PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 104th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

Vol. 142

WASHINGTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 15, 1996

No. 68

House of Representatives

The House met at 9 a.m.

The Reverend Rees F. Warring, senior pastor, Elm Park United Methodist Church, Scranton, PA, offered the following prayer:

God of all people and nations, You who created and are still creating, may we be willing partners of Your creation. Help us to be merciful and just, compassionate and caring, that this will be a more merciful and just, compassionate and caring world. We pray that the quality of all life will be better because of the way we live and work. Enable each of us to be an instrument of Your peace, working to eliminate all that separates peoples and nations from You and from each other. Free us from all bigotry and prejudice, from pride of place and status, from the lack of vision and the loss of faith. Inspire us, this and every day, to be so concerned about Your way and truth, that Your will may eventually be done on Earth as it is in heaven. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCDADE] come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. MCDADE led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

WELCOMING THE REVEREND REES F. WARRING

(Mr. MCDADE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MCDADE. Mr. Speaker, let me begin by saying how nice it is to see so many familiar faces in the Chamber this morning. We are delighted that so many of our colleagues are here, and of course we all welcome you back to this magnificent House.

Mr. Speaker, I am privileged to welcome to this Chamber the Reverend Rees F. Warring, and I want to thank him for his beautiful opening prayer. Reverend Warring is the pastor of the Elm Park Methodist Church in the city of Scranton and has served several churches in northeastern Pennsylvania for over 30 years.

In every congressional district of this Nation—and no one knows this better than the people assembled here today—there are extraordinary people who exemplify the positive forces for good and selflessly serve their fellow man. Reverend Warring and his wife, Jean, who is with us today, are such individuals. They have tirelessly devoted their time and energy helping the less fortunate people in their community and providing spiritual solace to their congregation. Because of their good works, northeastern Pennsylvania and the Nation is a better place in which to live.

They have also raised four wonderful children, one of whom, also with us today, is their son, John, who serves as an important member of my Washington staff.

In addition to his spiritual efforts at Elm Park, Reverend Warring has been active in leading the restoration effort in Scranton to preserve the area's many historic church buildings. Elm Park serves as both an architectural landmark in downtown Scranton and as a community center for religious and civic activity. I am grateful that Reverend Warring could lead us in prayer today. He is a man who has enriched countless lives through his spiritual and community leadership.

And, my friends, on a personal note, I would like to extend on behalf of all of us a most happy 58th birthday today to Reverend Warring.

RECESS

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the House will stand in recess, subject to the call of the Chair, to receive the former Members of Congress.

Accordingly (at 9 o'clock and 8 minutes a.m.), the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

RECEPTION OF FORMER MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

The SPEAKER of the House presided.

The SPEAKER. On behalf of the Chair and this Chamber, I consider it a high honor and a distinct personal privilege to have the opportunity of welcoming so many of our former Members and colleagues as may be present here for this occasion. I think all of us want to pause and welcome each of them.

Let me also say, if I might, that if the House will indulge me to speak from the chair for a minute, that I am particularly delighted today to be here to recognize the distinguished gentleman from Illinois, Mr. Michel, for the amount that this House owes the gentleman from Illinois for his years of service, for his sense of commitment to the representative process, to his passion for freedom, and his willingness to serve his country under a wide range of circumstances. I would say that I believe all Members of the Chamber would join me in recognizing that the gentleman from Illinois always placed the House and the country above both his own personal interest and his partisan interest.

I must say, at a personal level, that without his having been my mentor and without his having literally at times helped train me, usually with the best of cheer, but on a rare occasion with a direct and firm manner, I would not today be Speaker. While the Democrats in the Chamber may regret that part of his career, I can say, at least on behalf of the Republicans, that we are all in Mr. Michel's debt for having taught many of us a great deal about the art of leading in a free society. So it is a great honor to me to have this opportunity to be here and to state my feelings about the gentleman from Illinois.

Let me at this time yield to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY] on behalf of the minority.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the minority leader, the gentleman from Missouri, DICK GEPHARDT, on the Democratic side, I would like to also welcome former Members to this great assembly Hall and also offer my congratulations to Bob Michel, who you will give this award to this morning. Bob Michel was minority leader for a number of years and also a war hero. As you know, you have the privileges of the floor for the rest of the day.

We will be taking up the defense authorization bill, Mr. Speaker, and now we do not go as long as we used to on the defense authorization bill. Then after that we will take up a budget resolution. I would like to point out that I and 32 other Members of the House of Representatives will be former Members about January 3 of next year, and 13 Senators, so we have some folks that add to the ranks.

Welcome to Lindy Boggs, the President of your Association. She has been honored greatly this last week, not only in Missouri but also in Mississippi. Thank you for giving me this opportunity.

The SPEAKER. If I may recognize the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MYERS] on behalf of the majority.

Mr. MYERS of Indiana. Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and good morning to each of you. On behalf of the majority leader, who unavoidably is detained, who planned to be here, but since I am going to join your ranks this year, he said why do you not do it for me. So we are pleased to have y'all back again here in this Chamber.

I know many of you spent a good many years here, fond memories. It has not changed a whole lot that much. But we do welcome you back, and it is good to see so many look so young. You, too, Don. You know, it seemed like when we were younger that everyone aged more rapidly. But now that I am more mature, I realize that that is not true. But we do welcome you back and see so many that are still able to come back and say hello to us.

Again, there will be several of us joining you. Mr. MONTGOMERY and I will be joining you next year, and a number of us will be joining your ranks. I do not know if that will be improving your ranks, but it will improve the ranks here. A lot of Members will be pleased to have us go. Thanks for joining us again.

The years do go by fast. Welcome back to the Chamber.

The SPEAKER. Before the chair recognizes the distinguished gentleman from Florida, let me just say again as a history teacher, I particularly appreciate all of you coming back because the process of freedom is an organic process. The degree to which Members and former Members are able to educate the community, the degree to which each of you in your working life and in your chances as a citizen once you leave this place are able to reach out and help others understand this complex process that we call representative self-government is a very, very important part of the way in which we educate ourselves each generation.

So I think the fact that you have remained active and that you are back here today is a very important part of that historic chain that takes us all the way back to the very first Congress and that will carry us forward to future Congresses beyond our own service. So I appreciate very much your being here today.

The Chair now recognizes the Honorable Louis Frey, Vice President of the Association, to take the chair.

Mr. FREY (presiding). Thank you, Mr. Speaker, Congressman MONTGOMERY, and Congressman MYERS, for allowing us to be here.

There is always one thing I have wanted to say when I got up here. Everybody in favor of the balanced budget please say aye. Sorry, I waited 30 years for that.

The Clerk will now call the roll of former Members of Congress.

The Clerk called the roll of former Members of the Congress, and the following former Members answered to their name:

Mr. FREY (presiding). It is now my personal privilege to introduce to this group the president of the former Members, the gentlewoman from Louisiana, the Honorable Lindy Boggs. The association has just been fortunate to have as its leader such an extraordinary, wonderful person. Her energy, her drive, her vision, trying to catch up with Lindy is just about impossible. I do not know how she does it. She puts us all to shame. She can bring us all together. If we have any problems at all, we just listen to her and we just fall in place because she is such a wonderful person and a great leader.

If I had to use one word and I was forced to use one word to describe our president, I guess I would have to pick the word class. Everything that the gentlewoman has done personally, politically, in the business world, has been that that is the best in this country. We are just proud of the fact that we have been able to work with you. We thank you for everything you have done, and we turn the floor over to you.

(Mrs. BOGGS asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. BOGGS. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thank you so much. Mr. Speaker, I thank you so very much for those beautiful remarks. And I was sitting there hoping the real Lindy Boggs would stand up. It is such a pleasure to be here.

Mr. Speaker, my colleagues and I are pleased and honored to have this opportunity to once again be on the House floor and to present our 25th, 26th annual report to the Congress. We thank you for your warm welcome, and certainly we thank the gentleman from Mississippi and the gentleman from Indiana for their beautiful welcome to us.

I have to say that the gentleman from Indiana developed that southern accent when he was the president of the Lower Mississippi Valley Flood Association. Mr. Speaker, we have without exception a warm attachment to this body, its traditions and its role in a democratic society. We welcome the opportunity to speak out on behalf of all its members. The association, over the 26 years since its inception, has grown to a membership of some 600 and an annual budget in excess of $650,000. Following the mandate of its charter, the association has developed a number of programs, both domestic and international, to promote the improved public understanding of the Congress as an institution and representative democracy as a system of government.

One of our earliest initiatives was our highly successful Congressional-Campus Fellows Program. Under this program, which was launched in 1976, former Members of Congress visit colleges, universities, and high school campuses for 2 to 5 days to have formal and informal meetings with students, faculty, and community representatives to share with them firsthand knowledge about the operations of the U.S. Congress, the executive branch, and of course the judiciary. Seventy-three (73) former Members of Congress have reached more than 100,000 students through 232 programs on 164 campuses in 49 States. The most recent visit made in this program was by Romano Mazzoli of Kentucky, who visited Denison University in Ohio last month. In this time of increasing criticism of Congress, the members of the association feel particularly strongly that this program is vital to renew the faith of the American people in its system of representative government and to instill in them the importance of their active participation in the democratic process. We have been seeking funding to reinvigorate this program so our members may reach more students and faculty, and we will continue to do so in the coming year.

The association also provides opportunities for our members to share their congressional experiences overseas. Fifteen (15) study tours have been carried out for members of the association, who, entirely at their own expenses, have participated in educational and cultural visits to China, the former Soviet Union, Western and Eastern Europe, the Middle East, South America, New Zealand, and Australia. Most recently, a group of our members visited Canada, where former Congressman Jim Blanchard of Michigan has been our distinguished Ambassador. In the coming year, we are planning to have a delegation visit Ukraine, where we support a program to assist the Ukrainian Parliament and we have a congressional fellow—a former congressional staffer—in residence. We also have been invited by the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Chinese National People's Congress to send a delegation to China.

The association cooperates with the U.S. Government and a number of non-profit organizations which make available for educational projects the experience and perspectives of persons who have served in Congress. It has provided former Members of Congress for participation in programs sponsored by USIA's AMPARTS [American Participants] Program in Africa, Asia, Latin America, Europe, and Australia. USIA staff members hope to involve more former Members of Congress in these programs and have asked us to notify them when any of our Members who may be interested in participating in these programs are traveling abroad. So, please let us know of your travel plans.

The association currently is working with the United States Embassy in Mexico, where former Congressman Jim Jones is serving as Ambassador, to initiate an exchange program with the Parliament of Mexico. A bipartisan team of two former Members of Congress is scheduled to make a visit, under funding from the United States Information Agency, to Mexico in June to conduct a pilot project in this effort. With funding received from the Ford Foundation, a study mission to Cuba will be undertaken to assess the current situation there, as soon as conditions are more favorable. We also have been working closely with the George C. Marshall European Center for Security Studies in Garmisch, Germany, which aids defense and foreign ministries in Europe's aspiring democracies to develop national security organizations and systems that reflect democratic principles. Former Congressman Martin Lancaster of North Carolina has spoken at several of the Center's programs for parliamentarians from Central and Eastern Europe, and additional former Members will be participating in these programs in the coming year.

The association also provides opportunities for current Members of Congress to share their expertise with legislators of other countries and to learn firsthand the operations of those governments. It has continued serving as the secretariat for the Congressional Study Group of Germany, which is the largest and most active exchange program between the United States Congress and the Parliament of another country. The study group is an unofficial, informal, and bipartisan organization open to all Members of Congress. Currently, it involves approximately 120 Representatives and Senators, and provides opportunities for Members of Congress to meet with their counterparts in the German Bundestag and to facilitate better understanding and greater cooperation.

In addition to hosting a number of Members of the Bundestag and other

German Government leaders at the Capitol this past year, the study group hosted its 13th Annual Congress-Bundestag Seminar in April in Cape Girardeau, MO, located in the district of Congressman BILL EMERSON. The location was chosen because the Members of the Bundestag who participated in last year's seminar in Dresden, Germany requested that this year's seminar be held in middle-America, an area of the country many of them had never visited. Accordingly, Congressman EMERSON, the 1995 chairman of the study group in the House, very kindly invited us to hold the seminar in his district. The meeting, in which Louis Frey of Florida, Martin Lancaster of North Carolina, and I were privileged to participate along with current Members of Congress and current and former Members of the Bundestag, was a resounding success. As well as having in-depth discussions about many facets of United States-German relations, we took an afternoon cruise on the Mississippi River on the motor vessel Mississippi, the flagship of the Corps of Engineers, during which we learned about the effective efforts of the corps in flood control, and we had the opportunity to tour neighboring counties and to meet with a number of Americans of German descent, whose ancestors came from Germany to settle the area.

The study group program is funded principally by the German Marshall Fund of the United States. Its activities have included joint meetings of the agriculture committees of Congress and the Bundestag and visits by Members of the Bundestag to observe the Illinois presidential primary and the Iowa caucus, as well as to congressional districts throughout the country with Members of Congress to learn about the U.S. political process at the grassroots level.

The association also serves as the secretariat for the Congressional Study Group on Japan, which seeks to develop a congressional forum for the sustained study and analysis of policy options on major issues in United States-Japan relations, and to increase opportunities for Members of Congress to meet with their counterparts in the Japanese diet for frank discussions of those key issues. This unofficial, informal, and bipartisan group, which is open to all Members of Congress, has 77 members, and an additional 49 Members of Congress have asked to be kept informed of its activities. An ongoing activity of the study group is to host breakfast and/or luncheon discussion meetings with Americans and Japanese who are experts on various facets of the United States-Japan relationship. For example, in March, George Fisher, chairman, president and CEO, and chief operating Officer of Eastman Kodak Co., met with study group members for a lively discussion about the current film industry debates. The month prior to that, the study group had the opportunity to hear from the new Japanese Ambassador to the United States, His Excellency Kunihiro Saito. Major funding for this study group is provided by the Japan-United States Friendship Commission. The Ford Foundation also provided funding which assisted with the start-up operations of this group.

The association's program to assist the new democratic nations in Central and Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union, which was begun in 1989, has continued to expand. Under funding from the United States Information Agency, the association has: Hosted delegations of Members of Parliaments of Poland, Hungary, the Czech Republic and Slovakia in the United States; sent bipartisan teams of former Members of Congress, accompanied by either a congressional or country expert, to Hungary, Poland, and Czechoslovakia; and placed a congressional fellow in Budapest for 2 years to provide technical assistance to the Members and staff of the Hungarian Parliament.

Under a grant from the Pew Charitable Trusts, in March 1994, the association placed one congressional fellow in Slovakia—Jon Holstine—and another congressional fellow in Ukraine—Cliff Downen—for 2-year stints. Jon Holstine's tour ended last month, but Cliff Downen is remaining in Ukraine for an additional year to continue the highly successful fellowship program he began in August 1995, which brings young Ukrainians to Kiev to work with the Members and staff of the Rada Parliament for a 1-year period. The initial funding for this fellowship project was obtained from the Rule of Law Grant Program, which is funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development. The second year of the program is being funded by a grant from the Charles Stewart Mott Foundation and a new grant from AID. Former Members of Congress, Louis Frey of Florida, Lucien Nedzi of Michigan, and Don Johnson of Georgia, former House Parliamentarian William Brown and current and former congressional staff members and Congressional Research Service personnel have visited these fellows to assist them by conducting workshops and participating in seminars with Members of Parliament.

Back on the home front, the association has continued its program of hospitality for distinguished international visitors, parliamentarians, cabinet ministers, judges, academicians, and journalists here at the Capitol. This program, originally funded by the Ford Foundation, has been continued under grants from the German Marshall Fund of the United States. These grants have enabled us to host 336 events—breakfasts, luncheons, dinners, and receptions—for visitors from 85 countries and the European Parliament, and has proved to be an effective avenue for improving communication and understanding between Members of Congress and leaders of other nations.

In addition to our work with current parliamentarians, we maintain close relations with associations of former Members of the Parliaments of other countries. In this connection, Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to recognize and welcome three representatives of those associations who are with us today: Barry Turner and Hal Herbert of the Canadian Association of Former Parliamentarians and Georg Ehrnrooth of the Association of Former Members of the Parliament of Finland. These relationships have been extremely cordial. Lasting friendships have developed and, as one may expect, a better understanding and appreciation of our common democratic institutions has emerged.

I would be remiss, Mr. Speaker, if I did not salute the work of the U.S. Association of Former Members of Congress Auxiliary and express our gratitude to its membership so ably headed by Annie Rhodes and Debi Alexander, and to mention the untiring and successful efforts of Linda Reed, our executive director, and Walt Raymond, who has been responsible for most of these overseas programs, and of course of our distinguished board members and our very kind and excellent Academic Advisory Committee.

Mr. Speaker, it is now my sad duty to inform the House of those persons who have served in the Congress and who have passed away since our report last year. Those deceased Members of the Congress are:

John Joseph Allen, Jr., California;
Les Aspin, Wisconsin;
Bert A. Bandstra, Iowa;
Joseph W. Barr, Indiana;
James C. Cleveland, New Hampshire;
Williard S. Curtin, Pennsylvania;
Leonard Farbestein, New York;
Ovie Clark Fisher, Texas;
Dean A. Gallo, New Jersey;
Porter Hardy, Virginia;
John E. Henderson, Ohio;
Albert Sydney Herlong, Jr., Florida;
John C. Hinson, Mississippi;
Chet E. Holifield, California;
A. Oakley Hunter, California;
Walter B. Jones, North Carolina;
Barbara Jordan, Texas;
Edward R. Madigan, Illinois;
Thomas E. Morgan, Pennsylvania;
Edmund S. Muskie, Maine;
Joseph Mruk, New York;
Richard G. Shoup, Montana;
B.F. "Bernie" Sisk, California;
Henry P. Smith III, New York;
Margaret Chase Smith, Maine;
John C. Stennis, Mississippi;
Jesse Sumner, Illinois;
Mike Synar, Oklahoma;
Boyd Tackett, Arkansas;
Lera Thomas, Texas;
William Homer Thornberry, Texas;
Andrew Jackson Transue, Michigan;
Jamie L. Whitten, Mississippi;
William A. Winstead, Mississippi; and Ralph W. Yarborough, Texas.

Mr. Speaker, I respectfully ask all of you for a moment of silence in their memory.

May then rest in peace. Amen.

It is now my happy duty to report that nominated to be our association's new president is our colleague who is presiding today, and of all of the nice things that he said about me, I can just reverse to say about him, Louis Frey of Florida; and, as vice president, Matthew McHugh of New York. With them at the helm, the leadership of the association will be in capable and very experienced hands.

Each year the association presents a Distinguished Service Award to an outstanding public servant. This award rotates between political parties, as do our officers also. Last year's recipient on the Democratic side was Vice President ALBERT GORE, Jr., former Representative and Senator from Tennessee. This year, the recipient on the Republican side is the distinguished former minority leader and Representative from Illinois, Robert H. Michel.

It is a special personal pleasure for me to present this award to Bob on behalf of the association as I greatly enjoyed the years that both my husband, Hale Boggs, and I were privileged to serve with him in the House and to enjoy and admire his wonderful wife, Corinne. He has certainly been an outstanding Member of Congress. He has served with his leadership, not only his constituents in Illinois, but also the U.S. public in general with great distinction through many years. I must say that we are presenting this privilege to him, we are just falling in line with a large number of other distinguished Americans. In 1994, President Clinton awarded Bob Michel our Nation's highest civilian honor, the Medal of Freedom, and he was presented at one time the Citizen's Medal, our Nation's second highest Presidential award, in 1989 by President Ronald Reagan. He has also received the VFW Congressional Award, in recognition of his outstanding service to the Nation, and, in the same year, the American Institute for Public Service presented him with the Jefferson Award for Public Service.

He has also been recognized for just a range of activities that are really remarkable, and he has received the National Security Leadership Award by the leaders of the Reserve Officers Association, the American Security Council, and a bipartisan National Security Caucus on behalf of over 100 national organizations. He has also been the recipient of the Golden Bulldog Award, presented by the Watchdogs of the Treasury, for 18 consecutive terms.

So it is a tremendous pleasure for us, of course, to be able to present this award to our colleague, and I am certain he will continue to be the very special person that he has been for so many years, for many years to come.

I know all of you share my feelings and respect and admiration in being able to present this award to Bob, and I hope that he will come forward to receive it.

The award reads: "Presented to the Honorable Robert H. Michel of the United States Association of Former Members of Congress in recognition of his exemplary service to the Republic as a decorated war hero and as the long-term Republican leader of the United States House of Representatives. In Washington, D.C., May 15, 1996."

Bob, it is so wonderful to be able to present this to you. I am also pleased to present you with this scrapbook of letters from your colleagues offering their congratulations, along with mine, for this well-deserved symbol of our love and appreciation. We will be happy to receive some remarks from you, sir.

Mr. MICHEL. Madam President and former Speaker Jim Wright and my former leader, John Rhodes, and what is it, Speaker pro tem or what up there?

Mr. FREY (presiding). Your short-stop.

Mr. MICHEL. My distinguished colleagues, I am overwhelmed to again receive such a nice honor from my colleagues. I do not know what the criteria are for the former Members choosing one for this kind of award, but as I look around this room, I would say there are many more who would be justified in receiving it than this Member. After all, I have only been out there in the afterworld of Congress, you know, for less than 2 years. I have not had a chance yet to make my mark in that world, like so many of you out there. But I will tell you, I would not change it for anything. I am happy to be out there where you all are and be a Member of the Former Members Society.

And, Lindy, may I congratulate you and the organization for all those myriad of things that the former Members are doing and participating as they are to help publicize what this institution is all about and what representative government is all about. I am very happy that all my papers are going to the Everett Dirksen, have gone to the Everett Dirksen Center for Leadership in Pekin, IL.

One of the things we are attempting to do is each year to honor one person or several persons, whomever from the press who will write something positive about the Congress. And then, too, one of our emerging programs, because our endowment now is building up that we can afford to do it, is selecting high school teachers for one week of concentrated study on what the Congress is all about, so they can go back in civics classes and teach their high school students what this institution is all about.

So I guess none of you needs any long speeches on this particular occasion, but I just have to make mention of the fact that I have always been so proud to have been a Member of this House and to serve in it, the honor that was accorded to me to be elected, reelected so many times. And then the wonderful things that have happened to me, particularly since announcing my retirement.

I would hope that each and every one of you who still have that vim and vigor and have the respect for this institution, or you would not be here today as a former Member, would just accelerate those efforts at a time when the institution, all institutions of government, it seems to me, are under attack, and we need to be more positive in telling our young people what it really means to this country.

I remember a time when I was a little apprehensive about electrifying the House of Representatives by electronically covering the proceedings of this body. You know, will there be show-boating? Will it be good? Will it be bad? Well, I think in retrospect, as I look over it all, it has been a good thing for the country that C-SPAN gives it, you know, gavel-to-gavel coverage, to really educate the American people on what this institution and the other body then who followed suit, what it is really like.

Maybe just one word of caution to our sitting Members, because when you are on the outside and you are observing the proceedings of this House, yes, sometimes when I was still the leader, they were very much in evidence, we have always got to be mindful of the fact that what is said, how it is said, the deportment of the Member, is the projection to the American public of what it is all about. We have the clash of ideas and the vigorous arguments that take place on the floor of this House, and that is what it is all about. But there is a point at which you draw the line, and that is not to besmirch the character of a fellow colleague, engage in personal attacks that might diminish what you have said, because the general public gets its feeling about this institution much at a higher level when it is really considered to be the highest point at which these public issues are debated and yes, with men and women of good civil attitude and respect, not only for the institution, but for their fellow colleagues.

So I guess that would be the message I would leave with whoever might be in the listening audience here about how great this institution is and how it ought to be preserved. And those of us who have had the privilege of serving in it, I think we all feel just a little bit better when we come together on an occasion like this, share some of our experiences and views, and renew ourselves in the commitment to make absolutely sure the rest of this country understands perfectly what representative government is all about. It is the best on earth. We all ought to love it dearly for the rest of our lives. Thank you so much.

Mr. MAZZOLI. Madam President, would the gentlewoman yield for just a brief moment?

Mrs. BOGGS. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAZZOLI. I realize we have to clear the Chamber, but I would just address two or three things. One is to add my salute to Bob Michel on a life well lived and a career well handled, and to salute the gentlewoman for her leadership, but to also mention two things:

She was kind enough to mention my name in the course of her remarks and it was a great pleasure for me to go to Denison, Senator LUGAR's alma mater, to take part in that program. And I would only indicate to my colleagues, any one of you who would have an opportunity, whether by invitation or just inviting yourself, to go to one of the schools. And it was a wonderful experience, I think for the students, certainly for me. And I believe it is one wonderful opportunity we have to continue to share this information with the future generation.

Then I want to particularly thank my good friends, Abner Mikva, who helped me this past semester when I taught full time at the University of Louisville's Law School. Abner came down to visit me. It was not an easy trip for him to make, a trip to Louisville. It was wonderful for my school's students. And I would tell my friends from Illinois, he really was a trifecta, because he served here, he served in the Federal judiciary, and served in the administration, so he really kind of went to the triple play. But he was able to address all those issues and, so once again, I want to thank Abner. But I also want to indicate that that is a way we leave something behind us.

I thank the gentlewoman.

Mrs. BOGGS. Thank you very much, and thank you so much for your participation.

Well, Mr. Speaker, this concludes the 26th Annual Report to the Congress by the U.S. Association of the Former Members of Congress. We are honored, Mr. Speaker, by your warm welcome and your generous comments. We also want to thank all of the Members of the House here today for their very personal greetings. I know that for everyone in our group, being a Member of Congress was the most exciting, the most exhilarating, the most challenging period of our lives. So this is a rare and thoroughly enjoyable opportunity to greet old friends, feel for a moment the majesty of this Chamber and share with you the activities of its former Members. Finally, we want you to know this association will continue its efforts to promote greater public understanding of and appreciation for this very uniquely American legislative body, this greatest deliberative body in the modern world, the U.S. Congress. Thank you so much, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. FREY (presiding). Thank you, Madam President, for the great job and those remarks. In concluding, I just want to say I think all of us here are lucky, lucky to have been born in this country, lucky to have been a Member of this great body. And you know, what we probably have is a chance to do a lot more for this country now than maybe sometimes we had before, because it is needed out there. In some ways, we maybe have more credibility than when we were here. And I think what Bob Michel said is that we really have an obligation, and I am glad we are fulfilling it and I am sure that we will continue to fulfill it.

The House will continue in recess for 15 minutes.

Accordingly (at 9 o'clock and 55 minutes a.m.), the House continued in recess for 15 minutes.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. KOLBE) at 10 o'clock and 10 minutes a.m.

NOTICE OF AVAILABILITY OF CLASSIFIED MATERIALS ACCOMPANYING H.R. 3259, FISCAL YEAR 1997 INTELLIGENCE AUTHORIZATION BILL

(Mr. COMBEST asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. COMBEST. Mr. Speaker, I wish to announce to all Members of the House that the classified schedule of authorizations and the classified annex to the committee report accompanying the Intelligence authorization bill for fiscal year 1997, H.R. 3259, are available for review by Members at the offices of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence in Room H-405 of the Capitol. Staff will be available through Friday and again beginning Monday for any Members who wish to review this material. I am informed by the leadership that H.R. 3259 may be considered on the floor early next week.

It is important that Members keep in mind that clause 13 of rule XVIII of the House, adopted at the beginning of the 104th Congress, requires that before Members of the House may have access to classified information, they must sign the oath set out in that clause. The classified schedule of authorizations and the classified annex to the committee report contain the Intelligence Committee's recommendations on the intelligence budget for fiscal year 1997 and related classified information which may not be disclosed publicly. After consultation with the General Counsel to the Clerk of the House, I would advise Members wishing to have access to the classified schedule of authorizations and the classified annex that they must bring with them to the committee office a copy of the rule XLIII oath signed by them or be prepared to sign a copy of that oath when they come to see these classified materials.

I would also recommend that Members wishing to read the classified schedule of authorizations and the classified annex to the committee report first call the committee office to indicate when you plan to review the classified annex to the report. This will help assure that a member of the committee staff is available to help Members, if they wish, with their review of these classified materials. I urge Members to take some time to review these classified documents to help them better understand the actions the Intelligence Committee has recommended before the intelligence authorization is considered on the House floor next week.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 1745, UTAH PUBLIC LANDS MANAGEMENT ACT OF 1995

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 303 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 303

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 1745) to designate certain public lands in the State of Utah as wilderness, and for other purposes. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. Points of order against consideration of the bill for failure to comply with clause 2(1)(6) of rule XI or section 302(f) or 311(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 are waived. General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Resources. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Resources now printed in the bill. The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be considered as read. Points of order against the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute for failure to comply with clause 7 of rule XVI or section 302(f) or 311(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 are waived. Before consideration of any other amendment, it shall be in order to consider the amendment printed in the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution. That amendment may be offered only by the chairman of the Committee on Resources or his designee, shall be considered as read, shall be debatable for ten minutes equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole. If that amendment is adopted, the bill, as amended, shall be considered as the original bill for the purpose of further amendment. During further consideration of the bill for amendment, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may accord priority in recognition on the basis of whether the Member offering an amendment has caused it to be printed in the portion of the Congressional Record designated for that purpose in clause 6 of rule XXIII. Amendments so printed shall be considered as read. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. Any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the amendment in the nature of a substitute made in order as original text. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. KOLBE). The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LINDER] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, for the purposes of relevant debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume.

During consideration of the resolution, all time yielded is for relevant debate purposes only.

(Mr. LINDER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and insert extraneous material.)

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 303 is a completely open rule providing for the consideration of H.R. 1745, the Utah Public Lands Management Act of 1995.

The rule provides for 1 hour of debate equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Resources Committee. The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute is made in order as base text for purposes of amendment under the 5-minute rule.

The rule makes in order a manager's amendment by Chairman YOUNG printed in the report on this rule, debatable for 10 minutes. If adopted, the manager's amendment becomes part of the base text for amendment purposes.

As I mentioned earlier, this is a completely open rule permitting any Member to offer any germane amendment. Members who have preprinted their amendments in the RECORD may be given priority in recognition. Finally, the rule provides for one motion to recommit, with or without instruction.

Mr. Speaker, we have called up this rule today, even though it was not scheduled for consideration this week, because the minority gave notice yesterday that it would otherwise call up this rule pursuant to clause 4(c) of rule 11 which permits any Rules Committee member to call up a rule after it has been pending on the calendar for more than 7 days.

I don't think anyone seriously believes the minority is simply interested in considering the Utah wilderness bill. This is just one more attempt to circumvent, indeed violate two House rules for ulterior motives—and that is to defeat the previous question to offer a completely unrelated and nongermane amendment to this rule that would be ruled out of order on a point of order.

Despite repeated warnings, the minority has persisted in violating House Rule 14 which requires Members to confine themselves to the question under consideration. And they have attempted to defeat the previous question on other rules to offer an amendment that would be in violation of clause 7 of rule 16, the germaneness rule—an amendment that would require the Rules Committee to report a rule on a bill completely unrelated to the subject matter of the rule.

Rules Committee Chairman SOLOMON, in a letter to Ranking Minority Member MOAKLEY, back on May 7, urged Mr. MOAKLEY to join with him in helping to enforce House rules during consideration of special rules rather than violate House rules—specifically, clause 1 of rule 14 requiring that debate be relevant to the pending question, and clause 7 of rule 16 requiring that amendments be germane to the rules to which they are offered.

Those pleas for cooperation and adherence to the rules have obviously gone unheeded and ignored.

Mr. Speaker, while we are willing to continue the custom of granting half of our hour on debate on such rules to the minority, we would again caution and advise the minority to observe House rules on relevancy in debate and the germaneness rule on amendments to rules.

I urge the adoption of the previous question and the rule.

Mr. Speaker, I include the following letter for the RECORD:

COMMITTEE ON RULES,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, May 7, 1996.

Hon. JOHN JOSEPH MOAKLEY,
Ranking Minority Member, Committee on Rules,
The Capitol, Washington, DC.

DEAR JOE: The Congressional Budget Office has been kind enough to provide me with copies of its responses to your inquiries on the last two efforts to defeat the previous question on rules to offer amendments directing the Rules Committee to report back minimum wage legislation.

As CBO points out in both instances (on H. Res. 412 waiving the two-thirds vote requirement on same-day consideration of rules, and H. Res. 418, the U.S. Marshals Service Improvement Act), the proposed amendments to the rules would not constitute an unfunded mandate (being procedural in nature only), but the subsequent legislation they would direct be reported, "would impose both an intergovernmental and private sector mandate as defined in Public Law 104-4." (Letters from CBO Director O'Neill to Rep. Moakley, April 25 and May 1, 1996).

I appreciate your diligence in monitoring these potential rule violations so carefully. By the same token, however, I would respectfully ask you in the future to check with the Parliamentarian in advance on both the germaneness of such amendments to the pending rules and the relevancy of extended debate on this unrelated matter. Our own discussions with the Parliamentarian confirm that: (a) a discussion of the minimum wage was not relevant to either of the above cited rules and thus in violation of clause 1 of rule XIV (decorum in debate); and (2) the proposed amendments to the rules were not germane to the rules and thus in violation of clause 7 of rule XVI (germaneness).

Given your earlier, extensive correspondence with me on the subjects of the minimum wage, unfunded mandates, and the need for a strict adherence to House Rules, I would ask that you in turn see to it that during House debate on special rules you and the speakers you yield to observe both of these important House rules by avoiding the use of irrelevant debate on nongermane amendments that would be rule out of order even if you defeated the previous question.

As I suggested earlier, a simple check with the Parliamentarian, just as you check with CBO, would go a long way towards ensuring compliance with these two important House Rules on relevancy in debate and germaneness of amendments. I am sure you will agree with me that we do not set a good example for the House so long as we countenance such abuses of the fundamental rules of debate and amendment by mischaracterizing the previous question process and vote as something it is not.

I look forward to working closely with you in the future to ensure full compliance with House rules during House consideration of our order of business resolutions.

Sincerely,

GERALD B. SOLOMON,
Chairman.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from Georgia for yielding me the customary 30 minutes. I appreciate the gentleman's wanting us to abide by the rules of the House. I agree. We take, for example, how they try to ram a constitutional amendment through this House here without even having a hearing in the Committee on the Judiciary. So we will operate under the same set of rules.

Mr. Speaker, once again the House Democrats are going to try it again. Today we are going to try for the fifth time this year, the fifth time this year, to give 12 million hardworking Americans a long overdue pay raise. We are hoping that our Republican colleagues will stop voting no and start voting yes. We are hoping they will join us and join 85 percent of the American people who believe that the minimum wage increase is a very, very good idea.

Some of my colleagues may wonder how it is that we are considering today's rule. Well, this rule concerning some public lands in Utah was reported out of the Committee on Rules last December. The House rules allow any member of the Committee on Rules as a matter of privilege to call up a rule which has been waiting on the House Calendar for over a week. So I used my privilege, in order to try again to convince my Republican colleagues to allow us to raise the minimum wage for 12 million Americans.

Mr. Speaker, we are not talking about a lot of money. We are talking about a very small raise for our people. Our people, who work very hard, our people, who still only make $8,400 a year. We are talking about giving a long overdue raise to 12 million Americans, who work very long hours and still live below the poverty level.

Mr. Speaker, my Democratic colleagues and I believe very strongly that American workers deserve a raise, and you probably noticed we are going to still fight until we finally get one. It has been 5 years since the last increase in the minimum wage. Its value has now dropped to a 40-year low. Working people deserve this long overdue raise, and I think we really owe it to them. So, Mr. Speaker, at the end of this debate I will oppose the previous question in order to offer an amendment which provides for an immediate vote on the minimum wage increase.

Mr. Speaker, if any of my colleagues do not think we should give a raise to the minimum wage earner, if any of my colleagues think those on minimum wage should not have it increased, they should vote yes on the previous question. But everybody else, those who think that an increase in the minimum wage is long overdue, as I do, should vote with me and oppose the previous question.

Mr. Speaker, let us make sure that hardworking Americans with full-time jobs can finally support their families on their income.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, under the House rule XIV, which requires that a Member must "confine himself to the question under debate," is it relevant to the debate on either this rule or the bill it makes in order to engage in a discussion on the merits of the minimum wage?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair acknowledges the gentleman's parliamentary inquiry, and would advise Members that under clause 1 of rule XIV, they should confine themselves to the question under debate in the House. As explained on page 529 of the House Rules and Manual, debate on a special order providing for the consideration of a bill may range to the merits of the bill to be made in order, but should not range to the merits of a measure not to be considered under that special order.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, further parliamentary inquiry. Could the Chair enlighten us as to the subject matter of the subject under debate?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The subject for debate in this rule is the resolution providing for consideration of the Utah Wilderness bill, and the debate should be confined to that topic.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Utah [Mr. HANSEN].

(Mr. HANSEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in favor of this rule, but I want to explain to the people of Utah and the rest of America that this procedural move is not about H.R. 1745, my Utah Wilderness bill, but is about procedural maneuvering to address unrelated issues.

Mr. Speaker, I was before the Committee on Rules last December, wherein I requested an open rule to fully debate the issues of H.R. 1745, the Utah Wilderness Act. I support this rule and urge its adoption. When Utah Wilderness does come before this body, I will be proposing several changes to H.R. 1745 that moderate this legislation significantly. I and the Utah delegation have worked hard to add significant acreage, propose release language that is very moderate, and other changes that would make this bill acceptable to everyone. An open rule on this issue will allow for an open and complete discussion of the issue.

Mr. Speaker, I understand the political maneuvering of my colleagues on the other side to use the Utah Wilderness bill as a tool to get at issues like the minimum wage, but Utah Wilderness is critical to my constituents and the people of Utah. This is an important debate, and I am hopeful that Utah Wilderness does not become a pawn, as it looks like someone is trying to do, in the larger battle that it is unrelated to.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this rule, and I look forward to future debate on the Utah Wilderness bill.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR], the minority whip.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, several months ago the Republican leadership had scheduled for a debate on this House floor a bill concerning public lands for the State of Utah, I think it was back in December or thereabouts. What happened, for those of you who are interested, is that the moderates on this side of the aisle who are concerned about the environment, who have joined with us over 25 years to preserve the environment, clean water, clean air, good public lands, looked at this bill and had some serious objections. They were concerned about the extreme agenda in which our colleagues on this side of the aisle were taking the issue of the environment, cutting enforcement funds for EPA, cutting sewer grant money, not dealing with the question of Superfund. They are very much concerned about all of that.

So what happened was they decided, the leadership on the Republican side, not to bring it up. They just kind of let this rule, which was reported out of the Committee on Rules, hang on the desk up here.

What they failed to do was to table the rule. That is what you generally do when you do not let something hang around. So they failed to table that rule, and, under the rules of the House, after a 7-day period, the minority can call up this rule for purposes of amending the rule. And that is what we are about this morning. We are calling up this rule, and we have called up this rule. The majority, taking advantage of their prerogative to move it, has done so, and now we are engaged in a debate on whether this is a proper rule to address questions of concern to the Nation.

We believe it is our prerogative at this time to get a clean vote on something that has been denied this body four separate times, and that is a vote on the minimum wage. As the gentleman from Massachusetts has eloquently stated today, these are the folks in this country today who are working for $4.25 an hour. They are the people who take care of our mothers and our fathers in nursing homes. They clean our airports. They clean our offices. They are breaking their backs every single day for their kids. And all they want in this Congress is for us to stand up and say yes or no, should we raise the minimum wage for the first time in 5 years, which has now reached a 40-year low, or shall we sort of just ignore these folks?

What we are saying on our side of the aisle is that we agree with the 100 economists in this country, the three Nobel laureates, that this is an important issue for the country.

Mr. Speaker, what happens to people who work for the minimum wage? What happens is that you cannot support a family on $8,500 a year. Two-thirds of these people are adults, and about 60 percent of them are women with children. So they end up working one job, plus overtime, with two jobs or three jobs. And, as a result of that, these individuals are not there in the evening. The mothers are not there to teach their kids right from wrong, they are not there for bedtime stories. Fathers are not there, because they are working two jobs. They are not there for Little League or soccer. They are not there for PTA or dinner conversations, and the whole fabric of civil society starts to unravel.

And the Members come to the floor and they argue with us about juvenile delinquency, about crime, and all these other social pathologies and maladies affecting the American public.

A good decent livable wage is important as a foundation for providing families the wherewithal to take care of the educational needs, the discipline needs and the attention needs that their kids deserve.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BONIOR. I yield to the gentleman from Utah.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I would ask the gentleman if he has read H.R. 1745, the Utah Wilderness bill, which he just typified as an extreme antienvironmental bill?

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, if I did that, I did not mean to do so, because I did not want to characterize the bill from my perspective. I just wanted to characterize it in terms of what some of the Members on the Republican side of the aisle were concerned about when the bill was pulled.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, I do not think that is a correct interpretation. It is not an extreme bill and I really think the gentleman should stick to what he is talking about, because that is not an extreme bill. It is a moderate reasonable bill, and I somewhat, having worked on it for 20 years, kind of resent that being said. I apologize to the gentleman.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I recognize my colleague's concern and I recognize the hard work he has put on this bill. It is not my characterization, it is the characterization of some in his own party who have labeled it as such.

Mr. HANSEN. I would like to know who they are. They have not talked to me about it.

Mr. BONIOR. They obviously talked to the gentleman's leaders because it was pulled from consideration on this floor.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 15 seconds.

Is it my understanding the gentleman from Utah does not want to discuss the Utah Wilderness bill here, after asking us to stick to the subject?

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOAKLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. BONIOR. I would be happy if my friend would join us on the minimum wage issue. If he would like to talk about that, I would be delighted to continue to talk on the minimum wage.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Glens Falls, NY [Mr. SOLOMON], the chairman of the committee.

Mr. SOLOMON. I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time, and, Mr. Speaker, sometimes it gets pretty disheartening around here because everything seems to turn into a partisan fight.

I am just hearing my good friend from Massachusetts, Mr. MOAKLEY, and my good friend from Michigan, Mr. BONIOR, friends from the other side of the aisle, say that this bill is being held up for some reason because there is a lot of disagreement.

I have asked the chairmen of all of the standing committees to give us legislation, send it to the Committee on Rules, so that we can issue rules and have it out there so that when we do have lapses and windows here on the floor, that we can bring up issues like this. This is one of them. I wish we had 8 or 9 or 10 of these standing and waiting so that we could.

There are times when we finish the debate, like this afternoon, we are going to finish a very important bill, the defense authorization bill, which normally takes days and days and days, and we are probably going to finish it at 1 or 2 o'clock this afternoon and we would like to have standby legislation like this. The only thing is, now, if we are going to have the minority, the minute that these rules have been waiting for 7 days, jump up and call up a rule so that they can make some partisan stand, how can we do that? It interrupts the flow of this House.

Let me just tell my colleagues something. During the month of June, I think there are only 15 legislative days. We are in an election year. We are supposed to be off so that we can go home and do some campaigning for about 4 weeks starting with the first week of August and into Labor Day. We will hardly have time to deal with all of this legislation that has got to come before us, never mind the banking and campaign finance reform and all of these issues coming out to the authorizing committees. We have the budget to deal with, then we have to follow that with all of the appropriation bills and the reconciliation legislation, all of which is going to be so time consuming, and yet here we are fooling around here wasting time.

The gentleman knows that on Tuesday, and I will tell him right now, the Committee on Rules will be having a meeting and we are going to put out legislation that is going to give an up-or-down vote on the minimum wage.

I, for one, happen to think that there is a need for an increase in the minimum wage, but let me tell my friends what happened the last three weekends I went home. I was in the Adirondack Mountains in the northern end of my district, I was in the Catskill Mountains in the southern end, and all in between is the Hudson Valley, made up of apple farmers and dairy farmers. All of them asked me, "JERRY, how can you increase the minimum wage when we have such heavy regulatory burdens on us now?"

If we are going to increase the minimum wage, why can we not give small businessmen in this country a little relief to remove some of the cost off their backs so that they can afford to give the minimum wage? In the resort industries in the Adirondacks they told me that if they hire four college students, and in my district most of the college students have to work their butts off in order to get money to go to college because in my district they are not rich people. We do not have the money and kids have to pay part of their own tuition, so they have to work in the summertime. Well, if every single restaurant and motel in the Catskills and the Adirondacks are going to have to lay off one out of four people in order to have the money, what are we going to do? How will these kids make a living?

So that is what the argument has been all about. On Tuesday we will put out a rule which is going to bring this issue to the floor and have a legitimate debate. In the meantime, we are tied up here with this challenging of the previous question, which cannot go anywhere. And I wish the gentleman would withdraw it and let us get back to regular business and let us deal with the issues that are so terribly important to the American people, and I thank the gentleman for the time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume just to answer my friend and dear colleague from New York.

We, on the minority side up in the Committee on Rules, have sat back because the gentleman wanted to rush the matters before the Committee on Rules up there and said, look, when we get to the floor we can do all the debating the minority wants to do. Well, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman cannot have it both ways. He cannot stifle us in the committee and then stifle us on the floor.

So I think this is our only opportunity to vent our feelings on how we feel about some of these matters and by using the proper rules.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Ms. DELAURO].

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, I rise this morning to urge my colleagues to defeat the previous question so that we can go back to the Committee on Rules and have a vote on raising the minimum wage.

Republican House leader DICK ARMEY is quoted in today's New York Times saying people are, and I quote, "in a panic about raising the minimum wage." The Republican leader has said in the past that he will fight an increase in the minimum wage with every fiber of his being. No wonder people are in a panic about the minimum wage.

Yet the Republican leadership is not in a panic about dealing with tax breaks for investors with enough money to own racehorses. Yesterday the Committee on Ways and Means took up the issue of a special tax break for wealthy racehorse owners, but Speaker GINGRICH says any vote on raising the minimum wage is still weeks away, at best.

This is why the hard-working families of this country do not believe that Congress is on their side, because even though the minimum wage is at a 40-year low, even though many minimum wage earners are the sole breadwinners for their families, Republicans are still stalling on bringing up a minimum wage issue for a vote.

My Republican colleagues are fond of talking about family values, personal responsibility. Well, the families working for the minimum wage are working hard and taking the responsibility to stay off welfare. Somehow this Congress can find the time to help wealthy investors who can play at the track but not the time to help the hard-working men and women struggling to pay their bills and to keep their head above water.

Some of my Republican colleagues have had the courage to break ranks, cosponsor a bill to raise the minimum wage. They cannot be missing in action today on this vote. The gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ENGLISH], the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAZIO], and the gentleman from California [Mr. HORN]. We need these gentlemen. The working men and women of this country need them today.

The Republican leadership of this Congress has its priorities all wrong.

Stop the stonewalling, give us a vote on raising the minimum wage.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. Let me just say, leave it to the Democrats to suggest that elected officials can give people raises. If they want to give these people a raise, hire them and put them on their payroll, and then they can pay them anything they would like.

Of course 80 percent of America agrees other people should have raises, in the abstract. Ask the 250,000 people that the President's leading economic adviser says will lose their jobs over this how much they like it. Raising the minimum wage is income redistribution among poor people. For every four people who get a dollar raise, one person loses his job.

I wanted to tell my colleagues some of the bad effects of the minimum wage. Studies by Professor Masanori Hashimoto of Ohio State and Llad Phillips of the University of California at Santa Barbara both show increases in the minimum wage increase teenage crime. A study of professor William Beranek of the University of Georgia found the minimum wage increases employment of illegal aliens.

Research also shows the minimum wage increases welfare dependency. For example, a study by Peter Brandon of the University of Wisconsin found the average time on welfare among States that raised the minimum wage was 44 percent higher than States that did not.

Economist Carlos Bonilla of the Employment Policies Institute found a dramatic example in California after the minimum wage rose from $3.35 to $4.25. After accounting for the phaseout of AFDC, Medicaid and food stamps, and for Federal, State and local taxes, a single parent earning a minimum wage after it was increased was $1,800 worse off per year than before.

Finally, the latest research has shown increases in the minimum wage encourage high school students to drop out, enticed by the lure of higher pay, reducing their lifetime earnings and displacing lower skilled workers at the same time.

The 22-percent increase in the minimum wage in 1976 added just $200 million to the aggregate income of those in the lowest 10 percent of income distribution. Only 22,000 men, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and 191,000 women nationwide maintained families on a minimum wage job in 1993. That will decline by 250,000 people in total after we raise it.

Thirty-seven percent of minimum wage workers in 1995 were teenagers. Fifty-nine percent were 24 years old or younger. Seventeen percent of minimum wage workers are spouses and are likely to be secondary earners. Sixty-six percent of minimum wage workers work only part-time, including students, the elderly with pension or Social Security income, and people simply looking for a little extra cash.

Employers also respond to this, because they are touched, really, by laying off people and cutting back on hours. This is one reason why it is difficult to find a bank teller or someone to wait on you at the local department store. Between 1963 and 1995, average weekly hours worked in retail trade, the industry most affected by the minimum wage, fell from 37.3 hours per week to 28.9, while hours worked in higher-paid industries basically unaffected by the minimum wage, such as mining and construction, increased.

Mr. Speaker, this is politics and it is mean politics, using as pawns the very people they are purporting to help to make a political point to the rest of the world on a bill the subject of which is not even germane to. Mr. Speaker, let us move forward with germane discussion of this rule and the bill this rule applies to, and have a vote on the previous question as quickly as possible.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR], the minority leader, who could not let some statements go by without replying.

Mr. BONIOR. I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I have just listened to some of the most outrageous arguments I have ever heard with respect to the minimum wage. The gentleman from Georgia, who just talked, blamed illegal aliens coming into this country on the minimum wage; an increase in crime because of the increase in the minimum wage. He talked about students dropping out of school because of the increase in the minimum wage, and he talked about job layoffs all over the country because of the minimum wage.

Now, I have never heard of a recipe of disaster for trying to help working people who are trying to help their kids struggle through life. This last point, with respect to layoffs, I might add that he cited a number of studies. There were five recent studies done from California to New Jersey.

The New Jersey study studied the people who worked in the restaurant industry and found, in fact, Mr. Speaker, that there was not a decrease in the number of jobs, there was an increase as a result of the increase of the minimum wage in the State of New Jersey. About 10 States have increased their minimum wage since we last did it in 1991, and as a result of that there has not been any dramatic unemployment in this country.

In fact, unemployment numbers are down in this country. People are working. For the gentleman from Georgia to get up here and to suggest to this body and to this country that raising the minimum wage will increase crime, will increase illegal aliens, will increase the drop out of students in this country is just an absolute outrage and is wrong.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, it might be pointed out that I did not make any of these claims. All these claims were made by college professors doing studies, including Ohio State, University of California, University of Georgia, University of Wisconsin. All of these are legitimate studies that are in the literature.

For someone to stand there and say that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage increases unemployment is someone who has not looked at the record.

In the 2-year period between 1973 and 1975, we increased the minimum wage 31 percent. Unemployment at the end was 73 percent worse off than before, from 4.9 percent to 8.5 percent. The period 1974 to 1976, when the minimum wage was increased 15 percent, unemployment went from 5.6 to 7.7 percent, 37 percent worse off. In the period between 1978 and 1980, we increased the minimum wage 17 percent, unemployment went from 6.1 to 7.1, 26 worse off.

Between 1979 and 1981, we increased the minimum wage 16 percent, unemployment went from 5.8 percent to 7.6 percent, 31 percent worse off. 1989 to 1991, we increased the minimum wage by 27 percent, unemployment rate went from 5.3 to 6.7 percent, 26 percent worse off. And in four of those five occasions, four of those five occasions GDP growth was declining after the raise.

To say that increasing the minimum wage has no impact on the economy is to say, then why be so cheesy, give them $20. Then every family will have about $40,000 a year. That it is not going to hurt anybody. Do not be so cheesy with $4.25. If it is not going to impact the economy, give them all a big raise.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR].

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I do not know who was making those allegations on the floor. It certainly was not a college professor. The gentleman from Georgia was making those assertions.

Let me just counteract his claims with respect to employment; 1967, when the wage was increased from $1.25 to $1.40, unemployment decreased from 3.8 to 3.6 percent; 1974 to 1976, an increase in the minimum wage from $1.06 to $2.30, despite a recession, retail employment increased about 5.2 percent generating 655,000 jobs in this country. And in 1990 to 1991, from $3.35 to $4.25, despite a severe recession, which I might add was the responsibility of the Republican President in the White House, despite that period of time when the wage was increased and the severe recession, the numbers of total jobs quickly leveled off in this country.

There is no empirical data that during times of increases in the minimum wage that unemployment decreases. In fact, it is just the reverse.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I would say that the gentleman from Michigan's words have the quality of Alice in Wonderland, seeming to say when I use a word it means exactly what I want it to do.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire as to the time remaining for both sides?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. KOLBE). The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LINDER] has 15 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY] has 16 minutes remaining.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas [Ms. JACKSON-LEE].

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise to defeat the previous question so that we can go back to the Committee on Rules and bring up a rule dealing with increasing the minimum wage. I might say to my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, offer to say that the American people might not be interested in this debate as it relates to germaneness. They might not be interested in whether or not we need to have additional time to go back to our districts and campaign. I think they are interested in making a decent living.

Fifty-nine percent, if we are throwing out numbers, of those who are earning a minimum wage are women, working women with children. We also find that over 80 percent of the American people of all economic levels suggest that we should raise the American minimum wage. And in fact in 1969, the minimum wage at that time was comparable to $6.25. We now have a minimum wage in 1996 of $4.25.

I would simply suggest to my Republican colleagues that they, too, have Members who simply want to vote on the floor of the House and be given the opportunity to increase the minimum wage. Vigorous debate, yes, but an opportunity to do so, because there are people suffering who need an increase in the minimum wage. Let us defeat the previous question, go back to the Committee on Rules and fairly bring up a resolution rule that would allow us to do so.

I would hope that we would not engage in the bantering of statistics. We can all do that. I hope that we will look realistically at what the American people need. Working people need to be affirmed and that will not decrease the numbers of those working. It will increase the number of those working and give them a decent wage.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself a few seconds to instruct the gentlewoman from Texas. I hope not to sound remedial, but if we defeat the previous question, it comes immediately to the floor of the House. Whereupon, the proposed amendment would be stricken on a point of order because it is not germane.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT].

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I rise to salute the candor, ultimately, of my colleague in Georgia, because after some parliamentary mumbo jumbo about what page of the rules book could be used to thwart the desire of the American people for a raise, he has finally come forward in his last few minutes and he has indicated that what all this parliamentary maneuvering is about is his objection to raising the minimum wage. He has told the American people, in response to my colleague from Michigan, Mr. BONIOR, that it is not himself but it is the professors that made him do it.

The American people knew that Professor GINGRICH and Professor ARMEY were ready to fight with every fiber in their body to block the legitimate desire of the American people for a raise. All this parliamentary mumbo jumbo stuff can be explained in this chart.

We have considered this issue of the minimum wage a number of times in this body. There is a strange thing that has occurred. Those Republicans who stood outside in front of the cameras and said they were for the minimum wage got their arms twisted, once they got in here at the voting box. They refused to vote to give the people of America a raise even though they said they were for it. As they begin to hear from the people, the number of those people change.

The votes against the minimum wage have been going steadily down in this body. The votes for the minimum wage have been going steadily up.

All that it will take this morning in a few minutes when we take up this previous question is five Members, five Republicans who will walk up and vote in favor of giving the people of America a raise.

If they will do that, we will achieve an increase in the minimum wage and we will do it promptly. There is no reason to wait until tomorrow. There is no reason to wait until next Tuesday to consider this issue. We will get caught up in some other issue designed to ultimately kill it. Let us do it now.

I know they think it is important to raise the wilderness in Utah, but I think the raise that the American people are interested in is in their basic living standards. Let us give it to them today.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER], my colleague on the Committee on Rules.

(Mr. DREIER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this rule and moving the previous question. It is interesting to listen to this debate. Obviously we have gotten demagoguery, people who were trying to claim that we Republicans are opposed to working Americans because we are not out there violating the House rules to bring up, under Utah bill, the minimum wage. I mean it is preposterous.

Our colleagues on the other side of the aisle know that if we were to defeat the previous question, we could not bring this up. We could not bring it up. We are working long and hard on a compromise that will deal with increasing the take-home pay of working Americans, to deal with reducing the tax and regulatory burden which has jeopardized job creation and economic growth. The Committee on Ways and Means is working on that.

This is nothing but a ruse to have our friends on the other side of the aisle come forward and argue that somehow we are going to be able to increase the minimum wage by defeating the previous question. It ain't going to happen. It is a violation of House rules, and it is crazy to have them doing it.

So we should support the previous question, support this rule and move ahead with the way in which we can encourage opportunity for the people in this country to gain jobs and to gain the kind of standard of living which we hope very much will happen.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas, Mr. GENE GREEN.

(Mr. GENE GREEN of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GENE GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to oppose the previous question. Unlike my colleagues from California, we will have an increase in the minimum wage. And the closer we get, just like the chart we saw earlier, like my colleague from Texas, we need to keep working at it.

My good friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY], from the Committee on Rules stated earlier if the previous question is defeated an amendment to the rule will be offered. Then the Committee on Rules will immediately report a resolution back to the floor with the minimum wage increase.

They take care of the germane questions within the committee. They just need to do it, to provide for the consideration of a bill to increase the minimum wage from $4.25 an hour to $5.15 an hour beginning July 4.

This is a fourth time in the last month we as Democrats and a few Republicans have stood here on the floor and tried to give hard-working Americans a raise. Four times we have tried to do this. I have been asked, why are we doing this four times in the last month? I say we are fighting for an increase in the minimum wage.

I remember a quote from Martin Luther, 475 years ago, when he stood on the steps in Germany and said, Here I stand, I can do no other. God help me, Amen.

That is why we are here. We are here 4 times and we will be here another 4 times and another 40 times until we see a clean vote on the minimum wage.

Eighty-three percent of Americans favor an increase in the minimum wage. Yet this morning we have heard, and every time we hear that the majority party still argues that an increase is higher unemployment, increasing the number of welfare recipients. They claim that most minimum wage earners are teenagers. The facts point to the other direction. It is just not true.

You need to come to reality and, thank goodness, we are seeing an increase in Members from the Republican majority voting for a minimum wage increase. I hope we see that five more today because we will have an increase in the minimum wage if we only have five more Republicans join us Democrats today.

The facts agree with the need for an increase. I ask my colleagues to vote for it.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 30 seconds to point out that the way you increase the standard of living for low-income people is give them more take-home pay. The way you give them more take-home pay is to reduce the governmental burden and tax burden that they bear. Telling other people what they should pay their employees is simply not the way to run the Government.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WARD].

Mr. WARD. Mr. Speaker, I want to point something out to my colleagues here and anyone who may be paying attention to this debate; that is, what we are having to do in order to discuss the issue of the minimum wage on the floor the this House.

What we are having to do is to hold the discussion on a completely different item, H.R. 303, which has nothing to do, Mr. Speaker, with the minimum wage. But it has everything to do with the willingness of the majority to allow us to discuss and vote on the minimum wage.

What we are calling for today is a no vote on the previous question. Anybody who hears that wonders, what kind of mumbo jumbo is that? Well, it is what we have to do in order to get the Members of this body on the RECORD for or against an increase in the minimum wage.

Let us talk about who would get a raise if we increased the minimum wage in America. Remember, it is at a 40-year low next year, if we do not increase it, 40-year low in purchasing power. But who are these people?

Well, to hear many talk about it, we would have to think that they were teenagers, that they were people who did not need an increase. But we know better than that. Sixty percent of the people who would receive an increase in the minimum wage are women; 14 percent of Kentucky workers, that is over 200,000 people in my State, would increase their income because of an increase in the minimum wage. Something that I have just learned from some statistics that are in the New York Times and in the USA Today, 20,000 seniors, 20,000 people over the age of 65 in Kentucky would receive an increase in their wages.

That is almost as many as there are people under 25 who would receive an increase.

Does that tell us something? Yes, it does. It tells us that we need to support an increase in the minimum wage.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LEWIS], the deputy Democratic whip.

Mr. LEWIS of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, this morning the Democrats in the House will once again attempt to bring a minimum wage bill to the floor for a vote. I urge my colleagues, Democrats and Republicans, to support bringing this bill to the floor.

Raising the minimum wage is the right thing to do. It is more than just an economic issue, it is a moral issue. Hard-working people deserve the right to earn a livable wage. No one, but no one, can support a family on $4.25 an hour, $170 per week or less than $9,000 a year.

I know some of my Republican colleagues say they support raising the minimum wage. Well, now is the time to walk the walk, not just talk the talk.

Vote "no" on the previous question. Support an increase in the minimum wage.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FATTAH].

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Speaker, this debate about the minimum wage is about honoring work. But this issue about procedural gimmickry is about honoring one's word. The new majority has insisted that they would not bottle up bills that had popular support by using procedural gimmicks. But here we have a situation where the majority does not represent the majority. That is, everyone knows and everyone has asserted that if there were a vote on the minimum wage, it would pass. So, since the majority of the Members of the Congress would vote to raise the minimum wage, the Republican majority, not showing much maturity in this matter, has decided to use procedural gimmicks to stand in the way of allowing the Members of Congress, Democrats and Republicans, to have a clean, honest vote on raising the minimum wage.

Now, the people of our country deserve better from the majority. That is, if my colleagues are against the minimum wage, then they should vote against it, speak to the Members of the Congress on their point of view. But they should not hide behind procedural gimmicks to avoid us having a vote. It does not speak well of the majority, and this notion that somehow we can wait until another day suggests a certain passivity about the plight of working people in this country that does not speak well of the intent of the majority Members on this side of the aisle.

I would encourage all of us to vote "no" on the previous question so that we can vote "yes" on raising the minimum wage, and I would encourage my colleagues on the Republican side of the aisle to win or lose, but to stand up and have the courage of their convictions on the issue of the minimum wage rather than hide behind some procedural gimmick that disrespects and dishonors the suggestion that this is indeed the people's House.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to question why the minority, which was in the majority in both the House and the Senate and had the White House 2 years ago, had no concern whatever for the minimum wage.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LINDER. I yield to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Because, Mr. Speaker, we had an agreement with the Republican side that while health care reform was on the table and we may be burdening business with that cost, we would not raise the minimum wage.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, at least our colleague has admitted now that they are burdening business with the cost.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE].

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, the year before, I might point out, it was Democrats, without one vote from this side of the aisle, Mr. Speaker, that successfully gave a tax cut to people under $26,000 a year, working people, and that was in lieu of the minimum wage. No support from that side.

But this is interesting that it is on the Utah Wilderness bill, this is the only way we can get it up. It is fitting, in a way. Moses wandered in the wilderness for 40 years. The minimum wage is at an all-time 40-year buying low, and indeed five good Republicans—that is all it takes now—five members of the Republican party adding their votes to ours, will pass a minimum wage increase. That is all that is needed, Mr. Speaker, for coming out of the wilderness is five more Republicans.

We have been gaining and gaining and gaining. Our colleagues cannot hide anymore behind "We will get a vote next week or the week after that or whenever."

This thing has been wandering in the wilderness for too long. It is time to bring it out. Democrats have reduced the tax burden on working people progressively through the earned income tax credit. Ironically, the other side now wants to repeal part of that. But it is time to give working people a livable wage.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER].

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, let me say that it is about time we pass the minimum wage. There have been all sorts of spurious arguments against it. Those arguments are launched by narrow ideological fuel or those who have some business interests.

Here we are on the floor unable to bring the bill directly before us and trying to go through every parliamentary maneuver to achieve democracy, and we should not have to do this. The minimum wage is one of the most talked about issues in America. Most people, if the polls are right, are for it. A vote ought to come to the floor now, and let the arguments fall where they may. We ought to do it, we ought to do it cleanly, we ought to keep the American people working. We do not want to encourage people not to work because wages are so low, and this is a simple and easy way to do it.

Again, the only people opposed to this either have an economic self-interest or are extreme ideologues.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to point out one more time, at the risk of sounding remedial, this will not bring a vote on this floor on the minimum wage. This will bring this rule immediately to the floor with the amendment that the minimum wage will be on it, and it will be struck on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California [Ms. PELOSI].

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY] for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of an increase in the minimum wage, and in doing so I want to call attention of our colleagues to this cartoon, which is neither funny nor fair. As I call my colleagues' attention to it, Mr. Speaker, I want them to think about it.

"How long does it take to earn $8,440," it says.

On one side it says, "If you are full-time minimum-wage worker, it takes 1 year. If you are an average CEO of a large U.S. corporation, it takes one-half a day."

Think about it. God bless everyone who can make that kind of money at the high end. But why, in a great country as decent as ours, should we not reward work and for us to have a disparity this great? It is a matter of conscience and decency and a sign of a great country that we reward work.

This is an increase for necessities. Please honor American workers.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. TIAHRT].

Mr. TIAHRT. Mr. Speaker, this is not about CEO's, but it is about senior citizens. One of the things that happens when we raise the minimum wage, it is a historical fact, inflation follows, and when inflation follows, that hurts the people, people who are seniors, the worst because they have fixed incomes, they are unable to make their payments.

The second thing it does is it does cost jobs. Now, we have heard this example about New Jersey, the restaurant jobs. But that is an isolated instance.

As my colleagues know, my grandfather died when he was 94 years old, and he smoked. Does that mean that smoking is not hazardous to your health? Of course it is. That was an isolated instance.

It does cost jobs, and it does hit the minority communities the worst. So we are costing jobs, we are hurting the elderly, and yet we are pushing for a minimum-wage increase.

But the real thing, the hidden benefit to the President and to the liberals here in Congress, is that it is a tax increase. We will realize inflation. We will realize more higher taxes, more revenue. That is what happened in the early 1980's. My colleagues remember when we had the windfall tax? It was because of inflation. We had 14 percent inflation.

Mr. Speaker, we can drive inflation, we can hurt the elderly, we can hurt minorities, and we can increase taxes at their expense. But I think it is bad policy. We can, however, put more money in the pockets of the poor through earned-income tax credits, through $500-per-child tax relief, through the McIntosh-Klug-Tiahrt tax plan, which actually has more takehome pay for people who are heads of households than if we did increase the minimum wage. That is the type of policy this country needs.

Seventy-five percent of the people on minimum wage are students. They come from average household incomes of $50,000. Do they need it? No, this is bad policy. I am against the rule, and I urge my colleagues to vote against it.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS].

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts for yielding me the time.

My colleagues, minimum wage first came into law in 1938, and congressional Republicans were against it back then, those almost 60 years ago. Since that time, under the insistence of the American people, the Congress of the United States has raised the minimum wage 18 times, only 18 times in those 60 years, and every single time the Republicans in the Congress, not necessarily Republicans in America, please understand, but the Republican majority in the Congress, has been against the minimum wage. Why, Republican Presidents have even vetoed the minimum wage, the last being former President Bush, who vetoed a minimum wage that passed after 3 years of struggle that passed the Congress during his Presidency.

What is it about these Republicans, so frozen in the ice of their own indifference to the working poor, that they cannot support a proven benefit fiscally to those people?

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SHAYS].

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Speaker, it is not lost on me and my colleagues on this side of the aisle that when our colleagues on the other side of the aisle had an opportunity to increase the minimum wage when they controlled both the House and the Senate they choose not to bring it up. It is simply not lost on us that much of this debate is about politics.

The fact is this side of the aisle will have a vote on the minimum wage. But when we have a vote on the minimum wage, it will not just include the minimum wage. It will also include a tax credit for employers who hire the most disadvantaged workers, those who have been on welfare, those who have never had a job before. We will have a tax credit tied to increasing the minimum wage to help the most disadvantaged.

We will also have provisions to help small businesses most impacted by a minimum wage income. We are going to have a job creation program along with increasing the minimum wage.

I would encourage my colleagues, particularly on this side of the aisle, to vote for the previous question, and not be lured into this procedural vote that will ultimately be declared out of order.

Passage of the minimum wage should be done in a way that creates not only an increase in the wage base for those who are most disadvantaged, but also has a job creation element to help all Americans.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire if the gentleman from Massachusetts has more speakers.

Mr. MOAKLEY. The only speaker I have is myself.

Mr. LINDER. Then I will close after the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY].

□ 1115

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. KOLBE). The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY] is recognized for 1½ minutes.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I urge a "no" vote on the previous question. If the previous question is defeated, I shall offer an amendment to the rule which would make in order a new section in the rule. This amendment will provide for the immediate consideration of a bill to increase the minimum wage. That bill will be introduced by my very good friend, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR].

This provides for a separate and immediate up or down vote on the minimum wage. Let me make it clear to my colleagues, both Democrats and Republicans, that defeating the previous question will in fact allow the House to vote on the minimum wage increase. That is what the American people want us to do. We should not delay any longer. Vote "no" on the previous question.

Mr. Speaker, I include the text of the amendment and accompanying documents for the RECORD.

The text of the amendment and information on the previous question is as follows:

At the end of the resolution add the following new section:

"Sec. _____. That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution the House shall proceed without intervention of any point of order to consider in the House a bill introduced by Representative BONIOR of Michigan on May 15, 1996 to increase the minimum wage. The bill shall be debatable for one hour equally divided and controlled by the Chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Economic and Educational Opportunities. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions."

THE VOTE ON THE PREVIOUS QUESTION: WHAT IT REALLY MEANS

This vote, the vote on whether to order the previous question on a special rule, is not merely a procedural vote. A vote against ordering the previous question is a vote against the Republican majority agenda and a vote to allow the opposition, at least for the moment, to offer an alternative plan. It is a vote about what the House should be debating.

Mr. Clarence Cannon's Precedents of the House of Representatives, (VI, 308-311) describes the vote on the previous question on the rule as "a motion to direct or control the consideration of the subject before the House being made by the Member in charge." To defeat the previous question is to give the opposition a chance to decide the subject before the House. Cannon cites the Speaker's ruling of January 13, 1920, to the effect that "the refusal of the House to sustain the demand for the previous question passes the control of the resolution to the opposition" in order to offer an amendment. On March 15, 1909, a member of the majority party offered a rule resolution. The House defeated the previous question and a member of the opposition rose to a parliamentary inquiry, asking who was entitled to recognition. Speaker Joseph G. Cannon (R-Illinois) said: "The previous question having been refused, the gentleman from New York, Mr. Fitzgerald, who had asked the gentleman to yield to him for an amendment, is entitled to the first recognition."

Because the vote today may look bad for the Republican majority they will say "the vote on the previous question is simply a vote on whether to proceed to an immediate vote on adopting the resolution . . . [and] has no substantive legislative or policy implications whatsoever." But that is not what they have always said. Listen to the Republican Leadership Manual on the Legislative Process in the United States House of Representatives, (6th edition, page 135). Here's how the Republicans describe the previous question vote in their own manual:

Although it is generally not possible to amend the rule because the majority Member controlling the time will not yield for the purpose of offering an amendment, the same result may be achieved by voting down the previous question on the rule . . . . When the motion for the previous question is defeated, control of the time passes to the Member who led the opposition to ordering the previous question. That Member, because he then controls the time, may offer an amendment to the rule, or yield for the purpose of amendment."

Deschler's Procedure in the U.S. House of Representatives, the subchapter titled "Amending Special Rules" states: "a refusal to order the previous question on such a rule [a special rule reported from the Committee on Rules] opens the resolution to amendment and further debate." (Chapter 21, section 21.2) Section 21.3 continues:

Upon rejection of the motion for the previous question on a resolution reported from the Committee on Rules, control shifts to the Member leading the opposition to the previous question, who may offer a proper amendment or motion and who controls the time for debate thereon."

The vote on the previous question on a rule does have substantive policy implications. It is one of the only available tools for those who oppose the Republican majority's agenda to offer an alternative plan.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LINDER] is recognized for 8½ minutes.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, let me conclude my remarks by reminding my colleagues that defeating the previous question is an exercise in futility because the minority wants to offer an amendment that will be ruled out of order as non germane to this rule. So the vote is without substance.

The previous question vote itself is simply a procedural motion to close debate on this rule and proceed to a vote on its adoption. The vote has no substantive or policy implications whatsoever.

Mr. Speaker, I include for the RECORD an explanation of the previous question.

The material referred to is as follows:

THE PREVIOUS QUESTION VOTE: WHAT IT MEANS

House Rule XVII ("Previous Question") provides in part that:

There shall be a motion for the previous question, which, being ordered by a majority of the Members voting, if a quorum is present, shall have the effect to cut off all debate and bring the House to a direct vote upon the immediate question or questions on which it has been asked or ordered.

In the case of special rule or order of business resolution reported from the House Rules Committee, providing for the consideration of a specified legislative measure, the previous question is moved following the one hour of debate allowed for under House Rules.

The vote on the previous question is simply a procedural vote on whether to proceed to an immediate vote on adopting the resolution that sets the ground rules for debate and amendment on the legislation it would make in order. Therefore, the vote on the previous question has no substantive legislative or policy implications whatsoever.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the yeas appeared to have it.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule XV, the Chair announces that he will reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the period of time within which a vote by electronic device, if ordered, will be taken on the question on agreeing to the resolution.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 221, nays 197, not voting 15, as follows:

Mr. Paxon for, with Mr. Holden against.

Mr. WILLIAMS and Mr. OWENS changed their vote from "yea" to "nay."

So the previous question was ordered.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. KOLBE). The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION FOR SUNDRY COMMITTEES AND THEIR SUBCOMMITTEES TO SIT TODAY DURING THE 5-MINUTE RULE

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the following committees and their subcommittees be permitted to sit today while the House is meeting in the Committee of the Whole under the 5-minute rule: Committee on Agriculture, Committee on Commerce, Committee on Government Reform and Oversight, Committee on International Relations, Committee on the Judiciary, Committee on Resources, Committee on Science, Committee on Small Business, and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

It is my understanding that the minority has been consulted and that there is no objection to these requests.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

PRINTING OF PROCEEDINGS HAD DURING RECESS

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the proceedings had during the recess be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and that all Members and former Members who spoke during the recess have the privilege of revising and extending their remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 1997

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 430 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 3230.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H.R. 3230) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1997 for military activities of the Department of Defense, to prescribe military personnel strengths for fiscal year 1997, and for other purposes, with Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Committee of the Whole rose on Tuesday, May 14, 1996, the en bloc amendments offered by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE] had been disposed of.

By virtue of notice given pursuant to section 4(c) of the resolution, it is now in order to debate the subject matter of cooperative threat reduction with the states of the former Soviet Union.

The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE] and the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE].

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mr. SPENCE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, allow me to review briefly the actions taken by the National Security Committee on the Cooperative Threat Reduction [CTR] Program in H.R. 3230.

First, the committee cut the $327 million budget request by $25 million. Specifically, as based on the availability of prior-year funds, the committee cut $20 million from the fissile material storage facility in Russia. The committee also cut approximately $4 million from chemical weapons destruction-related activities in Russia. Specifically, the committee denied the DOD request to initiate a new, as yet unjustified demolition project and reduced the amount for the Chemical Weapons Destruction Support Office, an information clearinghouse located in Moscow. The committee also cut $1 million from CTR program overhead.

The bill also includes a provision that is intended to ensure that CTR funds are spent only on core dismantlement activities, such as destroying bombers, missiles, and silos. My colleagues may recall that noncore activities such as environmental restoration, job retraining, and defense conversion have been at the heart of the controversy surrounding this program in past years. This provision would prohibit use of fiscal year 1997 or prior-year, unobligated CTR funds for conducting peacekeeping activities with Russia, providing housing, performing environmental restoration, providing job retraining assistance, or for providing assistance to promote defense conversion.

I understand the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] plans to offer an amendment that would extend the prohibition on funding for defense conversion activities beyond the Department of Defense to include foreign assistance and related funding sources. I certainly support the gentleman's amendment.

Finally, the committee bill expresses deep concerns regarding the President's certification on a range of Russian behavior in the arms control and military modernization arenas. Evidence continues to mount that Russia is not adhering to its arms control obligations, including in the area of chemical and biological weapons. Likewise, it is hard to reconcile the President's certification with the fact that Russia is spending billions of dollars on a deep underground facility recently reported in the open press and on modernizing its strategic offensive forces.

The distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] also plans to offer an amendment which would prohibit the further obligation of funds for the CTR program in Russia and Belarus until the President certifies to Congress that Russia has met 10 conditions relating to arms control compliance, foreign and military policy, and arms exports. I share the gentleman's concern that the President's certifications send the wrong signal to Moscow and may actually encourage non-compliant behavior.

I look forward to today's debate and discussion, and reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER], a member of the committee.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the distinguished ranking member for yielding me time. As many know, I have served for 24 years on this committee, and, because I am retiring from the Congress, I have tried not to take a lot of the committee's time in debating these different issues, thinking others should move forward.

But I must say that I think we are engaging in one of the most serious issues that we are going to deal with in this Congress, and that is whether we continue to use our brain, engage our brain, and continue to move forward with the Nunn-Lugar proposals that denuclearize and demilitarize Russia and Belarus, or whether we go with our glands, do our chest beating, scream, holler and yell, and adopt the amendments that I think are going to derail what we have been doing and the progress we are making.

So I stand here in a very solemn mode, saying I certainly hope that the Solomon amendment is defeated, and defeated resoundingly, because the reason that we are trying very hard to take down the nuclear weapons in the Soviet Union and to demilitarize the Soviet Union is for our own good, it is for NATO's good, it is for all of our allies in Asia's good.

Nuclear proliferation does not help anybody. The way I read the Solomon amendment and others is that what they are trying to pretend is like this is foreign aid; this is a big bennie for Russia.

It is not a bennie at all. This is a carrot that we are doing as part of our leadership internationally to try and make this planet a little safer.

The nuclear genie got out of the bottle in this century. We are about to close this century, and this has been a very serious effort by two of the most well thought of Members of the other body, Senator NUNN and Senator LUGAR, to try and put the nuclear genie back in the bottle, to try and demilitarize this huge colossus that we used to know as the Soviet Union.

What a phenomenal opportunity this is for our children. What a phenomenal opportunity this is for the 21st century. How shortsighted it would be to say "Oh, no, no, no, this is really just an aid bill. We are just doing this for the benefit of the Russians, and we ought to shut this off."

No; for people who really miss the cold war, I suppose they ought to vote for the Solomon amendment. I do not miss the cold war. I do not miss the old drills of duck and cover. I do not miss that kind of terror. I hope people listen to this serious debate and vote "no" on the Solomon amendment.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. HUNTER], the chairman of our Subcommittee on Military Procurement.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman for yielding me time. Let me respond to my friend who says she does not miss the cold war, the war is over, and Nunn-Lugar money is a good way to exit the war.

The problem, my colleagues, is that we apparently have not convinced the Russians that the cold war is over. We see a continuing drive to modernize their strategic systems, which costs them billions and billions of dollars, to do other things with respect to chemical systems and biological warfare systems, which again cost them in the hundreds of millions and billions of dollars. And in light of that, in light of that continued expenditure of hard dollars by the Russians, the question we have to ask is does it make sense for us to subsidize the Soviet Union to the tune of some $300 million, which is what the full committee passed, or $327 million, which is what the administration asked for, without requiring certain certifications that the Soviet Union is slowing down this drive to modernize its systems and to build this deep, underground complex, which is bigger, incidentally, than the District of Columbia, and which could be used by the Russians to carry on weapons activities after a nuclear attack.

So let me go over some of the concerns we have that the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] meets with his amendment. First, a Yamantau Mountain underground complex, something that disturbs all of our war planners, all of our strategic thinkers, because this could be used to continue to weaponize the Soviet Union after a first strike.

Why do they have this mindset that somehow a first strike is survivable and could be survived? They are breaking chemical and biological weapons treaties. They are continuing to develop biological weapons at great costs. They are improving the SS-25 ICBM, really building what I call the SS-27 ICBM. It costs them a ton of money. They are building a new nuclear submarine, and they are selling nuclear reactors to Iran.

Mr. Chairman, let us send a message to the Soviets, back the Solomon amendment.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. COX].

Mr. COX of California. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman for yielding me this time. I want to especially thank the chairman for his acceptance in advance of the Solomon amendment, which much of the debate already has focused upon.

One of my colleagues across the aisle suggested that support for the Solomon amendment would somehow require one to long for the days of the cold war. But the truth is that the Nunn-Lugar moneys for Russia were approved in that headier, indeed giddy time after the collapse of the Berlin Wall and the Soviet Union itself, when the Congress typically sought to show its approval, its support for something, by showering money upon it.

Over $1.5 billion has now gone not to the people of Russia, but to the Government, and the Government of Russia, particularly after the next two rounds of elections in June and July, may well be back in the hands of a Communist imperialist, Gennadi Zyuganov. There was never much of a budget for these moneys to begin with. President Clinton expanded the purpose for which Nunn-Lugar aid might be spent to include housing for officers, defense conversion, and so on.

In this bill there is an attempt to address that. But what Chairman SOLOMON is talking about doing is even more important. President Clinton ought to be able to certify before the American taxpayers send a third of a billion dollars, as requested this year, President Clinton should be able to certify that Russia is complying with arms control agreements. If they are not, why should U.S. taxpayers subsidize them?

Russia should not be modernizing its nuclear arsenal at the very time we are allegedly paying for dismantling nuclear weapons. What could be more reasonable? President Clinton should be able to make that certification.

Russia should not be sharing intelligence with Cuba. If you are interested in supporting with United States taxpayer funds Russia sharing intelligence with Cuba, I do not understand that. The President should be able to certify that Russia is willing to respect the sovereignty of Lithuania.

My own concern about Russian deployment in Kalinigrad, where they have twice as many Russian troops on Lithuania's sovereign soil as American troops have deployed in all of Europe, cause me to have reservations about this.

Mr. Chairman, this is a fine amendment and I urge Members to support it.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I recognize Members of Congress have many things to do, but I would like to hope that when a Member takes the floor of this body on a significant piece of legislation, they would at least take time to read the legislation so that they would not speak based upon ignorance. If my distinguished colleague, the previous speaker, had read page 362 of this bill, bill language, it points out that moneys for housing are specifically prohibited.

Second, if the gentleman had taken time to understand Nunn-Lugar in substantive intellectual terms, the gentleman would understand that no money goes to the Russian people.

This money goes to American firms providing the services to dismantle warheads that just a few years ago were aimed at the United States to destroy, maim, and kill at a level of mega death beyond people's ability to comprehend.

It defies logic. It defies logic, Mr. Chairman, to talk about issues that are of lesser significance when there ought to be one thing that we universally accept, and that is that the danger of nuclear weapons has a significance and an imperative unto itself.

The Nunn-Lugar effort is an effort to dismantle these weapons. It is an effort to dismantle chemical and biological warfare, to destroy the facilities in Russia and Belarus. They are moving diligently in that area.

It defies understanding. I believe it is almost even bizarre for Members to challenge this piece of legislation when during the decade of the 1980's we spent in excess of $300 billion a year, prepared to wage war against the Soviet Union, even contemplated the idiocy and the insanity of nuclear war and we are not prepared to spend pennies to help Russia dismantle nuclear weapons that threaten our security. This is in our interest.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], the chairman of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, with all due respect to the ranking member, whom I have great respect for, the truth of the matter is that we are subsidizing the Russian Government to dismantle old nuclear missiles while still they are in the process of modernizing and building up other nuclear missiles.

Mr. Chairman, the Nunn-Lugar Foreign Aid Program, paying the former Soviet Union to dismantle some of their defensive missiles, was initially premised on the belief that the new Democratic States of the former Soviet Union wanted to destroy some of their massive war arsenals but were simply too poor to pay for this endeavor. That is what the initial premise was. Thus, for 5 years now it has been assumed that it was in our interest to divert some of our defense budget to help destroy some of those weapons, but not all of them. It is time to challenge that very complacent assumption, Mr. Chairman, at least in the case of Russia, and that is what my amendment does. It does not speak to Ukraine, it does not speak to Kazakhstan, it speaks to Russia.

Anyone who has been reading the papers knows that today Russia is spending billions of dollars on a host of activities that range from the legal to the illegal morally abhorrent, but all of which are contrary to our American national interests.

Mr. Chairman, and listen up over there, if Russia can cough up $5 billion to kill Chechnyans, if they can cough up $5 billion to kill them or $2 billion to produce new advanced submarines, and who knows how much to build a nuclear command bunker the size of Washington, DC, why can Russia not come up with the $200 million we have been allotting to them for the last 5 years under this program?

And let me tell my colleagues something. If we are giving them this money, it is freeing up other money to build housing for Russian officers while we are not taking care of our own American military personnel. That is outrageous. We have a 4.5 percent increase in housing in the gentleman's bill, and we are grateful that he did that, but we need a lot more.

Mr. Chairman, it is important to note that the Russia of today is not the Russia of 1992. The reformers in that country have long since been purged. That means thrown out. Since at least 1993, Russia has been pursuing foreign and military policies highly reminiscent of the old Soviet Union. Read through my list and Members will see. Mr. Chairman, obsession with whether or not the Communist party will win elections next month has led the Clinton administration to ignore that fact.

Mr. Chairman, some would say a tougher policy against Russia, such as linking our aid to their behavior, would weaken Mr. Yeltsin before the election. Proponents of this view are ignoring the reactionary and anti-western nature of Russia today, with Yeltsin as president. That is what is important, Mr. Chairman. And they are ignoring the fact that this negative trend in Russia has taken place in an atmosphere of unrelenting appeasement, with unlinked foreign aid as a cornerstone of that appeasement policy.

Mr. Chairman, the defense budget of all places is no place to put this kind of money. We should save that kind of money and send them a message. Read the certifications necessary and Members will vote for the Solomon amendment.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I want to have the attention of the distinguished gentleman from New York. I would like to read briefly and in part from a letter from the Secretary of Defense. It says, "I understand and share the concerns about Russian behavior that lie behind this amendment," speaking of the Solomon amendment, "but shutting down the CTR program would not be an effective method for addressing these concerns. Instead, shutting down the CTR program would severely damage our security."

Now, this is the Secretary of Defense. Damage our security. This is a dangerous amendment. We are jeopardizing American Security.

Now, to speak further,

The CTR is directly reducing the threat to the United States from former Soviet nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction. Under CTR, the United States is directly facilitating the dismantlement of ICBM's and silos, bombers, ballistic missiles, submarines, and other weapons that were designed to destroy the United States. For example, CTR has provided critical support for the following achievements:

Over 3,800 nuclear warheads have been removed from deployment, and over 800 launchers have been eliminated. Kazakhstan has become a nuclear free area and the Ukraine and Belarus will become so during 1996, halting potential proliferation brought about by the breakup of the Soviet Union. Six hundred kilograms of highly enriched uranium, a proliferator's treasure trove, were secretly removed from Kazakhstan to safe storage in the United States.

Thirty-eight hundred warheads, Mr. Chairman, this is a program that speaks to our national security, and I believe that while the gentleman from New York may very well be well intended, this is a dangerous amendment and flies in the face of American national security.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELLUMS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

As the gentleman knows, my amendment does not speak to Kazakhstan; it does not speak to Ukraine. Their new missiles threaten American security as far as I am concerned.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. TIAHRT], a member of the committee.

Mr. TIAHRT. Mr. Chairman, we have been trying to move to verify how these Nunn-Lugar funds are being spent. I had an incident occur in Fort Riley, KS, which is just north of my district, which we checked into the financing of.

What happened is we paid for the jet fuel for two IL-76's to bring over approximately 150 Russian soldiers. They then went to Fort Riley and we showed them our latest hardware. Then we put them on charter buses and ran them over to Topeka, KS, to show them the treasures of the czar. Then we hauled them back and eventually brought them back down to McConnell Air Force Base, near Wichita, and flew them back to Russia, all at taxpayers' expenses.

So I inquired where did these funds come from, from the Pentagon, and lo and behold some of these funds come from Nunn-Lugar. Now, whether this is a good opportunity or not, I think we should have Russians as friends rather than enemies, but these funds are not being spent as they were intended. They are not reducing the amount of chemical weapons and biological weapons and not reducing the nuclear threat as they were intended to.

So, if they are not going to do it, the administration fails to verify, where is the evidence this is actually occurring in Russia? We hear about other countries, but what about Russia?

Why should we borrow money from our children's future to fund these trips over here to America to the treasures of the czar and not let the money go for the specific purposes? That is why I am supporting the Solomon amendment, is that we do not have any verification that they are actually doing what we intended them to do and that they are misusing these funds, in my mind. If we want to do these sort of trips, then we should do it under that aspect and let it go through Congress, let us debate it and bring it up here and vote on it.

But let us make sure if we are going to spend money to reduce the nuclear threat that the money actually goes for that purpose. And I do not think it is going that way and that is why I am supporting the Solomon amendment.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY], my distinguished colleague.

Mr. KENNEDY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition of the Solomon amendment and I rise in strong support of the Nunn-Lugar program. This is a program that does more to kill Russian nuclear weapons with a pen than any hope that we could every have of killing these with dollars and with nuclear weapons or any other kind of weapons ourselves.

It is an example of some of the most wrong-headed, convoluted thinking that I have ever witnessed on the House floor. Somehow we think that, or maybe some people think that there is an opportunity here to try to accuse Democrats or anyone that is in favor of Nunn-Lugar funds of being soft on communism, of being some kind of pinko Communist that is not willing to stand up to the hard Russian threat.

The truth of the matter is, these dollars go, in vast majority, to United States companies to go out and get rid of Russian nuclear weapons. It is a rough equivalent to us saying that because someone has a gun to our head, what we are going to do is pull out a six-shooter and blow off each one of our toes in order to show an example of how tough we are, and if we are not willing to blow off the other six toes then somehow we are easy or light on communism.

This is craziness. What we should do is recognize that is the United States best interest to make sure that we can get rid of as many Russian nuclear armaments as we possibly can. And if we can do that and pay U.S. companies to get the job done, then why not go forward? What are all of these strings that we want to attach?

Of course, we want to get rid of Russian threats in terms of biological weapons, of course, we want to get rid of radar systems, of course, we want them to agree to a whole range of additional issues, but this is the wrong vehicle to attach those concerns to. I am very much in support of almost every goal that the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] puts forward in his amendment to terms of the kinds of compromises we want the Russians to agree to, but this is the wrong way to achieve those compromises.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, might I inquire as to the remaining amount of time on both sides of the aisle?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] has 11 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE] has 7½ minutes remaining.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SKAGGS].

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, I am not sure I am understanding what is going on on the floor right now. Is it the understanding of the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] that the fundamental purpose of these Nunn-Lugar funds are to reduce the nuclear threat and the threat of weapons of mass destruction to the United States?

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I would say to the gentleman that is exactly the purpose of Nunn-Lugar; a bipartisan amendment, I might add.

Mr. SKAGGS. The amendments pending before the House would cut funding for that unless certain other conditions are met?

Mr. DELLUMS. If the gentleman would continue to yield, Mr. Chairman, the practical effect of the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York is to put constraints and cause certifications that the President could never certify, which means we would kill the program.

Mr. SKAGGS. In other words, if we do not do what the gentleman wants to do in these categories, we are going to shoot ourselves, is the practical effect of this.

Mr. DELLUMS. I would think the gentleman's characterization is correct.

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Chairman, I suspect the ultimate irony of this is that in a year or two from now, if this becomes law, that we will have Members arguing that we need to increase defense spending because the nuclear threat from Russia has not been reduced, and the reason it will not have been reduced is because we have tried to attach extraneous conditions to one of the most effective programs we have ever seen in reducing the central security threat to this country.

Now, where in the world is the common sense in trying to perpetrate this kind of public policy? Does the gentleman have any idea how this could end up being helpful to our national security?

Mr. DELLUMS. If the gentleman would yield further, I do not think it is, and during the course of the earlier remarks in the general debate I quoted from a letter from the Secretary of Defense that said he believes that while he is concerned about the same issues the gentleman from New York is concerned about, he points out that this is an inappropriate vehicle to use, and at the end of the day to destroy the CTR program is to challenge America's national security.

Mr. SKAGGS. Again, as I understand it, just looking at Russia, the funds from the Nunn-Lugar program have involved removal of over 3,000 nuclear warheads in Russia.

Mr. DELLUMS. That is correct.

Mr. SKAGGS. Putting them ahead of schedule in complying with START I limits.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON], a member of the committee.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I will not take the full amount of time. But after looking at this, first I want to say, Mr. Chairman, I take a back seat to no one when it comes to a strong national defense. I also point out that the two Senators, the one from Georgia and the one from Indiana, who are the authors of the program, the Nunn-Lugar program, are also in the category of standing for a strong national defense.

What this program has done successfully is to reduce the nuclear threat, the nuclear warheads in the former Soviet Union.

I find myself in agreement so many times with my friend from New York. I find myself in agreement with the goals that he has set forth. But to require the President to certify things that are absolutely impossible for him to certify would gut the Nunn-Lugar program. I think that is a dangerous thing for the United States of America to do.

I find myself constrained to disagree with my friend from New York and to oppose this amendment. Though I am sure well-intentioned, it would have the unintended consequences of harming the security of the United States.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire whether the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON] yielded back any part of the 2 minutes?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON] yielded back 30 seconds.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN].

(Mr. DORNAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Chairman, I enjoyed the time that the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] spent on the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. I do not know whether it engaged him enough or what, but he only spent the better part of a year on there. I am in my eighth year on there.

I can tell my colleagues, you only have to be there a few months, read the National Intelligence Daily, and you will understand what a serious and dangerous world this is. With all the weapons that the Soviet Union has destroyed, they still keep the majority. Constantly in the open press we are reading about the danger of nuclear material and/or missile technology leaking out into the rogue nations of the world, North Korea, Iran, some unholy alliance between an oriental country and a radical Islamic terrorist state. This is a dangerous world.

When we look at the situation, the volatile situation in Russia, when they have crushed Christianity in their nation over the better part of this century and drove anti-Semitism and now they have a country that has partially lost its soul, its conscience, and they are into what I call dark capitalism, like pornography and prostitution and drug dealing and illegal corporate rip-offs, dark capitalism is ripping that country apart as they try to find their way through a free market economy.

So on this floor, I won, I think, 244 votes last year, that would cut off this Nunn-Lugar money until they certify in writing to Mr. Clinton, no more biological/chemical warfare. And they will not do it. They will not even let our auditors come over and find out what is happening to our money. What kind of madness is this?

You can take the position of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. TIAHRT] and say, why are we giving our children's money, borrowing money, going into debt for this, but we cannot even get it audited?

I will stand and vote with Mr. SOLOMON on this, as 244 Members of this House voted with me in the last authorization bill, and then it was gutted in the star chamber of the Senate conference.

I will include my remarks for the RECORD. Biological testing is going on in Russia.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Chairman, I will tell you the concern I have about this amendment. If you remember, the subcommittee on defense, as it was called then, is the one that funded this initially. This was not funded or authorized; they asked us to fund it in a supplemental. We put several hundred million dollars in. We put very strict interpretations on the language about how it could be spent, because we knew of the concern in the House about how this money should be spent.

I appreciate what the gentleman from New York is trying to do, but everything I have seen, and I had great concern about this amendment initially, is that this program has been successful. They are demilitarizing nuclear weapons.

I would hope we are not trying to interfere in the Soviet elections because I think that would backfire in our case. And I would hope that we would base our decision on the merits of whether this is working or not. Everything I have seen, from Secretary Perry, is that it is working.

We may need to make some changes. We made need to make some sort of certification. But I think the certification that is required in this amendment by the gentleman from New York, which has entirely good intentions, I think goes too far. So I would hope at some point we could come up with adequate restrictions but certainly not this kind of a certification.

I ask the Members to vote against the Solomon amendment at this point and see if we cannot maybe in conference work something out. I feel very strongly that what we are doing with the money we are making available to the Russians is not going to something else. It is going to the very specific purpose we have said. And if they are using other money, they just would not demilitarize their nuclear weapons. That is what it amounts to. So we are getting a tremendous benefit from the amount of money that we are spending in this area.

I ask the Members to consider very carefully voting against this amendment at this point and then later on making some sort of an adjustment in the conference to add restrictions which the President is able to adhere to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair advises that the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE] has 5½ minutes remaining, as does the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS].

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, who has the right to close debate?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE] has the right to close.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON].

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, with all due respect to my good friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA], and he is and so are many other Members, let me tell you what they are using this money for. They are using it to dismantle the missile carriers. They have not destroyed one single warhead. You know it and I know it. So while they are destroying old, obsolete missile carriers, they are building new ones.

That is what this debate is all about. We want to be able to certify that they are not doing that.

Let us vote for the Solomon amendment, go to conference, and let us work it out then. If you do not go to conference with the Solomon amendment, it will not even be discussed. That is the problem.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN], the chairman of the Committee on International Relations.

(Mr. GILMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I believe my colleague, Mr. SOLOMON's, amendment is an important one that opens a debate that this body needs to have.

Many of us here have been supportive of the goals of the Cooperative Threat Reduction program—or Nunn-Lugar program as it is commonly known.

Few, if any, of the Members of this House have difficulty in accepting that it is in our national interest to help the states of the former Soviet Union dismantle a large portion of their weapons of mass destruction and safely store nuclear warheads and other materials.

None of us deny that the denuclearization of Ukraine, Kazakhstan, and Belarus, by lessening the number of nuclear-armed states in the world, was a real achievement.

The problem now lies in the fact that we cannot ignore other American interests that lie beyond the process of reducing weapons of mass destruction.

What my colleague's amendment does is simply make that case.

We cannot long ignore the fact that the Russian military is spending large sums on its brutal operation in the separatist region of Chechnya, or that it may be better able to defray the cost of that operation due to Nunn-Lugar assistance elsewhere in the Russian military budget.

We cannot ignore the many outstanding questions about the status of Russia's chemical and biological arsenals, or questions about the strategic facilities it is still constructing and the weapons modernization it is still pursuing despite the relative paucity of funds for its military budget.

And, once again, those costs are, inadvertently, defrayed by United States assistance for demilitarization costs in the Russian military budget.

Mr. Chairman, the problems in the United States-Russian relationship will not simply disappear.

Instead, we must have this debate, and we must make it clear to Russia that we have strong concerns—very strong concerns—about its actions. This amendment sends the right message.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON], distinguished colleague and ranking member of the House Committee on International Relations.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise against the Solomon amendment. There has been very strong bipartisan support over the past year for the Nunn-Lugar program. That program is very much in the American national interest. It is not foreign aid. It is not a gift. It is in investment in our own national security. It directly reduces the threat that the United States faces from Russia. It expedites dismantlement.

This amendment, let us be very clear about it, this amendment would kill the Nunn-Lugar program. That program has destroyed 800 bombers and missile launchers. It has removed 3,800 nuclear warheads from deployment in the former Soviet Union. I do not see how you get a bigger bang for the defense dollar than when you directly dismantle Soviet nuclear power.

This amendment would stop a program to complete the denuclearization of Ukraine, Belarus, Kazakhstan. It would stop a program that is making the biggest contribution to nonproliferation in the very part of the world which represents the greatest nonproliferation threat. It would stop a program that every single day reduces the nuclear threat to the United States.

This amendment is self-defeating. These conditions that are set out, these objectives are all very worthy. The problem is the President cannot certify many of them, if any of them. And if he is not able to certify those conditions or objectives, then the program will collapse.

If we insist that those goals become preconditions before we provide help to Russia in dismantling these nuclear weapons, we will clearly harm the national interest of the United States.

May I say to my colleagues that one of the facts missing from all of this debate is what is happening today in the Russian defense budget. It is has declined 20 percent in the past year. It is 45 percent of what it was in 1992. It is less than 20 percent of what it was at its peak. The Russian defense budget, then the Soviet defense budget, in 1988. The Russian defense budget is in a freefall. Its defense establishment is in turmoil.

If we want some stability and if we want some security with regard to these nuclear weapons in Russia, then we are going to have to help provide them. May I say it is also a fact that Russia does itself contribute to the dismantlement of these programs.

I urge the defeat of the Solomon amendment. It just goes way too far and, I think, works against the American national interest.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SISISKY], a member of the committee.

Mr. SISISKY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

I never thought I would be here doing this. Last year I voted for it. I think I voted for it every time. But I reluctantly oppose the amendment offered by my friend, the gentleman from New York, Mr. SOLOMON, who I believe is a real patriot. We agree more often than not, but I cannot agree to gut the cooperative threat reduction or Nunn-Lugar program.

This program succeeded in moving former Soviet personnel and forces out of and away from eastern Europe. It has encouraged U.S. corporations to invest in defense conversions all over Russia. Nunn-Lugar has removed warheads, dismantled launchers, and brought nuclear material for storage in the U.S. Just think back 10 years ago, who would have dreamt that this could happen?

We won the cold war. Why snatch defeat from the jaws of victory and bring genuine progress to a halt? Make no mistake, by no stretch of the imagination have we solved all of our problems with Russia. I happen to agree with virtually everything that Mr. SOLOMON says about Russia, but effectively terminating Nunn-Lugar is precisely the wrong thing to do, the wrong signal to send, especially before the Russian elections.

It is veto bait that harms not only a good, sensible effective policy, but puts all other good things we achieve in this bill at risk.

I ask Members to oppose this amendment. We can revisit hopefully this issue in separate legislation this summer. I will try to get it out of the committee to do that. I am concerned about the Russian elections. We have a lot at stake. I would ask Members to vote against it.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] is recognized for 45 seconds.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I have tried to suggest to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] that some of the gentleman's conditions were beyond the ability to certify. Let me give our colleagues a couple of examples.

It says here Russia is not developing offensive chemical or biological weapons. If there is a pharmacological industry, how in the world can we certify with respect to biological weaponry? That flies in the face of reality.

Second, Russia is not modernizing its nuclear weapons. Why are we modernizing ours? For safety and reliability that are constrained by treaty, my colleagues.

Third, now, this one is extraordinarily bizarre. Mr. Chairman, it says Russia is not providing any intelligence information to Cuba. Now, how can the President of the United States certify with certainty that Russia is not providing intelligence information to Cuba? It defies logic.

This is a killer amendment to a significant piece of legislation. At the appropriate point I hope we defeat the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield our remaining time to the gentleman from California [Mr. HUNTER], the chairman of our Subcommittee on Procurement.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. HUNTER] is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, my colleagues let us go over the state of play here with exactly what we are talking about. Every single reduction in strategic systems that the gentleman from California spoke of and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON] spoke of are taking place; all those reductions are taking place because we signed START I. The Russians signed START I. We signed START I. And we agreed to reduce these nuclear weapons with our own taxpayer dollars. That means the Russians agreed to reduce their systems with rubles, we agreed to reduce our systems at our expense with dollars, and we proceeded on that course to go down approximately from 12,000 nuclear weapons to about 6,000, and we have been proceeding on that course.

We never agreed that we would pay the Russians for the reduction that they were making under START I. We never agreed we would subsidize that. But in 1991 we felt that the Russians were so fragile with that new democracy and that attempted democracy that we would help them. So we implemented Nunn-Lugar, and a lot of us agreed with that; it was a good program.

The point is that the Russians need to have their feet held to the fire.

Now, it is a good deal if two neighbors agree to disarm, and if the gentleman from California Mr. DELLUMS, agrees to disarm, and I agree to disarm, and Mr. DELLUMS says, "I need a little extra money to disarm, Mr. HUNTER; could you help," that is a good deal.

But it is not a good deal if my neighbor then takes some of the money or the resources that are freed up from my subsidizing his disarmament and builds some new weapons.

We are not concerned about the new SS-25. It is extremely accurate. We are concerned about their new strategic ballistic missile submarine system. We are concerned about their biological weapons development.

Now, I assure my colleagues in the end, when the smoke clears, there is going to be some Nunn-Lugar money on the table. But we need to have some conditions on money, and this starts the process. The Solomon amendment holds the Russians' feet to the fire, and let me just say the sales of nuclear technology to Iran, the biological weapons development that we know violates the biological weapons conventions, their new strategic missiles that they are building, are not in the spirit of the reductions that we have made, if not the law.

So this holds the feet of the Russians to the fire. Vote for these certifications. We are going to end up looking like dummies. We are going to be the guys that paid money to the Soviet Union to dismantle weapons while they were building new ones. Let us not be in that position. Please support Solomon.

The CHAIRMAN. It is now in order to consider the amendments printed in part A of the report relating to cooperative threat reduction with the former Soviet Union, which shall be considered in the following order:

Amendment A-1 offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] and amendment A-2 offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

AMENDMENT A-1 OFFERED BY MR. SOLOMON

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SOLOMON: In section 1104 (page 362, beginning on line 17)—

(2) add at the end (page 363, after line 12) the following:

(b) ANNUAL PRESIDENTIAL CERTIFICATION WITH RESPECT TO RUSSIA AND BELARUS.—None of the funds appropriated for Cooperative Threat Reduction programs for any fiscal year may be obligated for any activity in Russia or Belarus until the President submits to Congress, after such funds are appropriated, a current certification of each of the following:

(1) Russia is in compliance with all arms control agreements.

(2) Russia is not developing offensive chemical or biological weapons.

(3) Russia has ceased all construction of and operations at the underground military complex at Yamantau Mountain.

(4) Russia is not modernizing its nuclear arsenal.

(5) Russia has ceased all offensive military operations in Chechnya.

(6) Russia has begun, and is making continual progress toward, the unconditional implementation of the Russian-Moldovan troop withdrawal agreement, signed by the prime ministers of Russia and Moldova on October 21, 1994, and is not providing military assistance to any military forces in the Transdnistria region of Moldova.

(7) Russian troops in the Kaliningrad region of Russia are respecting the sovereign territory of Lithuania and other neighboring countries.

(8) The activities of Russia in the other independent states of the former Soviet Union do not represent an attempt by Russia to violate or otherwise diminish the sovereignty and independence of such states.

(9) Russia is not providing any intelligence information to Cuba and is not providing any assistance to Cuba with respect to the signal intelligence facility at Lourdes.

(10)(A) Russia is not providing to the countries described in subparagraph (B) goods or technology, including conventional weapons, which could contribute to the acquisition by these countries of chemical, biological, nuclear, or advanced conventional weapons.

(B) The countries described in this subparagraph are Iran, Iraq, Libya, Syria, Cuba, or any country, the government of which the Secretary of State has determined, for purposes of section 6(j)(1) of the Export Administration Act of 1979 (50 U.S.C. App. 2405(6)(j)(1)), has repeatedly provided support for acts of international terrorism.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] and a Member opposed each will be recognized for 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON].

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, my amendment is simple. It would prohibit any further obligation of Nunn-Lugar aid to Russia and Belarus but allow the funds to go ahead to Ukraine and to Kazakhstan, which is fast becoming a military satellite of Russia, until or unless the President certifies that Russia is in compliance with the conditions in my amendment.

First, Russia must be in compliance with all arms control agreements. Who can disagree with that? Russia must not be producing any offensive biological or chemical weapons. Who can disagree with that?

Russia must cease the ongoing construction of the massive bunker at Yamantau, which is widely perceived to be a nuclear command center.

Russia must cease modernization of its nuclear forces, and they are at present developing new classes of weapons, and we are paying for it.

Mr. Chairman, last, Russia is not exporting goods or technology to terrorist nations that could help them acquire advanced conventional weapons or weapons of mass destruction. Mr. Chairman, this is just common sense. Russia is engaged in all of these activities, all of which are contrary to our national interests, yet the aid continues to flow.

Mr. Chairman, many of these activities are addressed in the form of conditions in the previous cooperative threat reduction legislation, but they are so vague. For instance, the law states that the President must certify that Russia is "committed to arms control compliance," and that is what he has been doing. Well, either they are complying or they are not complying, and we all know that they are not. I just read the list. Every one of our colleagues knows they are not complying.

Mr. Chairman, we have had enough vagueness and enough unlinked foreign aid. With these policies we have done nothing to stem Russia's reactionary slide over the past 2 or 3 years. We have set no boundaries on Russia's behavior whatsoever, while shelling out hundreds of millions of American taxpayer dollars, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, let me just read to our colleagues from the GAO report, October 1994. Everybody should listen to this. Currently Nunn-Lugar officials appear to have overestimated the probable impact of similar projects in Russia. Russia can meet, without U.S. aid, its Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty obligations and eliminate thousands of strategic nuclear delivery vehicles and launchers over the next decade.

That is what their GAO says. They do not need our money; they have the money to do it.

What we are doing is financing their modernization of a new class of weapons; they are tearing down the obsolete silos, building new ones with our money so that these warheads that they are not abolishing or doing away with can be remounted. We should not be paying for it.

I will move my amendment at the appropriate time, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT].

(Mr. GEPHARDT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Chairman, I rise to just hope that Members on both sides of the aisle will turn down this amendment.

I realize that disarming the Soviet Union is the most important foreign policy objective we have. I think this amendment will make it harder to actually accomplish that reality that we all hope for, and I would simply remind Members, whatever their view on specific parts of this amendment, please remember there is an election in Russia next month. Can my colleagues imagine how it is in our interests to say to the Russian people that we want to stop and move back from an effort we have made together to get rid of nuclear arms as they are going to the polling booths to vote for whether they want to return to communism and to totalitarianism or whether they want to continue with democracy?

This is a bad amendment, it is a bad idea, it is bad timing, and I urge Members to vote against this amendment.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPRATT], a member of the committee.

(Mr. SPRATT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SPRATT. Mr. Chairman, the Solomon amendment purports to condition Nunn-Lugar funding. In fact, we all know what it would do. It would stop it, stop it dead in the water, and I think that is a tragic mistake, and I strongly oppose it.

Nunn-Lugar has three laudable goals, which I do not understand how anybody can possibly oppose, to destroy and dismantle weapons that were designed, developed, and deployed, the deadliest weapons in this world, to devastate this country. It is also designed to take the components of those weapons and make sure that they do not spread, fall into the hands of other countries, terrorist groups who might use them against us. And, astutely, it is also to be used so that the knowledge and the expertise of former Soviet scientists cannot be used by these same terrorist groups or rogue nations against us.

This law is for our benefit, not for their benefit, and it is in our best interests. And let us see what it accomplished. First of all, all of the nuclear warheads deployed in the former Soviet Union, in Kazakhstan and Ukraine and Belarus, will be removed, gone from those three countries, leaving only one nuclear State in the former Soviet Union. Thirty-eight hundred warheads will be freed up, removed from the former Soviet Union, putting Russia ahead in implementation of the START-I Treaty. Thirty-two of those warheads, missiles, will be SS-18's. That is 320 SS-18 reentry vehicles, more than any RV's, reentry vehicles, that we could possibly take out with any missile defense system we are going to develop in the near future. Eight hundred strategic launchers were removed; 200 missile silos removed.

Now, what is the money that is coming in this bill? What will it do? Among other things, it will help us continue eliminating those SS-18 missiles. Thirty-two have been eliminated so far; 170 remain to go. It will help implement START-I, help ratify START-II, carry it out if it is completed.

It will help destroy 10 mobile launch pads in Belarus, seal up 30 nuclear test tunnels in Kazakhstan, provide 150 United States-made containers to transport nuclear materials to save storage.

And let me stop here and say that it is true that a lot of those components have not been destroyed. What we want to do is build a facility in Tomsk, Siberia; been built, the site has been chosen and the design is completed. It is under construction. This money will help to go toward the construction and completion of this facility where those components will be taken, they will be accurately accounted for and safely stored.

Time does not allow me to keep on going, but I could iterate point after point about how we are protecting ourselves and protecting the rest of the world in this Nunn-Lugar program. It is a program of proven success, and it has much yet to be accomplished. It would be a tragic mistake in terms of timing, but in terms of our own self-interest and the protection of our country if we pass the Solomon amendment and terminated this program which has done so much to enhance the security of this country.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to our good friend, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HOKE].

Mr. HOKE. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me, and I speak on behalf of and am strongly supportive of the Solomon amendment.

Let us not make any mistake about what this is about. This is foreign aid to Russia, and we can cloak it in all kinds of language and we can talk about it being a particular program that has to do with the dismantling of nuclear warheads. The fact is that it is foreign aid, it is $1.2 billion, of which $500 million has already been spent, that goes from American taxpayers to Russia. It is money that Russia does not have to spend on other things. START-I requires, and we have agreed with this and Russia has agreed to it, that all of these weapons be dismantled, and it says nothing whatsoever about who will pay for that.

It speaks, I mean the assumption is, that Russia will pay for the dismantling of the Russian weapons, and the United States will pay for the dismantling of our own weapons. The fact is that we are paying for both now, and as a result of that, because, in the words that I never find better language to describe, money is fungible, that means that the money that is being spent, that is being given to Russia for this, they do not have to spend on something else.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. HENRY HYDE, a very valuable member of our Committee on Foreign Affairs and chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, one of the most respected Members of this body.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE] is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for the extravagant introduction.

Mr. Chairman, I am troubled by this amendment. I do not want to vote for this, because if there is a program that is diminishing the nuclear threat to our country, no matter what other aberrational things that are going on, such as selling submarines to Iran, I think anything that diminishes a nuclear threat to our country ought to be supported.

However, I learned that the Russians are modernizing their nuclear capability. "Russia test-launched new ICBM yesterday. Missile will replace SS-18's destroyed under Nunn-Lugar," on and on about how they are modernizing the nuclear capability. How does that diminish the threat to our country? It enhances it. So with one hand we are giving them money to sweep away the old stuff, the garbage, and then free up their own money to develop and modernize a nuclear threat. Support Solomon.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield my remaining time to the distinguished gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. TAYLOR].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. TAYLOR] is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, in the past I have supported the Solomon amendment, but as a number of well-attended hearings of this committee pointed out, our Nation does not have the ability to stop a single missile coming from the Soviet Union, the former Soviet Union, pointed our way.

For that reason, Mr. Chairman, it makes more sense than ever to try to destroy as many of those 26,000 nuclear warheads that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE] just told us about while they are on the ground, while they are still in the Soviet Union, before they fall into the hands of a terrorist Nation like Iraq or Iran or Libya, North Korea, or Cuba. We cannot stop them in the air and we cannot inspect the 4 million cargo containers that come into this country, should someone want to smuggle them into our country.

I would say to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE], it would make a whole heck of a lot more sense to fix the program we have and destroy them while they are on the ground in the former Soviet Union. Therefore, until the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] can fix some of those things that he knows the Soviets will not do, I am going to have to vote against his amendment.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to say to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE], whom I respect on these matters, that I respect the comment that the gentleman made; that there is adversity in this amendment.

But I would like to point out to my colleague with respect to the missiles that he spoke of, if he goes back to the START-II arrangement, it talks about the removal of SS-18's. They are trying to get rid of all of them, so we move away from virtually all, if not all, land-based missiles.

The treaty itself favors sea-based missiles. The missile to which the gentleman addressed his remarks is a sea-based missile. What constrained us were land-based missiles. What had us concerned were fixed-based ICBM's, the SS-18. That is what is being dismantled. So when we look at what they are doing in terms of modernization, we have to put that within some kind of perspective.

Staff can put a memo in front of us and say, gee, they are advancing this weapon, but ask staff to tell us what is that weapon attempting to do. It is a sea-based weapon, so all of this activity is confined within the treaty that we are party to. It is constrained by treaty.

Mr. Chairman, I pointed out earlier in my remarks that this gentleman wished we had never gone down the road toward nuclear weapons. We are the only species on the face of the Earth that have developed the capacity to destroy ourselves and all other life. But we went down that road. We went down that road to the tune of thousands of nuclear warheads and nuclear weapons. Nunn-Lugar is an effort to step back away from that. We are modernizing our weapons for several reasons: for safety and reliability I am assuming that they are doing that as well. We are doing it within the constraints of the treaties to which we have subscribed and on which we are appropriate signatories.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, let me say, the gentleman from New York has laid out a number of laudable concerns. I do not challenge the concerns. What I am saying is one does not cut off his nose to spite his face. Linkages make sense to us as politicians, but sometimes in the real world linkages do not make sense.

When we link the danger of nuclear weapons to a foreign policy consideration, it does not say the foreign policy concern is not legitimate, but it says that we have to balance these matters. We have to prioritize these matters. In our minds, it seems to me we ought to internalize the notion that nuclear weapons are dangerous, they are an imperative unto themselves. To link this unnecessarily is to destroy what it is we are trying to do.

The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPRATT] eloquently and articulately laid out the three goals of the nuclear warhead program, a bipartisan effort to dismantle, ultimately to destroy, to retard this kind of development of nuclear weapons, and weapons of mass destruction, including chemical and biological.

If we have foreign policy concerns, there are other fora, there are other places where we can fight that battle. But to use the CTR program as the vehicle to challenge on all these other bases I would suggest, to underscore for emphasis, that it cuts off our noses to spite our face.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, I listened carefully to all of the debates and discussion that my colleagues have raised. They have only raised one issue, that money is fungible. Big deal. We had to come to Congress to learn that, that money is fungible? So we can create any kind of scenario for our political purposes, but the fact of the matter is that this is a serious policy program that has specific implications. We should not attempt to play the game of "money is fungible" to create this.

One of my colleagues even talked about a few Russians coming to the United States and placed that in juxtaposition to removing 3,800 warheads. It is a joke. I would be willing to challenge the gentleman anytime, anywhere, anywhere, to make that kind of assertion about taxpayers' dollars. We are talking about our children and our children's children.

It is important for us, Mr. Chairman, to reject the gentleman's amendment. This is dangerous. It flies in the face of American national security. That has been stated by the Secretary of Defense. It has been stated by a number of other persons. I would ask my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to reject this amendment. It is qualitatively different, more dangerous than the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] last year; make no mistake about it. I urge my colleague to reject the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, for those people who are in a mood to cut money and authorization from the defense bill, now is their chance.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON].

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from South Carolina for yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, let me just praise the gentleman for the work he has done on this overall bill. It is a very good bill. For those who think it is too much money, let us point out that it is only 2.4 percent more than was being spent last year. That hardly pays for the raises for our military personnel. It hardly pays for the housing improvements needed so desperately. I wanted to say that about the overall bill.

About my amendment, Mr. Chairman, 40 percent of Nunn-Lugar will continue to go ahead with or without any Presidential certification that Russia is behaving itself in these areas we have been talking about. Forty percent of that money will continue to go to countries like Ukraine, who are good citizens, and countries like Kazakhstan, who are good citizens, who are actually out there destroying missiles and warheads.

By contrast, Russia is not destroying one single warhead. Not one has been destroyed. They simply are taking them out of the old dilapidated, antiquated silos that they have now, they are laying them over here, and then they are building these new, highly state-of-the-art silos and launching systems which they will take, and these warheads, and put them back in these new silos. Where is the diminishing of a threat then?

I am not going to use all this time because we have to get on with the bill, but let me tell the Members, their nuclear missiles threaten American security. Their weapons export sales to terrorist nations like Iran and Iraq and Syria and Libya, that is what threatens security of American citizens, both overseas and right here in America.

Mr. Chairman, if Members are sincere about wanting to deal with these issues like the Russians modernizing their equipment, if Members are interested in dealing with stopping them from their biological and chemical weapons development, and if they are interested in stopping them from exporting nuclear technology to Iran and Cuba, 90 miles off out shore, they will vote for the Solomon amendment.

Then they will go to conference with the Senate and pick out the most important ones, perhaps, of my listed items here. Then we will have held the Russians' feet to the fire.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPENCE. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I would just say let us accept the efficacy of the gentleman's argument that the Russians are bad guys. If they are, then those are the very people we want to help dismantle the weapons, so I accept the gentleman's argument and come to a very different conclusion.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield further, I would tell the gentleman from California, accept my amendment. We will go to the Senate and we will really accomplish what both the gentleman and I want to accomplish.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong opposition to these attempts to block cooperative threat reduction funding to Russia.

Cooperative threat reduction, also known as Nunn-Lugar, is not foreign aid. It is an investment in United States security. This program reduces the threat to the United States from nuclear weapons and other weapons of mass destruction. Nunn-Lugar funding improves the security of these weapons to keep them out of the hands of terrorists and aids in critical denuclearization efforts in Russia, Kazakhstan, Belarus, and Ukraine.

I share many of the concerns raised in this amendment. I strongly support the sovereignty of the independent states of the former Soviet Union, and would oppose any efforts on Russia's part to violate this independence. I also want to ensure that Russia is not providing assistance to Iran, Iraq, Libya, or Syria. But this amendment is not the way to do that.

Mr. Chairman, cooperative threat reduction is strengthening U.S. security. Blocking funding for these critical programs would only hurt U.S. efforts to expedite the dismantlement of weapons of mass destruction. I urge my colleagues to defeat this destructive amendment.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to the Solomon part A amendment to H.R. 3230, the fiscal year 1997 Defense Authorization Act. The Solomon amendment would place restrictions on the cooperative threat reduction denuclearization program in Russia. CTR is also known as the Nunn-Lugar program, after its bipartisan sponsors in the Senate.

Nunn-Lugar provides for the release of American funds to help speed the destruction of Russia's massive nuclear weapons stockpile. Russia's nuclear weapons are often poorly guarded and the threat of nuclear terrorism, either through theft or illicit sales of Russian fissile material, is all too real. The Nunn-Lugar program is a sensible approach to this serious problem, and represents one of the best investments we can make in our national security.

The Solomon amendment requires that Russia meet 10 conditions before funds could be released to Russia. While all of the conditions represent goals I would like to see reached, such as Russia's full withdrawal of troops from Chechnya and Moldova, I do not believe it is a good idea to allow Russia to maintain a large, unsecure nuclear stockpile that might reach the hands of terrorists. If anything, we should raise the amount of money allocated to destroying Russia's nuclear weapons instead of trying to eliminate funding.

The Solomon amendment is dangerous, unnecessary, and effectively guts one of the best bipartisan programs around. I urge a "no" vote on the amendment.

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by my friend from New York, Mr. SOLOMON, to condition the expenditure of funds for the Nunn-Lugar program.

Mr. Chairman, Nunn-Lugar protects American citizens from Russian missiles and nuclear warheads. Conditioning funds for this program on our ability to influence Russian leaders on specific policy goals, however admirable those goals are, is contrary to our own national interests.

Nunn-Lugar has been a successful program. Designed to meet the complex challenges which followed the break-up of the Soviet Union, it assures that weapons of mass destruction, as well as the equipment, material, and services supporting them, are dismantled. Since 1992, over 3,800 nuclear warheads have been removed from deployment, and over 800 launchers have been eliminated. That's good for America.

Because of Nunn-Lugar, Russia is ahead of schedule in meeting its obligations to reduce its number of warheads as set forth under the START agreement. That's good for America.

Nunn-Lugar has helped convert at least 17 Russian industrial facilities previously dedicated to building weapons to civilian manufacturing. And it has redirected the work for more than 11,500 former Russian weapons scientists.

As a result of this program, proliferation has been halted. Kazakhstan is nuclear-free, with more than 600 kilograms of weapons-grade uranium removed to the United States.

In the Ukraine, more than 460 nuclear warheads and 46 SS-19 silos have been deactivated because Nunn-Lugar provided the necessary heavy equipment to do so. In fact, both the Ukraine and Belarus are expected to become nuclear-free later this year. That, too, is good for America.

I don't doubt my friend's sincerity in wanting to change Russian behavior on a wide range of critical issues affecting our security and that of Russia's neighbors. I agree with them.

But I believe a more effective approach to achieving the goals outlined in my friend's amendment would be to engage the Russians directly—not to cut funds on a program whose greatest beneficiary is the United States.

Let me repeat that, Mr. Chairman. We need to remember that the greatest beneficiary of the Nunn-Lugar program is the United States, not Russia. To halt progress, even temporarily, on reducing the threat represented by the remaining Russian missiles and warheads is to put our citizens, American citizens, at risk.

I respectfully urge my colleagues to vote "no" on the amendment offered by my friend from New York.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Chairman, during roll-call vote No. 170 on H.R. 3230, the Solomon amendment, I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present, I would have voted "no."

The CHAIRMAN. It is now in order to consider amendment No. A-2 printed in part A of the report.

AMENDMENT A-2 OFFERED BY MR. GILMAN

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

(1) insert "(a) IN GENERAL.—" before "None of the funds";

(2) strike out paragraph (3) and redesignate paragraphs (4) and (5) as paragraphs (3) and (4), respectively; and

(3) add at the end (page 362, after line 16) the following:

(b) LIMITATION WITH RESPECT TO DEFENSE CONVERSION ASSISTANCE.—None of the funds appropriated pursuant to this or any other Act may be obligated or expended for the provision of assistance to Russia or any other state of the former Soviet Union to promote defense conversion, including assistance through the Defense Enterprise Fund.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN].

(Mr. GILMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment is about saving millions of taxpayer dollars from being spent in Russia and the other NIS States for dubious defense conversion projects.

The bill before us, as reported by the Committee on National Security, prohibits any DOD moneys from being spent for defense conversion in the former Soviet Union. My amendment simply broadens that prohibition to make certain that no United States funds, DOD or otherwise, can be used to promote defense conversion in the former Soviet Union.

This amendment is being offered for two significant reasons: First, because I believe it is important for the Congress to go on record on whether it wants to continue to support a profusion of aimless and uncoordinated programs for defense conversion in the former Soviet Union; and, second, because I am deeply frustrated the administration continues to try and fund the defense enterprise fund.

Let me address each of these. My colleagues, I want to make certain that you know just how many separate and overlapping programs are being utilized to implement this so-called defense conversion project.

First of all, there are already in existence several enterprise funds operating in the States of the former Soviet Union with financing provided through the Freedom Support Act Program. There is the United States-Russia Investment Fund, the Western NIS Enterprise Fund, and the Central Asian American Enterprise Fund. Let us not forget we already have the U.S. Export Bank, the U.S. Overseas Private Invest Corporation, and the U.S. Trade and Investment Agency all working in this direction.

Have I mentioned the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development, which we help fund, or the World Bank's International Finance Corporation, which works in the field of privatization and which we help fund, or our AID programs on privatization?

In short, we need to slow down, step back and ask do we need all of these programs and determine exactly what we are achieving.

I want to make certain that we appreciate the enormity of the task we are facing. One estimate is it will cost over $150 billion and will take 12 to 15 years to convert just Russia's defense industry, much less any of the other FSU States. Is that something that this Congress is prepared to take on, even in small part?

