I want to thank the gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. LOWEY], for leading a bipartisan effort to make sure that this funding was in place.

Again I want to commend my colleagues because this is an important initiative as we see the numbers rise where three out of four women will be victims of violent crimes. We have adequately responded with the resources at hand.

Mr. OBEY. I am awaiting my last speaker. I yield 1½ minutes to myself in the name of the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Let me simply say, Mr. Chairman, that we have been told many times today by our Republican friends that we have to cut the deficit. Of course we do. And I am certainly willing, and so are the rest of us, to see education, and job programs, and seniors programs take their fair share of deficit reduc-ton. But what we are not willing to do is to see them take a double hit so that they happen to be $2 billion on the -22, which we do not even need for 15 more years, or that they can continue to spend almost $13½ billion a plane to buy more B-2's than the Pentagon itself has asked for. We also do not think we ought to continue this important separation of subsidies for the nuclear industry. We are not willing to gut the NLRB and the protections it affords to workers in this country so that we can free up corporations to deal with their work problems instead of unified human beings. And we are certainly not willing to see these pro-table. The gentleman from Illinois Mr. PORTER does have 1 minute remaining. The gentleman from Wisconsin Mr. OBEY has 5 minutes remaining.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Missouri Mr. GEPHARDT, the distinguished minority leader.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to denounce this mindless and mean-spirited package of budget cuts and to urge every one of my colleagues to cast their vote against it. This appropriations bill is more than a selfish, mean spirited, package. It is one that is bareheaded by its authors; it is one that kills the elderly; it is one that slashes Medicare, student loans, and education to pay for a tax cut for people that have it made. We cannot afford a transfer of wealth in this country for people who work to people who are wealthy and no longer work.

Mr. Chairman, I suppose we could differ on supply side policies, but who, in good conscience, can support today's assault on workplace decency and children's opportunity? This bill slashes education, it slashes training, it slashes the standards under which our workers have been protected. The result is a damaging downward spiral: Even more children starting school unhealthy and unable to learn; even more Americans using the government to plot and prepare for them; even more of the sweat shop standards that Democrats and Republicans together used to strive to eliminate for nearly a century. These are not partisan issues. These are human issues.

When it comes to enforcing basic standards and decency, Government has a role. When it comes to ensuring access to education and health, Government has a role. This bill not only denies it, it destroys it. A vote for this bill is a vote against America's working families. A vote for this bill is a vote for a lower standard of living. A vote for this bill is a vote for a meaner, tougher America where the dream of rising wages will be nothing but a mirage.

This is not the vision of our people, Mr. Chairman, and it is not what the people of this country want. I urge Members on both sides of this aisle to reject this bill as bad policy and mean spirited, and to stand together in a bipartisan way and say that we can do better for the working people of this country.
Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I take great umbrage on the words "mindless" and "trite." I might say that the subcommittee worked very thoughtfully and, I think, very intelligently to provide cuts of about $6 billion on a base of $70 billion.

What I really take issue with is that the Democrats just do not get it. They do not seem to understand that we have to get spending under control; that we have to get the deficit down; that the special interest, serve them all, business as usual that has gone on in this Congress for the last 40 years is over.

Mr. Chairman, we are going to get our fiscal house in order. We are going to do it thoughtfully and intelligently. We are going to make the cuts necessary in order to accomplish that end. I might say that it is fascinating to me to listen to the sky is falling coming from the other side of the aisle when the cuts in our bill are not cuts at all. The bill is going up, because entitlement spending is raising it by $11 billion over last year.

It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, you have to put all of this in perspective and understand that the hyperbole from the other side is simply that, hyperbole.

The CHAIRMAN. All time for general debate on the bill has expired.

Amendment Number 1±1 printed in Part 1 of House Report 104±224 offered by Mr. PORTER; and

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER] and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] will each be recognized for 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER].

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I believe that under the rule it is indicated that the manager’s amendments, No. 1 and 2, will be disposed of before we proceed further at this point, but I also heard as part of the rule that amendments could be rolled in the discretion of the Chair.

Is it the Chair’s intention to dispose of these amendments if recorded votes are requested at this time; or would the Chair intend to roll the votes until later in the day?

The CHAIRMAN. It would be the Chair’s intention to roll the votes until later in the day.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the first amendment I intend to offer would do four things. The first would be to increase funding for Runaway Youth—Transitional Living in the Administration for Children and Families, in the Department of Health and Human Services by $1.3 million, to a level of $14.9 million. This funding level will permit the continuation of all currently funded projects.

Second, it would increase funding for International Labor Affairs in the Department of Labor by $4 million. This increase will not be less than $3.149 million. This funding level will permit the funding of the International Labor Organization’s International Program for the Elimination of Child Labor and to carry out other human rights activities conducted by that office. This $4 million increase is to be confined to those activities only.

Third, it would reduce funding for the Medicare Contractors budget by $2.3 million. HCFA indicated in fiscal year 1996 funding was below estimated levels and that $5 million was available for reprogramming. This reduction, along with the reduction approved by the committee, would reduce fiscal year 1996 funding by $5 million.

Forth, reduce funding for State Unemployment Insurance and Employment Service Operations by $2 million. Throughout the bill, Federal administration costs were reduced by 7.5 percent. With this reduction overall, the State administrative account will have been reduced 3 percent.

Mr. Chairman, I would encourage adoption of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair wishes to correct a statement just made to the gentleman. The Chair is in fact under the rule entitled to roll a vote, should it occur, on amendment No. 1. However, on amendment No. 2, the Chair is not permitted to roll a vote that vote. That vote will have to be taken immediately following the debate on amendment No. 2.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I offer amendment numbered 1-2. The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. It is in order to consider amendment No. 1-2 printed in part 1 of House Report 104-224 offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER]. The amendment is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PORTER

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment numbered 1-2.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 1-2 printed in part 1 of House Report 104-224 offered by Mr. PORTER: On page 76, line 12, after “applicant” insert “except an individual person.”

On page 77, lines 7 and 8, after “grantee” insert “except an individual person.”

On page 84, line 13, strike “or” and insert “or.”

On page 84, line 14, strike “or”

On page 84, line 15, after “to insert: or distribution of funds by”

On page 84, line 15, before the period insert: “and the provision of grant and scholarship funds to students for educational purposes” and on page 85, line 7, after “grantee” insert “except an individual person.”

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER] will be recognized for 5 minutes, and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] will be recognized for 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER].

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the second amendment I am offering would, first, correct a statement made to the bill with respect to title VI. It would insert two phrases that were approved by the committee but were inadvertently left out of the version that was sent to the printer.

Second, it would make a technical change in title VI by inserting language to exempt individuals from the requirements of title VI. This simply clarifies the intent of the legislation, and, again, I would urge the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, let me simply say here that I think it is important to understand that this is not just a technical change. As I understand it and as the gentleman from Colorado will point out shortly when I yield to him, this language not only accomplishes the technical changes desired by the chairman of the subcommittee, but also makes a substantive change to carve out individuals from the prohibition in the Istook amendment that should not be here in the first place.

So, it is an effort to put a rose on a pig. So to speak does not mean that the pig is still anything but a pig.

So I do not have any objection to the fix-up, but I want people to understand, it does not improve the general picture of the animal.

Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SKAGGS].

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Let me just point out to my colleagues, if you can envision a jalopy that is up on blocks in somebody’s backyard, the headlights have been shot out, the engine has been partly dismantled, the tires and wheels are gone, it is basically rusted out. This is a rough analogy to the quality of legislative product that we are now referring to as the Istook amendment.

What the gentleman’s amendment will do to this disarray, mechanically and philosophically, is basically perhaps to replace the oil gasket. But we still have a jalopy that is unfit for human habitation, much less legislative consideration in this body.

It does go farther than merely correcting the clerical error that occurred when this was considered in the full Committee on Appropriations, as the gentleman from Wisconsin has pointed out. It also attempts, unsuccessfully I might add, to repair one of the fundamental drafting of this ... whole cockamamy scheme, which is to try to fix it so it does not apply to normal human beings, individuals that receive some kind of Federal grant. But it only goes partway in doing that. We will have further discussions of that later on, I am sure.

So it reflects, as will be the case over and over again as we discuss this ill-considered proposition, the incredibly sloppy drafting that has been done originally in cobbling it together for ill purpose, and the incredibly sloppy drafting work that reflects the incredibly sloppy thinking.

Having said that, this clears up a little bit the slop.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, if I may say so, as the gentleman from Colorado and the gentleman from Wisconsin know, opposed the inclusion of this entire title in our bill. This I think would, however, improve the intent of what the gentleman from Oklahoma had when he offered this amendment that included title VI. I would therefore say it makes the product better, and would support it for that reason. The gentleman might want to oppose it for exactly the same reason.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to reclaim my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin? There was no objection.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SKAGGS].

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Chairman, I cannot avoid commenting on the gentleman’s characterization that this is attempting to improve on the intent of the gentleman from Oklahoma in offering this. His intent is unimprovable. This change certainly makes the bad impact of this provision somewhat diminished.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. ISTOOK], the author of title VI.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Chairman, I want to express appreciation for the comments of the gentleman from Colorado. I realize he opposes the thrust of the legislation and has his own concerns about that. As the gentleman correctly said a moment ago, even though he does not like the bill, at least in his opinion it is an improvement. This is certainly intended to clarify the intent and to correct the scrivener’s error that was made when things that were in the actual amendment as offered in appropriations were inadvertently left out in the bill printing process.

We have certainly tried to be responsive to the concerns of the Members on this. Our other rule for the corrective amendment I think certainly addresses those. I appreciate what modicum of favorable comment the gentleman was able to make in candor. I thank the gentleman. If there is no other debate on this, I would urge adoption of this technical correction.

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ISTOOK. I yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Chairman, there is a simple way we can improve this even further.

Mr. ISTOOK. I think I can anticipate that, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate your patience about improving the gentleman's proposal. I think we can make a very, very quick and brief act of mercy on it that will effect the real improvements necessary.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I thank the gentleman. While I realize we are very much opposed on the legislation as a whole, and we certainly do anticipate going forward with it. But this does, through the technical correction, make sure that we are addressing certain areas. I consider that I would urge adoption of the amendment.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on amendment No. 1-2 printed in part 1 of House Report 104-224 offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER].

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

This title may be cited as the "Department of Labor Appropriations Act, 1996".

THE CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER] will be recognized for 45 minutes, and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OERGY] will be recognized for 45 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER].

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, too, discretionary funding for the Department of Labor is $8.4 billion. This is a reduction of $1.1 billion below fiscal year 1995's revised amount and a reduction of $3 billion below the President's budget request.

In addition, the bill includes $1.9 billion for entitlement spending in the Labor Department. This is a reduction of $583 million below fiscal year 1995 and $3 million below the budget request.

The budget includes substantial reductions in certain job training programs, including elimination of funding for summer jobs program, also previously rescinded because of the general lack of effectiveness. This decision reflects the need to prioritize programs and reduce spending, as well as the fact that the Committee on Economic and Educational Opportunities is in the process of consolidating these very programs.

We also believe that these job training programs under the Job Training Partnership Act are, on the whole, less than effective, in that taxpayer funding is not getting full value out of these funds. Job Corps funding, however, has increased $31 million over last year, which will allow funding for four new centers which were approved in prior years and are opening in 1996. No additional new centers were approved beyond the ones already approved in prior years.

The total for Job Corps is $1.1 billion. We know that this program is expensive, but we believe that in the major cities it is not dealing with the very disadvantaged population than are the other principal job training programs which we have reduced very substantially. The committee has made it clear that the Government is to take all necessary steps to straighten out those centers that are not performing up to standards. I might say Job Corps, Mr. Chairman, addresses the most at-risk youth in our society.

The bill directs more of the Community Service Employment for Older Americans funding to States rather than to national contractors. We think the States can do a better job in this area. The national contractors have been in this program for 25 to 30 years, and there is essentially no competition in the program. They are simply renewed each year, year after year, by the Department of Labor. This includes AARP, the National Council on Senior Citizens, and the National Council on Aging. We believe that this should be handled more at the State level.

One-stop career centers are level funded at $100 million. We believe this is adequate to maintain this program at current levels until we see whether it is going to do what the administration says that it will do. This sounds like a good concept, but there are so many job training programs operating, according to GAO, 163 of them, that it is not at all clear that a new Federal grant program is going to coordinate and pull all of this together. Congress needs to take legislative action to clean up this mass of job training programs. We are hopeful that this will be accomplished by the authorizing committee.

We fund State unemployment insurance administrative costs at roughly the same as the 1995 level. This bill includes $2.3 billion for States to administer the unemployment benefit program. We expect that the States will tighten their belts on administrative costs, just like the Federal agencies are doing in this bill.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics is funded at $347 million, a decrease of only about one-third of the funding originally proposed for this program. We expect that the Bureau will continue to provide the funding for the revision of the consumer price index, and we expect the Bureau of Labor Statistics to give this a very high priority.

OSHA funding is reduced by 15 percent and shifted to emphasize compliance assistance. We increased funding by 19.2 percent over enforcement activities, where we cut funding by 33 percent for Federal enforcement and 7.5 percent for State enforcement.

Language is also included to prohibit OSHA from issuing a standard on ergonomic protection. This agency serves a useful public purpose, but it needs to arrange its priorities from being a policeman to a more cooperative and consulting role.

The bill also contains language to prevent implementation of the President's order on striker replacements and to end pressure on pension funds to invest in economically targeted investments.

This language, along with other language included in the bill, was included at the request of the authorizing committee. The bill reduces administrative costs throughout the Department by cutting overall administrative budgets by 7.5 percent and the congressional and public affairs offices by 10 percent. The bill includes nearly $1.5 billion for Labor Department salaries and expense costs in 1996.

We believe that the Department can make do with that amount and still accomplish its essential duties under the law.

Overall, this bill substantially downsizes the Department of Labor. We think that we have reduced programs that do not work very well and have reduced overhead and administrative costs in a reasonable way. We have fully maintained the Job Corps. We have tried to redirect the priorities of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. And we have provided adequate funding for the Department to carry out its essential responsibilities under the law.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, working people pay most of the taxes to support the activities of Government. Yet the activities of Government that are most being chipped by this bill are those that help workers, that help the children and the families of workers by way of education, training, and health. Our Republican friends are evidently not satisfied that between 1980 and 1993 only 97 percent of all of the income growth that occurred in our country was yielded to people in this society. The rest of the 8 percent in this society had to settle for sharing that tiny little 3 percent. And yet this bill will in fact make that situation worse.

They think that workers have too much power in the marketplace. In my view that is a joke. Yet their bill goes ahead and guts the ability of the NLRB to enforce laws to protect workers on everything from wages and hours to the minimum wage. It savages the ability of OSHA to provide a safe and healthy workplace; $1 out of every $4 that were present a year ago to defend the interests of workers in this society will be gone under this.

This bill, for instance, provides a healthy appropriation for the National Institutes of Health. I applaud that. They deal with diseases that anybody can get, whether you are the CEO of a plant or the janitor at that plant.

But the National Institutes of Occupational Health and Safety is supposed to be that one agency which does the research, the medical research which is supposed to underlie the actions that OSHA then takes to protect the health of American workers.

That agency is savaged. All ability to train occupational health workers in that agency is ended. Its budget, the money to train each worker, that needs additional research, is gutted. I think the majority party ought to be ashamed of itself.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. Pelosi], who will be $100 million.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Chairman, I thank the ranking member for yielding time to me, and once again for being such an articulate spokesperson for America’s workers and America’s families.

There are many reasons to be against this bill. Many of them have been enumerated in the debate thus far, and we will hear more later.

But this part of the bill, title I, deals with the war on American workers that this legislation has declared. Indeed, General Motors is the contrary, from the majority Republican side, this legislation cuts $10 billion, $10 billion in programs that relate to family planning in title I, workers protections, health, education. The list goes on and on.

This section, title I, goes to, as I said, the war on American workers. The Republican majority with this bill says to the American worker, essentially: Get lost. When it comes to your safety in the workplace, your pension protections, your employment standards and collective bargaining and job security, forget it. That is what the majority is saying.

This takes place at a time when workers in America are menaced by corporate downsizing to increase profits, the bottom line for corporate America, globalization, putting many U.S. jobs offshore, and the technological advances which we all support. These factors make it imperative to understand why the Republican majority would strike out at the American worker at this very difficult time in our economic history.

We hear a great deal about competitiveness, how can we compete with our European and our Japanese competitors when they respect their workers? The American workers are the most productive workers in the world. Yet our reward to them is to say, in this bill, the law of the jungle will prevail. Laissez-faire reigns. We are not interested in your progress.

This committee bill reverses decades of progress to protect American workers. Out of respect for those American workers, I offered an amendment to re-fund the critical worker protections. Unfortunately, this amendment is not in order under the rule. Therefore, I want to explain to Members the implication of these cuts on American workers.

A vote for this bill, and I think every Member should be very conscious of this when they put their card in the machine, a vote for this bill is a vote for a 33 percent cut in safety and health enforcement throughout the Department. Currently, 6,000 Americans are injured each day on the job each day, and these injuries cost America more than $12 billion a year. So it does not even make economic sense to make this foolish cut. These preventable injuries have a direct impact on American families.

In addition to that, they have a cut of 25 percent in safety and health enforcement.

Are you ready for this, my colleagues? Even General Motors is opposing this cut. This research ultimately saves the Nation billions of dollars annually in medical costs. Of course, the health care costs borne by the industry directly impact on the price of product, making global competition an issue as well. That is why General Motors is opposing this cut. Why do we not?

There are also cuts in mine safety. This means fewer mines will be inspected, exposing more miners to injury.

There are other reductions proposed in pension protections. The reductions proposed in this bill place in jeopardy working families’ pensions. These cuts will result in pension plan losses of at least $100 million, and the number of pension fraud cases pursued will decline by 20 percent.

Employment standards enforcement is cut by 25 percent. These reductions will mean that $25 million in back wages owed to some 50,000 workers will not be recovered.

Mr. Chairman, for the record, I am putting elaboration of all of this in, but in the interest of time I am just
This bill simply redirects OSHA’s current philosophy of assessing excessive fines and penalties to one where OSHA will be required to work with and assist small businesses in their efforts to promote health and safety in the workplace. So we reduce the funding for enforcement by 33 percent while increasing funding by 20 percent on compliance assistance.

Surely it is not too much to ask of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration to work with small businessmen and protect the safety of their employees. After all, that is why OSHA was created.

We heard so many stories, but this story was faxed to me, and it is very typical of the kinds of stories we heard on OSHA overkill in our hearings. This small businessman operated for 21 years. None of his employees ever had a lost-day injury, not one. No workers’ compensation claim was ever paid. Yet after 21 years, that OSHA inspector came in, filed 21 alleged violations.

He said the allegations were that he was exposing his employees to hazards such as not having a crane operators manual, and not having instructions on how to pour diesel fuel, and not having a list of hazards on how to handle gasoline, grease, and concrete.

I will make a long story short. That happened in 1991, 4 years after he contested the allegations, after he contested the citations, 4 years later and hundreds of thousands of dollars in legal costs later, all of the citations were vacated.

Would it not make a lot more sense had that inspector simply said, you have got 30 days to make the corrections on where we see violations and where you are out of compliance? The small businessman makes those corrections, and we go on with a good, safe workplace. Despite our budget challenges, we should not retreat on worker protection. Cuts that will result in increased workplace accidents and fatalities will cost our society. This is the wrong place to cut back. Shame.

Mr. Chairman, American workers are the engine of our economy. They must be treated with dignity and respect. They also deserve a safe workplace. Despite our budget challenges, we should not retreat on worker protection. Cuts that will result in increased workplace accidents and fatalities will cost our society. This is the wrong place to cut back. Shame.

Mr. Chairman, we will go into this more as we try to bring up other amendments. All I am saying here today is the job losses in this Chamber are due to the American worker, they will vote against this bill.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Bentonville, AR [Mr. HUTCHINSON], a member of the Economic and Education Opportunities Committee.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. Chairman, I commend the gentleman on his leadership that he has displayed on this very fine appropriations bill. I also want to commend the chairman on the Subcommittee on Workforce Protections, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BALLenger], for the work that he has done on OSHA reform.

We have had a number of OSHA hearings in recent months in which we have heard repeatedly the kind of horror stories of OSHA overkill. So I am very glad to support this bill, particularly because of the OSHA provisions in which we reduce funding for enforcement, investigation, and imposition of penalties by 33 percent while increasing compliance assistance by 20 percent, as we can see on this chart.

I am worried about them. I am worried about the future we are giving them. I am worried about the $18,000 debt that that little grandchild will inherit, the day he is born or she is born.

I am concerned about the $187,000 that they will pay to taxes this year. I am worried about the $12,000 debt that that little grandchild will inherit, the day he is born or she is born.
BALLENGER, the chairman of the Subcommittee on Workforce Protections of the Committee on Economic and Education Opportunities.

Mr. BALLENGER. I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, there has been a lot of talk about how if we make any cuts in OSHA enforcement we will directly endanger American workers. That kind of statement presumes that only the strong enforcement arm of OSHA stands between workers and serious injury or death, and more, that that’s nonsense. Employers in this country have a lot more reasons than OSHA for providing safe workplaces. The fact of the matter is that once one cuts through the rhetoric, the evidence of an overall effect of OSHA in reducing injuries and deaths over the past 25 years is at best very limited.

It has been claimed that OSHA works because workplace fatality rates have decreased by more than 50 percent since the OSH Act was passed. Since workplace fatality rates have declined steadily since the end of World War II, and in fact the fatality rate decreased more during the 24 years prior to OSHA than it did in the 24 years after OSHA was created.

OSHA itself cites a 1993 study which, OSHA claims, “confirmed that in the three years following an OSHA inspection and fine, injuries at the inspected worksite declined by as much as 22%.” In fact, OSHA is trying to make that study’s conclusions far more positive than the authors were. The authors of the study did estimate that in their sample of companies that had been inspected and fined there was a 22 percent decline in injuries over 3 years. The companies in the sample were very large manufacturing facilities; thus the number of injuries suffered was relatively high compared to all worksites in the United States. The authors did try to extrapolate their findings from this sample of companies to all companies, and concluded that OSHA probably reduced overall injuries by about 2 percent. Indeed, nearly all economists’ attempts to estimate the overall effect of OSHA on workplace injuries have concluded that the effect is between 0 and 3 percent.

Since OSHA began the Federal Government has spent over $4 billion directly in implementing and enforcing the OSH Act and directed that billions more be spent by American employers to comply. Why is there so little evidence that OSHA has had a significant effect on workplace safety and health?

If you talk to safety and health directors across this country, what you realize is that OSHA’s preoccupation on enforcement is not only not effective, but often counterproductive. Let me just read a few comments from a safety and health director of a major printing company.

During the 1980s and my first five years with that department’s focus was compliance based. During this time period, our accident rates and workers’ compensation costs increased dramatically. During this time frame, we averaged about 10 OSHA inspections per year. None of the citations related to the main reasons our accidents occurred. It was occurring in all of the citations were for not putting a band-aid on a cut—none were for what was causing the cut. In the beginning of 1992, we returned to a historical focus on managing safety and not compliance. With the return to our historical focus on accident prevention, we achieved an accident rate reduction of 18%, a significant rate reduction of 25% and a workers’ compensation cost per claim reduction of 24% from 1991 through the end of 1994.

In my position, I spend approximately 50% of my time on OSHA compliance issues and our plant safety coordinators spend approximately 60% of their time on compliance activities. The majority of our resources are dedicated to paperwork and programs that are not the cause of our problems. OSHA could be a helpful resource in our efforts to prevent accidents, but the agency needs to be re-focused.

The problem is that OSHA’s emphasis has been on compliance with regulations, many of which have only indirect or minimal relationship to safety. More reasonable regulations, combined with other strategies which focus on safety and health rather than punishment—expanded consultation services, incentives for good safety records, provision for workplace reviews, more leeway for employee participation and safety committees, and directing that enforcement focus on serious health and safety concerns—will make OSHA more effective, as well as less onerous.

Reforms to OSHA are badly needed. We are trying to reform OSHA in my subcommittee. This appropriations bill is a realistic reflection of where OSHA is today. Don’t be deceived by the talk about increased worker injuries. The evidence just doesn’t support those claims.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS].

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Chairman, this bill is not merely about saving money. Very little money is saved in the reductions, the cuts on OSHA. This is about micromanaging the Department to achieve certain targeted objectives.

There is a conspiracy to wipe out OSHA. There is a conspiracy to destroy Pennsylvania, the thirty-three percent of the enforcement budget is cut, 33 percent is cut from an already small work force. With the number of inspectors that OSHA has presently, it would take them 86 years to inspect every business establishment in America one time. Now they are going to cut that by one-third. There is a conspiracy.

Mr. Chairman, that conspiracy is documented in a Washington Post article, two articles which appeared July 23 and 24, and I intend to submit them in the Committee of the Whole for the RECORD, the entire two articles from the Washington Post. These articles expose the fact that there is a covert war to obliterate OSHA and MSHA. This conspiring has been underway since the beginning of the 1994 election campaign.

The Post article indicated that the Department for the contraction to assassinate OSHA was $65,000 in North Carolina. I am certain that similar war bonds for the destruction of OSHA and MSHA were being purchased in other States, also. They are specifically going after certain aspects of OSHA to please the business community. The world already knows how the Republican Party has turned over the Waco investigation to the NRA. That is well documented.

Thanks to this article in the Post, we now know that certain parts of what I call the Death and Injury Act in the authorizing committee was turned over to similar outside vested interests, and certain aspects of this appropriations bill have been turned over, to be written outside interest.

Mr. Chairman, we are talking about life and death. We are talking about a bill which will go after the standards which protect the health and safety of American workers. Fifty-six thousand die per year of an occupational illness or injury. There are few who would say that the $65,000 spent to assassinate OSHA was worth it.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia, Mr. Parks.

Mr. PARKS. Mr. Chairman, let me express my solidarity with my colleagues in the minority who support full funding for OSHA.

Mr. Chairman, we are talking about the 25 people who were killed in one fire in a North Carolina plant that had not been inspected by OSHA. In Georgia, on March 17, 1994, Mr. Sangster, an employee of the Industrial Boiler Co., was killed while attempting to test fire a boiler. The boiler exploded and the left front door struck Mr. Sangster, killing him. There were quite a number of such deaths in the State of Georgia. I mention that because there are prominent Members of the State of Georgia delegation on the committee seeking to assassinate and destroy OSHA.

Also in Georgia, on April 18, 1994, a Mr. Powel, an employee of Harbert-Youngin Co., was killed while in the process of erecting scaffolding. He bent over to pick up his hammer and his safety lantern got caught in an unguarded drive shaft. Mr. Powel was dragged into the shaft and killed.

In North Carolina, we know about the case in York, where a Mr. Rever used an impact wrench to reduce a block as it is supposed to be to prevent the falling. As a result, when Mr. Rever used an impact wrench to remove parts, the van fell on him, crushing his head and chest.

Mr. Chairman, this is a life and death matter for American workers. Not only the members of labor unions but all American workers are affected. Since OSHA has existed, the number of deaths and injuries has gone down. We must save OSHA from this micro-management, and the authorizing language in this bill, which is part of the appropriations for appropriation, is part of the reason this bill was written.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT].

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Chairman, there are so many cuts on middle-class working Americans in this bill, it is hard to know where to start. However, one example is an organization called the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, including the Southwest Center at the University of Texas in Houston. That is not in my district, but what that center and other regional centers do affect people across this country in every congressional district.

This program is purely scientific. It is a research organization. It is headed by scientists, not politicians, headed by bureaucrats, but scientists who are trying to prevent injury and illness in the workplace. To protect people so there are no lawsuits, so there is no government interference, so there is not adverse action or an illness to start with. It is that program that is about prevention, not prosecution, that is about research, not red tape, that gets slashed in this Republican proposal.

By cutting this proposal, what Republicans are doing, middle-class working Americans is to cut research to improve the protective clothing for our firefighters, to cut research to cut out the investigation of new ways to improve respirators for our pilots, to cut research in painful and debilitating illnesses, like asbestos and lead poisoning, that affect workers in the workplace, to cut research about workers who get crushed by machinery, who get crushed in accidental rollovers of large trucks.

Additionally, the Republicans abolish vital training and education programs that produced 2,700 health and safety professionals last year. They proceed to kill continuing education programs that taught 150,000 working men and women last year about the dangers of injury and illness. The goal of all these programs is to prevent injury and illness before it occurs. Stop the testing, stop the training, close the labs, turn out the lights. That is what this program is all about.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. GRAHAM].

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, I think the committee has struck a good balance with what we are trying to accomplish in this Congress, and what we are trying to accomplish in the Congress in my opinion, is to fulfill the mandate of the November election. Unfortunately, some of my colleagues apparently believe that caring is equated and shown by how much commitment you have to fund bureaucracies in Washington, DC. I would like to tell them the best I can that people in this country understand we can care without spending billions and billions of dollars on Federal Reform. We can care for people in the workplace, but what I have been elected to do is reform government so we have a government that is efficient, that meets the needs of the people, and I think our OSHA structure does not meet the needs of the American business, the American worker.

When 8 out of 10 violations are paperwork violations, you can have a safe workplace but it may not be OSHA safe.

For every dollar that you take away from a small business or a large business, that is a dollar you take out of the pocket of an employee who works for that business, and those workers' families tell me they are willing to see some of their taxes go toward enforcing health and safety rules, so that their loved ones come home at night from work safe and sound.

Mr. Chairman, that's a reasonable tradeoff for our working families, and that's a sound investment for our Nation.

This bill, however, makes it clear that the Gingrich Republicans would rather invest in a tax break for the fat cats than invest in the health and safety of American workers.

I urge all Americans who care about the health and safety of their loved ones to tell their representatives to oppose this bill.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. WOOLSEY].

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Chairman, this bill does not trim, it literally guts Occupational Safety and Health by one-third and will adversely impact millions of workers across this country. This very morning an individual was killed in my district in an oil refinery. He was using high pressure hydroblasting equipment to clean refinery equipment, was hit by water sprayed at a pressure of in excess of 10,000 pounds per square inch, and was killed. This accident could have been prevented.

Mr. Chairman, 55,000 workers die in our country and another 60,000 are permanently disabled each year in work-related deaths and injuries. Just in my region in the last 6 months there have been 11 work-related fatalities, a record number, two electrocutions, a... fall from an elevated platform where no fall protection was used, an individual crushed by a forklift, a woman who was working on structural steel and was killed by a piece of that steel, a worker overcome by fumes while filling a rail car with CO₂. Let us stand up for people who work and let us value life. Vote “no” on this bill.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PAYNE].

(Mr. PAYNE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I am here to speak out against the 25-percent reduction to the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health. NIOSH is the only Federal agency charged with conducting research to identify the causes of work injuries and diseases and develop approaches by which workers can be protected. This is not to be confused with OSHA. OSHA does not conduct research, although they rely on it.

Every day 17 Americans die from work injuries and illnesses. Every week 67,000 workers are disabled by workplace injuries and illnesses. What is more disappointing is the fact that most of these illnesses and injuries are preventable.

NIOSH has been making a difference to working men and women. Research and studies conducted by NIOSH has led to a reduction in work-related injuries, however, we still have a long way to go.

In July 1991, a 47-year old female had her entire scalp from the back of the neck to the browline removed.

Other workers have needed amputation and on average about 16 workers have been killed annually in entanglements involving rotating drive lines on agricultural machinery. In 1991, NIOSH eased public concern over an unknown hazard and a possible link between video display terminals and a cluster of miscarriages.

At that time, there were over 7 million women operating video display terminals [VDTs] and there had been widespread concern that the cause of the highly publicized clusters of miscarriages among workers were caused because of exposure to VDTs. But thanks to NIOSH, these stories have happy endings. NIOSH published the definitive report that found no connection between VDTs and miscarriages. The NIOSH relieved anxiety of what is called the prudent man rule, which is a very simple, basic rule that is well understood by the fiduciary community, or investment community, in this land.

Along comes the Department of Labor, and they issue what is called an interpretation of the prudent man rule, which is Interpretive Bulletin-94 that was issued in February 1994, where they try to interpret what is a socially beneficial investment, basically. Then, they follow that up by contracting for more than $1 million to implement what they refer to as a clearinghouse.

This was done in September 1994. Indeed, they went ahead, without any congressional clearance, to give a contract to Hamilton Securities Advisory Services at a cost of over $1 million to design and develop and operate a clearinghouse for the promotion, basically, of these economically targeted investments.

But the word that the financial community gives to the Department of Labor is, do not waste these millions of dollars in that regard. Do not promote or encourage or push any specific class of investments. You do not have to do that, because we have a very effective working prudent man rule in this land which has worked very well in regard to what is a proper investment being made in the private pension community.

Of course, what the Department of Labor would like to do is to be able to look at that $3.5 trillion of pension funds which are out there, having been successfully invested, and they would like to, of course, steer those investments into what they deem to be socially correct, but that simply is not required. If economically targeted investments are just as sound as other investments, which is what the Department of Labor likes to say, then promote the clearinghouse by a contract for over $1 million just to get it started is superfluous, because the market obviously will direct capital to them.

Mr. Chairman, another area where we are spending money, for instance, and do not have to do at all, is the Presidential Executive Order 12954 which prohibits Federal contractors from hiring permanent replacement workers in an economic strike. The President ignored completely that for 60 years the established labor law in America was that the workers did, indeed, and do, indeed, have the right to strike.

Also, as a last resort which no employer wants to ever use, the employer has the right to hire permanent replacement workers in an economic strike if indeed he finds that he has no other course but to go out of business if he cannot take that particular course.

Now, it is amazing to me that the President would just go ahead and take this action when there is no implied right, no basis in law under the procurement law, which he claims is his basis, to be able to enact a law like this. Presidents cannot just simply declare what the law shall be. It is not only not based on any kind of law, but also it is unconstitutional.

Mr. Chairman, we should think on these things as we criticize what this new Congress is trying to do.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY].

(Mr. CLAY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, let me tell my colleagues what the cut proposed in this bill to the budget of the Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration [PWBA] will mean to working people and their families. It means that a New York woman who needed emergency surgery to correct problems related to her breast cancer would have faced bankruptcy to pay her hospital's bills. It means that a group of Kansas City employees would have lost all the hard earned money they contributed to their employer's profit sharing plan when the employer failed to forward their payroll deductions. It means that more than 13,000 annuitants of terminated pension plans would not have been protected with a guarantee of more than $200 million when their insurance company failed and went into receivership. These are examples of the conscientious people the PWBA helps.

Mr. Chairman, this bill will seriously endanger the security of workers' pensions and health benefits. It will make hard earned pensions and benefits much more vulnerable to thieves and scammers. This bill could be called the "Pension Grab Authorization Act."

The Republicans propose to slash the budget for the Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration for fiscal year 1996. The PWBA is a lean, mean ship of workers' protections. In fact, a recent Brookings Institution report praised the PWBA as "The most highly leveraged operation in the entire Federal government." On average a single employee of... the PWBA oversees $4.8 billion in assets. So while the Republicans talk about eliminating wasteful bureaucrats, they contradict themselves with this cut. And while the Republicans talk about protecting pensions, they contradict themselves with this cut.

The million dollars in pensions and health assets covering more than 200 million Americans are protected by the agency. This enormous amount of money is an inviting target for flamboyants and embezzlers.

Last year, the PWBA responded to 158,000 requests for assistance. And its cases resulted in 141 criminal indictments and restored $482 million in pension wealth to workers. But if the Republicans have their way, $100 million that belongs to workers won't be recovered. One out of five pension thieves the agency would have indicted will be able to commit fraud with no repercussions. And 30,000 requests for information and assistance from working families cannot be answered by getting the PWBA. Vote against this bill.

Mr. Chairman, despite their claims to the contrary, the Republicans are willing to jeopardize workers' hard-earned pensions and benefits by gutting the PWBA. Vote against this bill.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. KAPTUR].

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Chairman, the massive crippling in this bill of the National Labor Relations Board is a punitive effort to restrict the agency responsible for ensuring the rights of workers to organize and bargain collectively.

This agency was created in 1935 to bring order and reduce violence in labor organization disputes. The agency has served our Nation for over 60 years by guarding against unfair labor practices by both employers and employees.

Mr. Chairman, let us stand up for working families. Let us vote "no" on this bill.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Tucson, AZ [Mr. KOLBE], my colleague on the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Chairman, I rise to discuss the Labor-HHS-Education bill before us today. Although we are now on title I, my comments are more general in nature. I have been patient in the face of extremely difficult circumstances as one bad amendment after another was attached to his bill during the full Appropriations Committee consideration. Unfortunately, this bill has now become a tar baby. Through no fault of the chairman, the Labor-HHS-Education bill is now fatally flawed.

Let me enumerate some of the problems I have with this bill. First, it contains extremely restrictive language on a woman's right to choose. It prohibits from receiving Federal funds obliged to provide abortion training. The message we are sending is that while abortion is legal in our country, we are not going to train physicians on how to safely perform this procedure. This is an unprecedented government intrusion into medical education.

Second, this bill contains a provision which allows Federal funds to be available for abortion under Medicaid in the cases of life of the mother, rape, or incest. But, States are only required to provide abortions under Medicaid in the case of life of the mother. This language was added during full committee consideration of the bill as a States' rights issue. I had an amendment. I was here. I voted in order, which would have reinstated the current Hyde language that makes Medicaid abortions available in circumstances involving life of the mother, rape, or incest. But, it would revile the States' rights. States are required to provide abortions under Medicaid in the case of life of the mother.

Last year, there were all of two Medicaid-funded abortions in the entire country in cases of rape and incest. This amendment was a fair compromise for Members who support States' rights, but who recognize that poor women who are pregnant as a result of a heinous crime like rape or incest should not be discriminated against by their health care providers. Members of this body will not have the chance to vote on the Kolbe-Pryce-Fowler amendment. I therefore will sponsor with Congresswomen LOWEY and MORELLA a motion to strike this language—though I would have preferred my reasonable alternative.

Third, the bill zeros out critical money for family planning services—though we have an opportunity to restore this when we take up the Greenwood amendment.

Finally, this bill includes a measure which provides for much needed Federal grant reform. I strongly support the substance of this measure which will curb Federal subsidies for political advocacy groups. I have serious reservations, however, about attaching this very complicated and large bill to an appropriations bill without the benefit of hearings or a markup in the authorizing committee.

I wish the gentlelady would stand here today and tell you I support this bill. It is in line with the budget resolution. It reduces overall spending by $5.8 billion over current funding levels and terminates 176 overlapping programs—helping to move us toward a balanced budget by 2002. The bill also increases funding for the National Institutes of Health, cuts the bureaucracy at the Department of Health and Human Services, maintains funding for community health centers and increases Pell grant levels. It reforms labor and OSHA rules that are in need of reform. Coming out of the subcommittee it was a good bill. Unfortunately, with the changes made in the full committee, the bad outweighs the good in this bill and I must oppose it.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. MILLER of California asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, we can argue over the size of the cuts, but we know that very often a budget cut of not a tremendous amount can cripple an agency, and that is unfortunately what our colleagues on the other side of the aisle intended to do when they sought the cuts against the National Labor Relations Board.

This is the arbiter of America's workplace. This is where employers and employees go to get a resolution to the conflicts that erupt in the workplace. This is where employers go to get issues resolved and employees go so they can go back to work, they can go about their business, they can provide for their families, they can provide for their businesses and get on with life.

But what has happened is that they now seek to attack the National Labor Relations Act both through the budget and legislative language that would prevent the National Labor Relations Board from seeking an injunction if the employees' and employers' are so egregious that they prevent a fair election from taking place. They want to enjoinder those actions. The National Labor Relations Board does not enjoinder those actions; they go to the district court and they make a case.

Now they are changing the number of votes you will need on the board to go and get that injunction. Why? Because one of our colleagues is upset with the refusal of an injunction against Overnight Transportation Co., whose actions were so egregious that in 19 regions, action after action was sought against them because of what they were doing to their employees, withholding wage increases and promotions and the job opportunities of anybody who wanted to organize that workplace.

They made a determination that a fair election could not be conducted under the circumstances and the injunction was offered.

What did our colleagues from Arkansas do? They wrote a letter and threatened the National Labor Relations Board and they said, "If you issue this injunction, we have the ability to take action against you." and they did. They cut their budget by 30 percent to cripple the agency.

Mr. Chairman, this means that businesses and worker organizations will be stymied in their efforts to resolve the differences that exist in the workplace, but it also means that the National Labor Relations Board that uses injunctions in only 6 percent of the cases against unions and 2 percent of the cases against employees, but egregious cases they are, will now be rendered ineffective from doing that. That is the goal.

That is what is wrong with this legislation. Time and again, we see private agendas coming into appropriations bills to undermine the laws of this country. If you have a problem with the National Labor Relations Board, we have an Education and Labor Committee. We will deal with that just as we are dealing with OSHA.

But that is not what is going on in this legislation, Mr. Chairman. There is a private agenda, and there are campaign contributions, and threatening letters by Members of Congress to an agency. When that does not work, because they are an independent agency, we now see them being punished in the legislative process.

It is unconscionable that a nationwide independent agency like the National Labor Relations Board would be threatened and then stricken with these kinds of budget cuts and this kind of punitive action against them, when in fact, it is the workers, who will provide the basis on which workers and employers can get a fair shake about the terms and the conditions of working in that place of employment.

Mr. Chairman, we now believe we have the most productive workers in the world in any industry we point to, but what we do here is a deliberate attempt to go after those workers to stymie their ability, to get a decision rendered on a timely basis so that they can get on with providing for their families.

This legislation, time and again, strikes, through legislative language, on an appropriation against the protections that workers need, against the protection that employers need, so that they can conduct productive workplaces.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to vote against the legislation.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Ward].

Mr. WARD. Mr. Chairman, I want to tell this House about someone who took off to work to travel all the way to Washington to argue against this bill. His name is Donnie McDonald. Donnie worked at the Canny Creek mine in Muhlenberg County, KY, from 1963 to 1999.

In 1974, Donnie was in an accident where a loaded coal rail car fell on him. He lost his arm and was off work for 6 months. But he went back to work and worked for another 16 years.

Donnie says that because of the Mine Safety Administration his line of work is much safer today than it was in 1974, but he warns that we cannot go back to the kind of loose regulation we used to have in the mining industry. He says that the $15 million cuts that this bill imposes on the safety efforts will do just that and that we should defeat this bill.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Toledo, KS [Mr. Inouye].

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the bill today.

This bill does a number of things that I think are very important and necessary. What it does immediately is, it makes tough choices and it does that now. It cuts $11.1 billion out of a $256 billion set of funding. It does so now and does not put off future decisions so that we do not have higher deficits into the future.

Mr. Chairman, I have heard a lot of talk on the floor recently about private agendas or that we need to help people out. We clearly do. I would contend the best way to do that is to pass bills like this one that cut back on Government funding. They cut back on Government programs so we can balance.

The cruelest thing we can do to the people of our Nation is to continue to add to this deficit. This bill terminates 170 programs, so we can get to balance, and it does so now. It is what we need to do.

Mr. Chairman, this is not a private agenda; this is a nation's agenda of balancing the budget, and that is what we have got to do. We have a nation’s agenda of balancing the budget, and it involves making tough choices.

Mr. Chairman, the committee has done an excellent job of doing that. I commend them and rise in strong support of this bill.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Ms. Delauro].

Ms. DELAUNO. Mr. Chairman, I rise to strong opposition to this assault on working men and women made to pay for a tax cut for the wealthy. This bill doesn't just pull the rug out from under American workers, it pulls out the entire floor.

The deepest cut is in crucial worker training and education programs that help displaced workers get back into the workforce. That cut is shortsighted and wrongheaded.

The American people are this country's greatest asset as we try to compete in a global economy. But, this bill puts people dead last. It puts working families dead last. It says—if you lose your job, you're on your own.

I know about the need for worker retraining. I live in a State that has lost these kinds of jobs in the last several years. Many of those jobs have been lost because of the defense build down. Many of those jobs aren't coming back.

And, the bad news just keeps coming for my State. We now face a plant closure at the AlliedSignal tank engine plant in Stratford, CT, in my district. The decision by the Army to close this facility will mean that we lose another 1,400 jobs. These workers in Connecticut and all across the country, need our help.

Defense workers aren't looking for a handout. They're looking for a helping hand. After years of working to maintain our country's strong national defense, these workers are being told that their skills are no longer needed. Their work helped us win the cold war, but now they are the ones being left in the cold.

The Republican leaders in this House say they are cutting across the board in order to balance the budget. They want us to believe that this is a shared sacrifice for a noble purpose.

But, this sacrifice is not shared and it is not noble. There is nothing noble in asking people who are out of work to pay for a tax cut for the wealthiest Americans.

Mr. Chairman, we have an obligation to help our displaced defense workers. We have an obligation to provide them with the training and education they need to get back on their feet. This bill fails our obligation to defense workers and that’s why I will oppose it.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Lexington, NE [Mr. Barrett], a member of the Committee on Economic and Educational Opportunities.

Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the provision in H.R. 2127, that would prohibit the enforcement of President Clinton’s Executive order, banning the use of permanent replacement workers on Federal contracts of $100,000 or more.

To put it simply, I believe that the President’s Executive order is unconstitutional, and is a direct challenge to the prerogatives of the Congress to set labor law. The President’s order—in the opinion of many—is nothing but a backroom deal to coddle favor with labor unions, and is a direct challenge to decades of well-established labor law which permits the use of permanent replacement workers.

Allowing employers to hire permanent replacement workers has been a long-standing right that employers have used, though sparingly, in order to countermand the union’s use of the strike. I wouldn’t say that either option in today’s workplace is perfect, but it has provided a careful balance that has enabled neither side to claim an unfair advantage.

Instead of allowing this issue to be settled by Congress, the President has circumvented Congress and has allowed purely political goals to enter into the fray of these employers and employees.

As a member of the Economic and Educational Opportunities Committee, I believe the committee has rightfully recognized the improper use of the President's Executive order, by reporting out H.R. 1176, which would make the order null and void.

Mr. Chairman, the provision in H.R. 2127 preserves the right of Congress to set labor laws, and would reverse a dangerous precedent by erasing Executive order 11935. My colleagues are eager to vote against any amendment to strike these provisions.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAM].

Mr. WILLIAM. Mr. Chairman, I encourage my colleagues and others to examine what we have just heard from the last speaker. This is a situation, or as Ross Perot used to say, here is the deal. You are an American worker, you are under contract, your employer violates the contract. What is left for you to do? Well, you probably try that cherished American right: You withhold your labor in protest.

Most Americans support that. Not these people. They say if you go to that cherished American right of withholding your labor, you are fired, you're fired. You are a woman, kids at home, you are trying to make it, you have this job, you are fired, you lose health care. Same thing with I Nano, of course. You lose your position, you lose your retirement, you lose your tenure, you lose everything you put in that company, you are fired.

Somebody is permanently hired for your job, and you are not offered it back. You are fired. Why? Because you dared to withhold your labor, because the boss broke his part of the deal, his part of the contract. But you? You are fired.

Bill Clinton, President Clinton, said, well, we are not going to let you use Federal money to do that, to fire these people. If you have a job and the taxpayers are paying for it, you cannot fire these American citizens just because they had their labor under the law, legally withhold their labor. The Republicans say oh, yes, you can, you can fire them. That is extremism run nuts, and that is what is in this bill, extremism run nuts.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Mount Holly, NJ [Mr. SAXTON].

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I said to all the folks here who are in this room that I wanted to talk to you for a couple of minutes about how pension fund managers invest pension moneys, I would see a bunch of people yawn and you would all think it was pretty boring, and you would be right. But if I said to you that I want to talk to you about your pension check when you retire, the size of it and the security of it, and to be sure that it would come every month, I am sure there would be a lot more interest.

But if I said to you and anybody else that could hear that the pension fund, total amount of pension fund moneys in our country, has grown since 1989 from a level of about $1.5 trillion to about $4.8 trillion today, you know, that is kind of hard to relate to. But if I told you that particularly people who are beginning to think about retirement, particularly people who are saving for their old age are invested in private retirement funds, because you see, in June 1993 Secretary Reich reinterpreted the law that provides safeguards for those savings in private pension funds. Secretary Reich calls the program economic investments. What he is saying to the people that manage all of that money for us so that we can retire with it, "We want to change the rules a little bit to permit you to do some things that you were not permitted to do," not permitted to do, because, before, they were considered to be too risky and, in my opinion, while nothing has changed to make the things that Secretary Reich would like us to do less risky, he wants us to go ahead and do other kinds of things with other people's money that they are saving for their retirement.

Now, I think it is a bad idea.

For years, what the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FAWELL] refers to often as the "prudent man" rule was followed, and in the late 1960's and early 1970's, private pension funds began to have some problems, and so in 1974, and I think correctly, the Congress passed a law known as the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, which we refer to as ERISA. It says clearly that the people that manage those moneys in private pension funds must follow one rule, that those moneys must be invested for the sole purpose of providing benefits to the participant in the plan, the sole purpose. Secretary Reich would like us to do some other things with the money and is encouraging pension fund managers to do so, to invest in socially good programs, to invest in socially good programs, to invest in socially good programs, to invest in socially good programs.

They are worthy goals, but if I want the moneys that I am investing for my old age in a private pension fund invested in those kinds of programs, then I will take my IRA fund and invest in some social good.

Most people do not choose to do that. And Secretary Reich, in my opinion, should not be encouraging pension fund managers to do that with my money either and the money of all the Americans, the 600,000 or so that I represent, and I think you will agree, Members on both sides of the aisle, that you do not want your constituents' money tampered with in an unsafe investment either.

This bill cuts back on funding that Secretary Reich and his staff are using for the purpose of encouraging pension fund managers to make these investments.

Now, we have lots of information that says that these are not good investments and they are not safe. For example, in one study at the University of Pennsylvania [Mr. ANDREWS], they have determined that the public pension funds which were required to make certain investments generated lower rates of interest, lower returns, and were less safe.

So I urge everyone to support this bill the way it is.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ANDREWS].

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, we do not need to look at anecdotes or predictions as to what will happen when OSHA is cut the way it is cut in this bill. I think OSHA is a agency in need of reform, and I am sure there are some bureaucrats in OSHA who are not necessary and who ought to be cut. That is not what this bill is going to do.

Make no mistake about it, this bill means fewer inspectors, fewer inspections, and more risks for workers. We do not need to theorize or guess what happens when you have too few inspectors or too few inspections.

We do not have to look to the future. We can look to September 1991, in Hamlet, NC, when the North Carolina Occupational Safety and Health Administration, with too few inspectors, too few inspections, under funded, permitted a facility, a chicken packing plant that had committed egregious violations prior to September of 1991, to create a situation where 25 people burned to death. That is what we have to look for. That is why we should oppose this bill.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. OLIVER].

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I want to tell this House today about someone who came to Washington to argue against this bill. This is the gentleman that I am speaking about. His name is Jim Hale. He is a resident of Chattanooga, TN.

He works in the construction industry. He is opposing this bill because his brother was killed 30 years ago at the age of 25 in an accident.

I will tell you that construction is a dangerous trade under the best of circumstances, and he will tell you that since he started working, it has become... much safer, that it is safer because Federal rules that require employers to take steps have made it safer in these last 30 years or so. Jim believes that his brother might be alive today, that his brother would have had an opportunity to look after and raise kids if the protections that we have today had been there in the 1960's, and he feels so strongly about that that he took off work and came here to oppose this legislation that takes us back to the 19th century.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. TUCKER].

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] for yielding this time to me. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to say that the appropriations bill before us is fraught with cuts in programs that are important to the working men and women of this entire country, a 30-percent cut in the National Labor Relations Board, a 33-percent cut in OSHA, elimination of the summer youth employment program, and cuts in funding for job training for dislocated workers. The working men and women of this Nation deserve our gratitude and our thanks, Mr. Chairman, for a job well done. Instead we offer this bill which guts the very programs and protections we, as a Congress, created for them. We should be proud for their hard work, not punish them.

There is much more than just the labor provisions that are wrong with this bill. This bill is fraught with all kinds of problems, but the labor provisions are enough in and of themselves to say no to this bill, and, therefore, I urge my colleagues to say no to this bill.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I know that there is a drive here to provide a great deal of deregulation in order to provide much more freedom in this society. That may very well be legitimate, but I think we ought to ask who is going to be free, what will they be free to do, and who will they do it to?

I want to give my colleagues some examples of who they will do it to. Take Jack Gray Transport, Inc. Truck drivers who worked in their facility in North Carolina began an organizing campaign in January of 1994, and they signed cards trying to recognize the union. In response their employer coercively interrogated those employees about their union activity, they threatened them with a loss of jobs if they did not sign a letter disavowing support for the union, and finally they laid off eight members of the organizing committee. Based on the facts, the district court used the injunctive relief at NLRB which is now available to prevent further action by that company, and they helped save those workers' jobs. That injunctive authority would be eliminated by this bill.

Krist Oil Co. in Michigan and Wisconsin. In 1993 a man by the name of Richard Johnson found out that their pay was being cut by being required to perform additional duties for insufficient compensation. They met at a park to discuss the problem, and that turned out to be a wage crisis. They wrote a letter politely raising a number of questions. Two days later the company fired Mr. Johnson, in part, it conceded later, because of that letter. Cashiers Yvonne Mains and Jodi Creten were fired after presenting the complaints by their store employees to a supervisor during a meeting at one of their homes. Mains told the boss that the employees were considering contacting the union. The company wrote a letter notifying Mains of her termination because she was, quote, creating a mutinous situation, end of quote. Again the NLRB used their injunctive relief to provide those workers with help. That would be done under this bill.

Wilen Manufacturing Co.: On June 2 of 1994 the company was certified on the day of the election itself. The employer interrogated employees about their election, about their election votes, and threatened them with discharge and other reprisals for voting for the union. The board sought 10(j) injunctive relief in order to prevent further damage to the workers.

One example of workers who are not protected:

On August 28, 1989, the Gary Enterprises company fired Jerry Whitaker for having previously filed an unfair labor practice charge with the Board. The Board decided in Mr. Whitaker's favor. The company ignored both the Board and the report. After being discharged, Whitaker had a hard time finding work, and finally took a job hauling logs. He had a heart condition, and frequently complained to his wife that the driving job was killing him. He was required to spend nights away from home, and had no money for lodgings. He slept in his truck. One morning, he was asleep in his truck. Whitaker was found dead in his truck from a heart attack at age 55. The Board is still trying to collect the backpay owed to his estate by the company.

That is the kind of a case that today could be considered for the injunctive relief which is being squeezed out of the law by the legislative provision in this bill.

People on that side of the aisle talk about OSHA as though it was created by a bunch of left-wing social engineers. The father of the OSHA statute was a man by the name of Bill Steiger, a respected Republican Member of Congress from Wisconsin who, when I came to this House as a freshman, was my best friend here. We had some successes under OSHA. The fatality rate is down 57 percent for workers in this country, and OSHA has contributed to that in a very significant way.

Along with Silvio Conte I helped create at OSHA the first fine-free consultation service, and we provided for some narrow exemptions in the case of small business and small farms. We did that all on a bipartisan basis.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Goolding].

Mr. Goolding. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fawell] for a response to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Obe].

Mr. FAWELL. Mr. Chairman, I simply wanted to respond to the previous speaker when he indicated that the 10(j) injunction had been eliminated. That just is not true. The 10(j) injunction will be alive and well. It will require the usual equitable grounds to be shown before one gets a preliminary injunction, but a preliminary injunction means they get the final decision. Understandably they must be able to show a likelihood of success, an irrevocable and irreparable harm, and a balance of the hardships between the complainant and the respondent, and that the injunction relief is in accordance with public interest.

So, that is the accurate way of setting that forth.

Mr. Goolding. Mr. Chairman, the American system of collective bargaining is based on the balancing of interest and risk, including the right to strike, the right to maintain business operations during a strike, if necessary, by hiring replacement workers. The executive order takes away this balance in the Federal contractor area. Permanent replacement is not the same as being fired. Permanently replaced workers have a right to be recalled until they get equivalent employment, and they may vote in union elections for 12 months. But the issue in relationship to this legislation is who has the responsibility under our form of government to legislate, who writes the laws, who passes the laws. I do not think there is anybody in this Chamber, anybody in the Congress, anybody in the United States, that does not understand under our form of government we do that, not the executive branch, and what the President has done is usurped our power, and we should guard our power jealously. The separation of powers was put together very carefully, and we should make sure that we guard that.

So, the issue is who has the responsibility to legislate, who has the responsibility to pass laws, and the answer very clearly we in the Congress of the United States.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. Pelosi].
Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Chairman, I again thank the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY], the ranking member, for yielding this time to me and for his leadership on these workers’ issues. I think it was perfectly appropriate that he closed his remarks to tell the House about individuals and how this policy so cruelly affects them and speaking in their own words. I, too, want to bring to the attention of our colleagues and individual case of how people are affected by the cuts in this legislation. I would like to call to your colleagues’ attention an example of someone who traveled to Washington all the way from California to argue against this bill. Her name is Beverly Reagan, and she is a Republican. She votes Republican, but came here to fight against the passage of this bill. Beverly is a food service worker. She works for private contractors at a U.S. Navy base. Repeatedly these contractors have won bids to operate food service facilities and then failed to make the health and unemployment benefits that were required under the terms of the contract.

Beverly and her coworkers had the experience of going to the doctor and finding that the health insurance that they thought was there to cover their expenses was not there at all. She is not alone. Tens of thousands of Americans find themselves in the same situation each year. And like Beverly, the only recourse they have is the Pension and Welfare Benefit Program in the Department of Labor.

This bill cuts that program.

I urge my colleagues to do what Beverly is asking and vote against this bill, protect the health benefits and pension plans of our constituents, and vote “no” on this legislation. This is only one of many cuts in the bill that deal directly with the American worker. The cuts in these seven programs for worker protection, along with a long list of legislation provisions limiting the authority of agencies to enforce child labor laws, laws which protect workers’ right to organize, and regulations to protect occupational safety, and language blocking the President’s Executive order regarding striker replacements constitute a war on the American worker.

When I was interrupted by the gavel earlier, I was talking about this dislocated worker assistance program which I want to call to our colleagues’ attention once again, which is being cut in this legislation by 34 percent. This means that 193,000 workers who lose their jobs in 1996 through no fault of their own will not receive training. Rapid advancements in technology, defense downsizing, corporate restructuring, and intense global competition result in structural changes necessary for economic growth. This program works. The Department of Labor has reported that workers served by this program were reemployed, remained in the workforce and regained their earning power. Continuing our investment in dislocated workers is essential. Of all the cuts in this bill, it is so very difficult to understand why, with all of our talk of free trade, et cetera, we will not deliver on our promise to dislocated workers who are affected by that kind of change.

Mr. Chairman, American workers are the engine of our economy. They must be treated with dignity and respect. They also deserve a safe workplace. Despite our budget challenges, we should honor our worker protections. Cuts that will result in increased workplace accidents and fatalities will cost our society.

There is only one word to describe this, Mr. Chairman: Shame.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. ENGEL].

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] for yielding this time to me.

This entire appropriation bill shows how mean-spirited and radical the Republicans have been with this proposal, and it really is for shame because from the moment this Congress began we have seen the majority try to hurt working men and women of America, we have seen them purge the name of Labor from the old Education and Labor Committee, we have seen them refuse to raise the minimum wage, we have seen them cut OSHA now here by about a third. More American workers are going to die and be injured on the job because of these OSHA cuts. We have seen them slice the National Labor Relations Board which monitors unfair labor practices. We see them slice money, cut money, for dislocated workers.

Why hypocrisy. We talk about getting people off the welfare rolls, and here we have workers that are losing their jobs, and we want to cut funding to help them locate new jobs; Davis-Bacon, which pays prevailing wage, that is cut. So, we have a pattern here, and this bill fits that pattern.

In my 7 years in Congress this is the most disgraceful appropriations bill I have ever seen, and it ought to be defeated.
is the case?' Eight people on that committee said, yes, they would vote for that; that lawyers are not in the priority position when you compare them with children. We will take from lawyers and give to the children. The liberals on that committee, to the person, all five, said yes, we will vote for this. But the lawyers. We will keep the $26 million in this burgeoning legal intrusive type of department, one that will not tell us what to cut. We would rather go with lawyers than children.

Mr. Chairman, I tell everyone this because it should give them an idea of how this particular Congress has existed for all these years. The argument about children, and the argument about Head Start was not the last time we found out that people were not sincere. We also had an amendment to transfer $135 million from the oldest American project of some sort, $135 million from that to Head Start. That was voted down also.

Mr. Chairman, that we are having here is a commitment to lawyers. Not everyone will understand it, if they are not businesspeople. Those who are business people will understand it. Lawyers are not deal makers, they are business people. I say we vote for this and support the amendment and the economy.

The CHAIRMAN. All time for general debate on title I has expired.

The Chair will now recognize Members for 2½ minutes.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. STOKES

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, number 70.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. STOKES: on page 2 line 15, strike $3,180,441,000 and insert $3,185,441,000 on line 16, strike $2,936,154,000 and insert $3,180,441,000 and on line 21 strike $299 million cut in vocational education, the $55 million cut in school-to-work, and the over $300 million cuts in adult and youth employment training.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the unanimous-consent agreement of today, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] and a Member opposed will each be recognized for 20 minutes.

The chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES].

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 4 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, while the bill's $55 million, or 22 percent cut in school-to-work, creates the viability of this initiative, my concerns extend beyond this symbolic amendment to the broader devastating funding cuts in career and employment training.

Mr. Chairman, while global competition is highly dependent on the workforce, while our technology driven and increasingly changing labor market requires a highly skilled workforce, and while the American business community recognizes the importance of training, the majority on the committee voted against funding for employment training.

No job training or re-employment initiative whether for our youth or older Americans was safe from the majority's cut ax. The 60 percent, or over $2 billion, cut in employment and related training means that 194,000 dislocated workers, individuals laid-off through no fault of their own, will be denied the re-employment and skills training they really need to re-enter the work force; 80,000 Americans will no longer have access to the employment training they need to compete in the job market; 3 million individuals will be denied vocational training needed to pay off student loans and earn higher wages; over 275,000 young people will be denied the employment training they so desperately need; and over 600,000 youth will be denied summer jobs they need. It is important for us to realize that the unemployment rate for teens is three times that of the general population. And, for African-American teens, the rate is more than six times higher than that of the general population. In fact, the unemployment rate is approximately 40 percent.

Employment Works. Mr. Chairman, the real wages of American workers are declining and there is growing disparity between the rich and poor. Base closings and corporate downsizing are devastating American families. According to the Department of Labor, 25 million workers will be permanently laid off in 1995. Employment training is the key to better jobs and higher wages for the American people. Skills matter, job training pays off. Skilled high school graduates earn an average of $40,000 per year, while skilled high school graduates earn approximately 19 percent more than their nonskilled counterparts. Skilled college graduates earn over 40 percent more than their nonskilled counterparts.

Now is not the time to gut employment training. I ask my colleagues to restore the Nation's investment in the future of the American people. Overturn the $446 million cut in dislocated worker re-employment assistance, the $135 million cut in education, the $55 million cut in school-to-work, and the $300 million cuts in adult and youth employment training.

And, my colleagues, overturn the majority's elimination of summer jobs for America's youth.

Mr. Chairman, H.R. 2127 is bad for our children, the elderly, families, and the country. I strongly urge my colleagues to join me in defeating H.R. 2127.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois wish to be recognized?

Mr. PORTER. Yes, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman has raised the value of the training programs generally, and I would agree that there are some that do some good. There are others that do not at all.

For example, if we look at adult job training and we look at the Department's own reviews, they indicate the program is not very effective. The inspector general audit reports indicated only 53 percent of the participants in the adult job training obtained jobs. The Secretary for Labor himself said they found them without JTPA assistance. Last year the IG testified the program is being asked to address educational failures, physical dependencies, and emotional and physical problems for adults. The Department of Labor's evaluation shows this program has been found to be unsuccessful in raising youth employment or earnings, and that it does not appear that JTPA youth training has had significant positive impacts.

The Summer Youth Employment Program. The program has not provided permanent skills training or education. It is basically an income supplement and the jobs are public sector jobs that do not meet critical needs. The Department's own reviews indicate that subsidized work experience "has generally not had long-term positive effects on employment in earnings."

The Displaced Worker Program. Effectiveness of short-term training has been questioned by departmental evaluations. According to the Department of Labor, short-term skills training has not proven successful in earning gains for dislocated workers. Further, only a minority of displaced workers are likely to enter long-term training if the option is offered to them.

The School-to-Work Program that is the subject of the gentleman's amendment. Here we have seen a program that still, even with the cut, would receive nearly twice what it received in fiscal year 1994, and we had to make a cut here for budgetary reasons, obviously. This is a program that will be under intense pressure to turn the program into a permanent subsidy rather than a demonstration program, which it is, and I would simply have to rise and oppose the gentleman's amendment for that reason.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I am permitted yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLAY], the ranking minority member of the Committee on Economic and Educational Opportunities.
Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding the time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES]. School-to-work is an initiative that should command broad-based bipartisan support. Of all the provisions in this bill, the proposal to reduce job training for dislocated workers is among the dumbest. As a result of Republican priorities, 193,000 workers lose their jobs through no fault of their own will not receive retraining in 1996.

This ill-conceived effort is ill-timed. Last month, the Base Closure and Realignment Commission recommended closing 132 military bases, disrupting 100,000 careers. In June, U.S. corporations announced more than 40,000 job cuts. Let us look at some of the school-to-work success stories. Cassandra Ford-Dade, of California, had been a clerk-typist at the Norton Air Force Base, earning $10 an hour. After being laid off, she entered classroom training to become a nurse. She completed her classwork with flying colors and passed the licensing exam. She now works at the Robert Ballard Rehabilitation Hospital, earning $15 an hour.

There is Susan Day. She was a nuclear technician at the Charleston Naval Shipyard. Before leaving the shipyard, she took advantage of training in business fundamentals. Then she and two of her friends opened a computer retail outlet in one of the most competitive fields in business today.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. DICKY], a member of the subcommittee.

Mr. DICKY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a case here that the Summer Job Program is obviously just a cash distribution system that our Government has set up. It is a 12-week program set up because we are in the recessions and we have a surge of business during the summer, and we go out and try to find people to work for us during that period of time, just the period of time that coincides with being out of school.

What we find is we find ourselves competing with the Federal Government and we cannot cut it. We cannot match it, because the Federal Government does nothing to the people who they give money to other than you be at your home, we will come pick you up or come to the office somewhere around—come into the city hall, or whatever it might be, somewhere and we are going to have you go out and stand in some ditch and act like you are doing something.

Now, what harm is what? What harm is that? First of all, let us look at it from the standpoint of our Government. It is wasting money. It is saying we want to give you sugar rather than protein and calcium. We do not want to give you any skills. When the kids get off the school program coming into my business with that on the resume, I say aha, we are going to have to undo what that person has earned from being a part of the welfare system and being a part of the cash distribution that our Government gives, and then after we work that out, we are going to have to teach them what it is like to really try to satisfy customers, really be accountable, and to really have some consequences from that.

That is what we are doing in this particular program. I cannot see in 12-week programs that we are doing anything anybody good. We cannot find work. We find the summer that we find we cannot satisfy the demand because workers are off doing those sort of things.

I just think what we need to do is, if nothing else, for the consideration of the kids, go out and give those people the money back into the Government, and watch when people smile and say our tax dollars at least are not being wasted on a cash distribution system called the Summer Jobs Program.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. LEVIN].

Mr. LEVIN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Chairman, I have been listening to the explanations for the majority position. Your bill is extremism run amuck. It rips whatever common sense the people who run businesses out of these cities and left the poor folks who just do not have the opportunity to gain employment to remain.

Now, it seems to me that common sense says that maybe we ought to stop doing the things the way we have been doing them over the years. Maybe we ought to be giving tax incentives to businesses to return to the cities, and let the real purveyor of wealth, the private sector, take over and generate the jobs to put poor kids in the inner-cities to work.

The gentleman has no more compassion for those out of work than I do. I will tell you that I am a big believer in summer jobs since I was 14 years old. I believe in summer jobs. I think that summer jobs are important for youngsters. They train them for skills that laid off who were building tanks for this country, nowhere to turn. The transition center in Sterling Heights has helped these people get back on their feet. And you come here today and mock those programs. Shame on you.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON], the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I think my friend for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I just heard the previous speaker say that the Republican position on the bill on the floor is extremism run amuck. After listening to him, I think his statement is hyperbole run amok. The fact of the matter is again we hear this Chicken Littleism. "The sky is falling. Call Henny Penny. The world is going to come apart at the seams."

I have seen training work in Michigan. I have seen the Robert Ballard Rehabilitation Hospital where around 9 o'clock, and we are match it, because the Federal Government and we cannot cut it. We cannot match it, because the Federal Government does nothing to the people who they give money to other than you be at your home, we will come pick you up or come to the office somewhere around—come into the city hall, or whatever it might be, somewhere and we are going to have you go out and stand in some ditch and act like you are doing something.

they will need in later life. But the Government is not the employer of last resort.

The fact of the matter is, the only useful skills that employees acquire on the job emanate from the private sector. It is impossible to come in America to go into the inner-city and hire one kid, then we will make a remarkably better gain toward reducing unemployment in this country than the current programs that the gentleman is complaining about that are working in the private sector.

We can consolidate. We can trim. We can scale back. We can save the taxpayer money. We can make the programs more efficient. And in the long run we can put more kids to work, give them more training, and give them better skills, so that they in turn will be productive citizens. And when they get a little bit older, maybe they will be rich enough to go out and hire other kids and put them to work.

The secret in the liberal who have shown us their policies that have failed day in and day out for the last 60 years, is just intolerable. It is hyperbole run amuck. The gentleman's amendment should be discarded.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY], the distinguished ranking member of the full Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to respond to my hyperventilating friend from Louisiana if I could. Let me simply say that we are resisting the cuts in worker training for one very simple reason: Because corporate profits are headed up, and wages are headed down, and we would like to see the two traveling upward together. That is why we are doing it.

There are millions of Americans who are going to be downsized out of their jobs this year. It would be kind of nice if we provided them the same thing. Every other industrialized society does, which is some decent job retraining. It does it, because corporate profits are headed up, and wages are headed down, and we would like to see the two traveling upward together.

That is why we are doing it.

First of all, I would like to point out how strong the Republican support has been for TRIO programs, which will be debated in a later portion of this bill, but is a strong, strong job training program. It has developed a direct relationship with the Job Corps program.

I have a Job Corps program in Laredo, TX, which is one of the most outstanding programs that is run in this country. It has done so for many years. The kids that you see come through this program turn out to be responsible, well-behaved members of society and go on to lead productive lives in the workforce.

I have also supported very strongly in this bill, to show our commitment towards job training, the Job Corps program. This bill provides 11 billion for the Job Corps program. Job Corps prepares our disadvantaged youth for the workforce. Its strength lies in providing students with the skills to help them succeed later in life.

I have a Job Corps program in Laredo, TX, which is one of the most outstanding programs that is run in this country. It has done so for many years. The kids that you see come through this program turn out to be responsible, well-behaved members of society and go on to lead productive lives in the workforce. Laredo sets an example for the rest of the country. There are other programs in other parts of the country as well that are part of the Job Corps program that work very well.

Even though we are expanding Job Corps, we have also sent a clear message to those running Job Corps facilities across the country. That message is am, they very strongly that, if you are mishandled and will not be effective, we will change leadership or shut you down. We are closing two centers, and we instruct the Department of Labor to think about closing some of the more operative programs under the Job Corps program.

Two weeks ago the latest performance figures were released by the Department of Labor. They showed that 7 of 10] ob Corps people found jobs or went on to further their education. This is a good, solid record. Oftentimes representatives from training programs have come before our committee that were part of the 163 job training programs. Often they cannot cite success stories like the Job Corps training program can. The report also shows that students placed in jobs are earning good wages, with nearly half working on jobs related to the training they received while enrolled in the program. Again, it is not easy to measure the success of J ob Corps.

Job Corps is the only program of its kind serving at-risk youth. The alternatives, welfare, unemployment, or incarceration, are more costly and lack any short- or long-term benefits. Job Corps is an investment which continues to yield returns for businesses, communities, and the youth who go on to better their lives.

I am sure if J ob Corps graduates like heavy-hitter the nation George Foreman were here today, they would thank this Congress for its leadership in funding the J ob Corps program.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS].

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, this bill is not about change; it is about retreat. Anybody listening would be confused about whether we are spending more or less.

Here are letters from America’s mayors, Republicans and Democrats, that say, do not do it. Do not do this to job training. Do not do this to summer youth. Why? Because they know we are spending less. We are sending them less, Republicans and Democratic mayors alike.

If we are to remain competitive in the world marketplace, we need to make sure that our workers, yes, including the new workers that will come on in the marketplace, have the skills necessary to move ahead. This is a terrible bill.

For my State of Montana it would be devastating. We would reduce adult training funding in my State in this bill, reduce it by more than $1,500,000.

The bill will reduce youth training funds to go to my State by close to $4 million. It eliminates every single dollar of summer youth program for the State of Montana and for every other State in the nation.

The chairman on the Republican side might say that is not a cut, to go from what we spend today to zero next summer. The chairman would be wrong.

Finally, let me tell Members this: I serve along with the good chairman, the gentleman from California [Mr. MCKEON], a Republican chairman of the committee that has redesigned the Job Training Partnership Act. In a bipartisan way we agreed to a 20-percent cut in youth training. They cannot say what this bill does. This bill cuts funds for youth 54 percent and for everyone else in this country 27 percent. On a bipartisan basis, the education authorizing committee has accepted 20 percent and no more. You are cutting beyond us.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I yield ½ minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. RANGEL].

(Mr. RANGEL asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, let me thank the Republicans for their candor in how they intend to resolve some of the problems.

I wish the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations was on this floor because now I fully understand, having been born and raised and living in the inner city, that our problems were and have been today the fact that we taxed the rich too much. And if we relieve the rich of this burden of tax, they will come back to the inner cities where they fled.

What we are trying to do is to do for those who are held hostage in the inner city the same thing that we do for Americans no matter where they are born: to give them hope, to give them vision, to give them job training, to give them the opportunity to allow them to look forward to raising a family; and to be able to live the American dream.

You keep talking about how much money you are giving. Where do we get this idea of reducing the rate of increase? What we are saying is that if the poor are getting poorer and coming up in larger numbers, you do not cut back the resources that are necessary to give them the strength to get back on their feet to become Americans. What have you cut? Have you cut out communism, socialism, or any of the things that Americans want get rid of? No; you are honest enough to cut those things and stand up to the American people, summer jobs for our kids, school-to-work programs, one-stop employment centers—that is not welfare, my brothers and sisters—and drug treatment to have people be able to stand on their feet.

It is a shame what you are doing in order to make the rich even more rich. Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 45 seconds to the gentleman from Texas [Ms. JACKSON-LEE].

Ms. JACKSON-LEE. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Ohio for his leadership. As I shred this sheet of paper this symbolizes the rights of Americans under this legislation. Under this bill, American workers simply have no rights. Passing this legislation but eliminating the rights of Americans and taking away training and retraining opportunities for Americans.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, would the Chair advise how much time remains on each side?

CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STOKES] has 4½ minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BONILLA] has 6 minutes remaining.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING].

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, thank you for your leadership on this bill with the fact that, and I suppose that is why it was presented, it gives 40 minutes of talk time. It gives no money to do all the things that Members are talking about doing in job training, et cetera.

When you look at the authority in relationship to the amount of money available, you cannot do any of those things. So basically, the amendment gives 40 minutes of talk, zero dollars in relationship to doing the kind of things Members are talking about. I just want to make sure that everybody understands that.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. WYNN].

Mr. WYNN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I just do not understand the reasoning of the Republicans. They say they want to fight welfare and put people to work. But they cut job training programs. They say they want to fight crime, they want to straighten out our young people, but then they cut summer jobs programs and school-to-work programs. I just do not understand.

They are cutting the vocational education program by $300 million or 27 percent. People ask me at town meetings, why do we not have apprentice-ship programs like they have in Germany to give our kids technical skills? They say, Congressman, our jobs are global. What are we doing to improve the skill level of our young people? Sad to say, I will have to tell them, the Republicans want to cut vocational training by 27 percent.

We talk about our young people. We say we ought to get our young people on the proper career tracks. But they do not need jobs. They do not need to talk about fighting crime, but they are cutting summer jobs. They are cutting almost 600,000 possible summer jobs, 7,000 jobs in my State of Maryland.

Mr. Chairman, I just do not understand their reasoning.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. DICKEY], a member of the committee.

Mr. DICKEY. Mr. Chairman, I would like to respond to three different accusations that have been made. The middle class understands what the members are saying about who the rich are. It is anyone who works and pays taxes. It is the middle class that we are trying to help. If we are helping the middle class and we are helping other people, they want to be helped, and the heck with whether or not other people are being helped also, so they are not being fooled.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 45 seconds to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER], a member of the committee.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I want to just cite from the adult training program valuation: "It is the only federally funded job training program that has undergone a major control and impact evaluation show that participants earned 10 to 15 percent more than those who do not go through some form of education or training." Mr. Chairman, those of us who have seen unemployment in our cities, those of us who see in some cities black youth unemployed in excess of 50 percent, those of us who walk the streets in our districts and have people yell at us "Hey, Stokes, how about a job," this is a program in order to try to provide an opportunity. We have told people over and over again that "All you have to do is work hard in this society, work hard on the job, and you can become a success in life. You can have a part of the American dream." This is what we are asking for here today: Give these young people and give these adults in our society a part of the American dream.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I accept the gentleman's offer that I be able to close. Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gesture on the part of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BONILLA]. Let me say that it has been a pleasure working with the subcommittee, and there are many matters upon which he and I agree and upon which we have worked jointly.

In closing, Mr. Chairman, let me just respond to remarks made by the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER], where he made reference to consolidating and eliminating small programs. We agree to that. We also have agreed to the elimination and consolidation of these programs, but we also support funding of the training programs, because they work.

I want to just cite from the adult training program valuation: "It is the only federally funded job training program that has undergone a major control and impact evaluation showed that participants earned 10 to 15 percent more than those who do not go through some form of education or training." Mr. Chairman, those of us who have seen unemployment in our cities, those of us who see in some cities black youth unemployment in excess of 50 percent, those of us who walk the streets in our districts and have people yell at us "Hey, Stokes, how about a job," this is a program in order to try to provide an opportunity. We have told people over and over again that "All you have to do is work hard in this society, work hard on the job, and you can become a success in life. You can have a part of the American dream." This is what we are asking for here today: Give these young people and give these adults in our society a part of the American dream.

When we talk about the middle class, we are not talking about the middle class. We are talking about the working class without a chance to just work a job. We owe every American that opportunity. This amendment would provide the opportunity for us to do that.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I ask an amendment. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I have often had constituents ask me the following question: Why does Congress always seem to have so many riders attached to bills that have nothing whatsoever to do with what those bills are supposed to accomplish? If this bill passes, they are going to be asking a lot more of those questions, because this baby sets a new record in terms of illegitimate legislation on what is supposed to be a budget bill. There are 29 pages of legislative riders stuffed into this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the unanimous-consent agreement of today the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] will be recognized for 20 minutes in support of his amendment, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BONILLA] will be recognized for 20 minutes in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I have often had constituents ask me the following question: Why does Congress always seem to have so many riders attached to bills that have nothing whatsoever to do with what those bills are supposed to accomplish? If this bill passes, they are going to be asking a lot more of those questions, because this baby sets a new record in terms of illegitimate legislation on what is supposed to be a budget bill. There are 29 pages of legislative riders stuffed into this bill, which is supposed to be a budget bill to fund education and health care and social service and labor programs, 29 pages.

I want to tell the Members, there is a clear pattern emerging in this House. We saw it on the bill earlier this week, the HUD bill, on the environment, and we see it all across the board on this bill. There are 17 different items that should not be here that were stuffed in because either Members have individual gripes with programs or agencies, or else because the authorizing committee chairmen do not apparently have the courage to bring these bills before us out of their own committees, so that we can debate those policy issues and have amendments offered to them. This is the way we can ensure the authorizing process, and we cannot do that in the appropriations process. Therefore, I think we are having a clear pattern.

Whether the issues affect women, whether they affect workers, they affect health, safety, or bargaining rights, they are rolling back basic law in a bill which is not supposed to write new law but only supposed to provide funding for budget items. I want to give the Members one example. Virtually every time I am in my district going through some plant or some business I run into somebody in an office, usually a woman at a typewriter, with a device on her wrist. I say, “What is the problem?” She says, “I have carpal tunnel syndrome.”

OSHA is in the process of trying to develop a standard to protect workers from a malady which costs $20 billion a year, motion injuries, $20 billion a year. Yet, they are not going to be allowed to legislate this. They cannot attach this bill, they are not even allowed to be allowed to collect data on those injuries. They are not even going to be allowed to prepare a possible standard, because the whiz kids on that side of the aisle have said, “No way. We know better than the agency charged with the responsibility for enforcing the law.”

We have another provision which says that the President cannot weigh in and try to help workers who will see their jobs replaced when they go on strike by permanent strikers. I will tell a little story. Last year I was in my district. A company that I helped get an industrial park for, so they could develop on land in a new location in my district, that company decided they wanted their workers to have to work Sundays.

The workers had been willing in most cases to work Sundays, but they wanted to maintain the option, because some of them wanted a little room for family and a little room for church on Sundays. Therefore, they went on strike when they could not get the company to leave working Sundays on a voluntary basis. A few days after they went on strike, that company started advertising to hire permanent replacement workers.

Shame on people like that, shame on that company. Yet, what you do is ram a provision in this bill which says that the President cannot take any action whatsoever to help on that front.

Then there is the Istook amendment. This is the Constitution of the United States, article 1. Unless Members have read it, if they have, they read it lately, let me read what it says: “Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech or the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.” Yet, we have the Istook amendment, which says that if you happen to get any kind of a Federal grant, even if you are using it to keep up your typewriter, you can no longer lobby the Government on matters of public policy.

Does it say that for defense contractors? Oh, no. Lockheed can continue to run full-page ads supporting this multi-billion dollar or that multi-billion dollar program. Do we try to stifle them? No. It is only the nonprofit organizations, who are trying to in many cases help people in this society who are at the lowest rung of the ladder.

Mr. Chairman, there are some people on the Republican side of the aisle who are offended by that. We already have laws on the books about illegal lobbying. That is clear. What they are trying to do in addition to that is to stifle freedom of expression and the right to redress one’s own Government with one’s own money. That is going too far.

A lot of Republicans on this side of the aisle know that, as well as a lot of Democrats.

This bill has traditionally been a bipartisan bill. I appeal to my Republican friends on this side of the aisle, do not abandon that bipartisan tradition on this bill. They know this goes too far on a number of items, including these legislative items that have been attached and rammed through this bill, many times over the objection of the chairman himself.

Mr. Chairman, I would urge the Members, return this bill to the middle ground. Get rid of this stuff. If Members want to bring these legislative items up, have guts enough to do it through the right process. Have the right chairman from the right committee who has jurisdiction bring it up and have a debate. If Members want to amend these crazy items, and possibly get them in a position where we can have both parties support them. If they are not willing to do that, I ask them to take out the junk. We also got it removed in the HUD bill last week. We lost by one vote. Let us hope we have a better result this time around.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Bonilla. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself up.

Mr. Chairman, we are opposed to this amendment presented by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Obey]. It strips out a lot of hard work and a lot of issues that we attached to this bill that are going to allow a lot to help the American people. I am proud of the guts that members of this committee on our side showed in trying to advance some of these issues. I will point out two, because there are other Members who have other issues to discuss as well.

The first I would like to discuss involves ergonomics. Ergonomics is one of these words that has small business in America shaking in its boots, because it is another tool, a potential tool that OSHA is going to use to impose unfair fines and unfair burdens and unfair paperwork on small business across this country. Ergonomics is a fancy term for designing jobs and tools to improve the physical and psychological limits of people.

In the private sector, there have been many efforts so far to improve productivity, to try to help the working environment so people are at work more often and have fewer absences, fewer injuries, and fewer illnesses. This is a great tribute to the commitment that the private sector and small business has to helping their employees. There is a myth that exists on the other side of the aisle that somehow employers are not interested in keeping workers on the job, keeping them safe, keeping them productive, and somehow that we are simply concerned about removing any worker safety that exists in this country.

OSHA was born many years ago as a good idea that now, like many cases, is a government program that is out of control. The pendulum has now swung too far in the wrong direction. We have OSHA now that is a four-letter word in the offices of many small businesses in this country.

Ergonomics is an overly ambitious, burdensome, and possibly the most expensive and far-reaching and intrusive regulation ever written by the Federal Government. We are not opposed, long-term, to implementing ergonomics rules in the workplace. We just say at this time that we cannot let OSHA move forward with an aggressive agenda, a burdensome agenda, with no scientific background, with no research to base their efforts on. We must give OSHA and those responsible for worker safety time to develop a thoughtful, scientific basis for implementing any kind of rules related to ergonomics. We are simply asking the Chairman which is part of this bill now we want to protest and therefore must work to defeat the Obey amendment, to preserve the ergonomics aspect of this bill.

Mr. Chairman, I would also like to address something in this bill that the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Obey] is trying to strip, is the amendment in the House to prohibit funding of the office of the Surgeon General. I thought I was doing the current president and future Presidents a great service by eliminating funding for the Surgeon General.

How much time has the Senate spent on this issue, which has served to do nothing more than embarrass the White House in the last several months in trying to fill this job? The Surgeon General is supposed to have the role of policy-making. It is simply a public relations job that the President has at his disposal.
You have a person walking around the country dressed in one of these uniforms, and it looks like they work on the Love Boat creating controversy all around America. So we do not need this anymore. We want to save the executive branch and the Senate a lot of grief and agony in the future by not allowing this to happen.

Mr. Chairman, I want to emphasize that we think advocating good health care policy is important, and this could be done by an assistant secretary of Health and Human Services, or is a role that could be filled by the head of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, or the private sector could provide leadership in this role via the American Medical Association, or many other groups that do a lot of work to advance good health care policy in this country. Therefore, eliminating the office of the Surgeon General is not in any way to say that we are not interested in advocating good health care policy.

Mr. Chairman, please vote against the Obey amendment, because it strips these two elements which are among a list of major things that the majority is trying to implement in this bill.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SKAGGS].

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Chairman, one of the many, many virtues of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin is that it would strike from this bill an incredibly ill-conceived provision generally referred to as the I-stok amendment, which attempts to control speech and political advocacy in this country. It is often described as if the only objective were to keep federal funds from being used for federal lobbying. That is already essentially against the law.

This proposal would go far further than that innocent-sounding purpose, and would put the entire Federal Government in the business of crippling the ability of anyone who is covered by this amendment to participate in the political life of this country.

Mr. Chairman, if it were to become law, large numbers, probably millions of Americans, would end up having to file, or participate in the filing, if you can conceive of this of a certified annual report detailing their political activity. Incredible.

The proponents of this amendment often trot out a picture of a pig eating Federal dollars. I guess that pig is supposed to represent farmers and small business people, the Girl Scouts, the Red Cross, the YMCA, the U.S. Catholic Conference, some of over 400 organizations that are opposing this provision. The proponents say their purpose is to keep these people and organizations from spending more than a minimal amount of money to affect Federal policy, but the real guts of this is to keep Americans from spending their own money, their own money, on political advocacy.

It flies in the face, as the gentleman who opened this debate indicated, of the first amendment, whether we are talking about university researchers, churches getting funds for day care centers, companies helping displaced workers, gun clubs being allowed to appeal to a federal reservation, on and on and on, being swept into this incredible proposal.

Perhaps worst of all, this amendment would establish a big government, big bureaucracy, an amendment that could stand still for this kind of nonsense on the floor of the United States House of Representatives in a free land, especially those who've spoken over and over again about wanting to restrain the reach of the Federal Government.

Mr. Chairman, a shame, an absolute shame. How any of us who took an oath to uphold the Constitution could stand still for this kind of nonsense on the floor of the United States House of Representatives in a free land, especially those who've spoken over and over again about wanting to restrain the reach of the Federal Government is absolutely incredible.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COMBEST], the distinguished Chairman of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

Mr. COMBEST. Mr. Chairman, I thank my most able friend from Texas for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY]. In particular, I am concerned because it would strike a provision in this bill that denies funding for the Department of Labor to enforce the Hazardous Occupational Order H.O. 12, which prohibits teenagers from merely loading a baler.

I have been involved in this issue ever since these outdated restrictions were brought to my attention by grocery store workers in my district who were fined by the Labor Department for violating H.O. 12. A fine of up to $10,000 can be imposed every time a cardboard box is smashed into a baler by teenage employees under 18.

Unfortunately, efforts to change this regulation through normal rulemaking by the Labor Department fell on deaf ears and that is why we are here today arguing against this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, in typical bureaucratic form, it took 7 months for the Labor Department to respond to a letter signed by over 70 Members on both sides of the aisle that requested a revision of H.O. 12. The Labor Department did not even have substantial evidence to support the prohibition of teenagers from merely loading balers. In addition, in the House Committee, language was included in this very bill that instructed the Labor Department to do a review of H.O. 12.

If I remember correctly, in the last Congress the gentleman from Wisconsin and the gentleman from Ohio, the chairman of the committee and the subcommittee. The Labor Department then promised to issue a notice of proposed rulemaking by May. We have heard nothing yet.

Mr. Chairman, you will hear that this provision will undermine child safety, but that is a far cry from the truth. The Labor Department admits that only 6 of the 11 documents filed in the operation of the baler, and under the provision in the bill, the operation of the baler would still be illegal.

One case the Labor Department lists happened next to a baler when a piece of metal happened to fall that was leaning against it. In another document case an individual had a paper cut when they picked up the box.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment should be defeated.

Mr. NUNN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. NORWOOD].

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to strongly, strongly oppose this amendment on many grounds, but for the point of this debate, let us just talk about his language that strikes the provision to control OSHA and ergonomics. Now, what is ergonomics? Ergonomics is simply repetitive motion. It might occur from playing tennis, it might occur from skiing, it might occur from fly fishing, perhaps it even can occur from using a computer too long.

If we have ergonomics, what really does it do? Well, they call it repetitive strain injury. I think we can all agree that there is such a thing. All of us over 50 know that there is repetitive strain injury. But how pervasive is it? Well, do not bother to find out. There is no perfect answer.

Mr. Chairman, OSHA estimates that such injuries account for 60 percent of all workplace illnesses. The Bureau of Labor Statistics says that that figure is 7 percent. The National Safety Council thinks, well, maybe it is 4 percent. Well, that is the problem, the reason repetitive strain injury is the workplace's most complicated and controversial problem.

Beyond the fact that we know that there is such a thing, there is little agreement on this subject. One problem is that no one can determine the scope of the phenomena. Remember, these divergent statistics are often called OSHA and the National Safety Council, but another involves the question of cause and effect, a science that is very muddled at best when it involves RSI, repetitive strain injury.

For instance, two secretaries work the same hours every day. One develops stiffness in her fingers and the other does not. An assembly line worker suffers from crippling backaches. His colleague who works right beside him and

Mr. OBEY. I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ANDREWS].

Mr. ANDREWS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I thank my friend from Wisconsin for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, this act is misnamed. It should be called the Special Interest Relief Act of 1995. One of the special interests that is no doubt dancing with glee over the contents of this act is the student loan industry, which has siphoned over $1 billion a year from the taxpayers of the United States of America, until 1993 when we adopted what I think was a good Republican idea called competition. In 1993 we said we would have two student loan systems compete with each other side-by-side. One was the expensive and complicated status quo system run by the banks, and the other was a new, more efficient system run through the college campuses called direct lending.

Everything that we have seen from around the country, Mr. Chairman, says, direct lending is winning. Students like it, universities like it, taxpayers like it, but the special interests who profit from the student loan system most certainly do not.

So what they have done in this bill is to cut off the competition at its knees. Language in this bill which would be removed by the Obey amendment says, direct lending is the only thing that is working. We have removed the competitive effects of the new, efficient, bank-based system. It is wrong for students and administrators because around this country, a vast majority of them have said that they prefer the direct lending system. Perhaps most importantly, Mr. Chairman, it is wrong as a matter of process. It is wrong because it is based upon a CBO report which cooked the numbers.

Mr. Chairman, anyone who follows this issue and is familiar with it knows that the conclusion that somehow or another the direct loans cost more than guaranteed loans was a conclusion CBO was led to reach for reasons of political convenience, and it is also wrong. Mr. Chairman, because this debate and this issue is being tucked away in this appropriations bill.

Mr. Chairman, the special interests of the student loan industry know that they cannot win a fair fight on this issue, because they do not have the facts on their side. So what they have done is to load it up in this bill, tuck it away in a corner where a lot of other issues will still be voted on, and it will not see the light of day. The Obey amendment is a way to correct that and bring us into the light so that there can be a fair and balanced debate.

For that and many other reasons I would urge my colleagues to do the right thing and vote ‘yes’ on the Obey amendment.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, in fairness to both sides, I think it would not make sense to vote on the Pelosi amendment, or spend the time debating it, if mine passed. I am not asking for a determination now, but I would urge the Chair to consider that problem.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. WALKER). The Chair will take the gentleman’s point under advisement.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. DELAY], the Republican whip.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, I hope Members are watching this debate and paying very close attention to what the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] is trying to do. It is a huge amendment that affects a lot of issues that are very important to a lot of Members.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is trying to remove legislative language that deals with striker replacement. In a situation where those issues, in my opinion, stepped way beyond the bounds of his authority by writing legislation through Executive order, we are trying to correct that.

The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. NUGENT] has already talked about the ergonomic standards, another example of overzealous regulatory agencies trying to write regulations on an issue that the scientific community has no consensus on, yet they are trying to write regulations that would have a severe impact on jobs in this country.

The gentleman is also attempting to stop summer jobs. In this bill, we have language that prohibits the Labor Department from stopping individuals under the age of 18 from using card-board balers in grocery stores. Right now, they are trying to stop high school kids who work summer jobs in grocery stores from operating the cardboard balers in those stores. The gentleman strikes that language.

Also, those that understand, particularly in light of the recent Surgeon General, we do not need a Surgeon General in this country. The gentleman strikes the language that does and talks with the Office of the Surgeon General. We go on and on and on.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] even includes some of the absorption language, so those
Mr. Chairman, we know the kind of workplace loss that that takes. We see it in our own offices. There are people walking around this Capitol with braces on their hands, on their elbows and shoulders from that kind of work. Do they want them? Mr. Chairman, we also know that employers and insurance companies recognize it. They are trying to develop a safer workplace. They are redesigning machine tools and redesigning the assets to the people working on the assembly line.

Somehow the Republicans have just lost sight that these are people; these are families; these are bread winners; these are spouses; these are mothers; these are fathers; these are sons or daughters who are out there working. Do they not deserve a safe workplace? The answer in this legislation is "no" from the Republican side of the aisle.

I think we have got to understand it extends even further in terms of the workers, where there is disagreement in the workplace between employer and employee. They make it much more difficult to go and get those conflicts resolved. And does that mean? That means it costs business more money. It costs workers wages and we do not get on doing what this country does very well, and that is produce goods and services, not only for this country, but for the international economy.

Mr. Chairman, why is this necessary? Because they will not deal with this through the authorization process as opposed to the appropriations process.

Mr. Chairman, let me just say that in taking over the majority in the short period of time that we have had, we did not have time to legislate through the normal process; and we feel that it is very important to do these kinds of things to stop an overzealous administration from accomplishing some really bad things.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to vote no on the Obey amendment. Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. MILLER].

(Mr. MILLER of California asked and was given permission to revise and extend this record on an appropriations bill.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, we should support the Obey amendment because this legislation is just such an incredibly comprehensive raid on the rights of American workers.

Whether those American workers seek to have a bargaining position with their employer over their working hours, terms, wages and conditions, where that right is taken away because of the attempt here to overturn the President's Executive order; whether those workers seek to work in a safe workplace, where we see as serious a problem as the ergonomic standards being set aside in this bill; going even further, not letting OSHA collect the data. Kind of, the Republicans on this side do not know this when they see it.

Let me tell my colleagues, we see it every time we get on an airplane. We see a flight attendant with their hands in the braces; people that cannot do the job on the airplane, because their hands are in braces.

We see it on the assembly line and we also see it when almost 3 million claims are paid for the injuries that are suffered for this amendment. Mr. Chairman, the question is, do we stick our heads in the sand, as the Republican amendment would have us do, or do we go out and try to meet this problem? This is about whether or not our workers get to continue to be able to work without disability or whether they are sent home from the workplace and they are put on disability and they see that their ability to support their families is dramatically reduced.

This is about Americans. This is about people who go to work every day and do not want to be hurt, yet 2.7 million of them file claims and were paid. Mr. Chairman, we know the kind of workplace loss that that takes. We see it in our own offices. There are people walking around this Capitol with braces on their hands, on their elbows and shoulders from that kind of work. Do they want them? Mr. Chairman, we also know that employers and insurance companies recognize it. They are trying to develop a safer workplace. They are redesigning machine tools and redesigning the assets to the people working on the assembly line.

Somehow the Republicans have just lost sight that these are people; these are families; these are bread winners; these are spouses; these are mothers; these are fathers; these are sons or daughters who are out there working. Do they not deserve a safe workplace? The answer in this legislation is "no" from the Republican side of the aisle.

I think we have got to understand it extends even further in terms of the workers, where there is disagreement in the workplace between employer and employee. They make it much more difficult to go and get those conflicts resolved. And does that mean? That means it costs business more money. It costs workers wages and we do not get on doing what this country does very well, and that is produce goods and services, not only for this country, but for the international economy.

Mr. Chairman, why is this necessary? Because they will not deal with this through the authorization process as opposed to the appropriations process.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. ISTOOK], a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Chairman, I find it interesting that some people object now, saying that we should not do other things on appropriations bills. I looked at last year's version of this very same piece of legislation when the other party was in power and there were in excess of 30 examples of what we call authorizing language in the appropriations bill.

Mr. Chairman, this is nothing new or unique; it is something that is common. But what is not common in this place, Mr. Chairman, is the type of outrun that we have heard from the special interest groups, because they realize they are threatened by this piece of legislation.

This piece of legislation defunds special interests. This bill is to stop the system of patronage, that has gone on through so much of the government bureaucracy, that hands money out to allies of the governing party and uses them to come back and lobby the taxpayers.

We have steps, not only by reducing the level of spending in this bill, but we have what we call the grants reform language, the stopping of welfare for lobbyists that goes to the heart of the problem.

Mr. Chairman, we will never get spending in this country under control if we do not stop using taxpayers' money for advocacy of political positions. This bill contains the language to correct it.

Mr. Chairman, I heard the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SKAGGS], my friend, say, "Oh, this is going to create a national database." My goodness, I hope the gentleman realizes that lobbyists already have to register. There is already a database. There is a database on registering lobbyist. There is nothing new in that.

Mr. Chairman, perhaps some people want to hide from public view the amount of money that is going to special interest groups. The President of the United States, yesterday, decried the special interests in Washington. Here we have a bill to take money away from them to make them stop taking advantage of the taxpayers and people treat it as though the sky is falling.

Mr. Chairman, this bill on so many fronts addresses the problems with how Washington operates, the way that taxpayers' money is used to fund giant bureaucracies in the private sector, as well as the government sector. This bill is to put a halt to that.

Mr. Chairman, the Obey amendment tries to gut this piece of legislation. It needs to be defeated and the bill as a whole needs to be passed.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Obey amendment and I want to make an observation to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. ISTOOK], my friend with whom I serve on two of the subcommittees. The fact of the matter is, we have not had a bill since I have been a member of the Committee, January of 1983, in which this kind of language was protected. Not one in that 14 years. It was not protected last year or the year before that or the year before that.

Mr. Chairman, what has happened not just in this bill, but in numerous bills, the authorizing committees have been ignored and we are trying to jam through legislative language on appropriations bills.

Mr. Chairman, we ought to reject it. Pass the Obey Amendment.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. TALENT].

Mr. TALENT. Mr. Chairman, I think this amendment highlights the philosophical differences between the parties. We believe in Americans and what they have built on their own. We think workers and employers, subject to reasonable rules and regulations, are pretty capable of creating jobs and economic growth and not helpless and unable to protect themselves.

The other side believes that we are going to have massive problems, unless these people are minutely watched by...
Mr. Chairman, I want to talk specifically about the fall protection standard, which is on the bill and on which there were hearings in my subcommittee.

The fall protection standard OSHA recently applied to all work above 6 feet in height, it was at 16 feet, they applied it to all work above 16 feet, which means it applies to all residential remodeling, commercial remodeling and, Mr. Chairman, everybody in this business, management, labor, everybody hates it because the workers have to tie on these harnesses and these lanyards and move anchors. It is tremendously inefficient, and it is unnecessary, and they resent the Federal Government telling them, experts in this, what they have to do in order to protect themselves.

OSHA says if we get full compliance with the fall protection standard at 6 feet, and every roofing job and every remodeling job in America, and I guess they are going to have cars in every subdivision to watch people, if we get full compliance, it will save 20 lives every year. I asked the head of OSHA, “How much does this increase the costs of these jobs?” Because the evidence we have, again pretty much undisputed, was that it would increase the cost of labor on the jobs about 30 percent, because the workers have to move so much slower. What happens when you increase the cost of this work? What do homeowners do? They turn to fly-by-night contractors, to handymen, to people who do not know and understand safety on roof tops, or maybe they do the jobs themselves.

What happens if you get a bunch of people working on roof tops who do not know what they are doing?

Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the remainder of my time.

Mr. Chairman, the issue is not whether you like the language on paper balers. The issue is not whether you like the language on any other OSHA action. The issue is whether or not this language ought to be considered as a slipped-in provision in this bill with no chance for hearings, no chance for examination, or whether we ought to do it in a more orderly way.

One of the previous speakers said that I was trying to prevent jobs because we are not taking out the language on paper balers. We are not trying to prevent jobs. We are trying to prevent the killing of kids. The fact is that it is true that some balers meet the new industry standards. But only one in five current machines meets all of the requirements, and in 15 and 16 year-olds are speed hiring not the most cautious of people. There have been six deaths because of paper baler machines, deaths of children.

The ergonomics standards, I do not, frankly, know what the standards ought to be, but I do not believe that the agency ought to be precluded from even developing data on the injuries associated with this problem, and that is what this language does.

Let me simply state, in response to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. ISTOK], about other labor-health bills providing legislative language. The difference is that every single one of those provisions was brought to this floor under an open rule, and if a single Member of Congress objected, they could strike it on a point of order. That meant the only provisions in the bill were noncontroversial, and they were not special interest sweet dreams, as these are.

Let me simply say that when you take, as you have done, 17 different legislative provisions and jam them into an appropriations bill, do not try to kid us. You know what you are doing. What you do is you circumvent the process. When you put it into an appropriations bill, you circumvent the normal congressional hearing process and the authorizing committees. You circumvent the process which is designed to make certain all of the parties who were impacted by a decision have an opportunity to comment on it before we, as the public’s Representatives, make a final decision and a final choice. What you are doing now when you slip it into an appropriations bill, you make sure that only certain special pleaders get taken care of. And the other folks who are affected by it?” Sorry buddy, but you are not involved. We got it in before you even knew we were doing it. Your comments do not even get heard.” That is not the way to do business when you are dealing with people’s rights to have a safe and healthy workplace, when your dealing with the ability of families to save some money on student loans. That is not the way to do business. This is simply, pure and simple, a special interest run of the normal legislative process. If you truly believe that some of this legislative language is correct, and some of it may very well be, then the way to deal with it is to have the proper committee bring it out under conditions which allow us to amend that language and change it. You cannot legislate, supposedly, on an appropriations bill, so we cannot do that here. Except you have slipped in these items so we cannot get at them through the normal point of order process. You know that these are special interest proposals. You know, if, for instance, you are going to subject a woman to fewer choices because she is a victim of rape or incest, it would be nice if she at least had a chance to comment on it. They have not, not the way you have brought this here.

Strip out all of this language. Bring it here before us in the correct process. Some of it may pass. Some of it may fail. But at least you will give everybody in the process a square deal. Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remainder of my time, 2 minutes, to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. McINTOSH], a great champion of free enterprise and small business.

Mr. McINTOSH. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. I think the American people have sent us here to get our work done. They are tired of us saying we cannot do it on this bill, we cannot do it in this vehicle. We have to go through this hearing. They sent us here last fall to change the very nature of this city and of this Government.

This bill takes a giant step in the right direction to accomplish that. It says to the agencies we are not going to continue giving you money to spend on regulations that do not make sense. It says to the President, “We think you have politicized the Surgeon General’s office, and we are not going to give you more money to manage your operation.” It says to the lobbyists here in Washington, “We are going to cut off your taxpayer funding, no more welfare for lobbyists under this Congress.”

The time to act is now, Mr. Chairman. The American people want these measures. They sent us here to do this work.

The committees and the Committee on Appropriations and subcommittees have marked hard language in this bill, and to craft these provisions in a way that reflects the will and the interests of all of the committees here in Congress. This is an effort to stop us from doing what the American voters sent us here to do, to change America, to cut back on regulations, to end welfare for lobbyists, to send a signal that it is no longer business as usual.

We are going to do what the people sent us here to do and fundamentally change the nature of this Government. I stand strongly against this amendment. Support the committee bill as it is written, because it does move in the direction of changing this Government for the better and for the American people.

Mr. EWING. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to this amendment, which would strike section 107 of the bill, which prohibits funding for the enforcement of Hazardous Occupation Order 12, relating to paper balers.

The language in section 107 is based on H.R. 1114, legislation which has 119 bipartisan cosponsors. It would reform a Labor Department regulation which has been on the books since the 1950’s and is very outdated. The regulation prohibits teenagers from working around paper balers in grocery stores, despite the fact that modern paper balers cannot cause injury while they are being loaded. The Department has been passing out fines up to $10,000 to small grocery stores for allowing teenage employees to simply toss an empty box into a nonoperating baler, even though they are safe. As a result, many grocers have stopped hiring teenagers.

Our language would simply allow teenagers to load paper balers and compactors, but would not allow them to operate or unload the balers. The bill as it is written, because it does move in the direction of changing this Government for the better and for the American people.
machines. Additionally, they could only load the modern machines which have the strict safety standards established by the American National Standards Institute.

This is a jobs issue as well as a safety issue. This small change will encourage supermarkets to start hiring teenagers again without the fear of huge fines. It will also make the workplace safer for all grocery store workers by providing an incentive for grocers to get rid of any old machines which are still in use and replace them with the modern, safe machines.

Congressman LARRY COMBEST and I have been working for well over 2 years to get the Labor Department to modify this regulation, and they have resisted our requests. Last year the Democratic Congress included language in this appropriations bill directing the Labor Department to review H.O. 12. In response, the Department told Congress that it would issue a “Notice of Proposed Rulemaking” on H.O. 12 by May of this year. As of today that Notice has still not been issued. That is why we strongly support the language contained in this bill.

The language in the bill is strongly supported by the Food Marketing Institute, which represents grocery stores in every congressional district.

Mr. Chairman, I include for the RECORD a letter from the Food Marketing Institute concerning this amendment.

I strongly urge my colleagues to support the committee bill.