Now, with respect to the defense enterprise fund, that fund, known as DEF, is a prime example of why we should not fund defense conversion projects. The DEF is a so-called private venture capital fund whose purpose is to finance joint ventures and promote defense conversion in the former Soviet Union. The GAO reports that DOD officials believe that we need to capitalize that fund at a minimum of $120 million in order for that fund to be viable and self-sustaining. I note that the DEF has not raised one dollar in private fund raising to date.

So where are we going to find the $120 million in U.S. taxpayer subsidies? To date DOD has agreed to provide $30 million, and that is it. The Congress has made clear that no more money is coming from the defense budget for the DEF. So what did the administration do? They transferred responsibility for funding and implementation of the DEF in fiscal year 1997 from the Department of Defense to the Department of State. This follows a pattern of transferring other CTR programs to the 150 budget function, including placing the export control programs under the nonproliferation and disarmament Fund. I do not need to explain to any one here the absurdity of finding extra money in foreign assistance funds to support this fund. It is not there and it never will be.

So let us send a message to the administration that this Congress does not see how our national security interests are being served by spending our hard earned taxpayers' dollars for defense conversion. Let us put the DEF out of business once and for all. I ask my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the gentleman's amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, first of all, the author of the amendment, the distinguished gentleman from New York, is the chairperson of the appropriate committee. This is less about dollars than it is about orderly process and procedure.

Let the Secretary come before the distinguished gentleman's committee and make the case. If the gentleman opposes what he wants to do, then zero it out. But to come here prematurely to offer a ban flies in the face of appropriate process and dignified procedure.

And the gentleman is the chairperson. He has the power and the authority to call the Secretary before the committee.

Now, with the remaining time, let me make a few remarks. The Gilman amendment attacks the defense enterprise fund because of the Secretary of Defense's request that it be funded from foreign operations appropriations. Last year the Secretary was told in no uncertain terms, Mr. Chairman, and I am a member of the committee that told him that, "Do not request defense funds for this program. If you want them, then secure them from foreign aid accounts." That is what he was told by the House Committee on National Security.

Because the Committee on International Relations had not given the Secretary an opportunity to testify on this issue, it seems to me it is unfair, premature, to pass an amendment prohibiting any expenditures, when the maker of the motion has the authority to call the Secretary before the committee. Let the Secretary make his case. If the Committee on Foreign Affairs rejects the offers, then they should zero out the request.

This amendment is premature. It sends all the wrong signals to the Russians about our willingness to help them to meet our common security requirements of preventing the proliferation of the technology and information on weapons of mass destruction. I urge my colleagues to oppose this.

Mr. Chairman, let me make a few further comments. If Nunn-Lugar is designed to prevent nuclear weapons proliferation, one needs to be concerned with scientific expertise as well as the nuclear materials themselves.

It is remarkably shortsighted, Mr. Chairman, to disallow expenditures in which efforts can be made that establish such a program that would make sense to the overall program objectives. Because of the notification requirements imposed on this program, Congress will always have the opportunity, will always have the opportunity to review in advance the type of activities against which obligations are purported to be placed.

One final comment. It seems especially troublesome, now that the administration has been responsive to Congress' demand not to spend defense dollars on these types of efforts, expenditures that are fully justified in themselves as national security activities, but that was the will of the body, that the effort is now launched to close off other avenues of supporting such high priority activities.

My point is very simple: If the body said to the Secretary of Defense, "Don't spend defense dollars for this high priority matter; put them in a foreign affairs account, put them in that account," then the chairperson of the Committee on International Relations, who had the authority to bring the Secretary before the committee, have appropriate testimony, make some decisions, then comes to the defense authorization bill to offer an amendment to ban the process.

I would suggest, sir, this flies in the face of intelligent and rational process and procedure, and this is one gentleman that feels that whether we disagree on the policy matters, the place where we ought to always be willing to come together is on orderly process, intelligent procedure, and dignified activities as we debate these matters.

I think this is premature, I think it is unfair, I think it makes no sense, and I ask my colleagues to reject the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is entirely correct in stating no hearings have been held on the recently submitted fiscal year 1997 budget on this issue. I would note that the Committee on International Relations has been closely involved in the Nunn-Lugar program since its inception in 1991, and has held numerous hearings in past years on the program. The issue of defense conversion, and in particular of the Defense Committee's desire to curtail funding for defense conversion and other activities such as housing, environmental restoration, are familiar to all of us.

That is why it is so frustrating to note that, without any consultation with the Congress, the responsibility for funding and implementing defense conversion activities in the former Soviet Union for fiscal year 1997 has been entirely transferred to the International Affairs budget. I do not need to convene exhaustive hearings or even one hearing to know we do not have the resources to do all of this.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] is recognized for 45 seconds.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, in 45 seconds let me reiterate, the administration submits a budget request. In this instance, they submitted a budget request based upon what we asked them to do. We said "Don't spend defense dollars." The Secretary said, "OK. Whether I agree or disagree, that is what you said, that is what I will do."

Now it seems to me orderly process means that the Committee on International Relations should then, if they had any question, call the Secretary before the committee and allow the Secretary to make his case. If it does not make sense, you can zero it out. But to do it without even holding hearings, without even bringing the Secretary, who simply responded to Congress' request, does not make sense.

Again, I press my point, defeat this amendment. It makes no sense.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Chairman, the Gilman amendment prohibits defense conversion. It prohibits, in particular, funds for the Defense Enterprise Fund.

To date, the Defense Enterprise Fund has received $30 million. The request for fiscal year 1997 is for $20 million. This request is not from the Defense Department budget, but from the foreign affairs (150) budget, in the jurisdiction of the International Relations Committee.

The goal of the Defense Enterprise Fund is to spark the process of defense conversion. The Fund, while small in size, serves as an important model to reorient enterprises from producing weapons of mass destruction to producing civilian goods. This Fund, and other U.S. Government activities, are a critical part of the Cooperative Threat Reduction Program.

So what has the Fund achieved to date? It has made 7 investments, and has achieved a leverage ratio of $6 of outside funds for every dollar committed by the U.S. Government. Those investments bring U.S. firms into partnership with former defense firms. Completed deals include converting nuclear sub parts to earthmovers; converting military electronics to IBM and minicomputer software; converting IBCM telemetry to civilian telecommunications; and converting nuclear weapons design to wood sterilization, to kill bugs in Russian timber.

The Defense Enterprise Fund is small, but its work is a triple win for the United States—a win for United States security, a win for United States business, and a win for the new enterprises struggling to build a free market economy in Russia.

The Gilman amendment kills funding for the Defense Enterprise Fund. Not only that, it has several other harmful impacts:

First, this amendment is so broadly written that it threatens to shut down much of the work of the United States Government in the former Soviet Union. That country was very heavily militarized. So much of what the United States does to promote economic reform in the New Independent States also has some aspect of defense conversion.

This amendment harms U.S. trade and investment. The Overseas Private Investment Corporation [OPIC] to date has approved more than $500 million in finance and insurance support for defense conversion projects, 5 of them in Russia. Under this amendment, OPIC would have to pull the plug on these projects.

The trade and development agency has approved 16 projects in the NIS related to defense conversion and the promotion of U.S. exports. Eleven of them are still in progress. Under this amendment, TDA would have to pull the plug on those projects.

This amendment harms Department of Commerce programs, including the SABIT program, which trains business leaders from the NIS to privatize and restructure enterprises, including defense enterprises.

This amendment harms the work of Commerce's BISNIS center, which helps U.S. firms find NIS partners, including former defense enterprises, for mutual economic benefit in civilian production.

This amendment harms market economic reform. It could stop the ability of the United States to help with the next stage of privatization in Russia. The next stage of privatization involves cash auctions and tender offers for shares in strategic industries. This amendment could harm United States assistance for privatization in Ukraine and the Baltic States in a similar way.

This amendment harms nonproliferation, because defense conversion is an important part of the work of the International Science and Technology Centers, where crack Russian and Ukrainian scientists work on peaceful projects instead of weapons design.

Second, this amendment applies to all activities of the United States Government in the former Soviet Union—past, present, and future. This amendment will stop current obligations and expenditures. It will stop programs in their tracks. It will require the review and re-writing of hundreds of existing contracts. This amendment should be renamed the Paperwork Creation Act.

Third, this amendment is contrary to understandings the administration reached last year with the defense committees. Last year, those committees told the administration: "Defense conversion doesn't belong in the defense bill." The administration listened. It shifted that funding request this year to the international affairs (150) budget.

Now, the chairman of the International Relations Committee has had the administration's budget request for about a month. He has not held a single hearing, or a single briefing for Members on defense conversion. He has not heard testimony on the administrations request for the New Independent States from either the State or Defense Departments.

Few members of the International Relations Committee know anything about this defense conversion request.

I am hard pressed to understand—in the context of a defense bill that is $12.4 billion above the administration's request—why the House needs to act today to block a $20 million request in the foreign affairs—150—budget in another committee's jurisdiction.

I would urge the chairman not to rush to judgment. I would urge him to withdraw this amendment, let the International Relations Committee review the request, and let the committee do its work.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to support a provision sponsored by Chairman GILMAN which is included in the en bloc amendment. I commend Chairman GILMAN for his work on this important issue, and for his inclusion of language in the amendment which will favorably impact on repair work at American shipyards.

The Gilman amendment is the text of H.R. 3221, which passed the House of Representatives by voice vote on April 16. Among other things, it authorizes the transfer of 10 naval vessels to six different nations, within 2 years after the enactment of the bill.

Under the provisions of the amendment, 6 of the 10 vessels will be sold or leased to three nations in the Western Pacific. New Zealand will buy one hydrographic ocean surveillance ship, Taiwan will buy three frigates and lease one tank landing ship and Thailand will buy one frigate.

As a condition of transfer, the amendment directs the Secretary of Defense to require that any necessary repair or refurbishment of such vessels will be performed at a U.S. shipyard. However, it is my understanding that the requirement to repair these vessels at an American shipyard ceases after the transfer is complete.

I would take the repair requirement a step further than the current language of the amendment. In implementing this program, I would urge the Secretary of Defense to link the transfer of these ships with their continued repair at U.S. shipyards over the lifetime of the vessel. The Secretary should request that "to the maximum extent possible" host countries repair these ships at American shipyards. Additionally, the Secretary should inform host countries that the United States will look favorably on future transfers if the repair work over the lifetime of the ships is performed at American shipyards.

As most of my colleagues know, the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission [BRAC] closed the ship repair facility [SRF] on Guam last year. SRF-Guam is facing a difficult transition on its way to becoming a privatized facility and is looking for repair work on which to bid. Since Guam is the only American shipyard within about 4,000 miles of New Zealand, Taiwan and Thailand, it is my hope that some of the six vessels which are transferred to them will be repaired at a newly privatized SRF-Guam.

The repair of some of these ships at SRF-Guam not only serves Guam's interest, but furthers the Pentagon's long-term national security goals in the region. The Pentagon has long-term requirements in the Western Pacific which are better served by an SRF on U.S. soil in Guam. Over the next few years, a successful transition for SRF will require a certain base workload from Naval vessels.

Guam's geographic location in the Western Pacific makes it an ideal location for the repair of vessels in the region, including the six Navy vessels being transferred to New Zealand, Taiwan and Thailand. But SRF-Guam requires Secretary Perry to go to bat for it in negotiations. I understand the Secretary has the statutory authority to request from host nations repair these vessels at U.S. shipyard. In next year's transfer bill, I look forward to working with Chairman GILMAN and other interested Members on specific provisions which will require "to the maximum extent possible" the repair of these ships at U.S. shipyards over the lifetime of the vessels.

A Secretary Perry implements this program and sets conditions for the transfer of the vessels, I strongly encourage him to link the transfer of the vessels to their continued repair and to use his leverage to benefit American workers at U.S. shipyards. Again, I thank Chairman GILMAN for his work on this issue and for offering this amendment today. I urge my colleagues to support the en bloc amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KLUG] and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KLUG].

Mr. KLUG. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, what we are going to talk about for the next few minutes is the subject of military physicians. In 1972, in order to guarantee there were enough physicians in the military, we took two steps in Congress. One was to set up a scholarship program to send medical students to places like the University of Wisconsin in Madison, and to Harvard, and to Virginia, and to Stanford, and Chicago, and Nebraska, and any university you might want to pick out. At the same time, we established in Bethesda, MD, the Department of Defense's very own medical school.

Now, that was 1972. Just 3 years later, in 1975, the Defense Manpower Commission reported that, quote, it was an unjustifiably costly method to meet current and future procurement and retention goals for military professional and medical personnel. Three years after the medical school in Bethesda was started, it cost $200,000 for each graduate, and the scholarship program cost each student just $34,000. Now keep in mind today as we kind of run through this list of how expensive this school is that today the school in Bethesda only provides about 11 percent of the doctors in the United States armed services.

In 1975, a House Appropriations Committee backed up the study done by the Defense Manpower Commission and said this is just too expensive to do it that way. In 1976, the General Accounting Office, just 3 years after the program was founded said the same thing, it is not cost effective for the Department of Defense to run its own medical school.

Mr. Chairman, it seems to me Republicans should be about privatization more so than anything else, and you have to ask us why today we were running for plants and printing offices and what are we doing in the medical school business? Well, that was 20 years ago.

So last year we came back one more time and asked the General Accounting Office again to take a look at the military school run by the U.S. military in Bethesda. Do my colleagues know what they came back and said? For every scholarship program student in the country, it cost $125,000. For everybody who comes out of Bethesda, it is over a half million dollars, $556,000.

Now, proponents will point out that students who go through the medical school tend to stay in the military a little bit longer than folks who come through the private scholarship program. So our amendment does a second thing as well as phasing out the medical school. It says that what we are going to do is that everybody who goes through the scholarship program also has to go make a 7-year commitment to the service the same way they are if they graduate from the DOD's medical school in Bethesda.

Mr. Chairman, we think we have a very commonsense amendment in front of us. It takes a program that is almost four times more expensive than what it cost to send people to the best medical schools in the country, phases out the medical school class, raises the scholarship program requirement for service. We think we save taxpayers money and at the same time get just as qualified a supply of military physicians in order to serve this country's needs.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I applaud the gentleman from Wisconsin for his efforts to save money, but he has chosen the wrong target. There have been no hearings or an in-depth analysis of the effects of closing the university. In fact, the GAO report, which he just cited says: As Congress makes decisions regarding both physician accession programs, it will need information not only about the programs' relative costs, but also about their effects on the short- and long-term requirements for military physicians and the value of the other university activities.

Acting without an understanding of the full implications of these actions could have a devastating impact upon military medical readiness, as well as medical recruiting and retention.

The proposal to close the school is based on a very selective and misleading use of the GAO study results. While the GAO report did indeed find the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences to be the most expensive source of military physicians, when comparing educational costs only, it also found that when all Federal costs are considered, the cost of a university graduate is comparable to that of the scholarship program graduates.

The chart for which the gentleman just referred does not take into account all Federal costs. It does not spread out all costs on the years of service or, in fact, take in the requirement of having to militarily train these doctors. This action is premature. It would be premature to undertake an action that could have a significant impact on both the department's short-term and long-term ability to recruit and train physicians to perform the department's medical requirements.

The GAO report also relied upon the 733 study which before our Subcommittee on Military Personnel was slammed. Not only was it slammed by a lot of the chiefs, it was slammed by the Democrats and Republicans in attendance, to also include Dr. Steven Joseph. So I think it is premature for us to act at this time.

The GAO report also, I would cite, states the alternative strategy to meet DOD's long-term enrichment needs could include an enrichment component, in other words, stretching out the tenure in which someone serves. That is much what the gentleman is requiring in his amendment. But this amendment only provides for that longer obligation.

It does not include any additional benefits or training that would entice physicians to accept a longer obligation.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. KLUG. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, let me point out to my colleague and good friend from Indiana that actually over the course of the last 20 years when this program has been in effect, there have been no more than 15 separate studies that have been done on it, including hearings in the Committee on Armed Services in 1994, 1992, and 1991.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY].

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, today I rise in support of the Klug amendment to phase out the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences, the Defense Department's very own medical school.

What this debate is about is setting priorities at the Pentagon, eliminating duplicative functions and finding more cost-effective measures to train our defense forces as we enter the 21st century and the limited Federal dollars which will be available as we prepare to balance the budget by the year 2002.

Let us make it clear that DOD currently offers tracks for training of medical personnel, and clearly one is more taxpayer-friendly. In 1995 the General Accounting Office concluded that the DOD medical school is more costly to educate and retain graduates than the health professional scholarship program run by that same organization. Clearly, from the charts, $566,000 compared to $126,000 is a clear savings to the taxpayers. Yes, $250 million will be saved over 5 years. DOD graduates from their medical school make up only 11 percent of all military school graduates while the balance comes from the scholarship program. Clearly, out of the total 987 graduates, 155 were from DOD.

I urge the passage of the Klug amendment.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. PICKETT], the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Personnel.

Mr. PICKETT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me, and, Mr. Chairman and Members, I would say that money is not the issue here. We do not try to buy the cheapest rifles for our military; we do not try to buy the cheapest artillery. We try to buy the very best for our military people, and we want them to have this as far as health care is concerned, too.

This resource is vital to our Nation's security. Military officers who are trained in multiple care disciplines get the military culture and a military career commitment at the same time. Military officers at this school are prepared and are tuned to the needs of a joint force. They go to school, and they work together jointly so when they come out they do not have to be trained in joint activities. They also get the essential background and military doctrine and leadership, a very important component for those people who are committed to a career in military medicine.

This is a national resource that provides a center for joint medical doctrine and research, and without this backbone for the military medical community in our country we would be far less prepared and we will not have a ready force. This is an issue of readiness, it is an issue of specialization, it is an issue of commitment to quality health care for our military people.

Mr. Chairman, I urge the Members here to oppose this amendment.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Maryland [Mrs. MORELLA].

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in the strongest possible opposition to this Klug amendment.

As my colleagues know, the GAO report that was quoted, I must reinterpret these figures because when all the factors are in in terms of the costs, USUHS costs $181,575 per year per student. Alternative costs are $181,169. The difference is $406; $406.

Now, what does that $406 buy? Higher retention rates; the expected service of USUHS' graduates is 1.9 times higher than the alternative, and GAO says that; better care. DOD data indicates that university graduates are cited for fewer adverse clinical privileging actions than other military physicians. That is a direct quote.

Increased readiness; all of the commanders of major military units proceed to physicians from the university, have a greater overall understanding of the military rate of commitment to the military, better preparation for operations, assignments, better leadership for leadership roles and preparation.

Support the best medical care for our troops. Vote "no" on Klug.

Mr. KLUG. Mr. Chairman, I just have 1 minute remaining. I yield myself the balance of my time.

If I could, I want to rebut a couple of arguments that have been made. My colleague from the other side of the aisle made the argument to say we need the best physicians possible for the armed services, and I do not disagree. But I think we can train them at Harvard and Stanford and Chicago and Virginia and Wisconsin and Michigan, Northwestern and any other schools across the country, and we are not sending them to bargain-rate universities. For $125,000 we can do it at the best medical schools in the United States.

Now, second, my colleague from Maryland indicated that we somehow misread the GAO numbers. This is a Congressional Budget Office analysis that says, based on figures from 1994, USUHS is the most expensive source of military physicians at $562,000 a person. By comparison, scholarships cost $125,000, and the financial assistance program and the volunteers program range in cost from $19,000 to $58,000.

Mr. Chairman, in a world in which we had all the money to spend, I think it would be a terrific idea to keep up and to maintain the Department of Defense's kind of old and private little military medical school castle, but I think at a time when we are asking every single Government agency to tighten its belt, we can no longer justify the expense.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the service Surgeon Generals have consistently testified at both House and Senate hearings that the university provides a unique medical training that cannot be readily secured at other sources.

Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from California [Mr. HUNTER].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California [Mr. HUNTER] is recognized for 20 seconds.

Mr. HUNTER. My colleagues, the question is what do we get for what we give? It is $556,000 per student, but we get on the average a 18-year doc for the military. It is $125,000 here if we do strictly scholarships, but we only get about 6 years of service to our country. So we are going to have an experienced doctor corps if we stay with the school. Vote "no" on this amendment.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY].

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Klug amendment.

During the Persian Gulf war, if we would have had casualties that would have been higher or even normal, Mr. Chairman, we would have had to implement the draft of doctors. We did not have enough doctors. We did not have them then, and we do not have them now.

Now, as the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. PICKETT] has said, we want the best. Now, the Uniformed Services University, they train medical students. These medical students know how to treat wounds, and then when they graduate, they go out and train other doctors.

The American Legion and VFW have done a study. They oppose this amendment, plus 20 military retirees associations oppose the amendment, and we are talking about 5 million members in this group I have just mentioned.

Please vote against this amendment.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman I yield to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. WELDON].

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me, and I believe that I can address this issue from a unique perspective in that I am a physician who participated in the health profession scholarship program. I worked my way through college, and I did not want to borrow money to go to medical school, and I was very attracted to the scholarship program. I remember distinctly sitting down in my parents' dining room and figuring out what it would cost me to borrow my way through medical school versus going into the military.

Now, I have to say the main reason I went into the military was that I really felt the Good Lord was leading me to go in and serve my country and put the uniform on. And it was the best experience, I think, in my life.

But I do not know if I would have done it if I had had a 7-year obligation, because when a doctor finishes his training and goes out into practice, he can typically pay off his student loans in about 4 years, and this 7-year requirement that the gentleman has added to his amendment, in my opinion, is going to make it very, very difficult for our armed services to recruit good quality physicians into the scholarship program.

I additionally would like to point out that perhaps the DOD would only pay this much money for the students in the scholarship program, but this is really what it costs every medical school. There is lots of other money that goes into training a doctor, grant money that comes in, State money that come in, and, yes, other Federal moneys.

So, in my opinion, this is an ill-conceived amendment, and I would encourage, as a former Army physician who participated in HPSP and worked with many of the armed services medical students, and they were some of the best doctors in the armed medical corps when I was in it, I would highly encourage all of my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to vote "no" on the Klug amendment.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON], a very valuable member of our committee.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I speak against this amendment. Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences is a military medical school. It is one that specializes and prepares doctors, young men and young women, to stay in the military and to serve those who are injured on the battlefield and to serve their families in time of peace. I think it would be a sad mistake to terminate this medical school.

If my colleagues want a professional medical program, if my colleagues want people to stay the minimum of 18 to 20 years, keep this medical school. If we want the very best for those men and women, if we want the very best for their families, we must keep this medical school because those who go through the scholarship program are less apt to stay in and make a career of it. This is a career training ground, educational ground, for those who wish to serve their Nation as a full-time doctor.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER].

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman from California, Mr. DUNCAN HUNTER, hit it right on the head, this university's graduates are expected to serve 18.5 years and about 50 percent are expected to stay on active-duty service for 20 years or longer. In comparison, regular scholarship graduates are expected to serve about 9.8 years, while deferred scholarship program graduates serve 5.3 years on average.

Now, military medical commanders also believe that the university's approach produces physicians who are at least initially better prepared than their civilian-educated peers to meet the demands of military medicine.

Additionally, the medical commanders believe that compared with other military physicians the university graduates have a better understanding of the military mission, organization, customs that are more committed to the military and to a military career.

I would also, Mr. Chairman, place into the RECORD a letter from the American Legion in support of the university, along with the Military Coalition. This is supported by not only the American Legion, the Air Force Association, the Army Aviation Association, Commissioned Officers Association, CWO, and the Enlisted Association of the National Guard.

The list goes on and on and on.

The letters referred to are as follows:

VOTE AGAINST THE KLUG AMENDMENT TO ELIMINATE THE UNIFORMED SERVICES UNIVERSITY OF THE HEALTH SCIENCES

The Military Coalition (signatures enclosed) representing more than five million current and former members of the uniformed services, is very concerned over Representative Scott Klug's proposed amendment to the FY 97 Defense Authorization Act to close the Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences (USUHS). The rationale that it is less costly to train physicians in civilian medical schools than through USUHS is defective.

The General Accounting Office (GAO) cost estimates cited by Representative Klug are misleading in that they fail to account for the taxpayer subsidies and other resources ($4.2 billion) given in grants, research and clinical services to civilian medical schools. In fact, in its report (page 33), the GAO also concedes that the total federal costs for USUHS graduates and Armed Forces Health Professional Scholarship Program (AFHPSP) graduates are virtually identical. Aside from cost considerations, USUHS graduates a military officer who is well trained in military operations and fully prepared for joint service leadership positions. Finally, the retention rate for USUHS graduates is considerably greater than those in AFHPSP (86 percent versus 14 percent) making their education a sound investment in the future of this country.

Representative Klug proposes to increase the AFHPSP service obligation with a view toward increasing career retention in that program. However, based on past recruiting experience, an increased service obligation is expected to aggravate AFHPSP accession problems, and is not expected to materially improve the retention of enrollees in that program.

The Military Coalition strongly urges you to retain USUHS as a national training resource by voting against Representative Klug's amendment. We appreciate your support on this very important issue.

THE AMERICAN LEGION,
Washington, DC, May 14, 1996.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE: The American Legion is asking you to oppose an amendment to the FY 1997 DOD Authorization bill which would close the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences (USUHS).

Each year as the national budget is debated we are made ever more aware of how austere funds are and how acute the need for support of so many diverse programs. One program that has been mentioned for elimination, but serves a very unique purpose, is the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences (USUHS).

A recent GAO report concluded that the total monetary cost for USUHS compared to the Armed Forces Health Professional Scholarship Program (AFHPSP) for civilian institutions are identical. However, unlike civilian medical programs, the USUHS provides military doctors well trained in primary care medicine, as well as combat casualty care, tropical medicine, combat stress and other injuries and illnesses unique to military deployments and combat conditions. Also, according to DOD, the retention rate in the armed forces is eighty-six percent for USUHS graduates compared to fourteen percent for AFHPSP.

This very special institution is a source of military physicians for the armed forces of the United States and the Public Health Service. It provides our military with a corps of dedicated career medical officers instilled with the commitment and selflessness only found in doctors who are trained and skilled in providing combat casualty care. In addition, this facility offers a full range of instruction and care in those maladies typically suffered primarily by military personnel. These include tropical, epidemiological and parasitic ailments.

Military medical officers serve beside and in support of U.S. service personnel when our forces are deployed to conflict. This environment is harsh, chaotic and demanding. The graduates of USUHS are trained to deal with these extreme and difficult conditions and in fact, work and improvise in some of the most deplorable circumstances where U.S. military forces are stationed.

To close the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences would be a great disservice to our men and women in uniform. We must do everything we can to provide our armed forces with the best health and battle casualty care available.

Once again, The American Legion urges you to oppose an amendment to the FY 1997 DOD Authorization bill which would close the Uniformed Services University of Health Sciences. We appreciate your support and commitment on important veterans issues.

Sincerely,

DANIEL A. LUDWIG,
National Commander.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I think that this is an important discussion, and in the spirit of fairness I would like to provide the opportunity for the author of the amendment to have a chance to respond to or rebut the arguments.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KLUG] for that purpose.

Mr. KLUG. Mr. Chairman, I thank my colleague from California. Briefly, Mr. Chairman, because I also know that we have other issues we want to discuss today, I want to essentially kind of rebut some of the arguments that have been raised point by point this afternoon about this discussion about whether 22 years later the Federal Government really needs to be in the business of running a medical school. We do not run other kinds of colleges and universities, and again fundamentally we can send folks to the best medical schools in the country, in fact, the best medical schools in the world, for a fraction of the cost.

One of the arguments that has been made is that this program has not been studied and has not been analyzed, and if we somehow begin to phase out the school, it will crash the medical physician program in the U.S. military. Again, let me point out page after page after page of study dating all the way back to 1975, just 2 years after this program was established, and every single one of them concluded it costs too much money.

It is not a bad program. It is not a bad idea. In the best of all worlds, we would love to do it. But let me remind my Republican colleagues, if we are going to cut the deficit, we have to ask the military to make tough choices.

Will there still be enough doctors in the military if we eliminate this? Keep this in mind: 89 percent of the physicians who presently serve in the Department of Defense came out of the scholarship program and other avenues. It is only 11 percent. The argument is, well, these people serve longer, so it is a better investment. But the General Accounting Office, again, and I hate to keep bringing us back to the facts, said that the main influencing factor for a graduate of either program to remain in the military is the minimum service requirement.

I expect my colleague who is a physician, the gentleman from Florida who brought up and said maybe he would not have picked the scholarship program if he had been required to serve 7 years rather than just a couple of years, but I think, given the rising cost of education, there would be a lot of people in the country who would have the opportunity to go through the DOD scholarship program, again, to go to the best medical schools in the United States and to go to the best medical schools in the world.

I think this all comes down to philosophy. That is what it really comes down to. It comes down to a simple judgment. In 1996, 24 years after this program was set up, does it really fundamentally make sense for the U.S. Government to be in the business of running a medical school? I think the answer has to be, fundamentally, no.

The argument is specialized training is needed for combat. Come on, we all know Bethesda. Where is the expertise that comes? Are we not better off if we want doctors to be trained in surgical procedures in a combat situation to send them into hospitals where they have to deal with gunshot victims and knife victims on a regular basis? We are not going to find that in Bethesda, MD.

Briefly, Mr. Chairman, let me suggest that this was a terrific program when it was first established. We have had 24 years of experience. Every program and every analysis that has come back since 1975, 3 years after this program started, said it is too expensive. We cannot maintain it. It does not make sense. Expand the scholarship program, raise the number of years of requirement, and begin to phase out the DOD military program.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. MORELLA].

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Chairman, the figures that I mentioned from the GAO report which indicate a $400 difference are if we factor in the number of years these people serve.

I would also like to point out an experience I recently had at USUHS. I was there because a medal of honor was given by the Secretary of the Navy to a man named Michael Charissis, who was the person who saved lives in the Amtrak MARC accident in Silver Spring, MD, recently. He did it quietly. They had to work to determine who it was. How did he know how to do it? The kind of training he had had equipped him for that.

I also want to remind this group, in terms of putting human faces, we had outstanding people who served in the Persian Gulf conflict. We had Rhoda Cornum, who was a graduate from there. We have had so many others, and such a distinguished group of people, and all of the military commanders who deal with medicine have come out in favor of it, all of the organizations that we know of. The American Legion, just to cite that, plus a lot of others, have all come out in favor of it. It is our only medical military university in the United States of America. I really think that we would be penny wise and pound foolish if we were to vote for this amendment, so vote against it.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM].

(Mr. CUNNINGHAM asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Chairman, I stand in strong opposition to this amendment.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KLUG].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. KLUG. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

At the end of title X (page 359, after line 20), insert the following new section:

SEC. 1041. SENSE OF CONGRESS CONCERNING ASSISTING OTHER COUNTRIES TO IMPROVE SECURITY OF FISSIONABLE MATERIAL.

(A) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) With the end of the Cold War, the world is faced with the need to manage the dismantling of vast numbers of nuclear weapons and the disposition of the fissile materials that they contain.

(2) If recently agreed reductions in nuclear weapons are fully implemented, tens of thousands of nuclear weapons, containing a hundred tons or more of plutonium and many hundreds of tons of highly enriched uranium, will no longer be needed for military purposes.

(3) Plutonium and highly enriched uranium are the essential ingredients of nuclear weapons.

(4) Limits on access to plutonium and highly enriched uranium are the primary technical barrier to acquiring nuclear weapons capability in the world today.

(5) Several kilograms of plutonium, or several times that amount of highly enriched uranium, are sufficient to make a nuclear weapon.

(6) Plutonium and highly enriched uranium will continue to pose a potential threat for as long as they exist.

(7) Action is required to secure and account for plutonium and highly enriched uranium.

(8) It is in the national interest of the United States to—

(A) minimize the risk that fissile materials could be obtained by unauthorized parties;

(B) minimize the risk that fissile materials could be reintroduced into the arsenals from which they came, halting or reversing the arms reduction process; and

(C) strengthen the national and international control mechanisms and incentives designed to ensure continued arms reductions and prevent the spread of nuclear weapons.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—In light of the findings contained in subsection (a), it is the sense of Congress that the United States has a national security interest in assisting other countries to improve the security of their stocks of fissile material.

(c) SAVINGS PROVISION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed as affecting applicable statutory or regulatory requirements relating to worker health and safety.

Mr. SPENCE (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the modifications be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE] and the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] each will control 10 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE].

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. NEUMANN].

Mr. NEUMANN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to engage the distinguished chairman of the Committee on National Security in a colloquy.

Mr. Chairman, I had intended to offer an amendment to eliminate the Department of Defense MANTECH program because I believe the program has serious flaws. After examining one Navy manufacturing technology center of excellence in my district, I became concerned that the taxpayer dollars were not being spent wisely. I found that despite significant Federal investment, the center had not lived up to its promises. Job promises had not been realized. overhead appeared excessive.

As an example, I read news reports of purchases of $69 tape dispensers and $6,000 conference tables. Executive compensation was, I believe, out of line with the center's responsibilities. As an example, the director received a $50,000 pay raise at the same time the company shrunk by two-thirds, increasing his compensation to $261,000 a year.

This led me to the 1992 GAO study of the MANTECH program. I would like to quote from the 1992 study. This is a direct quote.

The Office of the Secretary of Defense does not have reasonable assurances that the MANTECH program is being effectively implemented.

The cost savings or financial benefits being attributed to the MANTECH projects are not reliable.

The Office of the Secretary of Defense has not established a methodology for assessing the program's impact.

In response to the 1992 GAO study, the Department of Defense expressed concern that congressional earmarks has not been evaluated against any selective criteria, no benefits had been quantified, and no analysis of cost effectiveness had been performed.

I understand that the Committee on National Security and the Congress did move in 1992 and 1994 to address some of these problems. I commend the gentleman from South Carolina and his committee for these efforts. The program has apparently been tightened up and further controls put on spending.

However, I remain concerned that Congress still lacks the complete knowledge needed to evaluate this program. The Congress still does not know if doing business through the military's centers of excellence is an effective way to get the most for the taxpayers' money.

Mr. Chairman, would the gentleman consider requesting a follow-up to the 1992 GAO report to provide the knowledge needed to further evaluate the effectiveness of this program?

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NEUMANN. I yield to the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, although the committee has no knowledge of the claims by the gentleman in his district, I will agree that a GAO study is timely, since the Congress has taken serious steps to ensure a strong manufacturing program in the Department of Defense.

Mr. NEUMANN. I thank the gentleman from South Carolina and look forward to working with his committee on this issue.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1½ minutes for the purpose of entering into a colloquy with my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ROEMER].

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELLUMS. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

(Mr. ROEMER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, I rise to commend the efforts of the committee to support key modernization efforts for our services and wish to compliment both Chairman SPENCE and Ranking Member DELLUMS for their efforts in meeting the needs of our armed services. However, I would like to point out some deep concern regarding the HMMWV.

The HMMWV, manufactured in South Bend, IN, is the world leader in light tactical wheeled vehicles which are needed for rapid deployment forces. Its versatility also allows it to serve as a platform for newly developed command and control, shelter, and weapons systems programs. The new UpArmored version is also critical to protecting our troops now serving in Bosnia from the extensive threat of mines. The HMMWV might also be used to help the INS patrol our borders and the U.N. keep the peace.

The HMMWV budget request for fiscal year 1997 is not sufficient to prevent a gap in both the vehicle and armoring production lines. General Reimer, Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army, placed the HMMWV near the top of his unfunded requirements priority list in testimony before Congress. An increase of $66 million above this request is required to avoid a production gap and meet priority vehicle fielding requirements. I note the Senate version of the bill includes this additional authorization for fiscal year 1997 and urge my colleagues to support this level of funding in the upcoming authorization conference in order to ensure protection of our troops in Bosnia and other hostile areas.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I share the concerns of my distinguished colleague from Indiana, and I recognize the importance of the HMMWV Program and its extensive role in meeting the services' current requirements. I would further like to assure the gentleman from Indiana that this issue will be considered during the upcoming conference, and I yield to the gentleman for a final remark.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the distinguished gentleman and former chairman of the committee for his support and articulate words.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from the State of Washington [Mr. HASTINGS].

(Mr. HASTINGS of Washington asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time. I rise in support of this amendment. I applaud the committee's decision to accept my amendment in this end bloc amendment, providing funding for the Russian Reactor Conversion Program. In spite of the fact that the cold war is over, Russia continues to use many of its nuclear reactors to produce weapons grade plutonium. My amendment, which utilizes existing funding, will allow us to shut down these reactors, reducing the direct threat to the United States. Nearly everyone I talked to supports this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I also want to take a minute to mention an issue of particular interest to my district. This bill includes provisions in the committee mark to streamline the DOE's environmental management program, including, No. 1, granting additional authority to local site managers to cut through redtape and get the cleanup job done, placing strict limits on burdensome paperwork known as DOE orders and otherwise streamlining the DOE orders, and more important, requiring performance based contracts to assure contractors are given incentives to spend our tax dollars wisely.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today to urge my colleagues to support this critical legislation.

For more than a decade, we have sat by as our Nation's defense spending has been dramatically reduced. In fact, spending on procurement has fallen by 70 percent since 1985. Thus, the committee's action to increase funding over the President's request is a welcome change—one which will ensure that our military remains the best equipped and best trained in the world.

I also want to take a minute to mention two issues that are of particular interest to my district.

First, I applaud the committee's decision to accept my amendment providing funding for the Russian Reactor Conversion Program. In spite of the fact that the cold war is over, Russia continues to use many of its nuclear reactors to produce weapons-grade plutonium.

The Department of Energy runs a small program which focuses on either shutting down these reactors, or converting them so that they will not be able to produce plutonium. The program also leverages U.S. expertise in spent nuclear fuel management, in order to prevent reprocessing.

My amendment asks for no new funding. It will fund the program out of unspent balances from prior years. Nearly everyone who I have spoken to supports the program, and the debate thus far has simply been over which Federal agency should fund it—not whether it should be funded. By authorizing the use of existing funds, my amendment will preserve an important non-proliferation initiative, without taking funding away from crucial defense programs.

A related DOE project, the International Nuclear Safety Program, works to ensure the security and safety of Russian power-producing nuclear reactors. I understand that the subcommittee chairman believes that funding for this program should come out of foreign assistance funding, rather than out of defense spending, and I would propose that we work together to see that this program is adequately funded in this manner.

Second, I applaud the committee for accepting my legislation to streamline the Department of Energy's Environmental Management Program. My bill codifies important steps that the Department has taken in the past few months, including:

Granting additional authority to local site managers to cut through the redtape and get the cleanup job done;

Allowing site managers to transfer funding to the most critical cleanup projects;

Placing strict new limits on burdensome internal paperwork requirements—also known as DOE orders;

Encouraging performance based contracts, to ensure that private contractors are given an incentive to spend our tax dollars wisely;

Encouraging streamlined approval processes for new technology; and,

Allowing budget savings at cleanup sites to be used for other key projects.

These provisions are a significant step towards fundamental reform of the DOE cleanup program. They will not only speed progress made on cleanup, but ensure that Federal resources are used effectively. As a result, I strongly urge that my colleagues support this legislation.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I once made a statement with all this "Buy American" stuff when I heard all of the arguments that we could hire generals a lot cheaper from Korea. Evidently it helped me, and in 1994, I want to give credit to then Chairman DELLUMS who had helped me pass a law that says that if in fact a foreign country discriminates against certain types of American products, then there shall be no waivers of the blanket "Buy American" Act.

I think that is a very important piece of legislation. I want to thank the gentleman from helping with that. The reason why I have asked for the time is I want to engage in a colloquy with the chairman, and I commend the chairman for the fine job he has done.

But is that, because it was authorized in 1994 as a part of the Defense authorization bill, permanent law?

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRAFICANT. I yield to the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is correct. The operative provision of the gentleman's original amendment is already in law as part of the fiscal year 1994 Defense Authorization Act.

Mr. TRAFICANT. With that, Mr. Chairman, again I thank everybody. I want to thank Chairman DELLUMS because it took us some time to get that done under his leadership. He took a loot at that.

Second of all, my amendment now calls for a report. I think we must know the status of when this buy American act is waived, what are the dollar amounts and what are the goods being produced and purchased overseas.

So I want to again thank the chairman for including this in the en bloc, and I want to thank Chairman DELLUMS under his leadership for enacting this that is now permanent law.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON], the chairman of our Subcommittee on Research and Development.

(Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, there is a provision in our bill about a program called Joint Advanced Strike Technology, also known to industry as the joint strike fighter, that very few Members of this body have any knowledge of.

Our committee recommendation in this bill on the Joint Advanced Strike Technology Program restricts funding and asks for further justification for the program. This action has been viewed as controversial by some because it is seen as directed at one particular military service. Others find our action controversial because they claim that the committee's action came as a surprise and without sufficient debate. I appreciate these views, however this body needs to more fully understand the basis for the committee's action on JAST.

First, let me say that while most of you have never heard of this program called JAST, CBO estimates it is a $300 billion program. Yes, I said $300 billion. That is more than 7 B-2 programs and is well over the total amount of the entire DOD budget that we are debating.

DOD wants to spend $300 billion of your money, but the Pentagon refuses to classify JAST as an acquisition program—for reasons only Pentagon lawyers can seek to justify.

Section 2430 and 2432 of title 10, United States Code that govern Defense Department major acquisition programs, define what constitutes a major defense acquisition program and require that the Pentagon provide the Congress certain reports detailing overall costs and schedules for major acquisition programs so we can meet our oversight responsibilities.

However, while the Pentagon intends to spend $300 billion of taxpayer money, it refuses to comply with the law. The Pentagon has spent $400 million already and plans to spend nearly $4 billion more during the next 6 years and ultimately $300 billion for what the Pentagon continues to call a non-acquisition program.

No one should be surprised by our committee's action.

In 1993 the committee zeroed the funding for the Navy's request for the predecessor program to JAST, called advanced short takeoff and vertical landing aircraft.

In 1994, the committee again zeroed the funding request for this program.

In 1995, the committee authorized the DOD request. However, in its report on the bill the committee stated it did so "more out of concern for the industrial base than as an endorsement of the requirement for such an aircraft."

So no one should be surprised by the committee's recommendation. The committee's views have been consistent through 4 years of Democrat and Republican leadership.

Now that more Members have expressed an interest in pursuing the details of this $300 billion program, I intend to recommend to the chairman that we come out of conference with a requirement that first, the Pentagon comply with the law and that they meet the reporting requirements of a major defense acquisition program. Second, that an independent analysis be done regarding the so-called joint requirement for this program, and finally, that we restrict obligation of funding for JAST until the Pentagon complies with these two requirements.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. TAYLOR].

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, I thank the distinguished ranking minority member for yielding the time.

Mr. Chairman, the amendment which I am offering is included in the chairman's en bloc amendment. The first section of my amendment contains language which requires the Army not later than 180 days after the enactment of the fiscal year 1997 defense authorization to submit to Congress a plan for the utilization, reutilization, or disposal of the Mississippi Army ammunition plant which is located in Hancock County, MS.

The second section of my amendment, which I think many will have a great interest in, would name the multipurpose range complex heavy tank training facility at Camp Shelby, MS, for Congressman G.V. "SONNY" MONTGOMERY.

As Mississippi Adj. Gen. James H. Garner wrote:

Congressman G.V. "SONNY" MONTGOMERY has been especially supportive in the development of Camp Shelby to meet the training needs for not only the Mississippi National Guard, but the many other States using Camp Shelby for their annual training * * * I feel that it would be very appropriate, in tribute to Congressman Montgomery as he retires at the end of this year, that the multipurpose range complex be named the G.V. "SONNY" MONTGOMERY multipurpose Range. I would wholeheartedly support such legislative initiative to honor Congressman Montgomery in this way.

Just briefly, since he was first elected in 1966, Representative MONTGOMERY has steadfastly served as the voice of the citizens of Mississippi's Third District in Congress and our Nation.

The gentleman from Mississippi is a veteran of the U.S. Army in World War II, a retired National Guard General, member of the House National Security Committee, and former chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Committee. He has dedicated his life to serving the Nation both on the front lines of battle and in the Halls of Congress.

Incidentally, I would like to mention that during every single Christmas break during the Vietnam war, Chairman MONTGOMERY spent his Christmas in Vietnam with the troops.

His legislative legacy is impeccable. It includes the Montgomery G.I. bill, championing the concept of an All Volunteer military, making the Reserves truly a ready force, and equipping and strengthening the National Guard. He fought for reemployment rights for reservists and National Guard personnel who were called to active duty. He ensured that our Nation's veterans were eligible for basic benefits like healthcare, low-interest home loans, and a chance for a better education.

And, in spite of all his triumphs and personal successes, Congressman MONTGOMERY remains a kind and humble man. His successor will no doubt have huge shoes to fill.

Mr. Chairman, I am honored to have had the opportunity to serve with SONNY MONTGOMERY. I will be forever grateful for what he has done personally to assist me, the great things he has done for our State, our Nation's veterans, and our Nation. You will be missed, SONNY. Good luck in your retirement.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Chairman, I do so for the purpose of joining the gentleman from Mississippi, Mr. TAYLOR, in paying tribute to our colleague, SONNY MONTGOMERY, not only in naming this particular range after the gentleman from Mississippi, but for his long and distinguished service to this body.

As I said on yesterday and on other occasions too, I know of no person on either side of the aisle who has stood stronger for national defense over the years than SONNY MONTGOMERY. He is going to be sorely missed in this body and by this country when he retires.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LAUGHLIN].

(Mr. LAUGHLIN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LAUGHLIN. Mr. Chairman, as an officer in the active and Reserve U.S. Army for over 30 years, I rise in support of H.R. 3230.

I would like to begin by thanking Chairman SPENCE and Chairman DORNAN for their support of title 12 of the defense authorization bill, known as the Reserve Revitalization Act of 1996.

They recognize the vitality and importance of our Reserve components in the national defense of the United States.

On behalf of my fellow reservists and guardsmen, I can tell you that their devotion to our Nation's citizen-soldiers is known and very appreciated.

In particular, I would like to express my appreciation to Congressman SONNY MONTGOMERY.

Without Mr. MONTGOMERY's support of the Revitalization Act and his years of dedication to the national security of our great land, our country would be a very different place.

I also would like to thank my friend from New Jersey, Mr. SAXTON, for withdrawing his amendment to the defense authorization bill.

I believe it is important that my fellow Members understand why it is so important that the Army Reserve report directly to the chief of Staff of the Army.

Simply stated, this will improve the readiness of the Army Reserve.

Of all the Reserve components, the U.S. Army Reserve has the lowest readiness of any of our military Reserve commands.

I agree with Mr. SKELTON that the Army Reserve readiness has improved somewhat.

But this improvement is not because of its command relationship with forscorn.

It is because of congressional pressure. It is because of congressionally mandated equipment additions.

It is because of intensive oversight by this body over the years.

The Army Reserve is the only Reserve component which does not report directly to the service Chief of Staff.

During the authorization bill's markup in the Subcommittee on Personnel, this issue was specifically and thoroughly debated.

By an overwhelming vote, the subcommittee adopted the present bill language.

This language requires the commanding general of the Army Reserve to report directly to the Chief of Staff of the Army.

This arrangement mirrors the command relationships of all the other services.

It only makes sense that this will lead the Army Reserve toward the better readiness ratings earned by the Army's sister services.

The Army has resisted this change.

Unfortunately, this resistance to the will of Congress is not new.

In 1991, Congress mandated the establishment of the U.S. Army Reserve Command over the strenuous objections of the Department of the Army.

At one point, Congress was forced to threaten to withhold $100 million from the Army budget before the Army leadership would follow the orders of Congress.

The 1991 Defense Authorization Act, in section 903, directed the Army to assign the Army Reserve Command to the U.S. Atlantic Command, a warfighting commander in chief.

Instead, the Army placed the Army Reserve Command under the control of forscorn.

This year's legislation, in part, is another attempt to require the Army to improve the Readiness of the Army Reserve.

All former chiefs of the Army Reserve support the current bill language, based on their years of practical experience.

You heard Mr. MONTGOMERY read one letter that expressed the sense of those past leaders of the Army Reserve.

In addition, the Chief of Staff of the Air Force, the Chief of Naval Operations and the Commandant of the Marine Corps personally were involved in drafting this important language.

Each of them supports direct reporting between the Reserve Commander and the Chief of Staff as necessary and required for Reserve readiness.

Every study which has examined the Army Reserve has emphatically recommended that the Army Reserve Commander report directly to the Chief of Staff.

This is the best way to improve the Army Reserve's readiness, because it puts the chief of the Army Reserve at the table with the Army's top decisionmakers.

This is the same organization followed by all other of our Nation's military services—the Navy, the Air Force, and the Marines.

Studies chaired by retired generals Richardson and Foss, as former commanding generals of the Army training and doctrine command, made these recommendations.

The congressionally mandated independent commission directly addressed this issue in 1992 when it recommended elimination of layering and recommended direct reporting to the Chief of Staff.

Finally, the Hay group in 1993 specifically recommended that the commanding general of U.S. Army Reserve Command, USARC, report directly to the chief.

It is high time that the consistent and repeated recommendations of several study groups be implemented by Congress.

I urge my colleagues to support this important authorization bill, and do what is right for the readiness of this Nation's active duty military members and for America's citizen-soldiers.

□ 1500

All former chiefs of the Army Reserve, as mentioned in the statement yesterday by the gentleman from Mississippi, SONNY MONTGOMERY, support this provision. This allows them to have one boss and to have one direct chain of command, and that is to the senior U.S. Army general on active duty.

It is very important that we raise the level of readiness of the Army Reserve, because they have consistently had the lowest level of readiness of our Reserves.

Mr. Chairman, I urge support of the defense authorization bill.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. WATERS], another of my distinguished colleagues.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank the gentleman from South Carolina, Chairman SPENCE, and the gentleman from California, Ranking Member DELLUMS, for including my amendment in the en bloc amendment.

As in other sectors of society, the defense industry has undergone a wave of mergers in the past few years. With this much consolidation, I think it makes good sense for the Department of Defense to take a hard look at some of the consequences of this massive change.

In 1994, Northrop and Grumman merged, Loral and IBM-Federal Systems merged, and Martin Marietta merged with both General Dynamics-Space Systems and Lockheed that year.

In 1995, Loral merged with Unysis-Defense. Litton merged with Teledyne-Electronics. Raytheon merged with E-Systems, and Hughes merged with Magnavox-Electronic Systems.

Already this year, Northrop-Grumman has merged with Westinghouse-Defense Electronics and Lockheed-Martin has merged with Loral-Defense.

The Defense Department would report their findings to Congress 6 months after the date of enactment of this bill. This would give us a reasonable chance to evaluate, analyze and digest the information before we begin next year's funding cycle.

Mr. Chairman, I ask for support on the en bloc amendment. I think this addition of the en bloc will make this a better bill.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Oklahoma, Mr. J.C. WATTS, our Oklahoma quarterback.

Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I want to commend the ranking member, the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS], and also the gentleman from South Carolina, Chairman SPENCE, for as we fought these battles in committee they both conducted themselves with great professionalism and provided leadership on both sides of the aisle, and I appreciate their efforts and their professionalism.

The National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997 is a well-thought-out bill that gives much-needed support to the men and women of the Armed Forces.

Today, men and women of the United States military are protecting the cause of freedom in Bosnia, the Middle East, and other areas in the world. What better way to demonstrate our support for them than to offer legislation that enhances military pay, housing, and other earned benefits.

The National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997 remembers our Nation's defenders. In addition to increasing their basic pay, the bill speaks to important quality of life issues by increasing the basic allowance for quarters and giving thousands of military members housing choices that were previously unavailable.

I urge and call on my colleagues to offer their support for this legislation and the en bloc amendment to the 1997 authorization act.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN] for the purposes of engaging in a colloquy.

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from California, Ranking Member DELLUMS, for yielding me this time, and I would like to engage the chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Research and Development, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON] on two subjects, dual-use technology and the Nautilus program, both of which are included in this bill, and to thank him for his leadership and bipartisanship.

On the first subject, Mr. Chairman, we do not have the luxury any more of unlimited research and procurement funds in the defense budget, so saving money by using commercial products and technologies to solve military problems becomes more important than ever. Dual-use technology is an area of critical importance to us in the Congress as we work to get the most value for each tax dollar spent on defense.

Working on a bipartisan basis, we have crafted an innovative dual-use technology provision in this bill, which includes cost sharing and will make program managers in each service sector look to the commercial marketplace first for solutions to their technology needs.

I look forward to working with the gentleman from Pennsylvania to ensure this provision becomes law.

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. HARMAN. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I could not agree with the gentlewoman more. This is an innovative proposal we have worked together on. I applaud her for her leadership and look forward to fully funding this new initiative, which I am very excited about, and thank her for her leadership on this issue.

Ms. HARMAN. I thank the chairman. Second, we have plussed up the ballistic missile defense piece of this defense bill, and I am fully supportive of that, but our program will not meet the threats for some years. There are immediate threats in some theaters around the world, one of which is Israel.

I have been a strong supporter, as the gentleman knows, of our collaboration with Israel on various aspects of the ballistic missile defense budget. Just a few weeks ago the President and Prime Minister Peres signed a statement of intent providing that the Nautilus, which is a ground-based theater missile defense system, would be developed and deployed as soon as possible.

I am disappointed that the administration has not included funding in this bill for the Nautilus program, but we in our subcommittee and then in the full committee included supportive language. I would like to talk to the chairman about this bill.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes, the remainder of our time, to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON], the chairman of our Subcommittee on Military Research and Development.

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the balance of his time.

Mr. Chairman, I thank the committee chairman and I thank the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN] for her leadership on this vital issue and program.

The Nautilus program is critical, critical to our overall missile defense program and critical to the security of Israel. I pledge to her what she has said today we will fully support.

The gentleman from South Carolina, Chairman SPENCE, and I assume the gentleman from California, Mr. DELLUMS, also support this vital initiative. But I have to again mention to all of our colleagues that this administration, which talked about the importance of the high energy laser program, the Nautilus, for the past 3 years has tried to zero out the entire program.

In fact, I have to correct, Mr. Chairman, a statement I made yesterday. I said the President requested $3 million this year for the high energy laser program. What he did was requested $3 million to terminate the program; to zero it out; to end it. Thank goodness this Congress has been there to make sure the funding is in place so that we can protect Israel.

Finally, this President is seeing the light and joining with this Congress and enlightened people like the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN] in making sure that Israel's security is guaranteed by programs like the high energy laser program and missile defense technology. I applaud her, I look forward to working with her, and thank goodness, Mr. Chairman, the President has seen the light as well.

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. I yield to the gentlewoman from California.

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman's remarks, and I would note that I have been a long-term supporter of these initiatives and will continue to be. I am pleased that the administration at this point has proposed its collaboration with Israel.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word, and I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. HUNTER], the chairman of our Subcommittee on Military Procurement.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the chairman of the full committee for the great job he has done in moving this bill through the committee process and through the floor, and say to my colleagues, Democrat and Republican, that we have put together an excellent bill.

I just want to take a minute, because we have had such a fast run on the House floor that I think it is important to kind of bring this thing back into the context of the total bill, and talk a little bit about what we have done overall. I see the gentleman from Pennsylvania, CURT WELDON, the chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Research and Development, and the gentleman from South Carolina, Mr. SPENCE, the full committee chairman, who both had as one of their goals to enhance missile defense.

I think it is appropriate that we have just had this discussion between the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN] who has really been an advocate of missile defense and the cooperative program with Israel, because the administration has now agreed to undertake a program that, for all practical purposes, with the Nautilus missile defense system and the Arrow defense system that we have been building with Israel for some time, that will shoot down incoming missiles that are coming into Tel Aviv or other places. President Clinton has now agreed with the concept that we should defend the people of Israel against enemy missile attacks.

Now, that means a couple of things. First, he understands now that the possibility of those missile attacks exist. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON] and I wrote a letter some 5 or 6 years ago advising Israel and our then head of SDI that we expected to have missile attacks on Israel at some point in the future using Soviet made rockets, missiles, and that did occur. So President Clinton now agrees that missile attacks may occur in Israel and it is good to defend against them and defend the people, the population, of Israel.

Our next job is to drag this President kicking and screaming into the idea that it would also be good to defend the people of the United States against missile attacks. That is the impetus of the language that we have put forward in this bill.

We also have the 3-percent pay raise for our troops. We have ammunition, we have the heavy equipment that our troops need to deploy worldwide, and we have enhanced sealift and airlift in this bill. So we have done quality of life and we have done power projection, and I hope that everybody, Democrat and Republican, will vote for this bipartisan defense bill.

Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman from South Carolina for putting this all together, and the subcommittee chairmen, who really worked long and hard on this. I noticed the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BATEMAN] and his counterpart in the O&M subcommittee, put in lots of money so that we will have plenty of capability in ship repair and ordnance repair and equipment repair at our depots. That is an important aspect of being able to move the Marines in short order into a forward deployed area.

Mr. Chairman, we have added some $300 plus million, including $96 million for M-16 bullets that the Marines told us they were short in terms of fighting the two-war scenario.

This is an excellent bill, Mr. Chairman, and I hope everyone will vote for this bill.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON], the chairman of our Subcommittee on Military Research and Development.

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman for yielding to me, and I want to thank the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS], for his leadership. I encourage our colleagues to vote for this important piece of legislation, I think an historic piece of legislation that deals with the quality of life issues so important to our men and women serving around the country; that ensures we protect their pay increases, their housing, their quality of life priorities.

This bill also deals, Mr. Chairman, with our priorities in terms of rebuilding our acquisition and getting on to those platforms that can replace those aging items that need to be replaced.

I applaud the chairman for his leadership in allowing us to expand out and to put in a new innovative approach with the Russians in the area of missile defense, something we have never done before and which is a formal part of this bill.

I applaud the chairman for allowing us to expand from an environmental standpoint to allow the Navy to take a leadership role in more fully understanding the oceans, to allow the CNO to coordinate efforts among the nine Federal agencies doing oceanographic work into one effort headed up by the CNO of the Navy, supported by all the major environmental groups and the 45 major oceanographic institutions nationwide.

The bill is a good bill. It is a bill every Member of this body can support, just as in our committee, and I would encourage my colleagues to look at the vote out of committee. Forty-nine to two, Mr. Chairman was the vote. Overwhelming bipartisan support from Republicans and Democrats who have made the statement that we have reached a fair compromise.

Some of us might have liked to have had more money here or more money there, but we have covered all the major requirements, from impact aid to quality of life, to modernization, to missile defense, and we have done it in a bipartisan manner. The best evidence that we can show in terms of our support of this bill is now to take this piece of legislation that passed out of our committee 49 to 2 and have an overwhelming vote to send it to the Senate so that we can reach a fair compromise and send a bill to the President that he can support.

We can clean up some of the areas that Members have concern with, but, overall, we have an outstanding bill, one that I am proud to support and one I hope my colleagues will join with us in voting "yes" on.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word, and I yield to the gentleman from Texas, Mr. PETE GEREN.

Mr. PETE GEREN of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this bill, but I rise particularly to offer my support for the Taylor amendment. The Taylor amendment includes a provision that honors our colleague and friend, the Honorable SONNY MONTGOMERY. No finer gentleman has ever served in this House or lived a life more dedicated to the armed services of our Nation. This honor included in the Taylor amendment is richly deserved.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I recognize that we are attempting to fill in for a few moments while our leaders come back from other places. Let me take this opportunity to point out, Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, that there are five members of our committee for whom this is the last time they will come to the floor to debate a defense authorization bill: the Messrs. MONTGOMERY, BROWDER, PETERSON, GEREN, and Mrs. SCHROEDER of Colorado.

With respect to three of my colleagues, the gentleman from Alabama, Mr. BROWDER, is now seeking higher office in the other body; Mr. PETERSON is moving on to other things; and the gentleman from Texas, Mr. PETE GEREN, has decided to return to Texas into private life and pursue the balance of his life. For these three persons, I would like to say to them that it has been a pleasure to serve with them, to serve with them in my capacity as subcommittee chairman of various committees, full committee chairman last year, this year as the ranking Democrat. And I wish them well.

For two of my colleagues, I have been around here for a long time, Mr. Chairman. I am now in my 26th year. For the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY] and the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER], I would like to lay out a couple of anecdotal bits. Mrs. SCHROEDER, as my colleagues well know, came to Congress 2 years after this gentleman. I was elected in 1970, sworn in in 1971. The gentlewoman from Colorado was sworn in in 1973. I remembered my first 2 years I served on the Foreign Affairs Committee. My second term, by a set of circumstances that is a whole other story, I managed to end up on the Armed Services Committee as the peacenik from Berkeley.

I recall that the person sitting next to me at the very bottom of the rung on the committee was the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROE-

DER]. It was very interesting that there were two of us new Members to the committee, but the chair of the committee at that time decided that there would only be one additional chair in the hearing room. So the gentlewoman from Colorado and the gentleman from California had to sit in the same chair. So we sat cheek-to-cheek, hip-to-hip, and it took great dignity on the part of both of us to do this. We leaned into each other, recognizing what was being said to us by the humiliating effort to not allow the gentlewoman from Colorado and the gentleman from California to sit in two separate seats. But we turned to each other and we said let us do it with great dignity. Let us not give these people the luxury of thinking that they got to us. It was a difficult day, but when you are sitting cheek-to-cheek with someone, you learn a great deal about them.

Over the 20-something years that we have served together, we have learned a lot about each other. I personally will miss the services of the gentlewoman from Colorado. She has singularly fought major battles in this body to bring sanity to our military budget, to help move the world toward peace, to move us toward nuclear disarmament and toward arms control.

She has made an effort to stand on the floor of this body to challenge this Nation to a rational, coherent, and compassionate set of human priorities. I will miss the gentlewoman because sitting there with her year in and year out, fighting the same battles has given me heart, has given me courage to know that I was never standing alone, even sometimes when we were outnumbered in the Armed Services Committee.

With respect to my distinguished colleague from Mississippi, Mr. MONTGOMERY, he and I were guys who walked in, he was here before myself. We have very different politics. But it is the interesting thing about this institution that people looking from the outside rarely, even the media, rarely get a feel for that even where you can have differences of opinion, friendships develop and friendships emerge.

I knew that I had made it in this institution when I became friends with SONNY MONTGOMERY. I knew that my personal credibility was no longer being challenged in this institution.

My little story about SONNY MONTGOMERY is I remember several years ago when the Republican Party was controlling the other body, we had worked for several weeks to get through the Defense authorization bill. Every single item in the bill had been reconciled with the exception of one. The Montgomery GI bill. Every single issue, billions of dollars had been reconciled, late into the night, wee hours in the morning.

I am about to wrap it up. I am just filibustering so we can get other people back. Be lenient, I will finish this quickly, Mr. Chairman.

Everyone was leaning on the gentleman from Mississippi. SONNY, let it go, let it go, we will hold some hearings next year. And I remember they were beating hard on the gentleman from Mississippi and, I thought, in a relatively unfair way. So this junior Member from California, with left-wing politics, stepped up and stood next to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY] and said: Stay strong, SONNY, you can win this thing. And to the shock and amazement of the colleagues in the conference, the gentleman from Mississippi, conservative Democrat, the gentleman from California, progressive Democrat, arm in arm walked out of the conference and, walking out of that conference, allowed thousands of young people to go to college who would never have had the opportunity.

In Mr. MONTGOMERY walking out of that conference, he set a tone that said, if you are going to reconcile this bill, you are going to bring the Montgomery GI bill to fruition. He walked back in and they conceded. And that is why you now have the Montgomery GI bill that serves well thousands of young American people who can matriculate in this country.

So with those remarks, Mr. Chairman, I would like to say farewell to five very important, very significant Members who played a vital role in this Congress. I have enjoyed serving with them.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to authorize the transfer of naval vessels to certain foreign countries pursuant to the administration's request of January 29, 1996.

Legislation authorizing the proposed transfer of these ships is required by section 7307(b)(1) of title 10, United States Code, which provides in relevant part that "a naval vessel in excess of 3,000 tons or less than 20 years of age may not be sold, leased, granted * * * or otherwise disposed of to another nation unless the disposition of that vessel is approved by law * * *". Each naval vessel proposed for transfer under this legislation displaces in excess of 3,000 tons and/or is less than 20 years of age and therefore the Congress must act.

Therefore the first part of this amendment would insert a new section in title X of the bill to authorize the transfer of 10 naval vessels—(8 sales, 1 lease, 1 grant—to the following countries:

To the Government of Egypt, one Oliver Hazard Perry class frigate Gallery (FFG 26); sale: $47.2 million.

To the Government of Mexico, two Knox class frigates: Stein (FF 1065) and Marvin Shields (FF 1066); sale: $5.9 million.

To the Government of New Zealand, one Stalwart class ocean surveillance ship: Tenacious (T-AGOS 17); sale: $7.7 million.

To the Government of Portugal, one Stalwart class ocean surveillance ship: Audacious (T-AGOS 11); grant: $13.7 million.

To Taiwan (the Taipei Economic and Cultural Representative Office in the United States), three Knox class frigates: Aylwin (FF 1081) Pharris (FF 1094), and Valdez (FF 1096) Sale: $8.2 million; one Newport class tank landing ship: Newport (LST 1179) lease: No rent lease.

To the Government of Thailand, one Knox class frigate: Ouellet (FF 1077); sale: $2.7 million.

According to the Department of Defense, the Chief of Naval Operations certified that these naval vessels are not essential to the defense of the United States. The United States will incur no costs for the transfer of the naval vessels under this legislation. The foreign recipients will be responsible for all costs associated with the transfer of the vessels, including maintenance, repairs, training, and fleet turnover costs. Any expenses incurred in connection with the transfers will be charged to the foreign recipients.

Through the sale of these naval vessels, this legislation generates $71.7 million in revenue for the U.S. Treasury. In addition, through repair and reactivation work, service contracts, ammunition sales, and savings generated from avoidance of storage/deactivation costs, the Navy estimates this legislation generates an additional $525 million in revenue for the U.S. Treasury and private U.S. firms.

The second purpose this amendment is to amend authorities under the Foreign Assistance Act [FAA] of 1961, as amended, and the Arms Export Control Act [AECA] to revise and consolidate defense and security assistance authorities, in particular by updating policy and statutory authorities.

This amendment is identical to H.R. 3121, which the House passed on April 16, 1996, by voice vote, continues the effort by the Committee on International Relations to amend the FAA and AECA to make improvements to defense and security assistance provisions under those Acts. The provisions included in this amendment are the product of bipartisan effort and cooperation and enjoy the strong support of the Departments of State and Defense.

This amendment would insert a new title XV in the bill and is organized by subtitle as follows:

Subtitle A modifies applicable provisions on terms and criteria of financing assistance, including drawdown authorities and a rewrite of the excess defense article authority.

Subtitle B modifies terms of assistance for the International Military Education and Training [IMET] Program.

Subtitle C clarifies current law authorities under which antiterrorism assistance is provided.

Subtitle D modifies authorities under which assistance for international narcotics is provided.

Subtitle E deals with general provisions regarding military assistance including approval of third-country transfers, standardization of congressional review procedures for arms sales, definitions, arms sales certification thresholds, designation of major non-NATO allies, end-use monitoring, and other miscellaneous issues.

I appreciate the opportunity to explain my amendment and would urge my colleagues to support it.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong opposition to the provision in this amendment that authorizes international military education and training assistance for Indonesia.

In 1992, we voted to end all IMET assistance for Indonesia because of that country's abysmal human rights record and their continued oppression of the people of East Timor. Despite the lack of improvement in Indonesia's human rights record, and the opposition of myself and many of my colleagues, a modified IMET program was approved for Indonesia in the Foreign Operations Appropriations Act for fiscal year 1996.

When this provision was added to the foreign aid bill last year, we said we would monitor the human rights situation in Indonesia very carefully and act accordingly this year. Well, the State Department's Country Report on Indonesia was released in March, and according to the report, "The Government continued to commit serious human rights abuses."

That doesn't sound to me as though the situation has improved.

The State Department report also said that in Indonesia "reports of extrajudicial killings, disappearances, and torture of those in custody by security forces increased." Not decreased. Not stayed the same. Increased. Should we really be authorizing IMET assistance for this government now when they have not addressed these critical human rights issues? I don't think so.

Indonesia's policy in East Timor is about the oppression of people who oppose Indonesia's right to torture, kill, and repress the people of East Timor. It is about the 200,000 Timorese who have been slaughtered since the Indonesian occupation in 1975—200,000 killed out of a population of 700,000. It is about genocide.

Mr. Chairman, this provision should be debated fully by this House, not slipped into an en bloc amendment.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Chairman, I oppose passage of the fiscal year 1997 DOD Authorization Act because I believe it funds expensive and unneeded cold-war programs that will compete with fundamental defense spending priorities.

I am concerned that this bill, as did the fiscal year 1996 Authorization Act, puts us on a course to buy cold-war weapons systems such as the F-22, the new attack submarine and national missile defense—star wars. Funding these types of programs puts immediate spending priorities at risk. The number of big ticket and unnecessary procurement items authorized will make it difficult to fund basic defense needs in the outyears. The bow wave of increasing procurement costs that the bill establishes will make it much harder to ensure basic defense capabilities and needs.

While I agree with some of the priorities funded in this bill that help us meet new and changing threats, such as avionics upgrades and the V-22 program, I believe that the extra $7.5 billion authorized in this bill for procurement will threaten more important defense priorities. This increase will have direct consequences on specific readiness needs, such as: adequate funding to operate and maintain our forces, stable pay and benefits for our military service members, the ability to retain a steady and capable civilian work force, and the modernization of less glamorous hardware programs such as artillery systems.

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Chairman, I must reluctantly vote against the fiscal year 1997 Department of Defense Authorization Act because I am troubled by a number of aspects of the bill. First and foremost, the overall spending level is too high. While I appreciate that the bill seeks to address a number of shortcomings in the President's defense budget, too much additional spending has been added to the bill.

Our Nation's legitimate defense needs must be met, but if we are to succeed in the critical and ongoing effort to balance the budget, the defense budget cannot be exempt from spending reductions.

This year's authorization level is $2 billion over last year's level, probably significantly higher than required to meet the essential military aspects of our national security. Furthermore, I disagree with the decision to prevent amendments to the bill that might allow for a rational debate on program funding levels and some reasonable reductions.

Most of the additional funds authorized in this year's plan were for procurement—about $8 billion. This is too generous an increase over the budget request. While I believe procurement and modernization funding does need to increase in certain longlead components of major programs, this year's increase seems to avoid making the necessary choices to establish our most important priorities. This unsolicited increase is not the most rationale way to procure additional weapons, does not go far enough to reflect those items most needed by the services, and may have an adverse impact on our ability to meet real requirements in the future.

I am particularly concerned by the committee's plan to pursue what may be a premature deployment of a national ballistic missile defense system. I am not convinced that a true ballistic missile threat to our Nation from rogue nations will materialize as quickly as some have asserted. Our Nation's current missile defense plan can provide for an affordable defense against limited missile threats before those threats will emerge. I am concerned over the committee's plan to deploy a space-based "star wars" defense, and costs that would add nearly a billion dollars over the President's request to accelerate the development of both national and theater missile defense systems. This course of action commits us to a very expensive and probably unaffordable path. This attempt to accelerate missile defense deployment without a consensus on the actual threat is not sound policy.

The bill does meet important needs for operations and maintenance programs, as well as improvements in our military housing and other facilities. It is difficult for me to oppose this bill because it funds some important military construction programs in my own State of Delaware. But these worthwhile provisions are overshadowed by other problems in the bill.

The authorization bill attempts to legislate divisive social policies which will not improve our military readiness. These policies include a ban on privately funded abortions for U.S. military personnel in overseas hospitals, and mandatory separation of HIV-positive personnel without evaluation of whether they can perform their duties.

In conclusion, I think the fiscal year 1997 Defense authorization bill provides worthwhile support for our military personnel. Nevertheless, the overall funding level in the bill goes beyond what is necessary at this time, and the provisions regarding social policies are unnecessarily divisive. For these reasons, I reluctantly oppose the bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to commend Chairman SPENCE and ranking member DELLUMS for their work on this legislation and to thank them and Subcommittee Chairmen DORNAN, HEFLEY, and WELDON for their attention to Guam's priorities.

The most significant provision in H.R. 3230 for Guam is the repeal of restrictions imposed on land transferred by the Federal Government to the Government of Guam over 15 years ago. The land covers 927 acres, located in the port area and adjacent to facilities closed by the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission [BRAC] last year.

The repeal of restrictions will enable the Government of Guam to develop a comprehensive redevelopment plan and to attract private investors to the port area. Reuse of the port land will stimulate long-term economic growth and private sector employment. Private sector job growth is especially important in light of the loss of jobs by workers at BRAC-closed facilities near the port last year.

I am pleased that H.R. 3230 includes report language on the upgrade of the Piti Power Plant on Guam. The report language notes the continued commitment of the Navy under the Guam power agreement to transfer the Piti Power Plant to the Government of Guam in good working order, and urges the Navy to accelerate funding for the upgrade of two generators already programmed for fiscal year 1999.

The upgrade of two generators at the Piti Power Plant will fulfill a long-standing Navy commitment and greatly improve on the ability of the Guam Power Authority to provide adequate power to the island. The acceleration of the programmed funds to next year is critical, and I want to thank Chairman HEFLEY for his attention to this matter.

H.R. 3230 also includes report language on the extension of theater missile defenses [TMD] to U.S. territories. The report states that "the committee strongly supports fielding highly effective TMD systems that are capable of protecting U.S. territories from ballistic missile attack and directs the SecDef to review the TMD requirements for U.S. terrorists." It requires the Secretary of Defense [SecDef] to submit a report on the results of this review to the congressional defense committees not later than November 15, 1996.

As the majority pursues the development of a national ballistic missile defense system, I believe it should be an equal priority of the SecDef to develop a theater missile defense system which will protect U.S. territories from missile threats.

On Guam, the debate over missile attack is not academic. A few years ago, North Korea threatened Guam, which is closer to North Korea than Hawaii and Alaska, with a missile attack. This is a very real threat, and Guam deserves to receive equal consideration in the development of national missile defense systems. The report language included in H.R. 3230 will focus the Pentagon on the missile defense needs of the territories, especially the Pacific territories, which are outside the coverage of the national missile defense systems.

I am disappointed that no funds are authorized in the bill for construction of an armory for the Guam Army National Guard. As my colleagues know, the Guam Army National Guard is the only national guard unit without an armory. At the same time the Guam Army National Guard is being nationally recognized for its excellence in recruiting and retention. A readiness center to be used for training is essential to the continued excellence demonstrated by the Guam Army National Guard.

It is my hope that next year, the National Security Committee will not be forced into the same position again, and the Department of Army will request funds for armory construction in its annual budget request to Congress. Without informing Congress that armory construction is a priority to the Army, the Guam Army National Guard and other guard units will be left without the needed facilities. I urge the Secretary of the Army to recognize the service of the National Guard and to request funds to construct new armories in next year's budget request.

In spite of this reservation, I want to reiterate my appreciation for the attention of Chairman SPENCE and Ranking Member DELLUMS to issues of importance to Guam.

Mrs. COLLINS of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose this defense authorization bill. A nation's greatness ought to be measured only in terms of the greatness of its people; not by the greatness of its ability to dominate and intimidate with military might. Excessive funding in the defense authorization budget at the expense of critical social needs gives rise to a perilous sense of artificial security and leads to a dereliction of duty to all our citizens' needs.

Therefore, I oppose this bill because it reduces and/or eliminates funding for many critical Federal programs of importance to my constituents. We do not need a defense budget that authorizes $12.4 billion over what the administration has already requested. Why must we tailor our military force for threats that simply no longer exist. Wake up people. The cold war is over.

More than half of the increase over the President's request is for additional weapons procurement. How can we justify a $6 billion increase when funds are being reduced for safe and drug-free schools, for programs for kids with disabilities; for nearly 50,000 American children from the Head Start Program are eliminated, and so forth. We can't. The justification is not there. We can't because this bill, is simply not people-friendly.

Further, this bill is flawed by self-serving adventure-fantasies catering to but a few. It ignores with extreme insensitivity the sordid impact it has upon social concerns.

One of these social concerns affecting my constituents, is this bill's requirement of the immediate discharge of service personnel infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. While I respect the fact that others have a strong opinion on the topic of homosexuals in the military, I do not share views that rescinding the ban on homosexuals in the Armed Services would cause dangerous problems.

I am also concerned that this bill has an overseas ban on abortions. Ideally, men and women would have all the information they need about birth control and socially accepted methods to ensure it would be readily accessible. Unfortunately, this is not the reality for many Americans. Therefore, I continue to strongly believe that a woman, whether in or outside the military, in consultation with her doctor, family, and/or clergy has the right to choose.

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of this Shays-Frank-Gephardt amendment.

Ladies and gentlemen, I think the defense hawks need some history lessons. Lesson No. 1: the Second World War ended 50 years ago. Lesson No. 2: the cold war ended 5 years ago.

Now, a pop quiz: who won! In case some of you cold warriors forgot—we did. We defeated fascism and we defeated communism.

But this defense bill completely ignores this reality.

Right now, many of our European and Asian allies enjoy higher standards of living than our constituents, the American people. Somehow, these nations can support education, health care, child care, and so forth. Because we keep paying their military bills.

I don't know about you, but I am sick of Uncle Sam acting like Uncle Sucker.

The time has come for our allies to share the burden of their own defense. The time has come for shared responsibility. The time has come for us to reap the benefits of our hard work, and invest in our children, our seniors, and our environment.

I urge a "yes" vote on this amendment.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I oppose this legislation. It represents not only a continuation of the misplaced priorities but a compounding of missteps in last year's defense bill, of a much more extreme level. Last year, the Republican majority added $7 billion to the Pentagon's request. This year they added almost double this amount, over $12 billion in unnecessary spending. Even within the Republican party there are those who believe this is going too far, both in terms of spending and policy.

While the bill itself is bad policy, the process by which it is being considered is worse. In the past, open debate and opportunities to modify defense legislation have guided this process. Now we are restricted by the Republican rule in the amendments we can consider and issues that can be voted upon. Important amendments were offered but were not permitted in this debate, including a Republican amendment to reorganize the spending priorities of this out of balance defense budget.

The bill itself adds over $12 billion to the request of the Pentagon. Most of this new spending in the $267 billion bill goes to unrequested weapons systems, which one analysis points out will require an additional $50 billion in outlays in the next 6 or 7 years. How can the Republican majority maintain their balanced budget rhetoric with increased spending such as this? Unfortunately, the Republican agenda to accomplish this is through deep cuts to programs assisting American working families, seniors, students, and children. The spending on the procurement accounts of this bill alone, at about $83 billion, is more than any nation in the world will spend on their entire global defense program.

The budget offered by the majority which we will be considering this week highlights the priority problems of this Congress and this DOD authorization bill. Defense spending under the Republican's proposed overall budget plan will increase over the next 6 years, while severe funding cuts are proposed to be made to community development, infrastructure, the environment, and yes even education, I guess smart weapons but not smart soldiers is this formula, the United States will enter the next century with more weapons systems, but with seniors at-risk due to Medicare cuts, and a work force not keeping pace with technological and skills changes. If responsible cuts are to be made in the Federal budget, there should be no special dispensation for defense spending, above all spending Congress must ask the tough questions of DOD spending in 1996.

Instead of reasonable defense spending though, this authorization bill adds billions of dollars to the Pentagon's wish list. A host of new planes and helicopters, as well as submarines and ships are added, above what is justified or necessary for our military role. The additions and modifications to missile defenses waste millions of taxpayer dollars, again shifting the focus toward the discredited star wars missile defense. In addition, this legislation unilaterally alters the Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty [ABM] by imposing a definition of theater and strategic defenses. These changes to the ABM treaty circumvent the Clinton administration and past administration negotiations and commitments with Russia over this important issue.

The majority also states that the additional billions of dollars are for items the service chiefs have requested. The service chiefs were literally asked what they might do with additional funding if they had it. In response they provided a list of new and continued programs. Certainly anyone could provide a list of items they would purchase if extra funds were available. But to say that the service chiefs requested these additions to this year's bill is outrageous, this was a wish list, as if the dollars and taxes didn't matter.

In terms of requested weapons systems, the Department of Defense's own inspectors have determined that recently the Navy overstated its needs by at least $10 billion. This includes redundancy of systems and overestimation of the numbers of weapons needed. Another Defense Department report in May 1995 also indicated the Navy was seeking $14 billion in submarine technology that it did not need. More recently, the GAO released a study questioning the need for billions of dollars spent on ground attack weapons. The report found existing systems can accomplish the tasks of many of the sought after new weapons on which billions will be spent.

The problems of budgetary and defense policy in this bill are equalled by the social policy it contains. Instead of being concerned with the future direction of military policy and the role of the United States in the post-cold-war world, this bill focuses on social issues such as the discharge of HIV-positive personnel.

The Congress has already taken action on the issue of discharging HIV-positive personnel. This policy, which is not sought by the military and was formulated and carried out under Republican administrations, removes perfectly capable personnel from the military. The training and investment in these soldiers would be lost to an ill-conceived policy.

Certainly a much better bill can be crafted, one that does not include huge increases in spending beyond what the Pentagon has requested and one with an opportunity to debate the important defense issues. I urge my colleagues to vote against this bill.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Department of Defense [DOD] a authorization bill for 1997.

I oppose the bill because the legislation authorizes $12.4 billion more in defense spending than requested by the Pentagon. Later, this week we will vote on a budget resolution which proposes to spend $19 billion less than the President's request for priority domestic programs. The priorities being proposed are not consistent with the realities of challenges facing the United States.

One of the worst provisions in this bill would lead to the immediate discharge of 1,049 services members infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. The Department of Defense opposes this provision and does not believe that these service members present a deployment problem. Clearly, members with HIV should be treated as any other service member with chronic, possibly fatal, medical conditions and remain on active duty until such time as they cannot perform their duties.

This provision is discriminatory because it treats people with HIV differently from any other people with other chronic diseases are treated. Thankfully, a bipartisan coalition was successful in removing this provision from last year's bill and hopefully, this same coalition will prevail before this legislation is completed.

In addition, this bill would undo the current compromise and put in statute a complete ban on lesbians and gay men from serving in the military. Clearly, lesbians and gay men have served their country with distinction as members of the armed service from the very beginning of our country. This provision is unnecessary and is part of a disturbing pattern of promoting hostility toward lesbian and gay Americans.

Mr. Chairman, for budget reasons in general, and this provision in particular, I urge a "no" vote on this legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendments en bloc, as modified, offered by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE].

The amendments en bloc, as modified, were agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose, and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. YOUNG of Florida) having assumed the chair, Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 3230) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1997 for military activities of the Department of Defense, to prescribe military personnel strengths for fiscal year 1997, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 430, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute adopted by the Committee of the Whole? If not, the question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. DELLUMS

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. DELLUMS. I am in its present form, sir.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. DELLUMS moves to recommit the bill H.R. 3230 to the Committee on National Security with instructions to report the same back to the House forthwith with the following amendment:

At the end of title X (page 359, after line 20), insert the following new section:

SEC. 1041. REALLOCATION OF NATIONAL MISSILE DEFENSE FUNDING INCREASE.

(a) INCREASE IN AMOUNT FOR IMPACT AID.—The amount provided in section 301(5) for operation and maintenance for defense-wide activities, and the amount specified in section 367(a)(1) as the portion of such amount that is available for impact aid assistance, are each hereby increased by $53,000,000.

(b) AUTHORIZATION FOR CORPS SAM SYSTEM.—Of the amount provided in section 201(4) for research, development, test, and evaluation for defense-wide activities that is available for programs managed by the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization, not less than $56,000,000 shall be made available for the Corps Surface-to-Air Missile (SAM) system.

(c) OFFSETTING REDUCTIONS FROM AMOUNTS FOR NATIONAL MISSILE DEFENSE.—The amount provided in section 201(4) for research, development, test, and evaluation for defense-wide activities, and the amount specified in section 231 as the portion of such amount that is available for programs managed by the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization, are each hereby reduced by $53,000,000. Of the amount specified in section 231, not more than $749,437,000 may be made available for the National Missile Defense program element.

Mr. DELLUMS (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion to recommit be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. EDWARDS].

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this motion to recommit because I believe it is designed to help the people we should care about most, and that is the families serving in our military and their children. Specifically, this motion to recommit puts $53 million more into the Impact Aid Program, which should be called the military children education program.

Mr. Speaker, last December at Fort Hood in my district, I met with 50 soldiers being deployed to Bosnia. The second soldier I met had missed the birth of his first child because he was in Desert Storm. He was about to miss the birth of his second child because of his service to his country in Bosnia. It was a very personal experience to me in realizing the tremendous sacrifices our military families make for our country.

If we cannot guarantee that soldier he should be paid as much as we would like him to be paid, if we cannot guarantee his family will not wait in line for hospital care, if we cannot guarantee 1996 housing, one thing we should all agree is that we ought to ensure that that soldier and others like him can know when he serves his country that his child will get a first-class education. This $53 million for impact aid will help do that.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the efforts of the gentleman from South Carolina, Chairman SPENCE, and the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. BATEMAN, to put $50 million in impact aid in this bill, and I support that effort. But this motion to recommit takes their good idea and takes it a step farther in making an unquestioned commitment to ensuring that the children of our military families receive a quality education. Our families deserve no less.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Speaker, with the remaining amount of time, let me add some additional remarks with respect to the motion to recommit.

It would provide two opportunities to achieve what this gentleman believes to be a better balance of national security priorities. The motion would increase funding for two very important programs, would pay for these increases by reducing funding for star wars-type national missile defense programs contained in this bill.

Specifically, the bill removes $109 million from star wars funding increases. It would increase funding, as the gentleman from Texas pointed out, impact aid assistance by $53 million. It would also plus-up the Corps SAM missile program by $56 million, taking it from the national missile defense program.

The gentleman from Texas articulately discussed the matter of impact aid. I will not attempt to compete with those remarks.

On the second matter, let me note that much has been made, and appropriately so, of the urgency of being able to deploy a theater missile defense. Corps SAM is a system that we need to deploy with our troops. It will travel with our forces and provide protection to them from tactical threats in the theater, the No. 1 priority threat that we have at this particular moment.

Again, we should direct our scarce resources away from fanciful and extraordinary ideas, like star wars-type programs, and into programs of demonstrated requirements. A $56-million increase in Corps SAM is precisely an appropriate type of reordering missile defense priority.

So in summary, it does two things: $56 million for theater missile defense, which ought to be the appropriate priority in missile defense, not national. We take the money from the increases in national missile defense. Mr. Speaker, $53 million of those dollars go into impact aid. As the gentleman pointed out, this is educational assistance for the children of our service personnel who ought to have the same fine education that any of our other children outside the military have access to.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the motion to recommit. (Mr. SPENCE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, this is a good bill. As has been said on many occasions today, we have amply provided, I think, for the national security needs of this country. We reported the bill out of the committee by a vote of 49 to 2, a very bipartisan, as you can see, vote.

This authorization amounts to $600 million less than that budget figure allocation in our budget for 1997. This translates into 1.5 percent less, adjusted for inflation, than current spending.

From the standpoint of what we did for the military, we had a 3-percent raise for our troops, a 50 percent increase over the President's budget for housing allowance; things that are needed very much: family housing, barracks, child care facilities for our people.

We enhanced our military readiness by increasing the underfunded request. We added ammunition to the Marine Corps. They did not have enough to fight two major contingencies. We continued to add to the underfunded modernization programs. The Chairmen of the Joint Chiefs have asked for $60 billion in modernization beginning now. This administration only asked for about 39. We have added to it.

In short, we have done those things that the administration did not do.

From the standpoint of impact aid referred to in this motion to recommit, none was requested by the administration. This committee added $58 billion to impact aid. There were no amendments in the committee to do otherwise.

On theater missile defense, we added to the request that was submitted by the administration. I might add parenthetically on the matter of theater missile defense, it is a very important priority of this committee. As a matter of fact, last year we added to theater missile defense over the request of the administration, and the administration proceeded to spread out that which was authorized and somebody had appropriated. This year again we have added a third of what the administration request was for theatre missile defense, and so we do not really need to have anything more added to it even for impact aid or missile defense.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. HUNTER], the chairman of our Subcommittee on Procurement.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, let me just reiterate the theme that the chairman just elaborated on is, I think, a very important one for all of the Members to understand, and that is that this should not be, this bill should not be, a competition between whether or not we are going to give a pay raise to the troops or we are going to have the right equipment for them to use in a military conflict. It should not be a conflict. It should not be either-or.

What we have done in this bill is come up with an additional funding that allows us to have a 3 percent pay raise, it allows us to give the $300 million that the Marines need in ammunition to be able to fight the two war scenario, it enables us to get the 96 million M-16 bullets that they were short under the administration's budget, it enables us to have the theater defense and to start on the national defense just like the one that we are giving the State of Israel.

It enables us to do all those things that are important in terms of being able to project American military power and carry out foreign policy.

This is a complete package, and the gentleman has done a superlative job in bringing this thing together on the committee level and bringing it to the floor.

Let us pass this bill. Vote "no" on the motion to recommit.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WELDON], the chairman of our Subcommittee on Research and Development.

(Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, this is an amazing motion. We heard one of our colleagues from Texas get up and say we need money for impact aid. I have his letter from April 10 asking us to put $58 million in the bill. That is what is in the bill.

What are we talking about?

Mr. Speaker, I have heard from the colleagues on the other side saying we are spending too much money on missile defense, we have too many programs, and we need more burden sharing. What do they want to do with the motion to recommit? They want to reestablish another missile defense program that we have eliminated, and they want to do it for Europe, not for the United States, even though France has opted out of the program.

Mr. Speaker, this is amazing, it is absolutely amazing. We have heard that we want to cut programs, we have done that. We heard we want to not fund our European allies, and we have done that. So here we are being asked to support a motion to recommit to reestablish another missile defense program to protect not the United States, but the Europeans, even though one of the four partners, France, decided to opt out.

It is amazing, and I urge our colleagues do the right thing. Vote "no" on the motion to recommit and support the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. YOUNG of Florida). Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule XV, the Chair announces that he will reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the period of time within which a vote by electronic device, if ordered, will be taken on the question of passage of the bill.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 185, nays 240, not voting 8, as follows:

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION ON THE BUDGET, FISCAL YEAR 1997

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of Tuesday, May 14, 1996 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the concurrent resolution, House Concurrent Resolution 178.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 178) establishing the congressional budget for the U.S. Government for fiscal year 1997 and setting forth appropriate budgetary levels for fiscal years 1998, 1999, 2000, 2001, and 2002, with Mr. CAMP in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House of Tuesday, May 14, 1996, the concurrent resolution is considered read the first time.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KASICH] and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. SABO] each will control 90 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KASICH].

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, for purposes of debate, I yield 11 minutes to my friend and the very distinguished gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. FRANKS].

Mr. SABO. Before my friend from New Jersey starts and lest I forget, I request unanimous consent that the last 30 minutes of debate on the minority side, which is allocated to the Joint Economic Committee, be controlled by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. McDERMOTT], and that he have the authority to yield time to other Members.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Chairman, the measure before us is not simply about thousands of individual numbers. It is not about economic assumptions. It is not about green eyeshades and sharp leaded pencils. Budgets are about people. Budgets are about ideas.

Mr. Chairman, the budget of the Federal Government speaks to who we are as a country. It looks at our hopes and our aspirations, our dreams. It looks at our challenges and our problems. It looks at our opportunities.

But no budget, Mr. Chairman, exists in a vacuum. A budget is developed against the backdrop of the environment that we find today. As family across this country are looking at their own economic circumstances, they are saying very clearly that America can and must do better. While the economy may be showing signs of improvement for some, many families are still struggling. Tens of thousands of workers continue to lose their jobs, many the victims of corporate downsizing.

In fact, between June of 1994 and June of 1995, fully half the major corporations in the United States eliminated jobs, less than a third of the workers who lost their full-time jobs found new jobs that paid as much money. On average, workers who lost their jobs had to settle for jobs that paid 8.2 percent less. And for dislocated workers between the ages of 45 and 55, their incomes declined by fully 14 percent. We have watched high-paying manufacturing jobs continue to disappear at an alarming rate. Between March of 1995 and March of this year, 326,000 manufacturing jobs were lost.

In the past 2 years, there has been a 10.2 percent increase in the number of Americans who hold two or more jobs. Today more people are working two jobs than at any time in our Nation's history.

Yet, despite working longer and harder than ever before, too many families feel as if they are not moving ahead. They are working harder merely to stay in place, and it is no wonder. The American family has seen no increase in their wages over the past 3½ years. Meanwhile, taxes are taking a bigger and bigger bite out of the family's annual income.

It is interesting to note that back in 1950, Federal taxes consumed just 5 percent of the average family's income. Today, 26 percent of a family's income goes just to pay for Federal taxes. Most families across the country, Mr. Chairman, remember that back in 1993, just 3 years ago, President Clinton raised their taxes, bringing the tax burden to its highest level in history. The Clinton tax package increased taxes on gasoline, increased taxes on individual incomes, increased taxes on married couples, increased taxes on Social Security benefits, increased taxes on inheritances. As a result, every family, every year, is seeing their tax bill escalate. Last year, the average family with a single wageearner took home $803 less in their paycheck than they did in 1992.

What does all this mean to our children as we look to the future? If we stay on the current path and we do not stop our deficit spending, a child born today will face a very bleak future. Seventeen years from today, when that child is prepared to graduate from high school, every tax dollar sent to Washington, DC, will be consumed by just five programs: Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, Federal employee retirement benefits, and the interest obligation on the national debt. That means that when that child gets ready to graduate and go to college, there will be no money available in the Federal budget to help with his college education, no money to keep his neighborhood safe from crime, no more Federal aid to build new roads or mass transit systems, and no money available to protect and defend our country. Over his working lifetime, that child will be paying off a huge debt, a debt he inherited from all of us. That child's lifetime obligation as his share of the interest payment on the national debt will be $18,000.

The fact is that America needs a budget that saves our children's future. Our children deserve a better and brighter future than this scenario. They deserve one filled with hope and opportunity and a chance to live out the American dream. Since the start of the Great Society programs in 1965, we have spent $5 trillion on a vast assortment of social spending programs. That is more than we spent to win World War II.

What has that enormous investment produced? The number of children living in households dependent on welfare has tripled, from 3.3 million to 9.6 million. There has been an explosion in the number of mothers, many of them children themselves, who are having children out of wedlock, a 326 percent increase over the last 30 years.

We need to make sure that Washington is there to lend a temporary hand in time of need, helping the people to get back on their feet again so they can lead independent, self-sufficient lives.

As we look ahead to the vast changes that await us in the twenty-first century, just around the corner, we must empower individuals to take advantage of new opportunities, and to do that, America needs a budget that empowers people to be self-reliant.

To accomplish that objective, we need a budget that reduces the power and influence of Washington over our everyday lives. In just 30 years, Government spending has exploded. The cost of running the Federal Government has moved from $134 billion a year to $1.5 trillion a year, and along with all this spending, we have created a wasteful and bloated bureaucracy. Every year that bureaucracy churns out thousands of pages of new rules and regulations that affect all aspects of our lives, from the food we eat to the car we drive to the houses we live in. And it is not just businesses that pay the price for all this Government red-tape. Families pay, and pay quite dearly.

Government regulations cost the average family $6,800 every year. Just think about how time-consuming and confusing it is to fill out your own income tax form. That is because the IRS has 480 different tax forms, and another 280 forms to tell you how to fill them out. It is no wonder it takes the average taxpayer over 12 years just to figure out their own taxes.

America needs a budget that lowers taxes and spends less of our hard-earned money. There is something fundamentally wrong when the average American family pays more on taxes, taxes to the Federal, the State and local governments, than they spend on food, clothing and shelter combined. The average worker spends 2 hours and 47 minutes out of his 8-hour workday just to pay his tax burden. Twenty years ago, that same worker was spending half that amount of time to meet his tax burden.

Mr. Chairman, our budget plan will help America to do better. It will end 30 years of reckless deficit spending. It will shift power, money, and influence out of Washington, DC, and give it back to the American people. It trusts our neighbors and our communities to develop thoughtful and compassionate solutions to today's problems.

This budget attacks waste and inefficiency, and by lowering taxes and reshaping our Federal Government, it will help American families to move ahead so they can earn more, keep more, and do more.

Mr. SABO. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, here we are again, a repeat of 1995. I represent a party that in 1993 produced real deficit reduction. We did not simply talk about it. We produced it, and the deficit has fallen in half.

We come today to face the question of how we continue to put our Federal fiscal house in order, but how to do it in a fashion that is fair and workable.

One of the most important programs that America passed some 30 years ago was Medicare, to assure that elderly Americans had adequate health care. I congratulate my Republican friends on finally making one change in your proposal. You have accepted the President's position that the base premium for part B Medicare should not exceed 25 percent of total cost, and I congratulate you on that change.

Unfortunately, as I look at the details of your program, however, I discover that while you appear to have been easing your Medicare cuts over the 6-year period before 2002, that in reality, at the end of that time, the provider cuts in the final year, 2002, will actually have to be deeper and make Medicare more vulnerable than was your program as it passed the Congress and was vetoed by the President. That is hardly progress, my friends.

We find throughout this budget a variety of sugar coating to make it look a little bit better than the radical agenda of 1995. But when we look at its long-term impact, we find that in many cases, it is as bad or worse than what the President fortunately had to veto. And Medicare is one of those cases. The cuts, let me say again, to that program in 2002 under your program of today, they are going to have to be deeper than the cuts that you were proposing just a few months ago that the President, fortunately, vetoed.

We will have some more to say on that subject, much more, as we discover that your budget of 1996 is just simply a repeat of the unfortunate program of 1995.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to my good friend, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. PAYNE].

Mr. PAYNE of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank my colleague from Minnesota for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Republican budget resolution and in strong support of the Democratic substitute offered by the conservative Democratic coalition. The people back home who are listening to this debate will hear echoed many of the same themes we debated in last year's budget debate. But while the Republican budget resolution has come closer to the coalition substitute in terms of numbers, it still represents a political philosophy that does not reflect the views of the American people, and one that will hurt our economy and our citizens. Because the Republicans insist on borrowing $122 billion to pay for a tax cut, their resolution achieves $142 billion less in deficit reduction than does the coalition budget.

As it did last year, the coalition substitute still represents an honest path to a balanced budget, that protects both the middle class and our most vulnerable, and nowhere is this more true than in the Medicare Program.

Last year the Republicans proposed over $28 billion in Medicare spending reductions. This year, they are down to $16 billion. Last year the President proposed $98 billion in spending reductions, and this year he proposes $124 billion. So both sides have made substantial and significant progress forward toward a centrist compromise toward the coalition's budget. But yet while the numbers are moving closer, serious and substantive differences remain. Republicans have backed away from their radical cuts, but they have not backed away entirely from their radical policies.

The Republican plan turns Medicare managed care into a voucher program and forces seniors to pay the difference. The coalition plan prohibits from charging extra and protects seniors from unscrupulous and unfair billing.

The Republican plan spends $4.6 billion, over $7,000 a person, on medical savings accounts, at a time when the trust fund's solvency is in jeopardy. The coalition plan handles MSA's in a prudent and thoughtful way by having a test program, a demonstration project.

The Republicans spend $4.6 billion on medical savings accounts, but not one penny on preventive benefits. The coalition Medicare package spends $2 billion on benefits for prostate and colon cancer screening, mammographies and pap smears, and diabetes self-testing equipment, a preventive benefit that will save over $100 million a year for the Medicare Program when it is fully implemented.

The Republican budget cuts $123 billion from hospitals, home health agencies, and skilled nursing facilities. Under this new baseline, these cuts are even larger than those proposed by the Republicans last year, and they will devastate health care in rural areas such as mine.

The Republican Medicare plan represents the majority's misplaced priorities. It benefits some of those who manage the care, but it harms many of those who receive the care. In doing so, it cuts $22 billion more from Medicare than does the coalition's bill.

The coalition's Medicare policy represents sensible middle ground, without gimmicks, without surprises, or without reversals in policy.

I urge my colleagues to support our Medicare reform package and to support the coalition's budget resolution and to vote against this Republican budget resolution.

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Arizona [Mr. HAYWORTH].

(Mr. HAYWORTH asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HAYWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I thank my good friend from New Jersey for yielding the time. I listened with interest to the comments of the ranking member of the Committee on the Budget and to the comments of my good friend from Virginia. It is not my intent to indulge in venom or vitriol this afternoon, but, instead, I think it is a time for truth.

The gentleman from Minnesota seems to be saying, "Well, you have almost learned your lesson, new majority." Therein lies the most clear difference between the two overwhelming philosophies, for those who champion the Washington bureaucracy and the Washington approach as knowing all and knowing best put their faith in that bureaucracy instead of putting their faith in the people of America.

Those of us in the new majority put our faith in the American people, not the Washington bureaucracy.

And this, Mr. Chairman, is what is truly radical, this fact, this piece of truth: That the average person pays more in taxes and the average family pays more in taxes today than it pays in food, clothing and shelter combined. That is a fact.

It is time for truth, and the truth is the largest tax increase in American history, and this is a fact that my friend from Virginia, who champions deficit reduction, gets away from. The fact is the Clinton budget and the Clinton tax increase costs every household in America $2,600 in additional taxes. We can do better.

My friend from New Jersey brought this check up. We do not need the fictional Baby Jane Doe. I can put a real name there, John Mica Hayworth, who is now 2 years of age. If we fail to resolve these problems, if we fail to live within our means, John Mica Hayworth will pay in interest on the debt over $185,000 in his lifetime. That is unconscionable.

This budget dispute is not about numbers, it is about flesh and blood and the future, and despite the rhetoric and the playground taunts, the fact is we can do better for today's seniors, for the youngsters of today, for generations yet unborn.

Say no to the Clinton crunch, yes to our new budget and yes to a new plan for the future.

Mr. SABO. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute to simply say that was about the most inaccurate description of what has happened I have seen.

The fact is the bulk of the new revenues last year applied to changes in the income Tax Code for people with taxable incomes of over $140,000, which means they have close to a gross income of $200,000. The surcharge applies to incomes over $250,000, probably gross taxable income over $250,000, gross income of $300,000 or more.

I have to indicate also to the gentleman that the numbers he is using on this chart of average taxes assumes or averages in the Ross Perots with the rest of everyone. That is clearly inaccurate. It assumes that the cost of shelter is only 15 percent, and all of a sudden here a while ago, in the housing bill, the gentleman was trying to increase rents to over 30 percent of income for people in low-income housing. Grossly inaccurate.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to my friend, the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. CARDIN].

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank my friend, the gentleman from Minnesota, Mr. SABO, for yielding me this time, and really congratulate Mr. SABO for working with Members on both sides of the aisle, Democrats and Republicans, people of different persuasions, to try to get us together on a budget that will balance the Federal budget by the year 2002.

I thought we were making progress and I thought Mr. SABO had done a great job in bringing us closer together as we ended 1995. Unfortunately, as I look at the Republican budget that is being brought up under this resolution, it seems like we are no further together than we were a year ago. That is very unfortunate. A missed opportunity. The budget should speak to the framework on which we want to see the priorities of this Nation, on raising revenues and on spending priorities.

Let me just talk, if I might, in the few minutes I have, on Medicare, one part of that budget. The Medicare proposal in the Republican budget will cost my seniors more, they are going to receive less care, and it seriously jeopardizes the quality of our Medicare system.

Last year the Republicans suggested cutting $270 billion from the Medicare system in order to finance $245 billion of tax breaks. Well, we are not dealing with a 6-year budget rather than a 7-year budget, so this year the cut in Medicare is $168 billion, the tax breaks of $122 billion going basically to wealthier people.

That is not what our seniors want. That is wrong. Instead, we should be looking at ways of preserving the Medicare system, which the Republicans talk about, but by their own admission they do nothing on the long-term solvency of the Medicare system and a large part of their savings do not go into the Medicare Part A Program.

We talk about giving our seniors more choice, and they do if a person happens to be wealthy or healthy, under the Republican program. But the vast majority of my seniors do not fall into that category. They will not be able to choose a health care plan that will cover their needs.

The Republican proposal removes the protections in Medicare about the plans charging more or the doctors charging more. Sure, if an individual is wealthy they can afford that extra money, but if they are of modest income, as most seniors are, they cannot and they will be forced into a plan where they do not have choice.

We talk about people going into a private plan and returning the Medicare but we offer no protection on their Medigap plans. Most seniors rely on Medigap, and yet the Republicans have removed that from their proposal.

We do have a choice. We do have a choice in order to preserve the Medicare system. We can vote for the President's budget, we can vote for the Congressional Black Caucus' budget. I favor the coalition budget because it is a responsible way to bring down the cost of Medicare without robbing our seniors to pay for tax breaks for wealthy people. It also preserves the quality of our Medicare system.

I urge my colleagues to reject the Republican proposal and support the coalition budget.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes and 15 seconds to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. HAYWORTH] and ask the gentleman if he will yield to me.

Mr. HAYWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I gladly yield to my friend, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KASICH], the chairman of the Committee on the Budget.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, for those folks that are watching this debate, what the last speaker said is just so far from being accurate it almost ought to be on the Tonight Show in the opening dialog.

I think we ought to stop scaring our senior citizens, our most vulnerable people. We have massive increases in Medicare spending, the program will be enhanced, preserved and improved, and I just really wish that these scare tactics would come to an end.

The President blamed it on the press. He said, "The press made me do it," and I think he may be getting around to the point where he is going to stop, and maybe the rest of the people scaring the seniors ought to stop as well.

Mr. HAYWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I thank my friend and colleague from Ohio. It would be laughable if it were not so tragic.

My colleague from Maryland speaks of a missed opportunity. It is a missed opportunity when we fail to allow the American people to hang on to more of their hard-earned money and send less of it here to Washington, DC. That is tragic.

It is a missed opportunity when a Medicare trust fund under this administration is already $4 billion in arrears, instead of moving to solve the problem by allowing seniors the chance and the opportunity they have at every other phase of life to make their own choices, somehow try to lock them into a government bureaucracy.

Again, Mr. Chairman, it comes down to this question: Who should we trust? Should we place more trust in the hands of the Washington bureaucrats, who in the wake of that largest tax increase in American history have only delivered 49 percent of the revenues this tax increase was supposed to bring in, in our breakneck pace of spending; or do we trust the American people to make the right choices for their families and their futures?

We can play scare games all day, but in the final analysis, Mr. Chairman, we must stand at the bar of history with the American people as our judge; and, as for me and the new majority, we stand firmly in the column of the American people. We reject the outmoded notions that Washington knows best. Join us, save this country.

Mr. SABO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to my good friend the gentleman from Washington [Mr. McDERMOTT].

(Mr. McDERMOTT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. McDERMOTT. Mr. Chairman, I listen to this and I think that anybody who is watching it or listening to it in their office would ask themselves, who should I believe?

Now, the last Speaker got up here and said that we ought to stop scaring the seniors. I agree with that. It was the Republican proposal that scared the seniors in the first instance. And for those individuals who know who Yogi Berra is, Yogi Berra once said, when asked about a particular event, it is kind of deja vu all over again. What we are seeing today is the same plan they rolled out here last year. They did not change anything.

Oh, they have tinkered with it a little bit. They said they are not going to fool with the senior citizens premiums. They are not going to raise it up to 31 percent; they are going to hold it at 25 percent.

Now, of course that is the House. Now, we all know it will pass out of the House and go over to the Senate. Is there any agreement with the Senate on that; does anybody know? No, there is no agreement. This is a House proposal, and we will get the same wrangle and, just watch, we will get the same jerking around.

Now, instead of the part B premiums, the House GOP is going to cut hospitals because they do not want to cut doctors. The part B, as my colleagues know, pays for the doctor bills, and they do not want to cut doctors because they made a deal with them. They said, "If you will support our plan, we will give you a couple of things, and one of them is balance billing."

Now, remember the history of balance billing. Back in 1985 we said that doctors had to accept what Medicare paid when it paid a senior citizen's bill. The doctor could not balance bill. For almost 11 years they have not been able to balance bill. But the Republicans said to the doctors, "Look, if you will support our plans to cut the daylights out of Medicare, we will let you balance bill." So whatever Medicare pays, senior citizens can expect that the doctors will pile on an additional balance bill on top of that.

Now, in addition to that, we have to remember that the Speaker said, public statement, that he expects the traditional Medicare plan to wither on the vine. Now, how do they expect to cause this withering on the vine? The traditional plan that most people are in, they simply are not going to give the kind of increases that will make it possible for doctors to stay in that, so doctors will say, we do not want any seniors, and the only place a senior will be able to get their health care is to go into a managed care plan.

Now, by doing that, that means they will have moved all senior citizens into managed care and they simply are going to squeeze people down. It is very clear the plan the laid out. It is going to cost seniors $1,000 more a year by the year 2002.

Mr. Chairman, this is the kind of scaring that has gone on. It ought to stop. This same plan is being rolled out here again, and this should be enough in itself to defeat this budget resolution.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes and 15 seconds to the gentlewoman from Washington [Ms. DUNN], and ask if the gentlewoman will yield to me.

Ms. DUNN of Washington. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, let me just say, you can fool some of the seniors some of the time but not all of the seniors all of the time.

This trust fund is on the road toward bankruptcy. Our program is designed to significantly increase the amount of dollars in Medicare and to guarantee that this fund will be solvent well into the next century so our senior citizens can have a very viable program.

Ms. DUNN of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I want to switch the discussion to welfare, because welfare reform is included in this balanced budget resolution.

During the past 30 years, the Federal Government has spent more than $5 trillion on welfare programs intended to alleviate poverty, but the problem is getting worse, not better. The system is getting more and more cruel. Today one American child in seven is raised on welfare. That is what this budget debate is all about: the children and their families. The current welfare system encourages a life of dependency and weak families, and that has a devastatingly negative effect on a child's development.

Every one of us feels sick when we read in the paper, we see on television the real life stories of how the current welfare system has failed. Think of this: 19 children found together in a cold, dark Chicago apartment. Police found them sharing a bone with the family dog for food. Or the Boston family that has 14 out of its 17 adult children now living on welfare, right now, and receiving close to $1 million a year from taxpayers.

Our solutions are focused on promoting families and work, moving families into the work force and off welfare is the only way to break this cycle of dependency. Most Americans on welfare want to work, but, sadly, our Government offers them a better short-run deal to stay dependent.

To make our approach work, the amount of time someone stays on welfare must be limited. Our bill does that. The President says he supports a 5-year time limit on cash welfare benefits, but he includes so many exemptions that the current welfare system would no be significantly changed. Furthermore, under the President's plan, recipients are guaranteed noncash benefits forever.

We understand that families, especially mothers, need a helping hand in moving from welfare to work. That is why we provide over $6 billion in additional child care assistance over what is currently contained in the current welfare system. This gives parents the peace of mind to go off welfare into the work force.

We also understand that children are hurt when our system fails so pitifully in enforcing court-ordered child support. Right now today, $34 billion are owed in court-ordered child support not being paid to custodial parents from these children's own parents. Our program finds a way to locate those dollars, especially those deadbeat parents who move out of the State to avoid supporting their flesh and blood children.

Mr. Chairman, what is at stake is real welfare reform. Imagine what our country will look like in 5 years if we do not pass it. The system continues to hold millions of poor families in its grip. The problem is not the people who are involved. The problem is the failed process. The President recently asked for a welfare bill with personal responsibility, work and family. We give it to him. Sign this balanced budget proposal, Mr. President.

Mr. SABO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the hard-working gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PALLONE], a real knowledgeable Member on health care.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Chairman, I just want to say the seniors in this country are scared and they have reason to be because of these Republican proposals on Medicare. There is no question in my mind what is going on here again is the same thing that we saw last year. That is that senior citizens are being made to pay for the cuts that are being proposed in this budget and that Medicare is taking a bigger hit, almost as big a hit as it did last year, and all to pay for tax breaks essentially for wealthy Americans.

Now why should a senior citizen be scared? They should be scared because when the Medicare program was established in 1963, they were basically told that they were going to have at least three things: One, they were told they were going to have an unlimited choice of doctors and hospitals. Medicare would reimburse for that. Second, they were told that they would have protection against having to pay a lot of money out of their pocket. Right now it is limited to 15 percent. And then they were told they would have guaranteed coverage of all Medicare benefits for the premium that was established by law.

All these things are at risk in this Republican budget today. First of all, because of the reimbursement rate, the fact of the matter is that seniors will be pushed into HMO's or managed care. They will not have their choice of doctors and hospitals.

Secondly, the protections against balanced billing are eliminated. The doctors, if you stay in the traditional Medicare program, can charge anything beyond the 15 percent that is provided under current law. So more money out of pocket means you do not have the health care if you cannot afford it.

Lastly, with the MSA's, with the medical savings accounts, basically seniors are going to be encouraged to go into this two-tiered system where they have only catastrophic coverage, and they have to pay out of pocket for anything short of a catastrophic health care. So why should not senior citizens be scared?

All the basic tenets, if you will, of the Medicare program are at risk under the Republican budget. They do not know for sure if they can have their doctor anymore. They could very easily have to pay a lot more out of their pocket for going to a doctor or other Medicare or other health care expenses, and they do not even know if they choose an MSA that they will be able to have a lot of the services that Medicare now provides.

I would be scared. They should be scared because of what the Republicans are doing here today.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 20 seconds.

Of course the gentleman obviously has not read our program because our program would give senior citizens more choice. In fact, most senior citizens would love to be in the Arizona plan which offers them prescription drugs, eyeglass coverage with no charge, no part B premium and no deductibles. We want to give senior citizens more choice. In that system they would not have more copayments and in fact get to choose whatever kind of system they want.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SANFORD].

Mr. SANFORD. Mr. Chairman, it is interesting that if one looks at the polls today, for the first time in American history when folks were asked: do you think your children will do better off or worse off than you did, they are answering "worse off." That is the absolute opposite of the American dream, because the American dream is built on the idea that I did this well, my father did a little bit poorer than that, and my children are going to be doing better than that.

One cannot build a civilization, one cannot build a country around the idea that my children are going to do worse off than I did. So I think at the core of this debate and the core of this budget, what we are really talking about is the American dream.

Mr. Chairman, I would say second what those polls show is that Americans at the gut level understand what history has well documented over the course of time. Rome fell in 476 after controlling essentially the entire known world. The Byzantine empire, the Italian renaissance came to an end, the Spanish empire came to an end, the Dutch empire came to an end, the Ottoman empire came to an end. A host of civilizations came to an end because everyone of them reached a crossroads wherein they had to decide: Do we go back to what made us competitive and a world power in the first place, or we stay on this cozy but ultimately unsustainable cycle of upward government spending and upward government taxation?

We are at that same crossroads today. A child born into America today will pay an 82-percent tax rate if we stay on the course we are on. That either means economic enslavement or it means a collapse of the financial system as we know it. It took every single personal income tax return filed west of the Mississippi River simply to pay for the interest on the national debt. A child born in America, as you saw by the check earlier, will pay $187,000 in taxes on their share of interest on the national debt if we stay on the course we are on. So we are at that crossroads.

I think what this budget does is point us at the right fork in the road, because it begins to move decisions back to people in their local communities, in their local towns, and in so doing restores the American dream, and I think has a lot to do with saving the civilization.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3 minutes.

(Ms. SLAUGHTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to express my strong opposition to the Republican budget resolution and to advise my colleagues to carefully consider the implications of this budget on domestic discretionary spending. My colleagues need to understand there is simply no growth in this budget for important programs. Defense is the only area where they have proposed real growth. It makes no investment in safe highways, airline traffic safety, safe streets, safe schools, education, health care, public safety, clean water, clean air, research and development, business development, and transportation. The tough choices we made in 1990 and 1993 controlled the growth in discretionary spending. The caps have worked and we have the discipline to control future discretionary spending. There is simply no justification for further assaults on critical domestic programs. It is also difficult to understand how my Republican colleagues could propose slowing the growth in domestic discretionary spending to such low levels that by the year 2002, the purchasing power of overall nondefense discretionary appropriations will be 26 percent below this year's level. At the same time that they plan on eliminating any real investment in our economic security, they are proposing $13 billion more for defense than requested by the Pentagon.

Let me remind my colleagues again, that these cuts are in the most basic programs. Education, environmental protection, medical research, Head Start, civilian research and development, nutritional assistance, transportation, and criminal justice. All of these programs, regardless of what you may hear will be adversely affected if we enact the domestic discretionary level proposed in the Republican budget resolution.

In addition to the funding levels proposed, my Republican colleagues are also proposing some significant changes and eliminations. Included in this budget resolution is an assumption that 25 important educational programs will be block granted; the Governors will get to decide how to spend this money. While I have yet to see the list of these 25 programs, I can tell you that in some cases, the States will not act to serve vulnerable populations of children. It was because of the refusal of the States to address the unique educational needs of homeless children that I worked to create the Homeless Education Program. States and local governments simply did not reach out to these children and I can assure my Republican friends that under the block grant proposal, homeless children will be denied basic educational services.

Once again the Republicans are proposing to dismantle the one agency whose mission is job development and growth. Did we learn nothing from last year's budget battle. We need a strong and effective Department of Commerce. The late Secretary Brown accomplished this objective and I am fully confident that Secretary Kantor will meet the same challenge.

This Republican budget resolution also proposes the elimination of the Legal Services Corporation. Guaranteeing the basic protection of a citizen's constitutional rights is one of our responsibilities as Members of Congress. We take an oath to protect and defend the Constitution. Shouldn't we be concerned about guaranteeing every citizen, regardless of their income, the right to due process and the right of fair and just representation? Apparently only those who have the ability to pay are allowed adequate legal counsel.

I am gravely concerned about the direction of this country as we enter the next century and firmly believe that this budget will not guarantee that we are prepared to meet the challenges. I urge my colleagues to vote no on the Republican budget resolution. We can balance the budget without jeopardizing our economic future.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from the State of Oklahoma [Mr. WATTS].

Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, there was a cultist popular humanistic theme in the 1960's that said "God is dead." I am afraid that many of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle decided that they were left in charge, and what they did was drive us into the ever-deepening quicksand of more and more Government spending without results.

Our budget resolution offers more savings so that Americans can ultimately keep more of what they earn and they can decide what is best for them, not the Government. Bottom line, in our budget we trust the American people. In their budget, they do not.

Do I hate my Government? No. I just believe that we can do better for this country and for our kids, our grandkids, working families, and seniors. We can do better than $200 plus billion annual deficits, a $5 trillion national debt. I think we can do better than an anemic welfare system that penalizes mothers for saving money and penalizes them for wanting to marry the father of their children.

Mr. Chairman, I believe we can do better by saving Medicare from bankruptcy. In this country, we expect the best from our high school, our college, and our professional athletic teams. Why should we not expect the same from our Government? We are the greatest, freest, wealthiest country in the world. I believe we can do better and we should as Americans. Red, yellow, black, and white, we should demand the best from our Government, and our budget starts us in that direction.

Am I an optimist? I am reminded of the guy who defined an optimist as going after Moby Dick in a rowboat and taking the tartar sauce with him. Am I an optimist? You bet I am. I do believe we can do better by trusting the American people and figuring out the right answers for this time in our Government.

I believe that our budget resolution starts us in that direction. Our budget gets us another year down the road of accomplishing a balanced budget in the next 6 years. If we balance the budget, it opens the gateway to the future for our kids and our grandkids. If we do not, we can only look forward to more financial despair and burdens on families, a bankrupt Medicare system and keeping the caged eagles in the poor community locked up just waiting to soar.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to open the gateway to the future for our kids and our grandkids by voting for this budget resolution. Trust the American people.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. COYNE].

(Mr. COYNE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COYNE. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to point out the many deficiencies in the Republican budget resolution.

The Republican budget is fundamentally flawed. It places the burden of deficit reduction on health care, education, environmental, infrastructure, and safety net programs while leaving defense spending and corporate welfare virtually untouched. It still provides a substantial tax cut at a time when the Federal Government is running a sizable deficit. Defense spending is actually increased in this budget while critical domestic needs are ignored. Finally, the Republican budget puts a whole new spin on redistribution by increasing the burden on low- and moderate-income Americans and reducing the burden on the well-to-do; the Republican budget, for example, provides a child tax credit for middle- and upper-class families while cutting earned income tax credit assistance to low- and moderate-income households.

The Republican budget also resurrects a number of policies discussed last year. It eliminates the Commerce Department, the Energy Department, AmeriCorps, the National Endowment for the Arts [NEA], the National Endowment for the Humanities [NEH], the Legal Services Corporation, and the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health, just to name a few. These agencies provide valuable services to the people of this country. The proposals to eliminate them are short-sighted efforts to pander to the public perception that all government is bad. If you doubt that this is the case, then ask yourself why many of the functions, operations, and even the staff of the Departments of Energy and Commerce will merely be shifted to other agencies, much like the transfer of the Interstate Commerce Commission's responsibilities and staff to the Department of Transportation last year.

In addition, the Republican budget would provide more than $2 billion less than the President's budget on crime-fighting programs. It is inconsistent to enact tough anticrime measures on the one hand and then deny law enforcement officials the resources that they need to carry out those measures on the other.

One of the most important investments the Federal Government can make is its investment in its human capital. And yet, the Republican budget would freeze Federal funding for job training programs at roughly 60 percent of the 1995 appropriations level for these programs. It would reduce funding for the Job Corps by nearly 10 percent as well. And it would eliminate AmeriCorps and the Direct Student Loan Program.

Despite the strong public reaction to the Republicans' antienvironment initiatives last year, the Republican budget resolution would once again undermine Federal efforts to protect the environment and improve public health. It would cut the EPA's operating budget by 11 percent for fiscal year 1997. Cuts of this magnitude would damage the agency's ability to enforce existing environmental statutes. It would also eliminate EPA programs to develop advanced environmental technologies. This budget would also phase out energy conservation programs, renewable energy research, and fossil energy research and development. Such policies are incredibly short-sighted.

One of the functions most dramatically reduced under the Republican budget proposal is community development. Funding for programs like the Community Development Block Grant Program would be reduced from $11 billion in 1996 to $6 billion in 2002. The Economic Development Administration would be eliminated altogether.

Such cuts would devastate communities like Pittsburgh. Federal community development funding leverages billions of State, local, and private sector dollars into important development and revitalization efforts. Without this Federal seed money, many communities across the country will be at a loss to address many critical community needs.

American workers are also adversely affected. The Republican budget would reduce funding for programs like OSHA that ensure workplace safety. It would eliminate the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health [NIOSH], the only Government agency that conducts research on workplace injuries. It would repeal the Davis-Bacon Act and the Service Contract Act, legislation that guarantees that employees of Federal contractors are paid locally prevailing wages for their work. And it would extract another $9.4 billion in savings from Federal civilian and military retirees, the same people who have been called upon again and again in recent years to bear a disproportionate share of the burden of balancing the budget.

The Republican budget assumes dramatic changes in Federal housing assistance programs as well. While these programs are in need of reform, current funding for these programs falls far short of meeting the need for affordable housing in this country. The Republicans would reduce spending on housing assistance from the current level of services by roughly $20 billion over the next six years.

The Republican budget would also make dramatic changes in important Federal transportation programs as well. The local matching rate for transit capital grants would be increased to 50 percent. Transit operating assistance would be phased out. And mass transit new starts would be eliminated. Research and development of advanced high speed rail would be eliminated as well. In total, transit funding would be reduced below a freeze level by more than $6.5 billion over the next six years. This policy shift would have a devastating impact on congestion, energy consumption, economic growth, and air quality in many of our urban areas.

The Republican budget would eliminate or dramatically reduce technology transfer programs like the Advanced Technology Program and the Manufacturing Extension Partnership Program, programs that provide valuable technical assistance to small manufacturers across the country and promote the development of advanced technology and innovative products. These programs help American businesses compete with foreign manufacturers. They produce an incredible return on the Federal Government's modest investment.

The Republican budget still makes dramatic changes in the Medicare and Medicaid Programs. The proposed savings are large enough to devastate these critical health care programs. It is interesting to note that the difference in Medicare savings from last year's budget resolution to this year's is roughly the same size as the reduction in the size of the tax cut that the Republicans are proposing. That would suggest to me that the Medicare savings in this budget are motivated by the Republican tax cut package, and not by concern over the future of the Medicare Program. Regardless of the motivation, it should be clear to all Americans that attempting to save $168 billion from Medicare over the next 6 years is simply irresponsible, as is the plan's reliance on medical savings accounts to cut costs and impose fiscal discipline on Medicare beneficiaries and providers.

The Republican plan would also adversely affect Medicaid beneficiaries as well. The Republican's budget resolution would garner substantial savings, $72 billion, from Medicaid by converting it to a block grant, and it would eliminate the current guarantee of health care coverage for 2.5 million low-income children between the ages of 13 and 18.

Finally, the Republican budget would pull a number of additional threads from the already fraying Federal safety net. The Republican budget would make $53 billion in savings in programs like AFDC, food stamps, and SSI, primarily by eliminating the Federal guarantee of assistance for the needy and converting them to block grants.

Where does that leave us? With a Republican budget resolution that is fundamentally flawed. I voted against this resolution when it was considered by the House Budget Committee, and I shall vote against it when it is considered by the full House.

Any of the Democratic alternatives would be preferable. The President's budget is a responsible attempt to balance serious deficit reduction with important investments in our future and the need to preserve Federal safety net programs, although I believe that it would be better to balance the budget before we cut taxes substantially. The coalition budget also deserves credit for its commitment to deficit reduction, although I also have concerns about some of the provisions it contains. I believe, however, that the Progressive Caucus-Congressional Black Caucus budget proposal provides the Federal budget strategy that best addresses the needs of this Nation over the next 6 years. This budget substitute balances the budget, invests in our communities and our human capital, and even expands Federal safety net programs. It does so by reducing defense spending to a level commensurate with the reduced military threat we face with the end of the cold war, and by eliminating corporate subsidies and tax breaks that are wasteful and inefficient.

Consequently, I urge my colleagues to reject this improvident budget resolution and to adopt the Progressive Caucus-Congressional Black Caucus budget.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from the city of Cincinnati, OH [Mr. PORTMAN].

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Chairman, I just want to say I support this budget without reservation. It is a great budget for all the reasons we have heard up here today.

I have got three kids at home. It is about the kids, it is about the next generation. We do not want to leave them with this crushing debt, now $5 trillion. We do not want to increase their taxes to the extent we would have to in order to service that debt. We want them to have a shot at the American dream.

So this budget is at least one important step toward getting that budget under control and to get it into balance in 6 years.

But let me mention something else, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KASICH] talks about it a lot. Forget the numbers. This is also about shifting power and responsibility and authority and money out of this city, out of Washington and back to our States, back to our local communities and back to people, and that is very important, and it is a big distinction between the way we have been going and the way we like to go.

For 40 years we have increasingly aggregated that power and authority here in Washington. This budget is all about getting it out. Medicaid is a good example of that. Education is a good example of that. Welfare is a great example of that. Let me give my colleagues one example in Ohio.

For years Ohio tried to get a waiver to be able to do something innovative and creative in the area of welfare to try to help people actually move from welfare rolls to payrolls. Finally we got some of the waivers. We were able, in the last 3 years, to reduce our welfare rolls in Ohio by 23 percent. We could do twice that well, maybe three times that well, if we could get real flexibility that is in this budget proposal in the area of welfare reform.

Let us trust the people that sent us here. Let us do this budget because it is the right thing to do for our kids, to get our fiscal house in order, but also let us do it because it is time to start moving some of the power and authority out of Washington where it is increasingly aggregated and reverse that trend. This is one small step and an important step toward doing that.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM].

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Chairman, there are two budgets; no, there are four budgets being considered tomorrow. The one that I support borrows $137 billion less than the majority budget. I listened to a lot of speeches today, and I do not understand how anyone can propose that borrowing $137 billion more is going to make good economic sense.

We are talking about spending cuts. I hope my colleagues from rural America take a good hard look at our colleagues' budget. Cutting 46 percent more out of the agriculture discretionary function over the next 6 years does not make good economic sense by anybody's standards. Cutting 13 percent from research extension this year, 1997, does not make good sense. Whoever proposed that, I do not understand how they could possibly come up with that.

The idea that there is that much more overhead down at USDA completely ignores the fact that we have spent the last 3 years reorganizing the U.S. Department of Agriculture. We have cut $4.2 billion from that overhead. Now to come in and say we are going to take another $695 million because somebody keeps saying there is unnecessary bureaucratic overhead downtown, they are not looking at what has already been done over the last 3 years in the current administration, and they are truly going to do irreparable harm to agriculture, rural health.

Eliminating the office of rural health in the block grant program that has allowed rural hospitals who have been struggling to just keep their doors open, the success of that program, to suggest that is going to be eliminated does not make sense.

So, a lot of cuts. Yes, we need to cut; yes, we need to make decisions along these lines. But I would say take a good hard look at rural health, and that also includes urban health because what I say about rural health applies exactly the same way to the inner cities, and there are being many decisions made in this budget in the name of cutting the bureaucracy that are going to have the opposite effect. They are going to have a devastating effect on the food supply of this Nation some day.

Mr. Chairman, as Representative for the very rural 17th District of Texas, as a founding member and former cochairman of the House Rural Health Care Coalition, and as a 16-year veteran on the House Agriculture Committee, I find the degree to which this budget resolution assaults rural America truly stunning and enormously disturbing. In the past, rural Members, which of course can be found in both parties, have always managed to put aside partisanship in rural issues for one fundamental reason: An overriding worry about the potential loss of access to quality health care, loss of business, and ultimately, loss of economic viability in rural areas.

The programs and offices which this budget targets for elimination in the health function are the very programs and offices originated by the bipartisan Rural Health Care Coalition. I realize that constituents of urban Members do not worry about whether there is going to be a doctor to deliver their babies, an emergency room to treat the tractor accidents, a nurse to treat daily illnesses. But these are things my constituents do worry about. The programs targeted by this budget certainly do not respond to all of those needs by themselves but the programs and their coordination play a vital role at the edges.

The assault on agriculture is even more remarkable, with total agricultural discretionary spending cut a staggering 46 percent from 1997 to 2002. I understand Republicans think that this nearly 50 percent reduction will come from overhead, which I find particularly interesting since the Agriculture Department has just completed a major reorganization and downsizing. Since most of those cuts are unspecified, it's hard to know whether they will be taken from the hide of research and extension programs, conservation programs, or nutrition and safety programs. What is clear, however, is that with the Ag discretionary budget virtually cut in half, the impact will be felt in each and every function of the USDA. And that means the impact will be felt in each and every rural community.

I find it hard to believe that my many friends across the aisle who serve with me on the Agriculture Committee or on the Rural Health Care Coalition have focused on the aspect of the majority's budget. I have little doubt, though, that as these numbers are implemented into policies and as constituents across the country notify their Representatives of their concerns, my friends will become as alarmed about the impact of this budget on the future of rural America as I am today.

Mr. Chairman, for this and other reasons, I urge a "no" vote on the Republican budget and a "yea" vote for the coalition substitute which approaches a balanced budget in a far more humane and reasonable manner.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

I dearly love my colleague from Texas, but as my colleagues know, talk about a vain effort, I mean there is no one that I have yet met outside of the beltway who thinks that we have cut bureaucracy and redtape and travel expenses and supplies and equipment enough in any, virtually any, piece of this Federal Government.

This Republican majority believes that there is tons of money available in the travel allowance, the supply allowance, the equipment allowance of virtually every single department, bureau and agency of this Government, and frankly, I do not even think we started to downsize and save money.

So we are after the overhead accounts of everything in this Federal Government, and I have not yet gone home and had one taxpaying citizen say to me, "You have really cut the bureaucratic overhead too much in Washington." Not one single person has told me, and I think we are absolutely on the right track.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from the State of Arizona [Mr. KOLBE].

(Mr. KOLBE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Chairman, at the outset of this debate, the gentleman from New Jersey laid out the case very eloquently for this budget. A budget is not really about numbers. It is not about whether we spend $1,500 billion on the Federal Government or $1,600 billion. It is not even about whether we cut a program, whether we increase a program, whether we add a program, or whether we eliminate a program.

No, Mr. Chairman, a budget is an opportunity for this body and for our political parties to make a philosophical statement about the direction we believe this country should be going. It is an opportunity for us to say something about where we think our future is. It is an opportunity for each party in Congress to set forth its vision, its vision for America, its hopes, its dreams for our future and for our children's future.

Mr. Chairman, our budget makes such a statement. It says very clearly what we believe the National Government's priorities should be. It insists that we should decide what this Government can do, what it must do, and what it should do. It says that we should reduce the burden on our children, the burden that a new child born today in this country, assumes upon his or her birth. That burden is a burden of $188,000 just to pay the interest on the national debt.

Our budget says we believe other levels of government, the private sector, and nongovernmental organizations, can perform government functions better than Washington can. We say this about education, we say this about some aspects of welfare, about some aspects of health care, we say it about such things as economic development. And, yes, most importantly, it says that we believe the burden of taxes on American citizens should be reduced. Our budget would reduce the burden of taxes on American citizens.

The gentleman from Texas talked about having to borrow more money. But we reach a balanced budget as soon as any of our other budgets that are proposed. What we do differently is leave some of the money in people's pockets, leave money in the pockets of American citizens so they can decide how to spend the money on their health care, on their education, on their schooling, on their housing, on all the needs that they have. We do this because we believe that Americans who work hard and earn it should keep it.

That is what this budget is about; that is the statement this budget makes. I urge my colleagues to support it.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN].

(Mr. BROWN of California asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the budget resolution before us and I would like to comment on the treatment of research and development therein.

Last year, the Republican budget resolution initiated an all-out ideological and budgetary attack on our Nation's R&D establishment. That resolution proposed a reduction in civilian R&D by over 30 percent in real terms by the year 2002. Moreover, the detailed but misguided assumptions imbedded in the House version of the resolution report language became an iron-clad mandate for the Committee on Science and we were forced to follow its every detail in the authorization bills that were reported out. This budget resolution renews the attack.

Overall, this budget resolution cuts the nonhealth civilian science agencies by over $3 billion below the President's request just for fiscal year 1997. Over the entire 6-year period, this resolution cuts over $15 billion from the President's request. In inflation adjusted terms, our science investment will be cut by over 25 percent by the year 2002.

These cuts come on top of extraordinary efforts on the part of the administration to identify cost savings in all of the science oriented Federal agencies. NASA, NSF, NOAA, DOE, EPA and other agencies have dramatically downsized over the past 2 years. They have eliminated thousands of jobs, they have privatized major portions of their operations and they have cut overhead through reinventing Government. This budget resolution rewards them with additional cuts that go beyond streamlining management. These reductions are emasculating the core missions of these agencies and the fundamental role of Government in supporting research and development.

This is not a matter of simply balancing the budget. Indeed, the President's budget is balanced. The Republican plan contained in this budget resolution has established a rigid set of ideological principles, set forth in the accompanying report, with which to make judgments on the value of R&D. The authors of this resolution have asserted that this blueprint represents the only acceptable way to balance the budget.

For example, a balanced budget, according to the report language, must include the elimination of one directorate—namely the Social Sciences Directorate—at the National Science Foundation. It must include the elimination of solar and renewable energy research, fossil energy research, and energy conservation research at the Department of Energy. It must include a virtual elimination of any environmental research within NASA. The list goes on.

Mr. Chairman, these are not just recommendations for balancing the budget. They are demands that we conform our thinking to the misguided views of a few. These are also the demands that will be made to the Appropriations committees in the coming months.

In general, the goals of this budget resolution are to cut back and eliminate wherever possible applied research in the Federal Government and to block any attempts to partner with the private sector. This bias towards applied research and towards technology partnerships is particularly disturbing in view of the widely acknowledged need to link our investments in R&D more closely with the goals of economic development in the coming years.

I would call the attention of my colleagues to a recent report by the Office of Technology Policy entitled Effective Partnering. This report reviews the efforts of successive Congresses and Presidents to increase the effectiveness of mission based R&D within the Government to enhance technology-based economic growth. Programs such as the Manufacturing Extension Program and the Advanced Technology Program that are slated for extinction in this budget resolution represent our best hope for the generation of future jobs. Moreover, these programs are aimed at the emerging small, high-tech industries that will form the backbone for our future economic competitiveness.

Mr. Chairman, this budget resolution is antisience, anti-jobs, and anti-education. It will do irreparable damage to our investments and our commitments to research and development in the future. By drastically cutting clean coal and other fossil energy R&D it may stifle economic progress in important regions of our country.

I will close by stressing that these attacks have nothing to do with balancing the budget. In addition to the President's plan, there are many alternatives to balancing the budget that better preserve R&D. For example, I plan to vote for the conservative coalition budget which restores funds for investments not only in basic science, but also in NASA and in energy and conservation programs.

I urge a "no" vote on this budget resolution.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from the State of North Carolina [Mrs. MYRICK].

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Chairman, this debate today is about one thing and that is trust. As my colleagues know, we trust the folks back home to manage their own lives better than the bureaucrats in Washington, DC. Our budget resolution demonstrates that trust. For the last several decades Congress has said, "Hey, folks, you know, you don't know what you are doing; the Federal Government needs to tell you how to do it, how to take care of your life."

Mr. Chairman, I know from firsthand experience as a mayor of a city that the people back home do know how to take care of themselves. As my colleagues know, our city did not sit around and wait for Congress to tell us how to do it. We just got in there and did it. We believed that there is a better way.

We say that the American people have the answers. This country was built on self-sufficiency and free enterprise, with families making their own decisions. All over this country folks are finding the answers. They are overcoming adversity. They are solving problems. They are helping one another. This budget supports that effort.

Families need our help. Do Members know that it costs the average family $6,731 a year just for Government regulations? They need tax relief as well as control of their lives. Families are hurting. Our own son and daughter-in-law, our daughter-in-law had a terrible auto accident. She is unable to work. Their earning ability has been severely limited. They know firsthand how this budget is going to help them. It will give them some relief. It is going to provide a better future for our two granddaughters, Amanda and Savannah, and for all the other families in America. We truly want to take the power out of Washington and send it back to the people, where it belongs. Let us manage our own lives.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. OLVER].

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, the Republicans have insisted once again on enormous unrequested increases in defense spending in their budget. To do it, they are taking billions of dollars from discretionary accounts, thereby killing investments that are critical in a whole series of areas. Let me mention just three of those countless areas.

First, the Republican budget wipes out energy conservation and efficiency research, and stops the further development of solar and renewable energy sources, all of which are going to be necessary if this country is going to achieve energy independence from foreign sources, and all of which would be part of creating new jobs for American workers trying to compete in an international market.

Second, this budget phases out our commitment to public transportation, which is critical to take people to their jobs, to their doctors, to recreation, all of which are investments in the construction, in the operation, of the buses that move people in urban areas, large and small, large communities and small communities, all over this country.

No. 3, it turns its back on young people and the investment in those young people seeking an education by eliminating direct student loans and national service scholarships. Such extremism, Mr. Chairman, is not necessary to balance the budget. We can do a better job, and we should go back to the drawing board and get it right.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from the State of Arizona [Mr. SHADEGG].

(Mr. SHADEGG asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SHADEGG. Mr. Chairman, one of my colleagues came to the floor a few minutes ago and said that this debate is not about numbers, it is about philosophy. It is about vision. It is about where America is going, about whether America is going forward or going backward.

We need, America needs, a budget that saves our children's future, but that is not the budget that the Democrats will offer. The budget the Democrats will offer is a budget based on fear and class warfare. I hope my colleagues in America are listening to and watching this debate. Their budget is based on fear, is representation, and class warfare. Our budget is based on hope, growth, and opportunity. The difference between these budgets is that we trust the American people to take care of themselves.

Members heard the last speaker bemoan all the different cuts. He would have us cut nothing. Indeed, he would have us grow spending more and more and more, and debt more and more and more. These two children are the grandchildren of one of my colleagues. They face a debt in their lifetime of $188,000, each of them. Look at their faces. Their answer is more debt and more spending.

What has that spending gotten us? Let us take one issue, the education issue. They would tell us, the President would tell us, that we are gutting education and that we are stealing from education funds in America. They would tell us we should spend more and more and more.

Let me say about spending: It is not true that Washington knows best, and more spending does not necessarily make better education. Since 1980, the budget for the Department of Education has more than doubled. It has grown at a pace of more than 7 percent. That is twice the growth of the economy. The United States today spends more per primary and secondary pupil than any country in the world.

What have we gotten for it? What has that side that wants to take you back to more spending done for you? What that has gotten, what their excessive spending has gotten us, is 187 different studies that show there is no significant correlation between education spending and performance.

What has their spending done? SAT scores have dropped nearly 60 points in the last three decades. Math and science scores for students in America ranked behind China, Korea, Taiwan, the former U.S.S.R., England, and Slovenia. What has failed is their centralized big government solution.

If America is to move forward, we must trust the American people. We cannot burden them with more debt. I urge my colleagues to reject the past, to reject excessive spending, and to join us in passing a budget which protects their future and does not burden them with an immoral debt.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHADEGG. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Chairman, I understand what the gentleman is saying. The figure that the gentleman is referring to, it so happens that the President of the United States was Republican, in his party, for that period of time.

Mr. SHADEGG. The statistics I have cited are accurate.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE].

Mr. WISE. Speaking of education, Mr. Chairman, I find it interesting to talk about this great Federal monolith, since 94 cents of every dollar in public education is at the State and local level.

Let us talk about the Department of Commerce. If you were a business person, Mr. Speaker, and I came and said to you that I have a great idea, and you asked what is that, and I said we have this agency, the Department of Commerce, that because it developed for the first time ever a national export strategy, and because it has had an aggressive Commerce Secretary, Ron Brown, and now Mickey Kantor; has generated 80 billion dollars' worth of contracts over the last 3 years; and because this department was so effective that it took $1.5 billion, half of it private money, and generated 220 public-private partnerships to promote civilian technology, and because we have this Department of Commerce that has increased exports 26 percent over the past 3 years, and because we have this Department of Commerce that has increased tourism and provided the first White House conference ever on this growing industry for much of America, and you might be saying, yes, yes, what are you going to do with this agency, their answer would be, we are going to eliminate it?

Because that is what this budget does. It eliminates the Department of Commerce, breaks up some functions and ships them off into lower categories in other agencies, sets up a whole lot of new boxes, but eliminates the one means by which business has been getting increasingly a place at the table.

Take the Economic Development Administration, for instance. Every Member has had an EDA project in their district which has helped generate many dollars over what went into it. For Swearinger Industries, for instance, in Martinsburg, WV, $2 million of EDA investment helped trigger $130 million in private sector investment, 800 new good-paying jobs, and a significant civilian increase and a technology industry boost.

Eliminating the Department of Commerce? those who speak of their children, I understand the concern about debt, but how about the future? How about opportunity, how about jobs? How about somebody that is fighting for them to make sure they get their piece of the pie as well? That is where this budget is wrong, and that is why the Department of Commerce should stay.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. LAZIO].

Mr. LAZIO of New York. Mr. Chairman, I want to begin by complimenting the great chairman of the Committee on the Budget, the gentleman from Ohio, JOHN KASICH, for his leadership and dedication in moving this forward.

The debate today is really about the future of our children. It is America's children. We must be concerned not only for our own children, but all America's children.

Last week on this floor I spoke of the children growing up in public housing in Chicago's State Street corridor. In that neighborhood unemployment is almost universal. More young women become teenage parents than graduate from high school. Guns outnumber books. Children murder children. It is a community filled with despair.

Mr. Chairman, the budget we offer today is one filled with hope, hope for a brighter future for all Americans, including the children of State Street and all of our inner cities. The Republican budget keeps us on the path we started last year toward opportunity and economic growth. The 1997 budget endorses the landmark housing bill that passed the House last week, and is designed to give the people at the local level the power to deal with the problems in their communities without being strapped by Federal regulations and bureaucracy. We want to continue to shift responsibility, power, and money and influence out of Washington and back to neighborhoods, communities, and people.

House Republicans are doing what we said we would do: balancing the budget, freeing people from the trap of welfare, and providing genuine tax relief for working Americans. Who could be against a higher standard of living for our children and our grandchildren? That is exactly what this debate about the 1997 budget is all about.

There are two clear paths before us. We can return to the path we left last year and deliver a future of unsustainable spending and increase, crushing debt, huge increases in taxes that dash hopes and dreams, and that in the end promise fewer opportunities and not a good quality of life for the smallest among us who are still too young to vote. Or we can stay on the brighter path that we started last year. It will require courage, but it is filled with the hopes and aspirations that every parent has for their children.

The Republican budget for 1997 makes possible a future filled with hopes and dreams and opportunity. I urge its passage.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT].

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, last year our Republican colleagues, self-described Gingrich revolutionaries, caught Government shutdown fever and brought this Nation to a halt, until the country spoke up and rejected their budget. Now they are back again with the same type of zealotry that they had in 1995. I think the Four Tops wrote their theme song long before they got to Congress when they wrote "It's the same old song, just a different verse, since you have been gone," because they have not given up their revolutionary zeal to change their country in a way the country does not want to be changed.

Let me give just one example of what this budget resolution assumes and how it affects Austin, TX. Today, Austin, TX, got 10 more law enforcement officers. They are young people, just like these who graduated from our law enforcement academy last year. It brings to our community a total of over 100 law enforcement officers, over 5 million Federal dollars to support local community policing efforts.

This budget proposes to give billions of dollars to star wars. It forgets we have real wars in our streets. Our community is safer because of the commitment that this Congress made to 100,000 new police officers across this country—8,000 communities have benefited from that program. Yet this resolution assumes the termination of the cops on the street program, and some block-headed block grant program that will not guarantee the safety of our neighborhoods and which can easily be trimmed.

Let us stand up for safe communities and reject this Republican budget.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds.

Mr. Chairman, we have a very unique way in which we would put police on the street. Rather than putting police on the street in some cities that do not experience high violent crime rates, we have decided to let local people decide that police are going to be put on the streets where there is the most violent crime.

So where there is the greatest need is where we want the people to be. We think that makes a lot more sense than distributing police on a per capita basis. Send them where they are needed, that is our motto.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the very distinguished gentleman from the sunny State of Florida [Mr. STEARNS].

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the budget resolution. This budget says to the American people, "We think you are taxed too much." Since 1981, under Democrat control, we have had 19 separate tax increases. We think the economy is growing much too slowly. We know that slow growth coupled with enormous tax rates will leave our children with a lifetime tax rate of 80 percent just to pay interest on the debt.

Why is a balanced budget so important? Americans will have more take-home pay because our budget includes a $500-per-child tax credit and a reduction in the capital gains tax which would stimulate economic growth. We also have true welfare reform, which is the No. 1 priority of most Americans.

On the present course our children and their children will be left with immense debts and a tax bill of $180,000 a year just to pay the interest on the debt. That is why we cannot buckle in the face of adversity. We must stick to our principles.

The President's plan has given the American people a tax increase of $241 billion and a deficit that will increase dramatically after the year 1997. In other words, slow growth, high taxes, and weak economic growth will continue unless we stick to our principles.

Our country needs to go in a new direction. We must cut taxes and cut spending. Currently future generations will have to deal with this soaring debt and these high taxes. Let us pass this budget.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD].

Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD. Mr. Chairman, the Republican budget is shortsighted in its policy assumptions on transportation spendings.

By singling out mass transit for executive cuts in transportation programs, the Republicans retreat from the ISTEA agreement of 91 [ISTEA].

Although transit represents approximately 10 percent of the 1996 transportation budget, it receives nearly 50 percent of the cuts in outlays. And while maintaining the Federal match on highway projects at 80 percent, the majority jeopardizes mass transit by lowering the Federal match to 50 percent.

Under these revised incentives, local planners will inevitably choose highway projects at the expense of much needed mass transit.

Also, the phasing out of operating assistance will lead to fare increases, service cuts, and layoffs. This proposal would disconnect thousands of low-income workers from their jobs, isolate many elderly from their daily business and from health care.

In addition, the budget terminates funding for new start programs which provide commuting alternatives to some of our fastest growing cities.

Rail expansion in areas such as St. Louis, Los Angeles, Portland, New Jersey, and the Sunbelt States will be directly threatened by elimination of new starts funding.

The majority's budget is shortsighted and wrong in its effort to pull Federal support from transit planning and programs until the transit needs of urban America are fully met.

I urge a "no" vote.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the very distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, who do we want to please with this budget? I think we want to please the American people. The Republican Budget Committee for the first time in many, many years held hearings across the United States the last couple of years to ask the people what kind of a budget they wanted.

They said they would like a budget that allows them to keep more of their hard-earned income in their pockets rather than paying it out in taxes. They said America needs a budget that shifts power, money, and influence out of Washington and back to the people and the States and their communities.

This budget is based on these principles. It takes less of each person's income by reducing the massive tax burden we have placed on our people. The average person in my State of Michigan now works 86 days a year just to pay their share of taxes at the local, State, and national level. Since President Clinton had his huge tax increase of 1993, my Michigan workers now have to work 7 additional days just to earn all of that money that goes in additional taxes. The Heritage Foundation estimates that the 1993 Clinton tax increase has cost Americans 1.2 million jobs, private sector jobs, and $208 billion in economic output.

This budget calls for studies, Mr. Chairman, to say to States maybe it is going to be better if they keep the Federal tax money, rather than detour it through Washington to have Washington politically decide how that money is going to be distributed, and what they do send back? They send back massive regulations and restrictions.

Andrew Jackson realized that transportation is primarily a State issue. This budget gives seniors a choice in their medical coverage. This budget reduces the deficit every year and finally balances.

Mr. ORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM].

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time. A moment ago I spoke about agriculture and rural health and was challenged by the chairman of the committee, whom I deeply respect, and I would just say that we will continue that discussion any time, any place, regarding the facts of agriculture. But now I wish to speak to the debt and the deficit.

I have seen the charts, I have seen the kids, and I have seen the accusations about this side of the aisle. But the budget that I support with the gentleman from Utah [Mr. ORTON] and others on this side, we propose to borrow $137 billion less so that those same children do not have to pay interest on that debt. I do not understand why it makes good sense to borrow $137 billion to give a tax cut. That is all we are saying. Let us confine ourselves to the spending cuts.

I want to ask the gentleman from Utah a question. Last year the budget resolution contained a provision preventing Congress from considering a tax cut until CBO certified that we had found the spending cuts to balance the budget first. Is that language in the resolution that the Committee on the Budget reported last week?

Mr. ORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STENHOLM. I yield to the gentleman from Utah.

Mr. ORTON. No. In fact, Mr. Chairman, the language that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM] is referring to was section 210 of last year's conference report on the budget resolution, which in fact was entitled Tax Reduction Contingent on Balanced Budget in the House of Representatives.

The Congressional Budget Office in describing that particular provision of the act stated, "Both procedures in the House and Senate require CBO's certification that enacting the proposed reconciliation legislation would lead up to a balanced budget in 2002 before the Senate or the House can consider proposals to cut taxes."

Both Senate Majority Leader DOLE and chairman of the Senate Committee on the Budget DOMENICI are on record with regard to this provision, Senator DOLE saying the tax cuts, quote, "do not take effect unless and until the nonpartisan CBO certifies that we are absolutely on the path to a budget that is balanced in the year 2002." That is the safety valve. They do not take effect until certified. Chairman DOMENICI said, "But let me suggest that in the final analysis we will have tax cuts for the American people only when we get a balanced budget."

These particular provisions and protections in last year's budget reconciliation act are not in this year's budget. As the gentleman knows, we attempted in the committee to amend the budget to put these provisions back in, these safeguards, and the committee refused to do so.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE CHAIRMAN

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair must caution all Members not to make personal references to Members of the other body.

Mr. ORTON. Mr. Chairman, these were merely quotes.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Chairman, let me just ask the gentleman another question. I have heard referenced today that in the tax cut proposal by my friends on the other side, that they are making provision for a $500-per-child tax credit. Is it possible, for $122 billion, to get a $500 tax credit?

Mr. ORTON. If the gentleman will yield further, not according to the Joint Committee on Taxation. They have scored that over the 6 years as costing $135 billion. If in fact you only have a $122 billion tax cut provided for in the budget, as they do, you are $13 billion short.

Mr. STENHOLM. What would happen to the deficit numbers in the Republican budget if it included a tax cut large enough to pay for the child tax credit in every year?

Mr. ORTON. They would be $13 billion additional in the hole.

Mr. STENHOLM. The resolution that is before us contains a net tax cut of $122 billion. At the same time information put out by the majority indicates they can pay for a permanent repeal of the gas tax, a cut in the capital gains, which I happen to support, estate tax relief, small business expensing, AMT relief, expansion of IRA's and extension of expiring tax credits. By my math, that is more than $122 billion.

Mr. ORTON. In fact that adds up to a total according to the Joint Economic Committee, of $216.1 billion in cuts. If in fact you only have $122 billion provided for in tax cuts, you are $94 billion short.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes.

I think what is important for people to understand is that we laid out a program that said that we would downsize Washington and we would take the savings from downsizing Washington to pay for part of our tax relief program, which is the family tax credit. We also have said that we intend to close loopholes that large corporations' lobbyists have been able to secure during my lifetime, and we have suggested that we would close those loopholes and give some of the money that the big corporations with lobbyists in Washington, take some of their breaks away and create additional tax relief for hardworking ordinary Americans.

In our proposal, we are going to downsize government and at the same time we are going to close these loopholes that were passed by the old Democratic majority. We decided that all those loopholes that my Democratic friends have complained about for 40 years, finally some of them are going to be closed by Republicans, because we do not think lobbyists ought to win in this town.

What I have a hard time understanding is the great concern on the part of my Democratic colleagues about giving tax relief to Americans. We did not support raising taxes in 1993, and I would assume some of them who are complaining about our tax cuts did not support it then, either. We intend to systematically repeal as much of that tax increase so Americans can have more of their money in their pockets, rather than systematically taking it out of their pockets to put it into the pockets of bureaucrats. We do not favor that. We want Americans to keep more of what they earn.

We as a majority in this Congress, joined by many on the other side of the aisle, are going to systematically reduce the power, the money and the influence of this city so that the American people can have more, more empowerment, more wealth and more of their own paycheck.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. BROWNBACK].

(Mr. BROWNBACK asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. Chairman, just to follow up on those excellent comments by the chairman of the Committee on the Budget, what we all can agree to that is truly excessive here in Washington is the size of the Federal debt and the size of the Government. We have got over $5 trillion in debt and a government that takes up 22 percent of the overall economy of the country. We just think the debt is too big, it has got to be smaller for our kids, and we think the Government is too big and it needs to be smaller so that we can carry it.

To put a little meat on the bones factually, the Joint Economic Committee says that if we can cut the size of government, if we can cut it slightly, get it from 22 percent of the economy to even around 19 percent of the economy, we will create a growth rate in this country that is double the current growth rate. We are going to create jobs, better jobs at higher wages, so not only do we get the size of government down, not only do we shrink the overall deficit, not only do we get to balance over a period of 6 years but we are going to create jobs, we are going to create growth in the economy. This is a win all the way around.

I would like to report to the American people, if they do not know, we have hit our first-year balanced budget targets. We wanted to get the deficit down to $158 billion. Instead it is around $150 billion. We are below the target that we wanted to hit this year. And we are now on 6 years to balance the budget, and we are doing it fairly and compassionately and predictably so this economy can grow, so the American people can do better and so that we can restore the American dream. That is what this is all about.

Mr. ORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 seconds simply to respond to the chairman. There is not great disagreement between us. What we have said is we ought to pay for the tax cuts first, before going deeper into the hole.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. LEVIN].

(Mr. LEVIN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Chairman, let me sum up the Republican majority budget. They have softened some of the terrible numbers, but many of the terrible, harsh policies remain.

For example, Medicare. Balanced billing, seniors will pay more under their provision. And also hospitals in southeast Michigan, the proposal of last year would have cut them $2.3 billion. No one thought that was sustainable. This would probably be even worse.

Medicaid, block granting it. Seniors as a result will get less long-term care. EITC, look, there is one clear conclusion under their proposal: When you combine EITC as they have drafted it with their child tax credit, 3 million hard-working families with kids are going to be worse off.

Let me say a word about taxes in general, and your $122.4 billion. I have heard a lot of rhetoric on this floor about the 1993 tax increases. You do not touch a single one of them, not a single one that you complain about, except the gas tax, and that you repeal for 7 months as an election year ploy.

Why do you not in addition to your rhetoric do something? And then second, the $122.4 billion is not really that. As the gentleman from Utah [Mr. ORTON] has said, it is $60, $70, $80 billion. The New York Times caught on to you in the article of May 12. It says,

"The $122 billion allotted in the budget for a tax cut is a net figure, and House leaders have said they will eventually cut an additional $60 billion or so in taxes on investors, businesses, and individuals." That raises the tax cut to $180 billion. "The added tax breaks," I continue reading, "were not plugged into the budget that was made public on Wednesday, in part because there is yet no clear way to pay for them and in part no doubt because the lower figure is a less attractive target for Democrats accusing Republicans of giving tax breaks to the rich."

So last year it was $270 billion in Medicare cuts to pay for $245 billion in tax cuts, mostly for the wealthy. Now you are $168 billion in Medicare, and what are you, $180 billion in tax cuts, $190, $200? You shake your head, Mr. SHAYS. I said at that budget meeting it was $122 billion, plus an amount you are going to give to the Committee on Ways and Means. You say it is going to be raised by closing loopholes? What loophole did you close last time? Forty billion dollars in pension assets belonging to workers, giving it back to corporations? To raise $10 billion? You call that a loophole? You were out of touch last year, you are out of touch this year.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds to correct the gentleman on a number of points.

First off, the earned income tax credit under the Republicans last year went from $19 to $25 billion. The school lunch went from $5 to $6.8 billion. The Student Loan Program went from $24 to $36 billion. Medicaid went from $89 to $127 billion. Medicare went from $178 to $289 billion.

Only in this city when you spend so much more do people call it a cut.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. NUSSLE].

Mr. NUSSLE. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Chairman, my friend from Michigan said that this is about numbers. This is not about numbers, this is about people and families. We can do better. Our plan helps, because we allow people to earn more. We allow families to earn more, and we allow them to keep more so they can do more.

Let me tell you about a person. We are going to talk about people. I had a woman come to one of my town meetings who I think put our budget in perspective, all these speeches we hear. She had a simple message for me. She said, "You guys out in Washington don't get it. The problem with America today is air-conditioning."

I said, "What are you talking about?"

She said, "The problem is air-conditioning." She was 90 years old. She said, "When I was a little girl, we used to sit out on our front porch to keep cool during the summertime."

In the neighborhood that she lived in, neighbors would watch neighbors. She said they would take care of one another. Her neighbors were worse to the kids in the neighborhood than their own parents. They were stricter, and would take care of one another. In Iowa, a covered dish solves about everything for a neighbor.

Obviously that is not what we are suggesting here. She was suggesting with the invention of air-conditioning, people began to move inside. They began to move away from their neighbors, to move away from their neighborhood.

For 40 years in Washington, we have been asking them to move even further away from their front porches of America. We have been asking them to move to Washington to solve problems, instead of the neighborhood, the family, the community. And we have taken from them so they cannot earn more and so they eventually cannot do more.

Let me give you an example of this. I have a town in my district hit by a twister. That is the popular movie right now. We got hit by a twister about 5 years ago, a town by the name of Worthington, IA. This town was devastated. It destroyed just about the entire town.

Most people who have been watching the movie I am sure would think after the kind of devastation you see in a town like that, that maybe people would just leave. It is a town of about 800 people.

This town decided they would pull together. With volunteer money, because they knew they could not raise taxes like the Democrats did in 1993, this town decided with volunteer help, volunteer contribution, they built a city hall, a fire department, a community center, and they even went together and put in a library. This is a community that decided to help themselves. And when asked how did the Federal Government help you, there is not a program in the world, there is not a program the world, that would have helped them. Nothing at all. They could not get any help from the Federal Government. But they decided to pull together as a community, and, with local help, they were able to get this job done.

I think that is the kind of attitude we need again in this country if we are going to solve problems. $5.3 trillion since the 1960's to solve the war on poverty. What has it gotten us? Not less poverty. It has gotten us more poverty.

But what are the community action agencies and groups doing in our communities, such as the Salvation Army, organizations that derive their strength and their spirit from individual initiative and opportunity and responsibility for others?

That is exactly the kind of spirit that we need. It gets money out of Washington. Our plan puts money back in communities and families, back to the front porches of America.

So when you look at this budget and you say to yourself, what is this really as a bottom line? It is a question do you want it at a bureaucracy, a fancy white building, downtown Washington, filled with bureaucrats, or do you want that money on the front porches of America, the great front porches, that for years in this country solved our problems and in the future will continue to solve our problems if we will just let them.

Families need to earn more, they need to be able to keep more, and, with that, they will be able to do more. And when it comes right down to it, it is a matter of who you trust. We know who Republicans trust. We trust individuals and families, because they make better decisions. In Washington, unfortunately, the opposition says bureaucracy makes better decisions.

Mr. ORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentlemen from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT].

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Chairman, this budget has no true balance. It is rather only a retread of the same old Gingrich budget resolution that America rejected last year. And the understanding that the American people have of this budget is proven correct again today. You will remember, this is a budget whose main theme was how much it could cut Medicare in order to pay for tax breaks for the privileged.

Well, today's resolution proposes to cut Medicare $100 billion less than last year's resolution, and guess what? Just by coincidence, the tax breaks are $100 billion less than last year's resolution, or more or less in that range.

It demonstrates that the American people were correct in understanding that there is a direct relationship by how much Medicare gets cut, how much health security gets jeopardized, and how many tax breaks there are for the privileged.

But what does this resolution omit? It refuses to do a single thing about the billionaire expatriates who renounced their U.S. citizenship in order to avoid paying their fair share of taxes. That would have gotten us over $2 billion in revenues. It refuses to cut a single corporate tax loophole. It imposes, you might say, a means test for welfare. But if you have got the means, every one of your tax loopholes and your corporate subsidies is protected. That is the thrust of this budget resolution, and it ought to be rejected.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds, to once again correct the gentleman for his inaccurate comments.

Medicare under our bill goes from $196 billion to $283 billion. That is a 45-percent increase in spending from this year to the sixth year. Under our Medicaid Program, it grows from $95 billion to $140 billion.

Only in this city, when you spend so much more do people call it a cut. We are spending more because we need to improve this program.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2¼ minutes to the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. BASS].

Mr. BASS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Texas talks about tax cuts for the privileged. Of course, that is not true, and it is part of the rhetoric we have been hearing in this body now for a year and a half. It is totally unsubstantiated.

You know, we are interested in the privileged, because we consider all Americans in this country to be privileged. We are proposing a budget this year that continues along the path of balance, to relieve Americans from the tax burden that is going up and up and up year after year. And in 1995, we passed the first balanced budget in generations. Unfortunately, it was vetoed by the President. We continued to work to save taxpayers money, and we ended up with a budget that cuts over a 2-year period $43 billion. That is $668 for every American family. Those are our privileged Americans, all American taxpayers.

There are a bunch of Chicken Littles walking around over here saying the sky is going to fall, that we have got this problem and that problem. The fact is that we have passed two budgets now and changed the debate in Washington, hopefully forever. The debate now is when we will balance the budget, not whether.

Mr. Chairman, here is what we do now. We end once and for all three decades of reckless spending. We stop forcing yours and my children to continue to pay the bills. As our Federal Reserve Board chairman says, if we continue on our course, we are going to raise, and substantially, the standard of living for every American in this country. Those are the privileged people for us, working Americans.

The difference between our budget and their budget is that we trust Americans. We trust Americans. We want to send power, money and influence back to the States and localities. And long after the shrill rhetoric dies from this debate, the people who will really benefit from this budget that we pass are going to be my children and your children. They are the people that are going to be the winners in this debate.

Mr. ORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. OLVER].

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Chairman, the debate today truly is about the future of all of our children. This budget resolution is a repeat of many of the extreme proposals from last year. Just look at the 1980's and the deficits that gave us our current $5 trillion debt. Fiscal year 1982 was the pivotal year; a huge tax cut, assurances of future spending cuts, and our Nation's very first more than $100 billion deficit.

From there the deficit exploded. It was exceeding $200 billion 3 of the next 4 years. When you begin a budget balancing plan with a big tax cut, you invite failure. They deliberately created the illusion of the necessity of extreme cuts from health care, from education, from job training, from environmental protection, from transportation, extreme cuts that Americans have said very clearly that they do not want.

Or they have to do things like raising $20 billion in taxes from low-wage working Americans whose only sin is to earn less than $25,000 a year.

Their tax cut has nothing to do with balancing the budget. What it does do is leave us in the year 2002 with close to $6 trillion of debt that we have no revenue to begin to pay back, and $240 billion a year in interest on that debt that is going to have to be paid year after year after year, without end, into the future of all of our children.

I urge my colleagues to reject this budget, the committee's product. It makes too many of the mistakes of a year ago.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, would you inform both sides how much time is available, subtracting 30 minutes from each on the Committee on Economic and Educational Opportunities. How much time does this debate have?

The CHAIRMAN. Under the previous order of the House of May 14, 1995, the 3 more provided for general debate includes 1 hour on the subject of economic goals and policy. So that is 30 minutes of the time controlled by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KASICH] and 30 minutes of the time controlled originally by the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. SLAUGHTER], but now the gentleman from Utah [Mr. ORTON] is reserved.

Total time remaining is 39¼ minutes for the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KASICH] and 48½ minutes for the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. SABO].

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KASICH], chairman of the Committee on the Budget.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I want to point out to the folks watching this debate, our problem has been that we have consistently transferred resources from people who are young savers to people across the spectrum who are consumers. In our society we have destroyed the concept of savings.

When a nation does not save, a nation cannot invest. When a nation cannot invest, it cannot put the tools in the hands of the workers to compete and win, and we end up with job insecurity and stagnant wages. Mr. Broder on Sunday talked about the need to boost savings and investment and risk taking and opportunities so that our people can have the tools to win. That is what our document does.

Part of it is about huge deficits that kill the ability to save, but the other part of it is to transfer money from savers to consumers, and over time this country finds itself in a stagnated position. Our plan is designed to reward savings, to reward investment, to reward risk-taking, so that this country can have higher productivity and so that our workers can win and gain and earn more into the next century.

Mr. ORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER].

(Mr. HOYER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Chairman, this is about our children and it is about trust. Unfortunately, we are not being as honest with the American public as we ought to be.

In 1981 we talked about supply-side economics. We passed the Republican program in 1981. I say to my Republican colleagues that we passed it as they wanted to pass it and President Reagan signed it in August 1981. He said, after passing the tax bill as well, "We will balance the budget by October 1, 1983, under my program."

That is what was said to the American public and to this House. This is what happened. We went from $945 billion in total debt, I tell the chairman of the Committee on the Budget, to $4.5 trillion in debt. Why? Because we pursued the same kind of economic program that is included in the Republican budget today. The same kind. It is a supply-side budget which created gargantuan debt for the grandchildren and children that we talk on this floor.

Yes, it is about trust, and there is a responsible budget to be offered to this House, the coalition budget, which is a bipartisan budget that creates $137.5 billion less in debt. Why? Because it is honest with the American public, and says if we are going to buy education and environmental protection and health care, we need to pay for it, not so our children pay for it.

Let us not pursue supply-side economics once again to the detriment of future generations.

I rise to join my colleagues in expressing my deep concern about the nearly $124 billion of tax breaks for the wealthy included in the Republican leadership's budget proposal.

I am a strong supporter of adding a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution and believe that we must get our fiscal house in order before we cut revenue.

The alternative budget proposed by members of the Democratic coalition and the distinguished ranking member of the Budget Committee is a responsible and genuine way to balance our budget.

By delaying tax breaks until 2002 when the budget would be balanced, the plan allows continued investment in our future.

The coalition plan provides $21 billion more for Medicare.

It includes $45 billion more than the Republican budget for education, head start, and job training.

It provides $14 billion more than the Republican plan for basic scientific research, such as NASA and its mission to Planet Earth Program, as well as energy conservation.

And I am especially pleased that the coalition does not include the unwise and unfair cuts in Federal employee benefits that are again in the Republican plan.

There is a sensible, real, CBO-scored way to balance our budget in 7 years. It does so without compromising investment in America's future and I urge every Member to support it.

Then, in 2002, when our fiscal house is in order, this Congress can approve tax reductions for all Americans—including the middle class and the poor who would be so devastated by the Republican proposal before us.

I urge a "no" vote on the Republican proposal and a "yes" vote on the coalition alternative.

Mr. ORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MEEHAN].

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, it is foolish and irresponsible to propose increasing the deficit as part of a plan to balance the budget, but that is exactly what the Republicans want to do. Their much touted 6-year budget plan will order the Congress to borrow $17 billion next year in order to pay for 1 year of tax cuts, tax cuts that in the end will cost $175 billion in just 6 years, even though the Republicans only have enough to pay for $124 billion.

Are we not supposed to be cutting the deficit? Every year we fail to balance the budget we add to the growing national debt. The nearly $5 trillion debt sops up national savings, leaving increasingly less money for private investment, new equipment, technology, and worker training. Balancing the budget involves some very difficult choices.

We just passed a defense authorization bill this year that added $13 billion to what the Pentagon asked for. Last year we added, that is right, we added $7 billion to what the Pentagon asked for.

We have tough choices to make. How about the $200 billion we could save in corporate welfare over a 6-year period if Republicans would forget about the special interests and really try to make the tough decisions to balance this budget? The short-term consequences of expanding free trade pale in comparison to the long-term effects of a growing national debt, lower wages, a poorly trained work force and lagging economic growth.

The Republican plan foolishly sells tax cuts to the public in exchange for increasing the debt while drastically reducing investments in technology, economic development, education and the environment, ironically the very resources we need to be competitive worldwide and to reestablish high growth rates that our next generation needs to enjoy.

Let us forget this plan and support the coalition's budget alternative. This involves tough decisions. The coalition budget does that.

Mr. ORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

The real issue here that we are asking is that we be honest with the American public. Section 210 in last year's conference report, titled "Tax Reduction Contingent on Balanced Budget in the House of Representatives," at least promised the people we would not cut taxes first and then abandon spending cuts and end up increasing the deficit.

That is, if anything that we have learned from the decade of the 1980's, that should be it.

What is in this particular budget? We do not know. It says a net $122 billion tax cut. What is it? It does not even pay for the one item that has been identified. What about the gas tax? If we are going to repeal it more than just 6 months until the day after the election, that is going to cost an additional $30 billion. That is not paid for.

Even without the gas tax in it, the numbers are $64 billion off. Where are we going to cut spending? Where are we going to raise other revenues to make up that $64 billion? That is a giant hole in this budget resolution which no one has identified, no one has talked about. The public deserves to know what is in it or what is out of it, and the public deserves to have a promise that we will not increase the deficit.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Chairman, the state of the budget for 19—

Mr. SHAYS. Point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentlewoman yield herself such time as she might consume?

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Has the gentleman from Utah transferred control of the time?

Mr. ORTON. Mr. Chairman, the gentlewoman from Florida [Mrs. MEEK] will be controlling the remainder of the time until the 30 minutes, at which time the gentleman from Washington [Mr. MCDERMOTT] will control the time.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the gentlewoman from Florida [Mrs. MEEK] is recognized for 3 minutes.

There was no objection.

(Mrs. MEEK of Florida asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Chairman, last Thursday the Committee on the Budget met and deliberated for quite some time, and as we deliberated I made some assumptions about what I saw going on there. It appeared that the bottom line of that budget resolution was that the Republicans had changed the budget to some extent but there was still the same theme with some variations; the same theme of being able to work very hard to be sure that we would balance the budget in 7 years.

That was done with their budget, but as they did it, it appeared that the same people who were negatively affected in the first budget were still the same in this one. They assume tax cuts of at least $176 billion, which include a cut in the tax rate on capital gains. Part of these tax cuts is paid for by cuts in the rate of growth of spending for such programs as Medicare, Medicaid, and welfare.

It goes back to my original assumption, Mr. Chairman, that the same people that were negatively impacted in the first budget resolution, well, here we are again impacting them negatively again. But another part of the tax cut for the wealthy is paid for by raising taxes on working Americans.

The theme of the entire Republican budget resolutions all the time has been to help working Americans or to save for working Americans. Here we come back and show in this budget resolution that they are now raising taxes on working Americans who are at the very bottom of the income scale.

The Republicans want to cut the earned income tax credit by $20 billion. Now, we all know that is a cash payment from the IRS to low-income working families. The total Republican cuts in entitlement spending in this resolution came to $310 billion. The Medicare cut, $158 billion, accounts for 51 percent of the total cuts in entitlements. Almost all the other entitlement cuts, 47 percent, come from the three programs that I and my colleagues are going to debate for the next 15 minutes, Medicaid, welfare, and the EITC.

Mr. Chairman, I will talk briefly and focus on the EITC. At the markup, the majority said this year's proposal on the EITC essentially is the same as last year in the so-called Balanced Budget Act of 1995, and that bill was vetoed by Mr. Clinton. That is not quite true.

We now know what this EITC proposal means for those responsible, hardworking Americans who have chosen work over welfare. A few months ago the staff of the bipartisan Joint Committee on Taxation released an analysis of the impact on working Americans of the majority's EITC proposal as set forth in last year's conference report. The Joint Committee on Taxation found that 6.3 million families with annual incomes below $30,000 will face higher taxes because of the cutbacks in the EITC.

The Joint Committee on Taxation further found that the Republican plan would have raised taxes on many working Americans even after taking account of the $500-per-child tax credit in H.R. 2491. The report of the Joint Committee on Taxation concludes that 2.8 million families with children and with annual incomes below $30,000 would be worse off under last year's proposal even after taking into account of the $500-per-child tax credit. According to the Joint Committee, these 2.8 million families with children will be worse off by $29 a year even after taking into account of the $500 child credit.

Some of you may think an average tax increase of $29 is not very much. But that $29 is an average. That means some will face a larger tax increase. Moreover, this tax increase of $29 is more than the average American family will save because of the proposed repeal of the 4.3-cent-per-gallon gas tax. So what you're giving with one hand, you're more than taking away with the other.

The current Republican attack on the EITC is somewhat surprising because the EITC has historically had bipartisan support as a way to encourage people to choose work over welfare.

The EITC was originally enacted under President Ford in 1975, when the maximum annual credit was set at $400. Five times—under each of the next four Presidents—the maximum credit was raised, and in 1986 the schedule for the EITC was also indexed to keep pace with inflation. This year the maximum annual credit for a family with two or more children is $3,564.

But on a party-line vote the Committee on the Budget rejected my amendment to limit the changes in the EITC to those designed to reduce errors and fraud. According to the Congressional Budget Office, my amendment—which would fight fraud but still protect the working poor—would save about $2 billion over 7 years. The Republican majority was primarily interested not in reducing fraud, but in balancing the budget on the backs of the poor.

I've asked the Rules Committee to make in order my amendment to give Members the opportunity to go on record in support of people who tough it out every day, working in low-paying jobs, supporting themselves and their families. I doubt the Rules Committee will grant my request.

Many Members of the majority are using the existence of the current EITC to justify their opposition to an increase in the Federal minimum wage.

For example, on April 23, the majority whip made that argument to the House of Representatives. He relied on a Congressional Research Service [CRS] study he had requested. For each State, CRS added government payments for the EITC, Food Stamps, Aid to Families with Dependent Children [AFDC], and day care to the wages of a single person working full time at the minimum wage. CRS found that a single parent with two small children living in Florida and working full time at the minimum wage would have annual gross wages of $8,840 and would pay social Security payroll taxes of $676. This parent's wages would be supplemented, according to CRS, by an EITC payment of $3,536; food stamps worth $2,992; and an AFDC payment of $1,258. So this parent's total annual income after Federal taxes is $15,950.

Living in Miami, a single parent with two small children would find it hard to provide food, shelter, full-time day care, and clothing for $15,950 a year. Cut that EITC payment, and you hurt that family terribly. If the Republican majority really wants people to choose work over welfare, they would support both an increase in the minimum wage and the current level of EITC.

During the Budget Committee debate on my amendment, the Republicans asked how I proposed paying for the $20 billion in EITC spending over 6 years that my amendment would have protected. The answer to their question is contained in their own discussion on reducing corporate tax subsidies. In explaining how the Republicans would pay for their proposed cut in the tax on capital gains, the majority's draft report on the budget resolution "assumes a reduction in provisions in the Tax Code that can be clearly identified as benefiting one industry or a limited number of corporations and derive no public benefits." The draft report goes on to say that the Committee on Ways and Means has identified such changes in the Tax Code that "raise approximately $26 billion."

It appears that the Republicans have clearly stated their preference: to use this $26 billion to pay for tax cuts for wealthy Americans rather than to avoid raising taxes on working Americans.

There are almost 1 million hard-working families in Florida who will be affected by the Republicans' proposal to cut the EITC by $20 billion over 6 years; 46,000 of these families are in my congressional district.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, under the current Republican budget proposal, surely the rich will get richer, and the poor will pay for it.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. POMEROY].

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Chairman, one of the greatest errors made by the majority in their budget of last year were the devastating reductions they proposed in the future funding of the Medicaid Program. Unfortunately, they have done it again.

What is Medicaid? Medicaid is the joint venture of the Federal Government and State governments to meet the health care needs of children from homes falling below the poverty line, of disabled individuals unable to work and otherwise cover their health care expenses, and the long-term care costs of destitute elderly citizens. There are no more vulnerable people in this country than kids raised in poverty, disabled, and seniors who require long-term care but lack the funds to pay for it.

I am convinced much of the public reaction against last year's GOP budget was because the American people would not walk away from these kids and these seniors as they struggled to meet their health care needs.

A central problem with the GOP budget before us is that once again it clobbers kids and destitute seniors with Medicaid reductions that will dramatically reduce the quality of the health care these Americans can access.

Now, on the surface, the differences in Federal spending between the proposals may not look like much. The administration proposes a $54 billion reduction; the coalition $70 billion; the GOP budget $72 billion. The dirty little secret, however, behind the GOP proposal is that it would allow State funding toward the Medicaid program to fall off dramatically.

The ultimate comparison is revealed on this chart and shows just how devastating their hits would be. The administration combined hit of $105 billion, coalition $125 billion, but the GOP budget, $257 billion in future expenditures, nearly at the reckless levels of their last year's budget.

The difference between the proposals means this: Under the GOP plan, fewer kids in impoverished homes will be able to get health care. The services currently available to disabled Americans will be reduced and in some cases eliminated. And the long-term care for our seniors, people like our parents and our grandparents but they do not have ability to pay for it themselves, will fall and it will fall in terms of accessibility and in terms of quality of care.

If we are to negotiate toward a historic balanced budget agreement, Mr.

Chairman, we will not be able to bridge differences as great as those contained in their Medicaid proposal. I urge the majority to change their Medicaid plan, preserve the State-Federal partnership in meeting the health needs of impoverished kids and destitute elderly.

Until changes are made in this regard, however, I urge my colleagues to reject these devastating reductions in future Medicaid spending. Our kids and our seniors deserve better.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds to respond once again to the inaccuracies of my colleague.

From 1991 to 1996, we spent $463 billion on Medicaid. Under our proposal it increases. We will spend $731 billion, 463, 731. The President would spend only slightly more, 749. What is interesting is, our colleagues in the coalition budget would spend 732, $1 billion more. They call ours a cut and they call theirs an increase.

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 seconds to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. POMEROY].

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Chairman, Medicare is joint, State and Federal. If you look at the combined reductions in spending in the Medicaid Program, their proposal is recklessly, dangerously different than either the President or the coalition proposal.

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. WOOLSEY].

(Ms. WOOLSEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Chairman, here we go again.

As the only Member of this body to have actually been a single, working mother on welfare, I rise, once again, to make it clear that this budget is no kinder or gentler to children and families than the welfare reform plan peddled by Speaker GINGRICH and the new majority last year.

That should come as no surprise to anyone because this budget is just a rehash of the majority's same old cruel policies and skewed budget priorities that were rejected by the American people last year.

They were rejected, my friends, because the American people want real welfare reform—reform that helps families get jobs and stay off welfare for good—reform that expands the earned income tax credit; boosts the minimum wage and invests in education; job training; health care; child care and child support.

However, this budget, like all of the majority's welfare reform plans that came before it, tells children in this country: if you're poor, you had better not get sick, don't get hungry, and don't get cold, because the majority doesn't think you're important.

It says to families: Republicans in Congress don't want to provide you with a guaranteed level of health care; food; and general assistance for your children.

Just by ending the guarantee of Medicaid alone, almost 4.9 million children may lose their health coverage.

And, by its cuts to the earned income tax credit and failure to boost the minimum wage, this budget tells working parents that you might as well go on welfare because the majority doesn't think work should pay.

In fact, approximately 3 million working families will come out worse thanks to the majority's cuts to the earned income tax credit.

Mr. Chairman, this is not the way to be treating our working families, and it is certainly not the way to be treating our children.

It's time for the majority to stop recycling it's misplaced priorities and it's extreme policies.

It's time for the majority to work with us to pass a balanced budget that moves our Nation forward without leaving behind those who depend on us most—our children, our families, and our seniors.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. KOLBE].

(Mr. KOLBE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Chairman, twice now I have heard the gentlewoman from California, the gentlewoman from Florida talk about cuts in the earned income tax credit. Let me point out to my colleagues what we are talking about here.

Here is what we have spent the last 5 years on the earned income tax credit, $109 billion. This is what we are talking about spending the next 6 years, excuse me, the last 6 years versus the next 6 years, $155 billion. It must be some very special accounting that is used here in Washington by some of my colleagues that calls an increase from 109 to 155, $1 billion over the next 6 years, as some kind of a cut.

What we are talking about changing, what we are talking about eliminating is the earned income tax credit for illegal aliens. We do not think they should be eligible for the earned income tax credit. We are talking also about eliminating payments, ending payments to persons that have substantial sources of nontaxable or unearned income: for example, Social Security, tax exempt interest, IRA distributions, child support payments, those would be counted as part of the income, not currently included there.

So, yes, for those people there would be an elimination because they have other sources, in many cases government sources, of unearned income. We are talking about ending payments to childless workers. That was not ever the original intention of the legislation to have people who are childless workers. I would like to know the logic from my colleagues on this side of the aisle as to why a couple that earned, individual who has two children, is trying to raise them, should work extra hard to pay for taxes to provide an earned income tax credit for somebody who is childless and working part time.

An individual who is working full time at the minimum wage would qualify for a total of $40 under the earned income tax credit. In other words, basically a full-time person who is childless working at the minimum wage does not qualify for it anyhow. So you are talking about part-time people anyhow.

For the first 18 years of the earned income tax credit, it was not available to childless workers. That was one of the things that was added much later.

My colleagues also often mention that this is one of Ronald Reagan's favorite programs. They ought to remember that when Ronald Reagan was President, he was talking about in 1986, the total cost of the earned income tax credit was $2 billion. Today it is $25.3 billion, that is an 1165-percent increase in just 10 years.

We are not talking about eliminating or cutting the earned income tax credit. We are talking about getting rid of some of the abuses and trying to target those who need it the most and allow working people who have families to keep some of the money in their own pocket and not have to pay for childless couples who do not really need the earned income tax credit.

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 seconds to respond to my colleague's point of view.

I think what my colleague said did not present the whole picture of the cut that they have made in the EITC, because according to a study by the bipartisan Joint Committee on Taxation, the changes which the Republicans have recommended in their resolution would increase taxes on 6.3 million hard working families, that needs to be talked about, with an annual income below $30,000 a year.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from the State of New Jersey [Mr. MARTINI].

(Mr. MARTINI asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MARTINI. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the American people and in support of the fiscal year 1997 budget resolution. Two years ago Americans were restless and concerned. No longer was the status quo good enough. I shared that concern and that is why I ran for Congress in 1994.

Now, 2 years later, our record shows that we have succeeded in changing the status quo. We have taken action to make America fiscally sound once again. We have proven we can cut wasteful spending and protect our most important priorities and do so with caring and compassion while addressing the need of working families. The reason is obvious. The difference between our budget and theirs is that we trust the American people and they do not.

We know the very richness and quality of our lives is not defined solely by government but, rather, by the opportunity to be involved with our community, schools, neighbors and of course our places of worship. In my mind, these ideas are not revolutionary. Rather, they are inherent in the very role of being a Congressperson, managing the financial affairs of Government responsibly and fairly.

Yes, this Congress pushed the envelope of fiscal responsibility at the President, and we pushed that envelope again. He could no longer ignore that. It was not always pretty but real change never is.

The result has been saving the American taxpayers $43 billion, the first such reduction since World War II, a cut in deficit without an increase in taxes. Contrast this with the 1993 Clinton Democrat Congress budget of more spending, ballooning deficits, and the biggest tax increase in American history, $245 billion.

Yes, Mr. Chairman, we have come far in the last 2 years. I say to my colleagues, now is not the time to succumb to the scare and fear rhetoric that we have heard from the other side. I might add the party that for years stood for the party that said we have nothing to fear but fear itself today offers us only fear and more fear.

Now is not the time to retreat. Now is the time to go forward with courage and to continue on the path of change that we have adopted. I say we pass the budget resolution.

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentlewoman from Hawaii [Mrs. MINK].

(Mrs. MINK of Hawaii asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii. Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that it was not too long ago that we were saying, read my lips, no tax increases. Our majority party has been saying no tax increases, we are going to have tax cuts because that is what this economy needs. Yet we know this budget resolution is going to reduce EITC by $20 billion. What does that mean for those childless families? That means a tax increase.

If they have under existing law been enjoying an EITC from the Government and suddenly this bill is passed, reducing that EITC benefit to this family because they are childless, that, my friends, is a tax increase to that family. There will be millions of families so affected.

A family without a child in the household that they can consider a dependent may suddenly be strapped by someone becoming very ill, a heart attack or a stroke or someone has to go out and work and perhaps under this devastating minimum wage not be able to survive. And the Government is going to say, now that childless couple needing the support from this Government just as poor as any other family is not going to have the EITC benefit because there is no child in the household?

We want to help all families that are poor, that are entitled to this support. I cannot believe that the majority would stand up and say that this is not a tax increase on that poor family that heretofore has had this benefit.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute and 30 seconds.

Can we imagine a family where the income of two children at $30,000 who are being taxed to give benefits to a childless couple making $28,000, can we imagine the mother and father telling their children we cannot go to McDonald's tonight because we had to pay more taxes to give more benefits to a childless couple that is making $1,000 less than we are.

What does the family get who goes to work every day and is struggling to support their children? What do those people get? They do not want food stamps. They do not want housing. What they want is an opportunity. And what we aim to do is to give opportunity to those people trying to climb out of welfare.

We are trying to give benefits to those people who desperately need it. We are trying to help those people who cannot help themselves. But do my colleagues know who else we are very concerned about? Low income working Americans who give more and more and get less and less back. They are the forgotten Americans in this country. Those Americans are struggling every day to support their children, and all they ask for is an opportunity.

That is what this budget is all about, rewarding those people who get up every day and go to work, and all they ask for is a chance, and more of their money back in their paychecks for them to spend on their children. That is what is right.

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 more seconds to the gentlewoman from Hawaii [Mrs. MINK].

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii. Mr. Chairman, the distinguished gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KASICH], I think, misses the point. We all want to benefit working families. It was never the intention to make a distinction about a childless family. The formula currently includes benefits for childless workers because clearly there are circumstances where there are two individuals in a family, one perhaps disabled and unable to work, suffering some kind of disability where only one sole individual in that family can go out and work, and that family is as entitled to this benefit as any other family, and I do not believe the law ought to be changed. And the $20 billion that our colleagues are taking out of the program is to hurt that family. It is a tax increase.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today to ask my colleagues to take notice of a small, but important provision in this budget resolution. It expresses the sense of Congress that we should not enact or adopt any legislation that will increase the number of children who are hungry, homeless, poor, or medically uninsured, and further stipulates that Congress must revisit any legislation enacted to comply with this budget resolution which does cause an increase in the number of children who are hungry, homeless, poor, or medically uninsured.

I authored this amendment which was accepted by the Budget Committee on a voice vote. I must say that I was quite pleased when the chairman of the Budget Committee accepted my amendment without hesitation. Accepting this provision may have been easy, but I would caution this House that complying with it will be difficult given the budget proposal before us today.

As we have seen in the past, this budget seeks to sacrifice the most vulnerable in our Nation in exchange for a balanced budget by the arbitrarily chosen year of 2002.

It is difficult for me to see how we are going to prevent more children from becoming hungry, homeless, poor, or medically uninsured under this plan, which disproportionately targets those programs dedicated to assisting the poor, most of whom are children. Medicaid will be cut by $72 billion over the next 6 years, $53 billion will be taken away from welfare programs and the EITC will be cut by $20 billion. With the exception of Medicare, no other Federal program takes a larger hit in this budget than these three programs which make up the basic social safety net for our Nation's children.

It is obvious that the intention of their budget is to dismantle those very programs that work to keep children from being hungry, homeless, poor, and medically uninsured.

Most devastating is their decision again to do away with the basic guarantee, the entitlement, for children in this Nation to receive a minimum level of financial support and guaranteed health care, no matter where they live in this country, who their parents are, or the most difficult circumstances they may live in. Make no mistake, the adoption of this budget will end the Federal Government's commitment to a guaranteed safety net for our children.

We already know that if welfare legislation similar to H.R. 4 is adopted as this budget resolution suggests that at least 1.2 million more children will be thrown into poverty. This is based on analysis of the Senate version of H.R. 4 by the Department of Health and Human Services and the OMB.

Welfare reform as proposed in this document has nothing to do with giving families the tools to become self-sufficient and everything to do with cutting the budget. If we were truly interested in helping families on welfare we would be retaining the entitlement, especially for child care; increasing funding for education and job training, not decreasing it; and expanding health care for the poor, not reducing it.

In addition to the elimination of the safety net for children, this budget adds insult to injury by making it more difficult for low-income working parents to provide for their children without government assistance by cutting the earned income tax credit [EITC] by $20 billion over the next 6 years. According to the Joint Committee on Taxation, the EITC reforms proposed by the Republican budget would increase taxes for 6.3 million working families with incomes less than $30,000. We hear the Republican majority spout rhetoric about personal responsibility and the need to be self-sufficient, yet here we have a program that truly helps working families stay off welfare, and what do the Republicans do? They cut it.

Instead of supporting policies that lift people out of poverty like the EITC and an increase in the minimum wage, this budget relies on the failed policies associated with the trickle down economics. Worse, it destroys the safety net under current law for our 5 million children in welfare. To hurt these children is absolutely the wrong policy.

This budget resolution is seriously flawed. It eliminates or severely cripples some of the most important functions of the Federal Government, that which assumes our children and the most vulnerable in this Nation are cared for. The only hope we have is that provision I added in the Budget Committee which requires us to revisit this budget if it results in more children becoming hungry, homeless, poor, or medically uninsured. I ask my colleagues to reject this budget because it hurts children, it hurts the poor, the elderly, and the sick.

The gentleman from Arizona earlier said this budget is about priorities. Clearly, the majority's priorities do not lie with our children, or their families.

This budget resolution calls for the end of Americorps, terminates Goals 2000 which is local education reform, freezes Head Start, freezes WIC, cuts Job training by 25 percent below fiscal year 1996 levels, freezes funds for title I, freezes college student financial assistance programs like Pell grants, Work study cuts library funds by 20 percent, phases out legal services for the poor, phases out funds for the arts and humanities, and privatizes Corporation for Public Broadcasting, and cuts bilingual education.

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. THOMPSON]. He is a new member of the Committee on the Budget.

(Mr. THOMPSON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in opposition to the Republican budget due to the fact that it cuts deeply into programs that help children, seniors, and working people. This budget will have a devastating effect on my constituents in the Second Congressional District of Mississippi. Cutting $72 billion in Medicaid will decimate nursing home residents and cause many seniors to be put on the streets. This is a mean-spirited effort and is equivalent to Robin Hood in reverse.

While the Republican majority refuses to raise the minimum wage, they insist on reducing the earned income tax credit. The only help available for working-class Americans, the earned income tax credit, goes to people who work, not people relying on welfare. This is very unfair and a slap in the face. Of the persons who receive earned income tax credit in Mississippi, 234,000 had a gross income of under $15,000. This is about 25 percent of the working families in Mississippi—63,000. Mr. Chairman, live in my district.

I urge opposition to the budget.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FOX].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FOX] is recognized for 2¼ minutes.

(Mr. FOX of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FOX of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, our budget plan will help America do better. We have passed the first balanced budget in a generation. While the President vetoed our balanced budget, we have changed Washington forever. The debate is no longer about whether we need a balanced budget, it is about the best way to achieve one. We fought for one, the single largest reduction in spending since World War II, a savings to taxpayers of $43 billion. This budget will help seniors, working families, and children. We end nearly decades of reckless deficit spending. We stop forcing our children to pay our bills.

As Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan says, a balanced budget would enable families to look forward to their children doing better than they did, to give States the freedom to develop welfare programs that promote personal responsibility and break the cycle of welfare dependency. It restores the authority, Mr. Chairman, and responsibility for public education back where it belongs, in the hands of parents, principals, and local school boards, not with the growing Federal bureaucracy.

It allows decisionmakers in the States, not Washington bureaucrats, to design Medicaid programs that are tailored to meet the special needs of the poor and elderly.

This budget helps families move ahead through a $500 per child family tax credit, a special $5,000 adoption credit, a rollback of the Clinton tax hike. American families will get to keep more of what they earned.

Our balanced budget will also lead to lower interest rates. That will lower mortgage costs, car payments, student loans, and create hundreds of new jobs. Right now the Federal Government borrows so much available long-term capital that anyone else looking to borrow money is forced to pay higher rates. Once we stop deficit spending, interest rates will drop, saving the average family $1,700, almost $1,800.

This budget also attacks waste and inefficiency and puts an end to billions of dollars in corporate subsidies and special-interest tax breaks. It helps our veterans with $5.1 billion more than the administration's funding for hospitals and medical care.

Mr. Chairman, this budget is fair, compassionate, and it helps our constituents have a better life.

Mr. KASICH. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SAXTON], and I ask unanimous consent that he be allowed to control the time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD].

Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD. Mr. Chairman, last year, the American people rejected the Republican budget, and the President justifiably vetoed it.

This year's Republican budget is no better. Instead of moderating their extreme policies, the majority's plan continues to hurt hard working Americans.

Raising the minimum wage is supported by over 80 percent of the American people because it will help over 7 million working adults to pay for groceries, health care, rent, or their children's education.

The majority, however, is denying Congress a clean vote to raise the minimum wage, while at the same time proposing to cut the earned income tax credit for low-paid workers.

The EITC cuts of $21.6 billion will negatively impact 60,000 families in my district alone and 6 million low-income families across this country.

It makes no sense that as Congress debates the needs and the value of America's workers, the majority proposes to raise taxes on the poorest workers.

This is an unfair and unjust budget, and I urge my colleagues to vote "no."

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS].

(Mr. OWENS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Chairman, this fiscal year 1997 budget of the Republican majority continues the same extremism of the fiscal year 1996 budget. American people have rejected that extremism, but it goes on and on. It is an assault on the majority of the American people, starting with the poorest people who need Government most. The children, the elderly and the people with disabilities are attacked first.

The Medicaid entitlement, the removal of the Medicaid entitlement, is the thrust of that attack, which is most dangerous. Are we going to take away the possibility of life itself from many people? The Medicaid entitlement, means-tested Medicaid entitlement, is probably one of the most noble actions of our Government. As my colleagues know, it is a prolife action in the most profound sense of the concept of prolife. It is for all life. But by taking away the Medicaid entitlement, we are going to condemn people to a situation where the funds will not be there to preserve life when it is needed. We are taking a step backward from the possibility of ever realizing universal health care. This is a step forward toward decentralized genocide.

By giving it out to the States, by having the States with less money try to meet these needs, we are going to ratchet down the benefits and make more and more people suffer and more and more people will die, and eventually we are going to get into a situation where there is a whole class of people which we are throwing overboard, a whole class of people for which life itself has no meaning, the Government will not help to preserve it, and that kind of step is what this extremist budget takes us into.

Medicaid entitlement must be preserved.

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield 45 seconds to the gentlewoman from North Carolina [Mrs. CLAYTON].

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding this time to me.

I want to emphasize something that has already been stated, that indeed the Republicans are at it again, they are really attacking the poorest of the poor. Contrary to what they say, they are actually raising taxes on more than 6 million low-income persons. At the same time, they are giving a capital gain to the wealthy. Why not give tax breaks to all America rather than putting it all on the poor? On 7.7 million low-income people, taxes were raised in 1995. They did it in 1995; they are at it again. The poorest of the poor is being hurt.

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, in closing, I just would like to say that the Republicans are not facing the facts. Families with children will still be worse off in this new budget resolution. The Joint Economic Committee has already revealed that the $29 that the chairman talked about, that is an average figure. That is not the figure for every family. Some families will be hit harder by that, and we will have a large tax increase.

Mr. Chairman, we can balance this budget together, the Republicans and the Democrats, but we cannot balance it unless we work both with the poor, and the near-poor, and the rich.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 4 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, first let me commend the chairman of the Committee on the Budget and his colleagues and the staff of the Committee on the Budget for providing us with the opportunity to consider what I consider a very, very find budget.

This next hour will be controlled by the members of the Joint Economic Committee, and it is our function, along with deciding on what our priorities should be, to try to shed some light on the fiscal implications of our Federal budget, of our proposed Federal budget, and our past actions on the economic performance of the private sector in our country.

Mr. Chairman, I find it quite interesting to do that because over the years that I have served on the Joint Economic Committee we have found that there are certain things that happen here in Washington that have a profound effect on the American economy.

Today many middle-class Americans are deeply concerned about their lack of economic progress, and I would like to speak for just a few minutes about that because that is one of the issues that we are trying to address with this budget. Ordinary Americans in many walks of life feel that they are on a treadmill where they have to run faster and faster to stay in the same place, if not fall behind. Unfortunately, they have every reason to be concerned because not only is income growth nonexistent but taxes have gone up.

I would like to just point out that over the last 10 months we have released a number of Joint Economic Committee studies and reports documenting the middle-class income meltdown. The sad truth is that a variety of statistics show that economic well-being of the American middle class has declined or stagnated under the policies of this administration, and we are going to try to fix it.

For example, take one standard measure, median family income: This statistic charts changes in the level of middle-income families over time and can be adjusted for inflation as well. The Joint Economic Committee found that during the Clinton administration there has been no progress in inflation-adjusted median income. In other words, families that earned $40,000 3 years ago on average continue to earn $40,000 this year. This chart exemplifies that.

During the last decade, during the 8 years of the Reagan administration, each year American families could anticipate a 1.7 percent increase on average in their income. Now, if we extrapolate that out during that period of time, that means that income went up during that 8 years almost 14 percent.

Now, just to take an example of what that meant to the average American family over that 8 years, it meant that a family that started the decade of the 1980's making $50,000, by 1988 was making $57,281, and so that kind of growth took place because we had in place growth policies here in Washington.

Now, by contrast, since the present administration took office, we have had goose eggs, no growth in median family income. And so one of the things that this budget tries to address is that problem by bringing into control Government spending and lowering the thresholds that we anticipate for future Government spending as well.

Unfortunately, we know that median income did not treat all Americans the same.

For example, male earnings from 1992 to 1994 actually fell. In 1992 the median male income for males in this country was $31,897. It decreased by 2.2 percent by 1993 and fell to just over $31,000; and decreased another 1.1 percent in 1994 and fell to $30,854. So because of, we think, bad things that Congress did and the President did during those years, it crested a disincentive for the economy to grow.

Secretary Reich has tried to explain this away by saying that corporate profits are up; therefore, median income must be down. Not true. Not true. This chart shows what happened with corporate profits and total compensation. The red line shows what happened with corporate profits.

During the years of John Kennedy back in 1963 and 1964, corporate profits consumed or took up about 14 percent of total compensation. Today you can see over in the other end of the chart, it is only 10 percent. It has actually fallen. The black line does represent total compensation for American workers, 55 percent in 1959 and just about 55 or 56 percent today.

Mr. Chairman, I commend the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KASICH], the chairman, for the great effort he has put into this budget to treat all Americans fairly, and yet recognize the economic implications of what it is that we have created. Naturally, I am going to urge everyone to support this budget.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McDERMOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, we are now probably talking about what we should have started this discussion with, and that is the whole of how the economy is doing. The question we have to ask ourselves, Mr. Chairman, is whether or not anybody believes a Republican and their analysis of the economy. Most of us on our side of the aisle have some doubts, but occasionally the light goes on on the other side, and somebody makes a statement that makes sense.

In February 1996, ROBERT DOLE, who just left the Senate because he could not cope with these radicals on the other side of the aisle, said, "It is true, as some have said, that our economy is the strongest it has been in 30 years." If Members do not believe BOB DOLE, if they do not believe BOB DOLE, Members can listen to what they are now going to say. But the fact is that the economy today is the strongest that it has been in 30 years.

The second chart which I will put up here, do Members believe the Congressional Budget Office? We have had a discussion in this House over and over again as to whether or not we can balance the budget in 7 years, according to CBO numbers. Everybody on the other side said that the CBO numbers, they are absolutely correct.

Mr. Chairman, when President Clinton took over, if we follow this line, that is what CBO said was going to happen. The deficit was just going to go out of sight. As a result of the policies that the President instituted in 1993 and 1994, we now see that the deficit is coming down, and the President's projected budget will take it down in the course of 7 years to zero.

The President has done what has to be done in terms of dealing with deficit reduction. The fact is we still have real problems in this economy. The middle class, their incomes have been stagnant for 20 years. It did not start when President Clinton came in. It started 20 years ago. The lower classes have been drifting down. Their incomes have actually been falling in real money. We have serious problems. We have people out there who are permanent temporary employees: our children whom we sent to college, who accumulated debts, who have come out of those colleges in debt, and cannot find a permanent job.

The largest employer in this country is Manpower. People work 40 hours a week, they work 50 weeks a year at $10 and $15 an hour in my own city of Seattle, and they do not have health care benefits, they do not have a pension, they cannot buy a house. If you take a manpower pay stub into a bank and try to get a loan to buy a house, you are laughed out of the place. You simply cannot get a loan if you have a temporary job. There are thousands of people.

In my city, in the music industry there are no permanent jobs. Seattle rock music, everybody knows about it. They know about Nirvana, they know about Pearl Jam. They know all those companies. Those people, none of them have permanent jobs. So there are real problems in this country, because we have people with a temporary job trying to pay off school loans. It is no wonder that people are anxious.

But the problems are not solved by the policies in the Republican budget. The Republican budget wants to jerk the safety net out from under people. It wants to take away Medicare so that people in their middle years, who are trying to help a kid get through college, are suddenly going to have to help their parents with their health care bills. They want to take away Medicaid, which guarantees nursing home care for senior citizens in this country, and want to throw it back onto the families and say, "You come up with the $30,000 a year to take care of your mother in the nursing home."

Mr. Chairman, if you have to do that in the middle class, how are you going to help your kid go to a community college or pay for going to a university? Those are safety net issues.

The President said, it was a very interesting thing, he came out to Seattle a few months ago, 2 months ago, and said,

There is enough money on the table to balance the budget. We have agreed, there has been enough agreement between the House and Senate and the Presidency on the numbers, but we will not balance the budget if your intention is to destroy the safety net.

That is the essence of this budget debate. It is not about numbers. These numbers, we could argue about numbers, $50 billion here and $25 billion there and whatever. The issue is whether or not the Federal Government is going to be able and willing to provide a social safety net for the people in this country, whether we are talking about educational loans or we are talking about Medicaid for nursing homes or Medicare for senior citizens. Whatever we are talking about, it is a question of whether the Government should be involved in providing that safety net and trying to help people make it up. We have done it in the past, we will do it again, but not with the policies that are in this budget.

Mr. Chairman, I think that this budget resolution makes no sense. The people of this House ought to reject it and go for a budget that makes some real sense in terms of helping people make it up the ladder, not pull the bottom rungs out from under them. That is what their budget actually does.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Clarendon, TX [Mr. THORNBERRY], another member of the Joint Economic Committee who believes that big government acts as a drag on the economy.

Mr. THORNBERRY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, we have heard a lot about the trillions of dollars involved in the Federal Government's budget today, but I think it is also important to focus on the family budgets in this country, because in truth, the economic security of the country is only as strong as the economic security of the American family.

There may be some who think that the family budgets in this country are the strongest they have been in 30 years. That is not what I am hearing in my district. Everywhere I go people are squeezed. People are working harder and harder and having a tougher time making ends meet.

If we look at the statistics, they bear out that feeling. Since 1992, median family income in this country has gone down. Since 1992, the average Federal tax rate has gone up. The result is that Americans are left with less money in their pockets because the Federal Government is taking more and more money away from them.

Recent surveys show the American people across all lines think the Federal Government, government at all levels, should take about a quarter of what they make; it should take about a quarter of someone's income to pay for government, and yet the number today is more like 38.2 percent. That is, of course, as opposed to about 5 percent in 1950. Today parents are working harder and longer and have less time to spend with their children.

If Members do not think this country is experiencing the effects of people having to spend more time making ends meet, just to pay for food and shelter and away from their kids, I do not think they are in touch with what is happening. This budget includes a $500-per-child tax credit, so a family with two kids is going to get $1,000 more a year.

Some people say that is not enough to make a difference. I will tell the Members, that is. That $1,000 for a typical family will pay for 3 months of groceries, it will pay for 1½ months of mortgage payments, it will pay for 3½ car payments, it will pay for 14 months of health insurance.

In my district alone, it will mean $322 million more dollars over 7 years. That makes a difference in people's lives. It makes a difference at times that they need some relief.

The bill has a lot of other good things for families. It allows senior citizens to keep more of the money they earn and not be penalized on their Social Security. It repeals the gas tax and the rest. The problem with taxes is sometimes people in Washington get confused about whose money it is, but it is a fundamental issue, I think, on who can better spend the people's money; whether the Washington bureaucrats can spend it better or whether the families themselves can spend it better. I put my trust in the American people.

I think this country will be better off by letting people keep more of the money that they earn and spend it on themselves and their families and their food and their shelter and their communities and their churches, rather than sending it all to Washington. That is a lot of what is at stake here. That is a fundamental difference in this budget. It is the reason the American people need this kind of tax relief.

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, as a member of the Joint Economic Committee, I want to raise a number of objections to the GOP budget resolution for fiscal year 1997. This proposal that we have before us is little more than a rehash of the Contract With America and its assault on working families, senior citizens, students, and the environment, all of which have been rejected by the American people in each of the renditions that it has come to this House.

This budget is bad for the economy. It is bad for working people, and I believe it should be rejected. Just a few weeks ago after a year-long struggle on the budget, this body showed that it had the ability to compromise on fiscal matters and pass a budget reduction measure with support that was bipartisan. The omnibus appropriations bill cut the deficit by an additional $23 billion, while at the same time protecting our Nation's commitment to providing affordable health care, housing, and education.

The bill was the product of productive dialog between the parties; long, tough negotiations and compromise by Members on both sides of the aisle. That is why I voted for it, and that is why Democrats and Republicans alike in this House supported it and provided it with an overwhelming majority.

Now, Mr. Chairman, the majority party here in the House proposes to take several steps backwards and rehash the debate once again to limit health care services for the elderly, undercut health care providers in my district and across the Nation. We are again debating whether we should end our Nation's longstanding commitment to help provide food and medicine for those who need it, and raise the cost of education for working families. In the end, this budget would have a devastating impact on the economic security of working families across America.

Under the bill, Medicare would be cut by $168 billion. Medicaid coverage would no longer be guaranteed, and spending on education is reduced below its level of just 2 years ago. One and one-half million fewer students would be aided by Pell grants, as opposed to those who would be aided under the President's bill. In other words, the President's bill would provide Pell grants for an additional 1.5 million students over that which is proposed in the Republican budget.

In addition, the earned income tax credit would be cut by $20 billion, essentially raising taxes on thousands of working families in my district, and a total of about 6 million working families across the country. The debate on this budget plan has been a loser for the Republican majority throughout the past year. This budget promises to continue this losing tradition today, tomorrow, and on until November.

It is symbolic and ironic that on the same day the majority has rejected a modest increase in the minimum wage to help working families achieve a decent standard of living, it presents this House with a plan to raise taxes on those very same families by cutting the earned income tax credit.

If we cannot raise the wages of working families, then why should we also provide tax breaks for the most affluent members of this society? Why should the House vote for a budget that provides capital gains reduction that largely benefits the wealthiest 1 percent of families when we are telling working people that we cannot afford to raise the minimum wage above the lowest level it has been at in 40 years. It is time that we stand up for the economic security of working Americans instead of trampling on their standard of living.

Mr. Chairman, I urge that we reject this losing budget proposal and we vote for one of the Democratic alternatives that will be presented tomorrow.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANZULLO], a Member who has been particularly active this year in understanding what it means to the American family to have less income and at the same time pay higher taxes.

(Mr. MANZULLO asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Chairman, we all use charts in this body, and different figures are thrown out; but every day millions of Americans get up, get out of bed, they have their breakfast, they pack their lunch box, send their kids off to school. In many households both spouses work. We talk about the forgotten American, the people that go to work every day, the people in this country that are working harder and harder and taking home less money. Nobody is talking about that portion of the American people. Think about it.

The people in this country who get up every day and go to work, they say to me, "Congressman, I don't understand it. I'm working harder than ever in my entire life, and the money simply isn't enough to make the expenses. I'm not buying new cars, I'm not buying new houses, I'm just trying to do the best I can to survive in this economy."

Mr. Chairman, here is a chart. Here is the reason why. Americans today are working harder and taking home less money. Americans today are working harder and taking home less money. Americans today are working harder and taking home less money because governments of all sizes are growing and taking away the money.

The Federal Government continues to grow. The number of Federal employees declines, but the number of nongovernment employees who receive grants from the Federal Government to carry on the work of all the 10,000 Federal programs we have continues to grow. The man who gets up in the morning and packs his lunch and kisses his kids good-bye to go off to school and perhaps his wife goes off to work also, he takes home less money. And who cares about him? Who is caring about that man in America? He is down here taking home less money. Do you know why? Because government is too big. It is too intrusive. It is too pervasive. One program after another. Try to cut down the size of the Government, and the President adds AmeriCorps.

"Just give me another program. Just one more investment. Just another program. Just have this investment."

Mr. Chairman, every single one of the 10,000 programs in this Federal Government has its own constituency, its own lobbyists, its own special interests. But who cares about the man who gets up in the morning and packs his lunch and kisses his kids off to school and perhaps his wife has to go to work, also, just to make ends meet? Who cares about him?

Let me just reiterate the words I have heard this evening from the other side. The Republicans are extreme. Decentralized genocide. Mean-spirited. Cruel. Radicals on the other side. Assault on America.

Do my colleagues know where the assault is taking place? On the American family. Taxes continue to go up.

Rob Yedor runs a factory called Myco in Rockford, IL, about 125 employees. "Oh, with the great budget in 1993, we're going to raise the taxes of the rich, we're going to increase the subchapter S taxes." What happened? He pays $250,000 a year more in taxes.

Mr. Chairman, where was that money going to go? For three things for his employees: to purchase additional capital, that is new machinery, to fund more fully his 401-K retirement plan, and to increase the wages of the people who work for him. That was the 1993 Clinton budget. Do my colleagues know who got hurt by it? The man who gets up in the morning and packs his lunch and sends his kids off to school, the average American worker. Here is the chart. He is taking home less money because this Government is too big.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANZULLO. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. QUINN] wanted to be here to add to what we have said tonight but he lost his voice today, the poor guy. What he wanted to say was that we also did a study which showed that, when the Federal Government consumes more than about 17.4 percent of GDP, every dollar that we spend after that actually has a negative impact in pulling down the productivity and the production that takes place in the American economy.

Today, as the gentleman knows, the Federal Government consumes a full 22 percent of GDP. And so the optimum level, at about 17.5 percent, has been far surpassed. We are 4.5 percent above where we should be. This budget takes a small step toward getting us back to where we should be so that the guy who gets up in the morning and packs his own lunch and maybe the lunch for his kids, as the gentleman so eloquently pointed out, does not have to look forward to a future where we see diminishing returns on work, which is what is happening in the American economy.

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Chairman, there is a chapter that normally appears in every budget called the generational forecast. It has not been in the last couple of budgets. That states because of the $5 trillion national debt, unless something is dramatically done, the children born after 1992 entering the work force would have a combined State, local and Federal tax rate of between 70 and 90 percent. That is unconscionable.

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from North Carolina [Mrs. CLAYTON].

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Chairman, there are many parts of the Republican's proposed budget that I find objectionable, but there is one part that is particularly inappropriate.

They propose, once again, to eliminate the Department of Commerce by abolishing certain programs and by restructuring others.

The Department of Commerce, under the able leadership of Secretary Ron Brown, has been a shining example of what good Government can do.

And with the appointment of Secretary Kantor, continued good things are promised.

Why eliminate the one agency that has aggressively expanded American exports, has effectively pursued business opportunities abroad for American companies—big and small—has helped to ease our balance of trade deficit and, most importantly, has had a big hand in creating jobs here in the United States?

I am particularly distressed by their proposal to transfer the functions, but not the resources, of the Economic Development Administration [EDA] to the Small Business Administration [SBA].

This proposal would appear to be a classic example of seeking to make change for no reason, rather than change for good reason, change for the sake of change rather than change for the better.

The Economic Development Administration has been an effective and vital resource in helping communities, especially rural communities, respond to problems of economic distress.

In my district, EDA has been working to support the Global Transpark, an innovative and creative venture that will allow the rapid transportation of goods and services from my State to markets abroad.

With similar lack of logic, they propose to eliminate the Technology Administration, the Economics and Statistics Administration, the Minority Business Development Agency, and other important parts of the Commerce Department.

Our colleagues propose to save money through this dismantling and restructuring, but their math is misplaced.

The Commerce Department has already undertaken plans to consolidate, reengineer, move operations, delete regulations, change certain policies and save.

If our Republican colleagues are serious about passing a budget resolution in a timely and bipartisan manner, that will be signed by the President, they should start with a new beginning, not with an old ending. The Department of Commerce should not be eliminated.

Indeed, the Department should be funded at a level adequate to continue its good work.

Economics require it. America needs it. Good sense demands it.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SANFORD] who is going to report on yet another Joint Economic Committee study which shows the negative effects of large Government on the free enterprise system.

Mr. SANFORD. Mr. Chairman, in this whole debate about the budget, I would remind everybody that Mother's Day was this weekend.

One of my mother's sayings was that too much of a good thing is actually a bad thing. Benjamin Franklin said, "I would rather urge moderation in all things," and farmers back in my district had this saying that you can only squeeze but so much blood out of a turnip.

What these sayings say, I guess, is a word of support for a recent Joint Economic Committee study entitled "The Impact of the Welfare State on the American Economy," by Lowell Gallaway and Richard Vedder.

Its findings were highlighted in a recent Investors Business Daily article entitled "Cut to Grow." What both the report said and what the article said was that there is a price tag to Government spending. If you look at this chart, that price tag is that you can only go so far before Government spending becomes a problem. Keynes was right up to a point that Government spending creates economic activity, up until about this 17.6 percent that the chairman alluded to, and then beyond that it is actually detrimental. Beyond that it is actually a drag on the economy.

Mr. Chairman, here we are at about 22 percent of the size of our economy right now with Government spending, and what that means is that it is actually hurting us. For every $1 of additional Government spending beyond that 17.6 percent, it slows us down by about 38 percent, or, if you were to go out and find $100 of Government cuts, you would come up with about $138 of benefit to the total economy.

So I would say that this debate in large part is about who is best at spending your money. If you think it is bureaucrats, then you probably do not want to support this budget resolution. But if you think you are best at spending your own money, this graph and this study support that idea. Therefore, I would urge us all to support this budget resolution.

Mr. Chairman, I include the article referred to for the RECORD.

PERSPECTIVE—CUT TO GROW

Many supply-siders focus on cutting taxes as the best way to lessen the load of government and raise economic growth. But a new study suggests cutting federal spending can also do the trick.

The best size of government is about 17.6% of gross domestic product, says a recent study from Congress' Joint Economic Committee.

When government is very small it can do a lot to raise economic growth, say Ohio University economists Lowell Gallaway and Richard Vedder, authors of the study.

These include providing a strong defense, fighting crime, creating courts where people can resolve disputes and building a basic infrastructure, such as roads and highways.

But more government spending faces diminishing returns. That is, each additional dollar spent brings fewer benefits than the last one.

So the bigger government gets, the less likely it is that the benefits of more spending outweigh its costs.

Eventually, the study says, spending slows economic growth as government focuses on programs that dampen output rather than help it, such as regulating businesses and redistributing incomes.

For example, in 1948 less than 10% of spending went to social programs. For the twelve years after that, 25% of added spending went to these programs. That moved up to one-third in the 1960s, and half in the 1970s.

From 1990 to 1995, the government added more money to social programs than it added to the overall budget.

As a result, from 1947 through 1951, government spent about 15% of GDP, while GDP grew at a yearly rate of 4.2%. Through 1974, government spent 19% of GDP, and the economy grew at a 3.3% rate. Since then, government has spent 22%; GDP has grown at a 2.5% rate.

The government has exceeded the 17.6% spending level every year since 1965, ignoring gains to the economy from cutting spending, says the study. This excess spending has curbed the economy by an average of about 2% year, leading a cumulative loss of about $2.3 trillion in output.

That leaves a good deal of room for today's lawmakers to raise economic growth by cutting spending.

This year the government spent about 21.4% of GDP, according to the Treasury Department. The GOP budget plan would bring spending down to 18.5% of GDP by 2002, says the Congressional Budget Office.

For every $1 of spending cuts, the private-sector economy will expand by $1.38, Gallaway and Vedder say.

If sustained for seven years, that $1 budget cut would add $2.45 to total output, they say.

Supply-siders have long urged Congress to change the way it forecasts how much revenue the government would forego if it cuts tax rates. By raising economic growth, tax cuts need not lose as much as Congress thinks, and may actually raise revenue.

This study suggests that a similar effect may also work with spending cuts, meaning that cutting spending by $1 may close the budget gap by more than $1.

This effect should hold until the government whittles the budget down to 17.6% of GDP, and perhaps further.

Gallaway and Vidder got the 17.6% figure by assuming that government spending shouldn't be treated as a cost of production. If it were treated as a cost of production, then much less spending should be justified.

Then, the best spending level for government would be between 10% and 11% of GDP, they say. But treating spending simply as a production cost may overlook other reasons for it.

Also, the numbers may not tell the whole story.

For example, what if lawmakers trimmed government back to 17.6%, but did so by getting rid of spending that Gallaway and Vedder say is good, leaving things like welfare and regulating agencies?

That's unlikely, but it suggests a different route to the same theme of less government.

Instead of focusing on numbers, perhaps we should focus on the kinds of spending government does, no matter the amount. For example, during wartime the best level of government spending may rise as it costs more to defend ourselves.

By contrast, in a peaceful world, 17.6% may be much too high. Staying at that level might require welfare programs or wasteful defense spending.

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Georgia [Ms. MCKINNEY].

□ 1915

Ms. MCKINNEY. Mr. Chairman, here we go again. Instead of offering a budget that protects middle-class families in this changing economy, the Republican Party has once again lived up to its reputation as defender of Wall Street's barons.

Why do we need to cut Medicare, only to give $124 billion in tax breaks. Moreover, Mr. Chairman, the Republican budget does virtually nothing to go after corporate welfare. In fact, the conservative Cato Institute issued this news release today which says, "Eliminating corporate welfare would cut the deficit in half—business subsidies cost $75 billion per year, Cato study says."

Why must our seniors, schools, environment, and the poor be first in line to face cuts when we give away at least $75 billion in corporate welfare every year?

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to defeat this budget which is nothing more than the same old, same old.

In addition, Mr. Chairman, the Republicans have innovated a new form of governance. I call it kitchen sink legislation. They throw in everything—including the kitchen sink—and wait to see what survives the conference committee. This is no way to govern and we need to defeat this Republican budget.

Mr. Chairman, I include the following for the RECORD:

[From the Cato Institute News Release, May 15, 1996]

ELIMINATING CORPORATE WELFARE WOULD CUT DEFICIT IN HALF—BUSINESS SUBSIDIES COST $75 BILLION PER YEAR, CATO STUDY SAYS

"In 1995 the corporate safety net was left largely intact," says Stephen Moore, director of fiscal policy studies at the Cato Institute. "If members of Congress balk at cutting aid to dependent corporations again in 1996, they will look like fiscal frauds and fools."

In a new Cato Institute study, "How Corporate Welfare Won: Clinton and Congress Retreat from Cutting Business Subsidies," Moore and Cato fiscal policy analyst Dean Stansel note that the federal government currently spends $75 billion per year on corporate welfare—the use of government authority to confer targeted benefits on specific firms or industries. They identify the 35 "least defensible" business subsidies and show that Congress moved to cut only $2.8 billion, or 15 percent, from the 1995 level.

The Clinton administration has been hostile to even the modest corporate welfare cutbacks proposed by Congress, Moore and Stansel argue. "If Congress's performance was a disappointment, the Clinton administration's was dismal. In fact, we find that for the 35 corporate welfare programs identified in this study the administration's 1996 budget actually requested a slight increase in spending."

Moore and Stansel recommend eliminating or sharply scaling back programs including the Export Enhancement Program, Foreign Agriculture Service, Market Promotion Program, Advanced Technology Program, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, Army Corps of Engineers, Bureau of Mines, Export-Import Bank and Overseas Private Investment Corporation.

"If all federal assistance to business were purged from the budget, the budget deficit could be cut in half," Moore and Stansel write. "Both the social welfare and corporate welfare states needed to be reformed with equal urgency."

Policy analysis No. 254—contact: Stephen Moore, director of fiscal policy studies, 202-789-5252 Dean Stansel, first policy analyst, 202-789-5250; Dave Quast, director of public affairs, 202-789-5266; and Peggy Ellis, director of government affairs, 202-789-5284.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. INGLIS].

Mr. INGLIS of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Chairman, I have had the opportunity now to sit here and listen to some of the comments of our colleagues between the time of the Committee on the Budget's allocated time and now the Joint Economic Committee's allocated time, and it has been very instructive. It has been instructive because particularly these very valuable studies of the Joint Economic Committee point out that this Government is a drag on our economy. It is too big and needs to be reduced in size and scope.

As the gentleman from South Carolina just said, for $100 in cuts, you get $138 in expansion of the economy. That is a god bargain, so we should listen to folks on the Joint Economic Committee and have the courage to make these changes.

The second observation I would make is really I think it is very interesting to hear some of the comments from this side of the aisle about this budget. I had hoped that maybe this year we were going to be a little bit some candid in our debate, a little bit more forthcoming; that maybe this time we would not subject seniors in America to MediScare, that we would not subject poor people in this country to Medicaid scare. But it is pretty apparent we are going to go through it one more time, round two. In fact, the gentleman on the floor a little while ago said they are going to "Take away Medicare." Take away Medicare. The gentlewoman who just spoke said there were going to be cuts to Medicare.

Well, I defy anybody in this body to describe where there are cuts to Medicare. There is a reduction in the rate of growth, and per beneficiary the spending goes from this year, 1996, $5,200, to $7,000 in 2002.

The gentleman from Washington State said we are going to take away Medicare. I wonder if that sounds to any of my colleagues like it is taking away Medicare? We are going from $5,200 per year per beneficiary to $7,000 per year in 2002. $5,200 to $7,000. That is not taking away Medicare. That is not a cut to Medicare. That is an increase in Medicare spending.

I wonder how it is that our colleagues, particularly on the other side of the aisle, have the ability to say these are cuts? I suppose they are encouraged by the polls that indicate that MediScare works. You can scare seniors in America. They get worried and they decide that they will support you and your political campaign, even though you are imperiling the future of Medicare and of the whole country.

I hope as the debate goes on that just maybe, somehow, there will be some additional candor released here in Washington, and we will be able to have an honest debate.

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas [Ms. JACKSON-LEE].

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, we have come here again for the budget for 1997, and I thought we would have had an opportunity through the series of continuing resolutions that we attempted to pass in this last year and the reasonable disagreement that Democrats have had with my Republican friends, that we might have had a more bipartisan effort on this new budget.

We all recognize that it was the Reagan years when we began to use a new term in budget deficit, and that is a trillion dollars, when under President Reagan there was an attempt to cut taxes, but to continue to spend for programs that benefited many of those who did not need.

We now have a budget that portends to give money back to working Americans, but yet it damages and undermines the needs of children.

The Republican plan folds 20 separate child protection programs into two block grants, at a time when the GAO and others report current resources are failing to keep pace with the needs of a national child protection system in crisis; we cut funds that provide for reporting of abuse and neglect; and we do not give enough money to protect abused children and to protect them to make sure they are safe and in loving and permanent adoptive homes.

The plan potentially guts accountability for State child protection systems, over 20 of which are operating under court mandates. The Republican budget assumes more strict definition of disability for children, and the creation of a two-tiered system of benefits for children. Eligible children who require personal care assistance and without such assistance would require specialized care outside the home receive 100 percent of the Federal SSI benefit. However, children with disabilities who do not meet this personal care assistance test get 75 percent. This affects children with disabilities such as cerebral palsy, Down's syndrome, cystic fibrosis and AIDS. Then what we do is we do not protect the future for our children.

Through this budget we cut the Commerce Department. Then we move on to cut $330 billion out of the research and development budget for our country. It cuts the Advanced Technology Program, which is a program that has sought an opportunity for form a partnership between our small businesses and the Government.

This budget is proposed by Republicans to suggest that we give a $500 per child tax credit to low-income families. What they do not say to the American people is that the children's tax credit will not benefit 34 percent of the Nation's children.

This budget proposed by Republicans is deja vu, but it is the same old song.

It takes away the future of our children. It ensures that they will not have Medicaid by making this a modified block grant, and therefore ensuring that our children will not have good health.

Mr. Chairman, I ask that we support the Democrat alternative, for this budget is not one that helps all Americans.

Mr. Chairman, the Republican leadership, just in time for Presidential election year politics is talking about a balanced budget again. The is deja vu for the American voter who well remembers the campaign promises of Ronald Reagan who predicted that he could balance the federal budget by cutting taxes and increasing spending. Candidate George Bush called that budgetary slight of hand Voodoo Economics.

The results of two Reagan terms was a budget deficit which for the first time in any country's history used the term trillion to quantify the extent of the deficit.

In my Houston, TX district the minimum wage provides a less than minimum standard of living. For families it is not a matter of competing priorities but a matter of survival skills. These families are lead by mothers, and/or fathers who will in many cases no matter what the circumstances are will seek out a job with pay that few of us could imagine providing the sole means of support to our own families.

It is time for working families to get the raise they deserve. A few things to consider in the argument to raise the minimum wage. When adjusted for inflation, the value of the minimum wage is now 29 percent lower than it was in 1979. Raising the minimum wage from $4.25 to $5.15 an hour would lift an estimated 300,000 people out of poverty, including 100,000 children. Women make up 59 percent of minimum wage earners and nearly three-quarters of them are adults.

Taken individually each of the aforementioned facts is enough to make this a top legislative priority for the 104th Congress. My hope is that as this Congress works through its second session that this and other issues of vital importance to women and children are brought before the House for serious consideration.

We speak so often in this House about family values and protecting children. At the same time however, my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, have presented a budget package that will effectively eliminate the Federal guarantee of assistance for poor children in this country for the first time in 60 years.

The majority's plan is antifamily and antichild. It calls for unprecedented cuts in programs serving children and would remove the basic protections for hungry, abused, disabled and poor children while using the savings to offset tax breaks for wealthy individuals.

The Republican plan folds 20 separate child protection programs into 2 block grants at a time when GAO and others report current resources are failing to keep pace with the needs of a national child protection system in crisis. Under this plan, funds could be inadequate to respond to rapidly increasing reports of abuse and neglect, and insufficient to protect abused children and find them safe, loving and permanent adoptive homes. The plan potentially guts accountability for State child protection systems, over 20 of which are operating under court mandates for failing to provide adequate service to abused and neglected children.

The Republican budget assumes a more strict definition of disability for children and the creation of a two-tiered system of benefits for children. Eligible children who require personal care assistance and who, without such assistance, would require specialized care outside the home receive 100 percent of the Federal SSI benefit. However, children with disabilities who do not meet this personal care assistance test receive 75 percent of the SSI benefit amount. This system could result in a large majority of disabled children having their benefits reduced—children with disabilities such as cerebral palsy, Down syndrome, muscular dystrophy, cystic fibrosis, and AIDS.

The Republican plan would also deny most Federal, State, and local benefits—including school lunch—to illegal aliens and would deny SSI and food stamps to legal aliens until they become citizens. That plainly is an unfunded mandate on the States.

The Republic budget fails to provide adequate resources for work programs and child care which are critical to effectuate a transition from welfare to work. The Republican plan significantly increases the need for child care while reducing the resources for child care services as well as the funds available to states to improve the quality of care.

This strategy of welfare-to-work is doomed to fail. Mandatory welfare-to-work programs can get parents off welfare and into jobs, but only if the program is well designed and is given the resources to be successful. The GOP plan is punitive and wrong-headed. It will not put people to work, it will put them on the street. Any restructuring of the welfare system must move people away from dependency toward self-sufficiency. Facilitating the transition off welfare requires job training, guaranteed child care and health insurance at an affordable price.

We cannot expect to reduce our welfare rolls if we do not provide the women of this Nation the opportunity to better themselves and their families through job training and education, if we do not provide them with good quality child care and most importantly if we do not provide them with a job.

Together, welfare programs make up the safety net that poor children and their families rely on in times of need. We must not allow the safety net to be shredded. We must keep our promises to the children of this Nation. We must ensure that in times of need they receive the health care, food and general services they need to survive.

Finally, the Republican budget resolution proposes to cut the earned income tax credit [EITC] by $20 billion over the next 7 years. This cut includes eliminating the EITC for childless workers as well as families with children who have modest incomes. In fact, over 6 million families with children could receive a reduction in their EITC.

This program was designed to assist the working poor of America. The Republicans argue that in exchange for losing the earned income tax credit, many low-income families would receive the $500 per child tax credit. The fact of the matter, however, is that the children's tax credit will not benefit 34 percent of the Nation's children because they live in families that are ineligible because their income is too low.

Medicare, Medicaid, and welfare are on the top of the list for cuts right now, but I think that we can find ways to be fair and just when we make budgetary reduction decisions without shutting the Federal government down.

I would hope that this next attempt to seriously deal with this Nation's budget deficit will include compassion for the poor, our children and the elderly.

We should not play election year politics with this country's budget.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I believe that I am at least for now our last speaker, so I just wanted to kind of recap regarding the statements that my colleagues on the Republican side of the Joint Economic Committee have made here this evening and why they are important.

Before I do that, Let me just pick upon something that the last speaker mentioned, and that was the performance or relationship between the performance of our taxing and spending during the decade of the 1980's.

Yes, it is true that there was a tax rate cut which took place in the early eighties. I believe the gentlewoman said or inferred it was because of that tax rate cut that the deficit occurred.

Well, I would just like to remind everyone, or if people do not know this to tell them this for the first time maybe, we started the decade of the eighties, before the tax cuts, with about $500 billion in revenue, half a trillion dollars in revenue, money for us to spend, decide on the priorities, $500 billion.

By 1990 that had grown, in spite of the tax cuts, I should not say in spite of, because of the tax cuts. 1990, that money grew and became twice as much, $1 trillion. that is right, from 1980. In the early eighties when we had the tax cuts, the tax cuts provided an economic stimulus, and because we had more people working, more people packing their lunch in the morning, more people going to work and coming home on Friday afternoon with paychecks, larger paychecks, I might add, 1.7 percent each year, because they had more paychecks and higher income, they paid more taxes, and our revenue doubled during the decade of the eighties.

It was not, it has been proven not to be, true that someone can point their fingers at the Reagan tax cuts and say that it why we have a deficit. The fact of the matter is that we more than doubled spending. It is Congress' function. We are in the middle of the function right now tonight of determining how much money to spend for fiscal year 1997. We will make that determination just like we did every year during the eighties, and every year during the eighties we increased spending by or 7 or 8 percent. It was not the tax cuts that did that; it was done right here in this very process that we are engaged in tonight.

Spending is the problem, folks. Spending is the problem for the folks that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANZULLO] talked about also. A man goes to work, comes home, in 1992 making a median income of $31,897. It dropped down to $31,186 in 1993, and all the way down to $30,854 in 1994.

Once again, we see the effect of tax policy here, because we had a large tax increases, two large tax increases, bipartisan tax increases, one advocated by President Bush and the Democrats in this House in 1990, and the second by President Clinton and the Democrats in this House in 1993.

I just hold this up for emphasis. This is what happens when we increase taxes on the American families. It slows down the economy, less income for workers, or at least stagnant income for workers, and as a result of that, I think we can learn from history.

We were not the first people to say this. The first person to say this, and believe in this theory, was a member of your party. That was John Kennedy. He said in the State of the Union Address in 1963, "We cannot for long expect to lead the cause of peace and freedom around the world if we cease to set the economic pace at home."

He proposed massive tax cuts. Revenue grew and the economy grew, and it was the same story. So we can go back and make this a bipartisan argument.

Let me just conclude with this one chart, to reemphasize the point. Starting back in 1973, we anticipated what the American family, or have anticipated since, what the American family should have earned if we had not increased the size of government and the cost of government beyond the optimum size and the optimum cost.

If we had kept the size of government at 17.5 percent of GDP, this red line exemplifies what should have happened in terms of median income. Steady growth. Instead, we increased the cost of government to 18 and then 19 and then 20, and now 22 percent. This dotted line shows what actually happened to median family income, a large deficit of another kind that is even more meaningful to many American families than the deficit we talk about all the time.

This gap represents over the last 10 years to the average American family a loss of $106,000 in wages. So we are trying with this budget to correct a situation which we have allowed to develop here over the last several decades, Republicans and Democrats working together on the wrong path, on many occasions, and we are trying to correct that situation by slowing the rate of growth of government, because if we do not slow the rate of government and begin to consume 22.5 percent and 22.6 percent of GDP and 23 percent of GDP, this situation with wages and the long-term growth in our economy can only take one path, a negative one.

So, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KASICH] and his committee and his staff in my opinion have done a great service to the country in bringing this budget to the floor this evening. So I ask Members on both sides of the aisle to consider not just how much we will spend, but the priorities of what we are going to spend, and please, please, consider the effect on the pocketbook of the average American, middle class, upper class, lower class, all classes of American workers.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PALLONE].

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Chairman, I am glad that I followed my colleague from New Jersey, who I have the greatest respect for. But I think that the point that I would like to make this evening is that it is certainly true that our goal with this budget and with every budget has to be to achieve a balanced budget over the next 6 or so years, and that in the process of doing that certain types of tax breaks, if you will, if they help the average American, can be accomplished.

The President's budget does that. The President's budget achieves a balanced budget, if you will, by the year 2002. There is a family tax credit and there are education tax benefits, if you will, to pay for tuition for higher education.

So I would maintain that the difference between the President's budget and the budget that we are going to be voting on tomorrow, that has been presented by the Republican leadership, is not over which achieves a balanced budget, because they both do; or over which accomplishes giving certain tax credits or benefits for families or for education, because I believe actually in that respect the President's accomplishes more; but rather over the priorities in spending. That is where I think the difference really lies between these two proposals, that of the President and that of the Republican leadership.

The priorities are the same priorities that Democrats articulated last year during the budget battle, and our point was then and our point again now is that we can protect senior citizens' health care, we can protect Medicare, we can protect Medicaid, and we can also protect our environment and we can protect education programs at the same time that we balance the budget. There, I think, is the major difference between what the Republican leadership has proposed and discussed tonight and what the President has proposed.

Essentially, if we look at this Republican budget, it is more of the same on the issues of Medicare, Medicaid, education, and the environment. It has a negative impact on each of those areas for the average American.

I talked earlier this evening about the Medicare Program, and I believe strongly that the $167 billion in Medicare cuts over 6 years will definitely have a negative impact of the Medicare Program. It will cause many hospitals to close. In our own State of New Jersey, both myself and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SAXTON] have hospitals that are more than 60 percent dependent on Medicare, and I believe that many of those hospitals are going to face the real possibility of closure because of the level of Medicare cuts in this Republican budget.

But I would also like to talk about Medicaid. Medicaid is the program that exists right now. It is a Federal and State joint program that pays for poor people, or people below a certain income, and primarily pays for mothers with dependent children, and children, as well as for senior citizens who are in nursing homes.

What the Republicans are proposing is a $72 billion cut in Medicaid funding but block granting the program, just as they did in 1995, so they are essentially sending less money in real terms back to the States and leaving it up to the States to decide who is going to be covered and what kind of coverage there will be.

So what is going to happen is that many States will simply not provide the same level of funding. They will decide not to cover certain senior citizens, perhaps certain nursing home coverage; or they will say that certain children at a certain age, for example are not covered by Medicaid; or certain families, because they do not fall below a certain level of income, will not be covered by Medicaid.

We will see a larger and larger number of people who do not have health insurance, or a crisis perhaps in the nursing home situation, where many senior citizens will either not have access to nursing home care that they need, or they will not have the quality of care that they have now because there will not be a certain amount of supervision or nurses checking on the situation in nursing homes, for example.

So we are seeing a ratcheting down, if you will, of the Medicare program and the Medicaid program, and that is the same thing that we saw last year; that is hurting average Americans, particularly the senior citizens and those who depend on Medicaid.

Now, what about on the education front? Well, on the education front, it is pretty much the same thing again. We see the elimination of the direct student loan program. In my home State of New Jersey, Rutgers has depended on this a great deal. It has expanded educational opportunities, provided more money for loans for students in various universities and colleges around the country.

We see an end to new funding for Perkins loans, another form of funding to pay for higher education for many students. We see the elimination of the AmeriCorps Program; and the Republicans have been very critical of the national service program.

So whether it is education, whether it is Medicare, Medicaid or even the environment, which once again has significant cuts, that is the difference here between those two proposals.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

The continued claims from the other side that there are cuts in Medicare and Medicaid are no more true this year than they were last year. My friend from New Jersey, I believe, knows that I spent untold hours in hospitals during the debate on Medicare last year. There was no thought among the hospital administrators at the conclusion of that period of time that any hospitals were going to close anywhere in New Jersey, and seniors would expect the same level of benefits that they had received before.

It is true that the rate of growth in the program would have been reduced somewhat, but there was not a single penny of cuts in that budget, nor is there in this.

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Ms. DELAURO].

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from New York for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, there has been much discussion about the new Republican budget and about how moderate it is, but in fact this budget is in most ways as harsh as the budget that was proposed by the Republicans last year, and which the American public said to the President of the United States, 60 percent of them, veto this budget because it does not treat seniors well. It hurts seniors, it hurts education, it hurts the environment and it hurts those who are in nursing homes.

The plain truth is that under the Republican Medicare plan, this time around, deja vu all over again, seniors end up paying more and getting less. In the end, the worst fear of all is that seniors are going to be left with a second-rate health care system.

Rural hospitals are in danger of closing. Hospitals in my district came to see me in the last budget debate about their concern and their inability to be able to provide services.

The Republican proposal cuts Medicare by $168 billion. My Republican colleagues say they are cutting Medicare to ensure its solvency, but in fact the President's budget protects Medicare solvency for the same number of years, but does so without making these same deep cuts.

Do not believe the argument about slowing the rate of growth. If we have more seniors in the program and we have inflation costs, and we do not meet those needs and we do provide an increase, we have left these people shortchanged and some people will not get services.

The Republican cuts in Medicare are unnecessary. So why are we proceeding with them? Could it be that they are cutting Medicare more than they need so that they can pay for some other things, like tax breaks for the wealthiest Americans? No coincidence, again, that their tax package is $175 billion.

This budget unravels 30 years of progress in protecting our seniors.

That should not surprise us. We should not pass this budget.

I will finish with this quote, where we get a sense of what the Republican leadership is about. The Speaker of the House said, and I quote. "We don't get rid of it in round one because we don't think it is politically smart and we don't think that's the right way to go through a transition. But we believe it's going to wither on the vine because we think people are voluntarily going to leave it."

They would like to see it wither on the vine. Medicare should wither on the vine. That is not the value, that is not the priority, that is not a safe, secure, dignified retirement for seniors in this country who have earned it.

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MEEHAN].

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, we want to balance the budget. There is a Democratic plan to balance the budget. The question is this: Are we going to ask for shared sacrifice? Who is going to pay the price to balance the budget?

The budget actually increases the deficit in the first year by $17 billion. We are going to have to borrow $17 billion to pay for tax cuts in the first year of this budget.

In addition to that, we have corporate welfare cuts that would be difficult politically to institute because the special interests are supporting it in the Halls of Congress. We could do a better job of cutting corporate welfare. This budget does not do that.

This budget looks at education and again cuts education, again cuts the growth in the Medicare program. We have to make difficult decisions, Mr. Chairman. Let us make them fairly. Let us ask all Americans to share that burden.

We just passed a defense authorization budget that increases the defense budget above what the Pentagon asked for by $13 billion. Is that shared sacrifice? We should vote for a budget that is fair. This budget is not fair.

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentlewoman from Florida, Ms. CORRINE BROWN.

Ms. BROWN of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this Republican budget which, once again, balances the budget of this country on the backs of our poor, our elderly, our veterans and our children.

This budget represents the philosophy that those who have the money make the rules. It rewards those who have, and punishes those who have not.

Instead of evenly distributing the burden of responsibility in this fiscally challenging time, the Republicans have decided to rob the poor and working people to pay the rich. In other words, more reverse Robin-Hood.

Mr. Chairman, this budget denies assistance to children if they're born into a family already on welfare. It cuts $20 billion from the earned income tax credit—which currently helps the poorest in this country who are working for a living.

It cuts Medicaid by $72 billion, so that disabled people, senior citizens, children and pregnant women will suffer unjustly. In my State alone there are more than 3 million senior citizens. They make up more than 20 percent of the population. This budget is a slap in their faces.

Another inefficient move by the Republicans is cutting job training and education programs, which will have an adverse effect on this country.

It ensures that poor people will have an even harder time getting student loans, financial aid and work study. And it guarantees that people who need the job skills won't get them. This isn't sound fiscal policy.

This isn't just a bad budget, it's a mean-spirited budget. I urge my colleagues to accept the responsibility of representing the people of this country in a fair and decent manner. Oppose this budget.

In closing, I would like to say that "To whom God has given much, much is expected."

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Chairman, how much time is remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SAXTON] has 1 minute remaining, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. HINCHEY] has 2 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from New Jersey has the right to close.

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, over the course of this debate we have tried to demonstrate that there are substantial differences in priorities between the Democratic party in this House and the Republican party. Nowhere are those priorities more clearly defined than in the context of budgeting, and this budget continues that clear definition.

We want to balance the budget, too, and we are in the process of doing precisely that. When I came to this Congress, coincidentally when President Clinton was elected, the annual budget deficit was approximately $290 billion. If we had continued the economic policies of the Bush Administration, by the year 2002 the budget deficit would be pushing $600 billion. As a result, however, of the budget resolution of 1993, the deficit has been coming down substantially.

As a matter of fact, today the budget deficit is not $290 billion, as it was in January of 1993, it is approximately $140 billion, less than half of what it was approximately 3 years ago, and it continues to decline. We have reduced the deficit without cutting Medicare, without cutting Medicaid, without cutting education, without cutting protection for the environment, without cutting veterans benefits.

Although our friends and colleagues on the other side of the aisle protest when we claim that they are cutting it, the fact of the matter is if we follow their priorities, fewer people will get health care in this country next year and the year after that and the year after that.

□ 1945

Most of them will be elderly people because mostly elderly people benefit from the programs of Medicare and Medicaid. If we follow their priorities, our educational programs will be seriously deficient. From the elementary and secondary level, in fact beginning at Head Start, right on through Pell grants, there will be less educational opportunity in this country. Middle-class people will be unable to send their children to college. We will have a country that is not benefiting from the benefits of their education.

So these are the differences. They are basic, fundamental differences. Our budget is better. Their budget is worse. We need to defeat theirs and pass ours.

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Let me just say to the folks here from the other side of the aisle, our goals are twofold. The goals of this budget are twofold. One is to set the right priorities, and the second is to get our economy moving again. I have tried to talk over the last hour about the economic implications of this budget as opposed to yours. I believe all Americans will be better off if we can get the economy going again and get median income on the way up again. Where I take some umbrage with my friends from the other side of the aisle is their incorrect use of the word "cut." Anybody can see, this chart represents what our proposal is with Medicare. Over the last 7 years, we have spent $920 billion on Medicare programs. Over the next 7 years, we propose to spend $1.479 billion. If you call that a cut, you have been in Washington too long. This is an increase, not a decrease. It is a substantial increase, not a decrease. So I say to my friends, let us play fair. Let us tell it like it is.

THE PRICE OF BIG GOVERNMENT

Mr. QUINN. Mr. Chairman, recently the Joint Economic Committee released a major study on the impact of excessive Government spending on total worker pay and benefits. This study, the impact of the welfare state on workers, shows how excessive Federal spending has depressed the growth of productivity, wages, and benefits over the last two decades.

According to this JEC study, when Federal spending as a share of GDP exceeds 17.4 percent, additional Federal spending becomes literally counterproductive. These negative results are reflected in lower productivity and compensation growth. As a result of excessive Federal spending over the last two decades, the typical worker has lost a sum total of $106,800, enough money to purchase a median price new home in 1993.

At current levels, each additional $1 of Federal spending lowers the sum total of workers compensation by 26 cents. In other words, an extra $100 billion of Federal spending would lower total compensation available to American workers by $26 billion.

This study also debunks the myth advanced by Labor Secretary Robert Reich that seeks to blame the income stagnation under the Clinton administration on a recovery in business profits. This study refutes the notion that business profits cause income stagnation. And instead demonstrates that healthy business profits tend to generate compensation gains for American workers.

This study also shows that when appropriate inflation measures are used, hourly wages and benefits received by the typical worker increased about 26 percent between 1973 and 1994, after adjustment for inflation. This study demonstrates that there is a very close relationship between productivity and compensation growth during this period.

As we know, the real problem is that real median family income is stagnating under the Clinton administration. Other income measures of earnings are also flat or declining. We must do something to protect American families from the Clinton crunch. The tax relief provided in the Republican budget is a good first step.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Chairman, one of the key questions facing policymakers today is what can be done to help improve the standard of living for the average American. I hear from people all the time who tell me they are working harder and longer than ever, but they feel squeezed and are just barely getting by. I believe we must make a determined effort in this country for a higher rate of economic growth. That must become one of our Nation's top priorities. Higher growth will come from more saving and investment and from greater productivity, and it will do much to improve the outlook for working Americans.

State of economy: All of us know that the overall economy is doing reasonably well. Growth and inflation are both around 2 percent. Many jobs are being created and the unemployment rate is low. The deficit is going down. Stock prices are at an all-time high. But at the same time, there is tremendous uneasiness about the economy. Layoffs and downsizing are continuing as the inevitable result of global competition and technological change. There is job insecurity, enormous income inequality, and significant pressure on families.

I believe President Kennedy was right when he talked about a rising tide lifting all boats. We must have stronger economic growth.

Economic growth: Economic growth is the rate at which the overall economy grows from each year to year. In 1994 our Nation's total output of goods and services—gross domestic product—was $7.1 trillion and in 1995 GDP was $7.25 trillion, for a growth rate last year of 2 percent.

The U.S. growth rate has slowed since the decades after World War II. Economic growth averaged a robust 3.9 percent per year in the 1950's and 4.3 percent in the 1960's, but it has dropped to 3.2 percent in the 1970's, 2.7 percent in the 1980's, and, with the 1990-91 recession, 1.8 percent so far in the 1990's. We need to do better. Many economists believe that we should be striving for growth of around 3.5 percent per year over the long term. They believe that the structure of the economy has changed in recent years to allow that kind of growth without reigniting inflation.

Growth in the material standard of living is obviously not the sole measure of success as a society. But strong, balanced, and sustained economic growth helps in many ways. Jobs multiply and wages rise during periods of solid growth. Prior to the 1970's when we had strong economic growth, wage growth was also solid. But as the economy has slowed, wage growth has flattened out. Strong economic growth also makes it easier to balance the budget, as the growing economy boosts revenues and reduced social safety net costs, and it makes it easier for Americans to tackle a variety of domestic problems. Strong economic growth alone cannot solve the nation's problems, but without it they are likely to become increasingly difficult.

We need, in short, an economy that will provide employment for everyone willing and able to work, and an economy that will provide opportunity for a consistently higher standard of living for those employed. The only way I know to get that is with strong private sector growth. That growth will come from higher levels of investment and superior public services.

Pro-growth agenda: I believe there are several parts to a pro-growth agenda. First, we must balance the federal budget. Large Federal borrowing drains the pool of national savings available for productive private sector investment and it drives up interest rates. Progress has been made on the deficit, as it has been cut in half over the last 4 years. We need to build on that progress, put aside our partisan differences, and balance the budget.

Second, we need to reform the federal tax system so economic growth becomes a much more central objective. That means it has to do a much better job of encouraging saving and investment. How it should be restructured to achieve that is a matter of debate. We may need a variation of the flat tax, a lower tax on capital, or a system of taxing consumption instead of investment, but we must put at the top of our national agenda a search for a tax system that enhances growth.

Third, we must expand our trade opportunities and open foreign markets to U.S. products. Jobs in exporting industries tend to be higher-paying, so our companies must have fair access to the rapidly growing markets overseas. We need to continually review and adjust U.S. trade policy to make sure it is working in our national interest and is helping to expand our economy and good-paying jobs.

Fourth, we need to curb excessive and costly Government regulations. Many Federal regulations provide important health and safety protections. But overall we need to make sure their benefits exceed their cost and they are carried out in the least burdensome way. Regulations should recognize that a vibrant private sector is the best engine for economic growth and jobs.

Fifth, I also think we need higher levels of public investment in infrastructure. Federal, State, and local governments need to invest in more and better roads, bridges, highways, water systems, sewer systems, harbors, ports, airports and all the rest that helps make the private sector more productive. We also need to promote investment in research and technology, which boosts economic growth.

Finally, we need greater attention to upgrading the education and skills training of our workers. Improving educational performance is an absolute priority in today's world so all Americans—not just those at the top—can prosper as the economy grows. Education is, of course, primarily a State responsibility, but it is a national problem. Access to higher education and more skills training is a must.

I do not suggest that such changes will come about easily. We must be prepared to deal with the human problems that emerge. We should do all we can, for example, to create a system of portable pensions and portable health care to cushion the transition for people who have to move from one job to another. We must find ways of providing profit sharing and stock ownership plans for employees, not just for the top corporate management, so everyone has a greater stake in the success of our companies.

Conclusion: In sum, our objective is simple: higher growth in the American economy. That basic goal needs to become the much more central focus of what the Federal Government does on a variety of fronts—whether it be our budget or tax policy or our trade, regulatory, and public investment policy. In the end I think what is important for working people is for this economic system of ours to grow and to create more good-paying jobs. We don't know all the answers about getting higher growth, but we know some of them, and we should get about the business of implementing them.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this budget resolution. If a budget is a statement of priorities, this document demonstrates beyond a reasonable doubt that the Republican majority still doesn't care about average, working Americans. It is mean spirited and short sighted.

Although the Republican majority proposes to increase military spending—spending nearly $13 billion more than the Generals in the Pentagon say we need—they continue to attack programs that help the poor and the middle class, that make life better for the majority of Americans.