FOOD MARKETING INSTITUTE,

Hon. Tom Ewing,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN Ewing: The Food Marketing Institute (FMI) on behalf of the nation’s supermarket industry, wishes to express our strong opposition to the amendment that will be offered by Representative
Nancy Pelosi to the FY 1996 Labor/HHS Appropriations bill (H.R. 1227).

Among other things, this amendment will allow the Department of Labor (DOL) to continue issuing huge fines against grocery stores for situations where there is clearly no risk of injury to 16 and 17 year old employees. As you well know, the amendment seeks to undo years of work and progress. Order Number 12 (HO 12), a relic of a regulation that has remained unchanged since its adoption in 1994.

Similar to the important principles embodied in H.R. 1114 that you and Congressman Larry Combest are sponsoring, the language in the FY 1996 Labor/HHS Appropriations bill calls for common-sense reform to HO 12. This important language rejects the status quo and embraces safety standards that have been issued by the American National Standards Institute (ANSI) for cardboard balers and compactors. As provided for in H.R. 1114 and in the FY 1996 Labor/HHS Appropriations bill, employees who are 16 or 17 years old may be permitted to be materials into a bale or compactor that cannot be operated during the loading phase because the equipment complies with current ANSI standards.

FMI strongly endorses H.R. 1114 and the common-sense reform relating to HO 12 as specified in H.R. 2227. A vote against the strike rule is a vote against the following: Fairness to employers because fines will not be assessed for situations in which there is no risk of injury to workers; enhanced safety in the workplace; and a level playing field for purchase new equipment that meets the ANSI standards; and finally, job opportunities for young people, as grocery stores will once again be encouraged to hire teenagers. Sincerely,

HARRY SULLIVAN,
Senior Vice President and General Counsel.

Mr. FAZIO of California. Mr. Chairman, I agree with Mr. OBEY. If he’s said it once, he’s said it a thousand times: This legislative language has no place in an appropriations bill.

The issues that this bill touches—from abortion to workers’ rights—are complicated and controversial. They should be considered out in the open in the committee with primary jurisdiction. If the Majority is proud of this legislation, its members should have the opportu-tunity to hold public hearings to discuss these matters with the legislative— and that’s just what it is—is so important, it should stand on its own, and not hide behind the cover of an appropriations bill.

That said, I rise in support of Mr. OBEY’s amendment to strike the pages and pages of legislative language in this bill. Legislative language has no place in an appropriations bill.

This bill addresses complex and controversial issues—from abortion to workers’ rights. The American people deserve and expect these issues be subject to full Congressional scrutiny— out in the open—in the committee of jurisdiction.

Yet, the Republican back-door strategy is designed to circumvent this process.

This is wrong. Their legislative language deserves to stand on its own. These provisions deserves to rise or fall on their own merits, not on the basis of some legislative shenanigans.

My Republican colleagues speak highly of this bill. They are clearly proud of their efforts.

Yet, one could reasonably conclude— based upon the Republican decision to enforce this language. On this bill—that they seek to avoid a direct confrontation over this language.

Their motivation is clear. Many of these provisions reflect the most rad-ic and extreme elements of Republican agenda.

Their presence is the most vulnerable members of our society: rape victims and the victims of incest. In some cases, this bill rescinds years of legal precedent. In this bill, court decisions in labor cases are overruled.

The demolition does not end here. The supporters are attempting to give political pay back to their conservative supporters. Let me give you two examples.

The language in this bill about gender equity in college sports is unfair to our daughters. Title IX enforcement ensures that our sons and daughters have an equal chance to take part in sports in school. The language in this bill would halt Title IX enforcement. Intercollegiate athletic opportunities for female students—hammered as they already are—would be limited even more. My daughters—one each a better athlete than her father—have been denied the access to sports that I had to college sports. Halting enforcement of Title IX when there is still so much work to do is simply wrong.

The other example that I find intolerable as well as ironic addresses the training of obstetricians and gynecologists. While the provision of this language will say that it protects those who have moral and religious reservations about abortion from discrimination. But the Accredtation Council for Graduate Medical Education—the independent, organization of medcial professionals who set the standards for medical education—does not mandate abortion training. Anyone, either an individual or an institution, with a legal, moral, or religious objection to such training is not required to participate.

I would argue that the language in this bill serves a different purpose. It serves to restrict academic freedom. It serves to restrict knowledge about a legal medical procedure its supporters find personally unacceptable. In an ironic twist, in order to satisfy the personal priorities of many proponents of small government, they have inserted this language which represents an unprecedented intrusion into the actions of a private organization.

To repeat, this language has no place in an appropriations bill. Vote with Mr. OBEY to strike all these unnecessary and outrageous provisions.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of Mr. OBEY’s amendment to strike the legal medical procedure that some find personally unacceptable.

In an ironic twist, in order to satisfy the personal priorities of many proponents of small government, they have inserted this language which represents an unprecedented intrusion into the private organization.

In closing, let me repeat what Mr. Obey has stated so forcefully: This language has no place in an appropriations bill.

Vote with Mr. Obey to strike all of these unnecessary and outrageous provisions.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Obey].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Obey] will be postponed.

Are there further amendments to title I?

AMENDMENTS OFFERED BY MS. PELOSI

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Chairman, I offer three amendments en bloc.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendments en bloc.

The text of the amendments en bloc are as follows:

Amendments en bloc offered by Ms. Pelosi:

Amendment No. 60: Page 20, strike lines 15 through 22 (relating to OSHA protective standards).

Amendment No. 61: Page 58, line 20, strike the colon and all that follows through “Act” on page 59, line 8 (relating to NLRB and salting).

Amendment No. 62: Page 59, line 8, strike the colon and all that follows through “evidence” on page 60, line 8 (relating to NLRB section 10(j)) authority.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House, the gentleman from California [Ms. Pelosi] will be recognized for 10 minutes, and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Delay] will be recognized for 10 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Ms. Pelosi].

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Ms. Pelosi. Mr. Chairman, parliametary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlewoman will state her parliamentary inquiry.

Ms. Pelosi. Mr. Chairman, I thought we were 20-20.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment offered by the gentlewoman from California is 20 minutes total, 20 minutes on each side.

Ms. Pelosi. That is for all three, the en bloc?

The CHAIRMAN. The en bloc amendments specified under the unanimous-consent request was for 20 minutes, 10 minutes on each side.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from California [Ms. Pelosi].

Mr. Delay. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, in light of the fact that I only have 10 minutes and I though I had 20, I will take less time, obviously.

My en bloc amendment addresses three shortsighted riders to the Labor-HHS bill regarding worker protection. It deletes the ergonomics rider and would save U.S. corporations $20 billion a year in workers’ compensation costs. It eliminates one of the chief causes of a debilitating work-related disorder.

My amendment reverses the effects of this misguided rider which falls under OSHA. In addition to that, I have two amendments which address the NLRB.

As we know, earlier today we discussed some of the cuts in NLRB, two provisions in particular, the 10(j) provision and salting.

Section 10(j) of the National Labor Relations Act gives the NLRB the power to go into Federal court against an employer or a union to get the court to issue an order for interim relief. This is a very preliminary step. Such orders, for example, can require an employer or union to stop committing additional violations and to reinstate employees fired to chill organizing or withdraw illegal bargaining demands.

Mr. Chairman, what is important to note about the issue is when these 10(j)’s are issued, most of the time the overwhelming percentage of the time, the issue is dealt with expeditiously and in only a small minority of cases does it go to the next step.

This legislation in this bill would say that in order for the NLRB to go to Federal court against an employer or union, it would require a four-fifths vote of the NLRB, 80 percent. You talk about minority rule, 20-percent rules, a very small portion of one person on the NLRB, so I think that in a sense of fairness, our colleagues would recognize that this is silly legislative language.

In fact, had this legislation been in effect at the time of the baseball strike, on which the NLRB voted 3 to 2, we would never have been able to proceed to the resolution of that strike. I think that the figures there speak for themselves.

Mr. Chairman, I have so much more to say on these issues, but will not, in the interest of time.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. Delay. Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlewoman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. Delay. Mr. Chairman, could I, under the rules, transfer the management of the opposition to another Member by unanimous consent?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman, by unanimous consent, could do that.

Mr. Delay. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to allow the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Ballenger] to control the time in opposition.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from North Carolina will be recognized to control the time in opposition to the Pelosi en bloc amendments.

Mr. Ballenger. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fawell], a member of the committee.

Mr. Fawell. Mr. Chairman, I am going to try to, in the 5 minutes I have, make reference to the National Labor Relations Act provisions which are involved in this particular amendment.

First of all, in regard to the 10(j) injunction, I think that is oftentimes misunderstood, but basically all that this bill is doing is to, in effect, require uniform standards in regard to the issuance of a preliminary injunction. Nobody, obviously, should be against something like that.

We are also setting forth that the basic equity principles that always apply in all other areas of our civil law in regard to the issuance of a preliminary injunction would apply here.

Here again, when we talk about a preliminary injunction, we are talking about a very extraordinary remedy, and you must understand that where an ordinary speaking—and any of my lawyer colleagues listening in on this would agree—that you do not get a preliminary injunction just as a matter of course, which is what the NLRB has been doing for the last 2 years. You have got to show a likelihood of success, you have got to show irreparable damage that would be done if the preliminary injunction were not granted.

You would have to show a balance of hardships between the complainant and the respondent, and you have to show the public interest is something that demands it. That is what is being requested here.

In the last few years, we have had a great increase in the use of the 10(j) injunction, and both the new chairman, Mr. Gould, and the general counsel, Mr. Feinstein, have made a number of speeches where they have said that they are going to increase the use greatly and, indeed, they have.

Since 1947, when the Taft-Hartley law first authorized this thing of an injunction, it was used on average over the years no more than 30 or 50 times per year.

Now we are getting it at something like 160 over a 16-month period or roughly 10 times for each of the 16 months, and all of this means that what we have, as far as the small business person is concerned, a very costly and a very intimidating result because he is dragged into Federal court to try to defend himself, and then all too often we have, without these provisions.
applying as would ordinarily apply, we have an injunction that is issued against the respondent. The small business person especially cannot stand that cost, and it is an intimidating procedure to go through, and oftentimes we get a settlement on a matter that is not really a settlement. There is nothing to worry about here if my colleagues understand that these kinds of preliminary injunctions should never be issued anyway unless there are these extraordinary circumstances.

In regard to the labor relations issue, this involves unions that are sending paid or professional union agents and union members into non-union workplaces under the guise of seeking employment, and the question raised in a number of appellate court cases is whether the union paid and employed applicants for a job can be classified as an employee who would meet the definition of employee under the National Labor Relations Act.

So the question is simply this: Should the NLRB’s general counsel proceed to investigate and prosecute unfair labor practice charges against employers who refuse to hire an applicant who is employed by a union full-time, under the control and supervision of the union and thereby organize?

In the most recent case, which is now before the Supreme Court, the Supreme Court stated, and I quote, “union members who apply for jobs so that they can organize workers are not employees under the protection of the National Labor Relations Act,” so what is being suggested here is that they should not spend all that money that is being suggested here is that they should not spend all that money that is being spent by the unions, and proceed to investigate and prosecute unfair labor practice charges against employers who refuse to hire an applicant who is employed by a union full-time, under the control and supervision of the union and thereby organize?

So I think in both of these areas we have some very commonsense suggestions.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS].

Mr. OWENS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Chairman, 10(j) injunction processes allow the NLRB, the National Labor Relations Board, to do the job they set up to do. They operated for the last 60 years, done a great job for labor relations in America, but in their zeal to destroy organized labor and their zeal to destroy the workers of this Nation, the Republicans, the leadership, has moved in this appropriation bill in a way which is abusive, abuses their power and makes a mockery of the democratic process. It trivializes the institutions that we have had for the last 60 years.

The 10(j) process, when it was not in existence, caused the National Labor Relations Board to be impotent in cases which were life-and-death matters. I am going to give my colleagues one extreme example.

In August 1989 the company fired employee Jerry Whitaker for having previously filed an unfair labor practice charges with the Board. The Board ordered the company to reinstate Whitaker, and the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals enforced the Board’s order in 1992. The company ignored both the Board and the court. This is Gary Enterprizes, the Board, and the court. Whitaker was found dead of a heart attack at age 55. The Board is still trying to collect the back pay owed to Mr. Whitaker’s estate by the company. This is the kind of case that today would be considered for a 10(j) injunction. It could today. The use of the 10(j) injunction today successfully could have put Mr. Whitaker back to work promptly, reduced the back pay owed by the company, and possibly saved and prolonged Jerry Whitaker’s life.

This is a life-or-death matter, and we are using a shortcut process in the appropriations process to deal with it.

Mr. BALLenger. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. NORWOOD], a member of the committee.

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BALLenger] yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose this amendment on the same grounds that I opposed the Obey amendment 10 minutes ago. We must not allow OSHA to proceed on the basis of anecdotal reports about a medical condition they know nothing about. We do not even know for sure how many repetitive-strain injuries occur in this country. How can we say that it costs $20 billion when we are not sure exactly what has a repetitive-strain injury? How is it two employees can do the exact same thing, and one of them has a strain injury, and one does not?

Mr. Chairman, OSHA cannot write this standard yet. They do not have the ability, medical science does not have the ability, to determine when a person has a repetitive-strain injury. I ask, “Is your sore elbow sore from tennis, or is it sore from work? Is your sore ankle from skiing, or is it sore from work?”

Mr. Chairman, we do not have the ability yet to understand this. Vote against this amendment.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, responding to the previous speaker, it is interesting to hear our colleagues talk about needing a scientific basis for OSHA before proceeding with further ergonomic regulations. We do have that scientific basis with NIOSH, and some colleagues want to cut $32.9 million of our safety and health research [NIOSH] which is the foundation for OSHA. Mr. Chairman, I also would like to point out to my colleagues who are railing against the ergonomics regulations that a letter received in our offices that came from the Office of Inspector General, the House of Representatives. The letter says that among the provisions we recommend that the Chief Administrative Officer develop proposals for the approval of the Committee on House Oversight to phase out nonfunctioning furnishings with ergonomic modern furnishings over the next 9 years.

Let us take the advice of the administration of this House and have ergonomics considerations for people older as well as in the Congress.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. BECERRA].

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman from California [Ms. PELOSI] for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman, my father has never skied in his life, my father has never played tennis in his life. I doubt he even wore a pair of skis or touched a tennis racquet in his life. But for more than 50 years he did work with a pick and shovel, and now my father has tendons in his hands which are contracted and tendons in his hands which are hardened.

Pick and shovel and constantly stooping, that is what my father did in building the great Nation that we have in America.

Now was it repetitive action that caused those tendons to contract and harden? I do not know, and we should have information to determine if in fact that is what caused my father’s tendons to contract and harden. But this legislation does not even allow OSHA to collect the information to make that determination.

Whether or not we should have standards now, I will not make that judgment, but we should at least be allowed to collect the information needed to make that judgment. This bill under the Republican leadership would not allow it to happen.

I will go back and tell my father what the Republican Congress wishes to do on this particular issue.

Mr. BALLenger. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOEKSTRA].

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BALLenger] for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Pelosi amendment to strike the OSHA ergonomic provision, the provision on the 10(j) injunctions, and the provision regarding the processing of salting charges by the NLRB. We have talked about these issues in our Committee on Economic and Educational Opportunities. We concur with the work that has gone on here in the Committee on Appropriations. These provisions would simply strike down statements by the Committee on Appropriations that these are areas which are not a priority for the expenditure of resources.

Mr. Chairman, we are in a time of making difficile changes. The ergonomic provision would prevent OSHA from issuing an overly expensive regulation as indicated by the draft proposal already issued. When there are other demands on OSHA, we should focus OSHA’s limited resources on reducing fatalities and workplace accidents rather than on developing regulations to protect workers from repetitive injuries and other ergonomic hazards, regulations which will cost jobs, create paperwork, and will not work.

What we do in the area of repetitive-motion injuries is use common sense and not look for a bureaucratic paperwork maze to solve our problems. The provision on 10(j) injunctions requires the Board to pursue injunctive relief to be judged by uniform standards in determining when injunctive relief would be appropriate. It would also allow parties impacted by injunctive relief a opportunity, an opportunity to present their cases to the Board to open the process. These seem to me to be matters of simple fairness and due process.

The provision on salt merely requires the NLRB to suspend processing of charges until the Supreme Court has made a determination of whether or not these employees are covered under the National Labor Relations Act. It does not make sense for the NLRB to expend resources in an area where it might ultimately be determined that the employees are not covered.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. OLVER].

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Chairman, the labor title of this legislation really is not about money. It is all about legislating a return to the labor philosophy of the 19th century just as we are entering the 21st century. The amendment by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] corrects some of the worst of those provisions, one of which is why I decided to take a look at the proposal in the appropriation bill.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

In that time I want to urge our colleagues to support this amendment which supports American workers, and to give to the people in America concerned about ergonomics the same opportunity that the leadership of this House of Representatives wants to give to the workers in the Congress of the United States.

I believe that the calling for a four-fifths majority for 10(j) injunction is really antidemocratic. I urge our colleagues to vote for fairness and against that proposal in the appropriations bill. Please vote for the Pelosi amendment to support American workers and to treat them with the same fairness in regard to ergonomics we wish to have in this Congress.

With that, Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY], the ranking member of the committee.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, how much time remains?
Impeding the work of the NLRB just makes it harder for middle-income workers and their families. By striking at the very heart of labor-management cooperation and teamwork, erosion of the NLRB lays the groundwork for making millions of American workers more vulnerable to the whims of employers who want to avoid the rules of fair labor practice. By undermining the collective-bargaining system, we pave the way for unfair labor practices, and contribute to the disintegration of the American middle class. Without the protection of the NLRB—safeguards that ensure that both workers and managers engage fully in the collective-bargaining process—we are on the road back to the days when workers had no security. We cannot backslide to the days when the relationship between employers and employees was ruled solely by management. I urge my colleagues to support fairness and balance for American workers, families, and companies by supporting Congresswoman Pelosi's amendment.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I rise to express my support for this amendment and my strong support of the provisions in this bill which seek to limit the responsibilities and enforcement authority of the National Labor Relations Board.

The NLRB measures in this bill chip away at the basic organizing rights of American workers. This attack on the NLRB could mean the closing of half of the NLRB field offices—an obvious attempt to dismantle the ability of the NLRB to halt flagrantly unfair labor practices by employers and to provide necessary worker protections. The NLRB now takes over a year to resolve unfair labor practice cases. Ten percent of the cases are not resolved for 3 to 7 years. In the meantime, workers who have been improperly fired for union organizing activities remain out of work. Is it any wonder many workers are intimidated from being involved in organizing? The Republican leadership, by cutting NLRB funds by 30 percent, even in the face of this backlog, shows its true intent to make the rights of American workers, enshrined in the National Labor Relations Act of 1935, to disappear. We are on the road back to the days when workers had no security. We cannot backslide to the days when the relationship between employers and employees was ruled solely by management.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to ensure the basic rights of America's working men and women and support this very important amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment by the gentlewoman from California [Ms. Pelosi].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. OBEE. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House today, further procedings on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from California [Ms. Pelosi] will be postponed.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. CRAPO

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment made in order by the rule. The Chairman. The Clerk will desig-

(c) FY96 ALLOCATIONS.—The duties of the Director of the Congressional Budget Office and of the Committees on Appropriations and on Appropriations of the House of Representatives pursuant to this title and the amendments made by it regarding appropriation bills for fiscal year 1996 shall be based upon the revised section 602(a) allocations in effect on the date this Act was engrossed by the House of Representatives.

(d) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term "lock-box amendment" means any general or special appropriation bill, and any bill or joint resolution making supplementary, deficiency, or continuing appropriations through the end of a fiscal year.

Mr. CRAPAO. Under the unanimous-consent agreement, the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. CRAPO] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] will be recognized in opposition for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. CRAPO].

Mr. CRAPAO. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, we have finally made it to where the lock-box amendment is now getting an opportunity to be debated and voted on the floor. It has been nearly 2 years since a bipartisan group has been working to try to get this critical budget reform brought forward, and I want to thank the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. BRESTER], and the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN], from the Democratic side, for their support and continued effort to try to bring this issue forward.

Mr. Chairman, I also want to thank the gentleman from California, Mr. ROYCE, the gentleman from New Jersey, Mr. ZIMMER, the gentlemen from Florida, Mr. FOLEY and Mr. Goss, the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. UPTON, the gentleman from Oklahoma, Mr. LARGENT, the gentleman from Wisconsin, Mr. NEUMANN, the gentleman from New York, Mr. SOLOMON, for their strong effort on the Republican side to be sure that this important reform comes forward.

In a nutshell, Mr. Chairman, what does this amendment do? It corrects one of the basic problems in our budget process. Right now, as we vote to reduce spending, to try to balance our budget, and we reduce spending in a particular program, project, or line item of our budget, all that happens is that particular program or project is eliminated. The money allocated to that project is not eliminated. It simply goes into the conference committee so that those in the conference committee can reallocate it to their special projects.

Mr. Chairman, it is important for us to have a system where when we make a cut that counts, and that when we talk about deficit reduction on this floor, our cuts reduce the deficit. This bill does just that. It takes those cuts and puts them into a lock box and makes certain when this bill is conferenced, those lock-box items are used to reduce the statutory as well as the budgetary limits on our spending.

I encourage the support of the Members of this critical reform and think that we are now going to take one of the major steps in this Congress for budgetary reform.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the idea behind the lockbox is that, supposedly, when savings are made on the floor in bills that are brought over to the Appropriations Committee, that that money, instead of being used for another purpose, is locked up in a box and used for deficit reduction. Sounds great.

I think we ought to go through the history of the lockbox in this Congress. The first time that it was raised as a major issue was on the rescissions bill, when major reductions in the existing fiscal year’s budget were being considered by this House. In that bill, in committee, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA] tried to offer an amendment assuring that every dollar that was cut in that bill be used for deficit reduction, not for tax cuts. That amendment was defeated.

We then came to the floor, and our Republican friends in the majority had a change of heart. Essentially, they were looking for votes. What they said was, “All right, I tell you what. We will support the Murtha amendment.” They supported the Murtha amendment and approved the Brewster amendment, which said “No money for tax cuts, just use it for deficit reduction.”

One day after it was adopted, Mr. Chairman, the Republican chairman of the Committee on the Budget said, “Oh, that was just a game to get the votes to pass the rescissions bill.” They dumped it in Congress and came back with a hugely modified provision which allowed only the first year’s savings to go for deficit reduction, and in effect, all of the cut-year savings, billions and billions of dollars, over 90 percent of the savings in the bill, to be used for their tax cut.

Guess who gets most of that tax cut. Mr. Chairman? The folks at the top of the heap. Folks making $100,000 a year or more.

We then tried to help the gentleman from Utah [Mr. ORTON] and others, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Ms. HARMAN] another, who wanted to have the lockbox attached to other appropriation bills as they moved through here. Bill after bill, “Sorry, kiddo, no way.” It was not doing the job.

Now, however, we are going to say, “Yes, the gentleman from Utah [Mr. ORTON] and others, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Ms. HARMAN], on the Appropriations Committee or the Appropriations Committee of the Senate shall, within 10 calendar days after that date of enactment of this Act, carry out the duties required by this title and amendments made by it regarding appropriation bills for fiscal year 1996 or any subsequent fiscal year.”

SEC. 707. EFFECTIVE DATE.

(a) In General.—This title shall apply to all appropriation bills making appropriations for fiscal year 1996 or any subsequent fiscal year.

(b) FY96 APPLICATION.—In the case of any appropriation bill for fiscal year 1996 engrossed by the House of Representatives on or after the date this title was engrossed by the House of Representatives and on or after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Congressional Budget Office, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, and the Committees on Appropriations and the Committees on the Budget of the House of Representatives and of the Senate shall, within 10 calendar days after that date of enactment of this Act, carry out the duties required by this title and amendments made by it that occur after the date this Act was engrossed by the House of Representatives.

(c) FY96 ALLOCATIONS.—The duties of the Director of the Congressional Budget Office and of the Committees on Appropriations and on Appropriations of the House of Representatives pursuant to this title and the amendments made by it regarding appropriation bills for fiscal year 1996 shall be based upon the revised section 602(a) allocations in effect on the date this Act was engrossed by the House of Representatives.

lockbox is critically important. There are a lot of people all over this country, we call them C-SPAN junkies, and many of them are as informed as any group of people you can find within this country, but they did not know, many of them, that if you actually cut spending on appropriations bill, the money does not go to reduce the deficit; that the money, instead, will go for another spending program. This has been the practice now for about 40-plus years.

The Republicans have now been in the majority since January. This is now August. We have essentially been in charge for a very limited period of time. Within this very short period of time, however, we are actually, today, going to pass the first official lockbox bill on the House floor, so that as we cut spending, instead of using Washington rules and using it to spend on something else, this actually is going to reduce spending and we will use it to reduce the deficit.

You know what that is, Mr. Chairman? That is Main-Street-USA common sense. People on the other side criticize us for the way in which we have got lockbox to the floor. I say wait a minute, the minority had 40 years to do it, why did they not do it? They response is, “Well, if we would have just had one more week to be in control, we would have got it done.” That is kind of a joke around here. We could give them another 40 years and it probably would not have been done because this means real spending cuts, real reductions in the deficit, and it means common sense, USA, a Main-Street-America idea.

The beauty of this, Mr. Chairman, is it is on this bill and we are going to permanently extend the lockbox for as long as the Republicans, joined by some Democrats who have stuck their necks out, in order to get a lockbox and save this country’s fiscal future.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Ms. HARMAN].

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time, and I commend him for his effective leadership on this issue.

First of all, I agree that Mr. OBEY that the lockbox should have been passed a lot sooner. Had we had a lockbox at the beginning of this Congress, in cut spending from 11.3 appropriations bills would have been in it. Instead, today, the lockbox, sadly, is still empty. It will be empty at the end of this bill, because, as has been pointed out, we do not expect to cut money from this bill.

Nonetheless, Mr. Chairman, we start today on a very good footing with a bipartisan lockbox amendment that many of us have worked on for years. Had it been adopted in the last Congress it could have included more than $900 million from cuts adopted to appropriations bills.

I would like to commend the many freshmen on the other side whose involvement was critical in moving the amendment as quickly as it did move. Let me not forget my colleague, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. BREWSTER], sitting to right whose formidable presence and leadership on this issue made a big contribution. I also thank Ranking Minority Chairman TERRY SOLOMON and PORTER GOSS for their concerted efforts to report H.R. 1162.

Let me say, Mr. Chairman, that a reasonable person would believe a cut in one appropriation bill is simply shifted to another.

Lockbox will stop this practice and make a cut in spending a cut in the deficit. The lockbox, as I have said, has many fathers, but I am its mother, and as a mother, I would like to say how proud I am that after a very long gestation the baby will be born.

Congratulations again to all the bipartisan group that worked on this. I offer my strong support for the Crapo amendment.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. ROYCE].

Mr. ROYCE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this bipartisan effort to make our cuts, the cuts that we make on this House floor, count. What this bill would do is to ensure that spending cuts to appropriations bills will be designated directly to deficit reduction. They will not disappear in conference to be respent later.

This reform, I should share with Members, is supported by such bipartisan groups as the Concord Coalition. It is supported by Citizens Against Government Waste, Citizens for a Sound Economy, and the National Taxpayers Union. The amendment makes a statutory change to the Budget Act of 1974, and would require that all net savings from below the budgeted 602(b) allocation, whether from amendments on the floor or in committee, will go toward debt reduction and not for other spending projects.

In the case of this bill, the committee is already $320 million under its 602(b) budget authority allocation, and the net amount of savings and any more savings adopted on the floor of this House will be credited to the deficit reduction in the lockbox provision applies to this bill and to any other general or special appropriations bill or measure which follows, including supplemental appropriations, deficiency appropriations, and continuing resolutions upon their engrossment by either house.

I want to share with Members that had this passed last year, we would have saved $659 million that we cut on this floor, but was later respent rather than go to deficit reduction. Mr. Chairman, this provision is supported by the American people. They desperately want and need deficit reduction. Interest on the national debt is now the third highest item in the federal budget, and a child born today will have to pay, on average, taxes of $187,000 over his or her lifetime just to cover their share of interest on the national debt. That does not include the off-budget impact of the national debt which increases higher interest rates on everything from homes to cars.

Please support the amendment.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. Goss].

(Mr. GOSS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOS. Mr. Chairman, as someone who has worked in the effort to devise a lockbox mechanism that could work and still meet the legitimate need of flexibility for those who must write our spending bills, I am pleased to see in strong support of this lockbox proposal. Our Rules Committee members and I worked long hours to ensure that lockbox would be more than just a catchy phrase—that it would be a powerful and workable budgetary tool to help us meet and maintain our commitment to a balanced budget. And I believe we have succeeded in that effort.

When the House and the Senate vote to save money in spending bills, those savings should not be spent elsewhere, they should be credited toward deficit reduction.

On its face, this appears to be a simple matter—and the principle, that a cut should be a cut, truly is simple. But given the complexities of our current budget process, this simple principle becomes complicated in its application and one can get hopelessly mired in arcane commentary on such things as 602(a) allocations, 602(b) suballocations, statutory spending limits, and the like. These are beltway terms but they are important to understanding the minutia of how this thing will work.

As chairman of the Rules Committee’s Subcommittee on Legislative and Budget Process, I am deeply committed to reforming our entire budget process—it is complicated, it is cumbersome, it is confusing, it is often redundant, and it is generally geared toward spending and preserving the status quo.

As we proceed on the larger reform effort, there is no reason not to move forward now on this one important piece of the budget process reform puzzle. I urge strong support for this lockbox proposal.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. BECERRA].

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I do not think there is anyone in this House that is not pleased to see us with a lockbox amendment finally before us so that when we do see cuts being made, we know they are not just going to be for naught, because the money that will have been saved will go on to other programs within that particular agency.

If I may, I would like to propose a question to the sponsor of the amendment and tell the gentleman that I noticed something. This is an amendment that was made in order by the Committee on Rules. It was printed up. Unlike many amendments that were not included within the Committee on Rules reports. As I understand it, this amendment applies to all the cuts and savings that will be made henceforth.

But as the gentlewoman from California mentioned, there were $400 million worth of cuts that have been made in the previously passed appropriations bills over the last couple of weeks, but those $400 million will not be put into this lockbox. They will be used for other purposes, which I imagine included a cut for the very wealthy.

So I would ask the gentleman, when he went to the Committee on Rules, if he had asked the Committee on Rules to make this lockbox amendment applicable retroactively to the appropriations bills which we have passed over the last 2 weeks?

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BERCERA. I yield to the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman yielding.

I agree that we have been trying to get this lockbox amendment put into the process much earlier, and it should have been, so we could have caught some of the savings we already voted on. We did ask for retroactivity. We found there were some significant technical problems with that. The amendment has been written to give as much retroactivity as we can within the process this body is working in. I have to say it is not going to catch all of that which has now gone under the bridge.

Mr. BERCERA. Mr. Chairman, re-claiming my time, I thank the gentlemen for this response, because that worries me, because I know this committee can do quite a bit, technical or not, to make sure we save the money. It is unfortunate we did not take the opportunity to do so.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to my good friend, the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], the chairman of the Committee on Rules, who has been of great assistance in this bill.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, I took the well on this side of the aisle to look straight at two people sitting over here, because this truly is a bipartisan effort, and it is so badly needed. You know, there is nothing more disheartening for any Member of Congress than to stand up here and have the guts and the courage to vote for cuts of programs, some good program, but you have to do it. You have to get this deficit under control. And then, after you cast that tough vote, to see the moneys not go toward lowering the deficit. That is so discouraging. The American people are just so disturbed with that.

Finally, we have a lockbox that is going to correct that. That means when the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. BREWERST] or the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN] or the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. CRAPO] or all of the rest of us, when we have the courage to come out here and vote for those cuts, it means now they are going to lower the deficit, and we are going to get this deficit under control. I think this is a great day. I am just so excited I can hardly stand it. I want to jump up and down. Come over here and vote for this. I want to give the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. CRAPO] great credit, because for 2 years the gentleman has pursued this. Now we are going to pass it. I think it overwhelmingly. I thank the gentleman for the American people.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield my self 2 minutes.

Mr. CRAP. Mr. Chairman, I tried to listen to the previous speech with a straight face. I just want to say that it was my impression that just last night the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FOST] tried to, in the Committee on Rules, amend this proposal so that the lockbox could be applied to all of the appropriations bills which had passed the House in this section, and that in fact he was turned down. It seems to me that that fact indicates the basic disingenuousness of the situation in which we find ourselves.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, will my good friend yield?

Mr. OBEY. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, I would just say that there is nothing we would rather do than make this retroactive, to make it affect everything. But the gentleman's position was after you pass these bills, and the gentleman from Wisconsin, DAVID OBEY, is one of the smartest Members of this body, once we had made those cuts and then the 602(b) allocations has been redistributed, where had they been redistributed to? Mostly to NASA, which people felt we had to reinstate some of the cuts, and mostly to veterans affairs. We could not do that.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Chairman, re-claiming my time, I would simply say that I did not see that side of the aisle getting any double hernias trying to do heavy lifting in order to get the lockbox adopted on the rescissions bill. In fact, I saw them after they accepted the rescissions committee's version of the rescissions bill in this House, applying the lockbox principle to all of the savings, both near year and out year in the rescissions bill. I did then see them swallow a process in which all of the outyear dollar savings were used for the tax cut, rather than for deficit reduction.

I find it interesting that the lockbox will be used to provide tax cuts for somebody making $200,000 a year, but we will also pretend we are going to make additional savings in this bill for people at the lower end of the economic scale, when in fact we know that all of the savings you are going to have in this bill have already been made, they have already been cut, and, again, they are being used to justify a tax cut.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. LARGENT].

Mr. LARGENT. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I do agree it would have been an excellent idea to have enacted the lockbox earlier. In fact, it would have been an excellent idea to have enacted the lockbox shortly after the gentleman from Idaho introduced the legislation along with the gentlewoman from California in the 103rd Congress. Think of all the money we could have saved if it had been passed under the previous majorities.

But, fortunately, we have today for the first time a meaningful lockbox amendment before us, and it will establish that the budget allocations that we so solemnly adopt each year will be not floors, but ceilings. It will make it clear that we can't spend below those allocations and have those spending cuts stick. Budget cuts can go straight to deficit reduction, so we can start with the amount we have to add to the national debt every single day until that deficit is overcome.

Finally, I say to the gentleman who has been of great assistance here, because this truly is a bipartisan effort, and it is so badly needed. It is not going to catch all of that which has now gone under the bridge.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield my 1½ minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ZIMMER].

Mr. ZIMMER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I do agree it would have been an excellent idea to have enacted the lockbox earlier. In fact, it would have been an excellent idea to have enacted the lockbox shortly after the gentleman from Idaho introduced the legislation along with the gentlewoman from California in the 103rd Congress. Think of all the money we could have saved if it had been passed under the previous majorities.

But, fortunately, we have today for the first time a meaningful lockbox amendment before us, and it will establish that the budget allocations that we so solemnly adopt each year will be not floors, but ceilings. It will make it clear that we can't spend below those allocations and have those spending cuts stick. Budget cuts can go straight to deficit reduction, so we can start with the amount we have to add to the national debt every single day until that deficit is overcome.

Those of us who have been fighting to cut the budget over the years have felt...
Mr. BREWSTER. Mr. Chairman, today first I want to thank my good friend from Idaho, Mr. CRAPO. We have worked on this project for 3 years, were joined by the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN] last year, and it has been a long road. But we finally reached the point of getting a vote.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the lockbox amendment to H.R. 2127. Many Members on both sides of the aisle have worked tirelessly to get us to this point. We have many times seen amendments come up on the floor. We are going to see on this voting board around here the votes on this amendment. The American people are going to look to see who votes against this very simple amendment for a lockbox. That is the other question. Let us show the American taxpayers, do we need to change this way we do business that has occurred in many decades.

I thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] and the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN] and I have appeared before the Committee on Rules on every appropriations bill this year. I am sure the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] is tired of seeing us there. As we testified for the Brewer-Harman lockbox to be made in order, savings were slipping away and being used by the Committee on Appropriations elsewhere. Although a lockbox amendment does not capture the $480 million in cuts the House made this year, it symbolizes our commitment toward deficit reduction.

Constitutional amendments require a three-fifths majority in Congress and the approval of three-fourths of state legislatures. This amendment would simply guarantee that spending cuts we approve as part of any appropriation bills could be designated for deficit reduction, a novel idea.

Having watched year after year after year spending cuts voted in the House never going, never becoming true spending cuts, to say that we are a little bit excited about the possibility this time in spite of the fact that this is the second time this year we have done this, perhaps this time we are going serious and that this will not only pass tonight but that it will receive the full and complete support which it deserves and see that it in fact becomes the law of this House. This is a commonsense legislative effort.

When Congress votes for cuts, we should not deceive the American public or ourselves about what those cuts mean. Citizens assume a cut means a reduction in the deficit, not just a reshuffling of funds as has always been the case. With this change, budget savings will be placed in the lockbox, locked in for deficit reduction, without loopholes. These spending cuts should be initiated automatically unless otherwise specifically designated or transferred which can be done.

I commend the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN], the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. BREWSTER], and the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. CRAPO] for the effort, the leadership that they have shown in seeing that we have an opportunity tonight to vote for this amendment.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY].

Mr. FOLEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I am delighted to join the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. CRAPO] in this effort. I also commend the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN] and the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. BREWSTER] on their leadership on this issue.

The American public is telling us to quit spending their money, quit wasting their dollars. This is a mechanism by which we can start locking up some of those savings and putting them towards deficit reduction.

Simply put, I cut a project the other day $25 million. I found out hours later that that money, that $25 million, was swept off the table and spent somewhere else. It frustrated this Floridian to know that all of that effort was in vain because somebody else spent the dollars.

Let me tell my colleagues, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. LARGENT] spoke eloquently on the freshman class. I want to read you from the Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel an editorial, “Applaud House Foley, for `revolt’’: Congress has played the old shell-and-pea game with this process for years, shifting federal money from shell to shell with so much speed and dexterity that the befuddled taxpayer soon loses track of the pea.

Foley and many of his colleagues in the Class of 1994 were sent to Congress partly because they were sick of the way this place does business that has occurred in many decades.

The gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN] and I have appeared before the Committee on Rules on every appropriations bill this year, I am sure the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] is tired of seeing us there.

As we testified for the Brewer-Harman lockbox to be made in order, savings were slipping away and being used by the Committee on Appropriations elsewhere. Although a lockbox amendment does not capture the $480 million in cuts the House made this year, it symbolizes our commitment toward deficit reduction.

I thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. Goss] for bringing this issue before the House today and agreeing to also debate H.R. 1162 as a stand-alone bill after the August recess. I think this twofold process is important for the House to work its will on the lockbox issue and to better ensure that the lockbox becomes law as soon as possible.

Our constituents sent a message to Congress last November to reduce the deficit. Let us be honest to our constituents. Let us make sure a cut is really a cut, not additional spending for someone else. I urge my colleagues to vote for the lockbox amendment.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Florida [Ms. STEARNS].

Ms. STEARNS asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.

Ms. STEARNS. Mr. Chairman, let me ask this question: If you asked the American people, do we need to change the way Congress works, I think you would get a large percentage that would say yes.

There is another question. Shortly we are going to see on this voting board around here the votes on this amendment. The American people are going to look to see who votes against this very simple amendment for a lockbox. That is the other question. Let us show the American taxpayers that we are serious, very serious about reducing the deficit. Supporting this amendment should make it clear that we are going to put our money where our mouths are. In other words, we will ensure that any savings realized in the appropriations bill will automatically go into a lockbox and not be spent in another way.

Such a trust fund is long overdue, my colleagues. If we show the folks back home that we are truly committed to Mr. UPTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MINGE].

Mr. MINGE. Mr. Chairman, first, I will start by complimenting my Republican colleagues for what I think is an excellent proposal and also those Members on the Democratic side who have been so active in proposing and advocating and bringing this to the floor for a vote.

The lockbox principle is important; it is very important. One can simply say, a cut is not a cut unless we have the lockbox principle in place, because as others have explained, it is altogether too easy to take the cut, reallocate it among other programs, and undermine or defeat the entire effort that took place to save money and to reduce the deficit and ultimately to balance this budget.

There are aspects of this which remain troubling, and I trust that we will deal with these aspects in the weeks to come.

One that is most significant, in my opinion, is the unfortunate tension that exists in our Federal Government, the tension between the House and the Senate and between the White House and Congress. And what we find is that some of these bills and provisions are lost in that process. As a consequence, our efforts here to insert the lockbox principle in this appropriations bill may not survive the entire conference process and the possibility of a veto and work with the White House subsequently.

I urge the Committee on Rules and the Members of this body to work aggressively to not just pass this but also make sure that if this does not pass and is not ultimately signed by the President that we, in fact, have a lockbox that this body will observe as its own internal operating procedure so that we, in fact, as the U.S. House of Representatives, are committed to deficit reduction and we do not abuse the cuts that are made and reallocate these funds for other programs.

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. UPTON].

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Chairman, I ran for Congress to fight spending and to reduce the deficit. What has been more frustrating than ever has been when we have been able to get amendments on this House floor to cut spending, more times than not we have lost those battles. But in the times that we have actually been successful in cutting spending, something happens. The folks in the gallery, the folks at home, the folks at home who come and cheer watching C-SPAN, but ultimately when the bill goes to the Senate and those bills come back from conference, the spending level is at the same if not even higher.

This lockbox changes things. Thanks to a bipartisan approach from the very beginning, we have been able, I think, to change history with what we are doing tonight. Because in the future when we cut spending for whatever project it might be, defense, nondefense, foreign aid, I do not care, the spending is going to come down and we are going to win and the taxpayers are going to win big time.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BARRETT].

Mr. BARRETT of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Crapo-Harman-Brewster lockbox amendment. It is an amendment that I think is long overdue.

I have to admit that I was sitting in my office listening to the debate and hearing many of my colleagues from both sides of the aisle get up and talk about their shock and amazement that the cuts that they thought that they had voted for were not going to deficit reduction but were going back into be spent again by the appropriators. This shock was unbelievable to them.

What I find ironic is that we have had this debate for 7 months this year, and over and over again we have said, if we are going to truly address the deficit reduction problem, we have to have cuts made on this floor apply to deficit reduction. And time and time again we have been shot down. We have been unable to have those cuts go to deficit reduction.

I think it is wonderful that we have it in this bill. Of course, there are not going to be many cuts in this bill. It is ironic that we did not have this provision in the bill that dealt with transportation spending, that dealt with highway projects, that dealt with true transportation work. But that was the place where we should have been making cuts and having those cuts go to deficit reduction.

I am happy it is here now, but when I hear my colleagues talk about their shock, it makes me think, maybe it is not as shocking as they pretend that it is.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. HOKE].

Mr. HOKE. Mr. Chairman, we have done a lot, we have gone a long way to reform this Congress. But one of the things that we have not done is, we have not really tackled a systemic problem that needs systemic and systematic reform.

One of the problems we have got in the Congress is that we really have three parties. We have got Republicans; we have Democrats; and then we have appropriators. And sometimes the appropriators forget which party they originally came from.

The reason that it creates such a problem is that the appropriators run this place in a different way, knowing that if we do in fact get to the floor and make a cut, that when we make that cut, it will not matter. They can reprogram it however they want anyhow afterward, because it will not actually cut the budget in a way that goes long and hard out to bring truly be available to be used in another program in that particular appropriations bill.

That is wrong. It is part of what gives a certain kind of arrogance to the appropriations process that, frankly, becomes problematic to the rest of the Members.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the opportunity that we have had to have this critical debate. As the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. BREWSTER] said, we have been fighting for a long time to get this issue to the floor, and I again want to say thank you to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. BREWSTER] and the gentleman from California [Ms. HARMAN] for their strong help in getting this moved forward. This has been a bipartisan effort.

For those on the Republican side whom I mentioned earlier, we have got to work and we are going to win big time. And we are going to win and the taxpayers are going to win big time.

Mr. Chairman, as the previous speakers have said, we now have an opportunity to make our budget process real, so that when we vote, when those C-SPAN viewers see across the bottom of the screen that the debate is on whether to cut spending or to spend money on a certain project, then it is true that we are truly talking about making our cuts count. We now have the opportunity to create the lockbox; to create a true system in which when we vote on this floor to cut spending, spending is cut.

Mr. Chairman, I again want to say that this vote, this bill, has support of the Concord Coalition, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the Citizens Against Government Waste, the Citizens for a Sound Economy, and the National Taxpayers Union. Those who are interested in our budget process, in protecting the fiscal stability of our budget system, in protecting against the increasing taxes that we have seen across the country, are all standing up tonight, watching the vote here on this floor.

Mr. Chairman, one final point. I think it is very important that we have a strong vote tonight, so that we can send a signal to the other body that we are serious, that this reform was put into this appropriations bill because we expect to see it back, we expect it to come out of conference, and we expect it to be delivered to the President for his signature. That kind of a vote is what we need to see tonight to send a strong signal. I think that the debate today has shown that there is that kind of support, and I am encouraged that we pass the lockbox.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the gentleman's amendment and would like to commend him for his tireless work in bringing the lockbox amendment before the House.

The concept of this proposal is so simple, so basic, and so common sense, that only in Washington could we have missed it for so many years.

In essence, the term "lockbox" simply means that a dollar saved is a dollar saved—that we choose to cut funding for a program, the money won't be spent.

Most taxpayers—and maybe even most Members of Congress—believe that when Congress agrees to eliminate $5 billion in funding for the space station or $7 billion for the super collider, that it should remain in the Treasury. But, in fact, under current law, those tax dollars go back to the pot and can be reallocated, or spent, later that same year.

A ludicrous concept at any time, the practice is simply unconscionable in this era of $200 billion deficits and ongoing struggles to balance the budget by the year 2002.

When the American people voted last November 8, they sent us a message. The message was one of smaller Government, less costly Federal programs, and overall fiscal responsibility. Our ability to meet these demands hinges upon two factors.

First, we must engage in plain old-fashioned tough decisionmaking. We must determine which programs merit continuing, which can be privatized, and which should be eliminated altogether. My committee, the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight, is serving as our House coordinator of this government-wide downsizing effort and is a strong champion of substantial Federal reform.

But not just reform our business and make the hard choices on departmental restructuring and program eliminations, we recognize the need for a second type of fundamental reform. That is reform of the legislative process itself—reform which compels fiscal responsibility by promoting saving and making spending harder.

The Crapo lockbox amendment offers just such a change. It permits lawmakers to choose saving over spending, and allows us, for the very first time to honestly tell our constituents that a dollar saved is a dollar saved. The amendment is long overdue, and should be supported. I urge my colleagues to vote "aye."

Ms. ESCHOO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Crapo amendment which establishes a deficit reduction lockbox and finally makes our cuts count.

When I was first elected to Congress, one of my first priorities was to reduce and eliminate the deficit. I became a cosponsor of the Deficit Reduction Lockbox Act then and have again cosponsored the bill in the 104th Congress.

Why is this bill necessary? Every time we vote to cut spending in appropriations bills, these funds can be reallocated to other programs rather than being used for deficit reduction.

Mr. Chairman, we must get our House in order before we reorder anything else.

I worked hard to keep my own congressional office budget as low as possible both to save money and set an example of accountability to my constituents.

I was one of the rock-bottom, low spenders in my class, returning the unspent dollars of my office account back to the Federal Treasury for deficit reduction.

It's an outrage that we cannot do the same with our annual appropriations. This amendment will bring some accountability and common sense into our appropriations process, re建立 the confidence of the American people in what we do, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. CRAPO].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House today, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. CRAPO] will be postponed.

Are there additional amendments to title I, or are there amendments made in order under the rule?

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SAXTON].

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, the Labor, HHS, Education Committee report contains language that highlights the need for a Comprehensive Scientific Research Program addressing characteristics of extra-societal groups. Many Americans are concerned and puzzled by the conduct of individuals involved in events such as the bombing of the Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City, the Sarin attack in the Tokyo subway and the extreme violence associated with certain organizations.

The National Institute of Mental Health concludes that these groups recruit individuals and influence their behavior sufficiently to move them toward terrorism, violence and other criminal behavior; the manner in which such groups recruit individuals and influence their behavior sufficiently to move them toward terrorism, violence, and other criminality; the causes behind members leaving such groups; and mental health effects of membership in certain organizations.

I ask the subcommittee chairman if he would support the additional language in the report. This program of research is vital to effective and strategic planning of dealings with terrorism, violence and other criminal activity associated with certain organizations.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman of Ohio [Mr. SAWYER].

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Chairman, I have sought this time to enter into a brief colloquy with the distinguished subcommittee chairman, Mr. PORTER, concerning title III of H.R. 2127.

Mr. Chairman, last year, after many months of bipartisan discussions and negotiations, Congress authorized the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, including the title I program for educational disadvantaged children.

One fundamental element in determining how to allocate title I dollars was the accuracy of the data itself. Because reliable poverty numbers for areas below the national level were only available every 10 years from the census, title I funds were being distributed on the basis of data that was as much as 13 years out of date.

Therefore, Congress decided that these critical program dollars should be allocated using poverty estimates that were updated every 2 years. Equally important, the funds would be allocated based on school district-level numbers, to ensure maximum targeting of shrinking dollars to those students most in need.

I am concerned that producing poverty data for small geographic areas between censuses was a complex scientific task. That is why, as part of the reauthorization bill, it directed the National Academy of Sciences to conduct a 4-year review of the Census Bureau's effort to produce revised poverty numbers for States, counties, cities, and eventually school districts.

The Academy study would have two important purposes. First, it would provide an objective, scientific review of the Census Bureau's methodology and be able to recommend alternative approaches as the project moved forward.
Second, it would help the Congress determine the reliability of the updated poverty numbers at various geographic levels, and for various purposes. Without the Academy’s review, I am not at all sure that Congress will have any assurance in the numbers that the Census Bureau publishes.

Unfortunately, the Department of Education has not yet been able to fund the National Academy’s study, due to a substantial rescission in the Department’s evaluation funds.

Mr. PORTER. I am enormously pleased and grateful that the committee has included specific funding in this appropriations measure for the Department to obtain updated, school district-level poverty data from the Census Bureau. Those funds should allow the Bureau to proceed with its program as planned.

But I am afraid that failure to proceed with the National Academy study at the same time may render the Bureau’s work irrelevant in the end if Congress does not have confidence in the accuracy and soundness of the resulting numbers for purposes of the title I program.

Therefore, I would ask if you agree that the Department of Education should be able to use a portion of the $3.5 million set aside in this bill for updated, small area poverty data, for the National Academy study that Congress directed under the Improving America’s Schools Act.

Mr. PORTER. I thank the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SAVER] for bringing this important matter to the committee’s attention.

As a member of the committee on Economic and Educational Opportunities, Mr. SAVER was instrumental in bringing the problem of outdated poverty numbers to the attention of this body and in developing the solution that we are funding in this appropriations measure.

I agree with the gentleman from Ohio that the National Academy study is an important part of the effort to ensure that we have accurate and timely poverty data on which to base the allocation of Title I funds.

Therefore, I support the gentleman’s point that a portion of the $3.5 million, as the Department deems appropriate, could be used to fund the National Academy study of the Census Bureau’s poverty data program.

Mr. SAVER. I thank the gentleman from Illinois for his assistance in this very important effort.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. MORAN].

Mr. MORAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise to inquire about the coordination of disease prevention and health promotion activities at the Federal level. H.R. 2127 eliminates explicit funding for the activities carried out by the Office of Disease Prevention and Health Promotion, including the aggressive implementation of the national prevention strategy, Healthy People 2000. Although the activities of this office are to be continued at the Secretary’s discretion, no moneys were transferred to carry out this mandate.

I would like to clarify with the chairman his intent on maintaining disease prevention and health promotion as an integral part of national health policy and ensuring coordination of the array of Federal efforts in this domain.

I understand the budget constraints that you faced in putting together this legislation and appreciate the considerable flexibility that this bill gives the Secretary of Health and Human Services. I also appreciate the increased funding for specific, categorical prevention programs supported by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, such as for breast and cervical cancer screening. However, I am concerned that we are abdicating a strong Federal leadership role in orchestrating and coordinating prevention policy.

Would the chairman agree that a strong emphasis on disease prevention and health promotion must be part of our National Strategy?

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I very definitely do agree.

Mr. MORAN. Would the chairman further agree that it is the Office of the Secretary is best suited to coordinate all prevention activities in the various health-related agencies?

Mr. PORTER. Yes, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. MORAN. And so you would clarify your intent to ensure that funds are available for orchestrating disease prevention policy at the Federal level.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. GREENWOOD
Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Page 23, line 8, insert before the period the following: “: Provided further, That of the funds made available under this heading, $193,349,000 shall be for the program under title X of the Public Health Service Act to provide for voluntary family planning projects: Provided further, That amounts provided to said projects under such title shall not be expended for abortions, that all pregnancy counseling shall be nondirective, and that such amounts shall shall be expended for any activity (including the publication or distribution of literature) that in any way tends to promote public support or opposition to any legislative proposal or candidate for public office.”

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD] will be recognized for 15 minutes, and a Member opposed will be recognized for 15 minutes. Does any Member rise in opposition?

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON] will be recognized for 15 minutes in opposition.

Amendment offered by Mr. LIVINGSTON as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. GREENWOOD.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, amendment No. 2, as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. GREENWOOD.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment offered as a substitute for the amendment.

The text of the amendment offered as a substitute for the amendment is as follows:

Part 2, amendment No. 2-2 offered by Mr. LIVINGSTON as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. GREENWOOD:

Amendment offered as a substitute for the amendment

Mr. CHAIRMAN. The amendment offered as a substitute for the amendment by the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON] is also a 30-minute amendment, with 15 minutes being controlled by the gentleman from Louisiana and 15 minutes by a Member in opposition.

Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD], take the time in opposition?

Mr. GREENWOOD. I do, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. LIVINGSTON] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the time will be fungible. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD].

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, 25 years ago legislation sponsored by then-Congressman George Bush, signed into law by then-President Richard Nixon, established an American family planning program. It has been one of the most successful programs in the history of our Nation, and its success is for simple reasons. Family planning prevents unplanned pregnancies. And when you prevent unplanned pregnancies, you prevent abortions, and we all know, and every American supports that goal.

Preventing unplanned pregnancies prevents welfare dependency. It allows poor working women who have no health insurance to have access to contraception, to birth control, to the kind of counseling and health services they need, so that they can plan their families and stay off of the welfare rolls.

And the reason, Mr. Chairman, this program has not been controversial. It is supported by 70 percent of Americans for good reason. But lately it has become controversial. The Committee on House
Mr. Chairman, my amendment is straightforward. My amendment restores the title X family planning program. In short, the simple language of the amendment makes clear that all counseling must be noncoercive. Counselors in these programs may not suggest that a client choose abortion, but would simply lay out the legal options under the State laws that are applied. My amendment makes clear that not a penny of these funds can be used to advocate either in favor or against pending legislation at any level, nor for or against any candidate for public office.

This is strictly a birth control, family planning debate.

Now we have an agreement that we have reached that makes the Livingston-Smith amendment to my amendment in order as a substitute. We have agreed to do the purposes of a fair debate. But let me tell my colleagues what the Livingston-Smith amendment does.

The Livingston-Smith amendment kills title X family planning. It is just that simple. The program is gone, and at least in 781 counties across the United States there would be no family planning services at all, at all.

What we have to do is we have to defeat the Livingston-Smith amendment and then vote in favor of the Greenwood amendment.

The opponents will say all they choose to do is block-grant these funds into existing programs. They are wrong; that is not what their amendment does because those programs are already written into law in ways that prohibit these funds from being available for family planning. For the most part perhaps 30 percent of the funds might be available, and in many States not a dime will be available to help women with their family planning needs.

The opponents will say that this is about abortion. It is not about abortion. This debate is not about abortion. This debate is about family planning. Ninety-eight percent of the recipients of these funds perform zero abortions, zero abortions, and of the small 2 percent that do provide abortions, half of those happen to be hospitals where abortions are performed.

I say to my colleagues if they support family planning, a 25-year-old, successful, noncontroversial, mainstream program, then I ask them tonight to stand up, vote against the Smith amendment, the Livingston-Smith amendment, and vote for the Greenwood amendment.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 6 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD] for his participation in what will be a meaningful debate, however I might say that while the Livingston-Smith amendment kills title X, it certainly does not kill family planning.

The fact is that the Livingston-Smith amendment transfers the entire $193.3 million for title X, which the Greenwood amendment would hope to restore, the same amount allocated in fiscal year 1995, and it maintains that amount and places the entire $193.3 million into the maternal and child health care block grant and the community migrant health centers program, divided between them. About 60 percent of title X funding or $116.3 million would be transferred to the maternal and child health block grant, and the remaining 40 percent or $77 million will be transferred to the community and migrant health centers program.

Mr. Chairman, the most important thing is that this amendment does not, does not, eliminate or cut one single dollar in funding for family planning programs. What it does do is transfer the funding from a separate categorical family planning program, centralized in the Office of Women's Health, into two other comprehensive health care programs for low-income women and children. Both of these programs already provide family planning services, so this amendment does not eliminate family planning, does not eliminate family planning, and even if I were to eliminate the funding as opposed to transferring it to other programs, family planning funds already provided by the Federal Government would still be considerable.

Family planning funds and services are already provided under Medicaid, under the maternal and child health block grant program today, and the social services block grant and the community and migrant health centers program. In fact, the total conservative estimate that the Federal Government will spend on domestic family planning services in fiscal year 1995 is over $750 million, three-quarters of a billion dollars, and that is if we eliminate this funding, which we do not do. We transfer every single dollar of it. But, in 1994 alone approximately 2.6 million Medicaid-eligible people receive family planning services totaling over $193 million from this program. This is in addition to the millions of dollars available from State and private resources.

Under the Livingston-Smith amendment the same private and public nonprofit institutions, the same ones that currently receive title X family planning funds, can apply for funds for family planning under the maternal and child health block grant and the Community and Migrant Health Centers program. Under the maternal and child health care block grant program the decision as to what entities will receive funds will be left strictly to the State and local authorities. Now that is what opponents may not like, but it localizes the decisionmaking.

Under the community and migrant health centers categorical program the decision will be left to over 150 community and migrant health centers in every State and territory who are already under present law to provide family planning services or, under present law, can contract out to other public and private organizations for family planning services. These community and migrant health centers already do contract out for other services.

According to HHS' own budget justifications, over 115 centers have contracting procedures with outside groups and have contracted out for other managed health care services. The maternal and child health care block grant program serves currently 13 million low-income women and children, age 19 and under, and infants. The Federal law leaves the discretion to States and localities as to what services to spend. Forty percent of those funds can be used for any type of services including family planning. The Library of Congress has documented that States can and do use their funds for family planning. But the Federal law guarantees the States provide services to, quote, assure mothers and children, and particularly those low-income mothers and children, access to quality maternal and child health services, unquote, and they determine that the low-income mothers and children are those with family incomes below 100 percent of the Federal poverty guidelines.

The HHS officials have cited the maternal and child health block grant as a model of the Federal-State partnership in that it provides the maximum flexibility to the States to achieve what they determine is best for their citizens. Under the community and migrant health centers program, comprehensive health care services, including family planning, are already provided to over 7 million low-income and medically underserved people. These centers are all community based, and 61 percent of the people receiving services under this program are of minority ethnicity. Sixty-six percent of the users of community and migrant health centers are below the poverty level.

I say to my colleagues, if you believe that we should continue to streamline programs, downsize and operate more comprehensive, efficient health care programs for our patients to get the dollars to those who need it most and take it away from the Beltway bandits, then I urge you to support the Livingston-Smith amendment.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. LOWEY].

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Greenwood-Lowey amendment to restore funds to our Nation's family planning programs.
The amendment would restore $338 million to the bill for the network of family planning services provided through the title X program.

Those who oppose this amendment and support the Livingston-Smith amendment, however, assert that if they are committed to family planning, they are just putting the money somewhere else. They contend that family planning services will continue as before. Well, my colleagues, this is simply untrue. Here are the facts:

By law the maternal and child health program will be able to spend only the $34 million it would receive under this bill for family planning. That is a cut in family planning services of 72 percent. The rest of the title X funds that go to community health centers may or may not be used for family planning. We simply do not now if community health centers will use these new funds for family planning planning or for other very crucial health services.

Here is one thing we can be sure of. Without a designated source of Federal funds for family planning Congress’ commitment to the prevention of unwanted pregnancies, to the prevention of out-of-wedlock births, is merely empty rhetoric. If we fail to restore title X funds for family planning, we are reneging on our commitment to reduce this epidemic.

My colleagues, let us be clear about why the amendment is in committee. Title X is on the Christian Coalition’s hit list, and I quote. They call it the notorious family planning program. Despite the fact that title X funds are not and may not be used for abortions, the Christian Coalition has chosen to make this a fight over the right to choose. I frankly just do not understand it.

We may disagree in this body about why title X is eliminated in committee. Title X is on the Christian Coalition’s hit list, and I quote. They call it the notorious family planning program. Despite the fact that title X funds are not and may not be used for abortions, the Christian Coalition has chosen to make this a fight over the right to choose. I frankly just do not understand it.

Despite the fact that title X funds are not and may not be used for abortions, the Christian Coalition has chosen to make this a fight over the right to choose. I frankly just do not understand it.

To my colleagues who do not believe that government should be in the business of family planning, failure to restore title X funds today would affect more than just family planning services. Title X clinics provide over 4 million American women with their primary health care. If we fail to restore title X family planning funds today, the health of millions of American women will be jeopardized. Eliminating title X would cut out pap smears and exams for cervical and breast cancer. It would cut prenatal and postnatal care.

Earlier this year the House passed a welfare reform bill which stated that reduction of out-of-wedlock births was an important Government interest. How can this body claim it wants to decrease out-of-wedlock births while at the same time eliminating the cornerstone of a family’s family planning efforts? Family planning services prevent abortions, prevent teenage pregnancies, help keep women off welfare. Let us work together, my colleagues, to maintain our Nation’s commitment to family planning.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to vote “yes” on the Greenwood-Lowey amendment and “no” on the Livingston-Smith amendment. I urge my colleagues to save the Nation’s family planning program.

Mr. LIVINGTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. DELAY], the majority whip.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, the title 10 funding program was created in the 1970’s with the expressed mission to decrease teen pregnancy.

Mr. Chairman, that mission has failed. I repeat, title X has been an abject failure.

Unfortunately, more money does not solve our country’s social ills. The increase in funding for title 10 over the past 25 years has actually paralleled a dramatic increase in teen pregnancy. Between 1970 and 1992, the teen pregnancy rate has increased 23 percent. In addition, when title 10 began, 3 in 10 teen births were out of wedlock. Today, 7 out of 10 teen births occur outside of marriage.

The increase in funding not only correlates with an increase in teen pregnancy, but also in teen abortions, the transmission of sexually transmitted disease and the HIV virus.

In addition, title 10 gives a $33 million subsidy to Planned Parenthood, the Nation’s largest abortion provider, which also provides contraceptive services and abortion counseling without parental consent or knowledge.

I have to say, as a father, the idea of some other adult counseling my daughter to have an abortion, without my knowledge or consent, makes me sick to my stomach.

Mr. Chairman, title 10 has never been evaluated and has yet to show any success, and in this bill the amendment offered by the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. Livingston] eliminates more than $183 million back to the States, and, if my colleagues do not believe in block grants, I understand it, but they can compete for this money through the block grant system. This is in addition to the $560 million we already spent in 1995 for family planning services through Medicaid and social services block grants.

Vote “no” on Greenwood and “yes” on Livingston.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. MORELLA].

Mrs. MORELLA asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks. Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Greenwood-Lowey amendment to restore funding for the title X family planning program.

To eliminate this Federal program when we are trying to curtail dependence on welfare; when we are trying to reduce the number of abortions and unwanted pregnancies; when we are trying to reduce the number of breast and cervical cancer deaths; when we are trying to reduce the number of sexually transmitted diseases, including HIV; when we are trying to increase access to health care for low-income individuals—flies in the face of common sense.

The elimination of title X as a categorical program could be devastating to the availability of family planning services to women, particularly low-income women. While the funding designated for title X has been divided between the maternal and child health block grant, and the community and migrant health centers, there is no requirement that these additional dollars be used for family planning services. States would be given the option of using the dollars for any purpose allowed under the block grant.

Even more damaging is the fact that the maternal and child health block grant includes a number of set-asides: The result being that the maximum amount of the $116 million transferred to that program that could actually be used for family planning services would be $34 million—that is a cut of $83.6 million. Thus, this provision would not be a simple transfer of money for family planning—it would represent a drastic cut.

The title X program currently serves 4 million women—and some men—through more than 4,000 title X clinics across the country, with preference given to low-income women. In Maryland, 20 of our 23 counties have title X clinics only; there are no community health centers or MCH funded health department clinics currently providing family planning services in those 20 counties. And, 94 percent of the women served at title X clinics in Maryland were served in those same counties.

The clinics provide preventive services, including natural family planning methods and supplies, infertility services, and basic gynecologic care. The clinics also provide screening services for STD’s—some test for HIV—breast and cervical cancer, hypertension and diabetes. Training is also provided for nurse practitioners and other clinic personnel.

The program is clearly prohibited from using any funds for abortion services. Title X clinics do not provide abortion services.

The Greenwood-Lowey amendment specifically includes language clearly stating that no title X funding can be used for abortion. Mr. Speaker, title X prevents abortions. How can we on the one hand talk about the need to prevent unwanted pregnancies, and then vote to eliminate funding devoted to family planning services.

Title X funding for every dollar spent on family planning services saves an estimated $4.40 in medical, welfare, and nutritional services provided by Federal and State governments. If title
X services were not provided, between 1.2 million and 21 million unintended pregnancies would occur each year, rather than the 400,000 occurring today. The Greenwood-Lowery amendment restores funding for this critical program. The Smith amendment would cut $116 million from overhead costs and allow that money to go to direct services. And as this Congress has searched for ways to bring the Federal budget under control, programs that are unauthorized have naturally been subject to par- ticular scrutiny. The title X program hasn’t been authorized in 10 years.

The Livingston-Smith compromise will provide greater power to the States to administer their own family planning programs. As we have seen with many other areas of Government spending, the State governments are closer to the problem and can more ef- fectively channel funds so that the greatest number of persons—in each State—are served in the most efficient and most effective way possible. Who is more capable of delivering services to the people, the States or the Federal Government?

Part of the answer to this question includes a long, hard look at the title X program, its problems and its record of controversy and failure. Most of us agree that the purpose of Federal involvement in family planning efforts is to reduce the number of children born outside of wedlock, particularly to teenagers.

Yet, since 1972, teen pregnancy has skyrocketed from about 50 pregnancies per 1,000 teenage girls to about 100 pregnancies per 1,000 girls in 1990. This is a staggering increase of 100 percent— in a time span of less than two decades.

As with many other social problems, we are slowly making the realization that throwing more money at the problem is not the answer. The problem with title X is not the amount of money, but how it is spent.

The largest single recipient of title X funds is a private organization—the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, Inc. And its no coincidence that Planned Parenthood is the largest abortion provider in the United States today. Planned Parenthood organiza- tions perform or refer for over 215,000 abortions each year. This is an organ- ization that believes in giving out con- traceptives to children, and performing abortions on them, without their par- ents being informed. Planned Parent- hood proudly boasts of lobbying to overturn State laws that require in- formed consent before women undergo abortions, and which require parents to be notified before minors have abort- ions.

The ideology of Planned Parenthood is one that undermines parental au- thority. Unbelievably, title X regula- tions actually prohibit grantees from informing parents about treatment of drugs that are given to teens, if the teenager in question requests that the parents be left in the dark. This bi- zarre requirement in the title X pro- gram has actually prevented some States from receiving title X funds be- cause they have laws on the books which require parents to be informed about medical treatment given to their children. For example, the State of Utah was denied title X funds in the past because of the State’s parental no- tification requirements.

And here’s another coincidence. The Office of Population Affairs, which oversees the title X program, is headed by an abortionist from California who promotes abortion as a title X Par- enthood for over 20 years. This is the Clinton administration’s idea of a fam- ily planning expert.

Mr. Chairman, I hope no one will be fooled by the language on abortion that is contained in the Greenwood amendment. The intent of the amendment is to nullify the Livingston compromise and take the $116 million in new moneys from the Community Health Centers in order to re-fund title X, Planned Parent- hood, and the abortion industry.

The Greenwood amendment sounds like it has restrictions on funding of abortion, but it does not. It merely restates cur- rent law. But this too is already in current legislation. But this too is already in current law. Abortion funding is already prohibited under the Hyde amend- ment, which requires that Federal funds. Abortion funding is already prohibited under the Hyde amend- ment, which requires that Federal funds. Therefore, Planned Parenthood clinics directly provided 134,277 abortions, but only 4,494 were not paid for from title X funds. And they will argue that the Greenwood amendment says that title X funds cannot be used for lobbying or against legislative efforts. But this too is already in current law. And it has never stopped title X recipients from lobbying for abortion on demand and continued title X funding.

Supporters of the Greenwood amendment will say it prohibits title X funds from being used to pay for abortions. But abortion funding is already prohibited under the Hyde amend- ment. And yet, title X funds regularly go to sup- port organizations and clinics which per- form abortions as a method of birth control.

And they will argue that the Greenwood amendment says that title X funds cannot be used for lobbying for or against candidates or legislation. But this too is already in current law. And it has never stopped title X recipients from lobbying for abortion on demand and continued title X funding.

Just this month, a pro-life Member got hold of an “Action Alert” from Planned Parenthood of Central Florida—which receives title X fund- ing—opposing the Livingston compromise. The alert urges PP supporters to write and call the Member and “express your outrage.” It also encourages people to go to town hall meetings and “to clap or boo even if you don’t...
Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

All during the 1960s, never was title X a target. On a bipartisan basis, even though from 1985 on the program was under a gag rule, people of both sides of the aisle supported funding for family planning. There was an issue on the gag rule that was debated furiously, but not for a minute was there a question about funding of title X itself.

Mr. CHURCH. Chairman, now, somehow, the agenda has changed. Suddenly people are jumping up who were supporters of title X and saying how terrible a program it is. I heard a minute ago one of the Members say that he would be very, very concerned that his daughter was going to be counseled to have an abortion.

No one has ever been counseled to have an abortion by a title X clinic. It is against the law to do that. Never has a dollar been spent on abortion by a title X clinic. It is illegal to have the law to do that. GAO has repeatedly, over and over again, certified that no money is spent for abortion by title X clinics, yet here we are with some kind of new agenda.

Mr. Chairman, this is a program that helps poor women avoid unwanted pregnancies through contraception. Through contraception. Abortion is not a legitimate family planning method. Nobody thinks that, but, good God, here we are trying to make no mistake, this is an attempt to destroy title X family planning, a program that has served poor women for all of these years, sponsored originally in this House by George Bush, I might say, when he was a Member of Congress. The agenda has completely changed and it is a bad, bad agenda.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PORTER. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey. (Mrs. ROUKEMA asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Chairman, I want to associate myself with the gentleman's remarks. This is not about abortions, this is about education and stopping unwanted pregnancies.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the amendment offered by my friend from Pennsylvania, Mr. GREENWOOD, and would like to thank him for his hard work on this issue of family planning which is so very important to the health of women and their families throughout the country.

Mr. Chairman, let us get one thing straight about the Greenwood amendment; it provides funding for family planning services, and not abortions, as critics of this program argue. To make this a debate on abortion is to, once again, distort the truth—a misfortune that now seems to permeate every abortion debate. By attempting to link family planning funds to providing abortions, it would appear to me that once again, distort the truth—a misfortune that now seems to permeate every abortion debate. By attempting to link family planning funds to providing abortions, it would appear to me that once again, distort the truth—a misfortune that now seems to permeate every abortion debate.

Mr. Chairman, the abolishing of title X means more misery, more abused children, more abortions, and more American women locked in poverty.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, how much time remains on both sides?

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chairman, from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON] has 19 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD] has 19 minutes remaining.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I am delighted to yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVI\u0105CH].

Mrs. VUCANOVI\u0105CH. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by Congressman GREENWOOD, which would decrease the appropriation for the maternal and child health block grant by $163 million and decrease the consolidated health centers block grant by $77 million in order to fund the unauthorized Livingston-Smith amendment and wish to speak on its behalf.

Since 1970 this program has never had an official impartial evaluation of its effectiveness, while its funding has continued to increase. We do not know that the teenage pregnancy rate has doubled, out of wedlock births have increased, the teenage abortion rate has more than doubled, and sexually transmitted diseases among teenagers have increased. It is true that one in four sexually active teenagers will be infected by a sexually transmitted disease every year.

In addition, Mr. Chairman, while title X prohibits the use of these funds for abortion, many of the clinics perform abortions as well as provide family planning services. This arrangement implies that abortion is just another family planning method. No one supports abortion as a method of family planning.

This program is a disaster. The Livingston-Smith amendment would terminate funding for title X and transfer all of the money to the maternal and child health block grant in community and migrant health centers programs.

Services such as preventive and family planning health care for women would be better funded under a block grant. Preventive health care is also provided to pregnant women, infants, children, and adolescents. Health care and support are also provided to families in rural and underserved areas and to children with chronic health conditions.

Mr. Chairman, it would be irresponsible of us to again fund an ineffective program that has not even been authorized since 1965. We have an obligation to the American people to fund programs that work and provide real family planning assistance. I urge my colleagues to vote yes on the Livingston-Smith amendment.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER], the chairman of the subcommittee.
Public Health Service Act, title X funds cannot be used in programs that perform abortions. What the Greenwood amendment would do is to help reduce the number of unintended pregnancies. Under title X, grantees such as State and local health departments, hospitals, family planning clinics, and organizations such as Planned Parenthood, are attempting to control in the welfare bill we have already seen this year. Mr. Chairman, I ask the Members to support the Smith amendment.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield one minute to the gentleman from California [Mr. MINETA]. (Mr. MINETA asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MINETA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in very strong support of the Greenwood-Lowey amendment to restore title X funds to provide for voluntary family planning projects. Title X funds support clinics that provide 5 million low-income women with access to affordable, basic health care services, including access to all major methods of family planning. In my State of California, the working poor are caught without health insurance. Consequently, one out of five women of reproductive age are uninsured. For any of these women, title X services are essential to allow them to make informed personal decisions regarding their own health and well-being.

Furthermore, family planning is essential to preventing unintended pregnancies. The title X program is estimated to avert 12 unintended pregnancies every year. No title X funds are spent on abortions. Rather than supporting abortions, title X family planning prevents abortion.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Greenwood amendment and urge my colleagues to vote for it.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. STEARNS]. (Mr. STEARNS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Chairman, I would say to my colleague from Illinois that the reason we have not really looked at this program is we did not have the majority here to do anything. The funding for this program just increased exponentially under the Democrats, and the only reason we have not taken the time to look at this program carefully is because we never had the votes.

Now let us talk about what the real problem is. This all comes down to a debate on, and I think it basically could be thought of this way, do you want young women to be counseled for abortions without parental consent, without informed consent? Do you want your Federal Government to pay for that? Do you want this same agency that is getting your taxpayer dollars to go out and lobby, lobby through the Supreme Court, using your tax dollars, to fight for more abortions? That is what all comes down to.

Obviously, Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Greenwood amendment to appropriate $193 million for title X.

The Federal family planning program, title X, was enacted in 1970. Before 1970, people will say, what happened? As the whip has said, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DELAY] has mentioned that since title X, we have had no studies to show that it has worked, that it has done any of the things they have talked about. At this point it has ballooned into such a program that well-to-do families are using it.

Mr. Chairman, I ask the Members to support the Smith amendment.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, let me say to the gentlewoman that someone said that Planned Parenthood is going to do this, and I quote: I would say that means 790,000 unintended pregnancies to unmarried women.

going to say is states are going to be able to take the funds and decide not to spend them for family planning if they opt to do that.

That is wrong. The recipients of this planning, family planning in title X, are not paying for American Women. We have heard all sorts of outrage charges on this floor that title X has caused teen pregnancy. Please, no. Title X funds are given under state funds and they are not given without family permission and whatever the state law says.

Mr. Chairman, let us be sensible. Let us vote for the Greenwood-Lowey amendment.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California [Mrs. SEASTRAND].

Mrs. SEASTRAND. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Greenwood amendment and in support of the Smith amendment on title X.

Mr. Chairman, I want to say right off the bat that elimination of title X as a government program does not mean the elimination of family planning services for the poor. What title X supporters fail to tell the American people is that its funding level is maintained in this bill. $233 million in family planning assistance—the same level as fiscal year 1995—remains available through block grants. All current recipients of title X funding will still be able to apply for funds from their States.

What we are doing in this bill is recognizing the inefficiencies of title X as a federal program. Title X was established in 1970 as a way to reduce unintended pregnancies by providing services to low-income, poor women. In fact the program was originally designed to help poor couples—not individuals—plan their families.

Over its 25 years title X has mushroomed in cost of government inefficiency and been a contributing factor to the steady increases in areas where we were supposed to see dramatic reductions: single-parent families; illegitimacy; sexually transmitted diseases; and despite the assertions of its supporters, abortions. The program is another example of where the hand of Federal Government—well intended as it may have been—has compounded a problem.

Block granting these funds allow us to do away with a costly and inefficient government bureaucracy that has failed to direct services exclusively to those in need. We are giving States the flexibility they need to ensure that services are going directly to those who need them.

This Smith amendment is perfectly consistent with Republican efforts in this Congress to move power and money away from Washington, DC and into the hands of States and communities where it belongs.

I urge my colleagues to support the Smith amendment.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. MALONEY].

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Greenwood-Lowey amendment. Many referred to 1992 as the year of the woman. Today, Mr. Chairman, we face a Congress far more hostile to women's rights and health than any I remember. It is hard to imagine why anyone would want to cut the Nation's principal family planning program, one that through preventive medicine saves $95 for every dollar spent. If family planning is cut, 4 million women, most of whom are young and low-income, will lose their only health care. How can anyone oppose such an essential program? Whose better interests are being served? Certainly not those of American women. Once again, the radical right's agenda is put ahead of a good government. Protect American women. Vote to keep funding for title X. Save the Nation's family planning program.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. WELDON].

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Chairman, prior to coming to this body, I was a practicing physician. So I used to see a lot of this stuff on a daily basis. I have to say this program was initiated with the intent of helping to deal with the terrible problem of unwanted pregnancies. The unwanted pregnancy rate has skyrocketed. The abortion rate has skyrocketed. Teenage pregnancy has skyrocketed. This is a dismal failure.

I saw an amazing statistic yesterday: The U.S. people get more upset about wasteful government spending than they get upset about violent criminals being let out of jail prematurely. That is the bump in the road more upset than anything else. Here we are today arguing about whether or not we should continue to fund a program that has been a dismal failure.

The abortion rate is up. The teen pregnancy rate is up. The venereal disease rate is up. That is why this program was initiated, and it has not worked. Now we are asked today to continue its funding. I support the Smith-Livingston amendment. Oppose Greenwood.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GANKSE], a new Member, our physician.

Mr. GANSKE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. GANSKE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Greenwood amendment. Let me make myself perfectly clear. I have been strongly and consistently anti-abortion. I will base my vote on this amendment on my view of the best way to decrease the incidence of abortion.

I do feel there are too many abortions and do not believe abortion is an acceptable method of birth control or should be used to select the sex of a baby. And I firmly believe that abstinence is the best choice for unwed couples.

But I recognize that abstinence is not always practiced, and, in its place, contraception is far preferable to abortion.

Let me give some facts. We can never know how many abortions have been prevented in Iowa and around the country because young couples have had access to family planning services. But I do know that title X funds support 67 clinics in Iowa, provided family planning services to nearly 75,000 women in 1994. In my district alone, two-thirds of the 28,000 women receiving these services were at or below 150 percent of the poverty line. Without the assistance of title X services, they may be unable to obtain the family planning necessary to prevent unwanted pregnancies which may end in abortion. Title X funds provide a support for family planning clinics in my District four in Polk County, one in Pottawattamie County, one in Montgomery County, one in Harrison County, one in Shelby County, one in Audubon County, and one in Dallas County. Only one of the six sites in Polk County performs abortion services, and they do that without any title X funds.

If the Greenwood amendment fails, the funds transferred to the Maternal and Child Health Block Grant will not provide any family planning in Iowa. That is because the State has determined that none of the MCH funds should be used for that purpose.

The loss of title X funds in Iowa would leave a Community Health Center in my district of 1,800 sq miles, to provide family planning to the nearly 13,000 women at or below 150 percent of the poverty line. This clinic had 1,500 visits for family planning last year. The program’s director, Dr. Bery Engebretsen told me today it would be impossible for the clinic to handle the approximately 36,000 visits needed to make up for the closure of the title X sites.

Dr. Engebretsen also said, “without adequate access to birth control, I expect the rate of abortion will increase in the Fourth District.”

The Greenwood amendment recognizes the importance of separating family planning from abortion. It makes clear that none of these funds may be used to perform or counsel on abortion. These safeguards are important to ensure that the title X funds are used for family planning, not the termination of a pregnancy.

Mr. Chairman, I am strongly anti-abortion. And I believe that a vote against the Greenwood amendment would betray my goal of reducing the incidence of abortion in America. We cannot eliminate effective family planning without inviting a dangerous increase in the number of unwanted pregnancies, too many of which end in an abortion.

Mr. Chairman, I know that every one of us, whether we are pro-life or pro-choice, is anti-abortion. Ask yourself this simple question before voting: “Will the elimination of title X funding increase the incidence of abortion in your district?” I think the answer is yes. And that is why I support the Greenwood amendment, I urge all of my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. EMERSON].

(Mr. EMERSON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Greenwood amendment and in support of the Livingston-Smith language.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in opposition to Mr. GREENWOOD’s amendment.

Each year as we review funding for title X, abortion supporters manage to cloud the debate, claiming that women will not receive medical and family planning services. They just give this young person more birth control pills, condoms, and other contraceptives. Thus, even children from wealthy families qualify for private government help in maintaining their sexual conduct. Our tax dollars are used to by-pass Mom, and by-pass Dad, and by-pass the entire family. In their place, a federally-paid worker tells our youth it’s OK, you can sleep around all you want with your boyfriend or girlfriend, regardless of what your family has taught you. The Federal worker won’t focus on the fact that it’s wrong. They don’t give you love and moral guidance. They just give this young person more birth control, and treatment for V-D if they catch something.

Title X in this insidious fashion undercuts America’s families and promotes teenage promiscuity. Is this what we want to do with taxpayers’ money, is subsidizing sex outside of marriage. American history since title X was adopted shows that abortions are up, and out-of-wedlock births are also up dramatically. Why? Because the Federal Government, with taxpayers’ money, is subsidizing sex outside of marriage.

Let’s look just at the teenagers who are subsidized by title X: One-third of those who use title X are juveniles. Minors. Children. Teenagers. Over 1 million young people each year, who the law says are too young to vote, too young to enter a contract, often too young to have their ears pierced without a parent’s permission, can go to a government family planning clinic, without knowledge of parents or family. There they don’t get instruction in the moral and other consequences of sex outside marriage. Instead, they get free birth control pills, condoms, and other contraceptives, and treatment for sexually-transmitted diseases: AIDS, syphilis, gonorrhea, and other forms of venereal diseases. And their parents are never told.

No wonder America’s families find it hard to guide their children, when the government offers subsidies to their children’s end-run around the family on this, the most intimate of family issues. As a father of five, I don’t want government to overrule what your family has taught you. The Federal program services budget for title X is a failure. It is time we admitted that fact.

It is also important for us to stress that title X funds will be transferred under the Livingston amendment to block grants for the States. They will be used by individual States who will be able to set priorities for the use of these funds to benefit their citizens. No longer will these funds be a Washington setaside for Planned Parenthood and like-minded groups.

Planned Parenthood itself received approximately $35 million in 1995, approximately 19 percent of the entire program services budget for title X programs.

All the ills designed to be addressed by the title X program have increased. We have a national epidemic of out-of-wedlock births, teenage pregnancy, sexually transmitted diseases and abortion. It is time to let the States attempt to devise their own solutions.

For all of these reasons, I urge a yeas vote on the Livingston substitute and a no vote on the Greenwood amendment.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Kansas [Mrs. MEYERS].

(Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Greenwood amendment.

I rise in support of Mr. Greenwood’s amendment to restore title X family planning grants to the Department of Health and Human Services. After consulting with Kansas health officials, I am gravely concerned that ending title X and the money into the Maternal and Child Health Block Grant and Migrant and Community Health Care Centers will seriously reduce family planning access for working low-income women across this Nation.

The Maternal and Child Health Block Grant has a four-part mission, none of which has to do with providing basic routine gynecological care or birth control to women. The Maternal and Child Health block grant’s mission is a laudable: (A) to ensure mothers and children access to maternal and child health services; (B) to reduce infant mortality; (C) to rehabilitate blind and disabled children; (D) to promote community-based care for disabled children.

But because of these four specific earmarks there are very few dollars left for family planning. This is not block granting—the Smith amendment simply destroys a successful and tremendously important program which allows women control over their reproductive lives.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FAWELL].

(Mr. FAWELL asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN].

(Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TORKILDSEN].

(Mr. TORKILDSEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TORKILDSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Greenwood amendment and in opposition to the Smith amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I support title X funding and the Greenwood amendment. I commend my colleague from Pennsylvania for his leadership and patience in bringing his amendment to the floor.

This issue is about family planning—not abortion. Title X is the only program that exclusively addresses the health of women in this country. It helps keep women off of welfare, and helps prevent abortions.

A facility in my district, HealthQuarters, is the only source of health care for thousands of women. Seventy percent of these women are well below the Federal poverty level. They have no health insurance—public or private.

The number of middle-aged women using family planning facilities is growing because these women are in desperate need of cancer screening, and they can’t afford to pay a doctor for preventative care. The block grant approach proposed in this bill simply won’t meet these needs because it is impossible to replace the nationwide network of 4,200 family planning facilities already in place. Community health centers simply don’t exist in many parts of this country.

Even more onerous is the fact that these block grants provide no language explicitly directing States to use the funding for family planning services. Transferring funds to the Maternal Child Health Block Grant will mean an over 80-percent cut for family planning. This bill is a black hole for women searching for effective family planning and accessible, affordable care.

Eliminating title 10 is not the message this Congress and this majority should be sending to American women or American men. Family planning is clearly an integral part of healthy, successful families. Moreover, it allows poor women to take responsible control over their lives.

My colleagues, it is here that we must draw the line. It is here that we must rise above the rancorous political debate surrounding abortion, because this is not abortion. Let’s not lose sight of the fact that title 10 is originally Republican legislation. I urge my colleagues to remember the tradition of a young Congress- man from Texas named George Bush, who helped to pass the founding legislation, and the Republican President, Richard Nixon, who signed it into law.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. Chairman, the authors of this appropriations bill should call their legislation the Barefoot and Pregnant Act of 1995. I must say that I call their legislation the Barefoot and Pregnant Act of 1995.

Support the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Greenwood].

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Livingston-Smith amendment. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Greenwood amendment.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Greenwood amendment.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Greenwood amendment.

Mr. TAYLOR of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Livingston-Smith amendment.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Greenwood amendment.

Mr. TAYLOR of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Livingston-Smith amendment.
Mr. Chairman, this Congress has demonstrated a remarkable commitment to put an end to failed or low priority Government programs. Title X is one of these failed programs, which is why I strongly urge my fellow members to vote for the Livingston-Smith amendment.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Utah [Mrs. WALDHOLTZ], one of our most stalwart Members, a pregnant lady with shoes on.

Mrs. WALDHOLTZ. Mr. Chairman, this pregnant Member’s shoes are firmly on. While my shoes are firmly on, I am proud to rise in strong support of the Livingston amendment and oppose the Greenwood amendment.

I was reluctant to come and speak on this issue because I have been careful not to politicize my pregnancy. But I came to share with you a phone call from a mother in my home district of Salt Lake City yesterday who wanted me to tell the story of her 16-year-old daughter who went to Planned Parenthood when she suspected she was pregnant and when the clinic personnel told her she was pregnant, the only option this 16 year old was offered was an abortion. Four times this young girl said to me what I really did. She finally left the clinic with no more help than when she had entered it, to go home and talk to her mother.

Mr. Chairman, I am asking Members to listen to that mother from Salt Lake City and support the Smith amendment.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, this proud father of two fine young men and two beautiful little girls yields 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. WATERS].

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Greenwood-Lowey amendment to support funds to title X.

I rise in support of this amendment because I want Members to understand most of us, all of us, want to prevent pregnancies. We do not like the fact that younger and younger people are bringing babies into the world and we want to do something about it. Some people like to throw these statistics at us day in and day out and say, “Why don’t you stop it?” If we had a magic wand, perhaps we could walk it and stop it.

Mr. Chairman, these young people are sexually active. They are not just kids from one community. All communities. Your children. Children from the Christian Coalition, children all over America. We have to do something about preventing pregnancies.

You cannot wipe out title X. You go too far. This is extreme. I want Members to know, most of their constituents do not support wiping out family planning. If we are ever to get a handle on this, Government must be involved.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLILEY], chairman of the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. BLILEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Greenwood amendment and in support of the Livingston-Smith substitute. Supporters of the Greenwood amendment would like for everyone to believe that by transferring funds from the Family Planning Program to the maternal and child health block and the community health centers we are eliminating family planning services for poor women. Nothing could be further from the truth. Both of these programs, in addition to the Medicaid program provide family planning services to women. But what these programs provide that family planning does not is comprehensive health care services.

I am convinced that transferring these funds will result in better health care for women.

The maternal and child health block is provided to States to improve the health status of mothers and children. States are required to use at least 30 percent for preventive and primary care services for children, 30 percent for services for children with special needs, and 40 percent for other appropriate maternal and child health services.

These services include prenatal care, well-child care, dental care, immunization, family planning, and vision and hearing screening services.

Community health centers are located throughout the country in areas where there are significant barriers to primary health care. In addition to providing primary care, health centers also link with services such as WIC, welfare, Medicare, substance abuse, and other social services.

The health centers program provides comprehensive, perinatal care for women and their infants. The program also has provided perinatal care services to pregnant adolescents who comprise approximately 21 percent of pregnant women served in the program. According to the administration’s own statistics the program in fiscal year 1993 provided perinatal care to 185,530 women; arranged or provided for the delivery of 104,344 babies to women who were service-enrolled, and arranged or provided for prenatal care after being told to go home and talk to her mother.

Ms. DeLAURO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Greenwood amendment and opposition to the Smith substitute. The Greenwood amendment would protect access to safe and affordable health care for all women by restoring vital family planning funding.

Low-income and uninsured working women of all ages depend on the basic health care and family planning services provided by community clinics. These clinics rely on Federal funds. Without community clinics, millions of women would be denied access to potentially life-saving services such as screening for breast cancer, cervical cancer, hypertension, pap smears, and routine clinical exams. For many women, especially young women, community clinics are their only source for basic health care.

This debate is not about choice. Current law clearly states that no Title X funds may be used for abortions. It is about women’s health.

Combat the Republican attack on women’s health; support the Greenwood amendment to help women in need.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished doctor from Oklahoma [Mr. COBURN].

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose the Greenwood amendment. I think what we need to ask ourselves is, has this Party made a lot of claims about what title X has and has not done. There is not a scientific study that will evaluate it. But there is a retrospective study based on economics.

Mr. Chairman, what we do know is since 1970, we have had a rise in teen pregnancies, a rise in abortion. We now have a sexually transmitted disease epidemic that is out of control and unheard of anywhere in the western world. What we also are told is that there has not been a study of effective prevention.

We have one study that we can look at that will tell us what is going on, and it is a study that will be published next month out of the University of California by a Ph.D. economist. It says the following things: That those States which spend less money on family planning have less of those three things. They have less teenage pregnancy, less abortion, and fewer sexually transmitted diseases. It also says that the States with the highest amount of money will have the most abortion, will have the most teenage pregnancy, and the most sexually transmitted disease.

Mr. Chairman, I urge Members' support for the Livingston-Smith amendment.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlewoman will state it.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Chairman, I keep hearing that title X has caused pregnancies.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlewoman is not stating a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. SLAUGHTER].

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the bipartisan amendment to restore funding for title X Family Planning, a program that last year served more than 4 million women in 4,000 clinics.

Let me make clear that title X does not fund abortions; the law will not allow it. What title X does fund, in addition to family planning services, is gynecological exams and Pap smear tests; mammograms, clinical breast exams and education in breast self-exam; screening for high blood pressure; and screening for sexually transmitted diseases, as well as education and counseling on how to avoid and prevent such diseases.

Title X clinics provide critical health and family planning services for millions of women who can't afford private insurance, but don't qualify for Medicaid. These are women working in low-paying service-sector jobs that don't provide health coverage. What does eliminating title X say to these working women? It says, "Too bad if you can't afford a mammogram or pelvic exam. We hope you don't get breast or cervical cancer, but we're not going to do anything to help you detect or prevent it." Can we conceive of a crueler message that this Congress could send to American women.

With an allocation that works out to just 75 cents per person each year, title X is one of the best bargains around. It just 75 cents per person each year, title X is the most cost-effective anti-pregnancy program that last year served more than 4 million women in 4,000 clinics.

In my district I have not one community health center and all that maternal and child health money goes to the five big cities. In Connecticut 30 percent of all women now receiving pap smears, routine health services, and yes, pregnancy prevention services, will no longer have access to them.

Mr. Chairman, I urge opposition to the Smith amendment and support for the Greenwood amendment.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, I want to commend the House, those who agree with me, those who oppose us, for what I think has been a high-toned, important debate for this country. Let me close with this, Mr. Chairman. This is not now, never has been, never will be, a debate about abortion. It is a debate about about family planning. It is a debate about public health. It is a debate about the right of women in this country, poor women, to plan their families, and we should all stand up for that.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the very distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE].

(Mr. HYDE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, I am filling in for the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH], who was supposed to close, but he is tied up somewhere, so here I am.
This debate is not about family planning. This debate is about who will deliver the family planning.

On welfare, on grants to fight crime, the Republicans have taken the position that Washington can do it as well as the localities can, that States ought to be administrative districts of the Federal Government, and so we have sought to return to local government, to local agencies, the funds that heretofore have been disbursed by the all powerful Washington bureaucracy.

Now I tell my colleagues what this debate is about. It is about a $33 million Federal earmark to the largest purveyor of abortions in the world, Planned Parenthood, and they are fighting that as big money, but under our proposal they can still line up with other agencies out in the States and compete for those dollars. After all, Medicare today spends well over one-half billion dollars on family planning.

Who is sounding the death knell of family planning? Community health centers, social services block grants, maternal and child health block grants, and Medicare. They serve 13 million women, and children, and adolescents who need medical care, as well.

Mr. Chairman, let me in the time left simply say family planning is a good thing. I am for family planning, always have been against a big Federal earmark. I am for letting the States handle it as we are doing in welfare reform and in crime grants.

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Chairman, if 1992 was the year of the woman, then 1995 must be the year of the assault on women.

A good example of the continuing offensive against women in this country is the elimination of title X family planning money in this bill.

The United States has provided with broad bipartisan support in 1970. This program provides critical services to low-income women and uninsured working women. In addition to family planning services, title X clinics provide screening for breast and cervical cancer, sexually transmitted diseases, and hypertension. For many women, it provides accessible, high-quality, affordable health care to women who could not otherwise afford to have it. I encourage my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support passage of this pro-life, pro-health amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlemen from California [Mr. GREENWOOD] as a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD].

The question was taken; and the Chair announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House of today, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON] as a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD] will be postponed.

Mr. FAZIO of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GREENWOOD]. This amendment would restore separate, discrete funding for the Federal family planning—or “Title X”—program.

What many of Title X’s opponents fail—or refuse—to recognize is that the scope of this program goes far beyond family planning. The Title X program also provides other preventive health care services to approximately 4 million low-income women and teenagers at 4,000 clinics across America. It provides infertility services, as well as counseling, screening, and referral for basic gynecologic care, breast and cervical cancer, hypertension, diabetes, anemia, kidney dysfunction, sexually transmitted diseases, and HIV. Without Title X, millions of American women would have no other accessible, affordable source for quality, comprehensive health care services. It is the only source of health care for 83 percent of its clients and for many of them it is the single entry point into the health care system.

California has received Title X funds since the Public Health Services Act was passed in 1970. Last year, more than 350,000 low-income women received health care services at California’s Title X clinics. Yet, because of inadequate funding, the program serves fewer than half of those currently eligible for service. Although funding for Title X has declined by over 70 percent since 1980, health care costs have soared, and the number of women of reproductive age who are in need of these services has increased.

Title X services prevent 1.2 million pregnancies in the United States each year. When we support contraceptive services—both care and supplies—we thwart unwanted pregnancies and, ultimately, the need for abortion. By reducing unintended births, we also decrease welfare dependency. Each public dollar spent to provide family planning services saves more than four dollars that would otherwise be spent on medical care, welfare benefits and other social services.

Mr. GREENWOOD’s amendment restores accessible, high-quality, affordable health care to women who could not otherwise afford to have it. I encourage my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support passage of this pro-life, pro-health amendment.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee rise; and the motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Committee pro tempore (Mr. EMERSON) having assumed the chair, Mr. WALKER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that the Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2127) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1996, and for other purposes, had come to no resolution thereon.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill, H.R. 2127, and that I may include tabular and extraneous material.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

EXTENDING AUTHORITY UNDER THE MIDDLE EAST PEACE FACILITATION ACT

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on International Relations be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 2136) to extend authorities under the Middle East Peace Facilitation Act of 1994 until October 1, 1995, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do not intend to object. I do want to continue the concerns I have about our approach to this legislation.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Mr. Speaker, the existing law of the Middle East Peace Facilitation Act now expires August 15 of this year. On June 29 we took up a bill extending the law for 45 days. Now we are back doing the same thing again, extending the law until October 1, 1995.

Mr. Speaker, I would much prefer that the House be taking at least a 6-month extension at this time, and I regret that we are not. At this time especially, I think we should be sending a signal of very strong support to the parties in the Middle East peace process. This short-term extension I think has the opposite effect. It creates an unstable environment and makes a hard job for the Israelis and the Palestinians involved in the peace process even more difficult.

Mr. Speaker, having expressed that concern, since this bill is the only option before us right now.

My concerns have only increased about using this kind of approach on a bill critical to the Middle East peace process. If the act is allowed to expire, all funds for direct and multilateral assistance to the Palestinian authority will be cut off. The Pakistanis will not be able to maintain an office in the United States. Engaging in diplomatic activities relating to the peace process here in Washington would be impossible.

In short, allowing this law to expire could seriously jeopardize a fragile, but steadily progressing, Middle East peace process. As I understand it, our reasons for extending this act for only 45 days at a time are related neither to Palestinian nor to Israeli. Instead, this act is being used in the other body as some kind of bargaining chip in negotiations on unrelated bills. I think this is a serious and potentially dangerous mistake.

On June 29 (H.R. 2127) Chairman Gilman expressed my hope that the next time we extended this law, we would do so for a longer period of time. Chairman Gilman said we were taking only a short term extension because we would conference a more substantive Middle East Peace Facilitation Act prior to the summer recess. We have not. In fact, we have not yet even considered such a bill in committee. Difficult negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians continue and an interim agreement is possible soon. Terrorism also continues to raise its ugly head. The Palestinian authority is moving to control violence but there is always room for more effort.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. EMERSON). Is there objection to the reauthorization of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I will not object, but we are now extending it a second time for another 45 days, and I guess my feeling is a little bit different than my colleague from Indiana. I believe that we cannot indefinitely have these extensions without holding Mr. Arafat’s feet to the fire. I have submitted a bill along with the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. DELAY) which clearly lays out reasons and the threshold for Mr. Arafat and the PLO to comply with before there can be a continuation of funding for the PLO.

I would like to ask the Chairman if he can give me assurances that our bill will be marked up at committee, because I think there are many, many different feelings and opinions on the committee, and I think we should have the opportunity. I just want to say, I think it is especially critical because it seems pretty obvious to me that in the Senate, the State Department authorization bill is dead. So I think it is even more critical that we in the House come together and mark up my bill so that we can have a resolution of this issue, and I would like to just ask the Chairman if he would agree to mark up the bill.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ENGEL. Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, we certainly will take the gentleman’s thoughts into consideration and we will be reviewing the request as we return to committee following the recess. Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, I would like to just reiterate that I think it is critical that we do have a markup of the bill, that we hold hearings and mark up the bill, with the chairman’s assurances that he will take a look at this, and I hope with the assurances that we will mark up the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:
H. R. 2161

Be it enacted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

SECTION 1. EXTENSION OF AUTHORITIES.

(a) IN GENERAL. Ð Section 583(a) of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1994 and 1995 (Public Law 103-236), as amended by Public Law 104-17, is amended by striking "August 15, 1995," and inserting "October 1, 1995."

(b) CONSULTATION. Ð For purposes of any exercise of the authority provided in section 583(a) of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1994 and 1995 (Public Law 103-236) prior to August 16, 1995, the written policy justification dated June 1, 1995, and submitted to the Congress in accordance with section 583(b)(1) of such Act, and the consultations associated with such policy justification, shall be read to satisfy the requirements of section 583(b)(1) of such Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Gilman] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. Gilman. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2161 temporarily extends the Middle East Peace Facilitation Act of 1994, which otherwise will expire on August 15, 1995.

The motion to extend the authority under the five-minute rule is extended by Public Law 104-17, which we passed in June. H.R. 2161 extends the Act until October 1, 1995, and further provides that the consultations with the Congress that took place in June prior to the President's last exercise of the authority provided by the Act will suffice for purposes of a further exercise of that authority prior to August 16.

In consultation with our Senate colleagues, we have decided to extend the Middle East Peace Facilitation Act only through October 1 because we hope to complete action by that date on legislation that will include a longer term extension of the authorities of the act, along with strengthened requirements for compliance with commitments that were voluntarily assumed.

I urge my colleagues to agree to the adoption of H.R. 2161.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Gilman] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. Gilman. Mr. Speaker, I wish to inquire of the distinguished majority leader the schedule for the rest of the evening.

Mr. Army. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. Gephardt. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. Army. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, we are about to begin debate on the rule for the Telco bill.

There will be a vote on the rule in about an hour. After that vote, which should be the last vote of the evening, we will do the general debate on Telco for about 90 minutes. We will then consider a Billey amendment for 30 minutes, and a late Start amendment for 10 minutes, and a Cox amendment for 20 minutes, and all those votes will be rolled until tomorrow morning. So all Members should be alert for a vote in about an hour, and those Members who are interested in being involved in the general debate on Telco whose amendments mentioned should be prepared to continue working on the floor until we complete that work.

Mr. Gephardt. Mr. Speaker, what bill will be up in the morning at what time?

Mr. Army. In the morning when we reconvene, we will reconvene on Labor-HHS, and hope to finish that bill tomorrow.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 1555, COMMUNICATIONS ACT OF 1995

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 207 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. Res. 207

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and the Committee on the Judiciary. That amendment in the nature of a substitute. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. Points of order against consideration of the bill for failure to comply with section 302(f) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 are waived. General debate shall be limited to three hours and shall not extend ninety minutes equally divided among and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority members of the Committee on Commerce and the Committee on the Judiciary. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purpose of further amendment under the five-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Commerce and the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. Beilenson], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

SEC. 2. After passage of H.R. 1555, it shall be in order to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 652 and to consider the Senate bill in the House. All points of order against the Senate bill and against its consideration are hereby waived. It shall be in order to strike all after the enacting clause of the Senate bill and to insert in lieu thereof the provisions of H.R. 1555 as passed by the House. All points of order against amendment of the Senate bill are hereby waived. If the motion is adopted and the Senate bill, as amended, is passed, then it shall be in order to move that the House insist on its amendments to S. 652, and a conference with the Senate thereon. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Linder] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. Linder. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. Beilenson], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Gephardt. Mr. Speaker, in order to provide a modified closed rule providing for the consideration of H.R. 1555, the Communications Act of 1995, and allowing 90 minutes of general debate to be equally divided between the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Commerce and Judiciary Committees, the rule waives section 302(f) of the Budget Act against consideration of the bill. The rule also makes in order as an original bill for the the purpose of amendment, the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Commerce and provides that the amendment be considered as read. House Resolution 207 also waives clause 9(a) of rule XXII—preventing appropriate amendment to an authorization bill—and section 302(f) of the Budget Act—against the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute.

House Resolution 207 provides first for the consideration of the amendment in part 1 of the Rules Committee report. This amendment, which will be offered by Commerce Committee Chairman BILEY, is deatable for 30 minutes, equally divided between a proponent and an opponent, and provides that the amendment be considered as read. The manager’s amendment shall not be subject to amendment or to a demand for a division of the question in the House or the Committee of the whole.

After general debate, the consideration of the manager’s amendment, the provisions of the bill, as amended, shall be considered as the original bill for the purpose of further amendment under the 5-minute rule. House Resolution 207 makes in order only the amendments printed in part 2 of the Rules Committee report in the order specified, by the Members designated in the report, debatable for the time specified in the report to be equally divided between a proponent and an opponent of the amendment.

The rule waives all points of order against amendments printed in the report, and provides that these amendments shall not be subject to division of the question in the House or Committee of the Whole nor subject to amendment unless otherwise specified in the report.

This rule allows the chair to postpone votes in the Committee of the Whole and the Senate. Under this rule, any point of order against those votes follow a 15-minute vote. Finally, this resolution provides one motion to recommit, with or without instructions, as in the right of the minority.

Following final passage of H.R. 1555, the rule provides for the immediate consideration of S. 652 and waives all points of order against the bill. The rule allows for a motion to strike all after the enacting clause of S. 652 and insert H.R. 1555 as passed by the House and without points of order against that motion. Finally, it is in order for the House to insist on its amendments to S. 652 and request a conference with the Senate.

I would also ask for unanimous consent to add any extraneous materials for inclusion in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1555 is a complex piece of legislation, and the final product that passes the House has been signed by the United States maintains the lead on the information superhighway as we move into the 21st century. The House has worked to create a balanced bill which equalizes the diverse competitive forces in the telecommunications industry. The complex and balance of this legislation requires a structured rule, because it is conceivable that a simply constructed amendment would attract enough votes on the face of it, to upset the balance of the bill.

Let me take this opportunity to commend the diligent work of Chairman BILEY, Chairman FIELDS, and Chairwoman HYDE, and also recognize ranking minority members JON DINGELL and JOHN CONYERS, for their service in guiding this fair balanced legislation to the House floor.

The overriding goal of telecommunication reform legislation must be to encourage the competition that will produce innovative technologies for every American household and provide benefits to the American consumer in the form of lower prices and enhanced services. The House Telecommunications Committee report points out that in the market for local telephone service by requiring local telephone companies to offer competitors access to parts of their networks, drive competition in the multichannel video market, empower telephone companies to provide video programming, and maintain and encourage the competitiveness of over the air broadcast stations. The American people will be amazed by the wide array of technological innovations that will soon be available in their homes.

The massive barriers to competition and the restrictions that were necessary less than a decade ago to protect segments of the U.S. economy have served their purpose. We have achieved great advances and lead the world in telecommunications services. However, productive societies strengthen and nourish the spirit of innovation and competition, and I believe that H.R. 1555 will provide customers with more choices in new products and result in tremendous benefits to all consumers.

In order to achieve further balance and deregulation in H.R. 1555, the rule will allow the House an opportunity to debate a manager’s amendment to be offered by Commerce Committee Chairman BILEY. This amendment represents a compromise that will accelerate the transition to a fully competitive telecommunications marketplace. This 30-minute amendment is not a part of the base text, it will be debated thoroughly, and it will be judged by a vote on the floor of the House.

Following the consideration of the manager’s amendment, the rule allows for the consideration of a number of divisive amendments that focus on cable television price controls, re-regulating cable broadcast ownership, and provisions for regulation of violence and gratuitous sexual images on local television stations that may be constrained by technology.

The Rules Committee has made seven amendments in order in part 2 of the Rules report, including five minority amendments, a bipartisan amendment, and one majority amendment. A number of the amendments offered to the Rules Committee were duplicative, some were withdrawn and some were incorporated into the manager’s amendment. In addition, some amendments have already been included in the Senate bill, and it is important to note that there will be room for negotiation in conference.

The House also makes in order an amendment—to be debated for 20 minutes—offered by Representatives Cox and WYDEN which would ensure that online service providers who take steps to clean up the Internet are not subject to additional liability for being Good Samaritans. The rule also makes in order an amendment—to be debated for 10 minutes—offered by Representative STUPAK which involves local governments and charges for public rights of way.

The rule also allows for an amendment offered by the ranking minority member of the Judiciary Committee, Mr. CONYERS, which would enhance the role of the Justice Department with regard to the Bell Companies applying for authorization to enter currently prohibited lines of business. The chairman of the Commerce and Judiciary Committees have worked diligently to reconcile this issue, and it was decided that the Department of Justice should have a consultative role. Nevertheless, the rule permits Members the opportunity to vote on this measure.

We have also been extremely responsive to the requests of the ranking minority member of the Commerce Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance, Mr. MARKEY, by allowing all three of the amendments he requested. Mr. MARKEY has a different, more regulatory view of the future of the telecommunications industry, and he has proposed a number of this bill directly from the 1984 law. Nonetheless, the rule makes in order an amendment—to be debated for 30 minutes—would amend the bill by changing the standard for unreasonable rates and imposing rate controls on the cable industry. While the goal of this legislation is to reduce regulations, the rule will reverse the deregulatory cable provisions in H.R. 1555.

The second amendment—to be considered for 30 minutes—would retain the current broadcast cable ownership rule and scale back the audience reach cap in H.R. 1555 from 50 to 35 percent. While I believe that this amendment would selectively weaken the broadcast deregulation provisions in the bill, this is an issue that will continue to be debated by Members of this House and deserves a full and open debate.

There will be a substantive debate over provisions for regulating certain violent and sexual images on television. While there is evidence that the increasing amount of violent and sexual content on television has an adverse... impact on our society and especially children, the House has two options to consider in this debate. Mr. Markey has been granted the opportunity to offer an amendment requiring the establishment of a television rating code and the manufacture of certain televisions, which many fear will require a government-controlled rating system. The House will also have the opportunity to vote for a substitute offered by Representative Coburn that utilizes a private industry approach that does not impose strict, Washington-based mandates which raise difficult first amendment questions.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that this legislation will be remembered as the most deregulatory legislation in history. The goal of this legislation is to create wide open competition between the various telecommunications industries, and this legislation in its final form will undoubtedly encourage a new era of opportunity for companies involved in the telecommunications industry and many companies heretofore unheard of.

Those nations that have achieved the most impressive growth in the past have not been those with rigid government controls, nor those that are the most affluent in natural resources. The most extraordinary development has come in those nations that have put their trust in the power and potential of the marketplace. This bill states that government authority and mandates are not beneficial to economic development, and it will help assure this Nation's prosperity well into the 21st century.

The resolution that was favorably reported out of the Rules Committee is a fair rule that will allow for thorough consideration on a number of amendments. I urge my colleagues to support the rule so we may proceed with consideration of the merits of this extraordinarily important legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I include the following information for the Record:

1. This table applies only to rules which provide for the original consideration of bills, joint resolutions or budget resolutions and which provide for an amendment process. It does not apply to special rules which only waive points of order against appropriations bills which are already privileged and are considered under an open amendment process under House rules.

2. An open rule is one under which any Member may offer a germane amendment under the five-minute rule. A modified open rule is one under which any Member may offer a germane amendment under the five-minute rule subject only to an overall time limit on the amendment process and a requirement that the amendment be preprinted in the Congressional Record.

3. A modified closed rule is one under which the Rules Committee has determined the amendments that may be offered only to those amendments designated in the special rule or the Rules Committee report to accompany it, or which preclude amendments to a particular portion of a bill, even though the rest of the bill may be completely open to amendment.

4. A closed rule is one under which no amendments may be offered (other than amendments recommended by the committee in reporting the bill).
Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

§ 2245

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, we oppose this modified closed rule for the consideration of this landmark deregulatory telecommunication legislation for several reasons.

First, there is no legitimate need—there is no compelling reason—for us to consider H.R. 1555, during one of the busiest weeks we have experienced this year. There is absolutely no urgency at all attached to the passage of this bill before we adjourn.

Quite simply, we ought not to be debating this rule and this bill tonight. There are many more good reasons to put this legislation over until our return in September than there are for taking it up now.

Debating landmark legislation, which completely rewrites our existing communications laws, in the dead of night, squeezed carefully between major appropriations bills that should have first priority, is outrageous on its face.

We feel strongly that a bill with the enormous economic, political, and cultural consequences for the Nation as does H.R. 1555, should receive far more time for consideration than this bill will be allowed.

Second, there is not enough time allowed to properly consider the several very major amendments that have been made in order. For example, we shall have less than 4 minutes to consider the Markey-Shays amendment to increase cable consumer protection in H.R. 1555, an amendment which seeks to guard consumers against unfair monopolistic pricing.

The sponsors of the amendment testified that H.R. 1555, as written, completely unravels the protections that cable consumers currently enjoy, and that their amendment is needed to ensure that competition exists before all regulation is eliminated. This is a very substantive amendment, dealing with an industry that affects the great majority of Americans. It certainly deserves more time for serious debate then we are giving it tonight.

Mr. Speaker, perhaps the most troubling part of the bill is its treatment of media ownership, and its promotion of mergers and concentration of power.

The bill would remove all limits on the number of radio stations a single company could own, and would raise the ceiling on the number of television households a single broadcaster is allowed to serve.

It would also remove longstanding restrictions that have prevented television broadcasters from owning radio stations, newspapers, and cable systems in the same market.

Thus Mr. Markey’s amendment limiting the number of television stations that one media company could reach to 35 percent of the Nation’s households, and prohibiting a broadcaster from owning a cable system in a market where it owns a television station, is especially important—and, since it could lead to a single person or a single company’s owning an enormous number of television stations or media outlets in the country, this is an issue too that deserves far more than the 30 minutes the rule allows for it to be discussed and debated.

As the New York Times editorialized today, the bill “would for the first time allow a single company to buy a community’s newspaper, cable service, television station and, in rural areas, its telephone service. The amendment says that a company can’t even hand over to one company control of the community’s source of news and entertainment.”

Finally, Mr. Speaker, we also oppose the rule because it does not allow members to address all the major questions that should be involved in this debate. This rule limits to 6, the number of amendments that may be offered.

We fully understand and respect the need to structure the rule for this enormously complex and technical bill; but we do believe that, in limiting the time devoted to this bill, the majority incorrectly prevented the consideration of significant amendments that address legitimate questions.

When the Rules Committee met late yesterday on this rule, we sought to make those amendments in order. I would add that we did not seek to make every one of the 30 to 40 amendments submitted in order as I have already mentioned. We understand the need to structure this rule.

But the committee defeated, by a bipartisan vote of 5 to 6, our request to make in order the amendment submitted by Mr. Moran. That prohibits the FCC from undertaking the rulemaking that could preempt local governments from regulating the construction of cellular towers. The Members of the House should have the opportunity to vote on this amendment—and Mr. Moran deserves to have the opportunity to offer it.

The amendment addresses the very important concerns of localities who believe this issue is properly within the jurisdiction of local zoning laws. It is endorsed by the National Association of Counties, the National League of Cities, the U.S. Conference of Mayors, and the American Planning Association. Many local jurisdictions have contacted us this week in favor of this amendment, and we feel the committee made a mistake, Mr. Speaker, by not allowing it to be discussed on the floor.

We attempted unsuccessfully to make in order the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HALL], eliminating the ban on joint marketing of long distance service and Bell operating company-supplied local exchange service. Mr. HALL deserves time to explain his amendment and let the Members decide for themselves whose interests are best served by his amendment.

The majority also denied making in order the Orton-Morella affordable access amendment, which adds affordability to the requirement for preserving access for elementary and secondary students to the information highway.

The amendment is strongly supported by education agencies and organizations, and we feel that the sponsors deserve the chance to present their arguments for the amendment to the House. We should not have acquiesced to the arguments of industry representatives that these affordable access requirements should not be debated because the implications are not known. That is why we have debates—so that both sides can explain their position. Unfortunately, in these cases, we were able to hear only one side.

So, Mr. Speaker, we believe our Members have legitimate amendments that should have been made in order by this rule, and we regret their decision to shut them out of this important debate.

With respect to the amendments that were made in order, Mr. Speaker, we are very disturbed that the committee has ensured a veto-proof V-chip amendment was not properly honored. While his amendment is in order, the Coburn substitute, which is much weaker, will be voted on first; if it is adopted, Mr. Markey is denied the right to have an up or down vote on his very important amendment.

Members should be allowed a clean vote on the Markey amendment, which is by far the stronger of the two. Whether or not parents are given the ability to block violent television shows so their young children cannot watch them is an important issue, and we should not allow the vote to be represented as something it is not. The rule is very unfair in that respect.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1555 is a very complex piece of legislation; very few Members understand the implications of this bill, and I would suggest that we might very well come to regret its consideration in this hurried and inadequate manner.
We all know that changes need to be made in our 60 year old communications law. But we should be concerned about the process under which this bill is being brought to the floor tonight. Not only has a manager’s amendment been offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BONIOR], the minority whip, but it was done after the Rules Committee with jurisdiction overwhelmingly reported quite a different bill.

We should all be concerned about the process under which a bill with huge economic consequences and implications for consumers and business interests is being rushed through the House. The testimony of over 40 Members before the Rules Committee demonstrates the complexities involved in this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, we hope that the final version of this bill does balance the introduction of competitive markets, with measures designed to protect consumers. We have heard from all sides involved, and every industry has valid points to make. I do hope, however, that we do not lose sight of the consumer in this process, and of the need to protect the people from potential monopoly abuses.

Mr. Speaker, we oppose the rule—not only because it is restrictive, but because it does not go far enough in ensuring that enough time is given to this important debate, and because it does not protect the right of Members to offer amendments pertaining to all of the major issues of this very complicated piece of legislation.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], the chairman of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, let me just say to the gentleman from California [Mr. BEILENSON] I really am surprised at his testimony here. As my colleague knows, first of all we have 8 ½ hours allocated for this piece of legislation and we do not want to let that amount of time pass. In fact, that is what we have been trying to accomplish, and we will finish that part of the bill.

Now, if we had made in order all of those amendments that the gentleman just read off, we would be 19 hours. I figured out the time, 19 hours.

Now the gentleman knows we are going to be here until 6 o’clock in the morning tomorrow and into Friday, and my colleague and other Members have asked me to ask the gentleman’s side of the aisle to tighten things down so we can make sure that the members of the majority do hear from all the major issues. We negotiated with the majority, we negotiated with the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], we negotiated with the gentle- man’s Democratic leadership. Everyone was happy, and all of a sudden we come on this floor here now and nobody is happy.

Let us stick to our points. If we make a deal upstairs in the Rules Committee, let us live by it.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire as to how much time is remaining on both sides.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. EMERSON). The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LINDER] has 17 ½ minutes remaining and the gentleman from California [Mr. BEILENSON] has 22 ½ minutes remaining.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Bonior], the minority whip.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I regret that I will have a different view than my good friend the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BEILENSON]. I rise in support of this rule. It makes in order the key amendments that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Markey] and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Conyers] and others have asked for.

Mr. Speaker, I also would like to thank the [Mr. Speaker] for making debate on these amendments, but, on balance, I think it is a fair rule and I urge my colleagues to support it.

If we are going to make technology work for our economy and for our country, especially for our families, our laws need to keep pace with the changing times, and I believe the bill before us today will help bring this country into the 21st century. From the beginning, Mr. Speaker, telecommunications reform has been about one thing, it has been about competition.

We all know the more competition we have will lead to better products, better prices, better services and the American consumer will benefit from that competition. Above all, competition helps create more jobs and better jobs for our economy. Studies show that this bill will help create 3.4 million additional jobs for the next 10 years and lay the groundwork for technology that will help create millions more.

Let us be honest, Mr. Speaker, this is not a perfect bill before us today. There are lots of improvements that can be made, and I want to suggest a couple of them to you Mr. Speaker, but let us not get into a debate that will not result in the bill that needs to be passed.

First, we have an important amendment on the V-chip. Studies tell us that by the time the average child finishes elementary school he or she will have seen 8,000 murders and 100,000 acts of violence on the television. Most parents do all they can to keep their kids away from violent programming, but in this age of two-job parents and 200 channel televisions, parents need some help. Fortunately, we do have technology today that provides that help. The V-chip is a small computer chip that, for about 17 cents, can be inserted into a TV set and it allows the parents to block out violent programming.

This V-chip, Mr. Speaker, is based on some very simple principles: That parents raise children, not government, not advertisers, and not network executives, and parents should be the ones to choose what kinds of shows come into their homes.

Second, I believe we should do all we can to keep our airwaves from falling into the hands of the wealthy and the powerful. Current law limits the number of television stations, one per person or media company can reach, to 25 percent. This is an important provision that is being rushed through the House.

The rule was established to promote the free exchange of diverse views and ideas. The bill before us today, however, would literally allow one person, in any given area, to own two television stations, unlimited number of radio stations, the local newspaper and local cable systems. Instead of the 25 percent limit under this bill, Rupert Murdoch could literally own media outlets that reach to over half of America’s households.

In other words, this bill allows Mr. Murdoch to control what 50 percent of American households read, hear, and see, and that is outrageous.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Markey] will offer an amendment to set that limit to 35 percent, and frankly, I don’t think this amendment goes far enough. I believe we need to address broader issues, such as who controls our networks, who controls our newspapers, and who controls our radios.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that we would have liked to have seen a tougher amendment, but I urge my colleagues to support the Markey amendment on concentration, and, Mr. Speaker, this bill has been around a long time. It has been a long time in coming, and I urge my colleagues to support the rule.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. Goss], my colleague on the Rules Committee.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LINDER] and congratulate him for his fine work on an extremely complex rule that took a lot of work to get done, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] as well, and I am delighted there is support on both sides of the aisle, for it deserves it.

Mr. Speaker, I urge support for the rule also, and I will use my time to indulge in a colloquy with the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLILEY], the honorable chairman of the Committee on Commerce, because two points have come up in discussion today regarding local government authority which I think can be clarified and need to be clarified.

Chairman BLILEY was Mayor BLILEY of Richmond, and this gentleman was mayor of a much smaller town, but they were both local governments and there was a great concern among some of our local governments about some issues here, particularly two, as I have said. I want to address the issue of zoning.

Mr. Speaker, as to the cellular industry coming into the next century, there will be a need for an estimated 100,000 new transmission poles to be constructed throughout the country, I am told. I want to make sure that nothing in H.R. 1555 preempts the ability of local officials to determine the placement and construction of these new towers. Land use has always been, and I believe should continue to be, in the domain of the authorities in the areas directly affected.

I must say I appreciate that communities cannot prohibit access to the new facilities, and I agree they should not be allowed to, but it is important that cities and counties be able to enforce their zoning and building codes. That is the first point.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, I want to clarify that the bill does not restrict the ability of local governments to derive revenues for the use of public rights-of-way so long as the fees are set in a nondiscriminatory way.

Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOSS. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I have heard from a number of my local constituents, and I know the chairman is very strongly supportive of the rights of localities and the ability of local governments to have the authority to determine where these poles are placed in their community so long as they do not exclude the placement of poles altogether, do not unnecessarily delay the process for that purpose, do not favor one competitor over another and do not attempt to regulate on the basis of radio frequency emissions which is clearly a Federal issue. Is that an accurate statement of your intention?

Mr. GOSS. I am happy to yield to the distinguished chairman.

Mr. BLILEY. That is indeed, and I certainly will work to that end.

Mr. GOODLATTE. Thank you and I look forward to working with the chairman.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT].

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, if this bill really deserves a full and open debate, as the gentleman from Georgia has suggested, then why are we taking it up at midnight?

Mr. Speaker, this is a bill that affects the telephone in every house and every workplace in this country. It is a bill that affects every television viewer in this country and a wide array of other telecommunications services, and when does this Congress consider it? At midnight, after all day of debate on an appropriations bill.

Regardless of your view on this bill, and I think it has some merit, regardless of your view on the substance of the bill, this sorry procedure ought to be voted down along with this rule. What an incredible testament to this new Republican leadership that they could take a bill of this vital importance to the people of America and not take it up until midnight.

They can roll the votes. That just means there will not be anybody here listening to the debate. You can roll them all night long, as you plan to do. The real question is whether you will roll the American consumer.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BARTON].

Mr. BARTON. Mr. Speaker, I want to rise in support of the rule. I think this is a good rule. I think the gentleman's remarks are well taken, and I agree to point out to my colleagues that if this were a software package that would be version 5 or 6. We have been working on this issue for the last 5 years in the Congress. We had a bill pass the House; we never went to conference with the Senate last year.

There is one amendment that has been made in order, a bipartisan amendment, the Stupak-Barton amendment, that deals directly with the question of local access, local control of rights-of-way for the cities that is very bipartisan in nature, and I would urge support of that amendment if we can reach agreement on it, which we are still working on that.

So this is a good rule. I want to thank the Committee on Rules for making Stupak-Barton in order, and I would urge Members to vote for the rule.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], the ranking member of the committee. (Mr. DINGELL asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)
Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote for it.

The question is, what I would have written? Of course not. But it does get the House to the business of addressing an important national question, and that is the question of what will be our telecommunications policy, and will it be decided by the Congress, and will it be decided by the regulatory system, or will it be decided in a court of star chamber, in which no other citizen can participate.

I urge my colleagues to vote aye on the rule.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Paxon].

Mr. PAXON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule for H.R. 1555, the Communications Act of 1995.

The last time Congress considered communications legislation, the year was 1934. Radio was still in its infancy and commercial television broadcasting was still years away.

In those six decades dizzying changes in technology and markets have made our Nation's current telecommunication statutes totally outdated.

Over time as Congress has debated telecommunications reform legislation, the private sector hasn't waited—instead they have moved aggressively, for example implementing a completely new, alternative phone service—and they are now on the verge of creating yet another form of wireless communication.

Because of these rapid innovations in the marketplace, it is impossible and counterproductive for Congress to control micro manage the Nation's telecommunications future.

Instead, H.R. 1555 seeks to break down restrictive barriers, repeal outdated regulations and provide a fair and level playing field for all competitors.

As the Commerce Committee worked on drafting this legislation, we were of the opinion that competition is better regulated than the alternative of having regulations that are necessary, such as the transition rules while opening the local phone loop, regulations must be fair, reasonable, flexible, and sunset as quickly as possible.

In earlier decades it was perhaps logical for the Federal Government to establish communications monopolies to serve the Nation. However, we've now reached a stage in communications in which regulation is not only inefficient, but is actually a hindrance to the innovation and expansion which benefits the consumer.

For example—for the first time our policy is to move toward competition in local phone service and in cable television. We will also witness greatly expanded use of wireless telephone and radio and television broadcasting.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to take this opportunity to speak about the process that produced this important legislation.

H.R. 1555 is the result of many months of hard work by all members, both Democrat and Republican, of the Commerce Committee and innumerable hours by committee and personal staff. This bill does not favor one company or one industry at the expense of another. Chairman Bliley, subcommittee Chairman Fields and Ranking Member Dingell worked hard to produce legislation providing a fair and level playing field that will allow all companies to compete in a myriad of communication services.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this rule, support the manager's amendment, and support final passage of H.R. 1555.

Mr. BEILENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Moran].

Mr. MORAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend from California for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the rule, and I will share with my colleagues two good reasons to vote against this rule: You know, 90 percent of America's parents have been asking us to give them greater control over what their children are seeing on television, the sex and the violence and the profanity. Enough is enough they say. They look to us to give them some relief.

More than 50 colleagues, both Republicans and Democrats, cosponsored legislation to use the technology that exists today to empower parents to control what their children are viewing on television. Pennis is all it would cost to add it to every new box. But we have worked on this for months, and now, at the last minute, we have an amendment that was put together by the broadcast industry, which really is a sham, whose only objective is to kill the V-chip amendment. This rule makes it in order that if this amendment wins, and all it does is to encourage the broadcast industry to address this problem, if that amendment wins, we will have even get to pass the other.

The second reason is a real sleeper in this bill, and that is with regard to the sitting of these control towers. There are about 20,000 of them around the country now. There are going to be about 100,000. Our amendment said on private property, then the people that own that property have a right to go to their local zoning board.

Of course they have the right. Imagine if somebody tries to put a 150 foot tower on your property, and you object, and they tell you, "Well, the Congress gave us the authority to put it on. It is a Federal law. It supersedes local zoning authority." That is the last thing we want to be doing.

So I urge a "no" vote on this rule.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Burton].

Mr. BEILENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Emerson). The gentleman from Indiana is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. Burton. Mr. Speaker, I know that this bill has a great deal of merit and a lot of hard work has gone into it, and I think the rule, with a few exceptions, is a pretty good rule. But when I appeared before the Committee on Rules a couple of days ago, I specifically asked the chairman of the committee if we were going to get a freestanding up or down vote on this amendment.

I think there might have been a misunderstanding. I would not accuse the chairman of the committee of misleading anybody. But there definitely was a commitment, in my opinion, that we would have a straight, clear vote on the V-chip amendment.

The problem is that we now have, as the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Moran] said, a perfecting amendment which will gut our ability to have an up or down vote on whether or not parents in this country will be able to block out sexually explicit programs and violent programs that they do not want their kids to see.

This legislation that we are trying to get passed would be very, very helpful to parents who are working. There are going to be 2 to 3 hundred channels in most homes in the not too distant future. The only technology we have now will block out one or two or three programs, and parents are not going to take the time to go through and specifically block out program after program. But the technology talking about will allow them to block out whole categories of violence and sexually explicit programs. The amendment that is going to be offered as a preferential amendment to mine would stop that and just create a study commission.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Chairmain, I would just point out, I had an amendment offered on the V chip that was not made in order. I am supporting the rule. I hope those Members who had their amendment made in order would have the courtesy to support the rule.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, the reason I am not supporting the rule is simply because I was told we would have a straight up or down vote.

Let me just get to the crux of the problem. The American people, 90 percent of the families, as has been said, want the ability to protect their kids against violence and sexually explicit material. We have a way to do it, and we are not being given an up or down vote on that issue.

Now, we hope that the amendment that is going to supposedly perfect mine, which does not do anything, will be defeated. I urge my colleagues to defeat it so we can get a straight up or down vote on that, because I am confident that Republicans and Democrats alike, if given the chance, will give the American people what they want, and that is the ability to protect their kids against violence and sexually explicit programs. To do otherwise, I think is a sin.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. HASTINGS].

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida, Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 1555. This vital legislation makes long-overdue changes to current communications laws by eliminating the legal barriers that prevent true competition.

I am particularly pleased that H.R. 1555 will break down barriers to telecommunications for people with disabilities by requiring that carriers and manufacturers of telecommunications equipment make their network services and equipment accessible to and usable by people with disabilities. The time is past for all persons to have access to telecommunications services.

H.R. 1555 assigns to the FCC the regulatory functions of ensuring that the Bell companies have complied with all of the conditions that we have imposed on their entry into long distance. This bill requires the Bell companies to interconnect with non-Bell competitors and to provide them the features, functions, and capabilities of the Bell companies' networks that the new entrants need to compete. It also contains other checks and balances to ensure that competition in local and long distance grows.

The Justice Department still has the role that was granted to it under the Sherman and Clayton Acts and other antitrust laws. Their role is to enforce the antitrust laws and ensure that all companies comply with the requirements of the bill.

The Department of Justice enforces the antitrust laws of this country. It is a role that they have performed well. The Department of Justice is not and should not be a regulating agency. It is an enforcement agency.

Mr. Speaker, it is time to open our telecommunications market to true competition. This legislation is long overdue. I encourage my colleagues to support H.R. 1555.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my opposition with the process which was used for this important legislation. This bill will impact the life of every American—whether they talk on the telephone, listen to the radio, watch television, or send a fax. Even more significantly, it will impact technologies that have not yet been imagined and will be developed in the next century.

So how does the House of Representatives deal with this bill? By debating it into the dark of night under a rule which allows no amendments. This process is seriously flawed.

The primary goal of this bill is supposed to be to increase competition through deregulation. Unfortunately, the bill amended by the manager's amendment, falls short of this goal. For example, the bill does not require that there be any real, substantial competition in the local telephone loop prior to Bell entry into the long-distance business.

Several amendments were proposed to the Rules Committee to improve the bill and ensure that local competition will develop. None were made in order.

One such amendment, to ensure that 10 percent of local residential and commercial customers have access to a viable competitor prior to Bell entry into long distance, was rejected. In my State of Pennsylvania, which has 5.3 million local access lines, this means one of every 10 customers will be cut off from service right now to ensure competition.

Now why is it so important to have local competition before allowing the local telephone monopoly into long distance? Without real competition in the local loop prior to entry into long distance, a company can control long-distance service provider access to their local loop because all long-distance calls must traverse the local loop to reach telephone customers. In short, the Bell system can use its monopoly control over the local loop to monopolize control over the long-distance business. This bill does not prevent the Bells from extending their monopoly and denying the benefits of competition to our constituents.

I urge my colleagues to vote no on the rule and no on this bill in order to protect telephone consumers.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Ms. SLAUGHTER].

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the rule.

Mr. Speaker, the rules governing debate on H.R. 1555 are bad enough—we have 90 minutes to debate the most substantial changes to our communications laws in over 60 years. What concerns me the most, however, are provisions in H.R. 1555 which would be the single biggest assault on American consumers and diversity of opinion that I've witnessed as long as I have lived.

H.R. 1555 completely repeals limits on mass media ownership, and the result will be a dangerous combination of media power. Under the bill, a single company can own a network station, a cable station, unlimited numbers of radio stations, and a daily newspaper, all in the same town.

We have heard that lifting ownership limits will promote competition. Personally, I can't think of a worse way to go about it. Once we lift the limits, a handful of networks will dictate what programs the local affiliates in our districts should carry. If you have a complaint about losing local programming, don't bother changing the channel—the media group will own the channel, too. If you want to write a letter to the newspaper, feel free, but know that the media group probably is the editorial board.

If any of my colleagues have kept up with the news recently, company mergers are already lining up to buy each other out, all in anticipation of the broadcast ownership bonanza. You don't have to take my word for it, just look in today's New York Times and read about Walt Disney's buy-out of ABC or the Westinghouse takeover bid for CBS. I will warn my colleagues: these companies are counting on us to remove ownership limits so they can squeeze out smaller competitors.

I don't think that many of my colleagues realize this, but the FCC is reviewing ownership limits and making changes right now to ensure competition and local diversity. Blowing the lid off all restrictions doesn't make sense; we should let the FCC continue to do its job.

Mr. Speaker, with unrealistic time limits, this rule continues the tradition of the Republican-led 104th Congress: careless legislating and minimal debate. The new leadership cares more about corporate giveaways than consumers, and that is why I will vote against this rule. I urge all of my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. OXLEY], a member of the committee.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the privilege of extending my remarks.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, let me first say that the folks who support the Markay amendment which was made in order, the gentleman from New York was talking about the concentration of media, she has an opportunity to support the Markey amendment. But we cannot do that unless the rule passes. Then the Members, the V chip that they had their amendment made in order on the House floor and I stand and I stand and I stand and I got stiffer by the Committee on Rules and I am supporting the rule. What is wrong with this picture? I give up. I am here to support the rule and simply say that it is time that we break the chains of the modified final judgment and take once and for all the responsibility for telecommunications legislation back to the duly elected Representatives of the people and take it away from an unelected, unresponsive Federal court.

Let us give back, let us give us the opportunity to make those kinds of decisions for the consumer. This is the most far-reaching, procompetitive, regulatory piece of telecommunications legislation in over 60 years. This is a product that has not just come out of the woodwork. It is a product that has been worked on for at least 5 years. Members of our committee, members of the Committee on the Judiciary, Members who have been here a while have worked on this issue. I find it incredible that we would even consider not passing a rule that would get us one step closer to what we want in telecommunications in the modern marketplace.

We have an opportunity here to pass the most far-reaching job-creating bill that any of us can imagine, a 3.5 million jobs bill. In 10 years that will catch us up with technology and take an accelerated statute and bring it up to the 21st century.

I have a particular provision that I was proud to work on dealing with the foreign ownership restrictions. They are incredibly antiquated. They restrict the ability of American companies to raise capital and to compete in the worldwide market. This bill breaks those barriers. I am proud to support the rule and proud to support the bill.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. CLYBURN].

Mr. CLYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight in opposition to this rule. Once again, the Republican leadership has crafted a closed rule. Call it what they may, but where I come from there is nothing open about limiting both the time for debate and the amendments to be considered.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation will affect the country in the well of the home and is far too important to be subjected to a closed rule. H.R. 1555 would make it possible for one entity to own all the radio stations, newspapers, 2 TV stations, and even the local cable and telephone companies in the same media market. So the same bill which seeks to end local telephone monopolies would allow a handful of media magnates to drive smaller competitors from the market and put an end to broadcast diversity. An amendment to maintain current law regarding broadcast ownership was not made in order.

And what about the hypocrisy of the Republican leadership? For months they have been telling us that State and local governments are better equipped to make decisions affecting local residents, but this bill preempts local zoning authority with regard to the placement of antenna towers. Yet, an amendment to restore local authority was not ruled in order. I find it hard to believe that the Republican leadership is willing to rely on our State governments to solve this Nation's welfare crisis but does not trust local authorities to regulate the placement of cellular telephone antennae.

I would like to urge my colleagues to vote against this rule.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. BLILEY], my colleague on the Committee on Rules.

(Mr. DREIER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleagues from Atlanta for yielding time to me.

Believe it or not, I know it is 11:34 p.m. But over the next couple of hours, because of the fact that the ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations wanted us today to proceed with consideration of the Labor-HHS appropriations bill, we are going to embark on what I am convinced is one of the most exciting debates that has ever taken place in this Congress. It is going to lead us towards the millennium and in fact lay the groundwork for dramatically improving the opportunity for consumers in this country to benefit in the area of telecommunications.

Mr. Speaker, it is going to be done on a very, very fair, under a very, very fair and balanced rule. This rule will in fact allow for the consideration of a wide range of issues, contrary to some of the statements that have been made by those who are opposing the rule. It will allow us to go into debates on the V chip issue, on broadcasting, on cable, on Internet, a wide range of issues, including that very important item which was just addressed earlier, the issue of local control.

We also had a very healthy exchange between two former mayors, which is going to ensure that not only here but in the conference we will see the issue of local control addressed.

I give up. I am here to support the rule and proud to support the bill.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BRYANT].

(Mr. BRYANT of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BRYANT of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I say to the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER], to that strata, there is not going to be any debate tonight whatsoever. The reason is because once we vote on this rule, everybody in this room is going to go home except for five or six people, because there are not going to be any more votes until sometime tomorrow.

So the debate that takes place tonight will not be a debate. I would suggest all you Americans that are going to go home to participate and tell them to start the home movies because you are going to be the only one to see yourself talking. There is not going to be anybody to talk to. There is not a single person who believes it is right to take up this bill at midnight and talk to ourselves for the next 3 or 4 hours.

General debate and debate on the amendments will take place in a total vacuum. It is not right. It is not necessary. Nobody on this side will stand up and defend this process, and nobody on this side will stand up and defend this process. It is an outrage. I am disappointed that the Democratic ranking member of the full committee, that the chairman of the full committee and chairman of the subcommittee have such a low regard for the jurisdictional area of this committee that they would go along with this process. I urge Members on this side not to vote on this rule.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS], the chairman of the subcommittee which produced the bill (Mr. FIELDS of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FIELDS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, this is a good, balanced rule. This rule should be supported. It gives us an opportunity to ask one question. That is: With our telecommunications policy, do we move into the 21st century or do we crawl back into the 1930s? Some of us have lived with that question for 2½ years. In this debate today, in the midnight vote tomorrow, we know the issues of the debate. It is time to move forward on this important issue that affects a sixth of our Nation's economy. I want to compliment the chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LINDER], the gentleman from California [Mr. BEILENSON], the leadership... on our side, the leadership on the other side for allowing us to move forward.

This is a complex issue. If we had our preferences, we would do this at an earlier time. We would have more time to debate this. We do not. It is important to move forward. I also want to pay special recognition to some Members who, like me, have spent a great deal of time on this issue. My friend, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Dingell], my friend in the back of the Chamber, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Markey], who has spent as much time and more on this particular issue. And we will have our differences during this debate. We do disagree on the V chip. We do not want to see the government get into content regulation. But we will debate that issue.

We do not want to see the government continue a policy of restricting growth when it is no longer necessary with direct broadcast satellite, the growth of cable, the spectrum flexibility, the ability of broadcasters to compression. We will have that debate, a good debate on that particular issue.

Of course, we disagree on the government continuing to regulate cable. But those are issues that we have.

I want to recognize his leadership and others as we move forward on this legislation.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Frank].

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, this is not legislation. This is a three-card monte.

First we started with the appropriations bill on Labor-HHS, now we are going to sip in a telecommunications bill. But just when we get a focus on that, they will switch to the defense bill. This is an absolute degradation of the legislative process.

We have the problem that we are now going to have the debate first and then the votes. I think they ought to try it other way around. Why do they not have the votes first and then the debate? They have obviously decided that the two are totally unrelated. They have totally degraded the legislative process. They have borrowed their sense of procedure from the red queen. Verdict first; debate afterwards.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Markey], subcommittee ranking member.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, this is an important piece of legislation. The gentleman from Texas has already pointed out that it affects one-sixth to one-seventh of the American economy. We settle not debating a bill that affects one-sixth to one-seventh of the American economy at midnight in the United States Congress. We should not be doing this.

We cannot have a good debate on cable. We cannot have a good debate on long distance. We cannot have a good debate on the V chip. We cannot have a good debate on privacy. We cannot have a good debate on the Internet. We cannot have a good debate on any of these issues which profoundly affect the satellite, the cable, the telephone, the computer, the software, the educational future of our country.

This bill will make most of the rest of the legislation which we are going to deal with on this body a footnote in history. This is the bill. We are taking it up at midnight. We are going to tell all the Members, after they vote on the rule, that they should go home, that there will not be any votes.

America is sound asleep. This is not the way to be treating one-sixth to one-seventh of the American economy. The Members should be here. Their staffs should be in their offices. The American public is listening. We are talking about issues that are so profound that if they are not heard we will have lost the great opportunity to have had the debate, to have had the educational experience which the Congress can provide to the country.

Now, some Members say, well, who cares, really, it is just a battle between AT&T on the one hand and the Bell companies on the other? Who really cares, is kind of the attitude that some Members have taken.

Well, my colleagues, this is more than how many gigabits one company might be able to provide or how many extra thousand cubic feet of fiber optic that one or another company might provide. This is about how we transmit the ideas in our society. Whether or not we give parents the right to be able to block out the violence and the explicit sexual content that comes through their television set goes to how our children's minds are formed. Whether or not consumers are going to have one cable company or two cable companies in their community 1½ years from now goes to the question of whether or not they are going to have a monopoly or a real choice in the marketplace.

Whether or not we are going to have a single company able to purchase the only newspaper in town, two television stations, every radio station and the only newspaper in town, two television stations, every radio station and the cable system in every community in America is more profound than any other issue we are going to be debating on the floor this week, this month or this year.

This rule should be voted down. We should take up this bill in the light of day with enough time given the time it needs to be debated.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Ms. Lofgren].

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, argueably, the most important thing about telecommunications reform is not in this bill, and that is affordable access to the Internet for the Nation's schools. Myself and the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. Reed] offered such an amendment in the Committee on the Judiciary. We were asked to withdraw it in order that it would be worked on in this bill. The gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. Morella] and I went to the Committee on Rules for her amendment, and it is still not being considered.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Bliley] what our posture would be, if I may, in a colloquy, with the Senate version of the language that does ensure Internet access for schools that is affordable.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. LOFGREN. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, as I told the gentlewoman from Maryland earlier, it is my intention to work with her and anyone else to see that this provision, or as near as we can, is included in the final version when we come out of conference.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, it is time to vote on a rule for a very important bill. I would like to address a couple of points. First let me thank Chairman Bliley and Chairman Fields. We have worked on this for a long time. I would like to especially thank the ranking member [Mr. Dingell] who has given us some sage advice and a great deal of help. I am a little bit surprised at the compliant that we are not debating for a long enough time. We started with a 6 hour rule and we wind up with nine and a half hours, and that apparently is not enough. I am surprised at my friend from Indiana who can vote for this rule because he made his amendment in order, he wanted a closed rule on his amendment. All he has to do is have an up or down vote on his amendment is to have a substitute. It seems to me, if you have enough votes, you can defeat the substitute.

Mr. Speaker, I am most startled by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Markey] who made it very clear to us that he could not support this rule unless he could amend it in order. And we believed the gentleman, and we thought they were substantive enough to debate, and we made all three in order, and now he is complaining because we are debating this amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I was on this floor today on Labor-HHS and there were fewer people in this Chamber during this day on Labor-HHS appropriations than there are here tonight. You know as well as I typically there are fewer people in this Chamber during the day than at night. These are spurious arguments. The rule is a balanced rule. I urge you to support it.
Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my disappointment that the rule on this bill does not include an amendment that I introduced to provide affordable access to advanced telecommunications technologies for schools, libraries, and rural health care facilities.

In title I, section 246(b)(5) of this bill, the committee expresses its intent that students in our public schools should have access to advanced telecommunications technologies as one of the fundamental principles of universal service. This is an important and historic commitment. However, the bill does not address the issue of affordability of such access, nor does it include provisions addressing libraries and rural health care facilities. This was the amendment I introduced with Congressmen ORTON and NEY and Congresswoman LOFGREN. The bill, I understand, refers to "reasonable" rates. Reasonable rates by what standards? "Affordable" would have ensured that all schools, nationwide, would have access to the information superhighway.

I want to clarify that my amendment would not have imposed a financial burden on telecom providers. In the bill, universal service is being defined by the Federal Communications Commission [FCC] based on recommendations by this joint board. In my amendment, schools and libraries would pay "affordable" rates as defined by a joint Federal-State universal service board.

Most schools simply cannot afford advanced telecommunications services. At present, less than 3 percent of classrooms in the United States have access to the Internet. This will not change unless we make access for schools affordable.

The Senate has wisely added provisions to ensure access at a discount price for schools, libraries, and rural health care facilities. I am pleased the Commerce Committee chairman has stated his agreement to working with me to include this provision in conference. In a Nation rich in information, we can no longer rely on the skills of the industrial age. All of our students must be guaranteed access to a high quality of education regardless of where they live or how much money they make. We must ensure that the emerging telecommunications revolution does not leave our critical public institutions behind.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. EMERSON). The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes had appeared to have it.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 255, nayes 156, not voting 23, as follows:

involving this much money, will be debated in the dead of night in such a limited timeframe.

Mr. Speaker, this bill should not be here at all this week.

REQUEST FOR CONSIDERATION OF AMENDMENT NO. 2-2 OUT OF ORDER DURING CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 1555, COMMUNICATIONS ACT OF 1995

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the Committee of the Whole resumes consideration of the bill H.R. 1555 pursuant to House Resolution 207 on the legislative day of August 3, 1995, it shall be in order to consider the amendment numbered 2-2 in House Report 104-223 notwithstanding earlier consideration of the amendment numbered 2-3 in that report on the legislative day of August 2, 1995.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, could I inquire of the distinguished Ranking Member of the Committee on Commerce if that means the debate on the Conyers amendment would not be tonight, but would be tomorrow? Is that the intent of the gentleman's unanimous-consent request?

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARTON of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DINGELL. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker. Further reserving the right to object, I had asked for the same consideration. I am supporting the Stupak amendment, which is only 10 minutes of debate time, and it asks for the same consideration. The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. Schaffer], the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Stupak], and myself are in continuing negotiations, and it is quite likely that we would have an agreement so that there would not have to be an even vote on that amendment, and I was told that we could not do that.

Well, if we cannot do that, I am going to object to the gentleman from Michigan doing it.

Now if we can get unanimous consent that our little 10-minute debate can also be tomorrow, then I will not object.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARTON of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman would permit, that has been discussed with the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Conyers]. He feels no objection. I have discussed it with other members of the committee and other Members managing the legislation, and I do not think that the approval of the leadership on the Republican side would urge the gentleman to go along. It does not prejudice the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Stupak], who happens to be a very close friend and comes from the same State I do.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. If we could get agreement that the Stupak amendment, which is only 10 minutes of debate, could be considered, then I will withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman would yield, I have no objection to the gentleman making that unanimous-consent request.

Mr. HYDER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, the gentleman from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania [Mr. Fattah] is just about to make a privileged motion.

Now we are going to get along here, we are going to have unanimous-consents, we are going to try and move along. Many of us share the discomfort of the hour. But look. We want to get out on our recess, but is the gentleman going to move to adjourn, because if so, it is going to be difficult to agree to much around here.

So, I do not know if the gentleman wishes to disclose what his privileged motion is, but I suspect it is going to be to adjourn.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I am not sure of the parliamentary procedure, but, if I have the right, I would ask that the Dingell unanimous-consent request be amended so that the Stupak amendment will also be rolled until tomorrow.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, would the gentleman withhold his unanimous-consent request and let me make mine?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will entertain one unanimous-consent request at this time.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. BRYANT of Texas. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman what the purpose of wanting to change the order of consideration of the amendments is. Is he concerned that no one will be here to pay attention to the Conyers amendment if the unanimous-consent request is not granted?

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRYANT of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DINGELL. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Conyers] had indicated he wishes to do business with his amendment tomorrow. I think that is a fine idea, and I would like to see him have that opportunity.

Mr. BRYANT of Texas. Where is the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Conyers], and why is he not making this request?
Mr. MILLER of Florida changed his vote from "aye" to "no." So the motion was rejected. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

REQUEST FOR PERMISSION TO CONSIDER AMENDMENT OUT OF ORDER DURING CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 1555, COMMUNICATIONS ACT OF 1995

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the Committee of the Whole resumes consideration of the bill, H.R. 1555, pursuant to House Resolution 207, on the legislative day of August 3, 1995, it shall be in order to consider the amendment No. 2-1, as reported from the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BRYANT of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. I would like to ask the gentleman to explain exactly what he is attempting to do here.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRYANT of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLILEY].

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, basically it would allow us today to take up the Cox-Wyden amendment after the manager's amendment. That is it.

Mr. BRYANT of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I would ask the gentleman, is there some reason for doing that?

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, only to save time, so that we will have less time to be consumed tomorrow evening when we return to the bill.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRYANT of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL].

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, it also is because the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONYERS] would prefer to bring up his amendments tomorrow. This would facilitate the business of the House, and also is an accommodation to the Members.

Mr. BRYANT of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the gentleman would respond, if I might yield to him further, why these gentlemen want to take their amendments up tomorrow instead of later in the evening?

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, only to state it.

Mr. BRYANT of Texas. Mr. Speaker, does the chair expect to take any more recorded votes tonight? Will we have less time to be consumed tomorrow evening when we return to the bill.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLILEY].

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the Committee of the Whole resumes consideration of the bill, H.R. 1555, pursuant to House Resolution 207, on the legislative day of August 2, 1995, it shall be in order to consider the amendment No. 2-2, which is the amendment No. 2-1, reported from the Committee of the Whole, House Report 104-223, notwithstanding earlier consideration of the amendment 2-3 in that report on the legislative day of August 2, 1995.
Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself four minutes.

(Mr. BLILEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Chairman, today and tomorrow we will consider and pass the Communications Act of 1995, the most important reform of communications law since the original 1934 Communications Act, more than 60 years ago. This bill is sweeping in its scope and effects for the first time, communications policy will be based on competition rather than arbitrary regulation. As a result of this fundamental shift in philosophy, American consumers stand to benefit from a greater choice of telecommunications services at lower prices and higher quality than previously available.

As most Members of this House know, Congress has talked about telecommunications reform for the past several years. In fact, we have come close several times, most recently last Congress, when the House overwhelmingly passed a telecommunications reform bill only to see it die in the Senate. This year, with the help of Mr. DINGELL, Mr. HYDE and Mr. FIELDS, we are determined to succeed where past Congresses have failed in seeing that telecommunications reform finally becomes law.

The Communications Act of 1995 requires every Bell provider of local telephone service to open the local exchange network to competitors seeking to offer local telephone services. The legislation also will create competition in the video market by permitting telephone companies to compete directly with cable companies. Once the Bell operating companies open the exchange network to competition, the Bell companies are free to compete in the long distance and manufacturing markets. This bill also includes language relating to the Bell operating company provision of electronic publishing and alarm services.

More importantly, the key to this bill is the creation of an incentive for the current monopolies to open their markets to competition. This whole bill is based on the theory that once competition is introduced, the dynamic possibilities established by this bill can become reality. Ultimately, this whole process will be for the common good of the American people as quickly as possible.

The difficulty of passing communications reform legislation is well known. In the midst of the important and difficult policy decisions which must be made by Members, large telecommunications companies have expended enormous pressure to keep competitors out of their businesses. In the name of competition, these companies havelobbed our Members intensively for their fair advantage in the new competitive landscape. And once these facts are capable of recognizing what we all recognize is much needed reform. I urge my colleagues, particularly the new Members, to resist these pressures and to pass this long overdue bill. I realize these are not easy votes.

As I have stated, the need for telecommunications legislation is long overdue. We all recognize that the telecommunications industry is at a critical stage of development. This was highlighted by the vigorous activity we have seen this week. "Convergence" is the technical term used to describe the rapid blurring of the traditional lines separating discrete elements of the industry. From a policy perspective, convergence means that Congress must set the statutory guidelines to create certainty in the marketplace and to ensure fairness to all industry participants, incumbent and new entrant, alike. Such a policy will ensure a robust, competitive environment that will provide the American consumer with new telecommunications products and services at reasonable prices.

Mr. Chairman, Subcommittee Chairman FIELDS, Mr. DINGELL, and the members of the Commerce Committee believe that best policy decision this Congress can adopt is to open all telecommunications markets and to encourage competition in these markets. We believe it is competition, and not Government micro-management of markets, that will bring new and innovative information and entertainment services to Market as quickly as possible.

In shaping our legislation on a pro-competitive model, we have been careful. However, not to legislate in a vacuum. We have taken into account past, Government-created advantages. We have resisted, in the name of deregulation, to simply break up one monopoly only to replace it with another. Rather, we have created a model that reflects the development of competition in the local telephone market.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to vote for H.R. 1555. I urge my colleagues to vote for H.R. 1555. I urge my colleagues to vote for H.R. 1555.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, rise in support of H.R. 1555.

H.R. 1555 is a big bill, but not a flawless bill. While I continue to have serious reservations about several of its provisions, it accomplishes many important, important goals. It will provide a healthy dose of competition into the telecommunications industries—competition for cable service, competition for local telephone service, and more competition for long distance service. These are good provisions, and will benefit our constituents and our economy.

The bill will also get the Federal judiciary out of the business of micromanaging telecommunications—and that is good too. In fact, this has been a goal of mine since the breakup of the Bell System back in 1984.

The bill outlaws the practice known as slamming—when subscribers are switched from one carrier to another without permission. And it includes the penalties that should serve as an effective deterrent to this noxious practice. In moving to a competitive environment, the legislation protects several industries from unfair competition. H.R. 1555 includes safeguards to ensure that burglars, alarm companies, electrical and electronic manufacturers and equipment manufacturers of telecommunications equipment are not victimized by unfair competition.
Mr. Chairman, on balance, H.R. 1555 is an improvement in current law. With its problems corrected by the adoption of the Markey amendments, it will be a downright good bill. I urge my colleagues to support Mr. Markey on his amendments, and vote for the adoption of H.R. 1555.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Hyde. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Flanagan].

Mr. Flanagan. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1555. This is a very important bill. It will provide competitiveness to an industry that has long lacked it. It will provide competitiveness in the long-distance market.

Most support this bill, industry, labor alike. There is one small group that opposes this bill violently. That is the group of interesting and very strongly opposing folks, the Competitive Long Distance Coalition, made up of seven of the most colossally large corporations in the world, with net assets that are measured in the hundreds of billions of dollars.

Over the course of the last 10 days or so, every Member of this Chamber has been greeted as they came through the door with a sack of mail. I got one such sack here. This sack is not the mail I have received over the past 10 days. It is not even the sack of mail I received today. This is my 2 o'clock mailing. Every Member of Congress gets four mailings a day. This arrived at 2 o'clock today.

I was so livid by this, because I have never had a telegram in my life, but AT&T would have me believe that thousands of people in my district feel so strongly about their corporate profits that they are going to send me thousands of telegrams.

So I put the bus drivers to work today in my office and asked them to make a few phone calls. They called 200 of these telegrams. We actually got hold of 75 of them. And in the course of that time we found out that 3, exactly, 3 people out of those 75 even heard of these much less supported it.

Let me give you a few examples. This group of people right here, they do not speak English. We put some multilingualists on the phone with them for a good long time and talked to them. They really did not care much about telecommunications and even less about long-distance corporate profits.

This group here, Anthony in Chicago, very fine fellow, they could not talk to for months, and his wife told us on the phone that he has bigger problems to worry about than profits in the long-distance companies.

This guy here, Harold, he is also a very fine fellow. We could not talk to him either because his wife told us that he had been in intensive care for several weeks and probably had better things to do than call me about telecom.

This is a great one, Mr. Chairman. This is Dennis, who is supposed to live in River Grove. We called Dennis out there. Dennis has not lived in Illinois in 10 years. Dennis not only lives in southern Wisconsin, but just for grins we put one of the other Members and got him to hold off. We called Dennis and Dennis said, Not only do I not care about telecom and long-distance profits, but if I did, why the hell would I call you?

This is the great one, this is little Andrea. We called her, and her mom answered the phone and said, Well, little Andrea is 8 and she is out playing now, but when she comes in, I will have her call and tell you about the bill.

This is the worst one of all. This is the terrible one. Casimir, in my district. I will not say anything more about him out of respect for the family. But Casimir passed on in March.

It has been said in Chicago that those who have gone beyond have a tendency to vote, but to send me a telegram is indeed truly long distance at its best.

Mr. Chairman, I do not make this speech to mock the dead. I make this speech to show the appalling tactics of those who are tiny, who are absolutely opposed to this bill, not because it is anticompetitive but because they are not preferentially advanced as they have been through the years.
Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS], chairman of the Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance.

Mr. FIELDS of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. FIELDS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1555, the Telecommunications Reform Act of 1995, and I hasten to say that I believe that this legislation is balanced, it is sweeping, and it is proportionate.

Mr. Chairman, there are few times in a legislator’s career when one can come to this floor and talk about an historic moment, a watershed when a government breaks the chains of the past and enters a new policy era. Well, this is such a moment.

Mr. Chairman, since Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone, this is only the second time the Government has focused and dealt with telecommunications policy. The first time was 61 years ago in the 1934 Communications Act when our country utilized radio, telegraph, and telephone technology. The Congressmen and Senators in 1934 could not have envisioned the technology that we enjoy today. They could not have envisioned the advantages of digital over analog transmission. They could not have envisioned that clear voice transmission, along with data and video, could be accomplished without a wire. They could not have envisioned that the telephone could digitally compress and transmit as much as six times the current broadcast signal with the same or enhanced video capabilities.

Mr. Chairman, I am here tonight to tell our colleagues that we cannot on August 3, 1995, predict what the technologies and applications of those technologies would be next month, let alone next year. I firmly believe, however, that this legislation will unleash such competitive forces that our country will see more technological development and deployment in the next 5 years than we have seen this entire century. I firmly believe that this legislation will result in tens of billions of dollars being invested in infrastructure and technology in an almost contemporaneous manner when signed by the President.

Mr. Chairman, I cannot stand here and have this legislation is perfect, but I can stand up and say to this House that our focus as a Committee on Commerce was correct. This legislation is predicated upon two things: Competition and the consumer. A belief that competition produces new technologies, new applications for those technologies, new services, all at a lower per capita cost to the consumer.

Mr. Chairman, central to competition to the consumer in this legislation is opening the local telephone network to competition. We do this with a short rulemaking by the FCC, the telephone companies having to enter a good faith negotiation with a facilities-based competitor, to open the loop. A review by the State Public Utility Commission and FCC that the loop is open to competition, and once the FCC finally certifies that that local telephone network is open to that facilities-based competitor, then the same agreement with the same terms and conditions is open to any competitor within that State.

Mr. Chairman, this puts the consumer in control. Cable companies, telephone companies, long-distance companies, will all be vying for the consumer’s business, offering new technologies, better services, more choice, at lower cost.

Among other things we do in the bill, we also have broadcasters as they move into the new era of digital transmission to utilize the technology of signal compression, to produce as many as six signals over the air broadcast. All that is produced, we do six. It is hard for us to know what this one piece of the legislation means tonight. We hope it means more local news, weather, sports, cultural programming, and particularly, educational quality programming aimed at our Nation’s children, but we do not dictate. We do not micromanage.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY].

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Chairman, first of all, I would like to begin by complimenting my good friend, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS]. I have worked with the gentleman for three years on this legislation, and he and I have spent hundreds of hours talking about these issues and trying our best to come to common ground, and on many issues, we have, and many of those issues are in this bill. I think it is there that, in my opinion, the monumental parts of this bill are contained. I cannot thank the gentleman enough, and the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLILEY] on that side and all of the Members of the committee from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] and all of the members of our committee for all of the hard work which they have put into this bill over the last 3 years.

Mr. Chairman, unfortunately, since last year when we were considering this bill, there have been additions made to the legislation that were never under consideration in 1994. It is there primarily that the serious flaws in this legislation appear.

For example, one, I repeat myself, but it is very important. It is wrong to allow a single company to own the only newspaper, two television stations, every radio station in the entire cable system for a single community. It is just wrong. Second, I have no problem with deregulating the cable industry, if there is another competitor in that community. For 100 years in this country we have regulated monopolies.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Chairman, my career on the Committee on Commerce has been dedicated to deregulating toward competition so that we do not need to regulate monopolies any more, in electricity, in telephone, and in cable. But the honest truth of the matter is that there will be no competing cable system in most communities in America 2 years from today and 5 years from today. We should not subject those captive ratepayers to monopoly rents. It is wrong when the owner of all the stations, there will be no competing cable system. We do this with a short rulemaking by the FCC, the telephone companies having to enter a good faith negotiation with a facilities-based competitor, to open the loop.

Third, the V-chip. We are creating a universe that is going to go from 30 to 50 to 60 to 100 to 200 to 500 channels. Mothers and fathers who want this technology in their home for the wide variety of programming that will be available will also be terrified at what their child may gain access to when they are in the kitchen. A violence chip upgrades the on-off switch. That is all it does. It allows the parent to upgrade a 1950s on-off switch to something that they can have on or off when they are not in the room. That is all we are talking about. It only matches this 500 channel universe.

Mr. Chairman, these are the issues that we have to include in this bill if we are to have the 21st century. Competition and protection of the consumer. I would hope that those amendments would be adopted.

Let me make another point. Here is the complaint form that is going to have to be put out. For example, if you have 200,000 cable subscribers that are owned by the company in your area, 6,000 people have to fill out this form in order to complain about rates sky-rocketing when there is no other cable company in town that they can turn to, because rates are too high or quality is too low. Six thousand people out of 200,000 subscribers filling out a form that would basically make the 1040 form look attractive to most of them.

Mr. Chairman, this is not a complaint form. This is not a way in which ordinary consumers are going to be able to appeal when their rates go back up three times the rate of inflation before we put that cable rate protection on the books in 1992.

I am not looking for the kinds of radical changes that people might think I am looking for common sense changes.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr.NEY].

Mr. NEY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I just want to actually make a comment, Mr. Chairman, about something that was not in the bill and we were disappointed because we did have an amendment, and that was to include stressing of availability and affordability for access for rural libraries, rural schools, and also rural hospitals. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLEILEY], the chairman of the committee, has stated here that although the amendment did not make it to the Committee on Rules, which was a disappointment, but that he is going to do all he can to work with the Senate version which does contain, I think, some good language.

Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to restress that there are a lot of Members of the House, had that amendment been in order and had that amendment come forth on the floor, they would have supported the amendment. I want to tell people here on the floor, Mr. Chairman, that in fact one of the most disenfranchised areas in the United States is in fact rural America. They pay the toll calls. There has not been the availability in a lot of areas on the information highway for rural America.

We know that we do not have enough money to solve all the problems, so therefore using high technology is going to bring a lot of information for our hospitals we could not normally get, it is going to bring a lot of information to our students who really do not have the advantage a lot of times of the high-technology systems, it is going to bring a lot of advantage to our libraries. I just want to restress that it has to be available and affordable.

Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the commitment of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLEILEY] if we do not do something in this bill that is not in the House version, if we do not do something in the conference report, as this information superhighway goes across the United States, there is not going to be any exit ramps for rural America.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BRYANT].

(Mr. BRYANT of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BRYANT of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I would like to identify with the very generous remarks made by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY] a moment ago about the hard work done on this bill over the last few weeks that has been obviated by the fact that we now have before us at the very last minute what is called a manager's amendment which changes the bill entirely. The work of the committee, therefore, and the work of all of the people that came forth in the private sector, all of the people that came forth in the various public sectors, all of the Members of Congress, has now basically been sidelined while a manager's amendment that has been hammered out by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLEILEY], Mr. Chairman, and I assume from Michigan [Mr. DINKELL] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS] and others, not in an open committee rule, not with hearings, not with any organized input from anybody, is going to be brought up and we are going to be asked to vote for that.

Mr. Chairman, I think it is unprecedented. Maybe there is a precedent for it, although I cannot remember what it is. But I think that even if there were some precedent along the way that we pro-
The gentleman's question is right on target. We cannot reconcile the two goals, and I hope the Members will vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Markey], for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], and, if we do not get them adopted, for goodness' sakes vote against the bill.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Oxley].

(Mr. Oxley asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Chairman, as an original cosponsor of the Communications Act of 1995, I wish to express my support for the manager's amendment and the bill, and let me give credit to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS], the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Bliley], the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Dingell], the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Matanis], and many others who have worked long and hard on this. We are not reinventing the Wheel here.

The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Boucher] and I have introduced a bill involving [cable][telco] cross-ownership along with then Senator GORE and CONRAD BURNS from Montana, and before that there was a bill introduced by Al Swift from Washington, and Tom Tauke from New York. This has been an issue that has been with us a long time.

The real question we ask ourselves is do we think it is necessary 10 years later to have an unelected, unresponsive Federal judge as a czar of telecommunications, or is it time we take that issue back for the people through their duly elected representatives?

Make no mistake about it. This is the most deregulatory bill in American history. Some $30 billion to $50 billion in annual consumer business costs are benefited, 3½ million new jobs created. This is the largest jobs bill that will pass this Congress or any other Congress for a long time to come. It opens up all telecommunications markets to full competition, including local telephone and cable.

Now the cable/telco provisions based on the bill I introduced with the gentleman from Virginia is part and parcel of this bill. It basically allows telephone companies into cable, cable into telephone, and provides the necessary competition that is going to benefit our consumers.

I want to talk briefly about a provision that I was intimately involved in, and that is section 310(b) of the Communications Act. We felt it necessary to modernize that provision so that American companies would have better access to capital and at the same time would be more competitive in a global economy. Thank you, through the efforts of compromise with the Members on both sides of the aisle, we have reached that compromise, and I think that section 310(b), as we have amended it working with the administration as well as with the members of the committee, is clearly a much better section than it currently is in that it would encourage foreign governments, if left as it is now, to restrict market access for U.S. firms.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Goodlatte].

(Mr. Goodlatte asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Hyde] for yielding this time to me, and I rise in strong support of this legislation which will help to move the telecommunications policies of this country into the second half of the 21st century just in time to see this exploding technology move into the 21st century.

Make no mistake about it. It was Government policy that has restrained what is clearly the greatest opportunity for the creation of new technology that exists in this country, and it is about time that we enact this new policy to afford the opportunity to create the competition in all sectors of telecommunications that is going to make people better and to present an opportunity for all Americans to have greater access to information, to have greater access to employment, and have greater opportunities for new investment in all kinds of creative ideas.

I strongly support this legislation. I do have concerns about some aspects of it. I will support the Burton-Markey v-chip amendment, and I would urge others to do so as well. This is not Government censorship, this is not getting Government involved in reviewing and screening these programs, the thousands of programs that are going to come across hundreds of cable channels. This is the empowerment of the parents of this country to be able to exercise the same responsibility in their own living rooms that they are now able to do with every movie that is offered in every movie theater in this country. It is simply an advanced technology for allowing parents to do the same thing with thousands of programs that are offered every week in their home that they do with the dozens of movies that are offered to their children in movie theaters. They will do it with technology, with the v-chip. That is the only feasible way that I know of, and I am not the only one that knows of to accomplish this goal when we are talking about this massive amount of information.

I am also disappointed that the amendment, which I offered, the Goodlatte-Moran amendment, was not made in order by the committee to guarantee protection for local governments that they will continue to be able to provide the kind of decisions on the placement of telecommunications equipment that exist, and we have received assurance from my good friend, the chairman of the Committee on Commerce and fellow Virginian, that this matter will be...
Mr. BARTON of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Chairman and members, I rise in support of the bill. I think this is a very far-reaching telecommunications revolution on their doorstep. The Internet is in section 244 of the bill which outlines the conditions that local telephone companies must meet prior to entering the long distance marketplace. The aim of deregulation was to spur phone and cable companies to enter into each other's markets and create competition. That in turn would lower prices and improve service. Just the opposite would happen under H.R. 1555 in its current form. H.R. 1555 would give local cable—phone monopolies. Cable and phone firms could merge in communities of less than 50,000. Therefore, nearly 40 percent of the nation's homes could end up with monopolies providing them both services and the public would not be protected from unreasonable rate increases.

Mr. Chairman, the Department of Justice is the best protector of competition by utilizing the antitrust laws of this country. The Conyers amendment will ensure that the Justice Department of Justice has a meaningful role in the telecommunications reform, and, if it passes, consumers of America will benefit.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would like to announce for the benefit of the Members on the floor or in their offices that it is my intention to move that the Committee rise after general debate. There will be no amendment votes tonight on amendments.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BAR-... market. My amendment will give state utility commissions additional leverage to pressure the local phone companies to meet established customer service standards and requirements.

Local telephone customers complain vociferously about long waits for telephone repairs, busy signals at business offices, and inaccurate information provided by company customer representatives.

Just today, the Associated Press ran a story detailing customer service woes in the Pacific Northwest. According to the story, delayed new-service orders have increased 47 percent just this year. Across the West, more than $3,500 orders for new telephone service have been delayed in excess of 30 days. I ask that several articles addressing this situation be printed in the RECORD. Additionally, I submit a letter from Oregon Public Utilities Commission chairman Joan Smith be included for the RECORD.

[From the Associated Press, Aug. 2, 1995]

UTILITY REGULATORS QUESTION HELD ORDERS—CONSOLIDATION LINK

DENVER.—U.S. West Communications Inc.'s delayed new-service orders have increased 47 percent this year, and utility regulators blame it partially on the company's consolidated engineering program to consolidate work sites in Denver that are causing the problem, said many engineers declined to transfer, said.

"The committee speculates that it is the removal of engineers from each state and the current centralization of engineering services in Denver that are causing the problems," she said in a June 9 letter to Scott McClellan of U.S. West. U.S. West spokesman Dave Banks said the consolidation did not cause the problems.

"The intent of going through the re-engineering effort is to do just the opposite of what regulators might be saying," he said. "I think the problem is more of a result of the fact that we haven't been able to complete our re-engineering process in total yet." For more than a year, U.S. West has battled customer service woes, ranging from persistent busy signals at business offices to delays of months and, in some cases years, in filing new-service orders. The company has identified the problems were caused by unprecedented growth in the Rockies, which occurred as it launched a re-engineering program to consolidate work centers, cut jobs and upgrade equipment.

As part of that re-engineering, U.S. West last month opened the Network Reliability Center in Littleton, which houses employees and equipment needed to monitor the 14-state telephone network.

In a June 30 letter to Smith, Mary E. Olson, a vice president in network infrastructure, said the major cause of engineering delays has been the company's inability to readily access updated records on the network.

The company hopes to complete mechanization of that information by year-end, she said.

When the consolidation occurred, Olson said many engineers declined to transfer, which caused some delays, but the center is 95 percent staffed.

At the end of June, U.S. West had 3,588 held orders new-service requests delayed more than 30 days. That compared with 4,406 at the end of June 1994, 1,979 in January and 2,443 at the end of March.

The largest increase occurred in Utah, where held orders reached 422 at the end of June, up from 197 in June 1994. Increases also were reported in Idaho, Minnesota, Nebraska, Utah and Washington.

Held orders decreased in Arizona, Colorado, Iowa, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota and Wyoming. U.S. West exceeded its company goal of answering within 20 seconds at least 80 percent of the calls for residential service at its service office. It answered within 20 seconds 75.5 percent of the calls for residential repairs; 79.9 percent of for business repairs; and 72 percent to business repairs.

The regulator also has seen an increase in delayed repair orders and an increase in consumer complaints across U.S. West's 14-state region.

"Held orders are the biggest problems," said Montana regulator Bob Rowe. "Some of the problems concerning the customer-service centers have seen some real improvements."

Banks of U.S. West said, "We're not exactly where we want to be, but again, June is a much busier season for us." The numbers "are basically going to be higher in the summer months because we have much more demand for service improvements.

U.S. West spokesman Duane Cooke the company has scheduled 250 major construction projects in Utah this year and increased its capital expenditures to nearly $100 million to offset the problems. It is kind of ironic because the re-engineering program was supposed to improve customer service in the short-term has aggravated the situation," he said. "But, now we're starting to see the benefits of re-engineering."

For example, the consolidated engineering group can complete work on a major construction project in three months to four months, compared with a year to 18 months previously.

U.S. House of Representatives, Longworth Office Building, Washington, DC.

Re H.R. 1555 [Quality of Service].

I write to you about H.R. 1555, the telecommunications deregulation bill, as a member of the Regional Oversight Committee (ROC) for U.S. West. Representing a state that has been extremely aware of the effects H.R. 1555 may have on the quality of Oregon's telephone service. I urge your support for stronger service quality protections, as suggested by the ROC.

The ROC was formed as a result of state regulatory concerns about affiliated interest transactions and cross-subsidy issues arising out of the Modification of Final Judgment (MFJ) that divided the nationwide telecommunications monopoly into separate regulated carriers.

The ROC assists state commissions to perform their duties through positive, open relationships in a cooperative and competitive environment for telecommunications services is a goal that we all share, consumer protection in the present is an important consideration that should not be ignored in our enthusiasm for the future.

(3) THE NEW REGULATORY ENVIRONMENT

(A) In instituting the price flexibility required in this section the Commission and the States shall establish alternative forms of regulation that do not include regulation of the rate of return, if appropriate, may apply such alternative forms of state "alternative form of regulation" plan that would provide ongoing consumer protection from potential adverse effects of market change if the common carriers are regulated. The language of the Senate bill could easily be included in H.R. 1555 by changing existing Section 3 to Section 4, and including the Senate language as a new Section 3. (See attachment.) I support this modification.

I urge your support for such an amendment.

We sent this to the House delegation.]

Chairman.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO H.R. 1555

Including the attached language in H.R. 1555 would make it clear that states have the authority to respond to local conditions and take action to protect consumers when necessary. The plan for an alternative form of regulation could include penalties for failure to meet service quality standards. While the committee is committed to a full transition to a full competitive marketplace for telecommunications services is a goal that we all share, consumer protection in the present is an important consideration that should not be ignored in our enthusiasm for the future.

(B) The Commission or a State, as appropriate, determines to be in the public interest.

(8) The Commission or a State, as appropriate, determines to be in the public interest.

The Commission or a State, as appropriate, may apply such alternative forms of regulation of any telecommunications carrier that is subject to rate of return regulation under this Act.
was that the Bell system was using its rationale for the massive antitrust law.

A serious problem with the Bell going into long-distance, because there was a small problem with the Bell entry into long-distance. The cornerstone of the antitrust suit by the Justice Department that began in the 1970s and settled in 1984 was that the Bell system was using its local exchange monopoly to impede competition in the long-distance business.

Basically, the Bell system was cross-subsidizing and discriminating in favor of their long-distance business. This is the biggest antitrust suit that has ever been brought, dismissing the courts from it and deregulating at the same time; and, now, we suggest further that we defang the one regulator, the antitrust division of Justice, which, I think, is using us in exactly the wrong direction to compete, to encourage diversity and to stimulate competition.

Because of the concern that the seven baby Balls would continue the same anti-competitive behavior, Mr. Chairman, the consent decree barred them from entering the long-distance business unless they could prove that there was "No substantial possibility" they could use the monopoly position to impede competition.

The truth is, Mr. Chairman, very little has changed since 1984. The Bells still have a firm monopoly over the local exchange market, and if they were allowed in long-distance without any antitrust review, they could use their monopoly position to stifle competition and harm consumers. If we are to prevent this from occurring, we need to make sure that there is a Department of Justice antitrust review role, more of which will come on our amendment.

Now, Mr. Chairman, the administration has already sent an advisory that this bill will sustain a veto in its present form because of, principally, the manager's amendment, some 20 to 30 changes strewn throughout the commerce product that came to the floor in the form that it is now.

What are we going to do, Mr. Chairman? Is there any way that we can get together? Does this have to be a train wreck? The President has already signed the bill. Unless we make some sensible adjustments, I think that this is going to end up for naught, and we are going to be sent back to the drawing board. We did this once in the last Congress and now here we are doing it again. I urge, Mr. Chairman, that some consideration to these important amendments by given by the Members of the other side.

I would like to thank, Mr. Chairman, my staff. They have played a very important role in this matter. My staff director, Julian Epstein, Perry Apelbaum, Melanie Sloan, and I do know the names of the other staff Members on the other side, and I salute them for their good work as well.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Before recognizing the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Bliley], let me, just for the edification of the Members, announce the time remaining.

The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Bliley] has 10 minutes remaining, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Conyers] have 6½ minutes remaining, Mr. Bliley, Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Hastert], a member of the committee.

Mr. Hastert asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman for yielding me time. I urge my colleagues to support the Communications Act of 1995.

It is time to move forward with the most deregulatory and progressive communications legislation Congress has considered in over a decade. The Communications Act of 1934 is a dinosaur that just can't keep pace with the exploding information and communication revolution.

Communications industries represent nearly one-seventh of the economy and will foster the creation of 3.4 million jobs over the next 10 years. Thus, every day we delay passage of H.R. 1555, we stifle competition and prevent the creation of these new jobs. If we do not act, the cost to our Nation's economy will be the $30 to $50 million this year alone.

As a member of the Commerce Committee, I have been closely involved with drafting this legislation.

This bill provides a formula for removing the monopoly powers of local telephone exchange providers to allow real competition in the local loop. The long distance companies came to us early on with a list of areas (such as number portability, dialing parity, interconnection, equal access, resale, and unbundling) that give monopolies their bottleneck in the local loop. We agreed to remove the monopoly power in each and every one of those areas in our bill.

What's more, we included a facilities based competitor requirement. This means there must be a competing company actually providing service over his or her own telephone exchange facilities. Just meeting the checklist isn't enough—there must be some proof that it works. We've got that in this bill.

Bringing competition to the local loop is the best thing we can do for consumers. They will receive the twin benefits of lower prices and exposure to new and advanced services. Every day we delay consideration of this bill is a day telephone customer is denied choice of service providers and the benefits that go along with it.

The bill is much larger than the Bell operating company/long distance company fight. The bill is supported by the cable, broadcast, newspaper, and cellular industries. Taxpayer and consumer interest groups such as Citizens for a Sound Economy also support the bill.

Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would like to just speak very directly to the problem of seven Bells going into long-distance, because there is a serious problem with the Bell entry into long-distance. The cornerstone of the antitrust suit by the Justice Department that began in the 1970s and settled in 1984 was that the Bell system was using its
Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KLINK].

Mr. KLINK. Mr. Chairman, I thank my good friend, the gentleman from Louisiana, for yielding this time to me. I also want to echo the comments of some of the other speakers making thanking Chairman BILLEY and Chairman FIELDS. They have been two very accommodating chairmen in trying to reach some commonality on many of the issues that this massive bill deals with. Unfortunately, I have been unable to get in touch to support this and continue my opposition of the bill.

Let me just say I have a little different perspective I think. As many of the Members who were talking on the rule and who also have been speaking during general debate have talked about, we have already seen the massive amounts of merging that has been going on in anticipation of this bill. We have seen the Disney buyout of Cap Cities-ABC for $19 billion. We have seen Westinghouse Broadcasting $5 billion buyout of CBS.

I worked for Westinghouse Broadcasting for 14 years before coming here, so I know a little bit about the company. I do not have any belief that Westinghouse is an evil corporation or that it has any bad plans. In fact, I have fed my children and paid my rent for many years from the fruits of my labor with that company.

But what really concerns me is the fact that we are beginning to see the formation of what I would call information cartels. Only the largest corporations are going to be able to own these media outlets. In fact, when you start to talk about the fact that you can own the newspapers, as so many speakers have talked about, and the radio stations and the cable, my question is this: Who in this House among us, if we live in a market where that takes place, will be free to cast a vote of conscience on a matter in which the person who controls that information cartel in our district has a fiduciary interest? How will we be free to do that?

How can we look each other in the eye and say, “Well, I will cast my vote the way I want to”?” What is your recourse? How do you get the information back? Does that person controls all the media. You are certainly not going to use frank mailing, because we have cut all that out.

I simply think there are so many things wrong with this, and hope, as the debate goes, we will bring some of the problems out, because we have many problems. I urge Members not to support the bill.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, I am very pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN].

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to speak on the manager’s amendment which will be offered by the gentleman from Virginia sometime later. And I do so regretfully, because I rise in strong opposition to it. But first, I want to commend the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BILLEY] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS] on the enormous effort they have put forward in bringing this bill to the floor.

Mr. Chairman, I represent nearly 20,000 people who are employed in the telecommunications industry. This bill will directly impact their lives, professions, and the local economies which they support.

And I thought the bill that was reported by the Committee by a vote of 38 to 5 was a balanced bill. But the changes in the 66-page manager’s amendment would dilute the competitive provisions in the original bill and would tilt the playing field in favor of the local exchange companies. So I will be opposing the amendment.

However, this bill impacts more than just the people who work in the telecommunications industry. As many have said here tonight, our actions will impact every American citizen and we must consider all of them—our constituents—in this debate.

Yes, this is an historic bill which will guide this multibillion dollar industry into the next century. But we need to understand that the results of this profound debate will affect every facet of our personal and professional lives financial and otherwise.

And that is precisely why I oppose the manager’s amendment. We should debate these substantial changes for longer than a half hour because they do represent a clear departure from the original bill. I would urge a no vote on the manager’s amendment.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. KAPTUR], a very able Member of the House.

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I rise in opposition to H.R. 1555. Here we are in the middle of the night considering the most sweeping rewrite of communications legislation in the last half century. I have to say to all the gentlemen that have been complimented of all responsibilities in this, and that is the reason I am here at 2 a.m. in the morning.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, if you are leaving the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONYERS] out, could you leave me out too?

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Chairman, I would say to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE], I was hoping the gentleman would have a little more, because I think he is a man of very good intentions. But I wanted an opportunity on this floor to have time to debate on the foreign ownership provisions. I will not be given that opportunity. There will not be an opportunity to offer amendments. I think the neutering of the Justice Department is an absolute abomination, when we see the possibilities for concentration in this bill.

So as I leave this evening to drive home in my car, I find it a complete abomination, and I am ashamed of this House this evening. With a $1 trillion industry, with the rights of free press at stake, and competition in every one of our communities hanging in the balance, to be forced into this girdle, where we are only allowed 30 minutes during general debate, and then we will be put off on three little amendments tomorrow, maybe we will devote an hour or less to each of those, this is not the best that is in us.

I feel tonight as I did during the savings and loan debate, during the Mexican peso bailout, and probably during GATT as well, that we are truly being...
Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1555, the Communications Act of 1995. By the early 21st century, analysts predict the global information industry will be a $3 trillion market. That's an industry that was born in the '60s. Consider the entire U.S. economy today is about $6 trillion. Make no mistake: If we fail to pass this bill, we will have forfeited a golden opportunity for the U.S. economy to catch the wave of this revolution.

It makes no sense to keep U.S. communications companies penned up in the starting gate as the global telecommunications race is set to begin. My colleagues, the Communications Act of 1995 is, quite simply, the most sweeping reform of communications law in history. And it should be. I direct your attention to the timeline. When the first Communications Act passed in 1934, we had the telephone, the telephone and the radio. That's it. Bill and I will give you a hint: I will not see a color television set yet. Do you really want the communications industry to be governed by communications law that was enacted when we had this range of communications at our fingertips? The communications world as it existed in 1934 is barely recognizable today. Again, I direct your attention to the timeline. We have experienced an explosion of technology. In the last 50 years, television, AM and FM radios, computers, faxes, satellites, cable TV, cellular phones, VCRs and other wireless communications have all joined the communications mix. And that's just the beginning. Video dial-tone and high definition television are poised at the entrance of the telecommunications arena, while countless other new technologies are waiting just over the horizon.

At this moment in history, when the communications revolution is racing toward geography, it is time to scrap communications laws written 60 years ago. To say our communications laws are out of sync with the technological revolution underway in America is an understatement. The question we face today is not whether we can afford to deregulate the telecommunications industry, it is whether we can afford not to. I know of no sector of our economy so shackled by needless regulations as the communications industry. But if we pass this bill, the competition that will spark will amaze even its supporters.

My colleagues, it is not the business of Government to preordain winners and losers in the communications industry. Rather, at the starting line of the communications race, Government should step aside and allow the most dynamic sector of our economy to enjoy what most other segments of our economy take for granted, the freedom to compete. I urge all of my colleagues to support this bill. Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Arkansas [Mrs. LINCOLN].

(Mrs. LINCOLN asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. LINCOLN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time. I too would like to add my thanks to Chairman BLILEY and Chairman FIELDS, as well as to the ranking members, Mr. DINGELL and Mr. MARKEY, for their diligence and persistence in moving ahead on this issue. This is a very serious issue to us. As we move ahead in this age of information and technology, moving into a worldwide economy, it is absolutely critical for rural America to be able to have the capabilities to compete. Supporting this bill is important to preserve the quality of life in rural America, while bringing improved health care, educational opportunities and jobs.

Early in the debate of this issue, I went to Chairman FIELDS and asked him very honestly to let me be a part of the process for information for a real issue. He was very willing and interested in obliging to that. We worked hard to make sure that rural America saw a fair shake in this.

This is an issue of educational opportunities. I am delighted to hear from Chairman BLILEY that he is willing to work with the gentlewoman from California, Ms. LOFgren, in terms of educational opportunities for schools.

I recently spoke with a teacher from my district who is a part of an important program sponsored by National Geographic to bring geography into the lives of children in areas where they are not capable or do not have the opportunities otherwise to be a part of that. They were shocked to find that in rural America very few of the schools and some of the other learning institutions, as well as many of the teachers, did not have the technology or equipment to be able to bring the important subject of geography into the classroom through the Internet.

This bill will help us bring that reality to rural America. It encourages new technologies like fiber optics, which will allow two-way voice and video communication. The information highway is critical to all of us, but for those of us in rural America, the entrance ramp is absolutely mandatory. Doctors at the Mayo Clinic can read x-rays from Evening Shade, AR. Children in Evening Shade can dial the Library of Congress for information for their term paper. Parents can work from their home in Cloverbend with folks in New York.

I urge my colleagues to support this. Opponents may want to stay in the past and may be afraid of competition, but we must move ahead.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I want to say Aloha Oahu. It is 9 o'clock in the beautiful Hawaiian Islands where America's day almost begins, and I just wanted those lucky folks in that beautiful climate to know that we are here thinking of...
H. R. 1528 was referred primarily to the Judiciary Committee, and secondarily to the Commerce Committee. Likewise, H. R. 1555 was referred primarily to the Commerce Committee, and secondarily to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H. R. 1555, the Communications Act of 1995. This legislation represents the most sweeping communications reform legislation to be considered in this House in 60 years. It will establish the ground rules for telecommunications policy in our Nation as we proceed into the 21st century. If enacted, this measure will have much to say about the future health of the American economy, America's international competitiveness, and expanded job opportunities for American workers.

However, it should be pointed out that 1555 does not take the approach I would have preferred, and I would like to take a few moments to discuss the role of the Judiciary Committee in the development of this legislation. The Judiciary Committee took a fundamentally different approach from that of the Commerce Committee. I believe that the entry of the regional Bell operating companies into the long distance and manufacturing businesses is an antitrust question. After all, it is an antitrust consent decree, commonly known as the modification of final judgment or MFJ, that now prevents them from entering those business, and it is that decree that we are now superseding. Based on this fundamental belief, I introduced H. R. 1528, the Antitrust Consent Decree Reform Act of 1995 on May 2, 1995. H. R. 1528 proposed to supersede the MFJ and replace it with a quick and deregulatory antitrust review of Bell entry by the Department of Justice.

On the other hand, the Commerce Committee understandably took a Communications Act approach. H. R. 1555 requires the Bell operating companies to meet various federal and state regulatory requirements to open their local exchanges to competition before they are allowed into the long distance and manufacturing businesses. For example, the Bell companies are required to provide interconnection to their local loops on a nondiscriminatory basis. H. R. 1555 does not take the approach, and features of the network and offer them for resale. They must also provide number portability, dialing parity, access to rights of way, and network functionality and accessibility. Both the FCC and the state commissions will review the Bell companies' verifications to determine that they have met these regulatory requirements. In particular, there must be an actual facilities-based competitor in place before the Bell companies can get into long distance manufacturing businesses.

In keeping with the long tradition of these committees sharing jurisdiction over the area of telecommunications, the Judiciary Committee, Mr. Conyers, will offer an amendment that will include some aspects of the bill as reported by our committee. Specifically, my friend from Michigan will offer the language of the antitrust test contained in H. R. 1528. However, the Conyers amendment also differs in important respects from Mr. Conyers's bill. I will speak to those differences in greater detail when the Conyers amendment is debated. For now, I will simply point out that although the Conyers amendment would use the antitrust approach taken in H. R. 1528, it does not include the many procedural and substantive features that were central to my bill.

Despite my preference for the antitrust approach taken in my bill, I believe that H. R. 1555 is good legislation that will move America's telecommunications industry forward into the 21st century. In the development of the manager's amendment to be offered by Chairman BLILEY, the Judiciary Committee has worked closely with the Commerce Committee to improve H. R. 1555 in areas that are of particular concern to, and under the jurisdiction of, the Judiciary Committee. Let me now briefly explain those changes which are included within the manager's amendment.

First, the manager's amendment does include a consultative role for the Department of Justice. Under this part of the amendment, DOJ will apply the antitrust standard contained in H. R. 1528 to verifications that the Bells have met the competitive checklist contained in H. R. 1555. After applying the antitrust standard, DOJ will provide its views to the FCC and they will be made a part of the public record relating to the verification. Under this approach, the FCC will at least have the benefit of a DOJ antitrust analysis before the Bell companies are allowed to enter the currently restricted lines of business.

Second, we have made improvements to the electronic publishing provisions of the bill. Under the manager's amendment, the Bell companies will be required to provide services to small electronic publishers at the same per-page prices that they charge to larger publishers. This will allow small newspapers and other electronic publishers to bring the information superhighway... to rural areas that might otherwise be passed by. Also, we have broaden to definition of basic telephone service to ensure that the Bell operating companies are not able to use the more advanced parts of their networks to skirt the intent of the electronic publishing provisions.

Third, we have made various changes to title IV of the bill. Title IV addresses the effect of the bill on other laws. Those changes that we have made to the title IV portion of the manager's amendment have been in numerous local jurisdictions. This policy change in the manager's amendment to the 1992 telecommunications law, and the wireless successor language are technical improvements to clarify the language and they are not intended to change the substantive meaning of these provisions.

Other changes to title IV are substantive. State tax officials have complained that section 401(c)(2) of H.R. 1555 would unintentionally preempt State tax laws. Because of their concerns, this language is being stricken in the manager's amendment. We are also adding language that expressly provides that no State tax laws are intentionally preempted by implication or interpretation. Rather, such preemptions are limited to provisions specifically enumerated in this clause. In addition, we have also amended the local tax exemption for providers of direct broadcast satellite services to make it clear that States may tax such services and rebate that money to the localities that choose to continue in that business, and to manage and conduct their business as would any other participant in that industry. That is basic fairness to any Bell company that chose to enter the business when it was perfectly legal to do so. Their investment decision should not be undercut by a retroactive change in the law.

Fifth, law enforcement and national security agencies have expressed concern about the provisions of the bill that would define obscenity for purposes of sale or distribution. A definition of basic telephone service to skirt the intent of the electronic publishing markets. Much to the dismay of concerned parents both softcore and hard-core pornography is freely available on the Internet. Virtually anyone with a home computer hooked up to that remarkable technology can get pictures, movies—some with sound—and explicit descriptions of the most vile and base aspects of human sexuality.

Although the law currently outlaws the interstate transportation of obscenity for purposes of sale or distribution, as well as its importation, this has not stopped the corruption of one of the greatest technological advances in our modern society. Computerized depravity continues unabated, largely because of the confusion over whether the obscenity statutes include the transportation and importation of the obscene matter through the use of a computer. Furthermore, the law currently does not address the issue of sending obscene material—by contrast to obscene matter—by computer to a child.

It is time to end this dissemination of smut that only serve to debase those destroyed by computers. Consequently, my language makes it a crime to intentionally communicate, by computer, with anyone believed to be under 18 years of age, any material that is indecent. Indecency is defined in the provision as any material that, in context, depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards, sexual or excretory activities or organs.

This provision is entirely consistent with Supreme Court holdings in this area of law, because it is narrowly tailored to effectuate its particular purpose of protecting minors from direct communications that involve sexually or excretorily explicit functions or organs. The first amendment, as construed by the Supreme Court, requires this much. The Court instructs that Congress must be careful not to reduce the adult population, which is guaranteed a right of access to simply indecent matter, to the status of children. But, the amendment recognizes that the Government has a compelling interest in protecting minors from both obscenity and indecent materials. The Court has carved out a slim area in which we can legislate on these matters. And, we have managed to stay within those confines through this provision. The clarification of the current obscenity statutes, simply adds to the myriad of ways in which the obscenity can travel in, or be transmitted, or be imported. This section includes the word computer in those provisions to make it a certainty that the government will not regulate and proscribed one's access to obscenity by means of computer technology.

Mr. Chairman, I want to thank Chairman FIELDS and their staffs for their cooperation in addressing the Judiciary Committee concerns.

Mr. Chairman, as America advances into the 21st century, this telecommunications legislation is tremendously important. It is my firm belief that this bill means more jobs for Americans and will greatly enhance competitiveness worldwide. It is high time that we replace this overly restrictive consent decree with a statute that recognizes the telecommunications realities of the 1990's. I intend to support H.R. 1555 and the manager's amendment because it will accomplish these goals.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONYERS] is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I want to commend the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary for his comments about our work product in the committee, and his candor is always refreshing, as usual.

I too believe it is a superior work product. But I would urge him not to be worried about the fact that the lobbyists may not like it and there is not a lot of reported support for it. Press on. If he is doing the right thing, more and more people will begin to recognize the inevitability of the logic and the truth and the fundamental correctness of his position. And I know my friend from Michigan [Mr. CONYERS] will give up easily, and I cannot imagine the forces that may have overwhelmed him into the uncomfortable position that I imagine him to be in this morning.

But even if we have used our bill as the text with the manager's amendment, I still would not be able to come to the floor tonight to tell my colleagues that they ought to support this bill because the people who use telephones are going to end up paying $50 a year in rate increases in the first 4 years of this law's existence. That is projected by the International Communications Association. The people who subscribe to cable TV are going to find $5 to $7 per month average increases in this cable bill. That is according to the Consumer Federation of America. The people on fixed incomes, older Americans, will be put at particular risk by rising basic rates for phone and cable.

So I cannot support the bill, the base bill, H.R. 1555. With 30 or 40 phantom changes in the manager's amendment, I think we should be rather embarrassed by what we are doing here, no matter what time it is in Hawaii.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLILEY] has 5 minutes remaining and is entitled to close the debate.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. WHITE], a new member of the committee.
Mr. WHITE. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, when I think about this bill, I always think about the year 1989. If we remember reading in the newspapers in 1989, we will remember a lot of different things, but one of the most important things was high definition television. That was the time when the Japanese were ahead of our country in developing high definition television. There are a lot of people who said that we should follow their example, that our government should engage in something that we should take, should get our industry organized, and we should all follow that course, and maybe somehow, some way we would catch up with the Japanese.

Mr. Chairman, if we had followed that advice in 1989, we would not be here today. It was in 1990 that Americans, without the help of the government, invented digital television which leapfrogged the technology that the Japanese were using and put us in the position we are in today. It is digital television and digitization of the entire telecommunications industry that led to what we are doing in this bill. It has taught us a very important lesson.

The lesson is that it is the people, not the government, who are going to make the best decisions about technology. As we like to say in my district, which is the home of Microsoft, no matter how many Rhodes scholars you have in the White House, they are never going to be smart enough to tell Bill Gates to drop out of Harvard and invent software industries.

No matter how many Rhodes scholars you have in the White House, they will never tell the next Bill Gates to drop out of whatever school he or she is in now and invent the next revolution in the telecommunication industry. What is the lesson? Under this bill, the market, not the government, is going to tell us what the next wave of technology is. We have heard some people say this bill is not perfect. I guess that may be true. But I can tell you, we have made it about as fair as we can make it.

It is close enough for government work. Although it is late at night and although I am about the last person to speak on this bill, I am proud to be here. I am happy to be here. I am proud of this bill. I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. TAUZIN].

Mr. TAUZIN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me. I think it is important tonight, as we celebrate the work of Committee on Commerce and the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLILEY] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS] in particular, we also give due credit to the incredible preliminary work done over the years by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], the former chairman of the Committee on Commerce. Much of the work that is in this bill reflects efforts that were made over the years by Mr. DINGELL, and he deserves much credit for this bill tonight.

I rise in support of H.R. 1555. Recently the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS], a very thoughtful member, discussed telecommunications policy with government officials from several South American countries. During one of those discussions with the FCC counterpart in Chile, we asked that question about the communications infrastructure did they need the most investment, hoping to get some signal about where America and American companies could interact with that country in doing those investments.

The gentleman who represents the FCC in Chile responded astonishingly. He said, That is not my business; it is up to the consumers and our companies to make these decisions.

He reminded us of a lesson we forgot in telecommunications policy for many years, that consumers and companies making choices in a free marketplace where competition governs instead of courts and regulations set the high bar here in Washington generally benefits the consumer much more than the best laid plans of mice and men here in Washington, DC.

He reminded us about our own open enterprise system, and H.R. 1555 reminds us about the values of competition. It remarkably keeps the program access provisions we adopted in 1992 that has produced the satellites that are now sending direct broadcast television signals to homes all over America in rural parts of this country where cable never reached.

It has produced for us competition in areas where people only had one provider of television, one provider of telephones and all of a sudden now there are choices coming to them. This bill will produce more of those choices. It has the possibility of several million new jobs for Americans, as we develop and find these new and these new choices for our citizens. It will reach rural areas that we have been trying to force companies to reach. It will reach them by the sheer force of the free market, because now with multiple choices, it will be profitable to serve communities as small as 12 people, when we could not serve them with a mere telephone, even under universal service.

This bill will do more to bring us together as a country by linking us together with communication, education, information, recreational programming, data services, including medicine at home and education at home for people who never saw education.

This bill is a good bill. It deserves our endorsement.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL] has 2½ minutes remaining.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, I hope my colleagues were listening to the remarks of the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana about what this bill is going to do.

I want to commend my good friend from Virginia [Mr. BLILEY] the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. FIELDS] my friend, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CONYERS] as well as our good friend, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE] who is one of the finest Members in this body.

We have had a good debate. It has been an enlightening debate, an intellectual discussion and this legislation before us. I think that is important. I was rather troubled earlier about the ill will which we saw sprinkled around in the discussion. I think that was a bad thing. This legislation is extremely important not only to all of us individually and to our people but indeed to the future of the country.

It has been a long time since the modified final judgment was adopted. These have been bad times for telecommunications and for communications and for that industry. It also has had bad consequences for the country.

I want to repeat to my colleagues that this offers a chance now to utilize a good, new regulatory system which will enable us to begin to bring on new technology and to bring into play the forces of competition, which will serve all of our people both in terms of product and in terms of quality and in terms of cost. That is important. It also will open up the process.

I had been bitterly critical of the curious process which has gone on under the modified final judgment. It has been inadequate. It has been unfair, and it has been a closed process. The business of regulation of the telecommunications industry has gone on in a closed courtroom where no one could find out what was going on, no one could participate in the pleadings.

No one could appear without the leave of the court and the people who were the principal beneficiary of that particular modified final judgment. It is important that we get rid of that. And even if this were a bad bill, I would say that almost any price is worth paying to get rid of a system which is so basically unfair.

It is so basically unseemly and so inconsistent with the system that this country has, so closed to innovation, so closed to competition by the people whose interests are affected by it, and so controlled by the beneficiaries of it. This is one of the curious examples where government has been controlled for the benefit of the people who did in fact do the governing, AT&T, the Justice Department, working with the judge. He was a good judge, but a bad process.

Mr. Chairman, I would urge my colleagues to support the amendment. I would urge my colleagues to support the legislation that has worked, Mr. Regan, Ms. Reid, Mr. Ullman, and Mr. Michael O'Reilly, as well as my dear friend and colleague, Mr. David Leach, who have all worked so effectively to put together the packages before us.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLILEY] is recognized to close debate.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Chairman, it is late.

I therefore commend to my colleagues,
Mr. Chairman, I say to the White representative from Texas [Mr. LAZIO], its effects on radio and television broadcasting audience reach is subject to different interpretations, the term "telemedicine" generally refers to live, interactive audiovisual communication between physician and patient or between two physicians.

Telemedicine can facilitate consultation between physicians and serve as a method of health care delivery in which physicians examine patients through the use of advance-ed telecommunications technologies.

One of the most important uses of telemedicine is to allow rural communities and other medically under-served areas to obtain access to highly trained medical specialists. It also provides access to medical care in remote areas, where possibilities for travel are limited or unavailable.

Despite widespread support for telemedicine in concept, many critical policy questions remained unresolved. At the same time, the Federal Government is currently spending millions of dollars on telemedicine demonstration projects with little or no congressional oversight. In particular, the Departments of Com-commerce and Health and Human Services have provided sizable grants for projects in a number of States.

Therefore, I drafted a provision which is included in the manager's amendment to require the Department of Commerce, in consultation with other appropriate agencies, to report annually to congress on the findings of any studies and Demonstrations on telemedicine which are funded by the Federal Government.

My amendment would be to provide greater information for federal policymakers in the areas of patient safety, quality of services, and other legal, medical and economic issues related to telemedicine. Through adoption of this provision, I am hopeful that we can shed light on the potential benefits of telemedicine, as well as existing roadblocks to its use.

Mrs. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in ophension of H.R. 1555, the Communications Act of 1995. Although I believe that our telecommunications laws are in need of reform,
I have serious concerns about certain sections of this bill, and about the manner in which it has been brought to the floor.

This is an important bill, because it will affect every time he or she picks up a phone or T.H. 714, H.R. 701 and H.R. 1874 companies now provide a dif-finition of the bill. I am to the telecommunications laws such that we can enter the 21st century governed by laws appropriate to the technology and services available to us.

But this bill is not the vehicle that will best accomplish those goals. I say let's go back to the drawing board and try again.

Mr. LAZIO of New York. Mr. Chairman, the
House shortly will consider H.R. 1555, the Communications Act of 1995. Among other things, this bill and its Senate-passed compan-yes and the local telephone companies would ever completely agree on any bill. But to formulate a manager's amendment that is vehemently opposed by one of the parties forces members to choose between the two. It is the responsibility of the leadership to do everything possible to reconcile the differences between those affected by this bill, and I do not believe this has been done.

I have other concerns, including the potential of the bill to concentrate media ownership in a few hands and the bill's effects on radio and television broadcasting audience reach limits.

I am also concerned about the effect of the bill on State authority to regulate the costs of certain long distance calls within States. Many States have already taken steps to liberate such rates, and the bill would negatively affect these efforts. I share the concerns of the Governor of Florida and several other governors about this issue.

Mr. LAZIO of New York. Mr. Chairman, the
House shortly will consider H.R. 1555, the Communications Act of 1995. Among other things, this bill and its Senate-passed compan-yes, S. 652, aims to ensure competition in the cable television industry as it expands into interactive voice, data and video services.

I wanted to bring to the attention of my colleagues in both bodies a serious and potentially dangerous situation that merits further study by Congress in the future, as it was not addressed by the legislation we are about to take up.

Currently, telephone systems provide a different sort of lightning or surge protection than is provided by the cable industry. Telephone companies have provided such protection through devices that instantaneously detect dangerous surges and direct them to ground.
Cable companies do not have these devices and now only are required to ground their systems. As telephone companies branch out into broadband transmission services, they will continue to be required to provide surge power and lightning hazards.

The National Electric Code does not require the cable industry to provide the same kind of surge protection to current and future cable users, even if cable companies will be providing the same kind of telephone service in the future that telephone companies now provide.

I am told that the cable industry has made a commitment to do so if it does offer such telephone service, but it is an issue Congress should review.

I would urge my colleagues, particularly those in the Commerce Committee, to closely examine this potential problem and to hold hearings to make sure public safety will be adequately protected as our telecommunications industry goes through a period of unprecedented change.

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Chairman, with that, yield back the balance of my time, and I move that the Committee discontinue and to a rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. HASTERT) having assumed the chair, Mr. KOLB, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, and the House having, pursuant to notice, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 1555), to promote competition and reduce regulation in order to lower prices and higher quality services for American telecommunications consumers and encourage the rapid deployment of new telecommunications technologies, had come to no resolution thereon.

ILLINOIS LAND CONSERVATION ACT OF 1995

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on National Security and the Committee on Commerce be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 714), to establish the Midewin Na-

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD – HOUSE

August 2, 1995
Mr. WELLER. My Speaker, I would like to speak briefly about the importance of this legislation, H.R. 714, the Illinois Land Conservation Act, which has overwhelming bipartisan support from Members on both the Republican and Democrat sides of the aisle. This is an innovative land reuse plan which was developed by a citizens planning commission, appointed under the direction of my predecessor, former Congressman George Sangmeister, resulted from thousands of hours of volunteer time from businesses, conservation organizations, business and labor, educators, and many civic organizations.

Mr. WELLER. My Speaker, I would like to speak briefly about the importance of this legislation, H.R. 714, the Illinois Land Conservation Act, which has overwhelming bipartisan support from Members on both the Republican and Democrat sides of the aisle. This is an innovative land reuse plan which was developed by a citizens planning commission, appointed under the direction of my predecessor, former Congressman George Sangmeister, resulted from thousands of hours of volunteer time from businesses, conservation organizations, business and labor, educators, and many civic organizations.

Briefly, the Joliet Army Ammunition Plant, commonly referred to as the Joliet Arsenal, was declared excess Federal property in April 1993. A local citizen's commission developed a plan for reuse of the site, which is encompassed in my legislation. The plan has received broad-based support from Illinois' major media, citizens' organizations, veterans' groups, business, labor, conservation, and educators. The plan includes transferring 19,000 acres to the National Forest Service for creation of the Midewin National Tall Grass Prairie. The plan also includes a veterans' cemetery, which will occupy just under 1,000 acres on the arsenal property.

There are also two sites, for a total of 3,000 acres, to be used for the purpose of economic development and job creation, and finally 455 acres will be used for a local landfill.

Since this bill's introduction, I have worked closely with all the agencies involved and have made changes in the legislation to reflect issues that they have had concerns with. This is bipartisan legislation supported by the Governor of the State of Illinois, Republicans and Democrats in the Illinois delegation, and a large number of veterans, conservation, environment, business and labor, and private organizations.

Clearly, H.R. 714 is a win-win-win for taxpayers, conservation veterans, and working men and women. I ask for and urge the bill's immediate passage with bipartisan support.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the bill offered by the gentleman from Illinois H.R. 714, the bill that would establish the Midewin National Tallgrass Prairie at the former Joliet Arsenal, is an excellent piece of legislation that can serve as a model for other communities with closed military bases.

I am proud to say that I was there at the beginning when I was creating an abandoned TNT factory into a multi-purpose site for the benefit of the 8 million Chicago-area residents was first conceived. I enjoyed working with our former colleague, George Sangmeister, during the 103rd Congress and I have equally enjoyed working with his successor, the distinguished gentleman from Joliet.

Located less than 50 miles from the Ninth District, the Midewin National Tallgrass Prairie will offer my constituents unparalleled preservation and recreational opportunities.

The Joliet Arsenal is a true trove of rare and endangered species—so unique in the urban sprawl of northern Illinois. Sixteen State endangered species, 108 different birds, 40 types of fish, and 348 native plant species can all be found on the arsenal property.

In addition, the arsenal site contains the single largest remaining tract of prairie east of the Mississippi River, and the only grassland of this size in unfragmented, single ownership. It is also important to note that the arsenal is adjacent to other reserves and when all of that open space is combined, it creates the biggest prairie in the entire country.

We have so few opportunities in Illinois to preserve original, intact ecosystems. Most of our land has either been consumed by ever-growing cities and suburbs or is being farmed. There are very few natural areas in our State; a forest preserve here, a park there, but not nearly enough to satisfy our most minimal needs.

That is why acquiring the Joliet Arsenal and creating a tallgrass prairie is a once-in-a-life-time opportunity. We will never have this chance again. How can we protect this valuable site, it could be lost forever.

This is a bipartisan bill, supported by a large and diverse group, including the Republican Governor of Illinois, the Democratic mayor of Chicago, the Forest Service, and every major environmental organization.

There have been many people who have helped make this project a reality, but I want to give special recognition to Dr. Fran Harty at the Illinois Department of Conservation and Dr. Larry Grish and his colleagues at the Shawnee National Forest for their extraordinary efforts to make the arsenal a tallgrass prairie.

I also want to commend the Forest Service for their leadership in this matter. After other agencies dragged their feet on acquiring the Joliet Arsenal, the Forest Service enthusiastically entered the endeavor. Their can-do spirit toward the arsenal is laudable and I want to express my sincere thanks to them for being so cooperative on a project that is important to me and my constituents. I hope to continue working with the Service in the future to secure adequate funding for the Midewin National Tallgrass Prairie.

The cooperation extended by the Forest Service is just one piece of the unique public-private partnership that formed to preserve the Joliet Arsenal. This is truly a national model of how closed military bases can be converted to productive civilian use and of how local communities can work with the Federal Government to ensure that these old bases are developed to benefit the community.

There are hundreds of military installations across the Nation that have been closed by the Base Closure Commission. The Federal Government must decide what to do with these old bases.

We've seen the negative impacts that closing military bases can have on local communities. But if we follow the example of the Joliet Arsenal and let the local community decide how best to use the closed facility and have the Federal Government assist that locale, a closed military base need not destroy a struggling community.

I think it would be wise for the Pentagon to study the Joliet Arsenal model and to implement it at other facilities slated for closure. This bill is good for the people of Illinois and clearly good for the Nation, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 714, the Illinois Land Conservation Act. H.R. 714 is nearly identical to H.R. 4946 that was introduced in the 103rd Congress by Congressman Sangmeister. H.R. 4946 was passed by unanimous consent in the House after being discharged by the Agriculture Committee at the very end of the session. The Senate took no action on the bill before adjournment.

H.R. 714, introduced by Congressman WELLER, establishes the Midewin Tallgrass Prairie by initially transferring approximately 16,000 acres currently held by the Department of the Army to the Department of Agriculture. The bill also provides for the transfer of approximately 910 acres to the Department of Veterans' Affairs and the establishment of a National Cemetery on the site to be administered by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs. Additionally, the bill provides for transfer to the county of approximately 425 acres to be operated as a landfill and approximately 3,000 acres to the State of Illinois to be used for economic development. The U.S. Forest Service is supportive of the legislation before us today.

Mr. Speaker, an amendment that will be offered to modify the language regarding special use permits is supported by the U.S. Forest Service. I ask that a letter from U.S. Forest Service Chief Jack Ward Thomas, acknowledging the new language's consistency with current U.S. Forest Service management practices, be included in the RECORD.

Hon. PAT ROBERTS,
Ranking Member, Committee on Agriculture, Washington, DC, July 28, 1995.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: This is to confirm discussions my staff have had with members of your staff regarding language contained in a draft Agriculture Committee version of H.R. 714, the 'Illinois Conservation Act of 1995.'

John Hogan, counsel to the Committee, has told my staff that a proposed amendment may be offered on the House floor to strike two sentences in subsection 105(b)(2). The referenced subsection refers to the issuance by the Secretary of Agriculture of special use authorizations for agricultural purposes, including livestock grazing. The proposed amendment would strike the second and third complete sentences in that subsection, specifically: "Such special use authorizations shall require payment of a rental fee, in advance, that is based on the fair market value of the use allowed. Fair market value shall be determined by appraisal or a competitive bidding process."

It is our understanding that the proposed deletion of those two sentences is intended to avoid any confusion between the use provisions of the Forest Act and the Forest Service Act over grazing fees in the Western States. Mr. Hogan asked our opinion as to what effect the deletion of these two sentences would have on management of the Midewin National Tallgrass Prairie. The proposed deletion of the referenced sentence would have no practical effect on management of the Prairie. The Forest Service will utilize the same general terms and conditions for agricultural leasing as was utilized by the Army, including competitive bidding for farming and leasing rights. This system has worked well for the Army and we plan to continue it. And, we note, the system is consistent with the general Forest Service management practices throughout the Eastern United States. If we can provide additional information, please do not hesitate to ask.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his explanation and the language of the bill. Mr. Speaker, I withold my reservation of objection. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. STENHOLM?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

AMENDMENTS OFFERED BY MR. EMERSON TO THE COMMITTEE AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I offer amendments to the Committee amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendments offered by Mr. EMERSON to the Committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. In section 105(b)(2) of the bill, strike the sentence beginning with 'Such special use' and the sentence beginning with 'Fair market value'.

In section 202 of the bill, strike subsection (e).

Mr. EMERSON (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendments be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. STENHOLM. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I shall not object, but I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Emerson] for an explanation of the bill.