They want to cut $215 million from the Health Resources and Services Administration, which funds Maternal and Child Health Block Grants, Ryan White AIDS programs, community health centers, family planning, and targeting programs for health professions.

They cut $398 million from the Department of Health and Human Services.

They freeze the National Institutes of Health at last year's level—a cut of 15.9 percent in real dollars by the year 2002.

They freeze the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants and Children.

They slash housing programs by $20 billion over 6 years.

They cut libraries by 20 percent, Aid to Higher Education Institutional Development by $46 million in 1997, and Job Corps by $88 million.

While they cry crocodile tears over the working poor, they cut the Earned Income Tax Credit which helps people who earn the lowest wages and work hard to raise families get by.

They kill the NEA and the NEH.

They eliminate operating subsidies for mass transit by 2002, even though it is the cleanest, most environmentally sound transportation alternative, but they are willing to destroy the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to drill for more oil.

We need a budget that helps low- and middle-income Americans, educates our kids, makes our infrastructure more efficient, enforces the law and preserves our environment and our health. I urge my colleagues to reject the Republican budget resolution.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Chairman, the Federal debt is over $5 trillion. Interest alone on the Federal debt this year will cost $2,340 for every household in Indiana's Fifth Congressional District. The Federal Government will spend more than $4.3 billion each day this year; and of that amount, $446 million per day is deficit spending. Our Nation's Federal debt and yearly deficit continues to be one of America's darkest clouds. Even if we do balance the budget in 6 years, our Nation's debt will increase to over $7 trillion. The debt stymies personal economic growth, business development, job creation, and puts in doubt whether we will hand our children an opportunity for a better life that we have had.

The national debt is still manageable. We can and we must balance the budget by fixing ineffective government programs and slowing the growth of government spending. It is a commonsense approach to balancing our budget. My hope is to balance our Federal budget using a thoughtful and caring process of time, as we move to streamline Federal programs and shift functions to the State and local level. It is unfortunate the President continues to embrace a big Federal Government in the hope it can be all things to all people.

Just weeks after President Clinton told America during the State of the Union Address that the day of big government is over, he sent Congress a budget that is more of the same. Greater than 64 percent of his deficit reduction comes after he would leave office if elected to a second term, effectively "passing the buck" once again. In fact, his budget would raise the deficit from $158 billion this year to $164 billion next year. The President's budget does not reform welfare as we know it, it does not preserve and protect Medicare which is going broke at a faster rate than the President previously stated, nor does it eliminate one Federal agency.

I believe this is the wrong direction during a time when over 40 percent of all the money taxpayers earn goes to paying taxes. That's right—for every dollar the average Hoosier makes, 40 cents goes to pay local, State and Federal taxes. Taxpayers know how to better spend their money than the government does. The President's budget increases taxes on capital gains that will result in Hoosiers paying more in taxes once again. At a time when Republicans are trying to decrease the capital gains tax, the President's budget increases taxes on capital gains to a tune of $4.1 billion.

There is nothing in the President's budget that would encourage venture capitalists to put up money to provide new or existing companies with means to create and ensure Americans jobs. Wages are stagnated and more and more people believe the country is headed in the wrong direction.

In contrast, the Republican Congress has a very different agenda. We have passed a number of measures to eliminate Washington's reckless nature when it comes to spending taxpayers hard-earned dollars. In the past year and a half we have passed:

The Balanced Budget Downpayment Act II. This legislation saves the American taxpayer over $23 billion in 1996 alone. Signed by the President.

The line-item veto. This legislation will allow the next President the ability to cut wasteful spending. Signed by the President.

Tax Fairness and Deficit Reduction Act. Provides working Americans, senior citizens, farmers, and small businesses with $245 billion in tax relief. This bill was incorporated in the Balanced Budget Act. It was vetoed by the President.

Senior Citizens Right to Work Act. Allows senior citizens who need or want to work to earn income up to $30,000 without penalty to their Social Security benefits. Signed by the President.

Balanced Budget Act. It balanced the Federal budget by the year 2002 by eliminating over 163 wasteful Government programs while reducing the growth of many programs. Vetoes by President Clinton.

Unfunded Mandate Reform Act. Restricts the ability of the Congress to pass laws which impose additional costs to State and local governments, unless Congress provides funding to cover such expenses. Signed by President Clinton.

The Personal Responsibility Act. This legislation would have brought true reform to our failed welfare system. It focuses on strong work requirements, the preservation and importance of the family, the reduction of illegitimacy, and the elimination of certain benefits to noncitizens. The President vetoed this legislation.

The Republican budget resolution continues our efforts to end the fiscal madness. It shifts the power, money, and influence out of Washington and back into the hands of Hoosiers. It provides at least $176 billion in tax relief—including a middle-class tax credit, a reduction in the capital gains tax rate and other incentives for saving and investing for economic growth and job creation.

The budget resolution incorporates repeal of the 1993 Clinton gas tax, an adoption tax credit, enhanced health insurance deduction for the self-employed, medical savings account, and long-term care incentives.

The budget resolution reforms the failed welfare and Medicaid systems, promoting work and self-reliance. It assumes a 27-percent increase in funding for welfare and a 46-percent increase for Medicaid. In addition, it calls for increasing Medicare spending from $179 billion in 1996 to $304 billion in 2002—a 70-percent increase in Medicare spending. Under this plan, Medicare spending per beneficiary would increase from an average of $5,200 in 1996 to $7,000 in 2002.

The plan cuts bureaucracy by terminating the Departments of Commerce and Energy and the elimination of 130 Federal programs. It recommends the elimination of special interest corporate subsidies and tax loopholes, including the advanced technology program. National defense spending would increase $12.1 billion. It provides $4.1 billion in 1997 for the Violent Crime Reduction Trust Fund, and $5.1 billion more over 6 years in discretionary spending for veterans than the President's budget.

In education and the environment, the Republican budget resolution again calls for the elimination of Goals 2000, continued growth in student loan volume from $26.6 billion in 1996 to $37.4 billion 2002, elimination of the Government-run direct lending program, and level funding for title I programs. At the same time it calls for continued funding of Head Start, Pell grants, Aid to Disadvantaged Children, and the Drug-Free Schools Program at current levels and increases funding for total student loans. The budget resolution calls for funding to improve the quality of the Nation's parks and reform and increased funding for the Superfund Program.

Balancing the Federal budget is vitally important to our Nation's ability to be a world leader. It also has very real effects on the personal pocketbooks of Indiana families. Balancing the Federal budget means a reduction in interest rates by approximately 2 percent. As a result:

A family with an average mortgage of $75,000 will save $37,000 in interest rates over the life of the loan—an annual savings of $1,200.

A student with an average loan of $11,000—over 10 years—will save $2,160 over the life of the loan—an annual savings of $216.

A family buying a $15,000 car will save $900 in interest over the life of the car loan—an annual savings of $225.

For the first time in over 40 years, the discussion has turned from not "if" we will balance the Federal budget but to "when" we will balance the budget. This is a significant achievement. The debate has been shifted and we must now pass a balanced budget that places our goals into law.

Our current balanced budget debate involves two very different visions for America's future. The President defends the status quo of bigger government, deficit spending, and more government intrusion into our daily lives. I see a different future. Government over-regulates, has grown too big, spends too much, and taxes you too high. We must work together to achieve a balanced budget for a more prosperous future.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the fiscal year 1997 budget resolution. This budget continues to build on the Republican promise to the American people to reign in our national deficit and to move power and influence from Washington, DC back into local communities. This is a responsible budget—one that every year while maintaining our commitment to our Nation's most precious resource: our children.

Balancing our national budget is one of the best things we can do for our children's future. It is the primary responsibility of Members of this House—and a responsibility that Republicans have proudly accepted—to ensure that we do not leave our children a legacy of massive debt.

The budget resolution before us today also returns the responsibility for a child's education back where it belongs—in the hands of parents and local communities. As chairman of the Economic and Educational Opportunities Committee, I know firsthand the size and burden of the Federal education bureaucracy. Over the past several months, my committee has identified 760 Federal education programs spread throughout 39 Federal agencies. I am pleased that the budget before us today encourages each of us to take a long, hard look at our education programs and to move the basic responsibility for our children's education back to parents and local communities.

I strongly support providing assistance to our young people to help make the dream of a college education a reality. However, I am concerned that the Department of Education, which administers the Federal student aid programs, is showing clear warning signs of mismanagement. Their recent problems in processing financial aid applications raise serious concerns about their ability to oversee the Federal Direct Loan Program. One-and-a-half million students were involved in this delay.

The fiasco should serve as a wake-up call. Can we trust this Department to issue, track, and collect loans of millions of college students, who borrow billions in taxpayer funds, when they can't effectively manage the simple input of financial data into a computer? President Clinton thinks they can, and plans to completely replace the private-sector lending programs with his Direct Loan Program. Republicans think the end of big government should start here—President Clinton's Direct Student Loan Program should end.

In conclusion, I believe this is a responsible budget which protects our children's futures and returns power to the American people. I urge my colleagues to support the budget resolution.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. Chairman, I want to commend Chairman KASICH for his leadership on this budget. Once again, the Budget Committee is leading the way in downsizing the Federal Government.

This budget shifts power, money, and influence out of Washington and back to the people. It keeps us on the path to balance and ensures that Congress will continue to make the tough choices necessary for deficit reduction.

This budget will eliminate deficits entirely by 2002. We can then begin the very difficult task of reducing the $6 trillion debt that we will have built up by that time. Let us not forget, even when we end deficits we still have a huge bill to pay from past congressional excess.

A balanced budget is about much more than numbers. It means higher wages and more jobs. This results from the lower interest rates and the greater saving and investment that become possible when Congress exercises the necessary discipline.

This Congress has been responsible for a reduction of $40 billion in discretionary spending in 1995–96. We have already begun to see the fruits of that labor with lower interest rates. This means everything from lower mortgages to more affordable college loans for millions of American families.

One thing that I have learned in the past year and a half is that achieving a balanced budget is going to be a long hard battle. We are going to fight that battle, and we are going to win that battle. But the tremendous struggle to get to this point proves why we need a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution.

Mr. Chairman, this is a budget for our children. It is time we start thinking about them and put an end to deficits. There is no free lunch; if we do not pay the bills today, our children will pay them tomorrow.

I urge my colleagues to join me in strong support of this budget.

As I stated in the Budget Committee, I have two recommendations for improvement as this budget works its way through the process. First, our welfare reform savings are too modest. While we reduce the growth of welfare programs, these programs continue to grow and they continue to be subject to excess Federal control.

I recommend that we freeze welfare spending and then block grant all funding to the States. This would save the taxpayers far more through 2002. It would also permit the States total freedom to reform welfare. The States could require work, job training, and education, they could limit the time on welfare, and they could include a cap or other reforms designed to end welfare and move able-bodied recipients from dependency to work.

The States are where the true reforms are occurring with welfare. Unfortunately, States that now propose dramatic welfare reform must come to the Federal Government and beg for waivers. This is wrong; States should be free to design their own reforms.

The second recommendation I make is that we use a portion of these additional welfare savings to make the proposed reduction in the Federal gas tax permanent. State and Federal gas taxes now total over 40 cents a gallon. This is a tremendous burden on the middle class and working poor; it also hits particularly hard in the high mileage States out west. Repealing the 1993 increase would save taxpayers in my State of Colorado $70 million a year. Working families deserve welfare reform and they deserve tax relief.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, the majority's budget proposal reads like a hit list of education programs from Goals 2000 to student loans to education improvement grants. If a budget proposal reflects a party's priorities, then education is the least of the concerns of the majority party. I am dismayed because my personal priority has always been education—my life's work has been in education. It is incumbent upon those of us who do understand the importance of the investment in our schools and colleges to call attention to the damage that this budget proposal will wreak on school systems.

Some of these budget cuts are downright mean-spirited and are not based on the effectiveness of a program—the bilingual education programs are targeted for elimination as a consequence of an ongoing attack on immigrants and minorities.

I remember the good old days when the majority even had a President boasting that he wanted to be the "education President". I urge my colleagues to oppose the cuts to education—if it is asking too much for us to be the "education Congress", let us at least avoid our going down in history as the "slash and burn Congress".

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to express my concerns about the Republican efforts to radically alter the Medicare program. While the Republican budget resolution is short on details, I am assuming that they will follow the model that they proposed last year in order to meet their $168 billion reduction in Medicare spending over the next six years.

Republicans are proposing changing Medicare from a defined benefit to a defined contribution program. It does not propose controlling costs, but simply shifts those costs from the Federal Government to senior citizens and providers. It will end the prohibition against balance billing and allow doctors and hospitals to bill senior citizens for extra or added charges. It would even allow HMOs to charge seniors extra for the basic Medicare package. My Republican colleagues need to remember that 18 percent of seniors—which is about 7 million people—are living on less than $7,000 a year. Can they afford these new hidden, extra charges?

I attempted to discuss these concerns with the Budget Committee, I was told not to worry—these terrible things simply will not happen. But, with little or no details, it is hard to understand how they plan on achieving $168 billion in savings without shifting costs or forcing seniors into restrictive managed care plans. We should not move to these radical changes without detailed and thorough hearings, which have not been planned. There are too many questions and the implications are far too serious to implement a $168 billion change. Medicare has worked and has provided access to affordable, quality health care for millions of senior citizens. Do we have to jeopardize this success in the name of tax cuts for the wealthy?

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House of Tuesday, May 14, 1996, the committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. NEY) having assumed the chair, Mr. CAMP, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 178) establishing the congressional budget for the United States Government for fiscal year 1997 and setting forth appropriate budgetary levels for fiscal years 1998, 1999, 2000, 2001, and 2002, had come to no resolution thereon.

THE CAREERS ACT, CONCERNS VERSUS REALITY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GOODLING] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I am amazed at what length special groups and organizations will go to in order to stir up controversy, manufactured controversy so they can get contributions to keep their organizations going.

We are working for years on a bill called the careers bill. It started when the General Accounting Office indicated that there are 163 Federal job training programs spread over every agency downtown possible, most of which are totally ineffective. Many are duplicative, and so we set out to see what it was we could do, first of all, to consolidate these programs to eliminate those that overlap and are redundant and return the power and the authority back to the State and particularly back to the local communities so that they could plan job training programs that would actually prepare people for jobs that will exist in that particular area.

Well, as I indicated, it is amazing at what lengths some of these organizations would go to keep filling their coffers so that they can stay in business. Of course, the only way they can stay in business is to create controversy. Whether it is there or not, they create it.

Mr. Speaker, now let me mention some concerns and then some facts. First concern: Does the careers bill merge the Departments of Education and Labor? The fact: No, nothing in careers merges these Departments.

Second concern: Does careers reference Goals 2000? Fact: No, there is no reference to Goals 2000 in the bill.

The other day I almost had an accident on the Beltway because again these same groups will use any statements they want to make to prove whatever it is they are trying to prove, no matter how false it may be. So this person on the radio was saying that these sixth-grade girls were receiving examinations, physicals in school, and they were very thorough physicals. He was very upset, and it was because of Goals 2000 and outcome-based education that they were receiving these physicals.

Now, how ridiculous can anybody be. Physicals, when I was a principal of school, superintendent of school and a teacher, were required by our State, that certain grades had physicals. As a principal, the first doctor that I lost came in to me one day and said, I am not about to continue this. He said, I am not going to sign if I do not examine them, and I am not going to examine them and then have these innuendoes and so on spread all over the community. My business is too important to me.

So I had to hire another doctor who did it the way they used to do when we went through our physical in the Army, stood us at the other end of the room and said, oh, you are okay, move on. But he got paid for that.

No, nothing in this bill references Goals 2000. In fact, nowhere does the legislation require that any individual enter into a specific career track or enter into employment. In fact, special language was included to specifically guard against such abuses.

Let me read a few specific protections. "Nothing in this act shall mandate that any individual, particularly youth served under title II of this act be required to choose a specific career path or major or to meet federally funded or endorse industry-recognized skill standards or obtain federally funded endorsed skills certificates.

Second, none of the funds made available under this title shall be used to compel any youth to pursue a specific career or to obtain a federally funded or endorsed skills certificate. Youth participating in the program under this title shall be eligible to change their course of study and training.

The problem we are faced with is that people out there who somehow believe that everybody should be a college graduate. That is a great idea. What are they going to do? We now have hundreds of thousands of college graduates who either have no job or they are working at something far beneath their education. On the other hand, we have hundreds of thousands of technical jobs out there with no one to fill them in.

These same people believe that somehow or other in high schools there is an academic program or a vocational program. They forget that a large percentage are in a general program, and I got news for you; a general program in this day and age is just that. A general program is a dead-end street by all means for these people. Will the CAREERS bill result in the collection of private information on individuals, especially children? No; the bill does not allow for the collection of private information on individuals, and these are some of the protections.

Specific language restating title 13 of the Census Act relating to confidentiality of information. Specific language that states nothing in the act shall violate the Family Education Rights and Privacy Act under section 249 of the General Education Provisions Act. Specific language that all labor market data is aggregated from existing sources like the census, unemployment rates, and so on.

States would not be allowed to use funds to collect data about school-age youth. Those are just a few of the corrections that should be made. In future sessions I will make all the others because again, it is sheer nonsense that is being spread out there in relationship to the CAREERS bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio [Ms. KAPTUR] is recognized for 5 minutes.

WHITEWATER INDEPENDENT COUNSEL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MEEHAN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Speaker, I come to the House floor tonight to discuss the independence of Whitewater Independent Counsel Ken Starr.

Six weeks ago, I wrote Mr. Starr a letter. I asked him to immediately take the necessary steps to assure the credibility of his position by eliminating even the appearance of conflicts of interest in his Whitewater investigation. Since that time, Mr. Starr has done nothing to rectify the situation. In fact, he has not even responded.

At first, Mr. Speaker, I was surprised that Mr. Starr, who is such a highly successful attorney that he can pick and choose his clients, would decide to represent a tobacco company—a political foe of the President. However, as I began to take a closer look at Mr. Starr's career decisions, his representation of Brown & Williamson fits perfectly into a portfolio of controversial clients.

The archconservative Bradley Foundation, is another ideological client of the Independent Counsel. The Bradley Foundation hired Mr. Starr as a consultant and when Mr. Starr argued a school voucher case before the Wisconsin Supreme Court, the Bradley Foundation provided a $150,000 grant to pay State's legal fees. By defending the Wisconsin school voucher system, Mr. Starr argued directly against the Clinton administration's stance on an issue that could very well play a role in the 1996 Presidential election.

Mr. Speaker, the Bradley Foundation is one of this Nation's most conservative and partisan organizations. Each year the Bradley Foundation doles out $20 million to groups like the American Spectator, the Landmark Legal Foundation, the Free Congress Foundation, and others who attack the President and First Lady in a highly political and often personal fashion.

We can conclude then, Mr. Speaker, that Independent Counsel Ken Starr's personal wealth—he made well over $1 million dollars last year—is quite dependent on a political clientele.

Let's now look at Mr. Starr's firm, Kirkland & Ellis, and its dealings with the Resolution Trust Corporation—the key Federal agency in the Whitewater investigation.

In May 1993, nearly a year before Starr's appointment as Independent Counsel, the RTC accused Kirkland & Ellis of professional misconduct in the negligent representation of the First America Savings Bank, a failed savings and loan association. After Mr. Starr was appointed Independent Counsel, Kirkland & Ellis paid the RTC $325,000 to settle the claim.

Starr, who, as senior partner serves on Kirkland & Ellis' management committee, claims he was unaware of his firm's negotiations with the RTC. Mr. Speaker, I sincerely hope Mr. Starr was blissfully unaware of this case. Because, during this same period, Mr. Starr as Independent Counsel in the Whitewater Investigation, was questioning some of the same RTC officials who were involved with the decision to sue his law firm. Again, a reasonable person would see the appearance, if not the existence, of a serious conflict of interest.

Mr. Starr's appearance problems neither begin nor end with Brown & Williamson or the RTC.

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, the Justice Department has launched a number of grand jury investigations into possible criminal violations on the part of tobacco companies and their executives. According to the New York Times at least five grand juries have been convened. Department of Justice's probe of the tobacco industry represents the Department's largest investigation of the manufacturer of a consumer product under the Clinton administration.

However, while parents and health advocates overwhelmingly support the President's actions on curbing youth tobacco use, cigarette manufacturers, like Brown & Williamson, have retaliated with a massive political donation campaign to thwart the FDA's common sense regulations. Political donations by tobacco interests set new records last year. They gave $4 million in PAC and soft money to the two major political parties and various congressional candidates. Tellingly, Mr. Speaker, more than $3 million went to Republicans.

The Food and Drug Administration has proposed new regulations on tobacco advertising and marketing to children. President Clinton's leadership on the FDA's regulations has been historic. Never before has an American President so boldly stood up to Big Tobacco and not backed down.

Mr. Speaker, to say that tobacco companies, like Brown & Williamson, have a contentious relationship with the Clinton administration would be a gross understatement. Never before has the tobacco industry faced so many challenges in its dealings with the Federal Government. Let me just add, as an aside, that problems for the tobacco industry are victories for America's children.

The Castano suit is the largest class action suit in history. It has been filed on behalf of all addicted smokers in the United States against the tobacco industry. If successful, the Castano suit will cost Big Tobacco millions and millions of dollars.

I could not believe that the politically savvy Mr. Starr—a former Solicitor General in the Bush administration—would be so naive as to not see a serious problem in his dual role as lead attorney for Brown & Williamson and the Whitewater investigator.

I was unnerved, to say the least, Mr. Speaker, when I turned on my television set several weeks ago and saw Mr. Starr—not in Little Rock, AR, working on Whitewater—but in New Orleans. He was there acting as the Counsel of Record, in other words, the lead attorney, for the entire tobacco industry in the Castano class action suit.

For several years now, I have worked to hold Brown & Williamson, along with the rest of the tobacco industry, accountable for manipulating the level of nicotine in cigarettes, for targeting America's children in advertising, and for misleading the Congress, Federal agencies, and the American people when it comes to the dangers of tobacco products.

Unfortunately, here is what they are getting:

Mr. Starr, while purporting to oversee and lead the Whitewater Investigation, remains actively involved in an enormous private practice, over $1 million per year. Moreover, much of his private practice is dominated by ideological foes of the President.

For example, Mr. Starr is employed by Brown & Williamson—one of this Nation's largest tobacco companies. In fact, my interest in Mr. Starr's conflicts of interest stems from his work for Brown & Williamson.

Mr. Speaker, when the sitting President of the United States is under investigation, the public demands a fair and impartial investigator. I do not believe that is too much to ask. Currently, though, we have an Independent Counsel who seems to be the servant of several masters.

Mr. Speaker, the American people deserve better than this, the Congress deserves better than this, and the President deserves better than this.

Mr. Starr fails to recognize the political context of this Whitewater investigation. If he is to serve effectively as the Independent Counsel, it is imperative that he resolve problems his large, lucrative private practice creates. His unwillingness to address these questions will ultimately taint any resolution in this case.

Mr. Speaker, when a sitting President is the subject of any kind of investigation, the public demands a fair and impartial investigator. I do not believe that is too much to ask. Currently though we have an independent counsel who seems to serve several masters.

Mr. Speaker, the American people deserve better. The President deserves better. This Congress deserves better.

□ 2000

Mr. Speaker, Mr. Starr needs to clear up this conflict of interest. You cannot serve two masters. He made a million dollars last year in private clients. Somebody who can conduct a politically charged investigation that involves potentially the President ought to be really independent. It is time, Mr. Starr. Answer these questions.

NATIONAL PEACE OFFICERS MEMORIAL DAY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. RAMSTAD] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today on National Peace Officers Memorial day to pay tribute to the 14,064 peace officers who have given their lives to protect our communities. The names of these 14,064 brave men and women are permanently etched on the walls of the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial, located just a few blocks from here.

This year, Mr. Speaker, 161 new names were added in a candlelight vigil representing police offices who were killed during 1995, and anyone who attended the ceremony today saw the families of these 161 police officers had to be profoundly moved, just as they were by the President's heartfelt remarks and by the beautiful singing of Mariah Carey.

Mr. Speaker, my home State of Minnesota has suffered the loss of three police officers who have died on duty since July of 1995:

Paul Moen, a Minneapolis police officer died during a struggle; Brian Klinefelter, a St. Joseph, Minnesota police officer was killed just 3 months ago by a liquor store robber; and less than 2 weeks ago we lost Rice County Deputy John Liebenstein when his car was rammed by the teenaged driver of a stolen car.

Tragedies like these, Mr. Speaker, remind me of cop friends I have lost over the years: Sergeant J.W. Anderson of the Wayzata Police Department; Officer Jerry Haaf of the Minneapolis Police Department. Just yesterday I met with St. Paul police officers Mike and Frank O'Brien, whose brother, John, was killed in the line of duty 15 years ago.

In spite of these and many other tragic killings repeated far too often in far too many communities, we must never lose hope in the war against crime, and with the selfless dedication of law enforcement professionals like John O'Brien, like Sergeant J.W. Anderson, like Jerry Haaf, like Paul Moen, like Brian Klinefelter, like John Liebenstein, we will prevail in the war against crime, selfless, dedicated law enforcement professionals like these brave men and women honored today at the steps of the Capitol.

Mr. Speaker, there truly is no greater love than the love shown by those who lay down their lives for their friends and their fellow citizens. We must never forget the ultimate sacrifice of police officers who have laid down their lives for people they do not even know. Every single visitor to our Nation's capital should pay a visit to the Law Enforcement Officers Memorial located at the Judiciary Square Metro stop. The names carved in the wall of the memorial are a powerful, powerful testament to the thousands of officers who have sacrificed their lives and the hundreds of thousands more who risk their lives every day protecting our communities.

Mr. Speaker, we honor the dead by respecting the living, and today we honor law enforcement officials and their families for their sacrifices. Every single time a police officer puts that uniform on, he or she puts their life on the line.

I also hope, Mr. Speaker, we will continue to honor the memory of our fallen heroes through our actions in this Chamber, promoting policies which prevent crime and violence and supporting our brave men and women in law enforcement.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NEY). Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Hawaii [Mrs. MINK] is recognized for 5 minutes.

[Mrs. MINK of Hawaii addressed the House. Her remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY] is recognized for 5 minutes.

DEBATE ON THE 1997 BUDGET PROPOSAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from North Carolina [Mrs. CLAYTON] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, this morning a hearing was held before the House Small Business Committee. The topic of the hearing was the current debate over increasing the minimum wage.

During the hearing, I was struck by the testimony of Ms. Audrey Haynes, Executive Director of the Business and Professional Women/USA, an organization that represents some 70,000 working women with more than 2,000 local groups, one-third of whom are small business owners, at least one in every congressional district.

Ms. Haynes pointed out that at $8,500 a year, the "minimum wage worker" is more appropriately referred to as the "miracle worker".

The typical "miracle worker" is a single parent, with Children.

At the "miracle wage" of $4.25 per hour, each week, she brings home $182 after taxes.

She uses her "miracle wage" for child care at $50 a week; for minimal food at $65 a week; for essentials such as clothing, personal and health care products and doctor bills at $50 a week; for rent in basic housing at $85 a week; and for public transportation at $20 a week. She spends nothing on recreation or personal pleasure. And, at the end of the week, she still has a growing deficit of $88 each week.

With a modest increase in the minimum wage of ninety cents, and with the earned income tax credit, which is in some doubt because it too is under attack, the "miracle worker" can cut her deficit in half.

Mr. Speaker, I am at a loss as to how some of my colleagues can push for deficit reduction and a balanced budget, while refusing to pass a minimum wage increase that would be used by twelve million working Americans for that very same purpose.

The Small Business Administration's Office of Advocacy has assured us that the impact of a minimum wage increase would not be dramatic.

Fewer than ten percent of the Nation's small businesses would be affected.

That is because, contrary to popular belief, most minimum wage workers are employed by big business, not small business. Only 2.5 million minimum wage workers are employed by businesses with fewer than ten employees.

In addition, most small business owners already pay above the minimum wage. That is the only way to attract and keep good workers.

Moreover, businesses with receipts of less than $500,000 are exempt from minimum wage laws, unless involved in interstate commerce.

Mr. Speaker, a miracle is a mystery, a wonder, an enigma, a conundrum, a puzzle. How do these miracle workers survive at the wages they are paid? Perhaps the answer is that many do not.

Perhaps that is why drug-driven violence, teen pregnancy, homelessness and hopelessness so permeate our communities.

Ms. Haynes shared with us that twenty years ago her mother was a minimum wage worker, and today, in Columbia, KY, she still earns just above the minimum wage.

The minimum wage for many is not a training wage. It is not a temporary wage. It is not a teenage wage; it is a miracle wage.

I ask my colleagues to imagine feeding yourself and two children on $65 a week. Imagine clothing yourself, paying for personal and health care products and doctor bills on $50 a week.

You do not go to the dentist on that budget.

Perhaps if you can for one moment imagine the life of a miracle wage worker, the mystery may clear up and reality may set in.

Pass the minimum wage increase.
It does not take a miracle.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. RIGGS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

[Mr. RIGGS addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.]

COULD PRESIDENT CLINTON HAVE WON IN 1992 IF HE RAN ON WHAT HE DELIVERED?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of May 12, 1995, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LINDER] is recognized for 25 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, on the Sunday after BOB DOLE's famous "enough is enough" speech on the floor of the Senate in December, a commentator said, "At least there is one adult among them."

The media enjoyed portraying the conflict on the budget as adolescent behavior when even they must know that we are engaged in the most profound political debate since 1932. It can be defined in a few words: "Who decides—Washington or you?"

Do we continue 64 years of increasing the role of the Federal Government in making decisions on your behalf, or do we return to freedom and opportunity which made this the wealthiest, most generous nation in the history of the planet? Do we trust the bureaucrats and politicians, or do we trust you?

The Clinton victory in 1992 was the culmination of the liberal dream. It is true that he ran as a "New Democrat". It is also true that he moved sharply to the left even before he was sworn in. A promise of a middle-class tax cut became the largest tax increase in history. Ending welfare as we know it turned out to be a Government job if no other job could be found. And health care reform ended up being the largest attempted takeover of the private economy in the history of the nation. And, of course, he led off with gays in the military. It is easy to see why that was not mentioned in the campaign. Does anyone believe that Clinton would have won in 1992 if he had campaigned on what he delivered?

The Clinton philosophy was outlined best in a 1958 book entitled, "The Affluent Society," by John Kenneth Galbraith. It essentially said that Americans do not make too little money, they make too much, but they make bad choices with their dollars. It is the obligation of an educated government to tax those dollars from them and make better choices on their behalf.

If you look at the five major initiatives of the first two Clinton years—the budget, crime, welfare, education, and health care—all called for increasing taxes and increasing the numbers of decisions that would be made in Washington.

It is important to point out here that the Clintons are sincere. They truly do want to shape a future for our children and grandchildren that is warm and safe and secure and fair. If you're curious about what that future would look like, read anything that has come out of the Children's Defense Fund over the last 20 years.

Conservatives do not seek to shape the future because we do not know how. I could not satisfy 20 percent of the people in any given crowd. Each American looks to the future with different hopes and dreams and talents. I do know this, I could build a future that my daughter would love and my son would hate. So we want to leave your dollars in your pockets and you and 260 million other Americans, deciding on your own behalf hundreds of times a week, will shape the future. You will decide, not Washington. I do not have any idea what that future will look like but I will be right in there with you making my personal choices.

Now you see how deep and fundamental are the differences. Who decides?

This difference became crystal clear in the negotiations with the President over the budget. Frankly, we were not that far apart on the numbers. We want to increase spending 3 percent; the President wants to increase spending 4 percent. We want to assume a revenue increase of 5 percent; the President wants to assume a revenue increase of 5½ percent. We want to increase Medicare 62 percent over 7 years. The President wants to increase it 64 percent. Those are the differences on which the President has built his case that Republicans are proposing "extreme" cuts.

That is not where the discussions broke down. They broke down because Senator DOLE and Speaker GINGRICH were not willing to compromise on our values. We believe that giving seniors more choices in Medicare will cause them to shop their health care for the best deal and that competition will bring down costs.

Let me give you one example. One of the many meetings on transforming Medicare included Healthcare benefits managers. The John Deere Co. has formed its own health care company to control its costs. I asked the president of John Deere health care what it would cost the Federal Government if John Deere kept its retirees in their own health care system. He said $4,000 per year and he would make a profit off them. We are paying $5,200 this year per person. His offer amounted to a 25 percent savings.

Why can we not get President Clinton to agree? because the liberals will not let him loosen the Federal grip on your choices. They feel that you make selfish decisions and that bureaucrats make fair decisions. Again, who decides?

We also insisted that after spending $5.5 trillion in the war on poverty over the last 30 years, we lost the war. We want to return those Medicaid and welfare dollars to the State and local communities to aid the less fortunate.

Again, the liberals cannot let loose of the Federal grip on those decisions. If they return decisions to individuals and communities the glue that holds the coalitions that comprise the Democrat Party dissolves. That glue is the power to decide for you.

The level of invective aimed at efforts to reform the welfare state is nothing short of astonishing. Governor Engler was accused in the press of causing people to commit suicide. We have been accused of starving children. And you will hear much more.

In Thomas Sowell's new book "The vision of the Anointed," You know who the anointed are, the sensitive, the caring, the compassionate, the thoughtful, Sowell notes how the critics of the "anointed", from Malthus to Burke to Hayek, always spoke generously of the motives of the left even while questioning their policies.

Milton Friedman criticized the Great Society, but he always says it was born of noble intentions.

However, the responses from the "Anointed" to their critics were always personal. The critics's motives were questioned. They were called mean-spirited, hard-hearted, and cruel.

When Thomas Malthus criticized the vision of Godwin and Condorcet he said, "I do not question their candor or their integrity. I question their politics."

Godwin's response? A personal attack on Malthus, whom he called "the malignant man".

John Lewis has equated GINGRICH to Hitler and the Republicans in the House to Nazis. That was a new low for those who substitute name-calling for debate.

Noting has changed in over 200 years. While attacking us on personal grounds it is increasingly clear that liberals have less interest in program beneficiaries than in the power to decide. That is what the anger is about: losing power. And they will stop at nothing to regain that power, including lying.

G.K. Chesterton said, "I believe in Liberalism today as much as I ever did. But, oh, there was a happy time when I believed in liberals."

Oh, there was a happy time. It was the time between 1948 and 1968 when poverty dropped from 32 percent to 13 percent and black poverty from 90 percent to 32 percent. We witnessed the largest migration of blacks into management in the history of the country. In 1960 black illiteracy was 16 percent, and the black family was the most conservative, spiritual and family oriented segment of our society.

Then the poverty programs kicked in. $5.5 trillion later the poverty rate is 14 percent in general, and among blacks 33 percent. Illiteracy among blacks is rising rapidly. Nearly 70 percent of black babies are born out of wedlock, and the black family is under serious assault.

This is not to say that blacks are the problem. They are not. But in 1965, for the reasons we all know, a larger percentage of them were poor, and the Government helped them the most.

I grew up in a small town in northern Minnesota near two Chippewa Indian reservations. The Indian children went to school with us. Every fifth-grade class had an Indian child at the top of the class. They did not graduate: teen age pregnancies, crime, alcohol, violence, no father, in the homes.

For over a hundred years America rounded the Indians up onto reservations and bureaucrats told them where to go to school, which dentist and doctor to see, where to buy school clothes, and we paid the bill. The influence of the breadwinner was replaced by a bureaucrat with a Government check, and the breadwinner left.

I am the only white man that ever played baseball with the Inger Indians. I was the catcher, and we had a pitcher on the team who had a curve ball that looked like it was coming at you from third base. He was offered a minor league contract that summer, but he didn't know if he should take it. I said, "Look, you're 26 years old and you've never had a job. Take the contract."

Six weeks later he was back home. I asked him what happened. He said,

I just couldn't make it. I didn't know how to get an apartment so the owner had to help me. I kept forgetting where to change buses. I didn't know if I should get a black and white or color TV. I just couldn't make all those decisions.

At age 17 I was struck that Government paternalism steals from people the ability to make decisions about their own lives. They are all dead now. Richie Robinson, Esica Ogema, Tom Bowstring, Frank Rabbit, Johnny Wakanabo, Tom Goggleye. Dead too young. Not because Government did too little. Because Government did too much.

Having done so well with the American Indian, we have replicated the reservation in every major city in America with the very same results: Teenage pregnancies, crime, drugs, violence, no fathers in those homes. Not because Government did too little. Because Government did too much.

In spite of the total collapse of communism and socialism round the world, Liberals continue to believe that they are smarter than the people and that governments make better decisions.

They do not know, as we know, that the human being dreams, not for one more Government program but for freedom. The Soviets learned that in just 73 years.

Ilya Ehrenberg, a Russian poet, wrote, "If all the world were covered with asphalt, one day in that asphalt, a crack would appear, and in that crack grass would grow." That is the dream of the human spirit. That is the dream of freedom.

All of this is to say the following: Liberal efforts to replace your decisions with their decisions have been a colossal failure. It has been a failure for the taxpayer, but much more so for the generations of children destroyed in the process. Why is it so difficult in American politics to commit a truth?

We want to end the suffering of the poor in the care and feeding of the Federal Government. We want to rekindle the dream, to free the spirit, to let it soar.

This election is going to be the meanest election in your lifetimes. Because there is so much at stake. The Liberals know that another loss could send their party the way of the Whig Party. Like the current Democrat Party, the Whig Party was a disparate collection of groups who had only one thing in common. They hated Andy Jackson. When his presence disappeared, so did they.

The four building blocks of the Democratic Party are labor, blacks, feminists, and gays. What in the world do labor and gays have in common? They all have a thirst for the power to make your decisions for you. All four groups want power because they believe that they can gain economic advantage in Washington that they cannot gain in the neighborhood. Again the question: "Who decides? Washington or you?"

The commitment by labor unions to spend $35 million in negative television commercials is their last gasp. In addition to that, they will spend another $300 million paying the salaries of full-time campaigners in Democrat campaigns. None of that will be reported to the public the way that candidates report the money they raise and spend to the Federal Election Commission. Remember that the next time some "reformer" tells you that candidates spend too much money campaigning.

But, there is hope. Do you remember Ronald Reagan?

It is important to remember how dark the nightfall was when he began running for President. On the eve of his first run for the Presidency in 1975 he spoke at the 20th anniversary of National Review. In a somber moment he quoted something written two decades earlier by Whittaker Chambers.

Chambers wrote:

It is idle to speak of saving Western civilization, because Western civilization is already a wreck from within. That is why we can hope to little more than snatch a fingernail off a saint on the rack or a handful of ashes from the faggots and bury them secretly in a flour pot until that day ages hence when a few men would dare to believe that there once was something else. That something else is thinkable and there were those at the great nightfall who took loving care to preserve the tokens of hope and truth.

Five years later Reagan was President promising to rekindle the American dream.

It has been said that the American dream was to own your own home. That is not the American dream. The American dream is to get your kids out of your home. And when Ronald Reagan took office, many Americans wondered if they ever could.

We had interest rates at 21 percent, inflation at 14 percent, and 11 percent unemployment.

We were also losing the cold war. Between 1970 and 1980 the Soviet Union had increased its influence in Cuba, Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos, Nicaragua, Grenada, Mozambique, Angola, Ethiopia, Afghanistan, South Yemen, Libya, Iraq, and Syria.

On top of that one-third of our planes unable to fly for lack of spare parts, one-third of our ships in dry dock, soldiers practicing with pretend bullets, and much of our enlisted corps on food stamps.

In his first inaugural address Reagan addressed our difficulties at home and abroad. Then he appealed to the best in us. He said, "We can do this, because, after all, we are Americans." The decade of the eighties was the American decade in the American century. I know that the Clinton's, during the 1992 campaign, called it the decade of greed. Maybe they thought every American was trading in cattle futures. Most Americans were not. They were starting businesses, going to church, coaching little league, teaching school, paying taxes, and giving to charity.

In less than a decade, Americans, not government, created 4 million businesses and 20 million new jobs. They doubled the size of the economy and doubled revenues to the treasury. They doubled the money they gave to charities—to strangers—because they were generous.

And if we get the burdens of high taxes and too much regulation off their backs, they will do it again.

America is great, not because of Government policies or wise politicians. America is great because ordinary people do extraordinary things. When we return decisions to the American people and responsibilities to the communities I believe that they, not the Federal Government but they, will once again recapture the greatness we have known. If we fail, America will be the next century's Soviet Union. Not because government did too little. Because government did too much.

DORNAN REPLIES TO GUNDERSON

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NEY). Under the Speaker's announced policy of May 12, 1995, the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] is recognized for 5 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from California, Mrs. SEASTRAND, who will follow with 30 minutes that I think Members are going to find fascinating.

Mr. Speaker, I had 60 minutes tonight but everybody was jumping the gun and assuming that in a special order tonight at 8:30 East Coast time or later, 9:30 after the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. KLINK, does his special order, that I was going to respond to the Member from the Third District of Wisconsin, STEVE GUNDERSON, on his peculiar point of personal privilege yesterday.

I have talked to the parliamentarians and my honor was impugned at several points during Mr. GUNDERSON's strange point of personal privilege. If I had been here, I could have taken his words down time after time and had them stricken from the RECORD. I stood not mesmerized but fascinated at home. I will at some point, as the parliamentarians agreed, take a point of special privilege during the middle of the day, probably earlier than he did his. He did his around 3:30. That will be done in good time, probably next week, and I will set straight the perversion of facts that took place.

I am going to include for the RECORD the reply of the reporter, a man of honor, Marc Morano, to Representative STEVE GUNDERSON, it is fascinating; I want to put in the reply of the Family Research Council, it is fascinating; and I am going to put in again Billy Graham's beautiful address in the Rotunda on May 2 that he titled "The Hope for America," where he said that we are paying an awful price for what has happened in our land with moral issues. And then he said, "We are a society poised on the brink of self-destruction."

In the few moments left, Mr. Speaker, I will read from a letter from one of the outstanding researchers over at Family Research Council, he was a stalwart at Empower America, and it was in response to a good friend of mine saying the Christian Coalition might be obsessed with the issue of homosexuality.

Likewise CATO's David Boaz used the term to attack the Family Research Council in the New York Times. Funny you don't hear anyone accused of being obsessed with taxes, defense of our country, deregulation, education, or any number of other issues no matter how passionately they argue or how often. The "obsession" tag is used specifically in the homosexual debate, and I think I know why, he continues.

Because it implies a secret, hypocritical propensity for homosexuality. It is a nifty little smear that homosexual activists use routinely. That is why I winced when I found the nameless mutual friend of Mr. Knight's and myself had used the term unknowingly at the Road to Victory conference.

We have seen a debauching of the English language, a synonym for cheerful, happy, mirthful, good-natured, the word "gay," the root word of gala, substituted for the death in their prime of life of over 300,000 young males in America who have the word "gay" and "gaiety" put in the place of "sad" and "play."

We have seen a word created that is phony. I have four years of Latin. There is no such word as homophobia. Phobia of man, homo? If they mean homosexual phobia or decadence phobia, that would be more accurate, but it is not a phobia. It may be an aversion to seeing the collapse of our society or, as Billy Graham put it, a great Nation on the brink of self-destruction. I shall be back with that theme soon.

Mr. Speaker, Fair is fair and facts are powerful. Here is Mr. Morano's powerful rebuttal to the Member from Wisconsin who will retire in less than five months, effective Jan. 3, 1996.

MARC MORANO REPLIES TO REPRESENTATIVE STEVE GUNDERSON

The following is my response to Congressman Steve Gunderson's (R-WI) point of personal privilege delivered on the House floor on May 14, 1996:

It is an outrage that a U.S. Congressman would interrupt a session of Congress and take to the House floor and slander the character of a reporter whom he never met. Congressman Steve Gunderson said on the House floor that "hate and prejudice are the motives by which Mr. Morano * * * sought to totally misrepresent the fund raising events and their purpose." He further states that I "intentionally falsified information" and that my report is "the journalism of bigotry and prejudice." How Congressman Gunderson knows all of this about me remains a mystery.

The Washington Times reported today that at least three other people who attended the night dance can corroborate my account. John Cloud, a city paper reporter said he witnessed "a fair number of people using drugs." A columnist in Metro Weekly described the dance as follows: "We spent much of our time out on the dance floor trying to cop a feel, or back in the sponsors lounge trying to cop a feel, or outside in the designated smoking area trying to cop a feel and a smoke." In addition, Jim Jennings, who works for one of the sponsors of the event admitted to seeing "very provocative dancing."

The freedom of the press is a fundamental right set forth in the Constitution. Congressman Steven Gunderson's character assassination of me on the House floor has a chilling effect on free speech. Will reporters in the future now hesitate to come forth with a controversial story for fear our elected leaders will use their office to attack the reporters entire career, question their motives and engage in vicious name calling? Congressman Gunderson, by impugning my professional reputation, has proven that he is not above "questioning other peoples motives" and stereotyping whom he knows nothing about. The fact of the matter is that my report is entirely factual. I ask Congressman Gunderson to publicly apologize for his unfounded assault on my character. The dignity of his position demands that a retraction be forthcoming.

The following is a detailed response to Rep. Gunderson's point of personal privilege delivered on the House floor on May 14, 1996. First, I reaffirm that the report of my observations of the Cherry Jubilee's Main Event was totally factual and without misrepresentation. Second, Congressman Gunderson personal attack on me violates his own philosophy, which he states, "May I suggest that to begin, we stop questioning other people's motives." Third, the Congressman, who did not attend, claims to know more about the event than myself who was in attendance and personally witnessed the activities. Fourth, I was contracted to produce a video by the Family Research Council, not write a report. The report is my intellectual property not in any way commissioned by the Family Research Council.

Let us look at the allegations put forth by Congressman Gunderson in his point of personal privilege on May 14, 1996:

(1) Rep. Gunderson stated: "Throughout his [Morano's] entire story, not one source is ever identified or quoted."

The story is a personal account of what I witnessed. I was the source.

(2) Rep. Gunderson stated: "There is no record that Mr. Morano purchased tickets for any of these events. He clearly did not use his name and address at any time, nor did he seek to obtain any 'press credentials' for the events."

I did attempt to obtain "press credentials" but was told they were not issuing any. I made at least three phone calls to the organizers on the Thursday and Friday preceding the event. I was forced to purchase one ticket from someone outside the entrance and another ticket from the organizers inside the entrance. The Sunday Recovery Brunch which followed the Main Event was not open to the press. I went to the Rayburn House Office Building on Sunday to cover the event but was told no press or cameras were allowed.

(3) Rep. Gunderson claimed, "But fact is not the basis for the story. Rather hate and prejudice are the motives by which Mr. Morano . . . sought to totally misrepresent the fund raising events. . . ."

Rep. Gunderson is violating his own advice that we "stop questioning other people's motives." I reported on what I personally witnessed; to suggest otherwise is without foundation.

(4) Rep. Gunderson stated: "Nor does the video show any illegal activity . . . if there any doubt such illegal activity would have been filmed if it actually occurred? I don't think so."

I was forced to be very discreet with the video camera and did attempt to videotape the act of oral sex which occurred just off the dance floor but because of the concealment device used to hide the camera, the footage did not come out. Security eventually saw my camera and threatened to confiscate it and the tape. I was forced to hastily remove the camera from the building.

(5) Rep. Gunderson accuses me of "bigotry and prejudice" for the following sentence: "The homosexual community's credo seems to be 'Die young and leave a pretty corpse.'"

Rep. Gunderson uses this sentence taken out of context to accuse me of ignorance regarding death by AIDS. This sentence was part of an opinion piece on the event that I wrote for Chronicles Magazine. The whole context is as follows: "There were few if any men who could be described as overweight. In fact, the overwhelming majority had bodies sculpted from weight lifting. Beer and bottled water were the beverages of choice, while apples, bananas, and oranges were in plentiful supply. The image of young active health conscious men, drinking bottled water and consuming fruit is a study in contrast. The reckless lifestyle inherent in the gay experience results in a notably reduced life span. The life expectancy of a homosexual male is estimated to be no more than about 41 years old, regardless of AIDS. The homosexual community's credo seems to be "Die young and leave a pretty corpse."

I did not in any way seek to imply that people who die of AIDS "die pretty" as Rep. Gunderson infers. I was using an old expression to draw a contrast between the healthy vigorous party goers and the reality of the shortened life span of homosexual males. Rep. Gunderson takes this sentence out of context in order to accuse me of "bigotry and prejudice". Congressman Gunderson exploits the tragedy of the AIDS crisis to smear my name.

(6) Rep. Gunderson claims that the outside stairwell was closed off because of "construction."

This is simply not true. The outside stairwell was open for several hours and many people proceeded down there. One party goer, noticing people down in the stairwell referred to it as "screw alley." Security closed the stairwell down several hours after the dance began. Security erected orange cones to close it off and stationed an officer right in front of the entrance.

(7) Rep. Gunderson states that "security reported no fights, no harassment, no drugs, no smoking, nor any sexual activity. Security made no reports of illegal activity or trouble."

The question that needs to be asked is why Security did not report the activities it surely witnessed. According to the Washington Times (May 15), John Cloud, a City Paper reporter who attended the dance witnessed " . . . a fair number of people using drugs." The Washington Times also reported (May 15) that "A columnist for the Metro Weekly, a Washington homosexual newspaper, described the dance: 'The stately place was incredible—we felt like we were in a hallowed hall. We spent much of our time out on the dance floor trying to cop a feel, or back in the sponsors' lounge trying to cop a feel, or outside in the designated smoking area trying to cop a feel and a smoke.'"

Approved February 13, 1996, William J. Clinton.

Mr. Speaker, here are the prepared remarks of Dr. Billy Graham.

A beautiful title, Mr. Speaker.

THE HOPE FOR AMERICA

Mr. Vice President; Speaker Newt Gingrich; Majority Leader Bob Dole; Senator Strom Thurmond; Members of the House of Representatives and the Senate; distinguished guests and friends * * *

Ruth and I are overwhelmed by the very kind words that have been spoken today, and especially by the high honor you have just bestowed on both of us. It will always be one of the high points of our lives, and we thank you from the bottom of our hearts for this unforgettable event. We are grateful for all of you in the Senate and House who have had a part in it; and President Clinton for his support in signing the resolution.

As we read the list of distinguished Americans who have received the Congressional Gold Medal in the past—beginning with George Washington in 1776—we know we do not belong in the same company with them, and we feel very unworthy. One reason is because we both know this honor ought to be shared with those who have helped us over the years—some of whom are here today. As a young boy, I remember gazing at that famous painting of Washington crossing the Delaware. Only later did it occur to me that Washington did not get across that river by himself. He had the help of others—and that has been true of us as well. Our ministry has been a team effort, and without our associates and our family, we never could have accomplished anything.

I am especially grateful my wife, Ruth, and I are BOTH being given this honor. No one has sacrificed more than Ruth has, or been more dedicated to God's calling for the two of us.

However, I would not be here today receiving this honor if it were not for an event that happened to me many years ago as a teenager on the outskirts of Charlotte, NC. An evangelist came through our town for a series of meetings. I came face-to-face with the fact that God loved me, Billy Graham, and had sent His Son to die for my sin. He told how Jesus rose from the dead to give us hope of eternal life.

I never forgot a verse of Scripture that was quoted, "As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name" (John 1:12, KJV). That meant that I must respond to God's offer of mercy and forgiveness. I had to repent of my own sins and receive Jesus Christ by faith.

When the preacher asked people to surrender their lives to Christ, I responded. I had little or no emotion; I was embarrassed to stand with a number of other people when I knew some of my school peers saw me; but I meant it. And that simple repentance and open commitment to Jesus Christ changed my life. If we have accomplished anything at all in life since then, however, it has only been because of the grace and mercy of God.

As Ruth and I receive this award we know that some day we will lay it at the feet of the One we seek to serve.

As most of you know, the President has issued a proclamation for this day, May 2, 1996, to be a National Day of Prayer. Here in Washington you will see and hear of people throughout the District of Columbia praying today. It is encouraging and thrilling that here, and across the country people have committed themselves to pray today for our leaders, our nation, our world, and for ourselves as individuals. I am so glad that before business each morning, both the House of Representatives and the Senate have a prayer led by Chaplain Ogilvie of the Senate, who has had so much to do with this event today, and Chaplain Jim Ford, who used to be chaplain at West Point when I went almost every year to bring a message to the cadets.

Exactly 218 years ago today—on May 2, 1778—the first recipient of this award, George Washington, issued a General Order to the American people. He said, "The . . . instances of Providential Goodness which we have experienced and which have now almost crowned our labors with complete success demand from us . . . the warmest returns of Gratitude and Piety to the Supreme Author of all Good." It was a message of hope and trust, and it also was a challenge for the people to turn to God in repentance and faith.

We are standing at a similar point in our history as less than four years from now the world will enter the Third Millennium. What will it hold for us? Will it be a new era of unprecedented peace and prosperity? Or will it be a continuation of our descent into new depths of crime, oppression, sexual immorality, and evil?

Ironically, many people heralded the dawn of the 20th Century with optimism. The steady march of scientific and social progress, they believed would vanquish our social and economic problems. Some optimistic theologians even predicted the 20th Century would be "The Christian Century", as humanity followed Jesus' exhortation to love your neighbor as yourself. But no other century has been ravaged by such devastating wars, genocides and tyrannies. During this century we have witnessed the outer limits of human evil.

Our mood on the brink of the 21st Century is far more somber. Terms like "ethnic cleansing" "random violence" and "suicide bombing" have become part of our daily vocabulary.

Look at our own society. There is much, of course, that is good about America, and we thank God for our heritage of freedom and our abundant blessings. America has been a nation that has shown a global compassion that the rest of the world seemingly does not understand. After World War II because we had the Atom Bomb, we had the opportunity to rule the world, but America turned from that and instead helped rebuild the countries of our enemies.

Nevertheless, something has happened since those days and there is much about America that is no longer good. You know the problems as well as I do—racial and ethnic tensions that threaten to rip apart our cities and neighborhoods; crime and violence of epidemic proportions in most of our cities; children taking weapons to school; broken families; poverty; drugs; teenage pregnancy; corruption; the list is almost endless. Would the first recipients of this award even recognize the society they sacrificed to establish? I fear not. We have confused liberty with license—and we are paying the awful price. We are a society poised on the brink of self-destruction.

But what is the real cause? We call conferences and consultations without end, frantically seeking solutions to all our problems; we engage in shuttle diplomacy; and yet in the long run little seems to change. Why is that? What is the problem? The real problem is within ourselves.

Almost three thousand years ago King David, the greatest king Israel ever had, sat under the stars and contemplated the reasons for the human dilemma. He listed three things that the world's greatest scientists and sociologists have not been able to solve, and it seems the more we know, and the greater our technology, the more difficulties we are in. In perhaps the best-known passage of the Old Testament, Psalm 23, he touches on the three greatest problems of the human race.

First, David said, is the problem of emptiness. David wrote, "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want." He was not talking just about physical want, but spiritual want.

I stood on the campus of one of our great universities some time ago, and I asked the Dean, "What is the greatest problem on your campus?" He replied in one word: "Emptiness." The human heart craves for meaning, and yet we live in a time of spiritual emptiness that haunts millions.

"Nirvana" is the Hindu word for someone who has arrived into the state of perpetual bliss. Media reports said that Kurt Cobain, the NIRVANA rock group's leader, was the pacesetter for the nineties, and the "savior of rock and roll." But he said the song in the end which best described his state of mind was "I hate myself and I want to die!" And at age 27 he committed suicide with a gun.

Second, is the problem of guilt. David wrote: "He restoreth my soul, he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness." Down inside we all know that we have not measured up even to our own standards, let alone God's standard.

Third, David pointed to the problem of death. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me." Death is the one common reality of all human life. Secretary of Commerce Ron Brown did not realize his time had come when he stepped on that plane in Croatia a few weeks ago.

From time to time I have wandered through Statuary Hall and looked at all those statues of some of the greatest men and women in our nation's history. But one thing is true of every one of them: They are all dead.

Yes, these three things—emptiness, guilt, and the fear of death—haunt our souls. We frantically seek to drown out their voices, driving ourselves into all sorts of activities—from sex to drugs or tranquilizers—and yet they are still there.

But we must probe deeper. Why is the human heart this way? The reason is because we are alienated from our Creator. That was the answer David found to these three problems: "The Lord is my shepherd." This is why I believe the fundamental crisis of our time is a crisis of the spirit. We have lost sight of the moral and spiritual principles on which this nation was established—principles drawn largely from the Judeo-Christian translation as found in the Bible.

What is the cure? Is there hope?

Ruth and I have devoted our lives to the deep conviction that the answer is yes. There is hope! Our lives can be changed, and our world can be changed. The Scripture says, "You must be born again." You could have a spiritual rebirth right here today.

What must be done? Let me briefly suggest three things.

First, we must repent. In the depths of the American Civil War, Abraham Lincoln called for special days of public repentance and prayer. Our need for repentance is no less today. What does repentance mean? Repentance means to change our thinking and our way of living. It means to turn from our sins and to commit ourselves to God and His will. Over 2700 years ago the Old Testament prophet Isaiah declared: "Seek the Lord while he may be found; call on him while he is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the evil man his thoughts. Let him turn to the Lord, and he will have mercy on him, and to our God, for he will freely pardon" (Isaiah 55:6-7, NIV). Those words are as true as they were over two and a half millennia ago.

Second, we must commit our lives to God, and to the moral and spiritual truths that have made this nation great. Think how different our nation would be if we sought to follow the simple and yet profound injunctions of the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount. But we must respond to God, Who is offering us forgiveness, mercy, supernatural help, and the power to change.

Third, our commitment must be translated into action—in our homes, in our neighborhoods, and in our society.

Jesus taught there are only two roads in life. One is the broad road that is easy and well-traveled, but which leads to destruction. The other, He said, is the narrow road of truth and faith that at times is hard and lonely, but which leads to life and salvation.

As we face a new millennium, I believe America has gone a long way down the wrong road. We must turn around and go back and change roads. If ever we needed God's help, it is now. If ever we needed spiritual renewal, it is now. And it can begin today in each one of our lives, as we repent before God and yield ourselves to Him and His Word.

What are YOU going to do?

The other day I heard the story of a high school principal who held an assembly for graduating seniors, inviting a recruiter from each branch of the service: Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines to each give a twelve minute presentation on career opportunities they offered to the students. He stressed the importance of each staying within their allotted time.

The Army representative went first, and was so eloquent that he got a standing ovation, but went eighteen minutes. Not to be outdone, the Navy presentation was equally superb, but took nineteen minutes. Air Force then gave a sterling presentation, which lasted twenty minutes. By now, the principal was irate, and admonished the Marine recruiter that he had only three minutes before the students had to leave for the next class!

During the first two minutes of his shortened time, the Marine didn't say a word, but individually and carefully studied the faces of each student. Finally, he said, "I've looked across this crowd and I see three or four individuals who have what it takes to be a United States Marine. If you think you are one of them, I want to see you down front immediately after the assembly."

Who do you think drew the biggest crowd! This afternoon, as I look out across this distinguished group gathered here, I see more than a few men and women who have what it takes, under God to lead our country forward "through the night" into the next millennium—individuals who represent civil and governmental authority—as well as doctors, lawyers, clergy, artists and media.

Again, Ruth and I are deeply humbled by this award, and we thank you for all that it represents.

We pledge to continue the work that God has called us to do as long as we live.

Thank you.

AMERICANS NEED GAS TAX FREEDOM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of May 12, 1995, the gentlewoman from California [Mrs. SEASTRAND] is recognized for 40 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mrs. SEASTRAND. Mr. Speaker, approximately a week ago we celebrated Tax Freedom Day. It is interesting because this year, in 1996, it is 6 days later than we celebrated Tax Freedom Day in 1993. This is the day when across America, hardworking families, moms and dads, keep their paycheck, and they have the dollars to stop funding government at all levels, and the dollars after Tax Freedom Day actually go to their families and their children and to do the things they want to do with their dollars.

Americans do not need to look any further than their 1995 tax return to see the difference between Republicans and Democrats. Republicans want Americans to keep more of their paychecks. Republicans want families to save for their futures, and they want more for the families and for our communities across this Nation.

We kept our promises to the American taxpayers by passing the first ever balanced budget in 25 years. We passed the $500-per-child tax credit and the repeal of Clinton's assault on working seniors. We want seniors to keep more of what they earn.

But unfortunately President Clinton chose to veto these key provisions which were meant to put back power to where power belongs, and that is into the hands of working taxpayers, the working families, moms and dads across this Nation.

It is interesting because Washington values here on Capitol Hill are so very much different from the folks across America, and in particular the folks on the central coast of California. I am very privileged to have the right to be voted in by constituents on the central coast of California, to represent them. I represent two wonderful counties, San Luis Obispo County and Santa Barbara County.

It is interesting to note, because in 1993 we had a severe gas tax hike. It was part of the largest tax hike in history. In fact, $4.8 billion alone went to an annual gas tax, and I want to remind everyone that that is 30 percent to the Federal gas tax, a 30-percent increase. I might also remind people that not one Republican voted for the gas tax. It was part of an overall tax increase of $268 billion, an entire package. But again, as I said, $4.8 billion was the gas tax.

When politicians raise taxes for some reason they do not seem to save the money. They spend it. People on Capitol Hill here in Washington, DC, when they can get a dollar here, a dollar there, eventually they spend it. Spending in 1992 was $1.3 trillion, almost $1.4 trillion. But spending in 1995 was $1.57 trillion, almost $1.6 trillion, an increase of $190 billion.

I know I cannot fathom what $1 billion is. It is very hard to work in these numbers. I can identify with working families on the central coast of California. We deal not in those type of numbers. Only in government do we deal in billions and trillions.

But I know that the gas tax hits the low- and middle-income Americans the most, those that need a helping hand from those of us that are trying to help them here in Washington. I want to help those people, because I know it hits them, those that we always say we care the most about.

Perhaps you have seen that famous quote of President Clinton. It was stated in Houston in October of last year, and he was talking about raising $268 billion of tax increase, and he admitted, "Even I think I raised taxes too much."

I agree, and I think we here in Washington, DC, here in this House and this Senate, and we should have the President help to roll back President Clinton's tax hikes.

We have seen definitely that there has been a gas price increase and it has been caused by market-driven events, many reasons, and it really affects the central coast of California. In fact in Santa Barbara alone, the city of Santa Barbara, we saw perhaps the highest prices in Santa Barbara than were seen across this Nation, in some instances over $2 a gallon.

So we wonder, why are the retail prices up? I have a response here from the Department of Energy. On April 30, 1996, the Department of Energy told Senate staff that the recent increases in retail gasoline and diesel prices are due to many reasons, and here are some of the factors:

First, tight world crude supplies following a colder than normal winter.

Second, lower U.S. private crude and petroleum stocks due to, well, a colder than normal winter. Market decisions by companies to hold minimal inventories of crude oil in anticipation of the United Nations agreeing to allow Iraq to begin exporting oil.

Third, higher corn prices than have reduced ethanol production.

Fourth, normal spring refinery cutbacks while they reconfigure to decrease heating oil production and increase gasoline production for the summer driving season.

And, finally, fifth, in California, my State, particular shortages because of California's required introduction of a particular form of reformulated gasoline. The shortages were due to production run problems at several California refineries.

It is interesting, just recently in the Washington Post one of the reporters said today's prices are set by the absence of refining capacity and unnecessary environmental regulations, and that really does apply to California. We are all interested in cleaner air, but there is a price to be paid.

Overall, retail prices of motor fuels in the United States have increased sharply since the winter to their highest level since 1990. Especially in California, we are preparing for the tourist season. Tourism is very important to the central coast of California and so we are preparing for that busiest season and concerned about whether the folks are going to come.

But with gas prices soaring all over the country and especially, as I said, in my own backyard, I want to do something to help ease the burden of those rising gas prices. I think we need some relief and some immediate relief.

I have introduced a bill that would temporarily repeal the Clinton gas tax until 1997 to allow the oil markets a chance to recover from a shortage in supply. The bill is H.R. 3415.

Again, the central coast of California, every time I go home, and that is every weekend, folks will tell me that they just are overtaxed. They need some relief from the paperwork and the burdens of regulation, from all levels of government, and they wholeheartedly agree that immediately they would like to see saving some of that 4.3 cents that we pay because of the Clinton tax hike. They would like to put that in their pocket. They think it would relieve California and the central coast gas pains. It is amazing the good support I am getting on the central coast of California, and I think this is typical across this Nation.

But it is interesting because we hear a lot of naysayers on Capitol Hill here in Washington, DC. They say, the attitude is, why do we have to reduce the taxes? They just do not get it. They just do not understand the needs of working folks across this Nation and especially the folks in California.

Here in Washington on the Hill, you can have an apartment and you just walk to the office. Some people do not even own a car. Not so, not so from where I come from. Some people make, well, they can make a 100-mile round trip just going to the supermarket. California is different. I am sure this is also true in many of our rural areas across this Nation.

Well, my proposal to repeal the Clinton gas tax and return the money where it belongs, to the hardworking taxpayers, I hope you would consider what this means, not only cutting, putting the 4.3 cents in your pocket, but what it means to the other things you have to pay for, the transportation prices. When you think about the trucking industry and what we get delivered to our cities and areas, and how important gasoline is to moving our goods and services across this Nation, well, we have to sit back and think about all the things we buy: Our food, the cattle industry, the produce industry. Or if you just want to move from one place in these United States to another, all of this is done with gas.

Again, that 4.3 cents per gallon is going to mean lower dollars, lower transportation costs. Recent studies have documented the positive effect of repealing the Clinton gas tax. It would reduce taxes by almost $5 billion a year, and $550 million in California alone.

In addition, you know, we would recoup some of the jobs lost to that tax increase. The gas tax of 1993 is responsible for the loss of 8,000 jobs in California alone, and 69,000 jobs nationwide.

Earlier this year President Clinton and many of his Democrat colleagues who serve in Congress had the opportunity to cut taxes for the working American families, but they were committed to protecting Washington spending, and I believe they should be given another opportunity to reduce the tax burden of the American people.

Let us repeal the 1993 Clinton gas tax. Retail prices of motor fuels in the United States have increased sharply since the winter, to their highest levels since 1990. The Federal excise tax on gasoline was first enacted in 1932, and 1951 for diesel fuel. We started, as usual, with initial levels of 1 and 2 cents per gallon respectively, and then the taxes were raised gradually to 4 cents by 1959. From 1983 to 1993, there were five Federal tax increases on gasoline, raising them to their present levels of 18.3 cents a gallon.

Sometimes I think we do not realize how much we pay on an average gallon of gas when we fill it up. I should say of that 18.3, 14 cents goes into the highway trust fund and the 4.3 cents, well, it just goes into the general fund.

Now, that is the Clinton tax increase of 1993. I think it is important to stop here to repeat that. Only 14 cents of the 18.3 cents of Federal taxes on each gallon of gas that you purchase at the pump, only 14 cents goes into the trust fund for the roads, the bridges, to take care of those potholes when you are traveling along the freeways.

The 4.3 cents of the tax hike went to the general fund. I get a lot of postcards because people say maybe we could keep that money and fix the pothole on the freeway that I drive every day and let us not give it back. I would rather see the pothole filled up.

But, ladies and gentlemen, the 4.3 cents, the tax hike of 1993, does not go for your highways, for building bridges. It does not go for mass transit if you like in an urban city. In fact, the tax you are paying on your airline ticket today on the aviation fuel, that does not go for helping meet your transportation needs. It just goes into the General Fund, and only again in Washington, DC, do you have people here that feed the bureaucracy for more spending. It is dedicated, the 4.3 cents is dedicated to finance Washington spending on the bureaucracy.

Let me give you an example, in Santa Barbara County. I just heard there is consideration that we may have a measure on the November ballot to raise several million dollars to offset $100 million of backlog in maintenance on our county roads.

Well, here I have 4.3 cents that is just going into the general fund, when locally now the folks in Santa Barbara County may be asked to consider raising several million dollars to take care of backlog in maintenance. Something is wrong here.

The Congressional Research Service, a nonpartisan organization, estimates that, other things being equal, repeal of the 4.3 cent fuel tax would cause refiners, importers, and terminal operators to decrease wholesale prices by about three-fourths of the overall excise tax. I would say about 3.2 cents. Retail gasoline prices would tend to decline, and any decrease in the prices of gasoline and other motor fuel would tend to increase the demand for fuel and for complementary goods and services by reducing the cost of the vehicular transportation and related travel relative to the other costs and services. Therefore, the demand for substitute goods and services such as home recreation and other activities would tend to go down.

A decrease in the gasoline tax would increase, and I underline this word, household's disposable income, reduce business costs per unit of output, and would increase total demand for goods and services, thus having an expansive effect on economic activity.

Now, there have been questions asked about the bill to repeal the tax on gas from 1993, and one in particular is that even if the Clinton gas tax is repealed, it will not necessarily be passed on to the consumer.

Well, my bill, H.R. 3415, contains language that states the benefits of the tax repeal should be passed on to the consumers, and it requires that the Comptroller General of the United States conduct a study to assure pass-through of such a repeal.

It was interesting, because a colleague on the other side of the aisle just recently brought up his concern that passing that gasoline tax repeal will simply line the pockets of the big oil companies and will not be passed on to the consumers. I understand that concern. But certainly retailers I believe will always try to slowly drop the price of gasoline. However, the Department of Energy is predicting normal supplies and prices this summer.

Moreover, both world and domestic crude prices have fallen every day since early last week, and well before the President's announcement regarding SPR sales on Monday of last week. With gasoline prices expected to decline through this summer, market competition and full supply marketplace will make it very difficult, I believe, for retailers to keep the 4.3 cents if the tax is repealed.

I would just say other questions have been raised about the costs associated with this bill, and the answer to that is that we have the offsets, and they are found in reducing the size of rampant travel and other expenses at the Department of Energy. We also are going to look to the FCC auctioning off broadcast spectrums, and the Committee on the Budget chairman, Mr. KASICH, has assured us that we are on target to balance the budget by fiscal year 2002, even with this temporary repeal of the Clinton gas tax.

Well, Mr. Speaker, I guess it is the old story, the Democrats never met a tax increase they did not like. I would like to quote the minority leader from the Senate:

Well, it seems to me the Republicans' only issue, I am sure if you talked about the weather, they would come up with a tax cut, if you talked about heart problems, they would come up with a tax cut, and any problem that you think of in this country can be fixed with a tax cut, if you listen to Republicans. Again, we have got high prices. Let's not look at resources and supply and demand. Let's have a tax cut.

That is the Senate minority leader on April 29 of this year. Again, yes, I am looking to a tax cut, because I know how important it is for my folks to drive up to that pump, to fill up their tank and have to travel many miles on the central coast of California, and 4.3 cents in some tax relief to them is very important. And I make my case, the Democrats never met a tax increase they did not like.

From the way the Democrats are defending this tax hike, charging that its rollback will not get passed on to the consumers, it sounds like they cannot wait to increase gas taxes again.

As I said, I go home every weekend, and my constituents are telling me that they would like to see some relief. The students at U.C. Santa Barbara, the students at Cal Poly that have to travel miles, they want to see some relief. The cattlemen that take their cattle to and from market want to see relief. The produce industry, which is very big, taking the lettuce to market, it is very important and they want to see tax relief. And just the average mom and dad want to see tax relief so they can take the kids to school, get to work, get to the grocery store, get to little league, and do all the important things that are important in their life.

I believe, yes, that the best way to lower gas prices and relieve not only the central coast of California gas pains, but our Nation's gas pains, is to repeal the Clinton gas tax. It is time. It is time we let working men and women keep more of their hard-earned dollars, and not have the bureaucrats here in Washington say that they know best how to spend those hard-earned dollars.

Mr. Speaker, since its imposition in October of 1993, the gas tax has taken $613 million out of the economy. That is money that Californians could have had. Repealing the gas tax also would reduce taxes, as I said earlier before, by almost $5 billion annually. And I want to repeat this number, it would reduce taxes in California by $550 million. A repeal of the gas tax, I am summarizing here if you notice, the repeal of the gas tax would recoup the jobs most to the tax increase. If you recall, I said we lost 8,000 jobs in California, and I want to work for those 8,000 jobs, get them back, and I am going to work for the 69,000 jobs that we lost nationwide.

The Democrats love big government. They are so wedded to the old status quo that they are willing to deny American families, including those on the central coast of California, an annual $48 tax break. I think you all would remember that last year, or I should say last election, we heard slogans like "It is the economy, stupid." Well, I guess that if there was a slogan to be had this election time, we should remind people that it is the paycheck, stupid. The folks need to see more of the dollars kept in their paycheck and spend those hard-earned dollars as they best decide.

I would say, let the bureaucrats here decide how they are going to tighten their belts, and put their agency and their particular program on a diet. I would rather have the folks on Capitol Hill here in the bureaucracies decide how to tighten the belt, rather than my folks on the central coast of California.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. NEY). The Chair will remind Members to refrain from quoting individual Members of the Senate.

55TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BATTLE OF CRETE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of May 12, 1995, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KLINK] is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. KLINK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on this special order observing the 55th anniversary of the Battle of Crete.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. KLINK. Mr. Speaker, it is late, and many Members have not been able to join us tonight who had planned to make statements. They will put their statements in the RECORD. I am sure that will not be of distress to the Speaker, that we will not go as long as had been intended.

Mr. Speaker, I do rise today to mark the 55th anniversary of the Battle of Crete. This is really an historic event. It is of great significance. It took place on the Island of Crete during World War II. This was between Nazi forces and the people of Crete who were assisted by the allied armies.

I would like to rise today also to recognize the heroic efforts of the people of Crete that were exhibited not only during the battle itself, but during the subsequent 4-year occupation of Crete by Nazi forces.

At the outset of the war, Adolf Hitler had not intended to invade the Island of Crete. It was when Italian forces were unable to overtake the Greek forces on the Greek mainland that Hitler decided he would assist. Soon after Greece fell to German forces, Hitler was convinced by others to make Crete his next target.

Let me just talk a moment about the significance of the Island of Crete. It is the largest of the Greek islands, about 160 miles long. It varies in its width from about 7.5 miles to 35 miles. At the outbreak of World War II, Crete lay at a very strategic position for both the Allies and the Axis powers. For the British, who controlled the island at the time, Crete was a very strong point on the lifeline to India. It protected both Palestine and Egypt, and they had assigned elements of the Royal Navy to be sheltered in the great natural harbor of Suda Bay.

But despite its importance, the British maintained only a small garrison there. At the time of the outbreak of this war, it consisted of only three infantry battalions, armed with several heavy and light antiaircraft guns. They had coast defense artillery and searchlights. But sensing a coming Axis attack, they began to reinforce Crete with men and supplies.

But it was, in fact, too late. Because of the persistent attacks by the German Luftwaffe, they could send only a few thousand tons of supply to the island. And so it was on May 1941 that Adolf Hitler turned his attention to the Island of Crete.

Hitler's elite 7th parachute division began operation Mercury. At the time this was the largest airborne invasion to that point in our entire history, that is the entire history of this world. With the aid of some 500 transport aircraft and 500 bombers and fighters, the initial wave of paratroopers, which numbered about 3,500, suffered great casualties at the hands of Crete's ground forces. These ground forces, of course, included heroic Cretan civilians who used knives and pitchforks and sickles in their hands, and sticks and rocks, as some of their only weapons.

The valiant Allied forces were eventually forced to retreat, but the battle lasted 11 days before the Germans could declare a victory, and it resulted in over 6,000 German troops listed as killed, wounded or missing in action.

The losses to the elite 7th parachute division were felt so hard by the German military and were of such significance that no large-scale airborne operation was ever attempted by Nazi Germany again for the remainder of the war.

After the Allied retreat, the people of Crete were left to fend for themselves. The Cretan resistance movement organized in an effort to thwart the German Nazi forces. For 4 years the resistance movement on Crete inflicted very heavy casualties on the Nazi army. At one point the Cretan forces even kidnapped a heavily guarded German general.

The struggle undertaken by the Cretan civilians became an example for all Europe to follow in defying German occupation and aggression. The price paid for the Cretans' valiant resistance to Nazi forces became that of thousands of lives of civilians who died from random executions, some who died from starvation, others by imprisonment. Entire communities were burned and were destroyed by the Germans as a reprisal for the Cretan resistance movement. Yet the battle of Crete, in part, was to change the final outcome of World War II.

A direct result of this battle was a delay in Hitler's plans to invade Russia. Originally Hitler had planned to move on Russia in April of 1941. But Hitler was not able to move his forces on Russia until June because of the time that was lost as the valiant people of Crete had fought off the Third Reich. The consequences of this 2-month delay was Hitler's forces facing the harsh Russian winter. And while Nazi forces were able to penetrate into Russian territory, the snow storms and the sub zero temperatures eventually stalled them before they could overtake Moscow or Leningrad. This marked the beginning of the end of the Hitler war machine.

As is so often the case in history, the battle of Crete was not the first time a small force of Greeks fought against overwhelming odds. Dr. George C. Kiriakopoulos, a noted author and professor at Columbia University, has compared the battle of Crete to the ancient battle of Thermopylae. Thermopylae, which is a very narrow passageway located in east central Greece, was the site where King Leonidas and his 300 Spartans made their final stand against King Xerxes and his Persian army of 200,000 men.

Although King Leonidas' forces were defeated by the Persians, they defended the pass long enough for the bulk of the Greek army to escape. King Xerxes, of the Persian army, was finally, when they finally overtook Attica and Athens, was finally forced to flee Greece after his navy of 1,000 vessels was destroyed by fewer than 400 Greek ships during the battle of Salamis.

So just like King Xerxes, Adolf Hitler won his battle of Thermopylae in Crete, but that delay of 2 months cost him the war with Russia and cost him also the opportunity to eventually try to invade Great Britain.

Just last week, during his arrival ceremony for Greek President Constantinos Stephanopoulos, President Stephanopoulos stated that Greece, like the United States of America, continuously proves its commitment to the ideals of freedom of democracy and international law and order. It was because of the people of Crete and because they believed in these ideals and fought and died for these ideals that we as Americans should recognize and appreciate the historic significance of the battle of Crete.

The people of Crete themselves will always be remembered and will always remember the devastation that was brought to their island during World War II, however, I ask that all Americans observe the memory of the fallen heroes of the battle of Crete and honor the men and women of Crete, who, during World War II, fought an oppressive invader to preserve the ideals of freedom and democracy.

I would like to just mention a couple of other things about this battle for Crete, because it has been looked back upon with great amazement by many people who have analyzed it. It was the poet Calomenopoulos who said of the battle of Crete in one of his poems, "This castle you want to pillage, German, is founded on bones that are centuries old, and its foundations have drunk blood for thousands of years. It feeds on tears and sorrows make it strong. It's impregnable and it's indestructible and always stands erect. Unbendable and immovable, a bulwark of freedom. And it fights always standing and it wields the sword."

I wanted to take a look back at some of the amazing things that happened during the battle of Crete and put this great battle in significance.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman would yield for a second.

Mr. KLINK. I would glad to yield to my friend from California.

Mr. DORNAN. I enjoyed getting the gentleman from Pennsylvania's Dear Colleague. I am sorry more Members could not join us. I know on our side GEORGE GEKAS, a loyal son of Greek heritage, would dearly loved to have been here. He has done special orders just like yours.

I walked the battlefields of Crete with my oldest son, Bob Junior, on the 40th anniversary, 15 years ago, or that anniversary week, and I had not realized that at two of the major air fields that German airborne were totally repulsed and at the third field, which we visited, it was what the Iron Duke of Wellington, Arthur Wellesley, said after the battle of Waterloo: It was a close-run thing.

The New Zealand troops, with great loss of lives and wounded men, almost shut down the third major area of German paratroopers, and that is the area that the prize fighter, Max Schmeling, went into as a sergeant and a leader. Platoon sergeant. Of course, he had lucked out and beaten Joe Louis in their first encounter, and Louis, the Brown Bomber, kept his prediction that he would take him in one round. He did it in seconds of one round.

Maximum Schmeling was a good man, as I understand, not a Nazi. He did not understand Hitler's evil in the beginning and went down there, and then never again was part of any major German movement. I forget what happened to him. I am going to look it up after the order tonight.

But I appreciate the gentleman's taking this special order. I agree with your assessment that it was a key battle that probably affected everything after that. It was on the eve of Operation Barbarossa, which we are coming up on that on the 22nd of next month.

I want to make an observation and then back out of this. More Members should do what you are doing, Mr. KLINK, and try to recapture for our young people, as Ronald Reagan warned us. Just recent history with one of our mutual friends on your side, TOM LANTOS. I was down in the small rotunda on the House side, in what we are now calling the Lantos rotunda, or the Hungarian rotunda, there is Lajos Kossuth, the national hero of Hungary in the last century; died, I think in Paris in the 1890s; exiled for 47 years. And thanks to Mr. LANTOS of California we have a bust of one of the great heroes of modern times, Raoul Wallenberg.

We must study World War II. It is the watershed not only of this century, but it is an epic. It is a watershed of centuries. And when we focus in on certain battles, like the struggle for Crete, the first really massive use of paratroopers, never to be done again by Germans, as you pointed out in your Dear Colleague, I think it is a worthy subject for young Americans to study in high school.

So I will go back to my office as fast as I can and watch the rest of your special order with great interest, and then dig into my Crete books at home and relive some of my footsteps walking this heroic battlefield for the Greek people and the subcategory of the citizens of Crete who are Greek citizens. Thank you for doing this.

Mr. KLINK. I thank the gentleman from California, and indeed he is correct. I am reminded of former heavyweight champ Max Schmeling, who was one of those 7,000 elite troops.

When the 7th Parachute Division—and you have to remember, again, this was the largest airborne invasion in the history of the world at that time. The casualties that were suffered by these forces were heavier than the total number of Germans that had been killed in the war to that date.

This precious live airborne weapon had been altogether decimated moving into Crete, and not just by Allied forces or trained military, but many of them by women with pitchforks and sickles and people with sticks and rocks. The Cretan people just fought ferociously, not just during the battle of Crete but for the next 4 years.

There is a lesson here for all humankind. The people of Crete, together with the remnants of Allied forces from Britain, Australia and New Zealand, as the gentleman from California mentioned, showed the greatest valor of any of the conquered nations in Europe. The commanding general, Kurt Student, this is the German commanding general, called it "the fiercest struggle that any German formation had ever had to face."

In fact, it was Adolf Hitler who sent a message to his German general, Kurt Student, and said, "France fell in 8 days. Why is Crete still free?" It took 11 days to capture the island of Crete and only 8 days to capture the entire nation of France. That gives you an idea of the ferocity of these Greek citizens.

Moreover, the costly Cretan campaign, in the opinion of many historians, prevented Adolf Hitler from invading the British Isles. Many of his closest associates, including Marshal Goering, had suggested that they use this 7th Airborne Division to make their invasion of Britain. In fact, let me just read to you in ending some of the newspaper headlines from this period.

On the 28th of July 1941, the Times of London carried the story that 500 Cretan women were deported to Germany because they took part in the defense of their native island.

It was the Evening Standard in London on May the 24th of 1941 that said, "If Hitler takes Crete, one thing alone is certain. The next island to be assaulted is our own."

The Times in London on the 31st of May 1941 said:

A British naval officer has now reached the hospital. He set out to cross the open sea to safety, with a Cretan girl in a rowing boat. The boat was partly stove in and flooded by machine gun attack from the air. Part of the officer's side was blown away. To stop the bleeding and the gangrene the girl forced him to lie with his wounded side in the bilgewater in the bottom of the boat and herself rowed him more than 50 miles to an allied island.

There was a German epitaph that was put on the entrance to the village of Kandanos. It says,

On the 3rd of June 1941 the village of Kandanos was raised to the ground, never to be built again. This was an act of reprisal for the brutal murders of German parachutists, mountain forces and engineer corps, by men, women and priests who dared stand in the way of the Great Reich.

The victory at Crete cost the Germans 22,000 troops. About 400 aircraft were lost. The delaying effect of their attacks upon Greece and upon Crete not only interfered with Hitler's designs upon Syria and upon Iran, but eventually it proved disastrous in their attack upon Russia, as I mentioned earlier.

The German army reached the outskirts of Moscow in October of 1941. I think we know a little bit about the Russian winters from history. The early frost had begun to interfere with the movements of the Third Reich. Its arrival in front of Moscow 5 weeks earlier would have certainly led to capture of that city, and perhaps on to Leningrad, and history would not allow us to overexaggerate the impact that that would have had.

An eyewitness from 1941 said,

You should have seen the womenfolk carrying the cartridge belts folded round their waists. The women emerged in Chersonissos carrying sickles, sticks and virtually anything they could lay their hands on. The Germans suffered extensive losses at the hands of these women.

Again I would appreciate all of the Members who intended to be here with me, and I understand that they thought that it was late and did not want to make it. So that would end my comments.

□ 2115

Again, I would welcome Members putting their words in the RECORD and would also welcome Members to join me in cosponsoring a resolution, which I will plan to introduce next week, which would commemorate the people of Crete and their valiant efforts 55 years ago in fighting the oppression of the Third Reich.

Mr. COYNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join in this special order commemorating the 55th anniversary of the battle of Crete. I am pleased to be able to celebrate the heroism and sacrifice of the Cretan people, who bravely opposed the Nazi invasion in 1941, and who suffered under Nazi occupation for the next 4 years.

In 1940 and 1941, the armies of Nazi Germany and Italy swept through much of Europe. France, the Netherlands, Denmark, Norway, Albania, Yugoslavia, and finally Greece were overrun by the Fascists. Commonwealth troops and thousands of patriotic soldiers from the fallen countries—Poland, France, and Greece, in particular—continued to fight the Fascist onslaught, and when they were hopelessly outnumbered they undertook daring seaborne withdrawals from continental Europe in order to regroup, rearm, and build up their forces to fight another day.

After securing Greece, the Fascists turned their attention to Crete. Crete's location in the Mediterranean Sea made it an important strategic objective for both the Allied and Axis forces. Crete sat astride the important British communications route between England and India that passed through Egypt via the Suez Canal. Possession of Crete made the defense of this route easier for the British. The capture of Crete was central to Hitler's plans to conquer the Middle East and sever this important British supply line.

Because the British Royal Navy still maintained a strong presence in the Mediterranean, the German assault on Crete would come primarily from the air. Elite German paratroopers and glider troops spearheaded the assault on Crete. These were the same battle-hardened troops that had made the German sweep through the lowlands on Holland and Belgium in 1940 so dramatically successful. On the morning of May 20, 1941, thousands of German paratroopers and glider troops began landing on Crete. They were supported by hundreds of bombers and fighters from the German Luftwaffe.

The Allied forces on Crete were no match for the Axis invasion forces, but they were able to exact a heavy toll on the invaders. The British garrison on Crete was initially quite small—only three battalions—but many of the Allied troops evacuated from Greece had been sent to reinforce the garrison on Crete. These soliders—British, Australians, New Zealanders, and Greeks—aided by the civilians who lived on Crete—men, women, and even children—exactd a heavy toll on the first waves of airborne troops. Men and women armed only with knives, sickles and pitchforks attacked German paratroopers landing in their fields and on the beaches.

The outcome of the battle, however, hinged on control of the island's airstrips. If the Germans could capture one or more of these facilities, they could bring in planeloads of troops. Commonwealth and Greek troops, aided by patriotic Cretans, held onto the airfield throughout the first and second days' onslaught, but on the third day, the Germans secured the airfield at Málme and promptly began landing planes full of reinforcements and supplies at a furious rate. After that, German airpower and additional reinforcements turned the tide, and several days later the Royal Navy began evacuating the Commonwealth and Greek troops.

By early June, 18,000 troops had been evacuated and another 10,000 soldiers had been captured. The Germans began their occupation of the island, and the Cretan people began organizing an underground resistance movement. For the next 4 years, the Fascist occupation was characterized by guerrilla attacks and brutal reprisals. Villages were razed and thousands of civilians were imprisoned or executed. Yet the spirit of the people of Crete never faltered. Despite the horrible price, they continued to resist the Nazis until Crete was liberated in 1945.

Mr. Speaker, we have undertaken this special order today in order to pay tribute to the courageous men and women of Crete who, despite overwhelming odds, resisted the invasion of their homeland by the forces of prejudice and tyranny. Their struggle is a proud monument to the nobility of the human spirit and the importance that mankind places on freedom. It is only appropriate that on the 55th anniversary of the Battle of Crete, we celebrate the heroic deeds of the Cretan people.

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend my colleague, Congressman RON KLINK of Pennsylvania, for holding this special order.

I rise to today to join my colleagues in commemorating a valiant stand made more than a half-century ago on what was then the frontier of freedom. It was a stand made by a battered but brave group of individuals thrown together to halt the domination of a smaller, weaker nation by a larger, more powerful aggressor.

Greece was engulfed in conflict—along with the rest of the globe—during some of the darkest days of World War II. Indeed, in the spring of 1941, Nazi domination of the European continent was nearly complete. Following a valiant struggle against overwhelmingly superior German forces in and among the mountains to the north, Greek forces had been pushed entirely off the continent and were taking refuge on the island of Crete.

The German Army looked covetously across the sea to Crete. If captured, it would provide air and sea bases from which the Nazis could dominate the eastern Mediterranean and launch air attacks against Allied forces in northern Africa.

In fact, the Nazi high command envisioned the capture of Crete to be the first of a series of assaults leading to the Suez Canal.

On May 20, 1941, the largest German airborne attack of the war commenced against Greek, Cretan, and British forces, battle-weary and crippled after the withdrawal from the mainland. Waves of bombers pounded the Allied positions followed by a full-scale airborne assault. Elite paratroopers and glider-borne infantry units fell upon the rag-tag Allied soldiers, who valiantly stood firm in the face of certain defeat.

Watching death descend upon them from above, the brave defenders of Crete—having endured hours of vicious bombing, decimated the crack Nazi troops at two key airfields. However, the Germans managed to gain a foothold at a third airfield and soon were being resupplied and reinforced by air.

Seven days later, the defenders of Crete—though clinging to their rocky defensive positions—knew that they would soon be overrun. The evacuation order was given, and nearly 18,000 men were rescued. These valiant survivors had bought the Allies a week's precious time free of Nazi air and sea attacks based from Crete. More importantly, they inflicted severe losses on the German airborne forces, the showpieces of the Nazi Army.

Nearly 2,000 German soldiers were killed and more than 4,000 were wounded or missing. So injured were the German units, in fact, that they never again attempted an airborne assault of the magnitude of that launched at Crete.

This month marks the 55th anniversary of the Battle of Crete, a proud day in the defense of liberty and self-rule; when the sons of Greece and Crete along with their British allies firmly answered the Nazi challenge to freedom.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, may we take inspiration from the shining example of the defenders of Crete in ensuring that this is indeed the case. We must not forget those who have sacrificed their lives to secure our freedom.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank Congressman KLINK for organizing a special order to commemorate the 55th anniversary of the Battle of Crete. Throughout history, the Greek people have been champions of freedom and self determination and their actions in the Battle of Crete were instrumental in defeating fascism in the 20th century.

In October 1940, Mussolini's Italy invaded Greece, entering that country by coming through Albania. Responding to this crisis, the British rushed to Greece's aid and quickly sent

Army and Royal Air Force units to Crete. With Italian troops bogged down in Greece and delaying his brutal campaign of world domination, Hitler sent German troops into Greece and directed that the Nazi war machine take control of Crete.

In May 1941 the Nazis began executing Hitler's directive and launched an airborne invasion on a scale unprecedented in history. With lightning speed, the Germans dropped some 20,000 troops on the island by air; in addition, the Germans and Italians launched a land invasion, sending troops by sea from the Greek mainland, which had fallen to the Nazis a few weeks earlier.

The ensuing battle put up by the people of Crete and other Allied forces against the superior Nazi war machine was one of the most significant of World War II. And though the Germans won the battle and took the island, they did so at the highest possible cost—they would eventually lose the war. Karl Student, the Nazi general in charge of the invasion, called the battle "the fiercest struggle any German formation had ever had to face * * *". The German High Command would never again attempt an operation of that size.

The unanticipated heroism and ferocity with which the people of Crete fought delayed Hitler's planned invasion of Russia by 3 months. There were heavy losses on both sides. Strengthened by the knowledge that they were defending a concept—democracy—that had originated from their homeland, Cretan civilians, including women, children, and the elderly, joined the battle against the Nazis, wielding pitchforks and fashioning homemade weapons. By the battle's end, the Cretans and the Royal Air Force had inflicted so much damage on Hitler's elite 7th Air Division that it was rendered useless to the Nazi effort to conquer the Middle East.

The battle, moreover, continued long after the 11 days it took Hitler to finally take the Greek island. The Cretans organized a resistance movement, which for the remaining 4 years of the war zealously fought the occupying Nazi force. They suffered horrendously for their resistance; the Germans executed thousands of civilians and randomly decimated entire towns, villages, and communities. They did not, however, suffer in vain.

The resistance the people of Crete mounted against the invasion forced the Germans to attempt to invade Russia during the oppressive Russian winter—a task that proved to be too much for the Nazis. Their failure in Russia has since come to be recognized as the beginning of the end of Hitler's Third Reich.

We here in Congress should do our best to ensure our citizens never forget the role the citizens of Crete played in defeating fascism. Indeed, we honor ourselves by honoring them—many of those who participated in the Cretan resistance movement emigrated to the United States and became American citizens.

I am proud to have been able to participate in the remembrance of a historical event as important as the Battle of Crete. As the sacrifices the Cretans made 55 years ago demonstrate, we are indebted to Greece not only for giving the world the system upon which our country was founded, but for shedding the blood of their sons and daughters to protect that system as well. I strongly encourage all Americans to join me in honoring Greek-Americans of Cretan descent, and our friends in Greece and Crete, for their contribution to one of the most important battles of the 20th century.

Mr. KLINK. Mr. Speaker, at this time, I would yield to my good friend, BERNIE SANDERS, for the rest of my time.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, let me begin by expressing my disappointment at the vote that took place in the House today regarding the defense budget. It seems to me that in a time when Speaker GINGRICH and his colleagues are talking about the need to move this country toward a balanced budget and are talking about the crisis of our deficit situation, that it makes no sense for the Republican leadership to be proposing a defense budget which is $13 billion more than President Clinton has requested.

I find it especially hypocritical that at a time when the Republican leadership is saying that we have got to balance the budget and to do so we must make major cuts in Medicare, major cuts in Medicaid, major cuts in education and veterans' programs and environmental protection, in the fuel assistance program, and so many programs that the middle class and the working class of this country depend upon, low-income people depend upon that at the same time Mr. GINGRICH says, well, it is OK that we spend billions more for B-2 bombers that the Pentagon does not want, that we start spending billions of dollars more for the star wars program.

The budget of the U.S. Government is what this country is all about, and I think it is a sad day that we are saying that it is appropriate to spend billions more on the military, despite the end of the cold war, that we are prepared to put approximately $100 billion into defending Europe and Asia, although we do not even know who the enemy is now, but we do not have enough money to take care of our senior citizens who are in need, we do not have enough money to take care of our children.

This country has by far the highest rate of childhood poverty in the industrialized world, 22 percent of our kids in poverty. We do not have enough money to help them. We do have enough money to build B-2 bombers and star wars and things that the Pentagon does not even want. I think that is a very sad state of priorities that Mr. GINGRICH and the Republican leadership are expressing.

Mr. Speaker, what I want to concentrate on today is what I think is the most important issue facing this country, and that is the state of our economy and my very great fears that this country, in many ways, is moving toward an oligarchy, which is a nation controlled by relatively small numbers of very, very wealthy people.

What is going on in this country today is that since 1973, 80 percent of all American families have seen their incomes either decline or at best remain stagnant. What is going on in my

State of Vermont and what is going on all over this country today is that we are seeing working people work longer hours for lower wages. These families look to the future. They are extremely worried about what is going to happen to their kids because it appears very likely that for the first time in the modern history of the United States, our children will have a lower standard of living than we will have.

Mr. Speaker, this, in my view, is the most important issue facing this country. I get very disappointed as an Independent, as the only Independent in the Congress, that we do not see enough discussion here on that issue, certainly from the Republican leadership. We must have more of that discussion. What is also going on in this country is, not only is the middle class shrinking, but we are seeing another phenomenon that should be of concern to all people. That is that the wealthiest people in this country are becoming much wealthier at the same time as the middle class is shrinking.

We are looking at a schizophrenic economy. How bad is the situation today facing the working men and women of this country? Let me just make a few points. Again, these are points I think that should be made over and over again. Twenty years ago, the workers of the United States were the best compensated in the entire world. We were No. 1. Today, depending upon the study that you might look at, American workers rank 13 among industrialized nations in terms of compensation and benefits.

In fact, one of the great ironies of the current economic period is that we are seeing companies from Europe and elsewhere come to the United States in search of, quote unquote, cheap labor. In my State of Vermont and throughout this country, you can get hard-working individuals who must work for $6 or $7 an hour. Those are wages that large companies cannot get workers to work for in Europe. So we are seeing for certain European companies the United States becoming what Mexico is for American companies. That is a very sad state of affairs.

Mr. Speaker, adjusted for inflation, the average pay for four-fifths of American workers plummeted by 16 percent in the 20 years between 1973 and 1993. In other words, whenever you turn on the television or whenever you read the newspapers, they talk about the booming economy. The economy is booming for someone, but it certainly is not booming for the middle class or the working people of this country.

Between 1973 and 1993, the average pay for four-fifths of American workers plummeted by 16 percent. People are working for significantly lower wages. In 1973, the average American worker earned $445 a week. Twenty years later, that worker was making $373 a week. That is the issue that should be debated here on the floor of the House, should be debated in the Senate every single day, should be debated all over this country.

How did we go from 1st to 13th in the world in terms of the wages and benefits our workers received? How did it happen that the middle class is shrinking? How did it happen that real wages are declining? That is the $64 issue that should be addressed by the President, by the leadership of the Republican and Democratic parties.

Mr. Speaker, as bad as the situation is for the middle class and middle-age, middle-class workers, the situation is far worse for young American workers. In the last 15 years, the wages for entry-level jobs for young men who are high school graduates has declined by 30 percent. Young families headed by persons younger than 30 saw their inflation-adjusted median income collapse by 32 percent from 1973 to 1990. Young families headed by someone between 25 and 24, these are young American families, had incomes $4,000 lower in 1991 than they did in 1979. Their entry-level wages were 10-percent lower in 1991 than in 1979.

What all those statistics mean is that for young people graduating high school going out into the job market, the wages that they are earning are significantly lower than was the case just 20 years ago. So, as bad as the situation is for middle-age people, it is a lot worse for younger people. That is an issue that we must address and analyze and correct. Americans at the lower end of the wage scale are now the lowest paid workers in the entire industrialized world. One percent of American workers with full-time jobs are paid so little that their wages do not enable them to live above the poverty level.

Mr. Speaker, we hear a whole lot, we heard it from President Reagan, we heard it from President Bush, we are hearing it from President Clinton about all of the new jobs that are being created. The sad truth, however, is that the vast majority of the jobs being created are low-wage jobs. These are the jobs that pay workers $6 an hour, they pay workers $7 an hour. They often bring no health care benefits, no retirement benefits, and no time off for vacations or sick leave.

Also, one of the frightening aspects of the new economy is that more and more of the new jobs being created are part-time jobs or temporary jobs. What we are seeing is that many employers would rather hire two people for 20 hours a week or for 30 hours a week rather than one worker for 40 hours a week because the employer does not have to pay any benefits.

In fact, in 1993, one-third of the United States work force was composed of, quote unquote, contingent labor, and that is temporary labor. That means that you get a job for 4 months, for 6 months and then you have to go out looking for another job again. There was a time not so long ago in our history when a real job meant 40 hours a week with benefits, decent health care, perhaps retirement, that you moved up the ladder if you did your job well. You made more money. You had a certain sense of job security.

It seems that those days are ancient history, as many of the new jobs that are being created are part-time jobs or temporary jobs. In the past 10 years, the United States has lost 3 million white collar jobs and 1.8 million jobs in manufacturing, just in the past 5 years. Five companies, Ford, AT&T, General Electric, ITT and Union Carbide alone have laid off well over 800,000 American workers in the last 15 years. Meanwhile, while the decent-paying jobs continue to disappear, the number of involuntary part-time workers tripled between 1970 and 1993.

People might be surprised to know that the largest private sector employer in the United States today is not General Motors. It is not General Electric. It is not IBM. It is Manpower Incorporated. They are the leading supplier of temporary employees.

Now, one of the tragic results of declining wages in America is that the average American worker is now working significantly more hours than used to be the case. The number of Americans working at more than one job has almost doubled over the last 15 years. So if the average American thinks, my God, I am the only person who has to work two jobs or three jobs, wake up. It is your neighbor doing that. It is people all over this country, because as real wages decline, people are just scrambling as hard as they can. Certainly in the State of Vermont, it is not unusual to see people working two jobs, three jobs, just to pay the bills.

Furthermore, when we talk about things like family values, I think what many of us mean is the ability of a husband and a wife to spend some quality time with their kids. I remember seeing a constituent of mine in Burlington, VT, who told me—she was shopping at a grocery store, that she was working three part-time jobs. Her husband was working four part-time jobs. They hardly ever had a chance to be together or, let alone, to spend time with their child.

That is what is happening all over this country. Not only are people working longer hours, in fact the average American is now working approximately 160 hours a year more than was the case just 20 years ago. But what we are also seeing is that more and more Americans are lacking adequate medical insurance.

We had a major debate here on the floor of the House several years ago about the need for a national health care policy. Those of us who advocated the right of all Americans to have health care as exists in virtually every other industrialized nation on earth, we lost that debate. The result is that 3 years later, we are seeing more and more Americans not only without any health insurance, but we are seeing more Americans who have inadequate health insurance. By that, I mean very high premiums, large deductibles, large copayments. The situation is such that many people, even when they are sick, hesitate to go to the doctor because they just cannot afford the bill.

In terms of home ownership, which is a key part of the American dream, that home ownership is also in rapid decline for the average American worker. As a result of lower and lower incomes, an increasing number of young Americans can no longer afford to purchase their own homes. In 1980, 21 percent of Americans under 25 owned their own homes. In 1987, only 16 percent did. The answer is obvious: If you are not making decent wages, there is no way you are going to be able to put a down payment or pay the mortgage on a home.

Mr. Speaker, while the middle class is in decline or the real wages of American workers are going down, or while many of the new jobs are being created to pay people $4.50, $5 and $6 an hour, there is another aspect of our economy that must be addressed. That is, clearly not everybody is hurting. Some people are doing very, very well.

This is an issue we just do not talk about enough. I think on this floor of the House, and certainly the media does not talk about it enough, today, the United States has the dubious distinction of having the most unfair distribution of wealth and income in the entire industrialized world. I think many of us used to think that in countries like England, where you have queens and dukes the lords and barons, that those were really class countries that you had a ruling class and an upper class and you had a lower class. But the truth of the matter is that the United States of America today has a much more unfair and unequal distribution of wealth than England. We have a much more unequal distribution than any other country on earth. Hardly ever talked about, this issue, but we should.

What is going on now is that the wealthiest 1 percent of the population own 40 percent of the wealth in this Nation. That is more wealth than the bottom 90 percent.

The richest 1 percent own more wealth than the bottom 90 percent, and that gap between the rich and the poor is growing wider.

But it is not only wealth. We also have the most unfair distribution of income in the entire industrialized world. The highest-earning 4 percent of our population make more money than do the bottom 51 percent.

Mr. Speaker, from 1979 to 1995, household incomes in the United States grew by $800 billion in real terms. But 50 percent of that sum went to the wealthiest 5 percent of households, and 97 percent of it went to the wealthiest 20 percent. The remaining 80 percent of families scrambled for the crumbs, divvying up just 3 percent of all income growth between them.

So, in other words, when we talk about the growth of the economy, what we should ask ourselves is who is gaining that income. And what is clearly going on is the lion's share, the overwhelming amount of the growth in income, is going to the very, very wealthiest people while the vast majority of the people are seeing a decline in their real incomes.

Mr. Speaker, there are a number of reasons why the United States is seeing a decline in its standard of living for its middle class and for its working people, and I think one of them certainly has to do with the decline in our industrial base, a decline of manufacturing in the United States of America. I would urge Members of Congress just to go to their local department stores in virtually any part of America and check the labels on the products that they are observing, and more and more what we are finding is that products are not manufactured in the United States, but they are manufactured in the Far East, they are manufactured in Malaysia. More and more they are manufactured in China. And we are not just talking about cheap products, but we are talking about top-of-the-line products as well.

And the reason that more and more products are being manufactured in China is that American companies are beginning, have invested tens and tens of billions of dollars in China, in Malaysia, in Latin America, in many other very poor Third World countries.

So the good news is that corporate America is creating millions of new jobs every single year. The bad news is that they are not creating those jobs in the State of Vermont or the United States of America. They are creating those jobs in China, and in Malaysia, and in Latin America.

Now, why are these companies running to these countries? Well, it does not take a Ph.D. in economics to figure it out. They are going to China because workers in China receive 20 cents an hour. There are workers in China who are 12 or 13 years of age making products that we in the United States are purchasing, and, Mr. Speaker, I might mention that I have introduced legislation which would prohibit the importation of products made in any country that is made by child labor. There are children in China, children in India, children in Pakistan, who are 10, 11, 12 years old who are working for minuscule wages, who are doing the work that American workers used to do.

It is no secret that this year we will have a trade deficit of about $160 million. That means we are importing $160 billion more in goods and services than we export. That equates to about 3 million decent manufacturing jobs.

Mr. Speaker, in my view, we are not going to expand the middle class, we are not going to create decent-paying jobs for our young people unless we deal with the trade situation. I think the evidence is very clear that NAFTA has been a disaster, as many of us had feared it would be. I have very serious reservations about GATT.

We need a trade policy that is a fair trade policy, a trade policy that protects American workers, that allows us to export as well as import.

Mr. Speaker, if we are going to address the issue of raising wages in America, not only do we have to deal with the trade situation, not only do we have to become a country again which is building real products here in the United States of America, which is using our technology go create new jobs, producing real goods, but we also have to, in fact, raise the minimum wage, and I am delighted that more and more Members of Congress are beginning to understand that.

A number of years ago I brought forth legislation that would raise the minimum wage to $5.50 an hour. It was my view and is my view that if somebody in this country works for 40 hours a week, that person should not be living in poverty. That person should not be more in debt at the end of the week than he or she was in the beginning of the week. And when some of us began that crusade to raise the minimum wage, President Clinton was not on board, and many Democrats were not on board, and virtually no Republicans were on board. I am happy to say that right now we have a majority support for raising the minimum wage in the House, I believe that is the case in the Senate as well, and I certainly hope that the gentleman from Georgia, [Mr. GINGRICH] will allow a clean minimum wage bill to come up in the House so that we can vote it in and have the President sign it.

The minimum wage today is at its lowest point in 40 years. If the minimum wage today was at the same level as it was in 1970, it would be over $6 an hour. So to raise the minimum wage to $5.50 an hour, as the President would have us do in 2 years, is a conservative effort, and it is something we should do immediately.

Mr. Speaker, if we are going to turn this country around, I think it is important that we also address the tax situation in this country. The fact of the matter is that as the rich become richer, as the middle class is shrinking, and as poor people are just fighting desperately to keep their heads above water, I think what we need to do is take a hard look at progressive taxation, and that is to say that the largest corporations who are today contributing significantly less to our national coffers than they did 30 or 40 years ago, to the richest people in this country who have enjoyed significant declines in their real tax rates, that it is appropriate to ask those people whose incomes are soaring to start paying their fair share of taxes so we can provide some real tax breaks for the middle class and the working people of this country.

Mr. Speaker, one of the reasons that wages in America have declined is that the trade union movement in America has also declined. I think it will not be a surprise to most American workers to understand that employers often do not, out of the generosity of their heart, pay decent wages. They pay decent wages because there are people who are negotiating with them to get them to pay decent wages.

One of the concerns that I have right now in this country is that it is harder and harder for workers to be able to form trade unions. Very often, employers will harass those workers who are trying to develop a union, they will fire those workers under all kinds of pretenses, they will bring in high-falutin consultants to try to frighten workers, they will threaten workers that they will go to Mexico and Asia.

I think we need a new set of labor law which says that any worker in this country who wants to join a union should have the freedom, without fear, to participate in that process, and I believe that as we strengthen the labor movement in this country, that is, more and more workers join unions, they will be stronger and be able to negotiate good contracts which will not only benefit them, but it will benefit the whole country. Nonunion workers benefit substantially when we have strong unions because unions drive wages up, and employers therefore must pay nonunion workers a decent wage as well.

Mr. Speaker, I will soon be introducing a piece of legislation which I think is quite important. One of the concerns that I have increasingly in this country is the degree to which the taxpayers of our Nation are subsidizing large corporations through corporate welfare. Very conservative groups as well as progressive groups estimate that we spend about $125 billion every year on corporate welfare, which is tax breaks and subsidies that go to some of the largest corporations in America, and let me give you just one example of something that I and some of my colleagues are working on right now.

It seems to me to be very wrong that when the United States Pentagon, when our Pentagon, negotiates with various defense contractors, that some of the CEO's of those defense companies end up making huge salaries, basically at taxpayer expense, at the same time as they are laying off tens and tens of thousands of American workers. We pay the President of the United States $250,000 a year, and it seems to me to be very wrong that the taxpayers of this country should be paying the CEO's of the major defense companies substantially more.

I think the taxpayers of America should be concerned, for example that in 1994 James Miller, who is the CEO of General Dynamics, earned $11.3 million in compensation. Now, what is interesting is that General Dynamics, as a percentage of their business, does 100 percent of their business with the U.S. Government, which means that the U.S. Government is paying Mr. Miller $11.3 million in income, and I think that is wrong for at least two reasons:

First, in terms of our deficit, I do not know why we are paying CEO's who are 100 percent dependent on taxpayer money over $11 million a year in compensation. That is wrong.

But, second of all, it is wrong as an example, as a model of what this Congress should be doing. One of the more shameful aspects of the American economy at this point is that CEO's of major corporations today are earning about 200 times what their workers are making; 200 times. That is unheard of in the industrialized world. It seems to me that the U.S. Congress should not be encouraging and supporting that type of economic activity.

So we have legislation, and I have introduced legislation along with several other Members, that would say to the CEO's of the major defense companies that they cannot earn from the taxpayers of this country more than $200,000 a year in compensation.

I should point out once more that the head of General Dynamics receives $11.3 million, and as best we could understand, every single penny of that money comes from the taxpayers of this country. That does not make any sense. We are cutting back on so many programs that working people need and to say, yeah, we got $11 million to pay the head of General Dynamics makes no sense. And I should point out that this very same company has laid off over 35,000 workers between 1990 and 1995.

So these guys are making more and more money from the taxpayers at exactly the same time as they are laying off tens of thousands of American workers. That does not make any sense to me at all.

Mr. Speaker, I think you know sometimes Members of the Congress become a little bit obsessed with ourselves and we think that the end of the world is the Beltway around here. But we should pay attention to the fact that tens of millions of people are giving up on the political process, they are giving up on the two-party system. Again, it is an issue that we do not talk about too much, but maybe as the only Independent in the Congress I can raise the issue, and that is there is something fundamentally wrong with the politics of this country when in the last election, in 1994, only 38 percent of the people came out to vote. 62 percent of the people did not vote.

Mr. Speaker, there are a lot of reasons for that. But I think the major reason has to do with the fact that large numbers of people who are hurting very, very badly no longer believe that the U.S. Congress represents their interests or is capable of responding to their needs and their pain, and they are saying, hey, politics, it does not matter, we do not care what is going on in Washington, we do not pay attention to what is going on in Washington because all these people are living in another world.

I think, given the fact that so many men and women have put their lives on the line, have fought and died to defend freedom and democracy in this country, it is a very sad state of affairs that the United States has today by far the lowest voter turn out of any industrialized nation on earth.

Now how do we turn that around? How do we create a vibrant democracy where we have 70 to 80 percent of the people voting rather than 40 percent of the people or 50 percent?

I think, frankly, the answer is that this Congress has got to show the American people that we do feel their pain, that we do understand what is going on in their lives, and we are willing to respond to their problems. If we do not respond to their problems, people are going to say, "It does not make any difference. Why do I have to get involved?"

It is a catch-22. Unless ordinary people begin to stand up and say, wait a second, the U.S. Congress, representing all of the people in this country and not just the very rich, in the United States of America we should be able to provide health insurance for every man, woman, and child, as most of the industrialized nations do; in the United States of America we should be able to make sure that every young person who has the ability is able to get a college education, as many of our industrialized neighbors do; that in the United States of America we should be able to create decent paying jobs; that unless the people make those demands on the Congress and start electing people to the Congress who are going to fight for the middle class, fight for the working people, the Congress is going to be unresponsive.

That takes us to another issue in terms of how and why the Congress is unresponsive. That takes us to campaign finance reform. Clearly there is something very much amiss when increasingly we are seeing in Congress, in State houses all over America, very wealthy people taking out their checkbooks and writing themselves large checks and saying, "Gee, I think I would like to run for President. It is kind of boring in business now, I have a midlife crisis, I would like to do something else. I will make out a check and then run for the Presidency. I will run for Governor, I will run for the Senate," so forth and so on. That is not what democracy is supposed to be about.

A democracy is not supposed to be about the Democratic and Republican Parties holding fund-raisers here in Washington, D.C. I think last month, or a couple of months ago, the Republicans raised $16 million in one night, and recently the Democrats raised $12 million in one night, money which is coming from some of the wealthiest people in the United States of America, some of the largest corporations in the United States of America. Some of these guys contribute to both political parties. Is that what democracy is supposed to be about? I think not.

I think we must move toward campaign finance reform, and the most important aspects of that is we have to limit the amount of money that people can spend in a campaign. If you limit the amount of money, you take away the advantage of the big money interests. They cannot outspend you 10 to 1.

I think we have to move toward public funding of elections, combined with incentives coming from small donations, matching small donations. In that way we will have people who are serving in Congress who come from the ranks of ordinary people and simply are not hobnobbing with the wealthy and the powerful.

Most importantly, what concerns me is that tens and tens of millions of Americans believe the political process does not matter to them. They have given up on the political process. That is very, very sad. I would suggest to people, and I say this as somebody who was the mayor of a city for 8 years and am now in my third term in the U.S. Congress, that the only solution, basically, to that situation is for ordinary people to begin to stand up and fight back and reclaim this country for the ordinary people, for the middle class, for the working people of this country, and inform the U.S. Congress that all of us have a right to a decent standard of living and a good life. All of our children have the right to a good future. That right should not just exist to the very wealthy and the very powerful, but that is not going to change unless people get involved in the political process, unless people understand what is going on at all levels of government.

Mr. Speaker, let me just simply conclude by stating that in this great country, if democracy is to survive, if all of our people are to enjoy a decent standard of living, that is not a Utopian vision, that can happen, but people have got to be involved in the political process and have got to stand up and fight for their rights.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

I. Background

A. Introduction

The Congressional Accountability Act of 1995 ("CAA" or "Act") was enacted into law on January 23, 1995. In general, the CAA applies the rights and protections of eleven federal labor and employment law statutes to covered Congressional employees and employing offices. Section 220 of the CAA concerns the application of chapter 71 of title 5, United States Code ("chapter 71") relating to Federal service labor-management relations. Section 220(a) of the CAA applies the rights, protections and responsibilities established under sections 7102, 7106, 7111 through 7117, 7119 through 7122 and 7131 of title 5, United States Code to employing offices and to covered employees and representatives of those employees.

Section 220(d) authorizes the Board of Directors of the Office of Compliance ("Board") to issue regulations to implement section 220 and further states that, except as provided in subsection (e), such regulations "shall be the same as substantive regulations promulgated by the Federal Labor Relations Authority ["FLRA"] to implement the statutory provisions referred to in subsection (a) except—(A) to the extent that the Board may determine, for good cause shown and stated together with the regulation, that a modification of such regulations would be more effective for the implementation of the rights and protections under this section; or (B) as the Board deems necessary to avoid a conflict of interest or appearance of a conflict of interest."

Section 220(e) further authorizes the Board to issue regulations on the manner and extent to which the requirements and exemptions of chapter 71 should apply to covered employees who are employed in certain specified offices, "except . . . that the Board shall exclude from coverage under [section 220] any covered employees who are employed in [the specified offices] if the Board determines that such exclusion is required because of (i) a conflict of interest or appearance of a conflict of interest; or (ii) Congress' constitutional responsibilities."

This Notice of Proposed Rulemaking sets forth proposed regulations under section 220(d) of the CAA. A Notice of Proposed Rulemaking with respect to regulations under section 220(e) is being published separately.

B. Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

On March 6, 1996, the Board of Directors of the Office of Compliance ("Office") issued an Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking ("ANPR") that solicited comments from interested parties in order to obtain participation and information early in the rule-making process. 142 Cong. R. S1547 (daily ed., Mar. 6, 1996). In addition to inviting comment on all relevant matters and/or specific questions arising under section 220 of the CAA, the Office sought consultation with the FLRA and the Director of the Office of Personnel Management with regard to the development of these regulations in accordance with section 304(g) of the CAA. The Office has also consulted with interested parties to further its understanding of the need for and content of appropriate regulations.

The Board received 5 comments on the ANPR: one from the Secretary of the Senate and four from various labor organizations. Based on the information gleaned from its consultations and the comments on the ANPR, the Board is publishing these proposed rules, pursuant to section 220(d) of the CAA.

1. Substantive Regulations Promulgated by the Federal Labor Relations Authority.—In the ANPR, the Board invited comment on the meaning of the term "substantive regulations" under sections 220 and 304 of the CAA and further asked commenters to identify which of the regulations promulgated by the FLRA should be considered substantive regulations within the meaning of section 220 of the CAA. In this regard, the Board noted that certain of the FLRA's regulations relate to processes that implement chapter 71, while others relate to principles or criteria for making decisions that implement chapter 71. The Board invited commenters to discuss whether, in their view, the term "substantive" as used in sections 220 and 304 of the CAA might be intended to distinguish such regulations from those that are "procedural" in nature or content. In addition, the Board specifically invited comment on whether and, if so, to what extent the Board should propose the adoption of the FLRA regulations set forth in 5 C.F.R. sections 2411-2416.

a. Summary of comments: Two commenters addressed the meaning of the term "substantive regulations." One of these two commenters suggested that the term "substantive regulations" means "only those regulations promulgated by the [FLRA] that are necessary to implement the provisions of chapter 71 made applicable" by section 220 of the CAA. In this commenter's view, the term "substantive regulations" should exclude FLRA regulations that address procedural processes already provided for by the CAA. For example, because sections 405 and 406 of the CAA and the Office's procedural rules promulgated under section 303 set forth the procedures for hearings and Board review of hearing officer's decisions, in this commenter's view, provisions of the FLRA's regulations that purport to govern those matters should not be adopted by the Board. In support of its position, the commenter cited to Batterton v. Francis, 432 U.S. 416, 425 n.9 (1977).

This commenter further asserted that the term "substantive regulations" should neither include FLRA regulations that are procedural in nature, such as those addressing filing procedures, nor FLRA regulations that address processes already provided for in procedural rules issued by the Office pursuant to section 303 of the CAA, because "their adoption is not necessary to implement the provisions of chapter 71 made applicable by the CAA." The commenter stated that the Board has issued regulations, pursuant to section 303, that provide procedures for submissions under Part A of the CAA; the commenter urged that, to the extent possible, the same procedures should be used for submissions under Part D (section 220) of the CAA. The commenter suggested that, if any modifications to the Office's procedural rules are required to implement section 220, the Board should issue additional procedural regulations under section 303 of the CAA, rather than adopt assertedly "non-substantive" regulations of the FLRA.

Based on these views, this commenter took the position that, with certain modifications, all regulations set forth in subchapters C and D of the FLRA's regulations are substantive and should be adopted by the Board. Within those subchapters, this commenter suggested the exclusion of those regulations that the commenter deemed purely procedural. "Finally, this commenter opined that the regulations in subchapter B, set forth at sections 2411-2416, should not be adopted by the Board as those sections do not implement provisions of chapter 71, as applied by the CAA.

The other commenter did not propose to define the term "substantive regulations." Rather, this commenter asserted that, at present, it is not necessary for the Board to decide which of the FLRA's regulations are substantive. Instead, this commenter suggested that, although the FLRA's regulations may or may not be "substantive regulations," the regulations are sound procedural guides that the Board is free to follow in the exercise of its general rulemaking authority under sections 303 and 304 of the CAA. The commenter pointed to the approach to rulemaking followed by the FLRA and the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) as models for the Board, arguing that both the FLRA's and the NLRB's regulations include the various processes by which unfair labor practice and representation cases may be brought and considered and that neither the FLRA nor the NLRB has sought to "define substantive rights by regulation."

Finally, one other commenter, while not addressing the meaning of the term "substantive regulations," suggested that the Board should adopt all of the FLRA's regulations, including sections 2411-2416.

b. Board consideration and conclusion: The Board first examines the question of the meaning of the term "substantive regulations" under sections 220 and 304 of the Act. Under settled principles of administrative law, substantive regulations are regulations implementing an underlying statute that are issued by a regulatory body pursuant to its statutory authority. See Batterton v. Francis, 432 U.S. 416, 425 n.9 (1977). Such regulations are generally promulgated in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act, which requires that substantive rulemaking generally be preceded by a general notice of proposed rulemaking at least thirty days before the effective date of the proposed rule, and further requires that the agency afford interested persons an opportunity to participate in the rulemaking by submitting written comments. Regulations issued pursuant to this process are substantive because they "have the force and effect of law," id., and because, among other things, they "grant rights, impose obligations, or produce other significant effects on private interests," or . . . "effect a change in existent law or policy." American Hospital Assoc. v. Bowen, 834 F.2d 1037, 1044 (D.C. Cir. 1987) (citations omitted).

That regulations may arguably be procedural in content is, in the Board's view, not a legally sufficient reason for not viewing them as "substantive regulations." Procedural rules can in fact be substantive regulations. Process is frequently the substance of law and regulation; indeed, in the labor laws, process is the predominate means by which substantive regulation is effectuated. Moreover, in administrative law, it is commonplace for regulations covering procedures to be considered substantive regulations; as noted above, the Administrative Procedure Act generally treats regulation of process as substantive regulation. There is no evidence that Congress intended a different approach in the context of the CAA. Thus, it is the Board's conclusion that all regulations promulgated after a notice and comment period by the FLRA to implement chapter 71 are appropriately classified as substantive regulations for the purposes of rulemaking under sections 220 and 304 of the CAA.

In light of the foregoing, the Board has considered the regulations promulgated by the FLRA in order to determine which of the regulations are "substantive regulations." The regulations promulgated by the FLRA "are designed to implement the provisions of chapter 71 of title 5 of the United States Code . . . [and] prescribe the procedures, basic principles or criteria under which the Federal Labor Relations Authority or the General Counsel" will carry out their functions, resolve issues and otherwise administer chapter 71. 5 C.F.R. §2420.1. In addition, these regulations were issued according to the requirements of the Administrative Procedure Act, with a public notice and comment period. Therefore, it is the Board's judgment that all the regulations promulgated by the FLRA and published at 5 C.F.R. 2411-2416, 2420-2430 and 2470-2472 are "substantive regulations" within the meaning of sections 220 and 304 of the CAA.

A review of the FLRA's regulations demonstrates, however, that not all of the FLRA's substantive regulations are ones that the Board need adopt. Certain of the FLRA's regulations were promulgated to implement provisions of statutes other than provisions of chapter 71 made applicable by the CAA. In this regard, in the ANPR, the Board noted that sections 2411-2416 of the FLRA's regulations treat, among other things, the implementation and applicability of the Freedom of Information Act, the Privacy Act and the Sunshine Act in the FLRA's processes. Although one commenter suggested that the referenced statutes and the FLRA's implementing regulations should govern the processes of the Office of Compliance, these statutes were not incorporated in the CAA and the Board thus is not proposing the adoption of sections 2411-2416 of the FLRA regulations.

Similarly, the Board does not propose to adopt either section 2430 of the FLRA's regulations, which establishes procedures for applying for awards of attorney fees and other expenses under the Equal Access to Justice Act, 5 U.S.C. 504, or section 2472, which implements provisions of section 6131 of title 5 of the United States Code. As neither 5 U.S.C. 504 nor 5 U.S.C. 6131 is applied by the CAA, sections 2430 and 2472 were not promulgated to implement statutory provisions that are applied by section 220 and, accordingly, the FLRA's regulations implementing them need not be adopted.

2. Proposed Modification of Substantive Regulations of the FLRA.—In the ANPR, the Board invited comment on whether and to what extent it should, pursuant to section 220(d) of the CAA, modify the substantive regulations promulgated by the FLRA. Section 220(d) provides that the Board shall issue regulations that are the same as applicable substantive regulations of the FLRA "except to the extent that the Board may determine, for good cause shown and stated together with the regulations, that a modification of such regulations would be more effective for the implementation of the rights and protections under this section" (emphasis added). Section 220(d) also provides that the Board may modify the FLRA's substantive regulations "as the Board deems necessary to avoid a conflict of interest or appearance of a conflict of interest."

a. Summary of comments: A number of commenters urged that the FLRA's substantive regulations should be adopted without change. One of these commenters particularly stressed, in its view, the need to adopt without change the regulations that treat recourse to the Federal Service Impasses Panel and the Merit Systems Protection Board. But another commenter suggested several modifications to the substantive regulations. In addition to a variety of technical changes in nomenclature and terminology, this commenter specifically suggested the following modifications:

(1) Regulations implementing provisions of chapter 71 not made applicable by the CAA

The commenter stated that section 2423.9(b) should not be adopted on the ground that it sets forth procedures implementing 5 U.S.C. section 7123(d), a section not incorporated into the CAA.