(Mr. Emerson asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding under his reservation.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of this measure, H.R. 701, which is vital to the rural economic development efforts of southern Missouri. This legislation will authorize the U.S. Department of Agriculture to convey land within the Mark Twain National Forest to the city and citizens of Rolla, MO. This same bill was approved by the full House in the 103rd Congress, however,因为我 never Steps in the U.S. Senate on the last day of the 210 session, unrelated to the merits of this legislation, blocked further consideration and eventual passage.

The city of Rolla has been diligent in its plans to utilize the U.S. Forest Service's district ranger office site in the development and construction of a regional tourist center. I feel it important to note that tourism is the second largest industry in Missouri and this tourist center has already attracted interest and support for the need for dollars into the local economy.

Clearly, this project is a prime example of a local community exercising its own rural development plan for local expansion and job creation. In these terms of reduced Federal support for rural community-based economic enterprises, the city of Rolla is a shining example of an innovative approach that the other communities around the country can clearly emulate.

For over a year now, the city of Rolla has been collecting a 3-percent tax on local hotels in the attempt to finance... this project independent of any assistance from the Federal Government. Indeed, this land transfer arrangement is a very unique partnership for both Rolla and the Mark Twain National Forest. Several of Missouri's proud historical sites, which are among the most important elements of this site, will be maintained and preserved for current and future generations through the efforts of the city of Rolla—at a substantially reduced cost to State and Federal taxpayers.

This is particularly important to bear in mind, since this facility would have no further commercial viability without the direct involvement of the city of Rolla. So now, two worthy goals can be achieved—economic development and historical preservation. Indeed, there are other facilities that would serve the city's need for a tourist center, but the local community and its leaders have had the vision to realize this is a prime opportunity to help themselves and relieve Federal taxpayers from the burden of maintaining these Forest Service buildings and related facilities within the city of Rolla.

Mr. Speaker, I commend the leadership efforts of the Mark Twain National Forest and the city of Rolla. I urge the expeditious approval of this measure in order that the citizens of Rolla can get on with the business of economic development and job creation.

Mr. De La Garza. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 701, a bill to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to convey lands to the city of Rolla, MO. H.R. 701 is nearly identical to H.R. 3426 that was introduced in the 103rd Congress by Congressman Emerson. H.R. 3426 was passed by unanimous consent in the House after being discharged by the Agriculture Committee at the very end of the session. The Senate took no action on the bill before adjournment.

H.R. 701 authorizes the city of Rolla to pay fair market value for the lands described by the bill. The city may pay for the land in full within 6 months of conveyance or, at the option of the city, pay for land in annual payments over 20 years with no interest. If the 20-year option is taken, the payments must be put in a Sisk Act Fund where they will be available, subject to appropriation, until expended by the Secretary. The bill also authorizes the U.S. Forest Service from liability due to hazardous wastes found on the property to be conveyed, including all claims resulting from hazardous materials on the conveyed property.

Mr. Stenholm. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The Committee amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

MODIFYING BOUNDARIES OF TALLADEGA NATIONAL FOREST

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill, H.R. 1874, to modify the boundaries of the Talladega National Forest, Alabama, and ask for its immediate consideration on its passage.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the Committee amendments.

Mr. STENHOLM. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I shall not object, but I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. EMERSON] for an explanation of the bill.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding under his reservation of objection.

Mr. Speaker, this bill would transfer land to the Talladega National Forest Service. The land is currently being managed by the Forest Service. Another reason for the transfer is that the boundary of the Pinhoti Trail runs through a portion of the land that we are transferring. This transfer will enhance the management of the Pinhoti Trail. The total amount being transferred is 559 acres. It is my understanding that the minority has no objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri.

Q. Where on the Talladega Division are the lands affected by H.R. 1874?

A. The lands affected by H.R. 1874 are located in Calhoun County and contains 399.4 acres and is more particularly described as Township 17 South, Range 8 East, Section 34, NE1/4, SW1/4, and S1/2 NW1/4. This tract is located within the existing Administrative Map of the Talladega National Forest, the property is located in Calhoun County and contains 160 acres and is more particularly described as Township 17 South, Range 9 East, Section 28, SE1/4. This tract is transferred to the Talladega National Forest, the property is located in Calhoun County and contains 339.4 acres and is more particularly described as Township 17 South, Range 8 East, Section 34, NE1/4, SW1/4, and S1/2 NW1/4. This tract is located within the existing Administrative Map of the Talladega National Forest.

Q. What is the Pinhoti Trail?

A. The Pinhoti Trail is a foot trail that extends for 98.6 miles along the mountains, valleys, and ridges of the Talladega Division, Talladega National Forest, Alabama. It is "tentative" until the Forest Service has completed its Forest Plan Revision.

Q. Just what is the Pinhoti Trail?

A. The Pinhoti Trail is a National Recreation Trail that was designated in 1977. It is a foot trail that extends for 98.6 miles along the mountains, valleys, and ridges of the Talladega Division, Talladega National Forest.

Q. Does the public have any concern about the change?

A. Yes. They have worked closely with the Forest Service on this transfer for a number of years.

Q. Does BLM agree with this change of jurisdiction?

A. Yes. They have worked closely with the Forest Service on this transfer for a number of years.

Q. Does BLM agree with this change of jurisdiction?

A. Yes. They have worked closely with the Forest Service on this transfer for a number of years.

Q. What's presently located on these lands?

A. Both properties are forested tracts with pine and hardwood. There are no known or surveyed cultural resource sites or threatened or endangered species known to be located on these properties. The first tract is located inside a tentative Habitat Management Area for the Red Cockaded Woodpecker, a listed endangered species. The first tract is located inside a tentative Habitat Management Area for the Red Cockaded Woodpecker. It is "tentative" until the Forest Service has completed its Forest Plan Revision.

Q. What's presently located on these lands?

A. Both properties are forested tracts with pine and hardwood. There are no known or surveyed cultural resource sites or threatened or endangered species known to be located on these properties. The first tract is located inside a tentative Habitat Management Area for the Red Cockaded Woodpecker, a listed endangered species. The first tract is located inside a tentative Habitat Management Area for the Red Cockaded Woodpecker. It is "tentative" until the Forest Service has completed its Forest Plan Revision.

Q. What is a Habitat Management Area (HMA) and why is it "tentative"?

A. This is an area that contains pine and pine-hardwood forest types that will be managed for the recovery of the Red Cockaded Woodpecker. It is "tentative" until the Forest Service has completed its Forest Plan Revision.

Q. What is the Pinhoti Trail?

A. The Pinhoti Trail is a National Recreation Trail that was designated in 1977. It is a foot trail that extends for 98.6 miles along the mountains, valleys, and ridges of the Talladega Division, Talladega National Forest.

Q. Does the Pinhoti Trail begin and end?

A. The trail starts on the Talladega Ranger District at the east limit of the Talladega Scenic Drive and ends on the northeastern boundary of the Shoal Creek Ranger District at Highway 278.

Q. The first tract contains 399.4 acres while the description calls for 399.4 acres. Which is correct?

A. The 399.4 acres is correct. There was probably a typo error made while drafting the bill. However, the description is accurate.
reconvened by Quit Claim deed to the United States in 1978 due to its non-use. The Proclamation creating the Talladega National Forest included a provision that all lands hereafter acquired by the United States under the Weeks Act should be administered as a part of the Talladega National Forest. This provision, however, only applied to lands acquired by the Weeks Act, and not the BLM land which simply reverted back to the United States. The proclamation itself no longer had the force of law when the United States relinquished ownership to the subject land due to the repeal of the 1891 Act by section 704 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976. Hence, the subject land reverted to the appropriated public domain, and hence are not included within the Talladega National Forest as they had been withdrawn in favor of the State of Alabama prior to the proclamation and were later pateted to the State, thus entirely escaping federal control and the scope of the proclamation."

Q. What boundaries are being modified?
A. As previously indicated, the 160 acre parcel located in Calhoun County is located adjacent to but west of and outside of the existing Boundary for the Talladega National Forest. The Bill would extend this boundary to incorporate the tract.

The 399.4 acre parcel located in Cleburne County is within the Proclamation Boundary. Technically no boundary modification is needed in this case, as far as the Proclamation Boundary is concerned. However, the land line boundary would technically be changed in the jurisdictional transfer.

Regardless of the technicality of boundary modification, the Bill does effect the correct transfer of jurisdiction being sought by both agencies.

Q. How many additional acres of lands does the BLM presently have jurisdiction over that are within or adjacent to the Talladega National Forest?
A. None to the best of our knowledge.

Q. How is BLM presently managing these lands to be transferred to the Forest Service?
A. They are currently being managed for hunting and dispersed recreation.

Q. How much will it cost the Forest Serv-tice to administer these lands?
A. The additional cost would be to maintain the approximately 1 mile of additional boundary lines located on the 160 acre parcel in Calhoun County. Estimated cost for maintenance $500 to $1000 per mile.
However, with the tract located in Cleburne County, the Forest Service would actually lose approximately 1/4 mile of land line. Therefore there is a net loss of around 1/4 miles of land lines that the Forest Service will not have to maintain.

Since the lands are adjacent to and/or are within the existing National Forest, there will be little or no additional costs associated with the change of jurisdiction. The 599 acres would be incorporated into the 229,772 acres that make up the Talladega Division, Talladega National Forest. (Total for the entire Talladega National Forest is 387,176 acres.)

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

SECTION 1. EXPANSION OF TALLADEGA NA-TIONAL FOREST.

denial of renewal or reissuance of such au-

The Senate met at 9 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. We have a guest chaplain, Father Stephen Leva, St. Ann Church, Arlington, VA. He is the guest of Senator JOHN WARNER.

PRAYER

The guest chaplain, Father Stephen Leva, St. Ann Church, Arlington, VA, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray:

Almighty and eternal God: You have revealed Your glory to all nations. God of power and might, wisdom and justice, through You, authority is rightly administered, laws are enacted, and judgment is decreed. Assist with Your spirit of counsel and fortitude these women and men that they may be blessed with an abundance of wisdom and right judgment. May they encourage due respect for virtue; execute the law with justice and mercy; and seek the good of all the people of the United States.

Let the light of Your divine wisdom direct their deliberations and shine forth in all proceedings and laws framed for our rule and government. May they seek to preserve peace, promote civic happiness, and continue to bring us the blessings of liberty and equality. We likewise commend to Your unbounded mercy all the citizens of the United States; that they may be blessed in the knowledge and sanctified in the observance of Your law. May we be preserved in union and that peace which the world cannot give; and, after enjoying the blessings of this life, be admitted to those which are eternal. In Your holy name. Amen.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 1996

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. HUTCHISON). Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to consideration of S. 1026, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1026) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1996 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes.

The Senate proceeded to consideration of the bill.

Mr. THURMOND. Madam President, today the Senate begins consideration of S. 1026, the National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 1996. The bill we bring to the floor incorporates the Armed Services Committee's best judgments on the Nation's defense requirements. It is based on many long hours of testimony, analysis, debate, and consideration of opposing views.

I would like to thank the distinguished ranking member of the committee, Senator NUNN, for his outstanding leadership, and for his open, fair, and bi-partisan manner. I would also like to thank the members of the committee and the professional staff for their dedication and hard work.

It has been a privilege to work with Senator NUNN to bring this bill to the Senate. Although it is a good bill, not every Member, including me, is happy with every part of it. Throughout the past 6 months the committee worked in its traditional bipartisan manner because the security of the United States and the safety of our people are paramount. The bill reflects this cooperative effort, provides a clear direction for national security, and maintains a solid foundation for the defense of the Nation.

The committee’s overarching intent was to revitalize the Armed Forces and enhance or preserve our national security capabilities. That is essential in this post-cold-war world in order to provide the leadership and stability which are critical to the growth of democracy. Our military must be capable and ready in order to provide our men and women in uniform the best possible chance to succeed and survive in every demanding situation. We were reminded recently, with the dedication of the Korean War Memorial, that freedom is not free. We must always remember that courage and sacrifice are the price of freedom.

This bill would fund defense at $264.7 billion in budget authority for fiscal year 1996. I have noted with interest some inaccurate reports in the press that the bill would increase defense spending, and I would like to set the record straight. The funding level in the bill we bring to the floor today is nearly $62 billion lower in real terms than last year's bill, and that represents a decline of 2 percent. Although it had been my hope to preserve funding at last year’s level, this is the best the committee could do, given the budgetary pressures facing the Congress.

I have stated repeatedly that the administration is cutting defense too far, too fast. Most credible analysts conclude there is a shortfall of at least $150 billion in defense budget authority over the future years defense plan. Although the proposal contained in this bill represents a decline in defense spending, I would note that the funding level is still $7 billion higher than the administration’s budget request. The administration requested a defense budget 5 percent lower than the fiscal year 1995 level, and that is simply unwise.
Despite a decline in defense spending, the bill provides the resources to maintain substantial U.S. military power and the ability to project that power wherever our vital interests are at stake. An implicit theme in our bill is that any aggregated potential deterrent should show that our military services will remain the most effective and combat ready in the world.

National security is the most important responsibility of the Federal Government. We have begun discussions on this matter, I would like to explain the priorities which the committee kept in mind in crafting the bill, and highlight a few key decisions. The first objective was to ensure that forces remain viable, and manned at sufficient levels by people of the highest quality. Well-motivated, well-trained, and well-led soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines are the bedrock of national security. Strong support for equitable pay and benefits, bachelor and family housing, and other quality of life measures are key elements in attracting and retaining high-quality people. Perhaps more importantly, this bill expresses the commitment of the Senate to our men and women in uniform and attempts to uphold our part of the implied contract.

Our second objective was to ensure the military effectiveness and combat readiness of the Armed Forces. We believe the funding levels we have recommended will be adequate to take care of current readiness if the Department of Defense manages resources wisely and carefully. The quality of overall readiness essentially depends on adequate funding for both current and future readiness. Although this funding allocation is often described in shorthand as a balance, I would suggest it is a fundamental obligation of the Federal Government to provide adequate resources for both current and future readiness. However, the mix is important because a disproportionate allocation of scarce resources to operation and maintenance accounts would limit funds for the research, development, and procurement essential to modernization. We sought to achieve a reasonable balance. We also addressed multiyear procurement to avoid creating bow waves of funding requirements in subsequent years.

Department of Defense decisions to cancel or delay modernization programs create unrealistic modernization requirements for the future. The committee has addressed critical modernization needs by adding $5.3 billion in procurement and $1.7 billion in research and development accounts to offset some of these problems. We believe the Department of Defense must continue to fund procurement, and research and development, at similar inflation-adjusted levels in future budget requests.

Congress must also continue to provide sufficient funds for research and development to ensure the military's technological superiority in the future. If we do not, future readiness will be jeopardized. Unless the research and development, and procurement accounts are adequately funded from year to year, the services will not have the resources and the quantity, to be able to fight and win in the next decade. We must remember that the force we sent to war in Desert Storm was conceived in the 1970's and built in the 1980's. We must focus on the future.

Third, we addressed the proliferation of missile technology and weapons of mass destruction. We cannot stand by, idly watching, as an increasing number of foreign states develop and acquire long-range ballistic and cruise missiles. Many people do not realize that we currently have no defense whatsoever against any missile launched against the United States. None. Such missiles are capable of carrying nuclear, biological, and chemical payloads. A missile which has just reached our territory. We, as the Congress, will richly deserve the harsh judgment of our citizens if we fail to prepare for this clear eventuality.

It is our grave responsibility to ensure we develop the capability to defend both our deployed forces and our homeland. The committee provided direction and funds for both these requirements in the Missile Defense Act of 1995. An act which will institute a new program for defense against cruise missiles, while funding robust theater missile defenses. It also mandates a national missile defense program which will lead to the limited defense of the United States by the year 2003. I remind my colleagues that the largest single loss of life in the Persian Gulf war was from one, crude, Iraqi Scud missile that was not even targeted for the building it struck. It is entirely reasonable to spend less than 1½ percent of the defense budget to meet this serious security threat.

The bill's ballistic missile defense provisions also address the administration's attempts to limit theater missile defenses by an inaccurate interpretation of the ABM Treaty. That treaty was intended to limit only defenses against strategic ballistic missiles, not theater defenses. Unless this distinction is enforced, we will end up building less-than-optimally capable systems which may not be effective against the highly capable missile threats emerging in the world's most troubled regions.

Fourth, the committee was deeply concerned about maintaining the viability of the Nation's offensive strategic forces. According to the Nuclear Posture Review, the United States will continue to depend on its nuclear forces for deterrence into the foreseeable future. Safe, reliable, and effective nuclear weapons are the core of deterrence. In this bill the committee directs the Department of Energy to meet its primary responsibility of maintaining the Nation's nuclear capability. This means the Energy Department must focus on a stockpile management program geared to the near-term refabrication and certification requirements outlined in the NPR. If DOE cannot or will not shoulder this responsibility, then another agency must be assigned the task. If steps are taken now to maintain a nuclear weapons manufacturing infrastructure and a safe, reliable nuclear weapons stockpile, we face the very real prospect of not being a first-rate nuclear power in 10 to 15 years.

The committee addressed the role of long-range, heavy bombers in projecting power. Although I regret the committee's vote not to fund the B-2 program, I understand the concerns of Members on both sides about the high cost of the program.

The committee is also concerned that the administration's budget request did not include funding for numerous operations which the Armed Forces are currently conducting, even though the administration knew when it submitted its budget request that these operations would continue into fiscal year 1996. We authorized $125 million to pay for these ongoing operations in order to avoid the kind of problems with curtailed training which emerged last year.

I caution the administration that one consequence of paying for these operations on an unprogrammed, ad hoc basis is ultimately to deny the funds necessary for readiness. Last year, the practice of paying for peacekeeping and other contingency operations without budgetary or supplemental funding was directly responsible for lower readiness ratings and curtailed training in some units. Unless the Department of Defense includes the funds for such operations in the budget request, it will be difficult if not impossible for Congress to assess the impact these operations will have on our other accounts. The oversight responsibilities of Congress are hindered, if not usurped, when the Department does not budget for known requirements.

While I remain confident that this is a good defense bill under the present circumstances, I remain troubled. The defense budget trend over the past 10 years has been in constant decline, principally in response to budget pressures. The administration's request for budget increases this year is at the lowest level since 1950, declining more than 71 percent in real terms since 1985. The defense budget is at its lowest level as a percentage of gross domestic product since 1940, just before a grossly unprepared United States entered World War II. Each successive budget since 1989 has continued to push recapitalization farther into the future. As a result, the Services have been forced to delay the fielding of critical modern systems while maintaining aging equipment at the expense of operating and maintenance costs.

The prospects of not having adequate defense funds in the coming years should alarm us all. Despite the recommended fiscal year 1996 funding increase of $7.1 billion above the administration’s Bottom-Up Review Force structure, this is itself barely adequate. These funding levels cannot even begin to meet our known modernization needs and they do not even cover inflation. Shortfalls of the magnitude projected by the GAO and others will seriously impair the ability of the Department of Defense to field, modernize, and operate modern forces essential to our national security. The limited progress reflected in this bill cannot be maintained unless future funding is increased.

As the Senate takes up this defense bill, some Members will no doubt argue that my concerns about steadily declining defense spending and emerging threats are misplaced. They will point out that the cold war is over and provide long lists of other programs that could be cut. Such arguments always surface after a major victory, and just before the emergence of the next major threat. They are always shown in the long run to have been naive and shortsighted. They consistently fail to recognize the usefulness of effective readiness in shaping future events in ways that are favorable to us. They fail to recognize the instability and uncertainty of the times, and they fail to consider the future.

We must think about what challenges and dangers we will face in the future. We do not know with any certainty who will be our next peer competitor. I assure you, however, that a peer competitor will emerge and if such competitor believes there is an advantage because our military has been weakened, he will become bold and our challenge will be more significant. I encourage every Senator to keep this in mind as we debate this bill over the next few days.

I thank the Chair, and yield the floor.

Mr. NUNN addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia is recognized.

Mr. NUNN. Madam President, as we begin debate on the National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 1996, I first want to congratulate Senator THURMOND and his staff on reporting together the first defense authorization bill that has been reported with Senator THURMOND as committee chairman. Although he has been a stalwart for many years on the committee and has helped prepare the bills in the past, this is his first bill as the official chairman of the committee.

The major themes of this bill reflect Senator THURMOND’s longstanding and strong and effective support for our national security. It has been my great privilege and honor to have worked with Senator THURMOND in the Armed Services Committee and on the Armed Services Committee for all of my 22 years, and for at least maybe slightly more than half of his time here in the U.S. Senate. His career—and his decorated service in World War II and unwavering support for strong national defense, and his devotion to the men and women of the Armed Forces—has served as a model and an inspiration to me, and to, I believe, his fellow members of the Armed Services Committee and the Senate.

The 18 to 3 vote in favor of the bill in the Armed Services Committee reflects the fact that the bill continues many bipartisan efforts initiated by our committee in recent years, such as improvements in military pay and benefits, modernization programs, and, of course, the balanced budget. Senator THURMOND laid out, military readiness and personnel quality. This bipartisan support also reflects the actions taken by the committee to address concerns raised by Secretary of Defense Bill Perry about a number of the provisions in the House bill. In contrast to the action taken by the House, for example, our bill provides full funding for the Nunn-Lugar Cooperative Threat Reduction Program. A program that is aimed at trying to prevent proliferation of nuclear, chemical, and biological weapons all over the globe. It also avoids micromanaging the Office of Secretary of Defense, as was done in the House bill, and we do not have unacceptable restrictions on military operations as the Secretary of Defense specified very clearly he feared was being done in the House bill.

The bill before us provides $264.7 billion in budget authority, the amount specified in the budget resolution. This amount, which is $7 billion above the budget request, will enable us to fund the types of initiatives that have received bipartisan support in the past. This includes personnel programs such as the 2.4 percent pay raise for members of the services and modernization programs from fighter aircraft such as the F-22 to unglamorous, but essential items such as Army trucks. Most of the programs authorized by the committee reflect the administration’s priorities as set forth in the current year budget request or in the future years defense program which covers the next 5 years. Dr. Perry, in his discussions with the committee, urged us to focus any additions to the budget on acquisition programs that are in DOD’s future years defense programs. The bill before us largely follows this recommendation.

And I believe as various Members may come to the floor and say that we do not now need this program or that program which is funded with the additional money that has been put in this bill that was provided in the budget resolution, I think it is very important for Members to keep in mind that these programs—most of them, not every, but most of them—that have been added to the current year budget request that Secretary Perry and I think that is important for people to keep that in mind. That was the request that Secretary Perry made of this committee, and I think we have largely honored that request.

Madam President, this bill contains important legislative initiatives such as the authority to use innovative programs to finance military housing and refueling and reuse defense sites. This was a strong request and initiative by Dr. Perry and the Defense Department.

In addition, we establish a defense modernization account, which I sponsored and our committee supported, which for the first time that I have any knowledge about will provide incentives for savings in defense programs for use of those savings to modernize the equipment for our men and women in uniform.

In other words, Madam President, if the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps can find savings, we will let them put those savings in a carefully monitored account that will have to be, of course, monitored by the Congress, and we will have to follow our normal procedures. But those savings will be able to be used for the most critical deficiencies we face in modernization. And modernization in the outyears, the years ahead, is the biggest challenge we face.

I think everyone would acknowledge that we are, even with the increases in this budget, underfunding the outyear modernization. When our equipment starts to wear out during the 18 to 3 vote in favor of the bill in the Armed Services Committee reflects the fact that the bill continues many bipartisan efforts initiated by our committee in recent years, such as improvements in military pay and benefits, modernization programs, and, of course, the balanced budget. Senator THURMOND laid out, military readiness and personnel quality. This bipartisan support also reflects the actions taken by the committee to address concerns raised by Secretary of Defense Bill Perry about a number of the provisions in the House bill. In contrast to the action taken by the House, for example, our bill provides full funding for the Nunn-Lugar Cooperative Threat Reduction Program. A program that is aimed at trying to prevent proliferation of nuclear, chemical, and biological weapons all over the globe. It also avoids micromanaging the Office of Secretary of Defense, as was done in the House bill, and we do not have unacceptable restrictions on military operations as the Secretary of Defense specified very clearly he feared was being done in the House bill.

The bill before us provides $264.7 billion in budget authority, the amount specified in the budget resolution. This amount, which is $7 billion above the budget request, will enable us to fund the types of initiatives that have received bipartisan support in the past. This includes personnel programs such as the 2.4 percent pay raise for members of the services and modernization programs from fighter aircraft such as the F-22 to unglamorous, but essential items such as Army trucks. Most of the programs authorized by the committee reflect the administration’s priorities as set forth in the current year budget request or in the future years defense program which covers the next 5 years. Dr. Perry, in his discussions with the committee, urged us to focus any additions to the budget on acquisition programs that are in DOD’s future years defense programs. The bill before us largely follows this recommendation.

And I believe as various Members may come to the floor and say that we do not now need this program or that program which is funded with the additional money that has been put in this bill that was provided in the budget resolution, I think it is very important for Members to keep in mind that these programs—most of them, not every, but most of them—that have been added to the current year budget request that are in DOD’s future years defense programs. This was a strong request and initiative by Dr. Perry and the Defense Department.

In addition, we establish a defense modernization account, which I sponsored and our committee supported, which for the first time that I have any knowledge about will provide incentives for savings in defense programs for use of those savings to modernize the equipment for our men and women in uniform.

In other words, Madam President, if the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps can find savings, we will let them put those savings in a carefully monitored account that will have to be, of course, monitored by the Congress, and we will have to follow our normal procedures. But those savings will be able to be used for the most critical deficiencies we face in modernization. And modernization in the outyears, the years ahead, is the biggest challenge we face.

I think everyone would acknowledge that we are, even with the increases in this budget, underfunding the outyear modernization. When our equipment starts to wear out during the outyear, it will toward the end of this century, we are not going to have sufficient funding even with the increases in this bill to cover that.

So what we want to do in this defense modernization account—I know some Members will have some suggestions and concerns which we will certainly listen carefully to—but this account will be controlled by the Congress. It will be subject to the normal reprogramming and authorization and appropriation procedures which we have now.

There is a limit on how much can be accumulated. But for the first time we will be saying to each of the services, you will now have an incentive. If you figure out how to save money, it can go into an account. We are not going to grab that money and take it away from you as your punishment for saving it. We are going to let you spend it subject to the congressional oversight as outlined on the critical programs you need in the future.

I believe this kind of initiative has real potential and promise in terms of giving people throughout the military services a real incentive to try to save money. We all know the horror stories of what we have heard for years, not just in the military but in all areas of Government where, when you get down toward the last couple of months of the fiscal year, there is money that has not been spent and these people inherited in those decisions done that if the money is not spent, not only will it lapse but also they will have the budget cut the next year.
So there is almost a perverse incentive throughout Government now to take whatever is not spent and spend it so that you do not have your budget cut the next year. We want to reverse that psychology. This is at least a beginning toward doing that.

My outline of the bill's highlights should not, however, be viewed as representing unqualified support for all the provisions of this bill. The numerous roll call votes during our committee markup have convinced many Members about inadequate funding of important programs as well as questions about some of the priorities reflected in this bill.

There is much in this bill that I support, and I do support the overall bill. But I do have serious reservations about those aspects of the bill that appear to head back without very much thought given to the period of the cold war.

For example, the proposed new Missile Defense Act of 1995 sets forth a commitment to the deployment of missile defenses without regard, without any regard for the legal requirements of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty which we are a party to and which we signed. There are serious concerns of many Members about inadequate funding of important programs as well as questions about some of the priorities reflected in this bill.

The same provision contains legally binding timetables in our bill for deployment of missile defense systems. For example, section 235 requires a multiple site national defense system to reach the initial operational capability in 2003. These timetables are too short, too inadequate for testing. I hope we can have a system by then. I hope we can have one that really works, and I hope it will be calibrated to meet the threat that we may have in those outyears. But since the applicable missile testing statutes that were in previous laws are repealed in this National Defense Act, we have before us, what we have is a timetable for actual deployment stated as a part of the law and repealing the testing that would be required to determine if the systems are ready to deploy or whether they are going to be effective when they are deployed.

I find that to be a good combination. Finally, there is an arbitrary—and possibly unconstitutional—restriction on the obligation of funds by the executive branch to enforce the terms of the ABM Treaty.

I invite all of our colleagues to look at those aspects where there is a demarcation definition between the theater ballistic missile and the national missile defense that is precluded except under certain conditions in the ABM Treaty and the definitions we will have in these definitions. I think they are sensible definitions, and I think we do have to have a demarcation point because clearly theater missile defenses are not intended to be covered under the ABM Treaty. They never were covered. They should not be covered now.

The problem is once this definition is set forth, the executive branch is barred from doing anything at all regarding the ABM Treaty. It is the only treaty to which we are a party. I think that that goes too far. In fact, the wording of the proposal we have before us is so broad that any Federal official including Members of Congress would be precluded from anything short of doing something contrary to that definition. I think that goes too far, and I do not think that is what we want. I hope we can work in a cooperative way to iron out some of those difficulties, which I believe can be done, while continuing the strong and endorsee of moving forward with defenses without doing so in a way that is counterproductive.

The Department of Energy portions of the bill contain provisions that directly threaten the capabilities for the remanufacture of nuclear weapons.

Madam President, I have serious questions about whether this is a premature judgment at this time of the Department's ''blackpile stewardship'' plan is only now under review by the Department of Defense. I know that Mr. DOMENICI, the Senator from New Mexico, and others have been in discussion with Senator THURMOND and his staff and Senator LOTT and his staff, Senator KEMPTHORNE, on these energy questions, and I hope we can work something out here that makes sense, that moves us in the right direction without making premature judgments that are not ripe for decision.

Madam President, these are important issues for discussion and debate. There are questions about the potential international implications of a number of these provisions. For instance, the Russian leadership and their Parliament have stressed repeatedly, both to this administration and to various Members of the Senate and House, both parties, the importance they attach to continued compliance with the ABM Treaty. They have indicated that should they judge the United States no longer intends to adhere to that treaty, then they would abandon their efforts to ratify the START II Treaty, which is now pending in the Russian Duma.

Further, they warned that they would stop further compliance with other existing treaties including the drawdowns mandated by START I. In my judgment, there is a real danger that the provisions of the Missile Defense Act could be considered by the Russians as what is known as ''anticipatory breach'' of the ABM Treaty.

Madam President, if this bill leads to that outcome, it will not enhance our national security, but it will undermine our national security. Under START I and START II, the arms control treaties which have been entered into by Republican Presidents and adhered to by Democratic Presidents, the Russians are obliged under the terms of these treaties to remove more than 6,000 ballistic missile warheads from atop their arsenal of ICBM's and submarine-launched ballistic missiles. The United States, by the way, has already removed much of the first-strike capability that we spent 10, 15 years being concerned about and spending hundreds of billions of dollars trying to defend against.

They will also have to remove all of their MIRV'd SS-24 missiles and completely refit their ICBM force with single warhead missiles. These are goals that were worked on in a bipartisan fashion for several decades by both Democrats and Republicans with a lot of leadership coming from Republican Presidents in the White House.

This removal of 6,000 warheads by treaty is a far more cost effective form of missile defense than any ABM system that the SDI Program ever envisioned. I am not one of those who believe we ought to be so locked into every provision of the ABM Treaty that we do not believe it is a document that has to be improved, that has to be amended. I think it does. I do not think it is completely up to date. I think we need to take another look at it. I think we need to review it. I think there are changes that can be made and should be made in accordance with the provisions of the treaty.

Yet, this bill, if enacted, would create a very high risk of throwing away both the START I reductions which have not yet taken place and the START I reductions which are taking place now. Because this bill, No. 1, acts as if the ABM Treaty is no longer in effect; it does not even really acknowledge that there are any concerns. No. 2, it ignores the opportunity to negotiate sensible amendments with the Russians. And I think it is premature to believe that that effort cannot succeed. I do not think we have even started real serious efforts, and I think that those efforts at least have a strong possibility of success. And No. 3, this bill does not acknowledge that we can get out of the treaty and that we can get out of the treaty under its own terms if our national security is threatened.

If we are going to get out from under the ABM Treaty, if we are going to basically decide it no longer is in our national security interests, then we ought to get out of the treaty the way the treaty itself provides, which is our obligation under international law and our obligation under the treaty itself. We can serve 6 months' notice and exit the treaty. I think it is Russia's responsibility to make changes which we believe are necessary for our national security. That is the way to get out of the treaty. We should not get out of the treaty... by anticipatory breach with provisions of the law that we have not carefully thought through.

Indeed, Madam President, in this respect the actions proposed in the bill could be self-fulfilling. They could provoke Russia to stop its adherence to the START I Treaty, which would allow for a huge arsenal of Russian missiles in place and we would then have to move from a thin missile defense to protect against accidental launch or to protect some kind of small nation, radical nation, or terrorist group launch, we would then have to start worrying about the SS-18's again.

Now, do we really want to do that? Do we want a self-fulfilling circle? We take action without regard to the ABM Treaty in this bill. The Russians react by not basically going through with START II. Then they decide they are not going to comply with START I. Then they decide they are not going to comply with the conventional forces reduction in Europe causing all sorts of problems there.

Of course, we have to increase our defense. We have to go from the kind of system that President Bush wanted, which is an accidental launch type thin system that does not cost hundreds of billions of dollars, is achievable, that we can do. We could go to a much different kind of system. We are back in a spiral of action and reaction between the United States and Russia. I do not think we really want to go back into that atmosphere. That is one of the accomplishments we have in the last 10 years. I do not think that is what the authors of these provisions in the bill really intend. But I think it has got to be thought about because those are the implications of what this bill will head.

Madam President, this leads me to pose several questions. Are we as a nation better off if the START I and START II treaties are abandoned than if they remain in force? If somebody thinks we ought to abandon them and we are better off without them, why do we not say so? Why do we not say so? We have got to stop legislating as if there are no consequences to what we legislate. Other people in the world react. I think that is the way we have legislated too many times on foreign policy. I see it increasing taking place. We act as if we can take part of a cake, legislate, forget the consequences, and not even own up to what is likely to happen based on what we ourselves are doing.

The second question. Are we and our NATO allies better off if the Russians decline to be bound by the limits on deployments of conventional forces contained in the Conventional Forces in Europe Treaty? We have already drawn down our forces to 100,000. The allies are drawing down significantly. In many cases more than that. We are drawing down based on the CFE Treaty and based on the Russians' behavior because they have indeed dramatically reduced their forces. Do we really want to reverse that? If someone can say, well, the Russians cannot afford it now. They are not going to be able to build up. That is probably true. I think for the next 5 years it is not going to be able to afford a conventional buildup. What they can do is start relying on their early use of nuclear weapons very quickly, like tomorrow morning. If they are going to decide they are going to give us another kind of tactical nuclear weapons again, we are going to go right back to a hair trigger situation. That is what they can do. That is cheap. That is the cheap way. I do not think that is what we want. I do not think that is what the Russian leadership wants at this stage. But are we thinking about what we are doing? Next question. What will be the effect on Russian cooperation with us in forums such as the U.N. Security Council if arms control agreements are abandoned, an inadvertent abandonment on our part?

Fourth question. What is the ballistic missile threat to U.S. territory that requires us to abandon compliance with the ABM Treaty and to abandon the pursuit of possible amendments to that treaty even when there is nothing whatsoever in that treaty that prevents us from taking every step we would otherwise take in the next fiscal year? Why are we doing this at this point in time? I think that is the question. If we were at a point where we had to make a decision, then I could understand some of the pressure in this regard. But there is nothing, according to all the testimony, there is nothing whatsoever in the ABM Treaty, even as now interpreted, that prevents us from taking every step we need to take in the next fiscal year. So why are we doing this? I do not have an answer to that.

Finally, what is the nature of the theater missile threat? And that is what I believe everyone would acknowledge is the greatest priority, the greatest threat we have now. It is not a future threat. It is a present threat, theater ballistic missiles. We already face those. As Senator Thurmond outlined in his opening statement, we faced those in the Persian Gulf war.

What is the change that has taken place? That basically would have us, as Senator Thurmond thought, to give the money for developing and deploying no less than four overlapping-coverage missile defense systems to protect the rear area of the theater while leaving our U.S. forward-deployed ground troops totally unprotected from attack by existing enemy short-range missiles.

Madam President, I will have an amendment later in this process that will add back in the only program we have for developing and deploying no less than four overlapping-coverage theater ballistic missiles. Those that are the threats we face right now. We have a program called Corps SAM that is aimed at making those systems that can protect frontline troops. That system has been totally zeroed out in this bill; $35 million has been taken out. I assume that was part of the money that went into the beef-up of $300 million for national missile defense. I think we can do that. We ought the deal with the most imminent threats first. The most imminent threat we face now is the theater ballistic missile threat, particularly the frontline effect on our troops from short-range missiles. I hope we can get some attention to adding back that program at a later point in this debate.

Madam President, I have a number of other concerns about the bill. First, our ability to monitor and control treaty-mandated strategic weapons reductions could be affected by the failure of the bill to fully fund the Department of Energy's arms control and nonproliferation activities. I am not sure whether that is part of the negotiation that is ongoing now with the Senator from New Mexico, Senator Domenici, and Senator Bingaman who has taken a lead in this, but I am sure that will be the subject of the debate here in the next few days.

The other provisions, I think there are questionable priorities, as mentioned for the missile defense programs. While the bill provides an additional $300 million in funding for the national defense initiative, it provides only $3 million for other missile defense programs which were not requested by the administration, the Corps SAM missile defense system, which is strongly supported by the war-fighting commanders. That program is terminating. We will have a letter from our war-fighting commanders showing that is one of their top priorities. It makes no sense to provide vast increases for long-range speculative programs that will require billions in expenditure before they will be effective. We could be appropriating funds for specific theater missile defense initiatives designed to protect our frontline troops which we have the possibility of securing in the very short-range distant future—in the very next few years.

Madam President, also I am concerned that the bill fails to fund certain ongoing Department of Defense programs on the theory that the programs should be funded by other agencies. I am concerned whether that provision is part of the resolution nor the committee bill makes any provision for any other agency to assume DOD's responsibilities. These include programs that have received bipartisan support for many years, such as humanitarian assistance, which was initiated by our former colleague, Republican Senator Gordon Humphrey; foreign disaster relief, which was initiated by another former colleague, Republican Senator Strom Thurmond; a military cooperative action program, which was developed on a completely bipartisan basis by the Armed Services Committee.
Madam President, there are many good features in this bill, but there are a number of key areas where this bill can be improved during the consideration by the Senate. I look forward to working with Senator Thurmond, the other members of this committee, and the Senate in a cooperative fashion to move this bill along so we can complete our work in a timely fashion, and so that we can come out with a solid bill that will move our national security in the right direction.

Madam President, I yield the floor.

Mr. FEINGOLD addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina, the President pro tempore.

Mr. THURMOND. Madam President, I wish to thank the able ranking member for his kind remarks and also thank him for his fine cooperation in getting this bill to the floor.

Madam President, I will now ask that the able Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. INHOFE] be recognized.

Mr. FEINGOLD addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. I do have an opening statement.

Mr. THURMOND. Madam President, before presenting my opening statement, I would like to yield momentarily to Senator KYL for the purpose of proposing an amendment.

Mr. KYL addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

AMENDMENT NO. 207
(Purpose: To state the sense of the Senate on protecting the United States from ballistic missile attack)

Mr. KYL. Madam President, I have an amendment at the desk. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report. The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. KYL], for himself and Mr. INHOFE, proposes an amendment numbered 207.

Mr. KYL. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The amendment is as follows:

SEC. 1062. SENSE OF SENATE ON PROTECTION OF UNITED STATES FROM BALLISTIC MISSILE ATTACK.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) The proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missiles presents a threat to the entire World.

(2) This threat was recognized by Secretary of Defense William J. Perry in February 1995 in the Annual Report to the President and the Congress which states that "[t]he five declared nuclear weapons states, at least 20 other states that have acquired or are attempting to acquire weapons of mass destruction—nuclear, biological, or chemical weapons—and the means to deliver them. In fact, where United States forces could potentially be engaged on a large scale, many of the most likely adversaries already possess chemical and biological weapons. Moreover, some of these states appear determined to acquire nuclear weapons.".

(3) At a summit in Moscow in May 1995, President Clinton and President Yeltsin commented on this threat in a joint statement that "the threat posed by worldwide proliferation of missiles and missile technology and the necessity of countering this threat.".

(4) At least 25 countries may be developing weapons of mass destruction and the delivery systems for such weapons.

(5) At least 24 countries have chemical weapons programs in various stages of research and development.

(6) Approximately 10 countries are believed to have biological programs in various stages of development.

(7) At least 10 countries are reportedly interested in the development of nuclear weapons.

(8) Several countries recognize that weapons of mass destruction and missiles increase their ability to deter, coerc, or otherwise threaten the United States. Saddam Hussein recognized this when he stated, on May 8, 1990, that "our missiles cannot reach Washington. If they should reach Washington, we would strike it if the need arose."

(9) International regimes like the Non-Proliferation Treaty, the Biological Weapons Convention, and the Missile Technology Control Regime, while effective, cannot by themselves halt the spread of weapons and technology. On January 10, 1995, Director of Central Intelligence James Woolsey, said with regard to Russia that "... we are particularly concerned with the safety of nuclear, chemical and biological materials as well as highly enriched uranium or plutonium, although I want to stress that this is a global problem. For example, highly enriched uranium was recently stolen from South Africa, and last month Czech authorities recovered three kilograms of 97.8 percent-enriched HEU in the Czech Republic—the largest seizure of near-weapons-grade material to date outside the Former Soviet Union."

(10) The possession of weapons of mass destruction and missiles by developing countries threatens our friends, allies, and forces abroad and will ultimately threaten the United States. As of August 11, 1995, Deputy Secretary of Defense John Deutch said that "[i]f the North Koreans field the Taepo Dong 2 missile, Guam, Alaska, and parts of Hawaii would potentially be at risk.

(11) The end of Cold War has changed the strategic environmental facing and between the United States and Russia. That the Clinton Administration believes the environment to have changed was made clear by Secretary of Defense William J. Perry on September 20, 1994, when he stated that "[w]e now have the opportunity to create a new relationship, based not on MAD, not on Mutual assured destruction, not on another acronym, MAS, or Mutual Assured Safety."

(12) The United States and Russia have the opportunity to create a relationship based on trust rather than fear.

(b) SENSE OF SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that all Americans should be protected from accidental, intentional, or limited ballistic missile attack.

Mr. KYL. Madam President, I just wanted to propose this amendment now, since the Senator from Oklahoma, the coauthor of this amendment, is making his opening statement now because perhaps his remarks will make in his opening statement will also reflect on the amendment, which we want to be considered next.

So I yield to the Senator from Oklahoma.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. I thank the Senator from Arizona.

Madam President, I am pleased today to speak on behalf of the Fiscal Year 1996 Defense Department Authorization Act. I urge my colleagues to preserve it in its somewhat inadequate but present form.

Mr. FEINGOLD addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Since the 1991—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma has the floor.

Mr. FEINGOLD addressed the Chair. Would the Senator yield?

Mr. INHOFE. I would be glad to yield after the statement.

Mr. FEINGOLD. I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the Senator’s statement, I be permitted to make an inquiry of the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma has the floor.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Madam President, I made a unanimous-consent request. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma has the floor.

Does he yield for that request?

Mr. FEINGOLD. Madam President, the Senator from Oklahoma indicated he had a statement. I merely ask unanimous consent that I be recognized for the purposes of that inquiry at the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. I would like to ask the Senator to repeat his unanimous-consent request, please.

Mr. FEINGOLD. I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the Senator’s remarks, I be recognized for the purposes of making an inquiry of the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator yield for that request?

Mr. INHOFE. Yes.

Mrs. BOXER addressed the Chair. I have a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma has the floor.

Mr. INHOFE. I thank you.

Mrs. BOXER. I have a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. INHOFE. I do not yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I am advised by the Parliamentarian that the Senator from Oklahoma has the floor. If the Senator does not yield the Chair, no ability to request a parliamentary inquiry.

Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield the floor?

Mr. INHOFE. I do not yield until the conclusion of my opening statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Madam President, does the Senator object to my unanimous-consent request? I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of his remarks I be recognized for purposes of making a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma has the floor. If he yields for a unanimous-consent request. It is his prerogative to do so. Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield the floor?

Mr. INHOFE. Not at this time, Madam President.

Mr. KYL addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from——

Mr. FEINGOLD. The Senator indicated he would not object to my simply taking the floor to make a unanimous-consent request of the type I indicated. That is all I am asking at this time.

Mr. INHOFE. Madam President, let me continue my opening statement from the top again.

I am pleased to speak on behalf of this fiscal 1996 defense authorization bill. Although I believe it is still inadequate, I think it is as good as we could pass at this time.

Since the 1991 Persian Gulf war, the military has been cut, misused, neglected, and otherwise distracted from its ultimate purposes—protecting and preserving America's vital interests. This bill, with its House counterpart, represents a first step towards strengthening America's Armed Forces.

One of the most important messages which voters delivered in 1994 was the need to restore the strength of America's defenses. With this bill, the Senate has clearly had enough of the Clinton administration's weak hand in the national security arena. We have added $7 billion to the administration's request.

It has become fashionable in some circles to assert that now that the cold war is over, there is no longer a threat out there. But history has told us that most wars come with little or no warning. From the attack on Pearl Harbor to the invasion of Korea to the invasion of Kuwait, few could have predicted the size and scope of American military involvement which became necessary in the wake of these unexpected events. The lesson learned the hard way in Pearl Harbor remains true today: We must always be prepared.

President Reagan reminded us many times that we, as Americans, never have the luxury of taking our security for granted. It is up to each generation of this great nation to continue preparing for what comes our way, whether that be accidental, intentional, or limited ballistic missile attack.

Beyond the five declared nuclear weapon states, at least 20 other nations have acquired, or are attempting to acquire, weapons of mass destruction—nuclear, chemical, or biological, and the means to deliver them. In fact, in most areas where the United States forces could potentially be engaged on a large scale, most of the most likely adversaries already possess chemical and biological weapons.

For 8 years, Ronald Reagan gave us a policy of "peace through strength," a policy which invested wisely in defense needs with a special emphasis on America's inherent leadership in advanced technology. I believe proven success of that policy should continue to guide our defense posture. This is why, despite my reservations regarding the B-2, I support this bill. It will help save lives and protect our vital interests in the future.

I congratulate Chairman THURMOND and Senator Nunn for their work, and all the members of the Armed Services Committee for presenting a very good bill to the Senate this year. I do not have the honor of serving on the Senate Armed Services Committee. I did, however, serve on the House Armed Services Committee for 8 years. Frankly, I am very pleased with the product that has come out of the committee this year.

I, second, want to associate myself with the remarks the Senator from Oklahoma just made. They were just the help to set the stage for a good debate on what we need to do to provide for the defense of the United States.

Third, Madam President, I want to begin a discussion of the amendment which Senator INHOFE and I have laid down and which I think deals with one of the key parts of the bill that has been presented this year. It is the issue of missile proliferation, and the question of what the United States ought to do about it.

Given the fact that there is some difference of opinion about exactly what the nature of the threat is and when we ought to begin to deal with that threat, it seemed to Senator INHOFE and me that we should address something to the bill in the way of finding the proper sense of the Senate which expresses our belief that the American people should be defended from ballistic missile attack.

There are very fine findings currently in the bill. We all agree that those findings are a proper predicate for what follows in the bill. But we also believe that there are some other things that should be added as findings and that the Senate should go on record expressing its sense that Americans should be protected from either accidental, intentional, or limited ballistic missile attack.

Madam President, let me read the portions of the findings of the amendment which we believe help to lay the foundation for further discussions. The Senate will be taking with respect to the protection of American people from ballistic missile attack. We say, first of all, that the Senate finds the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missiles present a threat to the entire world.

This threat was recognized by Secretary of Defense William J. Perry in February of this year in the annual report to the President and the Congress, which states:

"Beyond the five declared nuclear weapon states, at least 20 other nations have acquired, or are attempting to acquire, weapons of mass destruction—nuclear, chemical, or biological, and the means to deliver them. In fact, in most areas where the United States forces could potentially be engaged on a large scale, most of the most likely adversaries already possess chemical and biological weapons. Moreover, some of these same states appear determined to acquire nuclear weapons."

Mr. KYL addressed the Chair.

This is an important finding because of this question that has been posed: Why should we be preparing some of the things that we are preparing now? Why should we be testing and... developing capable theater missile defenses and beginning to plan for the day when we would develop and eventually deploy a national missile defense system? It is because of the concern that has been expressed in this year's report to the President and Congress by the Secretary of Defense, among others.

Also, recently, in May of this year, at the summit in Moscow, President Clinton and President Yeltsin commented on this threat in a joint statement which recognizes:

...The threat posed by worldwide proliferation of missiles and missile technology and the necessity of countering this threat.

At least 25 countries may be developing weapons of mass destruction and the delivery systems for such weapons. We further find that at least 24 countries have chemical weapons programs in various stages of research and development. Approximately 10 countries are believed to have biological weapons programs in various stages of development, and, finally, at least 30 countries are reportedly interested in the development of nuclear weapons.

Several countries recognize that weapons of mass destruction and missiles increase their ability to deter, coerce or threaten. The United States Saddam Hussein recognized this when he stated on May 8, 1990:

Our missiles cannot reach Washington. If they could reach Washington, we would strike it if the need arose.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, these are trying to do.

Madam President, we further find in the preliminary findings to the sense-of-the-Senate resolution that international regimes like the nonproliferation treaty, biological weapons convention and the missile technology control regime, while effective, cannot by themselves halt the spread of weapons and technology.

On January 10, 1995, Director of the CIA, J. James Woolsey, said, with regard to Russia:

We are particularly concerned with the safety of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and the means of delivering them. We also have concerns about how highly enriched uranium or plutonium, although I want to stress this is a global problem. For example, highly enriched uranium was recently stolen from South Africa, and last month Czech authorities recovered 3 kilograms of 87.8 percent-enriched uranium in the Czech Republic—the larger seizure of weapons-grade material to date outside the former Soviet Union.

That is former CIA Director J. James Woolsey.

We further find in this resolution that the possession of weapons of mass destruction and missiles by developing countries threatens our friends, allies, and forces abroad, and will ultimately threaten the United States directly. On August 11, 1994, Deputy Secretary of Defense, John Deutch, now Director of the CIA said:

If the North Koreans field the Taepo Dong 2 missile, much of the eastern and central parts of Hawaii would potentially be at risk.

(Mr. THOMPSON assumed the chair.)

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, these are not hypotheticals for other countries, other places in the world. This is the United States and our territory. The former Deputy Secretary of Defense says that they would potentially be at risk.

We further find, in finding 11, that the end of the cold war has changed the strategic environment facing and between the United States and Russia. That the Clinton administration believes the environment to have changed was made clear by Secretary of Defense William Perry on September 20, 1994, when he stated:

We now have the opportunity to create a new relationship, based not on MAD, not on Mutual Assured Destruction, but rather on another acronym, MAS, Mutual Assured Safety.

The United States and Russia have the opportunity to create a relationship based on trust rather than fear.

That is the final finding in this sense-of-the-Senate resolution. As a result of all of these findings, these factors, of these statements made by the key representatives of this administration, it is the sense of the Senate that all Americans should be protected from accidental, intentional, or limited ballistic missile attacks.

Let me focus a moment on that simple one-sentence statement of what the sense of the Senate would be. We should be protected from accidental launch of ballistic missiles. I cannot think of anyone who would disagree with that sentiment. It does not take a star wars or a strategic defense initiative to protect against such an attack. We have the capability to develop, and ultimately deploy, a system which would provide that protection. Inherent within this bill is the beginnings of the development and deployment of such a system.

It is the sense of the Senate that all Americans should be protected from intentional ballistic missile attack. Obviously, if an intentional attack, we want to be protected from that. We mentioned the Taepo Dong 2 missile under development by the North Koreans. Should they decide to launch an attack against Alaska, for example, who among us would argue that we should not be prepared to meet that threat? Indeed, the mere threat that such an attack could be launched inhibits the conduct of our foreign policy because of the potential of blackmail by a China or an ally of North Korea.

To digress a moment to further elaborate on this point, one of the reasons that we have such a difficult time dealing with North Korea today is that North Korea does pose an offensive threat to millions of South Koreans and thousands of American troops against which we have no real defense. Because of the proximity of Seoul, Korea to the long-range artillery of North Korea, and because of the deployment of North Korean forces, it is very clear that if there were a North Korean attack or bombardment from their artillery, literally millions of South Koreans and thousands of Americans would be killed before the United States had an opportunity to respond. We simply do not have a defense against that kind of an attack, unless everybody from Seoul, Korea could move back about 30 miles. That is obviously not going to happen.

That is why there is no longer an effort to develop a strategic defense, such as was contemplated during the Reagan administration when the cold war was a very real threat to the United States. And that is why we are in a position to be blackmailed by North Korea. We cannot go in and deal with North Korea as we would like to because they do have a means of inflicting great harm on us by literally mounting a nuclear attack on the people of South Korea. We literally have no way to stop it. The only way to respond to that is by some kind of massive military action that would hopefully roll them back. But the damage would already be done.

That is the same thing with respect to missiles. A missile can be either used for blackmail in the conduct of one country's foreign policy, to push its weight around, or to actually launch against another country in a time of war, in order to create chaos and inflict damage on civilian populations, or to be launched against military targets. And in order to prohibit that from inhibiting the conduct of our foreign policy, we have to have a way of defending against it. If you do have a way of defending against it, you can essentially say you can build the missiles if you want, deploy them if you want, but you cannot be effective in using them, so we are not going to be bullied.

If you do not have an effective missile defense—and as I quoted, we do not—then we are susceptible to that negative influence of bullying by a country like North Korea. That is why it is important for us to have the means of defending ourselves and our allies, whether troops are deployed abroad, or whether it is the defense of the American homeland—in this case, Alaska—by a threat from the North Koreans.

Finally, it would be the sense of the Senate that all Americans should be protected from limited ballistic missile attack.

The reason we state it that way, Mr. President, is because we are concerned here about a limited attack. We do not believe that there is currently existing a threat of massive, strategic attack of intercontinental ballistic missiles by a country such as Russia, and possibly China, or North Korea. We do believe that the threat of limited attacks are the only countries today that could pose that kind of threat to the United States. We do not believe that circumstances warrant the development of a system that would provide a protection against such an attack.

That is why there is no longer an effort to develop a strategic defense, such as was contemplated during the Reagan administration when the cold war was a very real threat to the United States. And that is why we are in a position to be blackmailed by North Korea. We cannot go in and deal with North Korea as we would like to because they do have a means of inflicting great harm on us by literally mounting a nuclear attack on the people of South Korea. We literally have no way to stop it. The only way to respond to that is by some kind of massive military action that would hopefully roll them back. But the damage would already be done.

That is the same thing with respect to missiles. A missile can be either used for blackmail in the conduct of one country's foreign policy, to push its weight around, or to actually launch against another country in a time of war, in order to create chaos and inflict damage on civilian populations, or to be launched against military targets. And in order to prohibit that from inhibiting the conduct of our foreign policy, we have to have a way of defending against it. If you do have a way of defending against it, you can essentially say you can build the missiles if you want, deploy them if you want, but you cannot be effective in using them, so we are not going to be bullied.
Christopher R. Bond
United States

Now, that is why all we are saying here is that it is the sense of the Senate that all Americans should be protected from accidental, intentional, or limited ballistic missile attack.

That is the sense-of-the-Senate resolution that we finish my presentation with a couple of other quotations that I think would not necessarily be properly included within the findings, but which I think help to make the case that this is not some hypothetical, this is not something that we should be concerned about, it is something that at the highest councils in our Government, our intelligence, and the Defense Department, there is concern.

The first reason is because it is not necessarily the development of an indigenous capability by a country that is of concern here. We are concerned about North Korea developing the missiles that could eventually reach the United States. As a matter of fact, the missiles that could reach the United States is not even shown on this chart here which illustrates some of the other missiles that are in development, or already developed, and their capabilities.

The CSS-2, for example, is a Chinese missile that has been sold to the Saudi Arabians. It has a range of about 3,000 kilometers. That obviously poses a threat to countries in the Middle East, as well as some European countries.

It is not just the indigenous threat, but the possibility of a sale of one of these missiles to another country. I mention this missile, because this missile was sold by the Chinese to the Saudi Arabians. Saudi Arabians are obviously allies of the United States, and we do not fear that missile would be launched against us by this regime. We also did not fear during the regime of the Shah of Iran that Iran would ultimately be unfriendly to the United States. Of course, that is the situation that exists today.

A country that acquires a weapon like this today, if there should be some instability or other circumstance that changes its government, obviously, it could effectively, and perhaps not in the long-distance future, pose a threat to the United States.

We are first concerned about the indigenous threat, but second, we are concerned about a purchase. That is where the attention comes.

We can give an estimate of how long it takes a country like North Korea to develop a No Dong. It could be another 5 years to develop that. But they could sell a country with great capability in a matter of days or weeks, and the deployment could be a threat to us in a very short period of time.

A third aspect, in addition to the indigenous development and the sale of missiles to be used for military purposes, is the sale of space launch capable missiles. This has been done throughout the world, as well. There is absolutely nothing to prevent the interchange of a satellite to be launched into space for weather prediction, for example, and a warhead of mass destruction, a chemical or biological warhead, or even a nuclear warhead in such a missile.

These missiles are proliferating around the world, and though they have a peaceful purpose, they can very quickly be used for military purposes, and therefore, for us to base predictions on the fact that an adversary of ours will take a long time to induce and develop a weapon, again does not necessarily mean it is beyond the time element comes in. We are concerned about a purchase. That is something that only paranoid people are fearful of.

Mr. President, let me ask unanimous consent that other material be printed in the RECORD at this point, and allow me to reach a conclusion of my statement in support of this amendment for a sense-of-the-Senate statement.

Mr. President, let me ask unanimous consent that other material be printed in the RECORD at this point, and allow me to reach a conclusion of my state-but we make considerable efforts. Not so in defending the country against ballistic missile attack.

(IV) Moreover, the ballistic missile is the weapon of choice in the Third World. Ballistic missiles signify technological advancement, and are thus a source of prestige in the developing world. Missiles have become symbolically powerful, and are used to enhance national security and to challenge regional powers. They are relatively inexpensive, and thus a source of prestige in the developing world. Missiles have become symbolically powerful, and are used to enhance national security and to challenge regional powers.

(A) Asjit Singh, Director of the Indian Institute for Defense Studies and Analysis, has pointed out that "the process of development and deployment of strategic missile systems is gradually enhancing the strategic value of ballistic missiles . . . there is yet no credible defense against them."

(V) I fully agree that the arms control regimes will protect us from threat from ballistic missiles. Not so.

(A) The Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT), provides a useful barrier to discourage the transfer of technology concerning weapons of mass destruction. It is not, however, leak proof, and should not be relied upon as a primary basis for American and allied security. The NPT, for example, failed to prevent Iraq or North Korea from developing their nuclear weapons programs.

(B) The Missile Technology Control Regime (MTCR), founded by Ronald Reagan in 1987. Again, has admirable goals, but can only slow the transfer of missile technology until more surveillance technologies can be developed. The MTCR is a weak agreement that has no monitoring agency or enforcement mechanisms, and does not incorporate all the world's missile producing powers (notably China), and cannot forbid technologies that have civil uses.

(C) Former CIA Director James Woolsey said on January 10, 1995, that, with regard to Russia, "...we are particularly concerned with the safety of nuclear, chemical, and biological materials, as well as highly enriched uranium or plutonium, although I want to stress that this is a global problem.

(D) We simply cannot rely on arms control to do the job.

(VI) The Kyl-Inhofe amendment expresses the -sense of the Senate that Americans should be defended—whether in foreign lands or here at home.

We can agree about how to do it: but we should not begin this debate without at least agreeing on the basic premise that Americans should be protected. Surely we can all agree with that.

There is nothing threatening about defense. Missile defense destroys only offensive missiles.

Mr. KYL. These missiles are, unfortunately, becoming the weapon of choice of bullies in the world. Because they are relatively inexpensive, they can be used to great effect for blackmail. Iraq's deployment of long range missiles and the possibility of a new launch site have spurred discussion on the need for an early strike, as the chairman of the committee noted in his eloquent opening statement, will cause great damage.

Mr. President, 20 percent of all United States casualties in the Iragi war were from one Scud missile attack, which killed 28 Americans with one missile, because we did not have the capability of defending against that.

A question has been asked here, why now? Why were we not prepared this time? How can we be so unprepared? Because we did not have the missile defense system in place that 28 Americans at one time died from a Scud missile attack—20 percent of all of our casualties came from that—knowing of the destruction that the Scuds directed on the State of Israel, and knowing of our great concern about that because we could not locate the missile.

The only way we had to deal with it was to try to shoot it down, and finally, knowing after the fact that our Patriot missiles, designed to shoot down aircraft, not missiles, though pressed into action for that purpose, were really only effective to interdict about 30 percent of the Scuds that came their way.

Knowing of these things, one would imagine that 5 years later, we would have made great strides to protect ourselves against the threats that are posed. The fact of the matter is that virtually nothing has changed. Other than a slightly upgraded investigative capacity to detect the Scud missile, we do not have a missile defense. This is 5 years later, a period of time in which we should have been able to develop and deploy an effective missile defense against a weapon like the Scud. We have not done so.

I just taking the theater context and forgetting for a moment the potential threat to the United States, it is clear that we have not adequately pursued a defense against this weapon of choice by the troublemaker nations of the world.

We have not developed and deployed a new sensor. We have not developed and deployed a new missile. We have made some strides in the research, but we have not made a commitment to do the research. This is because there has been no clear national mandate, no clear national instruction, to get about the business of doing this. There are all kinds of reasons why.

The fact of the matter is, we need to get on with the business of getting this done. That is why I compliment Senator Nunn and Senator Thurmond for much of what they have included in the bill this year.

We have done some small differences, we will perhaps need to work on. One thing on which we can all agree at this beginning point of the debate is that there is a threat to be concerned about, and that we do need, as we begin this debate, to at least express the sense of this body that Americans need to be protected against an accidental or a limited ballistic missile attack.

Mr. President, if we cannot agree on that, I suspect the American people will be surprised about what we are in the body in which to repose confidence about their future security. I am confident that we can agree to this. Based upon that, we can make some sensible decisions about both the policy embodied in this year's defense bill and the expenditures inherent in the authorization bill.

I look forward to working with the chairman, Senator Nunn, and other members of the committee, and other members of this body in working through this bill based on an understanding there is a threat to the United States from ballistic missile attack, and to our forces abroad, and our allies, and it is against this threat we should be protected.

I hope when the time comes, Mr. President, my colleagues here will see fit to support the Kyl-Inhofe amendment, which expresses the sense of the Senate.

AMENDMENT NO. 2078 TO AMENDMENT NO. 2077

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, I send a second-degree amendment to the desk. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. Nunn] proposed an amendment numbered 2076 to amendment No. 2077.

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 5, beginning with 4, strike out all down through the end of the amendment and insert in lieu thereof the following: There is the further understanding that front-line troops of the United States armed forces should be protected from missile attacks.

FUNDING FOR CORPS SAM AND BOOST-PHASE INTERCEPTOR PROGRAMS.

(1) Notwithstanding any other provision in this Act, of the funds authorized to be appropriated by section 201(4), $35.0 million shall be available for the Corps SAM/MEADS program.

(2) With a portion of the funds authorized in paragraph (1) for the Corps SAM/MEADS program, the Secretary of Defense shall conduct a study to determine whether a Theater Ballistic Missile Defense system and Patriot missile technologies could fulfill the Corps SAM/MEADS requirements at a lower estimated life-cycle cost than is estimated for the cost of the U.S. portion of the Corps SAM/MEADS program.

(3) The Secretary shall provide a report on the study required under paragraph (3) to the congressional defense committees not later than March 1, 1996.

(4) Of the funds authorized to be appropriated by section 201(4), not more than $13.000 shall be available for missile defense programs within the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization.

(5) Section 238(c)(I) of this Act shall have no force or effect.

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, very briefly, this adds back $35 million to what is the Corps SAM program. I know other people want to speak on the Kyl first-degree amendment. That is a good amendment. I support it. The amendment does not in any way strike or in any way change the first-degree amendment, but is directly relevant because this gives strong emphases to the Corps SAM program, which is at the heart of our forward theater missile defense. I will explain this in more detail later. I know there are others who would like to speak, including the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I just have a little concern about the procedural step we started off with on the bill. At one point the manager of the bill on the majority side was properly recognized, as manager of the bill, for purposes of offering an amendment. But during the process it appeared that the Senator sought to have another Senator recognized for purposes of offering an amendment. There was no unanimous consent requested for that purpose. I am sure this was inadvertent, but it becomes very, very difficult to have what we would like to call here a "jump ball" on recognition if one Senator can sort of call on another Senator, in effect.

I again say I do not think that was the intent, but I am concerned about the way we got started on this.

Mr. President, I therefore ask unanimous consent that upon the disposition of the Kyl amendment that I be recognized.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FEINGOLD. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I do not think I can add a lot to what the very eloquent Senator from Arizona, Senator KYL, said about this sense-of-the-Senate amendment.

I do support the amendment and offer this with Senator KYL. One of the reasons I came to the Senate in the first place, and one of the reasons I sought to serve on the Senate Armed Services Committee, is a very deep concern over what has been happening to our Nation’s defense.

I have watched the cold war leave us and many people, when I was serving in the other body, would stand up and say, "There is no longer a necessity to have a very strong defense system. The cold war is over and the threat is not out there." I honestly believe, in looking at this, through my service on the Intelligence Committee as well as on the Senate Armed Services Committee and formerly on the House Armed Services Committee, that there is a threat to our country out there that is even more severe, more serious today than there was during the cold war, because in the cold war we could identify who the enemy was. As Jim Woolsey said, there were 20 to 25 countries, not two or three, 20 to 25, that are working on or have weapons of mass destruction. That is not something that might happen in the future. That is something that is imminent and that is taking place.

It is interesting that the administration downplays another conclusion by the intelligence analysts; namely, that there are numerous ways for hostile countries to acquire intercontinental ballistic missiles far more quickly. We have watched this. We have watched the discussions take place. I think we can come to some conclusions, and those conclusions are that there is a multiple threat out there.

The Senator from South Carolina just mentioned briefly the ABM Treaty. I think it is worth at least discussing in context with our need for a national missile defense system. I think at the time that the ABM Treaty was signed, ABM Treaty; maybe there was justification for that. There were two superpowers in the world—this was 1972—and the feeling was at that time, if neither of the superpowers were in a position to defend themselves from a missile attack, then there would not be any threat out there for the rest of the world. Maybe there was justification for that.

I had a conversation with the architect of the ABM Treaty just the other day, Dr. Kissinger. He said, and I will quote him now:

There is something nuts about making a virtue out of our vulnerability.

That is exactly what we are saying when we say, by policy and by treaty, that we can defend our troops who might be facing aggression, that we can pursue a theater missile defense system, but we cannot defend our Nation against a missile attack. There is something nuts about that. So we are going to have to address this.

In the meantime, what can we do to put a national missile defense into effect in the next 5 years? We can do exactly what we are doing with this bill. I would like to move even quicker than we can move right now, but we feel what we are doing in this bill that we are looking at today is all we can do to prepare ourselves for what can happen in the next 5 years. So, when we are able to change this national policy, we will be in a position to not lose any more time toward this goal.

I think the issue here is: Is it 10 years when the threat could be facing us or is it 5 years? I think it is incontroversial it is closer to 5 years.

Even if we were certain there is no new threat that would materialize for 10 years, there are two compelling reasons to develop and deploy a national missile defense system. First, it will take more than 5 years to develop and deploy the limited system, even when the Senator from South Carolina indicated it would take only a couple of years. After the bill passed, by then, we will most certainly be facing new ballistic missile threats to the United States.

Second, deploying the national missile defense system would deter countries from seeking their own ICBM capabilities. A vulnerable United States invites proliferation, blackmail, and aggression.

We are going to hear, during the course of this debate, people who really do not want to arm the United States. Unfortunately, it will take almost 10 years to develop and deploy even a limited system.

As Senator KYL’s amendment so clearly establishes, the intelligence community has confirmed that there are numerous ways for hostile countries to acquire intercontinental ballistic missiles in much less than 10 years by means other than indigenous development. Basically any country that can deliver a payload into orbit can deliver a payload to intercontinental distances. Space launch technology is fundamentally ballistic missile technology, and it is becoming more and more available on the open... market. Russia has all but put the SS-25 ICBM on sale for purposes of space launch. China has repeatedly demonstrated a willingness to market missile technology, even technology limited by the missile technology control regime.

In his last appearance before Congress as Director of Central Intelligence, James Woolsey stated clearly that countries working on shorter range ballistic missiles could easily transition to developing longer range systems. Saddam Hussein demonstrated that countries without a high technology base could get into the missile modification and nuclear weapons business.

North Korea has also demonstrated to the world that an ICBM capability can be developed with relatively little notice. The Taepo-Dong II missile, which could become operational within 5 years, is an ICBM. Each new development on this missile seems to catch the intelligence community by surprise. It certainly undermines the argument of those who downplay the threat and the intelligence community’s own 10-year estimate.

Even if we knew with certainty that no new materialize for 10 years there would still be a strong case for developing and deploying a national missile defense system. Deploying an NMD system would serve to deter countries that would otherwise seek to acquire an ICBM capability. A vulnerable United States merely invites proliferation, blackmail, and even aggression.

For this reason, I strongly and enthusiastically support Senator Kyl’s amendment. It is a reasonable statement for the Senate to make. Only those who believe that the American people should not be protected against the one military threat that holds at risk their homes and country should oppose this amendment. I urge my colleagues to support the Kyl-Inhofe amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the second-degree amendment?

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I would like to make a couple of comments about the Kyl-Inhofe amendment, and then also about an amendment that I intend to offer during the consideration of this legislation. I intend to offer an amendment that eliminates the $300 million that was added to national missile defense research and development in the budget that was submitted by the President and requested by the Pentagon. In other words, the Pentagon said, here is what we think is necessary for that program. The Armed Services Committee added $300 million above that for national missile defense.

I listened to my friends from Arizona and Oklahoma, whom I have great respect. We just disagree on this question. I intend to offer an amendment to strip the $300 million out of the bill because I think the national missile defense system described in this bill ought to be built or deployed, and I do not believe that the taxpayers should be asked to provide $300 million that the Pentagon says it does not need.

The Kyl-Inhofe amendment has four pages of findings. And on page 5, it says, “It is the sense of the Senate that all Americans should be protected from accidental, intentional, or limited ballistic missile attack.”

It is hard to find fault with the language unless one asks the question: What does one mean by this? Is someone who suggests this saying that we should spend $300 million on a limited ballistic missile defense system, or star wars? I know that we were admonished not to use that term because that does not apply, we are told. This is in my judgment a star wars national missile defense proposal, if I may.

The Congressional Budget Office in 1993 said the cost of building a national missile defense system at Grand Forks, ND and five other sites would be $34 billion. A March 1995 Congressional Budget Office review pegs the cost of that same site plus five others at $48 billion.

If with this simple sense of the Senate on page 5 the Senate is saying, Yes, let us develop a program that costs the American taxpayers $48 billion, I think people here in the Senate ought to think long and hard about this.

Sure everyone wants to be protected. Today, in the old Soviet Union, they are crushing and busting up missiles under a program that we are helping pay for. Missiles are being destroyed today as I speak in the old Soviet Union.

What is the threat? Well, the Soviet Union has now disappeared. But we are not told that the threat is that some terrorist Third World country, perhaps Iraq, or Iran, maybe some would suggest Qadhafi, could get a hold of an ICBM and grade plutonium, build a nuclear bomb, put it on the tip of a intercontinental missile and shoot it toward the West. Move that is the threat.

In my judgment, if the wrong people get a hold of enough weapons grade plutonium to build a nuclear bomb, it is far more likely that they will threaten this country by putting it in the trunk of a rusty Yugo parked on a dock of the New York. I reckon that the national is far more likely the case in which they would acquire or be able to build an intercontinental ballistic missile with which to threaten the West.

Frankly, this bill is interesting to me. People are saying that we do not have enough money, that we are up to our neck in debt, and that we must reduce the Federal deficit—and I agree with that. Then this bill says the Pentagon does not know what it is talking about, $371 million humbug. We want to add $300 million. And more than that, we have not learned our lesson about advanced deployment and emergency deployment. We also want to not only add money, but, in my view, we also have not paid for the folks who are building this star wars project that we want accelerated development for a limited deployment in 1999. And full deployment will follow in 2003. That is the scheme in this legislation.

I thought maybe we learned something about those enhanced research schedules and accelerated deployment schedules with the B-1 bomber, and some other weapons programs, but mostly, no.

In any event, I think the question is not should we protect America. The question is why should we decide to spend $300 million more on national missile defense than the Defense Department says it need? And we decide that we are going to dump in extra money beyond what the Secretary of Defense says he needs or wants?

We have direct testimony from the Secretary of Defense saying I do not want this. This is not money that I am asking for. I do not need this. You are proposing, he says, to defend against a threat that does not exist. And you are proposing giving the Pentagon money it does not want.

I just find it unusual that the same people who always tell us that the big spenders are on this side of the aisle are saying the Pentagon does not know what it is talking about; they want to provide the Pentagon $300 million more for this boondoggle, dollars they do not want. But that is not what I guess is so important today. The fact is that this extra $300 million is just lighting the fuse on a $40 to $50 billion spending program that once underway will not be controlled, and all of us know that.

I recognize that part of this deals with my State. My State was the site of the only antiballistic missile system in the free world. It was built in north east North Dakota 25 years ago. I said at the time I did not think it should be built. It did not matter much what I said then; it was built. And after billions of dollars were spent and after the system was operational, within 30 days it was dismantled.

Now, some might say, well, it was useful to spend all of that because we were creating bargaining chips with which to negotiate with the Soviets on an ABM Treaty. I do not know the ve-within 30 days after being declared operational.

Now we have a constituency to build a new ballistic missile defense system. This starts from President Reagan’s announcement in the 1980’s of a shield, sort of a national astrodome—‘I was a national astrodome who was talking about, putting an astrodome over this country of ours so that no one could attack it. If an incoming intercontinental ballistic missile took aim on our country and took flight, then in our country, we would have a system of defense, both ground based and space based, with which we would knock out those incoming missiles and protect our country forever.

The result was that an enormous amount of money has been spent all around this country on research, engaging academic institutions, engaging companies all over, virtually every State in the Union, and a constituency has developed for this idea. It does not matter that times have changed. It does not matter there is no longer a Soviet Union. It does not matter there is no Warsaw Pact, the Berlin Wall is gone, Eastern Germany does not exist. It does not matter the world has changed. The folks who want to build a star wars, ABM, national missile defense program have not had their appetites satisfied. So they want to continue with this program, but they are not the Defense Department doing research in this area. They will only be satisfied if they require deployment—on an interim basis so that by 1999, less than 4 years from now, somehow, some way, someone will deploy the first contingent in any number of sites around the country of the national missile defense system.

Again, I certainly respect the views of those who have great ardor and support for this program. I respectfully disagree however. We have so many needs that are urgent that we have not been addressing, not the need to build schools more important than to build star wars; Do we care about education? If we do, is not the need to build star wars more important than to build star wars? Do we care about hunger and nutrition? If we do, is it not more important to make sure that we fund those programs so that people in this country are not hungry instead of taking $300 million that the Pentagon does not want and building a system the Pentagon says should not be built at this point? It is a matter of priorities, and we must begin choosing.

I think those who push not only this but several other things in this legislation that go well beyond the funding request by the Pentagon are saying we do not have to make choices. We are not interested in prioritizing. Or at least if they are not saying that, they are making choices and prioritizing in kind of a burlesque way, saying, well, it is not important for a poor kid in school to get a healthy lunch because we cannot afford it, and then changing suits, having a good sleep and coming back the next day saying it is important, however, to give the Secretary of Defense $300 million he does not need for a program he does not want to deploy at this point and for a program that he says is not going to be built to meet an existing threat.

I am just saying to you that I think those who are saying that, are wrong. If I read Senator Kyl’s sense-of-the-Senate: ‘It is the sense of the Senate that all Americans should be protected from an accidental, intentional or limited ballistic missile attack.’ I would say, oh, sure, all Americans ought to be protected, I understand that. That makes sense to me. If I change this and say it is the sense of the Senate that we begin embarking on a program that will eventually cost $40 billion to deploy in multiple sites around the country a ballistic missile defense system with a ground-based and a space-based component, have I changed the question? I think I have, because if I am asking the Senators in this room whether that is the way we ought to spend $40 billion in the coming years, they have to evaluate whether $40 billion spent for this versus $40 billion allocated for other competing needs in this country is the right choice.

So, Mr. President, as I indicated when I began, I intend to offer an amendment to strip the $300 million in additional funding that has been put in the legislation before us for the national missile defense program. There will still remain $371 million, a substantial amount of money. But if my amendment is accepted, there will not remain $300 million which the Secretary of Defense says he does not want, does not need, and did not ask for. We will, I am sure, have a rather substantial debate about this when I offer my amendment. I shall not pursue it further at the moment. But I could not help but comment on this amendment, which is a sense of the Senate, a question of all of us, very tough choices about what we spend money on. I think two questions ought to be asked on all of these proposals. Do we need it? And can we afford it? And with those two questions in the national missile defense system, nicknamed star wars—which is appropriate, because this talks about the potential of a space-based system—when we ask those two questions: Do we need it? And can we afford it? The first answers are often falsely presented that runs roughshod the Pentagon. They have said, no, we do not need it. And they have not asked for it. The second answer ought to be answered by everybody who is in the U.S. Senate who is grappling with questions about can we feed our children through nutritional programs? Can we adequately educate our kids? And can we do all the things that are necessary? Can we adequately fund Medicare and Medicaid for the elderly and the poor?

Mr. INHOFE. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DORGAN. The answer to my question is no. We cannot afford something we do not need when priorities require us to make a better judgment than this.

I would be happy to yield.

Mr. THURMOND addressed the Chair.

Mr. INHOFE. I am sure you heard several times—

Mr. THURMOND addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has yielded for a question.

Mr. INHOFE. We have quotes by Jim Woolsey and John Deutch and other experts in this field. And in terms of the quote that was attributed to Jim Woolsey, there are between 20 and 25 countries that have developed or are developing weapons of mass destruction and the ability to deploy those.

Do you not believe that statement by John Woolsey?

Mr. DORGAN. Well, I would say to the Senator from Oklahoma that the statements that are made by—let me give you a statement by the head of the CIA. “We see no interest in or capability of any new country reaching the continental United States with a long-range missile for at least the next decade,” so on, so forth.

But I would say this, that the Secretary of Defense, having evaluated all of these conditions, including the potential of other developments of ICBM’s, has concluded that this is not in our interest. I mean, what the Secretary of Defense has said to you looking at all those things, “Don’t do this. I don’t want the money. I don’t want the program and I don’t want the threat it.” It doesn’t make sense for this country’s national security.”

I would be happy to yield further.

Mr. INHOFE. If the Senator will allow me to read a statement—two statements. One is by James Woolsey concerning what is out there today.

“We can confirm that the North Koreans are developing two additional missiles with ranges greater than 1,000 kilometers that it flew last year. These new missiles could put at risk all of the Northeast Asia, Southeast Asia, and the Pacific area. And if we export, the Middle East could threaten Europe as well.” Then further John Deutch says, “If the North Koreans field the Taepo Dong missiles, Guam, Alaska, and parts of Hawaii would potentially be at risk.”

So it is a two-part question. First of all, do you believe this? And, second, and most significantly, Mr. President, will the Senator agree that the Secretary is wrong?

Mr. DORGAN. Well, will some day some countries that we now consider terrorist countries or renegade countries have the capability of developing
Mr. DORGAN. They are the ones saying it is good news.

Mr. KYL. I know the Senator from Arizona whether his intention with this is to provide support for and for to assist in the accelerated deployment of a national missile defense system?

Mr. KYL. And I say to the Senator, absolutely, bingo.

Mr. DORGAN. If that is the Senator's intention, I will not want to be supporting that, because I do not think that happens to make sense for this country.

Mr. KYL. The Senator, obviously, has the right to vote for or against my amendment. I was curious. There is a lot that can be said. Perhaps the Senator could be thinking—I would like to hear from some of the other Senators—perhaps the Senator could be thinking how he will substantiate the claim he made repeatedly now that the Secretary of Defense does not want this, did not ask for it, and so on. If the Senator can find those statements, I would be curious because, of course, General O'Neill testified to the Armed Services Committee that he could spend $450 million and he does not do that without getting the concurrence of the administration.

The administration's initial budget request did not ask for the money, I agree, but in last year's budget, the Committee that all Americans deserve to be protected from missile attack. So when the Senator makes the argument about the $300 million, he is really making the argument in support of his amendment that is going to be the case both Senators have made. I think they made it very well. It is just I do not agree with them. I think this is a case where you say, if you have unlimited funds that you can take from the defense, you say: "I just keep spending your money, because we have got plenty of opportunity and we have lots of needs." If you have unlimited funds, then build everything. That is fine. The problem is we do not have unlimited funds. We are forced—literally forced—to start choosing among wrenching, awful, agonizing priorities. I think when the Senator proposes this, what he is saying is, we do not intend to choose, at least not in defense; we intend to build it all.

Mr. KYL. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DORGAN. Yes.

Mr. KYL. I know the Senator from Georgia is able to speak on his amendment. I can respond to each of the points that the Senator from North Dakota made in detail. But rather than doing that, I want to pose one quick question, because, frankly, it may not be necessary for us to do that.

Is the Senator prepared to tell us whether he is going to vote against or for my amendment? If the Senator is going to vote for the amendment, I will not bother to respond to some of the points.

Mr. DORGAN. I have not read the entire amendment. I read the sense of the Senate. It is hard to disagree with the sense of the Senate if you understand that the sense of the Senate says that "it is the sense of the Senate that all regions of our country should be protected from accidental, intentional, limited ballistic attack." Yes, they ought to be protected.

I ask you this question: Are you saying with this that it is your sense that we should spend $300 million extra next year and go to enhanced deployment of a ballistic missile defense system; that it is your intention with this amendment to put the Senate on record to go for early deployment and $300 million extra next year and go to enhanced deployment of a ballistic missile defense system; that it is your intention with this amendment to put the Senate on record to go for early deployment and $300 million extra next year and go to enhanced deployment of a ballistic missile defense system; that it is your intention with this amendment to put the Senate on record to go for early deployment and $300 million extra next year and go to enhanced deployment of a ballistic missile defense system? Mr. CAMPBELL assumed the chair.

Mr. KYL. In response to the Senator's question, it is as you have noted. You are going to propose an amendment to strike $300 million that is already in the bill. My amendment does not add any money to the bill. My amendment simply expresses the sense of the Senate that all Americans deserve to be protected from missile attack. So when the Senator makes the argument about the $300 million, he is really making the argument in support of his amendment that is going to be
Mr. COATS. I am saying the world has changed significantly since we employed the doctrine of mutually assured destruction, and the deterrent effect the Senator alluded to that would satisfy the concerns of the Senator from Arizona simply may not be applicable in today's world.

Mr. DORGAN. It is interesting, what has changed it is quite remarkable—it is almost breathtaking in its scope—is that the Soviet Union does not exist anymore. Cutting the tails off bombers, they are crushing their missiles, and we are taking warheads apart. What has changed dramatically is that we have stepped back from the brink, we have largely seen the cold war dissolve, we have a circumstance in this world today for which all of us should rejoice.

The arms race is largely over, and the Senator raises the question, are there still not some other threats? Yes, there are. But you know what has not changed is the appetite for those who are parents of weapons programs, because those who have parentage of new weapons programs just cannot give up. It does not matter what the world is like, it does not matter what the need is; they have a weapons program, and they are going to build it.

Mr. COATS. That may or may not—

Mr. DORGAN. Will the Senator at least acknowledge that the genesis of this kind of program came from Ronald Reagan, I believe, in 1982 or 1983, in which he described the holocaust from a single Soviet Union ICBM attack on the United States?

My Senator underlines the fact that you believe that mutually assured destruction is the preferred solution to, say, an accidental launch?

Mr. DORGAN. Well, Mr. COATS. And do you believe that would be any kind of a deterrent or appropriate response to an accidental launch of a missile?

Mr. DORGAN. The Senator understands, I would judge successful the strategic employment of both of the nuclear triad in order to avoid nuclear war over some 25 or 30 years. Would the Senator agree with that?

Mr. COATS. I do, but the world has changed significantly since then. We are trying to deter something entirely different.

Mr. DORGAN. If I may respond to that—I did not respond to the Senator's question about North Korea. I would like to add for the record something I will not read, a rather lengthy paragraph, about the capabilities of North Korea written by two Nobel laureates, two veterans of the Manhattan project, a total of seven eminent physicists, who are completely at odds with the representations about the capabilities of the North Koreans at this point.

I guess the Senator from Indiana is standing up saying we need this system because of the threat, in a way we can provide for an impregnable defense against the renegades, against terrorist countries; is what the Senator is saying?
the wind blows, or whether it rains, it is the same wagon. They just change the debate a bit. In my judgment, the taxpayers ought not to fund something that the Secretary of Defense says he does not want, the country does not need, and he said putting in the bill— I have no doubt folks will ask about the things we will talk about later, about abrogating the ABM Treaty and other things; I have not even discussed that. But I think you ought to listen to the Secretary of Defense on this issue. You ought to listen to the taxpayers. I think they understand.

Mr. COATS. If the Senator will yield, I am going to get off the floor. I just came over to ask a simple question. I got everything but the answer to my question. I did not mean to prompt the opportunity for the Senator from North Dakota to repeat what he already said earlier. I simply asked the question as to how the Senator proposed that we would deter an accidental launch of a ballistic missile toward the United States. I got everything but the answer to that particular question. The Senator from Arizona is more than capable of answering—and I believe he probably has already done it—the reasons why this program is significantly different from that which Reagan or anybody else proposed in the early eighties. It is not the so-called umbrella defense system that has been debated on the floor here for a decade. It is not a missile. It is much, much different from that. The threat is different from that. I do not disagree with the Senator that the threat we face includes options other than—

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, if the Senator would like to ask a question, I will be happy to answer a question. If not, I would like to begin the floor.

Mr. COATS. How does the Senator propose to deal with an accidental ballistic missile launch in the United States? It seems to me that your proposal is significantly different from that which we read about in the newspapers, and I am curious as to what this means from—

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I appreciate the question. The Senator from Indiana now suggests that the principal reason for spending $40 billion is to protect against an accident. It occurred to me that the Koreans would not have liked to have been in an accident, according to the Senator from Arizona. He is proposing that the Koreans might pose a threat. I assume when we hear discussions about other countries—Libya, Iran, or others—we are talking about a threat rather than an accident. The question on an accidental nuclear launch, I suppose, is a question others could ask of us and we could ask of many in the world. We have, it seems to me, very carefully, over many, many years, decades, in fact, worked to prevent an accident from occurring on any side, with respect to the nuclear powers. I again say that I urge all of us to evaluate. When we start talking about the need now, when the Soviet Union is gone, to build a star wars program to react to North Korea and spend $40 billion we do not have, I urge everyone to understand that at the same time we are going to consign ourselves to spend $40 billion, we are going to be unable to afford Medicare and Medicaid, and that the old folks should pay more and get less, and we will cut $270 billion out of Medicare.

We supposedly cannot afford all the other things we are talking about because we have to tighten our belts. It occurs to me that those that push this, especially in the year 1995, when the world has changed, but changed in a way that would augur for less incentive to need this kind of a program, those who push this are making an illogical argument. It seems illogical to me to be saying we have to tighten our belts here at home and have to worry about priorities, we have to make tough choices, and I would like to point out the ties to the floor and say, by the way, this is true for everything else, but we have $300 million here that does not apply because this $300 million will substitute our judgment for the judgment of the Secretary of Defense and others, and say that we must now embark on an accelerated deployment of a national missile defense program, including star wars.

I am just telling you that we will probably not make a decision on the question of that $300 million. If I see the glint in the eye of the Senator from Arizona from across the room, I suspect he will have a spirited defense of spending that money. I will be here, as soon as it works into the schedule, to see where we all stand on spending money we do not have on something we do not need.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that portions of a July 7, 1995 letter from signature winners of the Manhattan project, including two Nobel Prize winners and two veterans of the Manhattan project, who discuss accidental launch by Russia or China and the likelihood of a threat from a third country, particularly North Korea, be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the excerpts were ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

(1) Accidental launch of Russian or Chinese nuclear missiles may be of assistance as you deliberate on this problem in any event since cooperative measures are more expensive and technically difficult to build and deploy than other means of delivery, and are less accurate. Since launches are readily detected by satellites, the United States would pinpoint the origin of a missile attack and could retaliate quickly with devastating force. Such retaliation would have to be considered as a deterrent to a missile leader, and will always be a powerful deterrent to missile attacks.

(2) Deliberate missile attack by other countries in the future: Ballistic missiles are the least likely method a developing country would use to deliver an attack. Russian and Chinese missiles are more expensive and technically difficult to build and deploy than other means of delivery, and are less accurate. Since launches are readily detected by satellites, the United States would pinpoint the origin of a missile attack and could retaliate quickly with devastating force. Such retaliation would have to be considered as a deterrent to a missile leader, and will always be a powerful deterrent to missile attacks.

Currently, no country hostile to the United States possesses ballistic missiles that can reach US territory. Even if such threats begin to emerge in the future, the United States will have considerable warning since missile development requires flight testing that can be monitored by satellite. Although some 20 countries in the developing world possess some short-range missile or space-launch vehicle, only countries friendly to the United States—Israel, India, and Saudi Arabia—have deployable systems with a range greater than 600 kilometers.

North Korea, perhaps the most discussed threat, has conducted one partial-range test of the 1000 kilometer range Nodong missile, but does not have an operational version after six to seven years of development. North Korea is reported to be working on new missiles with ranges up to 3,000 kilometers, but such missiles would require new technologies, such as staging and more powerful engines. Judging from the long development period and likely considerable deployment of such an intermediate-range missile is many years off at least, and progress can be monitored closely by satellite. In any event, the United States would have the range to strike the US homeland.

CONCLUSION

Rather than devoting resources to national missile defenses, the United States should instead focus on programs to combat existing, more pressing threats. For example, a higher priority should be placed on bringing military and civilian weapon-usable fissile material in the former Soviet republics under better control and accelerating safe, verified dismantlement of Russian nuclear warheads and delivery vehicles.

In sum, proposals to deploy NMD are misguided and irresponsible. National missile defenses do not address the existing and most likely future threats to the US. homeland and are diverting valuable resources. Instead, NMD will destroy much of one of the United States’ primary tools for maintaining and increasing national security, arms control. We urge you to weigh carefully the negligible benefits and substantial costs of deploying NMD. Thank you for your attention to our views and please call on us if we can be of assistance as you deliberate on this matter.

Sincerely,

HANS BETHE, Professor of Physics Emeritus, Cornell University.

RICHARD GARWIN, Adjunct Professor of Physics, Columbia University and IBM Research Divi- sion Fellow Emeritus, IBM Research Division.

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, I have enjoyed the dialog on this subject. I think this is a good way to begin the defense debate. I inform all of my colleagues that the biggest challenges we have in this bill, in managing the bill—the chairman, Senator THURMOND and myself—is the vast array of ballistic missile defense, theater missile defense, and the ABM Treaty. We are off on the subject that I think is going to be the toughest subject. It will take the most time for debate. I consider this a good idea with which to begin the debate and get the views out on both sides of this issue.

I am sure there will be other views as we go along. I would like to explain, in just a few minutes, the amendment I have offered, which is now the pending second-degree amendment to the Kyl first-degree amendment.

This amendment is intended to restore funds for the program known as the Corps SAM program, which is also a cooperative program called MEADS. They are one and the same program, but the MEADS program is the name given for SAM that is designated as a cooperative program and supported by the Governments of Germany, France, and Italy, where they will be paying approximately 50 percent of the cost of the program, which is what we have been encouraging for the last several years in terms of allied participation.

Corps SAM is a highly mobile theater missile defense system which is designed to defend our most vulnerable military forces, that is, our Marine and Army troops assailed at the very edge of the battle area. It is the only system under development that can meet this requirement. In addition to defending our forward troops from attack by short-range ballistic missiles, the Corps SAM/MEADS system will also replace the aging and outdated and, in many cases, HAWK batteries that are now the Marines only defense against ballistic and cruise missiles, as well as enemy aircraft.

Notwithstanding the importance of the requirement to defend these forward deployed troops, the committee bill before us, unless it is changed, will cancel the Corps SAM/MEADS program that was done during the committee markup. That is the provision of the bill now. The bill does not just zero funding in the report; it directs the Secretary of Defense, in permanent bill language, to terminate this international program.

Mr. President, in my view, this is a shortsighted action and defies rational explanation. The Senate Armed Services Committee majority argued in their report accompanying our bill that 80 percent of the total ballistic missile defense funding goes to theater missile defense systems. And the majority of the report complains about both the number of our missile defense systems under development and their cost.

This bill has shifted more funds to the national missile defense, which is the overall, rather than the theater defense. But what the majority report does not set forth, Mr. President, is the following set of important facts:

First, the bill as it now exists, enshrines as the core theater missile defense program four programs to the exclusion of other programs.

Second, the bill does not recognize that these four core theater missile defense programs provide overlapping coverage of the rear area in the theater but often no coverage for our front line troops.

That is graphically shown on this chart, Mr. President. This is the forward battle area. These are various forms of attack coming from the enemy on a theoretical battlefield. This is the theater zone—if this area right here in red, is the area where our forward troops are, usually Marine forces or Army forces. The white zone is the theater zone that is the support area, not on the forward area.

The only system that is being designed now to protect these forces in the forward battle area is the Corps SAM system, which has been canceled in this bill and which I am seeking to add back in this amendment. The programs in the bill are all designed to protect in this zone. We have the Patriot intercept zone in white. The Patriot system is designed to protect in that area. We have the Navy upper tier—very difficult to read here—but it is the outlined pink area in the outline here.

That is the upper tier engagement. We have the THAAD intercept zone, the light green zone here. Then we have the Navy lower tier, which is a possible protected zone which is below here.

These are overlapping programs. We want some overlap. We did not know which programs will end up being the best programs. I am not complaining about the overlap. What I am complaining about is leaving this area completely—not only unprotected except for HAWK batteries, which are limited in their effectiveness—but we do not have any program, even with all this money that is being complained about in this, being added to protect our troops on the forward battle area.

There is a reference in the majority report to making the PAC-3 mobile. There is no money to do that. We do not know whether that can be done. In my amendment, what I provide is $4.6 million to test that view. Can we make the PAC-3 program apply to this area?

Second, the bill does not recognize that what our Congress has asked for, for our allies to get involved in this, they finally get involved, it is the very beginning of the program, and what did we do? We cancel the program. I do not understand it. Perhaps someone can explain it.

The third point I make is that the bill now makes the theater missile defense funding problem that is being complained about—that is, the majority report complains we are spending 80 percent of our money on missile defenses in the theater, but in this bill we add $215 million to the theater programs in this area while we cut out $30 million from the Corps SAM/MEADS program, which I seek to add back.

The fourth point is that the bill argues that instead of pursuing Corps SAM, the ballistic missile defense office should begin development of a system based on making the Patriot PAC-3 technologies highly mobile to meet the Corps SAM requirement.

I do not have a quarrel with that. Perhaps PAC-3 would be better than Corps SAM. We do not have money in the bill to test that. Right now it cannot protect in this area. It is not being worked on. I do not mind seeking an answer to that question, but no one knows the answer now.

Why should we cancel the only program that can be effective—if there is a problem with 80 percent of the overall funding going to theater, what is done in this bill as it now stands, those programs are being added to what the program that goes to the heart of the forward battle area is cut out.

The fifth point, the bill right now, unless it is changed, rejects the cooperation with our allies on the MEADS program. That is the program that three of our allies have signed up for, saying they are willing to put some money in this. For the first time we have some of our allies willing to put money into these programs. They will pay 50 percent of the MEADS program.
Now, that is puzzling to me, because every Congress—and I do not know of any objection we have ever had from this on either side of the aisle—has requested that the administration, the Bush administration and the Clinton administration, and even this Reagan administration, has been pushing hard for greater involvement of our allies in missile defenses.

The allies finally, after a lot of urging, have voluntarily—we did not tell them which program to get involved in; they chose this program. I do not think that makes any sense.

Mr. President, the bill’s decision to terminate the Corps SAM/MEADS program leaves our forward-deployed Marine and Army troops virtually unprotected for the foreseeable future from attacks by short-range ballistic missiles.

I want no one to misunderstand. We are not talking about what the dialog was a little while ago, when we have a threat in 10 years against the Holy Land, the United States, or whether we have a threat in 12 years or 8 years, or a present threat. This is a present threat. It is today’s threat. It is one in which the next time we have a conflict, we may well have a chemical weapon dropped on our forward battle troops by a delivery system, that the Corps SAM—which has been canceled under this bill—is designed to protect against.

I emphasize the point about today’s threat. This is a Defense Daily report dated July 6, and it is reporting on the Roving Sands exercise, which the caption says “Roving Sands Exercise Reinforced Need for Corps SAM, the Army Says.”

From the report, “In a June paper, officials of the Army’s Air Defense Artillery Center say that recently completed Roving Sands air defense exercise ‘reinforced the Army’s need to field the Corps SAM [surface-to-air missile]’—that is what SAM stands for, surface-to-air missile—‘to fill a void that exists as a result of emerging threats from tactical ballistic missiles, unmanned aerial vehicles, and cruise missiles.’”

“During the Army’s live Theater Missile Defense Advance Warfighting Experiment, which was conducted as a part of Roving Sands, SS-21 short-range missiles employed by enemy red forces presented a particular problem for the friendly blue forces.”

Mr. President, getting away from the quote, this is an exercise. We have enemy forces, we have friendly forces. They test the various enemy systems against our present capability. SS-21 has been produced by the Soviet Union for years and has been sold to numerous countries around the world. These are widely distributed missile systems that exist in many countries.

“The largest problem for the blue forces,” that is, the friendly forces, “came from the red Alpha Battery 1st Battalion, 914 SSM Brigade, which successfully fired all missiles, many with chemical warheads, against some 20 Corps and Division targets.” The battery was not engaged by the single mission, and they were not engaged by fixed wing aircraft, rotary aircraft,” or the Army Tactical Missile System.

In other words, they had 100 percent success rate in the shots that were positing technology against forward battle troops. Any one of those in a real battlefield would have contained chemical weapons.

Continuing the quotation from this report:

“For the exercise, four Scud brigades—of which two were simulated and two combined live and simulated equipment—and one SS-21 brigade formed the theater ballistic missile threat.

Surrogates for cruise missiles formed during Roving Sands “also attacked Corps targets at will” despite the deployment of blue forces of an advanced technology sensor to detect them.

This inability to deal with the major elements of the emerging threat during Roving Sands highlights a deficiency in corps missile defense capabilities, officials conclude in the paper. The Army must field the Corps SAM system to ensure protection of friendly forces and allow the commanders to accomplish their mission.

Mr. President, there is much more that can be said about those testings, but I think those paragraphs pretty much capture the essence of what we are faced with.

I am not going to get into a detailed comparison of the programs which are funded versus this program which is not funded. Suffice it to say, though, in my opinion we are pouring money into programs that are going to take a long time to develop, that are speculative in terms of whether they will work or not. I think some of them are worth some money. Some of them are worth pouring money in, to see whether they will work or not. I do not disagree with that. But we are pouring in large sums of money, above the requests in those areas, and we are canceling the very program that our allies are working on with us, finally, that is designed to protect the frontline troops against today’s threat. That does not make sense.

Finally, the termination of the Corps SAM program in this bill is bound to have a chilling effect on further cooperation with our NATO allies on all defense programs, not just missile defenses. The actions in this bill are a complete reversal of the previous policy of cooperation. The Congress has been urging cooperation by the allies. Frankly, we want them to put some of their money into these programs, too. We do not want to be the only ones who ever put any money up. We want them to participate. We are not going to be fighting, in most conflicts, certainly in the European theater, side by side with our allies.

Quoting from the National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 1994, and I give this as the exact quote from that bill—I know of no Senator or Congressman who opposed this provision in any way:

‘Congress encourages Allies of the United States, particularly those Allies that would benefit most from deployment of Theater Missile Defense systems, to participate in, or to increase participation in, cooperation Theater Missile Defense programs of the United States.

We have urged them to get involved. They have finally gotten involved and we are canceling the program. We are talking about $35 million in this amendment and we are talking about, not an add-on to this bill, this amendment would shift the money from the big pot of money, over $3 billion that is provided in the overall missile defense area, and we leave it up to the Secretary of Defense, in this amendment, to determine how to shift those funds. But there is in my opinion sufficient funds for this purpose.

Let me briefly summarize. My amendment restores the $30.4 million in the bill by the ballistic missile defense office for the Corps SAM/MEADS program. We add another $4.6 million for the ballistic missile defense office to study the view of the majority that the PAC-3 system can also be made applicable to this. We say, “OK, good idea. Take a look-see. But do not cancel this program while you are doing it because we do not know the answer.”

Thus, my amendment adds back a total of $35 million. Since the grand total of $770 million the majority has already added to the request for ballistic missile defense in my opinion is adequate, my amendment thus offsets the $35 million increase by an undistributed reduction of $35 million to the total BMD funding of $3.4 billion.

We have $3.4 billion in this bill. Of that $3.4 billion, we would shift $35 million to restructure, repair, and reinstate this program.

Mr. President, I should close by quoting from a number of letters of support for the restoration of the Corps SAM funding which I received both from the Pentagon and from our commanders in the field.

The first letter is from Senator Bill Perry. I will just quote from a page letter addressed to Senator Thurmond.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: As you continue your consideration of the Fiscal Year 1996 National Defense Authorization Act, I strongly urge you and your colleagues to reconsider the termination of the Medium Extended Air Defense System (MEADS) program. The MEADS is a high priority advanced capability tactical ballistic missile defense system that merits your full support.

Continuing to quote: The MEADS [program] represents an appropriate form of allied cooperation in the contemporary defense system for which the United States and our allies share a valid military requirement.

Continuing to quote:
The outcome of the internationally structured MEADS program will be viewed on both sides of the Atlantic as one of the most important tests of future trans-Atlantic defense cooperation. At a time when both sides of the Atlantic are experiencing declining defense budgets and smaller procurements, we should welcome collaborative ventures where available resources can leverage and able to counter the full threat spectrum. Though there is no system that can currently do this job for us, I strongly believe that the US Army has clearly articulated the need for such a system through the Corps SAM program.

I understand that recent action by the HNSC and the SASC have essentially terminated the Corps SAM program. I would think that the demise of that program should not be interpreted as a final Corps SAM requirement. The capability provided by Corps SAM represents one of our more important needs in protecting the force on the peninsula today and in the future.

Mr. President, he goes on to say:

While we do have Patriot PAC-2 assets in theater, we remain at risk given the growing and rapidly improving nature of the threat. The termination of Corps SAM continues and increases that risk. I strongly recommend that Congress reconsider the Corps SAM requirement and restore appropriate funding to protect our forces.

Mr. President, I also would like to read a letter from Major General Dennis Reimer, head of the U.S. Army:

The predominant threats to Army and Marine Corps maneuver forces are very short/short range tactical ballistic missiles (VS/SRTBMs) and unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs). Defense against these threats well forward of our forces is clearly one of the greatest concerns facing the Force Chief (CINC). The Corps SAM Operational Requirements Document (ORD) specifies countering these threats with a strategically deployable, tactically mobile system providing 360 degree coverage. Existing/proposed system configurations (PAC-3, THAAD, Navy Upper/Lower tier) fail to provide the required protection due to deployability and mobility limitations, lack of 360 degree coverage, and lack of growth potential to meet these essential requirements.

This critical shortfall requirement, Army and Marine Corps forces are at risk, and will remain at risk with no defense against VS/SRTBMs and only limited capability against UAVs.

Mr. President, finally a letter from Robin Beard. Many of you know Robin Beard. He was a Congressman from Tennessee, a Republican Congressman, and now is the Assistant Secretary General, NATO. He writes the following letter:

DEAR SENATOR STEVENS:

I am writing to express extreme concern with the Senate Armed Services Committee’s decision to terminate the Medium Extended Air Defense System (MEADS) program and to urge you and your colleagues to support the President’s budget request of $20.4 million in the FY 1996 Defense Appropriations Bill.

While others have spoken to the U.S. military requirements for MEADS/Corps SAM, I would like to express my perspective on the matter. Cancelling MEADS would send a horrible message to the Allies. It would confirm their worst fears regarding our commitment to protect them. It would be a terrible blow to European and Mediterranean projects and would seriously jeopardize on-going efforts to develop a cooperative approach for meeting the challenges posed by the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their delivery systems.

Mr. President, continuing to quote from Robin Beard who is now the Assistant Secretary General, NATO. He writes the following letter:

I am writing to express extreme concern with the Senate Armed Services Committee’s decision to terminate the Medium Extended Air Defense System (MEADS) program and to urge you and your colleagues to support the President’s budget request of $20.4 million in the FY 1996 Defense Appropriations Bill.

While others have spoken to the U.S. military requirements for MEADS/Corps SAM, I would like to express my perspective on the matter. Cancelling MEADS would send a horrible message to the Allies. It would confirm their worst fears regarding our commitment to protect them. It would be a terrible blow to European and Mediterranean projects and would seriously jeopardize on-going efforts to develop a cooperative approach for meeting the challenges posed by the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their delivery systems.

Mr. President, continuing to quote from Robin Beard who is now the Assistant Secretary General, NATO. He writes the following letter:

I am writing to express extreme concern with the Senate Armed Services Committee’s decision to terminate the Medium Extended Air Defense System (MEADS) program and to urge you and your colleagues to support the President’s budget request of $20.4 million in the FY 1996 Defense Appropriations Bill.

While others have spoken to the U.S. military requirements for MEADS/Corps SAM, I would like to express my perspective on the matter. Cancelling MEADS would send a horrible message to the Allies. one of the top ten priorities within our FY96 integrated priority list.

While we do have Patriot PAC-2 assets in theater, we remain at risk given the growing and rapidly improving nature of the threat.

The termination of Corps SAM continues and increases that risk. I would strongly recommend that Congress reconsider the Corps SAM requirement and provide appropriate funding to protect our forces.

Sincerely,

GARY E. LUCK
General, U.S. Army,

U.S. ARMY
THE CHIEF OF STAFF,

Hon. Strom Thurmond,
Chairman, Committee on Armed Services, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR Mr. Chairman:
The Senate Armed Services Committee (SASC) voted to terminate the Corps Surface-to-Air Missile (Corps SAM) program, after the House National Security Committee (HNSC) voted a $10 million decrement. However, the critical warfighting requirement beyond SAM/MEADS intends to fill remains completely valid.

The predominant threats to Army and Marine Corps maneuver forces are very short/short range tactical ballistic missiles (SRTBMs), cruise missiles (CMs) and unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs). Defense against these is well forwarded by forces, clearly one of the greatest concerns facing our Commanders-in-Chief (CINC)s.