(2) Provisions inapplicable under the CAA

The commenter further suggested that the definition of the term "activity" under section 2421.5 of the FLRA's regulations should be deleted on the ground that it has no applicability in the legislative branch. Further, this commenter suggested that the term "Government-wide rule" found throughout the regulations should be changed to "Government-wide rule applicable to the Senate [Legislative Branch]" because not all government-wide rules apply to the legislative branch. Similarly, this commenter proposed the deletion of section 2425.3(b) because it relates to civil service employees, of which there are none in the legislative branch. The commenter further suggested that Section 2429.2, relating to transfer and consolidation of cases, should also be deleted because it has no applicability in light of the structure of the Office of Compliance. Finally, according to the commenter, part 2428 of the FLRA's regulations, which relates to enforcement of decisions of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations, should not be adopted because the Assistant Secretary has no authority under the CAA and neither covered employees nor employing offices are bound by the decisions of the Assistant Secretary.

(3) Regulations addressing procedures governed by 405 and 406 of CAA

The commenter also contended that section 220 of the CAA directs that all representation and unfair labor practice matters that arise under section 220 be referred "to a hearing officer for decision pursuant to subsection (b) through (h) of section 405." Further, according to the commenter, sections 220(c)(1) and (2) require that decisions of the hearing officers be reviewed by the Board under section 406 of the CAA. Consequently, in this commenter's view, the Board should not adopt any FLRA regulation relating to the conduct of hearings on representation petitions or unfair labor practice allegations or relating to Board review of decisions. For example, this commenter suggested that sections 2422.18-22 of the FLRA's regulations should be omitted because they relate to the procedures for the conduct of pre-election investigatory hearings on representation petitions; according to the commenter, procedures for these hearings are governed by section 405 of the CAA and by the Board's procedural rules.

(4) Consultation Rights

The commenter additionally suggested that the threshold requirement in section 2426.1 of the FLRA's regulations that a labor organization hold exclusive recognition for 10% or more of the personnel of an employing office in order for that labor organization to obtain consultation rights be modified for good cause. Because of the small size of many employing offices in the legislative branch, the commenter expressed the concern that employing offices would be required to engage in consultation when only one or two employees are represented by a union. Such an obligation to consult would, in this commenter's view, "interfere with the rights of unrepresented employees because it would necessarily cause delay in implementation of new terms of employment."

(5) Posting of Materials

The commenter suggested that sections 2422.7 and 2422.23 of the FLRA's regulations be modified to prohibit the posting of any material relating to a labor organization in any area open to the public on the basis that such a display of material would create a conflict of interest "insofar as it may appear that Congress is unduly influenced by particular labor organizations."

b. Board Consideration and Response to Comments: Based upon the comments received and the Board's understanding of chapter 71 and the institutions to which it is being made applicable through the CAA, the Board is proposing to adopt the FLRA's regulations published at 5 C.F.R. 2420-29 and 2470-71 with only limited modifications. The Board has proposed to delete provisions of the FLRA's regulations that were promulgated to implement provisions of chapter 71 that are not applied by the CAA. In this regard, sections 2423.9(b)(c) and (d) have been deleted because they implement section 7123(d) of chapter 71, a provision that is not applied by the CAA. Similarly, section 2429.7 of the FLRA's regulations, relating to the issuance of subpoenas, has been deleted because it implements section 7132 of chapter 71, a section of chapter 71 that is not applied by the CAA. Finally, as statutory provisions in title 5 that permit executive branch employees to have access to the Merit Systems Protection Board (MSPB) were not applied by the CAA, references to the MSPB have also been deleted. The Board finds that there is good cause to make these modifications for the reasons herein stated.

In addition, the Board has proposed to make technical changes in definitions, nomenclature and prescribed processes so that the regulations comport with the CAA and the organizational structure of the Office of Compliance. In the Board's judgment, making such changes satisfies the Act's "good cause" requirement. However, contrary to one commenter's suggestion that the terms "activity" and "Government-wide" rule be omitted or modified, the Board is of the view that these concepts have applicability in the context of the CAA and therefore should not be deleted or modified. Of course, the Board welcomes additional comment on these issues as part of interested parties' comments on the proposed rules.

In addition to the foregoing, the Board has concluded that there is good cause to propose certain other modifications to the FLRA's regulations. These proposed modifications are discussed below.

(1) Exercise of Investigative and Adjudicatory Responsibilities

In issuing these proposed regulations to implement section 220, the Board has had to determine how it may best exercise its investigative and other authorities and responsibilities under section 220 of the CAA. In this regard, the Board notes that section 220(c)(1) of the CAA provides that the Board shall exercise the authorities of the three member Federal Labor Relations Authority (Authority) under various provisions of chapter 71 and that any "petition, or other submission that, under chapter 71, . . . would be submitted to the . . . Authority shall, . . . be submitted to the Board". The Board further notes that section 220(c)(1) provides that the Board "shall refer any matter under this paragraph to a hearing officer for decision pursuant to . . . section 405"; and yet it also states that the Board may direct that the General Counsel carry out the Board's investigative authorities". Finally, the Board notes that section 220(c)(3) limits judicial review to Board actions on unfair labor practice complaints. As an initial matter, therefore, there is a question as to whether section 220(c)(1) should be read to require that all representation, arbitration, negotiability and unfair labor practice issues that come before the Board first be referred to hearing officers for decision under section 405, or only to require referral of those matters that require a formal adversary hearing (involving, among other things, discovery and adherence to formal rules of evidence) in order to resolve the matter in dispute and create a record for judicial review. After considerable reflection, the Board is persuaded that Congress did not intend in the CAA to require that all issues first be presented to a hearing officer under section 405.

By its terms, section 220(c)(1) of the CAA expressly contemplates a distinction between investigative issues and those issues requiring referral for an adversary hearing. Specifically, section 220 expressly acknowledges that the Board possesses and may exercise investigative authorities, and explicitly states that the Board may direct the General Counsel to carry out such investigative authorities. A fortiori, the Board does not have to refer matters involving these "investigative authorities" to a hearing officer (but rather may direct the General Counsel to carry them out or carry them out itself).

The textual reference to the Board's investigative authorities is, in fact, only one of the statutory signals that Congress did not intend to require the Board to refer all issues to a hearing officer for initial decision under Section 405. Section 220(c)(3) further specifies that there shall be judicial review of only Board actions on unfair labor practice complaints. Since one of the key purposes of the section 405 hearing process is to create a record for judicial review, this limitation of the judicial review process is another textual suggestion that Congress intended to require referral to a hearing officer of only those matters that require a hearing of the type contemplated by section 405—i.e., a formal adversary hearing that establishes a record for Board and then judicial review.

Indeed, in section 220, Congress purported to impose upon the legislative branch the labor law applicable to the executive branch. In that scheme, representation issues, negotiability of bargaining proposals, and review of arbitral awards are not subject to elaborate adversarial procedures. Rather, they are subject to different investigative and decisional process better suited to expeditious and effective resolution of the issues presented. A determination by the Board that the resolution of exceptions to arbitral awards, negotiability of bargaining proposals, and representation petitions, must first be referred to a hearing officer for an adversarial hearing under section 405 would result in an overly cumbersome system that would undermine considerably the effective implementation of Section 220. The Board would not hesitate to implement such a scheme if Congress had clearly commanded it; but, when read in context, the statutory language does not so require, and the legislative history contains no suggestion that Congress intended such a striking departure from the underlying statutory scheme that it was purporting to impose on itself. In such circumstances, the Board cannot find good cause to modify the FLRA's regulations to require formal adversarial proceedings where they are not presently required under chapter 71.

Accordingly, the Board has examined the range of investigative and adjudicatory functions carried out by the FLRA and its officials under chapter 71 and the FLRA's regulations. The Board has further examined the manner in which those functions may most effectively and appropriately be carried out by the Office under the CAA. The Board has considered the suggestions of the commenters, the differences in organizational structure between the Office of Compliance and the FLRA, and the language and underlying statutory schemes of chapter 71 and the CAA. And, having done so, the Board has concluded that, consistent with the language of section 220(c)(1) and the scheme envisioned and implemented under chapter 71, issues that are presented directly to the Authority may and should also be presented directly to the Board. Likewise, the Board has determined that issues that are submitted to administrative law judges in the chapter 71 scheme should be submitted to hearing officers in the CAA scheme. Thus, the Board will decide representation issues, negotiability issues and exceptions to arbitral awards based upon a record developed through direct submissions from the parties and, where necessary, further investigation by the Board (through the person of the Executive Director); and it will refer unfair labor practice complaints to hearing officers for initial decision under section 405 (and then review by the Board and the courts).

Contrary to one commenter's assertion, 220(c)(1) does not require that pre-election hearings on representation petitions be conducted pursuant to section 405 of the CAA. Such hearings are investigatory in nature; and they do not require formal adversarial proceedings. They are to be conducted as part of the Board's authority to investigate representation petitions pursuant to the provisions of chapter 71 that are applied by the CAA. They thus need not be conducted by hearing officers under section 405.

(2) Procedural matters

The Board has further concluded that there is good cause to modify the FLRA's substantive regulations by omitting provisions that set forth procedures which are already provided for under comparable provisions of the Office's procedural rules. There are obvious benefits to having one set of procedural rules for matters arising under the CAA. Indeed, one commenter suggested this beneficial outcome in arguing why certain rules should not be considered to be "substantive regulations" within the meaning of section 304. While the Board believes that the rules are in fact substantive regulations, it believes that the benefits of having one set of procedural rules provides the "good cause" needed to modify the FLRA's substantive regulations in this respect.

Accordingly, provisions of Part 2423 relating to the filing of complaints and the conduct of hearings on allegations of violations of section 220 have been deleted or modified, as appropriate, where there is a specific regulation on the same matters in the Office's procedural rules. Similarly, provisions of Part 2429 of the FLRA's regulations relating to such matters as service, interlocutory appeals, computation of time, and methods of filing have been deleted or modified, to the extent that they are the same as, or specifically provided for under, procedural rules already issued. Finally, section 2429.9 relating to presentations by an amicus curiae and section 2429.17, which provides procedures for seeking Board reconsideration, have also been deleted. Although these subjects are not now covered by the Office's procedural rules, they have general applicability to Board proceedings under the CAA. The Board has determined that it would be more effective for the implementation of the rights and protections under the CAA to propose and issue rules relating to amicus filings and reconsideration in all matters before the Board as part of a rulemaking under section 303 of the Act.

(3) Arbitral awards on adverse actions

The Board also agrees with the commenter who suggested the deletion of section 2425.3(b), a provision that precludes the FLRA's review of arbitration awards involving certain adverse actions. Under chapter 71, Congress generally provided for the review of arbitration awards by the FLRA. However, for awards relating to matters in which an employee has an option of either filing an appeal with the Merit Systems Protection Board (or another adjudicative body) or of filing a grievance under a negotiated grievance procedure, Congress provided for judicial review of the award under the same standards of review that would be accorded to a decision of the MSPB or another appellate body. Therefore, there is a symmetrical framework for the review of arbitration awards involving certain adverse actions in the general Federal civil service in which decisions on such matters, whether made by an arbitrator or an adjudicative body, are subject to the same judicial review. In contrast, there is no such symmetry of review under the CAA because legislative branch employees have no recourse to the MSPB or other similar administrative agencies and there is no judicial review of arbitrators' awards. If section 2425.3(b) were not deleted, employees and employing offices under the CAA would be deprived of a forum for review of arbitration awards involving certain adverse actions. Accordingly, the Board concludes that there is good cause to modify the FLRA's regulations by deleting section 2425.3(b).

(4) Consultation rights

Under section 2426.1(a) of the FLRA's regulations, an agency or an agency's primary national subdivision shall accord national consultation rights to a labor organization that "[h]olds exclusive recognition for either: (i) Ten percent (10%) or more of the total number of civilian personnel employed by the agency and the non-appropriated fund Federal instrumentalities under its jurisdiction, excluding foreign nationals; or (ii) 3,500 or more employees of the agency." The Board has determined that the 10% threshold requirement should not be modified for good cause, as one commenter suggested. The Board agrees with the commenter that the small size of many employing offices in the legislative branch must be considered. However, the FLRA considered 10% of the employees of an agency or primary national subdivision to be a significant enough proportion of the employee complement to allow for meaningful consultations, no matter the size of the agency or the number of its employees. No convincing reason has been provided by the commenter why the FLRA's judgment is not workable here, or why there should be a different threshold requirement for small legislative branch employing offices from that applicable to small executive branch agencies.

By contrast, the same concern for the small size of many employing offices has prompted the Board to conclude that good cause exists to modify the alternate threshold requirement—i.e., the requirement that a labor organization hold exclusive recognition of 3,500 or more of an agency's employees in order to be accorded national consultation rights. Although the Board has been unable through its research to determine the reasoning of the FLRA in choosing the number 3,500 as a threshold requirement, the number corresponds to the considerable size of many of the executive branch agencies. Because none of the employing offices has as many as 35,000 employees, the 3,500 employee threshold is irrelevant in light of the existence of the other threshold requirement, discussed above, of 10% of the employee complement. The Board thus finds that it is unworkable in this context and that there is good cause to delete it.

Section 2426.11(a) requires that "[a]n agency shall accord consultation rights on Government-wide rules or regulations to a labor organization that . . . [h]olds exclusive recognition for 3,500 or more employees." The Board has determined that this threshold requirement should also be deleted for good cause, since many of the employing offices in the legislative branch are considerably smaller than executive branch agencies. However, once this requirement is omitted, there is no other requirement in the regulations by which to determine whether consultation rights on Government-wide rules or regulations should be granted to a labor organization. Therefore, the Board has concluded that the 10% threshold requirement should be employed in this section as well. The 10% figure is used as an alternate criterion to 3,500 in according national consultation rights, and it is an appropriate standard to use for according consultation rights on Government-wide regulations as well.

(5) Enforcement of Decisions of the Assistant Secretary of Labor

As noted above, one commenter asserted that part 2428 of the FLRA's regulations is inapplicable under the CAA and should be omitted from the Board's regulations. Part 2428 of the FLRA's regulations provides a procedure for the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations to petition the FLRA to enforce decisions and orders of the Assistant Secretary with respect to labor organization conduct.

The Board has concluded that, although the Assistant Secretary has no enforcement authority over covered employing offices or covered employees, nothing in the CAA removes the Assistant Secretary of Labor's authority to regulate the conduct of labor organizations, even those that exclusively represent legislative branch employees. Indeed, 5 U.S.C. 7120(d) authorizes the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations to regulate the conduct of labor organizations and is specifically incorporated into the CAA. Further, nothing in the CAA would preclude the Assistant Secretary from petitioning the Board to enforce a decision and order involving a labor organization under the jurisdiction of the CAA. In this regard, the FLRA promulgated part 2428 as part of its authority under section 7105 of chapter 71 to "take such actions as are necessary and appropriate to effectively administer the provisions" of chapter 71. Under the CAA, the Board has specifically been granted the same authority to administer the provisions of chapter 71 as applied by the CAA. Accordingly, there is not good cause for the Board to omit part 2428 in its entirety or to decline to permit the Assistant Secretary to petition the Board in accordance with the procedures set forth therein.

However, the Board proposes not to adopt section 2428.3(a), which would require the Board to enforce any decision or order of the Assistant Secretary unless it is "arbitrary and capricious or based upon manifest disregard of the law." In light of section 225(f)(3) of the CAA, which states that the CAA does not authorize executive branch enforcement of the Act, the Board should not adopt a provision that would require the Board to defer to decisions of an executive branch agency. Accordingly, the Board has modified the provisions of part 2428 by omitting section 2428.3(a).

(6) Production of evidence in pre-election investigatory hearings

As noted in section I.B.2. above, section 7132 of chapter 71, which authorizes the issuance of subpoenas by various FLRA officials, was not made applicable by the CAA. Moreover, as pre-election investigatory hearings are not hearings that are conducted under section 405 of the CAA, subpoenas for documents or witnesses in such pre-election proceedings are not available under the CAA. Nonetheless, in order to properly decide disputed representation issues and effectively implement section 220 of the CAA, a complete investigatory record comparable to that developed by the FLRA under chapter 71 is necessary. Accordingly, there is good cause to modify section 2422.18 of the FLRA's regulations in order to ensure that such a record is made in the absence of the availability of subpoenas. To this end, the Board is specifically proposing the inclusion of section 2422.18(d), which provides that the parties have an obligation to produce existing documents and witnesses for the pre-election investigatory hearing in accordance with the instructions of the Executive Director; and the Board is further proposing that a willful failure to comply with such instructions may in appropriate circumstances result in an adverse inference being drawn on the issue related to the evidence sought.

(7) Selection of the unfair labor practice procedure or the negotiability procedure

The Board has determined that there is also good cause to delete the concluding sentence of sections 2423.5 and 2424.5 of the FLRA's regulations because, in the context of the CAA, they would serve improperly to deprive judicial review in certain circumstances. Generally, when an employing office asserts it has no duty to bargain over a proposal, a labor organization may seek a Board determination on the issue either through an unfair labor practice proceeding or a negotiability proceeding. However, the concluding sentences of the referenced regulations preclude a labor organization from filing an unfair labor practice charge in cases that solely involve an employing office's allegation that the duty to bargain in good faith does not extend to the matter proposed to be bargained and that do not involve actual or contemplated changes in conditions of employment. In such cases, those sentences of the regulations provide that a labor organization may only file a petition for review of a negotiability issue.

Unlike chapter 71, the CAA does not provide for direct judicial review of Board decisions and orders on petitions for review of negotiability issues. Rather, judicial review of Board determinations as to the negotiability of collective bargaining proposals is only available through an unfair labor practice proceeding involving a dispute over an employing office's duty to bargain. Accordingly, if sections 2423.5 and 2424.5 were not modified, a labor organization would, in certain circumstances, be precluded from electing to file an unfair labor practice charge and possibly obtaining judicial review of a Board decision. Rather, the labor organization would be required to file a petition for review of the negotiability issue and any unfavorable decision would be unreviewable. The Board concludes that it would be more effective for the implementation of the rights and protections under section 220 to delete the two specified sentences, thereby allowing a labor organization to use the unfair labor practice procedures in all circumstances.

(8) Official time

Section 2429.13 of the FLRA's regulations requires employing offices to grant "official time" to employees when the employees, participation in investigations or hearings is deemed necessary by hearing officers or Office officials. The Board has determined that section 2429.13 of the FLRA's regulations should be modified by striking the last sentence, which would require the payment by employing offices of transportation and per diem expenses associated with employees, participation in investigations or hearings on official time. The Board finds good cause to modify the provision in light of the decision of the United States Supreme Court in Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms v. Federal Labor Relations Authority, 464 U.S. 89, 104 S.Ct. 439 (1983), in which the Supreme Court held that the FLRA had exceeded its authority by requiring federal agencies to pay such per diem allowances and travel expenses. This regulatory requirement has been authoritatively and finally invalidated by the Supreme Court and thus has no applicability under the laws that have been incorporated by the CAA.

(9) The Board's exercise of the authorities of the Federal Service Impasses Panel

Section 2470 of the FLRA's regulations defines the Federal Service Impasses Panel as all members of the Panel or a quorum thereof and thus permits formal actions to be taken on behalf of the Panel by less than the Panel's full complement of members. The Federal Service Impasses Panel is composed of seven members. The Board, which will exercise the authorities of the Panel pursuant to section 220(c)(4) of the CAA, is a five-member body. It is the Board's determination that it will be more effective for the implementation of section 220(c)(4) to provide for the full Board, rather than a quorum thereof, to carry out its authorities under that section. Section 2470 of the regulation has been modified accordingly.

(10) Conflict of Interest

As noted above, one commenter asserted that sections 2422.7 and 2422.23 of the FLRA's regulations should be modified pursuant to section 220(d)(2)(B). The two referenced sections of the FLRA's regulations provide, respectively, that an employing office may be directed to post a notice advising affected employees of the filing of a representation petition and that an employing office will post a notice of election when an election is to be conducted. In both instances the notices, which in the context of the CAA will be prepared by the Office of Compliance, must be posted in places where notices are normally posted for the affected employees or they may be distributed in a manner by which notices are normally distributed. The commenter urges that these regulatory provisions be modified to prohibit the publication of any material relating to a labor organization in any area open to the public. In support of the proposed modification, the commenter states only that display of such material in public view creates, at the very least, an appearance of a conflict of interest insofar as it may appear that Congress is unduly influenced by particular labor organizations.

In the ANPR, the Board requested commenters to fully and specifically describe the conflict of interest or appearance thereof that they believe would exist were pertinent FLRA regulations not modified and to explain the necessity for avoiding the asserted conflict or appearance of conflict. The Board further asked commenters to explain how they interpret 220(d)(2)(B) and, in doing so, identify the factual and interpretive materials upon which they are relying. The commenter has not discussed section 220(d)(2)(B) or explained why the proposed modification, a specific prohibition on posting an Office of Compliance notice in a public area, is necessary to avoid an appearance of conflict; indeed, the commenter has not explained how the posting of a notice announcing the filing of a petition or an upcoming election would create the appearance of undue influence asserted by the commenter.

In the Board's view, no appearance of conflict of interest or undue influence is created by an employing office posting a notice, prepared by the Office of Compliance, advising covered employees of a pending petition or an election under a statute that Congress has specifically applied to itself, similar provisions of which apply in the private and public sectors. Nothing in the FLRA's regulations requires that notices be posted in public areas; the referenced notices must only be posted or distributed in the manner that other information affecting employees is posted or distributed. Moreover, since the notices are prepared by the Office of Compliance, which is an independent office in the legislative branch, no reasonable person could even begin to find undue influence from the posting itself.

The Board thus concludes that, contrary to the commenter's suggestion, it is not necessary to modify sections 2422.7 and 2422.23 of the FLRA's regulations to avoid a conflict of interest or appearance of conflict of interest. The Board therefore proposes to adopt those provisions with only technical changes in nomenclature.

II. Method of Approval

The Board recommends that (1) the version of the proposed regulations that shall apply to the Senate and employees of the Senate be approved by the Senate by resolution; (2) the version of the proposed regulations that shall apply to the House of Representatives and employees of the House of Representatives be approved by the House of Representatives by resolution; and (3) the version of the proposed regulations that shall apply to other covered employees and employing offices be approved by the Congress by concurrent resolution.

Signed at Washington, D.C., on this 14th day of May, 1996.

GLEN D. NAGER,
Chair of the Board,
Office of Compliance.

§ 2422.7 Posting notice of filing of a petition.

(a) Posting notice of petition. When appropriate, the Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, after the filing of a representation petition, will direct the employing office or activity to post copies of a notice to all employees in places where notices are normally posted for the employees affected by issues raised in the petition and/or distribute copies of a notice in a manner by which notices are normally distributed.

(b) Contents of notice. The notice shall advise affected employees about the petition.

(c) Duration of notice. The notice should be conspicuously posted for a period of ten (10) days and not be altered, defaced, or covered by other material.

§ 2422.8 Intervention and cross-petitions.

(a) Cross-petitions. A cross-petition is a petition which involves any employees in a unit covered by a pending representation petition. Cross-petitions must be filed in accordance with this subpart.

(b) Intervention requests and cross-petitions. A request to intervene and a cross-petition, accompanied by any necessary showing of interest, must be submitted in writing and filed with the Executive Director before the pre-election investigatory hearing opens, unless good cause is shown for granting an extension. If no pre-election investigatory hearing is held, a request to intervene and a cross-petition must be filed prior to action being taken pursuant to § 2422.30.

(c) Labor organization intervention requests. Except for incumbent intervenors, a labor organization seeking to intervene shall submit a statement that it has complied with 5 U.S.C. 7111(e), as applied by the CAA, and one of the following:

(1) A showing of interest of ten percent (10%) or more of the employees in the unit covered by a petition seeking an election, with an alphabetical list of the names of the employees constituting the showing of interest; or

(2) A current or recently expired collective bargaining agreement covering any of the employees in the unit affected by issues raised in the petition; or

(3) Evidence that it is or was, prior to a reorganization, the certified exclusive representative of any of the employees affected by issues raised in the petition.

(d) Incumbent. An incumbent exclusive representative, without regard to the requirements of paragraph (c) of this section, will be considered a party in any representation proceeding raising issues that affect employees the incumbent represents, unless it serves the Board, through the Executive Director, with a written disclaimer of any representation interest in the claimed unit.

(e) Employing office. An employing office or activity will be considered a party if any of its employees are affected by issues raised in the petition.

(f) Employing office or activity intervention. An employing office or activity seeking to intervene in any representation proceeding must submit evidence that one or more employees of the employing office or activity may be affected by issues raised in the petition.

§ 2422.9 Adequacy of showing of interest.

(a) Adequacy. Adequacy of a showing of interest refers to the percentage of employees in the unit involved as required by §§ 2422.3 (c) and (d) and 2422.8(c)(1).

(b) Executive Director investigation and action. The Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, will conduct such investigation as deemed appropriate. The Executive Director's determination, on behalf of the Board, that the showing of interest is adequate is final and binding and not subject to collateral attack at a representation hearing or on appeal to the Board. If the Executive Director determines, on behalf of the Board, that a showing of interest is inadequate, the Executive Director will dismiss the petition, or deny a request for intervention.

§ 2422.10 Validity of showing of interest.

(a) Validity. Validity questions are raised by challenges to a showing of interest on grounds other than adequacy.

(b) Validity challenge. The Executive Director or any party may challenge the validity of a showing of interest.

(c) When and where validity challenges may be filed. Party challenges to the validity of a showing of interest must be in writing and filed with the Executive Director before the pre-election investigatory hearing opens, unless good cause is shown for granting an extension. If no pre-election investigatory hearing is held, challenges to the validity of a showing of interest must be filed prior to action being taken pursuant to § 2422.30.

(d) Contents of validity challenges. Challenges to the validity of a showing of interest must be supported with evidence.

(e) Executive Director investigation and action. The Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, will conduct such investigation as deemed appropriate. The Executive Director's determination, on behalf of the Board, that a showing of interest is valid is final and binding and is not subject to collateral attack or appeal to the Board. If the Executive Director finds, on behalf of the Board, that the showing of interest is not valid, the Executive Director will dismiss the petition or deny the request to intervene.

§ 2422.11 Challenge to the status of a labor organization.

(a) Basis of challenge to labor organization status. The only basis on which a challenge to the status of a labor organization may be made is compliance with 5 U.S.C. 7103(a)(4), as applied by the CAA.

(b) Format and time for filing a challenge. Any party filing a challenge to the status of a labor organization involved in the processing of a petition must do so in writing to the Executive Director before the pre-election investigatory hearing opens, unless good cause is shown for granting an extension. If no hearing is held, challenges must be filed prior to action being taken pursuant to §2422.30.

§2422.12 Timeliness of petitions seeking an election.

(a) Election bar. Where there is no certified exclusive representative, a petition seeking an election will not be considered timely if filed within twelve (12) months of a valid election involving the same unit or a subdivision of the same unit.

(b) Certification bar. Where there is a certified exclusive representative of employees, a petition seeking an election will not be considered timely if filed within twelve (12) months after the certification of the exclusive representative of the employees in an appropriate unit. If a collective bargaining agreement covering the claimed unit is pending employing office head review under 5 U.S.C. 7114(c), as applied by the CAA, or is in effect, paragraphs (c), (d), or (e) of this section apply.

(c) Bar during employing office head review. A petition seeking an election will not be considered timely if filed during the period of employing office head review under 5 U.S.C. 7114(c), as applied by the CAA. This bar expires upon either the passage of thirty (30) days absent employing office head action, or upon the date of any timely employing office head action.

(d) Contract bar where the contract is for three (3) years or less. Where a collective bargaining agreement is in effect covering the claimed unit and has a term of three (3) years or less from the date it became effective, a petition seeking an election will be considered timely if filed not more than one hundred and five (105) and not less than sixty (60) days prior to the expiration of the agreement.

(e) Contract bar where the contract is for more than three (3) years. Where a collective bargaining agreement is in effect covering the claimed unit and has a term of more than three (3) years from the date it became effective, a petition seeking an election will be considered timely if filed not more than one hundred and five (105) and not less than sixty (60) days prior to the expiration of the initial three (3) year period, and any time after the expiration of the initial three (3) year period.

(f) Unusual circumstances. A petition seeking an election or a determination relating to representation matters may be filed at any time when unusual circumstances exist that substantially affect the unit or majority representation.

(g) Premature extension. Where a collective bargaining agreement with a term of three (3) years or less has been extended prior to sixty (60) days before its expiration date, the extension will not serve as a basis for dismissal of a petition seeking an election filed in accordance with this section.

(h) Contract requirements. Collective bargaining agreements, including agreements that go into effect under 5 U.S.C. 7114(c), as applied by the CAA, and those that automatically renew without further action by the parties, do not constitute a bar to a petition seeking an election under this section unless a clear and unambiguous effective date, renewal date where applicable, duration, and termination date are ascertainable from the agreement and relevant accompanying documentation.

§2422.13 Resolution of issues raised by a petition.

(a) Meetings prior to filing a representation petition. All parties affected by the representation issues that may be raised in a petition are encouraged to meet prior to the filing of the petition to discuss their interests and narrow and resolve the issues. If requested by all parties a representative of the Office will participate in these meetings.

(b) Meetings to narrow and resolve the issues after the petition is filed. After a petition is filed, the Executive Director may require all affected parties to meet to narrow and resolve the issues raised in the petition.

§2422.14 Effect of withdrawal/dismissal.

(a) Withdrawal/dismissal less than sixty (60) days before contract expiration. When a petition seeking an election that has been timely filed is withdrawn by the petitioner or dismissed by the Executive Director or the Board less than sixty (60) days prior to the expiration of an existing agreement between the incumbent exclusive representative and the employing office or activity or any time after the expiration of the agreement, another petition seeking an election will not be considered timely if filed within a ninety (90) day period from either:

(1) The date the withdrawal is approved; or
(2) The date the petition is dismissed by the Executive Director when no application for review is filed with the Board; or

(3) The date the Board rules on an application for review; or

(4) The date the Board issues a Decision and Order dismissing the petition.

Other pending petitions that have been timely filed under this Part will continue to be processed.

(b) Withdrawal by petitioner. A petitioner who submits a withdrawal request for a petition seeking an election that is received by the Executive Director after the notice of pre-election investigatory hearing issues or after approval of an election agreement, whichever occurs first, will be barred from filing another petition seeking an election for the same unit or any subdivision of the unit for six (6) months from the date of the approval of the withdrawal by the Executive Director.

(c) Withdrawal by incumbent. When an election is not held because the incumbent disclaims any representation interest in a unit, a petition by the incumbent seeking an election involving the same unit or a subdivision of the same unit will not be considered timely if filed within six (6) months of cancellation of the election.

§2422.15 Duty to furnish information and cooperate.

(a) Relevant information. After a petition is filed, all parties must, upon request of the Executive Director, furnish the Executive Director and serve all parties affected by issues raised in the petition with information concerning parties, issues, and agreements raised in or affected by the petition.

(b) Inclusions and exclusions. After a petition seeking an election is filed, the Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, may direct the employing office or activity to furnish the Executive Director and all parties affected by issues raised in the petition with a current alphabetized list of employees and job classifications included in and/or excluded from the existing or claimed unit affected by issues raised in the petition.

(c) Cooperation. All parties are required to cooperate in every aspect of the representation process. This obligation includes cooperating fully with the Executive Director, submitting all required and requested information, and participating in prehearing conferences and pre-election investigatory hearings. The failure to cooperate in the representation process may result in the Executive Director or the Board taking appropriate action, including dismissal of the petition or denial of intervention.

(a) Election agreements. Parties are encouraged to enter into election agreements.

(b) Executive Director directed election. If the parties are unable to agree on procedural matters, specifically, the eligibility period, method of election, dates, hours, or locations of the election, the Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, will decide election procedures and issue a Direction of Election, without prejudice to the rights of a party to file objections to the procedural conduct of the election.

(c) Opportunity for an investigatory hearing. Before directing an election, the Executive Director shall provide affected parties an opportunity for a pre-election investigatory hearing on other than procedural matters.

(d) Challenges or objections to a directed election. A Direction of Election issued under this section will be issued without prejudice to the right of a party to file a challenge to the eligibility of any person participating in the election and/or objections to the election.

§2422.17 Notice of pre-election investigatory hearing and prehearing conference.

(a) Purpose of notice of an investigatory hearing. The Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, may issue a notice of pre-election investigatory hearing involving any issues raised in the petition.

(b) Contents. The notice of hearing will advise affected parties about the pre-election investigatory hearing. The Executive Director will also notify affected parties of the issues raised in the petition and establish a date for the prehearing conference.

(c) Prehearing conference. A prehearing conference will be conducted by the Executive Director or her designee, either by meeting or teleconference. All parties must participate in a prehearing conference and be prepared to fully discuss, narrow and resolve the issues set forth in the notification of the prehearing conference.

(d) No interlocutory appeal of investigatory hearing determination. The Executive Director's determination of whether to issue a notice of pre-election investigatory hearing is not appealable to the Board.

§2422.18 Pre-election investigatory hearing procedures.

(a) Purpose of a pre-election investigatory hearing. Representation hearings are considered investigatory and not adversarial. The purpose of the hearing is to develop a full and complete record of relevant and material facts.

(b) Conduct of hearing. Pre-election investigatory hearings will be open to the public unless otherwise ordered by the Executive Director or her designee. There is no burden of proof, with the exception of proceedings on objections to elections as provided for in §2422.27(b). Formal rules of evidence do not apply.

(c) Pre-election investigatory hearing. Pre-election investigatory hearings will be conducted by the Executive Director or her designee.

(d) Production of evidence. Parties have the obligation to produce existing documents and witnesses for the investigatory hearing in accordance with the instructions of the Executive Director or her designee. If a party willfully fails to comply with such instructions, the Board may draw an inference adverse to that party on the issue related to the evidence sought.

(e) Transcript. An official reporter will make the official transcript of the pre-election investigatory hearing. Copies of the official transcript may be examined in the Office during normal working hours. Requests by parties to purchase copies of the official transcript should be made to the official hearing reporter.

§2422.19 Motions.

(a) Purpose of a motion. Subsequent to the issuance of a notice of pre-election investigatory hearing in a representation proceeding, a party seeking a ruling, an order, or relief must do so by filing or raising a motion stating the order or relief sought and the grounds therefor. Challenges and other filings referenced in other sections of this subpart may, in the discretion of the Executive Director or her designee, be treated as a motion.

(b) Prehearing motions. Prehearing motions must be filed in writing with the Executive Director. Any response must be filed with the Executive Director within five (5) days after service of the motion. The Executive Director shall rule on the motion.

(c) Motions made at the investigatory hearing. During the pre-election investigatory hearing, motions will be made to the Executive Director or her designee, and may be oral on the record, unless otherwise required in this subpart to be in writing. Responses may be oral on the record or in writing, but, absent permission of the Executive Director or her designee, must be provided before the hearing closes. The Executive Director or her designee will rule on motions made at the hearing.

(d) Posthearing motions. Motions made after the hearing closes must be filed in writing with the Board. Any response to a posthearing motion must be filed with the Board within five (5) days after service of the motion.

§2422.20 Rights of parties at a pre-election investigatory hearing.

(a) Rights. A party at a pre-election investigatory hearing will have the right:

(1) To appear in person or by a representative;

(2) To examine and cross-examine witnesses; and

(3) To introduce into the record relevant evidence.

(b) Documentary evidence and stipulations. Parties must submit two (2) copies of documentary evidence to the Executive Director or her designee and copies to all other parties. Stipulations of fact between/among the parties may be introduced into evidence.

(c) Oral argument. Parties will be entitled to a reasonable period prior to the close of the hearing for oral argument. Presentation of a closing oral argument does not preclude a party from filing a brief under paragraph (d) of this section.

(d) Briefs. A party will be afforded an opportunity to file a brief with the Board.

(1) An original and two (2) copies of a brief must be filed with the Board within thirty (30) days from the close of the hearing.

(2) A written request for an extension of time to file a brief must be filed with and received by the Board no later than five (5) days before the date the brief is due.

(3) No reply brief may be filed without permission of the Board.

§2422.21 Duties and powers of the Executive Director in the conduct of the pre-election investigatory hearing.

(a) Duties. The Executive Director or her designee, on behalf of the Board, will receive evidence and inquire fully into the relevant and material facts concerning the matters that are the subject of the investigatory hearing, and may make recommendations on the record to the Board.

(b) Powers. During the period a case is assigned to the Executive Director or her designee for pre-election investigatory hearing and prior to the close of the hearing, the Executive Director or her designee may take any action necessary to schedule, conduct, continue, control, and regulate the pre-election investigatory hearing, including ruling on motions when appropriate.

§2422.22 Objections to the conduct of the pre-election investigatory hearing.

(a) Objections. Objections are oral or written complaints concerning the conduct of a pre-election investigatory hearing.

(b) Exceptions to rulings. There are automatic exceptions to all adverse rulings.

§2422.23 Election procedures.

(a) Executive Director conducts or supervises election. The Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, will decide to conduct or supervise the election. In supervised elections, employing offices or activities will perform all acts as specified in the Election Agreement or Direction of Election.

(b) Notice of election. Prior to the election a notice of election, prepared by the Executive Director, will be posted by the employing office or activity in places where notices to employees are customarily posted and/or distributed in a manner by which notices are normally distributed. The notice of election will contain the details and procedures of the election, including the appropriate unit, the eligibility period, the date(s), hour(s) and location(s) of the election, a sample ballot, and the effect of the vote.

(c) Sample ballot. The reproduction of any document purporting to be a copy of the official ballot that suggests either directly or indirectly to employees that the Board endorses a particular choice in the election may constitute grounds for setting aside an election if objections are filed under §2422.26.

(d) Secret ballot. All elections will be by secret ballot.

(e) Intervenor withdrawal from ballot. When two or more labor organizations are included as choices in an election, an intervening labor organization may, prior to the approval of an election agreement or before the direction of an election, file a written request with the Executive Director to remove its name from the ballot. If the request is not received prior to the approval of an election agreement or before the direction of an election, unless the parties and the Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, agree otherwise, the intervening labor organization will remain on the ballot. The Executive Director's decision on the request is final and not subject to the filing of an application for review with the Board.

(f) Incumbent withdrawal from ballot in an election to decertify an incumbent representative. When there is no intervening labor organization, an election to decertify an incumbent exclusive representative will not be held if the incumbent provides the Executive Director with a written disclaimer of any representation interest in the unit. When there is an intervenor, an election will be held if the intervening labor organization proffers a thirty percent (30%) showing of interest within the time period established by the Executive Director.

(g) Petitioner withdraws from ballot in an election. When there is no intervening labor organization, an election will not be held if the petitioner provides the Executive Director with a written request to withdraw the petition. When there is an intervenor, an election will be held if the intervening labor organization proffers a thirty percent (30%) showing of interest within the time period established by the Executive Director.

(h) Observers. All parties are entitled to representation at the polling location(s) by observers of their own selection subject to the Executive Director's approval.

(i) Parties desiring to name observers must file in writing with the Executive Director a request for specifically named observers at least fifteen (15) days prior to an election. The Executive Director may grant an extension of time for filing a request for specifically named observers for good cause where a party requests such an extension or on the Executive Director's own motion. The request must name and identify the observers requested.

(2) An employing office or activity may use as its observers any employees who are not eligible to vote in the election, except:

(i) Supervisors or management officials;

(ii) Employees who have any official connection with any of the labor organizations involved; or

(iii) Non-employees of the legislative branch.

(3) A labor organization may use as its observers any employees eligible to vote in the election, except:

(i) Employees on leave without pay status who are working for the labor organization involved; or

(ii) Employees who hold an elected office in the union.

(4) Objections to a request for specific observers must be filed with the Executive Director stating the reasons in support within five (5) days after service of the request.

(5) The Executive Director's ruling on requests for and objections to observers is final and binding and is not subject to the filing of an application for review with the Board.

§2422.24 Challenged ballots.

(a) Filing challenges. A party or the Executive Director may, for good cause, challenge the eligibility of any person to participate in the election prior to the employee voting.

(b) Challenged ballot procedure. An individual whose eligibility to vote is in dispute will be given the opportunity to vote a challenged ballot. If the parties and the Region are unable to resolve the challenged ballot(s) prior to the tally of ballots, the unresolved challenged ballot(s) will be impounded and preserved until a determination can be made, if necessary, by the Executive Director or the Board.

§2422.25 Tally of ballots.

(a) Tallying the ballots. When the election is concluded, the Executive Director or her designee will tally the ballots.

(b) Service of the tally. When the tally is completed, the Executive Director will serve the tally of ballots on the parties in accordance with the election agreement or direction of election.

(c) Valid ballots cast. Representation will be determined by the majority of the valid ballots cast.

§2422.26 Objections to the election.

(a) Filing objections to the election. Objections to the procedural conduct of the election or to conduct that may have improperly affected the results of the election may be filed by any party. Objections must be filed and received by the Executive Director within five (5) days after the tally of ballots has been served. Any objections must be timely regardless of whether the challenged ballots are sufficient in number to affect the results of the election. The objections must be supported by clear and concise reasons. An original and two (2) copies of the objections must be received by the Executive Director.

(b) Supporting evidence. The objecting party must file with the Executive Director evidence, including signed statements, documents and other materials supporting the objections within ten (10) days after the objections are filed.

§2422.27 Determinative challenged ballots and objections.

(a) Investigation. The Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, will investigate objections and/or determinative challenged ballots that are sufficient in number to affect the results of the election.

(b) Burden of proof. A party filing objections to the election bears the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence concerning those objections. However, no party bears the burden of proof on challenged ballots.

(c) Executive Director action. After investigation, the Executive Director will take appropriate action consistent with §2422.30.

(d) Consolidated hearing on objections and/or determinative challenged ballots and an unfair labor practice hearing. When appropriate, and in accordance with §2422.33, objections and/or determinative challenged ballots may be consolidated with an unfair labor practice hearing. Such consolidated hearings will be conducted by a Hearing Officer. Exceptions and related submissions must be filed with the Board and the Board will issue a decision in accordance with Part 2423 of this chapter and section 406 of the CAA, except for the following:

(1) Section 2423.18 of this Subchapter concerning the burden of proof is not applicable;

(2) The Hearing Officer may not recommend remedial action to be taken or notices to be posted; and,

(3) References to charge and complaint in Part 2423 of this chapter will be omitted.

§2422.28 Runoff elections.

(a) When a runoff may be held. A runoff election is required in an election involving at least three (3) choices, one of which is no union or neither, when no choice receives a majority of the valid ballots cast. However, a runoff may not be held until the objections to the election and determinative challenged ballots have been resolved.

(b) Eligibility. Employees who were eligible to vote in the original election and who are also eligible on the date of the runoff election may vote in the runoff election.

(c) Ballot. The ballot in the runoff election will provide for a selection between the two choices receiving the largest and second largest number of votes in the election.

§2422.29 Inconclusive elections.

(a) Inconclusive elections. An inconclusive election is one where challenged ballots are not sufficient to affect the outcome of the election and one of the following occurs:

(1) The ballot provides for at least three (3) choices, one of which is no union or neither and the votes are equally divided; or

(2) The ballot provides for at least three (3) choices, the choice receiving the highest number of votes does not receive a majority, and at least two other choices receive the next highest and same number of votes; or

(3) When a runoff ballot provides for a choice between two labor organizations and results in the votes being equally divided; or

(4) When the Board determines that there have been significant procedural irregularities.

(b) Eligibility to vote in a rerun election. A current payroll period will be used to determine eligibility to vote in a rerun election.

(c) Ballot. If a determination is made that the election is inconclusive, the election will be rerun with all the choices that appeared on the original ballot.

(d) Number of reruns. There will be only one rerun of an inconclusive election. If the rerun results in another inconclusive election, the tally of ballots will indicate a majority of valid ballots has not been cast for any choice and a certification of results will be issued. If necessary, a runoff may be held when an original election is rerun.

§2422.30 Executive Director investigations, notices of pre-election investigatory hearings, and actions; Board Decisions and Orders.

(a) Executive Director investigation. The Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, will make such investigation of the petition and any other matter as the Executive Director deems necessary.

(b) Executive Director notice of pre-election investigatory hearing. On behalf of the Board, the Executive Director will issue a notice of pre-election investigatory hearing to inquire into any matter about which a material issue of fact exists, where there is an issue as to whether a question concerning representation exists, and any time there is reasonable cause to believe a question exists regarding unit appropriateness.

(c) Executive Director action. After investigation and/or hearing, when a pre-election investigatory hearing has been ordered, the Executive Director may, on behalf of the Board, approve an election agreement, dismiss a petition or deny intervention where there is an inadequate or invalid showing of interest, or dismiss a petition where there is an undisputed bar to further processing of the petition under law, rule or regulation.

(d) Appeal of Executive Director action. A party may file with the Board an application for review of an Executive Director action taken pursuant to section (c) above.

(e) Contents of the Record. When no pre-election investigatory hearing has been conducted all material submitted to and considered by the Executive Director during the investigation becomes a part of the record. When a pre-election investigatory hearing has been conducted, the transcript and all material entered into evidence, including any posthearing briefs, become a part of the record.

(f) Transfer of record to Board; Board Decisions and Orders. In cases that are submitted to the Board for decision in the first instance, the Board shall decide the issues presented based upon the record developed by the Executive Director, including the transcript of the pre-election investigatory hearing, if any, documents admitted into the record and briefs and other approved submissions from the parties. The Board may direct that a secret ballot election be held, issue an order dismissing the petition, or make such other disposition of the matter as it deems appropriate.

§2422.31 Application for review of an Executive Director action.

(a) Filing an application for review. A party must file an application for review with the Board within sixty (60) days of the Executive Director's action. The sixty (60) day time limit provided for in 5 U.S.C. 7105(f), as applied by the CAA, may not be extended or waived.

(b) Contents. An application for review must be sufficient to enable the Board to rule on the application without recourse to the record; however, the Board may, in its discretion, examine the record in evaluating the application. An application must specify the matters and rulings to which exception(s) is taken, include a summary of evidence relating to any issue raised in the application, and make specific reference to page citations in the transcript if a hearing was held. An application may not raise any issue or rely on any facts not timely presented to the Executive Director.

(c) Review. The Board may, in its discretion, grant an application for review when the application demonstrates that review is warranted on one or more of the following grounds:

(1) The decision raises an issue for which there is an absence of precedent;

(2) Established law or policy warrants reconsideration; or,

(3) There is a genuine issue over whether the Executive Director has:

(i) Failed to apply established law;

(ii) Committed a prejudicial procedural error;

(iii) Committed a clear and prejudicial error concerning a substantial factual matter.

(d) Opposition. A party may file with the Board an opposition to an application for review within ten (10) days after the party is served with the application. A copy must be served on the Executive Director and all other parties and a statement of service must be filed with the Board.

(e) Executive Director action becomes the Board's action. An action of the Executive Director becomes the action of the Board when:

(1) No application for review is filed with the Board within sixty (60) days after the date of the Executive Director's action; or

(2) A timely application for review is filed with the Board and the Board does not undertake to grant review of the Executive Director's action within sixty (60) days of the filing of the application; or

(3) The Board denies an application for review of the Executive Director's action.

(f) Board grant of review and stay. The Board may rule on the issue(s) in an application for review in its order granting the application for review. Neither filing nor granting an application for review shall stay any action ordered by the Executive Director unless specifically ordered by the Board.

(g) Briefs if review is granted. If the Board does not rule on the issue(s) in the application for review in its order granting review, the Board may, in its discretion, afford the parties an opportunity to file briefs. The briefs will be limited to the issue(s) referenced in the Board's order granting review.

§2422.32 Certifications and revocations.

(a) Certifications. The Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, will issue an appropriate certification when:

(1) After an election, runoff, or rerun,

(i) No objections are filed or challenged ballots are not determinative, or

(ii) Objections and determinative challenged ballots are decided and resolved; or

(2) The Executive Director takes an action requiring a certification and that action becomes the action of the Board under §2422.31(e) or the Board otherwise directs the issuance of a certification.

(b) Revocations. Without prejudice to any rights and obligations which may exist under the CAA, the Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, will revoke a recognition or certification, as appropriate, and provide a written statement of reasons when an incumbent exclusive representative files, during a representation proceeding, a disclaimer of any representational interest in the unit.

§2422.33 Relief obtainable under Part 2423.

Remedial relief that was or could have been obtained as a result of a motion, objection, or challenge filed or raised under this subpart, may not be the basis for similar relief if filed or raised as an unfair labor practice under Part 2423 of this Chapter: provided, however, that related matters may be consolidated for hearing as noted in §2422.27(d) of this subpart.

§2422.34 Rights and obligations during the pendency of representation proceedings.

(a) Existing recognitions, agreements, and obligations under the CAA. During the pendency of any representation proceeding, parties are obligated to maintain existing recognitions, adhere to the terms and conditions of existing collective bargaining agreements, and fulfill all other representational and bargaining responsibilities under the CAA.

(b) Unit status of individual employees. Notwithstanding paragraph (a) of this section and except as otherwise prohibited by law, a party may take action based on its position regarding the bargaining unit status of individual employees, pursuant to 5 U.S.C.

§ 2423.1 Applicability of this part.

This part is applicable to any charge of alleged unfair labor practices occurring on or after October 1, 1996.

§ 2423.2 Informal proceedings.

(a) The purposes and policies of chapter 71, as applied by the CAA, can best be achieved by the cooperative efforts of all persons covered by the program. To this end, it shall be the policy of the Board and the General Counsel to encourage all persons alleging unfair labor practices and persons against whom such allegations are made to meet and, in good faith, attempt to resolve such matters prior to the filing of unfair labor practice charges.

(b) In furtherance of the policy referred to in paragraph (a) of this section, and noting the 180 day period of limitation set forth in section 220(c)(2) of the CAA, it shall be the policy of the Board and the General Counsel to encourage the informal resolution of unfair labor practice allegations subsequent to the filing of a charge and prior to the filing of a complaint by the General Counsel.

(c) In order to afford the parties an opportunity to implement the policy referred to in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section, the investigation of an unfair labor practice charge by the General Counsel will normally not commence until the parties have been afforded a reasonable amount of time, not to exceed fifteen (15) days from the filing of the charge, during which period the parties are urged to attempt to informally resolve the unfair labor practice allegation.

§ 2423.3 Who may file charges.

An employing office, employing activity, or labor organization may be charged by any person with having engaged in or engaging in any unfair labor practice prohibited under 5 U.S.C. 7116, as applied by the CAA.

§ 2423.4 Contents of the charge; supporting evidence and documents.

(a) A charge alleging a violation of 5 U.S.C. 7116, as applied by the CAA, shall be submitted on forms prescribed by the General Counsel and shall contain the following:

(1) The name, address and telephone number of the person(s) making the charge;

(2) The name, address and telephone number of the employing office or activity, or labor organization against whom the charge is made;

(3) A clear and concise statement of the facts constituting the alleged unfair labor practice, a statement of the section(s) and subsection(s) of chapter 71 of title 5 of the United States Code made applicable by the CAA alleged to have been violated, and the date and place of occurrence of the particular acts; and

(4) A statement of any other procedure invoked involving the subject matter of the charge and the results, if any, including whether the subject matter raised in the charge (i) has been raised previously in a grievance procedure; (ii) has been referred to the Board under Part 2471 of these regulations, or the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, or (iii) involves a negotiability issue raised by the charging party in a petition pending before the Board pursuant to Part 2424 of this subchapter.

(b) Such charge shall be in writing and signed and shall contain a declaration by the person signing the charge, under the penalties of the Criminal Code (18 U.S.C. 1001), that its contents are true and correct to the best of that person's knowledge and belief.

(c) When filing a charge, the charging party shall submit to the General Counsel any supporting evidence and documents.

§ 2423.5 Selection of the unfair labor practice procedure or the negotiability procedure.

Where a labor organization files an unfair labor practice charge pursuant to this part which involves a negotiability issue, and the labor organization also files pursuant to part 2424 of this subchapter a petition for review of the same negotiability issue, the Board and the General Counsel ordinarily will not process the unfair labor practice charge and the petition for review simultaneously. Under such circumstances, the labor organization must select under which procedure to proceed. Upon selection of one procedure, further action under the other procedure will ordinarily be suspended. Such selection must be made regardless of whether the unfair labor practice charge or the petition for review of a negotiability issue is filed first. Notification of this selection must be made in writing at the time that both procedures have been invoked, and must be served on the Board, the General Counsel and all parties to both the unfair labor practice case and the negotiability case.

§ 2423.6 Filing and service of copies.

(a) An original and four (4) copies of the charge together with one copy for each additional charged party named shall be filed with the General Counsel.

(b) Upon the filing of a charge, the charging party shall be responsible for the service of a copy of the charge (without the supporting evidence and documents) upon the person(s) against whom the charge is made, and for filing a written statement of such service with the General Counsel. The General Counsel will, as a matter of course, cause a copy of such charge to be served on the person(s) against whom the charge is made, but shall not be deemed to assume responsibility for such service.

(c) A charge will be deemed to be filed when it is received by the General Counsel in accordance with the requirements in paragraph (a) of this section.

§ 2423.7 Investigation of charges.

(a) The General Counsel shall conduct such investigation of the charge as the General Counsel deems necessary. Consistent with the policy set forth in § 2423.2, the investigation will normally not commence until the parties have been afforded a reasonable amount of time, not to exceed fifteen (15) days from the filing of the charge, to informally resolve the unfair labor practice allegation.

(b) During the course of the investigation all parties involved will have an opportunity to present their evidence and views to the General Counsel.

(c) In connection with the investigation of charges, all persons are expected to cooperate fully with the General Counsel.

(d) The purposes and policies of chapter 71, as applied by the CAA, can best be achieved by the full cooperation of all parties involved and the voluntary submission of all potentially relevant information from all potential sources during the course of the investigation. To this end, it shall be the policy of the Board and the General Counsel to protect the identity of individuals and the substance of the statements and information they submit or which is obtained during the investigation as a means of assuring the Board's and the General Counsel's continuing ability to obtain all relevant information.

§ 2423.8 Amendment of charges.

Prior to the issuance of a complaint, the charging party may amend the charge in accordance with the requirements set forth in § 2423.6.

§ 2423.9 Action by the General Counsel.

(a) The General Counsel shall take action which may consist of the following, as appropriate:

(1) Approve a request to withdraw a charge;

(2) Refuse to file a complaint;

(3) Approve a written settlement and recommend that the Executive Director approve a written settlement agreement in accordance with the provisions of section 414 of the CAA;

(4) File a complaint;

(5) Upon agreement of all parties, transfer to the Board for decision, after filing of a complaint, a stipulation of facts in accordance with the provisions of § 2429.1(a) of this subchapter; or

(6) Withdraw a complaint.

§ 2423.10 Determination not to file complaint.

(a) If the General Counsel determines that the charge has not been timely filed, that the charge fails to state an unfair labor practice, or for other appropriate reasons, the General Counsel may request the charging party to withdraw the charge, and in the absence of such withdrawal within a reasonable time, decline to file a complaint.

(b) The charging party may not obtain a review of the General Counsel's decision not to file a complaint.

§ 2423.11 Settlement or adjustment of issues.

(a) At any stage of a proceeding prior to hearing, where time, the nature of the proceeding, and the public interest permit, all interested parties shall have the opportunity to submit to the Executive Director or General Counsel, as appropriate, for consideration, all facts and arguments concerning offers of settlement, or proposals of adjustment.

Precomplaint settlements

(b)(1) Prior to the filing of any complaint or the taking of other formal action, the General Counsel will afford the charging party and the respondent a reasonable period of time in which to enter into a settlement agreement to be submitted to and approved by the General Counsel and the Executive Director. Upon approval by the General Counsel and Executive Director and compliance with the terms of the settlement agreement, no further action shall be taken in the case. If the respondent fails to perform its obligations under the settlement agreement, the General Counsel may determine to institute further proceedings.

(2) In the event that the charging party fails or refuses to become a party to a settlement agreement offered by the respondent, if the General Counsel concludes that the offered settlement will effectuate the policies of chapter 71, as applied by the CAA, the agreement shall be between the respondent and the General Counsel and the latter shall decline to file a complaint.

Post complaint settlement policy

(c) Consistent with the policy reflected in paragraph (a) of this section, even after the filing of a complaint, the Board favors the settlement of issues. Such settlements may be accomplished as provided in paragraph (b) of this section. The parties may, as part of the settlement, agree to waive their right to a hearing and agree further that the Board may issue an order requiring the respondent to take action appropriate to the terms of the settlement. Ordinarily such a settlement agreement will also contain the respondent's consent to the Board's application for the entry of a decree by the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit enforcing the Board's order.

Post complaint prehearing settlements

(d)(1) If, after the filing of a complaint, the charging party and the respondent enter into a settlement agreement, and such agreement is accepted by the General Counsel, the settlement agreement shall be submitted to the Executive Director for approval.

(2) If, after the filing of a complaint, the charging party fails or refuses to become a party to a settlement agreement offered by the respondent, and the General Counsel concludes that the offered settlement will effectuate the policies of chapter 71, as applied by the CAA, the agreement shall be between the respondent and the General Counsel. The charging party will be so informed and provided a brief written statement by the General Counsel of the reasons therefor. The settlement agreement together with the charging party's objections, if any, and the General Counsel's written statements, shall be submitted to the Executive Director for approval. The Executive Director may approve or disapprove any settlement agreement.

(3) After the filing of a complaint, if the General Counsel concludes that it will effectuate the policies of chapter 71, as applied by the CAA, the General Counsel may withdraw the complaint.

Settlements after the opening of the hearing

(e)(1) After filing of a complaint and after opening of the hearing, if the General Counsel concludes that it will effectuate the policies of chapter 71, as applied by the CAA, the General Counsel may request the Hearing Officer for permission to withdraw the complaint and, having been granted such permission to withdraw the complaint, may approve a settlement and recommend that the Executive Director approve the settlement pursuant to paragraph (b) of this section.

(2) If, after filing of a complaint and after opening of the hearing, the parties enter into a settlement agreement that contains the respondent's consent to the Board's application for the entry of a decree by the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit enforcing the Board's order, the General Counsel may request the Hearing Officer and the Executive Director to approve such settlement agreement, and upon such approval, to transmit the agreement to the Board for approval.

(3) If the charging party fails or refuses to become a party to a settlement agreement, offered by the respondent, that contains the respondent's consent to the Board's application for the entry of a decree by the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit enforcing the Board's order, and the General Counsel concludes that the offered settlement will effectuate the policies of chapter 71, as applied to the CAA, the agreement shall be between the respondent and the General Counsel. After the charging party is given an opportunity to state on the record or in writing the reasons for opposing the settlement, the General Counsel may request the Hearing Officer and the Executive Director to approve such settlement agreement, and upon such approval, to transmit the agreement to the Board for approval. The Board may approve or disapprove any such settlement agreement or return the case to the Hearing Officer for other appropriate action.

§ 2423.12 Filing and contents of the complaint.

(a) After a charge is filed, if it appears to the General Counsel that formal proceedings in respect thereto should be instituted, the General Counsel shall file a formal complaint: Provided, however, that a determination by the General Counsel to file a complaint shall not be subject to review.

(b) The complaint shall include:

(1) Notice of the charge;

(2) Any information required pursuant to the Procedural Rules of the Office.

(c) Any such complaint may be withdrawn before the hearing by the General Counsel.

§ 2423.13 Answer to the complaint.

A respondent shall file an answer to a complaint in accordance with the requirements of the Procedural Rules of the Office.

§ 2423.14 Prehearing disclosure; conduct of hearing.

The procedures for prehearing discovery and the conduct of the hearing are set forth in the Procedural Rules of the Office.

§ 2423.15 Intervention.

Any person involved and desiring to intervene in any proceeding pursuant to this part shall file a motion in accordance with the procedures set forth in the Procedural Rules of the Office. The motion shall state the grounds upon which such person claims involvement.

§ 2423.16 [Reserved]

§ 2423.18 Burden of proof before the Hearing Officer.

The General Counsel shall have the responsibility of presenting the evidence in support of the complaint and shall have the burden of proving the allegations of the complaint by a preponderance of the evidence.

2423.19 Duties and powers of the Hearing Officer.

It shall be the duty of the Hearing Officer to inquire fully into the facts as they relate to the matter before such Hearing Officer, subject to the rules and regulations of the Office and the Board.

§ 2423.24 [Reserved]

§ 2423.26 Hearing Officer decisions; entry in records of the Office.

In accordance with the Procedural Rules of the Office, the Hearing Officer shall issue a written decision and that decision will be entered into the records of the Office.

§ 2423.27 Appeal to the Board.

An aggrieved party may seek review of a decision and order of the Hearing Officer in accordance with the Procedural Rules of the Office.

§ 2423.28 [Reserved]

§ 2423.29 Action by the Board.

(a) If an appeal is filed, the Board shall review the decision of the Hearing Officer in accordance with section 406 of the CAA, and the Procedural Rules of the Office.

(b) Upon finding a violation, the Board shall issue an order:

(1) To cease and desist from any such unfair labor practice in which the employing office or labor organization is engaged;

(2) Requiring the parties to renegotiate a collective bargaining agreement in accordance with the order of the Board and requiring that the agreement, as amended, be given retroactive effect;

(3) Requiring reinstatement of an employee with backpay in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 5596; or

(4) Including any combination of the actions described in paragraphs (1) through (3) of this paragraph (b), or such other action as will carry out the purpose of the chapter 71, as applied by the CAA.

(c) Upon finding no violation, the Board shall dismiss the complaint.

§ 2423.30 Compliance with decisions and orders of the Board.

When remedial action is ordered, the respondent shall report to the Office within a specified period that the required remedial action has been effected. When the General Counsel or the Executive Director finds that the required remedial action has not been effected, the General Counsel or the Executive Director shall take such action as may be appropriate, including referral to the Board for enforcement.

§ 2423.31 Backpay proceedings.

After the entry of a Board order directing payment of backpay, or the entry of a court decree enforcing such order, if it appears to the General Counsel that a controversy exists which cannot be resolved without a formal proceeding, the General Counsel may issue and serve on all parties a backpay specification accompanied by a request for hearing or a request for hearing without a specification. Upon receipt of the request for hearing, the Executive Director will appoint an independent Hearing Officer. The respondent shall, within twenty (20) days after the service of a backpay specification, file an answer thereto in accordance with the Office's Procedural Rules. No answer need be filed by the respondent to a notice of hearing issued without a specification. After the issuance of a notice of hearing, with or without a backpay specification, the hearing procedures provided in the Procedural Rules of the Office shall be followed insofar as applicable.

Subpart B—Criteria for Determining Compelling Need for Employing Office Rules and Regulations

2424.11 Illustrative criteria.

Subpart A—Instituting an Appeal

§2424.1 Conditions governing review.

The Board will consider a negotiability issue under the conditions prescribed by 5 U.S.C. 7117 (b) and (c), as applied by the CAA, namely: If an employing office involved in collective bargaining with an exclusive representative alleges that the duty to bargain in good faith does not extend to any matter proposed to be bargained because, as proposed, the matter is inconsistent with law, rule or regulation, the exclusive representative may appeal the allegation to the Board when—

(a) It disagrees with the employing office's allegation that the matter as proposed to be bargained is inconsistent with any Federal law or any Government-wide rule or regulation; or

(b) It alleges, with regard to any employing office rule or regulation asserted by the employing office as a bar to negotiations on the matter, as proposed, that:

(1) The rule or regulation violates applicable law, or rule or regulation of appropriate authority outside the employing office;

(2) The rule or regulation was not issued by the employing office or by any primary national subdivision of the employing office, or otherwise is not applicable to bar negotiations with the exclusive representative, under 5 U.S.C. 7117(a)(3), as applied by the CAA; or

(3) No compelling need exists for the rule or regulation to bar negotiations on the matter, as proposed, because the rule or regulation does not meet the criteria established in subpart B of this part.

§2424.2 Who may file a petition.

A petition for review of a negotiability issue may be filed by an exclusive representative which is a party to the negotiations.

§2424.3 Time limits for filing.

The time limit for filing a petition for review is fifteen (15) days after the date the employing office's allegation that the duty to bargain in good faith does not extend to the matter proposed to be bargained is served on the exclusive representative. The exclusive representative shall request such allegation in writing and the employing office shall make the allegation in writing and serve a copy on the exclusive representative: provided, however, that review of a negotiability issue may be requested by an exclusive representative under this subpart without a prior written allegation by the employing office if the employing office has not served such allegation upon the exclusive representative within ten (10) days after the date of the receipt by any employing office bargaining representative at the negotiations of a written request for such allegation.

§2424.4 Content of petition; service.

(a) A petition for review shall be dated and shall contain the following:

(1) A statement setting forth the express language of the proposal sought to be negotiated as submitted to the employing office;

(2) An explicit statement of the meaning attributed to the proposal by the exclusive representative including:

(i) Explanation of terms of art, acronyms, technical language, or any other aspect of the language of the proposal which is not in common usage; and

(ii) Where the proposal is concerned with a particular work situation, or other particular circumstances, a description of the situation or circumstances which will enable the Board to understand the context in which the proposal is intended to apply;

(3) A copy of all pertinent material, including the employing office's allegation in writing that the matter, as proposed, is not within the duty to bargain in good faith, and other relevant documentary material; and

(4) Notification by the petitioning labor organization whether the negotiability issue is also involved in an unfair labor practice charge filed by such labor organization under part 2423 of this subchapter and pending before the General Counsel.

(b) A copy of the petition including all attachments thereto shall be served on the employing office head and on the principal employing office bargaining representative at the negotiations.

(c)(1) Filing an incomplete petition for review will result in the exclusive representative being asked to provide the missing or incomplete information. Noncompliance with a request to complete the record may result in dismissal of the petition.

(2) The processing priority accorded to an incomplete petition, relative to other pending negotiability appeals, will be based upon the date when the petition is completed not the date it was originally filed.

§2424.5 Selection of the unfair labor practice procedure or the negotiability procedure.

Where a labor organization files an unfair labor practice charge pursuant to part 2423 of this subchapter which involves a negotiability issue, and the labor organization also files pursuant to this part a petition for review of the same negotiability issue, the Board and the General Counsel ordinarily will not process the unfair labor practice charge and the petition for review simultaneously. Under such circumstances, the labor organization must select under which procedure to proceed. Upon selection of one procedure, further action under the other procedure will ordinarily be suspended. Such selection must be made regardless of whether the unfair labor practice charge or the petition for review of a negotiability issue is filed first. Notification of this selection must be made in writing at the time that both procedures have been invoked, and must be served on the Board, the General Counsel and all parties to both the unfair labor practice case and the negotiability case.

§2424.6 Position of the employing office; time limits for filing; service.

(a) Within thirty (30) days after the date of the receipt by the head of an employing office of a copy of a petition for review of a negotiability issue the employing office shall file a statement

(1) Withdrawing the allegation that the duty to bargain in good faith does not extend to the matter proposed to be negotiated; or

(2) Setting forth in full its position on any matters relevant to the petition which it wishes the Board to consider in reaching its decision, including a full and detailed statement of its reasons supporting the allegation. The statement shall cite the section of any law, rule or regulation relied upon as a basis for the allegation and shall contain a copy of any internal employing office rule or regulation so relied upon. The statement shall include:

(i) Explanation of the meaning the employing office attributes to the proposal as a whole, including any terms of art, acronyms, technical language or any other aspect of the language of the proposal which is not in common usage; and

(ii) Description of a particular work situation, or other particular circumstance the employing office views the proposal to concern, which will enable the Board to understand the context in which the proposal is considered to apply by the employing office.

(b) A copy of the employing office's statement of position, including all attachments thereto shall be served on the exclusive representative.

§2424.7 Response of the exclusive representative; time limits for filing; service.

(a) Within fifteen (15) days after the date of the receipt by an exclusive representative of a copy of an employing office's statement of position the exclusive representative shall file a full and detailed response stating its position and reasons for:

(1) Disagreeing with the employing office's allegation that the matter, as proposed to be negotiated, is inconsistent with any Federal law or Government-wide rule or regulation; or

(2) Alleging that the employing office's rules or regulations violate applicable law, or rule or regulation or appropriate authority outside the employing office; that the rules or regulations were not issued by the employing office or by any primary national subdivision of the employing office, or otherwise are not applicable to bar negotiations under 5 U.S.C. 7117(a)(3), as applied by the CAA; or that no compelling need exists for the rules or regulations to bar negotiations.

(b) The response shall cite the particular section of any law, rule or regulation alleged to be violated by the employing office's rules or regulations; or shall explain the grounds for contending the employing office rules or regulations are not applicable to bar negotiations under 5 U.S.C. 7117(a)(3), as applied by the CAA, or fail to meet the criteria established in subpart B of this part, or were not issued at the employing office headquarters level or at the level of a primary national subdivision.

(c) A copy of the response of the exclusive representative including all attachments thereto shall be served on the employing office head and on the employing office's representative of record in the proceeding before the Board.

§2424.8 Additional submissions to the Board.

The Board will not consider any submission filed by any party, whether supplemental or responsive in nature, other than those authorized under §§2424.2 through 2424.7 unless such submission is requested by the Board; or unless, upon written request by any party, a copy of which is served on all other parties, the Board in its discretion grants permission to file such submission.

§2424.9 Hearing.

A hearing may be held, in the discretion of the Board, before a determination is made under 5 U.S.C. 7117(b) or (c), as applied by the CAA. If a hearing is held, it shall be expedited to the extent practicable and shall not include the General Counsel as a party.

§2424.10 Board decision and order; compliance.

(a) Subject to the requirements of this subpart the Board shall expedite proceedings under this part to the extent practicable and shall issue to the exclusive representative and to the employing office a written decision on the allegation and specific reasons therefor at the earliest practicable date.

(b) If the Board finds that the duty to bargain extends to the matter proposed to be bargained, the decision of the Board shall include an order that the employing office shall upon request (or as otherwise agreed to by the parties) bargain concerning such matter. If the Board finds that the duty to bargain does not extend to the matter proposed to be negotiated, the Board shall so state and issue an order dismissing the petition for review of the negotiability issue. If the Board finds that the duty to bargain extends to the matter proposed to be bargained only at the election of the employing office, the Board shall so state and issue an order dismissing the petition for review of the negotiability issue.

(c) When an order is issued as provided in paragraph (b) of this section, the employing office or exclusive representative shall report to the Executive Director within a specified period failure to comply with an order that the employing office shall upon request (or as otherwise agreed to by the parties) bargain concerning the disputed matter.

A compelling need exists for an employing office rule or regulation concerning any condition of employment when the employing office demonstrates that the rule or regulation meets one or more of the following illustrative criteria:

(a) The rule or regulation is essential, as distinguished from helpful or desirable, to the accomplishment of the mission or the execution of functions of the employing office or primary national subdivision in a manner which is consistent with the requirements of an effective and efficient government.

(b) The rule or regulation is necessary to insure the maintenance of basic merit principles.

(c) The rule or regulation implements a mandate to the employing office or primary national subdivision under law or other outside authority, which implementation is essentially nondiscretionary in nature.

SEC. 5. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND FEDERAL ASSISTANCE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) domestic violence is the leading cause of physical injury to women; the Department of Justice estimates that over one million violent crimes against women are committed by intimate partners annually;

(2) domestic violence dramatically affects the victim's ability to participate in the workforce; a University of Minnesota survey reported that one-quarter of battered women surveyed had lost a job partly because of being abused and that over half of these women had been harassed by their abuser at work;

(3) domestic violence is often intensified as women seek to gain economic independence through attending school or training programs; batterers have been reported to prevent women from attending these programs or sabotage their efforts at self-improvement;

(4) nationwide surveys of service providers prepared by the Taylor Institute of Chicago, document, for the first time, the interrelationship between domestic violence and welfare by showing that between 50 percent and 80 percent of AFDC recipients are current or past victims of domestic violence;

(5) over half of the women surveyed stayed with their batterers because they lacked the resources to support themselves and their children; the surveys also found that the availability of economic support is a critical factor in poor women's ability to leave abusive situations that threaten them and their children; and

(6) proposals to restructure the welfare programs may impact the availability of the economic support and the safety net necessary to enable poor women to flee abuse without risking homelessness and starvation for their families.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) no welfare reform provision shall be enacted by Congress unless and until Congress considers whether such welfare reform provisions will exacerbate violence against women and their children, further endanger women's lives, make it more difficult for women to escape domestic violence, or further punish women victimized by violence; and

(2) any welfare reform measure enacted by Congress shall require that any welfare-to-work, education, or job placement programs implemented by the States will address the impact of domestic violence on welfare recipients.

SEC. 6. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON IMPACT OF LEGISLATION ON CHILDREN.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that Congress should not adopt or enact any legislation that will increase the number of children who are hungry, homeless, poor, or medically uninsured.

(b) LEGISLATIVE ACCOUNTABILITY FOR IMPACT ON CHILDREN.—In the event legislation enacted to comply with this resolution results in an increase in the number of hungry, homeless, poor, or medically uninsured by the end of fiscal year 1997, Congress shall revisit the provisions of such legislation which caused such increase and shall, as soon as practicable thereafter, adopt legislation which would halt any continuation of such increase.

SEC. 7. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING TAX CUTS.

It is the sense of Congress that changes in tax laws which promote job creation, economic growth, and increased savings and investment should be enacted and be offset by changes which close tax loopholes and eliminate corporate welfare.

SEC. 8. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING THE DEBT.

It is the sense of Congress that eliminating the deficit by producing a balanced budget is only the first step toward the ultimate goal of reducing and eventually eliminating the public debt.

SEC. 9. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING TRUST FUND SURPLUSES.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(2) all recent-year Federal budgets, as well as both fiscal year 1996 budget resolutions reported out by the Committees on the Budget of the House of Representatives and the Senate, have masked the magnitude of annual deficits by counting various trust fund surpluses; and

(2) upon reaching a balance in the Federal budget, the Government should move toward balance without consideration of trust fund surpluses.

SEC. 10. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING BALANCED BUDGET ENFORCEMENT.

It is the sense of Congress that, in order to ensure that a balanced budget is achieved by fiscal year 2002 and that the budget remains in balance thereafter, title XIV of H.R. 2530 establishing strict budget enforcement mechanisms should be enacted. Such language would—

(1) require the Federal Government to reach a balanced Federal budget by fiscal year 2002 and remain in balance thereafter;

(2) establish procedures for developing honest, accurate, and accepted budget estimates;

(3) require that the President propose annual budgets that would achieve a balanced Federal budget by fiscal year 2002 and for each year thereafter, using accurate assumptions;

(4) require the Committees on the Budget of the House of Representatives and the Senate to report budget resolutions that achieve a balanced Federal budget by fiscal year 2002 and for each year thereafter, using accurate assumptions; and

(5) require Congress and the President to take action if the deficit targets in this resolution are not met.

SEC. 11. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING MEDICARE REFORM.

It is the sense of Congress that any legislation reforming medicare should reflect the policies and distribution of savings contained in H.R. 2530. Specifically, that legislation should—

(1) reform policies for medicare risk contracting to expand the choice of private options available to all medicare beneficiaries, including individuals in rural areas;

(2) contain regulatory reforms to facilitate the creation of provider-sponsored networks;

(3) contain reasonable reductions in the growth of payments to providers that do not threaten the availability or quality of care;

(4) require higher income medicare beneficiaries to pay a greater portion of medicare premiums without establishing a new bureaucracy for the collection of premiums;

(5) expand coverage of preventive benefits under medicare;

(6) provide a demonstration project for Medical Savings Accounts for medicare beneficiaries; and

(7) prohibit managed care plans from charging medicare beneficiaries additional premiums beyond the part B premium.

SEC. 12. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING MEDICAID REFORM.

It is the sense of Congress that any legislation changing the medicaid program pursuant to this resolution should—

(1) continue guaranteed coverage for low-income children, pregnant women, the elderly, and the disabled;

(2) continue the guarantee of an adequate benefits package for all medicaid beneficiaries;

(3) provide States with greater flexibility in the delivery of services and administration of the program;

(4) contain a financing mechanism in which the Federal Government fully shares in changes in program costs resulting from changes in caseload;

(5) require States to maintain current levels of financial effort to preserve the current joint Federal-State partnership in meeting the costs of this program;

(6) continue current restrictions on the use of provider taxes and donations and other illusory State financing schemes;

(7) continue Federal minimum standards for nursing homes;

(8) continue Federal rules that prevent wives or husbands from being required to impoverish themselves in order to obtain and keep medicaid benefits for their spouse requiring nursing home care; and

(9) continue coverage of medicaid premiums and cost sharing for low-income seniors.

SEC. 13. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING WELFARE REFORM.

It is the sense of Congress that any legislation reforming welfare programs pursuant to this resolution should—

(1) impose tough work requirements on able-bodied recipients;

(2) provide sufficient resources for job training, child care, and other programs necessary to help welfare recipients make the transition from welfare to work;

(3) require States to maintain levels of financial support sufficient to operate an effective program;

(4) contain effective counter-cyclical mechanisms to assist States facing economic downturns or increases in population;

(5) include provisions holding States accountable for the use of Federal funds and the effectiveness of State programs;

(6) contain strong child support provisions; and

(7) maintain the integrity of the food stamp program as a national safety net.

SEC. 4. RECONCILIATION.

(a) Not later than June 21, 1996, the House committee named in subsection (b) shall report its recommendations to the House.

(b) The House Committee on Ways and Means shall report changes in laws within its jurisdiction sufficient to increase revenues by $40,500,000,000 in fiscal year 1997, by $377,000,000,000 in fiscal years 1997 through 2001, and by $486,600,000,000 in fiscal years 1997 through 2002.

SEC. 5. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND FEDERAL ASSISTANCE.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) domestic violence is the leading cause of physical injury to women; the Department of Justice estimates that over one million violent crimes against women are committed by intimate partners annually;

(2) domestic violence dramatically affects the victim's ability to participate in the workforce; a University of Minnesota survey reported that one-quarter of battered women surveyed had lost a job partly because of being abused and that over half of these women had been harassed by their abuser at work;

(3) domestic violence is often intensified as women seek to gain economic independence through attending school or training programs; batterers have been reported to prevent women from attending these programs or sabotage their efforts at self-improvement;

(4) nationwide surveys of service providers prepared by the Taylor Institute of Chicago, document, for the first time, the interrelationship between domestic violence and welfare by showing that between 50 percent and 80 percent of AFDC recipients are current or past victims of domestic violence;

(5) over half of the women surveyed stayed with their batterers because they lacked the resources to support themselves and their children; the surveys also found that the availability of economic support is a critical factor in poor women's ability to leave abusive situations that threaten them and their children; and

(6) proposals to restructure the welfare programs may impact the availability of the economic support and the safety net necessary to enable poor women to flee abuse without risking homelessness and starvation for their families.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) no welfare reform provision shall be enacted by Congress unless and until Congress considers whether such welfare reform provisions will exacerbate violence against women and their children, further endanger women's lives, make it more difficult for women to escape domestic violence, or further punish women victimized by violence; and

(2) any welfare reform measure enacted by Congress shall require that any welfare-to-work, education, or job placement programs implemented by the States will address the impact of domestic violence on welfare recipients.

SEC. 6. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON IMPACT OF LEGISLATION ON CHILDREN.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that Congress should not adopt or enact any legislation that will increase the number of children who are hungry, homeless, poor, or medically uninsured.

(b) LEGISLATIVE ACCOUNTABILITY FOR IMPACT ON CHILDREN.—In the event legislation enacted to comply with this resolution results in an increase in the number of hungry, homeless, poor, or medically uninsured by the end of fiscal year 1997, Congress shall revisit the provisions of such legislation which caused such increase and shall, as soon as practicable thereafter, adopt legislation which would halt any continuation of such increase.

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 104th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

Vol. 142

WASHINGTON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 15, 1996

No. 68

Senate

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Cast your burden on the Lord and He shall sustain you.—Psalm 55:22.

Gracious Father, we respond to this uplifting promise with gratitude. Each of us has burdens. Some of them are profoundly personal. We carry the burden of our failures. In the quiet we hear You say, "You are forgiven; peace be with you." We also carry the burden of worry over our families and friends. You remind us that You love the people about whom we are concerned and so we turn our anxiety about the needs of people over to You. In our work we are burdened by the unfinished and the unresolved. Help us to do the very best we can each day and leave the results to You. As leaders of our Nation, we are troubled by the drift of our society from Your righteousness and truth. The burden of leadership rests heavily on our shoulders. We hear Your whisper in our souls, "I will never leave you or forsake you."

Dear God, bless the Senators, their families, staffs, and all who are part of the extended Senate family here in the Capitol. Whatever burdens each carries today, we ask You to lift them by Your grace and provide for them out of Your boundless resources. Then help us to lift each other's burdens by being as encouraging as You have been to us.

Today we join with the Nation in honoring and expressing our gratitude for peace officers. Thank You for those gallant officers who have given their lives in the line of duty.

In the name of our Lord. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The able Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, on behalf of the leader, I make the following statement to the Senate.

This morning the Senate will immediately begin consideration of Senate Concurrent Resolution 57, the concurrent budget resolution. There is a 50-hour statutory time limitation on the budget, therefore Senators can expect late sessions this week and rollover votes throughout in order to complete action on the budget this week.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION ON THE BUDGET

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. INHOFE). Under the previous order, the Senate will now proceed to consideration of Senate Concurrent Resolution 57, which the clerk will read.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 57) setting forth the congressional budget for the United States Government for fiscal years 1997, 1998, 1999, 2000, 2001, and 2002.

The Senate proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I send to the desk a list of majority and minority staff members and ask unanimous consent they be granted the privilege of the floor at various times at the option of the manager and the ranking member.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The list is as follows:

MAJORITY STAFF

Brian Benczkowski, Jim Capretta, Amy Call, Lisa Cieplak, Christy Dunn, Beth Felder, Alice Grant, Jim Hearn, Keith Hennessey, William Hoagland.

Carol McGuire, Anne Miller, Mieke Nakabayashi, Denise G. Ramonas, Cheri Reidy, Ricardo Rel, Karen Ricoy, J. Brian Riley, Mike Ruffner.

Melissa Sampson, Andrea Shank, Amy Smith, Austin Smythe, Bob Stevenson, Beth Wallis, Winslow Wheeler (detailee).

MINORITY STAFF

Amy Abraham, Kenneth Colling (fellow), Bill Dauster, Tony Dresden, Jodi Grant, Matt Greenwald, Joan Huffer, Phil Karsting, Jim Klumpner, Soo Jin Kwon.

Daniela Mays, Sue Nelson, Jon Rosenwasser (fellow), Jerry Slominski, Barry Strumpf.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, again in behalf of the majority leader, I ask unanimous consent that the presence of small electronic calculators be permitted on the floor of the Senate during consideration of the 1997 concurrent resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOMENICI. Now, Mr. President, as I understand it, there are 50 hours of debate on this resolution. Unless it is agreed to add additional time, each amendment is given 1 hour for the amendment, 1 hour in opposition to the amendment. Amendments to the amendments have one-half hour, and one-half hour in opposition.

The Budget Act prescribes that opening statements will utilize 4 hours on economics, and that will be the opening of the budget debate. I am not so sure we are going to use all that time, but I would like to engage in a dialog with the ranking member, if he would, at this point.

Senator EXON, I note, and I think you would concur, this is a rather exceptional year in that there are three full budgets that will be offered to the Senate: There is the Republican budget that is pending, encapsulated in the resolution; there is a bipartisan proposal, led by Senators CHAFEE and BREAUX, which is a full substitute for the Republican proposal; and then there is a third proposal, which I assume you or someone on your side will offer, which is the President's budget, which, again, is a full substitute for the Republican plan. Also, obviously, there are many amendments that Members on your side and our side would like to offer, either to the Republican budget resolution or to one or the other of the other full budgets that I have just briefly described.

It had been my hope, and I share this with you to see what your thoughts are, that we could use the 4 hours allowed for economic discussion, 2 on each side, and then proceed with amendments to the Republican budget for the remainder of the day—we ought to get a lot of them in if we can do that—and that we then, late this evening, take an accounting for ourselves and see where we are, and that at a later time in this debate we take the full budgets that are offered as full substitutes to the Domenici mark. So at some point you would offer the President's and, some time thereafter, Senators CHAFEE and BREAUX, or BREAUX and CHAFEE, would offer theirs.

I think we had a very good spirit of cooperation in the committee. I am just hoping that between us we can get our Members to start sending their amendments to us so we will know where we are going. I can say unequivocally—I heard from the leader yesterday and I read a statement this morning—we are going to finish this this week. I see no reason to go into Friday night and Saturday if we can work together to kind of organize, as best we can, our colleagues in their presentations.

I yield at this point for your thoughts or observations, if you would share them with me.

Mr. EXON. I thank my friend, the chairman of the committee, for his remarks and outline. Generally speaking, I do not know that I have any serious reservations. I think the chairman of the committee has basically stated what should be the procedure. I have a caveat to that that I will mention in just a moment. I simply say that I agree that even though we have 25 hours on each side—and while you have not said that, I understand the intent is the 25 hours on your side would be controlled by the majority leader or his designee, which would normally be you, and the same thing would be true on our side with the minority leader and myself as the ranking Democrat on the Budget Committee. Is that the way? Would we follow usual procedures in that regard?

Mr. DOMENICI. Yes.

Mr. EXON. I see no reason why we should not head for, and very likely can, finish this by Friday late, if not sooner. I say to my friend, in the 4 hours set aside for economic discussions, I do not anticipate we would use all of our 2 hours on this side, although no one ever knows what happens for sure in the U.S. Senate.

I simply say, as I listened to the opening remarks from the chairman of the committee, if he felt we would likely only have amendments to the Republican measure today, I had intended at a very early time to offer the President's budget, which we offered very early in the procedure in the committee, as you will remember, and we would not agree in advance to any extensive delay in our desire to offer the President's budget, which very likely would be the first action on this side. And so I would like to advise the leader of that.

Mr. DOMENICI. First of all, let me indicate, the leader has already indicated that I am his designee to manage this bill and allocate the time. From time to time, as you will, I will give that to some other Senator who will manage in my stead.

Mr. EXON. We will follow the same procedure here.

Mr. DOMENICI. Let me tell you one thing I failed to mention by way of trying to reach some accord. It is my commitment and desire, and I hope you will cooperate—I think there is no reason why we should not do this. Senator GRASSLEY has requested and I have agreed that his amendment with reference to defense will be the first amendment offered, and it addresses the pending resolution.

So sometime after our opening remarks and some discussions on the economics, I will clearly ask that he be the first one, and I think you will not have any objection.

Mr. EXON. I think it should be a foregone conclusion that whatever the procedure, that you on that side and myself on this side will make the final determination of what will be the order of filing amendments. Certainly you have every right to recognize Senator GRASSLEY for the first remarks on that side.

What I have indicated is when our time comes, it is very likely that the first action on this side will be the offering of the President's budget as a substitute. I just want to alert you to that.

Mr. DOMENICI. You do not intend to have other amendments that address themselves either to our budget or other things before you offer the full budget?

Mr. EXON. That is my present plan, although we have not locked in anything.

Mr. DOMENICI. I just thought it might be interesting, from the standpoint of understanding, if we got some of the amendments out of the way and we were looking at three full budgets and debating them in a sequence which would permit us to see them all kind of one, two, three. But you have every right to do that. So why do we not proceed.

Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President: Is it correct, under the Budget

Act, that there are now 4 hours equally divided, minus the time we have used, I guess, after the opening statements?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes, that is correct.

Mr. EXON. May I inquire further along those lines. If, after the opening statements by the managers, and we are into the 4-hour period that has just been referenced by the leader of the committee, we jointly agree or should jointly agree to yield back any remaining time—in other words, suppose we have an hour on each side or an hour on that side and half an hour on this side, whatever it is, we can hopefully work to expedite the procedures—

Mr. DOMENICI. Absolutely.

Mr. EXON. And I am sure you would agree.

Mr. DOMENICI. I agree.

Mr. EXON. If we can take that 4 hours and get it down to 1 or 1½, that is our goal.

Mr. DOMENICI. We are going to try to make it less than the 4 hours. We have a few Senators who want to speak on this subject, and they are going to be given that opportunity. And then we will get off that as soon as we can.

I thank Senator EXON for his cooperative spirit this morning. I hope we can do that all the way through the next 3 days.

Mr. President, we begin again today a debate that some might think has not yet ended and others might think never ends. To my friend, the ranking member of the Budget Committee, I know this is the last budget resolution he will manage on the Senate floor. I will have more to say about Senator EXON at the end of these remarks, but he knows the work we are about today and probably for the rest of this week. It is very serious work. It is work that will directly affect our country's future.

In many ways, the work we are about today is a continuation of our efforts of the last year to find a way to balance our Federal budget early in the next century and, in doing that, to look through the budget of the United States and find some areas where we are going to have real trouble down the line if we do not make some reforms and changes now.

In other ways, the work we are about here today builds on the successful efforts last year to reduce spending and put us on a path to a balanced budget. I think the fact has been lost in the heated debates last winter that we did reduce spending on appropriated accounts to the levels assumed in last year's budget resolution.

Largely because of those successes in the appropriated accounts, we are able to continue our goal of reaching balance in 2002 as originally planned. Obviously, our work is to achieve that goal, that goal which would have been made easier had the President signed the Balanced Budget Act of 1995 instead of vetoing it last December. But because the President vetoed that legislation, which we worked so hard to enact last year, we find ourselves back here today. A little discouraged perhaps, but not daunted at all in our effort and our endeavor, because this issue is not going to go away and the American public demands that we balance spending and revenues at the earliest possible time.

While some things will surely seem not to have changed from last year as the debate progresses, in other ways things will have changed significantly since 1 year ago.

First, one big change is that the President, after nine attempts, has now, at least on paper, with some major gimmicks, figured out a way to present what he claims to be a balanced budget plan. We will have a lot more to say about the President's so-called balanced budget plan, and I sincerely look forward to debating it.

But let me say at the outset, however, that I have known smoke-and-mirrors budgets and I have known real budget plans, and I do not hesitate to award the President, the President's so-called balanced budget plan this year with an Oscar for the best acting in fiction.

Second, another big change this year, we will have a third budget plan to debate. I think that is exciting. The bipartisan budget plan to be offered by Senators CHAFEE and BREAU is a real budget plan. Again, I look forward to debating that plan.

Unlike the President's, which is a hoax of a budget, I want to compliment the group of Senators who have worked hard this last year to put together a real budget, certainly not a smoke-and-mirrors budget like the President's plan. Unfortunately, the bipartisan plan does not achieve balance in 2002, and I have some concerns about elements of that plan that we will debate later. But this is a welcome change from a year ago when Republicans stood here on the floor alone and offered the only real balanced plan for the American people, the only one to be on the floor of the Senate in almost four decades.

Mr. President, the Senate-reported budget resolution, the one before us today, Senate Concurrent Resolution 57, offers America hope. It is real—no smoke and mirrors. It recognizes the need to set priorities, it makes tough decisions, or at least says to those who will follow after it with legislation that they are compelled to make some tough decisions, and it is realistic. It can be done. It needs to be done. This is a budget designed to help working American families, to make them more secure, secure in their homes, in their communities, and in their jobs.

It offers them a more efficient Government, one dedicated to economic growth and security, support for our children and lower taxes on American families.

The resolution before us today recognizes the very simple notion that our Government cannot simply go on spending our children's money. It is good medicine for our Nation and it is designed to prevent America's children from having to swallow a poison pill of mounting Federal debt. It is designed to prevent our Medicare system from going bankrupt in just 5 years. It is designed to prevent a future of a crushing tax burden on those just starting out in life.

The resolution before us, Mr. President, will strengthen America, it will continue to build on our successes of last year, and change the way our Government works, to make it more efficient, more responsive, and less expensive.

Most importantly, it is a budget plan that will ensure a better future for our children and our Nation. I said that last year; I believed it then; I continue to believe it now. True leadership cannot simply postpone this difficult work because it is an election year. The problem will not go away simply because there is an election this fall.

The second balanced budget plan the Republicans have proposed in this Congress is designed to return our Nation to fiscal reality and preserve America as the land of opportunity, not only for now but for future generations. In short, it reflects our commitment to fiscal responsibility, generating economic growth, creating family wage jobs and protecting the American dream for all our citizens young and old.

This budget will restore America's fiscal equilibrium. It will balance the budget by the year 2002 without touching Social Security, by ratcheting down the deficit by slowing the growth of Government spending. But let me emphasize, Government spending will continue to grow over the next 6 years. It is a budget which will reverse the tide of 50 years of power that flowed from the rest of the country to Washington.

We want to provide more freedom and opportunity to people at the local level so they might have more control over the decisions on the programs that affect their lives, affect their children, and affect their communities.

Key changes are proposed to shrink the Federal bureaucracy to terminate duplication in Government, to consolidate programs to improve efficiency, and prioritize the limited resources we have. But at the same time, we continue to support programs which provide needed services to our citizens. We have been careful to preserve a safety net for those truly in need.

We support programs aimed at keeping America safe, safe in their homes, their schools, and their neighborhoods, by funding needed crime programs and funding those parts of the U.S. Government that are engaged day by day in fighting crime across America, such as the FBI, the DEA, Border Patrol and the like.

The budget before us today provides $6.5 billion for environmental protection, including increases of nearly $1 billion in the safe drinking, Superfund and the environmental enforcement programs of EPA. So in 1997 it cannot be said that this budget cuts environmental spending. It does not. It increases environmental spending.

This budget moves toward protecting America's senior citizens. It makes the Medicare trust fund solvent for 10 years, 1 decade. I regret that I cannot stand here and say to the senior citizens of the United States, we are going to make the trust fund solvent for 50 years. The truth of the matter is, it is difficult to make it solvent for 10. And we must at least do that.

I mention that the President's stated goal in his budget is solvency of the trust fund through 2006, 10 years, the same goal as we have in this budget resolution. The way we have solved it—that is, the budget before us and the President's—is very different. We will have more to say about this issue, a lot more during the debate.

But the Congressional Budget Office tells us very simply—question: How much must we save in the trust fund to keep it solvent for 10 years? Their answer is: You need $123 billion of savings in the trust funded portion of Medicare to meet the President's goal of 10 years. That is what we have done. We have said, Medicare will be changed, reformed, but there for every senior that wants it just like it is, but the providers in that system, and through changing the program to offer options, we must save $123 billion.

The President's budget, I regret to say, does not meet his goal. He only extends the life of the trust fund for 1 additional year. This is the President's first big gimmick, an unbelievable cruel hoax on senior citizens, particularly those who depend upon home health care as part of this system.

We protect, preserve and keep Medicare solvent for one decade. For Medicare part B—all should know that when you speak of Medicare, there are two pieces. One is a trust fund. Every working American puts money in that trust fund. That is essentially the part that is an encapsulated trust fund for the protection of senior citizens and their health programs related to hospitalization and long-term home health care. That is the part that is going bankrupt, and we will be there in 5 years unless we fix it. We have been told, to fix that part you must reform it to save $123 billion.

The other part, frequently called part B, is an insurance program for the rest of health care that is not provided in the trust fund. This program is funded by general tax dollars, and there is no trust fund. Seniors pay a portion of the insurance premium, and essentially it is an insurance policy.

I want to make it absolutely clear, for part B we have taken the President's proposed savings, $44 billion—we have heard all we can take about Republicans and Medicare—and this year it is clear that we are responding with 44 billion dollar's worth of savings in part B, exactly the same number as the President. But we are making the trust fund solvent in a real way with no gimmicks and absolute integrity.

In our budget, so that everyone will understand the dimension of this issue, we provide $1.46 trillion of Medicare spending over the next 6 years—$1.46 trillion. We propose to increase on each Medicare beneficiary the amount of money spent from $5,300 per person today to $7,000 per person in 2002. How can that be called a cut? You do the arithmetic and it is a huge increase. If we were to provide these kinds of increases anywhere else in any budget it would be impossible to sustain it. In the case of seniors, we have a commitment. We want to save the fund and maximize their coverage.

Our budget throws the Medicare trust fund a life preserver. The President's budget throws Medicare overboard. We will have more to say about how the President gets to his statement of 10 years of solvency in part A of the trust fund as we move along.

Medicaid: Now, so everybody will understand, Medicare is for seniors; Medicaid is a program of the U.S. Government, or I should say, a composite of 23 programs that are put together to help poor people by giving them health care, by paying their health care bills with certain limitations and certain exceptions. This budget assumes we will spend $731 billion on Medicaid over the next 6 years. This budget assumes the implementation of the Medicaid reform plan as recommended unanimously by a bipartisan group of Governors—that is, 48 Governors. We have added back $54 billion in Medicaid spending compared with last year's resolution. Mr. President, that is $36 billion of Medicaid spending, compared with the Balanced Budget Act vetoed by the President. We are anxious to get this Medicaid reform done. With the support of Democrat and Republican Governors it can be done. The amount proposed for savings is truly achievable.

Medicaid spending, Mr. President, will increase under this budget 46 percent over the next 6 years. How can that be called a cut? Medicaid spending in this budget will increase by 46 percent over the next 6 years. This budget recognizes the need to overhaul America's deteriorated welfare system. Funding levels in this resolution allow Congress to send power back to the States as requested by the National Governors' Association, by converting a failed AFDC Program, Aid for Dependent Children Program, sometimes called the welfare program, into a block grant with certain guarantees.

The resolution before the Senate assumes reforms in the food stamp and child nutrition programs to slow the growth rate of spending in those programs but maintains the entitlement to preserve a nutrition safety net for children. It assumes funding targets on the severely disabled in Supplemental Security Income Program.

This budget assumes funding from reforms to child enforcement programs, to make deadbeat dads support their children instead of making the Government, the taxpayer, hard-working families trying to make a living, instead of asking them to do the supporting with tax dollars. This assumes we will change the law, truly make deadbeat dads pay their legally responsible child care and support.

This resolution assumes savings from restricting immigrants the access to Government assistance programs to ensure that sponsors live up to their promise not to allow immigrants to become a public charge. Actually, very few Americans, and until lately, very few Senators, knew that under our generous policy of family unification, for the last 15 years or so, American citizens have been busy bringing their relatives, most of them elderly mothers, fathers and grandparents, to our country, under our policy of unification, sign a certificate of support, for we do not invite the unification so that the taxpayers can pay for the support of these people that are brought to America to join in our society and be part of their family.

It is incredible how that approach has degenerated into a program where billions of American tax dollars are going to legal immigrants who are brought here purposefully to avoid the certificate of support and become wards of the Government. It is American history from our inception. We have held a policy that we are not bringing aliens to America to become wards of the public. That has fallen apart. We put it back together in our assumptions here. Many of the assumptions were realized in the votes on the immigration bill, Mr. President, as we voted numerous times last week and the week before.

Finally, this budget provides $122 billion in tax relief for American families through a $500 per child family tax credit. This will aid 52 million American children in 28 million families. I want to repeat, in this budget resolution, the resolution itself says we will reduce the amount of tax we take into the Treasury by $122 billion because we are going to give 28 million American families, 52 million American children, a chance to keep more of their money and spend it on their needs. If ever the Tax Code of America went amiss and became antifamily, it was when we lost our way and let the deduction for a dependent child wither away from where it was in my day to where it is today. What can be deducted as an expense of rearing a child is a mere shadow of what it was in years past. Yet, we wonder why there is so much strain and stress in families. We will not even be returning it to its more wholesome day of profamily taxes, but we will make a giant step when we say every parent with children under 18 will get a tax deduction of $500. Their taxes will be reduced by $500 for each child. What is wrong with that?

For those who want to stand on the floor of the Senate and talk about this budget cutting something so we can pay for tax cuts, let me just say I am very, very proud that we have made room in this budget for this $500 child tax credit. For those who accuse us, let them stand up and say they do not want to give the $500 tax credit. Under our plan, I repeat, a family with two children under age 18 would receive $1,000 of permanent tax relief.

In summary, on the $122 billion tax proposal in this resolution, we have reduced Government spending from what it would be by $712 billion. In doing that, we feel very positive about being able to say $122 billion is given back to the people rather than spent on more Government.

In closing, let me say that I hope we can move, during the next 2½ days, to enact this resolution, and then move toward implementing it in the months of June and July. I believe this can be done. But if, for some reason, we fail again to get the job done, I can only say that I think the tide is turning, and we will be back again and, clearly, sooner rather than later, we will do what is right.

Finally, I wish it were possible to have my friend and ranking member, Senator EXON, join me in support of this last budget resolution and his last budget resolution on the floor of the Senate. That is not possible. But he will be convinced, maybe, on its merits, and as we move through this debate, I just want to say that he has been a very good ranking member and has spoken his party's case extremely well. I believe it is fair to say that the two of us have done that, with little rancor and, in my case, with great respect and admiration, regardless of how it turns out in terms of where Senator EXON ends up 2½ days from now. I know that he feels very strongly about the need to find a balance in Federal spending. He has been a long-time supporter of the constitutional amendment for a balanced budget. He supported the line-item veto legislation that was enacted recently. He supported the unfunded mandates legislation voted out of our Budget Committee earlier this year.

Obviously, in the years to come, if it is my privilege to be here on the floor, I will miss him and I wish him well. We will have more to say about that soon.

At this time, I yield the floor.

Mr. EXON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CAMPBELL). The Chair recognizes the ranking minority member, the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. EXON].

Mr. EXON. I thank the Chair. I thank my friend and colleague from New Mexico for his most kind remarks. I appreciate them more than he knows.

When I came here 18 years ago, I sought a seat on the Budget Committee and was granted one. I have served on the Budget Committee the entire time I have been here. One of the stalwarts on that committee on the other side of the aisle, whom I got to know initially very well that first year on the Budget Committee, was PETE DOMENICI. What he has just said means a great deal, and I thank Senator DOMENICI for that. I have the highest respect for his ability and his integrity, and I appreciate what he said about my support.

I feel the same way about the Senator from New Mexico. We do not always agree, and we cannot in this body. Sometimes it may be difficult for people who do not understand the U.S. Senate to recognize and realize that we can disagree on policy, we can disagree on numbers, and we can speak very forcefully about that. That is the process. But as far as personal esteem is concerned, there is no one in the U.S. Senate whom I hold in more high personal esteem than I do my chairman, the Republican Member, and the excellent floor manager of the measure before us.

So in spite of what is said after that, I certainly want Senator DOMENICI to know, as he already knows, that we are good friends, who have high regard for each other personally. And in the difficult tasks that face the Nation, here is where we come to some disagreement as to how to reach the proper end that we both are seeking.

As Senator DOMENICI has said, Mr. President, this is the last budget resolution that I shall manage on the floor of the U.S. Senate. I remember well my first budget resolution 18 years ago. It was in the spring of 1979, and our dear and late colleague, Senator Ed Muskie of Maine, was the chairman of the Budget Committee, and the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma, Henry Bellmon, was the ranking minority member. The projected deficit for fiscal year 1980 was less than $20 billion. It does not seem possible, but that is what it was. I had high hopes, as a freshman Senator, that we would see the end of deficit spending. I said so in my first speech. But those hopes were dashed, Mr. President, during the Reagan-Bush years when deficits were piled upon deficits. President Reagan's Office of Management and Budget Director, David Stockman—in case he has been forgotten—later described that period of time under Reagan-Bush as "fiscal carnage." The fiscal carnage that took place at that time is what we are attempting to deal with here today, as we were last year. Four years ago, President Clinton began the arduous task of drawing a narrowing circle on the deficit, and he succeeded beyond all expectations, with no help, Mr. President, from those on that side of the aisle.

I will simply cite the difficulties that we are in and how we are going to get out of them, and the significant contribution that President Clinton has made to the possibility of balancing the budget by the year 2002.

The graph that I have behind me here is entitled "Budget Deficits, CBO Estimates." These are Congressional Budget Office estimates of where they were going. You will see the year 1980 to the year 2000 across the bottom of the chart, and the billions of dollars in deficits on the left side. If you will notice, halfway up the chart, before the dotted lines start, is where President Bill Clinton came into office. At that time, you will notice that the annual deficits were about $300 billion a year. I would like to make a point here that I think all too many Americans do not fully appreciate or grasp. They hear "deficits," they hear "national debt," and all too often I think the difference between the two becomes blurred. So, once again, for the RECORD, let me state that the deficits we talk about are the annual shortfalls where we spend in Government more than we take in. The annual deficits were running wild.

I just stated in my opening remarks that when I was here in my first year, we were facing an annual deficit of $20 billion. When Bill Clinton became President of the United States, we were facing annual deficits not of $20 billion but of $300 billion.

I hear attacks again and again that are not factual, indicating that the President of the United States is not sincere, that he is trying to use smoke and mirrors. The smoke and mirrors in this chart shows what has happened. This bottom line is that President Bill Clinton—without help from or even one vote on that side of the aisle in the U.S. Senate or over in the House of Representatives—has driven that $300 billion deficit down. That is the annual deficit as opposed to the trillion-dollar, multitricillion-dollar debt of the United States of America. That is something that I think people overlook.

At the end of each year when the deficit is $20 billion, as it was when I came here, or up to $300 billion when Bill Clinton came here as President of the United States, those deficits at the end of each and every year are piled upon, and we start all over at the end of each year. Those deficits magically go away, I guess. What we do is pile them onto the national debt, which has risen since I came here—before the Reagan-Bush years from under $1 trillion; today, to over $5 trillion—and are going up even under the projections of the Republicans to at least $6 trillion, before we balance the budget, hopefully by the year 2002.

The point I want to make again, Mr. President, is that when Bill Clinton became President of the United States we were running deficits of $300 billion. Notice the lower line where they have come down now to where the Congressional Budget Office projects they will be under $150 billion next year. Bill Clinton, therefore, is not even given credit by those on that side of the aisle for more than cutting in half the annual deficits of the United States of America. That is a remarkable achievement. But you do not hear much about it from that side of the aisle.

The lower part of this President's budget takes the budget down to balance by the year 2002 as opposed to what the Congressional Budget Office projections said they would be on that up line before Bill Clinton—BBC, Before Bill Clinton. I submit for the RECORD that I do not think anyone can refute it, that unless we had followed the fiscal responsibility of Bill Clinton when he became President of the United States that has more than cut the annual deficits in half, we would not be standing here today pretending, or hoping, that we could balance the budget by the year 2002 because we would have been way up here on the upper part of this chart. And had we continued to follow the policies that those on the other side of the aisle, evidently by their votes, wanted to follow we would not be standing here today talking about reaching balance in 2002.

Before Bill Clinton, BBC, we were in deep trouble, and we are still in very deep trouble. But unless Bill Clinton had taken a stand and unless the Democrats, by a tie, or one vote, had the courage to stand up and say, "We have to stop it," we would not be in a position today, even under the Republican proposal to balance the budget by the year 2002. So let us give Bill Clinton at least some credit.

We thought, Mr. President, that we had a chance last year to build on the President's success. Under his leadership, we would have reduced our Federal deficit to use some other figure by a projected $846 billion through fiscal year 1998. We had a rare opportunity to balance the budget last year, but that opportunity was squandered by the radical right. Here we are yet with another year and with yet another Republican budget that does not fairly do what this Senator and most on this side of the aisle and most of the American people want to do: balance the budget in a fair and equitable manner.

During the opening remarks by my friend and colleague from New Mexico, and I think I can quote the manager of the bill correctly, he said the President claims that he will balance the budget. But he indicated in his remarks that it was fictional. Let me say, Mr. President, that all during that debate that followed the budget last year and the failure of the Republicans even to meet with the President to work out a proposition, it is clear to see where the responsibility lies.

Despite the claims, despite the statements, June O'Neill, the Republican-appointed head of the Congressional Budget Office, testified in front of the Budget Committee, and I quote June O'Neill: "The President's budget proposals and policies, as estimated by the Congressional Budget Office, would balance the budget by the year 2002."

Let me repeat that again. Contrary to what you have heard, contrary to what you are going to hear, the Republican-appointed head of the Congressional Budget Office says the President's budget policies will balance the budget by the year 2002.

Mr. President, we also heard a great deal so far today—and I am sure that we will hear more about it in the future—that the President of the United States is not being honest with regard to the Medicare trust fund. Mr. President, I cite a letter, and hereby request it be printed in the RECORD of May 9, 1996, from June O'Neill, the Republican-appointed head of the Congressional Budget Office, to me, the Honorable JAMES EXON, ranking member, Committee on the Budget:

DEAR SENATOR: At your request, the Congressional Budget Office has examined the effects of the administration's budgetary proposals on the hospital insurance trust fund. Under current law, the hospital insurance trust fund is projected to become insolvent by the year 2001. CBO estimates that the administration's proposal would postpone this date to the year 2005.

Enough is enough is enough. I do not think we accomplish a great deal by plotting against other people's motives when the leader of the CBO has certified that the President is being honest and that the President and his administration are being straightforward.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the letter I just referenced be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. EXON. Here we are, Mr. President, with yet another Republican budget. But after 18 months of extremism and demagoguery, after two shutdowns and a threat of a dozen more, I must say that I expected something better. True—and I congratulate and thank my friend from New Mexico—true, there is some degree of dulling the knife's edge from last year's disastrous Republican budget proposal that was not appreciated by the vast majority of the people of the United States once they understood it.

But I ask, is this latest Republican budget kinder? Is it a gentler budget than the Republicans had promised the American people? I think not. Yes, it is somewhat better, I would say, than last year. Primarily that is possible because the Congressional Budget Office in the estimating of what is going to happen in the future has come up with a healthier economic growth than they had previously. I thank Senator DOMENICI and the Republicans for wisely using that to alleviate some of the hit that many Americans not as fortunate as the rest of us would have taken.

We hear time and time again about how the Republicans are going to spend more money on these programs than in the past. You have heard already and you will hear more about the fact that the Republicans are spending more money than in the past, especially with regard to Medicare programs. Yet the facts are that the additional money the Republicans are saying they are going to spend, therefore saying, piously, that it is not a cut, even though the rate of increase that the Republicans are proposing for the average Medicare recipient is less than the projected increased costs of health care for the public at large will not be sufficient for the seniors that need Medicare. So another way of saying it, oh, yes, they are providing more money but they are not providing the money that seniors need for Medicare, if you look at the projections of what the increased costs will be for the public at large.

One need only go in this area to the materials issued on May 8 by the House Budget Committee and the joint House-Senate press conference that followed. You will see the same venomous policy and skewed priorities that were proposed in last year's budget included in this new Republican budget, although I hasten to add it is an improvement over last year.

The direct student loan program would be eliminated. The Goals 2000 Program would be terminated. That is a key educational function. The earned income tax credit would be slashed by $17 billion, $7 billion above what the bipartisan Governors found was acceptable.

So that there will be no misunderstanding, the earned income tax credit was first proposed, I believe, by President Ford, and the earned income tax credit is designed for the very lowest of the low-paid people of the United States of America. It is designed to get them out of poverty by giving them an earned income tax credit. It was a Ford-Republican proposal that we Democrats in a bipartisan fashion recognized was good, and we have taken up the mantle. They, the other side of the aisle, are devastating that earned income tax credit that goes right to the heart and throat of many people living near that economic edge.

The programs that they advocate also eliminate the Department of Commerce, and Energy would be either eliminated or deep sixed to the place where they could not function. Even the slightly better off Senate Republican budget cuts $65 billion more in discretionary spending than the President's plan, and discretionary spending is something that we all agree now is a major concern for the future welfare of America. I suppose this warms the cold hearts of Speaker GINGRICH and Mr. ARMEY and the Republican freshman class over on the other side of the Hill, but it is of little consolation to the American people who had expected moderation and imagination and teamwork.

I say to my good friend, the distinguished chairman of the Budget Committee, I compliment his leadership on that side of the aisle in many areas, and I listened with great interest and had a tendency to stand up and applaud when Senator DOMENICI was talking about the need to make changes in the immigration policy. I happen to agree that we have gone way too far and allowed way too many people into the United States of America. Not all of the immigrants but far too many are coming in here to take advantage of our safety net that is already overcrowded, and we are not doing a very good job of maintaining it. We cannot have immigrants coming into this country primarily to take advantage of our safety net.

I hope and think my friend from New Mexico appreciates the fact that during the recent debate on this measure, this particular Senator voted almost without exception with the distinguished Senator from Wyoming [Mr. SIMPSON], the leader of the effort. I think we will find that we did not do everything we wanted to do, but I think we made some good strides under the excellent leadership primarily of Senator SIMPSON and, of course, on our side Senator KENNEDY. Immigration is still a major problem and causes us great difficulty when we try to come up with what is the right thing to do.

Once again, I compliment Senator DOMENICI for his leadership in this area and in many others. Yet we are faced with those in our party and he on his side in his party among many who feel that some kind of compromise is something bad.

Compromise is the only way we have to bring 100 dedicated, strong-willed people into some kind of coalition so that we can get things done.

I must say that I look at this budget resolution, Mr. President, that this budget resolution, while some improvement over the last, still fails in many ways. Most of all, this budget fails the American people. I do not think putting frosting over a bad cake makes it any better. It still divides our great country when we should be striving to unite it. It still casts blight when we should be providing shade and comfort for the elderly, the disabled and especially our children. It still extracts the most from those who have the least when we should be asking for a fair and shared sacrifice. This is where President Clinton's budget succeeds. That is why I will be offering to use the Clinton budget, which balances the budget by the year 2002 as certified by the Republican appointee to the Congressional Budget Office.

This is where the Republican budget, in my view, fails the test of fairness. The Republican budget promises many things. As far as I can see, the Republican budget may achieve balance. I agree that it would achieve balance, as does the President's budget, in the year that they claim it will. But at what cost to the American people under the Republican budget? What sacrifices, many of them unfair in the view of this Senator, are we going to make? As far as the rest of the loud promises are concerned, they are gusty winds of propaganda. This Republican budget delivers least when it promises to do most.

The Republican majority would like Americans to believe that they are saving Medicare for future generations. "Preserve and protect," was their poster-tested public relations slogan. But when $167 billion—I repeat, Mr. President, when $167 billion is lopped off the projected spending for Medicare over the next 6 years, $50 billion more than in the President's budget, I am not so sure it will be the same first-class health care system that exists today. It is this first-class system—and it is a first-class system—more than just a trust fund that we are trying to protect and preserve.

Despite the attacks from the other side, I cite back once again to the letter that I received from June O'Neill, the Republican-appointed CBO chief, that the President is right in his projections.

The Republican budget would reduce Medicare spending growth per beneficiary far below—far below the projected private sector growth rate. I mentioned this earlier. It is right to say we are increasing the spending, but if we are increasing the spending for Medicare less than the cost of health care delivery in the private sector, then that is not an increase.

I am very fearful that what the Republicans are doing here will, without question, diminish the quality and the access to health care for millions of middle-class Americans. Doctors and hospitals will be able to charge seniors for the entire balance of the charges above the Medicare payment. Hear this again. Under the proposal, the Republican proposal that they claim is fair and reasonable, doctors and hospitals would be able to charge seniors for the entire balance of the charges above the Medicare payment. The danger here, and Americans should understand it, and they will not have the wool pulled over their eyes—is the Republican majority may assert—

Mr. DOMENICI. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. EXON. I will yield at conclusion of my remarks.

The Republican majority may assert that premiums are not going up, but they cannot make the same claim about seniors' out-of-pocket expenses to pay their medical bills. The $123 billion reduction in the growth of the Medicare hospital insurance spending will particularly devastate rural and urban hospitals. The Republicans assert that it is necessary to preserve the solvency of the trust fund through the year 2006. Not true, Mr. President. President Clinton's budget proposal extends the life of the trust fund without such deep reductions as the Republicans are proposing. The Republican-appointed CBO Director has certified, and I say this again, that the administration's proposal would extend the life of the Medicare hospital insurance trust fund until the year 2005.

What about Medicaid? What about Medicaid reform? Reform was the Republican rallying cry, but instead of attempting to reform Medicaid in a manner that would be acceptable to mainstream America, the Republican majority paddled up one of their right-wing tributaries and came out with something new. I believe you would take the whole Nation by surprise if you told them that the Republican Medicaid reform might mean that middle-class working American families might have to pay thousands of dollars out of their own pockets for nursing home care for their loved ones, or that millions of low-income children might have their health care jeopardized, or that enforcement of nursing home standards might not be as vigilant as it is today.

In other words, "reform" means "conform," to their way of thinking, even if it means taking out a second mortgage on your home to pay for nursing home care for a sick or elderly parent. With a $72 billion reduction in Medicaid from the projected spending combined with a block grant approach, that may well be the scenario.

In closing, I want to talk for a moment about tax breaks. My colleagues know that I oppose all tax breaks until we get the deficit under control. But, of course, that is not going to prevail. This is just one conservative Senator's opinion, that we should not be talking about tax breaks until we get the budget finally and completely under control. But that is not the way it is going to be, because this is a political year. It is not easy to say "no" to tax cuts. It is a painful, unpopular vote. But that is what we should be doing, in the opinion of this conservative Democratic Senator.

This year the Senate Republicans claim a net tax cut of $122 billion. This figure is going to be talked about a great deal during this debate. But let me repeat that. This year the Senate Republicans claim a net tax cut of $122 billion. But no one should be fooled into believing that the Republicans intend to limit their tax breaks merely to that. The gross cuts will be much larger. The House Budget Committee and its chairman boast that this budget will provide at least $180 billion in permanent new tax relief.

There is something amiss here. The Republicans are certifying and claiming that they have only $122 billion in tax cuts in the Senate proposal and yet those who consulted with the Republicans in the Senate, their counterparts over in the House of Representatives, claim that the same numbers will add up to $180 billion in tax cuts, and have said so publicly. There is something wrong. Their budget also provides for a list of tax cuts that could include nearly every item included in last year's totally failed budget that was rejected by the President and rejected by the American people. Just so no one has forgotten, the tax cuts in that bill would have gone primarily to the wealthiest Americans. So much for the little guy in a Republican proposed budget.

I provide this side-by-side comparison for a good reason. I ask my colleagues to remember what happened last year. The Senate Republican budget had $170 billion in tax breaks and the House Republican budget lavished even more at $347 billion in tax breaks, largely for the wealthy. In the end, the conferees agreed to $245 billion in tax breaks. So experience tells us to be wary of Republican promises of how much or how little tax breaks will be, and who in the end will benefit from them.

The Republican budget also does not call upon special interests, who assume few if any of the burdens of balancing our budget. While President Clinton has proposed that $40 billion—$40 billion be raised from corporate reform and loophole closing, the Republican budget lists no savings from these categories.

When I mentioned that President Clinton has proposed $40 billion be raised from corporate tax giveaways and reforms and loophole closings, I only say, referring back to the chart I have in back of me that I referenced earlier, the President, Bill Clinton, knows what he is doing with regard to being a fiscal leader.

Having said that, I must admit that I would not have stood on the floor of the U.S. Senate and said that a year ago in January when the President sent his group down here to explain to us on the Budget Committee his budget for last year. At the time, I said it was a bad budget, I did not support it, I would not support it. But through the influence of Senators like myself and others, we have helped Bill Clinton make the firm decisions that he made to accomplish the goal of reducing the annual deficit from $300 billion when he took office down to $150 billion.

The President is now on the right course. I did not salute him when he came up with a budget last year that I did not think made any sense. I salute him for what he has done now. He is on the right course. The figures prove that he is on the right course. Let us get behind the President and support him.

Chairman DOMENICI made it clear, however, that the tax increases can be used by and maybe increased by the Finance Committee to offset additional tax breaks. If the past is any guide, the Republicans will soon be proposing to raid the pension funds for working families to pay for tax breaks that will primarily benefit those earning over $100,000 a year.

I do not believe, Mr. President, that my friend and colleague, Senator DOMENICI, wants that. But he has to deal with some people on the other side of the Hill who plainly want that, and the Republicans in the Senate need and have to have the cooperation and the support for their Republican counterparts on the other side of the Hill.

I simply say that there is an alternative. There is an alternative to this rehashed and repackaged Republican budget. It is the President's budget. In my 18 years in the Senate, this is the first Presidential budget of either a Republican President or a Democratic President that this Senator has supported, and I support it in the form that is submitted. Not that I agree with all of it, and I hope that if we were using the President's mark, the President's budget, we would adopt some changes. But from the standpoint of starting and setting up something to amend, we would be far better off to work from the President's budget with some flaws than the Republican proposal with many, many, many more flaws.

The President's budget reflects his values and the priorities. It makes difficult choices, but it makes them fairly. It balances fiscal responsibility with caring and compassion for our seniors, the young and the neediest among us.

At the appropriate time—sometime today—I will offer the President's budget as a substitute for the Republican budget that is presently before us. There is a clear distinction between these two budgets, a distinction that is not lost on the American people. We should have the opportunity to debate and vote on these two distinct visions for the future of our Nation, and we will.

Mr. President, let me conclude by saying to the chairman of the Budget Committee, once again, that I know he had a very difficult time putting this budget resolution together, and I suspect he would be the first to admit that there are some things in here that he is not enthusiastic about. But, once again, the art of being a leader in the U.S. Senate, regardless of which side of the aisle you are on, has to take into consideration what you can do, what you can accomplish, building a coalition. Certainly, in this case, the Senator from New Mexico has built a coalition of what most of the Republicans would like to see.

I join with my chairman and thank him for mentioning the fact that Senator BREAUX and Senator CHAFEE, and several of our comrades on both sides of the aisle, have come up with a budget that is worthy of some consideration. Likewise, there are some parts of that budget that I do not agree with, but at least it is something that we should take a hard look at and possibly, in the end, incorporate some of those concepts and those ideas of those thoughtful Senators, both Democrats and Republicans, who are trying, in my opinion, to be helpful.

I had hoped one day in my Senate career I would be able to say to my good friend, for whom I have said before I have high respect and admiration, that I support his budget. Unfortunately, that day has not come. But I really enjoy working with him, and I hope that the debate that follows will be as factual as possible, will be as short as possible, and, once again, I tell him that I will try in every way I can to cooperate with him, as I did in the committee, not to have this go on and on and on.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

EXHIBIT 1

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, May 9, 1996.

Hon. J. JAMES EXON,
Ranking Minority Member, Committee on the Budget, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR: At your request, the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) has examined the effects of the Administration's budgetary proposals on the Hospital Insurance (HI) trust fund. Under current law, the HI trust fund is projected to become insolvent in 2001. CBO estimates that the Administration's proposals would postpone this date to 2005.

Sincerely,

JUNE E. O'NEILL,
Director.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI], is recognized.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, shortly, I am going to yield as much time to Senator MACK as he desires. Senator SPENCER ABRAHAM will come to the floor probably during Senator MACK's discussion. On the record, I want to state that I am going to designate Senator ABRAHAM in my stead to control the time on this side, at least until noon or 12:30.

Mr. President, I want to make two very brief comments with reference to the statements of the distinguished Senator from Nebraska. First, if the Senator is suggesting that Republicans are for lower taxes, we are going to plead guilty. We are for lower taxes. If the Senator suggests that we are going to cut taxes for families with children, we plead guilty. We are going to do that.

Second, the President of the United States entered into his office as President at a point in time when a number of things were happening and, as a matter of fact, he was very, very fortunate, as was the country, that these events occurred. I personally believe the President's budget and the President's conduct had nothing whatsoever to do with them. They were in play.

Let me just put up one little chart. You see, Senator EXON says that this budget deficit CBO estimates—let me see if I can meander over there a little bit.

Does the Senator mind if I use his chart?

Mr. EXON. No. The Senator is welcome to.

Mr. DOMENICI. The Senator would make a point that at this point in history the budget starts turning down, and it would have gone up; and, therefore, President Bill Clinton has done a masterful job of controlling the expenditures of our country and being fiscally responsible.

Let us just look. This is not me. This says the Congressional Budget Office. It is not the Senator from New Mexico. We asked them, what did this? How did this happen? Lo and behold, here is what they said: Taxes were raised, and that made up 38.3 percent of getting this down.

So the American people right off should know, yes, the Democrats got the deficit down. And 38 percent was because they increased taxes. Most interesting, 50 percent—50 percent—of this reduction, from this line to this line, had nothing whatsoever to do with any action by anyone. They are merely reestimates of the expenditure of Government to adjust them to the reality instead of the estimate, such things as the savings and loan fund to pay for the bailout. We overestimated the amount of money, and it was sitting there in the budget, a huge amount of money. I cannot believe that anybody is going to claim that the President did that or the Democrats, by voting for a tax-loaded budget-deficit package, did that. That is a huge amount of money.

Others are estimates in the expenditure costs of programs. The estimated increases did not come out as high as the budget projected. I must say, in all deference, it did not matter who was elected President. That 50 percent occurred from no action on the part of the executive branch or the Congress. So that is 50 percent; plus 38 percent of the reduction in the deficit.

Over here we had economic changes amounting to $13 billion. We will just put that up there. If they want to argue about that $13 billion—that the President deserves credit for that—then we can talk about that. But the thing that we must be worried about—that we must be worried about—is that the Congressional Budget Office told us that through 1995 the total cuts in spending were $1 billion, the total cuts in spending were $1 billion.

Frankly, in all deference and with all of the gentleness that I can muster, this is not a deficit-reduction package that is calculated to permanently reduce the size of Government, which everyone says is the cause of the deficit. Nobody says we are being taxed too low—strike that. Somebody does. Most people do not think we have to raise taxes and spend more. They think we should cut the expenditures of Government to get to fiscal equilibrium. This is the history of those lines.

Having said that, I want to just make one last point. Senior citizens, senior citizens, the President of the United States has pulled off in his budget a huge hoax—a huge hoax—for which, because of other things in his budget, as I said in my opening remarks, he truly deserves the Academy Award for fiction on his budget.

Let me just tell you about Medicare. Medicare in the entrusted fund, the trust fund, Mr. President, has been assuring and paying seniors for long-term—long-term—home health care. Let me repeat, in the trust fund, seniors, you have been getting your long-term home health care paid for by this guaranteed fund.

Second point. It is the fastest growing item in Medicare. Fact—the President chooses to take that program out of the trust fund. That program is $55 billion, home health care for seniors.

What a hoax. You take out something you are providing them, and say,

"We're saving the trust fund." Now the question is, how does he pay for it, the home health care for the seniors? Interesting. He does not pay for it. He puts it right on the backs of the taxpayers of America. One might even say, you raise the taxes $55 billion, because the truth of the matter is, the insurance premiums that the seniors pay for, everything other than what is in the trust fund, other than hospitalization and long-term care, the insurance premiums, the President says we are not going to add the $55 billion to the premiums. So magically he has made the trust fund more solvent by taking away some of its responsibility and also diminishing the assuredness of that coverage for seniors and at the same time does not pay for it.