The Corps SAM Operational Requirements Document (ORD) specifies countering these threats with a strategically deployable, tactically mobile system providing 360 degree coverage. Existing/proposed system configurations (PAC-3, THAAD, Navy Upper/Lower tier) fail to provide the required protection due to deployability and mobility limitations, lack of 360 degree coverage, and lack of growth potential to meet these essential requirements.

This is a compelling requirement. Army and Marine Corps forces are currently at risk, and will remain at risk with no defense against AS/SRTBMs and only limited capability against CM attacks. We strongly feel that development actions must continue, and we will work with the Committee to demonstrate how we can leverage current capabilities in order to meet this critical need in a rapid, cost-effective manner.

Sincerely,

DENNIS J. REIMER
General, U.S. Army,
Chief of Staff.

U.S. ARMY
THE CHIEF OF STAFF,

Hon. Ted Stevens,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Defense, Committee on Appropriations, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR Ted:
I am writing to express extreme concern with the Senate Armed Services Committee's decision to terminate the Medium Extended Air Defense System (MEADS) program, and to urge you and your colleagues to support the President's budget request of $30.4 million for MEADS in the FY 1996 Defense Appropriations Bill.

While others have spoken to the U.S. military requirement for MEADS, I would like to offer a broader NATO perspective on the matter. Cancelling MEADS would send a horrible message to the Allies. It would confirm their worst fears regarding the lack of U.S. interest in cooperative programs and would likely jeopardize ongoing efforts to develop a cooperative approach for meeting the challenges posed by the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their delivery systems.

NATO is now closer than ever to formulating an Alliance approach to theater missile defense. At the January 1994 NATO Summit, Ministers recognized the dangers posed by proliferation and directed that work begin on developing a policy framework to reduce the proliferation threat and protect against it. Supporting this effort is NATO's Senior Defense Group on Proliferation, which recently concluded that preventing the proliferation of delivery systems remains NATO's top counter proliferation priority. Additionally, the June 1994 Alliance Policy Framework on Proliferation and Weapons of Mass Destruction recognizes the growing proliferation risks, especially with regard to states on NATO's periphery, and called on the Alliance to address the military capabilities needed to discourage WMD proliferation and use, and if necessary, to protect NATO territory, populations and forces.

In fact, the political track, NATO Military Authorities have prepared a draft Military Operational Requirement for Theater Missile Defense that calls for the protection of the military population against ballistic missiles. And efforts are also underway under the auspices of the Conference of National Armaments Directors (CNAD)—where NATO's material development is focused—to define future opportunities and methods of collaboration in the area of theater missile defense.

All of these efforts will lead, in the next couple of years, to the development of an Alliance theater missile defense capability endorsed by the North Atlantic Council. The termination of MEADS, the first significant TMD collaborative efforts, would be a serious setback for it in this area. The need to respond to the growing proliferation threat, coupled with the high cost of new defensive systems, means that we can't go it alone. The continued participation and MEADS is a good place to start because it responds to French, German and Italian requirements to develop a new defensive program. Moreover, it is a highly mobile system capable of being deployed by aircraft, ballistic missiles, and cruise missiles. And, as it has been noted by U.S. military authorities, it fulfills the requirement for a highly mobile TMD/cruise missile defense system capable of protecting Army and Marine Corps maneuver forces.

The implications of canceling MEADS go well beyond NATO TMD cooperation. MEADS is an experiment that is being closely watched on both sides of the Atlantic. As the centerpiece of the U.S. "renaissance" in trans-Atlantic cooperation, MEADS is an experiment that is being closely watched on both sides of the Atlantic. If the U.S. follows through will stifle prospects for future cooperation—such as with J STARS—and play into the hand of those who would like to see a strong European industry at the expense of trans-Atlantic cooperation. U.S. industry will then find it increasingly difficult to solicit European cooperation in a broad spectrum of projects. It may also well spell the difference between trans-Atlantic cooperation and competition.

I urge you and your colleagues to consider this broader geopolitical implications of this cooperative program and support the President's budget request. MEADS will pay dividends in the future both in terms of its contribution to trans-Atlantic armaments collaboration and as a military capability in support of out-of-area operations—a central tenet of the Alliance's new Strategic Concept.

Yours sincerely,

ROBIN BEARD,
Assistant Secretary General, NATO.

Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff,

Hon. Sam Nunn,
U.S. Senate, Committee of the Armed Forces,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR NUNN: Thank you for your letter of 11 July regarding your concerns about theater missile defense (TMD) priorities for a highly mobile TMD/cruise missile defense system capable of protecting Army and Marine Corps maneuver forces.

The President's Budget submit represents a balanced approach to satisfying our theater missile defense requirements. In that the Corps SAM/MEADS program and development was supported as a part of the integrated TMD architecture. It will fill a critical need for mobile, self-defensive capability for maneuver forces, both Army and Marine Corps. We support funding of this program at $30.4 million for FY 1996. In response to your questions, I support funding Corps SAM/MEADS at this level since none of the programs in the letter offer an alternative better than the President's Budget.

Current development efforts, new efforts in sophisticated strike weapons against mobile launchers, and the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization-led TMD Cost and Operational Effectiveness Analysis will enable us to recommend a new set of acquisition decisions in the FY 1998 budget process consistent with funding constraints and the CINC's warfighting requirements. For now, I believe the DoD Budget submit appropriately represents our TBMID warfighting priorities.

I shared the above position with the Joint Chiefs and our CINC's, and all are in agreement.

Sincerely,

John M. Shalikashvili,
Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The Secretary of Defense,

Hon. Strom Thurmond,
Chairman, Committee on Armed Services, U.S. Senate.

The Honorable STROM THURMOND,
Chairman, Committee on Armed Services, U.S. Senate.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: As you continue your consideration of the Fiscal Year 1996 National Defense Authorization Bill, I strongly urge you to reject the language to eliminate the termination of the Medium Extended Air Defense System (MEADS) program. The MEADS is a high priority advanced capability tactical ballistic missile defense system that merits your full support.

The Department's approach to the MEADS program has its direct legacy in past Congressionally directed initiatives that the United States seek cooperation with our allies on the development of tactical and theater missile defenses. I would cite the provision from the Fiscal Year 1994 Defense Authorization Conference Report that expressed the following sense of the Congress:

"Congress encourages allies of the United States, and particularly those allies that would benefit most from deployment of Theater Missile Defense systems, to participate in or to increase participation in, cooperative Theater Missile Defense programs of the United States. Congress also encourages participation by the United States in cooperative defense efforts of allied nations as such programs emerge."

The MEADS represents an appropriate form of allied cooperation in the development of a missile defense system for which the United States and our allies share a vital military requirement. As you are aware, MEADS will fulfill an existing U.S. operational requirement for a rapidly deployable, highly mobile, robust air defense system designed to protect maneuver forces and expeditionary forces of the U.S. Army and Marine Corps. As such, it is in line with the requirements expressed in the recent National Security Strategy.

The MEADS program is a viable alternative to the Theater High Altitude Area Defense (THAAD) for a mobile, hybrid system. The acquisition strategy for the current MEADS program does, in fact, leverage the existing PAC-III and PAC-3 missiles and the full spectrum of air-breathing threats. MEADS will provide unique protection against short- and medium-range ballistic missiles, cruise missiles and other air-breathing threats anywhere a theater missile defense system is required.

In this manner, maneuver forces will be vulnerable to attack by tactical ballistic missiles, cruise missiles, and other air-breathing threats. MEADS would allow the United States, French, German and Italian forces operating the system to provide protection for all coalition partners. At the same time, THAAD and other area defense forces could provide a defensive overlay.

Hence, MEADS supports coalition efforts, joint operations and interoperability of tactical ballistic missile defense forces and our other missile defense efforts, such as GMD. The MEADS program could be critical features in a future conflict.

I urge you to support the full budget request for MEADS, our centerpiece of Theater Missile Defense cooperation with our European allies.

Sincerely,

William J. Perry
Commander in Chief, U.S. European Command
We have tried to list all of the various concerns. We have resolved all of these issues except maybe one or two where we just need to have a good debate and have a vote and see how it turns out.

I am pleased with the bill that we have produced. I think we should not lose sight of the fact that we need to move it on through in a reasonable time. We get it in the conference and we will continue to work out differences, and produce a bill that I feel confident that hopefully the President will be able to sign.

Also I would like to urge my colleagues to try to limit the number of amendments. Let us get right down to the basic issues and vote so we can finish up the authorization bill in the next 3 days and move on to the appropriations bill.

From an authorization standpoint, I think we need to remember that we are right on top of the appropriations process now. If we dally along very much, we will wind up on a side track, and the appropriators move forward. So let us work together and resolve these issues as we can.

But I would like to address the issue that has been discussed a lot here today—a couple of the issues that will be debated later on, and we will have a debate. That is the Missile Defense Act of 1995. Since there have been a number of assertions that I think are not true—I think they are false—concerning the content and the intent of this legislation, I would like to explain actually what it does and does not do in my opinion.

The Missile Defense Act of 1995 would replace the Missile Defense Act of 1991 which was a bipartisan effort that was developed in 1991 with more up-to-date legislation intended to respond more completely to the challenges and opportunities of the post-cold-war era—times have changed—and establish a more focused course for theater and national missile defenses.

The new legislation also addresses the growing cruise missile threat that we have around the world, for the first time establishing an integrated approach to ballistic and cruise missile defense.

Programmatically, the Missile Defense Act of 1995 has three pieces: One that focuses our efforts in the area of theater missile defense; one that establishes a clear policy to develop and deploy a limited national missile defense system; and, one that establishes the cruise missile defense initiative.

With regard to TMD, the legislation establishes a top priority corps program consisting of the Patriot PAC-3 system, the theater high altitude area defense system, or THAAD, the Navy lower tier system, and the Navy upper tier system. To allow us to maintain this high priority program and to make room for programs to defend American territory, the legislation also proposes to terminate two unfocused and relatively low priority programs—although its value or priority has already been discussed, and we will talk more about it in a moment—that is, the airborne boost-phase interceptor, and the Corps SAM system.

Each year my colleagues say that, well, you never cancel any defense programs even when they have had problems or when their future is not clear, or regardless of what the cost is. Where is a case where we are trying to terminate a program that has been unfocused and has some problems.

We want to work with Senator Nunn on the Corps SAM issue and I think maybe we can find a way to work through this. But keep in mind, this is not some $30 million program or $35 million program. This is a program that leads us to over $10 billion now. If it is an international program that involves some of our allies in Europe, presumably they would take some half of the Corps SAM program. But this is potentially a big dollar program.

So what I would like to see us do is let us look at the problems it has had, let us ask some questions about why it has problems, and international arena without us I think directly acting on that, and see if we can understand where we want to go before we get started toward a program that could cost a lot.

I am impressed, we are all impressed, when the frontline commanders say we need this. We listen to that. But here is a case where we said we just do not feel we can afford this one in view of the way it has been developed and some of the problems it has had.

With regard to the national defense, I am amazed at what I hear on this. Listen to what I said: "National defense." The Missile Defense Act would establish a policy to deploy a multiple-site ground-based system by the year 2003. This is not star wars but a modest and responsible answer to a growing threat.

After considering all the alternatives, the Armed Services Committee felt that the United States should move directly to a multiple-site system, since a single-site system would just not be capable of defending all Americans. We are thinking about a system that is going to allow some Americans to be defended and not others. What do we want to do that?

We felt it was inappropriate morally and strategically to select a subset of the American population for defensive coverage while leaving some undefended. You better check and see if you would be defended or not. We are talking about national defense of our country and by one that could have more than one site so that everybody could be covered. This decision seems even more correct given that the most dangerous new ballistic missile threats will be capable of reaching States like Alaska and Hawaii before the continent itself becomes vulnerable. I am referring to the North Korean intercontinental ballistic missile program which the intelligence community believes could become operational within the next 5 years.

This is not some far-off potential threat. This is very close. An NMD system consisting of the only site in the middle of the United States simply cannot defend Alaska and Hawaii and would not do a very good job of protecting the coastal regions where most Americans live, including this Senator. I live on the Gulf of Mexico. I look at those States covered. We probably would not be covered. I am uncomfortable with that.

In the area of cruise missile defense, the legislation would require the Secretary of Defense to focus U.S. activities and coordinate the various efforts within the Department of Defense. It would require the Secretary to integrate U.S. programs for ballistic missile defense with cruise missile defense to ensure that we leverage our efforts and do not waste resources through unnecessary duplication. It also requires the Secretary to study the current organization for managing cruise missile defense and recommend changes that would strengthen and coordinate these efforts.

There have been a number of other statements I just do not agree with raised against this legislation, most of them having to do with the ABM Treaty. Let me set the record straight. Nothing in this bill advocates or would require violation of the ABM Treaty. Every policy and goal established in this bill can be achieved through means contained in the ABM Treaty itself. The argument this bill would force us to violate the ABM Treaty is like arguing that one must drive off a cliff just because there is a bend in the road where the cliff is.

This bill recommends that we gradually and responsibly turn the wheel. Can we improve on it? Let us work at it. Maybe we can. I think we have got some scarve tactics here with regard to what we are trying to do, and that is not what we want to do.

Let me also say that it is not this bill first and foremost that forces us to reconsider the ABM Treaty. Such a reexamination is warranted, indeed required, as a result of the end of the cold war and the growing multifaceted ballistic missile threat characteristics of this new era. The ABM Treaty with its underlying philosophy of mutually assured destruction, MAD, practically defined the cold war confrontation. Why would anybody argue that we should now reexamine that agreement? Times are different.

Let us be clear about what this bill in fact calls for. It recommends that the Senate undertake a comprehensive review of the continuing value and validity of the ABM Treaty. It suggests that the Senate consider creating a select committee to undertake a 1-year assessment. Let us not run up to the point where in the year 2002 or 2003 we may actually want to move toward deployment.

Let us think about it. Let us have a group, and if this is not the way to set it up, set it up somewhere else. Get the various committees that would have jurisdiction, get us thinking about and talking about what we want to do with the ABM Treaty. So what we are recommending is a careful examination of all issues before making a specific recommendation to the President on how to modify our current obligation.

By establishing a policy to deploy a multiple-site NMD, national missile defense system, this bill does assume that eventually we will need to amend or otherwise modify the ABM Treaty, but let me repeat that the means to achieve this are contained in the ABM Treaty itself. The treaty in no way limits the deployment of ABM systems.

In the case of ground-based systems, the treaty limits permit deployment or development or testing. Therefore, we can proceed simultaneously to develop the system called for in this bill while we figure out the best approach dealing in the future with the treaty.

We should remember that the ABM Treaty was meant to be a living document that can be changed as circumstances change. Anyone who argues that the strategic and political circumstances have not changed since 1972 is living on another planet.

Article XIII of the treaty envisioned possible changes in the strategic situation which have a bearing on the provisions of this treaty. So I wish to just emphasize again as I move forward that there are various treaty compliance ways to modify our current obligations under the treaty and we would like to work toward.

For those who are upset by the fact that this bill would establish a policy to deploy a multiple-site NMD, I would point out that the ABM Treaty signed and ratified in 1972 did permit development and deployment of multiple sites. I would also remind my colleagues who seem to fear the prospect of amending the treaty that in 1974 the Senate approved a major amendment to the treaty. So we are not suggesting something happened that has not already happened before and we would not suggest doing it for quite some time.

Let me also briefly address another provision in the Missile Defense Act of 1995 which relates to the ABM Treaty. Section 238, which is based on legislation introduced earlier this year by Senator WARNER, would establish a clear demarcation line between TMD systems which are not covered by the treaty and the ABM systems which are explicitly limited. This provision is also consistent with the letter and the spirit of the treaty, and I know we will talk about that later on.

Now, with regard to this specific amendment that is pending, I wish to commend Senator Kyl for his amendment. How could anybody disagree with it? It says the purpose of this amendment is to state the sense of the Senate on protecting the United States from ballistic missile attack. That seemed like a very worthwhile proposal to me. The Senator from Arizona has clearly demonstrated a real and growing threat to the security of the United States posed by ballistic missiles of all ranges. I fully conquer with his sense-of-the-Senate language that all Americans should be defended against this potential limited ballistic missile attack.

This week we will have a lot of debate on this subject and others related to it. One argument that will surface over and over is that there is no threat to justify the deployment decision of the national missile defense program. The Kyl amendment clearly establishes that this is an erroneous assumption. The United States currently faces ballistic missile threats from Russia and China, and this, if the intent is to terrorize, if not attack, the United States. North Korea has also demonstrated that any country that has a basic technology infrastructure can develop long-range ballistic missiles without providing significant warning.

Saddam Hussein, I heard earlier today some Senators kind of seeming to brush off Saddam Hussein or what he might do. But he proved to the world that modifying existing missiles is not, you know, something we should take lightly. It can happen. High technology is not needed if the intent is to terrorize, if not directly act.

Since we will debate this issue at length, I will limit my remarks at this point. Later in the debate I will present a detailed rational for the missile defense provisions in the Defense authorization bill and respond to the many red herring arguments that have been made in opposition. Let me close by saying that the Kyl amendment is warranted and long overdue. I strongly urge my colleagues to support it. I hope that this bill is not just the start, but a modest and responsible answer to a growing threat. After considering all alternatives, the Armed Services Committee felt that the United States should move directly to a multiple-site system, since a single site system would just not be capable of defending all Americans. We felt that it would be inappropriate morally and strategically, to select a subset of the American population for defensive coverage while leaving some undefended.

This decision seems even more correct given that the most unpredictable and dangerous new ballistic missile threats will be capable of reaching States like Alaska and Hawaii before the continent itself becomes vulnerable. I am referring to the North Korean intercontinental ballistic missile program, the so-called Taepo-Dong, which some observers believe could become operational within the next 5 years. An NMD system consisting of only one site in the middle of the United States simply cannot defend Alaska and Hawaii, and would not do a very good job of protecting the coastal region of American living areas.

In the area of cruise missile defense, the legislation would require the Secretary to study the current organization for managing cruise missile defense and recommend any changes that would strengthen and coordinate these efforts. There have been a number of other false arguments raised against this legislation, most having to do with the ABM Treaty. Let me set the record straight: nothing in this bill advocates or would require a violation of the ABM Treaty. Every policy and goal established in this bill can be achieved through means contained in the ABM Treaty itself. The argument that this bill will force us to violate the ABM Treaty is like arguing that one must drive off a cliff just because there is a bend in the road. This bill recommends that we gradually, and responsibly, turn the wheel.

Let me also say that it is not this bill, first and foremost, that forces us to reconsider the ABM Treaty. Such a reexamination is required, as a result of the end of the cold war, and the growing multifaceted ballistic missile threat characterizes this new era. The ABM Treaty, with its underlying philosophy of mutual assured destruction, practically defined the cold war confrontation. Why would anybody argue that we should not reexamine such an agreement?

Let us be clear about what this bill in fact calls for. It recommends that the Senate consider creating a successor to the current organization for managing missile defense programs, consistent with the letter and spirit of the ABM Treaty that in 1974, the Senate approved a major amendment to the treaty. Let me also briefly address another provision in the Missile Defense Act of 1995, which relates to the ABM Treaty. Section 238, which is based on legislation introduced earlier this year by Senator Warner, would authorize the Secretary to study the ABM Treaty linkage only obfuscates the fundamental argument that is commonly used by repeating Russian arguments about START II linkage to one based on mutual security and arms control.

Let us be clear. What this bill seeks to do is to authorize the Secretary to study the ABM Treaty to allow deployment of five or six ground-based sites. According to testimony the Armed Services Committee received earlier this year from Mr. Sidney Graybeal, who was a senior United States ABM Treaty negotiator, the Russians were not opposed to permitting five or six sites in the original ABM Treaty. How is it, then, that today such deployments will upset stability and arms control? It simply will not.

Of course, we should seek to cooperate with Russia and take into account legitimate security concerns. But this is what START II is all about. That agreement is manifestly in both countries' interest and should not be held hostage to any other issue. Unfortunately, the Russians have linked it to a variety of issues including expansion of NATO. We must reject this linkage, lest we encourage the Russians to believe that they possess a veto over any NATO missile defense system. Admittedly, START II is in trouble in the Russian Duma, but this has nothing substantively to do with the United States missile defense program. Simultaneously, Russia's intent on undoing START II so as to retain some or all of their multiple-warhead ICMB force. The United States should strongly oppose this effort to undo START II. But legitimizing the false argument about ABM Treaty linkage only exacerbates the issue. The United States should not participate in a clouding of the issue by repeating Russian arguments about ABM Treaty linkage. This is simply a distraction from the central problem.

As we proceed to debate the various aspects of the Missile Defense Act of 1995 and consider implications for START II, we should bear in mind that including the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Fundamentally, this argument is rooted in the cold war. It assumes an adversarial and bipolar relationship between the United States and Russia. Rather than repeat the same old arguments, the Russians and the Clinton administration, including the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, should be seeking to change the basis of our strategic relationship to one based on mutual security and arms control.

We must remember that President Yeltsin himself proposed a Global Defense System and that, in the early 1990s, the United States and Russia had tentatively agreed to amendments to the ABM Treaty to allow deployment of five or six ground-based sites. According to testimony the Armed Services Committee received earlier this year from Mr. Sidney Graybeal, who was a senior United States ABM Treaty negotiator, the Russians were not opposed to permitting five or six sites in the original ABM Treaty. How is it, then, that today such deployments will upset stability and arms control? It simply will not.

Of course, we should seek to cooperate with Russia and take into account legitimate security concerns. But this is what START II is all about. That agreement is manifestly in both countries' interest and should not be held hostage to any other issue. Unfortunately, the Russians have linked it to a variety of issues including expansion of NATO. We must reject this linkage, lest we encourage the Russians to believe that they possess a veto over any wide range of United States national security policies.

Let me also briefly address another provision in the Missile Defense Act of 1995, which relates to the ABM Treaty. Section 238, which is based on legislation introduced earlier this year by Senator Warner, would authorize the Secretary to study the ABM Treaty to allow deployment of five or six ground-based sites. According to testimony the Armed Services Committee received earlier this year from Mr. Sidney Graybeal, who was a senior United States ABM Treaty negotiator, the Russians were not opposed to permitting five or six sites in the original ABM Treaty. Unfortunately, the Russians have linked it to a variety of issues including expansion of NATO. We must reject this linkage, lest we encourage the Russians to believe that they possess a veto over any wide range of United States national security policies.
today the United States has no defense against ballistic missiles. Russia, on the other hand, has an operational ABM system deployed around Moscow, which has been modernized and upgraded over the years. We should not feel threatened by the existence of this system. Indeed, we should encourage the Russians to invest in this system instead of their destabilizing strategic offensive forces. Likewise, the United States should develop and deploy a national missile defense system. Such a system has greater security for all Americans than an outdated theory of deterrence that does not even apply to other countries. The Missile Defense Act of 1999 clears the way for a world that is safer and more stable for the United States and Russia.

I will be glad to yield to the Senator from Georgia if he would like to respond.

Mr. NUNN. Yes, First, I appreciate all his good work on this bill. He has done a great deal in helping the chairman and all of us on this legislation. I do not think the Senator from Mississippi was here when I mentioned we have a total of four systems that are in the bill. Of all of those, as the Senator from Georgia pointed out, one could use a good bit of money before it is over. The allies hope to pay about half of it. But this is the only system that is designed to protect the front-line troops. The rest of these systems are in the theater support area.

We have the Navy upper tier program, which is in this envelope. We have the THAAD intercept program, which is in this green envelope. We have the PAC-3 right in this envelope, and then a possibility of maybe a Navy lower tier in this envelope.

So my point is, this system should not be canceled unless we can find one of these systems that could also cover this. Now, I believe the majority report indicates that the PAC-3 system could. I am perfectly willing to have that study. That is what the extra $5 million is for, to see if that idea really will be proven to be workable. I would also be willing to have this study take place and hold back some of this money. I think that has been suggested by the staff of the Senator from Mississippi. We could work on some fencing amendment so we make sure we are getting the best program, I certainly have that, but I do not think we should cancel this program when it is the only one, until we get some affirmative answer, which we do not have now, on something that could take its place.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, if I may respond to the Senator's comments there, I do think there is a possibility that we could do that PAC-3 modification. But we do not know yet that it could provide that additional coverage. We still need to see if it can be done. Perhaps we can work out a way not to completely cancel the Corps SAM while we take a look at that. But again, my argument is before we start down this trail that could lead to $10 billion, I think we need to look and see if there are other options.

I would like some clarification of how we got into this international agreement. What is that international agreement? What extent of commitments do we owe from our allies about being willing to pay up to $5 billion of the cost of this program? There are just a number of questions in that area that I think we need to get clarified.

But we will work with the Senator from Georgia as the day progresses, and hopefully we can work something out.

Mr. NUNN. I say to my friend from Mississippi, each of these other programs is going to involve billions and billions of dollars, also. We know we will not be able to afford them all. We know that.

Mr. LOTT. Which one do we not want to afford?

Mr. NUNN. Well, right now we have four programs that cover the same area, and they are fully beefed up and funded, while the only program that covers the forward battlefield is being canceled. So we have tremendous redundancy here. I do not mind some redundancy, but I do not want to know which of these programs is going to work and be the most cost-effective program.

But we do not have any redundancy here and no coverage here. The problem is the majority suggestion about PAC-3 possibly covering this area. We need to get some funding into a study for that, if that is going to be done. Perhaps we can work on something while we are continuing the debate.

Mr. President, I yield the floor at this time.

Mr. BINGAMAN addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, before we went to vote on any of the amendments, I just wanted to ask the Senator from Georgia a few questions about his understanding primarily of the Kyl amendment. I certainly support his perfecting amendment as I understand it, and believe it is well considered. But I have some concerns about the Kyl amendment, which it is an amendment to. And I wanted to just clarify the thinking of the ranking manager on this bill as to what his perspective on that was. I thought there were on the import of the Kyl amendment.

It seems harmless enough in some respects. When you read it, it says it is a sense of the Senate that all Americans should be protected from accidental, intentional, limited ballistic attack. I agree with that. But I add to that that we also ought to protect all Americans from cruise missile attack, terrorism, and from a variety of other potential hazards.

So for my concern is that, as the Senator from Georgia knows very well, and all of us on the Armed Services Committee know, there is considerable controversy about the provisions in the bill that we are now beginning to debate regarding ballistic missile defense.

We have a letter from Secretary Perry to Senator Nunn, and I am sure to the chairman of the committee as well, dated the 28th of July, where Secretary Perry makes a variety of points or a series of points about this. He says he wants to register strong opposition to the missile defense provisions of the Senate Armed Services Committee defense authorization bill. In view of that, I would institutional micromanagement of the administration's missile defense program and put us on a pathway to abrogating the ABM treaty.

I am concerned that I do not want to support the Kyl amendment if it puts us on a pathway to abrogating the ABM Treaty. I would be interested in the Senator from Georgia giving me his perspective on that as to whether I could vote for the Kyl amendment with confidence that it was not an endorse or a series of the various ballistic missile provisions in this bill, many of which I intend to join with Senator Exon and others to strike here when the opportunity arises.

Mr. EXON. Will the Senator yield for an additional question before the—

Mr. BINGAMAN. I will be glad to yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I would say to my friend from the State of Georgia, I have the same concern about this, basically, as posed in the question by the Senator from New Mexico. I am for and wish to make a short statement in support of the Nunn underlying amendment.

But if I understand the procedures, the Kyl amendment is a sense-of-the-Senate resolution that I would strongly oppose because of its implications, even though it is only a sense-of-the-Senate amendment.

What would be the situation if the Nunn amendment in the second degree to the Kyl-Kenn amendment passes, and then the Kyl amendment itself fails? Obviously, it would take the amendment that I support, offered by the Senator from Georgia, along with it, would it not?

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I guess we have six or eight questions posed to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. NUNN. I am sorry. I must ask the Senator from Nebraska, and I apologize, if he will repeat that question. He has gotten to be such a good—almost like a lawyer since he has been here. I am sure he can reframe that question.

Mr. EXON. I resent that statement.

Mr. NUNN. I knew the Senator would resent that statement. I said "almost." not quite. Does the Senator mind repeating that, if he would?

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I am saying to the Senator from Georgia, I was asking the same basic question just a little differently than the Senator from New Mexico. I am strongly in support of the amendment by the Senator from Georgia, and would like to make a statement in support of that amendment. As I understand the procedure, though, it is attached as a second-degree amendment to a sense-of-the-Senate amendment to the underlying bill, which I support, then vote on the Kyl amendment, which is a sense of the Senate. If the Kyl amendment fails, that would take effect along with the amendment that I support offered by the Senator from Georgia. I am wondering if I properly understand the procedure.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield the floor?

Mr. BINGAMAN. I yield for a response from the Senator from Georgia, because I have two or three other questions I want to ask.

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, I will say first to my friend from New Mexico, his question was, does the amendment breach the ABM Treaty. We are talking about the Kyl amendment now.

As I outlined in my opening statement, I feel that the provisions of the underlying bill create what I would call a very high risk that it would be perceived as an anticipatory breach of the ABM Treaty. That is the underlying bill. I do not think there is anything in the Kyl amendment, and the Senator from Arizona is not on the floor now, but I do not read anything in the Kyl amendment that would either breach the ABM Treaty or suggest breaching the ABM Treaty.

The operative paragraph in the Kyl amendment is the one at the end that says:

It is the sense of the Senate that all Americans should be protected from accidental, intentional, or limited ballistic missile attack.

Like the Senator from New Mexico, if I were drafting this, I would certainly add criteria so there were perhaps some other threats. I see nothing wrong with the way it is worded in terms of in any way creating the impression that the ABM Treaty would be breached by this amendment.

I also note the paragraph just before the sense-of-the-Senate operative paragraph, paragraph 12, page 5 of this amendment says, explicitly:

The United States and Russia have the opportunity to create a relationship based on trust rather than fear.

So it seems to me there is nothing in this amendment that would in any way breach the ABM Treaty or that would in any way violate the conditions that the Secretary of Defense, Secretary Perry, has laid down in his letter.

I made a lengthy statement about what my fears were about the course this bill takes, and we will have amendments dealing with that on the ABM Treaty. So do have the similar concerns as the Senator from New Mexico on the underlying bill, but I do not have such concerns on this amendment.

I will also say, if you look at the findings in paragraphs 1 through 12, I think the findings I generally agree with. Everyone will have to read them to see if they agree with them. But the findings I personally agree with.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, can I pose one additional question to the Senator from Georgia? Senator Exon, Senator Glenn, Senator Levin, and myself intend to offer an amendment at some stage to strike various of the provisions that remain in this bill at the present time, particularly the ones under subtitle C on missile defense. I think that striking those is totally consistent with the letter we have received from Secretary Perry.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, if the ABM Treaty or suggest breaching the ABM Treaty. It does not set up any kind of anticipatory attack that does not otherwise exist. The Kyl amendment does not say how that should be done. It does not refer to the ABM Treaty. It does not set up any kind of anticipatory defense that does not otherwise exist. So I do not see any inconsistency there. As long as the Senator from New Mexico really agrees with the findings I personally agree with. As the Senator from Georgia sees it, that is the Kyl amendment.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, let me clarify one more time. My own position is that I do support the existing law with regard to the ABM Treaty, which I gather was adopted by us in 1972. As the Senator from Georgia reads the Kyl amendment, the adoption of that amendment would be consistent with existing law and with the 1991 language which we put on the books; is that correct?

Mr. NUNN. As I read it—I will not pretend to the Senator from New Mexico that I have made a detailed sentence-by-sentence analysis of this amendment—I read it hastily. I read it again, my staff has read it. I see nothing in it that would not NSP [Non-Proliferation and Security Program]. In fact, the basic premise of this amendment is also the basic premise on which the 1991 Missile Defense Act passed, which I coauthored.

I see nothing inconsistent in that. Most of the findings in the Kyl amendment reference various statements Secretary Perry has made or that various military witnesses have made or simply statements that, for instance, the President of Russia. I do not see that it contradicts.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I appreciate those responses, and I yield the floor.

Mr. EXON addressed the Chair.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I rise in support of the Nunn amendment, that I just referenced, to make $35 million available to continue the funding on the Corps SAM Program, also known as the MEADS or Medium Extended Air Defense System.

This program will provide a rapidly deployable, highly mobile 360-degree coverage defense system to protect our war fighters and forces in the field of battle. Sometimes Patriot’s protective umbrella cannot provide this, and certainly not against short-range missiles that would otherwise underly the THAAD Missile Defense System, as important as that system might be.

Corps SAM is what the Congress has been pushing for for many years, a cooperative trans-Atlantic defense program. Pulling out the program now would be an ongoing failure, and all our cooperative ventures with our allies. More important, it will deny—I emphasize, Mr. President—it will deny our forces in the field of battle an important layer of defense against missile attack that does not otherwise exist.

Therefore, I urge my colleagues to support this modest addition. At a time when we are unwisely throwing billions of dollars, in my opinion, on unnecessary full-blown national missile defense systems, I believe we can afford this small investment in the protection of our troops overseas in battle conditions.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. LOTT addressed the Chair.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I wonder if we are perhaps ready to go with a modification and perhaps a couple of votes on the pending amendments.

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, I have asked the staff to check with the leadership. I recommend that we go ahead with the modification and have a roll-call vote on the second-degree and on the first-degree amendment.

I have talked to the Senators from Mississippi and South Carolina about modifying the pending second-degree amendment which is related to Corps SAM.

I will soon send a modification of the amendment to the desk. It basically says that we will defer $10 million of the $35 million until such time as we have the report referred to in subsection (c)(2). That is the report, as I explained in my remarks, to determine whether the PAC-3 system could basically also cover that unprotected forward area that the Corps SAM system is designed to. This is acceptable to me.

Mr. NUNN. Assuming the Senator from Mississippi and the Senator from South Carolina concurs, I will send a modification of my amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right.

The amendment is so modified.

The amendment (No. 2078), as modified, is as follows:

On page 5, beginning with "attack," strike out all down through the end of the amendment and insert in lieu thereof the following: "attack. It is the further sense of the Senator that front-line troops of the United States armed forces should be protected from missile attacks.

(c) FUNDING FOR CORPS SAM AND BOOST-PHASE INTERCEPTOR PROGRAMS—

(1) Notwithstanding any provision in this Act, of the funds authorized to be appropriated by section 201(4), $35.0 million shall be available for the Corps SAM/MEADS program.

(2) With a portion of the funds authorized in paragraph (1) for the Corps SAM/MEADS program, the Secretary of Defense shall conduct a study to determine whether a Theater Missile Defense system derived from Patriot technologies could fulfill the Corps SAM/MEADS program at a lower estimated life-cycle cost than is estimated for the cost of the US portion of the Corps SAM/MEADS program.

(3) The Secretary shall provide a report on the study required under paragraph (2) to the congressional defense committees not later than March 1, 1996.

(4) Of the funds authorized to be appropriated by section 201(4), not more than $3,403,413,000 shall be available for missile defense programs within the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization.

(d) Section 234(c)(1) of this Act shall have no force or effect.

(e) Of the amounts referred to in section (c)(3), $10 million may not be obligated until the report referred to in subsection (c)(2) is submitted to the Congressional defense committees.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, if I could comment briefly, our staffs—Senator THURMOND’s, mine, and Senator NUNN’s—have discussed this, and I think this is acceptable, from my viewpoint. If the chairman is comfortable with that, it makes the amendment acceptable.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that after we take the vote on Senator NUNN’s amendment that we take the vote on Senator KYL’s amendment, back to back, to save time.

Mr. NUNN. Reserving the right to object, I will ask the leadership to respond. I propose that we vote on both of those. I would like to accommodate the Senator.

I have received word, so I will not object.

I ask for the yeas and nays on the second degree amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The result was announced—yeas 98, nays 1, as follows:

NOT VOTING—1

DeWine

So, the amendment (No. 2077), as amended, was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair reminds the majority leader that under the previous order the Senator from Wisconsin is to be recognized.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I yield to the majority leader for purposes of making remarks without losing my right to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. I think we have worked out an agreement that might not require the introduction of an amendment and second-degreeting it, and that is in the process of being typed, so if we could just have a brief quorum call, I think it would be a matter of 2 minutes.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, will the majority leader yield for a question?

Mr. DOLE. Yes.

Mr. FEINGOLD. I would like to offer the amendment at some point, but if there is an agreement. I can hold off and offer this particular amendment later in the process.

Mr. DOLE. This would not prejudice the Senator’s right to offer the amendment as far as I am concerned immediately after the disposition of the other two amendments.

Mr. FEINGOLD. I would clarify, upon the disposition of the unanimous-consent agreement, I ask unanimous consent that I be recognized for the purposes of an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRASSLEY). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, in reference to the pending bill, let me encourage our colleagues—Mr. President, we have lost a little time here, but we started on the bill at 9 o’clock. We have had two rather, I guess, important votes, but one was a sense of the Senate; one was concerning $35 million. So this is a big piece of legislation.

We are going to shut her down on Friday night. I hope that we can accept some of these amendments, and others who feel—we are not going to shut down the Senate Friday night; we are going to shut down this bill on Friday night.

I hope we can get time agreements on amendments. It seems to me that most have been argued every year for the past 10, 15 years. If we can get time agreements, I think it is the hope of the managers. Senators THURMOND and NUNN, that they can complete action by Friday evening, and then we can go to either Treasury Department appropriations bill or Interior. And then, Saturday, we will start on the welfare reform package. Later next week, we will take up the DOD appropriations bill, along with the legislative appropriations conference report, I guess, and maybe—depending on Bosnia—maybe a veto override.

I urge my colleagues that if we can cooperate with the managers, they are prepared to work late this evening and late tomorrow night and late Friday night and would really appreciate your cooperation.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator BOXER be recognized to offer an amendment regarding ethics, and that no amendments be in order to the McConnell amendment, and that the time on both amendments be limited to a total of 4 hours, to be equally divided between Senators McCONNELL and BOXER.

I further ask unanimous consent that following the conclusion or yielding back of time on both amendments, the Senate proceed to vote on or in relation to the McConnell amendment to be followed immediately by a vote on or in relation to the McConnell amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mrs. BOXER. Reserving the right to object. Perhaps I did not hear it, but is this the unanimous-consent request on the two amendments? May I ask who will control time?

Mr. DOLE. You will control time on that side and Senator McCONNELL will on this side.

Mrs. BOXER. Two hours per side. We will debate those simultaneously?

Mr. DOLE. Yes, that is what the agreement says.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I have had the opportunity to consult with a number of our colleagues, and we find that this unanimous-consent agreement is acceptable, and we would like to proceed.

Mrs. BOXER. Reserving the right to object. I want to ask one more question of both leaders. Is a motion to table in order here?

Mr. DOLE. I ask just what the agreement says: “on or in relation to.”

Mrs. BOXER. I do not have a copy of the agreement.

Mr. DASCHLE. “On or in relation to” would include a motion to table on each amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. I thank the Democratic leader and the other people involved. I hope this will not take 4 hours. This is another half day off of the August recess, which we hope will start sometime in August.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. BOXER. Parliamentary inquiry. Does the Parliamentarian have a copy of the Boxer amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is not a copy here at the desk.

AMENDMENT NO. 2079

(Purpose: To require hearings in the investigation stage of ethics cases.)

The Senator from California [Mrs. BOXER] proposes an amendment numbered 2079.

SEC. 2. ETHICS HEARINGS.

The Select Committee on Ethics of the Senate shall hold hearings in any pending or future case in which the Select Committee (1) has found, after a review of allegations of wrongdoing by a Senator, that there is substantial credible evidence which provides substantial cause to conclude that a violation within the jurisdiction of the Select Committee has occurred, and (2) has undertaken an investigation of such allegations. The Select Committee may waive this requirement by an affirmative record vote of a majority of the members of the Committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the amendment is temporarily set aside, and the Senator from Kentucky is recognized.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. McCONNELL] proposes an amendment numbered 2080.

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert:

(A) The Senate finds that:

(1) the Senate Select Committee on Ethics has a thirty-year tradition of handling investigations of official misconduct in a bipartisan, fair and professional manner, and

(2) the Ethics Committee, to ensure fairness to all parties in any investigation, must exercise its responsibilities strictly according to established procedures and free from outside interference;

(3) the rights of all parties to bring an ethics complaint against a Senator, or employee of the Senate are protected by the official rules and precedents of the Senate and the Ethics Committee;

(4) any Senator responding to a complaint before the Ethics Committee deserves a fair and non-partisan hearing according to the rules of the Ethics Committee;

(5) the rights of all parties in an investigation—both the individuals who bring a complaint or testify against a Senator, and any Senator charged with an ethics violation—can only be protected by strict adherence to the established rules and procedures of the ethics process; and

(B) the integrity of the Senate and the integrity of the Ethics Committee rest on the continued adherence to precedents and rules, derived from the Constitution; and, for any Senator who ever intervened in any ongoing Senate Ethics Committee investigation, and has considered matters before that Committee only after the Committee has submitted its report and recommendations to the Senate;

(1) the Senate Select Committee on Ethics shall not, in the case of Senator Robert Packwood of Oregon, deviate from its customary and standard procedure, and should, prior to the Senate’s final resolution of the case, follow whatever procedures it deems necessary and appropriate to provide a full and complete public record of the relevant evidence in this case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be 4 hours of debate on the Boxer and McConnell amendments, 2 hours under the control of the Senator from Kentucky and 2 hours under the control of the Senator from California.

Who yields time?

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I yield myself 15 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, there is a big difference between these two amendments. The reason we took a little time on our side looking over the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky is because, at first blush, you think all this sounds good, but when you get to the end of it, you learn quickly that it is essentially a "feel good" amendment, a "cover yourself" amendment. It is the "no public hearing" amendment. It is a sense-of-the-Senate amendment which has no force of law, no requirement.

On the other hand, the Boxer amendment which we have strong support here today, will require that if the Ethics Committee wants to close the door on a case that has reached the investigative phase where there is credible, substantial evidence of wrongdoing against the Senator, they need a majority vote to close those doors.

I think that is very reasonable. I think the fact that we have a deadlock in this case is very serious. It is the first time in history this has happened. This deserves our attention.

I also think it is important to note that the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky deals with one specific case, the case pending before it, whereas the Boxer amendment talks to the issue in general terms. In other words, what we are saying is that in every case that we visit this stage, there should be public hearings, unless the committee votes by majority vote to slam those doors shut.

I do think that we can break the deadlock. It is up to each and every Senator to decide that issue. I think the message that has been sent on a deadlock vote by the Republicans on the Ethics Committee is a message that does not sit well with the American people.

Let me read from just a few individuals today. Sometimes I think if we would listen to the voices of America, we can learn a lot. The question in the USA Today poll of average people: Should the Packwood ethics hearings be forced open?

I will read a couple of these responses. A young man aged 19, a student in Florida:

They definitely should be open. He is an elected official and a public servant. People should know what is going on. Government already has a bad name for being secretive.

A woman, a 32-year-old from Oregon:

Keep them open to take the mystery out of what is going on. Women have a particular interest in this. They may not be well represented behind closed doors.

John Larson, 55, a financial planner in Bloomington, MN, says:

They should be open so the public would have more information about what is going on. Government, Ethics should be on a high level for everybody. Whatever happened to honesty? If we are not honest at the top, what do we expect our young people to do?

I think the people of America understand that it is just hope and pray that the Senators do.

As we debate this today, I think we are going to hear very reasoned voices on this side of the aisle. So much for comments that if this was a secret ballot, 98 Senators would vote against open hearings. That notion will be dispelled here today when we see the kind of eloquence we will see on the floor on this matter.

Now, I have to make a point. When the Ethics Committee voted 3-3 and deadlocked, they made a big point of saying, the chairman did, of how he was going to release all the materials in the case. As a matter of fact, a couple of the Ethics Committee have said to the press, "I feel really good. We are disclosing everything." Making people believe that there was something unique about this, that the papers were being released.

Mr. President, if we look over here—I can barely see over this—here we have the pile of materials that have been released in every other ethics case that has reached this stage. They are always released. They have never been withheld. Papers are always released. This is every case in history—these are the papers that have been released.

Of course, that is a precedent. So is public hearings. Every one of these cases and hearings. In this case, the doors have been slammed shut. I just hope that is a temporary glitch that we can straighten out here today.

There are a number of points, I know, that my Democratic colleagues on the Ethics Committee will make more eloquently than I, because they understand the precedence of the committee better than I, because it is their job to serve on the committee, to study the committee, and to act in the best traditions of the committee.

I have to say, as one U.S. Senator who is going to vote on how to dispose of this matter in a fair and just fashion to all concerned, that I do not want to base my vote on a stack of papers. I know that the Senator in the case had a chance to go before the committee and look them in the eye and explain any discrepancies, if any. And when you read the papers, clearly there are.

I do not know for a fact, but if you read the papers, there are discrepancies, in fact.

Yet, those on the other side have no chance to walk into that room, look in the eyes of the Senators, and tell their story. It reminds me of a trial where one side is heard and then they just say, OK, the jury should go in now, seek out itself and vote a penalty. I excuse me, say, I never heard from the victims. I never heard from the victims. Yeah, I read what they said. But the defendant has said no, in certain cases, that is not what happened. I need to find out for myself. That is why I believe we need public hearings. That is why I believe we need public hearings.

I cannot believe that some Senators, from what I hear, are going to vote against public hearings and cast a vote without all the facts. I think this is something extremely important.

Now, I want to point out in my amendment I have bent over backwards to be fair to the Ethics Committee. As a matter of fact, it is a very respectful amendment. It says that the committee, by majority vote, can vote to close the hearings, and it underscores the fact that rule 26 will allow the committee to protect witnesses if they decide that must be done.

We are in no way in this amendment being disrespectful of the Ethics Committee. We are being respectful of the Ethics Committee.

For some to say Go away and never comment, would be a dereliction of constitutional responsibility of each and every Senator, if you read article V, section 1, that says, "We are responsible in this Congress to police ourselves."

Here we have an unprecedented circumstance where, for the first time in history, a case that has reached the investigative stage will not have public hearings. And then we must ask ourselves the next question: Why? Why?

The question is not about Senator BOXER or any other Senator, or about what the record is in the House in holding hearings. The question is, why would the Republicans on the Ethics Committee vote not to have public hearings when every single time in history—and it goes back to the day the Ethics Committee was formed—there have been public hearings.

I want to say, there were some who said, "Wrong, Senator BOXER, there were not any on this or that case." I will ask to have printed in the RECORD the dates of every public hearing, of every single case. You cannot argue with the facts. This would be the first time.

When you answer that question—why—the only thing I can think of are a few responses. One is, protect this particular Senator from something we never protected any other Senator for. The second is, it is embarrassing. Well, that is no answer, Mr. President. The Senators should have thought of that before.

Is the message that if you do something and it is embarrassing, there will not be public hearings? That is a swell message to send. That is the message that is being sent unless we break the deadlock here today.

I was going to quote from Senator BRYAN, in his letter that he sent when five Senators were concerned about this matter, but he is here and rather than quote him, I know he will have much to say on the subject.

But I want to personally thank the courage, the courage of the Ethics Committee members who were fighting hard in a very difficult situation for what is justice and what is right. What the Republicans have done by voting against public hearings is a miscarriage of justice any way you slice it. The best face you can put on it is a dereliction of responsibility to allow the Senator to come before the committee and not allow the victims—and not allow factual differences to be explored by... the committee. That is wrong. And if Senators want to hide behind a feel-good amendment, a sense of the Senate that does nothing on this matter, so be it. So be it. But let there be no mistake, that is what we are facing: An amendment that says there shall be no public hearings unless a majority vote says no by the committee; and a feel-good amendment that is a sense of the Senate that does nothing.

Mr. President, it has been a very long road for me to get to this point, and it has been a harsh road, and it has taken many turns, some of them quite personal. But I am so honored that I am a Member of the U.S. Senate and that, because the people of my State sent me here and believe that I have a right to be here, that is all it took for me to hold my ground. You cannot be intimidated when you know you are doing what you think is right. So this has been, in many ways, a very important debate, just getting to this point.

In my remarks, before I yield 30 minutes to the vice chairman of the Ethics Committee, Senator Bryan, let me summarize. There are four main reasons to support public hearings in this case.

First, it is consistent with Senate precedent. Do not make an exception in one case. That is a very perilous path, because the message that it could send is: The more embarrassing the transgression, the more protected you will be. And if it is sexual misconduct, you can count on it being behind closed doors. And that is wrong, not only to the women of this country, but to their husbands, to their sons, to their fathers, to their uncles. We are all in this together.

Second, public hearings will clarify the issues that are in dispute. Third, it is a question of fairness. The Senator got his chance to appear before the committee. The accusers did not.

Finally, we should fully air our problems. This is not a private club. This is the people's Senate, and we ought to act that way and open up the doors. We can handle it. My God, the Republicans voted for hearings and hearings and hearings and hearings on Whitewater, on Foster, on Waco. I voted with them. Open up the doors. Do not let problems fester. But do not suddenly close them when it comes to sexual misconduct. That is wrong, and a terrible signal for us to send.

Mr. President, I yield 30 minutes to the distinguished and eloquent vice chairman of the committee, Senator Bryan.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, I firmly support the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from California. For more than six decades, the U.S. Senate has held public hearings on all major ethics cases. The committee counsel again confirmed this fact to each member of the committee earlier this week at our Monday meeting. So there can be no misunderstanding, what Senator Boxer seeks to accomplish with the amendment she is offering this afternoon is to continue that unbroken precedent of public hearings. I embrace this position after considering the weight of my colleagues that no one is more anxious than I to have this matter concluded without further delay. My service as chairman of the Ethics Committee for 2 years, and more recently my service as vice chairman of the committee, past 7 months, has not been a pleasant experience.

Yet, I am firmly convinced that public hearings are essential if the integrity of the Senate and of the ethics process are to be sustained. There are many reasons to hold public hearings. There is no credible reason to make an exception in this one case.

On May 17, the Ethics Committee released the charges it was bringing against Senator Packwood. The Ethics Committee found substantial credible evidence providing substantial cause for the committee to conclude that Senator Packwood may have engaged in a pattern of improper conduct between 1969 and 1990, and may have engaged in improper conduct and/or violated Federal law by intentionally altering evidentiary materials needed by the committee; and may have inappropriately linked personal financial gain to his official position by soliciting offers of financial assistance from persons who had legislative interests.

Following its rules, the committee then offered Packwood an opportunity to appear before the committee to make a statement and to answer committee questions. That occurred over a 3-day period, from June 27 to June 29.

In addition, Senator Packwood was also offered his right to a hearing, which would involve cross-examination and appearances by those who had brought the charges against him. He declined this opportunity.

When the Senate returned from the Fourth of July recess, it was the point in the process for the committee to make a decision on what else needed to be done in the final investigation and final stage, including the all-important question as to whether or not public hearings should be held; in other words, to complete the evidence phase.

On July 31, the Ethics Committee voted on the question of holding public hearings. The committee was split, deadlocked at 3-3.

So here we are today with a deadlock in the committee. In my view, it is entirely appropriate that the question now come before the full Senate for its determination.

I want to address the question of delay which has been raised. There is, in my view, no delay or improper interference with the committee process for the Senate to debate and vote on an amendment as to whether public hearings should be held.

In fact, this is the proper time for the Senate to make that decision. Other-Committee. That requires public hearings.

I would like to briefly run through some of the reasons why I think public hearings are important—indeed, necessary—in this case. And I would suggest to you that this will be one of the most important ethics votes that will be cast in this session of Congress, or perhaps in their congressional careers.

First, the precedent of the ethics process by which we hold public hearings in every major ethics case in this century. As you know, those of you who have served on the Ethics Committee were often guided by precedent just as courts are in legal matters. Indeed, few decisions are made by the committee without first inquiring of the staff to state the precedent or case history. The precedent on the question of holding public hearings is clear. The committee has always held public hearings.

Since 1929, seven Senators—Senators Bingham, McCarthy, Dodd, Talmadge, Williams, Durenberger, and Cranston—have been the subject of disciplinary proceedings on the floor of the U.S. Senate. All first faced public hearings. The pending case against Senator Packwood moved to the final investigative phase. Since the three-tiered ethics process was adopted in 1977 setting up the investigative phase, public hearings have been held in all four cases—Talmadge, Williams, Durenberger, and Cranston—mat ters which reached this very serious stage.

Let me briefly review the major cases.

In 1929, the Hiram Bingham hearings were held between October 15 and October 22 on charges of employing on his committee staff an employee of a trade association which had a direct interest in legislation then before the committee.

In 1954, the celebrated Joe McCarthy hearings began August 31 and ended on September 13 on charges of obstructing the constitutional process.

In 1966, the Dodd hearings of March 13 to 17 on charges of converting political contributions to personal use.

In 1978, the Talmadge hearings, 27 days of hearings between April 30 and July 12 on charges of submitting false expense vouchers and misuse of campaign funds.

In 1981, the Senator Harrison Williams hearings held, July 14, 15 and 28, on the question of misuse of his official position to get Government contracts for a business venture in return for a financial interest.

In 1989, Durenberger, June 12 and 13, hearings on charges of accepting excess honoraria and illegal reimbursement of personal living expenses.

In 1991, in the Keating matter, in which only the Cranston case entered the investigative phase, had 26 days of hearings beginning on October 23, 1990, on conduct which included campaign fundraising and official activities.

There were no other ethics cases which entered the investigative phase or which came before the Senate for a proceeding. In short, there has been no exception in holding public hearings in any major ethics case in this century.

I suggest that is the standard by which the Senate ought to act today in support of the Boxer amendment which seeks to continue that unbroken precedent.

Second, I ask myself: Is there some reason, some compelling or persuasive reason, as to why we ought not to hold a hearing in this case in light of the fact that there has been a clear and undeniable precedent?

I have given that considerable thought. And I must say I can find no justifiable reason for not holding a hearing in this case. I have heard no credible reason offered from any of my Senate colleagues.

I would ask you to ask yourself: Why would we make an exception in this one case? I do not think by and large you will be pleased with the only answer I can give you. That is, the Senate does not want to hold public hearings in this case because it deals with sexual misconduct. In my view, that is not a persuasive reason to depart from our honored tradition of the past.

Third, I think this case presents an even more compelling reason for holding public hearings because of the alleged victims. This, to the best of my ability to review the record of the ethics process, is the first case in the history of the Senate in which there are alleged victims that have come forward and filed sworn charges against a U.S. Senator for actions that have been directed against them individually and personally.

This is a case of first impression on two aspects—because they are alleged victims and because of the finding of substantial evidence of sexual misconduct. From a public credibility standpoint, there is no doubt about the need to hold public hearings on a matter of this magnitude.

What message will the Senate be sending to those who have come forward in this case or anyone who dares to come forward in the future? If there are victims, we do not want to hear from you, so we will close the door? Mr. President, that is the standard that we invite if we decline to hold public hearings in this case.

Fourth, the question of the future of one Senator. This decision speaks to the fundamental question of whether the Senate as an institution is capable of disciplining its Members and itself in a manner which merits public confidence. This is far more important than any one of us individually.

In the most recent serious ethics case before the Senate, the so-called Keating case, all six Ethics Committee members voted to hold public hearings—Senators Heflin, Payor, Sanford, Rudman, Helms, and Lott.

In the opening statements of the first day of those hearings, no Senator was more eloquent or more persuasive nor more to the point than our colleague Senator Lott, who said it best in focusing on the need for hearings for the sake of public credibility of the institution, when he said:

"I wish I were so eloquent. That is, in my view, a compelling and justifiable reason for the public hearing process in this case and all cases which reach this stage in the ethics process. This debate is not based upon ideological division. Four Christian pro-family groups have called for hearings. Gary Bauer of the Family Research Council told the Hill, a newspaper publication, on June 7, and I quote:

"We are an organization that talks about values. Many of you out there think that the party ought to err on the side of being aggressive in removing any cloud over it. These charges are serious enough to warrant full hearing and in my view, a compelling reason for the public hearing process in this case."

Eight women's law or advocacy groups have called for public hearings. Nine of the women who have made charges to the Ethics Committee have publicly called for hearings.

Let me comment here on an objection which some have made to holding public hearings. I am afraid I think it is more of an excuse rather than a reason. It is argued by some that we should not hold public hearings because we need to protect the women who have filed charges. I point out again that 9 of the 17 women have called for hearings. I am not aware that any of the others have expressed opposition.

I am not unmindful of the need to protect victims.

In order to protect women who come forward with complaints of sexual misconduct I asked the committee to adopt the principles of the Federal rape shield law. As the author in 1976 of Nevada's State rape shield law, I feel strongly about these principles. Rape shield laws are designed to protect victims of sexual misconduct from unfair cross examination. There are attempts to inquire into the most personal and intimate relationships totally unrelated to the current allegation.

There is no issue which should be before the committee or the Senate, nor should any other issue be referred to by any Senator or anyone involved in this case, except the issue of the specific allegation made by a woman against Senator Packwood.

The issue of public hearings, some have tried to claim, is strictly an issue within the Beltway. To the contrary, editorials from newspapers throughout the country, every geographical region, have called for public hearings.

USA Today, July 14:

"Open the Packwood hearings; this isn't a personal matter"
So those are the reasons. Mr. President, I feel very strongly that public hearings should be held. First, it has been the precedent of this institution in major ethics violations for this century. Second, I know of no justifiable reason for not holding public hearings. The only answer that has been suggested is that somehow the Senate thought to avoid embarrassment because this issue deals with sexual misconduct. I believe that is unacceptable rhetoric.

Third, this is a case of first impression in which we have victims coming before the Senate Ethics Committee and hopefully to be heard by the entire Senate and the American people who have made sworn charges against a U.S. Senator for actions directed against them. And this is also the first time the Senate will judge a Senator who has been charged by the Ethics Committee with sexual misconduct.

As a former prosecutor, I know a little about evidence. I know that sometimes when a witness faces a jury in person, he or she provides additional information or gives additional insight from that which can be gathered from reading a written report. I know that if there are conflicting explanations, I want to question all parties in person about those conflicts.

I am familiar with the depositions of the women who have made charges of sexual misconduct. However, in the interest of fairness and judicial prudence, they should be given the right to come before the committee, just as Senator Packwood was given that right.

It is equal justice that we seek here. We are rightly concerned about being fair to our colleague who is being charged by others. We need to be fair to those who have come forward at considerable personal risk to themselves and who have made very specific allegations and seek the opportunity for a public hearing.

Some reports today are stating the committee hearings will be in private. Let me correct that impression. The committee voted to hold no hearings, public or private, not to hear in person from anyone involved in this case except Senator Packwood.

I yield the floor. I thank the Senator.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, may I ask the manager of the amendment for the majority if he is interested in taking any time to discuss this matter?

Mr. BRYAN. I do not believe—I think the answer to that is no.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I thank the Senator. Mr. BRYAN. In terms of public statements, those would be for each Senator to interpret.

I yield the floor. I thank the Senator.

Mr. BOXER. I yield 3 more minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BRYAN. Fourth, the credibility of the institution to deal with this issue is very much irreparably damaged without public hearings.

Fifth, as I have indicated, I think each of us needs an opportunity to evaluate credibility. I will conclude by noting: What kind of message does the Senate want to send to the citizens we serve? This is really our opportunity to send a message to the American people that fits the message they sent to each of us last November. The public expects their Government to be open and to hold Members accountable to a proper standard of behavior. The message the Senate risks sending today, however, is that in disciplinary matters involving Members, we have chosen to retreat and to close the door tighter than it has ever been before.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BRYAN. I will be happy to yield for a question. I only have a couple of minutes, and I have a question for the Senator. The time up on our side, but want to make moves on Bob Packwood. You’ll find that in the deposition.

Mr. BRYAN. I do not believe that there are discrepancies of fact here.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Just one further question. Has Senator Packwood publicly pleaded guilty in effect to the charges? Does the Senator know whether that is so?

Mr. BRYAN. I do not believe—I think the answer to that is no.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I thank the Senator. Mr. BRYAN. In terms of public statements, those would be for each Senator to interpret.
The demand for a public hearing is real low-ball, hardball politics.

Chris Wallace [voice-over]. Tonight, the Packwood investigation is it a case of the old boys' network looking after one of its own?

Announcer. This is ABC News Nightline. Substituting for Ted Koppel and reporting from Washington, Chris Wallace.

Chris Wallace. The veil of decorum in the U.S. Senate was pulled back ever so slightly today when the Senate decided what to do with Bob Packwood. While maintaining all the practiced civilities of the Senate floor, the Republican head of the Ethics Committee, Mitch McConnell, who has represented Kentucky from California, Barbara Boxer, were very politely sticking a shiv in each other. McConnell said the Ethics Committee wasn't about to be pushed around in deciding to deal with the Packwood case. Boxer said she respects the committee, but if it doesn't decide to hold public hearings on its own, she will be forced to do it.

Ever since the Clarence Thomas hearings, there's been a charge that the Senate—made up overwhelmingly of white middle-aged men—is insensitive to issues of sexual misconduct. Now, as the Packwood case is well into its third year, and so far, all the proceedings have been behind closed doors, that charge of insensitivity is being heard again. As ABC's Michel McQueen reports, the investigation of one senator is now putting some heat on all of his colleagues.

3rd former Packwood STAFF MEMBER. There was no warning. He suddenly grabbed me by the hair and forcefully kissed me, and it was very hard to get him off.

2nd former Packwood STAFF MEMBER. He stood on my feet, pulled my hair, pulled my ponytail, my head back, was forcefully try-

1st former Packwood STAFF MEMBER. In 1992 [NBC News]. My actions were just plain wrong, and there is no other, better word for it.

Michel McQueen. I believe in the integrity of the committee, but I think I'm just being very reasonable and, frankly, conservative, because that's what the committee does, they come out with some motion.

Stanley Brand. It really has nothing to do with partisan politics. These have been the rules through both Democratic and Republican control of the House and Senate, and in fact, these committees are even split along party lines, to prevent partisan-framing from taking control, if you will.

Michel McQueen. Not so fast, says Wall Street Journal editorial writer Paul J. Gigot.

Paul J. Gigot. What we're seeing here is the politics of ethics. If you don't have an issue, you can use personal politics, personal foes, of politicians. It was elevated to an art form in the 1980s against people like John Tower, Clarence Thomas, and in Bob Packwood's case, it's being used again, not to say that there are no allegations here, but the public hearings, as the demand for public hearing, is real low-ball, hardball politics.

Michel McQueen [voice over]. Whether it was politics or process, the argument erupted on the Senate floor today between Ethics Committee chairman Mitch McConnell and Senator Barbara Boxer.

Sen. Mitch McConnell. This has been the mother of all ethics investigations. It is also the first full-fledged investigation of sexual misconduct ever conducted in the Senate. Although allegations of sexual misconduct were leveled against two other senators in the 1990s, the committee dismissed both of these cases rather than proceed to an in-depth inquiry.

Sen. Barbara Boxer. I'm glad that the committee is meeting, but I'm not backing off one bit. If they don't vote for public hearings, I'll be back here with an amendment, so we can get the wheels of government moving.

Michel McQueen [voice over]. Senator McConnell said that the committee would resume its work on the Packwood case next week after what he called a "cooling-off period." But there was no word on how the committee will handle the question of public hearings. This is Michel McQueen for Nightline, in Washington.

Chris Wallace. When we come back, we'll be joined by one senator who's defending Senator Packwood's right to private hearing and by another who's pressing for them to be made public. [Commercial break] you, there are plenty of people on our side who, in a personal vendetta, would simply file grievances and reports against Senator Boxer. Then, when we’re in the minority, that’s exactly what members of the Ethics Committee are doing.

Chris Wallace. Senator Alan Simpson is a supporter of Senator Packwood's attempt to hold private hearings. He's been one of our most vocal supporters of public hearings. Tonight, he joins us now from our Washington bureau, as does Senator Barbara Boxer, the Senate's most spirited advocate of public hearings.

Chris Wallace. But Senator Simpson, let’s not get bogged down in the procedural issue. Let’s talk about the actual decision as to whether to have public or private. You favor private hearings, do you not?

Sen. Alan Simpson. I have—I have never—I have never objected to public hearings. I say let the Ethics Committee finish its work. I know you’d like me to say that I don’t want to have public hearings, but I don’t.

Chris Wallace. No, I want you to say whatsoever—you whatever you feel, Senator.

Sen. Alan Simpson. I just believe that the Ethics Committee could finish its work. If you—if you shortcircuit the investigatory process right now, you’re dooming the U.S. Senate. That’s what you’re doing.

Chris Wallace. Let me ask you about this, Senator Boxer, because since you called for public hearings, some of your Republican colleagues have warned about possible repercussions, have warned that you might be offended by that, because that didn’t happen. I’ve already written a letter about that.

Sen. Barbara Boxer. Well, I think it’s offensive. I had—the son and I are friends, and he gave me some advice. The friendly advice was, essentially, to stay off, and I have to say this. I find it offensive. I had—

Chris Wallace. To lay off?

Sen. Barbara Boxer. Yes, I want you to say whatsoever. The advice was, essentially, to lay off, and I have to say this. I find it offensive. I had—

Chris Wallace. To lay off?

Sen. Barbara Boxer. Yes, I want you to say whatsoever. The advice was, essentially, to lay off, and I have to say this. I find it offensive. I had—

Chris Wallace. Let me ask you about that. What did you mean?

Sen. Alan Simpson. No, that’s not true. I never get offended by that, because that didn’t happen. I’ve already written a letter about that.

Chris Wallace. Well, Senator Boxer, what—whether it’s a warning or whatever he’s trying to say, I’ve already written a letter to the other side that took you aside the other day off the Senate floor. What did he mean?

Sen. Alan Simpson. No, that’s not true. I never get offended by that, because that didn’t happen. I’ve already written a letter about that.

Chris Wallace. Well, Senator Boxer, what—whether it’s a warning or whatever he’s trying to say, I’ve already written a letter to the other side that took you aside the other day off the Senate floor. What did he mean?

Chris Wallace. Barbara’s gonna get you.

Sen. Alan Simpson. Barbara’s gonna get you.

Chris Wallace. Barbara’s gonna get you.

Sen. Barbara Boxer. Well, you don’t know what happened in this issue, Senator Simpson.

Sen. Alan Simpson. I do know what happened to people in my own family, and I do know.

Sen. Barbara Boxer. No, I said—

Sen. Alan Simpson. [Continuing.] That this man has not been charged with sexual harassment, and sexual harassment, as a statute of limitations, is three years in every other jurisdiction in America.

Sen. Barbara Boxer. The women haven’t had that. I plan to offer it, in fact, we don’t get the committee. Senator Packwood has—

Sen. Alan Simpson. Well, I’ll tell you, there are going to be a couple of ‘em that I really want to come forward, and the last one, which was the—

Sen. Barbara Boxer. Well, what does that mean?

Sen. Alan Simpson. Just what I said. If they want to come forward in a public hearing, they got to get their right hand up and be examined with the rules of evidence. The last one made moves on Bob Packwood. You’ll find that in the deposition.

Chris Wallace. Senator Boxer?

Sen. Barbara Boxer. Well, I’m just saying this. In every single case that has come before the Senate Ethics Committee, we’ve got public hearings. In every single—

Sen. Alan Simpson. I do not. That’s not true. That’s not true.

Sen. Barbara Boxer. [Continuing.] In every single case. I put that in the record today. The vice chairman of the committee has stated that, Richard Bryan, very well respected. It’s been stated by Senate historians. I am not partisan. The amendment that you’re suggesting, Senator, you can get the hearings, just says, in every case, be it against a Democrat or a Republican, if it gets to the stage—

Chris Wallace. Senator—

Sen. Alan Simpson. Barbara’s gonna get you.

Chris Wallace. Barbara’s gonna get you.

Sen. Barbara Boxer. [Continuing.] If it gets to the stage where there’s substantial credible evidence, there should be public hearings.

Chris Wallace. Senator Simpson, I want to ask you about the last comment you made, because there was a lot of feeling after the Anita Hill-Clarence Thomas hearings that I think, the anger of some people on one side, you would certainly say—was a feeling that some Senate members tried to make Anita Hill—

Sen. Alan Simpson. Well, I’m just saying this. In every single case that has come before the Senate Ethics Committee, we’ve got public hearings. In every single—

Chris Wallace. Senator Simpson, you know, for all the talk about issues of sexual misconduct and enlightenment and all that, is this just pure politics? Is this just Democrats looking for a way to embarrass Republican and Republicans looking for a way to sweep it under the rug?

Sen. Alan Simpson. I don’t know, but I do know巴拉巴拉Boxer is one of the toughest partisan shooters in this building.

Sen. Barbara Boxer. Well, first of all—Chris Wallace. Senator Boxer, is it just politics?

Sen. Barbara Boxer. This is ridiculous. I already showed you where, when I was in the House and the Ethics Committee was too soft on a Democrat who I felt committed sexual misconduct, actually worse than that, I voted for a tougher penalty. My amendment isn’t aimed at Bob Packwood. It is a generic amendment that just says we shall have public hearings in any case that gets to the stage of investigation. I am stunned to hear my colleague say some of the things he has said tonight, turning the tables on this situation, making women look like they’re the problem.

Sen. Alan Simpson. See, there’s the argument, there it goes.

Sen. Barbara Boxer [continuing]. No, well, let me finish the point. This senator is going to have her chance to do whatever she wishes when they finish the investigation, and there was only one charge of sexual misconduct in the last 13 years, and if that’s a pattern, I’ll buy the drinks.

Chris Wallace. Well, I think we’re going to have to leave it there, but I think I’d point out, as a point of information, Senator Simpson, that I think there were a half-dozen allegations of sexual misconduct—Sen. Alan Simpson. No, there were not. In the last—

Chris Wallace [continuing]. In the—during the course of the ‘90s—

Sen. Alan Simpson [continuing]. Thirteen years, one.

Chris Wallace. I know, but there were a lot in between ‘90 and ‘92, so the question—Sen. Alan Simpson. Yeah, but in the last 13 years, one.

Chris Wallace. Well, you can divide it where you want to.

Sen. Alan Simpson. Yeah, I will divide it.

Chris Wallace. Well, we’ve been unable to do that, Senator Boxer, thank you both very much for joining us.

Sen. Barbara Boxer. Thank you.

Chris Wallace. And I’ll be back in just a moment. [Commercial break]

Chris Wallace. Tomorrow on 20/20, an exclusive interview with David Smith. Barbara Walters talks with the ex-husband of convicted murderer Susan Smith. That’s tomorrow on this ABC station.

And that’s our report for tonight. I’m Chris Wallace in Washington. For all of us here at ABC News, good night.

Packwood Sees Benefits to a Public Hearing

WASHINGTON.—While not endorsing the public hearings being demanded by Democrats, Sen. Bob Packwood said Friday they would give his lawyers their first chances to cross-examine some of the women accusing him of sexual and official misconduct.

“If there was a hearing, we’d finally have a right to question the complainers. We’ve been unable to do that,” the Oregon Republican said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Packwood’s lawyers earlier told the Senate Ethics Committee that the senator would not exercise his right to ask for a public hearing. The senator refused Friday to say whether he wanted a public hearing.

“It’s up to the Ethics Committee to decide whether there is anything to be gained by that. I’m not sure any new information would be gained,” Packwood said.

Two Democrats on the panel, Richard Bryan of Nevada and Barbara Mikulski of Maryland, have called for public hearings. Committee Chairman Mitchell McConnell, R-Ky., opposes the idea.

Packwood said he would make clear in any hearing that most of the allegations were more than a decade old.

Mrs. BOXER. Is there anyone on the other side who wishes to take some time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Right now, there is no one to answer that.

Mrs. BOXER. There is no one to answer that. I say to my colleagues that this is a very important debate that is going on. And I think in fairness we ought to go back and forth, side to side, here. I find it very strange, given the content of this. Sen. Thomas Cranston, you mentioned the amendment to the press, personally, publicly, every which way you could send a message to somebody, that they are not here to talk about it.

But in any event, at this time I am going to yield 30 minutes to the Senator from Maryland.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Ms. Mikulski. Thank you very much. I thank the Senator who has sponsored the resolution for yielding me this time.

I rise to speak in favor of the Boxer resolution. The purpose of this resolution states “To instruct the Select Committee on Ethics of the Senate to hold hearings on certain allegations of wrongdoings by Members of the Senate.” I want to commend Senator Boxer for her efforts in pursuing this issue. Senator Boxer has been persistent and clear. She says we must hold public hearings in order to defend the integrity of the U.S. Senate and follow its historic precedent. I agree with her purpose.

I regret that some have made Senator Boxer an issue. Senator Boxer is not the issue. And I would like to compliment Senator Boxer on her stamina and on her strength in resisting the abuse that has been hurled at her because she wishes to exercise her prerogative as a Senator and offer legislation on this issue. I contend she refused to have her voice silenced on behalf of the women who have been the victims in this ethics proceeding. As we both know, whenever women are assaulted, they themselves are always made to look like they are the problem rather than the victim. So I thank Senator Boxer. I thank her for not having her voice silenced, and I thank her for offering an amendment to ensure that the voices of the women are not silenced.

And I say that because as we look at what has been happening, we now see that as a Member—as it currently stands—the voices of the women will be silenced. As a member of the Ethics Committee, I voted for public hearings in the Packwood case. Unfortunately, that motion failed on a 3 to 3 vote, strictly on party lines. I wanted public hearings to occur because I felt it was important for the honor and integrity of the U.S. Senate. I also voted to release all relevant information to the public as soon as physically possible.

Let me clarify that this release of information is the usual practice of the Ethics Committee. It is neither unusual nor is it unprecedented. It is the committee’s customary practice that this type of information has been released to the public in the seven major cases in this century—involving Senators Hiram Bingham, Senator Joe McCarthy, Senator Thomas Dodd, Senator Allan Cranston.

And I want to emphatically state that I do not believe that the release of this information is a substitute for public hearings. I do not believe that it is in lieu of public hearings. And, also, it is not a proxy for public hearings. It is the minimal acceptable form of disclosure.

Now, why is this not a substitute for public hearings? As my colleagues know, I am always for public hearings, publicly to protect the honor of the Senate and because it is important to give voice and value to the charges brought by women. These women are the first actual victims ever to bring complaints against a U.S. Senator to the Ethics Committee. It is the first impression. If we silence them now on the issue of sexual misconduct, will victims ever, ever again bring a charge to the Ethics Committee because they believe they will be treated as the problem or that they will be silenced because of the kind of vote that we saw?

I voted for public hearings because I wanted to be sure that women got a fair shake and that they got a fair shake in the U.S. Senate. That, as we know, women are assaulted, battered, or abused are told to be silent or there is institutional forums to be silent. I want to assure them that their voices were not silenced, that they were treated with respect, that their allegations were taken seriously and would have value.

I never met these women. I have only heard their stories through deposition, affidavits, and through the summaries of their testimonies. I do not want their stories to be filtered. I also did not have a chance to personally hear the other witnesses, whether it was related to diary tampering or solicitation of jobs for Senator Packwood’s wife to have a job to lower the alimony. I did hear Senator Packwood’s statements.

There has been no opportunity to cross-examine or ask questions of the women or other witnesses in this area of investigation. I did not get to talk to the women. I did not get to talk to the lobbyists that Senator Packwood spoke to about a job for his former wife. I did not get a chance to talk to the woman who has been typing Senator Packwood’s diary for all of these years and whether, in fact, there has been diary tampering and why. Because that is the way the committee works.

The committee first functions like a grand jury. We listen to the issues and concerns through depositions, through affidavits. And then we come to a conclusion. Is there substantial, credible evidence to present a bill of particulars to the U.S. Senate? We did do that. Now we have to decide whether there is clear and convincing evidence on those allegations to determine the sanctions. Now, how can we decide whether something with a higher standard of evidence is clear and convincing unless we follow the practice that has been done by the Senate in each and every one of those cases? That is the purpose of public hearings.

I also believe that the public hearings will help restore the honor and integrity of the U.S. Senate. We all know the American people have little confidence in their elected representatives and little confidence in the institution of Congress. They do not believe that we can police our own. The American people believe that, given a choice, we will always protect our own at the expense of others. They believe we meet in backrooms, behind closed doors, cut the deals, circle the wagons to protect our own. We must demonstrate by our actions that we can police our own and this is why we need public hearings.

Now, I lived through the Anita Hill debacle. To many, the Senate did not deal fairly with Miss Hill’s allegations. The Senate trivialized what Miss Hill had to say. Anita Hill was put on trial and treated very shabbily. She was shamed here in the U.S. Senate. And the institutional behavior of the U.S. Senate raised questions whether this institution could ever deal with allegations related to misconduct.

Now, I want the American people to believe that we can act responsibly, and we do that not with words, but with deeds, and the most important thing we can do is vote for the Boxer resolution on public hearings.

I support public hearings because it will all allow us, Members of the Senate and the American public, to judge for ourselves what has happened, to show that we can hold hearings that are neither a whitewash nor a witch hunt. No matter what we decide, the full Senate and the American people have a right to know the facts on these cases, a right to know how we arrived at our conclusions, and they should have confidence that we have done the right thing.

Now, why do the arguments against hearings not hold up? Some say this will be a spectacle if we do not hold public hearings. No matter what the Senate decides, I believe that there will be a public forum held on this matter.

Mrs. BOXER. That is right. (Mr. SMITH assumed the Chair.) Ms. MIKULSKY. We need to have a fair format, to make sure the format and tone is fair for the victims telling their stories, and a fair format for Senator Packwood. Public hearings are the best way to ensure that there is no spectacle and that all parties are treated fairly.

To say that those hearings will debase and sensationalize the Senate and that the Senate will compete with the O.J. trial—hey, let me say this. No one seems very concerned about the Whitewater hearings debasing the U.S. Senate. No one seems concerned that the Whitewater hearings are debasing the President.

No one seems very concerned about debasing the Congress through the Waco hearings. Nobody seems very concerned that at the Waco hearings, one of the purposes is to demean another woman, the Attorney General of the United States.

Nobody seemed to be concerned when a Senator stood on one side of the aisle and chanted, “Where’s Bill? Where’s Bill?”

No one seemed concerned about the Senate when another Senator stood on the floor and sang “Old MacDonald Had a Farm,” concluding with “oink, oink, oink.”

Well, there is a question about where the barnyard really is.

So I think we will stop these arguments that are filled with fallacy. If we want to honor the Senate, let us follow its historic precedents.

I think we further debase the Senate if we do not hold these hearings, precisely because citizens have come forward, they believed in us, they believed in the process, and the procedure. This is the first time that citizens have come forward and made statements about misconduct, the first time victims have come and asked us to listen to them, to allow them to tell their story, and this must occur.

Let me be clear, a public hearing at this point in the proceedings has been the practice of the Senate. If the Senate does not hold public hearings in this matter, the Senate would deviate from its own precedent.

In every case where the Ethics Committee has reached the investigation stage, where the Packwood case now stands, there have been public hearings. Those cases were Senators Tom Dodd, Herman Talmadge, Harrison Williams, David Durenberger, the cases involving Charles Keating—Senators DeConcini, McCain, Riegle, Glenn, and Cranston.

Let me be clear that in this case the Ethics Committee found substantial credible evidence of misconduct and has moved to the “investigation” stage.

This resolution sets forth the committee findings in three areas: Sexual misconduct, diary tampering, and jobs for Mrs. Packwood.

Let me remind my colleagues what the committee members found. We found substantial credible evidence that Senator Packwood may have engaged in a pattern of sexual misconduct spanning 20 years, 18 instances involving 17 women. Let me give an example, just so it refreshes everybody’s memory.

Out of our bill of particulars, we found substantial credible evidence that in the basement of the Capitol, he walked a former staffer into a room, where he grabbed her with both hands in her hair and kissed her, forcing his tongue into her mouth.

We also found that in his Senate office in DC, he grabbed a staff member by the shoulders, pushed her down on a couch and kissed her. When the staffer tried to get up, he repeatedly pushed her down.

In the Capitol, he grabbed an elevator operator by the shoulders, pushed her to the wall, kissed her on the lips, followed her home, tried to kiss her again and ask her to engage in an intimate relationship.

I cannot bring myself to read more of these cases on the floor of the U.S.
Mr. McCONNELL. I say to my friend from California, I understand her request, but I am going to have to reserve the 2 hours for this side and hope that she will be able to work everybody in under the agreement that we entered into.

Mrs. BOXER. Does the Senate have speakers at this time to take any time?

Mr. McCONNELL. The Senator will be using the time or controlling the time, and that is his prerogative.

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California, Senator BOXER, for her courage and tremendous leadership on this issue, a painful issue but something that absolutely has to be dealt with.

Mr. Boxer. Mr. President, I was trying to find out in the spirit of running this place if the Senator had any particular speakers at this time, I could defer. How much time does the Senator from California have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixty minutes.

Mrs. BOXER. I yield 5 minutes to the good Senator from Wisconsin, Senator FEINGOLD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. FEINGOLD. I thank the Chair. Mr. President, I especially thank the Senator from California, Senator BOXER, for her courage and tremendous leadership on this issue, a painful issue but something that absolutely has to come before the Senate.

Mr. President, let me say how much I admire the work of the Senator from California, the courage, really, in this case. This is a hard thing to do. It is a hard thing to have to come before this collegial body and force an issue about public hearings that I think just comport with the common sense of every American.

As I look out at the room and see no one—not one—from the other side prepared to speak, I wonder if this is really a debate at all. Several of us have already spoken. The Senator from Maryland has already spoken, clearly, really, in this case. This is a hard thing to do. It is a hard thing to have to come before this collegial body and force an issue about public hearings that I think just comport with the common sense of every American.

What I understood was that they were going to have a back-and-forth debate for the American people to see about whether or not we should have public hearings in this Packwood case. I recognize that this is a very emotional and painful matter for every Member of the U.S. Senate. These kinds of charges, if inappropriate or inappropriate for the institutions, is something that no one can enjoy considering. We are uncomfortable with the subject of the charges, with the task of judging one of our colleagues and with the taking of responsibility as a body with what is the proper format for dealing with this issue.

For some, Mr. President, there is a tremendous desire to just let the Ethics Committee decide. Some say let Senator Packwood make the decision. Some say let someone else take responsibility for this difficult question.

Mr. President, as the Senator from California pointed out so well, this is really an abdication of our responsibility to the American people and to the countless number of women and yes, men, who have been the victims of the kind of conduct which is alleged to have been committed in this case.

The question before this body today is not whether Senator Packwood is guilty, not whether the punishment proposed fits the alleged misconduct; the question, rather, is whether those who have alleged that misconduct have been the victims of misconduct should have the right to a public hearing in which they have the opportunity to present their evidence and be heard.

I am pretty sure, Mr. President, if Senator Packwood had requested a public hearing to clear his name or his reputation, there is little question that these women would be required to present public testimony supporting their charges. There could be no doubt that Senator from Maryland is very aware. Yet, Mr. President, in this instance, it is apparent that the Ethics Committee intends to break with a longstanding tradition of holding public hearings when a case reaches this stage of the proceedings.

Our current rules provide for a three-tiered process for examining allegations of misconduct. First, the preliminary inquiry; second, initial review; and, third, the investigative stage. A case reaches the investigative stage only if there is substantial credible evidence that misconduct has occurred. Heretofore, when a case reached this stage, every time public hearings have taken place, even before the current system was adopted, public hearings have been held in cases involving serious allegations of misconduct. Yet, Mr. President, somehow, despite this history, the Ethics Committee is currently deadlocked on whether to order such hearings.

Mr. President, the Senate has an obligation to make a decision on whether such hearings should be held. We should not try to hide behind the Ethics Committee for excuses that we should not interfere with its processes. The Senate, as a whole, is responsible for establishing what are fair procedures—fair to those directly involved and fair to the American public.

So, Mr. President, as we look at this whole picture here, with all the Senate Members on this side ready to speak and debate, the Senator from the other side not even present, I ask, what is the image that is being presented in an institution that prefers to conduct its proceedings in secret?
business behind closed doors, an institution that believes that scandalous charges should not be publicly discussed, even after its own factfinding body has determined that there is substantial, credible evidence to support those charges.

Mr. President, let me repeat that phrase: Substantial, credible evidence to support the charges. This is not a request for a public hearing on every libelous or baseless charge made against any elected official. This is a request only for those cases in a case which has advanced to the final stages.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair reminds the Senator that his 5 minutes have expired.

Mrs. BOXER. I will yield 2 additional minutes to the Senator from Wisconsin.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized for an additional 2 minutes.

Mr. RINGOLD. I thank the Senator. Now we are asking the American public to allow the Senate to make its decision on this case behind closed doors, without public testimony. Little wonder that the public is so disillusioned about our political process. We are so concerned about protecting the image of this institution that we seem to forget one big thing, and that is that we are a public entity that is responsible to the American public. This is not a private club where the rules are made to please ourselves or to protect ourselves from public scorn.

The charges are sexual misconduct. There is little doubt but for the nature of the charges, the public hearings would have been scheduled quickly. That has been the practice of the past. We do ourselves no great service by this debate.

We should not seek to hide this matter behind closed doors. Public hearings should take place, and obviously the committee has the authority to close those portions of the hearings that would be prejudicial, or otherwise be appropriately closed. But to say that no public hearings at all should be held in this matter because of the nature of the charges is just plain unacceptable.

Across America, countless women are watching how this institution handles this matter. What is the message we send to those women who have been subjected to sexual misconduct if we refuse to air those charges in a public format? What are we telling our daughters about what can happen if you are the victim of this kind of misconduct and bring charges against a powerful person?

So, Mr. President, the Senate should go on record now, today, making it clear that this institution is prepared to hold its disciplinary process up to the plain light of day and to public scrutiny.

I again thank my colleagues on the floor, and especially the Senator from California for her persistence in this matter.

I yield the floor.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELSTONE. Mr. President, I asked for 3 minutes because there is no reason to delay the Senate's opportunity to use any more time on this side. I voted for and support public hearings in the case of Senator PACKWOOD.

There are two values to which I hold fast as a U.S. Senator: fairness and accountability. This is the commitment I have made to Minnesotans who sent me here.

Refusing to hold public hearings on this matter runs contrary to these values and what, I believe, the American people expect of this institution. Given the committee's refusal to hold public hearings, I am very concerned about the message we are sending to the public.

We are now in the final investigative stage where there is precedent in the Senate for public hearings on ethics cases. It is time to move forward.

Shining the light of day on Senate proceedings is very important. I voted for public hearings because it is important to show the American people that no hearings at all should be held behind closed doors. While I commend the committee for unanimously voting to release all relevant documents, it is not sufficient. There simply is no substitute for full and open public hearings; the committee has not been held behind closed doors.

While I commend the committee for unanimously voting to release all relevant documents, it is not sufficient. There simply is no substitute for full and open public hearings; the committee has not been held behind closed doors. While I commend the committee for unanimously voting to release all relevant documents, it is not sufficient. There simply is no substitute for full and open public hearings; the committee has not been held behind closed doors.

I believe fully and open hearings will help to ensure the public's confidence that we can—and will—police the conduct of Members—we have that responsibility.

It is also important to give voice to the charges brought by these women. I believe each of these women should have the opportunity to come before the committee to tell their story and I believe Senator PACKWOOD should have that same opportunity.

I feel strongly today that this is the right course. Let us honor the values of fairness and accountability. Let us move forward with public hearings.

Mr. President, I really came down to the floor for this debate, first of all, for a personal reason, which is to support my colleague from California. Senator Boxer is a friend, and I very much admire her courage. And I have some indignation—the same indignation that Senator MIKULSKI from Maryland has—about some of the attacks on a Senator who has been persistent and has had the courage to speak up, and whom I think has been a most effective Senator representing not just women, but men, really people all around the country. Because to me, Mr. President, the issue is just one of accountability.

At this final investigative stage, I think it is very important for all the parties concerned—and I think it is very important for the U.S. Senate, that we now have a public hearing. It seems to me that there are important, compelling questions to be answered: I know that this process will be fair. I do not believe anybody in this Chamber is pleased about where we are right now. It is painful for everybody. But we cannot have this kind of hearing on this stage done privately. We cannot have it done behind closed doors. It really will serve no good purpose. It will serve no Senator well, and it certainly will not serve any of us well, whether we are Democrats or Republicans, or men or women.

Therefore, I am in strong, strong support of the Boxer amendment. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, I will sustain the remainder of my time for the Senator from California, who is managing her amendment.

Mrs. BOXER. How much time do I have now, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California controls 52 minutes 20 seconds.

Mrs. BOXER. I do not see any Republican Senators on the floor to engage in a very important debate that involves the constitutional responsibility of each and every Senator. I am very disappointed in that.

I have many Senators who wish to speak. At this time, I will yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Washington, Senator MURRAY, who has been such a leader on issues such as this.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington [Mrs. MURRAY] is recognized.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I rise today to address the amendment offered by the Senator from California. First of all, I want to commend my friend, my colleague from California. She has been aggressive, forthright, and true to her principles on the issue currently pending before the Ethics committee. She has raised very difficult, but I believe very important, questions to which all of us must give very serious thought.

This has been a very long and very difficult case for the Ethics Committee. The whole Senate has waited for over 30 months while the committee has pored over the documents, interviewed the witnesses, and attempted to find the right path. In light of this work, I regretfully must express my grave disappointment in the committee's decision not to hold public hearings on this case.

Mr. President, this case is a test of the Senate and the Ethics Committee. The U.S. Constitution gives this body the sole responsibility for policing itself. No other agency of government—not the executive, not the House, not the judicial branch—has authority to ensure that the Senate adheres to high standards of ethics and conduct. I am sure the senior Senator from West Virginia, this state of the process done in a constitutional scholar, can give us a detailed explanation of this authority. Therefore, this case, like every other considered by the committee, is a test of whether... the Senate can demonstrate to the public that it is capable of policing itself.

All Senators have gone out of their way to not interfere in this case, to give the committee the time it needs to go through the process.

I supported them when they needed the full Senate to support the investigation. We have continued steadfastly to allow the committee to do its job. As individual Senators, this has been our responsibility to the institution and to our constituents.

Now, we have a responsibility to conclude this matter in an equally responsible way. If it cannot be done by the Ethics Committee, it cannot be done at all.

I urge my colleagues to put aside the emotions of this case and focus carefully on the facts. In May, the committee found substantial, credible evidence of Senate rules violations. I am not a lawyer. I have never tried cases. I know that is a very high standard.

In a case that has come before, public hearings have been held. Why, I ask my colleagues, should this case be any different? That is the key question. Why should this case be any different?

I believe a deviation from precedent on this case will cast a long shadow over the Senate's credibility. Specifically, the lack of hearings will shatter any subsequent action by the committee on this issue and any issue that comes before the committee in the future.

I feel very strongly this will create doubt in a general public that is already skeptical of its public officials. They have a right to know their elected officials are held to high standards. Anything less not only damages this institution, but also our individual credibility.

Mr. President, like many Senators, I am already on record in support of public hearings on this issue. I believe this is the only way the committee and the Senate can show the public that it is serious about its responsibilities. I encourage Senators to weigh the facts as we currently know them. I believe we will conclude that the amendment offered by the Senator from California offers the best course of action. I urge its adoption.

I yield back the remaining time to the Senator from California.

Mr. President, I yield time to my friend and colleague from Illinois who has fought many of these battles. I think she will add greatly to the debate, Senator MOSELEY-BRAUN.

Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN. Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, I very much regret the circumstance around the Senator from California, Senator BOXER, and the Senator from Maryland, it is not surprising, no one on the other side of the aisle will speak to this issue. This is still something that can only shame, and I think it is the shame of the attempt to try to defend the indefensible that has kept the opposition from coming forward and speaking to this issue.

What this amendment is all about, in my opinion, is not any individual case, but about the Senate's obligation to the American people in every case. That is, the obligation that we have to resolve these ethics cases in public.

Mr. President, I serve on the Senate Banking Committee. The membership of that committee will add few additions; constitute the membership of the Special Whitewater Committee. Last year, under the resolution, we reviewed over 10,000 pages of documents. We conducted about 37 depositions. The committee had days and days and days of hearings—6 days, in fact.

The whole purpose of the public hearings was that the American people would have the opportunity to hear and to see the people who were involved in Whitewater themselves, and to reach their own judgments.

Now we are back again this year. The committee has reviewed, again, an additional hundreds of thousands of pages of documents, conducted at least 61 depositions, and we are right now in the midst of public hearings—hearings that go all day long. Again, so the American people can see for themselves, can hear for themselves, and make their own decisions about the circumstances around the handling of papers following Mr. Foster's untimely death.

Mr. President, that is the way this should be. That is the way that we do things here in the United States. We investigate in public; we decide this in public. That, in fact, if anything, is one of the founding cornerstones of our democracy.

We do not have secret trials. We do not have star chambers. We believe sunshine is the best disinfectant. Quite frankly, acting in public is not just the principle of this Congress that applies to our investigations of the executive branch. The Senate has always applied that same principle to ethics investigations involving this body.

With this in mind, I leave the details or the process, which the Senator from Maryland has spoken to, the fact is, in every single past case handled by the Ethics Committee that moved to this third stage, there have been public hearings. It seems to me, Mr. President, that our obligation to the American public is no less now than it has been in the past. We have the same responsibility to conduct public hearings now as we did in the past.

The question then remains, Mr. President, whether or not we are going to stand up for this institution, whether or not we are going to stand up for the regard that the public has of this institution if we say no, not only are we not going to allow in this particular instance for raw power to determine whether or not we air these issues in the public or whether or not they will simply be covered up.

I do not believe that the Members of this body want to be seen as participating in a coverup. I do not believe that the Members of this body want to be seen as participating in any diminution of stature in regard to this institution, in the minds of the American people.

Mr. President, again, this is not a personal issue. I also happen to be the first woman—the only woman—to serve on the Senate Finance Committee. I have had occasion to work with Senator PARKWOOD. He is a brilliant man. He has certainly been fair. He certainly has been fine to work with.

In that regard, it puts me in a very difficult situation to stand on this floor and to take this position in the collegial atmosphere of the Senate. I have to say that service on the same committee—withstanding the fact is this is not a partisan issue, this is not a personal issue. This is not an issue for Senator PARKWOOD's ethics. This is an issue going to the ethics and the regard of the U.S. Senate in the minds of the American people.

I believe that toward that end and in defense of this institution, we have an obligation, a moral obligation, if you will, to support the amendment of the Senator from California.

I yield the time back to the Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I see the Senator from Kentucky on the floor, so I will defer to see if he wants to make a statement. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If no one yields time, the time will be deducted equally from both sides.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum. I ask that the time be charged to the other side, since they have no speakers at this time.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I object.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I have to say this is a very sad day for the Senate. It is sad for a number of reasons.

It is sad because we ought to all be for public hearings. That is the right thing to do. It is also sad that because clearly we have a lot of speakers on our side who wish to express themselves, who are assuming there would be speakers on the other side to participate in the debate.

I think there is an obvious point being made here, which I will let others interpret.
I think something that the Senator from Illinois said ought to be thought about. Namely, why no Member is willing to come over here at this point and debate on the other side.

Another point that was made by my friend from Kentucky, who has already left, was: "Don't kid yourself. Whether there is a public hearing or not, there's going to be a public hearing," because this is the United States of America.

The American people already, 2 to 1, are in favor of public hearings in this matter, when they watch this debate. Unless we prevail, I think they will demand it.

Mrs. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? When I said there would be a public hearing, even if your amendment is defeated, the women are counting on the U.S. Senate to provide a forum. They have counted on us for 30 months.

If, in fact, the Senate rejects that opportunity, and rejects them, I believe that the American people will conduct some type of forum themselves—I do not know that.

I will reiterate the point that I have never spoken to the women as a member of the Ethics Committee. I have followed the rules of the Ethics Committee and never spoken to those women. They are going to tell their story. I would much rather that they tell their story in an organized format in the Senate than through a series of other forums.

Mrs. BOXER. I think the Senator made such an excellent point here, because some of the things we hear whispered around here are, "This is too embarrassing. We better have this behind closed doors." If anyone on the other side thinks this is going to stay behind closed doors simply because they tried to close the doors today, they are mistaken. Because this is America. This is not a tyranny. This is not a country that gaggs its people.

At this time I yield 4 minutes to my friend from Vermont, Senator LEAHY. I am very proud he has come over to join the debate.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I agree this is a matter that should be heard before the Senate and heard in public. There is no question it is going to be heard, one way or the other. But we Senators, no matter how painful it might be, no matter how tough any one of us might be individually, for the good of the Senate—and that is important in our constitutional government—for the sake of trust in elected officials in the Senate, these hearings should be held here.

Certainly, for the women who have waited to be heard, the accusers in this case, ought to be heard and heard in public. For the Senator in question, he ought to be able to be heard in public, be able to hear his accusers and give his answers.

But I worry: in a country like ours, a democracy where our Government operates on the trust of the people, that the U.S. Senate should be the conscience of the Nation. The Senate, with our 6-year terms, with our unlimited debate, is the body that can be the conscience of the Nation. We are not reflecting that conscience if we do not have public hearings. Not because any body in this body will relish this, but because we know, every single Senator knows in his or her soul, that it is the right thing to do. Every single Senator in this body knows in his or her soul that, if we are to be the conscience of the Nation, this publicly before the Nation, no matter how difficult it is.

None of us knows how these hearings are going to unfold. When I was a prosecutor I presented a case, the other side presented a case, and the court ruled. Here, in a way we become judge and jury together. For many of us that is a unique experience. But for the U.S. Senate, it is not a unique experience. It has over 200 years of proud history. It is the body that has, time and time again, allowed the conscience of the Nation to be expressed. Unless we do it here openly, we do not uphold our own conscience, we do not uphold the standards we ask of others, and we do not uphold the standards of a great institution.

I hope the whole Senate will rise and support the Senator from California and say, let us have the open hearings. Whatever happens, we will have them, for the good of the Nation, of the good of the individuals involved, but also for the long term good of this fine institution.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GREGG). Who yields time? The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I was doing some work on matters for my constituents, and my staff tells me there is some suggestion that there might not be any speakers on this side of the issue. Let me dispute my friends on the other side of that notion. It is my understanding, under the unanimous consent agreement, each side had 2 hours. We are prepared to use some or all of that time.

Let me say at the outset that I am told a number of Senators have suggested that a 3-3 vote in the Ethics Committee is not a decision. In fact it is a decision. The Ethics Committee was crafted with this purpose to reserve four votes from a bipartisan committee to take any affirmative action. So at the outset let me make it clear, there is no deadlock to be broken. A decision was made on the public hearing issue.

Also, let me suggest that the resolution offered by my friend from California, ironically in the name of precedent, really seeks to uphold a precedent that does not exist—it simply does not exist—but demolishes other precedents which do exist and are vital to the Senate.

One precedent which it destroys is the Cranston case not to hold public hearings, at a point when its rules and procedure provide, at the end of the inquiry. So, with regard to the precedent issue, there is no clear, consistent precedent for holding public hearings and no precedent for no public hearings in the Ethics Committee. But there is a 3-year precedent for not having the full Senate bind the Ethics Committee in any particular case. And while I suppose it could be argued that the amendment of the Senator from California is generic in nature, it is certainly no accident that it is being offered at this particular time. This is not the normal way in which we would change a committee rule.

So make no mistake about it, Mr. President. The precedent that would be set here would clearly conflict with the beginning of the end of the ethics process, because you can imagine what would happen, particularly around campaign season when out here on the floor there is always a majority and always a minority—make up the Ethics Committee where it is 3-3—the temptation to offer amendments directing the committee to do this or to do that would be overwhelming, particularly as you get closer and closer to an election.

The second point I want to make, Mr. President, and then members of our committee on both sides who have served for the last 2½ years, I think, all agree that the professional staff of the Ethics Committee is completely nonpartisan. The same folks who are working there now under my chairmanship there working under the chairmanship of the vice chairman last year. This professional staff, which has its reputation on the line in this case as well—these are professional investigators who serve the Ethics Committee on a nonpartisan basis. There is no partisan hiring whatsoever in putting together the staff of the Ethics Committee. They know more about this case than those who sit in judgment on it. I know more than the vice chairman knows, and on many occasions members of the committee from both sides on our committee have praised the work of the staff.

In almost every instance we have followed advice and counsel in working on this case, or other cases. The staff in this case, Mr. President, recommended that public hearings were not appropriate.

Why did they do that, this group of skilled professionals who have their own reputations on the line in a high-profile case like this? Mr. President, I think the answer is rather clear. There are two investigative criteria for holding hearings. One is to ensure the completeness of the evidentiary record—and the second would be to assess the credibility of the witnesses who gave testimony.

The Ethics Committee, first and foremost, has a legislative body, and investigative criteria must be applied to our decisions. The staff judgment was that the evidentiary record is not just complete, the staff judgment was that the record was not just complete; it was encyclopedic and ready for final decision. Hearings would be needed only if witness credibility was in doubt tested by questioning and cross-examination.

Every committee member, Mr. President, has strong feelings about the believability of the testimony given to us through sworn depositions. No hearings are going to change that—we have voluminous sworn depositions before us—and poring over those.

In addition, there is the question of delay. The staff opinion is that real hearings would take at least 2 months, actually probably much more than that, given the preparation time involved to get ready for having them.

So we needed to ask: Is there another way to make our proceedings in this case public without adding unnecessary delay to a 2½-year-old case? The fact that the public has a right to know all the relevant information in this case is really not in dispute. The relevant sworn testimony of witnesses who came forward will be shared with the public. The Senate and the public will have all the relevant facts prior to the disciplinary action.

So it is not a question of whether the public is going to be denied information relevant to the final decision.

The resolution of the Senator from California, in effect, Mr. President, destroys the independent ethics process. They know more about this case than those who sit in judgment on it. I know more than the vice chairman knows, and on many occasions members of the committee from both sides on our committee have praised the work of the staff.

It destroys the independent ethics process. I don’t think I have to go into any detail here, Mr. President, about the Senate’s responsibility to ensure that the public has a right to have the whole story told, that the public has a right to know all that is relevant to the final decision.

The Senate and the public will come forward will be shared with the public. The Senate and the public will have all the relevant facts prior to the disciplinary action.

Some of the folks here in this body who have been around for a while remember Senator Cooper. He is something of a legend in Kentucky, known for his integrity and his wisdom. Interestingly enough, it was Senator Cooper’s resolution in 1964, the year I was an intern here in the Senate, that finally kicked off the Ethics Committee. What he was trying to do was to get misconduct cases—this was in the case of the Bobby Baker incident—which in those days was handled by the Senate Rules Committee, and obviously any other committee of the Senate except the Ethics Committee, was controlled by the majority. So there was a sense, after the Bobby Baker case, that it really was not handled all that well, and both sides felt that way.

So it was Senator Cooper’s vision that there would be created an evenly balanced committee, in effect, forced to be bipartisan because of the nature of the committee, and that committee, to act in any affirmative way, would have to come to a conclusion. It would require bipartisanship to go forward. Mr. President, for 31 years this process has stood the test of time until today.

The Ethics Committee, as Senator Cooper envisioned it, was to be empowered to investigate cases as it—saw fit without mention. The committee’s authority was intended to be exclusive and absolute through the investigative phase.

Obviously, at that point it was envisioned the committee’s work would come to the full Senate typically with a recommendation for action which only the full Senate could approve. The whole idea, Mr. President, was to make it possible in this most political of all places to have a bipartisan investigation, and the process has served the Senate well. And at no point during the 31-year history has there been a resolution offered, debated, and voted upon in front of the full Senate seeking to tell the committee what to do.

So the resolution of the Senator from California will shatter this 31-year precedent, and the new precedent for the future will be a way of proposals on the Senate floor to suggest that the committee open a case here, close a case there, do this, do that. That will be the precedent.

The approval of the proposal of the Senator from California would destroy the vision of Senator Cooper, and others, that the Senate could, at least through the investigative phase, remove a misconduct matter, deal with it on a bipartisan basis, and then produce a final product for the floor of the Senate.

All future Ethics Committee actions, Mr. President, or split votes—which, as I have already indicated earlier, is a decision—would be fair target for bruising public floor fights.

Currently, the Ethics Committee sets aside prelection season complaints. Now I am fairly confident that the wave of the future will be resolutions in the Chamber forcing immediate action on one matter or another.

The resolution of the Senator from California sends really an unequivocal message. The Ethics Committee can be treated like a political football, pursuant to any direct majority seeks to push it—kicked around by any Member who wants to push a political or personal agenda. The approval of the Boxer resolution would be the beginning of the end of the Ethics Committee and a return to the bad old days. And the bad old days before 31 years ago were to deal with misconduct cases on a partisan basis.

The other irony, Mr. President, is that the principal loser under a system which allowed the majority to control misconduct cases would be the minority party in the Senate. So the other ironic effect of the proposal of the Senator from California is to force a matter out of a bipartisan forum onto the floor of what arguably is one of the most partisan bodies in America. In what way does the minority party benefit from, in effect, ending a bipartisan forum?

Second, Mr. President, while we are dealing with procedures for the first time in history of the Senator from California clearly violates the precedent set earlier in this case when we had before the full Senate the question of the subpoena of diaries. Just a little while back, in 1993, I remind my colleagues, the Senate voted 94 to 6 to tell the Ethics Committee’s subpoena of the Packwood diaries. The Senate also voted 77 to 23 against an amendment restricting the committee’s access to diaries. And clearly what was in this Chamber just in the fall of 1993 was a question of whether the committee judgment was going to be sustained. My friend from California and others were emphatic in saying the Ethics Committee should handle the case. Unfortunately, that wouldn’t be the case, Mr. President.

At that time, both Democrats and Republicans argued that the Ethics Committee had exclusive authority to investigate misconduct without interference from the full Senate or from any single Member, and that was just in the fall of 1993. The Senate voted overwhelmingly that the Ethics Committee alone had the right to determine what procedures it should follow in conducting investigations. Senators from this side of the aisle voted almost unanimously against the interests of one of our own. Republicans voted against the demands that one of their own was trying to impose on the committee.

I know it would be extremely tough for someone on the other side of the aisle to oppose the resolution of the Senator from California, but I hope there may be a few listening to this debate who will think through the ramifications of the passage of the Boxer amendment. Remember, there is no deadlock. Three-three on the Ethics Committee is a decision. It takes four votes to do anything affirmatively in the ethics process. Make no mistake about it. This proposal is designed to overturn a decision already taken by a bipartisan committee.

Now, this vote today, in my judgment, is not about Republicans versus Democrats or, in my view, even being for or against our colleagues. The vote is whether the Ethics Committee should be allowed to do its work, to do its work without interference or second-guessing from the floor at least until it finishes its job. And that is important to understand. It is not that individual Senators or the group of Senators are not going to have ample opportunity to express themselves, to condemn the work of the committee, to argue that we should have done this or should have done that. None of those options are waived, Mr. President, by allowing us to finish our work. As a matter of fact, given the controversial nature of this case, it is inconceivable to me that we are going to be applauded by very many of our friends up in the gallery or anybody on the other side no matter how we handle it. The question is will we be allowed to finish? And—and—will the process be changed, the 31-year precedent of no interference in this bipartisan committee's work?

Many of us like to quote our senior colleague from West Virginia because he has said many wise things when it comes to this institution and what is necessary to protect it. Back during the diary debate, the diary subpoena debate in this case, Senator B. N. said, “If we turn our backs on our colleagues who have so carefully investigated this difficult matter, we may as well disband the committee.”

I do not know where we go if we are going to set the precedent that the committee is to be in effect micromanaged from the Senate, but it does make one wonder whether this is a useful process. The committee is either going to be allowed to finish its work without interference from the floor or it is not. And if it is not, then I wonder why anybody would want to serve on the Ethics Committee. My colleagues, Senator C. W. and Senator S. M., and I have scratched our heads on that issue occasionally and wondered why we agreed to do it in the first place.

Imagine a scenario under which this Ethics Committee or any Ethics Committee knows that all along the way, at any crucial point or at any time when somebody is trying to score a political point or wants to make a few headlines, they are going to be out on the floor of the Senate in an awkward position trying to protect confidential information that they know about and at the same time trying to engage in a public debate on a case not yet finished. Do not want to be in that position here, Mr. President, because there is no point in having the Ethics Committee if that is the way it is going to be from now on.

I cannot imagine that anybody would want to serve. I just cannot imagine it. It is not much fun now, I can assure you. It is not the way I particularly want to spend my afternoons. But imagine if in addition to presiding over the toughest investigation against one of your own colleagues, you know that all along the way during the process you are going to be out here like we are today getting a bunch of bad press, trying to do what you think is right, while one or more Members of the Rules Committee, and some people might be concerned that the Rules Committee might be a little less enthusiastic about pursuing a Member of the majority than a Member of the minority.

But maybe I am off base here. Maybe it would not operate that way. Maybe people would on the Rules Committee just kind of rise above party affiliation and be just as interested in pursuing examples of alleged cases of impropriety against Members of the majority as they would against Members of the minority. Or maybe we ought to just throw up our hands and say, “We cannot do this job. Let us let outsiders do it.” Some have suggested that. Well, Mr. President, one thing you can say about the case that has generated this floor debate, it is the toughest investigation in history. As I said earlier, it has been the mother of all ethics investigations. The witnesses have consistently praised the committee’s comprehensive inquiry. The handling of the Packwood case outshines all previous investigations of sexual misconduct, certainly here because we have not had any, and compared to the House, which has had 5 in the last 10 years, the handling of this has been vastly superior in every measurable way.

The committee has interviewed 264 witnesses, taken 111 sworn depositions, issued 44 subpoenas, read 16,000 pages of documents, spent 1,000 hours in meetings. And even in spite of all of that, if the Senate will allow us to finish our work, the Senate will indeed have an opportunity at the appropriate time to substitute its collective will for ours. The Senate will have a chance to challenge committee action. The Senate rules give broad latitude—broad latitude—and frankly, Mr. President, if that was under the chairmanship of Senator B. N., I served on the Ethics Committee and I have served for the past 4 years on that committee, a year—2½ years of that—3½ years of that was under the chairmanship of Senator B. N. Never, ever under any circumstances did I see any partisan reflection by him or his colleagues on the committee. We always worked together in the spirit of knowing, No rights are waived by allowing the committee to finish its work.

But to undermine the work of the committee in the middle of the case takes away its independence. It is tantamount to abolishing the committee outright or maybe dissecting it piece by piece by piece by piece by piece.

Let me say in conclusion, Mr. President, every precedent weighs against the resolution of the Senate from California. And precedents do not mean a thing, Mr. President, if they are not upheld in difficult cases.

Let me say again, there is no clear, consistent precedent for full-fledged public hearings at the end of every investigation involving ethics.

I may speak again later, but let me say, regardless of the outcome, I pledge as chairman of this committee we are going to try to finish our work. We are going to try to finish it in good faith. And let me say I would be less than candid if I did not say that the spilling of this case on to the floor of the Senate has divided our committee. We have been able to work together on the whole, I think, on a good, bipartisan basis in this long and difficult investigation. There is no question that we have been feeling feeling and I hope that once this unfortunate floor proceeding is over, that the six of us who have actually in many ways become good friends during the course of this difficult assignment, will be able to come back together, finish this case, do what is best for the Senate, for the American people, and for Senator P. P.

Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

Mr. President, in seeking office to be a U.S. Senator, it was not my hope that I would ever be in the position that I am now in on the floor of the U.S. Senate as a member of the Ethics Committee essentially debating in some ways regarding a case involving one of our colleagues. It is not something you look forward to.

But before entering into the discussion of the Boxer amendment, which I strongly oppose, I just want to say regarding the chairman of this committee—and frankly, his predecessor as well, Senator B. S.—starting first with Senator B. N., I served on the Ethics Committee and I have served for the past 4 years on that committee, a year—2½ years of that—3½ years of that was under the chairmanship of Senator B. N. Never, ever under any circumstances did I see any partisan reflection by him or his colleagues on the committee. We always worked together in the spirit of knowing, No rights are waived by allowing the committee to finish its work.
frankly, as you refer to this case, but for the grace of God it could be some or one on the other side.

See, as Senator McConnell has so brilliantly outlined, that is the beauty of the whole concept of the Ethics Committee, and the fact that we have taken this whole issue of judging a colleague out of the hands—out of the hands—of politics and put it into a nonpartisan, rather than bipartisan, in my estimation, Ethics Committee.

Senator Cooper, who was referred to by Senator McConnell, who helped to craft this legislation to create this committee, was brilliant, in my estimation. Is it a perfect process? No. I can certainly attest to that, as can any of my colleagues who have served on this committee.

Senator McConnell, as the chairman of this committee, involving a major case of one of our colleagues on our side of the aisle, has taken more abuse than any chairman of this committee that I can recall in recent times. And every word of it, every single word of it has been unfair. And I happen to know because I have served with him every step of the way, both when he was ranking member and as chairman. He has taken it from the press, he has taken it from colleagues on his side of the aisle, he has taken it from colleagues on the other side of the aisle.

And none of it, none of it, is justified. I know how frustrating it is—because I have been in the Senate when I was not a member of the committee—when there is a case of this magnitude, or any case that is before this committee, to not know what is going on, meeting behind closed doors, if you will. There is a reason for that.

No, it may not be popular out there in the public. It is certainly not going to be popular when you have colleagues like Senator Boxer railing against the process that has been outlined by the Senate. No, it is not going to be popular. It is going to be unpopular because when Senator Boxer and others rail against the process on the Senate floor, they will make it unpopular. That is why it is unpopular.

There is no confidence in public officials or public institutions, it has been said on the other side of this debate. When I say “on the other side of this debate,” I do not necessarily mean all of them, but that is the reason why, because with all due respect to my colleague, she did not give us the opportunity to render a decision, not a decision in regard to Senator Packwood in terms of punishment, if any. No, no; that is not the issue. She did not give us a chance to render a decision on whether or not there was going to be a public hearing.

This issue is not about a public hearing. Let us be honest about this. This is not about a public hearing. If it was about a public hearing, with all due respect to the Senator from California, the Senator from California would have waited until the Ethics Committee took a vote and, as it turned out, it was 3 to 3. Then she would have come to the Senate floor and criticized the vote, which she has a right to do, and say we should have had public hearings.

But that is not what happened. I say to my colleagues. Senator Boxer decided, before the Ethics Committee made a decision, that she was going to criticize the Ethics Committee to intimidate the Ethics Committee and break the nonpartisan, nonpartisan process. That is what happened. That is exactly what happened, and my colleagues know that is what happened, and that is wrong. We have now injected the ugly aspect of partisanship into this process.

I heard it said on the floor of the Senate prior to this debate that the three of us on our side of the aisle in this case had made up their minds and had already announced their decisions. This Senator had not made any such decision before the Ethics Committee even met. Neither had the other side of the aisle know it. If they are honest about it, they will admit it, because I never made any statements until just days, a couple of days, before this whole thing happened, did I ever say to one of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle how I was voting. I did not know how I was going to vote. I tried to keep an open mind.

I heard Senator Mikulski say in the debate a while ago that I have always been in favor of public hearings. Let me just say, that is not true. In my case, I was never always against public hearings. You know what; I tried to listen to the merits of this case and I tried to make my mind up on whether or not there should be a public hearing based on what I heard after 2½ years. I did not make my mind up on anything, not anything at all, because it is too important to do that.

This is a colleague that we are talking about. This is a case that is not that important. They all deserve—they all deserve—a fair process, and the process that has been outlined by Senator McConnell is fair. It is fair, and it keeps politics out of it. It allows the Senate Ethics Committee to operate not under the pressures of what is popular out there, or unpopular out there, whatever the case may be, not what the Washington Post says or anybody else says out there in the media, not what is written on the editorial pages, not what is said on the floor of the Senate in some partisan debate. That is not the way we are supposed to operate. We cannot operate that way.

I urge my colleagues to consider that when you vote. Forget about the “D” or the “R” next to your name and think about it. Think very carefully about it, because as Senator McConnell has said, we very well may be back to the Rules Committee making decisions.

I do not know who in the world, as he said, would serve on the Ethics Committee if before you make a decision on anything, be it public hearings or final decision, we have to be told or intimidated by debate as to what may be popular how we are supposed to rule. That is not the process.

As Senator McConnell also said, we nephews any particular party in this case; a little bit of it when we had the situation on the floor over the diaries, but minimal. But in terms of the meetings that we had, I do not know how many hundreds of them we have had and they have not spent, but it was sitting here and did not check the record—and I will be happy to stand corrected if I am wrong—I cannot recall one vote, not one, that was 3 to 3 on anything that we have done on this case, and we have had one heck of a lot of votes. This is the only one. It was 3 to 3.

I have to deal with my own conscience and with my own Creator, and I made that decision not based on whether there is an “R” next to my name or not, thank you. I say to Senator Boxer, but I made it on the basis of what I thought was right. That is how I made my decision. And my colleagues on the committee who have worked with me for the past 4 years know that.

The Senate seeks to undermine the bipartisan nature of this committee. It is a very dangerous road to travel down. The many issues that we face with other committees and Members have been handled not only in a bipartisan, nonpartisan, but a respectful manner—respectful manner.

I truly believe that each member of this committee feels strongly about every case we have worked on, about each Member’s conduct we have judged, and the effect every case has on the Senate as an institution, as well as the victims, as well as the Senator accused—but also the Senate.

I can honestly state that I have never seen any partisanship until now. I understand the pressures, and I regret very much that because of those pressures, some have had to succumb to this. I regret very much—and I do not cast any personal aspersions, and my colleagues know that—but I regret very much for the few moments that I was in the chair earlier this afternoon, seeing all of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle on the Ethics Committee converged around the Senate from California with their staffs, working on an amendment which, in essence, guts the entire Ethics Committee process. I regret that very much. I want to get that out on the floor as a matter of public record. I regret it very much.

At each step of this investigation, with a Democrat as chairman, with a Republican as chairman, we have conducted our business fairly, bipartisanship, and we have never left a stone unturned. That is what I am about, and this includes the committee. When Senator McConnell took over as chair of the committee, he did not change one staff member; not one. Can we say that about other Senate committees after the parties changed power? Not one staff person. It did not even cross his mind. It was never discussed, ever.

We cannot circumvent the procedure that we have here. If this Boxer amendment is adopted—no longer—no longer—will there be a thoughtful discussion of the facts among committee members, no more thoughtful discussions. It will be what is popular. I respect that, and I again want to be strong in my statement—I resist very much some of the terms that have been used on the floor in this debate: “Whitewash”; “sweep things under the rug”; “behind closed doors”; “men’s club.” I have heard all of it. I have heard all of it, and it is an insult, frankly, to all six members, and all six members know it is an insult.

The public has a right to know; it absolutely has a right to know the facts in this case. I spent 6 years on a school board and its chairman. I strongly support the public right to know, the right-to-know laws, and full public disclosure. I take a back seat to no one on that.

I tell you that when this case is concluded, everything that this committee knows the public will know. I can also tell you that after the decision is rendered and this case is discussed on the floor, you can ask any question that you want to ask of this Senator, or any other Senator on the committee, any information. It is all there. You will have it all. You can question anything you want—anything. You can overturn any decision we make. You can agree to any decision we make. But that is the way the process is supposed to work, and that is not what is happening now.

Think about this. In this case, it is a popular thing to say that Senator BOXER has brought up here. It is popular in the sense that you are derogating the perception that a “men’s club,” a U.S. Senate with very few women, is somehow, be-cause of this being an allegation in-ternal to the committee and responsible fashion, so that the accused and the victims of this issue could be rendered and this case is discussed on the floor. Every one of you will have it all. You can question anything you want of this Senator, or any other Senator on the floor. Every one of you will have it all. You can question anything you want of this Senator, or any other Senator on the floor.

At the outset of my comments, let me recognize the chairman from Ken-tucky, who has, in my opinion, served in an honest and forthright way to cause this procedure to go forward in a timely fashion, but in a thorough and responsible fashion, so that the accused and the victims of this issue could be considered appropriately. I think he has done an excellent job. And I must say that 1½ years of service in this body, I also served under the Democrat chairman. He, too, func-tioned in the same manner.

As has been mentioned by my two colleagues, the staff of that committee is, by every test, bi-partisan. They have worked in that fashion untold hours to bring about a body of knowledge and information from which we should make decisions that is probably, in total, unprecedented in number of pages and hours of work effort involved.

For the next few moments, then, let me read something into the RECORD that I think is extremely valuable for the Senate to focus on, because some-how in this proceeding, there is an attempt-ed air of suggesting that things are being done behind closed doors, and that that somehow is unfair to the due process and openness of the U.S. Senate, and, therefore, judgments and decisions rendered inside that environment could somehow be distorted on behalf of a colleague under consideration and against those who might be victims.

Let me read:

May 17, 1995. The attached resolution of investigation was unanimously voted by the Senate Select Committee on Ethics on May 16, 1995.

RESOLUTION FOR INVESTIGATION

Whereas, the Select Committee on Ethics on December 1, 1992, initiated a Preliminary Inquiry (hereafter “Inquiry”) into allegations of sexual misconduct by Senator Bob Packwood, and subsequently, on February 4, 1993, amended the Inquiry to in-clude allegations of attempts to intimidate and discredit the alleged victims, and misuse of official staff in attempts to intimidate and discredit, and notified Senator Pack-wood of such actions; and

Whereas, on December 15, 1993, in light of sworn testimony that Senator Packwood may have altered evidence so as to mislead the Committee’s Inquiry, the Chairman and Vice-Chairman determined as an inherent part of its Inquiry to inquire into the integ-rity of evidence supplied to the Committee and into any information that anyone may have endeavored to obstruct its Inquiry, and notified Senator Bob Packwood of such ac-tion; and

Whereas, on May 11, 1994, upon completion of the Committee’s staff’s review of Senator Packwood’s typewritten diaries, the Com-mittee expanded its Inquiry again to include additional areas of potential misconduct by Senator Packwood, including solicitation of financial support for his spouse from persons with an interest in legislation, in exchange for gratitude, or recognition for his official acts; and

Whereas, the Committee has conducted the Inquiry under the direction of the Members of the Committee; and

Whereas, the Committee has received the Report of its staff relating to its Inquiry concerning Senator Packwood; and

Whereas, on the basis of evidence received during the Inquiry, there are possible viola-tions within the Committee’s jurisdiction as contemplated in Section 2(a)(1) of S. Res. 338, 88th Congress, as amended; it is therefore resolved:

1. That the Committee makes the following determinations regarding the matters set forth above:

   a. As to respect to sexual misconduct, the Committee has carefully considered evi-dence, including sworn testimony, witness interviews, and documentary evidence, relat-ing to the following allegations:

      i. I am now going to proceed to read 18 different allegations. Mr. President, am I divulging secret information? Is this something that was held behind closed doors? Am I, for the first time, exposing to the public information that the committee has known that might otherwise come out in a public hear-ing?

      No, I am not. This is a document that was put before the public and put be-fore the press corps of this Senate some months ago. And it was thoroughly reported in many of the newspapers, on television and radio across this Nation.

(1) That in 1990, in his Senate office in Washington, D.C., Senator Packwood grabbed a staff member by the shoulders and kissed her on the lips.

(2) That in 1985, at a function in Bend, OR, Senator Packwood fondled a campaign worker as he danced. Later that year in Eugene, OR, in saying goodnight, and thank you to her, Senator Packwood grabbed the campaign worker’s face with his hands, pulled her toward him and kissed her on the mouth, forcing his tongue into her mouth.

(3) That in 1981 or 1982, in his Senate office in Washington, D.C.—

And the allegations go on, all 18 of them, through 1969.

Then it says:

Based upon the committee’s consideration of evidence received to each of these allegations, the committee finds that there is substantial credible evidence that provides substantial cause for the Committee to conclude that violations within the Committee’s jurisdiction as contemplated in section 2(a)(1) of Senate Resolution 338, 88th Congress, as amended, may have occurred; to wit:

1. That the Committee makes the following determinations regarding the matters set forth above:

(a) With respect to sexual misconduct, the Committee has carefully considered evidence, including sworn testimony, witness interviews, and documentary evidence, relating to the following:

(1) That in 1990, in his Senate office in Washington, D.C., Senator Packwood grabbed a staff member by the shoulders and kissed her on the lips.

(2) That in 1985, at a function in Bend, OR, Senator Packwood fondled a campaign worker as they danced. Later that year in Eugene, OR, in saying goodnight and thank you to her, Senator Packwood grabbed the campaign worker’s face with his hands, pulled her toward him and kissed her on the mouth, forcing his tongue into her mouth.

(3) That in 1981 or 1982, in his Senate office in Washington, D.C., Senator Packwood squeezed the arms of a lobbyist, leaned over and kissed her on the mouth.

(4) That in 1981, in the basement of the Capitol, Senator Packwood entered an elevator with an elderly woman as a former staff assistant in a room, where he grabbed her with both hands in her hair and kissed her, forcing his tongue into her mouth.

(5) That in 1981, in Eugene, OR, Senator Packwood pulled a campaign worker toward him, put his arms around her, forced his tongue into her mouth; he also invited her to his motel room.

(6) That in 1980 or early 1981, at a hotel in Portland, OR, on two separate occasions, Senator Packwood kissed a desk clerk who worked for the hotel.

(7) That in 1980, in his Senate office in Washington, D.C., Senator Packwood grabbed a staff member by the shoulders, pushed her down on a couch, and kissed her on the lips; the staff member tried several times to get up, but Senator Packwood repeatedly pushed her back on the couch.

(8) That in 1979, Senator Packwood walked into a parking lot in Eugene, OR, and asked a former employee to make love with him.

(9) That in 1977, in an elevator in the Capitol, Senator Packwood walked a former employee by her shoulders, pushed her to the wall of the elevator, and kissed her, forcing his tongue into her mouth; she then reported the incident to the Office of Compliance.

(10) That in 1976, in a motel room while attending the Dorchester Conference in coastal Oregon, Senator Packwood grabbed a prospective employer by her shoulders, pulled her to him, and kissed her.

(11) That in 1975, in his Senate office in Washington, D.C., Senator Packwood grabbed a staff assistant referred to in (4), pinned her against a wall or desk, held her hair with one hand, bending her head backwards, fondling her with his other hand, and kissed her, forcing his tongue into her mouth.

(12) That in 1975, in his Senate office in Washington, D.C., Senator Packwood grabbed a staff assistant around her shoulders, held her tightly while pressing his body into hers, and kissed her on the mouth.

(13) That in the early 1970’s in his Senate office in Portland, OR, Senator Packwood chased a staff assistant around a desk; Senator Packwood kissed her on the lips.

(14) That in 1975, in a hotel restaurant in Portland, OR, Senator Packwood dropped a screwdriver and ran his hand up the leg of a dining room hostess, and touched her crotch area.

(15) That in 1975, in his Senate office in Washington, D.C., Senator Packwood grabbed a staff member by the shoulders and kissed her on the mouth.

(16) That in 1969, in his Senate office in Washington, D.C., Senator Packwood grabbed a staff worker, stood on her feet, grabbed her hair, forcibly pulled her head back, and kissed her on the mouth,forcing his tongue into her mouth. Senator Packwood also reached over her skirt and grabbed at her undergarments.

Based upon the Committee’s consideration of evidence related to each of these allegations, the Committee finds that there is substantial credible evidence that provides substantial cause for the Committee to conclude that violations within the Committee’s jurisdiction as contemplated in section 2(a)(1) of Senate Resolution 338, 88th Congress, as amended, may have occurred; to wit, that Senator Packwood may have used his United States Senate Office by improper conduct which has brought discredit upon the United States Senate, by engaging in a pattern of sexual misconduct between 1969 and 1990.

2. Notwithstanding the above, for purposes of making a determination at the end of its Investigation with regard to a possible pattern of conduct involving sexual misconduct, some Members of the Committee have serious concerns about the weight, if any, that should be accorded to evidence of conduct alleged to have occurred prior to 1976, the year in which the federal court recognized quid pro quo sexual harassment as discrimination under the civil rights Act, and the Senate passed a resolution prohibiting sex discrimination, and taking into account the age of the allegations.

(b) With respect to the Committee’s inherent responsibility to inquire into the integrity of the evidence sought by the Committee, as part of its Inquiry, the Committee finds, within the meaning of Section 2(a)(1) of S. Res. 338, 88th Congress, as amended, that there is substantial credible evidence that provides substantial cause for the Committee to conclude that improper conduct reflecting upon the Senate, and/or possible violation of the federal laws at Title 1A United States Code, Section 1505, as amended, have occurred. To wit:

Between some time in December 1992 and some time in November 1993, Senator Packwood intentionally altered diaries materials that he knew or should have known the Committee had sought or would likely seek as part of its Preliminary Inquiry begun on December 1, 1992.

(c) With respect to possible solicitation of financial support for his spouse from persons with an interest in legislation, the Committee has carefully considered evidence, including sworn testimony and documentary evidence, relating to Senator Packwood’s contacts with the following persons:

(1) A registered lobbyist representing a client who had particular interests before the Committee on Finance and the Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation;

(2) A businessman who had particular interests before the Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation;

(3) A businessman who had particular interests before the Committee on Finance and the Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation;

I must tell you, Mr. President, that this is exactly how the Ethics Committee of the U.S. Senate operates. We try to bring all of the public hearings that we have had over the years to the public, and we try to make sure that all of the information that we have is made available to the public. I believe that it is our responsibility to make sure that this information is made available to the public.

I am therefore tremendously bothered by the fact that after 32 years of nonpartisan investigation, we now find ourselves considering that prior to the Senate Ethics Committee's decision, we should not have had the opportunity to review all of the evidence that is available to us.

I also understand the pressures we are facing and the pressures that are being placed on us. I understand the pressures we are facing and the pressures that are being placed on us.

But I also recognize it is the responsibility of the Ethics Committee to render its decision in a professional manner, to render its decision in a professional manner, to render its decision in a professional manner.

It is a precedent of politicizing. It is a precedent of politicizing. It is a precedent of politicizing.

And I must say, in all fairness, in a wholly bipartisan voice, that the Ethics Committee responded in an exhaustive bipartisan, nonpartisan fashion.

There is a precedent here, and it is a precedent of risk, of a precedent of risk, of a precedent of risk.

So I have one simple closing plea.

If hearings are for the purpose of allowing the public to know and to collect additional information and the second criteria had been met, then what about the first criteria? That criteria has also been met, and that is to provide full public disclosure of all relevant information, which is fully 100 percent of all of the documentation that has been put before the committee for its process.

So if hearings are for the purpose of allowing the public to know and to collect additional information and the second criteria had been met, then what about the first criteria? Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, how much time is remaining on each side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. INHOFE). Forty-nine minutes is remaining on your side; the other side has 36 minutes.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I have a number of requests for time, so I am going to have to start allocating minutes, fewer minutes than I had hoped. Senator KASSEBAUM has indicated she wants to speak. Senator HUTCHISON has indicated she wants to speak. Senator SIMPSON is here. Senator BROWN is really sort of next in order. I would like to give to Senator BROWN 10 minutes.

I yield Senator BROWN 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado is recognized.

Mr. BROWN. Thank you, Mr. President. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate the time.

The Senate is now deliberating a change in its rules, and ostensibly the question that should be before us is one of openness. I am for openness. I believe in openness and in sharing information—I think it is the foundation of our democracy. I am not just verbally for openness. I was a sponsor of Colorado's sunshine law. It is probably one of the most—or the most—progressive laws in the country. It guarantees open meetings. It talks about open records. It even allows when the Senators get together, even in a caucus, that the press is allowed to be there to make sure that information gets out to the public.

I do not only advocate openness, I vote for it. But Members should be aware that the amendment before us is not just about openness. The deliberations of the Ethics Committee will come to the floor regardless of how they rule, and the Members on both sides of the aisle who serve on that committee have served with great distinction, the Senator from Nebraska is recognized. Mr. BROWN. Thank you, Mr. President, I appreciate the time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado is recognized.

Mr. BROWN. Thank you, Mr. President. Mr. President, the bottom line is simply this. This amendment is not about openness. Each of us have had countless votes on which we can express our views and our feelings. This amendment is not about whether this body and the democratic process ought to be open. I am for openness, and I voted for it and I stand for it consistently. But this amendment is not about openness. The documents in this case are open, and will be available to the public. The results of the deliberations will be open and publicly debated in this Chamber. This amendment is about partisan gamesmanship. I do not think it deserves to pass.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I would like to yield 5 minutes to Senator Exon of Nebraska.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. EXON. I thank the Chair, and I thank my friend and colleague from California.

I have been listening with great interest to the debate. It is one of those painful debates that the Senate has to go through from time to time, and I have been through many of them. I simply say I think we all owe a debt of gratitude to Members on both sides of the aisle who serve on the Ethics Committee. It is a thankless task. I think I have supported the Ethics Committee any time there has been any controversy. I would simply say that I have served in this body longer than any other Member on either side of the aisle on the Ethics Committee, and therefore I think I have some claim to what I think is proper for this body and for this institution and for what it stands.

I wish to thank personally once again now by name the distinguished Members on both sides of the aisle who have served with great distinction, in my view, on the Ethics Committee, as have Members of the body before them, once again a totally thankless task. If I were charged with an ethics violation, I would have complete confidence, I might say to the President, and the Members on that side of the aisle, Senator MIKULSKI, Senator BRYAN—and, of course, Senator BRYAN used to serve as the chairman of the committee—and certainly the newest member of the committee has served with great distinction, the Senator from North Dakota, Mr. DORGAN.

I have no ill will toward any of them. I think they have done a very yeoman job. But we are now in a situation where we have to make a decision, and I stand here today in defense of the Senator from California for what I think is a proper course of action.
I looked through the previous open hearings that we have held in the Senate since I have been here, Cranston in 1991, Duradero in 1990, Harrison Williams in 1981, and Herman Talmadge in 1978. I was here through all of those. And I remember the difficult task, very difficult vote that we as Senators were called upon to cast after the Ethics Committee had made its recommendations, all of them, I might say, after open hearings.

Therefore, I simply say that I have been absolutely amazed at the broadband against the Senator from California for what I think is a very legitimate action on her part. When she first made her announcement of considering going to and asking the Senate to go on record, I intended to visit her about it and see what was behind it. Then about that time a Member on that side of the aisle made a public statement—it has not been retracted as far as I know—that I consider a direct threat to the prerogatives of the Senator from California, by saying that the Senator from California proceeded with her action, that Senator on that side of the aisle might well investigate other prominent Members of the Democratic Party on that side.

That was a threat. That should never have been made. And it is about time to receive an apology for that.

With that statement, Mr. President, this one Senator, who tries to be even-handed on these things, recognized and realized that the Senator from California was only doing what I think is right and should be done.

The Senate of the United States is on trial. The institution is being looked at by the American people today, and its credibility is on trial.

I have no ill feelings against Senator Packwood at all. I have worked with him on many, many important measures over a long period of time. I would just happen to feel better, frankly, if the Senator—could I have 2 more minutes?

Mrs. BOXER. One more minute to the Senator. I am running out of time. One more minute.

Mr. EXON. I hope that maybe Senator Packwood would be better served by open hearings. In closing, let me say that if the amendment offered by the Senator from California fails, the Senate fails, and the time will never come when the Senator can redeem itself in the eyes of the public and/or the eyes of itself. The Senate self-esteem is at issue. It was important yesterday. It is important today. It will be important tomorrow.

The Senator herself is on trial, and I hope that it does not fail in accepting the amendment offered by the Senator from California.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I yield 4 minutes to the senior Senator from California. [Mrs. FEINSTEIN].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I thank the Chair very much.

Mr. President, I rise to support my colleague and her resolution, which I believe is appropriate, fitting, and not partisan. I do not believe that she had in mind some matter. I believe she had in mind being able to conclude a process in a way which gave much fresh air and clarity and credibility to it. So I am pleased to support her.

I think every member of the Ethics Committee has worked hard in what has been a very difficult case. None of us likes to sit in judgement of another, and certainly the Senator at issue is one who is competent, who has had great credibility and great standing in this body.

Nonetheless, I came here in 1992, and this issue was very much with us in 1992. The allegations and the statements of the accusers have been printed and published all over the United States. The question is, is there credible statements? And this question can only be answered by a hearing.

I heard the distinguished chairman of the Ethics Committee say 264 witnesses had been interviewed but, of course, that is not the case.

The Senator from New Hampshire said, well, any member of the committee did sit in and listen to those depositions. That is not likely to happen with the busy life of the Senate we lead in this body.

Human beings are certainly not perfect, and there will be mitigating circumstances, but I think sexual misconduct, and particularly sexual harassment, is often misunderstood. It means different things to different people.

What is compelling to me is that 9 out of the 18 accusers have publicly asked for public hearings. Generally, this is not true. Generally, women do not want to come forward publicly. However, I have personally asked for the hearings.

As the Senator from California, my colleague, has pointed out, in every one of these cases, when the investigation has been completed, there has in fact been a public hearing. As I have heard stated on this floor, the reason not to have a public hearing is often to protect the accuser or the person who provides the testimony. However, that is not the case here.

I think in any way to successfully conclude this is with a public hearing. Why? Because questions can be asked. Questions can be clarified. Issues can be probed. And the degree of culpability can be established. Perhaps that is very low. Perhaps it is very great. Without a hearing, I have no way of knowing, as a non-Ethics Committee member.

Another reason that is important to me is the allegations have all taken place in private, and the context of the individual's duties as a U.S. Senator. This is not private, personal conduct. This is conduct that took place in public service, and many of the people involved are themselves Federal employees. So I think these allegations involve conduct about which a hearing must be held and a decision must be made.

Is it acceptable? Is it not? If it is not, what about it? I think issues revolving around sexual misconduct are issues that need to see the clarity of day and the openness of probing questions, and their resolution. So I am very proud to support my colleague from California and to stand and say that I believe her motives are highest. And I am hopeful that this body will conclude the process as rapidly as possible.

Mrs. BOXER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. I want to thank my friend from California.

I yield 4 minutes to the Senator from Massachusetts, Senator KERRY.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from California, I would like to begin by paying tribute and gratitude to Members on both sides of the aisle who serve on the Ethics Committee. They bear an enormous burden. There are too few here willing to serve. And we should all understand the difficulty of that service.

Whether willful or not, Mr. President, the effect of holding a public hearing here is to sweep away the human voices and to replace them with paper. That is a denial of process. And it is a reversal of the very commitment made by the U.S. Senate recently where we voted to live the way other Americans live. If probable cause was found in a case of sexual misconduct against an American citizen, that American citizen would find themselves in a public situation facing an accuser, having a public review. It is not the case here where there is a hybrid entity called an Ethics Committee, that was set up in a sense, to try to guide this special institution through its life that there is now a denial of that open process.

It is contrary to all prior precedent where you have had a finding of probable cause, where you have found substantial and credible evidence. In every substantial and credible evidence case, the U.S. Senate has had a public hearing. We are going to apply the standard which friends on the other side of the aisle are now suggesting, that when you build a sufficient record of depositions, you can make a judgment, that because it is encrypted you do not have to have a hearing, then let us end the Whitewater hearings today. Maybe we should come in here with a resolution as an addendum to this to say we have an encyclopedia of depositions. Let them speak for themselves. We do not have to have a hearing from all these other people. I know my colleagues would vote against that. It is a double standard, double standard for Alan Cranston, double standard for John Glenn, John Cranston, double standard for John Glenn, double standard for Alan Cranston.
August 2, 1995

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE S 1177

McCain, Don Riegle, and now here we are at a moment where the Senate has to make a judgment as to whether or not depositions speak like people.

Bob Packwood has had his moment before the members of this committee. It was sufficient for him to be able to come forward and look them in the eye and be able to be asked questions. But our colleagues are being denied that same right to provide a record. That is what is important here. Mr. President, the question of whether there will be a sufficient record for the next generation, for the Senate, where people are put to the test. It may help Bob Packwood to have some of these people asked questions publicly, to have the full measure of these accusations judged by the American people, not off paper that everybody knows they will never read, but in the full light of day. That is what this is really about. Staff doing a deposition is not a Senator asking a question within public scrutiny of the hearing process.

So much for Packwood. I do not suggest, Mr. President, that based on precedent, based on the standard we have accepted in the Senate, based on the best means of providing process in this situation, i.e., adequate capacity to ask questions and to judge and appeal, is it not the case for the Senate to explore this in public. And it is interesting to hear my colleagues suggest that somehow this is popular—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. KERRY. Can I have 1 additional minute?

Mrs. BOXER. I yield 1 additional minute.

Mr. KERRY. I hear the notion of popularity. There is a reason that one is popular and one is not. That is because one judgment is correct and the other is not. This is not a matter of partisanship, and it should not be. But it is highly inappropriate to apply a different standard to Bob Packwood. What is happening is that we are going to shut the door and sweep away the human capacity to speak to what has happened. These probable cause issues rise not just to the question of obstruction of justice, they rise to the question of a breach of ethics with respect to assistance in job finding for personal family members. And it is very hard to explain why all of a sudden sufficiency of the record is needed to be made against Senator Packwood with the benefit of deposition from the witnesses live, before the committee, subject to examination by the members of the committee and by counsel for Senator Packwood.

Mr. President, the Senate has established the Ethics Committee in a remarkable act as a way to delegate responsibility to this committee to adopt standards for the behavior of the Members of this institution and then to uphold those standards. As a way, if you will, to discipline, to set standards for our behavior, in between those times when the ultimate judges of our behavior, namely our constituents, have the opportunity to vote on us.

The committee was established, I am convinced, to keep strong the bonds of trust between those of us who have been privileged and honored to govern and those for whom we govern. And at the heart of that trust is credibility and confidence in the process by which we judge each other. And it is on that basis—and so strongly that it is right and fair to have public hearings in this matter.

The precedents seem to say to me that in every case which has reached the investigative stage, including, I gather, the case of former Senator Cranston, there have been public hearings, although in the Cranston case the hearings were uniquely at an earlier stage. The point here is to preserve public credibility in the one hand. And that credibility is based on the public's assessment of the fairness of the process. But it is also critically important in terms of the judgment we reach. The members of the committee will have the opportunity to hear the witnesses come before them, and as I have said, Senator Packwood's counsel will have the opportunity to cross-examine those witnesses.

The fact is also that how can we expect the witnesses, those who have made allegations, that the doors to the judge's chamber essentially are closed to them, although the one against whom they have made the accusations has had the opportunity to appear in person?

Mr. President, the chairman of the committee, the distinguished Senator from Kentucky, has made an important argument and statement when he says that this would be a breach of precedent for the Senate as a whole to intervene in ongoing ethics proceedings, without letting the committee make the judgments itself.

It is an important point. Let me explain to him, and I was troubled by it, why I am supporting Senator Boxer's intervention and resolution to amount to an intervention on a side. I do not take this resolution to equal an intervention to direct a particular verdict, to bias the proceedings. I see this as an intervention that is totally neutral at all substantive. It is, in fact, neutral on the question of substance.

Does it create a precedent? In a sense, it builds on a precedent and perhaps creates a clear statement by the full Senate, which makes our authority to govern ourselves and judge our own ethics to this six-member committee. And the precedent is that the burden of proof should be on the committee in rejecting hearings, because the openness of these proceedings is so critically important to the credibility of the final judgment.

Let me repeat what I said as one Senator as to why I am supporting this resolution to the members of the committee.

We give them a tremendous responsibility, and it is a difficult responsibility, to spend all this time, to hear all this evidence and to come back and report to us. On the basis of that, we make these terribly difficult judgments about our colleagues.

This Senator is saying respectfully to the members of this committee, I feel that I will not have all the information I need to make an informed judgment as to charges against our colleague from Oregon unless the committee has the opportunity to hear and confront those people who have made these serious allegations and to cross-examine them. That is why I hope that my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, in that spirit, will vote to support the resolution of the Senator from California, understanding it does not in any way prejudice the case. Quite the contrary, it suggests the desire that all of us have for the fullest possible information before we charge a colleague our colleague from Oregon.

I thank the Chair and I yield the floor.

Mrs. BOXER addressed the Chair.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. I yield 4 minutes to the Senator from Montana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. President, this is not an easy matter for me. I am on the Finance Committee. Bob Packwood is my chairman. I have known Bob Packwood for many years. But I believe that we as Senators have a higher calling. It is not friendship—though friendship is very important—it is more important than friendship. It is fulfilling our responsibility of public service; living up to our obligation to the people we represent.

When I first came to the Congress, there was a joint conference meeting on a tax bill, a major tax bill. I wanted to learn a little bit about the tax bill. I wanted to learn how Senators and House Members decide matters in a conference. And I had a hard time finding where the conferences were meeting. Finally, I asked myself, “Who would know where the conferences were meeting?” This is about 20 years ago, about 1975.

Mike Mansfield, the majority leader of the U.S. Senate, I thought ought to be able to tell me where the conferences are meeting. I went to his office. They told me. I went to the meeting. There was a policeman standing at the door. I said, “I am a Member of Congress.” He said, “OK, go in.”

It was the House Ways and Means Committee hearing room: A sea of executive branch people. Secretary Bill Simon was there. Senator Russell Long, chairman of the conference, was talking about when he was a boy back years ago in Louisiana. Al Ullman, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, was talking. Then Jimmy Burke of Massachusetts walked up to me and said I had to leave. “Why”, I asked.

He said, “Because of the rules.” I said, “What rules?” He said, “The Senate rules.” I asked, “What Senate rules?” He said, “I just the rules.” He said, “Nobody else can be in here; nobody else; no other Senator or Congressman. It is closed to everybody—closed to the public, closed to the press, closed to Members of the House, closed to the Senate.” I said, “That is wrong. And I am going to do something about it.”

That afternoon, I stood up on the floor of the House and I said it was time to change this rule.

Ab Mikva, then a House Member, got up and agreed with me. And the next year we had the rules changed, so now all conferences are open to the public. I am very proud of that.

And I am also very proud of my home State of Montana and all that we have in our State government requiring that all public meetings be open. It causes a certain burden on our Governor, a burden on certain State officials who would rather, in some instances, not to have everything open, but it is open. And the public benefits from this openness. In Montana, we know what our State government is up to. This has helped tremendously to increase confidence in the people of the State of Montana government. It has made a big difference.

I just stand here, Mr. President, basically to say that we have a much higher calling. It is not friendship, and I am proud of that. It is to open up everything. Open up the Ethics Committee investigation. What is there to hide? Sure, there is going to be a little bit of embarrassment. It is going to be difficult for some people. Some people of the Senate will be a little bit put out, but in the long run, public confidence will increase.

Again, this is a very difficult matter for me to address, because I am on the Finance Committee. But I feel very strongly that all hearings are the right thing to do. I am bound to stand up and do what I think is right. I think we should vote for the resolution sponsored by the Senator from California.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. MCCONNELL addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. MCCONNELL. How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-four minutes are left, and on the other side, 11 minutes are left.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I yield 10 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Iowa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I will not support the Boxer amendment. I have to say that it is a tempting proposition probably for a lot of us because on its face, I think it is a perfectly reasonable request, because, after all, what is wrong with letting the sunshine in? All the business we do around here?

But there is an important reason for holding public hearings generally, because you hold public hearings, do you not, so the truth can be known to the public? It allows the public then to judge the credibility of what we do as a body. Public disclosure, in general, helps this process.

There are three elements of what has helped our democracy endure and flourish: seeking the truth, holding people accountable, and upholding justice. It is my belief that the Senator from California, hopefully, wants all three of those elements to prevail in the case of Senator Packwood. I think we agree with those elements. We support those elements.

The Senate does have a process, however, for achieving all three of those elements. Of course, it begins with the Ethics Committee, and every case is handled with the action of this full body. This process is set up to gather facts, and it is set up to let the truth. It must then evaluate the facts, it must assign responsibility, and then it sets appropriate punishment.

I might add that the Ethics Committee is not yet finished with its own part of the process. To me, this is a very key point, and I will return to that point in just a minute.

But during the Senate process, sometimes it is necessary to air the facts publicly, sometimes not. But I would stress that closed hearings are OK if, and only if, the punishment at the end of the process fits the facts because, otherwise, the process itself is up to legitimate criticism. Public hearings are necessary when a problem of credibility arises, as in the Anita Hill case, or if the punishment does not fit the facts, as I have stated. But, Senator Boxer, the Senate has to reach a judgment about it. It can be criticized. That is my view.

By the way, the issue of public disclosure is met to a large degree by the committee’s decision already made to call the relevant documents. Of course, this is not the same as a hearing, and I do not pretend that it is. But if the committee decides not to hold public hearings, then it, for sure, better do the right thing. If it does, then public hearings become a nonissue, so long as disclosure of documents is made. If it does not, then a motion to recommit is in order and the Senate should then demand open hearings. That is because the credibility of the committee’s decision would have been questioned. But the key is, for Senator Boxer and my colleagues, the committee must render a judgment first before we can credibly call into question the committee’s work. In the past, the committee process has produced unacceptable results that did not fit the facts, and that process has been rightly criticized. The Ethics Committee has been criticized in the past for white-washing and dispensing mere slaps on the wrist, when a much harsher punishment seemed to be just, and I do not pretend that.

This Senator has joined in that criticism. I also intend to vote against the McConnell amendment, as well, because of the first finding of the amendment that would say this: “The Senate Committee on Ethics has a 31-year tradition of handling investigations of official misconduct in a bipartisan, fair, and professional manner.”

Mr. President, I am not so sure that I can support an amendment with that language, because I think too often in recent times, this is not under Chairman McConnell’s able leadership, but well before him—the committee has acted too timidly, and I... think it is important to not regard that too lightly.

And it is not just the Ethics Committee. I have had my own battles with the Armed Services Committee on closed versus open hearings. I tied up the Senate at the time when the caucus of the last Congress on a nomination that you will recall was General Glosson's promotion. I should add that I did so with the help of the Senator from California. The committee had recommended that General Glosson retire with a third star, because that was the case. The committee chose to review the matter in several closed hearings.

Mr. President, no evidence was uncovered at that time that overturned these serious charges. As the committee deliberated over the facts in the case, the conduct of the Senate, the posture of informing of the committee's judgment.

Yes, I believed in General Glosson's case there should be a public hearing, but I did not push it. I would have given the committee a chance to do the right thing without it, a chance to make recommendations to be commensurate with the facts of that case. The committee chose to review the matter in several closed hearings.

If the closed-hearing process would produce a verdict commensurate with the merits, I would have had no problem. Under that scenario, public hearings in the Glosson case were, in my mind, irrelevant. It is the dispensing of justice that I was most concerned with.

Well, the committee had several hearings and availed itself of the information I provided. Nonetheless, the committee recommended a third star for General Glosson. But—and this is important—it was not until I examined the committee's evidence and the committee's rationale in support of its decision that I decided to question the committee's judgment. And then I made my case on the Senate floor.

The committee and Senate leaders supported General Glosson—regardless of the facts in the case—I think of friendship. I think that is as plain then as it is today. I accused the committee of putting me on the Senate floor. My point is, the amendment by the Senator from California has a proper objective. But the timing is wrong. In my view, the Senator from California has an appropriate amendment when, and only when, she measures the recommendations against the facts as presented by the committee's findings, because that is when the credibility is earned for persuading the public and this body of her intent.

I, for one, would join the Senator from California in a motion to recommit if it were clear that the committee fails if it were clear that the Ethics Committee was once again dispensing slaps on the wrist, having learned nothing then from the Anita Hill experience, the Senator from California would have all the moral authority in the world to insist that the committee get it right.

But the time for sending that message is not yet upon us. So let us wait for the committee's recommendations first. Clearly, that is the right thing to do right now.

Finally, let me reiterate a point about Senator McCONNELL's leadership. The comments I have made with respect to the Ethics Committee's past do not reflect on him. The Senator from Kentucky has conducted himself fairly in this case, especially in the case of acquiring diaries and disclosing the relevant documents. Up to this point, I can find no fault with his committee's approach, and he has shown able leadership on this issue. But I will reserve final judgment on his committee's work product pending its recommendations. That is the proper time to do it.

I yield the floor.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, how much time do I have left?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are 34 minutes remaining. The Senator from California has 11 minutes remaining.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I yield 8 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Wyoming.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming is recognized for 8 minutes.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I rise to speak against the pending motion regarding hearings in the current Ethics Committee investigation of our colleague, Senator Packwood.

I have listened very carefully to the remarks made by my colleague, Senator Boxer of California. Let me try to start on a positive note, a nonpartisan note, by outlining those areas where we agree. The Senator from California has urged us to focus our thoughts, to avoid being distracted by irrelevant issues, or by peripheral considerations. She has, in the past, urged us to remember what the issue is, saying, "I am not the issue."

I could not agree more. Senator Boxer is not the issue; partisan politics is not the issue; and I will say very firmly—and I hope this is heard correctly—sexual harassment, even is not the issue here. Senator Packwood has not been charged with that. My colleague from Iowa has just spoken about another issue, but Anita Hill never charged Clarence Thomas with sexual harassment—ever. That was never in the record, never any part of that proceeding. She wanted us to be aware of his behavior and the conduct that had gone on in the Clarence Thomas hearings. Remember, too, please, in that particular grievous exercise sexual harassment was not the issue in that matter either. I know that may be shocking to some, but Anita Hill never charged Clarence Thomas with sexual harassment—ever. That was never in the record, never any part of that proceeding. She wanted us to be aware of his behavior and the conduct that had gone on in the Clarence Thomas hearings. You can find that to be true through the Democrats and Republicans who served and anguished with regard to that.

The issue here is, how we do the difficult business of conducting ethics investigations, of passing judgment on colleagues in a way that is fair and is nonpartisan? That is the issue here—the only issue. The issue before us is whether or not we are going to begin to dismantle the nonpartisan process by which such decisions are made in the Senate.

I hope everyone will understand this. It is absurd to say that it is a "threat" to simply note that it is a very, very bad idea to make these questions critical until we find out what almost all the votes on the Senate floor, and, ironically, this surely cedes a terrible degree of power to the party in the majority. Hear that. That is not a threat. That is as real as you can get about partisan politics.

We have, through the Ethics Committee, deliberately created a nonpartisan forum in which these questions can be addressed. It is just about the worst job any Senator can have. I do not want it, would never take it. Chaiiring that committee is a daunting task. At the very least, that we have tried to assure the chairman and co-chairman of the Ethics Committee that the process employed by the Ethics Committee would be respected, and that the full Senate would not interfere to change the rules in the middle of a case.

And I do hope that any suggestions that there is an attempt at secrecy here can be swiftly laid to rest. I have been reading all this now for about 2½ years. I read about the witnesses. I read about what they have said about Senator Packwood. I do not know what is left to hear—except one thing that I am anxious to hear, and that is what will be said when somebody stands up and puts their right hand up and, under affirmation or oath, subjects themselves to cross-examination and the rules of evidence. Then I will be right here. I would love that. I practiced law for 38 years. Few here did.

I am not talking about "leaks" from the Ethics Committee, but it is surely all out there. There is not a single new thing you are going to find that is relevant. You might find some things that are new, but what happened that might destroy somebody else from an event occurring 10 years ago, 20 years ago.
Let the record be very clear here too. I have never received or seen a committee deposition. That has been reported. Perhaps that is my own misstatement. I have never seen a deposition. I have seen statements. Those statements have had very different views of the "contact" that took place at that particular time; a very different view. Those will come out. Somebody will be very hurt in that process. That is not a threat. That is the way it works.

But I think, when we talk about secrecy, it is very difficult for anyone to believe that when the committee is going to release thousands upon thousands of pages of documents in an unprecedented airing of private information—yes, even personal diary information—I can assure you that few of us, if this were happening to us, would find that to be a laudable result. Who among the hundred of us does not know dozens, even hundreds of individuals who have told us full of false or false accusations upon us for things that we may have done through the decades? Fortunately, I threw all mine right out there when I first ran. It is all there for the public to see. I believe any one of us would be stunned to find that there was to be a release of thousands of pages of such allegations. I do not believe anyone of us would ever feel that such an action, as seen by us or the public, would be called "covering up," or "equivocation." What are we debating today my colleagues, and I hope all will understand, has nothing to do with the merits of the case in question. It has to do strictly with the integrity of the process itself. It has to do only with whether or not we will respect the judgments of the committee with respect to the appropriate process to follow.

What is the appropriate process? What is it in such a case as this? Do we call the committee to task for bringing these charges of sexual misconduct by how much we are willing to trample upon the nonpartisan procedures of the Senate in order to achieve a desired result? Do we measure our sensitivity by how far we are willing to go back to dredge up embarrassing and inappropriate conduct? No. We measure—or should measure—our sensitivity and our seriousness by the degree to which we ensure that such charges are weighed in a nonpartisan atmosphere of fairness.

Even if we are to be held to a higher standard of conduct, this surely does not mean we should employ a lower standard of fairness.

Under the current Federal law—hear this, when an individual wishes to bring a charge of sexual harassment, the individual has 180 days to file that complaint with the EEOC or if there is no State agency to handle the complaint, 180 days, hear that; 300 days is the State agency to handle the complaint, with the EEOC if there is no State agency. The individual has 180 days to file that complaint with the EEOC if there is no State agency. The individual has 180 days to bring a charge of sexual harassment, this when an individual wishes to bring a charge of sexual harassment, this when an individual wishes to bring a charge of sexual harassment, this when an individual wishes to bring a charge of sexual harassment.

Why is there a statute of limitations? Probably because the reliability of such charges, such grievous charges as these, cannot be accurately judged at a tremendous distance from the time in which they were alleged to occur. I agree with the Senator from Ohio, my good friend from Massachusetts. Let us indeed apply to ourselves the laws we apply to others because the biggest one out there is the statute of limitations on tort and sexual harassment. It is 6 years, as far back as you can go in any jurisdiction in this country. But in the matter of the conduct of the Senator from Oregon, conduct which even the Senator has himself said was "terribly wrong"—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Abraham). The Senator's 8 minutes has expired.

Mr. McCONNELL. I yield the Senator 1 additional minute.

Mr. SIMPSON. But in the matter of the conduct of the Senator from Oregon, conduct which even the Senator has himself said was "terribly wrong," we are dealing with charges reaching back for decades.

All of us will soon pore through thousands of pages of depositions to investigate charges that would not get a moment's hearing if they were brought before any other jurisdiction in this country. It is astonishing the degree to which we go. And we do that because we are different. These are decades after the fact. If ever there was a "consistent pattern" of behavior here, the pattern ceased to exist some time ago. What we see here is a case study in the continuing destruction of a man. I ask my colleagues, how would you feel if this were happening to you? There is a good reason to pose the question, because if we approve the resolution of the Senator from California, someday it will happen to each of us, whether we "had it coming" or not. Our political opponents will see to it. Believe it. It is a sad chapter in the Senate history if this resolution passes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Abraham). Who yields time?

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from Maine, Ms. SNOWE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for yielding.

On July 10, I signed a letter to the chairman and vice chairman of the Ethics Committee urging that they hold public hearings at the concluding stages of the case currently before the committee.

Signing that letter was not an easy step to take. But I believe it was the right step to take. It was not an issue of politics; it was an issue of principle. The fact is, instances of misconduct know no partisan lines. Allegations of impropriety know no political boundaries.

My singular goal and overriding goal in this matter has been to preserve the integrity and reputation of this institution and I believe we do so by opening up the final stage of an ethics process for public view.

Let me say from the outset, though, that I have the utmost respect for the hard work, dedication and integrity of the Senator, Mr. MCCONNELL, Senators, and staff of the Ethics Committee have done in this case to date. Indeed, they have been assigned the most difficult and thankless of tasks in this institution.

Without question, this is a painful and difficult matter. It is tough for the institution of the Senate. It is difficult for each and every Senator in this Chamber and everybody involved.

But the time has come, Mr. President, the time has come for a decision to be made about the Ethics process. On Monday, the Ethics Committee opted not to hold public, open hearings in the case pending before them. That is a decision with which I respectfully disagree.

I recognize that this is a very complex and delicate process, and I understand why some Senators look upon this amendment with concern.

But, Mr. President, this Chamber at the top of a hill in the Nation's Capital is not a museum. It is not an institution that should be removed from the people. And it must never be above the ideals of our country or its people. It must represent America at its very best.

This is a place where nominations to the U.S. Supreme Court are decided. It is the place where members of the President's inner circle—the Cabinet—are confirmed. And it is the part of Congress where the hope for peace and prosperity are passed through our unique role of crafting treaties.

The U.S. Senate is not immune to some of the problems and challenges of our society. Throughout the history of the Senate, Members have been cited and reprimanded for those flaws.

In this case, since December 1992, the Senate Ethics Committee has conducted a thorough investigation into accusations of misconduct against a Member of this institution.

Clearly, the Senators of this committee and their staff have not taken this case lightly.

Their analysis—released in mid-May—concluded that there exists "substantial credible evidence" that the Senator has engaged in clear misconduct over a period of 25 years. The committee then voted unanimously to proceed to the third and final investigative stage.

These are very difficult, very sensitive and very disturbing allegations. For perhaps the first time since its creation 31 years ago, the Ethics Committee has had to investigate charges that are not simply numbers on paper. They are not a series of accountant's slips or ledgers. It is about a tough subject—we all know that—and it is about never tolerating that kind of misconduct, no matter when it occurs, no matter who the perpetrator, no matter what the context.

But the real issue that has come before this Chamber is whether to continue this matter behind closed doors or to conclude this last—and most serious—phase of the investigation in full, public view by way of open hearings. Some have claimed that this will embarrass us as an institution.

Embarrass us as an institution? It is by our lack of action, Mr. President, by our failure to hold open hearings and by our embrace of the institutional sanctuary of closed doors that we would embarrass this institution.

To do otherwise would threaten those bonds of trust and faith with the American people. Does this policy mean that, simply because the issue at hand is in a form of sexual misconduct, even less openness is in order? Does that mean that financial misconduct deserves open, public hearings, but sexual misconduct should be a closed door policy? I think not.

This is purely a question of whether we are ever to turn back the tide of sexual misconduct—which has taken years to even get into the realm of public debate and dialog—open hearings must be held in this and other cases.

In words attributed to Lord Acton, this point is made: “Everything secret degenerates, even the administration of justice; nothing is safe that does not show how it can bear discussion and publicity.

These are thoughts to bear in mind as we make our decision on this amendment today.

Mr. President, this amendment takes the simple and honest step of shining light into the process of the U.S. Senate.

In the end, the issue at hand demands that we cross a new threshold for this revered institution. Its significance cannot be underestimated, not just in terms of fairness and justice, but in terms of what we are as an institution, and who we are as servants of the American people. It is my hope that we will make the right decision.

Thank you, and I yield the floor.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, how much more time do we have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Twenty-five minutes.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I yield such time as she may need to the distinguished Senator from Texas.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I thank the chairman, thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, the matter before us today is very serious and extremely important. It is not an issue for partisanship. It is an issue that demands of each of us our best judgment of what is right and what is wrong. And when we examine this matter, it is clear that the Senate Ethics Committee has been scrupulous about investigating every charge and accusations lodged against the Senator from Oregon. It is unprecedented in Senate history that so much time and effort has been devoted to assembling the facts on such a matter.

What is wrong is that this amendment threatens to render null and void all that has been done to date. The Ethics Committee must be allowed to finish its work and make its recommendations. At that point the full Senate will be called upon to agree or disagree and act on the recommendation. The decision can be heard on this matter. The question is whether we will wait to hear the Ethics Committee decision as our rules require us to do.

If we are not going to wait for the Ethics Committee's full report and recommendations before acting, we might as well disband the committee completely and conduct all future proceedings on the floor of the Senate. I think that bypassing the committee and conducting a hearing of this critical moment in the Packwood case would be a terrible mistake.

If we open these hearings and overrule our bipartisan Ethics Committee today, we will set the precedent that at any time the majority intends to make political points or whatever motive the majority might have.

I have been asked how my position on this question pending before the Senate squares with my position regarding sexual harassment in the Navy. In the case of the Tailhook incident, the Navy conducted its investigations. I was asked if the investigations were adequate. In my judgment, they were not.

The case before us is very different. We have an investigation in process. No recommendation has yet been made. But some of our Members want to make a judgment on its adequacy before we make a final decision. At this time the majority intends to make political points or whatever motive the majority might have.

I believe we should not change the rules in the middle of the case. If we decide the rules should be changed, we should do so when and if we have acted on the Ethics Committee recommendation and judged it to be inadequate. I believe fair play to all concerned is to give our respect to the process and to wait for the Ethics Committee to act.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. MCCONNELL. If the Senator from South Carolina will use some of her time right now, I would appreciate it.

Mrs. BOXER. You mean the Senator from California, not the Senator from South Carolina. I do not know who you thought I was. But it is an interesting slip.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I say to my friend that I have no doubt in the world who she is.

[Laughter.]

Mrs. BOXER. I yield 3 minutes to my friend from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, other members of the Ethics Committee have now all spoken on this floor on this issue, and it understates the case, it seems to me, to say that this is a difficult ethics case requiring tough, hard choices for everyone in the Senate. The ethics issues are difficult under any circumstances, especially difficult if it seems to me in a political institution like the U.S. Senate. Our duties require us to confront not only what is convenient but rather what is necessary, and the duties of those of us on the Ethics Committee require us to judge the ethics complaints that are filed against Members of the U.S. Senate.

I serve on that committee not by choice; I serve because I was asked, and there is no joy in that assignment.

I think this committee has six members—three Republicans and three Democrats. This is the way it was set up, and this is the way it should be—three Republicans and three Democrats. It is the way it is intended to work.

But the real issue that has come before this Chamber is whether to conclude this last—and most serious—phase of the investigation in full, public view by way of open hearings. Some have claimed that this will embarrass us as an institution.

Misses of the Senate, the Senator from California.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?
Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I yield to the distinguished Senator from Kansas whatever time she may use. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. I thank the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. President, I oppose the amendment offered by the Senator from California.

As a former member of the Ethics Committee, I certainly can sympathize with the comment Senator Dorgan made preceding my comments—that there is no joy in the process in serving on the Ethics Committee. But I also know the difficulties that are imposed in the process that this Ethics Committee has to undertake, and I am flatly and strongly opposed to any effort to inject the full Senate into the committee process in midstream, and at this point.

It saddens me that we have reached this point. Mr. President, it should not be a cause of great concern to all of us on the floor of the U.S. Senate. I would feel this same way whether it was a Member on the other side of the aisle or a Member on this side of the aisle. We should not be debating the case at this point, but the process.

The Ethics Committee has one of the most difficult jobs in the Senate. It is never easy to sit in judgment of a colleague. But it is essential to the working of our Senate and to the public confidence in government that some of us take on that role.

I regret that the committee is now divided on how to proceed in this case. I have enormous respect for both the chairman, Senator McCONNELL, and the vice chairman, Senator BRYAN. There is an honest difference of opinion with legitimate concerns on both sides. I believe it is a serious mistake to turn that honest disagreement into a partisan battle.

I do not believe that there is any effort for a coverup. I do not believe that it was designed to be done behind closed doors. And I really regret that we have reached this particular point.

The investigation of charges against Senator PACKWOOD has now been underway for 31 months. The committee has spent thousands of hours and interviewed hundreds of witnesses. It has conducted what may be the most thorough and exhaustive investigation in Senate history. Now we are at the end of this process, and the committee apparently is preparing to render its verdict, as it should.

Mr. President, I see no purpose in further delaying this matter by ordering the committee to conduct public hearings on this matter that could go on and on and on.

It is time to make a decision. That is the real question that the committee and the full Senate must address. Is Senator PACKWOOD guilty of the charges leveled against him? And, if so, what is the appropriate punishment? I believe we must answer that question in a fair and prompt manner. The committee should lay out all the evidence it has gathered, and then it should present its verdict to the Senate and the American people. We can then focus our energy not on committee procedures but on the committee product. Mr. President, that is the way it should be.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. McCONNELL addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. McCONNELL. If I could take a moment, I thank the distinguished Senator from Kansas for her remarks. As a former member of the Ethics Committee, I think she understands this process very well, and I am extremely grateful to her for expressing her view on this most important matter.

Mrs. BOXER addressed the Chair.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Nebraska, [Mr. KERREY].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. KERREY. I come to the floor to support this amendment. I must confess that at first I thought it was a terrible idea. I thought the Senate Ethics Committee ought to complete its work and then let us make a decision about whether the work was worthwhile.

I was concerned that the rhetoric was getting partisan. I was concerned as well that Senator PACKWOOD could be tried in a court of public opinion as opposed to allowing the facts to determine guilt or innocence, and I believe the charges of sexual misconduct necessitate special protection for those bringing the charges.

I have listened very carefully and particularly to the arguments of the Senator from Nevada, [Mr. BRYAN], who has made five very compelling arguments. First, he observes that every case which reached the final, serious investigative stage has public hearings, and every case which reached the final, serious investigative stage had a public record. This is our unbroken precedent.

Second, the Senator from Nevada points out that a justifiable reason exists to leave public hearings in this case. Except that if the Senate does not want to hold public hearings because it deals with sexual misconduct, there is not one. Since none of the alleged victims are unwilling to come forward for examination, our concern does not stand as an excuse.

Third, he makes a legal point that this is a case of first impression because, for the first time in Senate history, these are alleged victims, citizens who came forward and filed sworn charges against a U.S. Senator for actions against them.

Fourth, the Senator from Nevada points out that he is concerned that the credibility of the Senate itself to deal fairly and openly with the discipline of its Members would either be greatly enhanced or irreparably damaged.

Mr. President, he is unquestionably right. The integrity of the Senate is far more important than the risk of embarrassment to any Member.

Fifth, he believes that hearings would provide a valuable opportunity to evaluate the witnesses firsthand, and I do not read a written statement. This last point made me believe that Senator PACKWOOD—

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, the Senate is not in order, and I think it is very important. This is a Senator who has changed his view on this matter. Perhaps other Senators ought to hear his reasoning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time actually expired. If the Senator would like to yield more time.

Mrs. BOXER. I yield the Senator an additional 1 minute.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, this is a rather simple change and I think it is a very important change in our law concerning all ethics offenses involving the one involving Senator PACKWOOD. The simplicity and brevity of this proposed law compels me to read it in full:

The Select Committee on Ethics of the Senate shall hold hearings in any pending or future case in which the Select Committee, first, has found, after a review of allegations of wrongdoing by a Senator, that there is a substantial credible evidence which provides substantial cause to conclude that a violation within the jurisdiction of the Select Committee has occurred, and second, has undertaken an investigation of such allegations.

The Select Committee may waive this requirement by an affirmative record vote of a majority of the members of the committee. This proposal deserves the support of any who are concerned about the integrity of this institution, the Senate, as well as the integrity of one of our Members, Senator Bob PACKWOOD. One stands accused of misconduct by citizens. He has not been convicted and deserves to be treated as innocent until a judgment is rendered. The other will stand accused of impeding the chance for justice to be delivered if we vote no on this amendment.

Mr. President, H.L. Mencken said that "injustice is not so difficult to bear as it is made out by some to be; it is justice that is difficult to bear." Let us vote yes with this truth in mind.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 2 minutes 4 seconds.

Mrs. BOXER. I yield the remainder of the time to the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. LAUTENBERG].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I thank the Senator from California for her willingness to give me just a couple minutes.

I first wish to commend her for bringing the issue to the point that we have, where it is being discussed openly. And that ought to be the focus, because the public as well as the Senate has been working very hard on opening the process.

In the last 2 weeks we have had a couple of very serious cases where either or not lobbyists have to be open in their dealings. We have openness questions on whether or not gifts are acceptable. We have tried to illuminate the process for the public. We all know that the public trust is no longer with us and to be with us, this process continues to be hidden, secretive.

Even though our friends on the other side of the aisle say that we ought not to interfere with the committee process, this is far above the committee process. This is a matter of human rights, of individual rights of a woman to work and to not be harassed during her job hours.

This is the question of whether or not someone has violated the basic rules of the Senate, and we should have an open hearing. I know that Senator Packwood loves this institution. He has worked very hard on many good issues and has delivered positively on those issues. But we are not judging Senator Packwood’s past record. What we are making a judgment about is whether or not the public is entitled to know what is taking place. And in my view there is no doubt about it. The Senator from Connecticut, when he spoke, suggested that even for Senators it would be worthwhile to be able to gain the knowledge that would come as a result of a public hearing.

Mr. President, I think we are at a crossroads, and whether or not the hearings are secret or public will determine what the public thinks about Senator Packwood’s guilt. They will condemn him absolutely if the process continues to be hidden. And I hope that our Members will take heed for the good of the institution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. Lautenberg. That Senator Boxer’s resolution goes through and that we have public hearings on this matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. McConnell. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 38 minutes.

Mr. McConnell. Mr. President, in closing this debate, I wish to particularly thank Senator Smith and Senator Craig, who have served with me on the Ethics Committee on our side of the aisle for these 2% long years. I wish to say that they have approached this issue in every single instance with character, with integrity, with conviction and a sincere desire to produce the best possible result for all the Senate and for the accused Senator.

To my colleagues on the other side of the aisle on the committee, until very recently, I think we had, indeed, succeeded in developing a bipartisan approach to this, and I regret deeply that this case has spilled over into the full Senate before it was over.

And what is that is before us today. Thirty-one years ago, Senator John J ohnstone of Montana was one of the old-timers around here may remember, in the wake of the Bobby Baker case, felt that there ought to be a better way to handle misconduct charges against a sitting Senator. He felt we ought to get through one of these kinds of cases from the floor of the Senate where everything is partisan. And so he suggested we have a bipartisan Ethics Committee with not too many members, just six, three on each side of the aisle.

This approach, coupled with the requirement that there be four votes to do anything affirmatively, guaranteed—that the results of any case would have a bipartisan stamp. It has been said that the committee was deadlocked when it voted 3-3. It was not deadlocked. That was the decision. Because under the rules of the Ethics Committee, a 3-3 vote is not an affimmativve act to proceed. So the decision on the issue of public hearings in the House is consistent with the rules of the rules of the committee. So the Senate from California today would have us change the rules in the middle of the game—change the rules in the middle of the game.

I would suggest, Mr. President, not only is it a bad idea generally speaking to change the rules in the middle of the game, it is a bad rules change anyway. And beyond it being a bad rules change, what is happening here on the floor of the Senate today is exactly what Senator Cooper feared would happen if we did not create the Ethics Committee. And that is, have every one of these cases debated here in the most partisan forum imaginable, with the majority decision.

One of the astonishing things about this proceeding today is I think it can be totally persuasively argued that the principal beneficiary of the bipartisan Ethics Committee is whichever party happens to be in the minority in the Senate at a given time, and yet this proposal emanates from the minority side to bring a matter out of a bipartisan forum into a partisan forum for decision.

We will rue the day we go down this path. Just imagine campaign season. We are out here on the floor of the Senate today exactly what Senator Cooper feared would happen if we did not create the Ethics Committee. And that is, have every one of these cases debated here in the most partisan forum imaginable, with the majority decision.

The reason for an Ethics Committee was that these cases would be investigated through the investigative phase that we have at the State level. And it has never been interfered with in 31 years. At the end of the process the committee would take an affirmative action which would require at least four members, which would guarantee some bipartisan stamp. If the case was serious enough, bring it to the floor of the Senate, and at that point every Senator would have his or her opportunity to say whatever they felt was appropriate, if at all possible, to the bipartisan committee. Criticize it, condemn it, applaud it, amend it, filibuster it, whatever. There is an opportunity, Mr. President, for any Senator to have his or her fair say about this whole process.

So what we are experiencing today is the great fear that Senator Cooper had 31 years ago if we did not have an Ethics Committee. And yet here we are having this debate, slowing down the disposition of the case.

As I said earlier, candidly, it has all had an impact on the members of the committee. It has pulled us in opposite directions. It has tried to make us more partisan. And if we do not have to do, if the Boxer resolution is hopefully not approved, on the committee is to get ourselves back together again. Friendships have been strained. And we have got to get ourselves back together so we can finish this case.

Nobody’s taken a bigger beating in the last 2½ weeks than I have. I am getting to wonder who the accused is in this case.

But I am proud to be chairman of the Ethics Committee because I believe in this process. I think it serves this institution well and I think it serves the public well. There is not going to be any cleanup in this process. Let us finish our work. We will release everything relevant to the decision. And if you do not like the penalty that we recommend, recommend another one. But do not start down this path. It is the beginning of the end of the ethics process, which has served this body well for 31 years.

So, Mr. President, I sincerely want to thank all the Senators not on the committee who came over and pitched in. And I thought I might be the only speaker. I did not have to ask anybody to come over. Senator Simpson was here. Senator Brown was here. Senator Kassebaum was here. Senator Grassley was here. And Senator Hutchison was here. And none of them on the committee. And this is the kind of thing your staff will whisper in your ear, “Boy, you don’t want to get near this one. Vote and leave.” And yet they came over and spoke in opposition to this resolution, expressed their opinion that the resolution was a bad idea and that the Ethics Committee ought to be able to finish its work.

The President, it is my understanding that the Democratic leader would like to use some leader time to speak. I do not see him on the floor at the moment. So how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eight minutes.

Mr. McConnell. I will for the moment reserve the balance of my time.
The vice chairman of the Ethics Committee and several others have already outlined some of the facts that lead me to that conclusion:

First, under the precedent of the Senate and the Ethics Committee, in every major ethics case, public hearings have been held. In 1977, a three-tiered ethics process was adopted. Public hearings have been held in all four cases that reached the final investigative phase under this process.

Second, the amendment before us today would allow the Senate to waive those hearings; a vote for the amendment of the distinguished chairman of the Ethics Committee would allow a simple majority of the committee to do so.

The issue before us goes far beyond the specifics of any case. If the evidence in a case before the Ethics Committee has reached the final investigative phase, and if there is not sufficient reason to make an exception for that case, then it is inappropriate for the committee to move forward with public hearings. I urge my colleagues to support the amendment.

Finally, I want to commend the Senator from California, Senator Boxer, for offering this amendment. I also want to commend my other colleagues on the Ethics Committee. We all know theirs is a thankless job, yet they deserve all Senators’ thanks.

Mr. DOLE. How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate has 5 minutes left. This will be yielded from leader time.

Mr. DOLE. How much?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are 5 minutes left.

Mrs. BOXER. I am sorry, Mr. President, how much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Five minutes.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from California.

My colleagues have spoken on both sides of this issue with eloquence and passion. For me, the central issue that we are debating today is the simple proposition of shall there be public hearings. A vote for the Boxer amendment commits this Senate to public hearings; a vote for the amendment of the distinguished chairman of the Ethics Committee votes not to have public hearings.

There has been much comment made about this somehow disrupting the process, or that it portends that in the future the nominee may be placed at some disadvantage.

What this is all about, as far as I am concerned, is that in every case, whether or a Member of the majority or the minority in which there is an ethical matter of this magnitude brought to the attention of the committee, there ought to be public hearings.

It has been said that precedent will be broken. In the few cases in which public hearings will be violated if, indeed, the amendment is offered and approved. That is true, but if we fail to support the amendment of the Senator from California, the Senate abandons nearly a century of precedent, a precedent which has served us well in every ethics violation, public hearings have been held. If my colleagues have any question about that, simply call the ethics office, and they will tell you the same thing that they have told each and every one of us.

I conclude, Mr. President, where I began, and that is: Why should this case be different? I am unable to reach a conclusion as to why this should be different. We have another precedent, and that is for the first time we have victims who seek to come forward and to present their testimony before the members of the committee. I think that we ought to reflect for a moment on what kind of a process we support.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair informs the Senator his 2 minutes have expired.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank my friend. I yield 1 minute to the Senator from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I want to make clear that at no time during this debate or at any time during my membership on the Ethics Committee have I been critical of the other members of the Ethics Committee or of its current chairman. I believe that the Ethics Committee has conducted itself with honor, meticulousness, and really pursued due diligence.

We have an honest disagreement on the issue of public hearings. There is something special about the U.S. Senate. The world views us as the greatest deliberative body. The rules guarantee full and complete opportunity for all concerned parties to speak. We have great pride in the way we protect the rights of the minority.

It is that history and tradition that I believe that calls us now, as we get ready to vote, to honor the precedent of public hearings, for cross-examination of witnesses, to resolve discrepancies in testimony, to have a fair format.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair informs the Senator the 1 minute has expired.

Ms. MIKULSKI. A vote here is the right thing to do. It is the senatorial thing to do. It is the American thing to do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California has the floor.

Mrs. BOXER. Public hearings. I thank my friends. I say to my colleagues on both sides that my amendment is very respectful of the Ethics Committee but is also respectful of the full Senate and the victims in this case. It is very respectful to the American people who want us to open the doors, very clearly. The Ethics Committee chairman says the committee has not deadlocked. Only in the U.S. Senate would you say a 3 to 3 vote is not a deadlock. Clearly, the committee has deadlocked for the first time in its history.

The Boxer amendment says you need a majority vote to close hearings. I think that is very reasonable and no Senator—no Senate—from either party should fear a majority vote.

We have had 18 Senators speak in behalf of my amendment, including one Republican. I am a very proud Senator, as I stand here today, because when I started this, many colleagues told me that nobody cares about this but the Senator from California, and that never was true.

Why do we care? Because we love this place, and we want it to work right. I read the Constitution, and article I, section 5 says each and every one of us has a responsibility to make sure we police ourselves and do it in the right way.

The Senator from Kentucky has stated that I am turning precedents on its head. Nothing could be further from the truth. If you vote for the Boxer amendment, you vote to continue public hearings. We have heard it from the vice chair of the committee; we have heard it from Senator Mikulski. These are valued Members of this body. I know they are well respected. It is not just a Senator who is not on the Ethics Committee calling for public hearings.

Then we hear we have the documents. Is that not wonderful, let us just have the paper. I want to ask you, does a piece of paper talk to you about the humiliation? Does a piece of paper come alive? I say not.

Finally, Mr. President, I note with regret that during debate on this amendment, several Senators made reference to my record on ethics matters as when I served as a Member of the House of Representatives. Unfortunately, their statements mischaracterized my record. I wish to take this opportunity to clarify the record.

Specifically, the Senator from Colorado, Senator Brown, stated that I repeatedly voted against public hearings in the final stage of ethics cases. The Senator from Colorado opposed that bill.

Also, in cases of sexual misconduct to reach the House floor, I voted twice to increase sanctions against individual Members. In those cases, one was a Democrat and one was a Republican. Senator Brown, then my colleague in the House, voted for increased sanctions for the Democrat, but not the Republican.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mrs. BOXER. Do not vote in favor of paper, vote in favor of people and support our people. I am here for the 3rd amendment.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. Dole. Mr. President, I have not had an opportunity to hear the debate. I know the seconds have been used. To many this is a very important matter and certainly the charges leveled against Senator from Oregon are serious ones.

It is supposed to be a bipartisan committee. That is why it is 3 to 3 to avoid all the things we are doing right now. That is the reason it was implemented in this way, structured in this way, so we avoid a focus on the floor if somebody felt so inclined.

So we have a procedure that has worked, as I understand, fairly well for 31 years. I think it ought to be followed today. We have had 2½ years of investigation in this case—2½ years against Senator Packwood. As a part of this investigation, the Ethics Committee has interviewed 264 witnesses, taken 111 sworn depositions, issued 44 subpoenas, read 16,000 pages of documents and spent 1,000 hours in meetings and that is not the case.

It is now my understanding, at least, that the Ethics Committee is preparing relevant information, the most detailed public submission ever made by the committee in any case. As it does in other cases, the Ethics Committee will also recommend an appropriate sanction. And before the Senate votes on this sanction, the committee will provide a full and complete record of all relevant evidence, and this record will be made public.

So I believe the American people, as they should, will have a right to know. The American people will know; they will have an opportunity to review the record, blemishes and all. It just seems to me, as someone not on the Ethics Committee—and, believe me, it is not easy to ask your colleagues to serve on that committee; it is going to be even more difficult from this day forward, I assume, unless you want to make it just a partisan committee, and then maybe we ought to change the numbers.

But I guess the real question is whether or not we are going to allow the Ethics Committee to do its work without second-guessing on the floor of the Senate.

The Ethics Committee should not be a political football. We have a process and that process should be followed. It has been followed in numerous cases in the past. If we write new rules and change the process, I assume we will do it as we normally do, prospectively, in future cases, and not in the middle of a case.

I can imagine what would happen if this were just on the partisan side of the aisle. The Senator from California would not be on her feet. There were several cases in the House, as I understand it, and there was not a word uttered by the Senator from California, who was then in the Senate. But this is different.

I have confidence in the Ethics Committee. We are out here in the middle of a case—actually, at the end of this case, because I understand the committee would like to act. Now, if we do not believe in the integrity of the Ethics Committee, why do we not abolish it? We can turn that over to the Senator from California to be in charge of everybody’s ethics in the Senate, or to someone else who does not agree with the Ethics Committee.

We do not agree with a lot of things that happen in committees around here, but I am not certain we challenge every committee when we have a disagreement and bring it to the floor and demand a public hearing on our issue because we did not prevail in any other committee.

This is the Ethics Committee. I can tell you, as the leader, that it is extremely difficult to ask your colleagues to serve on this committee. It is going to be more difficult if this becomes a transparent effort to score partisan political points either in this case or the next case. Maybe the next time it will be on this side and we will be able to score these partisan political points.

Things that go around come around here, or whatever it is. I hope that is not the case.

If I felt for a moment that there were Republicans on the Ethics Committee—not in this case—who were not men of integrity, I would say move right ahead. I think their integrity probably matches that of those on the other side. I think they are all men and women of integrity on the Ethics Committee.

So I hope my colleagues will defeat the amendment offered by the Senator from California and then adopt the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky.

Let the committee proceed. This may be good media, but it is bad policy. The press loves this. They have been flocking in all day long. They like it. Going after a Member really whets their appetites, whether it is this case or any other case. It is a great way to get big headlines and make the nightly news.

But what does it do for the integrity of the Ethics Committee to score a few political points at the expense of the the theater in this body. This is a proud institution and, in my view, I think we can properly oversee and properly conduct the affairs of the Senate without second-guessing from the floor of the Senate. The Ethics Committee should not be a political football. We have a process and that process should be followed as it has been followed in numerous cases in the past.

If we want to change the rules, change the process, then we should do so prospectively, not for future cases, not in the middle of this case or any other case, and certainly not as part of a transparent effort to score partisan political points.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, have the yeas and nays been ordered? The PRESIDING OFFICER. No. Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on both amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second. The yeas and nays were ordered.

So, the amendment (No. 2000) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. THURMOND. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader. Mr. Dole. What is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. FEINGOLD] to be recognized.

Mr. Dole. If he would yield for a moment.

I have talked to the managers of the bill. I think it is their intent to stay here late this evening. And I understand they are going to take the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin and take an amendment from the Senator from Iowa. But we need to find other amendments. And we have had a five-hour delay here, rain delay, that is not the fault of the managers. So we have lost five hours. So they would like to make up some of that time tonight.

If we cannot find any amendments, we need, in fairness, to let our colleagues know. If we cannot find amendments, we need to have our colleagues know whether we can have a roll call, and at what time. So maybe the managers can take a quick check and let the leaders know, so we can advise our forces.

Mr. DASCHLE addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I urge Democratic Senators to come to the floor. We have a whole series of amendments that ought to be debated. This is primarily an important opportunity. I hope we will not let it go to waste. There are Senators who have expressed their interest in amending this bill, and they ought to come to the floor to offer these amendments.

I urge Cloakrooms to encourage Senators to come to the floor at their earliest convenience.

Mr. FEINGOLD addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the distinguished Senator yield to me without losing his right to the floor?

Mr. FEINGOLD. I yield to the Senator from West Virginia.

CONGRATULATIONS TO DARIUS JAMES FATemi, Ph.D.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, Plato thanked the gods for having been born a man and for having been born a Greek and for having been born during the age of Sophocles. I thank the benign hand of destiny for allowing me to live to see one of my grandsons become a Ph.D. in physics.

On yesterday, Darius James Fatemi was given his Ph.D. in physics. Seneca is reported to have said that a good mind possesses a kingdom. Disraeli said, upon the education of our youth, the fate of the country depends. Emerson said that the true test of civilization is not how many cities nor the size of cities nor the size of the crops—no, but the kind of man the country turns out.

You can imagine, those of you who are grandparents, and those of you who may not yet be grandparents, the pride which I share with my wife, Erma, in feeling that we have, indeed, contributed to this great country a new physicist, a doctor of physics.

Darius was named after Darius the Great, who became King of Persia upon the death of horse. Darius James Fatemi did not get his doctorate by the neck of a horse.

We are grateful that the good Lord has blessed us with wonderful grand-

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 1996

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. FEINGOLD addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin holds the floor.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask my friend from Wisconsin to withhold.

Mr. FEINGOLD. I yield without losing my right to the floor.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Debbie Allen, a congressional fellow assigned to my office, be assigned privilege of the floor during pendency of the legislation now before the Senate.

Mr. FEINGOLD. I yield without losing my right to the floor.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that an article from the Monday, August 2, 1995 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, as follows:

SEP. . SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING FEDERAL SPENDING.

It is the sense of the Senate that in pursuit of a balanced federal budget, Congress should exercise fiscal restraint, particularly in authorizing spending not requested by the Executive and in proposing new programs.

Mr. ThURMOND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for 10 seconds to get some people on the floor?

Mr. FEINGOLD. Yes, I yield.

Mr. ThURMOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Jack Kenosha, the Romans, their neighbors and friends, and who are currently serving fellowship assignments on Senator McCain's staff, be granted the privilege of the floor during the Senate's consideration of S. 1006, the fiscal year 1996 national defense authorization bill.

Mr. FeINGOLD. Mr. President, this is a sense-of-the-Senate amendment stating that Congress should exercise self-restraint in authorizing and appropriating funds for all Federal spending, including defense spending, especially in cases where the spending has not been requested by the applicable agency in the first place or is not directly related to national security needs.

I will just speak very briefly, because I understand the managers intend to accept this, but I do want to make a brief point about it.

I think every Member of this body is aware of the problem this sense of the Senate is intended to address. Congress passed a budget resolution a short time ago that called for increased defense spending over the next few years of more than $58 million. We ought to understand that just because there is room in the budget resolution to spend that extra money, it does not mean that Congress has to or is forced to appropriate it on projects that are either unnecessary or not directly related to national security interests.

In recent weeks, the reports, Mr. President, have been increasing. Media reports have documented what they have called a business-as-usual attitude in Washington, DC, as many of these so-called reformers have gotten in line to not decrease but to add defense spending for weapons systems that our military people have not even asked for. Why? Because the weapons systems are built in their districts or their home States. That is the simple answer.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that an article from the Monday, August 2, 1995 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, as follows:

EXTRA PENTAGON FUNDS BENEFIT SENATORS' STATES.

There being no objection, the articles was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that an article from the Monday, August 2, 1995 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, as follows:

and Cohen are members of the Senate Armed Services Committee and Cohen chairs its seapower subcommittee, nicknamed the "shipbuilders subcommittee," which decides the fate of most sea-related military equipment.

Defense officials admit they do not need either ship to be ready to fight two wars nearly simultaneously, which is the standard set for all branches of the military by the Joint Chiefs of Staff. But, said a senior defense official, "If I don't get some of these ships, I'm going to have to keep some older ships in the fleet."

The ships are just the most expensive example of the additions to the $258 billion presidential budget request, which all the Republican chairman of House and Senate defense-defense-related committees believe is too low. The Senate Armed Services Committee added about $7 billion to Clinton's request. The House added nearly $10 billion. The full Senate is to take up the defense spending bill in August.

Of the 44 military construction projects that the Senate Armed Services Committee added to the defense budget, 32 of them—and $6.3 billion in additional money—went to states represented by senators on one of the two defense committees, according to the same study. The study is a culling of the programs compiled by the Council for a Livable World, a Washington-based organization that advocates decreased defense spending.

"The Senate and nothing [these programs] not for national security reasons, but to help members of Congress," said Council President John Isaacs. "It is absolutely business as usual. This is a practice as common among Republicans as Democrats. Changes of policy, changes of ideology don't matter."

The Defense Department is supposed to wholeheartedly support the president's budget request. But when the Republican chairmen of the House and Senate defense committees asked the services this year to come up with a wish list if they had more money, not one balked.

That is the one reason, defense officials said, they did not want to be named in this article, or even identified as Army, Navy, Air Force, or Marine.

Many items at the top of the services' wish list showed up on the Senate committee's list. Among them: 12 extra F-18 Hornet fighter jets for $564 million, built in the states of Texas and California; 12 extra F-16 Fighting Falcons for $564 million, built in the states of Texas and California; 20 extra Kiowa Warrior helicopters for $372 million, built in the states of Texas and California; and 33 extra SH-60 Sea Hawk helicopters for $300 million. These helicopters are produced by General Electric Co. in Massachusetts and United Technologies Corp. in Connecticut.

Senators and representatives have been able to arrange things in a way that makes them both profitable and useful to their home districts. They have been able to get the Defense Department to pay for items of equipment has been neglected during the defense spending process because it would be cheaper to build than wait until a time when production costs could be higher.

Kennedy did not support adding money to the president's request, said a spokesman for the Massachusetts senator, but when he realized the Pentagon had asked for $26 billion, "he wanted to see the money spent as best as possible." He said Kennedy believes the helicopters will help the Marines improve their counterradicalization efforts.

"All politics is local," one defense official said. "If I'm a defense contractor I'm going to do everything I can to locate in a powerful chairman's district. I have airmen who have immediate access. Jobs are important on the Hill."

Mr. FEINGOLD. I thank the Chair. Mr. President, I am not suggesting that we should only fund weapons systems requested by the Pentagon, or that because the Pentagon has asked for something, that Congress should automatically vote to provide them with their wish list.

What I am saying is that when members of Congress start adding things to the Department of Defense spending list, we ought to give extra special scrutiny to those items that the administration never even requested.

I think we ought to be looking carefully to make sure those additional items, in fact, are related to national security needs, not just a source of jobs back home. There are better ways to provide those jobs than building new weapons. Those that we do need, are not wanted by the military, and further drain our National Treasury.

Mr. President, my sense of the Senate is simply intended to make a commonsense statement. We do not have to spend it all just because the budget allows it. Let us apply some fiscal discipline and restraint in all budget areas, including the Department of Defense.

I do hope the amendment will be accepted, as has been indicated to me previously by the PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, we will accept the amendment on this side.

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, the amendment makes sense. I urge our colleagues to accept it on this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. President, the amendment is not accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 2062) was agreed to.

Mr. GRASSLEY addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, my amendment, I do not think, will be controversial. I hope it has been cleared on both sides. I believe it has.

My amendment will modify section 505 of the bill.

Section 505 of the bill streamlines the procedure for retiring our most senior military officers. That means admirals and generals who hold three- or four-star rank. Under the bill, the President must nominate the most senior officers for retirement, which involves senatorial confirmation under existing law. If a three-star or four-star officer is not nominated or not confirmed under current law, that individual, as we all know, does not lose his or her permanent grade, which, obviously, is lower.

For a three-star general, as an example, this could mean retirement with a two-star, or even a one-star grade, I believe. I hope I understand it well. Section 505 would eliminate Senate confirmation. That means section 505 of this bill would do away with Senate confirmation of three-star and four-star officers who are retiring.

When Senator Nunn and Mr. Cooper and Senator HUTCHISON and Senator NUNN, and others, first introduced this measure, it was introduced as S. 635 and introduced on March 28 of this year. At that time, I very much opposed the idea, and I joined Senator HUTCHISON and Senator NUNN and Senator Murray in signing a letter to the committee on May 11 of this year expressing opposition to the bill by Senators HUTCHISON and NUNN. We felt that S. 635 would undermine congressional oversight, that it would undermine the civilian control of the military, and would undermine accountability.

Our most senior military officers, we felt—because they are entrusted with tremendous power and responsibility—ought to, in all instances, be proven to do that. So, for that reason, and that reason alone, we feel that they must be held to the very highest possible standards.

Well, section 505 of this bill is not much different from the original S. 635. The language has not changed much, but I can say that we have changed as we viewed the intent of the NUNN-HUTCHISON bill.

Our initial reaction to S. 635 was tempered by several very difficult and controversial retirement nominations last year. Remember Admiral Kelso, Gen. Buster Glosson, General Barry, Admiral Mauz. We thought that we had good reason to question those nominations for retirement. We thought our concerns were justified. We still do.

Well, after the Hutchison-Nunn bill was introduced, I asked the American Law Division of the Congressional Research Service to assess all of the bill's implications. Mr. Bob Burdette, legislative attorney with the division, was kind enough to prepare a very thoughtful and helpful analysis of the proposed changes to the law, as suggested by our colleagues. Mr. Burdette's report helped to lay most of my concerns to rest.

I ask unanimous consent to have that report printed in the RECORD at this point.
There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

SEC. 505(a)(1) OF THE BILL

The first change, which would be made by section 505(a)(1) of the bill, is substantive in nature. It would strike out the words "and below lieutenant general or vice admiral" which presently appear at 10 U.S.C. §1370(d)(2)(A). With such words excised from subparagraph (A) of §1370(a)(2), that subparagraph would read as follows:

"An officer who has served 3 years in grade, and at the time of such transfer or discharge, not withstanding failure of the person to complete the specified nine-year period, is entitled to retired pay under section (c) of this title, without regard to the words "and below lieutenant general or vice admiral" which presently appear at 10 U.S.C. §1370(d)(2)(B)."

The fourth change, which would be made by section 505(b)(2) of the bill, is substantive in nature. It would amend subsection (c) of 10 U.S.C. §1370 by replacing certain words with certain other words. That is, the word "officer" would be struck out and replaced by the words "an officer."

The second change, which would be made by section 505(a)(2) of the bill, is likewise substantive in nature. It would strike out the words "and below lieutenant general or vice admiral" which presently appear at 10 U.S.C. §1370(d)(2)(B). The word "and" would be struck out, and the words "below lieutenant general or vice admiral" would be added to the end of the sentence.

The third change, which would be made by section 505(a)(2) of the bill, is substantive in nature. It would amend subsection (c) of 10 U.S.C. §1370 by adding a new paragraph. That paragraph would read as follows:

"A person who has served 3 years in grade, and at the time of such transfer or discharge, not withstanding failure of the person to complete the specified nine-year period, is entitled to retired pay under section (c) of this title, without regard to the words "and below lieutenant general or vice admiral" which presently appear at 10 U.S.C. §1370(d)(2)(B)."

The fifth change, which would be made by section 505(b)(3) of the bill, is substantive in nature. It would amend subsection (c) of 10 U.S.C. §1370 by striking out certain words with certain other words. That is, the word "officer" would be struck out and replaced by the words "an officer."

The sixth change, which would be made by section 505(b)(3) of the bill, is substantive in nature. It would amend subsection (c) of 10 U.S.C. §1370 by striking out certain words with certain other words. That is, the word "officer" would be struck out and replaced by the words "an officer."

The seventh change, which would be made by section 505(b)(3) of the bill, is substantive in nature. It would amend subsection (c) of 10 U.S.C. §1370 by striking out certain words with certain other words. That is, the word "officer" would be struck out and replaced by the words "an officer."

The eighth change, which would be made by section 505(b)(3) of the bill, is substantive in nature. It would amend subsection (c) of 10 U.S.C. §1370 by striking out certain words with certain other words. That is, the word "officer" would be struck out and replaced by the words "an officer."

The ninth change, which would be made by section 505(b)(3) of the bill, is substantive in nature. It would amend subsection (c) of 10 U.S.C. §1370 by striking out certain words with certain other words. That is, the word "officer" would be struck out and replaced by the words "an officer."

The tenth change, which would be made by section 505(b)(3) of the bill, is substantive in nature. It would amend subsection (c) of 10 U.S.C. §1370 by striking out certain words with certain other words. That is, the word "officer" would be struck out and replaced by the words "an officer."

The eleventh change, which would be made by section 505(b)(3) of the bill, is substantive in nature. It would amend subsection (c) of 10 U.S.C. §1370 by striking out certain words with certain other words. That is, the word "officer" would be struck out and replaced by the words "an officer."

choose, instead, to waive time in grade requirements, allowing the officer to retire with full rank, as a three-star general. This would end the controversy, but it would give the officer an unearned promotion.

Mr. President, with that minor modification that will be in my amendment, I would support Section 505. We will still have ample opportunity to scrutinize the performance and conduct of our most senior military officers through the regular confirmation process.

All three-star and four-star active duty promotions and assignments will still be subject to Senate confirmation. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the complete text of the letter sent to the Armed Services Committee be printed in the Record.

An additional argument made in support of S. 635 is that this legislation would” reduce the imperative work load of the Senate Armed Services Committee and the Department of Defense.” We are sympathetic with this goal, but we believe that S. 635 fails to provide an effective answer to this problem. We understand that in fiscal year 1993, for example, the Committee was asked to review just six grade 0-10 officers for retirement, and less than twenty at grade 0-9. In total, these retirement nominations represented just a fraction of the total number of nominations reviewed by the Committee—which we have been told numbered in the thousands. According to the Congressional Research Service, the numbers for 1993 are typical of the work load presented in recent years by these retirement nominations.

Moreover, we reject the idea that military nominations, be they for promotions or retirements, are nothing more than routine “administrative workload.” Reviewing military nominations is one of the Armed Services Committee’s most important responsibilities. It is a Constitutional responsibility and an important tool for maintaining civilian control and accountability. It is also a way of keeping the Senate involved in the crucial process of nurturing military leadership.

Since the passage of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947, your Committee has held the view that the top-most military and naval officers in the Nation should be subject to Senate approval. The reason for this is quite simple: the question of who gets the “top rank” will in the log-run determine the overall quality of the leadership in the armed Forces. And having top quality military officers is probably the single most important ingredient of military strength.

Keeping the Senate involved in the promotion and retirement process is the final, independent check will help to ensure that only the best are rewarded with top-level promotions. Most of those promotions go to future leaders, but some are given as rewards at retirement for outstanding service.

Retirement nominations are no less significant than others handled by the Committee. As you know, retired members of the armed forces can be recalled to active duty at any time, voluntarily or involuntarily, and therefore the status conferred on those individuals at the time of retirement is of course of much more than ceremonial significance. Finally, last year we were encouraged by the Senate’s almost unanimous support of the President’s request for the FY 1995 Defense Authorization Act which required that the armed services improve the procedures by which discrimination and sexual harassment complaints are processed. In part, the amendment states: “The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that the Department’s regulations governing consideration of equal opportunity matters in evaluations of the performance of members of the Armed Forces include provisions requiring as a condition of evaluations consideration of a member’s commitment to elimination of unlawful discrimination or of sexual harassment in the Armed Forces.”

This statutory language reflects an important public policy, but we are concerned that
Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate resumes the DOD authorization bill at 9 a.m. on Thursday, Senator Dorgan be recognized to offer his amendments, and that the time be 90 minutes equally divided in the usual form, with no second-degree amendments in order, and following the conclusion or yielding back of time, the Senate proceed to vote on or in relation to the Dorgan amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SEC. 631 AND 632

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I rise to express some concerns I have about sections 631 and 632 of the Department of Defense authorization bill for fiscal year 1996, S. 1026. These two sections Nos. 631 and 632, will grant unlimited commissary shopping privileges to ready reservists, certain retired reservists, and to all their dependents.

Mr. President, I am a strong supporter of the men and women who serve this Nation, including those who serve in the Ready Reserve. Their commitment to this country is strong, and they deserve our support. My concerns about sections 631 and 632 are not about the Ready Reserve, but rather about the budgetary impact of these proposed changes.

In total, Mr. President, these sections provide an estimated 2 million people unlimited access to military grocery stores here in the United States and overseas.

This is quite a dramatic expansion over current law, which limits reservists to shop at commissaries while on active duty plus an additional 12 shopping trips during the course of a year. Up until now, only active duty, career military men and women enjoyed unlimited commissary shopping privileges. However, under section 631 and 632 the Congress will be bestowing this special benefit to 2 million civilians. Stated differently, if we adopt this language, civilian reservists will have the same compensation benefit as career active duty military personnel.

Mr. President, I have been advised that according to the Department of Defense, there will be no budgetary implications associated with granting unlimited shopping privileges to the ready reservists, retired reservists, and their families. I hope this is in fact true, because this is not the same message that we heard when the expansion was contemplated in the fiscal year 1994 defense authorization bill.

According to Pentagon testimony just 3 years ago in 1992, every dollar of sales in a commissary store requires about 16 cents in appropriated funding. In other words, it takes roughly 16 cents of taxpayer money to subsidize a dollar sale in a commissary store. Back in 1992, the Defense Department also told Congress that $24 million in tax dollars is needed for every additional 100,000 commissary patrons.

Now, here we are in 1995, and all of a sudden, everything has changed. Now, a year ago, Mr. Hill credited the Federal Government's Supplemental Security Income Program with saving his life, and all the indications seemed to support his assertion. He was physically strong. He was mentally prepared, and he once again to accept a place in America.

Mr. President, Jack Gordon Hill, Jr., had a serious problem with drugs and alcohol his entire adult life. His cocaine and whiskey cost him everything he had earned in his job, and shortly thereafter he lost his family. He and his wife divorced. He gave up an infant son for adoption. Most tragically, he abandoned his two small daughters in Baltimore, unable or unwilling to take care of them.

In short, Mr. Hill was rushing ever faster toward rock bottom and almost hit, he claims, when he discovered SSI, which provides special payments for drunk and doped up people. "I have been falling bottomless pit all my life, and all of a sudden there was this one thin branch sticking out. I grabbed it. Now I am climbing out."

It turns out that the branch of SSI did not save him, but rather accelerated his fall. Mr. Hill's branch was a $458 a month governmental check, with which he was able to enter a drug and alcohol treatment center and get away from the street corner he had haunted. In an interview with the Baltimore Sun last July, he sat in his room, in the California rehab center, playing with his kitten, Serenity—its name represented a new-found state of peace in his life. This world of contrived contentment was built on a foundation of sand.

Six months after that interview, the Baltimore Sun found Mr. Hill back on the same corner where he had begun, drunk and doped up. "Federal funds were now being used to support his renewed addiction to cocaine."

His use of these funds is far from exceptional. The system under which he is living costs more per capita of taxpayers' funds. Unlike Mr. Hill, however, most of the individuals who receive these funds—hundreds of thousands, according to the Baltimore Sun—never enter treatment centers, or seriously try to beat their addictions. The $458 a month they receive only speeds their inevitable demise.

One drug counselor at a health clinic for the homeless told the Sun that drug dealers flocked around the recipients of SSI whenever the checks come in. Speaking of his patients who had died from drug overdoses, the drug counselor said, "All the dealers came circling around the patient of the day like vultures. A week or two weeks from what he ever done he was doing and feel terrible. Those were the times he would go looking for help. The problem was that we could never find help for him when that check came in the mail on the first of the month, and the whole cycle started over again."

This cycle of abuse, funded by the Federal Government, this welfare system which provides funding for the maintenance of these habits, is a tragedy which is costing us a tremendous toll in terms of human lives. When our welfare system clearly and openly supports a policy which runs contrary to those who are responsible and principled, we cannot be so blind as not to see the immediate and overwhelming need for an overhaul of the welfare system.

I have come before this body repeatedly to relate the personal stories of real Americans, stories which demonstrate how bankrupt our current welfare system is, how it enslaves its beneficiaries, how it traps them and robs them of their independence, their hope, and their futures. It is hard enough to break out of the cycle of poverty and dependence which the welfare system creates economically, but when the welfare system buys drugs for addicts, it virtually guarantees they will not escape and they will never be free but wards of the Federal Government.

Mr. Hill did not only find himself abused, but he tried to do something. Mr. Hill did more than most of the SSI recipients, he tried to get treatment. Yet, because Washington, DC, perceived the solution to his problems to be a wad full of Federal money—because the helping hand of Washington extends money to those who are in need and does not do much else—it destroyed his capacity. True charity cannot come from the Federal Government, it must come from concerned citizens who know the problems of their own communities, who know the citizens in those communities, and truly want to solve the problems. And Federal money, money alone, cannot solve the problem. We need to involve the communities. We need to involve the States. We need to involve people—people who have the chance to introduce those on welfare to opportunities that lift them out of welfare.

Federal money should be administered to the States directly, allowing them the freedom to direct funds where they are needed. Federal funds should not be administered from a distant Washington bureaucrat and directed in ways that are not meaningful on the local level. Welfare, as it is currently practiced, simply provides a means for Mr. Hill and others like him to continue their self-destructive behavior. This behavior costs not only Mr. Hill, it costs us—not only in terms of our resources but it costs us productivity and lives. It has cost his three children an association with a father. It has been a tragedy, not just in financial terms, but in personal terms. It provides a means for Mr. Hill and others like him to continue their destructive behavior. This is not a time for us to engage in half measures of welfare reform, and it is not a time for us to engage in only silence is exactly what we are getting from the Democrats who are making proposals which they call welfare reform. Every Republican plan...
The President has been proposed eliminates the drug addiction and alcoholism disabilities from SSI. The Democrats are silent. President Clinton is silent on this issue. On issues as important as these, silence is death.

We have been down the road of half measures before. It was called the 1988 Family Support Act. It made big promises. It was going to put people to work. We had hoped, with the so-called Welfare Reform Act of 1988, that the devotion of additional resources, that additional Washington management, that additional one-size-fits-all solutions from the Nation's Capital would somehow provide a solution to the problem. But if we take a good look at what has happened in terms of welfare spending, we did not solve the problem in 1988. The problem skyrocketed in 1988. Half measures, the rearrangement of the deck chairs on the welfare Titanic, will do no more than provide a basis for taking the line on this chart right off the page.

We need to have real reform. We need to understand that welfare that is simply the Federal Government's handing individuals a wad of money, like the welfare reform proposal made available to Mr. Hill, is welfare reform. That is welfare entrapment. We need to be involved in welfare replacement.

We must do more, we must ask for more, we must involve more people in the program. We must ask that civic groups and nongovernmental organizations be allowed to work with States. We must send the resources to the States to give them flexibility. The idea that there is a single solution in Washington that will provide the opportunity for everyone everywhere is an idea that has been proven to be a failure.

My family has an average size. If we were to try to buy pajamas based on the average size, one-size-fits-all would not be the best solution. When the Government in Washington, DC, tries to have a one-size-fits-all solution, it frequently fits none. It is time for us to turn the opportunity over to the States, States that can involve institutions that care for people, States that have the courage to make basic reforms, States that will have the courage to say to those on drugs and alcohol, “We will not continue to support your habit.”

The real costs of welfare are not just the costs that we face as a result of the budget crunch. They are the costs in terms of human tragedy, costs like those endured by the Hill family as a result of the fact that, as a Government, we have chosen to fund one's addiction rather than to provide the kind of care that would help an individual leave the welfare system and become a productive individual.

This Saturday we will begin the welfare debate. We will have the opportunity to give the States, which have been begging for decades now, the flexibility to do what works, to give them the resources through block grants, to allow them to make the kinds of changes and to have the kinds of conditions and requirements that will lift welfare reform up, by enlisting nongovernmental organizations and others in their communities to help individuals on welfare become productive members of our cities and towns.

It is with this in mind that we need to understand that welfare reform cannot be tinkering around the edges. It must be substantial. It must be real renovation and reformation, for without renovation and reformation in the system, we will not have a new opportunity for the citizens of the land. Indeed, that is what citizens who now are on welfare desperately need.

I thank the Chair.

Mr. FORD addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

NOT THE TIME FOR MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I have enjoyed the statement by the Senator from Missouri related to welfare reform. I think that is one thing that this country is looking forward to. But I do object to no morning business. Now we have not had morning business, or been allowed morning business for over a week. We come in here on a defense authorization bill and we take 10 minutes to talk about welfare reform. I am sitting here trying to get an amendment on the bill.

So we have morning business periodically during the day. That is fine. This is prime time, and I know it is a lot better than 8 o'clock in the morning or 9 o'clock in the morning. But we have a defense authorization bill here, I would like to get that done. We are going to have welfare reform. You can talk all day Saturday if you want to, about welfare reform.

As I say, I have enjoyed what the Senator said. I appreciate what he is trying to do. But we are also trying to get a Defense authorization bill through, and I think we ought either to have morning business and do it then, or we should have morning business late in the evening, instead of going through and interrupting the flow of business in the Senate.

I thank the Chair and suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mrs. KASSEBAUM addressed the Chair.

Mr. FORD. I withdraw that suggestion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas is recognized.

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.
can take place. When the Senate ratified the safeguards agreement, we believed that placing many of America’s nuclear materials under safeguards would strengthen our ability to press other countries to accept safeguards as well. Our national interests are well served when other countries accept safeguards, and our interests are at risk when safeguards are rejected, as we have learned bitterly in Iraq and in North Korea. If the Senate today walks away from our safeguards commitment, what message are we sending to those whose nuclear ambitions we oppose?

The third concern I have is that the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT) to ban nuclear testing is on schedule for completion in 1996. Our negotiators have pursued this agreement for decades, and their hand was significantly strengthened by the decision of the United States during the Bush administration to impose a moratorium on our own nuclear tests. Yet, this legislation funds the program to prepare the United States to resume testing, even before our own self-declared tested moratorium has expired. If we take this step, we signal to the world that we are not serious about a test ban, and we will put the treaty’s successful conclusion in serious jeopardy.

Finally, we all are aware of the importance of START II, the basic agreement for implementing President Reagan’s vision of deep cuts in the strategic nuclear arsenals of the United States and the former Soviet Union. The treaty now is pending before the Senate and before the Russian Parliament for ratification. Yet, the legislation before us today would halt for at least a year the retirement of U.S. strategic nuclear weapons, would substantially restructure our nuclear forces to retain greater capacity, and would strengthen our ability to quickly reconstruct weapons in excess of our treaty commitment. At a time when hardliners in the Russian Parliament are searching for reasons to kill the START II treaty—and when certain elements in Russia have stated clearly that they expect the United States to adhere to its commitments under the ABM treaty—actions such as those proposed in this legislation would, I fear, significantly diminish the prospects for Russian ratification of the treaty.

Perhaps this again is something that we do not want to undertake at this time. But I think that we ought to have then a more full-blown discussion of the importance of the START II treaty.

Mr. President, I will oppose efforts that endanger these important agreements that serve the interests of our Nation. The provisions I have discussed do not serve our national security or foreign policy interests. I believe in a strong national defense, but I also believe that arms control has a place in America’s national security strategy and that America should not lightly abandon its obligations.

I urge my colleagues to think long and hard before proceeding with the courses of action this bill proposes.

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, I want to commend the Senator from Kansas for her remarks. And I made remarks this morning and went over most of the same items and expressed many—not all but many—of the same concerns, particularly in relationship between the ABM Treaty which is in this bill, and the relationship between that and the START treaties which are pending. But not only that; the START I Treaty which has not completely been implemented. I think it would be the height of folly if we end up increasing the threat that would otherwise be aimed at the United States by doing something in a bill that prevents the deep reductions that are taking place in both START I and START II.

So I share the views of the Senator from Kansas on this. I think she is on point. I also share the concerns she has expressed about prematurely going back into manufacturing of nuclear weapons where we have not had decisions made yet by DOE on that point. I believe in probing DOE to make sure we have nuclear safety and security. But I think we are making decisions in this bill that go too far at this time.