He just says, add it to the expenditures of the Government. I believe it is at risk. I believe it was safe in that trust fund. I believe it is at risk when you take it out and you do not pay for it and you just say, the taxpayers will pay for it, and Congress will see to that.

That is the truth of the difference in our solvency of the trust fund and the President's. He has this magic $55 billion solvency by saying what we have been giving you out of that trust fund we are not going to give you any longer. But we have made it solvent.

So frankly that is the only difference between the President and the Republicans. That is a big difference. That is a difference that, when it is understood, will turn the tables on who is really worried about making sure the senior citizens get their care and protection.

At this point I yield to Senator MACK.

Mr. EXON addressed the Chair.

Mr. MACK addressed the Chair.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COATS). The Senator from Nebraska, as manager of the bill, is recognized.

Mr. EXON. I yield myself whatever time is necessary off of my time.

Mr. President, I listened very carefully to my friend and colleague, and as near as I can tell, when he uses charts to show how we are falsely trying to take credit for reducing the annual deficit, and giving that credit where I think it logically belongs, to President Bill Clinton, I simply say, well, it is tomfoolery.

I also suggest, regardless of the charts and percentages that we talk about, one of the reasons that we are making significant progress is the fact that under President Bill Clinton we are having a good economy, a growing economy, the stock market reaching record proportions.

I simply say, at least I hope my Republican colleagues would agree that we should give President Clinton the credit that he deserves for the good economic news, the growing economy without inflation that we are experiencing under the leadership of Bill Clinton.

I would hate to think what the Republicans would be saying if we were here debating this resolution at a time when the economy was not going well, if the confidence of Americans was not as healthy as it is. I am sure that under those conditions my Republican colleagues would not be blaming President Clinton for those downturns. That is facetious and at best it is an understatement.

One other thing on Medicare. The Republicans always seem to keep moving the goalposts. Last year, how many times did we hear, "Mr. President, just give us a balanced budget that will be scored and balanced by CBO, and we can come to an agreement." The President did that at the urging of myself and others who thought that his earlier budget proposal last year was not sound. He made dramatic changes. He changed many things, all for the good.

Finally, believe it or not, we got CBO to approve a budget plan that the President had offered. Then, rather than sealing the agreement that they had made—if you could come to a balanced budget agreement certified by CBO, we could get together—they started moving the goal post.

On Medicare, the Republicans always seem to be moving the goal post once again. All last year, the Republicans called for preserving the Medicare hospital insurance trust fund. All year, time and time again, that is what they wanted. Now, Mr. President, now that the President has come up with a plan, certified again by the Republican appointee, the head of the Congressional Budget Office, they are moving the goal post. They said 2005 is not enough, we have to go beyond that. It is like they are moving the budget, and every time we meet their goal and reach their goal line, they move the goal post. That may be political. I think it is. At least, it seems to me, it is not realistic.

I simply say, as somewhat of a football expert, Nebraska could not possibly have won two national championships if we moved the goal post every time we got close to the goal line. I reserve the remainder of my time.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan is recognized.

Mr. ABRAHAM. How much time remains on our side?

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator would be advised there are 24 hours 15 minutes.

Mr. ABRAHAM. Is there a limit on opening statement time?

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no limit.

Mr. ABRAHAM. I yield such time as he may consume to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. MACK. Thank you, Mr. President. I am going to focus my remarks this morning not so much on the specifics of the budget, as others will during the next several days, rather I will focus on the economic conditions that surround this debate.

The distinguished Senator from Nebraska who a minute ago said he hoped that we Republicans would give President Clinton credit for good economic news, may be disappointed in what I have to say, because it certainly is not my intention to give the President high marks for what is happening in the economy.

I ask people to reflect first on my very strong feelings about the Office of President of the United States, an office that all of us hold in high regard, when we think back across our history to some of the great leaders who have held that position. But today, as I discuss the economy, I find it difficult, frankly, to hold in high regard the comments made by the President of the United States with respect to what is happening with the economy, what is happening with growth, what is happening with opportunity.

In his State of the Union Address this year, President Clinton said this is the strongest economy in three decades. Last year, fourth quarter to fourth quarter, the economy grew at an anemic 1.3 percent. Over the entire time that President Clinton has been in office, we have seen economic growth of only 2.4 percent a year. Compare that to the 10 years prior to President Clinton's administration, when economic growth in America averaged 3.4 percent a year. I do not believe this economy is something that we should brag about.

Now, some economists cite statistics and say to us, "Well, things are really kind of OK, not to worry." Let me tell you who I pay attention to. It may be all right for the President to pay attention to those economists and maybe try to hide behind the numbers—2.8 percent annual real growth in the first quarter of this year—while ignoring the fact that in 1995 we had only 1.3 percent real growth; or to say the unemployment rate is at 5.4 percent, while failing to say at the same time that there were no net jobs created in the private sector last month—none, zero. What does that mean? No opportunity. No opportunity to find a new job, no opportunity to leave one job to advance to another. No jobs created.

When I want to know about the state of the economy, I pay attention to the people back home, people who come up to me and tell me they are worried about their future. In fact, it is interesting to ask people these days, how many of you believe that you are better off than your parents were at your age? Almost every hand in every audience goes up, agreeing that they are better off than the previous generation. But when you then ask how many believe their children will be better off when they are your age, maybe four or five hands go up. It appears that for the first time in a long, long time, we have a generation of Americans that thinks the next generation will not do as well as they have done. That is what is causing the tremendous anxiety that exists in America today.

Still, President Clinton wants to claim the strongest economy in three decades—on the basis of 1.3 percent growth. It is interesting to remember that in 1992, when he was campaigning for the Presidency, he called the economy the worst in 50 years, even though the economy that year grew at 3.7 percent. It is a little difficult to understand the President's line of thinking: one day he talks about 3.7 percent growth as being a very weak economy, and then a few years later and he is President, and the economy is growing at only 1.3 percent, or even 2.4 percent, to say we have the strongest economy in three decades. It is very difficult for me, frankly, to give this administration, or this President, credit for a strong economy.

I think we ought to, again, listen to what the people back home are saying to us. One example. I recently heard a story about a woman recalling that her husband had said to her on two separate occasions, "You better not go out today. I may have to call and tell you to come pick me up, because I may not have a job when this day ends." I think about the mother telling her children she would not be home in the evening because she had to get a second job to make ends meet.

One piece of statistical data that has not made the headlines is that, since January 1994, the number of individuals holding a second job has increased 17 percent. Now, the economists might tell working people not to worry. The President may tell working people not to worry, that everything is fine. But I can tell you that the people back home do not agree. They are very anxious about their future, and their ability to make ends meet.

As a matter of fact, a recent poll asked, "How worried are you about your ability to make ends meet?" The response indicated that some 20 million American families a year say their ability to make ends meet is their No. 1 concern. Now there are 30 million families who are concerned about their ability to make ends meet. The anxiety question is real. Economists can say whatever they want, but the people in the State of Florida are concerned about the future.

A couple of other statistics point to why people are feeling anxious. Real median family income has declined in 4 out of the last 5 years. And many other indicators suggest that trend will continue. Real compensation—that is, wages and benefits—grew only four-tenths of a percent in 1995, the slowest in 14 years. Between 1982 and 1989, real income per person grew three times as fast as it has since 1993, when President Clinton took office.

The real issue before us is, how can we help create higher levels of growth? Should America be satisfied with 2.4 percent real growth, or worse? I say the answer is absolutely not.

From the end of World War II to the beginning of the Clinton administration in 1993, economic growth averaged nearly 4 percent a year. Today, we are told we are doing well with growth of only 1.6 percent. Where are the jobs going to come from that will ensure prosperity and opportunity tomorrow?

Not long ago, the President of the United States was in Florida, and there was debate over the future of the sugar industry in the Everglades. Protesters opposed to the administration's plan said they were going to lose their jobs. In essence, the President responded: "Don't worry, we will see that anyone who loses their job will get another one." I wonder how many times he has made that comment around the country. But where does he think these jobs come from? Government doesn't create jobs. They come from the private sector, and they come as a result of Government getting out of the way and allowing for investment to take place.

So we must begin this discussion, Mr. President, with the understanding that the economy is weak, not strong, that job creation has slowed. While the administration wants to brag about the 8.5 million jobs created since they came into office, they neglect to mention that if job formation took place at the same rate as in previous recoveries, there would have been 11.5 million jobs created in America, and we are really 3 million jobs short. Furthermore, of the 8.5 million jobs that have been created, many are second and part-time jobs going to families that need second jobs just to make ends meet. That does not make for a growing economy.

I think it is also important that, when we debate the budget, we must remember who is paying the bills. I think about the people at home who come up and tell me about their tax burden, what they are being asked to pay for Government. I think of the young couple, the husband who works two jobs all week long, from early in the morning until late at night, five days a week, and then stays at home on Saturday and Sunday to take care of his little ones while their mom is out on her job over the weekend in order to make ends meet. I think about the couple that gets up at the crack of dawn and commutes long distances to work, and does not get home at night until well after dark, who cannot spend time with their kids, yet are being asked to pay more and more and more to the Federal Government.

Do you know what really frustrates them? It is that they are being asked to work longer and harder to pay more taxes to support programs that they know have failed and to support individuals who are not working. That is the central theme that runs all through the debate. For example, with respect to the 4.3-cent rollback of the gasoline tax. Every time workers pull up to the gas pump, that 4.3 cents in gasoline taxes goes not to build more roads or to build more bridges, but to fund Federal programs they know have failed, and support people who refuse to work. That is why support for activities here in Washington, DC, has been so deeply undermined in America.

So, Mr. President, I believe our debate should not be so much concerned about this budget itself, but about what needs to happen in order to spur growth of this country, and thereby provide more hope and opportunity for more Americans.

Let me make one other point about productivity growth. Prior to the mid-1970's, productivity in America grew approximately 2.1 percent a year. In the last 10 years, that rate declined to about 1.1 percent. And now, during the 3 years of the Clinton administration, productivity growth has averaged only three-tenths of a percent. If productivity does not increase in a meaningful way, there is no way to pass on higher wages to employees.

What is causing productivity to decline? More taxes, more spending, more Government, and less freedom, including taking away the freedom to pursue greater creativity, to spur American ingenuity, and to provide opportunity. With higher taxes, more regulation, and more interference from Washington, there is less opportunity for American business to be more productive, more competitive, and to create jobs.

So, Mr. President, I say that, at this point, this economy is weak. There is no sign that, in the long run, we are going to achieve higher levels economic activity or offer hope and opportunity to future generations of Americans unless we follow far different policies than the ones offered by the administration. Those politicians who believe that today's economic statistics indicate opportunity are making a grave mistake. The debate on this budget should be about America's future, about the ability to create jobs and opportunity through more investment, job creation, and business formation.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

(Mr. ABRAHAM assumed the chair.)

Mr. COATS. Mr. President, I asked the Senator from Michigan if he would assume the chair so I could take the opportunity to come down to the floor to compliment my colleague, Senator MACK from Florida. He outlined for the Senate, and for those who are observing, the real concern and the deep anxiety that exists among many Americans today about their future and their family's future. A concern that I think is now becoming almost universally shared about the impact of the decisions, or lack of decisions, that Washington has made. This inability of Congress and the President to make decisions impact their future in a negative way.

We have not faced up to some of the difficult choices that clearly must be made if we are going to put our economy on an upward path, and if we are going to offer and provide opportunity for the young people of the next generation of America, not to mention this current generation that is struggling with that economic anxiety. The Senator from Florida put his finger on the most immediate items that we in this Congress and with this President can address in answering these particular problems. We can provide immediate relief to Americans today by doing what they have asked us to do, and that is examine the role, the function, the scope, and the size of Government. We can address what virtually a universe of Americans now believe—this Government tries to do too much, it is too big, it spends too much. Americans see the results of this Government and they are simply not the kind of return on investment that Americans are asking for. They are working harder in order to pay more taxes to fuel and feed a Government spending effort that is not addressing the basic needs of Americans in an effective way, and they are saying "scale it back." If we could do so and make the appropriate decisions in doing so, we can provide them with an immediate increase in their wages. We can give them immediate salary or hourly wage increase by giving them tax relief from the excessive burden of taxes now being imposed.

This whole question about the gas tax is not really to move the price of gasoline which I paid this morning $1.65.9 a gallon. The question is, and the issue is, that the Congress has not been straight and fair with the American people on the issue of gas taxes and on a whole range of other taxes. The Clinton 4.3-cent gas tax increase was not applied to building roads and bridges, which most motorists in Indiana and, I think, across the country believe. When Americans pay extra money to cover gasoline increases, I know they at least think it goes to build roads and bridges and to help ease their commute to work, or their travel across the country. But no. This gas tax increase went to general revenues in order to feed the excessive and seemingly unabated spending habits of Congress.

So just in the gas tax alone we are talking about more than a reduction at the pump. We are talking about being honest with the American taxpayer in terms of how their money is being used and giving them some relief. The budget that we are debating today is designed to put us on a path toward fiscal responsibility that will allow us then to take the savings that occur over and above balancing the budget which can occur in outyears and return it to the American people in the form of tax relief so they do not have to work so hard and do not have to take that extra job simply to pay taxes to fuel Government.

The Senator from Florida has accurately addressed the issue. And I wanted to take the opportunity to step down from the Chair to thank him for his contributions and for reminding us and keeping our eyes focused on the real picture.

The second point I would make is simply that we as a Congress and the President of the United States must address the tough choices and the priority choices that we all know have to be addressed if we are going to get a handle on this budget.

This idea of deferring for some future Congress the questions about mandatory spending and entitlements is simply postponing the inevitable and bringing us closer to a day of cataclysmic budget collapse. We cannot continue to run up the deficit as we have. We cannot continue to pretend that there are not problems in the mandatory spending programs that need to be addressed.

It reminds me of the old commercial where the fellow picks out the dripping carburetor leaking with oil and says, "You've got two choices. You can pay me now or you can pay me later. If you pay me now, we can make this a lot less expensive and a lot less painful. But, if you wait, the whole engine is going to fall apart."

If we keep postponing this decision, the whole engine is going to fall apart. Republicans have attempted to come forward with budget after budget addressing these questions in an honest way even at considerable political risk only to find that President Clinton ducks his head in the sand, or slips and slides his way through the political minefield, the end result of which is to do nothing.

Mr. MACK. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. COATS. Yes. I am happy to yield to the Senator.

Mr. MACK. I think it would be helpful if we put this debate in terms that citizens around the country can associate themselves with. I remember last year when we were going through this debate, we talked about what would happen if we got a balanced budget. We said that interest rates would come down and that would mean lower mortgage payments, lower automobile payments, and more affordable student loans. I think it is important to look closely at what has happened since we did not get an agreement on a balanced budget. Long-term interest rates have risen by a percentage point. What does that mean to the average consumer, to the couple who is out there today closing on the purchase of their first home? For the average home in America, that higher interest rate means they will pay about $650 more each year in payments, or another $100 a year for a car.

So there are real consequences to this debate and for failing to get a balanced budget proposal through the Congress and signed by the President of the United States.

Real families, real individuals, hard working men and women of America, are paying hundreds of dollars more each year because of the failure to come to an agreement on a balanced budget.

I thank the Senator for yielding.

Mr. COATS. I thank the Senator for those comments.

I will close by quoting what has already been quoted on the floor today probably, the piece written in the Washington Post by Robert Samuelson, who is an economist and writer that I greatly respect because he speaks with great candor, and I think speaks about the thrust that this Congress and that the President needs to address. Just to quote part of this. He says, "As a moral matter, Americans deserve candor."

Americans deserve to hear the truth about the financial situation in which we find ourselves. We are debating in the Senate this week the budget for the next fiscal year and a budget which lays out a plan to achieve a balance in the future. We are debating about these very issues, the issues of how we spend taxpayer dollars, and how we establish priorities. And there is no better time to talk about it than this particular week in the Senate.

Samuelson said, "As a moral matter, Americans deserve candor. As we debate this issue, they deserve what we believe to be the truth. They deserve candor about the situation in which we find ourselves. When you look at the mandatory spending in just the Social Security and Medicare areas, it is an unassailable fact that longer lives, steep health costs, and an aging baby boom will inevitably make Social Security and Medicare unbearably expensive in the next century."

The next century sounds like a long way away. We have plenty of time to worry about it. This is 1996 approaching 1997. We will be at the next century before we know it.

He uses the word "unbearably expensive." "We are facing a crisis of fiscal proportions that this Nation has never faced in its history. It will be unbearably expensive, if we do not address it, and address it now."

He goes on to say, "At some point, spending and benefits will be cut to avoid costs that seem politically intolerable. But the trouble is that the longer changes are delayed the more abrupt and unfair those changes will be, and that's why silence is irresponsible."

We are today hearing silence on this issue from the White House. We are seeing gimmicks, budgetary gimmicks, as the Senator from New Mexico just outlined, to fool, or attempt to fool the American people about the status of the Medicare trust fund by shifting $55 billion out of that trust fund to the general revenues to either put the benefit program at risk, or to add additional costs to the taxpayer, or to drive us deeper into debt.

Samuelson says "This is a relevant character issue about the President. Question: Does he have the moral fiber to help America make difficult choices?"

We are trying to make difficult choices. This budget requires difficult choices. But it is time that we stood up and began to tell the American people the truth about those difficult choices and not postpone the inevitable. At great risk to this economy, at great risk to the future of this generation, and an extraordinarily unbearable risk to the future generation.

So I hope we will use this time to make these discussions relevant, to talk about them in an honest way, and to quit the posturing and the pretending and to end the practice of saying,

"Well, we cannot do it now because there is an election just months away." I have served in this body for some time, and every 2 years the excuse is "we will do it after the next election." The time to do it after is running out. The risk is extraordinary; the results are unbearable; and I hope we could face up to these decisions and honestly put it before the American people.

Frankly, I think they are ready for the truth. Frankly, I think they will reward truth and reward candor, and I hope this can be a major part of this debate in the Presidential election and in the Senate and congressional elections, and I hope we can initiate the debate this week.

Mr. President, I thank you for your patience. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COATS). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ABRAHAM. I yield myself such time as I may need.

Mr. President, once again, we have before the Senate the budget resolution that was passed by the Budget Committee under the leadership of Senator DOMENICI. This budget resolution achieves balance in the year 2002. It accomplishes this feat by reducing the size of Government and slowing the growth of various governmental programs. At the same time, it preserves and protects Medicare, provides full funding for education and environmental programs, and increases funding for Federal crime programs over previous levels.

Mr. President, let me begin by saying I am happy that this year we are dealing with a belief that we should balance the budget. One year ago in this budget process the President was talking about $200 billion a year deficits as far as the eye could see. This year the President is talking about balancing the budget and attempting, we would argue not successfully but at least attempting, to present a budget that does bring us into balance.

The differences though are considerable. The accomplishments of the Republican budget contrast strongly with the President's budget submitted earlier this year. Where we rely on tough economics and tough choices, the President's budget relies on rosy scenarios, gimmicks and deferred savings. Where we employ new ideas to help curb the growth of our entitlement programs, ideas like choice in Medicare and returning our welfare programs back to the States where they belong, the President relies on tried and, I believe, failed policies that guarantee our entitlement programs will continue to spiral out of control. Where we put our faith in individuals and families by encouraging economic growth so they can earn more, reduce the size and scope of government so they can keep more, and in the process do more for themselves and their families, the President's budget simply puts his faith in more government.

The differences are these. We are offering a budget that gets to balance and achieves it by making some tough choices, choices that have to be made if we are to truly have a balanced budget.

The President's budget, on the other hand, in effect says we can achieve a balanced budget painlessly, without anybody really having to suffer. That is, in my judgment, impossible. Obviously, we have to constrain the growth of government. We have to do it in a way that is fair and equitable. To say that we can accomplish this where tough choices are not needed is wrong.

Other Members have already addressed the important details of the Republican budget. How it reduces overall growth in Federal spending by over $440 billion through the year 2002 while increasing funding for education, the environment and crime fighting programs. How it protects veterans' health care and homeless programs from the devastating cuts included in the President's budget. And how it protects Medicare home health care programs by keeping the program within the part A portion of Medicare where it belongs.

Today, I would like just to focus on one difference between the two budgets. That is the area of tax cuts and how the Republican approach contrasts with that of the President.

First, let me put the tax picture in perspective. According to the Tax Foundation, more than one-third of the average American worker's wages go to taxes. For working parents that meant they had to work until May 7 just to pay their taxes this year. The Tax Foundation calls this tax freedom day, and May 7 is the latest it has ever been recognized.

Other indicators are just as ominous. Columnist Bruce Bartlett pointed out recently that State, local and Federal revenues now consume more of our national income than ever—31.3 percent of everything Americans earned last year. At the Federal level, taxes are also at near record levels. Last year, they consumed 20.4 percent of our national income. This marks only the second period in which the Federal tax burden has exceeded 20 percent of the gross domestic product of the United States. The last period was at the end of President Carter's administration, just prior to President Reagan's tax cut proposals of 1981.

President Clinton has played a very active role in helping achieve this record tax burden. As a candidate, he campaigned on a platform of middle-class tax cuts. At that time he stated, "We will lower the tax burden on middle-class Americans." He even argued against raising gasoline taxes, telling voters, "I oppose Federal excise gas tax increases." Why? Because a gas tax "sticks it to lower income and middle-income retired people in the country, and it's wrong."

That is the campaign rhetoric of 1992, but it is not consistent with his performance thereafter. As we all know, President Clinton pushed through the Congress in 1993 the largest tax increase in history: $265 billion over 5 years. Gas taxes were raised during that budget battle. The President also raised taxes on senior citizens. He raised taxes on the largest corporations, and he raised taxes on thousands of the smallest businesses. He raised taxes on the living and he even raised taxes on the dead. Then he turned around and told a Houston audience, "You might be surprised to find * * * I think I raised your taxes too much."

That is true. The fact is, the tax burden has been raised higher than it has ever been before, except for one point in American history. More significantly, by ranking tax burdens according to Presidents, you can see that this President has presided over the highest average tax burden of any President in the history of the country, 19.933 percent of national income.

In a nutshell, the President has succeeded in completely reversing the progress made during previous administrations in moving us toward a simpler, fairer, flatter Tax Code. The Tax Code now is more burdensome, it is more complex, and it is more costly as well.

What does that mean to average Americans? We can talk about numbers and percentages, as we often do on the floor here, to the point where we lose sight of its impact on real people. But what it means is this. Last year Americans paid to Uncle Sam $87.2 billion more than they would have under previous policies. For the average American family, that's over $800 taken out of their pocket each year and handed over to the Federal Government.

The Balanced Budget Act which President Clinton vetoed last year would have provided partial relief from these record tax burdens. The bill would have reduced the tax burden on Americans by a modest amount, on average about $36 billion a year. In other words, the tax relief vetoed by President Clinton last fall was less than half the increased tax burdens that Americans have experienced since he took office in 1993. President Clinton vetoed the Balanced Budget Act and deprived Americans of middle-class tax relief, like the $500-per-child family tax credit, marriage penalty relief, expand IRA's, spousal IRA's, and estate tax reforms that would have given small business and family farm owners the opportunity to pass on their enterprises to their families in a way that is not feasible right now because of the high inheritance taxes.

Which brings us to this year. In the President's State of the Union Address, Mr. Clinton announced that "the era of big Government was over." He then sent to Congress a budget which would ensure that Government spending and income taxes remains at record levels.

Once again, however, we have to look beyond the rhetoric. When the President released his budget in March, he claimed he was providing Americans with $99 billion in tax relief, enough to pay for a watered-down child tax credit.

On closer inspection, however, the President also included $62 billion in tax loophole closing and other increased revenues, which means the net tax relief is only $36 billion.

Finally, in an attempt to make the budget reach balance in the year 2002, President Clinton has to terminate his tax cuts in the year 2000, which reduces the total tax relief provided in the Clinton budget between 1996 and 2002 to something around $6 billion.

Think about that. We are talking about net tax relief over 6 years of about $1 billion per year. There are 250 million-plus Americans. That means the President's tax cut, spread over six years, averages out to about $4 per American per year. This amount is hardly consistent with the promise that was made during Clinton's election campaign for significant middle-class tax relief. In fact, Mr. President, as I think about it, it probably means one extra trip to McDonald's per year for the average American family.

But that is not the worst part. The worst part is that, while President Clinton terminates his tax cuts, his tax increases are permanent. They go on forever. The net effect is another tax increase on Americans. Between 1996 and 2006, President Clinton's budget would raise taxes on Americans by $50 billion. Add this new tax increase to the previous tax increases, and this Presidency will have cost Americans 465 billion additional dollars through the year 2002.

Contrast this tax increase with the Republican budget. Our budget includes funding for the full-sized, permanent, $500-per-child family tax credit. Our goal is to reduce the tax burden for those taxpayers who need it the most—parents attempting to raise young children. For a family earning $30,000 per year in my home State, Michigan, with two children, the child tax credit would reduce their 1996 Federal income tax burden 51 percent. That is real relief from what, under President Clinton, has become the highest tax burden on families in the history of this country.

That is the difference between the direction that we perceive Americans wanting to go and the direction they would have under the President's proposals. Our goal is to let American families earn more and keep more. Our goal is to give American families a chance to keep more of the dollars that they earn and to be able to use those dollars to help their families, particularly those families in the middle class who are struggling to make ends meet, working hard and playing by the rules.

I think the choice before the Senate is clear. On the one hand, you have a resolution that is responsive to the American voters and taxpayers in their desire to see a smaller, more effective Government with its books balanced, and, on the other hand, you have the President's budget which is responsive to the status quo and inside-the-beltway interests.

I would like to just close by thanking Senator DOMENICI for his leadership on this issue. This is my second opportunity to vote for a budget resolution. Thanks to Chairman DOMENICI's resolve and guidance, I am once again proud to support and back a document that brings this Government's budget into balance. It has been 25-plus years since the Congress was able to do that, and it is under the leadership of Senator DOMENICI and the Republican majority that we accomplished this goal.

Last year we took this goal as close as we could to the finish line by making sure that Congress ultimately passed a budget that was in balance. Unfortunately, the President chose to veto that budget. He chose to veto tax cuts for working families. He chose to veto reform of the Medicare Program to help ensure the solvency of the Medicare trust fund. And, he choose to veto a budget that will give Americans relief from the high interest rates that result from uninterrupted Federal budget deficits. years.

Hopefully this year, when a balanced budget is presented to the President, we will have a different result. I hope he will sign that budget, and I hope he will agree with us that it is time to truly put the era of Big Government to rest and move in a different direction.

The President's budget does not really accomplish that. The budget which the Senate Budget Committee passed last week does. I look forward to working to see its adoption here on the floor of the Senate.

I yield the floor.

Mrs. BOXER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHCROFT). The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I am pleased to be here today as a member of the Budget Committee to talk about the differences between President Clinton's budget, which I voted for in the Budget Committee, and the Republican budget that passed on a partisan vote.

First, I wanted to point out that the Senator from Michigan complains about the size of Government as a share of the economy, but he only tells half the story, if that. What he did not know is that President Clinton has reduced the size of Government. There are fewer people working for the Government now than at any time since John Kennedy was President.

Let me repeat that: There are fewer people working for the Government now than at any time since John Kennedy.

Spending by the Federal Government now is 22 percent of the economy. But what the Senator did not know is that this is the lowest percentage since the 1970's—lower than it was when we had Republican Presidents. As a matter of fact, the record level was set during the Reagan administration.

So I think when we talk about this budget and the situation today, we ought to put it into the context of where we have come from. We have come from a time when there were hardly any new jobs created to a point where President Clinton has fulfilled his commitment to create more than 8 million new jobs. We have come from a time where we talked about deficit reduction but ran up more debt during George Bush and Ronald Reagan than all the years since George Washington through Jimmy Carter. Now we have seen deficit reduction 4 years in a row.

There are many other facts about this economy that are important. The misery index is at the lowest point. That is a combination of unemployment and inflation. It is at a very low point. As I said, we have fewer Government employees than at any time since John Kennedy.

Does that mean everything is perfect? No, it does not mean everything is perfect. We have a long way to go. We should have started yesterday by passing an increase in the minimum wage. That is what we should be doing. We should be reaching across the aisle to make life better for millions and millions of working people who have seen that minimum wage go to a 40-year low in terms of its purchasing power. Seventy percent of the American people think it is an issue of fairness, and we have a Republican leader over in the House who says he really does not believe there ought to be any minimum wage—there ought to be no minimum wage. Can you believe it?

The thinking that has taken over this Congress since 1994 never fails to amaze me. Yesterday, I said the passion that is being expressed on the other side about reducing 4 cents on the gas tax should be matched by a passion to increase the minimum wage for our people.

We already know from the experts that the oil refiners will probably get that 4 cents a gallon. When that issue comes before us, we are going to work hard on the Democratic side to make sure that money does go into the pockets of consumers, but even with that, we cannot ensure it. Let us say they got every penny, that is $27 a year, and the deficit will go up. If it is made a permanent repeal, it will go up by $30 billion.

So how do the people view this Republican Congress when deficit reduction is supposed to be No. 1 and then we repeal a gas tax, which will probably go into the pockets of the oil companies, and then we are going to have to find out how we are going to make up that money? The latest plan is to do a one-time fee on banks. But the fact is, that fee on banks is supposed to be put aside in case there are bank or savings and loan failures, not to be used up on a gas tax repeal.

What does that all have to do with the budget? I think in many ways it is symbolic of the kind of budgets we are going to see presented. One, in my view—and that is President Clinton's budget—really does put people first, and the other, the Republican budget, I do not think puts people first. Of course, it is up to the American people to decide.

I am going to just show the differences in the budget, as I see them. I will use a chart to do that, because I think it is one thing to talk about how we feel about the budget, which we all will do, it is another thing to put the numbers behind our statements.

So I have tried to highlight from my perspective as a Budget Committee member some of the most important differences in the two budgets. I want to talk about education and job training.

If people from another country were to ask me what makes our country great, I would say it is because we have a great middle class and everyone has a chance at the American dream.

And then if they asked, "Why do people have a chance at the American dream?" I would say, "If I had to say one thing, it would be education."

I happen to be a product of public schools, all the way from kindergarten through college. I was very fortunate to have a good education in public schools. In college, I went to the State university. It cost me $12 a semester. It was amazingly affordable. Of course, as I go around my State, the people who like me say, "Look at that Senator, she's a product of public schools." Of course, the ones who do not say, "See what public schools can do; look at that Senator."

The fact of the matter is, it is education that is the key to the American dream, and today it is more than education, it is education and job training. As our President has said, many of us will have seven and eight jobs in a lifetime, and we need the constant retraining, the reeducation. I know people of my generation have had to learn how to use the computer. It is not that easy, but it can be done.

The fact is, if you look at the two budgets, the President's budget and the Republican budget, the President adds $56 billion more to education and training than does the Republican budget. That is a fact. Both budgets balance in the timeframe of 6 years. Both budgets balance. So we do not have to argue about that. That is resolved. The question is, what are your priorities? What do you want to invest in? And I think that this Democratic President is correct in saying we must invest in education.

What the Republicans do is actually, compared to 1996 levels, decrease by $3.2 billion over the next 6 years what is spent on education. I just have to say, if there were no other differences in this budget, no other differences than this first point, $56 billion more to education and job training in President Clinton's budget than in the Republican budget, if there was not one iota of difference other than that, I would say vote for President Clinton's budget, which is, of course, what I intend to do.

There are more important things as well—Environmental Protection Agency enforcement. I see the Senator from Arkansas is on the floor, and yesterday I thought he made a spectacular statement about the importance of clean air and clean water and an environment we can hand down to our children that is at least as beautiful as the one we inherited. You cannot do that without enforcement.

We had this argument in the 1970's when, under President Nixon, we set up the Environmental Protection Agency. That was bipartisan. What has happened to the environmental issue? We cannot find support for environmental protection on the Republican side of the aisle.

It takes inspectors to enforce the laws, to make sure that companies are not polluting and that when they do, they pay to clean it up. It takes dollars to clean up Superfund sites, most of which are very close to our populated cities.

I visited one of them in San Bernardino, CA. The cleanup was stopped because of the Government shutdown. We could not get the money to clean it up, and the pollution and the toxic waste was about to penetrate into the water table. Thank goodness we were able to get those funds after the Government reopened to begin cleaning up that site. That is just one small example of the problems that we have.

Years ago we did not know that some of these chemicals were very dangerous, that they could sink down into the water table. But we know it now, and if we do not pay the price now, we will pay it later. How wise it is to clean up those pollutants now before they get into the water table and people cannot drink the water, and if they do, they get sick. I just read a recent report that they have traced chemical pollution in the water supply to childhood leukemia.

The fact of the matter is, it is shortsighted to shortchange the Environmental Protection Agency, and that is a difference in our budget.

Let us get to the issue of Medicare. I thought we had the fight over Medicare in the sixties, and we decided it was shameful and morally reprehensible that half of our senior citizens had no health insurance.

We passed a good law, the Medicare law. It has worked. Do we have to make sure that the Medicare system is sound? Do we have to make corrections and reforms? We do. And the President does in his budget. He makes that fund safe until at least 2005.

But what does the Republican budget do? It cuts $50 billion more out of Medicare than does President Clinton's budget—$50 billion more. It is hard to imagine what $50 billion would look like. But taking $50 billion out of Medicare more than the President—more than the President—and saying that system can survive is simply not so. As I understand it, all of the costs would be put on to the hospitals in this particular plan, and hospitals will start closing; we will lose emergency rooms and we will be in big trouble. I think our senior citizens deserve better.

Republicans cut $18 billion more than the President out of Medicaid. I hope to have an amendment to talk about the Medicaid issue. Who is on Medicaid? The poor children, the poor families, and two-thirds of our senior citizens in nursing homes are on Medicaid, our grandmothers and our grandfathers.

What do you suppose is going to happen when you take $18 billion more than the President did out of Medicaid? Nothing good will happen, I can assure you. We have already had the scandals in the nursing homes in the 1980's. I do not want to live through that again. We cannot take these kinds of dollars out of Medicare and Medicaid and have a system that functions and a system that works. Then if you do the medical savings accounts on top of that, which is also, as I understand, assumed in this budget, the healthiest and the wealthiest will leave a lot of our plans, including Medicare, and it is going to make matters far worse when the healthiest and the wealthiest leave the big insurance pool.

The earned income tax credit. Republicans cut $12 billion more than the President in the earned income tax credit. What is the earned income tax credit? It is a credit given to those in our community who work very, very hard for very low wages. And the purpose of it is to ensure that they do not have to go on welfare. And it is really a very important, very important tax credit for those at the bottom of the scale who work so hard and do not want to be on welfare. Yet, the earned income tax credit, which was really praised highly by President Reagan, President Bush, bipartisan, is hurt deeply in the Republican budget.

However, there is one area where the Republicans spend more. Guess what it is? It is the Pentagon. They spend $11 billion more than the Department of Defense asked for. Let me repeat that. In this budget, if you vote for it, you are voting for $11 billion more than the Department of Defense, the admirals and the generals, asked for. I do not get it. I do not get it.

We have the strongest military in the world, and we should keep it that way. We spend more than any other nation. I am going to tell you exactly what we spend compared to other countries.

Here is a chart that shows that the U.S. military budget spends more than the next five countries combined. I want to thank Senator SIMON for sharing this chart with me. He had used it in the Budget Committee. So here we see the United States, $264 billion; Russia, $98 billion; Japan, $54 billion; France, $41 billion; the United Kingdom, $35 billion; and Germany, $34 billion.

Let me make a point. Let us just say for purposes of this that Russia is not our friend. Of course, the cold war is over and she would like to join NATO. But for the purposes of this conversation, let us say Russia was not our friend, because there are elections coming up and we are nervous about it, I understand. All the other countries—Japan, France, the United Kingdom, and Germany—are our very close allies. So if you take what America spends, and you add what our best friends spend, I mean, we are up there in the stratosphere. We do not have to lose sleep at night about the size of our military budget.

And the fact of the matter is, the kinds of threats we now face are very different than the threats that we faced in the height of the cold war, when we worried about intercontinental ballistic missiles and we worried about nuclear weapons. Thank goodness times have changed. Are they risky times? Yes. Are they dangerous times? Yes. We can never not be vigilant. But the threats are different. And the costs should reflect the different types of threat.

We are far more threatened by terrorism, for example, than we are from an intercontinental ballistic missile. And you need different things to prepare for that than you do that type of a star wars threat that we used to feel in the cold war days. So with all of this information, the Republican budget adds yet another $11 billion.

I want to hearken back to what Dwight Eisenhower said, general and President, a Republican. He said, it is very important to educate our children; that the defense of our Nation is not only in the size of its arsenal, but how educated our children are. He is the one who brought to the Congress in the 1950's the National Defense Education Act. He called it the National Defense Education Act because he knew, if we are going to be strong, if we are to defend America and its principles and its democracy, it takes an intelligent country and it takes young people who are ready to learn.

I will tie that into a conversation I had with the entrepreneurs in the Silicon Valley. I am so proud to represent them here in the U.S. Senate. When I went to see them when I was running for the Senate back in 1992, I said, "Tell me the one thing I could do for you if I become your Senator." I fully expected them to say something like, "Well, cut our taxes." They did not say that. They said, "If you become our Senator, get us an educated work force. Get us an educated work force." Today they are hiring foreign workers because they are not getting the skills here that they need. The answer lies in this budget.

That is why this debate is so exciting and so important. It can sound a little boring when you talk about technical terms such as "real freezes" and "hard freezes" and all the rest and technical assumptions, "CBO" and "OMB," and all the things we talk about in our budget meetings.

But behind all those words is reality. The reality is, what do we believe in? What do we believe will make us great? If we can, in our budget, invest in those things that will make us great, in the context of a balanced budget, because we need to do that—we need to do that. We are wasting so much on interest payments on the debt. We have to get a handle on that. And we do in both of the budgets before us. The debate can now focus on these differences, these things.

So, Mr. President, it is indeed an honor for me to partake in the debate. I want to thank Senator EXON, our Democratic ranking member, for all the hard work that he has done and the staff has done. I want to thank the President of the United States for giving us a budget that I think we can be very proud to vote for. It is fiscally responsible. It makes the tough and hard choices. It comes to balance, but it does it in a way that makes the right investments: Education, environment, Medicare, Medicaid, the earned income tax credit, and a sensible number for defense.

You put that altogether, and I think you have a pretty good roadmap into the next century, one in which America will truly be the economic leader of the world, and also the moral leader of the world.

Thank you very much, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee.

MR. FRIST. Mr. President, I rise today as a member of the Budget Committee in strong support of the 1997 balanced budget resolution. I want to commend the diligent work of our chairman on that committee in moving this legislation to the floor of the U.S. Senate.

As we begin our debate, I hope we will keep our Federal debt in perspective. As of today, the Federal Government is $5 trillion in debt, more than $19,000 for every man, woman, and child in America. The whole concept of $1 trillion is so difficult to understand. An analogy I use to explain how much a trillion is, I go back to a very simple way of thinking about it. That is, if you started a business on the day that Jesus Christ was born, almost 2,000 years ago, and on the day he was born you lost $1 million and you lost $1 million every day since the day he was born—$1 million every day—you still would not have lost $1 trillion.

We in this country have a $5 trillion debt. Looking at this problem from another angle, a child born today owes $187,000 just on interest on the debt over his or her lifetime. We clearly cannot sustain this course of unrestricted, unrestrained Federal spending. That is why we are here today to introduce a balanced budget which will protect those children and that opportunity for an American dream for those children.

It really boils down to the whole concept of long-term thinking. We, in this town, too often think in terms of 1 year or 2 years. It is time for all of us to come together and think in terms of that long term. In my own career of medicine, before coming to this body, you do an operation to possibly get through a short-term, acute problem, but you do it for the long-term quality of life for that individual. It is this long-term thinking that all of us need to engage, bring to the table in this budget debate.

Long-term thinking clearly means reducing spending and reforming entitlements, something that is tough to do—and this is a political year—really any year. All of us are dependent on reaching out to the public. Telling the public, broadly, that entitlements, or benefits established by law and paid to any eligible beneficiary—and we define that the eligibility requirements, regardless of cost, are what are driving this country to higher and higher debt and larger deficits over time—it is the result of the automatic-pilot spending that causes entitlements to be the largest and fastest growing portion of our Federal budget.

On this chart—and it is a familiar chart to many of us on the budget committee, but it is one that is worth imprinting in our minds because it shows the problem that we have, not just in 1996 and 1997, but on into the next century. The chart is very simple. It shows Federal spending; that is the height of each of the bars. It starts in 1970 and comes to where we are right now, 1990, then to the year 2000, and on into the next century, the year 2030.

The green line is the revenue that comes in to Washington, DC, the taxpayer dollars, the amount of money that is coming in. We can see, over time, as a percent of GDP—gross domestic product—that is constant. It has been constant for decades and will be for decades, right at 19 or 20 percent of GDP. We can see, of interest, that the income coming in, the revenues, matched in 1970—the last time it matched—Federal spending. Why? We have not had a balanced budget in almost three decades in this country.

We can see through the 1980's and the 1990's that the Federal spending outpaced the revenues. That is why we have the deficit each time. We add up each of the deficits, and we get the $5 trillion debt. In red are the entitlements. There are basically five entitlements—there are really more than that: Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, pensions, and welfare spending.

Look at the dramatic increase, historically, over time, to where we are today, in the red, in entitlements. They are on autopilot. The interest is the amount of money, the interest on the Federal debt. It is the amount of money that we are paying each year we have to pay on the $5 trillion debt that is out there. As the debts increase, the amount of increase over time has increased.

In the blue, looking at 1970, we have discretionary spending. Discretionary spending is that spending that is for the sorts of things that we just talked a little bit about earlier. That is our national parks, defense of this country, education, roads and infrastructure. Notice how, over time, the blue is getting smaller as the red gets larger on autopilot.

What is frightening—and the reason why I want to show this chart—is what happens in 4 years, 10 years, in the year 2000, 2010, and 2020. Revenues stay the same and there is a huge growth in overall Federal spending. Unless we do something, this is inevitable. This is agreed to in a bipartisan way. These are data that are generated by a number of sources that, again, both sides of the aisle accept. It is inevitable. The reason it is inevitable in some part is because of our aging population, because we had a baby boom back 30 years ago now which will be traveling through, which at the year 2010 will hit.

Now, 2010 sounds a long way away, but in truth it is 14 years away. You can see in the year 2010, 14 years away, that entitlements, in the red, and on the debt, in the yellow, consume all Federal revenues in 14 years unless we do something. The last year and a half we have not done anything. Unless we do something, we will have no money left over for the discretionary spending. This is education, national parks, research, science, and defense of this country. That is why we must come together and act in a reasonable way.

The growth of mandatory spending we can look at differently to drive home the problems that we have. That is really in this second chart. Mandatory spending—what we spend if we do nothing—on entitlements and interest on the debt are consuming an increasing portion of our Federal budget pie. This chart, I think, describes that and explains that very well. We have mandatory spending in 1965, overall spending in 1965; overall spending in 1995 is shown by the middle pie; and then looking on into the future. This is our overall budget. The red is entitlements; the yellow is interest on the debt; and the discretionary spending is in the light blue.

Look what happens between 1965 and 1995: Entitlements and interest on the debt in 1965 consumed about one-third of our overall budget; by 1995, the discretionary spending and the mandatory spending have flipped. We can see entitlements and interest on the debt now consume almost two-thirds of the overall budget, with the discretionary spending having consumed before two-thirds, now only one-third. We must act.

Again, why do we need to act today for the long term and not just the short term? Because if we look out again in 14 or 15 years, in the year 2012, the entire Federal budget will be spent for entitlements and interest on the debt, with absolutely no money left over for defense, medical research, roads, national park, and infrastructure. This is what happens if we do not act, if we do not act in this body, in a bipartisan coming-together, in a reasonable way.

Clearly, we face a monumental fiscal crisis if we do nothing. This 1997 balanced budget resolution, which came out of the Budget Committee, begins to solve this long-term problem by reducing spending growth and reforming entitlements. Over the next 6 years, our resolution will slow spending by $441 billion. More importantly, 85 percent of these spending reductions target mandatory programs, those automatic pilot entitlements that are driving us deeper and deeper into debt.

Our budget, unlike the President's budget, addresses this problem of growth in entitlements and interest over time, which ultimately eliminates discretionary spending. Now, long-term thinking also means strengthening and improving programs that are critical to the health care of our Nation.

Of the 400 entitlement programs in the budget, I want to briefly comment on two—Medicare and Medicaid. It is the long-term decisions that we make about these programs that are crucial because it is they that are the fastest growing entitlements, and it is they that provide the critical health care services that over 37 million senior citizens depend upon and over 30 million people below the poverty level. It is a little disappointing because I have been in this body about a year and a half to 2 years, and we have made absolutely no headway in saving, strengthening, and simplifying Medicare. Yet, the problem has been laid out for us now almost 2 years ago.

Politicians all too often have been negligent in telling people the truth about Medicare's really precarious financial situation. Let me say at the outset that, as a physician, I have taken care of thousands of Medicare patients personally, day in and day out. It is the world's largest insurance program. It is hugely popular among 37 million participating Americans. It is giving seniors and individuals with disabilities unprecedented access to the great health care system that we have today. It has prolonged and improved the lives of millions and millions of Americans. Thus, we must work together to strengthen and save this program.

The truth is depicted again in this chart, though. This is the Medicare hospital trust fund, the so-called part A trust fund. It started going broke last year. If I were to come into any small business and say, "You are going broke right now," what would they do? They would react, go back and develop a strategic plan. They would react on that day. Yet, we sit in this body and have not yet done one thing to reverse

Medicare going broke in a few short years.

This chart shows overall assets of the trust fund in billions of dollars. You can see that we were spending more than we were taking in beginning last year. This is 1994. In 1995, we went into the red in the Medicare trust fund spending, the actual cash flow going in and out. That deficit spending has increased this year, will increase this year, the year after that, and the year after that. Meanwhile, this trust fund is going down, down, and down, where in 4 to 5 years the trust fund will be bankrupt.

I should add that these projections have gotten worse over the last year. Last year, we said it is not going to start going bankrupt for a year and will not really go bankrupt until 2002. Well, over the last 14 months of doing nothing in the U.S. Congress, Medicare is going bankrupt more quickly.

This chart shows this whole concept. We sort of looked at cash flow in the last part, how much is coming in and going out. If we look at actual bankruptcy—I took a chart that we used last year, based on the Medicare trustees' report of last April, and updated that chart. This chart looks at, in billions of dollars, how much the trust fund has in assets. When it gets down to this line, Medicare is actually going bankrupt. This is 1985 to 1995. It projects out to the year 2004. The line that I used last year, which was in the Medicare trustees' report, was the blue line. From 1985 to 1995, as you can see, the Medicare part A trust fund looked better and better and better. However, we saw, beginning last year—not this year, and we saw it on the previous chart—we started deficit spending. This is what we projected last year. This is 1995. That is, Medicare would be bankrupt in the year 2002. I should add, when Medicare goes bankrupt, by law, no hospitals can be paid. So when it goes bankrupt, that means that care will actually be denied. That is inevitable, unless we act. Well, last year, we presented a plan to the President of the United States that would save Medicare, would change the course of this line on out into the future. Yet, it was vetoed by the President. Now we have yet another opportunity to salvage, to save and strengthen Medicare.

Look what has happened in the course of the last year and a half of doing nothing. That is where I have updated this chart. That is where the red line comes in. Based on the predictions by the Congressional Budget Office, we see that Medicare is not going to go bankrupt in the year 2002. But now it is going to be going bankrupt in the year 2000—and nothing else has changed—unless we act. In this balanced budget resolution, I will show you, shortly, how we will extend these lines out and preserve Medicare.

Surely, we must save and strengthen and simplify this program. We have to lay aside the politics and focus on protecting those Americans. I think of those thousands of patients who I have taken care of myself, and who were treated for heart disease, lung disease, emphysema, and had lung cancers taken out, and who have gone through coronary bypass surgery. Those are the people I have seen and the people we have to be responsible to in preserving this program.

This chart shows the Medicare hospital insurance trust fund with what we have before us today in this balanced budget resolution, with what the President has proposed and will be talking about later today, and what we will discuss on this floor today and tomorrow. Under current law, again, this shows that Medicare will be going bankrupt in the year 2000 if we do nothing. That is the red line. Well, the President, in his proposal—once you get rid of the gimmicks of moving home health care and part A of the trust fund elsewhere, which is a gimmick—if you put that aside, you can see that under the President's proposal, in green on the chart, the hospital trust fund is extended for 1 year.

We have to get away from this short-term thinking and look on into the next century. The baby boom does not even hit until 2008. We have to be prepared for the year 2008 and extend solvency for 10 years. That is what our balanced budget proposal does. The balanced budget proposal—the one we will be debating and discussing—extends the life of the part A trust fund, which is the heart of Medicare, out for 10 years. That is an objective that the President said he would like to see out there. It is something I feel strongly about. Remember, out in the year 2006, we are going to have a whole new set of problems we have to address. In the proposal before us, we extend for 10 years the solvency. The President extends it only for 1 year. If we do nothing, it will be going bankrupt in the year 2000.

With regard to Medicaid, which is the second area I want to discuss, I think we have a historic opportunity to work together to preserve what has become and needs to be a real safety net for women, children, senior citizens, and our disabled population.

Let me, again, say that about 35 percent of the people who I have transplanted hearts into are below the poverty level and benefited by having Medicaid. So, again, my experience with this whole health care issue is pretty real in that 35 percent of all the people I have transplanted benefited by having Medicaid, which served them very well. The problem is that Medicaid, today, takes up 6 percent of total Federal spending and about one-fifth of State spending. Unless we act, we will see about a 155-percent increase in just 10 years.

This increase in Medicaid spending, if you look at it just from last year to this year, is more than we spent in whole on mass transit, on all criminal investigations, on pollution control and abatement, and on the National Science Foundation. That is just how much the increase has been. Unfortunately, Medicaid, with this inexorable growth, is bankrupting our State budgets, who have Medicaid being the largest single entity in the States' budgets, driving out spending on other very useful causes, like police, crime, and education.

Let me say at the outset that nothing in our balanced budget resolution constitutes a cut in Medicaid—absolutely nothing.

President Clinton and Republicans both attempted to rein in growth and spending and protect the eligible population. The differences are going to be hammered out in the committee. But let me just say what we started with.

We started with the bipartisan cooperation in working with the Nation's Governors, 48 of whom got together and passed out unanimously a proposal that we agree with. Their plan was designed to protect all current law eligibles and included in the umbrella a fund for emergencies.

To preserve the important safety net which must be there, Medicaid spending under our plan, our proposal, will increase 25 percent over the next 6 years. There are $54 billion more in our bill than in last year's budget resolution. It is not a cut. The program will continue to grow at a rate of about 6.5 percent under our proposal, which is important—two times the rate of inflation—and it will grow a total of 46 percent from 1996 to the year 2002.

Let me also add that as we strengthen Medicare, improve Medicare, and save Medicare for the future, and as we improve, simplify, and strengthen the Medicaid programs, we must also recognize that biomedical research must and will remain a priority for our Nation's long-term health care needs, again going back to the importance of thinking long term and not just short term. In this field of biomedical research, shortsightedness would only yield some quick remedies that would really, I think personally and based on my experience, potentially endanger lifesaving breakthroughs from continuing research.

The 1997 budget resolution allows us to maintain funding for the NIH, the National Institutes of Health, at the level of funding secured last year and an increase of 8.8 percent, or almost $1 billion, more per year than in last year's budget resolution. Their commitment will help to preserve our position as a world leader in biomedical research.

Finally, Mr. President, long-term thinking means avoiding budget gimmicks. Earlier I spoke very quickly about a gimmick that I find very troubling in the administration's budget of transferring home health care, which is growing at about 17 percent a year, from one part of Medicare to another to make us feel better about part A. Medicare is part A, the hospital trust fund we have talked about, and part B, which is physician services, we focused on a lot over the last year and a half.

Part A, the hospital trust fund, and the data that we just talked about, is the hospital part A trust fund. We cannot solve that problem without some fundamental reform. What the President has done, unfortunately, is take assets out of the part A trust fund, move them elsewhere and say, now the trust fund is going to be solved long term. It is just not right. It is just not true. That is a gimmick. We have to have fundamental structural reform if we are going to look at the long-term solvency of that part A trust fund.

I guess I want to comment lastly on the President's "spend now, save later," proposals for discretionary spending. This chart looks just to the nondefense discretionary outlays, the spending that is out there. The red is the President's plan. The green is the Senate-reported plan that we have on the table now. It is $270 billion in overall spending, fiscal year 1996, where we are today, going out to the year 2002 over the next 6 years. The difference in this plan is very clear—increased spending in these early years by the President's plan in nondefense discretionary spending where we have real numbers coming in addressing the problem today, not focusing on just the first 2 years, but the long term.

The President has certain trigger proposals which will come into play these last few years, and I think they really defy common sense. The American people need to recognize these proposals as gimmicks that are antithetical to our efforts to balance the budget. No American family or individual would conduct their financial affairs in this manner, and their Government should not either. The problem is now. Let us address the problem now, not increase spending hoping, hoping, that it will be addressed in the future.

I look forward to offering a sense-of-the-Senate amendment on the floor that will oppose these discretionary triggers and support commonsense budgeting.

Our constituents deserve nothing less than a courageous forward thinking leadership here in Washington. All of us know that today they want us to balance the budget. Today they want us to save Medicare from bankruptcy, which is inevitable if we do not act. They want us to reform Medicaid to return welfare to workfare, to provide tax relief without resorting to budgetary gimmicks. We do need to transform Washington from that 2-year town that looks to the next election to a 20-year town that looks to the next generation.

We can start that today as we get this whole budget discussion underway this morning and in the afternoon, over the next 50 hours, by eventually passing this 1997 balanced budget resolution.

I would like to briefly yield time, if I might, out of my time to Senator GRAMS, my friend from Minnesota.

Mr. EXON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska is recognized.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I would like to briefly respond to the remarks and comments of my friend and colleague from Tennessee.

Could I see that chart that he just had there about the trust fund going broke?

Mr. President, here is one of the things that I am most concerned about. I think we all recognize that we have a problem, and we all are trying to work together to solve it. I do not think it is particularly helpful for us to show on television charts that scare the devil out of the senior citizens of America.

The Medicare fund is not going to go broke. Everybody knows it is not going to go broke because the Congress, whatever it has to do, is going to step in and stop it. The fact of the matter is that while we keep criticizing what the President of the United States has done, as I demonstrated by charts earlier on today—listening to people on the floor of the U.S. Senate that have recently come into the Congress, you would think they are the only ones who have any expertise or knowledge on how to balance the Federal budget—as I showed vividly with charts this morning, it was the President of the United States, Bill Clinton, who has come on board and at the urging of some of us who have been fiscal conservatives for a long, long time and very much concerned about the skyrocketing budget deficits annualized at about $300 billion, Bill Clinton is the one who has reversed that course. For the first time since man's mind runneth to the contrary, we have seen a dramatic turnaround in the annual deficits of the United States of America.

I only say, once again, that all of these things that are being thrown around by those on that side of the aisle who fought without a single Republican vote against the deficit reduction proposal advanced by the President of the United States and supported by Democrats was the only time in 30 years that we have had a turnaround in the annual deficits.

When I see people talking about the trust fund going broke, unfortunately, I feel it is a means of scaring senior citizens. I tell the senior citizens that the fund is not going to go broke. Of all the criticisms that have been made about how bad and how gimmickry the President of the United States is with his proposal, I cite once again, and, if necessary, I will read it once again.

Let me repeat what June O'Neill said on May 9, 1996, in a letter to me after I made a request for her, June O'Neill, the Republican appointee as head of the Congressional Budget Office that we all look to as a guiding light today and the umpire, if you will, on disputes between the political parties. She said, "Under the law, the trust fund is projected to become insolvent by 2002."

So we agree with that part. But when we talk about going busted, that is something else—going bankrupt, projected to go bankrupt.

June O'Neill goes on to say that the Congressional Budget Office, which, I say again, is run by the Republicans—it has a director who makes these decisions after listening to staff that are Republicans—June O'Neill says in that May 9 letter to me, "The Congressional Budget Office estimates that the administration's proposal would postpone this date," or the date when it could be in some trouble, "to the year 2005."

I simply say, Mr. President, it is not necessary for us to talk about this going broke and indicate that the Democrats and the President of the United States are doing nothing about it when that is not the case.

The Senator complains about backloading, about backloading in the President's budget. Take a look at the Republican budget. It is like the kettle calling the teapot black. There is little difference with regard to the backloading in either the Democratic plan or the Republican plan, and we should be honest about it and not mislead the American people. It seems to me you would have to agree that under my calculations, both budgets, both the Democratic budget of the President and the Republican budget, achieve exactly the same amount of deficit reduction—82 percent of it in the last 3 years.

Let me repeat that. You hear this talk about backloading. Backloading means that you do not make the cuts upfront now. You wait until the 6th and 7th year of the budget. So that is after Bill Clinton will have finished his second 4-year term as President of the United States or that is after our good friend, Senator BOB DOLE, would finish his first 4 years as President of the United States. But both are guilty of the same thing. And I wish to lay down the marker now, that when you hear about backloading, it is a plague on both of our houses.

Mr. President, 82 percent of the deficit reduction or savings in both the President's plan and the Republican plan is in the last 3 years. So I simply say that there is probably little to be gained if you want to talk honestly about who is the worst backloader.

I reserve the remainder of my time and yield the floor.

Mr. FRIST addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. FRIST. Let me just very briefly respond because I know we have a number of colleagues here. I guess the one element that I would like to respond to is the scare tactics, because it has been a fascinating year for me. I have only been here for a year and a half, and I do not have all the answers to the budgetary problems that we have today, but if we look at the issue of scare tactics, the numbers that I showed you in terms of the chart and Medicare going bankrupt were given to us, given to this body, by the Medicare trustees, a bipartisan group, three members of President Clinton's Cabinet, and that is the chart that comes directly out of their numbers. They tell us that it is an urgent problem; it is going bankrupt—again, bipartisan.

The numbers that have been released recently are that things are getting worse, that part A—40 percent of the overall Medicare Program is part A—is going to be insolvent. We were told in 7 years. Now we know it is going to be 6 years, which, since it has been a year, is only 5 years from now. That is scary. That is scary.

But contrast that with the number of things you see on television. Every time I go back to Tennessee they say, "What are you people trying to do with our budget and Medicare, trying to slow the growth from 7 percent to 6 percent," which is what we were trying to do last year and that is what we are trying to do this year.

That scares seniors. That scares seniors. If we do not do anything, that program is going broke. It is gone. The 70-year-old people who need heart surgery, who I operate on, are not going to get it.

I have not been around that long, but maybe by the year 2000 they will come in with some huge tax increase or strip back benefits in the year 2000, but that is the only thing that will save the program. Nothing else will do it because it is inevitable; it is going bankrupt, part A, the hospital part of the trust fund.

So we have seen a lot of scare tactics out there over the past year and a half. Those scare tactics have been on television, paid advertising. They scare every senior citizen. Every person over the age of 50 will come up, because they are scared, and say, "Don't touch anything, because what we can see on the television ads, if you reform the system, we are not going to have a health care system at all."

Those are the scare tactics I am afraid of. I have just presented the facts in terms of bankruptcy. I agree with Senator EXON. We need to work together. Clearly, both budgets have their real problems. These numbers came from CBO scoring, that right now, if you look at the hospital trust fund—these are CBO numbers, Congressional Budget Office numbers, that came from June O'Neill's staff to our staff that have been released and part of the record we talked about in the Budget Committee—it is going bankrupt in 5 years—the red line—if we do nothing.

Under the President's plan, if you remove the gimmickry of the $55 billion in home health care—it is just moved to the side—CBO said it extends the life of the trust fund for 1 year.

Our proposal, according to CBO, June O'Neill's group, says we have 10 years in our report. This, again, comes from the Congressional Budget Office.

I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

Mr. GRAMS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. GRAMS. Mr. President, first, in business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess today from the hours of 1:30 to 3:30 and that the time during recess then be charged equally from the budget resolution. By the way, this does have the approval of the minority side as well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. EXON. There is no objection on this side, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRAMS. Thank you very much, Mr. President.

I rise today with great pride in supporting the budget resolution for fiscal year 1997, and I commend the distinguished chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, Senator DOMENICI, and my colleagues on the committee for drafting a piece of legislation of which every American can be proud.

This bill, more than anything else, is about promises, making promises and keeping them. The American people have every reason to be cynical about political promises. They hear so many of them, and they hear them repeated so often that it is easy to begin to tune them out. Yet, something resonated with the voters when we went to the people back in November of 1994 and we promised that we would take this country in a better direction if they elected a new majority to Congress.

Last year we redefined the role of the Federal Government when we laid out a plan for the Nation's future unlike anything that the people have seen over the last 40 years. Up until then, they had always been told that big Government was good Government; that we could keep spending as much as we wanted and never get stuck with the bill; that Washington knew best.

That was nothing more than a fairy tale. Our budget pointed toward a more realistic, more responsible path, and we passed that into law only to have it vetoed by a "pie crust" President whose promises are easily made and easily broken.

Now the second installment of our balanced budget promise is before us and we have a second opportunity to take our case to the people. Our budget recognizes that we do have a responsibility to guarantee our children a debt-free future and that balancing the budget without raising taxes must be a priority of this Congress.

Mr. President, it is ironic that we begin debate on the budget resolution today, May 15. Each year, the non-partisan Tax Foundation calculates its tax freedom day, and that is the day on which Americans stop working just to pay their State, Federal, and local taxes and actually begin keeping their earnings for themselves.

Now let us go back to 1925. Tax freedom day arrived on February 6. But this year, Americans had to wait until May 7 before they were allowed to keep the first dime of their own money. Mr. President, 1996 marked the latest arrival ever for tax freedom day. In fact, tax freedom day has just jumped ahead an entire week since President Clinton took office because under Bill Clinton's watch the Government is taking more from the paychecks of middle-class Americans than ever before.

Let me repeat that. Despite all the claims you hear about Bill Clinton doing well with the budget and the deficit, tax freedom day is a week later under Bill Clinton than ever before because, under the watch of President Bill Clinton, he is taking more money out of the pockets of American taxpayers than ever before.

I also want to make a couple of notes on some of the charges or responses we have heard today from some of our Democratic colleagues, and I will just go back to Senator EXON and some of the comments he made, that Congress will step in to save Medicare. Senator FRIST of Tennessee is more of an expert on this than I am, and he has done a good job of laying it out and trying to explain what happens, but we know the President is using smoke and mirrors when he says he is going to take $55 billion out of Medicare and move it into the general fund so it will make it look like it is solvent. And when Mr. EXON says Government or Congress will step in to save it, what does he mean? The President has ignored the issue. How they would step in and save it would be to raise your taxes.

Let us not talk about it today, but if we get the opportunity we will come in and we will raise our taxes. Also, about the claims that they passed the 1993 budget plan without a single Republican vote, we are very proud of that, that we were not part of raising taxes in 1993.

My colleague from California, a few minutes ago, was talking about a smaller Government today under President Clinton than ever before, and a higher Government level under President Reagan in the 1980's. But I think that is when you take into consideration all military personnel as well. The truth is, under this administration we have more bureaucrats and more people working in Government outside of the military than at any time in history. So they have not shrunk the size of the Federal Government. They have shrunk the size of the military in order to come up with those numbers.

Then lower deficits, the reason we have lower deficits today is because of higher taxes. They are taking more money from the average taxpayer to offset the increase in spending. Also, we have enjoyed some lower interest rates over the last couple of years. But when we are talking about spending, it continues to grow out of control, so we have not reduced the size of the Government, we have not eased the spending burden on Americans, especially when you look again at the fact that tax freedom day comes 1 week later today than it did 3 years ago.

And then the gas tax. I tell you, some just cannot stand to let go of a tax no matter how small they try to make it look. They are saying the 4.3 cents is going to go into the pockets of oil companies. That is doubtful. When they reduced the excise tax on air fares, when the Government tax went off, that was immediately passed on to the consumer in a rebate. But no matter what that question might be, we do know one thing, the $5 billion in that increased gas taxes come out of the pockets of taxpayers and it has gone into the pockets of bigger Government.

When we talk about cutting and backloading our budgets, and we are charged we do not do any better than what the President has proposed in his budget—there are some very stark differences. Our budget, over the life of 7 years, begins to trim the size and scope of the Federal Government and we will enjoy compounded savings in the fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh year of our budget. But the President's plan takes 100 percent of its backloading reductions in the last 2 years, and it takes it directly out of discretionary spending. I do not think there is one Member of this Congress who could stand up and tell the mayors and Governors of this country and others they are going to make that deep of a cut in the last 2 years. That will not happen.

So we do have some differences in how we achieve the balanced budget. It seems they always try to find some good out of a bad situation. On the farm you would call that trying to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear. But the news is more discouraging for taxpayers of Minnesota because national tax freedom day came and went 8 days ago, but Minnesotans do not keep their own dollars until today. That is, 136 days into 1996, because of higher State and local taxes, and the differences in the Federal tax burden, Minnesota is tied with Wisconsin in having the fourth latest tax freedom day in the Nation. Only the residents of Connecticut, New York, and New Jersey pay higher taxes than we do in Minnesota. That is nearly 20 weeks, over 800 hours on the job, just to pay Uncle Sam.

By imposing his record-breaking $255 billion tax increase in 1993, again, President Clinton bears the responsibility for ever-increasing tax burdens from singles to families to seniors to job providers. Every segment of society has felt the pinch. Motorists were hit especially hard by the President's gas tax increase, which again boosted the cost of gasoline by nearly $5 billion every year.

So, whatever you call it, the Clinton crunch or the middle-class squeeze, as long as taxes keep rising, the dollars Americans have left over to provide for their families will keep falling. It must be the goal of Congress to help Americans earn more money and keep more money so they can do more for themselves, their kids, their communities, and their churches.

The budget resolution we begin debating today will go a long way toward ensuring tax freedom day arrives earlier next year for all Americans. Mr. President, its cutting taxes provisions could not come at a better time. Government has become a looming presence in the lives of the American people. Each year the people are asked to turn more responsibilities over to the Federal Government for Government regulation, for Government support. From the time they get up in the morning until they go to bed at night, there are very few aspects of American daily life that are not touched now by the hand of government.

So government has been forced to grow just to keep up. Consider that government spending at the Federal, State, and local level has jumped from 12 percent of the national income in 1930 to 42 percent today, and the burden for keeping these ever-ballooning bureaucracies in operation has fallen on the taxpayers, of course, through more and higher taxes.

The increase has been dramatic. Between 1934 and 1995, individual Federal income taxes as a percentage of gross domestic product rose 1,114 percent.

Today, the typical American family faces a tax burden from all levels of government of 38 percent, and most middle-class American families are turning more money over to the government than they are spending for their family's food, clothing, shelter, and transportation combined. Families with children are now the lowest after-tax income group in America, below elderly households, single persons and families without children.

A significant number of families are relying on a second job just to pull themselves above the poverty line and to meet their annual tax obligations. The majority of families who have reached a middle-class standard of living are families with two incomes. They are still trying to pursue the American dream, but the ever-increasing tax burden keeps pushing it out of reach.

According to the Gallup organization, 67 percent of the people say they are handing over too much of their own money to the Federal Government. They might feel differently if they were getting a fair return on the investment, but Americans see their hard-earned dollars being wasted by the Federal Government. They look at the services they are getting in return and they feel like they have been taken to the cleaners.

It has always been easy for past Congresses to be generous with somebody else's money. This Congress, however, is no longer willing to let the Government gamble away the taxpayers' hard-earned dollars. In fact, we are going to keep those dollars out of the Government's hands in the first place. The centerpiece of our balanced budget plan is the $500 per child tax credit, and I am proud this desperately needed provision remains at the heart of our legislation. The tax credit alone will allow 28 million taxpaying households to keep $23 billion of their own money each year.

In my home State of Minnesota, the tax credit would return $477 million every year to families who work hard, pay their bills, and struggle every day to care for their children without relying on the Government.

In addition another 3.5 million households nationwide will find the $500-per-child tax credit tax liability has eliminated their tax liability entirely; 3.5 million households. President Clinton has promised a middle-class tax cut of his own, but, again, it is virtually nonexistent in his 1997 budget. Let us look at what he calls for.

To qualify for the President's version of the child tax credit your child has to be under the age of 13—meaning that just about the time you need that tax relief the most, it would dry up. In addition, it would only be $300 per child for 3 of its 5 years, and then it would be abruptly terminated 2 years early. The $122 billion in tax relief Congress is offering in our budget resolution is real tax relief. It is not a paper gimmick.

The second plank of the legislation before us is the promise to balance the budget by the year 2002. Every year the Federal Government is spending billions and billions more than it takes in. Because of 4 decades of fiscal insanity, the national debt has today eclipsed $5 trillion and continues to rise. Just the interest alone on a debt that massive is accumulating at the rate of $4 million an hour. If our national debt were shared equally among all Americans, each of us would have to pay up $19,000 for every man, woman, and child in this country. Every child born today in the United States of America comes into the world already saddled with a debt of more than $19,000. The share for an average family is $75,000.

So the first, most important result of a balanced budget would be to free our children and grandchildren from the economic burden they will inherit from this generation, a burden they did not ask for and one they certainly do not deserve. Because we have been able to begin reining in spending over the past year, our budget reaches balance in 6 years, not 7 as we first proposed a year ago. By contrast, the President's 1997 budget plan never achieves balance. It achieves an annual budget deficit of $84 billion by the year 2002. Our plan achieves its goals without dramatic cuts of any kind—except in the deficit.

Spending on Medicare, Medicaid, Social Security, welfare programs, and the earned income tax credit will all continue to grow to meet this Nation's needs over the 6-year life of our budget.

Keeping promises may be considered out of style here in the Nation's Capital City, where promises are a dime a dozen among the professional politicians, but back in Minnesota a promise is something a person does not back down on, even if it was made by a politician.

With our budget resolution and its meaningful tax relief, its protections to ensure the solvency of the Medicare Program, its reform of the welfare system, its commitment to a balanced budget by the year 2002, this Congress is keeping the promises that we made to the American taxpayers.

Thank you very much, Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator from Michigan will withhold.

APPOINTMENT BY THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair, on behalf of the President pro tempore, pursuant to Public Law 94-201, appoints the following individuals as members of the Board of Trustees of the American Folklife Center: James F. Hoy, of Kansas, and Charles E. Trimble, of Nebraska.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION ON THE BUDGET

The Senate continued with the consideration of the concurrent resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, at this time, I yield to the Senator from Missouri such time as he may need, up to 15 minutes, to speak on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, my sincere thanks to the acting floor manager and to the Chair.

A comment was made a few minutes ago when I was on the floor that maybe some of the newer Members of the Senate did not really understand how we have to balance the budget in the Federal Government.

I am one who is not new around here, and I would like to say that I appreciate very much the interest and enthusiasm and commitment brought by the acting floor manager, the previous speaker, the Senator from Minnesota; the previous acting floor manager, the Senator from Tennessee; and the occupant of the chair, a junior colleague from Missouri, all of whom have shown great dedication to the need to balance the budget and to come to this body without any preconceived notions that the old ways are the only way we can do it.

Frankly, we have broken new ground. I do a little bit of sowing of seeds, and I know how difficult it is to break new ground. If you have tried breaking up sod that has not been broken up before, you realize that is not an easy task. We have benefited a great deal by the fact that we brought in people and we have in this body new Members who represent their constituents and who believe, as our constituents overwhelmingly do, that there is no reason why the old way of spending more and more than the Federal Government takes in is good enough for the future.

Mr. President, we have put $5 trillion of debt on the backs of our children. Each year's deficit, if it is running $100 or $200 billion, adds to that debt. The interest rates build up, and our children are going to be looking at a time when they are working to pay tax dollars that could go almost exclusively to pay interest on the debt that our generation has run up because we are unable to balance the budget.

Today, we are involved in what I consider to be maybe not the most exciting but perhaps the most important series of discussions and debates we have had on this floor. How do we get our national budget back on track? How do we ensure that continuing deficits do not bankrupt the Federal Government, do not allow vital programs, like Medicare part A, to go broke and do not ruin the economy by bringing back high rates of inflation, stagflation, high unemployment, and stagnating wages?

It is very important that we be clear and that our colleagues and the people we serve understand what we are talking about.

My good friend from Nebraska, the ranking member on the Democratic side on the Budget Committee, has said that there is little difference between the numbers in the Senate committee-passed budget and the President's budget. He gave us the admonition, "Let's be honest," and I agree with him. I do not agree on the numbers that he presents, but I agree with him on the need to be honest. We both agree on the need for the St. Louis Cardinals to improve their record, but that is for another day's discussion. We do have many things in common, just a different set of figures that we are using.

What we are working from are two different sets of numbers. I came to this floor yesterday with the very simple proposition that numbers do not lie. Or do they? It is the numbers that count. We heard in the 1992 campaign, "It's the economy, stupid," but when you are talking about the budget, it is the numbers that count.

The President and his staff and the Office of Management and Budget have given us the numbers to work with. This is the budget supplement; this is the appendix. This has all the numbers the President is recommending. This puts forward the President's priorities. They are different from the priorities that have been included in the numbers in the budget passed by the Senate Budget Committee.

Even though some may say they are close, I think there are very significant differences. That is why we have these debates. We do have an independent scorekeeper to keep us honest. I will remember President Clinton's stirring call in 1993 at the State of the Union Message that we needed to find a way that we could agree on what our proposals did, and he said we should use the Congressional Budget Office as the independent, objective professional scorekeeper, and that is what we have done. In the budget proposal passed out of the Budget Committee under the direction of Chairman DOMENICI, we have produced a budget that reaches balance, according to CBO, in the year 2002.

The President sent us initially a budget which he obviously was not sure whether it was going to get to balance, because in his budget message, he included some fail-safe mechanisms. There is nothing wrong with fail-safe mechanisms, but when it comes to the point that you have to use these fail-safe mechanisms, it is important to recognize what they do.

In this book, "Budget Supplement: A Vision for the Future," page 13, it says:

In case the new assumptions produce a deficit in 2002, the President's budget proposes an immediate adjustment to the annual limits or caps on discretionary spending, lowering them enough to reach balance in 2002. The President is committed not only to proposing a budget that reaches balance according to CBO, but reaching an agreement with Congress to enact such a budget.

I think that is very forthright and that is good. The problem is that the numbers presented by the President to CBO do not really reach a balance in the year 2002. There are almost $77 billion in cuts or increases in revenue that have to be made in the final years to get to a balance.

So the CBO, in scoring the President's budget, has assumed what the President put into his budget, and that is, he will put a tax increase for families in it, as well as a $53 billion cut in discretionary spending outlays in the years 2001 and 2002.

Let us be very clear about it. The President's budget has said, if CBO does not score us as reaching balance, then here are the automatic steps that must be taken to get to balance. CBO found, in fact, the budget did not get to balance; therefore, CBO said, we will impose the cuts he proposed as an automatic offset to the deficit. That, Mr. President, is what we need to talk about.

Some of my colleagues earlier today on the other side have presented budget charts showing the spending initially proposed by the President. It does not look like much difference. But those are not the charts that reflect what happens when the CBO performs its duty under the President's budget to cut spending to bring it to a deficit of zero in 2002.

I remind my colleagues on this side and the other side that if we are talking about the President's budget, any time a colleague puts up a budget showing the President's number, if I am on the floor, I will ask if that budget reflects the CBO cuts as directed by the President in his budget message. For those of my colleagues who may be here, I invite them to do the same thing, because I think it is very, very important that we talk about apples and apples. If we are going to get to a balanced budget as the President says, then how we get there is the vitally important number that we have to consider as we go forth and vote on these competing proposals for the budget for the next 6 years.

These are the numbers the President has proposed. These are the numbers in these books. Mr. President, unless and until he sends up to this body and to the House another set of books and releases them to the press to say that they have come up with a new budget, then this is the budget we have to work with. These are the figures that he has presented to us.

Let me take my colleagues through a description of some of the things what the Clinton budget, as scored by CBO, would actually do and see how it measures up to some of the claims that are made for it in the text.

In the description of the budget plan, a little book called, "A Citizen's Guide to the Federal Budget," this book says, "The President's 1997 budget would reach balance over the next 7 years by cutting unnecessary and lower priority spending." Remember that; "lower priority spending" is going to be cut.

It goes on to say, at the bottom of page 31, or down in the lower part of it:

The budget saves $297 billion in discretionary spending, cutting unnecessary and lower priority spending, but investing in education and training, the environment, science and technology, law enforcement and other priorities that will raise living standards and improve the quality of American life.

Mr. President, I also serve as chairman of the Senate appropriations subcommittee dealing with a number of these important areas. I think it might be well to take a look at some of these more interesting areas and also some of the areas funded in other budgets which are handled by other subcommittees on which I serve.

Let us start off with the Food and Drug Administration. It is vitally important for ensuring safety in the food supply and drugs. This green line across the top shows what the Senate Budget Committee reported out. Essentially that is a flat line. That is tough. That is holding their feet to the fire.

That is making them absorb inflationary increases, additional workload. That is tough, but that is doable.

But take a look at what happens to this spending when CBO implements its cuts. It drops from over $850 million down to just below $700 million, just above $650 million, by the year 2000. This is, I would say, about a 30 percent cut in the Food and Drug Administration. That is 25 percent. This is in the body that is supposed to keep our food supply safe and make sure we get good quality, reliable, efficacious drugs. That is something I challenge. Can we afford to cut the FDA that much? I do not think so.

Let us take another one. This one is very important. We are talking about the research that is done to deal with diseases and promoting cures for many of the diseases we have and the things that are of great concern to many people—the National Institutes of Health.

The President starts off with a nice little increase, but you can see by the year 2000, that has to fall off the table. That is almost a $2 billion cut in the budget of NIH to reach balance by the year 2002. Overall it is a 14 percent cut. Are we not going to need the research done by the National Institutes of Health in the year 2001 and 2002? I think we will. I am optimistic that we are going to discover cures. But I do not think we are going to make all the progress we can possibly make and then be able to shut down research at NIH. So I question the priority of slashing the NIH budget.

How about some of the other priorities? I have a responsibility for acting on, in our appropriations subcommittee, the budget for EPA. You all have heard a great deal about the President and his support for EPA. Who would have believed just a few months ago that the President's budget would leave EPA with less money 6 years from now than it got from Congress last year, and well below the budget proposal we are presenting this year? As I have said many times over, numbers do not lie.

This is what happens to funding under our Senate-passed budget resolution. We hold EPA at a flat line. We want to work to improve the way that EPA does its business. We think that there are new ideas that are being developed both within EPA and by groups supporting EPA that can give us tremendous progress as we shift more responsibilities to State and local governments and maintain a vitally important monitoring function at the national level and using more flexible means of achieving goals.

The President said it well in his budget: "If industry can come up with a better way, a cheaper way of doing it, let's do it the most effective way." We can live with it. But take a look at what happens to the President's budget under the numbers presented by the President and as scored by CBO. This EPA budget takes a very sharp drop from just above $7.2 billion to below $6.4 billion by the year 2002.

This is a tremendous slash for the environment. He said, I thought, in his message in here that one of his priorities is making sure we take care of the environment. I do not think his budget does that. He says, "We need to invest in education, training, the environment, science and technology." I think our budget does a lot better job of doing that than his does.

Oh, yeah, by the way, science and technology. Our subcommittee also finances the National Science Foundation. We provide funding for it. Look what happens to the funding in the National Science Foundation. The Senate budget includes a slow but steady upward path. The President's budget gives us a little bump up here and then it drops off the table again because it has to. The President himself ordered that cuts be made to bring the budget in balance in the year 2002. Under CBO scoring that is the only way it is going to get to balance.

Finally, I addressed yesterday the budget of the Veterans' Administration, the agency which provides care to the medically indigent veterans and those veterans who have been injured in the service of their country, a very, very important group of people who depend solely on the Veterans' Administration.

These people would see the money devoted to their health care cut by almost 25 percent. The Clinton budget cuts $12.9 billion out of the VA budget by the year 2002. We maintain essentially level funding. That is a cut that the veterans of this country cannot live with, and we in good conscience cannot live with.

I mentioned to this body yesterday that the President's people have said, "Don't believe these numbers." The Secretary of the Veterans' Administration, Jesse Brown, when he testified before my subcommittee, said, "The President has assured me that these will not be the numbers. He is going to negotiate with us." A representative of the White House Office of Management and Budget was quoted in the papers in our home State saying these numbers that are being presented, we are misrepresenting, because we took the numbers out of the book and out of the CBO. He said, "Those are just rough general guidelines. Don't believe them."

So it is the official policy of the administration not to believe the official policy. Until they send us up new numbers, send us a new budget, that is what we have to work with. That is what the priorities are: Cutting veterans, cutting national science, EPA, NIH.

Mr. President, that is not the way to get to the balanced budget we need. We can do so by following the plan outlined by Chairman DOMENICI. I urge all my colleagues to look at the contrasting numbers and make up their mind. I hope they will support the budget supported by the Senate Budget Committee.

I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

RECESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now stand in recess until the hour of 3:30 p.m.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 1:30 p.m., recessed until 3:30 p.m.; whereupon, the Senate reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer [Mr. KEMPTHORNE].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader is recognized.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR BOB DOLE

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I just had the opportunity to listen to the majority leader make his announcement of his future. I wanted to come to the floor this afternoon to salute BOB DOLE's 35 years of dedication to this institution and to his country. No one has given more, and no one has greater admiration in this body than does BOB DOLE.

I congratulate him on his decision. I believe it was the right one. Obviously, it is never easy to leave this institution. But he does so with our good wishes. While we will have the opportunity to serve with BOB DOLE for at least the next several weeks, we wish BOB, his wife Elizabeth, and his daughter, Robin, well as they pursue their future.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of the quorum.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, as a matter of fairness, I suggest the absence of a quorum and ask unanimous consent that the time be charged equally to both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SENATOR DOLE'S ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I just watched Senator DOLE make his announcement. I want to join with Senator DASCHLE in his comments. I have worked with BOB DOLE from my days in the House and have come to have great respect for the huge contribution he has made here in the Senate and to our country. I think sometimes we get so partisan here that we forget the contributions that people are making.

Let me add one other thing, because media coverage is so negative all the time on candidates and officeholders that I think one thing is ignored, which is that we have a good choice between two outstanding candidates for President in Bill Clinton and BOB DOLE. For philosophical reasons, because of who might be appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court, and that type of thing, I am supporting Bill Clinton. But I am not going to buy a one-way ticket to Canada if BOB DOLE gets elected. I think the American people have a choice between two very fine, substantial candidates. That is the way our system should work.

In all the negatives that people will hear between now and November 5, the American people should not lose sight of that.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum and ask that the time be equally divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION ON THE BUDGET

The Senate continued with the consideration of the concurrent resolution. Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I yield whatever time is needed off of our time to the Senator from Maryland.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland is recognized.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I appreciate the courtesy of the chairman of the committee and of the ranking member of the committee. I just want to say at the outset what an outstanding job I think the distinguished Senator from Nebraska, Senator EXON, has done with respect to the budget that we are now considering. I was privileged to be very supportive of his position in the committee, and continue to be so. I want to thank him for the leadership that he provided on our side of the aisle.

Mr. President, I want to take just a moment or two to sound what may be an alarm bell in the night and take what is perceived as not the most popular position. But I want to talk a little bit about the 150 account—that is the international affairs account in this budget—and to simply sound a warning that I think we have been reducing that 150 account in successive years in such a way that we are now impeding upon our ability to perform as a great power in the world.

The budget that is before us and that has been brought out of committee would cut the international affairs portion of the budget by more than $1 billion from the President's request. The President requested $19.2 billion, and the bill reported from the committee cuts it to $18.1 billion.

The actual international affairs spending in this particular account in the budget, which covers all of our responsibilities abroad other than the military, was $20.8 billion in fiscal year 1994, and $20.1 billion in fiscal year 1995. It is estimated at $18.5 billion for fiscal year 1996. So we are making a very significant cut from historical levels.

In other words, international affairs spending has been brought down from $20.8 billion in fiscal year 1994 to $18.1 billion in fiscal year 1997, which is a cut of almost $3 billion just in that short period of time. That represents a cut of about 15 percent in the budget that we have to carry out our responsibilities internationally.

In fact, our international affairs budget has been reduced by 50 percent in real terms over the last decade. In other words, if you adjust for inflation and take a 10-year period, we, in effect, are cutting by 50 percent our ability to carry out programs in the international arena. We are in the process now of asking the international affairs budget to do more and are providing less with which it can be done.

During the 1980's, we did not have democratic, market-oriented regimes in Eastern Europe. At that time we were building nuclear weapons instead of trying to help the Russians destroy and dismantle them. We had one Embassy to cover a country, the Soviet Union, where we now have 15 separate countries. At that time neither Jordan nor the Palestinians recognized Israel's right to exist, so we had no stake in their economic vitality. We had economic sanctions against South Africa; now we are trying to help South Africa rebuild. All of these are new responsibilities and opportunities over the last few years.

So, in fact, our responsibilities increased rather than diminished, and particularly if the arena of competition or concern shifts from the military into the political and economic arena.

Only about 1 percent of the Federal budget is spent on foreign aid, and less than half of that goes to humanitarian and development programs. In fact, the United States ranks dead last among 21 industrialized members of the OECD in the percentage of GNP that we spend on development assistance. All of these other countries have made the judgment that they have an important interest in helping the rest of the world to develop; so much so that they are prepared to commit a larger percentage of their GNP than we are to development assistance.

I know these are not popular facts to bring before the country, but I think it is important for those of us who carry the responsibility which comes with being Members of the U.S. Senate to stop and consider it because we have to square the rhetoric about being the world's leader with the reality of how that is accomplished.

In fact, there is, apparently, a great deal of misconception across the country. A nationwide poll done last January by the University of Maryland found that a majority of Americans, when asked what percentage of the budget they think is spent on foreign assistance said 15 percent or higher. The majority said 15 percent or higher. When they were asked how much they thought should be spent, they said on average about 5 percent. In fact, we spend about 1 percent. There is a tremendous disparity in perception. The majority think we spend more than 15 percent of our budget for this purpose when we in fact spend about 1 percent.

I am very frank to say to my colleagues that if the United States is going to continue to be a great power, we have to commit the resources to carry out our responsibilities as a great power. This is particularly true in the post-cold-war era, when a range of complex problems faces us. That means coming up with adequate funding for the conduct of our foreign affairs. In my view, we have already cut well below the minimum level that is necessary to sustain American leadership in the world.

I really want to sound that warning. I am persuaded that over time, if this trend continues, it will become obvious to everyone what we have done to ourselves. But I think we need to apply some analysis and attention now in order to ascertain that situation, and I am frank to say I think we have crossed the danger point and are now in the zone where our leadership ability is being eroded and undermined.

The various cuts have very detrimental effects on our ability to conduct an effective foreign policy. It would be one thing if people were saying we want a little America, something with which I do not agree. But if they say we are going to have a little America and we are going to shrink back from the responsibilities and, therefore, we are going to shrink resources, that at least would be a consistent position.

But to articulate a rhetorical position in terms of America being the world leader and playing the first and foremost role in exercising international responsibilities, and then have a huge gap between that statement and the resources with which to carry out those responsibilities, is illogical and inconsistent.

The United States now is the largest debtor at the United Nations. As the Washington Post put it in a recent editorial, we are the "global deadbeat." We are so far behind in paying our assessments to some of the international financial institutions that our arrearages exceed our scheduled annual payments. We are, indeed, exasperating and disappointing our friends and allies who desire and support American leadership. They desire and support American leadership. But we continually dictate ever longer lists of demands and provide ever shorter resources with which to carry them out.

Aid to the poorest countries has been reduced by nearly 30 percent from last year, jeopardizing the progress we have made in reversing environmental degradation, slowing population growth, preventing the spread of deadly disease, building economic self-sufficiency, promoting democracy, resolving conflicts peacefully, stemming the flow of illegal drugs and countering the threat of nuclear proliferation. All of these are very important objectives.

Consulates have been closed and embassy staffs reduced all over the world, making it impossible to provide the services that Americans abroad expect and deserve. We have closed 30 posts abroad since 1993, and 13 more are slated for closure this year.

Some of this scrubdown of posts needed to be done. But once again, I think we have gone beyond the point of diminishing returns and we now are really eroding our capacity to carry out an effective foreign policy.

While some question the importance of ambassadors and embassies in an era of CNN, supersonic travel, and instant global communication, I think this skepticism is misplaced. We need to have our ambassadors and their embassy teams on the ground, around the globe promoting human rights, conflict resolution, antiterrorism and counter-narcotics cooperation, U.S. economic interests and U.S. exports, for example. Many of the embassies have significantly improved their performance by working with the American business community in a very significant and substantial way.

We need consular officers to assist U.S. visitors and business people, to issue visas, replace lost passports and cut through redtape when Americans run into difficulties abroad. We need them to spread good will, to exemplify American values and to deal with sensitive situations before they become full-blown emergencies. This experienced corps of professionals is the face of our Nation around the world.

Yet our diplomatic service is forced to rely on computer software, office equipment, buildings and services that are outmoded, unreliable, inefficient, and sometimes even unsafe. Diplomacy in the 1990's is being carried out on the technology of the 1960's and 1970's, and no relief is in sight.

These cuts are particularly troubling when juxtaposed to very large, unrequested increases in defense spending. The budget adds almost as much for defense, over and above the amount the Pentagon asked for, than is spent on the entire foreign aid budget for a year. In other words, we are cutting substantially the 150 account, our diplomacy account, our political and economic interest account, at the same time that we are increasing the military account over and above what the Pentagon sought.

It seems to me a matter of common sense that by investing a little bit in preventive diplomacy you may be able to address situations while they are amenable to economic and political solutions rather than wait until they become full-blown crises and require the presence of our military. By sacrificing investment in preventive political and economic measures, we will only be postponing and probably escalating the ultimate costs.

Of course, effective diplomacy is enhanced by a strong military and the readiness to apply it, but our military strength ought not to become our prime recourse for influencing situations in the international arena. In fact, I think the task of the next century will be to hone our diplomatic, economic, and political skills so that we can protect our interests without having to put our troops in harm's way.

It is increasingly clear that in the 21st century American interests in the world will be heavily economic and political. We need to ensure open markets and fair trade to promote American prosperity. We need to avert conflicts that will cause human suffering, refugee flows, environmental destruction, and economic dislocation. We must combat international terrorism and prevent the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction.

None of these goals can be achieved on a unilateral basis. None of them can be undertaken by military action alone. And none of them can be achieved without sufficient resources. The 150 account is important to meeting our responsibilities as a world leader. By not allocating adequate resources, we may indeed encounter disastrous consequences. Further cuts are not just ill-conceived; they are downright dangerous to our national security and to achieving American objectives around the world.

I urge my colleagues, although I know it runs against a perception of popular sentiment, to examine carefully what we are doing to our ability as a nation to carry out our responsibilities as a world leader. It cannot be done if we do not commit the resources with which to do it. And we now have reached the point where I think we have so drastically reduced our commitment in this area that we are markedly affecting our ability to act as a world leader.

Mr. President, I yield the floor, and I thank the distinguished ranking member for yielding me time.

Mr. EXON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. DOMENICI. Did the Senator want to speak at this point?

Mr. EXON. No. I was just going to try and get embodied in an agreement what we had arranged for. The Senator from Delaware would like 3 or 4 minutes on another subject. I would like time likewise. Then we had general agreement that we would go to Senator GRASSLEY with his amendment. We have all agreed to that, and I would just like to suggest it.

Mr. DOMENICI. The Senator from Delaware wanted to 2 minutes.

Mr. EXON. OK. I will follow the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. DOMENICI. I will yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Delaware.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware is recognized for 2 minutes.

THE RESIGNATION OF BOB DOLE

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, the news by our esteemed majority leader that he will be resigning both his leadership post and his Senate seat is, indeed, bittersweet. I am sure I speak for all of my colleagues when I say that the Senate will miss BOB DOLE—his intelligence, his courage, his love for his country, and his unparalleled leadership skills. In Europe, 50 years ago, as a young lieutenant, BOB DOLE was willing to make the ultimate sacrifice for his country in war. And today for the sake of his country and the Congress, BOB DOLE is willing to leave the job he loves because he loves his country and Congress so much. This is a bold move by a man whose life has been the ultimate story of courage. America needs his courage, his moral compass, his leadership in the White House, and this move will enable him to focus much more on the road to the White House.

Because of BOB DOLE's leadership, the 104th Congress will be remembered as the Congress which finally said enough is enough. No more excuses. No more Washington gimmicks. Balance the budget. With BOB DOLE's leadership we have forever altered the debate. The question is no longer whether to balance the budget, but how; not whether to cut taxes, but how; not whether to reduce the size of the Federal bureaucracy, but how; not whether to reform welfare, but how; and not whether to return power to the States, but instead how.

Under BOB DOLE's leadership, the Congress for the first time in four decades passed legislation to balance the Federal budget. BOB DOLE's legacy of leadership in the Senate will only be surpassed by what he will do for America from the White House. I am proud to be a Member of the Dole team, and I will be even prouder to assist a Dole administration next year in carrying out BOB DOLE's agenda for America: lower, fairer, simpler taxes, less Government and a balanced budget.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska is recognized.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, my few remarks about my friend BOB DOLE and his announcement today will be devoid of any political motivations whatsoever.

BOB DOLE has been a friend of mine ever since I came into the Senate. We have differed frequently on many issues, but we have been together on many issues. The announcement today that we heard about this morning came as a considerable shock to this Senator because whatever the future holds, the Senate in my view has lost a tremendously dedicated individual, a talented leader on the Republican side of the aisle, a man I never hesitated a moment in going to on any subject. He has always been fair to this Senator. We have clashed from time to time on issues. But fairness and confidence and being a very capable Senator and a Senate leader has been the hallmark of BOB DOLE.

I simply say that we will miss him very much in the U.S. Senate, and I would have preferred that he not take the additional step that he announced today with regard to resigning from the Senate. I recognize that in running for President of the United States, it was most difficult to be here, to be a leader. However, I thought the announcement that I read in the papers this morning with regard to Senator DOLE, recognizing that he could not do justice to his Presidential race and be a full-time leader of the Senate and the suggestion that he turn this over to other Members of the Republican majority, seemed to make sense to me. But, for whatever reason, BOB DOLE has made the decision that I think he had to make. I only thank him for the friendship.

I will value the few remaining weeks, week or two or three, that I will have the privilege of serving together with him in the U.S. Senate.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I do not want Senator GRASSLEY to think we are procrastinating and trying to put his amendment off. He is going to have to be absent for just a few minutes.

Mr. President, I will use just a few minutes here as in morning business. I ask my remarks be as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE RESIGNATION OF BOB DOLE

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, the last 3 or 4 hours have been a time of very mixed emotions for many of us. A while ago when we were crammed, all of us Republican Senators, in BOB DOLE's office, when he told us of his desires and wishes, I can say that was a room where grown men, more than one, had a few tears in their eyes, including our distinguished majority leader.

I, for one, will miss him very, very much here in the Senate. But I think when we finally take stock of the U.S. Senate—we are now 208 years old, but if we were to take stock, now, of the 208 years of the U.S. Senate, looking for the giants of the Senate, I am not the least bit reluctant to say that whatever short list one chooses as part of history, BOB DOLE will be among the giants and the real leaders of the U.S. Senate. There is no doubt in my mind, if you take just the last 100 years, that BOB DOLE would once again show up in the top three, four, five U.S. Senators of this entire modern century.

So, obviously, you cannot take somebody like that out of here and not have a big void. We will clearly miss his leadership and his marvelous ability to tell funny stories and get us off guard and get things done. But essentially his life has been one of real sacrifice for the country. Most Americans do not know that. They have to find out.

BOB DOLE dedicated weeks and months and years to getting his body in the position where he could conduct business and be a Senator after his tragic World War II accident on the front lines. In that, he learned about determination and about fortitude and about strength, and how much strength he really had. He has been giving since then, giving and giving and giving—not to the Senate, but to the American people. And, since he has made the decision that he wants to be President, I, this Senator, wholeheartedly support what he has chosen to do. I hope it is everything he plans it to be, and I think it will be.

He will go to the American people not as the majority leader or Senator, but as a man from Kansas who has sacrificed more than once for this country and will try to do it one more time. I have nothing but great admiration and respect.

My comments to him today are: The very best to you, BOB DOLE. Hopefully, this decision will take you to the White House. If it does, it will be the greatest decision you ever made, and a great decision for America.

But, indeed, there is no question the American people are going to get to find out who BOB DOLE is and what he is all about. And if that is done, it will be a fair election. For if he cannot do that, if the people do not get to know him as he is, it will not be a fair election, not one where he will have the right kind of chance to be President.

So those are my few remarks for today. In time I will say more about him, recalling some of the things we have done together.

With that, I yield to Senator GRASSLEY for his amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMPSON). The Senator from Iowa.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION ON THE BUDGET

The Senate continued with the consideration of the concurrent resolution.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield myself as much time as I might consume, but I would like the Chair to notify me when I have 15 minutes left because I want to make sure my cosponsors get ample time to speak on the amendment as well.

Did the Senator from Nebraska want the floor?

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, could I pose a question now so we could establish this? This is the first amendment that is being offered. Do we have time agreements on amendments?

I remember in the opening remarks, the chairman of the committee indicated some time limits on the amendments. For the information of this Senator and the Senate as a whole, will the Chair please indicate how much time is allotted to the amendment, the first degree? I assume that timeframe would continue unless we get unanimous consent at some future time to change it. What is the agreement on time limits?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On the Budget Act, there are 2 hours equally divided on first-degree amendments, 1 hour equally divided on second-degree amendments.

Mr. EXON. So there are 2 hours, and 1 hour, half an hour a side, on any amendments to it. Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Second-degree. The Senator is correct.

Mr. EXON. I thank the Chair, and I thank my friend from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I assume that my time is starting right now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has not called up his amendment. We will not proceed until the amendment is at the desk.

AMENDMENT NO. 3963

(Purpose: To reduce defense spending)

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. GRASSLEY], for himself, Mr. EXON, Mr. KOHL, Mr. KERRY, Mr. FEINGOLD, and Mr. HARKIN, proposes an amendment numbered 3963.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 4, line 8, decrease the amount by $8,300,000,000.

On page 4, line 17, decrease the amount by $2,300,000,000.

On page 8, line 3, decrease the amount by $8,300,000,000.

On page 8, line 4, decrease the amount by $2,300,000,000.

On page 52, line 11, decrease the amount by $8,300,000,000.

On page 52, line 12, decrease the amount by $2,300,000,000.

On page 59, at the end of line 2, insert "This section shall not apply to defense discretionary budget authority and budget outlays caps for fiscal year 1997."

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield myself 15 minutes, Mr. President, off of my time.

For those on the Budget Committee, this amendment attempts to do almost exactly what I did in the Budget Committee, somewhat lower numbers, but also the numbers are not fenced in the truest sense of the word because, under the budget resolution, that would be subject to a point of order, and we wanted to make sure the amendment was germane.

So to the Budget Committee members, we are still trying to reduce the deficit by the amount we are saving on defense. For the rest of the Senate, I want to say my approach is the same, the same goal, lower numbers. We are speaking about reducing the defense numbers, and we are speaking about reducing the deficit when we save money on defense. The exception to that would be the President of the United States capability of declaring that he needs more money for defense and having that be considered, in an emergency, and not having to have offsetting numbers.

It strikes a balance, I believe, between administration proposals for defense spending and that proposed in the budget resolution.

The amendment would reduce the budget authority for defense for fiscal year 1997 by $8.3 billion below the budget resolution. Outlays for defense in fiscal year 1997 would be reduced by $2.3 billion. The savings are earmarked for deficit reduction.

Some of my friends might be concerned that down the road, we will need more funds for national security. In that case, this amendment allows the President to propose emergency spending for defense without requiring offsets.

I am pleased to be joined on this amendment as my main cosponsor by Senator EXON, a member of the Armed Services Committee and ranking Democrat on the Budget Committee, as well as Senators KOHL, KERRY, FEINGOLD, and my colleague from Iowa, Senator HARKIN. I should note this amendment is supported by the National Taxpayers Union, one of the top deficit hawk groups in Washington, DC, and I ask unanimous consent to print that letter in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL TAXPAYERS UNION,
Alexandria, VA, May 15, 1996.

Hon. CHARLES GRASSLEY,
U.S. Senate, Hart Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GRASSLEY: Thank you for contacting the National Taxpayers Union (NTU) regarding the amendment you plan to offer to the FY 1997 Budget Resolution in an effort to control defense spending.

Your amendment would "fence" $11.3 billion in budget authority and $2.9 billion in outlays (the difference between the President's proposal and the Committee's mark for FY 1997), making the additional funding contingent upon the President's certification that the funds are necessary for national security. If the President fails to make that certification the funds would be used to reduce the deficit.

America's taxpayers deserve a more fiscally responsible and cost effective federal government, as well as the lower taxes that should result from spending reductions.

Your legislation will be helpful in that regard, and therefore NTU is pleased to endorse it and urge your colleagues to support it.

Sincerely,

AL CORS, Jr.,
Director, Government Relations.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, just so everyone understands the history behind this amendment, let me call your attention to this chart. I want to call your attention to this chart because with the budget authority side of the chart, it lays out the history of where we are and where budget resolutions take us and where the President is.

Last year, the Senate budget resolution proposed that in fiscal year 1997, we should have this figure of $253.4 billion. What is important and significant about what we did last year and this year is that we had 60 Senators on a very bipartisan vote last year reject an amendment that would have increased the dollar amount of $253.4 billion, a bipartisan vote in the Senate not to go above $253.4 billion.

Now we have this budget resolution which has disregarded the Senate's action last year and disregarded last year's vote, practically the same membership in this body, and has proposed $265.6 billion for defense. That is the number in the resolution that is before us, $265.6 billion.

Simple arithmetic. That is $11.3 billion more than the President's mark. The President's mark is this middle figure. What he proposed to us in his budget this February, $254.3 billion. You can see the difference, $11 billion; $11.3 billion, to be exact.

It is also $12.2 billion more than the level voted by 60 Members of this body last year.

What the amendment offered by this Senator and my colleagues would do is provide a compromise by allowing defense to increase $3 billion above the President's mark and nearly $4 billion above the level voted by the Senate last year. That would be $4 billion above this figure of $253.4 billion.

So I hope that you realize that we are trying to do a compromise approach here, not just one of these take it or leave it, we want everything or we don't want anything approach.

It is a good compromise, I believe, that will address the concerns of those who want to ensure adequate spending for defense and also ensure that defense spending does not grow out of control.

I want to give some background and rationale for this amendment. It probably does not differ from the background and rationale that I would give for similar amendments I have offered over the many years that I have been in the Senate.

Every so often, since the 5th century B.C., some bright scholar states the obvious. The most recognized statement was by philosopher George Santayana when he said, and we have all heard it so many times:

Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it.

He goes on to say some very crucial and insightful things about learning from our experience. He says:

Progress . . . depends on retentiveness . . . [W]hen experience is not retained, as among savages, infancy is perpetual.

Mr. President, this body, the U.S. Senate, is coming dangerously close to what George Santayana described. We are close to acting like children. I know that might shock the public. At issue is whether the Senate is condemned to repeat the mistakes of the 1980's; specifically, whether we will pump up the defense budget with no justification and with no control over it and, in the process, we would be getting less defense than planned.

Last year during conference discussions—that is ironing out the differences between the House and the Senate on the budget resolution—we were promised Defense Department reforms. We were forced to support higher defense numbers, but the quid was that we would get reforms this year. We were told that there would be complete top-to-bottom reform of the Pentagon, so much so that it would change the Pentagon into a triangle.

Mr. President, I drive by the Pentagon each night that I go to my house that I occupy here in Washington—not my home, but my house. My home is in Iowa. Each night since last June 28 when we heard that in that conference—that is when we voted that conference report—I watched and waited. As of last night on my drive home, it is still a pentagon, it is not a triangle.

The justification for my amendment is to stop the raping and pillaging of the Treasury under the guise of national security. There is a very sophisticated con job going on with this defense budget, and I would like to describe it so that the taxpayers know exactly how it works, how the defense industrial military complex picks their pockets.

There are two facets of this con job. The first is bureaucratic; the second is congressional. Congress collaborates with defense bureaucrats in an extortion of the taxpayers who think they are paying for national security. Instead, they are paying for pork for Members of Congress.

The game the bureaucrats play is the most sophisticated. It took me a couple of years to figure this one out. First, the bureaucrats deliberately underestimate the cost of everything in the budget. That way, everything they want gets squeezed in. Nothing gets turned down. You can have it all, just like you can have your cake and eat it, too, almost. "Just get all the programs approved," the bureaucrat says, "we'll worry about the money later on."

You see, once a program gets started, programs hardly ever end. You might say they never end. Too many jobs and too many careers are at risk. When the actual bills come in, they say, "Oops, we've underestimated the costs. By gosh, we've got to do something about that. We need more money to buy all this stuff that we've committed."

That creates then constant pressure to raise the defense budget, but it does something else as well: there is not enough money to cover all the cost overruns, so we buy fewer quantities. This drives up the prices even further. Over time, because of bad management, we buy less for much more. This hurts our ability to defend our country. That is the bureaucrats' game.

Here is how it is handled when it gets to the Hill. We saw it last year, and we are seeing it again this year:

The Armed Services Committee collaborates with the Budget Committee. They find a nice fat defense number that can accommodate everyone's insatiable appetite for pork. The numbers start to move through the Budget Committee. Meanwhile, the Armed Services Committee starts to cram all their pet programs into the budget, all the way to the brim. There is even some overflowing, Mr. President.

The budget resolution then goes to the Budget Committee; from the Budget Committee to the floor. That is where we are today.

Some Senators offered amendments to squeeze the defense budget, to rid it of pork and waste, just like the Grassley amendment. But such an amendment is put at a great political disadvantage. The taxpayers are unaware of this, but members of leadership and members of the committees are busy behind the scenes twisting the arms of undecided Senators. They confront undecided Senators with a newly drafted defense bill crammed in with all the pet programs.

The undecideders are told, "If you vote to squeeze the defense budget, as Mr. GRASSLEY wants to do, we'll take program A, B, or C out of the bill. Your State will suffer. You'll lose jobs." Of course, that is intimidation. And some people are intimidated and vote then for fatter defense numbers.

What Senator wants to lose potential jobs in his or her State? These Senators might be intimidated, but for taxpayers it is extortion. They are really getting the shaft. The same thing happened last year. This year the Senate committee wised up and did the same thing as was done in the House last year. The bottom line is, bureaucratic and political games are wreaking havoc with the taxpayers' bottom line, all in the name of national security. They are conspiring against the taxpayers' interests, pure and simple.

I remind my colleagues of the promise accompanying last year's budget conference report, with the bloated defense budgets that I pointed out here—$265.6 billion. They said, you will get reforms next year. The reforms were supposed to be of infrastructure and base closures. The savings would then be used for modernization. This was the specific promise of the Secretary of Defense as well.

But we have the General Accounting Office out there, that nonpartisan group of people that are to make sure that we use honest numbers in Government. The General Accounting Office just completed a review of the infrastructure savings. The GAO's findings are truly amazing.

Despite four rounds of base closures since 1988, there are no savings. And now, despite very dramatic cuts in our force structure, there are no savings. DOD infrastructure costs are going up, not down.

On April 25, I spoke about this in detail on this floor, Mr. President, laying out all the facts. The promise was that we would have savings. The reality, Mr. President—there are no savings. It is not that there were not modest savings, the problem is, it has all been spent. It has been spent on new infrastructure projects like public affairs and headquarters and, in other words, creating more spin and fattening up headquarters. Overhead—that does not come very cheap. It soaked up all of the savings.

So as the force structure of our armed services gets smaller and smaller and smaller, headquarters gets bigger and bigger. It is still then a pentagon; it is not a triangle.

Once again, Mr. President, the Pentagon is proving that it cannot allocate money sensibly. Once again it is proving it cannot save money even with such golden opportunities given by base closures. That means that we will not have the money promised for the modernization so that we can meet the needs of our national security in this new budget environment we are in to balance the budget.

The question is, do we reward this bad management with even more money or do we hold the Department of Defense's feet to the fire? Do we support the defense budget in this resolution or do we put a meaningful constraint around it so that it will be managed better?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has used his 15 minutes.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield myself 1½ more minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right.

Mr. GRASSLEY. That is the essence then of my amendment. It is an attempt to better manage the Pentagon's resources, because enough is enough. Promised reforms are not the same as real reforms. We shovel billions into the defense budget on the promise of reforms. Historically the reforms have failed to materialize, yet we still throw good money after bad.

If we fail to learn the lessons of the past, as George Santayana preaches to us, "We're doomed to repeat them ad nauseam." If we do that again this year, Mr. President, we will be falling into the familiar trap once again expressed by the great philosopher Georg Hegel. He said, "We learn from history that we learn nothing from history."

So I urge my colleagues to avoid repeating the mistakes of the past. I ask them to vote for the bipartisan amendment, the Grassley-Exon amendment. I yield the floor.

Mr. EXON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I thank my colleague and friend from Iowa for yielding me time. I simply say that there undoubtedly will be opposition to this Grassley-Exon amendment. I certainly do not think it is proper for me to be managing the time in opposition to an amendment that I am a cosponsor of. So I just alert Senators who are likely opposed to this amendment that they should come here, and someone should assume the responsibility for managing the time against the amendment.

First, Mr. President, I am reminded of a couple years ago when the Democrats were the majority party in the Senate. And I teamed up with Senator GRASSLEY for an Exon-Grassley amendment at that time that proposed to cut $26 billion in outlays and $42 billion in budget authority over a 5-year period. We were working on a 5-year proposition then.

Do you remember the wailings at the time? The Secretary of Defense, who is still the Secretary of Defense, the Assistant Secretary of Defense, who is now Director of the CIA, and others, moaned and groaned, and the wailing went on about how Exon-Grassley was devastating our defense budget.

Well, they did not have the horses. Exon-Grassley at that time passed. And it was a modest step at that time dedicated to reducing the deficit.

This year, with the Republicans in the majority in the Senate, I was very pleased when my friend and colleague from the neighboring State of Iowa came and asked me my advice on this amendment. It is true that Senator GRASSLEY offered in the Budget Committee on which I serve an amendment that eliminated the $11.3 billion increase over the President's budget. And I supported that in the Budget Committee. And it lost on a 12-to-12 vote.

When we conferred upon the proper course of action here, we agreed that—I think, and I think a near majority of the U.S. Senate feels, that the amount authorized over the President's budget for defense, which was $12.9 billion, $12.9 billion, I say, in the Armed Services Committee, and $11.3 billion over the President's budget, as it came out of the Budget Committee, is more than we need to spend, because it is more than the President requested; it is more than the Pentagon requested; it is more than the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs has requested. So I simply say that I think that the Grassley amendment, and others, this time is in good form and proper taste.

I suggested to my friend from Iowa, in our conversation about this, that probably rather than duplicating the effort in the Budget Committee by eliminating all of the $11.3 billion increase, that we would possibly recognize that maybe we would garner some support if we would not cut the whole $11.3 billion, but allow for a modest $3 billion increase to the President's numbers.

I have no definite word on this from the White House, but I am quite confident that the President would accept a modest $3 billion increase that we are suggesting over the recommendations that he has made. I do not know whether he would veto the defense authorization bill if faced with an $11.3 billion increase, which I think may be veto bait. I do not think this slight increase would be veto bait, and I appreciate the fact that the Senator agreed and thought that was the right figure to go with.

Certainly, I simply say the amendment, in technical terms, reduces the defense numbers in the Republican mark by $8.3 billion in budget authority and $2.3 billion in outlays. This still represents an increase, once again, of $3 billion over the President's budget request and the budget authority and $600 million additional in outlays. It seems to me this Grassley-Exon amendment has something in it for almost everyone because it is the ultimate in reality, I believe, at this time.

Let me summarize this amendment, although the Senator from Iowa has basically gone through it. This amendment does two things. First, it reduces defense numbers by $8.3 billion in budget authority and $2.3 billion in outlays. Second, it revises the budget resolution language that eliminates designating appropriations as emergency by creating an exception for defense. This allows the President and the Congress to approve increased defense funding over and above Grassley-Exon by the use of an emergency designation.

I think the Senator from Iowa stipulated what this is about. This is simply saying in another fashion that with the $3 billion over and above the defense numbers suggested by the President and the Pentagon, there is a means in the case of an emergency, if that should occur, for the President and the Congress to go up to the $11 billion figure, if such an emergency occurs.

Is that the right interpretation of this, I ask the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Yes.

Mr. EXON. The Republican defense budget for 1997 is excessive in a time when we are desperately trying and seeking to balance the budget.

This amendment would scale back the Republican overzealous $11.3 billion increase to the President's request but still provide a modest $3 billion increase to try to satisfy some, if not all, of the priorities that have been expressed in the Congress on both sides of the Hill. At a time when we are trying to balance the budget, such an exorbitant increase of $11-plus billion is uncalled for. We cannot return to an era of just throwing money at the defense problem at will, especially when the experts in the administration and the Pentagon have not requested it.

This action recently taken by the defense authorizing committees, I think, demonstrates the point that I am trying to make. In the House National Security Committee and the Senate Armed Services Committee, the majority added $4 billion in procurement and R&D accounts that was neither in the Pentagon's 1997 request nor in the Pentagon's 5-year future years defense plan. That means that the authorizing committees approved $4 billion for programs that the Pentagon would never have bought even if it had had the money.

The real issue, Mr. President, is not how much to give defense but how to distribute it over a 6-year timeframe. Both the Republican budget resolution and the President's request propose to spend $1.6 trillion—that is $1.6 trillion on defense between 1997 through the year 2002.

The real allocation for defense differs by only $11 billion. The Republican plan increases defense dramatically in the first few years and then flattens it out in the outyears. How we will pay for the associated rise in operation and support costs and still balance the budget is a mystery. The present budget at least increases the outyears to reflect defense budget realities to the point that it is $11 billion more than the GOP plan in the year 2002. And the President still balances the budget by the year 2002, as certified by the Congressional Budget Office, as I said earlier today.

This amendment leaves open the possibility to increase defense spending, as I have outlined and as Senator GRASSLEY has outlined, if necessary. By reinstating the ability to declare supplemental appropriations of defense budget by emergency, a simple majority in Congress with the approval of the President will still be able to increase the defense budget if it truly is an emergency and truly in the national interest.

Mr. President, I have just received a letter from Director Alice Rivlin that the administration states its position on the defense numbers in the resolution that Senator GRASSLEY and I are trying to reduce. In that letter from the Office of Management and Budget, Director Alice Rivlin states: "The resolution provides $11 billion more in the defense budget than the President's budget in 1997 which commits historically high levels of resources through readiness as measured in funding for the troops. Further, in the critical years of defense modernization at the turn of the century, the resolution does not provide enough budget authority compared to the President's defense program."

Mr. President, I urge adoption of the Grassley amendment. I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, how much time have I used or has been used in opposition to the amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. None at this point.

Mr. DOMENICI. I will speak for a few moments. The word should go out there are a number of Senators on our side who want to speak against the amendment. We have plenty of time, but we do not want to be here in quorum calls. We have sought not to do that once we go to work on the resolution. I hope they will come to the floor and be heard.

Mr. President and fellow Senators, let me first indicate unequivocally that Senator GRASSLEY is consistent. He has consistently called for reduced spending and he has consistently been concerned about whether or not the spending on defense is being done in the most efficient manner. In many ways, he has been successful. We have consistently reduced defense spending since 1987. Since 1987, defense spending has declined 34 percent after inflation.

On the other hand, since 1987, the rest of the discretionary programs of America have increased by 31 percent. For those who say, in the last few years, domestic spending has been cut, the truth of the matter is—and these are in constant dollars in this chart behind me—1987, this red bar is defense discretionary; domestic discretionary is the green bar; the big, big expenditure, sort of the blockbuster is the purple bar, which is entitlements.

Moving over a decade we will find in real dollars defense is down 34 percent; domestic discretionary is up 31 percent, and, of course, the entitlement programs are a 41 percent increase. So that is the story of spending as it relates to defense and domestic in the United States.

So, in a very real sense, Senator GRASSLEY's concern about getting spending down has not fallen on deaf ears. Obviously, some big events occurred in the world, but many, many things have happened for the better in the Defense Department in terms of efficiency, in terms of better contracts, less waste, less loopholes, less opportunities to take advantage of the taxpayer.

This budget resolution reduced defense spending from last year's assumption over the next 6 years by $14.3 billion. That is, over the next 6 years we have reduced defense over what we assumed last year as we produced a 7-year trend line—reduced it by $14.3 billion.

Senator GRASSLEY would reduce defense spending next year from that number that we have by $8.3 billion. That will be the 12th straight year of decline.

Now, I agree with Senator GRASSLEY in one important way. He has said in the Budget Committee—and while I was not here for his entire speech, I believe it is fair to say that the Clinton administration has played politics with this year's national security budget, the defense budget. The President has proposed a significant reduction in defense spending this year, despite his 1995 State of the Union Address that drew a line on further defense cuts.

Now, it is interesting, and the President will probably say, along with those who defend his budget, that looking out over the next 6 years, the President lets defense grow a little bit. Well, this is so typical of the budgets coming out of the White House. For domestic spending, which he wants to say he is not cutting, those go up in the first few years and then come tumbling off the wall in years 4, 5, and 6 from now. On defense, we turn it the other way and say, do not worry, we are going to cut it this year, but it is going to go up. We think both of those approaches are inconsistent with what is good for the men and women who are in the armed services, the operation and maintenance, and seeing to it that they have good equipment, as modern as possible.

Now, cut defense spending so you can show big add-ons in the nondefense budget, but then send your military chiefs of staff to the Hill. They come to the Hill and they ask for more money. In fact, our adding up of what the chiefs—the Chief of the Air Force, a four-star general; the Chief of the Marines; and the head admiral of the Navy—they have come up here and said, “Yes, we are a part of the President’s budget, but we sure would like some more money, because we need it.” They asked for $15 billion. We could not do that. We gave them less.

So, in a sense, I agree with the distinguished Senator, except I do not have enough confidence in trusting the President to ask for money, from now until the election, if they need it. One of my friend’s—Senator GRASSLEY—ideas is let us give him his budget, and let him have to come up here and ask for more. Frankly, I do not think that will happen until after November, even if we did. I do not want to take that risk.

I figure we can just as well go ahead and analyze the requests made in the committees. The authorizing committee of the U.S. Senate, the Senate Armed Services Committee—I believe Senator EXON is a member, and if my recollection is wrong, and he can correct me—voted 20–0 to report out a Defense authorization bill that is consistent with the Republican mark and the Republican budget, not the mark or the dollar numbers the President asks for in his budget.

So maybe some would like us not to bail out the President, but I believe it is not bailing out the President. If that happens to be a side-effect of doing what is right by the Defense Department, and by the men and women of the military, who need our help—incidentally, Mr. President, when we voted in the all-volunteer military—the All-Volunteer Army and Navy and Air Force and Marines, during the Nixon era, we said we were going to pay them the equivalent wage of what they would make in the civilian sector. I am very pleased that we are having a very powerful commission evaluate this to see if we are really doing that. I merely make the point that I am quite convinced that they are going to tell us we have to pay our men and women more.

I make that rather bold pronouncement because I feel confident it is going to happen. I am not interested in seeing more than the 12,000 military men and women who are already on food stamps. In fact, I am hopeful they will tell us how to get them off of food stamps and pay them what they are entitled to. That is not a large number, you will be told, and our laws are strange on Medicaid and food stamps. But I believe that is not consistent with the pledge made when we decided to have an All-Volunteer Army. Just on its face, it is not consistent.

I also comment that many of the vehicles that the Air Force is operating under are extremely old. You recall, much is being made in the news today of a plane that is 27 years old. I think the plane that crashed was 27 or 29 years old. Many are suggesting that we better be careful when they get up there at that age.

Well, fighter aircraft, at this point, are as follows: In 2001, the Air Force pilots will be flying aircraft 15 years old, on average. This means that some of those aircraft will be 30 years old. I do not know what that means, but I have been led to believe that is getting pretty close to critical time. If it is critical on the civilian side, and if we do not want to have 30-year-old planes on the civilian side, I do not think we want a lot of our men and women in the military flying 30-year-old aircraft. We do not have any big money in this budget, nor did the President put any in, to have a systematic approach to ameliorating that situation.

I could go on. Squadrons of airplanes are shrinking. They used to be 24, and we are down to 15, in many cases, and even 12. So we have more sites for them but fewer airplanes. I understand we do not want to close down installations, but, obviously, the cost of maintaining and operating smaller units like that is very, very high in comparison to larger units. Ultimately, something will be done about that.

Now, I want to close with this. Once again, so there will be no misunderstanding, I have nothing but the highest respect for the distinguished Senator from Iowa, Senator Charles GRASSLEY. He is consistent. He believes what he says, and he works at it. He believes firmly in this position. I understand how he feels and what he is thinking. But I believe that in this case it is too risky; it is too risky for our men and women and our national defense to allow this amendment to pass. And I hope it does not.

Mr. EXON. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DOMENICI. Of course.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I would like to ask the chairman one thing about the chart that is up here. The 1987 that he referenced there is some kind of a benchmark. Is it not true that in 1987 there existed such a thing as a very powerful and threatening Soviet Union and a Warsaw Pact that is not here today?

Mr. DOMENICI. Absolutely.

Mr. EXON. I thank the Senator.

Mr. DOMENICI. I did not say we cut it just to eliminate waste. I said it has been cut. For those who say it is always increasing while domestic is not, I just want to say it has been coming down for 1 decade. That is all.

Mr. GRASSLEY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I want to yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Illinois.

He also would like to be added as a cosponsor of my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, might I inquire? Can I then ask that following in sequence Senator HUTCHISON from Texas have 5 minutes and Senator COHEN from Maine have 10 minutes in that order?

Will the Senator have additional speakers?

Mr. EXON. We will have additional speakers.

Mr. DOMENICI. Senator KYL and Senator INHOFE.

How much time does the Senator desire?

Mr. INHOFE. Four minutes.

Mr. DOMENICI. Can we agree on 5 minutes for Senator INHOFE?

Will Senator HUTCHISON control time for me for the next 15 minutes?

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Yes.

Mr. DOMENICI. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I first want to commend my colleague from Iowa. As Senator DOMENICI said, through the years we have to be more prudent in defense spending.

I am for this amendment for two reasons: One is it reduces the deficit.

Some of us on this floor right now are members of the Budget Committee. Let me tell you without a constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget the 7 years that both sides are talking about will not result in a balanced budget. We put all the tough decisions off to the end. Not all of them but most of them. So we are not going to achieve a balanced budget without a constitutional amendment, and this at least moves in the direction of reducing the deficit.

Second, I am for it because the budget as it is constituted has an imbalance. What the Grassley amendment does is gives the Defense Department $3 billion more than they requested.

Frankly, if I were to put the budget together—for example, in yesterday’s New York Times is a story, “U.N. Says North Korea Will Face Famine as Early as This Summer.” And in today’s Washington Post it says “No Help Set for N. Korea.”

I do not think that we ought to be using hunger as a political tool. I think we would be much smarter saying we want to help feed people who are hungry whether they are Communists, anarchists, or what their background.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to put these two items in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, May 15, 1996]
NO HELP SET FOR N. KOREA

(By Mary Jordan) Washington Post Foreign Service

TOKYO.—Reclusive North Korea will not receive any immediate new shipments of rice or other food from the United States, Japan or South Korea despite new reports of widespread malnutrition there.

"With respect to food aid and [the easing of economic] sanctions, we have no plans at this time to go forward," said U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Winston Lord, concluding two days of talks with top Japanese and South Korea officials over what policy to adopt toward the deteriorating north. "We will keep the situation under review."

The three countries issued a joint statement saying they agreed to continue efforts to persuade the North to accept four-nation peace talks proposed by Washington and Seoul last month.

The three-nation talks, held on the South Korean island of Cheju, again pointed out the difficulty these three allies have maintaining a united front to deal with the Communist regime in Pyongyang. The issue of food aid is seen as critical because some experts believe an increasingly hungry North Korea could opt to use its 1.2 million-man army to end its crisis in a hail of missiles and bullets.

Others argue that offering help only rewards the missile-exporting nation, Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole and others have criticized President Clinton for "coddling" this Stalinist regime whose military threat keeps 37,000 U.S. troops on its border.

Generally, the United States has favored sending food aid to ward off an immediate crisis. Even in the last few days, U.S. Ambassador James Laney and State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns indicated that the United States was considering new aid and easing sanctions.

U.N. food aid officials Monday issued fresh alerts that "food stocks are critically low," that there is "no further food assistance in the pipeline" and that peasants' rations are being cut in half.

The United States has enforced economic sanctions against North Korea since the end of the Korean War in 1953. But it has also donated more than $2.2 million in aid since floods last summer exacerbated the food crisis in the crumbling state, which lacks heat for homes and cash for imports.

South Korea, whose capital city, Seoul, lies minutes away from the missiles that North Korea has aimed at it, sees the situation differently. South Korean officials oppose food aid because they say the military will likely divert the food for its own stockpiles. They also doubt the severity of the hunger. An official in Cheju today said that although the food shortage is serious, he did not think it would lead to an "African-style famine."

The chief Japanese delegate, Deputy Foreign Minister Shunji Yanai, told reporters at the end of the talks that at the moment Japan had "no plans to extend food assistance." It had earlier sent 500,000 tons of rice. But Japanese officials have also indicated they might pursue a more independent dialogue with their unpredictable neighbor.