It is my hope that we will be able to have amendments that will iron out each of these problems as we go down the line. On the ABM question, the question that the Senator from Kansas raised, we will have at least two or three amendments tomorrow—early, I hope—on those key questions because she has identified them. I think the major concerns with this bill Mrs. KASSEBAUM, Mr. President, if I may, I appreciate the comments of the Senator from Georgia. I was in a markup all morning and did not hear his speech. I have the highest regard for the chairman, Senator THURMOND, and the ranking leader of Armed Services Committee, Senator NUNN. I know they know these issues well, and have great dedication to them.

I appreciate the Senator’s comments. Mr. NUNN. I have learned over the years that the Senator from Kansas does not necessarily need to listen to any of my speeches in order to come to the right conclusion.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, could I say to my distinguished colleague that I was not able to be present throughout the presentation of her statement. But I know it addressed several provisions that I was about to discuss. I think that when the Senate reads the amendment tomorrow, it will have an opportunity tomorrow after examining the statement in full, Mr. President, to reply I hope in full and perhaps to the satisfaction of my distinguished colleague.

AMENDMENT NO. 2084

(Purpose: To authorize additional military construction projects)

Mr. THURMOND. I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from South Carolina (Mr. THURMOND), for himself, Mr. BURNS, Mr. REID, Mr. FORD, Mr. BOND, and Mr. NUNN, proposes an amendment numbered 2084.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 404, in the table following line 10, insert before the item relating to Fort Knox, Kentucky, the following project in Kentucky:

Mr. THURMOND. I further ask that because the Senate has previously approved these projects by an overwhelming vote of 84 to 10, we can agree to a time limit on the debate and a vote on this amendment.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, this is a military construction amendment which we have discussed. This amendment has been worked carefully on both sides of the aisle, with Senator Thurm ond’s staff and my staff and the staff of other members of the committee, and I am in favor of this amendment and certainly hope it will pass.

It is my understanding that each of these projects meet the committee criteria. Those criteria are that it has to be a part of the 5-year defense plan of the Department of Defense. So these are high-priority projects. They must be the highest priority in the State or the base in question. Each one of the projects must be executable in fiscal year 1996. It must be consistent with the BRAC process and they must be mission essential.

So this is a list of projects for which the appropriators have already appropriated the money. It fits within the 602B funding allocation, and this would make the authorization committee and the Appropriations Committee in sync as I understand it. So I think that this amendment should be accepted. I hope it will be accepted.

Mr. THURMOND addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. THURMOND. I understand the distinguished Senator from Arizona (Mr. McCain) will be in a little bit to speak against this amendment. I wanted to make that announcement now.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I just wanted to clarify, if I could, exactly what the amendment is and then make a short statement.

Am I correct, if I could address a question to the chairman or ranking member, either one, this amendment brings up the amount of funds authorized for military construction to the level that we decided to appropriate to last week in the appropriations bill? Is that essentially what is being done here?

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, that is correct.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Am I also correct that the level of funding for military construction this year in this bill, the 1996 authorization bill as requested by the administration, was about $2 billion over what was requested and appropriated last year?

Mr. THURMOND. That is correct.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Am I also correct that what we are essentially doing here is authorizing what the House has already appropriated, or the House appropriation/authorization provides, and that is about $500 million more than the administration request?

Mr. THURMOND. They appropriated $500 million. We are only appropriating here about $300 million.

Mr. BINGAMAN. We are going above the administration’s request by this amount, is that correct?

Mr. THURMOND. Correct.

Mr. BINGAMAN. I appreciate the Senator’s responses very much.

Mr. President, this is the same vote we cast last week where I indicated my opposition to adding additional money. I think the figures we had last week were that we were adding $474 million to what was requested by the administration, and in addition another $300 million. I tried to persuade my colleagues to not add the additional $300 million and was unsuccessful. We had a vote on it.

I understand that the Senate supports the amendment that the Senator from South Carolina is offering here, and I will not ask for a rollcall vote, but I would like the record to show that I oppose the amendment and have me recorded in opposition at the time this is voted by voice.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, Senator McCaiin I believe is ready now.

Mr. McCAIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, it is with disappointment that I come to the floor. I do not know where my colleagues have been lately. I do not know if they have been seeing what is being written in the newspapers and editorials all over America about spending too much money on unneeded projects out of defense dollars.

You know what we are running the danger of here? We are running the danger of losing support for defense spending if we keep this up, if we keep spending money on things that we do not need.

If the chairman and the distinguished ranking member of this committee can find me one military leader, one military leader that would come over and say this $228 million is a priority, I would like to meet that person. What they will say, if you ask the military leaders what they need the money for, they will say they need it for depot maintenance; they will say they need it for modernization; they need it for something.

I can give you 20 things, 20 priorities that rank above more military construction.

My colleague from New Mexico last week tried to stop additional military construction money. We got a total of 17 votes, or was it 197 I do not remember. Seventeen votes. It is a little embarrassing to lose a vote by that much. But this is wrong. This is wrong.

I do not understand who we think we are kidding here. We have 54,000 young men, military families today on food stamps—on food stamps—and we are going to build these. Before the subcommittee, of which I am the Chair, the outgoing Commandant of the Marine Corps said the following. He said, yes, we want our military families to live in good housing, but I do not want the widow of a Marine living in a good house when we come to tell her that her husband has been killed because we did not supply him with the right equipment.

That is what the Commandant of the Marine Corps said. What he was saying was that they have a higher priority, they have a number of higher priorities than additional MilCon.

The Senate appropriators added a great deal already, $200 million. In response to the request of the Secretary of Defense that we improve the standard of living and the military housing situation for both married and unmarried military personnel. And we did that and they were pleased.

Then we added another $125 million in the markup. Now we are adding another $228 million. I guess my question to the chairman and ranking member is, how much is enough? How much is enough? I f our friends are frustrated by this, it is because I continuously talk to people in the military who say to me: What are you guys doing adding all this MilCon money? I get that from captains and lieutenants and majors and lieutenant commanders. They say, why is it—we have a depot maintenance backlog of 3 and 4 years, and yet you guys keep adding MilCon money.

I have been around this body long enough to know, Mr. President, where these votes lie.

I have been around this body to know that we would probably get another 17 votes if a recorded vote on this was called for. And I do not particularly feel like putting the body through this drill. But I want to tell you, Mr. President, I want to tell you in all sincerity, more and more and more stories are coming out about defense pork. And the confidence and commitment of the American people for us to spend money on defense where it is truly needed is growing less and less and less. So, I guess—I do not know if the ranking member can answer, the distinguished Senator from Georgia. I would like to ask him. How much is enough? How much MilCon money is enough? But I guess there is not any answer because there may not be enough. Because if there is another billion or couple million, we will probably put it in MilCon.
So that is why I objected to this. I think it is wrong. I think there that are other priorities. Those have been made clear time after time by our military leaders. And we are making a ser-iousteak because the time is going to come when we really need to spend some money. And so I voted against that and we will have lost the confidence of the American people in our ability to spend those funds wisely.
Mr. President, I yield the floor.
Mr. FORD addressed the Chair.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.
Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I hope that my colleague from Arizona will understand that there are some of us that just sincerely disagree with him—and I will be glad to yield to the Senator—that we disagree and sincerely disagree. And so I hope that somehow or other we can look at the defense of our country in another light.
Now, this MilCon as I understand it, met the criteria of the mission essential. It met the criteria of highest priority. And, Mr. President, one of the things we see as we downsize, we must support and improve the position of our Reserve. Our Reserve Guard, those that have 66 Members of this Senate that are members of the National Guard Caucus. When we go back home we see the 130-H’s and see them in Panama or Somalia or Bosnia and those places.
Those are the National Guard. Those are the ones we want to train. These are the people in this MilCon that we are trying to support. So we are trying to strengthen the National Guard and give them the kind of training centers, the ranges, those things that would make them better military personnel.
And I understand that you do not want to go to a fine house and talk to a widow. But I also understand that if you are going to have quality personnel in the military, if you are going to continue to get, keep and recruit high-quality personnel, then we have to have a quality of life for the military personnel. And housing is one of the most important things that you can do.
And so, Mr. President, under this bill we have an appropriated amount. And we voted on that, 80-some odd votes approving this particular amendment.
Now, we want to approve this amendment in the authorization part of the DOD bill. And I think it is only fair that we put it in the authorization now so that we can go on with supporting the quality of life of our military per-soneel, to strengthen the National Guard and the Reserve to meet our highpriority and mission essential.
So I hope vigorously support this amendment as I believe and sincerely believe it is in our best interest in the defense of our country.
I yield the floor.
Mr. GLENN addressed the Chair.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.
Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I am glad that we are using the criteria that we have established in the Readiness Subcommittee on the Armed Services Committee over the last couple of years, the criteria for setting the ground rules for how we move forward on items like this. I must, however, join my friends, Senator MCBAIN and Senator BINGHAM, in their concerns about what we are doing. I recognize fully that we did vote for the approbrials bill last week that had these things in it, but it was done on the contingency, as I understand it, that we pass the authorization. Senator BING-HAM disapproved of it then and wanted to move that money out of that approbrials bill and into contingency operations. And I supported that amendment of that.
Now we have $228 million we seem to have found here. It seems to me that that money would be better spent for what Secretary of Defense Perry has called one of his highest priorities; that is, getting the money to pay for the operations in the Balkans and the other operations that we have going all around the world. So it would lessen the amount they would have to come up in the supplemental one of these days.

The criteria priorities that were established says that if an item is on the FYDP, the 5-year defense plan, that we can move it forward. But one of the hurdles that would have to be jumped would be that one of having it on the 5-year de-fi defense plan. As I understand it, all of these items that are on the proposal for the $288 million expenditure do comply with those criteria being on that plan.

However, to me, we have so many other things that we are contending with this defense budget this year.
We have depot maintenance that is required. We are shortchanging that. We are shortchanging military housing.
We are shortchanging a lot of other things and, in effect, moving these items forward to a higher priority than some of those items. We are moving things forward on what was going to be taken care of somewhere out in the 5-year defense plan.

We are moving all forward basically because of Senate Majority. Members want these things in their districts, as I see it.
And I can appreciate that. I have no quarrel with people wanting things in their particular districts or their particular States. But I just think that we are getting criteria hiatities a little bit out of line when we move things forward on that 5-year defense plan and move them ahead of other requirements that I think are much more pressing than most of the things that this $228 million would be spent for.

So I support the fact that we are using the criteria that has been established. I do not think we are setting our priorities right, though, when we move this $228 million ahead of some of the other priorities where money is more desperately needed in the defense budget than for those items. I realize they have already been put through the appropriations process. But I think they are wrong. And I would follow my friends from Georgia—and this is to be passed on a voice vote—I am not asking for a rollcall vote on this; I do not believe that has been done—but I would follow the lead of Senator BINGAMAN and say, if there is to be a voice vote, it should be with us opposed against it. I know that will be probably a losing effort. But I think that we have to stand up on some of these things. We have established a pattern in the Armed Services Committee of opposing some of these things the last couple of years. And I would want to do the same thing here even though we did pass the appropriations bill a week or so ago. So I would ask that, if there is a voice vote on this, that I be recorded in opposition.
Mr. NUNN addressed the Chair.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia.
Mr. NUNN. I would just like to point out to the Senator from Ohio—and I appreciate his leadership in this area and his remarks—that there are a num-ber of those projects that are family housing projects. There are a number of these projects that are barracks.
There are a number of those projects that was mentioned. That is one of the things we talked about. There are three of these projects that are daycare centers and fitness centers. We are talking about high-quality, priority projects. None of these have been drawn out of the air. As I understand it, all of them are on the 5 Year priority list for the defense plan.
I think people ought to understand, as we hear this talk about waste and so forth, that the reason the military construction additions and garisons that occurr here is because the administration itself has requested a whole lot less money in military construction over the last couple of years because the BRAC process was going on. We now know what happened in BRAC. We did not know that the administration did not know that, when they submitted their defense budget this year or last year. So that defense request, that is going to be the measurement.
If anything is going to be labeled waste that goes over the administration request in military construction, I think that is really a misleading kind of portrayal, because the BRAC process was ongoing when the administration put the budget together. They did not request a number of projects that are now high-priority projects. An awful lot of this money is going to barracks and to housing and to daycare, and to quality-of-life projects. We have one project in the budget here for a World War II facility, a vehicle maintenance and storage complex. It is of World War II vintage. And it does not meet the fire and safety standards. It is in violation. So I think people ought to be very careful and look at this on a project-by-project basis. I know the Senator from Ohio has done that, or will do that. And a lot of this effort here goes directly to the very areas that are a priority.

August 2, 1995 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD Ð SENATE S 11195

Mr. GLENN, Will the Senator yield? Mr. NUNN. Yes. Mr. GLENN. I do not quarrel with the fact that some of the funding in this goes to MiCon projects that are good and under the 5-year plan would be fine. But if we found $228 million to spend, it seems to me if we want to spend that on MiCon projects, we should have gone back to the Defense Department and said, where do you need it most, where are the worst barracks, where are the people living in the most intolerable conditions, and let them prioritize where the greatest needs are.

I submit most of these items were placed back on this agenda and moved ahead on the 5-year plan because of a personal interest of a particular Senator, and this was not done on a priority basis where the greatest needs are in the military. That is my objection to it.

I know that we followed some of the criteria on the 5-year defense plan that we used as one of our criteria. I think if we can find this kind of money, it should be put to use in places where the Pentagon says they need it most, not just in those areas where the Members were getting something back for their particular States.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I want to thank my ranking minority member on the subcommittee because we worked together on this. I want to assure the Senator from South Carolina referred to as a distinguished Senator from Montana, my friend Mr. Burns, I have done a little bit to solve that problem—dormitories, barracks where single military can live. We did not go for officer's quarters. We looked to the enlisted men, what we could do to help the enlisted men and women of this country live a little better.

There is a tremendous backlog. We only do a little bit, but that little bit will help those people concerned.

I have to say, Mr. President, if you are in the military and you want to live and live decently, you are really more concerned about that than some new weapons system. If we are going to have a strong military, one of the things we must have are people who feel good about being part of the military; they have a decent place to live.

So I strongly endorse the remarks made by the chairman of the Military Construction Subcommittee, the distinguished Senator from Montana, my friend Mr. Burns, I have done a great job on this subcommittee.

As he has said, each project meets strict criteria. First, these projects are all mission essential.

Second, each of these projects has already been programmed in the Department's out-year budget.

Third, a construction site has been selected for each of these projects, not by members of the subcommittee, not by members of the committee, but by the military.

Fourth, each project is considered by the base commander as their highest priority, not a priority, but their highest priority.

And fifth, each of these projects can be funded in this 1996 fiscal year.

As I have said on the floor in the past, I do not think anyone would consider the chairman of the Armed Services Committee, the senior Senator from South Carolina, as a big spender. I have never heard the senior Senator from South Carolina referred to as a big spender. I do not know of anyone in the history of the U.S. Senate that has military spending as their concern. I am watching how the money of this country is spent than the Senator from South Carolina, the sponsor of this amendment. And probably running a close

Then Dr. Perry, when we talked to him, the Secretary of Defense, said, "I have a new housing initiative, but give me a little money and I can live in the private sector.''

He wants a pilot program on that to see if we can get off-base housing for some of our married personnel. We gave that to Dr. Perry because it is very high on his priority list.

He said maybe we can double the availability of housing that we have. So we are expanding from Nevada and I, when we had the hearings and our staffs got together—and there has been nobody better to work with on this committee in trying to prioritize what we do with this money than Senator Reid—we know that the BRAC has taken a lot more money out of MiCon than we first thought it ever would, because of the environmental cleanup. We are not through that yet. In fact, we do not realize what the bottom line is going to be on that or what the costs are going to be on these bases that are being closed and bases are being realigned, before those bases become available and can be moved into the private sector, because right now they have no value to us at all until we complete the mission of environmental cleanup.

So when we look at the totality of what we have, the dollars are very well invested and all meet the criteria that was set forth by the Armed Services Committee.

I want to thank the Armed Services Committee, because they have done an excellent job in setting priorities on this particular piece of legislation.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

Mr. REID addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I appreciate the kind comments of the chairman of the subcommittee, the junior Senator from Montana.

I support this amendment that has been offered by the chairman of the Armed Services Committee. Mr. President, this conforms the military construction projects in the authorization bill to those already approved by the Senate in the military construction appropriations bill. I am a cosponsor of this amendment and hope the Senate will support it as strongly as it did, an identical provision, by a vote of 77 to 18 a week or so ago when we considered the military construction appropriations bill.

Mr. President, these projects are critical, worthy, well-scrubbed, quality-of-life projects which are needed in this era of an all-volunteer force. The chairman of the subcommittee very well outlined how our military force has changed. We depend much more today on our Reserve and Guard component, as we should. Any suggestion, as indicated by the senior Senator from Ohio in his remarks just a short time ago, that military housing is shortchanged is certainly true. That is what we are trying to rectify partially in this bill, and this amendment will allow us to do that.

Military housing has been shortchanged. I agree with the Senator from Ohio. We built many homes for the emergency during the Second World War. Those homes were to last for 5 years, 10 years at the most. People are still living in them after 50 years.

In many places, the military cannot live in the houses people to live in, even in some of them are so bad they cannot live in them with their families, and at other times they just do not exist. So they have to live off base. Because housing is so expensive, they have to go on food stamps. One out of every 10 or 15 of our military is on food stamps. Why? Because housing is so outrageously expensive, they have no choice.

What the chairman of the subcommittee did and the ranking member did was identify places where单 military can live. We did not go for officer's quarters. We looked to the enlisted man, what we could do to help the enlisted men and women of this country live a little better.

There is a tremendous backlog. We only do a little bit, but that little bit will help those people concerned.

I have to say, Mr. President, if you are in the military and you want to live and live decently, you are really more concerned about that than some new weapons system. If we are going to have a strong military, one of the things we must have are people who feel good about being part of the military; they have a decent place to live.

So I strongly endorse the remarks made by the chairman of the Military Construction Subcommittee, the distinguished Senator from Montana, my friend Mr. Burns, I have done a great job on this subcommittee.

As he has said, each project meets strict criteria. First, these projects are all mission essential.

Second, each of these projects has already been programmed in the Department's out-year budget.

Third, a construction site has been selected for each of these projects, not by members of the subcommittee, not by members of the committee, but by the military.

Fourth, each project is considered by the base commander as their highest priority, not a priority, but their highest priority.

And fifth, each of these projects can be funded in this 1996 fiscal year.

As I have said on the floor in the past, I do not think anyone would consider the chairman of the Armed Services Committee, the senior Senator from South Carolina, as a big spender. I have never heard the senior Senator from South Carolina referred to as a big spender. I do not know of anyone in the history of the U.S. Senate that has military spending as their concern. I am watching how the money of this country is spent than the Senator from South Carolina, the sponsor of this amendment. And probably running a close
The amendment helps emphasize the importance of housing for our military families. This amendment replaces housing that suffers. Some places have suffered more than 50 years of neglect; they were built around the Second World War as temporary structures, built just for that war era.

It was not for the Second World War, not for Korea, not for Vietnam, not the cold war, but for the war that we are now in. And though that Second World War is long since gone, our military personnel continue to survive in these outdated residences. These projects are not budget busters. Each Senator should understand that the Military Construction Subcommittee was totally within our 602(b) allocation. Every penny was within the 602(b) allocation. It is just this simple. The committee evaluates rather than the Pentagon.

The budget approved by the Department of Defense has been, once again, as in past years, neglected, and I use that word pointedly to address the military construction needs of the National Guard. It is $182 million for guard and reserve construction, as compared to $574 million appropriated just last year. When approved, this amendment will authorize 20 percent less than last year, some $452 million.

Once again, I emphasize this amendment addresses the long, overlooked quality of life initiative, particularly. Mr. President, in family housing and barracks, the initiative making up nearly one-third of the total military construction bill, is an area of concern. As the senior Senator from Ohio said, military housing is usually short-changed. We recognize that. That is why a third of what we are talking about here goes to military housing.

Mr. President, we need more, and the way it should be, but that is the way it is.

The guard and reserve deserve more than what the Pentagon and administration requested in this budget and in budgets in the past. When the going gets tough and there is a potential crisis on the horizon, the guard and reserve are called. I recently received a call from a friend who is a major in the Nevada National Guard. This man left his business during the gulf crisis to serve his country for 1 year. He was a combat veteran from Vietnam. He wanted to go to combat again in Iraq. They would not let him do it. They needed his service in the Pentagon. He has now been asked to go to Germany because the Army cannot find a replacement in our country. That is what the guard and reserve are all about. They deserve more than what the administration and Pentagon requested in this budget. My friend, Maj. Evan Wallot, is debating in his own mind whether he is going to go to Germany. We in Congress are traditionally forced into the position of putting the priorities into a better balance—I am glad we have done that—which means adding needed funds to projects for the guard and reserve. These funds are for nothing less than the quality of life.

We are forfeiting the future.

I cannot speak to the portion of the military construction budget that goes to fund other items. I know we have infrastructure and other maintenance problems throughout the military. I cannot speak to that, but I can speak to the portion that goes to the housing.

I am pleased that the committee has designated this as a priority. I am pleased they have adopted the criteria established by the Senate Armed Services Committee for evaluating these needs. I have had a number of discussions with the chairman of the MilCon Appropriations Subcommittee, and he has outlined for me that they have faithfully followed the criteria and the recommendations to try to get at some of the worst housing on a priority basis.

To the extent that we can accelerate some funding for this crucial area, I think we ought to do that. I am supportive of this particular effort. There is a housing initiative that has been undertaken by the Department. We granted some new authority for that to the Department of Defense.

Passage of this authorization bill and acceptable conference of the item will provide the Department of Defense with needed new authority to privatize some of this construction and maintenance effort, rebuilding efforts, and renovation effort. That is necessary if we are ever going to provide the kind of housing initiatives that have been undertaken by the Department of Defense with both the inside task force group and an outside task force group headed by former Secretary of the Army John Marsh, a two-pronged effort to try to deal with a very significant problem that exists today in our armed services.

The combination of the military construction funds that are utilized now for building new and renovating military family housing and barracks housing and the initiative that has been undertaken by the Department of Defense with both the inside task force group and an outside task force group headed by former Secretary of the Army John Marsh, a two-pronged effort to try to deal with a very significant problem that exists today in our armed services.

We have directed considerable funds to a number of tactical systems, to modernization, to readiness. If we had more, we could direct more. We wish we had more.

We cannot continue to defer the construction of housing and the renovation of housing for our military personnel and claim that we are providing the necessary quality of life that the military personnel and their families, that will attract the kind of people we want for our military. We cannot continue to do that. We are forfeiting the future.

We have postponed this now for more than a decade. It is time we undertook this project. I am thankful for the work by the chairman and the ranking member of the Appropriations Subcommittee. I hope that we can successfully move this forward as we attempt to finalize the legislation on this effort.

I yield the floor.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I just want to remind the Senate that the House already passed $500 million for these facilities. In this amendment we are asking only for $228 million. The defense appropriations has approved this amount already.

We are ready to vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further discussion? If there is no further discussion, the question is on agreeing to amendment number 2084, offered by the Senator from South Carolina.

The amendment (No. 2084) was agreed to.

Mr. THURMOND. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. COATS. I move to table the motion.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 2085

(Purpose: To exclude the Associate Director of Central Intelligence for Military Support from grade limitations applicable to members of the Armed Forces)

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask it be reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senate from Georgia [Mr. Nunn], proposes an amendment numbered 2085.

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 403, between lines 16 and 17, insert the following:

SEC. 1095. ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR OF CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE FOR MILITARY SUPPORT.

Section 102 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 403) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(e) In the event that neither the Director nor Deputy Director of Central Intelligence is a commissioned officer of the Armed Forces, a commissioned officer of the Armed Forces appointed to the position of Associate Director of Central Intelligence for Military Support, while serving in such position, shall not be counted against the numbers and percentages of commissioned officers of the rank and grade of such officer authorized for the Armed Forces of which such officer is a member.";

Mr. NUNN. This amendment to the National Security Act of 1947 provides, in the event neither the director or deputy director of Central Intelligence is a commissioned officer of the Armed Forces, a commissioned officer of the Armed Forces appointed to the position of associate director of Central Intelligence for Military Support, while serving in such position, shall not be counted against the numbers and percentages of commissioned officers of the rank and grade of such officer authorized for the Armed Forces of which such officer is a member.

At the present time, neither the Director nor Deputy Director of the CIA is a commissioned officer. At the same time, an important new position of Associate Director of the CIA for Military Support is being created. The incumbent of the new position, who will be a three-star admiral, would serve as the principal advisor to the Director and Deputy Director of the CIA on military issues, with particular emphasis on Intelligence Community support for military forces and operations. This will include serving as liaison between the Intelligence Community and senior military officers of the Joint Staff and the unified combatant commands; evaluating the adequacy of intelligence support for all military purposes, including operations, training, and weaponization; reviewing intelligence resources in the light of military needs; representing the Director of Central Intelligence on various boards and interagency groups established for crises and issues that potentially involve the deployment of U.S. military forces; and serving as the Director’s principal liaison with foreign military organizations.

This new position will be of critical importance under the circumstances we have now, neither the Director nor Deputy Director of CIA are commissioned officers. However, because of Congressionally mandated grade limitations, the Navy, which will be providing the 3-star officer for this position, does not have a 3-star number available and has had to borrow a number from the Army. The Army will need that number in a couple of months.

This amendment, by enabling the assignment of a three-star officer without counting against that officer’s Armed Forces, would facilitate the performance of this critically important function at times when, as at present, neither the Director nor Deputy Director of CIA is a commissioned officer.

What this amendment does, since there is no military officer either as director or deputy director, it simply shifts over and allows this exemption on counting against the officers in the military services to apply to the new position, which is the associate director for military support.

This is a new position. It will carry out the spirit of what we had done in the past with this exemption.
I believe this amendment is acceptable to both sides. I hope it would be supported.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, we have no objection to this amendment. It will make it possible for one qualified service military officer to be assigned to the CIA without counting against the limit on senior officers within the Department of Defense.

I join the distinguished Senator from Georgia in supporting this amendment and urge its adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further discussion, the question is on agreeing to the amendment numbered 2085, offered by the Senator from Georgia.

The amendment (No. 2085) was agreed to.

Mr. NUNN. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. THURMOND. I move to table the motion.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 2086

(Purpose: To authorize a land conveyance, Naval Surface Warfare Center, Memphis, TN)

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, on behalf of Senator Thompson, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. THURMOND] for Mr. THOMPSON, proposes an amendment numbered 2086.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

SEC. 283L. LAND CONVEYANCE, NAVAL SURFACE WARFARE CENTER, MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE.

(a) AUTHORITY TO CONVEY.—The Secretary of the Navy may convey to the Memphis and Shelby County Port Commission, Memphis, Tennessee (in this section referred to as the "Port"), all right, title, and interest of the United States (in this section referred to as the "Property") to be acquired in accordance with the provisions of the Land Exchange Agreement between the United States of America and the Memphis and Shelby County Port Commission, Memphis, Tennessee.

(b) DETERMINATION OF FAIR MARKET VALUE.—The Secretary shall determine the fair market value of the real property to be conveyed under subsection (a) and of the easement to be granted under subsection (b)(1). Such determinations shall be final.

(c) CONDITION OF CONVEYANCE.—The conveyance authorized by subsection (a) shall be subject to the provisions of the Land Exchange Agreement between the United States and the Memphis and Shelby County Port Commission, Memphis, Tennessee.

(d) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage and legal description of the real property to be conveyed under subsection (a) and the easement to be granted under subsection (b)(1) shall be determined by surveys satisfactory to the Secretary. The cost of the surveys shall be borne by the Port.

(e) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance authorized by subsection (a) and the easement granted under subsection (b)(1), as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

Mr. THURMOND. The committee has reviewed the amendment. It provides for the exchange of property at fair market value, which ensures that the Federal Government is fully compensated.

The amendment appears to be in the best interest of the Navy and the communities.

I recommend approval of the amendment.

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, this amendment is supported by the Department of Navy.

I have a letter dated July 28 from the principal deputy of the Department of Navy, Office of the Assistant Secretary, and I ask it be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
OFFICE OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY,

DEAR SENATOR THURMOND: Based on the inquiries from your staff, this is to advise you that the Department of the Navy would support the proposed legislation pertaining to a proposed land agreement involving the Naval Surface Warfare Center, Memphis Detachment and Memphis and Shelby County Port Commission. The property is located at Presidents Island, Memphis, Tennessee.

The proposed legislation will provide a buffer zone between the river and the Caviton Channel facility, which will increase mission efficiency. In addition, the Navy has no immediate need for the crane which if properly maintained in operable condition will be of additional interest to Memphis and Shelby County. The Navy will receive 100 acres of land to act as a security and acoustic buffer zone for its Naval Service Warfare Center in Memphis. In return, the port will obtain from the Navy a 1,250-ton mobile crane for the facility. The crane will increase the Port's capabilities and provide a new waterfront industry to Memphis and Shelby County.

This is something the Navy wants and the Port of Memphis and others in the community want. Local officials say it will bring new industry and more jobs to the Memphis area. As this is beneficial for both sides and there are no new costs involved, I urge adoption of this amendment.

Mr. NUNN. I urge approval of the amendment.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 2086) was agreed to.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. NUNN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COATS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. COATS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for the transaction of routine morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 5 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

POM-267. A joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Nevada; to the Congressional Delegation.''

United States House of Representatives and Senate of the United States of America:

WHEREAS, the 68th session of the Nevada Legislature has convened in regular session on October 1, 1995, for the Conservation Biology of Rangelands Research Unit of the Agricultural Research Service, USDA, in the State of Nevada; and

WHEREAS, the closing of this Unit will have severe impacts on the management and restoration of rangelands in Nevada and adjacent intermountain states; and

WHEREAS, this Unit has been consistently rated as one of the most productive in the nation per dollar spent per scientist, which is attributed to the frugal, appropriate and productive use of federal money; and

WHEREAS, Nevada receives less than 1 percent of the funds expended for agricultural research in the western states; and

WHEREAS, the Conservation Biology of Rangelands Research Unit’s research on both prevention and restoring burned vegetation is essential to this state because wildfires cost the residents of the State of Nevada millions of dollars annually for suppression, and vast losses of livestock, wildlife, habitat, watershed cover, private property and on occasion the loss of human lives; and

WHEREAS, research on the replacement of, and biological suppression of, cheatgrass has great ecological and economic significance to Nevada because cheatgrass has increased in dominance from less than 1 percent to nearly 25 percent on 19,000,000 acres of sagebrush rangelands during the last 30 years, with the invasion greatly increasing the chances of ignition, rate of spread and the length of the wildfire season; and

WHEREAS, this unit is the only research organization in the western United States dedicated to weed control and the experimental management of the weed control of all whitetop (Lepidium latifolium), potentially the most biologically and economically significant weed in Nevada’s meadows and croplands; and

WHEREAS, the Unit’s research on adapted plant material, seedbed preparation and seeding practices for arid and disturbed lands is important to Nevada because mining reclamation is critical to the mining industry, which in turn is critical to the economy of Nevada; and

WHEREAS, the Unit’s research in general is critically important to Nevada because it provides a communications link between the users of Nevada’s wildlands and the concerned environmental, scientific community and because maintenance of biological diversity is a major scientific and environmental issue Nevada; and

WHEREAS, without the Conservation Biology of Rangelands Research Unit, Nevada would become the only significant agricultural state in the United States that does not have an Agricultural Research Service research unit; and

WHEREAS, there are no existing research units capable of filling the loss created by closing the Nevada unit: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly and Senate of the State of Nevada, jointly, That the members of the 68th session of the Nevada Legislature do hereby urge the Secretary of Agriculture to maintain funding in the fiscal year beginning on October 1, 1995, for the Conservation Biology of Rangelands Research Unit of the Agricultural Research Service, USDA, in the State of Nevada; and be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the Assembly prepare and transmit a copy of this Resolution to the Mayor of the City of Carson City, the Mayor of the City of Reno, the Mayor of the City of Las Vegas, the Mayor of the City of Henderson, the Mayor of the City of Sparks, the Mayor of the City of Elko and all other cities and counties in the State of Nevada; and be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the Assembly prepare and transmit a copy of this Resolution to the Secretary of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, the Subcommittee on Agriculture, Rural Development and Related Agencies of the Senate Appropriations Committee, the House Appropriations Committee and the House Subcommittee on Agricultural Appropriations and each member of the Nevada Congressional Delegation; and be it further

Resolved, That this resolution becomes effective upon passage and approval

POM-268. A resolution adopted by the Greater Homestead/Florida City Chamber of Commerce of the City of Homestead, Florida relative to Homestead Air Reserve Base; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

POM-269. A resolution adopted by the City and County of Denver, Colorado relative to securities; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mrs. BOXER (for herself and Mr. Grassley):

S. 1102. A bill to extend title 10, United States Code, to make reimbursement of defense contractors for costs of losses due to fire or natural disaster at the expense of insurance providers under the Servicemen’s Group Insurance, Federal Employees’ Group Life Insurance, and Federal Employees’ Group Health Insurance Programs; to the Committee on Armed Services.
Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I rise to introduce legislation that will cap taxpayer reimbursement for the salaries of defense contractor executives at $250,000 per year. This legislation will permanently extend the temporary CAP established in the Fiscal Year 1995 Defense Appropriations Act. I am very pleased to be joined in this effort by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GRASSLEY].

I began investigating this issue after hearing reports of multi-million-dollar bonuses awarded as a result of the Lockheed-Martin Marietta merger. As a result of that merger, $92 million in bonuses will be awarded—$31 million of which will be paid by the taxpayers.

I think it is wrong that corporate executives make so much money at a time when their employees are struggling just to make ends meet. What makes it even worse in this case is that these multi-million-dollar bonuses were given as a reward for a business deal resulting in 12,000 layoffs nationwide.

So the taxpayers buy rich executives $31 million worth of champagne and caviar while defense workers struggle just to feed their families. I think the defense industry employees—in California and across the Nation—are the ones who deserve a bonus. The CEO's and multimillionaire executives are already doing just fine.

As I investigated this issue further, I discovered that the problem was not limited to mergers or bonuses. Top defense industry executives routinely earn more than $1 million per year—sometimes even more than $5 million. And the taxpayers pick up most of the tab.

This legislation sets a $250,000 maximum for compensation that is reimbursable by the taxpayers. It applies to all forms of compensation including bonuses and salary.

It is important to understand that my legislation would do is stop them from passing the check to the taxpayers.

My legislation would add “excessive compensation”—defined as all pay over $250,000 in any fiscal year—to an existing list of expenses that cannot be reimbursed by the taxpayers. Under current law, the Pentagon cannot reimburse contractors for expenses ranging from small items such as concert tickets and alcoholic beverages to large items, like golden parachutes and stock options. My legislation would add compensation in excess of $250,000 to this list.

Congress has studied this issue for a number of years and has noted with increasing concern that executive compensation seems to be spiraling out of control. In last year's DoDappropriations bill, Congress placed a 1-year $250,000 cap on executive compensation. This legislation takes the next logical step—making that cap permanent.

I think it is wrong that corporate executives make so much money at a time when their employees are struggling just to make ends meet. I hope my colleagues will support this bill.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of this bill be inserted in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1103. A bill to extend for 4 years the period of applicability of enrollment mix requirement to certain health maintenance organizations providing services under Dayton Area Health Plan; to the Committee on Finance.

DAYTON AREA HEALTH PLAN LEGISLATION

- Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, today, Senator DeWine and I are introducing legislation which is necessary for the continued operation of the Dayton Area Health Plan.

The Dayton Area Health Plan is a mandatory managed care plan for 24,000 Medicaid recipients in Montgomery County, Ohio, which has been operating very successfully for over 6 years. It emphasizes preventive care and has developed two programs—Baby's Birth Right and Neighbors in Touch—to increase the use of prenatal and after-delivery care. In partnership with the Dayton School Board, it brings HealthCheck physical exams to schoolchildren in Dayton.

Last fall, the Dayton Area Health Plan became the first Medicaid HMO in Ohio to publish a quality score card which assesses the plan’s performance in the important areas of access to care, preventive care, success of medical care, consumer satisfaction, operational efficiencies, and quality assurance survey scores.

The Dayton Area Health Plan is operating under a waiver of the Federal 75/25 enrollment mix requirement for HMO’s—a requirement that for every three Medicaid enrollees a plan must have one non-Medicaid enrollee. The current waiver expires at the end of the year, and the legislation we are introducing today extends it until December 31, 1999. This legislation is supported by the Ohio Department of Human Services, which received a waiver of the 75/25 enrollment mix requirement for HMO’s participating in OhioCare, an 1115 Medicaid waiver program. However, the implementation of OhioCare has been delayed due to concerns about the level of Federal Medicaid funding for fiscal year 1996 and beyond.

The Dayton Area Health Plan has widespread community support and has been increasingly successful in providing high-quality, low-cost medical care to Medicaid recipients in Montgomery County, Ohio. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation which extends the plan’s waiver for 4 years.

DUTY SUSPENSION LEGISLATION

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, I rise to introduce two temporary suspension bills. It is my understanding that they are noncontroversial. I am introducing these on behalf of AgrEvo, a company located in my home State of Delaware, because they will help improve the company’s overall competitive posture by lowering its costs of doing business.

While I recognize that it is exceedingly difficult to enact temporary duty suspensions, the administration has authority to proclaim certain tariff reductions in the context of additional progress in the WTO to harmonize chemical tariffs at lower levels. I urge the administration to achieve such progress, particularly through expanding the participation of other countries in the WTO’s chemical tariff harmonization agreement. This would allow the administration to address growing demands for new duty suspensions on chemical products by utilizing existing tariff proclamation authority.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE S 11203

August 2, 1995

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1995.

By Mr. D’AMATO (for himself and Mr. MOYNIHAN):

S. 1106. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide the same insurance reserve treatment to financial guaranty insurance as applies to mortgage guaranty insurance, lease guaranty insurance, and tax-exempt bond insurance; to the Committee on Finance.

THE FINANCIAL GUARANTY INSURANCE ACT OF 1995

Mr. D’AMATO. Mr. President, today my distinguished colleague, Senator MOYNIHAN, and I are introducing legislation to amend Section 832(e) of the Internal Revenue Code to extend the scope of its provisions to general financial guaranty insurance.

Financial guaranty insurance, commonly called bond insurance, is an insurance contract that guarantees timely payment of principal and interest when due. The bond insurance contract generally provides that, in the event of a default by an insured issuer, principal and interest will be paid to the bond holder as originally scheduled.

Originally enacted in 1967, currently, Section 832(e) applies to underwriters of mortgage guaranty insurance, lease guaranty insurance, and state and local tax-exempt bond insurance. Congress enacted Section 832(e) to alleviate the significant drain on insurance providers’ working capital that State financial regulations place on those firms. Under Section 832(e), a company writing mortgage guaranty insurance, lease guaranty insurance and tax-exempt bond insurance may deduct, for Federal income tax purposes, amounts required by state law to be set aside in a reserve for losses resulting from adverse events. The deduction cannot exceed the lesser of, first, the company’s taxable income or, second, 50 percent of the premiums earned on such guaranty contracts during the taxable year.

Furthermore, the deduction is available only to the extent that the taxpayer purchases non-interest-bearing tax and loss bonds equal to the tax savings attributable to the deduction. The taxpayer insurance company may redeem such bonds only as and when it restores to the issuer limited deduction for reserves. Reserves are restored to income as and when they are applied, according to state regulations, to cover losses, or to the extent that the company has a net operating loss in some subsequent year. In addition, the reserve deduction taken in any particular year must be fully restored to income by the end of the 10th subsequent year. For the tax-exempt bond insurance, this period is increased to 20 years.

Mr. President, our proposed legislation would expand the scope of Section 832(e) to include general financial guaranty insurance. This reflects the fact that the guaranty industry has expanded, and now provides other insurance guaranty instruments not offered at the time Section 832(e) was enacted. These new guaranties are regulated by the same State financial regulations that apply to insurance guaranties currently covered by Section 832(e); producing the same extraordinary tax burden that existed for earlier guaranty insurance instruments. Thus, the proposed legislation constitutes a sensible modification to the Code in the context of new forms of bond insurance, and does so in a way which both Congress and Treasury have previously found acceptable.

This bill would allow those insurance companies which are writing lease guarantee insurance and insurance guaranteeing the debt service of municipal bond issues, for example, obligations the interest on which is excludable from gross income under Section 103 of the Code, to deduct additions to contingency reserves in accordance with the current treatment of such additions for mortgage guaranty insurance under Section 832(e).

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

By Mr. DASCHLE (for himself, Mr. SIMON, Ms. MOSELEY-BRAUN, Mr. LEAHY, and Mr. PRESSLER):

S. 1107. A bill to extend COBRA continuation coverage to retirees and their dependents, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

THE RETIREE CONTINUATION COVERAGE ACT OF 1995

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, in March I introduced a bill to address a problem brought to my attention by the retirees of the John Morrell meatpackaging plant in Sioux Falls. Unfortunately, the situation has deteriorated in recent months and I feel that a new bill is needed to address the issues raised by those retirees and to protect future retirees from being placed in a similar predicament.

Last January more than 3,000 retirees of the Morrell Co. in Sioux Falls and around the country found out that their health benefits were being terminated by their former employer.

With just a week’s notice, these retirees, many of whom had accepted lower pensions in return for the promise of retiree health benefits, were suddenly faced with the prospect of losing the benefits that they had assumed would be available for them and their spouses during their retirement years.

The bill I introduced in March would have required employers to continue providing retiree health benefits while a cancellation of coverage was being challenged in court. However, the Supreme Court recently refused to hear the Morrell case, leaving this group no possibility of a judicial remedy for their problem.

Meanwhile, thousands of retirees and their families are left stranded without health coverage.

I am introducing a bill today to allow early retirees and their dependents who lost their health benefits to purchase continuing group insurance coverage until they become eligible for Medicare. This legislation would not prohibit employers from modifying their retiree health plans to implement cost-savings measures, such as utilization review or managed care. But it would protect retirees from suddenly losing their employer-sponsored health benefits. This legislation simply extends COBRA coverage to early retirees and their dependents whose employer-sponsored health care benefits are terminated or substantially reduced. There would be no direct cost to the employer.

COBRA currently requires employers to offer temporary continuing health coverage for employees who leave their jobs. The employee is responsible for the entire cost of the premium, but is able to remain in the group policy, thus benefiting from lower group rates. This legislation would extend the COBRA law to cover early retirees and their families, until they are eligible for Medicare.

This bill would help secure health coverage for the most vulnerable retirees, at no cost to the Federal Government. It simply allows those workers who may not be able to purchase coverage elsewhere to take advantage of their former employer’s lower group insurance rate.

These retirees deserve this kind of health security.

Workers often give up larger pensions and other benefits in exchange for health benefits. It never occurs to these employees that their benefits could be taken away, with no increase in their pensions or other benefits to compensate for the loss.

Early retirees have often been with the same company for decades, perhaps all of their adult lives. They rightfully believe that a company they help build will reward their loyalty, honesty and hard work.

When these hard-working people abruptly lose their health coverage, they suddenly have to worry that high medical costs will impoverish them or force them to rely on their children or the Government for financial help. Each day without insurance they live in fear of illness and injury.

In this particular case, Morrell retirees received a simple, yet unexpected, letter stating their health insurance plan was being terminated, effective midnight, January 31, 1995—only a week later. The benefits being terminated, the letter said, included all hospital, major medical and prescription drug coverage, Medicare supplemental insurance, vision care, and life insurance coverage.

For these retirees under 65, this action poses a particular problem. While Morrell did give them the option of paying for their own coverage for up to 1 year, for many that is simply not enough time. For example, if a retiree leaves the company at age 59, he or she will not be eligible for Medicare for 6 years; the original offer from the company could have left him or her without coverage for 5 years.

This is why many Morrell retirees; but there are thousands of other workers who could also benefit from this legislation. A 1994 Foster-Higgins report found that two-thirds of American companies surveyed had plans to reduce retiree health benefits or to shift more costs to retirees in the coming years, and 2 percent said that they were actually eliminating benefits altogether.

The presence of preexisting conditions can make it impossible for elderly Americans to purchase health insurance; insurers may refuse to enroll people who expect to be heavy users or they may price the policies so that they are simply unaffordable. Consequently, early retirees with medical conditions, such as heart disease and diabetes, need to be continuously covered until they become eligible for Medicare.

This bill is not a cure, but it is a step in the right direction. It will help secure coverage for early retirees who cannot afford to buy an individual insurance policy. Under this legislation, Morrell retirees could be paying a premium of $500 a month per couple. While this is a lot of money for retirees on limited incomes, it is substantially less than if they purchased coverage on their own. And, of course, many are currently unable to purchase insurance at any price.

As I have said repeatedly, the long-run solution is comprehensive health reform that guarantees every American citizen—and every American employer—access to affordable health care.

I have fought over the years for comprehensive health reform and was deeply disappointed when the 103d Congress was unable to pass legislation addressing our nation's health care needs. This is America's most serious problem. If we had passed health reform, the Morrell retirees I have spoken about today would not face this loss of their health benefits.

Clearly, the problems we talked about in last year's health reform debate did not solve themselves when the session ended.

But some of these problems, like the one Mr. Morrell retirees face, cannot wait for the long-run.

I hope we can pass this measure expeditiously, to help alleviate the harshest aspects of the injustice created by the Morrell Co. decision to eliminate retiree health benefits—and so that others are helped as they face the problem Morrell retirees are grappling with today.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill be printed in the Record, and that no objec-

SEC. 3. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act shall take effect as if enacted on January 1, 1995.

By Mr. SMITH:

S. 1108. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow individuals to designate that up to 10 percent of their income tax liability be used to reduce the national debt, and to require spending reductions equal to the amounts so designated.

THE TAXPAYER DEBT BUY-DOWN ACT

Mr. SMITH, Mr. President, today I am reintroducing the Taxpayer Debt Buy-Down Act. The proposal is specifically designed to give taxpayers an unprecedented role in the budget process and provide a mechanism for an annual national referendum on Federal spending. If Congress fails to reign in Federal spending, this bill allows the taxpayers of America to speak out every April 15.

The proposal would amend the IRS Code to allow taxpayers the opportunity to voluntarily designate up to 10 percent of their income tax liability for the purpose of debt reduction. All moneys designated would be placed in a debt reduction account established in the Department of the Treasury, and used to retire the public debt, except obligations held by the Social Security trust fund, the civil service, and military retirement funds.

On October 1, the Treasury Department would be required to estimate the amount designated through the checkoff. Congress would then have until September 30 of the following year to make the necessary cuts in Federal spending. The Debt Buy-Down Act does not micromanage the spending cuts. Congress retains complete authority to cut any Federal spending program it deems appropriate.
To coordinate this measure and the efforts to balance the budget, the checkoff will apply only if the amount designated is greater than the cuts that Congress has already implemented. For example, if Congress passes a mandatory bill providing $50 billion in spending cuts in 1998, and the checkoff in 1998 totals $60 billion, the $50 billion will count toward the checkoff and only an additional $10 billion will need to be cut.

If Congress fails to enact spending reductions to meet the amount designated by the taxpayers, an across-the-board sequester would occur of all accounts except the Social Security retirement benefits, interest of the debt, deposit insurance accounts and contractual obligations of the Federal Government. If Congress enacted only half of the necessary cuts, the sequester would ensure the other half. The Debt Buy-Down account would hold Congress's feet to the fire.

Although nothing in the legislation required by the act would be permanent—the cuts would permanently reduce the spending baseline. For example, if $1 billion of cuts are required and Congress eliminates a $1 billion program in the Department of Education, that program would be gone forever. If Congress later decided that they needed the program, they would be required to cut $1 billion elsewhere. Although nothing in the legislation would prohibit Congress from increasing those taxes could not be used to substitute for the spending reductions designated by taxpayers.

Mr. President, we cannot allow the current talk about balanced budgets to deter us from our ultimate goal—elimination of the $4.9 trillion national debt. Yes, we must balance the budget first, and this proposal serves as a friendly enforcement mechanism to do just that. Balancing the budget, however, does not guarantee that we will begin to build a national savings fund. Our budget is balanced by the year 2002 as required by the congressional budget resolution, what happens next?

Under current law, the answer is: nothing. There is no requirement that Congress begin to attack the debt problem. This bill would change that. The American people would be allowed to tell us exactly how much debt reduction they believe is necessary and Congress would be required to act. That is the way our system of government is supposed to work.

Mr. President, the Taxpayer Debt Buy-Down Act was endorsed by then-President Bush at the 1992 Republican Convention. The House companion legislation, H.R. 429, is sponsored by Congressman Bob Walker, and passed the House earlier this year as part of the Contract With America.

The legislation is supported by the National Federation of Independent Business [NFIB], Americans for a Balanced Budget, Americans for Tax Reform, The American Legislative Exchange Council [ALEC], The Council for Citizens Against Government Waste, Association of Concerned Taxpayers for a Fair and Simple Tax, the Institute for the Research on the Economics of Taxation [IRET], the National Taxpayers Union [NTU], and the U.S. Business and Industrial Council.

I urge my colleagues to support the Taxpayer Debt Buy-Down Act. It is an innovative proposal that makes "We the People" an integral part of the Federal budget process.

By Mr. CAMPBELL: S. 1109. A bill to direct the Secretary of the Interior to convey the Collbran reclamation project, Colorado, to the Ute Water Conservancy District and the Collbran Conservancy District, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

THE COLLBRAN RECLAMATION PROJECT LEGISLATION

- Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, today I am joined by my colleague from Colorado, Senator Brown, in introducing legislation to transfer the Collbran project from the Federal Government to its real owners—the people who have paid for and own the water produced by this project.

This legislation would complete the repayment to the American people the amounts owed by the users of this project. Because this legislation involves a substantial payment from the Collbran and Ute Water Conservancy Districts to Federal Treasurer, this legislation helps us reduce the Federal deficit by a small, but important, amount.

Millions of people live, work, and play in Colorado and the other Western States. People are drawn to the rural areas of the West because these communities offer an attractive mix of economic opportunity and access to world-class natural resources. This high quality of life would not exist if it were not for the water and power provided from Federal projects constructed under the 1902 Reclamation Act.

The original vision of the Reclamation Act was that Congress would facilitate the construction of locally sponsored and locally controlled projects. Congress achieved this result by providing financing for those projects, subject to the requirement that a local entity repay the Federal investment in the irrigation portion of the project, and that power users in the West repay the remaining costs of the project.

Congress explicitly stated the water rights for reclamation projects were to be obtained in accordance with State law, and Federal courts have consistently ruled that the real owners of the water from reclamation projects are the people who put the water to beneficial use. The important point is that Federal ownership of these projects was always for the purpose of ensuring that the Federal investment was repaid; the Federal partnership in reclamation of the west was never intended to perpetuate Federal control over the use of land and water at the local level.

Water from reclamation projects allowed the development of irrigated agriculture, which provides an important complement to other industries such as mining, metals, and tourism. Power from reclamation projects was and is an important part of extending the benefits of electricity beyond cities to people in the country. In short, the Reclamation Act has achieved its primary goals—development of healthy and stable communities throughout the West.

While there is a continuing obligation to honor previous Federal commitments to complete reclamation projects, it is now time to reassess the Federal involvement in those projects which have been completed. In particular, the Federal Government should not be spending scarce resources on the operation and maintenance of projects when the project beneficiaries may or will repay all of their financial obligations to the United States. In these cases, the Federal Government should transfer the project to the local beneficiaries, subject to the requirement that the project continue to be operated for the purposes for which it was authorized.

The Collbran project meets these criteria. The project was authorized in 1902 for agricultural and municipal purposes, and included a power component. The project provides an important water supply for irrigated lands in the Collbran Conservancy District. In addition, the water released from the project provides an important domestic water supply for over 55,000 people in the Grand Valley served by the Ute Water Conservancy District. This legislation requires the districts to pay the net present value of the revenues which the United States would otherwise receive from the project, plus a premium of $2,000,000 and a significant contribution to promote additional protection for the Colorado River ecosystem.

The Federal goals of the project have been attained. It is now appropriate to transfer the project to the districts, with the United States retaining only its commitment to the State of Colorado on recreational facilities. This legislation not only establishes a good precedent for transfer of projects to reduce the Federal debt, but also fulfills the original vision of the 1902 Reclamation Act by ensuring that the project will continue to be used to benefit the people and communities for which it was built.

By Mr. CAMPBELL: S. 1110. A bill to establish guidelines for the designation of national heritage areas, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

THE NATIONAL HERITAGE ACT OF 1995

- Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, I introduce the National Heritage Act of 1995.

Today, most of my colleagues are aware that the opportunity to create... new park units is most difficult in light of the current condition of the National Park System. The Park Service, facing a 37-year backlog in construction funding, a 25-year backlog for land acquisition, and a shortfall of over $866 million for park operation and management, is clearly in trouble.

However, these difficulties are compounded by the growing popularity in Congress to recognize and designate important areas of our country for inclusion in the National Park System. Over the last three decades, the National Park Service has designated over 30 new units of the Park System. These new additions, while meritorious, have added significantly to this huge backlog of funding facing the agency.

It is well known that when you create a new unit, limited fiscal and human resources must be taken away from existing park units. Unfunded and poorly managed parks will only contribute to the continued erosion of the existing unit system. As a result, it can be fairly stated that in our current system new additions can actually hinder rather than enhance the Park Service System.

I am aware of approximately 110 areas throughout the country which have already been introduced in Congress, that may be suitable for inclusion into the Park System as heritage areas. I know of eight areas in my own State of Colorado, that may deserve recognition. However, under the current system, the National Park Service may not be able to afford any new area, no matter how deserved it may be.

Thus, the question of how to lighten this overwhelming load on the Park Service, while maintaining Congress' ability to recognize and protect precious areas of our country's heritage is before us.

I believe that my legislation will provide the solutions to this problem. National Heritage Areas can be created and established as an alternative to the traditional National Park Service designation. This can be accomplished in a very cost effective and efficient method, without creating unnecessary Federal management and expense to the taxpayer.

My bill, when enacted, will encourage appropriate partnerships among Federal agencies, State, and local governments, nonprofit organizations, and the private sector or combinations thereof to conserve and manage these important resources.

This bill will authorize the Secretary of the Interior to provide technical assistance and limited grants to State and local governments, nonprofit organizations, and the private sector or combinations thereof, to conserve and manage these important resources.

Mr. President, most important, this legislation, when enacted, will empower individuals, groups, and organizations to be true partners with the Federal Government. By giving the groups the decisionmaking authority, as well as a share of the fiscal responsibility, to implement the bill to maintain local control and ultimate oversight of the very areas they work so hard to save. Who better to manage our natural and cultural heritage, than those who are already going above and beyond their duties as Americans to preserve, restore, and protect these wonderful areas.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a section-by-section analysis of the legislation be printed in the RECORD for the benefit of my colleagues.

There being no objection, the section-by-section analysis was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS—NATIONAL HERITAGE ACT OF 1995

Section 1 entitles the Act the ‘National Heritage Act of 1995’.

Section 2 sets forth Congressional findings. Section 3 states the purposes of the Act. Section 4 defines terms used in the Act. Section 5(a) establishes a National Heritage Areas Partnership Program within the Department of the Interior to promote nationally distinctive natural, historic, scenic, and cultural resources and to provide opportunities for conservation, education, and recreation through recognition of and assistance to areas containing such resources.

Subsection (b) authorizes the Secretary of the Interior in consultation with this Act (1) to evaluate areas nominated under this Act for designation as National Heritage Areas according to criteria established in subsection (c) below, (2) to advise State and local governments and other entities regarding suitable methods of recognizing and conserving thematically and geographically linked natural, historic, and cultural resources and recreational opportunities, and (3) to make grants to units of government and nonprofit organizations to prepare feasibility studies, compacts, and management plans.

Subsection (c) lists the eligibility criteria for designation as a National Heritage Area. Subparagraph (1) requires that the area be an assemblage of natural, historic, cultural, or recreational resources that represent distinctive aspects of American heritage worthy of recognition, conservation, interpretation, and continuing use and that such resources are best managed as such an assemblage, through partnerships among public and private entities.

Subparagraph (2) states that the area shall reflect traditions, customs, beliefs, or ways of life, or some combination thereof, that are a valuable part of the story of the Nation.

Subparagraph (3) states that the area shall provide outstanding opportunities to conserve natural, cultural, historic, or recreational features, or some combination thereof.

Subparagraph (4) states that the area shall provide outstanding recreational and educational opportunities.

Subparagraph (5) states that the area shall have an identifiable theme or themes, and resource important to the theme(s) shall retain integrity that will support interpretation.

Subparagraph (6) states that residents, nonprofit organizations, other entities, and governments within the proposed area shall demonstrate support for designation of the area and appropriate management of the area.

Subparagraph (7) requires that the principal organization and units of government supporting the designation be willing to enter into partnerships to implement the compact for the area.

Subparagraph (8) requires the compact to be consistent with continued economic viability in the affected communities.

Subparagraph (9) requires the consent of local governments and notification of the Secretary for inclusion of private property within the boundaries of the area.

Subsection (d) states that designation of an area may only be made by an Act of Congress, and requires that certain conditions be met prior to designation. An entity requesting designation must submit a feasibility study and compact, and a statement of support from the governor of each state in which the proposed area lies. The Secretary must approve the compact and submit it and the feasibility study to Congress, along with the Secretary's recommendation.

Section 6 describes the feasibility studies, compacts, and management plans. Section (a)(1)(A) indicates that each feasibility study must be prepared with public involvement and include a description of resources and an assessment of their quality, integrity, and public accessibility, the themes represented by such resources, an assessment of impacts on potential partners, units of government and others, boundary description, and identification of a possible management entity for the area if designated.

Subparagraph (2) requires that compacts include a delineation of boundaries for the area, goals and objectives for the area, identification of the management entity, a list of initial partners in preparing the compact and a description of the role of the State(s) in which the proposed National Heritage Area is located. This subsection requires public participation in development of the compact and a reasonable time table for actions noted in the compact and recommendation.

Subparagraph (3) describes the plan for a proposed area. Such plan must take into consideration existing Federal, State, and local plans and include public participation. The plan shall specify existing and potential funding sources for the conservation, management, and development of the area. The plan will also include a resource inventory, policy recommendations for managing resources within the area, an implementation program for the plan by the management entity specified in the compact, an analysis of Federal, State, and local program coordination, and an interpretive plan for the National Heritage Area.

Subsection (b) requires the Secretary to approve or disapprove a compact within 90 days of receipt and directs the Secretary to provide written justification for disapproval of a compact to the submitter.

Section 9(a) outlines the duties of the management entity for a National Heritage Area. Duties include development of a heritage plan to be submitted to the Secretary within three years of designation. This section directs the management entity to provide priority to implementation of actions, goals, and policies set forth in the compact and management plan for the area. The management entity is directed to consider interests of diverse units of government, businesses, private property owners, and nonprofit groups in the geographic area in developing and implementing the plan. The management entity must hold quarterly public meetings regarding plan implementation.
Section 12 authorizes an appropriation of $8,000,000 annually for technical assistance and grants as outlined in section 9(a), and states that technical assistance is suspended if a plan requires more than $8,000,000 annually for technical assistance.

Section 13 prohibits the management entity for a National Heritage Area from using federal funding to acquire real property or an interest in real property.

Section 14 requires the Secretary to submit a report of the status of the National Heritage Areas Program to Congress every 5 years.

Section 15 is a savings clause, preserving existing authorities contained in any law that designates an individual National Heritage Area or Corridor prior to enactment of this Act.

Mr. Hatch. Mr. President, today, I rise with Senator Kennedy to introduce the Biotechnology Patent Protection Act of 1995, S. 1111. This bill is similar to legislation which passed the Senate last year, and is identical to a measure reported by the House Judiciary Committee on June 7.

It is abundantly clear that the current patent law is not adequate to protect our creative American inventors who are on the cutting edge of scientific experimentation. Through the importation of biotechnological research, for example, scientists are using recombinant processes to mass-produce proteins that are useful as human therapeutics.

The potential for unfair foreign competition, however, threatens the capital base of the biotechnology research industry. Clearly, without a protected end product that can be sold or marketed, there is little incentive to invest millions of dollars in biotechnology research.

The Hatch-Kennedy legislation extends patent protection in biotechnology cases to the process if there is a patentable starting product, offering the biotechnology research industry valuable and needed protection.

Specifically, the Biotechnology Patent Protection Act modifies the test for obtaining a process patent by clarifying In Re Durden, 763 F.2d 1406 (Fed. Cir. 1985).

In Durden, the Federal circuit held that the use of a novel and nonobvious starting material with a known chemical process, producing a new and nonobvious product, does not render the process itself patentable. The erroneous application of Durden, a nonbiotechnology process patent case, to biotechnology process patent cases has led to devastating results for the biotechnology industry.

Under the current Patent Code, an inventor may hold a patent and still be unable to bar importation of a product made abroad with the use of the patented material, if the inventor has been unable to obtain patent protection for the process of using such material.

The biotechnology field is particularly vulnerable to abuse under Un fortunately, the naturally occurring human protein was extremely difficult to obtain or produce.

Agen scientists, using recombinant DNA technology and molecular biology, were able to produce an erythropoietin product, for the first time ever.

Agen was able to obtain a patent for the gene encoding and for the host cell, but not for the process of making the product, or for the final product.

With knowledge of Agen's development, Chugai, a Japanese company, began manufacturing a similar protein in Japan using the patented recombinant DNA technology. Placement of genes in host cells is prior art, thus unpatentable, and the end product is a previously known human protein, thus unpatentable.

Agen was without any recourse under our patent law when Chugai imported the erythropoietin product.

The proposed legislation would extend patent protection to the process of making new and nonobvious products. Thus, if a process makes the use of a patentable material, the process, too, will be patentable. The fact that the steps in the process, or most of the materials in the process are otherwise known in the art should not make a difference.

Obviously should be determined with regard to the subject matter as a whole, as the current Patent Code suggests.

S. 1111 will also make our patent law consistent, at least in the field of biotechnology, with the patent examination standards now practiced by the European and Japanese patent offices. American technology and research has been exploited by the legal loophole that can no longer be tolerated.

This bill is identical in substance to last year's Senate legislation, with one exception. This year's bill changes the definition of "biotechnological process" to include the wide range of techniques currently used in the biotechnology industry. New subparagraph 102(b)(3)(A) has been rewritten to cover the enhanced expression of a gene product—via the addition of promoter genes—and gene deletion and inactivation.

We were very disappointed when the Senate bill, which passed last year, died in the House Judiciary Committee. The House version of the bill introduced last year was drafted to address issues broader than biotechnology, with the patent examination standards now practiced by the European and Japanese patent offices. American technology and research has been exploited by the legal loophole that can no longer be tolerated.

This bill is identical in substance to last year's Senate legislation, with one exception. This year's bill changes the definition of "biotechnological process" to include the wide range of techniques currently used in the biotechnology industry. New subparagraph 102(b)(3)(A) has been rewritten to cover the enhanced expression of a gene product—via the addition of promoter genes—and gene deletion and inactivation.

THE ANTI-GUN TRAFFICKING ACT

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, today Senator SIMON and I are introducing legislation, the Anti-Gun Trafficking Act, to reduce interstate gun trafficking by prohibiting bulk purchases of handguns. The bill generally would prohibit the purchase of more than one handgun during any 30-day period.

Mr. President, the United States is suffering from an epidemic of gun violence. Tens of thousands of Americans die every year because of guns, and no communities are safe. Reducing the violence must be a top national priority.

Mr. President, my State of New Jersey has adopted strict controls on guns. We have banned assault weapons, and we have established strict permitting requirements for handgun purchases. Yet the effectiveness of these restrictions is substantially reduced because the controls in other States are far less strict.

Unfortunately, many criminals are making bulk purchases of handguns in States with weak firearm laws and transporting them to other States with tougher laws. New Jersey has helped spread the plague of gun violence nationwide, and there is little that any one State can do about it.

A few years ago, the State of Virginia enacted legislation that was designed to prevent gunrunners from buying large quantities of handguns in Virginia for export to other States. Under the legislation, handgun purchases were limited to one per month.

The Virginia statute has proved very effective in controlling gun trafficking from Virginia. A study by the Center to Prevent Handgun Violence found that for guns purchased after the law’s effective date, there was a 65-percent reduction in the likelihood that a gun traced to a handgun from the Southeast from the Northeast corridor would have originated in Virginia.

Mr. President, Virginia’s experience suggests that a ban on bulk purchases can substantially reduce gunrunning. However, to truly be effective, such a limit must be enacted nationwide. Otherwise, gunrunners simply will move their operations to other States.

The legislation I am introducing today proposes such a nationwide limit.

Under the legislation, an individual other than a licensed firearms dealer generally would be prohibited from purchasing more than one handgun in any 30-day period. Similarly, the bill would make it unlawful for any dealer, importer, or manufacturer to transfer a handgun to any individual who has received a handgun within the last 30 days. Violators would be subject to a fine of up to $5,000 and a prison sentence of up to 1 year.

The legislation would provide an exception in the rare case where a second handgun purchase is necessary because of a threat to the life of the individual or of any member of the individual’s household.

Mr. President, I do not claim that this bill will end all handgun violence. However, it is a reasonable and modest step in the right direction. I also would note that President Clinton has endorsed the adoption of a once-a-month handgun purchase limit.

I hope my colleagues will support the legislation.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the legislation be printed in the Record along with other related materials.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

(b) PENALTY.—Section 924(a) of such title is amended by redesignating the 2nd paragraph (3) as paragraph (4) and by adding at the end the following:

"(7) Whoever knowingly violates section 922(i) by more than 65 imprisoned for not more than 1 year, or both."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this Act shall apply to conduct engaged in on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

VIRGINIA ON GUNS: PLEASE COPY

Virginia's new handgun law won't produce a cease-fire across the state, nor will the Old Dominion benefit the most from the state's one-handgun-per-month limit on firearm purchases. But what it should do—and can do—is more important. As the supporters were saying all along, the gunrunners up and down the East Coast won't have it so easy anymore. It was the state's reputation as the favorite stop-and-shop outlet for concealable firearms along the Atlantic Seaboard that propelled such strong bipartisan votes in Richmond. And it is those votes that should now signal Congress that a federal copy of the Virginia law would be politically possible and immensely popular.

For sure, the NRA will be all over Capitol Hill, warning that one handgun a month is just an immigration into the gunrunning arms trade, and that peace-loving, government-fearing individual. That's what the lobbyists said in Richmond, but Republicans and Democrats—gun owners as well as those who wouldn't touch a firearm—didn't buy it. The lawmakers heard their constituents calling for reasonable ways to curb traffic in weapons that most people feel only in their minds, they read polls showing intense public concern about the ease with which guns could be bought and resold in huge quantities for evil purposes. The legislators also learned that they could infuriate the NRA leaders, enact this measure and survive politically—with strong support from every major law enforcement organization in the country.

Now Virginia's delegation in Congress should spread the word that a federal version of this law would curb the trafficking of handguns on interstate lines from coast to coast. With this reasonable purchase limit—and with passage of the Brady bill to establish a workable waiting period—America, it could begin to start. Like the Virginia law, it imposed a thirty day period.

In response to a growing reputation as a principal supplier of firearms to the illegal market—particularly in the Southeastern United States—Virginia enacted a law (which was implemented July 1, 1993) restricting handgun purchases to one per month per individual. The purpose of this study was to determine whether limiting handgun purchases to one per month would be an effective way to disrupt the illegal movement of firearms across state lines.

Hypothesis

The hypothesis tested was that the odds of tracing a gun, originally acquired in the Southeast region of the United States, to a Virginia gun dealer, if it was recovered in a criminal investigation outside of the region, would be substantially lower for guns purchased after Virginia's one-handgun-a-month law took effect, than for guns purchased prior to implementation of the law.

Methods

The principal analytic method used in this analysis was to estimate the odds ratio for tracing a firearm to a gun dealer in Virginia relative to a gun dealer in the other Southeastern states (as defined by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (BATF)), for guns purchased prior to Virginia's one-handgun-a-month law's effective date compared to guns purchased after the law was enacted. The data, including information about 17,092 East Coast crimes traced to the Southeast, come from the firearms trace database compiled by the BATF.

Results

The hypothesis was substantiated by the data. The odds of tracing a firearm, originally acquired in the Southeast region, to a Virginia gun dealer, and not to a gun dealer in another Southeastern state, were substantially lower for firearms purchased after Virginia's one-handgun-a-month law took effect, than for firearms purchased prior to implementation of the law.

Specifically, for guns recovered: Anywhere in the United States (including Virginia), the odds were reduced by 36%; in the Northeastern United States, the odds were reduced by 66%; in New York, the odds were reduced by 73%; in New Jersey, the odds were reduced by 59%; and in Massachusetts, the odds were reduced by 60%.

Conclusion

Most gun control policies currently advocated in the United States (e.g., licensing, registration and one-gun-a-month) could be described as efforts to limit the supply of guns available in the illegal market. This study provides persuasive evidence that restricting handgun purchases to one per month per individual is an effective means of disrupting the illegal interstate transfer of firearms. Based on the results of this study, Congress should consider enacting a federal version of the Virginia law.
the economic incentive created by the disparities in gun laws among the states—an objective supported by historical evidence. In 1975, South Carolina limited purchases of firearms to one gun in a thirty day period. Prior to enactment of the law, South Carolina was a primary out-of-state source of guns used in crime in New York City. After the passage of the law, South Carolina was no longer a primary source of guns for New York City.10

PURPOSE OF THE STUDY

The objective of this study was to assess the effect of Virginia’s one-gun-a-month law on gun trafficking patterns, particularly along the “Iron Pipeline.”

DATA

The data used in the analysis come from the firearms trace database compiled by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (BATF). Law enforcement agencies can request that the BATF trace a gun which has been recovered in connection with a criminal investigation. BATF staff at the National Tracing Center (NTC) contact the manufacturer of the firearm to identify which wholesaler or retailer received the gun. NTC staff then contact each consecutive dealer who acquired the firearm until the gun is either traced to the most recent owner or, until the gun can be traced no further. There is no requirement that records of gun transfers be maintained by non-gun dealers who sell a firearm. Consequently, the tracing process often ends with the first retail sale of the gun.

As part of the tracing process, information is collected on several variables including the location of the gun dealer or dealer who handled the gun (by state and region); when the gun was purchased; when and where the trace was initiated; and, the manufacturer, model, and caliber of the firearm being traced.

The firearms trace database contained in excess of a half million records pertaining to approximately 206,000 firearms (1989 through 1995). The database contains more records than firearms because two or more traces can be of the same gun, as part of the same criminal investigation. Multiple traces of a particular gun is an indication that the weapon was transferred from federally licensed firearms dealer to another dealer before it went into the hands of an end user. Since 1990, the number of traces conducted each year has more than doubled to approximately 85,000 in 1994.

METHODS

The principal analytic method used in the study was to estimate the odds ratio for tracing a firearm to a gun dealer in Virginia relative to a dealer in the other Southeastern states (as defined by the BATF), for guns purchased prior to Virginia’s one-gun-a-month law’s effect date compared to guns purchased after the law was enacted.

In order to minimize the number of variables, the data were classified by two criteria: (1) where the gun was purchased (from a gun dealer in Virginia or from a dealer in another state in the Southeast region of the country), and (2) when a traced firearm was purchased (before or after implementation of the Virginia law). The odds ratio was calculated by comparing the odds of a gun being traced to a gun dealer in the state of Virginia relative to a dealer in another part of this region, for guns purchased prior to the law’s implementation and for guns purchased after the law took effect.

The Southeast region was identified as the comparison group for Virginia because the region has long been identified as a principal source of out-of-state firearms for the Easter Seaboard.7 In addition to Virginia, the Southeast region includes North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and Tennessee. Only guns traced to a dealer in the Southeast region were incorporated into the analysis. The BATF no longer traces firearms manufactured prior to 1965 without being specifically requested to do so. Results are reported in this analysis only for guns purchased since January 1985. However, a sensitivity analysis was conducted incorporating data for all firearms for which date of purchase information was available. The results of the analysis were essentially unchanged from those of the principal analysis; the conclusions would not change.

The period studied for which there is data after implementation of the law was 20 months long. Consequently, the possibility that seasonal variation in gun trafficking patterns could have affected the results of the analysis was studied. A sensitivity analysis was conducted excluding guns purchased more than one full year after the Virginia law took effect. The results of the sensitivity analysis were essentially different from those of the principal analysis; the conclusions would not change.

Date of purchase information was not available for all guns in the firearms trace data set. The distribution of guns traced to the Southeast region (to gun dealers in Virginia relative to the rest of the region) is similar for the subset of data for which date of purchase information was available (24%), and the subset for which date of purchase information was not available (28%).

The Virginia law pertains to acquisition of handguns by individuals who are not federally licensed firearms dealers. Therefore, the origin of a gun which had been transferred from a dealer in one state to a dealer in a second state was considered to be the last dealer’s location. In other words, if a firearm was transferred from a dealer in Georgia to a dealer in Virginia, who then sold the gun to an individual who was not a licensed dealer, the gun would be considered a Virginia gun. Odds ratios were estimated for traces initiated: (1) anywhere in the United States; (2) the Northeast corridor taken as whole (New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts); and, (3) for each of the Northeast states individually considered. For each iteration, the hypothesis being tested remained the same, and what the results mean: the odds of a gun, purchased after enactment of Virginia’s one-gun-a-month law, being traced to a Virginia gun dealer relative to a gun dealer in another part of the Southeast, were significantly lower than for guns purchased prior to enactment of the law.

A significant reduction in the odds would provide evidence that the Virginia law effectively helped to reduce gun trafficking from the state.

RESULTS

The date a gun was purchased and the date the trace request was made was available for 55,856 (19%) of the guns in the database. Of these guns, 17,082 (30.6%) were traced to a dealer located in the Southeast region. Approximately one in four guns (24%) traced to the Southeast were traced to a Virginia gun dealer.

Cross-tabulations indicate that there is an association between when a firearm was acquired (before or after the Virginia law went into effect) and where it was obtained (either from a Virginia gun dealer or a gun dealer in another state located in the Southeast). Twenty-seven percent of all guns purchased prior to passage of the one-gun-a-month law (including guns recovered in Virginia), which were traced to a gun dealer in the Southeast, were acquired from a Virginia gun dealer. Only 19% of guns purchased after the one-gun-a-month law went into effect and similarly traced to a dealer in the Southeast were acquired in Virginia. In other words, there was a 36% reduction in the likelihood that a traced gun from anywhere in the nation was acquired in Virginia relative to another Southeastern state, for firearms purchased after the one-gun-a-month law took effect compared to guns purchased prior to enactment of the law (Odds Ratio=0.64; p<0.0001 (Table 1)).

The magnitude of the association between when a firearm was purchased and where it was acquired was greater when the analysis focused on gun traces initiated in the Northeast corridor of the United States (New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts). For gun traces originating in the Northeast, there was a 66% reduction in the likelihood that a gun would be traced to a Virginia relative to a gun dealer elsewhere in the Southeast for guns purchased after the one-gun-a-month law took effect when compared to guns purchased prior to law effective date (OR=0.34; p<0.0001).

Even stronger associations were identified for gun traces initiated in individual states—specifically for traces of guns recovered in New York and Massachusetts. Among the guns from the Southeast recovered in New York, 38% purchased prior to implementation of the Virginia law were traced to Virginia gun dealers compared to 15% of guns from the Southeast which were purchased after the law took effect (OR=0.29; p<0.0001). In Massachusetts, the percentages were 18 and 6 (OR=0.28; p<0.001). In other words, implementation of the law was associated with a 73% reduction in New York and a 72% reduction in Massachusetts in the likelihood that a traced gun, originally purchased in the Southeast would be traced to a Virginia gun dealer as opposed to a dealer in another Southeastern state.

COMMENT

In 1993, 11 million violent crimes were committed with handguns. Studies show that anywhere from 30% to 40% of criminals identified the illegal market as the source of their last handgun. The illegal market exists for several reasons: would-be criminals may be unable to buy handguns because prior criminal records disqualify them from over-the-counter purchases, or the gun laws in their states prevent them from obtaining a handgun quickly and easily. In addition, would-be criminals do not want to make over-the-counter purchases because the handgun eventually can be traced back to them.

Local and state legislative bodies have created a patchwork of weak and strong laws regulating handgun sales across the country. In some jurisdictions purchasers may need a permit to possess a handgun, or may be required to wait before the transfer is allowed to go forward. In other jurisdictions, however, there are now restrictions on the sale of handguns beyond the few imposed by federal law. Consequently, the jurisdictions with "weaker" gun retail laws attract gun traffickers who buy firearms in these jurisdictions and transport their purchases illegally to areas with "stronger" regulation. The guns are then sold illegally on the street to ineligible buyers (e.g., felons or minors), or to people who want guns that cannot be traced back to them.

The BATF recently completed a study on gun trafficking in southern California where a 15-day waiting period applies. The study found that more than 30% of the guns recovered in crimes in that region which could be traced to Virginia were purchased in Virginia and transported across state lines. The analysis of the firearms traced demonstrates that Virginia is the source of approximately 43% of the firearms traced in New York compared to New York's 16% restriction. In the Virginia General Assembly, the ability to purchase large numbers of handguns beyond the few imposed by federal law, allowed Francis to buy four more Davis Saturday Night Specials—the most common handgun traced to crime between 1990-1991, and traced back to Virginia if they were to New York and sold the guns. Francis was arrested a few weeks later when he returned to Virginia to buy four more Davis handguns.

The BATF field division for southern California recently reviewed over 5,700 instances of multiple sales. Almost 18% of these multiple sales involved individuals purchasing three or more guns. Theoretically, prohibiting multiple purchase transactions should be an effective way to disrupt established gun trafficking patterns while ultimately reducing the supply of firearms available in the illegal market. The effects of the Virginia one-gun-a-month law seem to support the theory.

The results of this study provide strong evidence that restricting purchases of handguns is an effective way to disrupt the illegal movement of guns across state lines. The analysis of the firearms traced demonstrated that, consistently, guns originated in which guns originally obtained in the Southeast are less likely to be recovered as part of a criminal investigation and if they were purchased after the Virginia law went into effect. There was a 65% reduction in the likelihood that a gun traced back to the Southeast would be traced to Virginia for guns recovered in the Northeast Corridor; a 70% reduction for guns recovered in either New York or Massachusetts; and, a 35% reduction for guns recovered anywhere in the United States.

While evidence generated from this study is strong, a change in the laws governing gun purchases in the other southeastern states (e.g., Florida or Georgia) which makes the laws in those states more permissive after July 1, 1994, would provide an alternative explanation for the findings. A review of laws related to private gun ownership in the southeastern region revealed no relevant changes, though Georgia will move to an instant check system and preempt local gun laws effective January 1996.

While there are many strengths of this analysis, there are some limitations. First, additional research is needed to clarify what, if any displacement effects were created by the Virginia law (i.e., to what extent, if any, do gun traffickers purchase more handguns as a result of criminal investigation, and, for the firearms traced, some information (e.g., date of purchase) is not available.

the Secretary to impose liability on States consistent with this administration's views on regulation E. I disagree with that policy. The Federal EBT task force estimates that the bill will also save Federal taxpayers around $400 million over the next 10 years. Under current law, States are required to use coupons, with some exceptions. About 2.5 billion coupons per year are used for SNAP benefits. Store, issued to participants, counted, canceled, redeemed through the banking system by Treasury, shipped again, stored, and then destroyed. That cost can reach $60 million per year in Federal and State costs. Printing coupons alone costs USDA $35 million a year. EBT does not just cut State and Federal costs. The inspector general of USDA testified that EBT "can be a powerful weapon to improve detection of diversion by as much as 80 percent leading to the prosecution of traffickers." The special agent in charge of the financial crimes division of the U.S. Secret Service said the EBT system is a great advancement generally because it puts an audit trail relative to the user and the retail merchant. Another Bush administration report determined that EBT promises "a variety of Food Stamp Program improvements * * *, Program vulnerabilities to certain kinds of benefit loss and diversion can be reduced directly by EBT system features * * * [EBT] should facilitate investigation and prosecution of food stamp fraud." A more recent Office of Technology Assessment [OTA] report determined that a national EBT system might reduce food stamp fraud losses and benefits diversion by as much as 80 percent.

The bill is based on meetings with the U.S. Secret Service, the inspector general of USDA, the National Governors Association, the American Public Welfare Association, Consumers Union, the OTA, the Federal EBT task force, and the affected industries, and a full committee hearing last session of the Senate Agriculture Committee. Perhaps nothing is totally fraud-proof, but EBT is clearly much better than the current system of paper coupons, and EBT under my bill will cut State costs. Let us be bold. Under current law, 2.5 billion coupons are used once and then canceled except for $1 coupons which may be used to make change. Would we consider it cost-efficient if all $50 bills, for example, could only be used once, then stored and destroyed? EBT has an added benefit—it eliminates cash changes. Under current law, food stamp recipients get cash change in food stamp transactions if the cash does not exceed $1 per purchase. That cash can be used for anything. In coupons, I am convinced that the single most important thing we can do to reduce fraud and State costs is to eliminate the use of coupons. I hope you will join with me in this effort.

By Mr. LEAHY:
S. 1114. A bill to amend the Food Stamp Act of 1977 to reduce food stamp fraud and improve the Food Stamp Program through the elimination of food stamp coupons and the use of electronic benefit transfer systems, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

THE FOOD STAMP FRAUD REDUCTION ACT OF 1995

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I want to invite all Members to cosponsor legislation with me which will eliminate illegal trafficking in food stamp coupons by converting to electronic benefit transfer, often called EBT, systems. I may be presenting an amendment as an amendment to welfare reform or as an amendment to the farm bill or the Reconciliation Act. Under President Bush, USDA noted that "the potential savings are enormous" if EBT is used in the Food Stamp Program. The bill is designed to save the States money. Issuing coupons is expensive to States. Some States mail coupons monthly and pay postage for which they receive only a partial Federal reimbursement. When coupons are lost or stolen, the mail, States are liable for some losses. It also saves State money by requiring that USDA pay for purchasing EBT card readers to be put in stores. Under current law, States pay half those costs.

The bill is designed to save the States money. Issuing coupons is expensive to States. Some States mail coupons monthly and pay postage for which they receive only a partial Federal reimbursement. When coupons are lost or stolen, the mail, States are liable for some losses. It also saves State money by requiring that USDA pay for purchasing EBT card readers to be put in stores. Under current law, States pay half those costs.

Some States issue coupons at State offices, which involves labor costs. Under the bill, USDA pays for the costs of the cards and recipients are responsible for replacements and much of the lost coupon mailing costs. Allowing the Secretary of Agriculture to impose liability on States except for their own negligence or fraud, as under current law. Other welfare reform proposals allow... bill the Federal Reserve Board would be barred from imposing those liabilities. The bill specifically makes households liable for most EBT losses; however, they are not liable for losses after they report the loss or theft of the EBT card. As under current law, States are liable for their own fraud and negligence losses. The bill also provides that each recipient will be given a personal code number [PIN] to help prevent unauthorized use of the card.

Most of the liability provisions, unlike those in other welfare reform proposals, are based on the May 11, 1992, EBT steering committee report under the Bush administration which represents an outstanding analysis of the liability issue. Under the bill, food stamp families will have to pay for replacement cards. However, once reported as lost or stolen, the EBT card willed be voided and a new card will be issued with the balance remaining.

The card holder will be responsible for any unauthorized purchases made between the time of loss and the household’s loss of the lost or stolen card. The card cannot be used without the PIN number. Households will be able to obtain transaction records, upon request, from the benefit issuer and that issuer will have to establish error resolution procedures as recommended by the 1992 EBT steering committee report.

Under the bill, USDA will no longer have to pay for the costs of printing, issuing, distributing, mailing and redeeming paper coupons—this costs between $50 million and $60 million a year.

Under the bill, in an effort to reduce the costs of implementing a nationwide EBT system, States and stores will look at the best way to maximize the use of existing point-of-sale terminals. They will follow technology, rather than lead technology.

The Federal EBT task force estimated that Federal costs could be reduced by $400 million under the proposed bill. I do not have an official CBO estimate yet.

Many stores now use or in the process of adding point-of-sale terminals which allow them to accept debit and credit cards. These systems can also be used for EBT.

Stores which choose not to invest in their own systems will receive reimbursements for point-of-sale card readers. USDA will pay for these costs. If the store decides at a later date that it needs a commercial—debt or credit card—reader, the store will have to bear all the costs. In very rural areas, or in other situations such as house-to-house trade routes or farmers’ markets, manual systems will be used and USDA will pay 100 percent of the costs of the equipment.

It is planned that this restriction—only Federal and State programreaders paid for, with the upgrade at store expense—will encourage the largest possible number of stores to invest in their own point-of-sale equipment.

To the extent needed to cover costs of conversion to EBT, the Secretary is authorized to charge a transaction fee of up to 2 cents per EBT transaction taken out of benefits. This provision is temporary. Households receiving the maximum benefit level—for that household size—may be charged a lower per transaction fee than other households.

While it is unfortunate that recipients have to be charged this fee they are much, much better off under an EBT system. In studies conducted regarding EBT projects participants have strongly supported its application.

In implementing the bill, the Secretary is required to consult with States, retail stores, the financial industry, the Federal EBT task force, the inspector general of USDA, the U.S. Secret Service, the National Governors Association, the Food Marketing Institute, and others.

In designing the bill we met with the Director of the Maryland EBT System, they have Statewide food stamp EBT, the National Government Association, the American Public Welfare Association, the Federal EBT task force, USDA Food and Consumer Services, Office of the inspector general of USDA, Food Marketing Institute, U.S. Secret Service, the National Governors Association, the American Bankers Association, the Public Voice for Food and Health Policy, the American Bankers Association, and representatives of retail stores.

I want to again invite each of you to cosponsor this legislation. There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1114

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; REFERENCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—This Act may be cited as the "Food Stamp Fraud Reduction Act of 1992." (b) REFERENCES.—Except as otherwise expressly provided, wherever in this title an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2011 et seq.).

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) Roger Viadero, Inspector General of the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), testified before Congress on February 1, 1995, that: "For many years we have supported the implementation of the Electronic Benefits Transfer, commonly called EBT, of food stamp benefits as an alternative to paper coupons. EBT also provides a useful tool in identifying potential retail store violations. Violations not detected by the EBT system have enabled us to better monitor and analyze sales and benefit activity at authorized retailers. [...] [i]t can be a powerful weapon to identify and take down tax refuge and fraud and provide evidence leading to the prosecution of traffickers.";

(2) Robert Rasor, United States Secret Service, Special Agent in Charge of Financial Crimes Division, testified before Congress on February 1, 1995, that: "The EBT system is a great advantage because it puts an audit trail relative to the user and the retailer merchant.''

(3) Allan Greenspan, Chairman of the Board of Governors, Federal Reserve System, has noted the importance of EBT for the food stamp program, and the potential advantages offered by EBT to government benefit program agencies, benefit recipients, and food retailers. (Indeed, EBT also would help reduce costs in the food stamp processing operation of the Federal government);

(4) The Bush Administration strongly supported EBT for the food stamp program, including 1 report that noted "The potential savings are enormous.''

(5) In February 1991, a USDA publication noted that Secretary Yetter proposed EBT as an element of the "Department's strategy to reduce food stamp loss, theft, and trafficking.''

(6) In March 1992, USDA noted: "EBT reduces program vulnerability to some kinds of fraud, such as benefit diversion and misuse; EBT also provides an audit trail that facilitates efficient investigation and successful prosecution of fraudulent activity....[F]raud estimations for an EBT system are almost two orders of magnitude lower than for an existing paper-based system.''

(7) In tests of EBT systems, USDA reported during the Bush Administration that: "EBT also introduces new features that reduce the chance for unauthorized use of one's benefits as a result of loss or theft....[R]etailer response to actual EBT operations is very positive in all operational EBT projects.''

(8) Retail stores, the financial services industry, and the States should take the lead in converting from food stamps to an electronic benefits transfer system;

(9) In the findings of the report entitled "Making Government Work" regarding the electronic benefits transfer of food stamps and other government benefits, the Office of Technology Assessment found that—

(A) by eliminating cash change and more readily identifying those who illegally traffic in benefits, a nationwide electronic benefits transfer system might reduce levels of food stamp benefit diversion by as much as 80 percent.

(B) with use of proper security protections, electronic benefits transfer is likely to reduce theft and fraud, as well as reduce errors, paperwork, delays, and the stigma attached to food stamp coupons;

(C) electronic benefits transfer can yield significant cost savings to retailers, recipients, financial institutions, and government agencies; and

(D) recipients, retailers, financial institutions, and local program administrators who have tried electronic benefits transfer prefer electronic benefits transfer to coupons;

(10) the food stamp program prints more than 2,500,000,000 coupons per year, including 2,500,000,000 paper coupons;

(11) food stamp coupons (except for $1 coupons) are used once, and each of the over 2,500,000,000 coupons per year is then count- ed, canceled, shipped, redeemed through the banking system by 10,000 commercial banks, 32 local Federal reserve banks, and the Secretary of the Treasury, stored, and destroyed;

(12) food stamp recipients can receive cash change in food stamp transactions if the change is not exceed $1 per transaction;

(13) the printing, distribution, handling, and redemption of coupons costs at least $60,000,000 per year.

SEC. 4. ELIMINATION OF FOOD STAMP COUPONS.

Section 4 (7 U.S.C. 2021) is amended by adding at the end the following:
"(d) Elimination of Food Stamp Coupons.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2) and notwithstanding any other provision of law, effective beginning on the date that is 3 years after the date of enactment of this subsection, the Secretary shall not provide any food stamp coupons to a State.

"(2) Exceptions.—

Amendments Submitted

KYL (AND INHOFE) AMENDMENT NO. 2077

Mr. Kyl (for himself and Mr. Inhofe) proposed an amendment to the bill (S. 1026) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1996 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes.

On page 371, below line 21, add the following:

SEC. 1062. SENSE OF SENATE ON PROTECTION OF UNITED STATES FROM BALLISTIC MISSILE ATTACK.

(a) FINDINGS.--The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) The proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missiles presents a threat to the entire world.

(2) This threat was recognized by Secretary of Defense William J. Perry in February 1995 in the Annual Report to the President and the Congress which states that ``[b]y 1998 the five declared nuclear states, at least 20 other nuclear states have acquired or are attempting to acquire weapons of mass destruction--nuclear, biological, or chemical weapons--and the means to deliver them. In fact, in most areas where United States forces could be targeted on large scale, many of the most likely adversaries already possess chemical and biological weapons. Moreover, some of these states appear determined to acquire nuclear weapons.''

(3) At a summit in Moscow in May 1995, President Clinton and President Yeltsin commented on this threat in a Joint Statement which recognizes ``... the threat posed by worldwide proliferation of missiles and delivery systems for nuclear, biological and chemical weapons and the necessity of countering this threat...''

(4) At least 25 countries may be developing weapons of mass destruction and the delivery systems for such weapons.

(5) At least 24 countries have biological weapons programs in various stages of research and development.

(6) Approximately 10 countries are believed to have biological weapons programs in various stages of development.

(7) At least 10 countries are reportedly interested in the development of nuclear weapons.

(8) Several countries recognize that weapons of mass destruction and missiles increase their ability to deter, coerce, or otherwise threaten the United States. Saddam Hussein recognized this when he stated, on May 8, 1990, that `[o]ur missiles cannot reach Washington. If there were Washington, we would strike it if the need arose.''

(9) International regimes like the Non-Proliferation Treaty, the Biological Weapons Convention, and the Missile Technology Control Regime, while effective, cannot by themselves halt the spread of weapons and technology. On January 10, 1995, Director of Central Intelligence, James Woolsey, said with regard to Russia that `[s]tates in this region are increasingly concerned with the safety of nuclear, chemical, and biological materials as well as highly enriched uranium or plutonium, although I want to stress that this is a global problem. For example, highly enriched uranium was recently stolen from South Africa, and last month Czech authorities recovered three kilograms of 87.8 percent-enriched HEU in the Czech Republic--the largest seizure of near-weapons grade material to date outside the Former Soviet Union.''

(10) The possession of weapons of mass destruction and missiles by developing countries threatens our allies, and forces re- armed and will ultimately threaten the United States directly. On August 11, 1994, Deputy Secretary of Defense John Deutch said that `[w]ith the North Koreans field the Taepo Dong 2 missile, Guam, Alaska, and parts of Hawaii would potentially be at risk...'

(11) The end of Cold War has changed the strategic environmental facing and between the United States and Russia. That the Clinton administration environment to have changed was made clear by Secretary of Defense William J. Perry on September 20, 1994, when he stated that `[w]e should seize the opportunity to create a new relationship, based not on MAD, not on Mutual Assured Destruction, but rather on another acronym, MAS, or Mutual Assured Safety.''

(12) The United States should have the opportunity to create a relationship based on trust rather than fear.

SEC. 1063. SENSE OF SENATE.--It is the sense of the Senate that all Americans should be protected from accidental, intentional, or limited ballistic missile attack.
McConnell Amendment No. 2080
Mr. McConnell proposed an amendment to the bill S. 1026, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert: (A) The Senate finds that:

(1) the Senate Select Committee on Ethics has a thirty-one year tradition of handling investigations of official misconduct in a bipartisan, fair and professional manner;

(2) the Ethics Committee, to ensure fairness to those being investigated, must conduct its responsibilities strictly according to established procedures and free from outside interference;

(3) the rights of all parties to bring an ethics complaint against a member, officer, or employee of the Senate are protected by the official rules and precedents of the Senate and the Ethics Committee;

(4) any Senator responding to a complaint before the Ethics Committee deserves a fair and non-partisan hearing according to the rules of the Ethics Committee;

(5) the rights of all parties in an investigation—both the individuals who bring a complaint against a Senator, and any Senator charged with an ethics violation—can only be protected by strict adherence to the established rules and procedures of the ethics process;

(6) the integrity of the Senate and the integrity of the Ethics Committee rest on the continued adherence to precedents and rules, derived from the Constitution, and

(7) the Senate as a whole has never intervened in any ongoing Senate Ethics Committee investigation, and has considered matters brought to the Senate only after the Committee has submitted a report and recommendations to the Senate.

(B) Therefore, it is the Sense of the Senate that the Senate Select Committee on Ethics should not, in the case of Senator Robert Packwood of Oregon, deviate from its customary and standard procedures, and should, prior to the Senate's final resolution of the case, follow whatever procedures it deems necessary and appropriate to provide a full and complete public record of the relevant evidence in this case.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

STAFFING OF DOD OVERSEAS SCHOOLS

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President I call the attention of my colleagues to an educational matter that requires continued attention. Americans serving in the armed services who are stationed overseas usually depend on Department of Defense Dependents Schools to educate their children. It has been a matter of concern that these overseas schools do not provide the same level of educational services as schools on military installations in the United States. I ask that the Record be printed the executive summary of a recent study providing hard numbers substantiating this concern. I hope Senators will consider the findings of this study as we draw down forces in Europe and as we provide for an appropriate quality of life for members of our Armed Forces stationed overseas.
DoDDS has made a determined commitment to be a truly world-class school system—the educational services and programs of a premier school system. It is essential that what needs to be done to fulfill these expectations on a regular basis is unrealistic—the average teacher doesn’t have the skills to: maintain a full-scale modern computerized media center (library); provide quality curricular offerings in physical education, music, and art; conduct all remedial assistance for students who would ordinarily be provided with special help through Reading Improvement Specialists (RIS) and Compensatory Education Specialists (Comp Ed); mainstream and assist students who need of English as a Second Language (ESL); be ready to apply first aid and administer medication or diagnostic assistance for students (SPED); assess and administer help to students who qualify for learning impairment assistance (Special Education for the Learning Impaired, teachers—SPED) or for school-wide enrichment (SWEP, a.k.a. TAG—talented and gifted, teachers).

While most classroom teachers have some skill in these areas—to assume or assert that they are simply will not create the skills. Saying it doesn’t make it so—no matter how often it is said.

Next year DoDDS schools will have fewer specialists, a higher Pupil Teacher Ratio (PTR), and fewer options for students, if the cuts now proposed and currently being implemented are allowed to stand. This briefing paper will present statistics on the DoDDS Mediterranean (Med) district and DoDDS-Europe (DoDDS-E) as a whole. We have the necessary documentation on the schools in this district because the Overseas Federation of Teachers is the exclusive bargaining representative for the teachers in these schools. DoDDS Med District represents approximately 1/6 of the enrollment of the odds-E student enrollment. Our proposal, therefore, is based on projecting our data on a 1:6 ratio, so that we can reach a conclusion on what is needed for all of DoDDS-Europe.

DoDDS-E is unique in geographic terms (most of the schools are located on islands and peninsulas), it can still be used a “bellwether” program for the DoDDS-E districts. As the drawdown in northern Europe continues, we will need similar studies for the DoDDS-E districts. The National Profile (Table 94), Appendix no. 8, shows the comparison of services available to students in schools of various sizes in DoDDS-E and to students in the Section 6 Schools.

The schools are located far apart and in isolated locations, but to demand that they fulfill these expectations on a regular basis is unrealistically demanding. The principal of the high school and elementary school are pooling their work year to create a full teacher. In other words, DoDDS is relying on the “super teacher” to cover or provide all the services that the majority or 58% are in the range of 200+ student enrollment; for high schools in the range of 400+ student enrollment; and for high schools in the United States that the majority or 53% are in the range of 500+ student enrollment. The current practice in the United States is to keep elementary schools to a medium size, but to consolidate them if they are too small. For high schools, the standard practice is to consolidate. Consolidation of secondary schools (high schools) allows for larger staff and more electives and advanced course options for students—a depth and breadth of offerings not available in smaller secondary schools.

The Section 6 Schools generally follow the same staffing pattern as that in the United States. The National Profile (Table 94), Appendix no. 8, shows the comparison of services available to students in schools of various sizes in DoDDS-E and to students in the Section 6 Schools.
Overseas, in DoDDS schools, the opposite occurs. This is shown in Table 1. Type and Size of DoDDS-E Schools, found in Appendix No. 4. Tables 4, 5, and 6 in conjunction with Table 1, show that:

- for DoDDS elementary schools, a majority or 61.5% are in the range of under 400-student enrollment; for DoDDS unit schools (K-12), the majority or 58% are in the range of under 200-student enrollment; and,
- for DoDDS high schools, the majority or 81% are in the range of under 500-student enrollment.

In particular, it should be noted that there are NO DoDDS high schools with more than 700 students, while U.S.-wide, over half of all American high schools have MORE than 1000 students.

The explanation for this phenomenon is quite simple. The bulk of the DoDDS-E schools are spread too far apart to allow for the consolidation that occurs in the United States. For example, in Turkey if the DoDDS schools there could be consolidated, it would make staffing easier. If the distances of hundreds of miles separate these schools prevent this. This is the rule in DoDDS, not the exception.

In effect, stateside schools can be visualized as an inverse pyramid, with the largest schools being the consolidated high schools, the smallest ones being the neighborhood elementary schools. It is clear that the majority or 56% of the elementary schools in the United States are generally considerably larger than those in DoDDS. In the overseas schools however, the pyramid is bottom-heavy, positioned in its normal fashion, with most of the enrollment in elementary schools and a paucity of students in the age groups for upper grades (grades 7-12).

Overseas schools are often located at distances of 200 to 300 miles away from each other with no way to consolidate, which results in decreasing student populations as students move up through the grades.

If these smaller schools are staffed based purely and strictly upon enrollment requirements set forth in the Staffing Documents found in Appendix no. 1, can they offer the programs that are available in the sampled Section 6 Schools? Just because students are required to go to schools with smaller enrollments, is it appropriate that they have fewer educational opportunities than their stateside peers?

Certainly not. Parents, driven by perception and reality, who are required to bring dependents overseas to schools in these isolated areas will not be satisfied: They will refuse to enroll their children in schools that are not offering at least the same programs that are offered in the United States—in fact, they would have to be better to be a real inducement; word will spread that DoDDS is not providing quality education; the Quality of Life available will be degraded; military recruitment will suffer; and, there will be a resistance to overseas assignments.

GLADYS MANSON HAUG ARNTZEN TURNS 100 YEARS OLD IN AUGUST

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, a very valued constituent of mine, E.P. "Pete" Paup, executive vice president of the Manson Construction and Engineering Co. in Seattle, WA, has brought to my attention that his mother-in-law will reach the age of 100 years on August 13, 1995. Pete has kindly shared with me the life story of this remarkable woman.

Gladys Angelica Christine Manson was born in the small community of Dockton on Maury Island in the young State of Washington, August 13, 1895. Her parents, Minnie Carlson Manson and Peter Manson, were Swedish immigrants who had moved to Dockton from Tacoma in 1893.

Peter was employed by the local dry-docking company and became dockmaster in 1903. The year before, 1902, little Gladys held a lantern when her mother dug up a glass jar full of $20 gold pieces from a crawl space beneath their house. Because of the bank failures during the panic of 1893, the Mansons didn’t trust their money to banks, so they hid it. The gold from the mason jar was used to purchase a steam donkey and a floating crane by the dry dock.

Today, Manson Construction and Engineering Co. is a major Pacific coast marine construction and dredging contractor.

In 1910, Gladys was a member of Dockton Grade School’s first graduating class, whereupon she entered Bur- ton High School. In 1912 she moved to Seattle with her family and graduated from Lincoln High School in 1914. After graduation, Gladys’s entered the Uni- versity of Washington and graduated in 1918 with a degree in music.

Gladys later taught music in Brooklyn, Seattle, and Roslyn, WA and spent 3 years as a district music supervisor in Kent, WA.

Gladys is an active member of Grace Lutheran Church in Bellevue, WA and is a member of the Lincoln High School Alumni Association. She has also been a member of both the Sons of Norway and the Swedish Club.

Gladys Manson Haug Arntzen will celebrate her 100th birthday at her daughter’s home, on August 13, 1995. I invite the attention of all my colleagues to this tremendous story and great community contribution, and in so doing, I wish Gladys Manson Haug Arntzen the happiest of birthday celebrations on August 13.

APPOINTING SAM FOWLER, CHIEF COUNSEL FOR THE MINORITY, COMMITTEE ON ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, today I would like to formally announce that I have named Sam Fowler the chief counsel for the minority on the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources. For several years Sam has been our counsel for the toughest issues and the person we turn to make sense of the most difficult assignments. I would like to recognize his importance to use with the title of chief counsel.

Sam follows in the footsteps of Mike Harvey, who has for two decades defined the role of chief counsel on this committee. Sam is cut from that same high quality cloth as Mike. I know that the committee’s tradition of excellence in service to its members will be carried forward with Sam.

Sam is a graduate of the University of New Hampshire and the George Washington University Law School. He has served with the Smithsonian Institution, the Council on Environmental Quality, in private practice and with Mo Udall in the House of Representa- tives. Sam joined our staff in 1991. He has been invaluable, absolutely invaluable.

Sam’s portfolio includes nuclear facility licensing, parliamentary procedure, the budget process, uranium enrichment, Russian reactor safety, cleanup of Department of Energy nuclear weapons production sites, alternative fuels, automobile fuel efficiency, low-level nuclear waste disposal, health effects of electromagnetic fields, the National Environmental Policy Act, constitution law, nominations, Government organization, Senate and committee standing rules and ethics issues. In addition, Sam can take on anything else you can assign to him.

Sam is also our resident historian, defender of Thomas Jefferson, source of quotes that elucidate the wisdom of Winston Churchill and repository or precepts regarding the conduct of the Senate. He is a member of the House of Representatives and the English Parliament. He is a partisan of good clear prose, a lover of poetry and our committee's best legislative draftsman. I cannot imagine the Energy and Natural Resources Committee without him. I am glad to call him my chief counsel.

COMMEMORATION OF THE 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE FOUNDING OF MACKINAC STATE PARK

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I rise today to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the founding of Mackinac Island State Park. From the island's beginnings as a fort fought over by the French and British, to the peaceful calm of a historical vacation spot enjoyed by many, Mackinac Island State Park and the waters surrounding it are a rich and important part of our Nation's frontier and exploratory history.

Mackinac Island State Park became Michigan's first State park in 1895 after its transfer to the State from the Federal Government, ending its 20-year tenure as the Nation's second national park. The Mackinac Island State Park Commission was founded in 1895 to supervise the Mackinac Island State Park, including the 14 historic buildings comprising Fort Mackinac, which were built by the British Army in the early 18th century.

In 1904, the commission took on the administration of the site of Colonial Michilimackinac, established by the French in 1715 in Mackinac City and later dismantled and moved to Mackinac Island by the British. The area had been a fur-trade community, full of life and color. In 1975, the water-powered sawmill and 625-acre nature park known as Mill Creek were added to the land overseen by the commission. Mill Creek is located southeast of Mackinac City on the shore of Lake Huron. Over the years, the acquisition of land by the commission has led to a beautiful State park consisting of 1,800 acres and enjoyed by more than 800,000 visitors each year.

Mackinac Island State Park is dear to the hearts of many Michigan residents and visitors alike. The smell of Mackinac Island fudge brings childhood memories back to many a visitor while the clip-clop of horse hooves and the ring of bicycle bells on the automobile-free island recalls a by-gone time.

Mackinac Island State Park is a vital spot enjoyed by many, Mackinac Island State Park is dear to the hearts of many Michigan residents and visitors alike. It is home to the oldest hotel in the building still standing among the longest and largest in the world, located at the opulent Grand Hotel. I know many people in Michigan and around the world will join me in celebrating the jewel of the Great Lakes in the commemoration of its 100 spectacular years.

LOWER MILITARY SPENDING YIELDS HIGHER GROWTH

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I refer to my colleagues an article from the July 15 issue of The Economist. The article discusses the economic impact of reduced military spending in light of worldwide declines in defense budgets over the last decade. While the impact of such a policy is difficult to calculate, the article brings up an interesting point:

In the long run, most economists think that lower defense spending should stimulate growth. One reason for this is that cash can be switched from defense to more productive areas such as education. A second is that smaller military budgets should lead to lower overall government spending, hence lower borrowing than would otherwise have been the case. As a result, interest rates should be lower, stimulating private investment.

The article also refers to a recent IMF study which finds a clear relationship between lower military spending and increased economic growth. It concludes that a 2-percent per capita rise in GDP will result from the decreased spending worldwide in the late 1980s. Its authors also estimate that if global military spending is reduced to 2 percent of GDP—the United States currently spends 3.9 percent—the dividend will eventually lead to a rise in GDP per head of 20 percent.

I bring this to light as we consider increasing military spending by $7 billion, while making deep cuts in education, job training, health, and programs for the poor. Already, our Nation spends more on the military than on the total next six largest militaries combined. It is a mistake to turn back against global trends to a course that might leave them with their erstwhile benefactors cut this aid along with military assistance, but also for other aid. If one nation depended on defence-related aid, there might be a good way to improve the education and training of a civilian high-technology industry. Perhaps the sums fail to take into account the broad economic impact of reduced defense spending.

As with any big reduction in public spending, defence cuts tend to reduce economic activity in the short term, as the unemployment rate to rise, particularly in regions where defence-related industries are heavily concentrated. But big defence budgets can also have positive side-effects. In countries such as South Korea and Israel, spin-offs from military research and development have helped to foster innovation in civilian high-technology industries. In poor countries with low levels of education and skills, military training might be a good way to improve the educational standard of the workforce. During the cold war some poor countries also relied on the rival superpowers not just for military assistance, but also for other aid. If these countries were to cut this aid along with military support, it might lead to a reduction in economic activity in the long run.

Until recently, there has been little conclusive evidence about the long-run economic impact of lower defence spending. This is partly due to the difficulty of getting accurate evidence about the long-run economic impact of lower defence spending.
comparable data, and to the problem of separating short-term from long-term sequences. But in a recent working paper, Malcolm Knight, an economist at the IMF, and two colleagues, use a long-run growth model and sophisticated econometric techniques to measure the effect of military spending on growth in 79 countries between 1971 and 1985. They find a clear correlation between lower outlays and higher growth.

The authors then simulate what the long-run effects of the decline in military spending over the next decade are likely to be. Unsurprisingly, they are positive. Industrial countries, for instance, can expect a long-run absolute increase in GDP per head of 2% from the spending cuts that occurred up to 1990.

Delayed Payment

Mr. Knight and his fellow authors then try to estimate what the long-run effects of further cuts in world defence spending might be. They assume that global defence spending is reduced to under 2% of GDP (the current level in Latin America, the region with the world's lowest defence spending). If industrialised countries achieve such a target, the authors expect an eventual increase in their GDP per head of 20%. In other regions, such as Eastern Europe, the effects will be even greater. However, it will take a long time for these benefits to work through. Even after 50 years, for instance, the improvement in the level of GDP per head in rich countries would have reached only 13.2%.

Unfortunately, the model does not explain whether this increase would be attributable to more productive public investment, or to lower interest rates. In practice, the cuts in military spending since the 1980s appear to have been used to keep overall public spending under control. This means that the clearest long-term economic benefit from the end of the cold war is likely to come from lower interest rates—unless, of course, public spending rises for other reasons.

For those defence employees faced with the sack, it may be scant comfort to hear about the long-term gains to the economy that accompany fewer military bases. But, providing that governments keep public spending in check, the world will indeed benefit from a substantial peace dividend—even if interest rates rise for other reasons. The next cuts in world defence spending might go well beyond the immediate long-term benefits to the nations in the region.

The fall of Bosnian would fundamentally change the strategic balance in the region. The authors expect that the establishment of a greater Serbia with no place for Bosnians and Croats of other races and other religions clearly remains the objective of the Serbs in Belgrade, Pale and Knin alike. For the fall of Bihać would go well beyond the immediate loss of a safe haven, the Serbian military effort to continue their campaign of terror elsewhere in Bosnia and Croatia.

The Croatian Government, recognizing these strategic as well as humanitarian concerns, has signed an agreement with the Bosnian Government to come to the aid of Bihać. This may lead to a wider war with renewed fighting in Croatia.

But the fall of Bihać will become imminent, and this safe area dependent on Croatian intervention, if the United Nations forces and NATO fail to protect the Bosnian people of the Bihać region. The United Nations Security Council has declared Bihać a safe haven, but NATO has failed to keep it safe. NATO has declared Bihać a heavy weapons exclusion zone, but NATO has not carried out airstrikes to enforce that exclusion zone. The dual key arrangement under which the United Nations has denied NATO the authority to eliminate the missile threat to NATO aircraft has increased the likelihood that Bihać will not be protected. The United Nations Security Council has declared Bosnia a no-fly zone, but NATO aircraft have not been allowed to fly for humanitarian aid. The civilian population is sheltered remorselessly and the blue helmets and representatives of humanitarian organizations are dying.

One cannot speak about the protection of human rights with credibility when one is confronted with the lack of consistency and courage displayed by the international community and its leaders.

Human rights violations continue blatantly. There are constant blockages of the delivery of humanitarian aid. The civilian community is suffering, while UNPROFOR has failed to address the human rights violations he protested the United Nation's inaction to address the human rights violations he reported and the United Nation's failure to protect the United Nations-declared safe havens of Srebrenica and Zepa.

Allow me to read a few passages from Mazowiecki's letter of resignation, since his words are surely more eloquent than mine:

WAS CONGRESS IRRESponsible?
CONSIDER THE ARITHMETIC

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, on that evening in 1972 when I first was elected to the Senate, I made a commitment to myself that I would never fail to see a young person, or a group of young people, who wanted to see me.

It has proved enormously beneficial to me because I have been inspired by the estimated 60,000 young people with whom I have visited during the nearly 23 years I have been in the Senate.

Most of them have been concerned about the enormity of the Federal debt. The Congress has run up for the coming generations to pay. The young people and I almost always discuss the fact that under the U.S. Constitution, no President can spend a dime of Federal money that has not first been authorized and appropriated by the House and Senate of the United States.

That is why I began making these daily reports to the Senate on February 22, 1992. I wanted to make a matter of daily record of the precise size of the Federal debt, which as of yesterday, Tuesday, August 1, stood at $4,954,700,676,689.14 or $18,808.12 for every man, woman, and child in America on a per capita basis.

NATIONAL HOSIERY WEEK

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, while driving to the Capitol this morning, I fell to thinking about what a calamity it would be if, all of a sudden, the hosiery manufacturing business in America were to shut down. How many jobs would be lost? How would the economy be affected? How would our country’s trade balance with other countries be affected? And how many grandchildren would have to think of something else to put under the tree for Grandpa next Christmas?

None of the above is an idle question, Mr. President, and I bring up the subject because next week will mark the 24th annual observance of National Hosiery Week. So, beginning Monday, August 7, will be a time to pay our respects to a great American example of free enterprise, the hosiery manufacturers of our Nation.

Now, regarding some of the questions I posed at the outset of these remarks: Last year, 1994, the U.S. hosiery industry made significant increases in exports. To be precise, shipments overseas increased 34 per cent to 240 million pairs of socks and stockings. Total U.S. production totaled 362 million dozen pairs— or, if you want to break it down, the total production comes to four billion 394 million pairs of hosiery. A mind-boggling number, indeed.

We are blessed with a great many hosiery manufacturers in North Carolina, Mr. President. All of these companies are good corporate citizens—and the men and women employed in the hosiery industry are fine hard-working Americans. I am told that there are 455 hosiery plans in America, employing more than 65,000 people. Together these companies and these workers added more than $6 billion to the U.S. economy.

But, Mr. President, it is in the many smaller communities where the hosiery industry makes its most significant contribution, because it is there that these companies constitute a large part of the local economy. In so many cases, a hosiery company is the major employer in the area, providing good, stable jobs for its employees.

Mr. President, I think it was Dizzy Dean who once remarked that “braggin’ ain’t braggin’, if you can prove it.” Well, I can prove why National Hosiery Week is of special importance to me—it is because North Carolina is the leading textile and hosiery State in the Nation, generating more than half of the total U.S. hosiery production. I am proud of the leadership of the hosiery industry and the fine quality of life that it has provided for over 40,000 people.

On behalf of my fellow North Carolinians, I extend my sincere congratulations and best wishes to the hosiery industry and to its many thousands of employees for their outstanding contribution to our State and Nation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDERS FOR THURSDAY, AUGUST 3, 1995

Mr. COATS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today it stand in recess until the hour of 9 a.m. on Thursday, August 3, 1995; that following the prayer, the Journal of proceedings be deemed approved to date, the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day, and the Senate then immediately resume consideration of S. 1026, the Department of Defense authorization bill, with Senator DORGAN to be recognized as under the previous order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CONGRATULATIONS, RON RUHLAND

HON. JAMES A. BARCIA
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 1, 1995

Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to offer my heartfelt congratulations to Mr. Ron Ruhlland on his appointment to the Michigan State Waterways Commission. Governor Engler could not have made a finer choice.

As a Member whose district includes more shoreline than most entire States, and with a district that includes a significant number of lakes, bays, and rivers, I have a great interest in waterways issues. The development and maintenance of harbors, channels, and docking and launching facilities is vital to thousands of people throughout my district. It is one of the key reasons why I sought membership on the Water Resources and Environment Subcommittee of the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee.

Ron Ruhlland understands the waterways in Michigan’s 5th Congressional District. Living so close to the area and continuing to enjoy the waterways himself, he has first-hand knowledge of the benefits and needs of our water resources. He is also an accomplished sailor and boatman for 35 years, and serves as vice commodore of the Saginaw Bay Yacht Club.

As one of the seven members of the Michigan State Waterways Commission, many of us are looking to Ron to being a strong advocate for our needs. His reputation as a successful and innovative business owner, and a thoughtful Commissioner on both the Bay County Board of Commissioners and the Bay County Planning and Zoning Commission, make everyone who knows him confident that he will be a positive and active influence on the Waterways Commission.

I look forward to working with Ron in a partnership to maintain and improve Michigan’s waterway resources for our residents and our many, many visitors. I urge you, Mr. Speaker, and all of our colleagues in wishing Mr. Ron Ruhlland the very best as he undertakes this new and most important task.

TRIBUTE TO THE HONORABLE THOMAS E. MORGAN

HON. LEE H. HAMILTON
OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 1, 1995

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, it is with sadness that I bring to the attention of my colleagues the passing of Thomas E. Morgan, former Member of Congress from the State of Pennsylvania and former chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, who died yesterday in his native Pennsylvania at the age of 88.

Doc Morgan served this institution with distinction for 32 years, beginning in 1944. For most of his career he was the only practicing physician serving in the U.S. Congress. For 17 years from 1959 to 1976, Morgan was the able chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee—renamed the Committee on International Relations during the 94th Congress. His stewardship was the longest of any chairman in the committee’s history.

Doc Morgan presided over crucial debates on foreign assistance, arms control, the Cuba missile crisis, the Vietnam war, and relations with the Soviet Union. He led U.S. delegations to international meetings and parliamentary conclaves, and advised several Presidents and Secretaries of State.

Yet Doc Morgan never dwelt on his foreign policy expertise or the role he played in Washington’s foreign policy deliberations. He simply referred to himself as a country doctor. He never lost his sense of humor. He never lost touch with his patients, whom he continued to see after he came to Congress. His priority in Congress remained the same throughout his career: to improve economic conditions for his southwestern Pennsylvania constituents.

The son of a Welsh coal miner, Doc Morgan returned to his Monongahela River Valley roots his entire life. He returned to Pennsylvania upon his retirement but played a key role as chairman of the Permanent Joint Board on Defense—United States and Canada.

Our prayers and sympathy go to Doc Morgan’s wife, Winifred, to his daughter, Marianne, and to other members of his family. They can be proud of his many accomplishments and of his dedicated service to his Nation. It was my distinct honor and privilege to see after he came to Congress. His priority in Congress remained the same throughout his career: to improve economic conditions for his southwestern Pennsylvania constituents.

Mr. TAYLOR of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to offer the organizers of the event and extend my power in the defeat of global tyranny. I salute the organizers of the event and extend my support for this undertaking.

God bless our airmen, young and old, present and departed and God bless America.

SALUTING FREEDOM FLIGHT AMERICA

HON. HENRY BONILLA
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 1, 1995

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Speaker, this year, the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II, we have much to be thankful for. As Americans, we are blessed to live in the greatest and most free Nation in the history of mankind. The freedom we enjoy today is the result of the sacrifices of millions of Americans during that war 50 years ago.

Not only must we honor those who sacrificed for our freedom, we must never forget the titanic global battle to protect freedom. On August 2 and 3 the people of El Paso will be honoring our great victory in a truly remarkable fashion when Freedom Flight America arrives.

Freedom Flight America is a coast to coast Journey featuring hundreds of World War II vintage aircraft. Some of the aircraft that won the war—DC-3’s, T–6s, F–4U Corsairs and P–51 mustangs—will be on view. This remarkable display will entertain and educate the people of El Paso on the role of American airpower in the defeat of global tyranny. I salute the organizers of the event and extend my support for this undertaking.

For all of the complexities of the bill, the basic issue dividing the Baby Bells from the long-distance group is fairly simple. Marketing studies done by both camps show that the prize goes to whoever is first to offer consumers simple, complete phone service. Phone customers are tired of having separate bills and companies for local and long distance, and would sign up with the first... company to offer inexpensive combined service. All the jockeying between the Bells and the long-distance firms is about determining who will get the first shot at combining local and long-distance plans.

The provisions that AT&T et al. succeeded in working into the original committee bill, H.R. 1555, would have placed a series of hazards and roadblocks in the way of the Bell companies, while leaving their path to the market wide open.

The most important of these was the requirement that a local Bell company have a “facilities-based” competitor in its market before being allowed to compete in the long-distance market. In other words, the local company would be blocked from offering long-distance service until some other company had come into its market and built a physical network of wires comparable to the network the local Bell already has in place. In practice, that would be a very, very long time.

Since the legislation also requires the Bells to sell time on their own networks to the long-distance companies at a discount so the time can be resold as part of a local and long-distance bundle, AT&T and Sprint would have no reason to build local networks of their own. They would have been able to use the Bell local networks to get into the local service business, while at the same time keeping the Bells from competing with them in the long-distance business.

The Bells successfully fought that provision, arguing that the market should be opened for everybody all at the same time. So too, a host of other provisions that would also have hindered the Bells’ entrance into the long-distance market. That entry is feared by a long-distance industry that appears to have a very cozy environment going for itself.

For all the television ads touting the cutthroat competition among AT&T, MCI and Sprint, it turns out that basic long-distance rates have been going up for the last couple of years, by more than 5 percent a year. More disturbing still, the big three companies, which account for more than 95 percent of the long-distance market, have raised their prices in lock step. This is a happenstance of the long-distance market, have raised their prices in lock step. This is a happenstance of the long-distance market.

South Korea has been much on our minds of late. We watched with sorrow at the climbing casualty list from last month’s tragedy in Seoul. We also celebrated with the South Korean people as survivors were miraculously pulled from the rubble of the collapsed department store.

South Korea captures our attention for other reasons as well. The Korean peninsula presents some of the most challenging issues facing U.S. foreign policy. We are concerned about North Korea’s nuclear program, the uncertainties of its leadership succession, and relations between South and North Korea.

Next week, we will welcome President Kim Yong-sam to Washington. We will bestow upon him the honor of addressing a joint session of Congress. That is a true measure of our friendship with South Korea. Our countries have excellent bilateral relations, marked by a strong security alliance and broad economic ties.

South Korea’s success South Korea is a great success story. Consider Korea in 1945. It had been the victim of harsh colonialism for 50 years. The defeat of Japan brought not liberation, but division of the Korean nation along the 38th parallel. Families were torn apart. Customary patterns of trade, communication, and exchange were broken. Soviet occupiers ravaged the northern half of the country.

Five years later saw the resumption of warfare—all the more bitter because it was Korean against Korean. Armies surged up and down the peninsula, bringing death and devastation. Millions lost their lives. Tens of millions more were displaced.

The 1953 armistice brought no real peace. The peninsula remained divided. South Korea, the less prosperous half, was saddled with huge defense burdens to guard against the civilian population, and South Korean critics complain that their court have only limited jurisdiction over U.S. servicemen and American economic interests.

But by and large, the South Korean people and their government have grown accustomed to Americans. They are no longer controversial or distasteful. The alliance is viewed as mutually beneficial, a normal part of everyday existence. South Koreans, for example, were relieved earlier this year when the Clinton administration announced it would maintain a 100,000 troop level in East Asia.

III. THE U.S.-SOUTH KOREAN SECURITY ALLIANCE

I need not dwell on the reasons for the U.S.-Korean security alliance. On the U.S. side, the stability of South Korea is critical to our overall security and prosperity, and our security relationships with Korea and Japan are the linchpins of our presence in Asia.

For South Korea, the benefits are also clear. A hostile North Korea still stations two-thirds of its 1.2 million man army near the Demilitarized Zone. The North has enough artillery targeted on Seoul to reduce it to rubble. It has SCUD missiles and is developing longer-range ballistic missiles. Its dictators have committed terrorist acts. It has stated, until recently, a secret nuclear weapons program flaunting the will of the international community.

This does not suggest the North could defeat the South in a war, but it does point out the dangers. The Korean peninsula remains the most dangerous flashpoint in Asia because of its location, North Korea’s military potential, and the threat of nuclear weapons. Generalincluded, until recently, a secret nuclear weapons program flaunting the will of the international community.

The Korean peninsula remains the most dangerous flashpoint in Asia because of its location, North Korea’s military potential, and the threat of nuclear weapons. General included, until recently, a secret nuclear weapons program flaunting the will of the international community.
A. North Korea's Nuclear Program

North Korea's secret efforts to acquire nuclear weapons are a major threat to U.S. national security. A nuclear-armed North Korea would also jeopardize the stability of the entire region.

Last October, the United States signed an agreement with North Korea to freeze, and eventually eliminate, its nuclear weapons program. This complex accord will be implemented in stages over a decade or more. In essence, it is a trade. North Korea has halted and will eventually dismantle its nuclear weapons program, accepting extensive international inspections to verify compliance. In exchange, the United States will provide North Korea with alternative energy sources, initially in the form of heavy fuel oil, and later with light-water reactors that cannot easily be used to make nuclear bombs.

The agreement also envisages that we will move toward normalization of political and economic ties between the United States and North Korea, and a resumption of dialogue between the two Koreas.

This agreement does not address every concern we have about North Korea. But it does provide us with an opening—one that did not exist before—to lift the specter of a nuclear threat from the Korean Peninsula. Under the Agreed Framework, North Korea would begin a process of meaningful dialogue between the two Koreas, and come to grips with other North Korean activities that concern us.

This time last year, we were on the verge of a confrontation with North Korea—a confrontation no one wanted, and that held little hope for the peaceful development of North Korea's nuclear program. Voices in this city, and pundits across the country, called for sanctions and even military strikes.

Today, under the Geneva agreement, the North has frozen its nuclear program and agreed to a step-by-step process that will eventually eliminate that program.

Some say the Agreed Framework is "frontloaded" in favor of the North. I cannot agree. North Korea has already taken a number of significant steps under the agreement. It has shut down its only operating reactor. It has halted construction on two new reprocessing facilities. It has admitted International Atomic Energy Agency inspectors to its nuclear facilities. And it has allowed the International Atomic Energy Agency inspectors and U.S. technicians into their nuclear facilities.

In return, we have provided North Korea with $5 billion of heavy oil. We have also spent $10 million to ensure the safe storage of the North's spent fuel rods—but this was preferable to having Pyongyang reprocess those rods and obtain enough plutonium for 4-5 nuclear weapons.

North Korea will not get what it really wants—light water reactors—until well down the line—after all our questions about its past nuclear activities has been resolved.

The agreement is frontloaded—but in our favor.

Moreover, North Korea has agreed not only to resume IAEA inspections of its nuclear facilities, but to exceed its obligations under the Non-Proliferation Treaty. It will have to allow a much broader range of inspections. This means the North cannot obtain plutonium to manufacture nuclear weapons.

B. South-North Dialogue

A dialogue between South and North Korea is also necessary if we are to bridge our differences with North Korea.

Recent events give us some grounds for optimism. Last month officials from North and South Korea met in Beijing. The result was an agreement by the South to provide 150,000 tons of rice to help North Korea meet its acute food shortage. A second round of talks between the two Koreas began just a few days ago.

South Korea was careful during and after the talks not to humiliate the North. This shows a level of political maturity that bodes well for future South-North contacts. And it's not unrealistic to expect further contacts.

Just as ping-pong opened the door for substantive discussions between the United States and the People's Republic of China, so might rice set the stage for further progress on family reunification, cultural and athletic exchanges, investment, and even a South-North summit.

One of the most pressing topics for South-North dialogue is still the question of the Demilitarized Zone along the front line. The lessons we learned in central Europe during the Cold War can be applied in Korea.

Redeploying conventional forces, and great transparency, can reduce the danger of war along the DMZ. Confidence-building measures, such as signing liaison officers to the headquarters of field commands, requiring observers at military exercises, and limiting the size of such exercises, would help reduce tensions.

C. Reunification and the Armistice

On an issue of fundamental importance to the people of Korea, there should be no doubt: The United States supports the peaceful reunification of Korea. The division of Korea, the suffering of the Korean people, is artificial and unnatural. Reunification is clearly in U.S. interests: It will eliminate the danger of a new Korean war. Reunification of the two Koreas—by the Korean people themselves, on terms acceptable to them.

In recent years the North has insisted that the United Nations—on the theory that North Korea should negotiate a peace treaty to replace the 1953 armistice agreement that ended the Korean War. Some of our friends in the South have voiced concern lest the United States, tired of its peacekeeping burdens, take up North Korea on its suggestion.

The United States has insisted, does insist, and will continue to insist that any peace treaty to replace the armistice agreement be negotiated between the two Koreas themselves.

I cannot emphasize this enough: The United States will not permit North Korea to negotiate a condominium between the United States and South Korea. As Ambassador Laney said earlier this year, "The United States will never play the role of an 'honest broker' between the two Koreas—the United States will never be neutral." The United States will not deal with North Korea behind its ally's back.

D. The Economic Dimension

I have dealt with the security side of the U.S.-South Korea partnership because it is so important. I can also report that our economic ties are closer than ever.

South Korea is our eighth largest trading partner. South Korean exports to the United States will probably rise by 7 percent this year, to over $2 billion. Korea's market is the sixth largest market for U.S. exports, and the fourth largest market for U.S. agricultural goods.

Alienated exports to South Korea may surpass $30 billion this year. Let me put that in perspective: That is ten times the amount of foreign assistance we provided to South Korea over thirty-three years.

Investment is also robust; the United States, with more than $30 billion in direct investment, is the largest foreign investor in Korea.

Nagging problems are a part of these close economic ties. Unfair trade practices continue to restrict access to Korean markets. Korea still does not provide sufficient protection for U.S. intellectual property. Indeed, the United States recently kept Korea on the Special 301 "priority watch list."

We also want Korea to open financial services markets, on par with the access we provide to the U.S. market. South Korea has given foreigners greater access to the bond market, raised investment limits for stock holdings in Korean companies, and allowed Korean financial organizations to issue local currency bonds—but more needs to be done.

E. Democracy and Human Rights in Korea

Had I been with you to address U.S.-South Korea relations a few months ago, I would have highlighted grave American concerns about political freedom and human rights in South Korea. Not so today.

We have all been impressed in the last decade as South Korea moved from military to civilian rule, from authoritarianism to democracy, from closed to open politics. We were pleased when President Roh Tae Wo broke with Korea's lengthy military tradition and opened the door to civilian rule.

We were thrilled two and a half years ago when the South Korean electorate returned Kim Young-Sam—the longtime dissident, political prisoner, and champion of Korean democracy.

In recent years we have seen considerable progress in human rights as well, although even South Koreans would concede that there is still room for improvement. The rule of law is not yet assured for every citizen. Preventive detention remains a problem. The labor movement is still handicapped by restrictions. Still, most observers agree that movement on human rights, if not always as swift as we might wish, is in the right direction.

As South Korea evolves into a prosperous democracy, the bilateral relationship between Washington and Seoul deepens and...
We downsized. We de-layered. And we outsourced.

GE is among the most dynamic of U.S. companies, with a deep commitment to the long-term health and productivity of its core employees, GE is an attractive place to work. However even the best of our corporations cannot guarantee career security, employment, or a high-road approach, but that doesn't guarantee that they will take it. It's also necessary for society to bar the low road.

Mr. KIM. Mr. Speaker, I rise before the House floor today to pay tribute to Tannetie Verhoeven who will be celebrating her 100th birthday on August 11. Truly, this is an extraordinary occasion. The city of Chino has greatly benefited from her decades of continued dedication and commitment to community service.

Mr. Verhoeven has witnessed two World Wars, the Great Depression, the founding of the United Nations, man walking on the moon, as well as many other monumental events our country has faced. She has seen this country through its greatest triumphs and the most arduous of times. Ms. Verhoeven is a shining image of what American dreams are built upon. Her wisdom has helped shape the future of many people in her community.

Ms. Verhoeven has played an integral role in her family’s possessive, simple human compassion and kindness, along with a culmination of determination and drive. I commend Ms. Vernhoeven on a lifetime of the many contributions she has given both her family and community. My most since wishes for more happiness and memories to come. Best wishes for a memorable celebration.

Mr. DEUTSCH. Mr. Speaker, as the Congressman for Florida’s 20th Congressional District which includes Key West, I have had the privilege of working closely with Captain J.M. Munninghoff, the commanding officer of Naval Air Station, Key West. I am always impressed by Captain Munninghoff’s professional manner and personable nature, but never surprised. He has shown relentless dedication to his job, and I am very sorry to see him leave.

Captain Munninghoff’s entire career reflects his fine qualities and distinct attributes. His warfare specialty has taken him all across the globe. His 4,400 flight hours and 774 carrier landings stretch from the South Pacific to the Indian Ocean. During his tour as commanding officer of VA-81, the squadron received the distinguished Commander, Naval Air Force, U.S. Atlantic Fleet Battle Efficiency Award in 1987. In addition to his accomplishments with in his warfare specialty, Captain Munninghoff has held many prestigious positions including the aviation readiness training branch head, and later deputy director to the Chief of Naval Operations, as well as the assistant strike operations officer and the air operations officer of the U.S.S. Forrestal and the U.S.S. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Reflecting his many achievements, Captain Munninghoff has also been awarded various personal awards, including the Legion of Merit, Meritorious Service Medal, Navy Commendation Medal, and Navy Achievement Award. I have had the personal pleasure of working with Captain Munninghoff in his current position of commanding officer at Naval Air Station Key West. I feel that he has done an exemplary job of dealing with the civilian community of the Florida Keys on important issues such as the Peary Court housing controversy, the base realignment and closure process, as well as the more recent proposals for joint use of military property.

It is rare to meet a person of such fine character, and I am honored to have had the opportunity to work with such a man. Needless to say, I am sorry to see him move on. I only hope that the Navy recognizes the tremendous asset they have in Captain Munninghoff.

HON. JAMES A. BARCIA
OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 1, 1995

Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Speaker, one of the special privileges of being a representative of the people is meeting so many outstanding individuals. For several years, I have had the good fortune to know Ted Leipprandt of Pigeon, MI. He is a man who has been a leader in his community and in agribusiness. He has been an entrepreneur who has always worked to maximize the benefit that the free market would offer to him. He also has been a role model with his community service, his religious devotion, and his ability to maintain a clear perspective in an often demanding and conflicting world.

Ted Leipprandt formally retired from his 36-year career with the Cooperative Elevator Co. of Pigeon, MI, last weekend, he is being honored for his accomplishments by his friends and colleagues in the Michigan Bean Shippers Association and the Michigan Bean Commission. I am honored to join in this tribute to a man who has made such an impact on the agricultural economy of the most productive portion of Michigan’s agricultural bounty—the Thumb.

Virtually a lifelong resident of Pigeon, Ted earned his degree from Michigan State University in animal husbandry before serving in the Army and returning to Michigan to work as a member of the Cooperative Extension Service. He began his affiliation with the Cooperative Elevator Co. of Pigeon, where over the years he worked in several capacities, including general manager. He planned and implemented several expansion and construction projects to make his facility into a state of the art leader in the grain business. He also undertook action to expand the elevator’s capability to store and process multiple varieties of dry beans to respond to the demands of international market opportunities. He also was involved in several trade and company formulations which again concentrated on both domestic and international marketing opportunities.

Throughout all of his career, Ted has had the active support of his wife, Peg, who is also a major contributor to her community. They emphasized the importance of work and Christian values to their four children, and continue to help guide their eight grandchildren. They were allowed to grow as individuals. Mrs. Saltzen’s exuberance and motivation was as strong on her last day in education as it was on her first.

She served as a research intern from 1977 to 1979 for the Department of Research, Development and Evaluation at the Eugene 4J School District in Oregon. Mrs. Saltzen came to Colusa County in 1979 and until 1982 was the special education teacher for the Office of Education. The following year she began her tenure as superintendent of schools.

Perhaps her greatest attributes are an open mind for learning and an ability to excite others about education. Since leaving office last January, countless parents and educators throughout Colusa County have told me how much Mrs. Saltzen is missed as schools chief. I share their sentiment about her departure.

I ask my colleagues to join me today in honoring Mrs. Saltzen for her many years of service to the Colusa County Office of Education. I wish her happiness and continued success in all her future endeavors.

HON. BRIAN P. BILBRAY

Mr. BILBRAY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize and honor Mr. and Mrs. Morton
Ochs Heinrich of La Jolla, CA, as they celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary on the 14th of August. Mr. Heinrich is also retiring this year after working for over 43 years as one of America's top experts in the field of lightweight, antishubmarine torpedos. Mrs. Heinrich is a community leader and a lawyer, who continues to this day to provide free legal services to senior citizens in San Diego. Together, the Heinrichs' represent the best that America has to offer and are a shining example of an American Family.

A native of New York, Mr. Heinrich graduated from the Bronx High School of Science and the University of Oklahoma. He began his career in 1951 at China Lake, in the high California desert, and quickly moved to a posting in Pasadena, CA. He settled in San Diego in 1974. He has been cited many times over the past four decades for his work in the design, development, test, and production support of the Navy’s mark 32, mark 46, and mark 50 torpedoes. He holds a patent on the mark 46’s acoustic homing system, which went into the fleet in 1967 and remains the Navy’s standard littorals submarine homing system. In 1984, he was awarded the Naval Ocean Systems Center’s Lauritzen-Bennett Award, the highest award given by the center. For over 40 years, his leadership in both the public and private sector has been instrumental in maintaining the high state of readiness our naval forces rely upon to meet the global commitments with which they are tasked.

A native of Clayton MI, Mrs. Heinrich has been active in the community for over 25 years as a bridge teacher. After having raised two children, Mrs. Heinrich completed law school, passing the bar in 1989. For the last several years, Mrs. Heinrich has done volunteer legal work at San Diego Senior Citizens Legal Services. Their two children have been role models themselves. Their son, Mark, is a 1975 graduate of La Jolla High School, a 1979 graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, and a 1985 graduate of the University of Kansas Graduate Business School. He is currently a commander in the Navy, assigned to the staff of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Research, Development, and Acquisition, Commander Heinrich, his wife, Judy, and their two sons currently live in Fairfax, VA.

Their daughter, Marjorie, is a 1979 graduate of La Jolla High School, a 1983 graduate of the University of California at Berkeley and a 1986 graduate of the Golden Gate University Law School. She is currently a partner in the Oakland, CA, law firm of Kincaid, Gianunzio, Caudle & Hubert. Miss Heinrich currently lives in Oakland, CA.

Morton and Eileen Heinrich have been totally committed to excellence, both in their public lives and in their efforts to raise their family. As a lawyer in San Diego, Eileen Heinrich has been a role model for others half her age. As a public servant for over 30 years and as an expert in this field for over 40 years, Morton Heinrich has been a tremendous steward of the public’s trust.

Mr. Speaker, Mort and Eileen Heinrich represent a tremendous example of an American success story; a couple of modest means who have served both the country and the community. It is only fitting that we should recognize their many accomplishments as pillars of the community. I ask all my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to join me in wishing this great American couple every success in the future and congratulations on their 40th wedding anniversary.

RESPECTEEN NATIONAL YOUTH FORUM

HON. EARL POMEROY
OF NORTH DAKOTA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 1, 1995
Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring to the attention of my colleagues a letter written to me regarding the Conservation Reserve Program [CRP] by Rachel Heiser. Rachel Heiser participated in the seventh annual RespecTeen Speak for Yourself Program, and she was selected to represent North Dakota at the 1995 RespecTeen National Youth Forum in Washington, DC. She just completed the eighth grade at Simle Middle School in Bismarck, ND, and her letter emphasizes the benefits and importance of CRP. I have included Rachel’s letter for the benefit of my colleagues.

The Conservation Reserve Program started in 1985 pays farmers not to farm highly erodible land for 10 years and convert it to perennial vegetation. CRP has been successful because farmers, taxpayers, wildlife, and the environment all benefit.

The Great Plains has been characterized as one of the most endangered ecosystems in North America. Populations of grassland-nesting birds have been declining faster than any other bird group.

Now, because of CRP, many species of birds are making a great comeback. Ring-necked pheasant populations in South Dakota attracted 48,000 non-resident and 80,000 resident hunters in 1995, spending $5.7 million. Grasshopper sparrows, lark buntings, and Eastern meadowlarks are increasing in areas with high CRP enrollment. Elk, Mule deer, white-tailed deer, and antelope have responded surprisingly well to CRP. In the piedmont prairie, sharp-tailed grouse, a candidate species for federal listing, is making a dramatic recovery on CRP lands. Three million additional ducks were produced in 1994 in the Dakotas and Montana because of CRP. CRP will provide up to $1.2 billion in overall environmental benefits during the life of the program.

As you can see, CRP is a very important program when it comes to saving soil and providing grassland habitats. However, beginning this year, most of the grassland habitat created by CRP will be converted back to cropland without reauthorization of CRP. When all CRP contracts are terminated, commodity prices are expected to drop due to increased crop production leading to a significant reduction in farm income. CRP pays for itself by reducing surplus crops and thus support prices to producers. CRP is the only program that has restored many wildlife populations while saving taxpayers a bundle. Please help to reauthorize the CRP program.

HON. RANDY “DUKE” CUNNINGHAM

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 1, 1995
Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, today I will have three amendments printed in the Record regarding restoring education funding in the fiscal year 1996 Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bill.

These amendments restore from $130 to $174 million to education. They insure that critical health research funding grows at least 4 percent. And they seek to make positive, balanced change to the Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bill.

The first amendment transfers $174.93 million across the board from the National Institutes of Health accounts, permitting health research funding to continue growing by 4 percent, same as the administration’s request. With those funds, resources are distributed as follows: $49.58 million to impact aid, $40 million to the chapter 2/Eisenhower Education Reform and Professional Development Program, $80.45 million to vocational education basic State grants, and $4.87 million to the National Institute for Literacy. The amendment also deletes legislative language in H.R. 2127 which prohibits impact aid funding for military B’s, military B’s with disabilities, and schools affected by the hold harmless provisions of last year’s reforms. This amendment is also being submitted by Mr. RIGGS of California, a member of the Appropriations Committee, and will most likely be offered by him on the floor.

The second amendment transfers $160 million across the board from the National Institutes of Health accounts, permitting health research funding to continue growing by more than 4 percent, an amount greater than the administration’s request. With those funds, resources are distributed as follows: $46 million to impact aid, $40 million to the chapter 2/Eisenhower Education Reform and Professional Development Program, $80.45 million to vocational education basic State grants, and $4.87 million to the National Institute for Literacy. The amendment also deletes legislative language in H.R. 2127 which prohibits impact aid funding for military B’s, military B’s with disabilities, and schools affected by the hold harmless provisions of last year’s reforms.

TRIBUTE TO FRANK ZEIDLER

HON. GERALD D. KLECZKA OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 1, 1995

Mr. KLECZKA. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pride that I rise today in tribute to a man I admire greatly, my good friend, Frank Paul Zeidler, former long-time mayor of my hometown, Milwaukee.

The history books and records at City Hall tell us that Mayor Zeidler served as a Milwaukee County Surveyor, the Director of Milwaukee Public Schools, and as our city's highest elected official from 1948 through 1960.

I would like to stress, however, the many aspects of this great leader that historians may have overlooked, and that the average Milwaukee-area resident may not be aware of. He is truly a gifted man, with many diverse talents and interests.

First and foremost, Mayor Zeidler was, and continues to be, a family man. He and his wife, Agnes, raised six children, who with their many offspring, continue to be Frank's pride and joy.

The former mayor was, and also continues to be, committed to education, demonstrated in his efforts on behalf of local libraries, colleges, museums, life-long learning institutions, and public radio and television stations, to name a few.

But, what Frank Zeidler is most, is a man dedicated to improving the quality of life for all those with whom he comes in contact with in his day-to-day activities. Be it the students he reaches in his college lectures, the attendees at one of the many civic board meetings he participates in, or the Milwaukee resident who just happened into City Hall when the former mayor was there for a meeting, all are graced by his presence.

Mayor, you are truly a living legacy in Milwaukee. So many of the treasures of my hometown are the way they are because of you and I can truly say that Milwaukee would not be what it is today without your influence and interests.

THE EXECUTION OF THOMAS LEE WARD: "THE DEATH PENALTY IS NOT A SOLUTION"

HON. GERRY E. STUDDS OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 1, 1995

Mr. STUDDS. Mr. Chairman, earlier this year the House adopted legislation which severely restricts the right of State prisoners awaiting execution to challenge the constitutionality of their convictions or sentences in Federal court. If this legislation becomes law, it will increase the likelihood that persons who are unjustly convicted will be put to death.

Given the apparent willingness of this House to embrace such a result, I wish to share with my colleagues a powerful and sobering article which appeared in the Boston Sunday Globe on June 4, 1995. It is an account of the execution of Thomas Lee Ward, a death-row prisoner in Louisiana, written by David A. Hoffman, a Boston attorney who represented him, without fee, through 9 years of appeals in the effort to secure a new trial.

Mr. Hoffman's tribute to his client is one of the most moving and persuasive statements I have ever read on the evils of the death penalty. His client, an indigent African-American man, was executed by a criminal justice system that denied him a fair trial and then chose to take his life rather than admit its mistake. As Mr. Hoffman writes:

"Thomas Ward's case is a good example of the unfairness of our death penalty system in the United States... Our legal system does not have any reliable means of sorting out who deserves death and who doesn't. As a result, people who have not"..."are not innocent." Thomas said to me that this was his first execution and that, as a Christian, he found it difficult. He wanted to say his prayers, "to say goodbye to the Lord," and asked me to pray. I tried to comfort him as much as I could. I told him that he had done nothing wrong, that he had been wrongly convicted, but that his actions had led to his own death. I told him that I was proud of him, that he had been a good man, and that I was proud of him. I told him that he had been a good man, and that I was proud of him. I told him that he had been a good man, and that I was proud of him. I told him that he had been a good man, and that I was proud of him. I told him that he had been a good man, and that I was proud of him. I told him that he had been a good man, and that I was proud of him. I told him that he had been a good man, and that I was proud of him. I told him that he had been a good man, and that I was proud of him. I told him that he had been a good man, and that I was proud of him. I t..."
Board hearing. On the phone that night, she told Thomas she had thought the court would stop the execution. Thomas ended the conversation abruptly; he had no use for her remonstrations.

We watched the 10 o’clock news: “Time is running out for death row inmate Thomas Ward as he waits for word from the US Supreme Court. If the Court does not grant a stay of execution, Thomas Ward as he waits for word from the US Supreme Court. If the Court does not grant a stay of execution, the warden will carry out his sentence Wednesday night.”

We watched the report on the Simpson trial—a study in contrasts. Thomas’ lawyers were a team; his trial lasted almost a month and a half. We speculated on whether O.J. did it alone or with an accomplice.

All evening long, a guard from the prison’s “tactician’s team” listened to every word and kept a log of Thomas’ phone calls and activities. Thomas seemed used to this intrusion, but I finally lost my patience and asked him to back off so that my client and I could talk privately. With squads of guards surrounding Camp F (the “death compound” at Angola), there was little risk that we were going to hatch an escape plan.

The guard slid his chair to the corner of the tier, but kept his eyes riveted on Thomas.

One of the guards brought in a tub of butter pecan ice cream, which we devoured while we changed our clothes into Styrofoam cups—the only thing either of us had eaten in many hours. Thomas, a diabetic, had been on a low-fat, no sugar diet—until the night before. Do you want to write a statement?” I asked. “The warden seems to think your death will have more meaning if you make a statement. Thomas shrugged his shoulders and said, “You know how I feel and you write it.” I typed out a statement on the laptop computer I brought with me from Boston. Thomas studied it through the bars, dodging the camera flashes and forth so I could read the screen. He suggested a few changes, and then said it was OK.

“The warden has asked me if I would like to make a statement. I do not want to do so. I have asked my lawyer to inform the press as follows: I am leaving the world at peace with myself and with the Almighty. I feel remorse for the things that I did. I hope that young people today will learn that violence is not an answer. I hope that the legal system learns that lesson, too. The death penalty is not a solution.”

One of the guards summoned me to take a phone call at 10:45 p.m. It was my office. The Supreme Court had turned down the appeal. The guard was still standing against the wall. A sparkle of disappointment shot down my spine. I thought I was prepared for this news. I was not. I was convinced that our claims were strong, and that the system was both illegal and morally compelling. I felt betrayed by the courts.

All emotion drained from my face as I returned to the cellblock to share the news with Thomas. He was quiet. He nodded his head and said, “I handled it well. He was my spiritual adviser. He pointed out that conversation and asked if I felt I could be Thomas’ oldest child) and keep the other years ago in California.” I told him I would hand them to me. “I want you to have these,” he said. “One of them is my wedding ring myself.” I returned to the cellblock, but conversation did not come easily that last hour with Thomas. He withdrew as we talked about death. He wondered what was on the other side. He felt confident that something better lay ahead. He told me he had lived a long life—unlike his brother, who was stabbed to death on the streets of Harlem at age 26. He did not wish to spend his life as an inmate in the sick bay, and he described the way they were treated by the guards as monstrously degrading. He said he was ready to go.

At 11:41 p.m., the warden arrived with the phalanx of guards who would accompany Thomas to the death room. I would be permitted to stay with him, but I feared I would lose my composure if I did not have my own statement to give to the press. I hoped the press would be outside the gate, but I feared I would lose my composure if they were.

At 12:11 a.m., the warden, several guards and a lab-coated official walked single file out of the death room. Everyone stood up as they walked by, except me. I could not. A lawyer was standing at my chair and said, “He handled it well. He was OK.” I thanked him for telling me and left.

The press talked with the warden in his office for an hour. He handed me out of the prison gate. There was no one to give my statement to. The night and a dark road lay ahead. I leave my statement here as a small tribute to a client and friend.

“Thomas Ward’s case is a good example of the unfairness and arbitrariness of our death penalty system in the United States. Mr. Ward was tried and convicted as an African-American, did not receive a fair trial. My colleagues and I have worked for nine years, trying to get Mr. Ward a new trial. But the bottom line is that no matter how fair a trial he received, our legal system does not have any reliable means of sorting out who deserves death and who does not. As a result, the people on death row are often there simply because, as in this case, they did not have enough money for “dream team” lawyers or even competent lawyers. Or they had been wrongfully convicted without evidence. Or, as in this case, the courts announced new principles but refused to apply them to people who had already been tried. This is not a fault of the law, but rather of the wisdom of our society to know who should live and who should die, our legal system should not be in the business of killing people.”

RECOGNITION OF REAR ADM. RAY R. SAREERAM

HON. JAMES V. HANSEN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 1, 1995

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize and honor Rear Adm. Ray R. Sareeram, Supply Corps, U.S. Navy, as he prepares to retire on October 1 1995. Rear Admiral Sareeram is completing over 33 years of dedicated service to the Navy and our Nation.

A native of Sacramento, CA, Rear Admiral Sareeram graduated from Sacramento State College and was commissioned through Officer Candidate School in 1962. He subsequently earned a masters of business administration degree from the University of Michigan, and is a graduate of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces.

Currently, Rear Admiral Sareeram is the director, Supply Programs and Policy Division, Office of the Chief of Naval Operations. Admiral Sareeram has distinguished himself in one of the most crucial flag-ration logistics billets in the Navy. His leadership and vision has been instrumental in maintaining the high state of readiness our naval forces rely upon to meet the global commitments with which they are tasked.

Rear Admiral Sareeram’s other tours ashore have included command at the Naval Supply Center in Oakland, CA, and at the Ogden Defense Depot in the great State of Utah. Admiral Sareeram served as fleet supply officer, U.S. Pacific Fleet during the Desert Storm conflict. He also served as deputy chief of staff for supply, Commander Task Force 73 in the Philippine Islands. Other tours include service at headquarters, Naval Supply Systems Command, Washington DC; Navy Ships Parts Control Center Mechanicsburg, PA; and, service in Saigon during the Vietnam war.

Rear Admiral Sareeram served at sea as supply officer aboard U.S.S. Kenneth D. Baily, a destroyer based in Mayport, FL; as assistant supply officer on U.S.S. Sylvia, a fast combat stores ship out of Naples Italy; and as supply officer on board U.S.S. Emory S. Land, a submarine tender based in Norfolk, VA.

Rear Admiral Sareeram’s decorations include the Defense Superior Service Medal, the Legion of Merit with one Gold Star, the Bronze Star, the Meritorious Service Medal with three Gold Stars, and numerous unit and campaign medals.

Rear Admiral Sareeram is a dynamic and resourceful naval officer totally committed to excellence. A visionary, Admiral Sareeram has led, won in downsizing and streamlining operations without degradation of service to the fleet. His efforts have ensured our naval forces readiness levels are at historic highs even during these times of budget reductions.

Mr. Speaker, Ray Sareeram, his wife, Cathy, and their three children, have made many sacrifices during his 33-year naval career. It is only fitting that we should recognize their many accomplishments and thank them for the many years of service to our country.
I ask all of my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to join me today in wishing this great American every success as well as “Fair Winds and Following Seas” as he brings to close a distinguished naval career.

DEPARTMENTS OF VETERANS AFFAIRS AND HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT, AND INDEPENDENT AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1996

HON. EARL POMEROY
OF NORTH DAKOTA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 27, 1995

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2099) making appropriations for the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and for sundry independent agencies, boards, commissions, corporations, and offices for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1996, and for other purposes:

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Chairman, today I am supporting passage of the VA, HUD, Independent Agencies appropriations bill for fiscal year 1996. But I do so with reservation.

Affordable, safe, clean housing is a basic need which eludes many low-income families and elderly individuals. We should not be making extreme cuts to housing programs as our elderly population increases and personal income erodes for the working poor. It is ironic that as we push more people into the at-risk population for becoming homeless, we cut homeless programs by almost half.

I hope that my colleagues on the conference committee will be amenable to any increases suggested by their Senate counterparts.

Additionally, I supported the Stokes-Boehlert amendment to the VA-HUD-Independent Agencies appropriations bill, which eliminated legislative language that would gut portions of the Clean Water Act, the Clean Air Act, the Community Right-to-Know Act, and the Safe Drinking Water Act. If the amendment had been approved it would have protected both public health and the legislative process.

Under the Stokes-Boehlert amendment the legislative process, to which we have grown accustomed in this country, would have been preserved. Throughout her life, Marjorie Black Wilson gave freely of her time and talents. For many years, she volunteered in city schools where she counseled teenage girls on the importance of education. She also had a great love for the arts and theater. In remembering Marjorie, friends recall that she was the type of person who always expected the best from people. Marjorie encouraged others, and she inspired them to reach their fullest potential. They also recall that during her long battle with cancer, Marjorie did not retreat, but she drew them even closer and sought to educate women of color about the disease.

Just recently, The St. Louis American paid special tribute to Marjorie Black Wilson and acknowledged her contributions to the St. Louis community. The article captures the spiritual and inspirational energy that Marjorie brought to each of us. I pleased to share this article with my colleagues and the nation.

Mr. Speaker, the passing of Marjorie Black Wilson brings to a close a rich, full life devoted to family, friends, and the community. Those of us who had the privilege to know Marjorie will always remember her zest for living. My wife, Kay, and I extend our deepest sympathy to her husband, Earl; to her daughters, Denise, Stacy, Kim, and other members of the Wilson family. We take comfort in knowing that Marjorie’s spirit lives on.

NOTING THE PASSING OF MARJORIE BLACK WILSON

HON. LOUIS STOKES
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 1, 1995

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Speaker, I am saddened to rise today and report the passing of Marjorie Black Wilson. Marjorie was a very gifted and inspirational woman who was loved by all who knew her. On July 16, 1995, the St. Louis community mourned her passing after a prolonged illness. I join my colleague from Mississippi, Bill Clay, his wife, Carol, and many other as we reflect upon the life and legacy of this talented and courageous individual.

One of the things she would do is tell them (the students) about her travels,” and Cora Cade-Lemmon who knew Mrs. Wilson for four years. “She had an Afrocentric spelling bee where she would give the girls awards.”

Mrs. Wilson was expecting the best from people, Cade-Lemmon added. Cade-Lemmon recalled one day when Wilson, who wanted to give fruit as a reward to the students for good work on their projects. She said that Marjorie was observed about how the children would receive the kind gesture.

“We were thinking these kids aren’t going to be into fruit,” Cade-Lemmon said. “It turned out to be one of the best awards we had.”

During her eight-year battle with cancer, Mrs. Wilson worked diligently to educate women of color about the disease. She is featured in a program to be aired this summer on PBS on options for black women stricken with cancer.

“Margie dealth with her illness as she did with her life, accepting those things she could not change, always including family and friends in her endeavors and fighting the good fight until the end,” said Elizabeth J. Chandler, a close friend of Mrs. Wilson.

“I guess the thing I remember most about her is that she was a cancer survivor,” Cade-Lemmon said. “Her love for life, she lived life fully and encouraged the girls to do the same. She didn’t talk about her illness. She focused on the girls and their development. She put them first.”

Mrs. Wilson frequently traveled with her students to visit black colleges and universities across the nation. An admirer of poetry, Mrs. Wilson often took her books with her on such trips, Cade-Lemmon said. “She felt very strongly that only African Americans can save African-American children and that we must lift while we climb.”

Mrs. Wilson’s ability to lift as she climbed also spread to the world of arts and theater, and she frequently found herself enjoying plays at the St. Louis Black Repertory Theater with friends.

“Mrs. Wilson was an appreciator and champion of the arts. She encouraged all artists and was a source of inspiration to us all,” said Shirley Simmons, an artist and friend of Mrs. Wilson for 10 years.

In what was described by one friend as “a tapostry of love,” Cade-Lemmon said Mrs. Wilson will be best remembered for her kindness and generosity as she embraced life fully and forcefully.

“One of the things she would do is tell them (the students) about her travels,” and Cora Cade-Lemmon who knew Mrs. Wilson for four years. “She had an Afrocentric spelling bee where she would give the girls awards.”

A rosary Mass will be celebrated 7 p.m. Friday, July 22, at St. Nicholas Catholic Church, 701 N. 19th Street. A brief prayer service will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday, July 22. Burial will follow in Calvary Cemetery in North St. Louis.

HON. GERALD B.H. SOLOMON
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, August 2, 1995
Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, the following is a copy of the Captive Nation’s Week proclamation which I am submitting for the RECORD:

Whereas, the dramatic changes in Central and Eastern Europe, Central Asia, Africa and Central America have fully vindicated the concept with and support for the just aspirations of the Captive Nations Week Resolution, which the United States Congress passed in 1959, President Eisenhower signed as Public law 86-90, and every president since has proclaimed annually; and

Whereas, the resolution demonstrated the foresight of the Congress and has consistently been, through official and private media, a basic theme of the new dispensation and confidence to all the captive nations; and

Whereas, the recent liberation of many captive nations is a great cause for jubilation, it is vitally important that we recognize that numerous other captive nations remain under occupation, do not have a voice in the dictatorship of the self-appointed, and the residual structure of Russian imperialism; among others, Cuba, Mainland China, Tibet, Vietnam, Idol-Ural (Tartarstan etc.) the Far Eastern Republic (Siberyaks); and

Whereas, the Russian invasion and massacre of Chechenia,—a once-again declared, independent state—evoke the strongest condemnation by all given to rules of international law, human rights, and national self-determination; and

Whereas, the freedom loving peoples of the remaining captive nations (well over 1 billion people) look to the United States as the citadel of human freedom and to its people as leaders in bringing about their freedom and independence from communist dictatorship and imperial rule; and

Whereas, the Congress by unanimous vote passed P.L. 86-90, establishing the third week in July each year as “Captive Nations Week,” and inviting our people to observe such a week with appropriate prayers, ceremonies and activities, expressing our great sympathy with and support for the just aspirations of the still remaining captive peoples.

Now, therefore, I do hereby proclaim that the week commencing July 16-22, 1995 to be observed as “Captive Nations Week.” I invite the citizens to join with others in observing this week by offering prayers and dedicating our efforts for the peaceful liberation of the remaining captive nations.

In witness whereof, I hereunto set my hand and cause the seal of the United States of America to be affixed this 2nd day of July 1995.

HON. JACK FIELDS
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, August 2, 1995
Mr. FIELDS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, a great friend of mine, Dr. Haden E. McKay, Jr., of Humble, TX, will receive the Grand Lodge 50-Year Masonic Service Award at ceremonies to be held tomorrow. I want to take a moment to recognize this outstanding community leader who has devoted his life to improving the lives of so many of his neighbors.

Dr. McKay, now 87 years old, retired as mayor of Humble, TX, in May after 24 years in office. He began his service on the Humble city council when he opened up his medical practice in town, back in 1938. During World War II, his service in the U.S. Army Medical Corps forced him to suspend his medical practice, to raise up his city council seat. When he returned from the war, he resumed his medical practice and his public service.

As much as he loves medicine, and as much as he loves working to make Humble a better community in which to live and raise a family, Dr. McKay loves his wife of 54 years, Lillian, more. With the pressures of public office now behind him, Lillian and he can finally spend more time together.

Mr. Speaker, in an interview with the Houston Chronicle 4 years ago, Dr. McKay explained that he chose a career in doctoring for the same reason he chose to enter public service: to help people. He has done more to help more people than probably anyone else in the history of Humble, TX.

Now Dr. McKay is being honored by the Humble Masonic Lodge for his years of service to the lodge and to his community. This certainly is not the first honor accorded to Dr. McKay. It would take me hours to list the medical, civic, and other awards and honors that he has received during the course of his medical career and his years of public service.

At this time when many Americans question the motives of their elected public officials, I wish more Americans could know Haden McKay as I know him, and as the men and women of Humble know him. His half-century return from the war, he resumed his medical practice. It is rapidly supplanting. Only the most effective managed care plans can BOTH reduce costs and improve wellness. But the public sector at least, managed care has become a preoccupation—perhaps even an obsession—for private insurers, employers, and individuals, as well as for legislators and the every level of government. Yet it is an obsession that obscures the need for greater scrutiny of the managed care industry, in order to prevent the potentially irreparable damage to the future viability, quality and ethical standards of health care providers, as well as to the good health of many millions of Americans.

In other words, before we continue this headlong rush into uncharted territory, we need to pause and take stock, to make sure our compass is set correctly. We need to ask (and answer) some tough questions:

Where is the heat of the current debate, which I believe represents nothing less than a war for the values of health care, and even the soul of the managed care industry.

The dilemma is essentially a simple one: what is “managed health care” and should it primarily benefit payers or patients? It is largely designed as a blunt instrument for containing health costs—as many policy-makers in Washington and dozens of state capitol believe? Or—as many managed care advocates would like to believe—is something else: a genuine health care delivery reform that shifts the historic emphasis from acute and episodic illness to the prevention and maintenance of wellness.

This is not an idle question. If managed care is primarily the former—a way to contain costs—then we may be wasting our time worrying about ethics. As indicated by the recent publicity over the failure of some HMOs to pay for emergency services, if the bottom line is all that counts the patient and the provider will both suffer (this is true whether the bottom line is Medicare savings or higher dividends for shareholders). Of course, we would all like to believe that effective managed care will restrain costs and improve wellness. But the plain fact is, in the public sector at least, MOST managed care activities have been carried out in the name of short term cost containment rather than genuine health system reform.

There are perhaps several ironies here. The first, of course, is that there is increasing evidence that managed care is not much more effective over time in holding down health costs that the fee for service system it is rapidly supplanting. Only the most highly organized and self-contained plans—staff and group model HMOs—have any measurable track record over time in holding down costs. For most other managed care, in the past the brief initial flurry of savings—often driven more by the arbitrary demands of payers...

than any inherent efficiencies in most organizations—costs seem to rise at about the same rate as the industry as a whole.

A second irony is that the major underlying increases in the American health industry have little or nothing to do with either managed care or fee for service systems. They are affected by such factors as the large and ever-growing numbers of uninsured, continuing advances in expensive technology on both the outpatient and inpatient fronts, and the fact that no one has effectively cured most Americans from demanding the most and the best no matter what health plan they enroll in. (It can be argued that the primary reason that the so-called "point of service" managed care plans—the most costly and least controllable—are the plans that usually score highest in consumer satisfaction among HMOs.)

The third, and perhaps greatest, irony is that the steps which clearly could reduce health costs over time—prevention, wellness and public health services—are the last services added and the first ones on the chopping block when the primary goals are short term cost cutting and profit-taking.

Certainly, there is no disagreement about the importance of preventive measures aimed at improving the individual and community-wide health status. Preventive health can minimize both the potential for excessive care in the fee for service environment and the potential for providing new services in the managed care environment. Moreover, the assignment of patients to primary care gatekeepers who are able and willing to maintain a continuum of care around the patient's care, also improve a patient's health, and thus hold down long term health costs, even if more services are needed in the short run. Most of these features must be fully integrated into HMO's not just grafted onto the service medicine. Rather, they depend on managed care plans. I do not believe it is inevitable that TennCare represents the future of managed care—but if we hope to expand such programs to include a substantial proportion of Medicare beneficiaries, we must act quickly, together, to set tough standards for equity, fairness, access, quality and fiscal integrity in managed care plans.

Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Mr. NEAL. Mr. Speaker, on August 12, 1995, the St. Joseph's Society of Palmer, MA, will celebrate its 100-year anniversary. Located in the village of Thorndike, the St. Joseph's Society has served generations of Polish-Americans as a social, spiritual, and athletic organization.

Upon the occasion of its 100-year anniversary, I proudly take this opportunity to enter the Nineteenth Century found people leaving their respective homelands for many and varied reasons to start life over in the New World. The first Poles to arrive in the Town of Palmer came in 1888.

In 1891 the Rev. Chalupka of Chicopee was instrumental in getting the Polish settlers of Thorndike and the other three villages of the town of Palmer together and form a society. It took nearly four years, and in April of 1895 the St. Joseph's Society was incorporated as an Insurance Aid Society in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The membership grew quickly and all the villages were represented among the members of the society.

Under the Insurance Aid Society all the members received weekly benefits of three dollars for thirteen weeks when sick.

In 1902 the society chosen Stanley Ziema, Symon Jorzak, John Bielski, Michael Pelczarski, Frank Salamon, and public health services are the last services added and the first ones on the chopping block when the primary goals are short term cost cutting and profit-taking.

HON. DAVE WELDON OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, last Sunday, July 23, readers of the Florida Today were treated to a classic case of misinformation by a newspaper that still has not gotten over the results of the 1994 election. The charges leveled against me in the newspaper’s open letter with respect to the veteran’s hospital and the space program are a gross distortion of facts.

Regarding my efforts in support of the space program, the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD speaks louder than any words I could offer: Full funding for the space station; an actual increase in funding for the shuttle program; introduction of more stable, multiyear funding for space station; and an innovative, first-ever $10 million authorization in the NASA budget for investment in our Nation’s developing spaceports.

Contrast this with the facts not reported by the Florida Today about my predecessor’s record: He voted in each of his 4 years to fund the shuttle program below the President’s budget request. This was, including myself, voted to support the President’s budget level for shuttle operations; less than 1 year ago, he voted to cut $400 million from the shuttle program—KSC derives two-thirds of their budget from this account; since 1992, my predecessor voted to reduce actual shuttle program dollars by $1 billion. This year Republicans are proposing to increase it.

Selective reporting and journalism does little to foster a real debate on ideals and public policy and can seriously undermine morale at KSC.

A July 20, Florida Today editorial, stated: “Brevard county did pretty well in a congressional vote Tuesday on space and VA spending..." I would like to point out that veteran’s were relieved after the vote because U.S. Rep. Dave Weldon managed to salvage $17.2 million for a veterans clinic in Viera.”

I see this clinic as the first step in the process of keeping the VA hospital alive and so, apparently, did the Florida Today, until its turnabout in its open letter. So much for consistency.

Florida Today mentioned being baffled these past 8 months. If by that they mean they are baffled about a vision for space that goes beyond today’s paradigm of Government run programs; baffled to why so many cherished liberal enclaves such as NEA, NEH, and countless ineffective Government programs are on a collision course with a fiscally responsible Congress; then being baffled is simply a euphemism for being desperate. Such desperate reporting takes place frequently in this beltway. It’s unfortunate to see it here in Brevard as well.

I support our space program and our veterans. But balancing our budget is crucial if we are going to have funds for space and VA care in the future. In 1996 we will spend $270 billion in interest payments on the debt. Imagine the good we could do today if previous Congressmen had the will to make the tough decisions and act responsibly.

HON. LEE H. HAMILTON
OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to insert my Washington Report for Wednesday, August 2, 1995 into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

MEDICARE: PAST SUCCESSES, FUTURE CHALLENGES

July 30th marked the thirtieth anniversary of Medicare. Although many in 1965 predicted hospitalizations as a result of Medicare's enactment, it is today without question one of the most widely supported federal government programs. And for good reason: Medicare has contributed to enormous improvements in the well-being and quality of life of older Americans. Americans of all ages agree that the assurance of access to medical care for the elderly must be preserved.

But Medicare also faces many challenges. Health care costs that have significantly outpaced inflation and growing numbers of older Americans have made it difficult to adequately finance the program. Congress has made numerous changes to Medicare over the years cutting payments to health care providers and placing stricter limits on benefits. But financing problems remain, and will lead to hardships for the 37 million Medicare beneficiaries who depend on the program if the problems are not addressed soon.

SUCCESSES

The Medicare program consists of two parts: Hospital Insurance (HI), which is funded by payroll taxes; and Supplemental Medical Insurance (SMI), which is paid for by beneficiaries and providers. HI covers hospital care and SMI covers post-hospital care.

Before Medicare was enacted, less than half of Americans under 65 had health insurance, and only 30% lived above the poverty line. Many older persons had to choose between medical care and other necessities because they could not afford both. Financial pressures forced some to forego treatment until it was too late. Today, almost all older Americans—97%—have health care coverage, and the percentage of them living in poverty has been reduced by half. Life expectancy for an American born today is over five years higher than it was for those born in 1960.

While Medicare is not perfect, its administration, especially over 2% of program spending, considerably lower than the administrative costs of the average large private insurer. And while all Medicare enrollees receive coverage regardless of income, comes most Medicare benefits go to those who need them most—older persons with incomes of $25,000 or less.

CHALLENGES

Medicare's impending financing problems are of great concern to seniors receiving Medicare benefits, as well as future beneficiaries who question its availability during their years. The program, which was less than $5 billion in 1967, now total over $131 billion. The trustees of the Medicare trust fund project that HI will become insolvent in 2002, just 7 years away. This funding shortfall reflects the high rate of inflation in the health care sector, an aging population, and growth in the quantity of services provided. Since SMI is financed with premiums and general revenues, it does not have the same financing problems as HI.

Long-range deficits have been projected for HI since the early 1970s. In the early 1980s, Congress took action to protect Medicare's solvency by increasing tax revenues and re-forming how benefits are reimbursed. These reforms, along with an expanding economy, improved Medicare's financial outlook in the near-term.

Currently, there are numerous proposals to reform the Medicare system. I believe that Congress should consider these reform proposals with a critical eye. Several proposals have already credited much interest, but long-term funding problems remain.

One proposal would mean annual limits on spending in the program by giving older people a choice of private health insurance plans as alternatives to a standard federal program. The idea would be to make an expanded choice of available Medicare beneficiaries at the time of initial eligibility and during subsequent annual open enrollment periods.

Another idea would require the government to give beneficiaries vouchers to buy private insurance. The Medicare system would cease to be a system of defined benefits and become instead a program providing a defined contribution toward the cost of health care.

Other proposals would offer options like medical savings accounts or managed care, such as Health Maintenance Organizations and Prefer Provider Organizations. Some would basically keep the current system but increase the SMI beneficiary, increase the Medicare deductible, and charge copayments on home health services.

MY VIEW

Over the past three decades, Medicare has proven itself an effective and essential element in raising the standard of living of older Americans. Medicare is a commitment by all Americans that every American who has health care is most likely to be needed, it will be available. I believe that this core commitment must be preserved. Reforms in the Medicare system must be considered: how ever, wholesale immediate cuts are not the answer. Reforms cannot be considered without focusing on our inflationary health care system.

The budget resolution supported by the congressional leadership calls for a huge transfer of $270 billion reduction in Medicare spending; that's about 30% of the money that the resolution needs to balance the federal budget over the next 7 years. I voted against this budget resolution, but because these cuts simply cannot be made without doing harm to the beneficiaries and the health care system. But it is also true that there is no way to balance the federal budget or even achieve significant deficit reduction over the long haul without reducing the growth of Medicare.

The cuts proposed in this budget resolution are much greater than what is needed to maintain Medicare's solvency. Instead, I believe we should enact more modest short-term savings that would extend the life of the trust fund and give us more time to examine the best policy options for longer-term reform. I believe we must be cognizant of the responsibilities of Medicare reform: affordability, universality, quality, cost containment, fairness to seniors and providers. It is not my preference to reduce payments to beneficiaries under Medicare. We must act decisively yet carefully to preserve the promise of Medicare for the next thirty years and beyond.

TRIBUTE TO TED LEIPPRANDT

HON. DAVE CAMP
OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Mr. CAMP. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to recognize Ted Leipprandt of Pigeon, MI, as he celebrates his retirement. For the past 36 years, Ted Leipprandt has devoted his time and energy to the advancement of Michigan's dry bean industry. On August 7, 1995, Ted will be honored for his role in Michigan's agricultural sector through the Michigan Bean Shippers Association summer conference.

Ted has worked tirelessly for the advancement of agricultural issues since his introduction to the industry in 1959 as an agronomist for the Cooperative Elevator Co. Over the course of the next two decades, his dedication was awarded with several promotions, culminating in his ascendancy to general manager in 1974.

In his capacity as the cooperative's general manager, Ted led the company through a period of rapid growth and industrialization. He devoted countless hours to ensure the company's significant expansion was a success. Under his leadership, the cooperative was carried into the latter half of the 20th century.

Ted's dedication to the agricultural industry is paralleled only by his devotion to the community. Currently, Ted sits on the board of the Detroit Edison Co., and of the East Central Farm Credit System. In the past, he spent 2 years as the president of the Michigan 4-H Foundation. Ted is also a member of the Salem United Methodist Church. Through his active role in organizations like the Michigan Bean Shippers Association and the Rotary Organization, he has continually made significant contributions to his community, and to the entire State of Michigan.

Mr. Speaker, Ted Leipprandt is an outstanding individual who has instilled his sense of honesty and trust into all that he comes in contact with. He has dedicated his life to improving Michigan's dry bean industry. I know you will join me in recognizing Ted for all that he has done as he celebrates his retirement from the Cooperative Elevator Co.

TRIBUTE TO LEUKEMIA SOCIETY VOLUNTEERS

HON. MARGE ROUKEMA
OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, I rise to thank DialAmerica Marketing Inc., for its dedicated work on behalf of those suffering from leukemia. Based in my congressional district in Mahwah, NJ, DialAmerica is a company with a heart, a company that uses its resources to go to the aid of those in need.

This Friday, August 4, DialAmerica will officially hand over a $5 million check to the Leukemia Society of America. This is money that has been raised through a magazine subscription program in which 12.5 percent of the company's proceeds is contributed to the Leukemia Society for research, patient assistance, and patient information. DialAmerica joined forces with the Leukemia Society and the CURE 2000 fight against leukemia and other related diseases. The initial contribution to the society was $40,000 and the company now contributes an average $1.8 million annually. I quote Dwayne Howell, president and chief executive officer of the Leukemia Society.

DialAmerica is our largest corporate sponsor. Not only do we receive "no cost" dollars but we benefit from increased public awareness of the society. DialAmerica has proven to be an invaluable source of support for our research program.

I know personally the tragedy of leukemia: My husband and I lost our son, Todd, to leukemia in 1976 at the age of 17. At that time, bone marrow transplants and other techniques that offered hope were only in their experimental stages. Since then, many advances have been made that have spared thousands of other parents the heartbreak we faced. It is thanks to the dedicated, selfless people of the Leukemia Society—through their fundraising, their research, the goodwill, and the awareness they promote—that hope can be maintained. The people of the Leukemia Society are a shining example of how the kindness and caring of volunteers can support direct research as it races to a cure.

Today, we are within grasp of a cure but research costs money. I thank God for those who are willing to contribute to this cause and pray that with their help a cure can be found and that no child will ever again have to suffer from this terrible disease.

A TRIBUTE TO THE 30TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE MUSICAL DRAMA "TEXAS"

HON. LARRY COMBEST
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Mr. COMBEST. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to salute the musical drama, "Texas," as they celebrate their 30th anniversary. Set in the natural confines of Palo Duro Canyon State Park in the Texas Panhandle, "Texas" has maintained its reputation as the best attended outdoor drama in the country, as well as the Official Play of the State of Texas. The Palo Duro Canyon State Park is located near Canyon, TX, and is administered by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. Since its inception in 1966, "Texas," produced by the nonprofit Texas Panhandle Heritage Foundation, Inc. has contributed over $1 million from show revenues to the department.

Written by Pulitzer Prize winning author, Paul Green, "Texas" portrays the struggle and hardships, celebration and joy of early settlers living in the Texas panhandle. Well over 2 1/2 million people from across the country and around the world have come to the Grand Canyon of Texas to watch this epic story, which captures the uniqueness of the Lone Star State.

The talented cast of over 80 singers and dancers act out the historic tale on the stage of an open-air theater with a 600-foot cliff serving as a backdrop. "Texas" uses great choreography and stirring music to tell its story. Modern technology has improved props, sound effects, and light displays to help make "Texas" nights an unforgettable experience.

The play "Texas" embodies the true values of a great musical romance. I now ask that you, Mr. Speaker, and my colleagues join me in commending "Texas" for 30 wonderful seasons. As we look forward to the next 30 seasons, I am confident this extraordinary musical drama will continue its professional depiction of early Texas history for our children and our children's children.
TRIBUTE TO HARRY PASTER

HON. GARY L. ACKERMAN
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join with the constituents of my district in honoring Mr. Harry Paster. Next month, one of the guiding lights of American advertising will retire after a most distinguished 47-year career. Harry Paster, a legend in the advertising world, will be moving from his position as executive vice president of the American Association of Advertising Agencies (AAAA) on September 30, 1995.

American advertising is one of the nation's most vibrant and important industries, and for over 77 years, the leadership of the AAAA has advanced and strengthened the advertising agency business throughout the U.S. One of the most respected and dedicated members of that leadership team has been the AAAA's executive vice president, Harry Paster.

Mr. Paster, who earned his bachelor's degree at City College of New York and his master's degree from New York University, started with AAAA as a statistician in 1948. Subsequently, he was appointed to serve as senior vice president, and in 1960, to executive vice president of the association. In each of these positions, Mr. Paster demanded the highest standards from his industry and from himself.

In 1992 Mr. Paster's dynamic career and extraordinary contributions to the advertising agency business were aptly recognized when he was named Man of the Year by the Advertising Club of New York and awarded the prestigious Silver Medal by the American Advertising Federation.

When Harry Paster retires next month from the industry that he has nurtured and led for almost five decades, his humor, his counsel and his unparalleled insight into the people and the workings of the advertising business will be sorely missed. I ask all my colleagues in the House of Representatives to join me, and Harry's countless friends in commending Harry Paster for his dedicated service and in wishing him the very best for a most rewarding and fulfilling retirement.

VIEQUES LANDS TRANSFER ACT OF 1995

HON. CARLOS A. ROMERO-BARCELÓ OF PUERTO RICO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Mr. ROMERO-BARCELÓ. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing the Vieques Lands Transfer Act of 1995. The purpose of this legislation is to authorize and direct the transfer of 8,000 acres of land currently comprised of the U.S. Naval Ammunition Facility [NAF] to the municipality of Vieques.

The transfer will make Vieques an island free of the U.S. Navy's coastal training activities on the island of Vieques. The island is about 33,000 acres or 51 square miles of land and, according to the 1990 census, a population of 8,602. The island's two towns, Isabel Segunda and Esperanza, have populations of 1,702 and 1,656, respectively. The other residents are classified as rural inhabitants. Vieques is a civil-military municipality of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and is divided into seven wards--barrios.

The Navy and Marine Corps conduct Atlantic Fleet training and readiness exercises at the Puerto Rico-Virgin Island complex known as the Atlantic Fleet Weapons Training Range [AFWTR]. Headquartered at Roosevelt Roads Naval Station in Ceiba, PR, the complex consists of four ranges: the inner range on the east end of Vieques; the outer range which is an easterly ocean range extending both north and south of Puerto Rico; the underwater tracking range at St. Croix, VI; and an electronic warfare range which overlaps all of the ranges.

On Vieques, but outside the inner range, is the Naval Ammunition Facility [NAF] which occupies the entire range of the civilian zone--approximately 8,000 acres. The Navy uses this facility for deep storage of conventional ammunition such as the ordnance dock at Mosquito Pier, located on the northern coast of the NAF. From there, it is transported by truck to bunkers distributed throughout the NAF. Most of the ammunition is destined for off-island use by the Navy, the Marines and the Puerto Rican National Guard. Occasionally, ammunition is transferred overland from the NAF to the ground maneuver area located east of the civilian zone. At present, training exercises are not carried out at the NAF.

Since the 1940's, when the U.S. Navy acquired 78 percent--approximately 25,000 acres of Vieques territory, the island has suffered a prolonged and ever-increasing economic crisis and a massive out-migration. From a population of around 15,000 in the 1940's, Vieques currently has 8,602 inhabitants. An unemployment rate higher than 50 percent; lack of adequate housing, health, educational facilities, and a growing crime rate are among the clearest manifestations of the critical economic situation on Vieques. According to the 1990 census, the per-capita income in the island was $2,997, and the Viequense families with an income below the established poverty level reached 70 percent in 1989.

Women must be flown by emergency plane to the main island of Puerto Rico to give birth due to the poor conditions of Vieques' hospital. The island also suffers from the highest rate of broken families among Puerto Rico's 78 municipalities.

In the late 1970's, Viequense fishermen spearheaded a drive to stop the bombing on the island and end restrictions on fishing. Many of them were arrested.

In 1980, our colleague from California and now ranking minority member of the House National Security Committee, Congressman RON DELLUMS, directed a House Armed Services Committee panel review of the naval training activities on the island of Vieques. This panel concluded in its final report to the committee that the Navy should locate an alternative site and that "[i]n the interim, the use of Vieques should be minimized with the Navy working closely with the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico in implementing programs to alleviate the impact of its activities and in particular explore turning over additional land to the island for civilian use."

In 1983, while Governor of Puerto Rico, I signed an agreement with the Department of the Navy whereby the Puerto Rican Government agreed to drop all litigations in court against the military for ecological and economic damage on Vieques in exchange of a Navy commitment to mitigate the ecological impact of their activities and help with local economic development. All of the economic projects set up in Vieques with assistance from the Navy closed down within 1 or 2 years after initiating operations.

Lack of control of over two-thirds of the island by the municipal government is widely recognized as the principal cause of Vieques' economic and social woes. Trying to find a solution to the current problems, the local planning board and the municipal government, in close coordination with the government of Puerto Rico and the State legislature have designed and commenced the implementation of a tourism industry strategy. But the truth of the fact is that this gloomy economic picture can only be improved if and when the municipal government of Vieques acquires sufficient lands to develop the required infrastructure for the implementation of the tourism industry strategy.

My bill would transfer the 8,000 acres of land that currently comprise the NAF to the municipal government of Vieques. The transfer would take place only after the municipality submits to the Secretary of Defense a detailed plan of the public purposes for which the conveyed property will be used—such as housing, schools, hospitals, libraries, parks and recreation, agriculture, conservation and economic development—and such plan is approved by the committees with jurisdiction in both the U.S. House of Representatives and the Senate.

The eastern part of Vieques, which comprises approximately 15,000 acres, would still remain U.S. Navy property. This means that, even with the adoption of this bill, the Navy would still control nearly half of the island. Puerto Rico has a long and proud tradition of supporting national defense. This has been shown time and time again as hundreds of thousands of Puerto Ricans have demonstrated their valor and patriotism through service in the U.S. Armed Forces. Today, more than ever, we stand ready to assume an even bigger role in the defense and values for which our Nation stands.

This bill is in no way contrary to that tradition, but rather one that I believe provides a solution which will be beneficial for both the people of Vieques and the U.S. Navy. I am hopeful that it will receive favorable congressional action at an early date.

HEALTH UNIT COORDINATORS DAY

HON. DAVID E. BONIOR
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, 1995 is the 50th anniversary of the profession of health unit coordinators. Michigan, along with many other States and local municipalities have designated August 23, two weeks from today, as Health Unit Coordinator Day. I support these
Mr. Speaker, as I see it, we have two options: either first, hope that the Senate restores the funding that the House has cut from these small rural health programs; or second, plan for the future and offer an alternative approach that recognizes both the necessity of maintaining the small stream of funding that goes to rural areas and the reality that the current set of disparate programs are too small and limited in scope to effectively and comprehensively address the problems facing rural America today.

Today I am introducing legislation that finds that middle ground. My bill is the result of countless discussions with rural residents, doctors, nurses, hospitals, and policymakers. It reflects the lessons they’ve learned and the experiences they’ve had with breaking through the chronic isolation that plagues rural America to provide care to its residents. My bill provides a new direction for rural health. It creates a single program aimed at enabling rural communities to develop their own sustainable health care delivery systems. Furthermore, it reaffirms that providing health care to underserved rural Americans is and will remain a priority.

Mr. Speaker, no community is viable without health care. Folks need to be healthy in order to go to work, pay taxes, attend school, and raise a family. That is why the decision to live in a rural area must not be a decision to accept inferior health care. Access to care in rural America is critical for both our local rural economies as well as the health of each individual rural American.

HONORING LINDA GALLIGAN-ROY

HON. PAT WILLIAMS OF MONTANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Ms. Roy has overcome tremendous personal challenges in addition to her professional success. At age 15, her mother’s death forced her to leave school and enter the working world to help her father care for her younger siblings. Today she continues to demonstrate zestful spirit and strength: recovering from a drug addiction with vivid reality. As she expressed in a letter to me, her goal is to stop at least one person from developing a drug addiction. I admire and salute both her selflessness and its potential.

It is people like Ms. Roy who are leading the way for other women and men who seek new opportunities. Her perseverance is inspirational; she leads by example. Mr. Speaker, I know the sacrifices and commitment necessary to accomplish all that this woman has, and I ask you to join me in honoring Ms. Linda Galligan-Roy.

HONORING LINDA GALLIGAN-ROY

HON. ROSA L. DeLAURO OF CONNECTICUT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Ms. DeLAURO. Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring a strong and devoted woman, Ms. Linda Galligan-Roy. Ms. Roy serves as a role model for each of us seeking to improve ourself and our community.

As a young widow battling a drug addiction, Ms. Roy has stood firm in the face of challenge. She has set difficult goals and has accomplished them through hard work and untiring dedication. Dubbed the “Concrete Queen,” Ms. Roy excels in the male-dominated field of construction work. While building houses, Ms. Roy breaks down the barriers women face in society. Her passion makes her strong and her determination makes her capable.

Ms. Roy has overcome tremendous personal challenges in addition to her professional success. At age 15, her mother’s death forced her to leave school and enter the working world to help her father care for her younger siblings. Today she continues to demonstrate zestful spirit and strength: recovering from her dependency on drugs, she aspires to be a writer and plans to enroll in college.

Ms. Roy not only hopes and strives to better herself but also to share what she has learned with others. She has written about many of her life experiences from her love of construction work to the devastating effect that drugs had on her life. In a piece entitled “A Knock on the Window,” she describes the horror of substance addiction with vivid reality. As she expressed in a letter to me, her goal is to stop at least one person from developing a drug addiction. I admire and salute both her selflessness and its potential.

It is people like Ms. Roy who are leading the way for other women and men who seek new opportunities. Her perseverance is inspirational; she leads by example. THE HEROIC EFFORTS OF 2D LT. EDWARD C. DAHLGREN IN WORLD WAR II

HON. JOHN ELIAS BALDACCI
OF MAINE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Mr. BALDACCI. Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to speak today about an exceptional Mainer who served this country with great honor and courage during one of history’s most terrifying wars, World War II.

To complete his mission in the face of insurmountable odds, 2d Lt. Edward C. Dahlgren exhibited uncommon courage and skill. He was awarded this country’s highest form of gratitude, the Congressional Medal of Honor. I would like to honor him again as the 50th anniversary of World War II draws near.

Second Lieutenant Dahlgren was the commander of the 3d Platoon that was charged with rescuing another American unit that was surrounded by the Germans in Oberhoffen, France. Lieutenant Dahlgren risked almost certain death to draw fire away from his fellow soldiers. He alone charged a fortified German position under heavy fire and fought his way into their building. Eight German soldiers surrendered. With his courage and skill, he alone attacked again—five times. The Germans surrendered. He attacked again—10 Germans surrendered, and again with another soldier—16 Germans surrendered. These heroic charges made by Lieutenant Dahlgren at fortified German strongholds resulted in the surrender of 49 Germans and the safety of the American platoon. Lieutenant Dahlgren truly earned this country’s highest honor.

Maine has a long and proud tradition of sending brave soldiers to fight for freedom at home and abroad. These men have exhibited enormous skill and unbreakable courage in the face of death. From Joshua Chamberlain in the Civil War through Gary Gordon in Somalia and countless numbers in between, Maine patriots have fought so that others might live free.

I am proud of Lieutenant Dahlgren for all that he has given to the world. He fought not only for America, but to rid the world from one of the most dangerous threats it had ever known, the Axis powers. The efforts of Lieutenant Dahlgren and his troops helped liberate Europe from the deadly grip of Nazism. This country and the world will never forget his sacrifice.

that is because Caremark’s guilty pleas stemmed from paying doctors to induce referrals of Medicare and Medicaid patients to the company’s several home care businesses. Although the Caremark case is not a pure physician self-referral case, it confirms that physicians are vulnerable—vulnerable to greed; vulnerable to pay-offs; and vulnerable to temptations.

Without a doubt, physician self-referral is bad for the public and bad for the patient. Study after study has shown that it inevitably encourages unnecessary duplication and overutilization of facilities and services, producing an overall significant increase in cost to the patient and to the Treasury in higher Medicare and Medicaid payments. As shown by the Caremark case, this type of unethical arrangement gives doctors powerful incentives to bend their professional judgment. Without laws to prohibit this type of behavior, doctors will continue to drift toward the opinion that medicine is just a business, and patients are theirs to be bought and sold.

Clarification of current law is necessary. Perhaps the main problem with the law is the administration’s inadequate delay in releasing the antireferral regulations. The lack of guidance has contributed to both confusion of the doctors and to the bank accounts of lawyers, who have often created unnecessary fears about the legislation. We must clarify, where necessary, the exceptions that would essentially negate the law. Last year, we worked extensively with a number of provider groups and organizations to develop amendments during health reform, which were included in H.R. 3600, but that unfortunately did not pass. Today, I offer legislation to amend and clarify the physician self-referral law.

Today’s bill includes a number of provisions designed to make the law clearer, more workable, and more acceptable to the provider community. The bill does the following: repeals the exception for physicians’ services; includes durable medical equipment and parenteral and enteral nutrients, equipment and supplies in the exception for in-office ancillary services; excepts shared facility services that are furnished under certain conditions; creates a prepaid plan exception in the case of a designated health service, if the designated health service is included in the services for which a physician or physician group is paid only on a capitated basis by a health plan pursuant to a written arrangement in which the physician or the physician group assumes financial risk for those services; includes an exception to the prosthetics, orthotics, and prosthetic devices and supplies designated health service by providing for prostheses replacing the lens of an eye, eyeglasses, or contact lenses; and

Mr. FOOTEY PETE STARK of California:

Mr. FOOTEY PETE STARK of California: OBJECTIVE AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES ACT OF 1930

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I am today introducing legislation to clarify, simplify, and improve the Medicare and Medicaid physician self-referral legislation, while maintaining its important protections against abuse of patients and expensive overutilization and over-billing of the Medicare and Medicaid Programs.

Last month, when Caremark International Inc., a former health care giant pleaded guilty to Federal fraud and kickback charges, two physicians were accused along with the company. It is predicted that several hundred more doctors eventually could face criminal prosecution before the investigation concludes—that is because Caremark’s guilty pleas stemmed from paying doctors to induce referrals of Medicare and Medicaid patients to the company’s several home care businesses. It isn’t fair, and it isn’t right.

Mr. FARR. Mr. Speaker, I rise to support H.R. 1103 in the strongest possible terms.
This bill, which amends and strengthens the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act—or PACA for those in the know, is one of the most important Federal agricultural programs for the farmer’s of California’s central coast. And, Mr. Speaker, it does not cost the taxpayer a dime.

PACA, which was first enacted in 1930, ensures that growers, packers, and produce dealers are paid in a timely manner for their produce without recourse to costly and time-consuming court litigation. Produce dealers and retailers must get a license from the USDA to market produce and their license fees support the program.

PACA is absolutely crucial for perishable fruits and vegetables such as strawberries or lettuce which are only marketable for a short time before they spoil. Almost every dollar of the $2.4 billion per year in agricultural production in my district is directly tied to the protections in PACA—it is as crucial to central coast specialty crop growers as the wheat and corn programs are to mid-western farmers. So I am very happy that the House is taking up this bill today that ensures a strong PACA program well into the next century.

I want to point out that this legislation includes an important provision for domestic flower growers. Fresh-cut flowers are every bit as perishable as lettuce, grapes, or other produce. But they are not included in PACA’s protections. This legislation will require the USDA to work with the flower industry to study the feasibility of including flowers within PACA.

I want to thank the Chairman ROBERTS and Mr. DE LA GARZA for their hard work in bringing this bill to the floor. I also want to thank my Subcommittee Chairman Ewing and friend Mr. Pombo for their hard work in bringing all sides of the produce industry together in agreement on this legislation. Finally, I want to thank Mr. Keith Pitts and Ms. Stacey Carry of the Agriculture Committee staff who given so much of their time to move this legislation forward.

So if you enjoy artichokes, strawberries, lettuce, tomatoes, or any other of the 160 fresh produce crops that my district produces, I urge you to support this legislation.

Mr. DE LA G ARZA for their hard work in bringing

HON. THOMAS J. MANTON
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Mr. MANTON. Mr. Speaker, last week, leaders of the U.S.-flag Merchant Marine gathered in New York City to pay tribute to retired Navy Rear Admiral Floyd Harry “Hoss” Miller, the president of the New York State Maritime College at Fort Skyler, a branch of the State University of New York. Having served with distinction as president of the New York Maritime College for 15 years, Admiral Miller has decided to move on to new challenges.

The most outstanding tribute to Admiral Miller, was the reaction of his students and colleagues to his announcement. Students at New York State Maritime and, indeed, leaders of the entire New York Maritime community were disappointed to learn that Admiral Miller was leaving. All seemed to agree that there were too many important projects that could not succeed without “Hoss” Miller’s guiding hand. During his service as president, Hoss Miller has transformed the Maritime College into a technologically advanced, state-of-the-art institution that is well equipped to train young men and women for the future. While the college has a long legacy of training sea-farers, Admiral Miller has broadened the training programs so that Maritime College graduates are prepared to meet the new challenges of a rapidly evolving transportation and trading system.

A member of the New York State Maritime college class of 1953, Admiral Miller possessed a deep commitment to the college. Many in this House, know from personal experience the strenuous efforts made by Admiral Miller and the other Academy presidents to ensure that the Federal Government honored its commitment to the U.S.-flag merchant marine and maritime education. Although in Congress seem to have forgotten an important lesson of history, namely that a nation without a merchant marine is doomed to fall both militarily and economically. Admiral Miller spent his last days in office urging Congress to reexamine this misguided philosophy which neglects maritime education and ignores the unfair maritime practices of our trading partners. Without Admiral Miller’s efforts, maritime colleges would be in even more perilous condition. Just as he fought hard for his students and his alma mater before Congress, Hoss Miller led the fight in Albany for increased State funding for education.

Prior to joining the college, Admiral Miller had an outstanding record of military service. From his start as a nuclear expert on the U.S.S. Enterprise, through his service off the coast of Vietnam as executive officer of the U.S.S. Bainbridge, Hoss Miller served with distinction and courage. From the Navy, Admiral Miller sought to serve his Nation in the field of education. He was thrilled by the prospects of preparing a future generation of leaders. Admiral Miller has been tremendously successful in this endeavor and indeed the men and women who trained at the college are part of his legacy.

Although Admiral Miller is leaving the college with a record of accomplishment most would envy, I am certain he will find numerous ways to continue to serve his Nation and his fellow citizens. I and the members of the New York delegation wish you every success in the future.

As we look ahead, I will take this opportunity to welcome Admiral Brown, the new president of the New York Maritime College. Admiral Brown was previously president of the Great Lakes Maritime College and is well known to Members of this House. Admiral Brown, we are pleased to have someone of your statute succeed our friend and we wish you every success in this new position.
President Washington was committed to providing security to the Northwest Territory and sent several commanders to lead the army. Each expedition was defeated, until President Washington appointed Maj. Gen. “Mad Anthony” Wayne.

In the spring of 1793, Wayne led his well equipped troops from Ft. Washington, which is present north of Cincinnati, and marched northward following a line of forts, such as Ft. Hamilton, that had been established. Rather than stopping at Ft. Jefferson, Wayne continued north for a few miles and built Ft. GreeneVille, around which later grew the city of Greenville. He met with the Indians and held discussions to arrange for a peace treaty, however the previous Indian successes encouraged them to fight. Eventually, the peace talks were called off and Wayne prepared for battle. He pushed further north and defeated the Indians at the site of Ft. Recovery where a previous battle had been lost by General St. Clair. Near the Maumee River at the Battle of Fallen Timbers on August 20, 1794, Wayne again decisively defeated the Indians. Wayne continued to press the Indians and in the fall of 1794, Wayne returned to Ft. GreeneVille.

Peace negotiations began in June of 1795 and continued through August and concluded with the signing of the Treaty of GreeneVille on August 3, 1795. The signing of the treaty by Gen. “Mad Anthony” Wayne, President George Washington and the Indians living in the territory ended 40 years of hostilities with the Indians west of the Ohio River.

The agreement brought about the safe settlement of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and part of Minnesota. Settlers could explore and move to the West without the fear of Indian attack and battle. The United States had taken its first step westward, ensuring stability for the future.

In 1912, as the late President Theodore Roosevelt stated in a speech made in Greenville, “Greenville is a most historical site. It marks one of the great epochs in the history of our nation. . . a starting point of America as a coming world power.” After the treaty was signed, the Stars and Stripes automatically changed from a flag of 13 colonies to the flag of the United States. A 15 star flag was hoisted over Ft. Greeneville by General Wayne. Eight years later, Ohio became the 17th State in the union.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I am proud to represent the citizens and the city of Greenville, OH. Our forefathers persevered in creating a free and safe Nation. We truly have a reason to celebrate and recognize the treaty signed in Greenville, OH, 200 years ago today.

Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, in the early morning hours of July 25 (Guam Time), Guam lost one of its most prominent leaders with the passing of Lt. Gov. Rudolph Guerrero Sablan. “Rudy” as we affectionately called him, was survived by his beloved wife Esperanza “Ancha” Cruz San Nicolas, children Rudy and Essie, and three grandchildren, Marie Antoinette, Jessica, and Mario.

Rudy always excelled at whatever he was tasked to do. He graduated as valedictorian of Father Duenas Memorial School in 1950 and went on to receive a bachelor’s degree in political science from Loyola University in Los Angeles, CA. Rudy went on to serve his country as he worked at a Navy Fleet Works Con- trol Center in the United States. Serving his country in Hawaii, Rudy was an intel- ligence analyst and area study specialist with the Army Psychological Warfare Unit. Rudy’s outstanding reputation was displayed through his selection to participate in various special administration assignments throughout Asia and the Pacific.

After his service ended, Rudy returned to his beloved island home. He began his service to Guam by entering the government of Guam workforce. Within a short time, Rudy was pro- moted to various administration positions in- cluding director of labor and personnel in 1961. Impressed with Rudy’s abilities, Gov. Manual F.L. Guerrero selected him to serve as assistant secretary of Guam and executive as- sistant to the Governor. During this time, Rudy had oversight over most of the executive branch of the executive branch of the Government of Guam.

After the Guerrero administration ended, Rudy went on to assume roles in the other two branches of Guam’s Government. These included the position of administrative director of the Guam International Authority. Under his leadership, movements to- ward the improvement, development, and modernization of the existing airport facilities were established. The massive airport expa- nsion movement would eventually provide more sufficient facilities for Guam to take advantage of its growing tourism economy.

While his move to the private sector, Rudy would maintain his stature in Guam politics and serve as a respected Democratic Party elder. Commanding a respectable amount of grassroots followers, Rudy made three attempts to garner the support of the people of Guam and attain the elected office of Governor. So on four different occasions throughout the years, he began his quest to merge the factions of the Demo- cratic Party of Guam and is credited with spearheading the successful victory of Gov. Carl T.C. Gutierrez and Lt. Gov. Madeleine Z. Bordallo.

With the beginning of the Gutierrez- Bordallo administration until his untimely death, Rudy Sablan played an integral part in the policy making arm of the administration.
Serving as the Governor’s chief advisor, Rudy was also selected to be a member of the Commission on Self-Determination, tasked with the responsibility of drafting Guam’s future political relationship with the United States of America. This was his second appointment to the commission, the first during the Bordallo-Reyes administration of the island from 1983 until 1987.

During his first term as a member of the Commission on Self-Determination, Rudy was credited with participating in the drafting of the Guam Commonwealth Draft Act. His participation was highlighted with his expertise in area studies, travel, and communications. Rudy continued his support for the Commonwealth Act after the Bordallo-Reyes administration ended.

Most notably he testified at the only congressional hearings to have been held on the Guam Commonwealth Draft Act in Honolulu, HI, during December 1989. Entrusted by the Governor, Rudy joined the other members of Team Guam and participated in the 1995 Base Reuse and Realignment Commission hearings held in San Francisco this past year.

It is with a sense of great loss that another distinguished island leader has passed away before the political status issues between Guam and the United States are resolved. It is for this reason, Mr. Speaker, that I especially mourn the loss of Lieutenant Governor Sablan. His perseverance on these issues will not go unnoticed. I am committed to continue his legacy of leadership in this realm. May his lifelong commitment to these issues not be neglected by our Federal Government and energize the people of Guam.

Mr. Speaker, this year Guam mourns the death of this fine leader, let us pay him tribute by honoring him in our body today. He will be remembered as a strong and highly respected gentleman. Let him serve as a model of what an exceptional citizen should be, here as in Guam. He was a good friend, one of Guam’s most respected leaders and a great contributor to Guam’s struggle for dignity with its relationship with the Federal Government and the world.

THE HEROIC EFFORTS OF MAJ. JAY ZEAMER, JR. IN WORLD WAR II

HON. JOHN ELIAS BALDACCI
OF MAINE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Mr. BALDACCI. Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to speak today about an exceptional Maine Ww2 combat veteran, who brought great honor and courage during one of history’s most terrifying wars, World War II.

Maj. Jay Zeamer, Jr., exhibited uncommon courage and skill to complete his mission in the face of insurmountable odds. He was awarded this country’s highest honor, the Congressional Medal of Honor. I would like to honor him again as the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II nears.

Major Zeamer entered the service when he resided in Machias, ME. The Major was a volunteer bomber pilot who was chosen to lead the mapping of a heavily defended region in the Solomons Islands. Even under the threat of a formidable Japanese fighter attack, Major Zeamer continued with his mission. In the ensuing fight, the crew destroyed five enemy aircraft. It was the Major’s superior maneuvering ability that allowed the outnumbered bomber to successfully engage the enemy. All this was accomplished even though Major Zeamer was shot in both legs and both arms. Although he was seriously wounded, the Major did not give up until the enemy fighting had retreated. Mr. Speaker, it was courageous soldiers like this that allowed the United States to repel Japanese advances in the Pacific.

Maine has a long and proud tradition of sending brave men to defend a home and abroad. These brave men exhibited enormous skill and unbreakable courage in the face of death. From Joshua Chamberlain in the Civil War through Gary Gordon in Somalia and countless numbers in between, Maine patriots have fought so that others might live free.

I am proud of Major Zeamer for all that he has given to the world. He fought not only for America, but to free the world from one of the most dangerous threats it had ever known. The efforts of Major Zeamer and his fellow soldiers helped to purify the face of imperialism. This country and the world will never forget his sacrifice.

“Many were serving, but none was fighting,” declared author John Steinbeck. “How can anyone learn English in school when they speak Spanish 4 ½ hours a day?”

A recent survey of Denver teachers after just 5 years, there will be 40 million Americans who can’t speak English. Those Americans will be isolated, cut off from realizing the American dream, if they don’t have the one skill that is required for success in America: Fluency in English.

Linda Chavez in her article calls for an end to mandatory bilingual education at the State and Federal level, and she’s absolutely right. My bill, H.R. 739, would do just that. I hope you all join me in my effort to make English our official language and keep America one Nation, one people. Cosponsor H.R. 739, the Declaration of Official Language Act. I ask that the full text of her article appear in the RECORD at this point.

ONE NATION, ONE COMMON LANGUAGE

Mr. ROTH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to call the attention of my colleagues to the August issue of Reader’s Digest and the article, “One Nation, One Common Language.” The author, Linda Chavez, makes a compelling case against bilingual education and for preserving our common bond, the English language.

Ms. Chavez points out that immigrants oppose bilingual education for their children and teachers oppose it for their students. Listen to the commonsense observation on bilingual education’s shortcomings that elementary school teacher Gail Fiber makes: “How can anyone learn English in school when they speak Spanish 4 ½ hours a day?”

A recent survey of Denver teachers after just 5 years, there will be 40 million Americans who can’t speak English. Those Americans will be isolated, cut off from realizing the American dream, if they don’t have the one skill that is required for success in America: Fluency in English.

ONE NATION, ONE COMMON LANGUAGE

Lusi Granados was a bright five-year-old who could read simple words before he entered kindergarten in Sun Valley, Calif. But soon after the school year began, his mother noticed that he couldn’t keep up. Yolanda Granados was bewildered. “He knows his alphabet,” she assured the teacher.

“What you don’t understand,” the teacher explained. “The use of both Spanish and English in the classroom is confusing to him.”

Yolanda Granados was born in Mexico but spent most of her excellent English. Because Spanish is sometimes spoken in her household, however, the school district—without consulting her—put her son in bilingual classes. “Every time I went to the school,” she says, “the principal gave me some excuse.” Finally, Granados figured out a way to get around the rule, who had still officially classified as a bilingual student until he entered the sixth grade.

Immigrant parents want their kids to learn English. Why, then, do we have a multibillion-dollar bureaucracy to promote bilingual education?

Unfortunately, the Granados family’s experience has become common across the country. When bilingual education was being considered by Congress, it had a limited mission: to teach children of Mexican descent in Spanish while they learned English. Instead, it has become an expensive behemoth, often with a far-reaching political agenda; to promote Spanish among children regardless of whether they speak English or not, regardless of their parent’s wishes and even without their knowledge. For instance, the New Jersey last year, Hispanic children were being assigned to Spanish-speaking classrooms, the result of a state law that mandated bilingual instruction. Angry parents demanded freedom of choice. When a bill to end the mandate was introduced in the legislature, a group of 50 bilingual advocates testified against it at a state board of education meeting.

“Why would we require parents unfamiliar with our educational system to make such a monumental decision when we are trained to make those decisions?” asked Joseph Ramos, then co-chairman of the North Jersey Bilingual Council.

The Los Angeles Unified School District educates some 265,000 Spanish-speaking children, more than any other in the nation. It advises teachers, in the words of the district’s Bilingual Methodology Study Guide, “not to encourage minority parents to switch to English in the home,” and to encourage them to promote strong development of the primary language. Nevertheless, the guide also declares that “excessive use of English in bilingual classrooms tends to lower students’ achievement in English.”

In Denver, 250 students from countries such as Russia and Vietnam learn grammar, vocabulary and pronunciation in ESL (English as a Second Language). An English “immersion” program, ESL becomes the alternative to bilingual education. Within a few months, most ESL kids are taking mathematics, science and social-studies classes in English.

But the 11,000 Hispanic children in Denver public schools don’t have the choice to participate in ESL full time. Instead, for their first few years they are taught most of the day in Spanish and are introduced only gradually to English. Jo Thomas, head of the Denver public schools, explains that ESL education for the Denver public schools, estimates these kids will ultimately spend on average five to seven years in its bilingual program.

ACTIVITIES TAKEN

Bilingual education in the late 1950s as a small, $75-million federal program primarily for Mexican-American children, half of whom could not speak English when they entered first grade. The idea was to teach them in Spanish for a short period, until they got up to speed in their new language. Sen. nặng (D., Texas), who sponsored the first federal bilingual law in 1968, explained that its intent was "to make children bilingual and literate in English." Yarborough assured Congress that the purpose was "not to make the mother tongue dominant.

Unfortunately, bilingual-education policy soon fell under the sway of political activists demanding recognition of the "group rights" of cultural and linguistic minorities. By the late 1980s, bilingualism was insisting that school districts offer bilingual education to Hispanic and other "language minority" students or face a cutoff of federal funds.

Most states followed suit, adopting bilingual mandates either by law or by bureaucratic edict. The result is that, nationally, most first-grade students from Spanish-speaking homes are taught to read and write in Spanish.

The purpose in many cases is no longer to bring immigrant children into the mainstream of American life. Some advocates see bilingual education as the first step in a radical incorporation of the United States into a nation without one common language or fixed borders.

Spanish "should no longer be regarded as a 'foreign' language," according to Jose Gonzalez, director of bilingual education in the Carter Administration and now a professor at Columbia University Teachers College.

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union (H.R. 2076) making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1996, and for other purposes:

Mr. MORELLA. Mr. Chairman, I had intended to offer an amendment to restore funding in the State-Commerce-Justice Appropriations bill for the State Justice Institute. Since filing the amendment, I realized that a number of Members are not familiar with the work of the State Justice Institute, thereby leading me to conclude that it was not an opportune time to debate SJI funding. I withdrew the amendment.

But I want to let my colleagues know that there is a clear Federal interest in supporting programs like SJI, which promotes a just, effective, and innovative system of State courts.

Court systems are stuck. Americans if we hope to remain one people, not simply a conglomeration of different groups. And one of the most effective ways of forging that sense of unity is through a common language.
Federal assistance to State courts is as appropriate as Federal assistance to State law enforcement, prosecution, and corrections agencies. By helping the State courts to deliver justice more efficiently and effectively, SJI promotes their greater use by litigants, thereby reducing the number of cases filed in Federal court. Continued funding for SJI would provide the administration and Congress with the opportunity to improve the State courts’ response to important issues, such as family violence, the rights of children, drug abuse, and crime.

As a Member of Congress who has been active on the issue of domestic violence, I can attest to SJI’s many contributions in improving the State courts’ response to family violence. For example, the State Justice Institute is the entity responsible for implementing my legislation, which was passed in 1992, to develop training programs for judges and other court personnel about domestic violence, especially its impact on children, and to review child custody decisions where evidence of spousal abuse has been presented. The Judicial Training Act addresses problems that many battered women have when they step into the courtrooms in this country to fight for custody of their children or to fight for equal justice in criminal cases. The response of our judicial system to domestic violence has been one of ignorance, negligence, and indifference, often with tragic consequences. The State Justice Institute has moved expeditiously to implement this act, and it has provided important assistance in improving the State courts’ response to family violence.

Federal policies can have serious consequences for the State courts and often impose substantial responsibilities on the State courts. The State Justice Institute has provided important Federal assistance to help the State judiciaries cope with federally imposed burdens, such as the Child Support Enforcement Act of 1984, the Family Support Act of 1986, and the Adoption Assistance and Child Welfare Act of 1980. These Federal programs should be accompanied by Federal assistance for State courts to meet these increased demands. The State Justice Institute has filled this important role.

As an educator, a former university professor, and a former president of the San Diego Board of Education, I am in a unique position here in Congress—I have first-hand knowledge of the importance of Federal funding to students of all ages and all communities. And I want you to know that I have serious concerns about the direction we are taking in the current budget deliberations.

For example, the San Diego School District—one of the school districts in my congressional district—stands to lose a minimum of $12 million in fiscal year 1996. Although students in every school in the district will be affected, the students most in need will be hit the hardest if we vote to slash title I as is currently proposed. Schools with a high number of students and families in poverty and low achieving students will receive the deepest and most severe cuts.

Title I funding helps disadvantaged children to better learn and achieve high educational standards. The proposed cuts in title I funding will devastate this program currently operating in the San Diego schools. A total of 50 schools will be eliminated from the program, and more than 11,000 children will not be served. Supplemental reading and math programs will be eliminated, as well as parental involvement activities. The very resources needed to raise student achievement and to meet the high standards we all want will be taken away.

In addition, the 127,000 students served by Impact Aid, the 31,000 students served by the Bilingual Education Program, the 17,000 students served by School-to-Work funding, and the 127,000 students affected by the Safe & Drug-Free Schools funding will suffer from the $700,000 cut to Impact Aid, the $1 million cut to Bilingual Education, the $140,000 cut to School-to-Work and the $500,000 cut to Safe & Drug-Free Schools. These cuts are for one school district. Multiply that by the thousands of districts in the Nation.

Perhaps the most foolish action in the bill pending before us is the cut of $137 million for Head Start. The money we spend to give our youngest a head start makes for productive citizens and pays dividends in the future. We should be putting more money into Head Start—not less.

In California, the economic decline of the past several years means that State and local economics cannot absorb the huge financial burden that will be shifted to them. The loss of instruction, the lay-offs of teachers and staff, and the lessening of the quality of education resulting from these proposed cuts cannot be replaced at the local level. The Federal Government has a role, an obligation, and a responsibility to participate in the education of our children.

Our children are our future. Let us make them a priority. I urge my colleagues to do our part. Support the Federal investment in the future and reject the severe cuts proposed for the coming fiscal year.

OUR CHILDREN ARE OUR FUTURE

HON. BOB FILNER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, August 2, 1995

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker and colleagues, I rise today to remind us all that the future of our Nation lies with our children. We hear those words so often that they are almost a cliche—but do we listen? Do we understand what that must mean as we develop our budget priorities?
And most importantly, it directs the two agencies to combine forces and target those industries notorious for hiring undocumented workers and forcing them to work in unacceptable conditions.

My bill gets tough on employers who knowingly hire undocumented workers by imposing stronger sanctions and doubling those penalties against employers also caught violating labor laws. It also helps employers by reducing the number of documents workers can use to verify their eligibility.

I want to fully acknowledge that there is an inherent danger that this kind of approach could lead to discrimination against workers—and evidence shows that this has indeed been the case in some instances. Thus my bill will also stiffen the penalties against employers that discriminate and give the Department of Justice the resources it needs to thoroughly investigate incidents of discrimination. We will also provide programs to educate employers about their responsibilities in this area.

Finally, my bill will crack down on document fraud by increasing the civil and criminal penalties for using or manufacturing fraudulent documents.

My bill takes a balanced, comprehensive approach to the problems created by illegal immigration. As a border Congressman, I am well aware of both the positive and the negative effects of immigration.

And I promised myself, and the people that I represent, that we would deal with the negative impacts without retreating from the values that have made this the greatest country in the world. I challenge Congress to get past the scapegoating that has become so politically profitable.

I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support this critically important initiative and show your commitment to truly stemming the illegal immigration that affects so many of our communities.

The Congressional Record is available as an online database through GPO Access, a service of the U.S. Government Printing Office.