Lord stressed the need for talks involving the two Koreas, the United States and China to hammer out a formal peace treaty to replace the armistice that ended the 1950-53 Korean War.

Lord, Chung and Yanai agreed that such talks had the best chance of achieving stability on the Korean peninsula.

Beijing has not committed itself to the proposal, first suggested last month by President Clinton and South Korean President Kim Young Sam, but has indicated it would back the move once North Korea accepted.

North Korea, which until now has refused to discuss a peace treaty except in bilateral talks with Washington, a condition rejected by Washington and Seoul, has not agreed to the proposal.

Shortly after a similar conference among the three nations held in Hawaii earlier this year, the United States gave $2 million in food assistance to North Korea. Since then, there have been some encouraging signs in the U.S.-North Korean diplomatic relationship.

Just in the past few days, the two countries reached a breakthrough agreement that will allow the first joint effort to recover the remains of U.S. soldiers unaccounted for since the Korean War. More than 8,100 servicemen are still missing, and many of them are believed to be buried in North Korea. The recovery effort could begin before the end of the year.

U.N. SAYS NORTH KOREA WILL FACE FAMINE AS EARLY AS THIS SUMMER

(By Nicholas D. Kristof)

TOKYO.—Hunger in North Korea is growing more intense as the country's economy continues to deteriorate, so that malnutrition could become widespread in the coming months, some experts say.

In the latest sign of the country's crisis, the World Food Program and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations warned today that "the food supply is becoming increasingly desperate" in North Korea, and that without emergency food imports, "the consequences are likely to be devastating for large segments of the population."

In their statement, the two agencies said that the situation had deteriorated just in the last few months and that the shortages were likely to grow worse this summer.

"There are some cases of malnutrition, but it is not widespread at this time, as far as we can tell," Trevor Page, the country director for the World Food Program, said by telephone for the organization's office in Pyongyang, the North Korean capital. "However, with levels of rations that are now being distributed, malnutrition will develop and become widespread in the coming months unless there are substantial food aid shipments."

North Korea, with the world's last Stalinist government, remains virtually sealed off from the rest of the world, and few foreigners are allowed to visit. But many Western diplomats, business executives, academic experts and visitors to the country say there are growing signs that the economy is deteriorating.

Even in Pyongyang, which has by far the best standard of living in the country, visitors say that power outages are now routine and that water is often cut off for much of the day.

Some Western diplomats and military officials worry that North Korea's economic crisis could make it unpredictable or even lead it to attack South Korea and the American forces stationed there.

North Korea, with a population of about 24 million, was the better-endowed part of the Korean Peninsula when Japan ended its occupation in 1945. The North has a wealth of minerals and other natural resources, but it has been hobbled by its rigid Communist model, by huge spending on its 1.2 million-member armed forces, and by the collapse of trading partners in the former Communist world. Now many North Korean factories are idled by lack of oil and electricity, and collective farms are returning to draft animals because there is no fuel for tractors.

The American Ambassador to South Korea, James T. Laney, warned in a speech on Saturday of "serious risks," including the possibility that "the North may look for other ways of using the only remaining asset it possesses which commands international respect—its military might."

In a speech that seemed to signal a shifting direction in American policy, Mr. Laney suggested that the old approach of simply emphasizing deterrence against North Korean attack was no longer sufficient. Now, he said, deterrence must be augmented by inducements to get North Korea to cooperate with the West.

Senior officials from the United States, Japan and South Korea are now meeting in South Korea to discuss policy toward the North. Diplomats say that they are expected to agree on an assistance plan on condition that the North agrees to President Clinton's proposal last month for four-party peace talks involving both Koreas, the United States and China.

North Korea's economy has been deteriorating for years and was further devastated by widespread flooding last year. Rations have already been halved, and experts say that some peasants are eating bitter wild grasses and roots that have not been part of the diet since 1951, during the Korean War.

But one such emergency food, a grass called naengi, stops growing this month and so will be unavailable in the crucial summer months, until the next grain harvest is ready in the fall. This year's harvest is also expected to be poor, because bad weather delayed planting by about two weeks.

Experts say there are other signs of economic desperation, including the sale by peasants of anything they have—even human hair—to China in exchange for wheat flour. Russia is said to have cut freight train service for lack of payment of bills, and that may complicate North Korea's trade picture.

Most staple foods are distributed in North Korea by the Government, but the alert today said that this system "is perilously close to collapse." Moreover, foreign assistance—which eased the shortages over the winter—is coming to an end.

Foreign shipments averaged about 50,000 tons of grain a month since late last year, but plunged to 12,200 last month and an anticipated 9,300 this month. Next month, 2,500 tons are anticipated, and the nothing is in the pipeline.

Some North Korea watchers have suggested that the hunger could lead to a revolt or to the disintegration of the system, and there have indeed been a growing number of North Koreans who risk being shot by sneaking across the border into China. But visitors say they have seen no sign of political unrest in North Korea, perhaps the most tightly controlled society in the world.

"Although food shortages are all over, there are no signs that this will cause the political collapse of the country," Mr. Page of the world food Program said.

The food shortage in North Korea may become perennial, experts say, unless the rigid Communist economic system changes dramatically. The Government appears to be bending its rules a bit by turning a blind eye as peasants plant larger private plots than they are allowed or sell food in informal markets in some parts of the country. Likewise, in the cities some residents are planting crops on spare bits of land or raising chickens on their balconies. But North Korea has given no indication that it is contemplating any major opening.

Another problem for North Korea may be declining cash transfusions from ethnic Koreans living in Japan. Nicholas Eberstadt, a scholar at the American Enterprise Institute in Washington, has concluded that the transfusions were never as great as widely believed and have plunged since the late 1980's.

Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, let me point out what is happening in defense spending.

Here is the United States. Here are the next five countries in defense spending: Russia, Japan, France, the United Kingdom, and Germany. We are spending more on defense than the next five countries combined. The cold war is over, as Senator EXON just pointed out.

Let me take you back to the year when Senator GRASSLEY and I came to Congress, fiscal year 1975. Do you know what the defense budget was then adjusted for inflation? It was $234 billion, $32 billion less than we are requesting here. Then we faced the nuclear confrontation with the Soviets. We had a war in Vietnam, as my friend from Iowa will remember. We had all kinds of challenges. Today we do not need to spend anywhere near this amount.

If we were to cut the defense budget in half—and I do not advocate that—but if we were to do that, we would still be spending appreciably more than any other country on the face of the Earth. A little prudence as this amendment suggests is just common sense.

I hope the Senate will listen to our friend from Iowa with his amendment. I am proud to be a cosponsor of it. I think it makes sense fiscally. I think it makes sense from the viewpoint of what we ought to be doing in the defense area.

So, Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the Grassley amendment, and I hope there will be enough Senators who say let us look at our real needs. Let us look at our deficit situation. The Grassley amendment logically ought to be overwhelmingly supported. I know that is not going to be the case. If we win it will be by a narrow vote. But we ought to vote for the people of this Nation on this next vote. And I think that is a vote for the Grassley amendment.

I yield back the balance of the time to Senator GRASSLEY.

Mrs. HUTCHISON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I respect Senator GRASSLEY very much. I respect Senator SIMON, and Senator EXON. But I serve on the Armed Services Committee, and I think they are wrong on this issue.

In fact, let us cut to the chase. We are not talking about allowing the President to come back in and certify that he needs more money. The President has said that he does not want the money. His budget came in $11 billion lower this year in real terms than it was last year, and that was after telling the American people in his State of the Union Message that he did not think we should cut defense spending any more.

Mr. President, we have had testimony before the Armed Services Committee from every single high ranking military and civilian official in this administration; the President's own administration. Every chief of every service has said we cannot continue to train our forces and modernize our forces if we do not have the money to do it. This is the 12th straight year of declining defense spending; the 12th straight year. Weapons procurement is down 70 percent since 1985.

It is proper after the cold war that we would draw down our military spending. But, Mr. President, we have gone far enough. If we maintain keeping the funding level that Senator GRASSLEY is suggesting that we cut, the $8.3 billion, what would it take away from our Armed Forces? What would it do to us?

First, it would stop the increasing modernization that we must have as we are drawing down our force numbers. It is essential that we have the modernization, equipment, and technology to make up for the smaller numbers of people that we will have in the field. That is what the drawdown requires if we are going to be able to fight and win two simultaneous major regional conflicts. We must have the technology and the equipment to do it.

It will pay for an improved quality of life for the men and women who risk their lives to serve our country. We are asking for a 3-percent pay raise for our military; 3 percent. These are the young men and women who volunteer to fight for the freedom and independence of our country. We must assure that they have a better quality of life that demonstrates to them that they have the complete support of the American people.

We will also not be able to increase our commitment to counter the ballistic missile threats; the threat of ballistic missiles launched at our country. The Secretary of Defense testified that we do not have a defense to ballistic missiles fired at the United States. He said that this year. The Secretary of Defense, himself, thinks that we need to go forward with the technology for a ballistic missile defense for our country. At least 30 countries throughout the world have ballistic missile technology and capabilities. Many of those have nuclear, biological and chemical weapons capability as well. So, of course, we ought to be able to defend our shores, or any of our troops in the field against incoming ballistic missiles. Yet, if you cut $8 billion that Senator GRASSLEY wants to cut, we will not be able to go forward in that technology.

Mr. President, we should have learned a lesson from our experiences in previous wars. That is what history is for—to teach us lessons. We should learn the lesson of the Korean war. We should not forget the lessons of Task Force Smith, when we had drawn down our forces after World War II, and we did not have the equipment and the training going into the Korean war, and Task Force Smith was a unit that was rushed into combat in the early days of the Korean war and were obliterated by the North Koreans. They were brave soldiers who fought courageously but because they were not equipped with up-to-date equipment and their training was woefully short they suffered terrible casualties. We cannot forget the sacrifice of those who died in Task Force Smith and now once again repeat those same mistakes today by undercutting the ability of our troops in the field to have the equipment and the training and the technology they need to do the job when they signed up to protect our freedom.

We saw in Desert Storm an almost perfectly executed war, but we had almost 6 months to prepare for that war. Our enemies will not always give us 6 months to prepare for a war. They saw what happened to Saddam Hussein when he did that. So when you talk about cutting $8 billion out of our defense budget, you are talking not about fat; you are talking about muscle and bone. You are talking about cutting the critical support for our military that we must continue to provide if we are going to maintain the strength of our military.

As President Reagan once said, we got peace through strength. Being weak and unprepared and technologically inadequate is not what America is about. If we are going to have the greatest nation on Earth and the last superpower status on Earth, we must have the equipment and the technology and the upgrading to do the job. So cutting our military budget to the level that the President asked for is certainly not going to do that.

I implore my colleagues to look at the big picture and to remember the lessons of Task Force Smith. Let us not let the deaths of those brave men go unheeded. Let us keep our freedom and our strength, and let us keep our commitment to our troops in the field for a quality of life and let us have a ballistic missile defense for our country going into the 21st century.

Now, Mr. President, according to the previous order, I yield 10 minutes to Senator COHEN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, I was interested in listening to the comments of my colleague from Illinois when he held up several press accounts that the North Koreans may be heading for starvation, and so the solution, I suppose, is to send food.

Mr. President, the North Koreans would not be headed for starvation if they were spending less on weapons, less on putting half a million people right on the DMZ, having 1.2 million under arms, and doing more to grow food.

So the word ought to be to the North Koreans, "Make food, not war." Yet we are being called upon here for us to now feed the North Korean Army, because that is where the food is going, it is not going to feed the general population.

Let me suggest to my friends who now would adopt the policy of send food and not prepare for defending South Korea that the North Koreans have not been responsive to date to these sorts of gestures. We have been sending them fuel oil so they would not go forward and build a nuclear weapons capability, and now we are being told they are on the verge of starving, so, therefore, we must cut back, we must in fact trim our procurement needs in order to accommodate the needs of the North Korean people whose military regime continues to spend them into bankruptcy.

It was also suggested with a chart over there that there are some five countries that we spend more in defense than the total of these five countries. Well, which countries are they? Is it Russia? Is it China? Can anyone on the Senate floor tell me how much China spends on their military? Can you tell me how much Russia spends for its military? If any of you can even establish that in nominal terms?

Would you like to compare what it costs the United States taxpayer to acquire a fighter aircraft from McDonnell Douglas versus the Chinese Government?

Mr. President, there is no sense in trying to compare our expenditures to those of five countries when we cannot even identify the true costs of what those countries are spending. Assuming that you could, are we going to take the position in the Senate that we now would like to see the Japanese, for example, increase their defense spending so they can assume a greater responsibility in the field of seapower, and extend their seapower capabilities throughout that region?

Do we want to see Germany, for example, have a much greater expenditure in defense to adopt much greater responsibility than they currently have? Are we willing to see that our stabilizing presence throughout the world should be diminished with all the consequences we have seen during the history of warfare during the 20th century; that every single time the United States has cut back and cut back and cut back we have seen the seeds of future wars sewn?

Mr. President, it has been talked about here of how the peak of spending has gone down over the past 10 years. I have a chart here as well that can show very clearly how it has dropped significantly since 1985—70 percent.

We think back to our capability in World War II. I ask this question frequently: How many ships did we have during World War II? Take a wild guess. Five thousand warships. How many are we headed for today? Three hundred forty-six.

Bismarck indicated that there are only two things that do not change in life. One is history and the other is geography.

We still are required to sail the same seas. We still are required to defend this country's interests globally. That has not changed. So we now are required to cover the globe with our sea power capability with 346 ships, not 5,000. Indeed, these 346 ships are more capable than those 5,000 we had in World War II, but we have to continue to modernize them.

The fact is we are operating them at a greater operational tempo. They are wearing out faster. So what we are asking our young men and women to do is to sail in ships that are operating at a higher tempo, that are wearing out faster, that need replacement, need repairs, and we put their lives in jeopardy because we are cutting back and cutting back.

We are doing so in contradiction to what the President promised. This is what is most ironic. For years, the administration has been telling us that the procurement budget is going to turn around. Just wait until next year. It is sort of like us in New England; we keep saying about the Red Sox: Next year we are going to get the pennant. Just wait one more year.

That is precisely what has been said about the defense budget: Next year it is coming. We know it is going to an all-time low. It has to come up because we are sacrificing our qualitative edge here, folks, so it has to come up. Two years ago, Secretary Perry testified, and I am going to quote:

We cannot sustain these low levels of procurement for long, and we are projecting an increase beginning next year, fiscal 1996.

Mr. President, it did not happen. Last year, the Clinton administration said that the upturn in the procurement budget will begin next year, in 1996. Now they say that it is not going to happen. Last year, the administration said it was going to be requesting $44 billion in fiscal 1997 for procurement. We got the budget, and it was 38.9 for procurement. Now here we go again. The administration says the procurement upturn is going to start next year, fiscal 1998. So we were promised in 1996. They broke the promise. We were promised in 1997. They broke the promise. Now they say wait, just hold on; if we can just get to 1998, it will start to upturn.

Mr. President, when is that going to happen? The reason we are here, the reason we have added this funding for our defense capability is that we cannot rely upon empty promises. We have had military adviser after military adviser come forward and say, "Yes, we support the President's budget," but when pressed, "Yes, we could use a little bit more."

Let me just quote something else for you. Last fall, General Shalikashvili, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, began banging the drum pretty loudly for a ramp up in procurement, saying we need to get the procurement budget up from this year's $42 billion to $60 billion by fiscal 1998.

If you started reading the trade press accounts in the last couple of months, you would have seen a series of articles quoting General Shalikashvili and other senior officials saying maintaining our military edge depends on achieving $60 billion in procurement by fiscal 1998. Yet, the President's budget calls for procurement spending in 1998 essentially unchanged from this year and not reaching the $60 billion mark until after the turn of the century.

So, all told, this year's budget calls for $26 billion less for procurement over the next 5 years than the Department of Defense said just last year that it needed.

So, Mr. President, the reason we are here in opposition to this amendment is that we cannot afford to take the chance, we cannot afford to put the lives of our young men and women on the line with equipment that is wearing out, wearing down, and needs to be replaced. That equipment needs to be kept up to the best level that we can possibly maintain it.

When the call comes to go to Bosnia, we are the ones who have to go over there with the best equipment. When the call came to send two aircraft carrier battle groups over to Taiwan, when the Chinese were threatening with missiles headed toward Taiwan's territory, we were the ones who sent two aircraft carrier groups over. Every time there is an emergency that affects our interests or that of our allies, we are the ones who are called upon. Do we send our people over with deficient equipment or marginal equipment? No, we say we send them with the best. We are not going to put our people in harm's way under circumstances that put them at a great disadvantage.

Mr. President, we are asking that we reject this amendment. We think it is necessary to begin the procurement, not next year and not in fiscal 1998, but now. This is a commitment that was made by the Clinton administration 2 years ago. It was not kept. It was made again last year. It was not kept. This year we intend to see that the commitment is adhered to.

Mr. President, I ask our colleagues to reject this amendment and that we do so with an overwhelming vote.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ABRAHAM). Who yields time?

Mr. COHEN. I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Oklahoma.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. I thank the Senator for yielding. I also rise to oppose this amendment. I have to ask the question, what is this obsession that we seem to have around this place for cutting the military, for putting ourselves in a defenseless posture?

I am just shocked every time this discussion comes up, and hardly a day comes by when there is not talk about this. It is interesting that a President who ran on a balanced budget, ran on a strong national defense, ran on all of these things, wants to cut only defense. He has increased spending in every other program. The only area where he has suggested, in his budget, he wants dramatic cuts is in defense.

When he promised, prior to the 1994 budget, that he was going to ask for $62 billion, he ended up asking for $48 billion. For the 1995 budget, he promised he would ask for $55 billion and he only asked for $46 billion.

The Senator from Maine talked about the various missions that are taking place around the world today. I opposed it even back during the Republican administration, in December 1992, when we sent troops to Somalia, even though they sent them over for 90 days and they did not come back until after 18 of our troops were murdered and their corpses were dragged through the streets of Mogadishu. I opposed sending troops there then. I opposed sending troops to Bosnia. I opposed sending troops to Haiti. Not because I am not compassionate, not because I am not concerned for the plight of these people all around the world, it is just we do not have the military assets to go out and take care of all these social problems around the world and be able to defend ourselves.

So I think we have a twofold problem here. We are dramatically reducing, year after year after year, our military budget, and at the same time we are taking on additional responsibilities. Currently, we have more troops deployed around the world than we have had at any other time that is supposedly nonwartime, and we have taken huge cuts in our defenses. Since 1985—this is 12 years—for 12 consecutive years we have taken cuts in our Nation's defense.

What makes it even worse, it was pointed out by the Senator from Maine, our defense spending has fallen 41 percent since 1985. It is really worse than that, because procurement has dropped 72 percent since 1985. So, if overall defense spending has dropped 41 percent, procurement 72 percent, that is where the modernization is, that is where the new equipment is, that is where the accounts are that make us competitive. We have watched, year after year—1985, $405 billion using 1997 dollars, down to roughly $250 billion. We cannot afford any more cuts.

One of the things that has been stated is that the Pentagon did not make these requests. It is interesting, I heard not more than a month ago when we had testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee—it was also before the House committee—that we had the four Chiefs all in agreement that we have to have an additional $20 billion in our readiness account in order to be competitive. Yet, that is the first time I can remember in my recollection of American history when the Chiefs themselves came out and said, "No, the President is wrong. We are sorry. He is the Commander in Chief, but we are the ones responsible for protecting America, and we are not able to do it."

Look what has happened. You want to talk about administrations? During the Democratic administration of 1961, President Kennedy, in the percentage of the total budget, 50 percent was for defense, 16 percent for social spending. Now it is just reversed: 17 percent for national defense, 60 percent for social spending.

The areas where we are going to be suffering are the very areas that affect our troops that are in combat situations—preparing for combat situations—quality of life, black boxes for aircraft. Time and time again I get in 141's and 130's and I look down there—I have been a commercial pilot for 40 years, and I look down and see they actually have equipment I have not seen in 20 years. We are sending our people out without GPS's, a very inexpensive piece of equipment. It is because we are cutting down those procurement accounts to a level that we are not going to adequately take care of those individuals who are in the field.

I would just make one more comment about what has been said over and over again on the floor. It was said most recently by the very distinguished Senator from Illinois, that this amendment is still $3 billion more than the Pentagon requested. All I can say is, I hope all of America knows—certainly we know in this body here—that the President speaks for the Pentagon. He is the one, and they carry out his orders. But when you stop and ask the Joint Chiefs of Staff, or the Chiefs of the services—I will quote right here, "Unless we recapitalize"—I ask unanimous consent for 2 additional minutes.

Mr. DOMENICI. Could the Senator use 2 more minutes? I yield 2 more minutes to the Senator.

Mr. INHOFE. "Unless we recapitalize, we are not going to be ready to meet the threats of the future." That is the Chief of Staff of the Air Force, Ron Fogelman, March 14, 1996.

In the same meeting: "If we do not modernize, we ultimately place future readiness at risk." That was Adm. Michael Boorda, same meeting.

"Further deferral of modernization will incur significant risks to future readiness." This is Gen. Dennis Reimer of the U.S. Army, March 13, 1996.

It is there. The Senator from Texas talked about another great problem, and that is the problem that we have cut back, as a result of the veto of the DOD bill last year, on our ability to defend ourselves from a national missile attack. We do not have a National Missile Defense System in place. Most of the people in America believe we have one, and when they find out we do not have one, it scares them to death. Why are they scared? Because such great people as Jim Woolsey, who was the CIA Director under two Democrat Presidents, said that currently we have a great threat out there. We know of 25 nations that have or are in the final stages of completion of a weapon of mass destruction, either biological, chemical, or nuclear, and are developing the missile means of delivering it.

So we are imperiled, Mr. President. We have a great deal to do to rebuild our defenses, to go back and take us out of the posture we were in in 1980 when we could not afford spare parts. What we are doing today is trying to get ourselves into a position where we have adequate spare parts, adequate procurement, so that our troops out there can be competitive with the others.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I yield myself 30 seconds, and then I will change with Senator BUMPERS.

Mr. President, I say to Senator INHOFE that I just want to congratulate him on his remarks and on his steadfastness on the Armed Services Committee. I want to compliment you for the learning that has taken place in a very short period of time. Many Senators look to you for information on the Defense Department.

My accolades go out to you because I think it is clear that you are genuinely interested, and it shows. I want to just tell you we all understand it and appreciate it very much.

I do not know what the arrangement was. Would you like Senator BUMPERS to go next? We have had two or three of ours.

Mr. BUMPERS. Just for 5 minutes if the Senator from Iowa will yield to me.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, so that we will have things lined up, after his 5 minutes, could we go 10 minutes for Senator KYL and Senator STEVENS wants 10 minutes?

Mr. STEVENS. But I will be happy to wait for someone on the other side.

Mr. DOMENICI. If there are no Democrats, they can go in between and then we can go to Senator STEVENS. I ask that be the unanimous-consent request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President I want to congratulate my distinguished colleague from Iowa for a very sensible amendment, one that ought to receive the unanimous approval of this body.

This budget contains just over $500 billion in discretionary spending. I want my colleagues to think about this for a moment. We are looking at a total budget of between $1.6 trillion and $1.7 trillion and only a bit over $500 billion of that is for discretionary spending. Under this budget, about $265 billion of that is for defense. That does not leave much for programs that go to the very heart of the values of the country and the things that really make this Nation strong, like education and transportation. I can tell you that the number of explosions you can set off with weaponry is not necessarily related to the real strength of this Nation. I am always nonplused and puzzled when so many people jump under their desks every time somebody mentions cutting defense. You can savage education, which this budget does, you can savage the environment, which this budget does, you can savage the programs that people depend on for their very livelihood, earned-income tax credits, and on and on it goes, you can deal with those programs and you can ask for a whopping tax increase for the wealthiest among us, but if you ask defense to take one single dollar less, everybody goes berserk.

Now, there are some politics in this. But I want you to remember that the amendment of the Senator from Iowa is well above the administration's request. There is not any reason why Republicans ought to join in lockstep to vote against this. It is well above what the President has requested for the Pentagon, it is well above what the Defense Department says it needs.

I heard the distinguished Senator from Texas a moment ago, a woman whom I admire and respect, saying that we just simply cannot weaken our defenses. I want to ask my colleagues this: Who are the enemies you are going to spend this money for? Who are they?

Mr. DOMENICI. I did not hear the question.

Mr. BUMBERS. Pardon?

Mr. DOMENICI. What was the question?

Mr. BUMBERS. The question is, who are the enemies against whom we must spend $265 billion? Who are the enemies that we feel constrained to spend over $1.6 trillion over the next 6 years to defend against? The Senator from Illinois, [Mr. SIMON], said a moment ago that we spend as much on defense in this Nation as the top five possible adversaries, including China and Russia. It is worse than that. We spend as much as the top 10, and if you add NATO, we spend almost twice as much as the top 10 and there is not an enemy in sight.

Mr. STEVENS. Do you want to yield on that?

Mr. BUMBERS. No, I am not going to yield until I finish.

Mr. STEVENS. All right.

Mr. BUMBERS. Then the Senator from Texas proceeded to talk about how weak we could become. I will tell you how you get weak. You get weak by paying interest on a national debt that we incurred during the 1980's when defense spending went from $150 billion to $300 billion in 8 years. If we had not been so foolish, we would not be fighting about a balanced budget these days. It is because of the interest on that staggering debt increase that we cannot balance the budget.

There is not anybody here that I will yield to on supporting our defense needs. I served 3 years in the Marine Corps during World War II, and I learned a little bit about defense first hand, and now I sit on a defense appropriations subcommittee. I know how it all works, and I know how it happens. But I can tell you, this amendment will save the taxpayers of this Nation billions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. BUMBERS. Thirty seconds.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield 30 seconds.

Mr. BUMBERS. I have to admit that over the period of this budget resolution, there is a sum total of $11 billion difference between the Republican budget proposal and this amendment—$11 billion.

Mr. STEVENS. Will the Senator yield on my time?

Mr. BUMBERS. The President cuts back on defense spending now and the budget resolution cuts back on it later.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired. Under the previous order, the Senator from Arizona is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. KYL. Thank you, Mr. President. I would like to respond to some of the challenges just raised by the Senator from Arkansas. They are good questions. They deserve a response, and I think we have the response.

Before doing that, though, let me pay a compliment to the Senator from Iowa for raising this amendment, even though I strongly oppose it. The Senator from Iowa cares very much about the spending of taxpayer dollars in this country, and he knows that there are some places in the defense budget where we could make savings, and he is right in that. But I believe it is also the case that if that money were to be cut, we would not make the savings in the places where they ought to be made, but rather would continue to cut on important research and development, on readiness and on procurement, on the things that we have to spend more money on, and that is why I will end up opposing the amendment of the Senator from Iowa.

I would like the attention of the Senator from Arkansas because he raised some important questions a moment ago. He said, "Who is our enemy?" Mr. President, the United States of America is now the only superpower in the world. We are the country to whom everyone else in the world looks to for protection, not only of themselves but for the democratic ideals that animate many countries' pretensions to become a part of the civilized world.

I just returned from a conference in Prague, the Czech Republic, in which Central European nations said to the United States, "Please continue to assist us to help bring us into the European Community, because we have the same basic ideals that you do." We cannot do that if we do not have a strong defense.

Who are our enemies? Well, it all depends. If we want to come to the defense of Kuwait, then our enemy in that situation is Iraq. If we want to protect Taiwan, then our enemy might be China. If we want to protect South Korea, then our enemy is North Korea. If we want to stand up to Qadhafi, then our enemy is Libya. If we want to stop the terrorism from coming from Teheran, then Iran may be our enemy.

The point is, there is not any other country in the world that everybody looks to to stop this kind of aggression than the United States of America.

Mr. President, I will never forget what Dick Cheney said when everyone was patting him on the back for winning the gulf war. Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney at that time said, "It wasn't Dick Cheney who won the war. It wasn't George Bush. It wasn't Norman Schwarzkopf." He said, "As great as they were, it wasn't even just our great troops that won this war. We won the gulf war because of decisions that were made by courageous members of previous administrations and previous Congresses 10 and 12 and 15 years ago to give us the weapons, the high-tech weaponry and to provide for the training of our troops," so that we would be prepared to win a conflict that nobody could have even predicted back then, could not even have predicted just a few weeks before the invasion of Kuwait, in fact, apparently was not predicted by anybody until the invasion occurred.

So the point is, Mr. President, you cannot say that until we have identified a specific enemy, in the sense that we have been attacked, we should not be spending money on defense. That argument is absolutely wrong. Dick Cheney was absolutely right. What he said is, "I hope that the decisions that I'm making as Secretary of Defense today will enable my successor's successor, maybe 10 or 12 years from now, to win a conflict that nobody today can predict but which, as surely as we're sitting here, will occur."

Mr. President, that is the challenge of all of us sitting in this body today. We cannot predict who the enemy is. But we have an obligation to provide for that basic research, that readiness, that procurement that we know will win the next conflict wherever it is. To those who say we are savaging education, savaging the environment, spending overall on those accounts has not gone down, has not gone up much, but it has not gone down.

Defense spending has gone down now for 12 straight years, the only department of Government where that has occurred. As a matter of fact, defense spending last year and this year will be less than we spent before Pearl Harbor. Either as a percentage of the Federal budget or as a percentage of gross national product, we will be spending less on defense than we did the year before Pearl Harbor.

Now we are the only acknowledged superpower in the world. We are the country that everybody else turns to. Before my time is out, Mr. President, let me simply note that there are numerous reports, statements, pieces of testimony from representatives of the administration who say that we are already spending too little. If we were to cut the Republican committee request even further, as our friend from Iowa is suggesting that we do here, we would be setting our procurement program back by years and we would not be in a position to win that kind of conflict of which I spoke.

One of the people who I think we should rely upon here is the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Shalikashvili. He stated in his 1996 Force Readiness Assessment report a little bit earlier this year:

As overall defense spending has been reduced, permanent accounts have been the bill payer for other readiness-related spending. We can no longer afford to push procurement into the outyears.

Specifically with regard to the spending and the amounts, General Shalikashvili summarized the situation this way:

We are now fast approaching the time when we will no longer be able to rely on what we built in the 1980's, and so we must commit ourselves to a sufficient procurement goal, a goal I assess to be approximately $60 billion annually, if our force is to remain as ready tomorrow as it is today.

Mr. President, despite General Shalikashvili's assessment, the administration's 1997 request devotes less than $40 billion to procurement spending, less than at any time since the Korean war. What that means is, we are still going to be $20 billion short. Now the committee has added $11 billion back. That is still $9 billion short just with regard to procurement. If we were to adopt the amendment of the Senator from Iowa, we would be back to the point where we are at least $20 billion short just in the area of procurement, according to the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Without reading the statements made by other members of the Joint Chiefs and other representatives in the military, let me just summarize it this way. There is not anybody in the military who does not believe we could make good use of the money that the Armed Services Committee has put back in. There is a list here presented by each of the services that spends more than that amount of money. They would like to have it if they could.

They are good soldiers, following the Commander in Chief, who sent his budget up and said, we are not going to spend any more than the amount requested. But if you ask them, they will give you the list of things they say they need.

That is why I conclude again by answering the question of the Senator from Arkansas. We know who our potential enemies are. We know who we have to be prepared to defend against. What we are doing, in as best a way as we can, in the budget of the Armed Services Committee, in the authorization from the Armed Services Committee, is to request the minimal amount that we think we are going to need to sustain those requirements.

To go back to what Secretary Cheney said when he was Secretary of Defense: If we have the courage today to make the kind of decisions that people 10 and 15 years ago did that permitted us to be able to win the cold war, and win the first hot war since then in Iraq, then we will be able to say that at the time that it counted we stood up and we did the right thing. We had the foresight, we had the courage, and we were willing to defend the position to spend the money necessary to fulfill the first and most important obligation of the U.S. Government, of the Federal Government, and that is to defend the people of the United States.

That is why at the end of the day I support the distinguished chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Senator THURMOND, and the work of his committee in bringing forth their requests and respectfully oppose the amendment of our good friend from Iowa, Senator GRASSLEY.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Alaska is now recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. THURMOND addressed the Chair.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I say to Senator THURMOND, the previous order has Senator STEVENS to speak for 10 minutes and then the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. STEVENS. I am happy to defer to the chairman of the Armed Services Committee, if he wishes.

Mr. THURMOND. Go ahead.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I listened with interest to the proponents of this amendment. I spent this morning, as chairman of the Defense Appropriations Committee, in a classified session, meeting with members of the Department of Defense, uniformed members, considering what we do about replacing our fighter force. The F-15 will be 30 years old in 2003, Mr. President. We have a situation where, after the turn of the century, the C-141's and the C-5's will be retired. They will be retired. They also will be about 30 years old, one of them 30-plus years old. We have to find a way to replace them, too.

I find it interesting to listen to people who propose this amendment, because they are unwilling to take the step that would be necessary to accomplish what they want to do, and that is restore the draft. Over 60 percent of our money spent for defense, sometimes almost 70 percent, depending upon the year involved, goes to pay for the Volunteer Force, the best force in the world. It is the force of a superpower, but it is an expensive force. The remainder of the money goes for research and development, for acquisition of new systems.

What this amendment will mean is the people that have come to our committee already and said they want additions for this budget, they want things changed in the President's budget, they will not only be denied, but a series of things that are in the budget have to be taken out because the President's budget is not an honest budget.

It does not fund for contingencies, just as last year he did not fund for Bosnia at all. We have to find $5 to $6 to $7 billion every year to pay for things this President has ordered that he spends out of the money that we provide for defense under his power as Commander in Chief.

But what we are doing right now is ignoring our duty as Members of Congress if we do not follow the Constitution, which says we must provide for the common defense. To provide for the common defense of this country requires that we make the investment now to be assured that in the next century we will be as successful as we were in the Persian Gulf war.

That Persian Gulf war demonstrated, as was just said by the Senator from Arizona, the wisdom of the decisions that were made in the 1970's and in the 1980's to acquire the F-15, to finance the Tomahawk, to produce the Stealth 117. All of those were possible because of the discretionary spending that was available then.

If the amendment of the Senator from Iowa is adopted, we lose our advantage, we lose our capability to invest in the future, to invest in the research and development that is necessary, or we have to go to a draft, we have to start drafting people. I joined Senator Goldwater in opposing the draft in peacetime. We brought about the end of the draft in peacetime.

We do not believe in drafting our people in peacetime. I hope we will never be forced to do it. But we certainly will be forced to do it if we adopt this amendment, because the testimony I heard this morning, as I said, in a classified session, demonstrates that we must have the money to invest in the systems that are being researched now, some of them in a development stage, so that we can have the systems to keep our country in a position of being No. 1 in terms of capability out into the next century.

Now, I do not know any way to do it if we constantly have erosion on this budget, as mentioned by the Senator from Arizona. There has been an erosion on the budget every year. When Jack Kennedy was President of the United States, 51 percent of the budget of the United States went to defense. It is nowhere near that because of the growth of entitlements, the growth in interest rates. We get a portion of the controllable expenses for defense. It is a sizable portion, but nowhere near what we need.

In terms of need, if we really defined need and came in here and asked for the replacement of all the systems that are aging, this budget would be much higher. It cannot go down, as was projected by the President, and maintain the defense of this country into the next century. We are not talking now. People ask, who is the enemy now? The enemy will be met with the investments we made in the 1970's and 1980's. For the next century, it will be the investments of the balance of this decade. To cut the investments means we weaken the United States in its ability to make commitments around the world to protect our interests. I cannot get more worked up about anything than the continued demand that we try to defend this budget in terms of what is the threat now.

Look at Iraq. We had sitting Members of the Senate visiting Saddam Hussein about 5 months before he moved into Kuwait. Would anyone have come to the floor and when asked to define the threat, come up with Iraq, as we debated the bill, the year before that trip? I cannot define who is going to be the next country that we have to call an enemy.

I can say to the Senate that if this amendment is adopted—I can see the Senator from Massachusetts here—I can tell you the money will not be there for Patriot. It will not be there for Patriot, which is being upgraded to a new, better system than that which we had at the time of the Persian Gulf war. It will not be there for improving the Aegis system, which will provide area defense for our Navy.

I went with the Senator from Hawaii during the last recess to Hawaii and looked at some of the systems that are being tested now. They are just being tested, Mr. President. They are not capable of going into production yet. We went to classified bases and saw some of the things they are doing. They are very good. We have to have those systems to combat what is out there now.

Russia is selling arms to the world. So is France. Many of our people are selling arms out there. We talked about this problem that happened in the Persian Gulf war when we found systems our allies were using were in the hands of Iraq at the same time.

We have to design and produce and deploy systems that are capable of meeting any challenge that you can conceive now, in the next century. The difficulty is, some of the challenges we face we might not be able to conceive. So we continue our research. We continue our basic research to develop new systems to defend this country's interests.

I think if we do not have the money called for in this budget—and I congratulate the Senator from New Mexico for his wisdom in putting it out—we will face a series of reductions in our effort before the turn of the century.

The Senator from Arkansas says, "Look at the budget. The President's budget is just $11 billion different from the budget that the Senator from New Mexico has presented over the 6-year period." That is true. That is true. But if you want to look at it in terms of defense, it declines continually until the year 2000. What is the year 2000? The end of the next Presidential term.

What happens in 2001 and 2002? Miserably, substantial funds are ready for defense; more money than cut in the last 5 years is ready for the Presidency, starting in 2001. Is that not a miracle? A real miracle. Whoever is President in 2001 will have to have a new monetary system to finance what is proposed in the President's budget for defense. It is a false, phony budget. We need to correct that now.

We cannot have a decline in defense over a period of 4 more years and expect in 2 years, magically, after the turn of the century, we will have an enormous increase in spending. That is false. It is fake. You cannot rely on it. You cannot rely on it in terms of the defense of this country and our interests well into the next century.

I will say in terms of the comments made by the Senator from Arkansas, we have some very basic differences even when we look out into the future, because I want systems that will be capable of meeting those threats that we can project now through analyzing what we know other countries are doing.

My area of Alaska is adjacent to the north Pacific. Six of the seven largest armies of the world are active in the Pacific region today, Mr. President. If you look at the national intelligence estimate, it says the continental United States does not have any threat for missiles for 15 years. Senator INOUE and I say: What about Alaska and Hawaii? Well, that is another thing. North Korea and Iran have missiles that can reach our States now, and the President wants to ignore the missile defense systems of this country.

I say defeat this amendment and get back to the business of restoring the capability of our military well into the next century. That is what this amendment is all about.

Mr. WARNER. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. STEVENS. I have no time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico has control of the time.

Mr. DOMENICI. Have we agreed on the order of any others?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No. The unanimous consent has expired.

Mr. DOMENICI. Let me say to Senators, any Senator that wants to speak on the defense amendment on our side, and I think I am speaking for your side, we want to try to vote here early in the evening, not late in the evening. If they could let us know if they want to debate so we can start allocating enough time.

Senator EXON is here and is willing to take that up with his side. Senator GRASSLEY has 20 minutes left.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I promised the Senator from Massachusetts I would give him 4 minutes, but while I am standing here and have the floor, I will say I hope that if you are going to take time off of your bill, that Senator EXON would take time so we could have equal time on my amendment—if there is time coming off the bill after our time runs out.

Mr. EXON. The Senator from Iowa made a point that I would like to make. Everyone wants to know when we will vote. We have 21 minutes left on the allotted time.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I was not planning on going over.

Mr. EXON. It all depends on how much time you continue to yield in excess of the amount that was allotted to your side of the debate. We are not going to sit here and let you keep yielding time and then beat you over the head because you do not have a vote. We have 21 minutes left under the original agreement by the Senator from Iowa. I hope we intend to use that time, but no more. I will yield time off if you are going to continue to yield 10 and 15 minutes to people to speak against it. All I am asking for is fairness.

Mr. DOMENICI. Senator, it may be fair. If we need more time, you can have more time. That is fairness. We have Senators that want to speak on this amendment. We will accommodate them. There is a lot of time on this budget resolution. We will accommodate you. How much time has the majority used in opposition to the Grassley amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority has used 62 minutes.

Mr. DOMENICI. I have three additional speakers on our side. The chairman of the Armed Services Committee, how much time did you want?

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, 7 or 8 minutes.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, 5 minutes.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, 5 for the Senator from New Mexico, so we need 20 additional minutes. Also, Senator COHEN wants 6 minutes, so we will need 30 minutes on our side.

Senator EXON, however you want to handle it, if you want to use 30 more minutes.

Mr. EXON. If we are not going to go over that, we would allow you to continue, but it is we who are trying to expedite the matter. If Senator GRASSLEY controls the time, and, as I understand it he has 21 minutes left, if we have now reached an agreement on how much time you are going to continue to yield, I say to the chairman of the committee, then we might be able to hold to our side to 21 minutes, which I point out gives your side considerably more time in opposition to the amendment than the time we are using in support of it.

Mr. DOMENICI. Maybe, for the benefit of all the Senators, not just those on the floor, we can reach an agreement. If we need 30 minutes and the Senator has 20, if we extend that to 30, that would be an hour. Could we plan to vote at 7 o'clock? I think your side desires that. Or maybe we can make it 6:50. That is an hour. You get half an hour and we get half an hour.

Mr. KERRY. Reserving the right to object, and I will not object, I would like to inquire. Was there an order of speaking being asked for, or might we have an alternative process here, seeking proponents and opponents?

Mr. DOMENICI. We are going to work it out as fairly as we can. We do not intend to keep anybody here. Other Senators have been waiting a long time. If we can get the hour locked in, a half hour each, Senator EXON and I can work out the order.

I ask unanimous consent that there be 1 hour, equally divided, on the GRASSLEY amendment, after which we vote on or in relation to that amendment, and that we control 30 minutes, and Senator GRASSLEY and EXON control the other 30 minutes.

Mr. EXON. Does that include the 21 minutes Senator GRASSLEY has remaining?

Mr. DOMENICI. Yes; a total of 1 hour, and at 6:50 we would vote.

Mr. EXON. What the Senator is saying is that although you have used more time than we have, you want to divide the remainder of the time equally?

Mr. DOMENICI. Yes.

Mr. EXON. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa, [Mr. GRASSLEY], is recognized.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield 4 minutes to the Senator from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. DOMENICI. Will the Senator from Massachusetts yield me 10 seconds?

Mr. KERRY. Yes.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that following the Senator from Massachusetts, the distinguished Chairman of the Armed Services Committee be recognized to speak for up to 10 minutes.

Mr. WARNER. Reserving the right to object, I request that I follow the distinguished Senator from South Carolina with 4 minutes.

Mr. DOMENICI. I so request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Following the Senator from Massachusetts, the Senator from South Carolina will be recognized for 10 minutes, followed by the Senator from Virginia for up to 5 minutes.

The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I rise to support the amendment of the Senator from Iowa, as a cosponsor thereof. I begin my comments by saying that, like most of us here, we all care enormously about the ability of the United States to carry out its responsibilities and to have a military that is second to nobody in the world. I believe we have that military, and I think that it is vital in the post-cold-war period to begin to make a tougher set of judgments about how we are spending money, what our priorities are within the military, to guarantee that the reforms that we are promised are delivered on, and to guarantee that we are making choices about technology that are totally connected to the nature and definition of threat. I agree with the Senator from Alaska that nobody can say with specificity exactly which country will emerge, but we can make some pretty good judgments about what is happening in the world.

I have a chart here, and, regrettably, it is not blown up, but it does not take very much vision to see that there is only one significant bar on the entire graph. All of the others are very, very small compared to the expenditure of the United States in the $260-billion-plus mark.

China is the next largest expenditure in the world, with somewhere in the vicinity—it is hard to figure out exactly—of $30 billion-plus. So we have $30 billion or so in China. The People's Liberation Army today is engaged in making CD's and engaged in pirating intellectual property in order to support the military. We know that their modernization program is not, by most intelligence analysts' determination, geared for expansionism. It is geared toward modernization. Most military intelligence analyst experts do not suggest that there is, at this moment, some enormous threat. We are supplying arms to Taiwan, and I think our combined threat with respect to Taiwan is fairly significant.

China is the first of those sort of potential adversaries—if we wanted to put them in that category—that comes even close in terms of the next expenditures. But before China, the next highest expenditures in the world are Russia, now an ally; France, an ally; Japan, an ally; Germany, an ally; Britain, an ally. After China, you go to Italy, an ally; Saudi Arabia, an ally; South Korea, an ally; Taiwan, an ally; Canada, an ally; India, an ally; Spain, an ally; Australia, an ally; Turkey, an ally; Netherlands, an ally; Brazil, an ally; Israel, an ally; Sweden, an ally; and finally you get to North Korea.

So you can look at all the potential threats of the world, and when you add the expenditures of all of our allies to the United States of America, you have to stop and say to yourself, "What is it that we are really preparing for in a post-cold-war world?"

Mr. President, if you look at the potential weapons of most of these potential threats, you look at Syria, or North Korea, or China. The relative difference between Iraq, prewar, and those countries' weapons today is not really that enormous. Iraq, prewar, had 338 combat aircraft and 700 tanks. Iran, today, has less aircraft and marginally more tanks. North Korea has significantly less aircraft and maybe 3 times as many tanks. But we saw what the military of the United States was able to do in a matter of hours, let alone days, let alone weeks. The notion that we have to be proceeding to invest at a rate that is commensurate with the pre-cold-war period is simply irrational.

So, Mr. President, I suggest that all the talk about the United States' military capacity being threatened by this amendment is just talk. It has no relationship to the reality of the threat or to what is happening in the world. We in the U.S. Senate ought to make a tougher set of judgments about our military expenditures.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from South Carolina is recognized.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, prior to my remarks on this bill, I commend the able Senator from New Mexico for the fine job he does on the Budget Committee, and especially his attitude and what he has done for defense.

I rise to oppose the Grassley amendment, which would reduce defense spending from the $265.6 billion of the proposed budget resolution to $257.3 billion. I understand that the amendment would, however, make additional funds available to the President if he certifies a requirement for such additional funds. This is an unprecedented approach and an unnecessary and inappropriate transfer of power and authority from the legislative branch to the executive branch.

Let me be clear, Mr. President. The amendment of the Senator from Iowa is really a nullification of 75 percent of the Budget Committee's recommended increase to the President's budget request. Why would the President, who has already submitted his budget request, certify to the Congress that he needs additional funds for quality of life, modernization or readiness programs? Further, if he did request additional funds, those funds would likely be for programs that have not been directed by the Congress. We must all remember that the Constitution gives the Congress, not the President, the power to "raise and support armies," and "to provide and maintain a navy."

Mr. President, I believe that the Budget Committee has acted wisely and prudently in recommending an increase to the President's inadequate request for defense.

In order to buy the same level of national security in 1997 as we did in 1996, we would have to spend $273 billion. The President's request is $18.6 billion below this. The budget resolution proposes to increase the budget for defense by $11.2 billion; therefore, we are still $7.4 billion below the fiscal year 1996 level of funding in real terms. Does the Senator from Iowa believe that our Armed Forces will be asked to do less in fiscal year 1997 than they did in fiscal year 1996? I ask him to answer that.

The question we should be asking, therefore, is not whether we should increase the President's inadequate budget request by a minimal amount; rather the question should be: What risks are we taking by not adding more? Our Nation's top military leaders answer that question.

General Shalikashvili, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, says he is "very concerned that our procurement accounts are not where they ought to be."

General Reimer, Army Chief of Staff, says that "further deferral of modernization will incur significant risk to future readiness."

Admiral Boorda, Chief of Naval Operations, says "If we do not modernize, we ultimately place future readiness at risk."

General Fogleman, Air Force Chief of Staff, says that "Unless we recapitalize, we are not going to be ready to meet the threats of the future."

And General Krulak, Marine Corps Commandant, says that "The Marine Corps * * * cannot absorb further reductions without sacrificing critical core capabilities."

These statements of our top military officers were made in open committee hearings. If they were free from political concerns, one could expect an even more candid, and dire, assessment. Even Secretary of Defense Perry has acknowledged that "we have to start increasing the modernization program or, we will start to have a real problem of obsolescence in the field." The Clinton administration has certainly achieved consensus among the services and the Department of Defense, but in a way that the Goldwater-Nichols Act never envisioned.

Our defense needs are underfunded, from both a historical and operational point of view. We are at the lowest level of defense spending since 1950. Procurement has been reduced by 70 percent since 1985, and by more than 40 percent under the Clinton administration. Programs to support our servicemen and women's quality of life are inadequate. Our ability to protect our soldiers from ballistic missile attacks suffers from lack of funding and commitment. Our military research and development is anemic. If anything, we should be considering amendments which provide floors—not ceilings—on defense funding.

I realize that our great Nation has numerous domestic and international obligations. But none—I repeat none—of these obligations rises to the level of our responsibility to provide for the common defense. Protection of our Nation's citizens is the Federal Government's first order of business. Without meeting this paramount obligation, the basic guarantees of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" can easily become empty promises.

Defense spending is now at its lowest level in the second half of this century. This half century has been the era of American superpower status. Our superpower status is not something we can maintain cheaply. We won the cold war through our steadfastness and robust military capabilities. Yet, we are asked by the administration and supporters of this amendment to continue undermining our military capabilities.

I hope the Members of the Senate will agree with me that we cannot afford for our Nation to be less vigilant, less capable, and less ready. I strongly urge the Senate to vote against the Grassley amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Virginia is now recognized for up to 5 minutes.

Mr. WARNER. Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, I would like to follow on the statements of the chairman of the Armed Services Committee when he said the modernization for the 1996 fiscal year decline represents the 40-year low since 1950. So I went back and I looked at a chart which shows exactly what we bought just 10 years ago. To give you an example, 10 years ago, in 1986, the number of tanks we purchased in the field was 840. This year we purchased zero tanks. In 1986, tactical aircraft, 399 tactical aircraft; this year, 1997, 34. Most alarming of all, Mr. President, is the purchase of naval ships. In 1986, we purchased 40; in 1997, a mere 6. That is a clear indication, Mr. President, of the decline in the equipment.

When the members of the Joint Chiefs came before our committee, I, together with other Senators, asked each this question: First, what is the condition, say, of the Navy today? And the answer very proudly given by the Chiefs is it is in the best condition, it is ready, and it is well equipped. Then we asked with this level of procurement, what will your successor be able to say 10 years hence? And it is 10 years from the drawing board to the operational status of most of your major weapons systems, ships, aircraft, tanks, and the like. Each and every one of those Chiefs looked at the members of the committee, and you could read their faces. "We cannot give you an answer as to what our successor a decade hence with this level of procurement would be able to testify today with respect to the Armed Forces of the United States."

Mr. President, I am quite puzzled over this amendment because it is so clear that we need these forces. We need this money.

But I went back and looked at some polling data as to how the United States say 10, or 15 years ago viewed our defense situation. And clearly about half of the people ranked up there at No. 1, or No. 2, in their concerns about the security of the United States and how that appears in polling data today. Mr. President, the top item is the balanced budget, 26 percent; morale, 14 percent; crime, 11; taxes, 10; welfare, 10; jobs, 8; national defense—only 4 percent of the people are concerned; that low level of people, directly in conflict with the information that has been discussed on this floor about the threat that is poised against the United States.

The Defense Intelligence Agency looked back 10 years and found but maybe 30 different spots of the world which we termed as "hot spots" into which our troops might be called. That was 10 years ago. Today, that is number is 60 areas of the world into which our troops might be called to defend freedom, or the security interests of the United States.

So, Mr. President, while the public may think that we are safe and secure today, the reality is this is a very troubled world. I think it is our obligation to ensure that today, tomorrow, and in the years to come we are buying adequate numbers of ships, aircraft, and other items such that the men and women of the Armed Forces will remain as they are today—the best equipped in the world. We owe no less obligation to those who volunteer to proudly wear the uniform of the United States.

This amendment would cut $8.3 billion from the defense budget number reported out by the Budget Committee, and bring us almost back down to the inadequate level of defense spending requested by the President.

We have heard a lot during this debate about the increase in the defense budget contained in the budget resolution. There is no increase. What the Budget Committee has done is simply slow the rate of decline.

But even with the defense number reported out of the Budget Committee—$265.6 billion—the defense budget will decrease in real terms from the fiscal year 1996 level by $7.4 billion. This year will mark the 12th straight year of declining defense budgets—even without the additional cuts proposed in this amendment. Enough is enough.

U.S. troops are currently deployed in 10 separate military operations overseas. From Bosnia to the Persian Gulf, from the Adriatic Sea to the Taiwan Strait, we are calling on the men and women of the Armed Forces at an ever-increasing rate. The end of the cold war did not bring peace and harmony to the world.

It is our responsibility to provide our troops with adequate resources so they can effectively and safely perform their missions. We must not condemn them to enter the battlefield ill-prepared, with outdated equipment. As Army Chief of Staff Reimer told the Armed Services Committee in March, "In the event of a conflict, a lack of modern equipment will cost the lives of brave soldiers."

In testimony this year before the Armed Services Committee, our military leaders were candid about their assessment of funding requirements, and their concerns with the level of funding proposed by the President.

They recognize that today's military is second to none as a result of actions taken 10 years ago. I told all of the service chiefs that their challenge today is to ensure that the military leaders 10 years hence have the forces and equipment they will need to protect our Nation's interest. It was clear from their testimony that the budget submitted by the President would not provide for that capability.

Because of the Armed Services Committee's concerns with the low level of funding contained in the President's request, the committee requested each of the services to provide a list of urgent requirements that were unfunded in the administration's request. These lists totaled over $20 billion, and were used as a guide by the committee in adding $12.9 billion during our recent markup.

I was particularly concerned that the Clinton budget would continue the precipitous decline in the procurement accounts—or as Admiral Owens has called it, the crisis in procurement.

Despite promises last year from Administration officials that the modernization ramp up would begin in fiscal year 1997, the decline continues. We are now at a 40-year low—not since the start of the Korean war have we spent so little on purchasing new weapons for our troops.

To give just a few examples—in fiscal year 1986, we purchased 840 new tanks, this year, no new tanks were requested; in fiscal year 1986, we purchased almost 400 new tactical aircraft, this year, 34 new tactical aircraft were requested; and in fiscal year 1986, we purchased 40 new ships this year, only 6 new ships were requested.

Even though the Joint Chiefs of Staff unanimously recommended a procurement budget of $60 billion as soon as possible, the administration proposed a budget of only $38.9 billion for procurement in fiscal year 1997. Ten years ago, the procurement budget was over $100 billion in 1997 dollars. If the administration has its way, the $60 billion procurement budget recommended by the Joint Chiefs will not be seen until fiscal year 2001.

We cannot afford to further delay the recapitalization and modernization of our military equipment. Our troops in the field a decade hence will inherit outdated, obsolete equipment if we allow this procurement decline to continue.

During markup, the Armed Services Committee added almost $8 billion to these vital procurement accounts. This will not solve the problem, but it is a step in the right direction. We must not backslide now from our determination to adequately modernize the force.

I share my colleagues' desire for deficit reduction. But placing at risk the security of this Nation and the lives of our troops is not the way to achieve a balanced budget.

Our defense budget is already at its lowest level—in real terms—since 1950. We cannot afford to go any lower.

I urge my colleagues to vote against this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, did we not have any other agreements?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the order that was the last speaker, the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. STEVENS. I am perfectly willing to wait for the Senator from Iowa, if he wants to use some of the time.

Mr. DOMENICI. That is fine.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I will be glad to do so.

Mr. President, I yield myself 10 minutes.

How much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventeen minutes.

The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, first of all, we have been hearing from a lot of very competent Senators who are members of Defense Appropriations, who are members of the Senate Armed Services Committee, who have the responsibility to make sure that we meet our defense needs.

I compliment them for doing that. We have people on the Armed Services Committee who are using budget arguments rather than national security arguments. I think if they want more money for defense, they have to be able to justify it on national security grounds. While I have these good friends of mine who are members of this committee saying why we ought to spend more, one of the reasons I feel very good about having Senator EXON as a cosponsor of my amendment is because he brings good judgment to this issue because he sits both as a senior member of the Senate Armed Services Committee and he is also the senior Democrat on the Budget Committee. So I believe that Senator EXON as well has a point of view that he can bring to this, and I thank him for doing that, but I hope that my colleagues on this side of the aisle who oppose what I am doing know that we have taken both the national security argument and the budget argument into consideration.

Senator STEVENS has suggested that the defense budget should not be defined and sized to the threat as we know it today. There may be some unknown threat out there, I would have to admit, but we do not know about it. But that is not how it is done. We always determine the size of the budget by the threat that we see today and in the future. What we see is a dramatic decrease in the threat, so why should the budget go up? The budget should not go up. That is why I have my amendment here.

I say to my good friend from New Mexico, the remarks that he made in the opening of the debate against my amendment are macrobudget arguments, not national security arguments. The fact is the Soviet threat is history. In constant dollars, we are still very close to the cold war spending average. What is more, this budget is not based on a valid national security strategy. It is based on an outdated strategy. It is a cold war strategy.

Furthermore, history shows more money does not mean defense if reforms are not made. And they have not been made despite the promises. The Secretary of Defense has said modernization would be paid for through reform savings. That would take care of the concerns of the Senator from New Mexico. But we have not seen the savings. The responsible way is to force the savings to occur so we will have the money for modernization. Otherwise, we are just throwing good money after bad.

When will we learn, I ask my colleagues, that it is not the proper way to do things, that it just encourages more abuse of the taxpayers' dollars. I guess I would beg my colleagues, particularly those on this side of the aisle, to consider the same sort of intense look at spending that you do when you look at domestic programs. You always want to make the other side of the aisle understand that throwing money at a problem does not solve the problem. We tell them, the liberals of this body, that it is how you spend the money, not how much you spend.

When are we going to learn that that same principle which fiscal conservatives use against the liberals of this town on domestic social programs also applies to the defense budget?

Those arguments that are made by my colleagues are more budget arguments than they are national security arguments, and I think that is why they miss the point. Many of my colleagues then want to keep pumping up the defense budget. I say it makes no sense at all. Not only does it make no sense; it defies reason. It defies understanding.

Threats to our national security, that is the engine that is supposed to drive the defense budget, but in this debate we do not see it driving. It is strictly a budget argument: More dollars are going to accomplish more defense. Not so. That point was brought home nicely in Colin Powell's book, "My American Journey." This is what General Powell said he learned during a tour of duty with the National Security Council, and I quote from page 340:

Overarching all other concerns was our relationship with the Soviet Union. Our defense strategy and budget were almost wholly a reflection of Soviet capabilities and intentions as we read them. The size and the state of the Red Army were the measures against which we built our forces.

So for Senator COHEN, who raised the question of, do we know about the Soviet threat, well, Colin Powell says we know about that threat. We made our judgments based on that threat. That is the word from the last Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The military power of the Soviet Union was a principal driver behind our defense budget. Well, the Soviet Union is history. Russia might not be history, but things are changing there. The threat is gone. We all agree the cold war is over. Using General Powell's ruler as a guide, the defense budget should be coming down, not going up. When the Soviet Union went down, our defense budget should have come down.

Now, I know we still live in a dangerous, unstable world. I admit that. I know we have vital interests overseas that we want to be able to give direction to, and the military is one way of doing that. I suppose I have to realize the live fire maneuvers of Communist China over the Taiwan Strait is a harsh reminder of that. We need a strong defense. We can have a strong defense, but that defense has to be defined within the concept of our budget needs. It has to be defined in a way that is attainable. It is different now than it was before the fall of the Soviet Union. I think President Clinton is providing one.

For those of you who have some doubt, I have given you the benefit of that doubt. In fact, the numbers in this amendment are dictated through our cooperation with Senator EXON because, sitting on the committee, he felt that there should be maybe some leeway. I am willing to give that leeway based upon the judgment of a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

President Clinton has the defense budget on the right track. He has it on the right glidepath. A smaller threat requires a smaller defense budget. President Clinton's $254.3 billion request for fiscal year 1997 reflects that change in threat. His budget addresses our real defense needs in the post cold war. There is just one problem, though, with his budget. The bureaucratic machine at the Pentagon is still running on cold war inertia. Pentagon bureaucrats are trying to craft a cold war program with a post-cold-war budget. That is going to lead us to trouble. It is going to lead us to another hollow force like we had in the 1970's. The cold war warriors will have to rob the readiness account to pay for all their cold war programs. They have to rob the readiness account because the cold war programs are all underfunded. They are all underfunded because their outrageous price tags cannot be justified without a Soviet threat.

I yield the floor and reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMPSON). Who yields time?

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, Senator COHEN desired some additional time. How much did the Senator want?

Mr. COHEN. How much time does the Senator have?

Mr. DOMENICI. Five minutes. Does Senator STEVENS want 5 minutes.

Mr. STEVENS. I will have 5 minutes.

Mr. DOMENICI. Five minutes each, all right, in that order.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. President, it is curious, and I should say "curiouser," as I sit in the Chamber and listen to this debate. My colleague from Iowa says we are going to throw good money after bad.

Are you saying that we are throwing bad money at our systems? Is that what we tell the American people? Is that what we tell the men and women in the service, that we have been throwing bad money at them? Was it bad money that we spent on the stealth fighter aircraft that were able to take out the Iraqi defense in a matter of a few hours? Was it bad money that we spent on cruise missiles that we used to take out their weapon storage facilities? Was it wasted money we spent on Aegis destroyers, one of the most sophisticated systems that we have?

General Powell did not fight the Soviets. He fought the Iraqis in 4 days. He fought them in 4 days because we had the strategy and the capability to take down their army in that period of time with limited loss of life. I daresay, if we want to quote from pages other than page 320 of General Powell's book—we should not engage in selective quotation because a quote taken out of context can be used as a pretext. I doubt very much whether General Powell is saying that the President's budget is adequate to meet the threats of the future.

I have page after page of statements coming from our service Chiefs. The Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, "I am very concerned our procurement accounts are not where I think they ought to be * * * [We] must commit ourselves to a sufficient procurement goal, a goal I judge to be approximately $60 billion annually."

Chief of Staff of the Air Force: "Unless we recapitalize, we are not going to be ready to meet the threats of the future."

Chief of Staff of the Army, General Dennis Reimer: "Further deferral of modernization will incur significant risk to future readiness."

Adm. William Owens, Vice Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, "I want to talk about procurement because I believe it is the crisis in the defense budget today," and on and on, page after page. These are the people who are seeking to throw good money after bad?

Mr. President, it is really ironic, this whole debate. Last year we had the same thing, the same sort of approach. We have people coming up, supporting an amendment such as this—the same people who get on the floor here and vote to cut back on defense spending because they think it is too much, and yet they send us letters. I will not take the time or embarrass the Members who have sent these letters. Here is the compilation of all the letters Members sent to us, "Please, we need more money for defense."

I have talked to my colleague from Alaska. Mr. President, 60 percent of the people who wrote these letters here to the Defense Authorization Committee and the Appropriations Committee—their requests were complied with—they come on the floor and they vote against the spending. And they say, "By the way, do you think you can help us out, we think we need more assistance in these systems?" So the same people who are cutting the defense budget request here end up getting the systems funded so they can stand proudly on the floor and say, "I am for lower defense but, my God, please help spend some more money for our projects."

I think it is time we put an end to that. I think it is time we put an end to Members saying "We need more for defense" who then come to the floor and posture, saying, "We are for lower defense spending, the cold war is over."

I do not think there is anybody on the floor who can tell you what the threats are going to be in the future, 5 or 10 years out. We have to start procuring today to meet those threats as best we can. You cannot wait until the threat occurs and then decide you want to build more submarines or cruise missiles or aircraft or tanks. We have to start the procurement now.

The President of the United States said we were going to increase procurement 2 years ago, in 1996. He did not do it. He broke that promise. He said wait until next year, 1997. He broke that promise, too. Now we are told just give us until 1998 and once again procurement will go on the upswing.

It is our responsibility to listen to the service Chiefs, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the ones who are writing us saying, "We can use more. Yes, we can live with this budget the President has submitted if we have to. We are on the ragged edge right now. We do not know what tomorrow will bring. You have to give us more assistance here. We need more assistance if you can give it to us."

That is what they have been saying. For the first time this year, as compared to all other years where they have previously said we can live within the budget, now they are saying we could use a little bit more. They have been honest about it. They have come to us.

I have a list some two pages long totaling $21.1 billion that the service Chiefs have indicated to us they could use for modernization and procurement accounts, funding that is needed to meet the future threats. Yet, sure, they will come up and swear, take an oath, and say, "We can live with it if we have to. But we are telling you we need more."

The Members who write to us saying give us more, they ought not come to the floor today and vote for this amendment and say we are going to vote to cut defense and then come back later and say we want our systems funded.

Mr. President, I can tell you from this Member's point of view, I am going to see to it that all of those requests are denied and deleted, if that is the case, because they cannot have it both ways. You cannot say you want more for defense privately and get on the floor and say we are going to cut it publicly.

I yield the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I have a chart here that shows the situation in the last 10 years. We have three basic types of spending: Defense discretionary, domestic discretionary, mandatory spending. In 1987, in terms of 1997 dollars, we had almost $375 billion in defense money. The discretionary spending was considerably less than that, and this the entitlement, the mandatory spending in this year. In our budget it is down 34 percent from 1987 for defense. It is up 31 percent in terms of discretionary spending, domestic discretionary. And it is up 41 percent in terms of mandatory spending. We have, in fact, as the Senator from Iowa demanded, reduced spending. We have reduced spending by 71 percent in terms of procurement in defense. Our money for defense is 71 percent less than it was before. We have reduced manpower down. Even though it is voluntary, we still have reduced manpower by 33 percent.

I have the same comment that the Senator from Maine has made. I have here the list of last year, the requests from Members that came to the defense appropriations subcommittee, for Members' add-ons. About 20 percent of them were actually mentioned in the President's budget, but even those, most of them, the request was to increase the President's budget. This is the book of all the letters that we received from Members. We accommodated, as the Senator from Maine said, approximately 60 percent, almost every request we got from Members and, I might say, about 60 percent to the Armed Services or the Appropriations Committee were added on.

There you are, the Members who want to see how they succeeded last year in adding money to the budget, there it is. The reason we are able to do that is because we won the battle with the President. We added money last year.

This time the President has come down from even the amount that he agreed to for 1995. In any event, we are going to be cutting from the 1995 level for next year.

I agree with the Senator from Maine, there is no way that we can accept the concept of having people vote to cut the money and then come in and tell us their State absolutely needs additions to even the budget prepared by the Budget Committee. We did that. We even added to the levels of the Armed Services Committee in the appropriations process, and Members will remember that argument on the floor.

But this is unconscionable. When you look at it—just take the C-17. Right after the turn of the century the only airlift we will have to take our Armed Forces overseas will be the C-17. We originally were going to order 240 of them. The President's request comes down to 120. Mind you, that will be the only transport beyond the year 2006. I do not understand people when they say you have to cut that even further. The President's level will take it to 120. There is no way we can project our capability to defend this country with these continued changes.

The Senator from Virginia was here. He mentioned to us about the time four of us here, Senator INOUE, myself, Senator WARNER, and Senator NUNN, sat in Israel when we awaited the incoming Scud, the missile that was shot at Tel Aviv while we were there. Thank God there was a Patriot there and thank God it did glance off that Scud and the four of us are here because of that.

But the President's budget cuts missile defense and 77 percent of the people think we now have the capability of defending this country against missiles, which is not true. Not unless we spend some of the money that is absolutely necessary.

Mr. COHEN. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. STEVENS. Did the Senator want to ask a question?

Mr. COHEN. I was just going to ask, my understanding was that the President went to California and said we needed more C-17's, not fewer. So we have people going out to the local districts, or States which are politically populous, and appealing for votes in the fall, saying, "Gee, how can we help you? Can we keep that base open? We are not going to shut down a facility in Texas or California, we are going to keep it open," in order to purchase votes. I think the time has come for us to listen to what the service Chiefs and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs are saying. I say to my colleague from Alaska: They need more not less.

The President submitted a budget, and that budget has defined the national security needs. What the military people are really saying is, "We're at the edge. We have to start ramping up on procurement. We should have done it 2 years ago. We don't need it next year; we need it now."

I support what the Senator from Alaska is saying. We cannot afford to continue to do this. When my colleague from Massachusetts says what happens when we are spending more money than our friends from Germany, Japan, Italy, or all of our allies, when the 911 call goes out, are we going to send the British fleet to Taiwan? Are we going to send the Italian fleet or the German fleet?

The fact of the matter is, we are the superpower. If we can change that, we can say, "We don't want to be a stabilizing force in Europe or Asia." If that is the case, let us make that determination, but we ought not to do what we are doing now, and that is, constantly rob procurement in order to keep ready and then keep ready by overutilizing the ever-diminishing inventory that we have.

We have to make procurement changes. The President is unwilling to do so in an election year, saying, "Wait until next year; wait until I get by 1996; wait until 1997 or 1998." We cannot afford to do that unless we are willing to place our men and women in jeopardy.

Mr. STEVENS. Beyond that, I wonder how many people drive to work in the Senate in 30-year-old vehicles. The people who are flying our planes are flying planes made 30 years ago. By the turn of the century, every plane we have in the inventory will be 30 years old, except for the B-2 and F-117.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. STEVENS. I thank the Senator from New Mexico. I have finished my comments. I urge the defeat of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa has 7 minutes.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. President, you just heard the last two arguments. The basis of those arguments is blue smoke. The savings promised—now I am talking about savings promised—by the Defense Department through infrastructure reforms should have occurred regardless of all these letters that have been referenced here, all the letters that my friends are referring to.

The money was supposed to go toward modernization, but it did not materialize. I will not tolerate throwing good money after bad, and that is why I am offering this amendment.

I want to elaborate just a little bit on savings promised that never materialized. I want to say that there is another good colleague of ours, Senator JOHN MCCAIN, who is a member of the Armed Services Committee. He put out a white paper entitled "Ready Tomorrow: Defending America's Interest in the 21st Century." On page 23, he had this to say:

We must, therefore, look for ways to do more with less, and we must make the hard choices to ensure the best military force within the limited resources available for defense.

That is the essence of my amendment. I am not saying Senator MCCAIN is for my amendment. I am just saying Senator MCCAIN is a member of the Armed Services Committee and in that one sentence and throughout his entire paper lays out a basis to end this belief that we have around here, particularly on this side of the aisle, that all you have to do is throw more money at defense and you get more defense.

If I thought that the Defense Department was trying to save money, I might feel differently about adding $11.3 billion to the defense budget. The extra $11.3 billion would be used primarily for modernization.

The weapons and equipment that the military purchased over the past 20 years obviously is starting to age. If we are to maintain our military edge in the future, then we must begin to replace all this stuff at some point. I agree, but my Republican colleagues want the extra $11.3 billion to get the ball rolling, and I do not think that ball is ever going to roll.

From day one, senior defense officials, like Secretary Perry, have been making an important promise: New weapons would be bought with savings from lower infrastructure costs.

Mr. President, all the evidence indicates that the promised savings are nowhere on the horizon. The General Accounting Office has just completed a review of the defense infrastructure costs. Infrastructure dollars are spent to maintain the bases, facilities, and activities that house and sustain the armed services. They are support costs.

In a nutshell, this is what the GAO found:

Despite four rounds of base closures and dramatic and continuing cuts in force structure, there are no savings.

Defense infrastructure costs are going up, not down. The driving force behind the base closure effort was to save money by reducing overhead. Our base structure exceeded the needs of our sinking force structure. The whole idea was to close excess bases and to save money.

Once again, savings promised by the Pentagon have evaporated into thin air. Here was a golden opportunity to save money, and the Pentagon blew it.

I know base closings require upfront costs, in some cases substantial. But upfront costs are supposed to be followed by downstream savings. That is Mr. Perry's promise; that is Mr. Perry's testimony before the committee. He has identified $10 billion in savings. Mr. Perry promised the money would be used for the modernization that my colleagues are calling for here.

That is fine and dandy, but where is the $10 billion in savings? The GAO cannot find the money. It has audited the books and finds infrastructure costs will rise significantly in the out-years.

It is true, base closings did, in fact, produce some real savings, but underscore "did," which is past tense. Unfortunately, as soon as those savings popped up on the radar screen, Pentagon bureaucrats grabbed the money and spent it. The money is not being plowed into modernization and readiness, as Mr. Perry promised. Those savings are being diverted into new infrastructure projects, like new headquarters.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 5 minutes has expired.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I give myself 1 more minute, and the last minute I give to the Senator from Nebraska to close.

If we do not hold the Defense Department's feet to the fire, the savings will be frittered away on pork projects. Base closures and continued shrinkage in the force structure should have one inescapable result: lower infrastructure costs. I hope my colleagues on the Armed Services Committee will make sure that that happens.

I have referred to Senator McCain's white paper. Right at the top of Senator McCain's list of places to save money are infrastructure requirements. This is what he has to say:

Infrastructure and military force structure need to be brought back into balance. Elimination of excess infrastructure would reduce operating costs and free up funds to maintain force readiness and to modernize our smaller force.

I agree with my friend from Arizona 100 percent. I only hope that when we get to the defense authorization bill, he will help me find an enforcement mechanism. We need an enforcement mechanism.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I thank my friend for yielding. Everybody wants to know about when we are going to vote. As far as I am concerned, it looks like we can vote shortly after or about 6:45. I am going to take 5 or 6 minutes, whatever additional time I need, after the 1 minute allotted to me by my friend from Iowa, and I yield myself the time off the bill.

I have been listening in total amazement to the statements that have been made here. First, I want to say in answer to the statement that had been made by the chairman of the committee early on that the committee of jurisdiction for authorization, the Armed Services Committee, already voted 21 to 0 for the change that we are suggesting here now. I speak for myself and several other members of the Armed Services Committee who voted 21 to 0 for the bill, because we thought basically it was a pretty good bill, but just before that vote was taken, this Senator and others indicated that they would be offering some amendments on the floor, including amendments with regard to the level of funding over the President's mark. That is what I am doing now.

I have heard in total amazement here General Shalikashvili, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who put his seal of approval on the President's budget, being quoted tonight as if you would think General Shalikashvili was for the increase. He is not. He is not for the increase.

These Senators that have been up on the floor saying, "Well, the military says they need it." You show me a military man worth his salt, and you go to him and say, "You know, what more could you use?" I would be shocked and disappointed if such a military man would not say, "Well, I want this and this and this and this."

The facts are, the President's budget has the stamp of approval of General Shalikashvili, the other members of the Joint Chiefs, and the Commander in Chief, the President of the United States. All of these comments that I have heard on the floor would lead one to believe that this is a group of people who were trying to destroy our national defense.

The amendment that I am cosponsoring with my friend from Iowa is being attacked exactly as was the Exon-GRASSLEY AMENDMENT 2 YEARS AGO. THE SAME TYPE OF PHRASEOLOGY, THE SAME TYPE OF WORDING—"DEVASTATING NATIONAL DEFENSE." I SIMPLY SAY THAT IF YOU BELIEVE THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, THE CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT CHIEFS, AND THE JOINT CHIEFS THEMSELVES, AND THE PENTAGON WOULD PUT THEIR STAMP OF APPROVAL ON A LEVEL OF DEFENSE SPENDING OUTLINED IN THE PRESIDENT'S BUDGET THAT WAS NOT SUFFICIENT, THEN YOU ARE INDIRECTLY ACCUSING THEM OF DESTROYING THE NATIONAL DEFENSE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, IF YOU LISTEN TO SOME OF THESE PEOPLE ON THE FLOOR TONIGHT.

I think too much of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs and the Joint Chiefs to think they would put their stamp of approval on something just to kowtow to the President of the United States. I think they are better, I think they are bigger men than that.

I simply say, any time you want to spend more money for defense and call in some military people and say, "If you had more money, how would you use it?" of course, they would come up with something. I would be surprised if they did not.

I simply say, also, that you would think that Senator GRASSLEY's amendment, cosponsored by myself and others, was a further cut in defense. It is an increase of $3 billion. It is an increase of $3 billion over what was recommended by the Pentagon. But you have people on this floor who are so expert, who have sacrificed themselves to be in Israel and were saved by a Patriot missile. You know, it is a little too much for this Senator, who has stood stalwart for defense spending ever since I have been here.

So what we are doing with the Grassley amendment is to provide $3 billion more than the Pentagon and the President said was needed. These people who are criticizing this amendment have decided on their own that they are the experts, that they are the ones who know how much money we should spend for defense, regardless of what the Pentagon and the Commander in Chief says. They want an $11 billion increase.

The Grassley amendment says, "All right. We don't think that much is necessary. Some of us would like to go down to what the Pentagon says is needed, but we'll go along with the $3 billion increase." But that is not enough, evidently, by what I have heard here tonight.

I also heard statements—the Senator from Texas, for example, complained that if the Grassley amendment is adopted, military personnel would not get their 3 percent pay increase, as I understand it. The fact of the matter is, that is not accurate. The facts are that the 3 percent increase to the military personnel is included in the President's budget. The Grassley amendment provides $3 billion over and above that.

I simply say that I never have been very much impressed by a group of Senators getting together saying they know more about everything, the needs of the national defense, than even the Pentagon. I want to make it clear once again that the Pentagon agreed to and gave a stamp of approval to the President's budget. It is only these people, who I know are well-intentioned—and I know of their good intentions—that have said, "No. That's terribly wrong. It will destroy our national defense. So arbitrarily we have come up with $11 billion more than we need for this." I would rather trust the real military leaders and experts in the Pentagon. But I am willing to say, OK, let us add $3 billion.

I have heard here tonight that if the Grassley amendment is not defeated, it will end all of the work that is being done on Star Wars or a version of it. I would simply point out that all of the Star Wars technology that has been paraded out here in speeches tonight would lead one to believe that Star Wars, or a version of it, would not go ahead if the Grassley amendment is adopted. But the increases that the Senate Armed Services Committee and the House National Security Committee approved above the President's request were only $300 million and $330 million, respectively.

Senator GRASSLEY and I are adding $3 billion. So everything that these people who are out here attacking the Grassley amendment as ending the star wars research is not true. We can do everything they want to do because their requests are only about $300 million in 1997 above the President's request. We could do all of what they want to do, have all the Patriots we need to protect Senators who are in Israel with the $3 billion. We could spend the $300 million that they want for Star Wars for this year and still have $2.7 billion on top of that.

I simply say, Mr. President, there is room for argument on all of these things. But there is not room, I do not think, to conclude that others are in bad faith. It is wrong to say that General Shalikashvili does not support this budget, because he does. Senator GRASSLEY and Senator EXON are saying, "OK, we give you some leeway. We'll add $3 billion on top of what the Pentagon said is needed. That should be enough." I urge the support of the Grassley amendment.

I am prepared to yield back the remainder of our time if we have any left and proceed to go to a vote.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I listened with great interest the comments made by the senior Senator from Iowa—especially those that referenced my defense white paper. For the record, I strongly oppose the Grassley amendment. And while I am flattered that he choose to quote from my paper, the report makes the clear case that funding for our Nation's military is far too little to fully meet our vital national security needs.

Even though we are seeking to add $11 billion to secure our national defense, these limited resources are being stretched to the limit. I intend to insert into the RECORD a more complete statement to rebut all of the comments made by my friend from Iowa.

In closing, let me again emphasize my strong opposition to the Grassley amendment and urge my colleagues to vote against the amendment.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I join today with Senator GRASSLEY to urge my colleagues to support this very simple amendment to put some restraint in our defense budget.

In effect, our amendment accepts the higher defense spending levels for fiscal year 1997 currently in the budget resolution. However, it places a fence around $8.3 billion in budget authority and $2.3 billion in outlays. If the President certifies that, in fact, these additional funds, are required for our national security, the funds will be released. If the President does not make this certification, the funds will go toward deficit reduction.

This is a reasonable amendment. It gives the President every opportunity to use these funds for defense should there truly be a need to do so.

Last year, when the Senate passed its version of the fiscal year 1996 budget resolution, the Senate endorsed the administration's defense spending level for fiscal year 1997. When proponents of more defense spending tried to increase defense spending over the next 5 years, the Senate rebuffed that effort.

The vote last year gives me confidence that our amendment will succeed today, for there is bipartisan support for maintaining defense spending at reasonable levels. On May 23, 1995, in a strong bipartisan vote, the Senate defeated an amendment to last year's budget resolution which would have increased defense spending above the level requested by the administration. Sixty Senators voted against that amendment to increase defense spending not only for fiscal year 1996 but for fiscal year 1997 too. Unless they have changed their minds, the same 60 Senators should support this amendment. It offers another chance for the Senate to support reasonable defense spending levels.

Let us review some of the numbers for a minute, in case anyone is concerned that the proposed level of defense spending in our amendment is anything less than robust. Our amendment does not reject the $266.4 billion in budget authority and $264.6 billion in outlays as called for in the budget resolution reported out by the Budget Committee. Should the President determine that the money we fence is not needed for defense then, eventually, $8.3 billion in budget authority and $2.3 billion in outlays will be returned to the Treasury, a mere 1-percent reduction in the spending level endorsed by the Budget Committee.

Let me say a few words about inflation adjustments. Senators should realize that thanks to adjustments in the cost of doing business for the Pentagon we are really talking about an increase that surpasses the $11.3 billion added by the Budget Committee in terms of buying power.

Earlier this year, Secretary Perry announced that the Defense Department had discovered $45.7 billion in inflation savings after reestimating the defense budget for FY1997-2001 using lower inflation rates from the Bureau of Economic Analyses. The administration gave the Defense Department the green light to plow $30.5 billion of these funds back into the defense budget even though the additional buying power provided by these funds was not anticipated by the Defense Department nor was it requested. $4.3 billion of these inflation savings are built into the administration's fiscal year 1997 defense budget.

I am concerned that in the rush to increase defense spending, we have ignored the fact that in terms of buying power, the administration has already proposed significant increases which we are now building into our own numbers without any acknowledgment or discussion. Senator GRASSLEY, Senator BRADLEY, and I raised this issue with the Budget Committee earlier this year and I ask unanimous consent that a letter on this subject be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. KOHL. If we are serious about reducing the deficit and achieving a balanced budget, we cannot increase spending when favorable economic conditions bring down the costs of Federal programs. We must use these savings to help pay off our burgeoning debt. Yet, here we are turning around and giving the Defense Department even more.

And with all due respect to my colleagues, there never seems to be a specific goal here: It is always just more defense spending. Two years ago, we had a readiness crisis, now we have a so-called modernization crisis. Unfortunately, the only crisis we have here is a crisis of hemorrhaging tax dollars.

No one has made an effective case as to why we must be spending even more on defense. After more than four decades of building up a defense infrastructure to respond to the menace of the Soviet Union and its Eastern bloc allies, we are now pumping even more money into this same infrastructure without any real effort to reassess the basic assumptions underlying our national security posture. Is our defense spending relevant to the threats of the future? We cannot possible answer that question for the real conundrum is that we have no idea what these threats are. And, we are having a hard enough time articulating what we need to face the current threats.

Frankly, we are facing no major threats today. When the American people talk today about insecurity, they are talking about job security, personal security, and perhaps moral security. Even the threats to our national security posed by episodes of regional instability and conflict are less likely to be resolved with military force and more likely to be resolved through political or diplomatic intervention. To be sure, we need a strong defense. We need to develop a strategy and maintain a force structure to protect and advance our interests in the new global environment. If we could start over again and create a new force structure from scratch to meet the new challenges of this era, I am confident that we would have a leaner, more mobile and more efficient force at far less cost.

I must confess, I am perplexed by arguments made that we must provide additional funds to the military because the service chiefs have said they want these funds. Of course they do. Are there any Federal agencies, when asked if they want additional funds, that would say no? I am certain that if we asked each Cabinet Secretary to lay out his or her unmet requirements we would have equally impressive shopping lists to compete with those sent over by the services.

I am also puzzled by arguments that we must front load defense spending in the early years of a 7-year plan because spending in the out years cannot be relied upon. Mr. President, the spending we vote for today—much of it devoted to new procurement and new research and development projects—lays the groundwork for increased spending down the road. Frankly, the spending proposed today ensures that reductions proposed for the out years will not occur.

If we allow this tremendous increase in defense spending to stand, we are reinforcing a disturbing trend. Last year, for the first time in 14 years, Congress ultimately increased defense spending well above the level identified by the Defense Department as necessary for our national security. During consideration of last year's Defense authorization bill, Senator GRASSLEY and I attempted to bring defense spending back to the level in the Senate's budget resolution by cutting $7 billion. Our amendment was endorsed by a variety of groups focussed on deficit reduction and included in the annual scores generated by the Council for a Livable World and the Concord Coalition.

Although the amendment received bipartisan support, it was narrowly defeated.

I should note that this year the National Taxpayers Union and Taxpayers for Common Sense have already endorsed our efforts. I ask unanimous consent that a letter from the Taxpayers for Common Sense be printed at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 2.)

MR. KOHL. Mr. President, no one has explained to me how we can maintain these high levels of defense spending and reduce the deficit. We cannot continue to spare the Defense Department from the deep regimen of cuts we are asking the rest of our society to absorb. If we are committed to reducing the deficit and balancing our budget, we must make the hard votes.

I know for some this will be a hard vote. However, I urge my colleagues to vote for this responsible approach to defense spending.

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, DC, April 18, 1996.

Hon. PETE V. DOMENICI,
Chairman, Committee on the Budget,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: We are writing to express our strong concern about the Defense Department proposal to spend some $30.5 billion dollars in "inflation savings" realized because of lower inflation estimates over the next five years. We urge you to raise this issue during your hearings on the FY 97 budget and to direct these funds toward deficit reduction.

Inflation estimates used by the Defense Department over the years have been grossly inaccurate. In the 1980's, overestimates of inflation resulted in a $50 billion windfall. That money disappeared. Then two years ago, the Defense Department told Congress that it had underestimated inflation and needed another $20 billion to execute future defense programs. Now, just two years later, the Defense Department is telling us that it has once again overestimated inflation—this time to the tune of $45.7 billion. This history undermines the credibility of the Defense Department's financial estimates.

In its FY 97 budget submission, the Defense Department is proposing to use $30.5 billion of these inflation savings to buy more weapons systems.

We are troubled by the notion that any agency should be able to keep such a large windfall and increase its total spending because inflation estimates were inaccurate. Responsible budgeting demands that these funds be returned to the Treasury and that the Defense Department not be rewarded for changes in economic conditions.

Furthermore, purchasing more programs with inflation windfalls creates tremendous instability in program management.

If we truly intend to reduce the deficit, no area of the budget should be exempt from cuts. Cuts must be shared by all segments of our society. The Defense Department is no exception as long as threats to our national security continue to decline. In fact, given that the defense budget constitutes as much as 18 percent of the federal budget, we cannot afford to make the Defense Department an exception. And, we certainly cannot afford to give the Defense Department an unexpected $30.5 billion.

We urge you to direct these funds toward deficit reduction before the Budget Committee finalizes its FY 1997 budget.

Sincerely,

HERB KOHL,
BILL BRADLEY,
CHARLES E. GRASSLEY.

TAXPAYERS FOR COMMON SENSE,
May 15, 1996.

Taxpayers Say Support Grassley-Kohl
Amendment on Defense Spending

DEAR SENATORS GRASSLEY AND KOHL: Taxpayers for Common Sense is pleased to support your amendment to the FY97 Budget Resolution to "put the brakes" on the Pentagon's budget. In particular, we support your amendment that would fence the Budget Committee's $11.3 billion increase to the Administration's request. We understand that the fence would apply to the FY 1997 request only.

We understand that your amendment provides that the funds would be released only if the President certified that the additional amount was necessary for national security. If that certification is not made, the funds would go to help reduce the national deficit.

According to a recent GAO report, there have been no savings in the DoD infrastructure despite several base closures and significant cuts in force structure. At this crucial time, with our nation struggling to balance its budget all government agencies must share the burden of cost cutting.

We would urge the Senate to approve your amendment.

Sincerely,

JILL LANCELOT,
Legislative Director.

MR. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Iowa, Mr. GRASSLEY, for offering an amendment to the fiscal year 1997 budget resolution which seeks to reign in some of the excess defense spending in the Senate budget resolution and bring a little common sense to our Nation's defense budget.

The Grassley amendment seeks to reduce $8.3 billion in new budget authority and $2.3 billion in budget outlays of the Senate Budget Committee's markup for the Department of Defense for fiscal year 1997, unless the President certifies that these additional funds are needed to ensure the national security of the United States.

Mr. President, while I feel this amendment does not go far enough in cutting all of the $11.3 billion added by the Senate Budget Committee over and above the President's fiscal year 1997 request for defense spending, I feel it is a necessary first step in beginning to bring some sanity to our Nation's defense spending. As every other budget account is on a glidepath to reduction, the largest budget of them all—the defense budget—is reversing course and moving to return to its artificially high levels. The budget resolution funds the Defense Department at a level of more than $11 billion over the Clinton Administration's fiscal year 1997 request. The Pentagon is seeking $254.3 billion in fiscal year 1997 budget authority and $260.8 billion in budget outlays in defense spending, while the Senate Budget Committee has recommended $265.6 billion and $263.7 billion, respectively. Already our military budget is more than 3 times that of Russia's; 17 times larger than the combined budgets of North Korea, Iraq, Iran, Cuba, Libya, and Syria who are most often identified as our most likely enemies; and is above the level spent by Germany, France, England, Russia, China, South Korea, India, Japan, and Australia combined.

Mr. President, this budget plan for the Department of Defense is a recipe for fiscal havoc, and the Senate should insist upon more rationality. We simply cannot afford to continue spending at current or increased rates for defense, as this budget resolution seeks to do to a tune of $11.3 billion. Nor can we afford to insulate any department, including the Defense Department, from scrutiny as we seek to reduce the Federal debt. In a year when we are cutting programs and fighting for deficit reduction, increasing the defense budget is simply irresponsible. We cannot achieve a balanced budget by bloating defense spending. Deficit reduction requires that we make very hard choices and defense programs cannot be insulated in this manner.

For these reasons, I have cosponsored Senator GRASSLEY's amendment to the budget resolution, supported by the National Taxpayers Union, which seeks to begin to bring our fiscal house in order and to budget a little more wisely for the future. We simply cannot afford to jeopardize our country's economic health and to mortgage our future by spending tens of billions of dollars in additional funding beyond that which the Pentagon and the Clinton administration have requested.

I urge my colleagues to support the Grassley amendment, and I yield the floor.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise to speak in opposition to the Grassley amendment to the fiscal year 1997 budget request.

The budget provides the Congress with a framework in which it must work. By overly restricting the margins of that framework, we eliminate our ability to make the broad budget decisions necessary to meet our future defense needs. Senate Concurrent Resolution 57 preserves the Senate's flexibility to consider funding for those programs in the defense budget that should be eliminated and to make increases based on military evaluations and needs for the future.

The level of funding the President requested this year has been questioned by many individuals, including the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. John Shalikashvili and the service Chiefs. We need the flexibility in the fiscal year 1997 budget resolution to consider the additions these leaders of our Armed Forces have requested and accept or reject them on their own merits, not through a sweeping budget cut.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time on the amendment has expired.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a vote on or in relation to the Grassley amendment occur at 6:55, and the time between now and then be equally divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. EXON. That is all right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. Who yields time?

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, I am not sure that I need that much time. I do not believe the Senator has that much time, if I am looking at the clock correctly and dividing the time in half. I will take just a couple minutes.

Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the Grassley amendment to reduce the defense spending levels in this budget resolution.

For several years I have been expressing my concern that the projected declining budgets in defense are not sufficient from four standpoints: First, to maintain the current readiness of our forces; second, to provide the standard of living that military personnel and their families expect and deserve; third, supporting the force structure necessary to carry out the full range of missions that we expect our military to perform; and, fourth, to provide for the modernization that is the key to the future capability and future readiness of those forces. Mr. President, modernization today is our greatest deficiency.

We are living off the capital of previous investment. The men and women in the military continue to perform superbly every time they are called on. We call on them all the time, as we can see every day. We owe it to them to give them the support they need to do the job.

We also have to ensure that the men and women who will be called on 5, 10 or 20 years from now will have the same advantages vis-a-vis their potential opponents that our military forces have today, including technological superiority.

That latter point is where we are having problems today. You can live off the corpus for awhile. I think our force structure has been brought down about right. We have done a superb job in bringing it down, the military has, and keeping up the morale of our people.

The readiness of our forces is in good shape today. I do not agree with those who say that we have declined in readiness. I think our readiness is in good shape. What we are really doing, though, is borrowing from the future. We do not have enough money in the outyears of defense projections to be able to maintain the kind of research and development and procurement that we must have.

I do believe that the Budget Committee has it about right. I think this amendment would take the defense number down too low. It is important for all of us to realize that even with the Budget Committee number, which is higher than the President's, it is less in real dollar terms than last year.

When we are talking about this budget increasing defense spending, we are talking about relative to the President's budget, not relative to real dollars last year. This is still a defense cut, but it is moving toward stabilization. I think we do need to move toward stabilizing the defense budget in real dollar terms. I urge my colleagues to vote against the Grassley amendment.

While I believe the funding levels requested for readiness, military pay raises, and quality of life initiatives in the President's budget are about right, I think there are clearly insufficient funds going into modernizing our force. Modernization, for the most part, is delayed into the outyears under the current future years defense program. And we all know from experience how illusory these budget projections become 4 or 5 years down the road.

For the past few years, the Air Force has bought virtually no new fighter aircraft. The Air Force has no bomber modernization program. The Navy is not buying enough ships to modernize even a 300 ship Navy. The Marine Corps is years away from having a replacement for its aging amphibious assault vehicles. For the Army it would probably be quicker to list the modernization programs they do have left than to list the ones they don't.

The fiscal squeeze on the defense budget is already intense. As we seek to balance the budget—especially if we try to enact tax cuts at the same time, which I hope we will not do—the pressure will get even more intense. This gives me even less confidence in the outyear funding predictions that show funds for defense modernization increasing.

In my view, we need to increase the defense topline now, to restore the balance to our defense program. We also need to preserve the firewalls that the Senator from New Mexico has included in both last year's budget resolution and in the budget resolution that is before the Senate today to protect any defense increases we are able to achieve and to provide some stability in the defense budget. Firewalls have not and will not mean defense cannot be cut, but they ensure that if it is cut the savings go to reducing the deficit and not to spending on other programs.

We have been reducing the defense budget for a long time. The current buildup started during President Reagan's second term, even before the fall of the Berlin Wall, and continued, accelerated, throughout the Bush administration and the current administration. However, the time has come to stabilize the defense budget as much as possible, since the defense budget has already made a greater contribution to deficit reduction than any other part of the budget.

MODERNIZATION FUNDING SHOULD BE INCREASED

The future readiness and future capability of the Defense Department requires modernization and it requires research and development, and those are the programs that have been cut most deeply during the defense draw-down.

The pressure to achieve and maintain a balanced budget will make it very difficult to increase the defense budget above current levels, yet current levels are still somewhat artificially low as we work our back toward a normal level of procurement and a normal level of infrastructure investment.

Because we were reducing the size of the force and were able to keep the most modern equipment as we downsized, a temporary decline in procurement was appropriate. But we are now reaching the point where we have to get our modernization budget back up to a long-term level that will sustain our forces for the future. We have to start increasing the procurement budget to prevent the average age of our weapons technology from reaching unacceptable levels.

Similarly, during the BRAC era we underinvested in facilities modernization because nobody wanted to waste a lot of money modernizing facilities we might be about to shut down. But now that we have made those decisions and the BRAC process is over we are going to have to put more money in modernizing and maintaining the facilities we have left.

So our challenge will be to have a budget that is slightly larger than the ones now planned, if we are going to balance the budget it is unrealistic to plan for more than a slight increase, and the budget plan in this resolution only increases the budget by about 1 percent over the levels in the administration's request—in order to have adequate funds for capital investments in weapons and facilities.

This is why I oppose this amendment which would eliminate the increase in the defense topline number that the Armed Services Committee has recommended. This increase has gone almost entirely to modernization. I think my colleagues will find that the funds the Armed Services Committee added to the modernization accounts have gone mostly, not completely, to programs the service chiefs have requested, and generally these are things the administration was already planning to buy.

In conclusion, Mr. President, many of my colleagues share my concern that we have cut the defense budget too far, too fast and that we are mortgaging our future by sacrificing the capability of our forces 10 years down the road in order to fully fund current readiness. This amendment would eliminate our ability to fund modernization programs vital to the future capability of our military forces, and I urge my colleagues to reject it.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I have 2½ minutes?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield myself that time.

I hope one thing that all my colleagues will remember comes out of this debate. We have heard the argument from the other side that dollars define our defense. That is an upside-down way of making national security policy and the budget that is necessary to carry it out.

The way we decide how much money we are going to spend in defense is to define our national security policies, define our needs, have policy to fit those needs, and finance those policies. The other side has not made that argument. They have only made an argument that we need x number of dollars more for defense. That is upside-down reasoning.

Now, the other point I hope my colleagues remember from this debate is that we have been promised savings because of reforms. The General Accounting Office has told us—the nonpartisan General Accounting Office—has told us those savings have not materialized.

They have not gone into modernization. That is what Secretary Perry said he was going to do. They have gone into administrative overhead and things of that nature.

If we are going to be promised reforms, we should see those reforms before we give more money. Whatever money we give should be based upon a policy determination of carrying out our national security goals and our interests. The other side has not made the case for more money.

I yield the floor, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I gather the consent agreement has already been arrived at that we will vote at 6:55?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct. We will vote at 6:55.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I thank all the Senators that came to the floor this evening and today. I think it was an excellent debate. I commend my friend, Senator GRASSLEY, but I do not believe we should adopt this amendment.

Obviously, he is consistent. From what I can tell, this is not the time to expect the President to ask for increases if they are needed. I believe that will not happen and we will get a budget that is politically motivated, not really one that the Joint Chiefs of Staff totally support. As evidence of that, they have come to the Hill, singularly and together and asked for an additional $15 billion. I do not think they did that lightly. I think that is what they need.

Clearly, we ought to go with the Budget Committee's number and in due course debate can occur on how we spend it. I believe it will be spent wisely.

I yield the floor, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Iowa. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. FORD. I announce that the Senator from Hawaii [Mr. INOUE] is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. HUTCHISON). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

Inouye

The amendment (No. 3963) was rejected.

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was rejected.

Mr. LOTT. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, might I say to the Senators, since there are a lot of them present here tonight, Senator EXON and I have been trying to work together to see if we can move this resolution and the amendments along. We would very much appreciate it if Senators who have amendments could begin to tell us what the amendments are by noon tomorrow and perhaps begin to turn in amendments by noon tomorrow so we can begin to schedule the amendments in some kind of sequence.

Having said that, Senator EXON and I have conferred. Senator EXON is going to lay down the President's budget at 9:30 in the morning. There will be ample time to debate. There is plenty of time on the resolution. Indeed, there is time for amendments to the President's budget, and we will have some of those ready on our side.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

I. Background

A. Introduction

The Congressional Accountability Act of 1995 ("CAA" or "Act") was enacted into law on January 23, 1995. In general, the CAA applies the rights and protections of eleven federal labor and employment law statutes to covered Congressional employees and employing offices. Section 220 of the CAA concerns the application of chapter 71 of title 5, United States Code ("chapter 71") relating to Federal service labor-management relations. Section 220(a) of the CAA applies the rights, protections and responsibilities established under sections 7102, 7106, 7111 through 7117, 7119 through 7122 and 7131 of title 5, United States Code to employing offices and to covered employees and representatives of those employees.

Section 220(d) authorizes the Board of Directors of the Office of Compliance ("Board") to issue regulations to implement section 220 and further states that, except as provided in subsection (e), such regulations "shall be the same as substantive regulations promulgated by the Federal Labor Relations Authority ["FLRA"] to implement the statutory provisions referred to in subsection (a) except—(A) to the extent that the Board may determine, for good cause shown and stated together with the regulation, that a modification of such regulations would be more effective for the implementation of the rights and protections under this section; or (B) as the Board deems necessary to avoid a conflict of interest or appearance of a conflict of interest."

Section 220(e) further authorizes the Board to issue regulations on the manner and extent to which the requirements and exemptions of chapter 71 should apply to covered employees who are employed in certain specified offices, "except . . . that the Board shall exclude from coverage under [section 220] any covered employees who are employed in [the specified offices] if the Board determines that such exclusion is required because of (i) a conflict of interest or appearance of a conflict of interest; or (ii) Congress' constitutional responsibilities."

This Notice of Proposed Rulemaking sets forth proposed regulations under section 220(d) of the CAA. A Notice of Proposed Rulemaking with respect to regulations under section 220(e) is being published separately.

B. Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking

On March 6, 1996, the Board of Directors of the Office of Compliance ("Office") issued an Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking ("ANPR") that solicited comments from interested parties in order to obtain participation and information early in the rulemaking process. 142 Cong. R. S1547 (daily ed., Mar. 6, 1996). In addition to inviting comment on all relevant matters and/or specific questions arising under section 220 of the CAA, the Office sought consultation with the FLRA and the Director of the Office of Personnel Management with regard to the development of these regulations in accordance with section 304(g) of the CAA. The Office has also consulted with interested parties to further its understanding of the need for and content of appropriate regulations.

The Board received 5 comments on the ANPR: one from the Secretary of the Senate and four from various labor organizations. Based on the information gleaned from its consultations and the comments on the ANPR, the Board is publishing these proposed rules, pursuant to section 220(d) of the CAA.

1. Substantive Regulations Promulgated by the Federal Labor Relations Authority.—In the ANPR, the Board invited comment on the meaning of the term "substantive regulations" under sections 220 and 304 of the CAA and further asked commenters to identify which of the regulations promulgated by the FLRA should be considered substantive regulations within the meaning of section 220 of the CAA. In this regard, the Board noted that certain of the FLRA's regulations relate to processes that implement chapter 71, while others relate to principles or criteria for making decisions that implement chapter 71. The Board invited commenters to discuss whether, in their view, the term "substantive" as used in sections 220 and 304 of the CAA might be intended to distinguish such regulations from those that are "procedural" in nature or content. In addition, the Board specifically invited comment on whether and, if so, to what extent the Board should propose the adoption of the FLRA regulations set forth in 5 C.F.R. sections 2411-2416.

a. Summary of comments: Two commenters addressed the meaning of the term "substantive regulations." One of these two commenters suggested that the term "substantive regulations" means "only those regulations promulgated by the [FLRA] that are necessary to implement the provisions of chapter 71 made applicable" by section 220 of the CAA. In this commenter's view, the term "substantive regulations" should exclude FLRA regulations that address procedural processes already provided for by the CAA. For example, because sections 405 and 406 of the CAA and the Office's procedural rules promulgated under section 303 set forth the procedures for hearings and Board review of hearing officer's decisions, in this commenter's view, provisions of the FLRA's regulations that purport to govern those matters should not be adopted by the Board. In support of its position, the commenter cited to Batterton v. Francis, 432 U.S. 416, 425 n.9 (1977).

This commenter further asserted that the term "substantive regulations" should neither include FLRA regulations that are procedural in nature, such as those addressing filing procedures, nor FLRA regulations that address processes already provided for in procedural rules issued by the Office pursuant to section 303 of the CAA, because "their adoption is not necessary to implement the provisions of chapter 71 made applicable by the CAA." The commenter stated that the Board has issued regulations, pursuant to section 303, that provide procedures for submissions under Part A of the CAA; the commenter urged that, to the extent possible, the same procedures should be used for submissions under Part D (section 220) of the CAA. The commenter suggested that, if any modifications to the Office's procedural rules are required to implement section 220, the Board should issue additional procedural regulations under section 303 of the CAA, rather than adopt assertedly "non-substantive" regulations of the FLRA.

Based on these views, this commenter took the position that, with certain modifications, all regulations set forth in subchapters C and D of the FLRA's regulations are substantive and should be adopted by the Board. Within those subchapters, this commenter suggested the exclusion of those regulations that the commenter deemed "purely procedural." Finally, this commenter opined that the regulations in subchapter B, set forth at sections 2411-2416, should not be adopted by the Board as those sections do not implement provisions of chapter 71, as applied by the CAA.

The other commenter did not propose to define the term "substantive regulations." Rather, this commenter asserted that, at present, it is not necessary for the Board to decide which of the FLRA's regulations are substantive. Instead, this commenter suggested that, although the FLRA's regulations may or may not be "substantive regulations," the regulations are sound procedural guides that the Board is free to follow in the exercise of its general rulemaking authority under sections 303 and 304 of the CAA. The commenter pointed to the approach to rulemaking followed by the FLRA and the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) as models for the Board, arguing that both the FLRA's and the NLRB's regulations include the various processes by which unfair labor practice and representation cases may be brought and considered and that neither the FLRA nor the NLRB has sought to "define substantive rights by regulation."

Finally, one other commenter, while not addressing the meaning of the term "substantive regulations," suggested that the Board should adopt all of the FLRA's regulations, including sections 2411-2416.

b. Board consideration and conclusion: The Board first examines the question of the meaning of the term "substantive regulations" under sections 220 and 304 of the Act. Under settled principles of administrative law, substantive regulations are regulations implementing an underlying statute that are issued by a regulatory body pursuant to its statutory authority. See Batterton v. Francis, 432 U.S. 416, 425 n.9 (1977). Such regulations are generally promulgated in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act, which requires that substantive rule-making generally be preceded by a general notice of proposed rulemaking at least thirty days before the effective date of the proposed rule, and further requires that the agency afford interested persons an opportunity to participate in the rulemaking by submitting written comments. Regulations issued pursuant to this process are substantive because they "have the force and effect of law," id., and because, among other things, they "grant rights, impose obligations, or produce other significant effects on private interests," or . . . "effect a change in existent law or policy." American Hospital Assoc. v. Bowen, 834 F.2d 1037, 1044 (D.C. Cir. 1987) (citations omitted).

That regulations may arguably be procedural in content is, in the Board's view, not a legally sufficient reason for not viewing them as "substantive regulations." Procedural rules can in fact be substantive regulations. Process is frequently the substance of law and regulation; indeed, in the labor laws, process is the predominate means by which substantive regulation is effectuated. Moreover, in administrative law, it is commonplace for regulations covering procedures to be considered substantive regulations; as noted above, the Administrative Procedure Act generally treats regulation of process as substantive regulation. There is no evidence that Congress intended a different approach in the context of the CAA. Thus, it is the Board's conclusion that all regulations promulgated after a notice and comment period by the FLRA to implement chapter 71 are appropriately classified as substantive regulations for the purposes of rulemaking under sections 220 and 304 of the CAA.

In light of the foregoing, the Board has considered the regulations promulgated by the FLRA in order to determine which of the regulations are "substantive" regulations. The regulations promulgated by the FLRA "are designed to implement the provisions of chapter 71 of title 5 of the United States Code . . . [and] prescribe the procedures, basic principles or criteria under which the Federal Labor Relations Authority or the General Counsel" will carry out their functions, resolve issues and otherwise administer chapter 71. 5 C.F.R. § 2420.1. In addition, these regulations were issued according to the requirements of the Administrative Procedure Act, with a public notice and comment period. Therefore, it is the Board's judgment that all the regulations promulgated by the FLRA and published at 5 C.F.R. 2411-2416, 2420-2430 and 2470-2472 are "substantive regulations" within the meaning of sections 220 and 304 of the CAA.

A review of the FLRA's regulations demonstrates, however, that not all of the FLRA's substantive regulations are ones that the Board need adopt. Certain of the FLRA's regulations were promulgated to implement provisions of statutes other than provisions of chapter 71 made applicable by the CAA. In this regard, in the ANPR, the Board noted that sections 2411-2416 of the FLRA's regulations treat, among other things, the implementation and applicability of the Freedom of Information Act, the Privacy Act and the Sunshine Act in the FLRA's processes. Although one commenter suggested that the referenced statutes and the FLRA's implementing regulations should govern the processes of the Office of Compliance, these statutes were not incorporated in the CAA and the Board thus is not proposing the adoption of sections 2411-2416 of the FLRA regulations.

Similarly, the Board does not propose to adopt either section 2430 of the FLRA's regulations, which establishes procedures for applying for awards of attorney fees and other expenses under the Equal Access to Justice Act, 5 U.S.C. 504, or section 2472, which implements provisions of section 6131 of title 5 of the United States Code. As neither 5 U.S.C. 504 nor 5 U.S.C. 6131 is applied by the CAA, sections 2430 and 2472 were not promulgated to implement statutory provisions that are applied by section 220 and, accordingly, the FLRA's regulations implementing them need not be adopted.

2. Proposed Modification of Substantive Regulations of the FLRA.—In the ANPR, the Board invited comment on whether and to what extent it should, pursuant to section 220(d) of the CAA, modify the substantive regulations promulgated by the FLRA. Section 220(d) provides that the Board shall issue regulations that are the same as applicable substantive regulations of the FLRA "except to the extent that the Board may determine, for good cause shown and stated together with the regulations, that a modification of such regulations would be more effective for the implementation of the rights and protections under this section" (emphasis added). Section 220(d) also provides that the Board may modify the FLRA's substantive regulations "as the Board deems necessary to avoid a conflict of interest or appearance of a conflict of interest."

a. Summary of comments: A number of commenters urged that the FLRA's substantive regulations should be adopted without change. One of these commenters particularly stressed, in its view, the need to adopt without change the regulations that treat recourse to the Federal Service Impasses Panel and the Merit Systems Protection Board. But another commenter suggested several modifications to the substantive regulations. In addition to a variety of technical changes in nomenclature and terminology, this commenter specifically suggested the following modifications:

(1) Regulations implementing provisions of chapter 71 not made applicable by the CAA

The commenter stated that section 2423.9(b) should not be adopted on the ground that it sets forth procedures implementing 5 U.S.C. section 7123(d), a section not incorporated into the CAA.

(2) Provisions inapplicable under the CAA

The commenter further suggested that the definition of the term "activity" under section 2421.5 of the FLRA's regulations should be deleted on the ground that it has no applicability in the legislative branch. Further, this commenter suggested that the term "Government-wide rule" found throughout the regulations should be changed to "Government-wide rule applicable to the Senate [Legislative Branch]" because not all government-wide rules apply to the legislative branch. Similarly, this commenter proposed the deletion of section 2425.3(b) because it relates to civil service employees, of which there are none in the legislative branch. The commenter further suggested that Section 2429.2, relating to transfer and consolidation of cases, should also be deleted because it has no applicability in light of the structure of the Office of Compliance. Finally, according to the commenter, part 2428 of the FLRA's regulations, which relates to enforcement of decisions of the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations, should not be adopted because the Assistant Secretary has no authority under the CAA and neither covered employees nor employing offices are bound by the decisions of the Assistant Secretary.

(3) Regulations addressing procedures governed by 405 and 406 of CAA

The commenter also contended that section 220 of the CAA directs that all representation and unfair labor practice matters that arise under section 220 be referred "to a hearing officer for decision pursuant to subsection (b) through (h) of section 405." Further, according to the commenter, sections 220(c)(1) and (2) require that decisions of the hearing officers be reviewed by the Board under section 406 of the CAA. Consequently, in this commenter's view, the Board should not adopt any FLRA regulation relating to the conduct of hearings on representation petitions or unfair labor practice allegations or relating to Board review of decisions. For example, this commenter suggested that sections 2422.18-22 of the FLRA's regulations should be omitted because they relate to the procedures for the conduct of pre-election investigatory hearings on representation petitions; according to the commenter, procedures for these hearings are governed by section 405 of the CAA and by the Board's procedural rules.

(4) Consultation Rights

The commenter additionally suggested that the threshold requirement in section 2426.1 of the FLRA's regulations that a labor organization hold exclusive recognition for 10% or more of the personnel of an employing office in order for that labor organization to obtain consultation rights be modified for good cause. Because of the small size of many employing offices in the legislative branch, the commenter expressed the concern that employing offices would be required to engage in consultation when only one or two employees are represented by a union. Such an obligation to consult would, in this commenter's view, "interfere with the rights of unrepresented employees because it would necessarily cause delay in implementation of new terms of employment."

(5) Posting of Materials

The commenter suggested that sections 2422.7 and 2422.23 of the FLRA's regulations be modified to prohibit the posting of any material relating to a labor organization in any area open to the public on the basis that such a display of material would create a conflict of interest "insofar as it may appear that Congress is unduly influenced by particular labor organizations."

b. Board Consideration and Response to Comments: Based upon the comments received and the Board's understanding of chapter 71 and the institutions to which it is being made applicable through the CAA, the Board is proposing to adopt the FLRA's regulations published at 5 C.F.R. 2420-29 and 2470-71 with only limited modifications. The Board has proposed to delete provisions of the FLRA's regulations that were promulgated to implement provisions of chapter 71 that are not applied by the CAA. In this regard, sections 2423.9(b)(c) and (d) have been deleted because they implement section 7123(d) of chapter 71, a provision that is not applied by the CAA. Similarly, section 2429.7 of the FLRA's regulations, relating to the issuance of subpoenas, has been deleted because it implements section 7132 of chapter 71, a section of chapter 71 that is not applied by the CAA. Finally, as statutory provisions in title 5 that permit executive branch employees to have access to the Merit Systems Protection Board (MSPB) were not applied by the CAA, references to the MSPB have also been deleted. The Board finds that there is good cause to make these modifications for the reasons herein stated.

In addition, the Board has proposed to make technical changes in definitions, nomenclature and prescribed processes so that the regulations comport with the CAA and the organizational structure of the Office of Compliance. In the Board's judgment, making such changes satisfies the Act's "good cause" requirement. However, contrary to one commenter's suggestion that the terms "activity" and "Government-wide" rule be omitted or modified, the Board is of the view that these concepts have applicability in the context of the CAA and therefore should not be deleted or modified. Of course, the Board welcomes additional comment on these issues as part of interested parties' comments on the proposed rules.

In addition to the foregoing, the Board has concluded that there is good cause to propose certain other modifications to the FLRA's regulations. These proposed modifications are discussed below.

(1) Exercise of Investigative and Adjudicatory Responsibilities

In issuing these proposed regulations to implement section 220, the Board has had to determine how it may best exercise its investigative and other authorities and responsibilities under section 220 of the CAA. In this regard, the Board notes that section 220(c)(1) of the CAA provides that the Board shall exercise the authorities of the three member Federal Labor Relations Authority (Authority) under various provisions of chapter 71 and that any "petition, or other submission that, under chapter 71 . . . would be submitted to the . . . Authority shall, . . . be submitted to the Board". The Board further notes that section 220(c)(1) provides that the Board "shall refer any matter under this paragraph to a hearing officer for decision pursuant to . . . section 405"; and yet it also states that the Board may direct that the General Counsel carry out the Board's "investigative authorities". Finally, the Board notes that section 220(c)(3) limits judicial review to Board actions on unfair labor practice complaints. As an initial matter, therefore, there is a question as to whether section 220(c)(1) should be read to require that all representation, arbitration, negotiability and unfair labor practice issues that come before the Board first be referred to hearing officers for decision under section 405, or only to require referral of those matters that require a formal adversary hearing (involving, among other things, discovery and adherence to formal rules of evidence) in order to resolve the matter in dispute and create a record for judicial review. After considerable reflection, the Board is persuaded that Congress did not intend in the CAA to require that all issues first be presented to a hearing officer under section 405.

By its terms, section 220(c)(1) of the CAA expressly contemplates a distinction between investigative issues and those issues requiring referral for an adversary hearing. Specifically, section 220 expressly acknowledges that the Board possesses and may exercise investigative authorities, and explicitly states that the Board may direct the General Counsel to carry out such investigative authorities. A fortiori, the Board does not have to refer matters involving these "investigative authorities" to a hearing officer (but rather may direct the General Counsel to carry them out or carry them out itself).

The textual reference to the Board's investigative authorities is, in fact, only one of the statutory signals that Congress did not intend to require the Board to refer all issues to a hearing officer for initial decision under Section 405. Section 220(c)(3) further specifies that there shall be judicial review of only Board actions on unfair labor practice complaints. Since one of the key purposes of the section 405 hearing process is to create a record for judicial review, this limitation of the judicial review process is another textual suggestion that Congress intended to require referral to a hearing officer of only those matters that require a hearing of the type contemplated by section 405—i.e., a formal adversary hearing that establishes a record for Board and then judicial review.

Indeed, in section 220, Congress purported to impose upon the legislative branch the labor law applicable to the executive branch. In that scheme, representation issues, negotiability of bargaining proposals, and review of arbitral awards are not subject to elaborate adversarial procedures. Rather, they are subject to different investigative and decisional process better suited to expeditious and effective resolution of the issues presented. A determination by the Board that the resolution of exceptions to arbitral awards, negotiability of bargaining proposals, and representation petitions, must first be referred to a hearing officer for an adversarial hearing under section 405 would result in an overly cumbersome system that would undermine considerably the effective implementation of Section 220. The Board would not hesitate to implement such a scheme if Congress had clearly commanded it; but, when read in context, the statutory language does not so require, and the legislative history contains no suggestion that Congress intended such a striking departure from the underlying statutory scheme that it was purporting to impose on itself. In such circumstances, the Board cannot find good cause to modify the FLRA's regulations to require formal adversarial proceedings where they are not presently required under chapter 71.

Accordingly, the Board has examined the range of investigative and adjudicatory functions carried out by the FLRA and its officials under chapter 71 and the FLRA's regulations. The Board has further examined the manner in which those functions may most effectively and appropriately be carried out by the Office under the CAA. The Board has considered the suggestions of the commenters, the differences in organizational structure between the Office of Compliance and the FLRA, and the language and underlying statutory schemes of chapter 71 and the CAA. And, having done so, the Board has concluded that, consistent with the language of section 220(c)(1) and the scheme envisioned and implemented under chapter 71, issues that are presented directly to the Authority may and should also be presented directly to the Board. Likewise, the Board has determined that issues that are submitted to administrative law judges in the chapter 71 scheme should be submitted to hearing officers in the CAA scheme. Thus, the Board will decide representation issues, negotiability issues and exceptions to arbitral awards based upon a record developed through direct submissions from the parties and, where necessary, further investigation by the Board (through the person of the Executive Director); and it will refer unfair labor practice complaints to hearing officers for initial decision under section 405 (and then review by the Board and the courts).

Contrary to one commenter's assertion, 220(c)(1) does not require that pre-election hearings on representation petitions be conducted pursuant to section 405 of the CAA. Such hearings are investigatory in nature; and they do not require formal adversarial proceedings. They are to be conducted as part of the Board's authority to investigate representation petitions pursuant to the provisions of chapter 71 that are applied by the CAA. They thus need not be conducted by hearing officers under section 405.

(2) Procedural matters

The Board has further concluded that there is good cause to modify the FLRA's substantive regulations by omitting provisions that set forth procedures which are already provided for under comparable provisions of the Office's procedural rules. There are obvious benefits to having one set of procedural rules for matters arising under the CAA. Indeed, one commenter suggested this beneficial outcome in arguing why certain rules should not be considered to be "substantive regulations" within the meaning of section 304. While the Board believes that the rules are in fact substantive regulations, it believes that the benefits of having one set of procedural rules provides the "good cause" needed to modify the FLRA's substantive regulations in this respect.

Accordingly, provisions of Part 2423 relating to the filing of complaints and the conduct of hearings on allegations of violations of section 220 have been deleted or modified, as appropriate, where there is a specific regulation on the same matters in the Office's procedural rules. Similarly, provisions of Part 2429 of the FLRA's regulations relating to such matters as service, interlocutory appeals, computation of time, and methods of filing have been deleted or modified, to the extent that they are the same as, or specifically provided for under, procedural rules already issued. Finally, section 2429.9 relating to presentations by an amicus curiae and section 2429.17, which provides procedures for seeking Board reconsideration, have also been deleted. Although these subjects are not now covered by the Office's procedural rules, they have general applicability to Board proceedings under the CAA. The Board has determined that it would be more effective for the implementation of the rights and protections under the CAA to propose and issue rules relating to amicus filings and reconsideration in all matters before the Board as part of a rulemaking under section 303 of the Act.

(3) Arbitral awards on adverse actions

The Board also agrees with the commenter who suggested the deletion of section 2425.3(b), a provision that precludes the FLRA's review of arbitration awards involving certain adverse actions. Under chapter 71, Congress generally provided for the review of arbitration awards by the FLRA. However, for awards relating to matters in which an employee has an option of either filing an appeal with the Merit Systems Protection Board (or another adjudicative body) or of filing a grievance under a negotiated grievance procedure, Congress provided for judicial review of the award under the same standards of review that would be accorded to a decision of the MSPB or another appellate body. Therefore, there is a symmetrical framework for the review of arbitration awards involving certain adverse actions in the general Federal civil service in which decisions on such matters, whether made by an arbitrator or an adjudicative body, are subject to the same judicial review. In contrast, there is no such symmetry of review under the CAA because legislative branch employees have no recourse to the MSPB or other similar administrative agencies and there is no judicial review of arbitrators' awards. If section 2425.3(b) were not deleted, employees and employing offices under the CAA would be deprived of a forum for review of arbitration awards involving certain adverse actions. Accordingly, the Board concludes that there is good cause to modify the FLRA's regulations by deleting section 2425.3(b).

(4) Consultation rights

Under section 2426.1(a) of the FLRA's regulations, an agency or an agency's primary national subdivision shall accord national consultation rights to a labor organization that "[h]olds exclusive recognition for either: (i) Ten percent (10%) or more of the total number of civilian personnel employed by the agency and the non-appropriated fund Federal instrumentalities under its jurisdiction, excluding foreign nationals; or (ii) 3,500 or more employees of the agency." The Board has determined that the 10% threshold requirement should not be modified for good cause, as one commenter suggested. The Board agrees with the commenter that the small size of many employing offices in the legislative branch must be considered. However, the FLRA considered 10% of the employees of an agency or primary national subdivision to be a significant enough proportion of the employee complement to allow for meaningful consultations, no matter the size of the agency or the number of its employees. No convincing reason has been provided by the commenter why the FLRA's judgment is not workable here, or why there should be a different threshold requirement for small legislative branch employing offices from that applicable to small executive branch agencies.

By contrast, the same concern for the small size of many employing offices has prompted the Board to conclude that good cause exists to modify the alternate threshold requirement—i.e., the requirement that a labor organization hold exclusive recognition of 3,500 or more of an agency's employees in order to be accorded national consultation rights. Although the Board has been unable through its research to determine the reasoning of the FLRA in choosing the number 3,500 as a threshold requirement, the number corresponds to the considerable size of many of the executive branch agencies. Because none of the employing offices has as many as 35,000 employees, the 3,500 employee threshold is irrelevant in light of the existence of the other threshold requirement, discussed above, of 10% of the employee complement. The Board thus finds that it is unworkable in this context and that there is good cause to delete it.

Section 2426.11(a) requires that "[a]n agency shall accord consultation rights on Government-wide rules or regulations to a labor organization that . . . [h]olds exclusive recognition for 3,500 or more employees." The Board has determined that this threshold requirement should also be deleted for good cause, since many of the employing offices in the legislative branch are considerably smaller than executive branch agencies. However, once this requirement is omitted, there is no other requirement in the regulations by which to determine whether consultation rights on Government-wide rules or regulations should be granted to a labor organization. Therefore, the Board has concluded that the 10% threshold requirement should be employed in this section as well. The 10% figure is used as an alternate criterion to 3,500 in according national consultation rights, and it is an appropriate standard to use for according consultation rights on Government-wide regulations as well.

(5) Enforcement of Decisions of the Assistant Secretary of Labor

As noted above, one commenter asserted that part 2428 of the FLRA's regulations is inapplicable under the CAA and should be omitted from the Board's regulations. Part 2428 of the FLRA's regulations provides a procedure for the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations to petition the FLRA to enforce decisions and orders of the Assistant Secretary with respect to labor organization conduct.

The Board has concluded that, although the Assistant Secretary has no enforcement authority over covered employing offices or covered employees, nothing in the CAA removes the Assistant Secretary of Labor's authority to regulate the conduct of labor organizations, even those that exclusively represent legislative branch employees. Indeed, 5 U.S.C. 7120(d) authorizes the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations to regulate the conduct of labor organizations and is specifically incorporated into the CAA. Further, nothing in the CAA would preclude the Assistant Secretary from petitioning the Board to enforce a decision and order involving a labor organization under the jurisdiction of the CAA. In this regard, the FLRA promulgated part 2428 as part of its authority under section 7105 of chapter 71 to "take such actions as are necessary and appropriate to effectively administer the provisions" of chapter 71. Under the CAA, the Board has specifically been granted the same authority to administer the provisions of chapter 71 as applied by the CAA. Accordingly, there is not good cause for the Board to omit part 2428 in its entirety or to decline to permit the Assistant Secretary to petition the Board in accordance with the procedures set forth therein.

However, the Board proposes not to adopt section 2428.3(a), which would require the Board to enforce any decision or order of the Assistant Secretary unless it is "arbitrary and capricious or based upon manifest disregard of the law." In light of section 225(f)(3) of the CAA, which states that the CAA does not authorize executive branch enforcement of the Act, the Board should not adopt a provision that would require the Board to defer to decisions of an executive branch agency. Accordingly, the Board has modified the provisions of part 2428 by omitting section 2428.3(a).

(6) Production of evidence in pre-election investigatory hearings

As noted in section I.B.2. above, section 7132 of chapter 71, which authorizes the issuance of subpoenas by various FLRA officials, was not made applicable by the CAA. Moreover, as pre-election investigatory hearings are not hearings that are conducted under section 405 of the CAA, subpoenas for documents or witnesses in such pre-election proceedings are not available under the CAA. Nonetheless, in order to properly decide disputed representation issues and effectively implement section 220 of the CAA, a complete investigatory record comparable to that developed by the FLRA under chapter 71 is necessary. Accordingly, there is good cause to modify section 2422.18 of the FLRA's regulations in order to ensure that such a record is made in the absence of the availability of subpoenas. To this end, the Board is specifically proposing the inclusion of section 2422.18(d), which provides that the parties have an obligation to produce existing documents and witnesses for the pre-election investigatory hearing in accordance with the instructions of the Executive Director; and the Board is further proposing that a willful failure to comply with such instructions may in appropriate circumstances result in an adverse inference being drawn on the issue related to the evidence sought.

(7) Selection of the unfair labor practice procedure or the negotiability procedure

The Board has determined that there is also good cause to delete the concluding sentence of sections 2423.5 and 2424.5 of the FLRA's regulations because, in the context of the CAA, they would serve improperly to deprive judicial review in certain circumstances. Generally, when an employing office asserts it has no duty to bargain over a proposal, a labor organization may seek a Board determination on the issue either through an unfair labor practice proceeding or a negotiability proceeding. However, the concluding sentences of the referenced regulations preclude a labor organization from filing an unfair labor practice charge in cases that solely involve an employing office's allegation that the duty to bargain in good faith does not extend to the matter proposed to be bargained and that do not involve actual or contemplated changes in conditions of employment. In such cases, those sentences of the regulations provide that a labor organization may only file a petition for review of a negotiability issue.

Unlike chapter 71, the CAA does not provide for direct judicial review of Board decisions and orders on petitions for review of negotiability issues. Rather, judicial review of Board determinations as to the negotiability of collective bargaining proposals is only available through an unfair labor practice proceeding involving a dispute over an employing office's duty to bargain. Accordingly, if sections 2423.5 and 2424.5 were not modified, a labor organization would, in certain circumstances, be precluded from electing to file an unfair labor practice charge and possibly obtaining judicial review of a Board decision. Rather, the labor organization would be required to file a petition for review of the negotiability issue and any unfavorable decision would be unreviewable. The Board concludes that it would be more effective for the implementation of the rights and protections under section 220 to delete the two specified sentences, thereby allowing a labor organization to use the unfair labor practice procedures in all circumstances.

(8) Official time

Section 2429.13 of the FLRA's regulations requires employing offices to grant "official time" to employees when the employees' participation in investigations or hearings is deemed necessary by hearing officers or Office officials. The Board has determined that section 2429.13 of the FLRA's regulations should be modified by striking the last sentence, which would require the payment by employing offices of transportation and per diem expenses associated with employees' participation in investigations or hearings on official time. The Board finds good cause to modify the provision in light of the decision of the United States Supreme Court in Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms v. Federal Labor Relations Authority, 464 U.S. 89, 104 S.Ct. 439 (1983), in which the Supreme Court held that the FLRA had exceeded its authority by requiring federal agencies to pay such per diem allowances and travel expenses. This regulatory requirement has been authoritatively and finally invalidated by the Supreme Court and thus has no applicability under the laws that have been incorporated by the CAA.

(9) The Board's exercise of the authorities of the Federal Service Impasses Panel

Section 2470 of the FLRA's regulations defines the Federal Service Impasses Panel as all members of the Panel or a quorum thereof and thus permits formal actions to be taken on behalf of the Panel by less than the Panel's full complement of members. The Federal Service Impasses Panel is composed of seven members. The Board, which will exercise the authorities of the Panel pursuant to section 220(c)(4) of the CAA, is a five-member body. It is the Board's determination that it will be more effective for the implementation of section 220(c)(4) to provide for the full Board, rather than a quorum thereof, to carry out its authorities under that section. Section 2470 of the regulation has been modified accordingly.

(10) Conflict of Interest

As noted above, one commenter asserted that sections 2422.7 and 2422.23 of the FLRA's regulations should be modified pursuant to section 220(d)(2)(B). The two referenced sections of the FLRA's regulations provide, respectively, that an employing office may be directed to post a notice advising affected employees of the filing of a representation petition and that an employing office will post a notice of election when an election is to be conducted. In both instances the notices, which in the context of the CAA will be prepared by the Office of Compliance, must be posted in places where notices are normally posted for the affected employees or they may be distributed in a manner by which notices are normally distributed. The commenter urges that these regulatory provisions be modified to prohibit the publication of any material relating to a labor organization in any area open to the public. In support of the proposed modification, the commenter states only that display of such material in public view creates, at the very least, an appearance of a conflict of interest insofar as it may appear that Congress is unduly influenced by particular labor organizations.

In the ANPR, the Board requested commenters to fully and specifically describe the conflict of interest or appearance thereof that they believe would exist were pertinent FLRA regulations not modified and to explain the necessity for avoiding the asserted conflict or appearance of conflict. The Board further asked commenters to explain how they interpret 220(d)(2)(B) and, in doing so, identify the factual and interpretive materials upon which they are relying. The commenter has not discussed section 220(d)(2)(B) or explained why the proposed modification, a specific prohibition on posting an Office of Compliance notice in a public area, is necessary to avoid an appearance of conflict; indeed, the commenter has not explained how the posting of a notice announcing the filing of a petition or an upcoming election would create the appearance of undue influence asserted by the commenter.

In the Board's view, no appearance of conflict of interest or undue influence is created by an employing office posting a notice, prepared by the Office of Compliance, advising covered employees of a pending petition or an election under a statute that Congress has specifically applied to itself, similar provisions of which apply in the private and public sectors. Nothing in the FLRA's regulations requires that notices be posted in public areas; the referenced notices must only be posted or distributed in the manner that other information affecting employees is posted or distributed. Moreover, since the notices are prepared by the Office of Compliance, which is an independent office in the legislative branch, no reasonable person could even begin to find undue influence from the posting itself.

The Board thus concludes that, contrary to the commenter's suggestion, it is not necessary to modify sections 2422.7 and 2422.23 of the FLRA's regulations to avoid a conflict of interest or appearance of conflict of interest. The Board therefore proposes to adopt those provisions with only technical changes in nomenclature.

II. Method of Approval

The Board recommends that (1) the version of the proposed regulations that shall apply to the Senate and employees of the Senate be approved by the Senate by resolution; (2) the version of the proposed regulations that shall apply to the House of Representatives and employees of the House of Representatives be approved by the House of Representatives by resolution; and (3) the version of the proposed regulations that shall apply to other covered employees and employing offices be approved by the Congress by concurrent resolution.

Signed at Washington, D.C., on this 14th day of May, 1996.

Chair of the Board,
Office of Compliance.

(b) Validity challenge. The Executive Director or any party may challenge the validity of a showing of interest.

(c) When and where validity challenges may be filed. Party challenges to the validity of a showing of interest must be in writing and filed with the Executive Director before the pre-election investigatory hearing opens, unless good cause is shown for granting an extension. § 2422.12 Timeliness of petitions seeking an election.

(a) Election bar. Where there is no certified exclusive representative, a petition seeking an election will not be considered timely if filed within twelve (12) months of a valid election involving the same unit or a subdivision of the same unit.

(b) Certification bar. Where there is a certified exclusive representative of employees, a petition seeking an election will not be considered timely if filed within twelve (12) months after the certification of the exclusive representative of the employees in an appropriate unit. If a collective bargaining agreement covering the claimed unit is pending employing office head review under 5 U.S.C. 7114(c), as applied by the CAA, or is in effect, paragraphs (c), (d), or (e) of this section apply.

(c) Bar during employing office head review. A petition seeking an election will not be considered timely if filed during the period of employing office head review under 5 U.S.C. 7114(c), as applied by the CAA. This bar expires upon either the passage of thirty (30) days absent employing office head action, or upon the date of any timely employing office head action.

(d) Contract bar where the contract is for three (3) years or less. Where a collective bargaining agreement is in effect covering the claimed unit and has a term of three (3) years or less from the date it became effective, a petition seeking an election will be considered timely if filed not more than one hundred and five (105) and not less than sixty

(60) days prior to the expiration of the agreement.

(e) Contract bar where the contract is for more than three (3) years. Where a collective bargaining agreement is in effect covering the claimed unit and has a term of more than three (3) years from the date it became effective, a petition seeking an election will be considered timely if filed not more than one hundred and five (105) and not less than sixty (60) days prior to the expiration of the initial three (3) year period, and any time after the expiration of the initial three (3) year period.

(f) Unusual circumstances. A petition seeking an election or a determination relating to representation matters may be filed at any time when unusual circumstances exist that substantially affect the unit or majority representation.

(g) Premature extension. Where a collective bargaining agreement with a term of three (3) years or less has been extended prior to sixty (60) days before its expiration date, the extension will not serve as a basis for dismissal of a petition seeking an election filed in accordance with this section.

(h) Contract requirements. Collective bargaining agreements, including agreements that go into effect under 5 U.S.C. 7114(c), as applied by the CAA, and those that automatically renew without further action by the parties, do not constitute a bar to a petition seeking an election under this section unless a clear and unambiguous effective date, renewal date where applicable, duration, and termination date are ascertainable from the agreement and relevant accompanying documentation.

§ 2422.13 Resolution of issues raised by a petition.

(a) Meetings prior to filing a representation petition. All parties affected by the representation issues that may be raised in a petition are encouraged to meet prior to the filing of the petition to discuss their interests and narrow and resolve the issues. If requested by all parties a representative of the Office will participate in these meetings.

(b) Meetings to narrow and resolve the issues after the petition is filed. After a petition is filed, the Executive Director may require all affected parties to meet to narrow and resolve the issues raised in the petition.

§ 2422.14 Effect of withdrawal/dismissal.

(a) Withdrawal/dismissal less than sixty (60) days before contract expiration. When a petition seeking an election that has been timely filed is withdrawn by the petitioner or dismissed by the Executive Director or the Board less than sixty (60) days prior to the expiration of an existing agreement between the incumbent exclusive representative and the employing office or activity or any time after the expiration of the agreement, another petition seeking an election will not be considered timely if filed within a ninety (90) day period from either:

- (1) The date the withdrawal is approved; or
- (2) The date the petition is dismissed by the Executive Director when no application for review is filed with the Board; or
- (3) The date the Board rules on an application for review; or
- (4) The date the Board issues a Decision and Order dismissing the petition.

Other pending petitions that have been timely filed under this Part will continue to be processed.

(b) Withdrawal by petitioner. A petitioner who submits a withdrawal request for a petition seeking an election that is received by the Executive Director after the notice of pre-election investigatory hearing issues or after approval of an election agreement, whichever occurs first, will be barred from filing another petition seeking an election for the same unit or any subdivision of the unit for six (6) months from the date of the approval of the withdrawal by the Executive Director.

(c) Withdrawal by incumbent. When an election is not held because the incumbent disclaims any representation interest in a unit, a petition by the incumbent seeking an election involving the same unit or a subdivision of the same unit will not be considered timely if filed within six (6) months of cancellation of the election.

§ 2422.15 Duty to furnish information and cooperate.

(a) Relevant information. After a petition is filed, all parties must, upon request of the Executive Director, furnish the Executive Director and serve all parties affected by issues raised in the petition with information concerning parties, issues, and agreements raised in or affected by the petition.

(b) Inclusions and exclusions. After a petition seeking an election is filed, the Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, may direct the employing office or activity to furnish the Executive Director and all parties affected by issues raised in the petition with a current alphabetized list of employees and job classifications included in and/or excluded from the existing or claimed unit affected by issues raised in the petition.

(c) Cooperation. All parties are required to cooperate in every aspect of the representation process. This obligation includes cooperating fully with the Executive Director, submitting all required and requested information, and participating in prehearing conferences and pre-election investigatory hearings. The failure to cooperate in the representation process may result in the Executive Director or the Board taking appropriate action, including dismissal of the petition or denial of intervention.

§ 2422.16 Election agreements or directed elections.

(a) Election agreements. Parties are encouraged to enter into election agreements.

(b) Executive Director directed election. If the parties are unable to agree on procedural matters, specifically, the eligibility period, method of election, dates, hours, or locations of the election, the Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, will decide election procedures and issue a Direction of Election, without prejudice to the rights of a party to file objections to the procedural conduct of the election.

(c) Opportunity for an investigatory hearing. Before directing an election, the Executive Director shall provide affected parties an opportunity for a pre-election investigatory hearing on other than procedural matters.

(d) Challenges or objections to a directed election. A Direction of Election issued under this section will be issued without prejudice to the right of a party to file a challenge to the eligibility of any person participating in the election and/or objections to the election.

(c) Prehearing conference. A prehearing conference will be conducted by the Executive Director or her designee, either by meeting or teleconference. All parties must participate in a prehearing conference and be prepared to fully discuss, narrow and resolve the issues set forth in the notification of the prehearing conference.

(d) No interlocutory appeal of investigatory hearing determination. The Executive Director's determination of whether to issue a notice of pre-election investigatory hearing is not appealable to the Board.

§ 2422.18 Pre-election investigatory hearing procedures.

(a) Purpose of a pre-election investigatory hearing. Representation hearings are considered investigatory and not adversarial. The purpose of the hearing is to develop a full and complete record of relevant and material facts.

(b) Conduct of hearing. Pre-election investigatory hearings will be open to the public unless otherwise ordered by the Executive Director or her designee. There is no burden of proof, with the exception of proceedings on objections to elections as provided for in § 2422.27(b). Formal rules of evidence do not apply.

(c) Pre-election investigatory hearing. Pre-election investigatory hearings will be conducted by the Executive Director or her designee.

(d) Production of evidence. Parties have the obligation to produce existing documents and witnesses for the investigatory hearing in accordance with the instructions of the Executive Director or her designee. If a party willfully fails to comply with such instructions, the Board may draw an inference adverse to that party on the issue related to the evidence sought.

(e) Transcript. An official reporter will make the official transcript of the pre-election investigatory hearing. Copies of the official transcript may be examined in the Office during normal working hours. Requests by parties to purchase copies of the official transcript should be made to the official hearing reporter.

§ 2422.19 Motions.

(a) Purpose of a motion. Subsequent to the issuance of a notice of pre-election investigatory hearing in a representation proceeding, a party seeking a ruling, an order, or relief must do so by filing or raising a motion stating the order or relief sought and the grounds therefor. Challenges and other filings referenced in other sections of this subpart may, in the discretion of the Executive Director or her designee, be treated as a motion.

The Executive Director or her designee will rule on motions made at the hearing.

(d) Posthearing motions. Motions made after the hearing closes must be filed in writing with the Board. Any response to a posthearing motion must be filed with the Board within five (5) days after service of the motion.

(1) An original and two (2) copies of a brief must be filed with the Board within thirty (30) days from the close of the hearing.

(b) Notice of election. Prior to the election a notice of election, prepared by the Executive Director, will be posted by the employing office or activity in places where notices to employees are customarily posted and/or distributed in a manner by which notices are normally distributed. The notice of election will contain the details and procedures of the election, including the appropriate unit, the eligibility period, the date(s), hour(s) and location(s) of the election, a sample ballot, and the effect of the vote.

(c) Sample ballot. The reproduction of any document purporting to be a copy of the official ballot that suggests either directly or indirectly to employees that the Board endorses a particular choice in the election may constitute grounds for setting aside an election if objections are filed under § 2422.26.

(d) Secret ballot. All elections will be by secret ballot.

(e) Intervenor withdrawal from ballot. When two or more labor organizations are included as choices in an election, an intervening labor organization may, prior to the approval of an election agreement or before the direction of an election, file a written request with the Executive Director to remove its name from the ballot. If the request is not received prior to the approval of an election agreement or before the direction of an election, unless the parties and the Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, agree otherwise, the intervening labor organization will remain on the ballot. The Executive Director's decision on the request is final and not subject to the filing of an application for review with the Board.

(f) Incumbent withdrawal from ballot in an election to decertify an incumbent representative. When there is no intervening labor organization, an election to decertify an incumbent exclusive representative will not be held if the incumbent provides the Executive Director with a written disclaimer of any representation interest in the unit. When there is an intervenor, an election will be held if the intervening labor organization proffers a thirty percent (30%) showing of interest within the time period established by the Executive Director.

(g) Petitioner withdraws from ballot in an election. When there is no intervening labor organization, an election will not be held if the petitioner provides the Executive Director with a written request to withdraw the petition. (h) Observers. All parties are entitled to representation at the polling location(s) by observers of their own selection subject to the Executive Director's approval.

(1) Parties desiring to name observers must file in writing with the Executive Director a request for specifically named observers at least fifteen (15) days prior to an election. The Executive Director may grant an extension of time for filing a request for specifically named observers for good cause where a party requests such an extension or on the Executive Director's own motion. The request must name and identify the observers requested.

(2) An employing office or activity may use as its observers any employees who are not eligible to vote in the election, except:

- (i) Supervisors or management officials;
- (ii) Employees who have any official connection with any of the labor organizations involved; or

- (ii) Employees who hold an elected office in the union.

(4) Objections to a request for specific observers must be filed with the Executive Director stating the reasons in support within five (5) days after service of the request.

(5) The Executive Director's ruling on requests for and objections to observers is final and binding and is not subject to the filing of an application for review with the Board.

§ 2422.24 Challenged ballots.

(a) Filing challenges. A party or the Executive Director may, for good cause, challenge the eligibility of any person to participate in the election prior to the employee voting.

(b) Challenged ballot procedure. An individual whose eligibility to vote is in dispute will be given the opportunity to vote a challenged ballot. If the parties and the Region are unable to resolve the challenged ballot(s) prior to the tally of ballots, the unresolved

§ 2422.26 Objections to the election.

(a) Filing objections to the election. Objections to the procedural conduct of the election or to conduct that may have improperly affected the results of the election may be filed by any party. Objections must be filed and received by the Executive Director within five (5) days after the tally of ballots has been served. Any objections must be timely regardless of whether the challenged ballots are sufficient in number to affect the results of the election. The objections must be supported by clear and concise reasons. An original and two (2) copies of the objections must be received by the Executive Director.

(b) Supporting evidence. The objecting party must file with the Executive Director evidence, including signed statements, documents and other materials supporting the objections within ten (10) days after the objections are filed.

(c) Executive Director action. After investigation, the Executive Director will take appropriate action consistent with § 2422.30.

(d) Consolidated hearing on objections and/or determinative challenged ballots and an unfair labor practice hearing. When appropriate, and in accordance with § 2422.33, objections and/or determinative challenged ballots may be consolidated with an unfair labor practice hearing. Such consolidated hearings will be conducted by a Hearing Officer. Exceptions and related submissions must be filed with the Board and the Board will issue a decision in accordance with Part 2423 of this chapter and section 406 of the CAA, except for the following:

(1) Section 2423.18 of this Subchapter concerning the burden of proof is not applicable;

(2) The Hearing Officer may not recommend remedial action to be taken or notices to be posted; and,

(3) References to charge and complaint in Part 2423 of this chapter will be omitted.

§ 2422.28 Runoff elections.

(a) When a runoff may be held. A runoff election is required in an election involving at least three (3) choices, one of which is no union or neither, when no choice receives a majority of the valid ballots cast. However, a runoff may not be held until the objections to the election and determinative challenged ballots have been resolved.

(b) Eligibility. Employees who were eligible to vote in the original election and who are also eligible on the date of the runoff election may vote in the runoff election.

(c) Ballot. The ballot in the runoff election will provide for a selection between the two choices receiving the largest and second largest number of votes in the election.

§ 2422.29 Inconclusive elections.

(a) Inconclusive elections. An inconclusive election is one where challenged ballots are not sufficient to affect the outcome of the election and one of the following occurs:

(1) The ballot provides for at least three (3) choices, one of which is no union or neither and the votes are equally divided; or

(2) The ballot provides for at least three (3) choices, the choice receiving the highest number of votes does not receive a majority, and at least two other choices receive the next highest and same number of votes; or

(3) When a runoff ballot provides for a choice between two labor organizations and results in the votes being equally divided; or

(4) When the Board determines that there have been significant procedural irregularities.

(b) Eligibility to vote in a rerun election. A current payroll period will be used to determine eligibility to vote in a rerun election.

(c) Ballot. If a determination is made that the election is inconclusive, the election will be rerun with all the choices that appeared on the original ballot.

(d) Number of reruns. There will be only one rerun of an inconclusive election. If the rerun results in another inconclusive election, the tally of ballots will indicate a majority of valid ballots has not been cast for any choice and a certification of results will be issued. If necessary, a runoff may be held when an original election is rerun.

§ 2422.30 Executive Director investigations, notices of pre-election investigatory hearings, and actions; Board Decisions and Orders.

(a) Executive Director investigation. The Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, will make such investigation of the petition and any other matter as the Executive Director deems necessary.

(b) Executive Director notice of pre-election investigatory hearing. On behalf of the Board, the Executive Director will issue a notice of pre-election investigatory hearing to inquire into any matter about which a material issue of fact exists, where there is an issue as to whether a question concerning representation exists, and any time there is reasonable cause to believe a question exists regarding unit appropriateness.

(c) Executive Director action. After investigation and/or hearing, when a pre-election investigatory hearing has been ordered, the Executive Director may, on behalf of the Board, approve an election agreement, dismiss a petition or deny intervention where there is an inadequate or invalid showing of interest, or dismiss a petition where there is an undisputed bar to further processing of the petition under law, rule or regulation.

(d) Appeal of Executive Director action. A party may file with the Board an application for review of an Executive Director action taken pursuant to section (c) above.

(e) Contents of the Record. When no pre-election investigatory hearing has been conducted all material submitted to and considered by the Executive Director during the investigation becomes a part of the record. (f) Transfer of record to Board; Board Decisions and Orders. In cases that are submitted to the Board for decision in the first instance, the Board shall decide the issues presented based upon the record developed by the Executive Director, including the transcript of the pre-election investigatory hearing, if any, documents admitted into the record and briefs and other approved submissions from the parties. The Board may direct that a secret ballot election be held, issue an order dismissing the petition, or make such other disposition of the matter as it deems appropriate.

§ 2422.31 Application for review of an Executive Director action.

(a) Filing an application for review. A party must file an application for review with the Board within sixty (60) days of the Executive Director's action. The sixty (60) day time limit provided for in 5 U.S.C. 7105(f), as applied by the CAA, may not be extended or waived.

(b) Contents. An application for review must be sufficient to enable the Board to rule on the application without recourse to the record; however, the Board may, in its discretion, examine the record in evaluating the application. An application must specify the matters and rulings to which exception(s) is taken, include a summary of evidence relating to any issue raised in the application, and make specific reference to page citations in the transcript if a hearing was held. An application may not raise any issue or rely on any facts not timely presented to the Executive Director.

(c) Review. The Board may, in its discretion, grant an application for review when the application demonstrates that review is warranted on one or more of the following grounds:

(1) The decision raises an issue for which there is an absence of precedent;

(2) Established law or policy warrants reconsideration; or,

(3) There is a genuine issue over whether the Executive Director has:

(i) Failed to apply established law;

(ii) Committed a prejudicial procedural error;

(iii) Committed a clear and prejudicial error concerning a substantial factual matter.

(d) Opposition. A party may file with the Board an opposition to an application for review within ten (10) days after the party is served with the application. A copy must be served on the Executive Director and all other parties and a statement of service must be filed with the Board.

(e) Executive Director action becomes the Board's action. An action of the Executive Director becomes the action of the Board when:

(1) No application for review is filed with the Board within sixty (60) days after the date of the Executive Director's action; or

(2) A timely application for review is filed with the Board and the Board does not undertake to grant review of the Executive Director's action within sixty (60) days of the filing of the application; or

(3) The Board denies an application for review of the Executive Director's action.

(f) Board grant of review and stay. The Board may rule on the issue(s) in an application for review in its order granting the application for review. Neither filing nor granting an application for review shall stay any action ordered by the Executive Director unless specifically ordered by the Board.

(g) Briefs if review is granted. If the Board does not rule on the issue(s) in the application for review in its order granting review, the Board may, in its discretion, afford the parties an opportunity to file briefs. The briefs will be limited to the issue(s) referenced in the Board's order granting review.

§ 2422.32 Certifications and revocations.

(a) Certifications. The Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, will issue an appropriate certification when:

(1) After an election, runoff, or rerun,

(i) No objections are filed or challenged ballots are not determinative, or

(ii) Objections and determinative challenged ballots are decided and resolved; or

(2) The Executive Director takes an action requiring a certification and that action becomes the action of the Board under §2422.31(e) or the Board otherwise directs the issuance of a certification.

(b) Revocations. Without prejudice to any rights and obligations which may exist under the CAA, the Executive Director, on behalf of the Board, will revoke a recognition or certification, as appropriate, and provide a written statement of reasons when an incumbent exclusive representative files, during a representation proceeding, a disclaimer of any representational interest in the unit.

§ 2422.33 Relief obtainable under Part 2423.

Remedial relief that was or could have been obtained as a result of a motion, objection, or challenge filed or raised under this subpart, may not be the basis for similar relief if filed or raised as an unfair labor practice under Part 2423 of this Chapter: provided, however, that related matters may be consolidated for hearing as noted in §2422.27(d) of this subpart.

§ 2422.34 Rights and obligations during the pendency of representation proceedings.

(a) Existing recognitions, agreements, and obligations under the CAA. During the pendency of any representation proceeding, parties are obligated to maintain existing recognitions, adhere to the terms and conditions of existing collective bargaining agreements, and fulfill all other representational and bargaining responsibilities under the CAA.

(b) Unit status of individual employees. Notwithstanding paragraph (a) of this section and except as otherwise prohibited by law, a party may take action based on its position regarding the bargaining unit status of individual employees, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 7103(a)(2), 7112(b) and (c), as applied by the CAA: provided, however, that its actions may be challenged, reviewed, and remedied where appropriate.

§ 2423.1 Applicability of this part.

This part is applicable to any charge of alleged unfair labor practices occurring on or after October 1, 1996.

§ 2423.2 Informal proceedings.

(a) The purposes and policies of chapter 71, as applied by the CAA, can best be achieved by the cooperative efforts of all persons covered by the program. To this end, it shall be the policy of the Board and the General Counsel to encourage all persons alleging unfair labor practices and persons against whom such allegations are made to meet and, in good faith, attempt to resolve such matters prior to the filing of unfair labor practice charges.

(b) In furtherance of the policy referred to in paragraph (a) of this section, and noting the 180 day period of limitation set forth in section 220(c)(2) of the CAA, it shall be the policy of the Board and the General Counsel to encourage the informal resolution of unfair labor practice allegations subsequent to the filing of a charge and prior to the filing of a complaint by the General Counsel.

(c) In order to afford the parties an opportunity to implement the policy referred to in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section, the investigation of an unfair labor practice charge by the General Counsel will normally not commence until the parties have been afforded a reasonable amount of time, not to exceed fifteen (15) days from the filing of the charge, during which period the parties are urged to attempt to informally resolve the unfair labor practice allegation.

§ 2423.3 Who may file charges.

An employing office, employing activity, or labor organization may be charged by any person with having engaged in or engaging in any unfair labor practice prohibited under 5 U.S.C. 7116, as applied by the CAA.

§ 2423.4 Contents of the charge; supporting evidence and documents.

(a) A charge alleging a violation of 5 U.S.C. 7116, as applied by the CAA, shall be submitted on forms prescribed by the General Counsel and shall contain the following:

- (1) The name, address and telephone number of the person(s) making the charge;
- (2) The name, address and telephone number of the employing office or activity, or labor organization against whom the charge is made;
- (3) A clear and concise statement of the facts constituting the alleged unfair labor practice, a statement of the section(s) and subsection(s) of chapter 71 of title 5 of the United States Code made applicable by the CAA alleged to have been violated, and the date and place of occurrence of the particular acts; and
- (4) A statement of any other procedure invoked involving the subject matter of the charge and the results, if any, including whether the subject matter raised in the charge (i) has been raised previously in a grievance procedure; (ii) has been referred to the Board under Part 2471 of these regulations, or the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, or (iii) involves a negotiability issue raised by the charging party in a petition pending before the Board pursuant to Part 2424 of this subchapter.

(b) Such charge shall be in writing and signed and shall contain a declaration by the person signing the charge, under the penalties of the Criminal Code (18 U.S.C. 1001), that its contents are true and correct to the best of that person's knowledge and belief.

(c) When filing a charge, the charging party shall submit to the General Counsel any supporting evidence and documents.

§ 2423.5 Selection of the unfair labor practice procedure or the negotiability procedure.

Where a labor organization files an unfair labor practice charge pursuant to this part which involves a negotiability issue, and the labor organization also files pursuant to part 2424 of this subchapter a petition for review of the same negotiability issue, the Board and the General Counsel ordinarily will not process the unfair labor practice charge and the petition for review simultaneously. Under such circumstances, the labor organization must select under which procedure to proceed. Upon selection of one procedure, further action under the other procedure will ordinarily be suspended. Such selection must be made regardless of whether the unfair labor practice charge or the petition for review of a negotiability issue is filed first. Notification of this selection must be made in writing at the time that both procedures have been invoked, and must be served on the Board, the General Counsel and all parties to both the unfair labor practice case and the negotiability case.

§ 2423.6 Filing and service of copies.

(a) An original and four (4) copies of the charge together with one copy for each additional charged party named shall be filed with the General Counsel.

(b) Upon the filing of a charge, the charging party shall be responsible for the service of a copy of the charge (without the supporting evidence and documents) upon the person(s) against whom the charge is made, and for filing a written statement of such service with the General Counsel. The General Counsel will, as a matter of course, cause a copy of such charge to be served on the person(s) against whom the charge is made, but shall not be deemed to assume responsibility for such service.

(c) A charge will be deemed to be filed when it is received by the General Counsel in accordance with the requirements in paragraph (a) of this section.

§ 2423.7 Investigation of charges.

(a) The General Counsel shall conduct such investigation of the charge as the General Counsel deems necessary. Consistent with the policy set forth in §2423.2, the investigation will normally not commence until the parties have been afforded a reasonable amount of time, not to exceed fifteen (15) days from the filing of the charge, to informally resolve the unfair labor practice allegation.

(b) During the course of the investigation all parties involved will have an opportunity to present their evidence and views to the General Counsel.

(c) In connection with the investigation of charges, all persons are expected to cooperate fully with the General Counsel.

(d) The purposes and policies of chapter 71, as applied by the CAA, can best be achieved by the full cooperation of all parties involved and the voluntary submission of all potentially relevant information from all potential sources during the course of the investigation. To this end, it shall be the policy of the Board and the General Counsel to protect the identity of individuals and the substance of the statements and information they submit or which is obtained during the investigation as a means of assuring the Board's and the General Counsel's continuing ability to obtain all relevant information.

§ 2423.8 Amendment of charges.

Prior to the issuance of a complaint, the charging party may amend the charge in accordance with the requirements set forth in §2423.6.

§ 2423.9 Action by the General Counsel.

(a) The General Counsel shall take action which may consist of the following, as appropriate:

- (1) Approve a request to withdraw a charge;

(2) Refuse to file a complaint;
 (3) Approve a written settlement and recommend that the Executive Director approve a written settlement agreement in accordance with the provisions of section 414 of the CAA;

(4) File a complaint;

(5) Upon agreement of all parties, transfer to the Board for decision, after filing of a complaint, a stipulation of facts in accordance with the provisions of §2429.1(a) of this subchapter; or

(6) Withdraw a complaint.

§ 2423.10 Determination not to file complaint.

(a) If the General Counsel determines that the charge has not been timely filed, that the charge fails to state an unfair labor practice, or for other appropriate reasons, the General Counsel may request the charging party to withdraw the charge, and in the absence of such withdrawal within a reasonable time, decline to file a complaint.

(b) The charging party may not obtain a review of the General Counsel's decision not to file a complaint.

§ 2423.11 Settlement or adjustment of issues.

(a) At any stage of a proceeding prior to hearing, where time, the nature of the proceeding, and the public interest permit, all interested parties shall have the opportunity to submit to the Executive Director or General Counsel, as appropriate, for consideration, all facts and arguments concerning offers of settlement, or proposals of adjustment.

Precomplaint settlements

(b)(1) Prior to the filing of any complaint or the taking of other formal action, the General Counsel will afford the charging party and the respondent a reasonable period of time in which to enter into a settlement agreement to be submitted to and approved by the General Counsel and the Executive Director. Upon approval by the General Counsel and Executive Director and compliance with the terms of the settlement agreement, no further action shall be taken in the case. If the respondent fails to perform its obligations under the settlement agreement, the General Counsel may determine to institute further proceedings.

(2) In the event that the charging party fails or refuses to become a party to a settlement agreement offered by the respondent, if the General Counsel concludes that the offered settlement will effectuate the policies of chapter 71, as applied by the CAA, the agreement shall be between the respondent and the General Counsel and the latter shall decline to file a complaint.

Post complaint settlement policy

(c) Consistent with the policy reflected in paragraph (a) of this section, even after the filing of a complaint, the Board favors the settlement of issues. Such settlements may be accomplished as provided in paragraph (b) of this section. The parties may, as part of the settlement, agree to waive their right to a hearing and agree further that the Board may issue an order requiring the respondent to take action appropriate to the terms of the settlement. Ordinarily such a settlement agreement will also contain the respondent's consent to the Board's application for the entry of a decree by the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit enforcing the Board's order.

Post complaint prehearing settlements

(d)(1) If, after the filing of a complaint, the charging party and the respondent enter into a settlement agreement, and such agreement is accepted by the General Counsel, the settlement agreement shall be submitted to the Executive Director for approval.

(2) If, after the filing of a complaint, the charging party fails or refuses to become a party to a settlement agreement offered by the respondent, and the General Counsel concludes that the offered settlement will effectuate the policies of chapter 71, as applied by the CAA, the agreement shall be between the respondent and the General Counsel. The charging party will be so informed and provided a brief written statement by the General Counsel of the reasons therefor. The settlement agreement together with the charging party's objections, if any, and the General Counsel's written statements, shall be submitted to the Executive Director for approval. The Executive Director may approve or disapprove any settlement agreement.

(3) After the filing of a complaint, if the General Counsel concludes that it will effectuate the policies of chapter 71, as applied by the CAA, the General Counsel may withdraw the complaint.

Settlements after the opening of the hearing

(e)(1) After filing of a complaint and after opening of the hearing, if the General Counsel concludes that it will effectuate the policies of chapter 71, as applied by the CAA, the General Counsel may request the Hearing Officer for permission to withdraw the complaint and, having been granted such permission to withdraw the complaint, may approve a settlement and recommend that the Executive Director approve the settlement pursuant to paragraph (b) of this section.

(2) If, after filing of a complaint and after opening of the hearing, the parties enter into a settlement agreement that contains the respondent's consent to the Board's application for the entry of a decree by the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit enforcing the Board's order, the General Counsel may request the Hearing Officer and the Executive Director to approve such settlement agreement, and upon such approval, to transmit the agreement to the Board for approval.

(3) If the charging party fails or refuses to become a party to a settlement agreement, offered by the respondent, that contains the respondent's consent to the Board's application for the entry of a decree by the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit enforcing the Board's order, and the General Counsel concludes that the offered settlement will effectuate the policies of chapter 71, as applied to the CAA, the agreement shall be between the respondent and the General Counsel. After the charging party is given an opportunity to state on the record or in writing the reasons for opposing the settlement, the General Counsel may request the Hearing Officer and the Executive Director to approve such settlement agreement, and upon such approval, to transmit the agreement to the Board for approval. The Board may approve or disapprove any such settlement agreement or return the case to the Hearing Officer for other appropriate action.

§ 2423.12 Filing and contents of the complaint.

(a) After a charge is filed, if it appears to the General Counsel that formal proceedings in respect thereto should be instituted, the General Counsel shall file a formal complaint: Provided, however, That a determination by the General Counsel to file a complaint shall not be subject to review.

(b) The complaint shall include:

(1) Notice of the charge;

(2) Any information required pursuant to the Procedural Rules of the Office.

(c) Any such complaint may be withdrawn before the hearing by the General Counsel.

§ 2423.13 Answer to the complaint.

A respondent shall file an answer to a complaint in accordance with the requirements of the Procedural Rules of the Office.

§ 2423.14 Prehearing disclosure; conduct of hearing.

The procedures for prehearing discovery and the conduct of the hearing are set forth in the Procedural Rules of the Office.

§ 2423.15 Intervention.

Any person involved and desiring to intervene in any proceeding pursuant to this part shall file a motion in accordance with the procedures set forth in the Procedural Rules of the Office. The motion shall state the grounds upon which such person claims involvement.

§ 2423.16 [Reserved]

§ 2423.17 [Reserved]

§ 2423.18 Burden of proof before the Hearing Officer.

The General Counsel shall have the responsibility of presenting the evidence in support of the complaint and shall have the burden of proving the allegations of the complaint by a preponderance of the evidence.

2423.19 Duties and powers of the Hearing Officer.

It shall be the duty of the Hearing Officer to inquire fully into the facts as they relate to the matter before such Hearing Officer, subject to the rules and regulations of the Office and the Board.

§ 2423.20 [Reserved]

§ 2423.21 [Reserved]

§ 2423.22 [Reserved]

§ 2423.23 [Reserved]

§ 2423.24 [Reserved]

§ 2423.25 [Reserved]

§ 2423.26 Hearing Officer decisions; entry in records of the Office.

In accordance with the Procedural Rules of the Office, the Hearing Officer shall issue a written decision and that decision will be entered into the records of the Office.

§ 2423.27 Appeal to the Board.

An aggrieved party may seek review of a decision and order of the Hearing Officer in accordance with the Procedural Rules of the Office.

§ 2423.28 [Reserved]

§ 2423.29 Action by the Board.

(a) If an appeal is filed, the Board shall review the decision of the Hearing Officer in accordance with section 406 of the CAA, and the Procedural Rules of the Office.

(b) Upon finding a violation, the Board shall issue an order:

(1) To cease and desist from any such unfair labor practice in which the employing office or labor organization is engaged;

(2) Requiring the parties to renegotiate a collective bargaining agreement in accordance with the order of the Board and requiring that the agreement, as amended, be given retroactive effect;

(3) Requiring reinstatement of an employee with backpay in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 5596; or

(4) Including any combination of the actions described in paragraphs (1) through (3) of this paragraph (b), or such other action as will carry out the purpose of the chapter 71, as applied by the CAA.

(c) Upon finding no violation, the Board shall dismiss the complaint.

§ 2423.30 Compliance with decisions and orders of the Board.

When remedial action is ordered, the respondent shall report to the Office within a specified period that the required remedial action has been effected. When the General Counsel or the Executive Director finds that the required remedial action has not been effected, the General Counsel or the Executive Director shall take such action as may be appropriate, including referral to the Board for enforcement.

§ 2423.31 Backpay proceedings.

After the entry of a Board order directing payment of backpay, or the entry of a court decree enforcing such order, if it appears to the General Counsel that a controversy exists which cannot be resolved without a formal proceeding, the General Counsel may issue and serve on all parties a backpay specification accompanied by a request for hearing or a request for hearing without a specification. Upon receipt of the request for hearing, the Executive Director will appoint an independent Hearing Officer. The respondent shall, within twenty (20) days after the service of a backpay specification, file an answer thereto in accordance with the Office's Procedural Rules. No answer need be filed by the respondent to a notice of hearing issued without a specification. After the issuance of a notice of hearing, with or without a backpay specification, the hearing procedures provided in the Procedural Rules of the Office shall be followed insofar as applicable.

Subpart B—Criteria for Determining Compelling Need for Employing Office Rules and Regulations

2424.11 Illustrative criteria.

Subpart A—Instituting an Appeal

§ 2424.1 Conditions governing review.

The Board will consider a negotiability issue under the conditions prescribed by 5 U.S.C. 7117 (b) and (c), as applied by the CAA, namely: If an employing office involved in collective bargaining with an exclusive representative alleges that the duty to bargain in good faith does not extend to any matter proposed to be bargained because, as proposed, the matter is inconsistent with law, rule or regulation, the exclusive representative may appeal the allegation to the Board when—

(a) It disagrees with the employing office's allegation that the matter as proposed to be bargained is inconsistent with any Federal law or any Government-wide rule or regulation; or

(b) It alleges, with regard to any employing office rule or regulation asserted by the employing office as a bar to negotiations on the matter, as proposed, that:

(1) The rule or regulation violates applicable law, or rule or regulation of appropriate authority outside the employing office;

(2) The rule or regulation was not issued by the employing office or by any primary national subdivision of the employing office, or otherwise is not applicable to bar negotiations with the exclusive representative, under 5 U.S.C. 7117(a)(3), as applied by the CAA; or

(3) No compelling need exists for the rule or regulation to bar negotiations on the matter, as proposed, because the rule or regulation does not meet the criteria established in subpart B of this part.

§ 2424.2 Who may file a petition.

A petition for review of a negotiability issue may be filed by an exclusive representative which is a party to the negotiations.

§ 2424.3 Time limits for filing.

The time limit for filing a petition for review is fifteen (15) days after the date the employing office's allegation that the duty to bargain in good faith does not extend to the matter proposed to be bargained is served on the exclusive representative. The exclusive representative shall request such allegation in writing and the employing office shall make the allegation in writing and serve a copy on the exclusive representative: provided, however, that review of a negotiability issue may be requested by an exclusive representative under this subpart without a prior written allegation by the employing office if the employing office has not served such allegation upon the exclusive representative within ten (10) days after the date of the receipt by any employing office bargaining representative at the negotiations of a written request for such allegation.

§ 2424.4 Content of petition; service.

(a) A petition for review shall be dated and shall contain the following:

(1) A statement setting forth the express language of the proposal sought to be negotiated as submitted to the employing office;

(2) An explicit statement of the meaning attributed to the proposal by the exclusive representative including:

(i) Explanation of terms of art, acronyms, technical language, or any other aspect of the language of the proposal which is not in common usage; and

(ii) Where the proposal is concerned with a particular work situation, or other particular circumstances, a description of the situation or circumstances which will enable the Board to understand the context in which the proposal is intended to apply;

(3) A copy of all pertinent material, including the employing office's allegation in writing that the matter, as proposed, is not within the duty to bargain in good faith, and other relevant documentary material; and

(4) Notification by the petitioning labor organization whether the negotiability issue is also involved in an unfair labor practice charge filed by such labor organization under part 2423 of this subchapter and pending before the General Counsel.

(b) A copy of the petition including all attachments thereto shall be served on the employing office head and on the principal employing office bargaining representative at the negotiations.

(c)(1) Filing an incomplete petition for review will result in the exclusive representative being asked to provide the missing or incomplete information. Noncompliance with a request to complete the record may result in dismissal of the petition.

(2) The processing priority accorded to an incomplete petition, relative to other pending negotiability appeals, will be based upon the date when the petition is completed not the date it was originally filed.

§ 2424.5 Selection of the unfair labor practice procedure or the negotiability procedure.

Where a labor organization files an unfair labor practice charge pursuant to part 2423 of this subchapter which involves a negotiability issue, and the labor organization also files pursuant to this part a petition for review of the same negotiability issue, the Board and the General Counsel ordinarily will not process the unfair labor practice charge and the petition for review simultaneously. Under such circumstances, the labor organization must select under which procedure to proceed. Upon selection of one procedure, further action under the other procedure will ordinarily be suspended. Such selection must be made regardless of whether the unfair labor practice charge or the petition for review of a negotiability issue is filed first. Notification of this selection must be made in writing at the time that both procedures have been invoked, and must be served on the Board, the General Counsel and all parties to both the unfair labor practice case and the negotiability case.

§ 2424.6 Position of the employing office; time limits for filing; service.

(a) Within thirty (30) days after the date of the receipt by the head of an employing office of a copy of a petition for review of a negotiability issue the employing office shall file a statement

(1) Withdrawing the allegation that the duty to bargain in good faith does not extend to the matter proposed to be negotiated; or

(2) Setting forth in full its position on any matters relevant to the petition which it wishes the Board to consider in reaching its decision, including a full and detailed statement of its reasons supporting the allegation. The statement shall cite the section of any law, rule or regulation relied upon as a basis for the allegation and shall contain a copy of any internal employing office rule or regulation so relied upon. The statement shall include:

(i) Explanation of the meaning the employing office attributes to the proposal as a whole, including any terms of art, acronyms, technical language or any other aspect of the language of the proposal which is not in common usage; and

(ii) Description of a particular work situation, or other particular circumstance the employing office views the proposal to concern, which will enable the Board to understand the context in which the proposal is considered to apply by the employing office.

(b) A copy of the employing office's statement of position, including all attachments thereto shall be served on the exclusive representative.

§ 2424.7 Response of the exclusive representative; time limits for filing; service.

(a) Within fifteen (15) days after the date of the receipt by an exclusive representative of a copy of an employing office's statement of position the exclusive representative shall file a full and detailed response stating its position and reasons for:

(1) Disagreeing with the employing office's allegation that the matter, as proposed to be negotiated, is inconsistent with any Federal law or Government-wide rule or regulation; or

(2) Alleging that the employing office's rules or regulations violate applicable law, or rule or regulation or appropriate authority outside the employing office; that the rules or regulations were not issued by the employing office or by any primary national subdivision of the employing office, or otherwise are not applicable to bar negotiations under 5 U.S.C. 7117(a)(3), as applied by the CAA; or that no compelling need exists for the rules or regulations to bar negotiations.

(b) The response shall cite the particular section of any law, rule or regulation alleged to be violated by the employing office's rules or regulations; or shall explain the grounds for contending the employing office rules or regulations are not applicable to bar negotiations under 5 U.S.C. 7117(a)(3), as applied by the CAA, or fail to meet the criteria established in subpart B of this part, or were not issued at the employing office headquarters level or at the level of a primary national subdivision.

(c) A copy of the response of the exclusive representative including all attachments thereto shall be served on the employing office head and on the employing office's representative of record in the proceeding before the Board.

§ 2424.8 Additional submissions to the Board.

The Board will not consider any submission filed by any party, whether supplemental or responsive in nature, other than those authorized under §§ 2424.2 through 2424.7 unless such submission is requested by the Board; or unless, upon written request by any party, a copy of which is served on all other parties, the Board in its discretion grants permission to file such submission.

§ 2424.9 Hearing.

A hearing may be held, in the discretion of the Board, before a determination is made under 5 U.S.C. 7117(b) or (c), as applied by the CAA. If a hearing is held, it shall be expedited to the extent practicable and shall not include the General Counsel as a party.

§ 2424.10 Board decision and order; compliance.

(a) Subject to the requirements of this subpart the Board shall expedite proceedings under this part to the extent practicable and shall issue to the exclusive representative and to the employing office a written decision on the allegation and specific reasons therefor at the earliest practicable date.

(b) If the Board finds that the duty to bargain extends to the matter proposed to be bargained, the decision of the Board shall include an order that the employing office shall upon request (or as otherwise agreed to by the parties) bargain concerning such matter. (b) In preparation for taking such final action, the Board may hold hearings, administer oaths, and take the testimony or deposition of any person under oath, or it may appoint or designate one or more individuals pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 7119(c)(4), as applied by the CAA, to exercise such authority on its behalf.

UNITED STATES/UNITED KINGDOM AVIATION RELATIONS

Mr. PRESSLER. Madam President, I rise today to express my great frustration with the current state of aviation relations between the United States and the United Kingdom.

At a great cost to the United States economy, the highly restrictive United States/United Kingdom bilateral aviation agreement continues to be an enormous barrier to free and fair trade between our countries. It is a barrier British negotiators have carefully crafted over the years that, as intended, quite effectively limits competition in the United States/United Kingdom air service market. Simply put, it is an agreement which artificially manages air service trade in a way that significantly benefits British carriers.

For U.S. passenger carriers serving the transatlantic air service market, these are both the best of times and the worst of times. On the bright side, the historic open skies agreement the United States recently signed with the Federal Republic of Germany, combined with existing open skies agreements with other European countries, means that nearly half of all passengers traveling between the United States and Europe will be flying to or from European countries with open skies regimes. That truly is a remarkable statistic and great news for consumers.

Our aviation relations with the British, however, stand in disturbingly stark contrast. Although the British Government extols the virtues of transatlantic free trade, its words ring hollow with respect to the United States/United Kingdom air service market. United States carriers have proven themselves to be highly competitive in every international market they serve yet, all United States passenger carriers combined have a smaller share of the United States/United Kingdom air service market than just one British carrier, British Airways. Overall, two British carriers currently control nearly 50 percent more of the passenger traffic in that market than United States carriers. As I have said before, I do not believe market forces are responsible for this imbalance.

What adverse impacts does the highly restrictive United States/United Kingdom bilateral aviation agreement have on the United States economy? First, each year our economy is losing hundreds of millions of dollars of export revenue United States carriers might otherwise capture if the United States/United Kingdom air service market truly was competitive. Second, it is costing Americans new jobs which otherwise might be created if United States carriers could expand their services to the United Kingdom. Finally, consumer choice is badly restricted and consumers are denied the most competitive air fares.

Several months ago I announced an initiative I hoped might jump start stalled air service negotiations with the British and remedy these adverse economic impacts. Regrettably, the British spurned that attempt and other good faith efforts by the administration to restart talks. For that reason, I have decided to delay indefinitely my plans to introduce legislation increasing the permissible level of foreign ownership in the voting stock of U.S. carriers to 49 percent. That legislation was the cornerstone of my initiative. If the British exhibit a genuine willingness to seriously address our air service concerns, I will reconsider my decision.

Quite frankly, I am frustrated with the British intransigence in addressing this serious trade issue. They have long blamed a lack of reciprocal investment opportunities in the voting stock of U.S. carriers as a stumbling block to progress in our air service relationship. Finding some merit in that concern, I offered to introduce legislation to address it and help clear the way for further liberalization of our aviation relationship. The British Government's reaction, however, calls into question whether reciprocal foreign investment opportunities ever were the concern the British have long played them up to be.

To underscore that skepticism, I noticed in recent months British carriers have now moved onto criticizing United States policy on the grounds of additional wish list rights such as cabotage and direct participation in the Fly America Program.

Madam President, it has become even more apparent in recent months that British aviation policy is not driven by the goal of expanding rights for its carriers and moving forward in our aviation relationship. Instead, the overarching goal of that policy seems to be nothing less than continuing to protect British carriers from vigorous competition with United States carriers.

In particular, the British Government wants to keep in place the current system which blocks United States carriers from serving London's most popular airport, Heathrow, from most major passenger feed hubs in the United States. After all, under the current managed competition agreement, the British have totally blocked United States passenger feed to Heathrow from major United States hub airports including those located in Atlanta, Cincinnati, Dallas, Denver, Detroit, Houston, Minneapolis, Newark and St. Louis. No wonder United States carriers do not use larger aircraft as the British often chide.

Mr. President, let me conclude by saying I hope the British Government will decide to get in step with the rest of Europe by finally agreeing to take meaningful steps to liberalize the United States/United Kingdom bilateral aviation agreement. The time for such liberalization is long past due.

Let me also add that I for one believe there will come a time when the British truly want some significant aviation rights or regulatory relief from the United States. When that time comes, I fully expect the administration will use that leverage to the fullest extent possible and demand a very high price.

THE VERY BAD DEBT BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the Federal Government is running on borrowed money—more than $5 trillion of it. As of the close of business yesterday, May 14, 1996, the Federal debt stood at $5,096,217,391,261.73. On a per capita basis, every man, woman, and child in America owes $19,242.02 as his or her share of the Federal debt.

FOREIGN OIL CONSUMED BY THE UNITED STATES HERE'S THE WEEKLY BOX SCORE

Mr. HELMS. Madam President, the American Petroleum Institute reports that for the week ending May 10, the United States imported 8,623,000 barrels of foreign oil each day, 1,411,000 barrels more than the 7,212,000 barrels imported during the same week a year ago.

This means that Americans now rely on foreign oil for 57 percent of their needs, and there are no signs that this upward spiral will abate. Before the Persian gulf war, the United States obtained about 45 percent of its oil supply from foreign countries. During the Arab oil embargo in the 1970's, foreign oil accounted for only 35 percent of America's oil supply.

Anybody interested in restoring domestic production of oil? Politicians had better ponder the economic calamity certain to occur in America if and when foreign producers shut off our oil supply—or double the already enormous cost of imported oil flowing into the United States—now 8,623,000 barrels a day.

RICHARD M. SCRUSHY AND THE SPORTS MEDICINE COUNCIL

Mr. HEFLIN. Madam President, last week, one of Alabama's outstanding citizens and great success stories came to Washington in his effort to give something back to his country. Richard Scrushy is founder, chairman, and CEO of Healthsouth Corp., the Nation's largest provider of medical rehabilitation and sports medicine. He is also founder of the Healthsouth Sports Medicine Council, a nonprofit organization whose goal is to educate young athletes and help them become champions—not only in sports, but in everyday life.

The Sports Medicine Council is made up of top professional athletes and the Nation's leading sports medicine physicians and orthopaedic surgeons. The group unites sports celebrities who know the importance of good attitude, team spirit, and competitiveness, with physicians who have studied how the human body works, how to make it strong, and how to keep it well. Under Richard Scrushy's direction, this group has crafted a program and message that ultimately will reach hundreds of thousands of school children between the ages of 8 and 18 in cities across the United States. It will teach kids the importance of receiving an education, staying away from drugs, and practicing good sportsmanship on and off the field.

Last week in Washington, the Sports Medicine Council's message reached nearly 14,000 kids through a series of field trips to Sports Medicine Council shows. They were hosted by such sports figures as Bo Jackson, Herschel Walker, Kristi Yamaguchi, Cory Everson, and Lex Luger. The shows combined high-technology, interactive entertainment with the council's message and a hands-on opportunity for kids to meet their sports heroes and play on a team with them.

In a time when many of America's youth are in urgent need of positive role models and encouragement, Richard Scrushy's Sports Medicine Council is a wonderful idea and most welcome enterprise. It represents one of the ways in which private individuals and good corporate citizens can make a difference through their own initiatives. In this way, Richard Scrushy serves as a role model for all corporate CEO's.

Richard is truly one of the great American success stories. He is a self-made man who has never forgotten his roots. Part of his vision is to give back to his community. In the 12 years since the founding of Healthsouth Corp., he has led the company to employ over 33,000 people in over 900 locations across the United States. Healthsouth is an employer of over 3,000 people in Alabama alone. The company's revenues recently rose above the $2 billion mark. Not only has Richard Scrushy been a good citizen, he has been a great asset to the State of Alabama.

He has received such awards and honors as the 1994 Arthritis Foundation Humanitarian of the Year Award. He was named National Honorary Chairman of Multiple Sclerosis for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society. He has worked as a fundraiser for such charities as United Cerebral Palsy, the Ronald McDonald House, and the American Cancer Society.

As a modern-day, "renaissance man," Richard is an accomplished musician and also a commercial multiengine instrument pilot.

I congratulate Richard Scrushy on his tremendous success and on the rapid growth and contributions of the Healthsouth Sports Medicine Council. His is a tremendous example for others in the business community to emulate.

THE GAINES FAMILY

Mr. KERRY. Madam President, as we observe National Police Week, I want to pay a special tribute to one police family in Massachusetts. For the third year in a row, a group of 46 officers and friends from Massachusetts rode the 600 miles to Washington on their bicycles to attend ceremonies at the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial to honor those who have fallen in the line of duty. Among that group is Officer Paul Gaines and his three sons, Kevin, 10 years old; Stephen, 12; and Shawn, 14. Back at home, and missing her sons on Mother's Day is Sgt. Gladys Gaines, head of the Boston Police Department's domestic violence unit.

This remarkable family is an inspiration to all of us. While dysfunctional families who raise troubled children make the news, Paul and Gladys Gaines have obviously imparted to their children high moral values and a sense of responsibility to family and community, their own family, the family of brother and sister law enforcement officers, and the larger community of the Commonwealth. I want to pay tribute to the Gaines family and to the work they do as police officers and as parents.

TRIBUTE TO MISSOURI DEPUTY KEVIN M. MAYSE AND OTHER LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS KILLED IN 1995

Mr. ASHCROFT. Madam President, I rise today to honor the heroic service of our Nation's law enforcement officers, especially those who have paid the ultimate price in the line of duty. Facing increasingly organized and violent criminals, these brave men and women constitute the first line of defense against those who threaten society. We should be thankful that they do not shrink from this challenge. In the quest for law and order, 161 of our Nation's finest citizens made the supreme sacrifice in 1995, laying down their lives so that the rest of us may enjoy peace and prosperity. It is to honor their memory that today is proclaimed National Peace Officers Memorial Day.

I wish to honor in particular a brave, young Missourian. Cass County Deputy Sheriff Kevin M. Mayse died on June 13, 1995, from injuries sustained while preserving and enhancing the quality of life enjoyed by his fellow Missourians in Cass County. Deputy Mayse left behind a widow, Scottie Sue, and four children, including his youngest daughter whom he never had the joy to meet since she was born a month after Kevin's death.

As we honor those who have fallen while protecting others, we should also honor those such as Scottie Sue and her children who have paid a very high price for our protection as well. In his autobiography, Benjamin Franklin wrote: "The most acceptable service of God is doing good to man." The Bible says that there is no greater love than "when one lays down his life for his friends." I can think of no greater service to his fellow man than that given by Deputy Sheriff Mayse.

Three Missouri peace officers who died before 1995 have also been added to the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial. Officers George M. McCready of Richmond Heights, Max W. Smith of Moniteau County, and George Adams of St. Louis County also gave their lives in defense of their fellow citizens.

As we honor those lawmen slain in the line of duty, let us not forget those who carry on as guardians of our peace. We must protect them in turn by providing them with the tools and the laws necessary to wage the war against the ever-changing face of crime. Today, violent juvenile crime is growing at a phenomenal rate, yet our juvenile justice system is ill-prepared to cope with its dramatic rise or its brutality. Major reconstruction of the Federal and State juvenile justice systems is needed to ensure that violent and hardcore criminals, old and young, are identified, punished, and deterred. We also need to ensure that our fallen heroes, such as Deputy Sheriff Kevin Mayse, are not forgotten.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. PRESSLER:

S. 1758. A bill to amend the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, to improve the administration of the act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

THE PACKERS AND STOCKYARDS IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1996

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I am introducing legislation today that represents the first of several steps I am taking to get action on problems facing our domestic cattle industry. For the past year, I have been pressing the Clinton administration to address meatpacker concentration and utilize existing antitrust laws to make sure that cattle are sold in an open and competitive market. We have seen some action on the part of the administration to solve this problem. Frankly, its proposals offer nothing new. My bill is a necessary first step to pry open the market.

Another step in the process is to get the Senate more engaged on the issue. As part of that effort, the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry, and the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation will hold a series of hearings on this subject next month. Cattle producers are facing the worst economic times in recent memory. The President has the authority to order immediate Justice Department action. Antitrust laws should be enforced now.

I have been saying that for months, but my words have fallen on deaf ears. Only by taking action to enforce antitrust laws already on the books can we ensure the long-term economic viability of the U.S. cattle industry.

South Dakota ranchers know that any real solution to beef prices must include antitrust action. It took only a few days and a 14 percent increase in the price of gasoline for the President to ask the Justice Department to establish a five-person task force to investigate possible antitrust violations. The facts are these: first, cattle prices are at their lowest levels in years; second, only a handful of the top packers control nearly 85 percent the market; and third, retail prices do not reflect the dramatically reduced price paid for cattle. Something is not right.

The bill I am introducing accomplishes three things that South Dakota cattlemen have told me must be done. First, the bill would establish a livestock dealer trust. This would protect sellers from any losses when cattle are sold on commission to a dealer or market agency that goes bankrupt. This was part of the Senate-passed farm bill, but was not in the final version that was signed into law. Second, the bill would require the Packers and Stockyards Administration to include formula-priced cattle in the definition of captive supplies. During the Senate Commerce Committee hearing I held last year in Huron, SD, producers made it loud and clear that this needed to be done. Finally, the bill would require the Secretary of Agriculture to make timely reports on the numbers of livestock and livestock products that are exported and imported, and also require the reporting of prices paid for livestock.

The Senate needs to carefully review this bill and other issues confronting the U.S. cattle industry. Packer concentration, price manipulation, possible price fixing and captive supply all must be looked at and a definite course of action implemented. The introduction of this bill today is the first step in this process.

We need to keep in mind that old saying "if it ain't broke, don't fix it." Well the U.S. cattle industry is broke and it needs fixing, now. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

By Ms. MIKULSKI (for herself and Mr. SARBANES):

S. 1759. A bill to amend title 5, United States Code, to require that written notice be furnished by the Office of Personnel Management before making any substantial change in the health benefits program for Federal employees; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

THE FEDERAL HEALTH BENEFIT CHANGE
ACCOUNTABILITY ACT OF 1996

•Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I am introducing today, along with my colleague from Maryland, Senator SARBANES, the Federal Health Benefit Change Accountability Act. This bill is also being introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman BEN CARDIN. Our legislation will ensure that Congress has an opportunity to respond to any proposed reductions in retired Federal employee health benefits.

I want to save lives, save jobs, and save money. The 1996 prescription plan for Federal retirees that Blue Cross/Blue Shield negotiated with the Office of Personnel Management [OPM] is jeopardizing jobs, and in some cases may be jeopardizing lives. I want this policy changed for 1997, and I want to make sure that Congress is well informed of any future changes in health benefits.

Our bill will protect retired federal employees from the type of attacks on their earned health benefits that we are seeing with this plan. The bill would require a new reporting process at OPM. OPM would have to provide an annual report to Congress that would describe any significant changes in Federal retiree health benefits. The report would explain how proposed changes would affect retirees—both financially and in quality of care. The report would also explain what cost savings OPM expected to achieve. Congress would have time to react if there were concerns with the changes.

This legislation is necessary because of the terrible situation our Federal retirees find themselves in today with their Blue Cross/Blue Shield prescription benefits. Retirees in this prescription plan have a new 20-percent copayment at their neighborhood pharmacies. This is forcing retirees out of neighborhood pharmacy and away from the pharmacists they know and trust. They are forced to use mail order for most of their prescription needs, where there is no copayment, and where their care consists of an 800 number and a mail box.

I've been meeting with Federal retiree groups and with pharmacy groups, and what I'm hearing about this plan has disturbed me greatly.

I'm hearing about elderly retirees who are confused about how and when to use mail order.

I'm hearing about local pharmacies that are losing as much as 30 percent of their business and that are going to have to lay off employees. I'm hearing about jobs being lost because local pharmacies are being cut out of the business of providing care to Federal retirees.

I'm not antimail order, but I think it should be used under the right circumstances. A person can't wait for mail order when a weekend ear ache or a stomach virus strikes. A local pharmacist must be available right then. That is the safety net that allows mail order to work.

As my colleagues know, retirees have special health needs that are different from the majority of younger Federal employees. They frequently take more than one medication at a time, and they have complicated medical histories.

They also need the personal drug education and counseling that local pharmacy is able to provide. When they don't get this education and counseling, studies show they end up in the hospital because of noncompliance with their drug directions.

Community pharmacy is the last health care professional a retiree will see before taking that prescription. We need to think very seriously about what that means and what the consequences are to retirees. Unfortunately, OPM did not put enough thought into these consequences when the Blue Cross/Blue Shield plan was approved.

The very people who are unable to pay the 20-percent copayment because they are on fixed incomes and are forced to use mail order, are the people who are most likely to need the face to face counseling and drug education that they cannot get at mail order pharmacy.

That's why we need a drug benefit that achieves fiscal discipline but that allows retirees choice in their pharmacy care. Otherwise we end up treating prescriptions like a commodity. We end up managing the benefit instead of managing the patient.

Federal retirees have served us honorably and we must value them. We don't value them with words, we do it with actions. They earned and deserve retirement security and health security, and I want to see this government honor the promises that were made to them when they signed up for service.

The legislation we are introducing today will help ensure that the promise of quality health care is not bargained away by the Office of Personnel Management in the future.●

By Ms. SNOWE (for herself, Mr. DOLE, Mr. BRADLEY, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. SIMPSON, Mr. KERRY, and Mrs. FEINSTEIN):

S. 1760. A bill to amend part D of title IV of the Social Security Act to improve child support enforcement services, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

THE CHILD SUPPORT IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1996

•Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce the Child Support Improvement Act of 1996.

Fourteen months ago, Senator DOLE and I introduced our bill, the Child Support Responsibility Act of 1995, which later became an important piece of the welfare reform bill. Since that time, Congress has twice passed welfare reform, and twice it has been vetoed.

And now, we are in much the same place we were 14 months ago. While it is my sincerest hope that child support will pass as part of a comprehensive welfare reform bill this year, I believe that we must seize this opportunity to move forward on child support. Because this issue is too important to the future of American children to stand by and wait any longer.

For many of our Nation's children, the American dream is a rapidly fading mirage—one that they can see but are unable to firmly grasp. I'm talking specifically about the millions of children who suffer from the neglect of deadbeat parents—those parents who help bring a child into the world and then, for whatever reasons, renege on their responsibilities as a parent to care for them and give them the tools necessary to craft a better life than the one we enjoy today.

At a time when one in four children grow up in single-parent households, the crisis of unpaid child support remains a heavy burden. It is a burden that has not only taken an emotional toll on single parents and their children, but an economic toll as well. And it is sapping the financial resources of our State governments.

While many single parents have had some success in winning child support, only half of those who succeed actually receive what is owed. The other half receives partial payments or no payments at all. And an alarming 40 percent of single parents who seek child support do not succeed in winning any order at all. That means that, while the potential for child support collections is estimated to exceed $47 billion each year, only $15 billion or so is ever collected from noncustodial parents.

Worse yet, those single parents who have never been married have a difficult time receiving any child support payments at all. Data collected from the 1990 census indicates that of all mothers who have never been married, 75 percent did not have child support orders and more than 50 percent had household incomes below the poverty level.

These statistics translate into unprecedented burdens for single parents and their children, many of whom struggle to find good child care, quality medical care, warm clothes, or simply put food on the table.

In all fairness, Congress has tried to strengthen child support enforcement mechanisms prior to this term. In 1975, Congress did pass the Child Support Enforcement and Paternity Establishment Program as part of the Social Security Act, and then it enacted further improvements to this effort by way of the 1984 Child Support Enforcement Amendments and the Family Support Act of 1988.

Despite these actions, States have been hard pressed to keep pace with the virtual tidal wave of mothers seeking child support. States are faced with the daunting task of locating parents, establishing paternity, establishing child support orders, and collecting child support payments. Yet States have been hampered by a lack of leadership and technical support from the Federal Government.

As a former Member of the House of Representatives, I have a long history of working to change and improve Federal laws governing child support enforcement, and introduced my own legislation to help relieve single parents and their children of the institutional barriers to progress on this issue. As cochair of the Congressional Caucus for Women's Issues, we made child support enforcement one of our top legislative priorities in previous Congresses, where some 30 bills were introduced to address this problem. But I believe we have come to a point where everyone agrees that child support enforcement is one of the most important aspects of our campaign to revamp the welfare system of this country. It affects every State—children at every income level—and it affects both single mothers and single fathers. As a national problem, child support enforcement merits a national solution. And we must demonstrate our leadership by providing it.

That's why I have joined forces again with the distinguished majority leader, Senator DOLE, to introduce the Child Support Improvement Act of 1996. I should add, Mr. President, that this bill has true bipartisan support, and is intended to complement the efforts of my House colleagues, Congresswomen NANCY JOHNSON and BARBARA KENNELLY, who have introduced companion legislation in the House. Together, we have introduced the same child support provisions which received overwhelming support from both parties of Congress, as well as the administration, during welfare reform.

By passing this legislation, we will send a clear signal to deadbeat parents that their days of irresponsibility are over. We will also send clear signal to States that the Federal Government will provide them with the assistance they need to collect child support on behalf of millions of American families.

The bill contains commonsense reforms which achieve the following:

To strengthen efforts to locate parents, it expands the Federal parent locator system by creating Federal and State data banks of child support orders, and allowing State-to-State access of the network. It also creates Federal and State directories of new hires, to allow for basic information supplied by employers from W-4 forms to be compared against child support data.

To ensure that collected funds go to families as soon as possible, it establishes a centralized State collections and disbursements unit, and requires employers that garnish wages from employees to pay those withheld wages to the State within 5 days.

To increase paternity establishment, our approach simplifies paternity procedures, facilitates voluntary acknowledgement, and encourages outreach.

To ensure that child support orders are fair and equitable to children, it provides for a simplified process for review and adjustment of child support orders, and requires provisions for health care coverage to be required in child support orders. And to facilitate child support enforcement and collection, it requires States to adopt the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act, to encourage the seamless enforcement of child support orders across State lines.

Finally, this bill expands the penalties for child support delinquency to include the denial of professional, recreational and driver's license to deadbeat parents, and permits the denial of a passport for individuals who are more than $5,000 in arrears. My husband, former Gov. Jock McKernan, pioneered a similar program in Maine in 1993. This program has been an amazing success in my home State. Between August 1993 and April 1996, $44 million was collected in outstanding child support payments from 15,000 individuals. In fact, in one case, a long-haul trucker who owed the State $19,000 drove to the State capitol and paid the amount in one lump sum. In another case, a real estate agent who owed more than $11,000 in child support money contacted the State and agreed to sell off some land to pay off his debt. Clearly, it's worth taking these steps. But we can do—and should do—much more.

Mr. President, perhaps if we can replicate the successes of States like Maine on a national level, we can begin to ease and eventually lift the economic and emotional burdens caused by delinquent child support payments, and at last bring the justice, security, and equity to millions of single parents and their children.

I look forward to working with my colleagues to ensure that noncustodial parents begin to accept and bear responsibility for their children, who will reap the financial support they so justly deserve and desperately need.●

S. 1761. A bill to eliminate taxpayer subsidies for recreational shooting transfer of federally owned weapons, ammunition, funds, and other property to the private Corporation for the Promotion of Rifle Practice and Firearms Safety; to the Committee on Armed Services.

THE SELF-FINANCING CIVILIAN MARKSMANSHIP PROGRAM ACT OF 1996

● Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I introduce the Self Financing Civilian Marksmanship Program Act of 1996. I'm pleased that Senator BUMPERS is joining me in introducing this legislation.

The goal of this legislation is simple: to block the transfer of a $76 million Federal endowment to American gun clubs.

The Defense Department concluded long ago that the Army-run Civilian Marksmanship Program does not serve any military purpose. Even so, until recently the program was sustained by an annual $2.5 million Federal subsidy.

To extricate the Army from this program, while ensuring a steady stream of firearms to gun enthusiasts, pro-gun Members of Congress established a so-called private nonprofit version of the program in the fiscal year 1996 Department of Defense authorization bill.

In reality, the new corporation is private in name only. In fact, Congress blessed it with a multimillion-dollar endowment.

When the corporation becomes fully operational in October 1996, it will take control of 176,218 rifles worth more than $53 million. It will receive $4.4 million in cash and be given property valued at $8.8 million. Even more remarkable, the corporation will be given control of 146 million rounds of ammunition worth $9.7 million.

The old program was a flagrant example of government waste. The new version makes even less sense, since it relinquishes government control over the program.

In 1993, the General Services Administration reconfirmed a long-standing government policy. Under that policy, the Federal Government does not sell federally owned weapons to the public.

The Congress should not make an exception for the private, nonprofit Corporation for the Promotion of Rifle Practice and Firearms Safety. The U.S. Government shouldn't be an arms merchant.

Given the plethora of weapons readily available through the private sector, guns for which the federal government no longer has a use should be destroyed, and the corporation should be abolished.

Our bill would do just that. It would abolish the so-called private corporation, block the transfer of this $76 million endowment, and end the federally run Civilian Marksmanship Program once and for all. It would not prohibit gun clubs from operation, but it would not subsidize them with federally owned weapons, ammunition, property, and cash.

This gift of millions of dollars' worth of weapons and ammunition is terrible public policy. In fact, it's outrageous. The Government must work, to stem the rising tide of gun violence in this country, not aid and abet it.

I hope the Congress will approve this legislation. I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the Washington Post article on this program and a copy of the legislation be inserted in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UP IN ARMS OVER RIFLE GIVEAWAY—GUN-CONTROL ADVOCATES CALL ARMY WEAPONS A SUBSIDY FOR NRA

A provision of the defense budget that went into effect earlier this year requires the Pentagon to give away 873,000 old rifles from World War II and the Korean War, spurring protests from gun-control advocates who believe the government shouldn't add to gun commerce.

The little-noticed measure was promoted by the National Rifle Association and the congressional delegation in Ohio, home to an annual marksmanship competition that will be financed by the sale of the venerable M-1 rifles and other aged guns with a resale value of about $100 million.

The heavy, nine-pound M-1s are unlikely to be used in street crimes such as drug killings, the program's advocates say, because the main buyers have been and likely will continue to be gun collectors who must be trained in shooting rifles and pass a stringent background investigation.

But critics say the recent congressional action is in effect a subsidy to the NRA. It requires the Army to transfer control over the rifles for free to a new nonprofit corporation. The corporation will sell them to benefit marksmanship programs and the yearly target tournament in Camp Perry, Ohio, which is managed by the NRA.

The old Army-administered program also co-sponsored the annual Ohio tournament with the NRA, and over the years the NRA used its close relationship with the project to market itself, critics of the group said.

Congress's action marked the death of the Army-administered program, called the Civilian Marksmanship Program, which critics called one of the U.S. government's oddest pork-barrel projects. The Pentagon ran it for decades but has sought to disentangle itself in recent years.

The program harkens to 1903, just after the Spanish-American War. U.S. military officials were upset to learn farm boys conscripted for that conflict were not the rustics of romantic American novels who could nail a jack rabbit from 200 yards—in fact, they couldn't hit a barn. Congress established the project, supported by U.S. military guns and money, to promote sharpshooting in future wars.

"The gift of millions of dollars worth of weapons and ammunition is terrible public policy," said Sen. Frank R. Lautenberg (D-N.J.) in a column in USA Today. "In fact, it's outrageous. The government must work to stem the rising tide of gun violence in this country, not aid and abet it."

"This program historically has been a federal subsidy to the NRA's marketing," said Josh Sugarmann, a gun-control activist and author of a 1992 book critical of the NRA. Congress's latest action, he added, is "a new funding mechanism" that also helps the NRA.

The great majority of the gun clubs that take part in the marksmanship program are affiliated with the NRA, he said. For decades, in fact, the guns' buyers had to prove to the Army they were NRA members—until a federal judge stopped the requirement in 1979.

Promoters of the 93-year-old program say it's no more sinister than the Boy Scouts, the Future Farmers of America and other youth groups that have taken part in its marksmanship training. The M-1s that are sold are not used in crimes, they said, because the strict background probes of the guns' potential buyers cull out criminals. They also point out that nine of the 10 members of America's 1992 Olympic shooting team learned marksmanship in the program.

"Any link opponents try to draw between this program and urban violence is comparable to linking Olympic boxing competition with hoodlum street fighting," said Rep. Paul E. Gillmor (R-Ohio), who sponsored the new measure and whose district draws 7,000 visitors and $10 million in revenue during the summertime rifle competition.

Gillmor added that it would cost the military $500,000 to destroy the guns, while the cost is nothing if it gives them away.

Chip Walker, a National Rifle Association spokesman, said Lautenberg and other critics of the program "don't want to promote firearms safety and responsibility." He added that it's "ironic" that gun-control advocates for years have criticized the NRA for its harsh rhetoric, urging it to stick to its traditional mission of teaching firearms safety—and now raise questions about its efforts to pursue even that goal.

Almost all the guns the Army is to give away are M-1s, the bolt-action rifle lugged by GIs onto the beaches at D-Day and Guadalcanal. Replaced in 1958 by the M-14 as standard infantry issue, and later by today's M-16, the M-1 is prized by collectors and war buffs—especially the pristine guns sold in their original boxes by the Army.

Last year the Army charged $310 each for the M-1s stored at its Anniston Army Depot in Alabama—an increase from its recent price of $250. In any case, those are discounts, because M-1s usually sell for $400 to $500. In recent years the program sold a maximum of 6,000 guns a year.

The measure recently signed into law by President Clinton in essence privatizes the program and transfers ownership of the 373,000 rifles to the new Corporation for the Promotion of Rifle Practice and Firearms Safety, whose board is to be named by the Army. It will then sell the weapons for whatever price the market will bear, and at whatever rate it chooses. (The guns will remain at the Anniston facility until they are sold.)

The law requires the Army to transfer to the new corporation $5 million in cash the Army program has on hand, $8 million in computers and other equipment, about 120 million rounds of ammunition and the 373,000 guns. It's estimated that only about 60 percent of the guns—about 224,000—are usable, and they could fetch about $100 million.

The Pentagon has sought to remove itself as administrator of the program, under which it sold 6,000 guns a year and donated $2.5 million annually to the Ohio competition, military officials said. The main reason, they said, is that they concluded that the program years ago stopped contributing to "military readiness." Moreover, Pentagon officials were uncomfortable being involved in an issue as controversial as firearms.

Finally, last year, military officials were upset by the taint the program suffered when it was learned that members of a Michigan militia had formed a gun club that became officially affiliated with the Army program. Using that affiliation, the militia members had taken target practice at a Michigan military base until they were stopped.●

By Mr. PELL:

S.J. Res. 55. A joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to the commencement of the terms of office of the President, Vice President, and Members of Congress; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PRESIDENTIAL AND CONGRESSIONAL TERMS INAUGURATION DATE ADVANCE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT

Mr. PELL. Mr. President. I offer a joint resolution to amend the Constitution to advance the Inauguration dates for the President and Members of Congress from January 20th and 3rd to December 10th and 1st respectively. In offering this resolution here in the 104th Congress, I note for my colleagues that this is an effort I first began in 1981 and with each succeeding set of national elections, I believe that the rationale and wisdom for changing these dates becomes more compelling.

The current date for the Inauguration of the President was set by the 20th amendment to the Constitution in 1933. Prior to that, the Inauguration date had not changed since being fixed by an act of the Continental Congress in 1788 commencing the proceeding of the Government of the United States under the newly ratified Constitution. Under that act, March 4th was chosen simply because it happened to be the first Wednesday in March of 1789 and it was thought at the time that that amount of time was needed for each State to appoint Presidential electors to the Electoral College and for them to meet and cast their ballots. Additionally, there were practical and controlling considerations over the difficulty and length of time it took to travel to and from the Capital City, the necessity for time to allow newly elected officials to tend to the long-term organization of their private affairs prior to their extended departure from home for Washington, and the lack of sophisticated means for the verification of polling results and for communication of news. Thus, in the founding days of our country, March 4th was seen as the earliest possible date by which the Government could, in an orderly and practical manner, bring about the will of the electors as expressed in congressional and Presidential balloting from the previous November.

By 1933, however, it had become clear that it was no longer necessary to postpone the Inauguration of the President and Members of Congress until March 4th. Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, the Champion of the 20th amendment to the Constitution which advanced the Presidential and congressional Inauguration dates to their current status, said on the Senate floor in 1932:

When our Constitution was adopted, there was some reason for such a long intervention of time between the election and actual commencement of work by the new Congress. We had neither railroads nor telegraphic communication connecting the various States and communities of the country. Under present conditions, however, the result of elections is known all over the country within a few hours after the polls close, and the Capital City is within a few days' travel of the remotest portions of the country.

... The only direct opportunity that the citizens of the country have to express their ideas and their wishes in regard to national legislation is the expression of their will through the election of their representatives at the general election in November. ... In a government "by the people" the wishes of a majority should be crystallized into legislation as soon as possible after these wishes have been made known. These mandates should be obeyed within a reasonable time.

Those words ring true today. With the further advancement in travel, communications, polling, and the ascertainment of election results since 1933, there remains no justification for the present lengthy hiatus between Election Day and Inauguration Day. We now know election results within minutes of the last closing of the polls, indeed, usually before they close through news projections, and travel to Washington is an affair that can be accomplished in a day. The Electoral College could easily complete its duties within a few days time and there is no impediment to the commencement of the terms of the Members of Congress by December 1st. necessary because of the role of the House of Representatives in the ratification of the results of the Electoral College. It is clear then that no structural or logistical justification exists for delaying the implementation of the decision of the voters made at the polls in early November.

With no physical barriers to a more rapid installation of the President and Members of Congress, are there policy reasons for waiting 2 months and more before swearing them into office? In my opinion, the typical arguments of preservation of tradition and the need for time for transition organization are less than compelling. Indeed, I believe that these justifications pale in comparison to the drawbacks of the current state of affairs.

First and foremost, currently when a new President is elected, during the protracted transition period to a new administration that follows, it is unclear for almost 3 months who speaks for the United States on matters of national importance or crisis. As the undisputed leader in world affairs, and in a world ever more closely intertwined and influenced by daily events occurring throughout the international community, this is a needless peril into which we place ourselves. It is never wise not desirable for any country, particularly one with extensive power and influence such as ours, to tolerate any confusion or question about who runs and speaks for the affairs of State. Yet, whenever we elect a new President, we needlessly allow just such a situation to occur. We would substantially reduce the potential hazards of the current lengthy delay in the transition of our Government were this proposal adopted.

Another pitfall of the current lengthy interregnum is that under the present system, the next fiscal year's proposed budget is submitted by the outgoing administration only to be subject to amendment and revision once the new administration takes office. This is a needless duplication of effort and inevitably results in an unnecessary delay of the budget process. Indeed, given the record of the current Congress with regard to the Federal budget, it is clear that any additional time or lack of either redundant or pointless effort would be welcome. If the new Congress were to be sworn in on December 1 and the President on December 10, the new administration would start with a clean slate with regard to the budget and the process would be off to a much smoother and more sensible start.

Another clear benefit of an advance in the dates of inauguration for the President and Members of Congress would be that with the recently completed campaign season more fresh in the memories of the new administration and Congress, the opportunity would be greater to take quicker action on the proposals which collectively brought them to office. The populace, having listened to an extensive campaign and spoken their minds through the ballot box, deserve to have the views they supported formulated into legislation and acted upon in a reasonable and timely fashion. Waiting for 3 months to even begin the process seems to me to be simply too long.

Other reasons for advancing the Inauguration of the President and Congress, while slightly more speculative, seem likely. For example, with the advance, the President would prudently be inclined to have a good idea of who he or she would choose for key positions in the Cabinet prior to the election. Indeed, the composition of the Cabinet could well become part of the pre-election debate, something which I feel would be healthy given the enormous influence Cabinet members have over the day-to-day functions of the executive branch.

Another potential benefit would be that given the much shorter period between Election Day and the commencement of the terms of the new Congress, the incentive or need to hold so-called lameduck sessions of Congress would be greatly reduced. This would produce the desirable result of discouraging the opportunity for Members who had lost at the polls to still meet, vote, and decide upon matters on behalf of the constituents who just turned them out. Again, in a democracy, it is the will of the people that should be afforded the greatest chance of being heard and reducing the likelihood of a lame-duck session of Congress would forward that goal.

For all of these reasons, I again propose the constitutional amendment. For those unfamiliar with my earlier efforts to advance the Inauguration dates, a couple of points. First, there is nothing magical about the dates of December 10th for the President and December 1st for Members of Congress. Indeed, when I first pursued this effort, I proposed earlier dates ranging from early to mid-November. However, at a hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee in 1984, there was a general feeling that perhaps that left too little time after the election for an orderly transition. Likewise, there was resistance to interference with the Thanksgiving holiday so early December presents itself as the earliest reasonable and desirable timeframe for setting these Inauguration dates. Incidentally, for those who wish to cling to tradition, establishing a swearing-in date of December 1st for Congress would be somewhat of a return to previous practice. The Constitution originally established the meeting day for Congress on the first Monday of December and this was the practice until the 20th amendment changed it in 1933. Thus, it was not until 1934 that Congress began its sessions in early January. Under my proposal, Congress would resume the commencement of its sessions in early December.

Thus, I offer my joint resolution to advance the Presidential and congressional Inauguration dates. This proposal is good government, it makes common sense, and is both feasible and practical. Furthermore, I believe that failing to change the dates needlessly risks confusion over who speaks for the national government, facilitates undesirable legislative scenarios such as the convening of lame-duck sessions of Congress, and unnecessarily delays the chance for those chosen by the electorate to take their rightful offices and act upon the issues of the day. I urge my colleagues to take the time to carefully consider this proposal and that they join me in this effort to make these straightforward and eminently reasonable changes in our governmental process.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at this point a brief history of the 20th amendment as prepared for the Judiciary Committee in 1985 be included in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION: A BRIEF
LEGISLATIVE HISTORY
AMENDMENT XX
Text of amendment

"SECTION 1. The terms of the President and Vice President shall end at noon on the 20th day of January, and the terms of Senators and Representatives at noon on the 3d day of January, of the years in which such terms would have ended if this article had not been ratified; and the terms of their successors shall then begin.

"SEC. 2. The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall begin at noon on the 3d day of January, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

"SEC. 3. If, at the time fixed for the beginning of the term of the President, the President elect shall have died, the Vice President elect shall become President. If a President shall not have been chosen before the time fixed for the beginning of his term, or if the President elect shall have failed to qualify, then the Vice President elect shall act as President until a President shall have qualified; and the Congress may by law provide for the case wherein neither a President elect nor a Vice President elect shall qualify, declaring who shall then act as President, or the manner in which one who is to act shall be selected, and such person shall act accordingly until a President or Vice President shall have qualified.

"SEC. 4. The Congress may by law provide for the case of the death of any of the persons from whom the House of Representatives may choose a President whenever the right of choice shall have devolved upon them, and for the case of the death of any of the persons from whom the Senate may choose a Vice President whenever the right of choice shall have devolved upon them.

"SEC. 5. Sections 1 and 2 shall take effect on the 15th day of October following the ratification of this article.

"SEC. 6. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States within seven years from the date of its submission."

Background

In accordance with the constitutional provisions written by the Founding Fathers in 1787, the newly established U.S. Government was to become effective when nine States ratified the Constitution.<sup>1</sup> After the ratification process was completed in June of 1788, the existing Congress designated March 4, 1789 as the official date when the Federal Government, as outlined in the Constitution, would begin operation. This date represented an estimate of the time needed to appoint presidential electors in each State and allow them to cast their ballots for President. In addition, the States needed time to select both Representatives and Senators to serve in the U.S. Congress. As mandated by the Constitution, the President was to serve for 4 years, Senators for 6, and Representatives for 2. All legislative and executive offices, then and in the future, would commence on March 4 and end in subsequent odd-numbered years on the same date.

The problem inherent in this system was that the Constitution, under Article I, Section 4, Clause 2, stipulated:

"The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such a meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by Law appoint a different day."

This meant that, although Congressmen were elected to office in November of even-numbered years, they were not entitled to take office until after the terms of their predecessors expired the following March. Moreover, the new Congressmen would not assemble until the following December. This left a thirteen month lapse from the time of election until the new Congress first convened. In the meantime, defeated or retiring Congressmen would meet in their regular session in December of the election year and continue to hold office until their term expired on March 4 of the next year. This short session of Congress, from December to March, was nicknamed the "lame-duck" session, deriving its title from the stock exchange term meaning "one who was unable to meet his obligations."<sup>2</sup>

The "lame-duck" session of Congress was controversial for a number of reasons. For instance, if the election of the President were thrown into the House of Representatives, the election would be decided not by recently elected Congressmen, but by the "lame-duck" session. In addition, should a session of Congress require more time to conduct its business, the session could not be extended, since the terms of many legislators expired on March 4. The pending business would either have to be postponed until the following December, or a special session of the new Congress would have to be called. Consequently, the "lame-duck" session provided parliamentary advantages for the majority party in Congress. This is why constitutional amendments to eliminate the "lame-duck" session continually faced opposition in Congress.

Objections to the "lame-duck" session were heard long before proposals leading to the Twentieth Amendment were introduced. On the opening day of Congress' first "lame-duck" session in March of 1795, Aaron Burr laid before the Senate a motion introducing a constitutional amendment extending the terms of Congressmen until the first day of June.<sup>3</sup> Again in 1840, Millard Fillmore introduced an amendment that called for the elimination of the "lame-duck" session. Fillmore's resolution provided for the terms of Congressmen to begin on the first day of December, rather than fourth day of March.<sup>4</sup> Several other amendments to the Constitution, which would have altered the terms of office and dates of congressional sessions, were introduced during the last quarter of the nineteenth century. Each of them was defeated.<sup>5</sup>

In 1923, the first of several resolutions introduced by Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska to eliminate the "lame-duck" session was reported by the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.<sup>6</sup> The measure, S.J. Res. 253, easily passed the Senate on February 13, 63 to 6, 27 not voting.<sup>7</sup> However, as would be the case with several of Norris' resolutions, the House of Representatives defeated the proposal by delaying further action until Congress adjourned in March. The same thing happened in 1924 with S.J. Res. 22 (68th Cong.), and again in 1926 with S.J. Res. 9 (69th Cong.). In 1928, S.J. Res. 47 (70th Cong.) finally made it to a vote in the House, where it gained a majority but failed to receive the necessary two-thirds vote, 209 to 157, 66 not voting and 2 answering "present."<sup>8</sup>

On June 8, 1929, another Norris amendment proposal, S.J. Res. 3 (71st Cong.), passed in the Senate and was sent to the House. Once in the House, the Resolution lay on the Speaker's table until April 17, 1930, when it was finally referred to a House committee. In the meantime, a similar House Resolution, H.J. Res. 292 (71st Cong.), was introduced. This proposal, as amended by Speaker of the House Nicholas Longworth of Ohio, would have required the second session of Congress, which convened in January, to adjourn by May 4 of even-numbered years.<sup>9</sup> H.J. Res. 292 passed easily in the House, 290 to 93, 47 not voting and 1 answering "present."<sup>10</sup> In conference, representatives from the House and the Senate failed to agree on a compromise measure. As a result, hopes for an amendment to the Constitution once again expired with the adjournment of the 71st Congress.<sup>11</sup>

Legislative history

The elections of 1930 resulted in a Democratic landslide in the House. Unlike Longworth, the new Speaker, John N. Garner of Texas, came out in active support of an amendment to remedy the "lame-duck" problem. On January 6, 1932, the sixth Norris Amendment, S.J. Res. 14 (72nd Cong.), was reported in the Senate by the Committee on the Judiciary. During floor consideration in the Senate on January 6, one amendment to limit the second session of Congress was rejected before the Resolution passed, 63 to 7, 25 not voting.<sup>12</sup>

Footnotes at end of article.

In the House, the Committee on Election of the President, Vice President, and Representatives in Congress reported S.J. Res. 14 with an amendment in the nature of a substitute measure.<sup>13</sup> Among numerous suggested alterations, the substitute proposed ending presidential terms on January 24 and congressional terms on January 4, providing for succession in the event of the death or lack of qualification of the President-elect or Vice President-elect, making provision in case of the death of candidates from which Congress might have to choose a President or Vice President, and setting an effective date for the first two sections of the amendment.

The House began consideration of S.J. Res. 14 under an open rule on February 12, 1932.<sup>14</sup> On February 13, numerous amendments to the committee substitute were offered, all of which were either rejected or withdrawn. The two amendments withdrawn by their sponsors would have required ratification of the amendment within 7 years of its submission to the States and provided that Congress could, by concurrent resolution, set an assembly date other than January 4.<sup>15</sup> The rejected amendments called for ratification of the Twentieth Amendment by State conventions, extension of Representatives' terms to 4 years, and limitation of the second session of Congress.

After the House debate concluded, the Election Committee's substitute was approved and recommitted to the committee, with instructions to report it back with a new section establishing a mandatory 7-year ratification period.<sup>16</sup> Once the Resolution was amended accordingly and again reported by the Committee on Election, it passed the House 204 to 134, 43 not voting.<sup>17</sup> Minor differences between the House and Senate versions were quickly resolved in conference.<sup>18</sup>

Ratification history

The Twentieth Amendment was sent to the States for ratification in March of 1932; and within 1 year, all 48 States had ratified. The Twentieth Amendment appears officially as 47 Stat. 2569.

The Congress finds that—

(1) under existing law, the Federal Communications Commission is the administrator, not the owner, of telephone numbers, and has no authority to auction, or impose user fees for, any number within the North American Numbering Plan, nor does any other Federal agency;

(2) auctions of toll-free numbers will increase consumer fraud and confusion by allowing competitors to profit from the established reputation associated with existing toll-free numbers;

(3) there are a total of 21 countries in the North American Numbering Plan, including the United States of America, Canada, and most Caribbean countries, and decisions affecting universally available toll-free numbers should not be made without a consensus among the participating nations;

(4) the value of a toll-free telephone number is derived solely from the efforts of the holder to create value in it; and

(5) the right of first refusal for companies with toll-free numbers that have become a unique brand identity will ensure that customers reach their intended service provider.

SEC. 3. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.

It is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) the Federal Communications Commission lacks legal authority to conduct auctions or other revenue raising activities in connection with the allocation of any number within the North American Numbering Plan.

(2) if the Congress is to authorize such activities, procedures will be required—

(A) to protect any value attaching to new toll-free numbers by reason of a private business investment in the advertisement or public awareness of the corresponding 800 number, by granting a right of first refusal or other protection to the subscriber to that corresponding 800 number;

(B) to prevent unjust enrichment and inefficient use of toll-free numbers by measures designed to prevent speculation, hoarding, and other "gaming" of the allocation system; and

(C) to protect consumers from fraud and confusion by preventing the misrepresentation of established toll-free numbers; and

(3) the Federal Communications Commission should submit to the Congress a plan for the allocation of toll-free 888 numbers that contains procedures described in paragraph (2), together with its recommendations for legislative authorization of such allocation.

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED

THE CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

GRASSLEY (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 3963

Mr. GRASSLEY (for himself, Mr. EXON, Mr. KOHL, Mr. KERRY, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. BUMPERS, Mr. SIMON, and Mr. DORGAN) proposed an amendment to the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 57) setting forth the congressional budget for the United States Government for fiscal years 1997, 1998, 1999, 2000, 2001, and 2002; as follows:

On page 4, line 8, decrease the amount by $8,300,000,000.

On page 4, line 17, decrease the amount by $2,300,000,000.

On page 8, line 3, decrease the amount by $8,300,000,000.

On page 8, line 4, decrease the amount by $2,300,000,000.

On page 52, line 11, decrease the amount by $8,300,000,000.

On page 52, line 12, decrease the amount by $2,300,000,000.

On page 59, at the end of line 2, insert "This section shall not apply to defense discretionary budget authority and budget outlays caps for fiscal year 1997."

KYL AMENDMENT NO. 3964

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. KYL submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 57) supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. . SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING A SUPERMAJORITY REQUIREMENT FOR RAISING TAXES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate finds that—

(1) the Nation's current tax system is indefensible, being overly complex, burdensome, and severely limiting to economic opportunity for all Americans;

(2) fundamental tax reform should be undertaken as soon as practicable to produce a tax system that is fairer, flatter, and simpler; that promotes, rather than punishes, job creation; that eliminates unnecessary paperwork burdens on America's businesses; that recognizes the fact that families are performing the most important work of our society; that provides incentives for Americans who save for the future in order to build a better life for themselves and their families; that allows Americans, especially the middle class, to keep more of what they earn, but that raises enough money to fund a leaner, more efficient Federal Government; and that allows Americans to compute their taxes easily; and

(3) the stability and longevity of any new tax system designed to achieve these goals should be guaranteed with a supermajority vote requirement so that Congress cannot easily raise tax rates, impose new taxes, or otherwise increase the amount of a taxpayer's income that is subject to tax.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that this concurrent resolution on the budget assumes fundamental tax reform should be accompanied by a proposal to amend the Constitution of the United States to require a supermajority vote in each House of Congress to approve tax increases.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

LET'S WORK TOGETHER TO PASS WELFARE REFORM

• Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, President Clinton recently issued an executive order restricting welfare benefits to teenage parents. I commend the President for taking this action to change welfare as we know it. His work demonstrates his strong commitment to welfare reform. We in Congress should build on his action by quickly passing a tough bipartisan welfare reform plan.

There is no doubt about the dramatic increase in births to unmarried teens. It is clear that we must take aggressive and immediate action to address this serious problem.

The Clinton administration would change welfare policy to keep teen parents in school, require teen parents to sign personal responsibility contracts and require minor mothers to live at home. While this executive order is not the comprehensive overhaul of the welfare system that I feel is needed, it addresses a critical concern—the increase of births to unmarried teenagers. It is a good place to start.

Just last month, the Iowa welfare reform waiver was modified to institute similar changes. In the future, minor parents in Iowa will be required to stay in school and earn a high school diploma or GED and to live with their parents or another responsible adult. These changes will help build a welfare system that requires responsibility, strengthens families, and promotes independence by making families self-sufficient.

Without at least a high school education, welfare parents are unable to get decent jobs that will make the family self-sufficient. Therefore, too many young families are consigned to years of welfare dependency because the parents do not possess the basic skills necessary to get and keep a job. By requiring minor parents to stay in school to earn a diploma or GED, we begin to break this devastating cycle of dependency.

Further, too many minor parents go out and establish separate households when a child is born. Unfortunately many of these young parents are still children themselves and do not possess the skills to properly raise their children. By requiring these minors to remain with their own parents or live with another responsible adult, the young family will be in a more secure environment which will produce a stable family rather than a welfare dependent family for years to come.

Since January 1994, all Iowa welfare recipients, not just teen parents, have been required to sign family investment agreements which outline the steps the family will take to move off of welfare and a date at which time welfare benefits would end. The Clinton personal responsibility contract requirement is modeled on the family investment agreement which is working very well in Iowa.

Mr. President, as I have discussed many times before, Iowa instituted a statewide reform of the welfare system in October 1993. Since then, more families are working and earning income, the number of families on welfare has been declining and the amount of money spent on cash grant is down. In short, welfare reform is working in Iowa. In 1993 and 1995, Senator BOND and I introduced a common sense bipartisan reform plan based on the good work being done in Iowa and in Missouri on reforming welfare.

Mr. President, in February, the National Governors Association announced a bipartisan agreement on welfare reform. At that time, I viewed the proposal as the vehicle to jumpstart the congressional debate on welfare reform and restore bipartisanship to the process. This does not seem to be happening and I am very frustrated by that reality.

There is no doubt that the current welfare system is badly broken and in desperate need of repair. Further, there is no question that there is strong, bipartisan support in the U.S. Senate for welfare reform legislation. I still hold out hope that we can and will enact bipartisan welfare reform legislation during the remaining days of the 104th Congress.

The current dependency inducing welfare system must be replaced with one that promotes independence and self-sufficiency. One that sends the clear message to families on welfare that if you can work, you must work. One that requires every family to take responsibility, from day one on welfare, to begin the journey off of welfare and into self-sufficient employment.

There is overwhelming support in the Senate for this kind of commonsense welfare reform. This support was demonstrated last fall when 87 Senators voted for a bipartisan bill to reform welfare.

Mr. President, the American people desperately want us to address the major problems facing our country and stop the political game playing.

We should take the Senate passed plan backup, amend it to adhere to some of the key recommendations of the National Governors Association such as increased funding for child care, and pass it. We clearly have an overwhelming bipartisan majority to do that. That's the clearest way to get comprehensive welfare reform signed into law this year.

Leaders in the House of Representatives have spoken in favor of taking up the Senate bill. The President has said he could support the Senate bill and has said good things about the NGA plan. So it is very clear that there is a path available to us to enact welfare reform. We should take it, and quickly.

Mr. President, I am very concerned, however, that some seem to want to take a different course—one that is clearly destined to result in more gridlock, political fingerpointing and no welfare reform. The budget resolution passed out of the Budget Committee ties welfare reform to a poison pill—elimination of guarantees for elderly people in nursing homes to continued coverage of their care through Medicaid. By block granting and severely cutting Medicaid, health care for pregnant women and children would also be placed on the chopping block. And the President has rightly said that this is wrong and would force him to veto a bill that contained it.

In an effort to clear the path for enactment of welfare reform, I will be offering an amendment to the budget resolution that would take out the poison pill. My amendment will require consideration of welfare reform separate from ending guaranteed coverage for health care to millions of elderly and other Americans. This is the only hope for welfare reform this year. So I hope that all of my colleagues who share my support for comprehensive welfare reform will join me in support of this amendment.

I look forward to working with all of my colleagues on this and other important issues during the remainder of this session and ask that a summary of the executive order be printed in the RECORD.

The summary follows:

EXECUTIVE ACTION ON WELFARE REFORM

Today, President Clinton announced four measures to make responsibility the law of the land, by ensuring that teen mothers on welfare stay in school and live at home. These four executive actions include requiring all States to submit plans for requiring teen mothers to stay in school and prepare for employment; cutting through redtape to allow States to pay cash bonuses to teen mothers who finish high school; requiring all States to have teen mothers who have dropped out of school return to school and sign personal responsibility plans; and challenging all States to require minor mothers to live with a responsible adult. With these actions, we're focusing on one of the key components of welfare reform: parental responsibility. And we're putting young mothers on the right path, toward employment and self-sufficiency.

REQUIRING TEEN MOTHERS TO STAY IN SCHOOL

Currently, 26 States require teen parents to stay in school to receive assistance, 23 under waivers approved by the Clinton administration. Ohio, for example, has a model program called LEAP: Learning, Earning, and Parenting. LEAP reduces checks of teen mothers when they don't go to school, and pays them a bonus when they do. Other States are trying similar approaches with our support. For example, Delaware reduces benefits for truancy, and pays teen mothers a $50 bonus when they graduate from high school. Colorado pays bonuses when teen mothers graduate from high school or receive a GED.

These States are putting teen mothers on the right path, toward employment and self-sufficiency—and all 50 States around the country should follow their lead. That's why the President is directing all States to submit plans to require school attendance among teens who receive welfare. And to be sure they do, the Department of Health and Human Services will do annual surveys of their success.

ALLOWING STATES TO REWARD TEEN MOTHERS WHO COMPLETE HIGH SCHOOL

Today, President Clinton is also cutting through redtape to allow States to reward teen mothers who stay in school and complete high school, in addition to sanctioning those who don't. States would be able to give teen mothers cash bonuses for strong school attendance, graduating from high school, or GED receipt—without requesting a waiver.

REQUIRING TEEN MOTHERS TO SIGN PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY PLANS

Today, the Clinton administration is requiring all 50 States to ensure that teen mothers on welfare who have dropped out of school both return to school and sign personal responsibility plans. These actions will help teen mothers plan for their futures and turn their lives around.

REQUIRING MINOR MOTHERS TO LIVE AT HOME

Under current law, States have the option to require minor mothers to live at home—but only 21 States have such requirements, 11 initiated under waivers granted by the Clinton administration and 10 adopted under the State option. Today, the Clinton administration is challenging all 50 States to put minor mothers on the right track by requiring them to live at home or with a responsible adult in order to receive assistance.

ENDING WELFARE AS WE KNOW IT

The President's goals for welfare reform are clear: requiring work, promoting responsibility, and protecting children. With this new initiative, President Clinton underscores his commitment to helping welfare recipients become—and stay—self-sufficient. President Clinton continues to call for a national welfare reform bill that gets these priorities right. Under welfare reform waivers, we've already freed 37 States from redtape to pursue innovative welfare reforms—more than under any previous administration. State welfare demonstrations approved by the Clinton administration now cover 75 percent of all welfare recipients nationwide.●

HONORING MARY WHITE

● Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to a very worthy constituent, Mrs. Mary White. Mrs. White is retiring this month after years of service to both her State and her country, by working for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Mrs. White spent 21 years in public service. Her work for INS over the past 6 years has been exemplary, and has set a very high standard for her peers. My office, as well as many others, has enjoyed an excellent working relationship with the Immigration and Naturalization Service over the years, due in large part to the cooperation we received from Mrs. White. On numerous occasions she has performed flawlessly, always keeping an attitude that focused on helping others.

My best wishes go out to Mrs. White and her family. May she enjoy this new stage in her life, and be ever mindful of the respect and esteem we hold her in.

RECOGNIZING THE ODELSON FAMILY

● Mr. SIMON. The late Sam and Rose Odelson of Chicago had 13 children, 8 of whom served in the U.S. Armed Forces during World War II.

Four served in Europe, three in the Pacific, and one in the States. Two were injured in combat, and altogether, they earned 20 battle stars. Oscar served in the U.S. Army in Italy. Sidney, an Army veteran who landed at Omaha Beach served in France and Germany. Joe was also in the Army, serving near the tail end of the war in southern France. Irving was one of the first sent overseas, serving in the South Pacific. Julius was 89th Airborne, Roy was in the Army Air Corps, Ben served with the 13th Air Force in the South Pacific for over 2 years, and Mike was an MP in the Philippines.

All the eight Odelson boys returned home after the war. A few stayed in Chicago, the others moved out to sunny California to work in the insurance, furniture, or restaurant business.

With the recent commemoration of the 50th anniversary of World War II, it is fitting to recognize the achievements of this family. I salute these brothers and their family for their selfless commitment to our country. Every year the Odelsons gather out West in Nevada for a reunion. I am sure that they, as do we, will celebrate their contribution.●

TRIBUTE TO GEN. CALVIN A.H. WALLER

● Mr. NUNN. Mr. President, today a grateful nation paid tribute to one of its true patriots and finest soldiers, Lt. Gen. Calvin A.H. Waller, U.S. Army (Retired), who died last Thursday. I was privileged to be at the Fort Myer Chapel today for General Waller's memorial service, conducted by Chaplain (Major General) Donald W. Shea, with Chaplain (Colonel) John Kaising. The homily was presented by Chaplain Shea, and eulogy were offered by General Waller's son, Mark, and General Waller's friend Lt. Gen. Julius W. Becton, Jr., U.S. Army (Retired). General Waller was then interred in Arlington National Cemetery. It was a very moving and inspirational service.

Born in Louisiana, General Waller was a product of the Army Reserve Officer Training Corps [ROTC] program at Prairie View A&M University in Prairie View, TX. It is approximately 45 miles from the place General Waller called home—Houston. His dad was also a Prairie View graduate, and General Waller attended college to study veterinary medicine, entering in 1955. Because Prairie View was a land grant college—part of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College system—the first 2 years of ROTC were mandatory. In 1957, young Cal Waller signed up for Senior ROTC status. As his friend and fellow Prairie View classmate, retired Lt. Gen. Marvin Briansford, says, "Being a senior cadet at A&M had a certain attractiveness to it; it was prestigious, and we all could put the $27.90 a month we were paid as senior cadets to good use." A life in the Army, however, was far from his mind.

After being commissioned into the chemical corps and detailed into the infantry, then-Lieutenant Waller attended the basic infantry officer's course at Fort Benning, and then served in the 8th Infantry Regiment at Fort Lewis, WA. Before his initial tour of duty was over, Lieutenant Waller had decided that the Army had the potential for a career, or, as Secretary of the Army Togo West puts it, "Fortunately for us, he took a liking to the Army."

To better utilize his love of science, Cal Waller returned to the chemical corps, serving at Fort McCellan, AL; he went on to serve in the Eighth Army in the Republic of Korea; and in the 82d Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, NC. It was in the 82d Airborne, the All American division, that the Army realized what a natural leader and exceptional planner he was. Cal was one of the youngest officers in Army history to be selected for the Army's Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, KS, and upon graduation was immediately assigned to the staff of the U.S. Military Assistance Command, Vietnam.

After a tour in Washington, then-Major Waller began his career as an armor officer—a tanker in Army jargon. He attempted to stay assigned with soldiers and combat-ready units and served in the Federal Republic of Germany, Fort Carson, CO, Fort Stewart, GA, and Fort Bragg, NC. In those assignments, his natural leadership abilities blossomed. A former Army Chief of Staff Gordon Sullivan noted, "Cal Waller loved soldiers. He had a natural touch with soldiers, and soldiers loved him. I believe there are some men who have the ability, by their very presence, to calm the waters in crisis situations. Cal Waller was such a man."

In 1987, it was time to return to the Federal Republic of Germany and command of the 8th Infantry Division (Mechanized). It was there that I first met Cal Waller. I traveled with my staff director from the Senate Armed Services Committee, Arnold Punaro, and then-Colonel Frank Norton of the Army Senate Liaison, who I am now fortunate to have on my staff. We visited General Waller in Baumholder. After visiting soldiers and observing training on the multiple launch rocket system, we then had lunch together with some local German supporters of the U.S. Army. It was obvious they held Cal Waller in high esteem. For my part, I was greatly impressed with Cal Waller's professionalism and confidence, his technical acumen, his caring attitude for his soldiers and their families, and his wonderful, self-depreciating sense of humor. We developed a friendship, and I was grateful that our paths crossed on a number of occasions during his career and each time I was with Cal, I learned from him.

After his most successful tenure as Commander of the 8th Infantry Division, General Waller returned to Fort Lewis as the Commanding General of I Corps. He continued to be assigned to I Corps while deployed from Fort Lewis to serve as Deputy commander in Chief of the U.S. Central Command, with General Norm Schwarzkopf, for Operations Desert Shield/Desert Storm. General Schwarzkopf writes of his relationship with General Waller in his autobiography "It Doesn't Take a Hero." He says (pg. 392):

In mid-November Lieutenant General Cal Waller had reported to Riyadh as my deputy commander in chief: now I had someone to help me ride herd. Cal was a friend who had worked for me in two previous commands. Shrewd, soft-spoken, and given to quoting sayings he'd learned from his grandmother in Louisiana, he was also tough and effective. He'd been my first choice for the job: he'd come up through the Army as an armor officer and understood logistics; also I knew I didn't intimidate him at all. We trusted each other to such an extent that he could walk into my office and say point-blank, "Hey, something's all screwed up, it's your fault, and you need to know about it."

After the success of Operations Desert Shield/Desert Storm, General

Waller returned to command I Corps, Washington, and began making plans to retire. His Army service spanned 32 years; he had gone from a platoon leader commanding 40 soldiers to commanding general of I Corps and Fort Lewis, where he was responsible for over 100,000 personnel.

After retiring in 1991, General Waller returned to his love of science and was active in environment restoration efforts for a number of companies. I last saw Cal in August 1995 at a conference in Aspen, CO. He drove down from Arvada, CO near Denver, where he made his home. He was, as always, in a great mood and enjoying life. We played a round of golf, and had the opportunity for a lengthy visit. He noted how he was both enjoying and contributing in his second life.

But he never really left the Army, and the Army never left him. As Army Chief of Staff Denny Reimer notes, "The performance of our soldiers throughout the world * * * have their roots in (his) concerned leadership—making sure soldiers were properly trained for the task at hand and ensuring their families were well-cared for while they were gone. He was a patriotic American, a consummate soldier and a wonderful human being."

His friend and fellow soldier, Gen. Colin Powell says, "His ability to touch the lives of so many in such meaningful ways was legendary. We will miss him greatly." I certainly agree.

Mrs. Waller and her sons Michael and Mark know better than any of us the great loss our Nation has experienced. They bear their grief with dignity and courage—I know that Cal Waller is proud of them.

His unselfish service to the Army and our Nation is a testament to Cal Waller's sense of duty and honor. Our military forces have been strengthened by his contribution, and America has been enriched by his many accomplishments. I can offer no farewell to Cal Waller better than that extended by his son mark in his eulogy: "Ride swiftly, great Buffalo soldier."●

ORDERS FOR THURSDAY, MAY 16, 1996

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today it stand in adjournment until 9:30 a.m. on Thursday, May 16; further, that immediately following the prayer, the Journal of proceedings be deemed approved to date, no resolutions come over under the rule, the call of the calendar be dispensed with, the morning hour be deemed to have expired, and the Senate then resume consideration of Senate Concurrent Resolution 57. That is at 9:30 a.m. At such time, the Democrat leader, or his designee, will be recognized to offer the President's budget.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOMENICI. Tomorrow the Senate will resume consideration of the budget resolution. Additional amendments are expected to that resolution, and it is still the intention to complete action on the budget resolution this week. All Senators can therefore expect late night sessions and rollcall votes throughout the remainder of the week.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. DOMENICI. I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period for morning business for Senators to pay tribute to our dear friend, the majority leader.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. EXON. Reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I just want to emphasize what the Budget Committee chairman has said. There is great determination, especially on that side, to complete action this week on this budget. Whether or not that is going to be possible, we run over into Saturday or Sunday, as was indicated to me as a possibility by the chairman of the committee, I simply emphasize if people could get their amendments to us, as he has indicated, by noon tomorrow so that we would know at least preliminarily where we are on these things, then we can possibly allot and cut down some time on some of these things to expedite the proceedings which I think we all would like to do. So I endorse the statement that was made by the chairman of the committee and thank him for his cooperation.

Mr. DOMENICI. I say to all Senators, there is another full budget going to be offered by Senators CHAFEE and BREAUX in behalf of themselves and many Members from both sides in due course sometime later tomorrow or Friday. They will have an opportunity to offer that also. So there will be three total proposals that we will have considered.

ORDER FOR ADJOURNMENT

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I now ask that following morning business, which we have just agreed to, the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Who seeks recognition?

Mr. SIMPSON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

Mr. SIMPSON. I thank you, Madam President.

TRIBUTE TO BOB DOLE

Mr. SIMPSON. Madam President, apparently at this point in the order of the day, it is appropriate to make some remarks about a very special man who has made a very dramatic announcement today. Let me just say that I speak from perhaps a little special vantage point because I served as the assistant leader to BOB DOLE for 10 years. Those were 10 of the finest years I have spent in public life, and I have had some very exciting times, and some less exciting times, in public life. But the 10 years serving as first lieutenant to BOB DOLE as he served as our captain were tremendously satisfying and gratifying years for me.

Let me just say that the decision he has made today is one that is typical of BOB DOLE in that he thought that thing through for a long time. He talked with people he respects and admires and cares for, and he came up with a decision which is going to be very good for him and very good for the United States of America because the greatest part of it will be that he will be out in the land and the people of America will see him and the people of America will see Liddy Dole at his side. BOB DOLE and Liddy Dole will be deeply impressive to the American people.

The greatest pleasure I have is knowing that they will get to know him in the same way that we here know him, in the same way that I know him as an extraordinarily deep, complex, competitive, compassionate, complete man, a steady man of great, great sensitivity. I have seen all those attributes. Many of us who have worked with him have.

So it is going to be a wonderful thing to see him go forward from this place where we will no longer have the usual stuff. We would pull the same tricks if we would have had the same lay of the land. It is no reflection upon the fine leadership of the minority, Senator DASCHLE. I wish to compliment him in a very class act in being there at the press conference today, along with Senator BRADLEY, along with Senator KERREY of Nebraska, along with Senator HARKIN and Senator WELLSTONE. Those were acts of political grace. We do that with ourselves and among ourselves.

You have to remember that when we do this act, and we do some of that—a little bit of theater—as I say, we would have been doing some of that had the tables been reversed, but finally it does get to be rather an exhausting process. It is like getting pecked to death by ducks and you want to get away from it as fast as you can. He has, and he is smart to do it, and now the show can start.

For me, it has a western vernacular. It is like taking the hood off of a hunting falcon and now the prey is being observed and the prey is right there at the end of 1600 Pennsylvania. That is a pretty dramatic reference, but it is like an eagle with the tether off. It is like a race horse without the leg irons, and that is BOB DOLE. Boy, I tell you, he is going to run quite a race, and the people of America are going to be very proud and very, very impressed by BOB and Liddy DOLE as they leave this particular arena and go out into the land, not as the Senator from Kansas or the majority leader of the Senate but as an American citizen from Kansas, who, as he said so very beautifully, is either headed for the White House or home. I intend to invest a great deal of my efforts in seeing that he gets to the former location rather than the latter. I thank the Chair.

Mr. LOTT addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished assistant majority leader.

Mr. LOTT. Madam President, I, too, rise to join in expressing my great respect and admiration for our majority leader, BOB DOLE. We all know here in this institution of his great leadership. We know that he already holds the record of being the leader of the Republican Party longer than any other man in the history of the Senate. We know he has been in the Congress some 35 years, I believe, and that he has been elected six times to be the leader of the Republican team, having already served 11 years in that very critical position.

But there is a lot more to BOB DOLE and his career than those records. His is a remarkable career that will go down in history, I think, as one of the ones who will be remembered and pointed to as exemplary as a Senator and a leader who really loved the institution and did the job magnificently.

There are some words that come to mind when I think about what I have observed in BOB DOLE serving these past 16 months as his whip, and I have come to really appreciate the tremendous insight and leadership that he does have. So leadership clearly is one word that BOB DOLE has exhibited over all these years. He has never shied away from the tough issues, whether it was bipartisan efforts to save Social Security, to tax reform, to critical foreign policy responsibilities our Nation has had to face. Many times he stepped up and endorsed a position which might not necessarily have been the popular position in the country or here in the institution with his own colleagues, but he did what he thought was right and the responsible thing to do for our country, particularly in foreign policy.

BOB DOLE is clearly recognized on both sides of the aisle as a man of his word and a man of fairness. When BOB DOLE tells you you can count on something, whether it is in the Finance Committee or between leadership, you do not have to worry about it. He will stick to his word. Fairness is a cornerstone that I have seen.

Certainly we all know of his courage, both on the battlefields in Europe and the rough and tumble of American politics. BOB DOLE has fought the good fights. He has been a local elected official. He was in Congress. He was head of the Republican National Committee.

As a young Senator he was the patrolman back in the back of this Chamber who was willing to get involved in the fights that sometimes it takes a young Senator to wade into. Then he has had these distinguished leadership positions as minority leader, as chairman of the Finance Committee, and now as majority leader. But always he exhibited the will to fight and he showed the courage to get the job done.

Knowledge is a word that comes to my mind with BOB DOLE. I have been absolutely amazed at the awareness and the knowledge he has of the intricacies of this institution. They are not easy to understand and very difficult to master, but he has a sixth sense of how this body works, has worked, and, maybe even more important, should work. So I think his knowledge of this institution, his great reservoir of memory and experience, will be something we truly will miss.

And humor: Those across the country who do not see BOB as we see him every day may not be so familiar with that Kansas wit that he has, that crack, that moment when he says something that breaks the tension. He has a unique sense of humor and it has been greatly, mightily employed to help this place work over the years.

Now he has made another tough and courageous decision, to leave the life of public service that he has known so well and loved so much here in the Senate. As our Republican nominee, he has decided to leave the Senate and focus all of his time and attention on the quest for the Presidency, and that is as it should be. Up and out—he has taken the ultimate political risk. He has given up his Senate seat and his position of leadership to energize his efforts and to focus his attention on the needs of our Nation. It is an act of principle. He has made a personal sacrifice that we all know means a great deal to BOB DOLE and tells us so much about the man.

Serving his country in wartime and peace, BOB DOLE has sacrificed for America. He has taken a bold action and, as he said today in his speech when he announced that he was making this move: With all due respect for Congress, America has been my life.

I think that truly speaks well of what BOB DOLE has done today. I do not believe we have seen the last of BOB DOLE in the Senate or in service to our country. We will see and hear much more from him. And we all join in expressing our great love and appreciation for what he has done for us individually, for this institution, for our party, and for our country.

I yield the floor.

Mr. COCHRAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BROWN). The senior Senator from Mississippi is recognized.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I am very pleased to be able to join my good friend and State colleague, and the distinguished Senator from Wyoming, in saying how sincerely and deeply we respect the decision that BOB DOLE has made and announced today, that he will resign his seat in the U.S. Senate to seek the Presidency of the United States.

I think this truly does signal the beginning of the race for the Presidency. Obviously, as majority leader of the Senate, BOB DOLE has had an enormous responsibility for the schedule of the Senate, for doing all the things that are required of a leader in the Senate to do. He has done them all with great skill and in a way that has reflected an enormous amount of credit on the U.S. Senate.

I am confident the decision to resign did not come easy to him. We have all had an opportunity to be with him today in meetings, first a small group in the leadership, then in the Republican conference, and then to hear his public statement that he made in the Hart Senate Office Building. Throughout all of those conversations it became obvious to us what a difficult decision it had to be. But I think it also shows the willingness of BOB DOLE to do what he has been selected to do and that is to be a candidate for President of the United States. His party has, in effect, nominated him as our candidate, and he has said, "You have my full commitment. All of my energy, all of my effort, without distractions, no more ambushes here in the U.S. Senate from our friends on the other side of the aisle, or from wherever—all of my energies and my commitment will be directed to achieving success and winning the election campaign." And I predict that he is going to win this election campaign.

We are going to miss him very much as our leader. He has been a true friend to so many of us, and certainly to me, during the time that I have had the honor of working with him here in the Senate, and even before.

I never will forget when he came to Mississippi as a new Member of the Senate to defend those who were in charge of disaster benefits after Hurricane Camille had struck our gulf coast in 1969. There were some in the Senate who were prospective candidates for President who were on the other side of the aisle who chaired the committees. They came down to investigate how our State was disbursing disaster benefits and suggested, with a lot of national attention, that we were discriminating in our State against some of our citizens in that process. And it really was blatant posturing and trying to take advantage of an emotional situation, to curry favor in the national political arena.

BOB DOLE, young, new U.S. Senator, could see through that and he defended our elected Governor and the other officials in Mississippi who were working very hard to try to take care of a situation and deal with an enormous disaster. Huge money damages had been lost, a lot of personal suffering; lives had been lost. BOB DOLE was willing to come down and stand up for what would have been a politically incorrect cause, defending the State of Mississippi. I remember that, and all of Mississippi remembers that. If they wonder why the numbers are like they are in the Presidential polls right now, you look at our State. He is way out in front and he is going to stay way out in front.

But he has been a man of courage all of his life. We are familiar with his war record and what he suffered in World War II as a young man, and it just makes your heart ache to think about what he has been through and what he has overcome, to do with his life what he has done with his life and to really give it to the United States in public service—not to privately enrich himself in any way. He said, I am not a person where Congress is my life. America has been my life and it is my life. And it truly is his life.

So it is with a great deal of respect and some heartfelt remorse, too, that he will be leaving the Senate, that I stand tonight to salute him as a great American, a great Senator, a great statesman. We are all very proud of BOB DOLE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition? The distinguished Senator from Alaska is recognized.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, it is with a sad heart that I join these comments about the majority leader. I have known Senator DOLE for a long time and I have known him as a man whose is unquestionably a leader.

There are people who have mannerisms that come from various experiences in their lives. Whenever I think of BOB DOLE, I think of a great many men I have known in my life who were tested in war. He not only was tested but he was severely injured and really came back in a miraculous way, through the support that he got from his own townspeople in Kansas, through, really, the skill of a great surgeon in Chicago. But he came back and decided that the country that had given him that opportunity to recover from the effects of war was a country that he owed something to, and he has committed his life, really, to trying to make America a better place.

I really do not—it is not too often when I sort of puddle-up in public. When I think about BOB DOLE, I do, particularly after this decision today. I remember being with BOB DOLE when we met with people who were disabled. Everyone knows that BOB was disabled coming out of the war. But he has, because of his own experience in coming back, committed himself to help those, not only get a chance for recovery, but help those who did not have the same miracle of recovery that he had. And the disabilities laws we have now are laws that, as the preceding speaker said, future generations will look to. They will look to what we did during our watch here in the Senate and they are going to find a great many marks made by Senator BOB DOLE, even beyond being a leader.

The work that he did, along with others, in saving the Social Security System involving a bipartisan solution, although it is not totally permanent, was historic. What Senator DOLE did, working on the Finance Committee, and what that law did, in fact, preserved the Social Security system.

But Senator DOLE goes beyond that, in my mind, because I see him with the Secretary of Transportation, when she came to Alaska, standing on the back of a railroad car, the type of railroad car that former Presidents have used, or Presidents or candidates have used, as they made whistle-stop campaigns through the country. I hope BOB DOLE does that as a candidate.

Clearly, I saw the way that he met with our Alaska Native people, with Alaskans, and the way he enjoyed the outdoors and really has been quite supportive of those of us who represent our State.

The BOB DOLE I know is a man who you never have to ask him twice where he stands. You can take his word to the bank. And the decision he made today literally brings tears to my eyes, because I know that he has committed himself to service in the Congress and distinguished himself here.

He has been willing to set that aside and to tell the country, as he did, that he has two destinations after he leaves here on or before June 11: either to the White House or back to Kansas. I think that took great courage and real determination and commitment, the kind of commitment that other people may not understand, but we understand what it means to us.

I have been here when several people ran for the Presidency. They did not resign. They left their seat vacant and missed vote after vote, and there were decisions made here that should not have been reached if they had been here. I was thinking back to President Kennedy and his campaign. He was gone a long time. Lyndon Johnson was gone a long time. Many others had been out campaigning, and they had been gone and missed votes.

This candidate, as leader, has not missed many votes. But now he has decided he must commit his full time to his quest for the Presidency. He has made a very courageous decision. I salute him. I will say other things later after he does leave. Unfortunately, we sometimes wait too long to say them. But I think that BOB DOLE has a love for the Senate and the Senate has shown its love for him in responding to his leadership. We are going to miss that leadership, and I hope that those who follow him understand the Senate the way BOB DOLE does.

Thank you, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. MCCONNELL addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky is recognized.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, by any standard, this has been the kind of day that takes your breath away, one of those days that you will always remember.

Everyone on this side of the aisle had an opportunity earlier this afternoon to sit down with the majority leader as he explained this momentous decision. I looked around the room, and I do not think there was a dry eye in the place. Not a one. Everyone sensed that this was a moment of historical significance, and, indeed, it is. We witnessed one of the great men of American history make a dramatic and important decision that virtually everyone I know thinks was the right decision, to put this magnificent congressional career behind him and to move on to the next challenge.

My oldest daughter happened to have been in town today, and I said, "Your timing couldn't have been better. Come with me. I'm going to let you experience something you will remember for the rest of your life." We walked over to this crowded room, 902, that we were all sort of huddled around in to listen to what one of the skeptical commentators, who usually finds no good in politicians, uttered tonight on the evening news was the finest speech BOB DOLE ever made.

So, Mr. President, we are here tonight to celebrate the end of a remarkable career and for many of us to look forward to the next challenge, which is BOB DOLE, unencumbered by past responsibility, stepping forward to present to the American people his plans for the next 4 years.

I would be less than candid if I did not say this is probably the most exhilarating moment that people on this side of the aisle have enjoyed in the last 3 months. It is no secret this has not exactly been the height for the Republican national campaign the last few weeks. So it has provided an opportunity to take a second look at what this man would do for America in the next 4 years.

So it is with a great deal of excitement, but also sadness, that we mark the movement of BOB DOLE on to a new plateau.

When the history books are written about this institution and they pick out the few Senators who really made a difference for America, there is not a doubt that the Senator from Kansas will be near the top of the list. We wish him Godspeed in the challenges ahead.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

The Senator from Washington is recognized.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, on December 5, 1992, President-elect William Clinton resigned his position as Governor of Arkansas. On that date, of course, he was assured of another job, after having remained as Governor through at least the full year in which he devoted very little time and attention to that governorship. On this day, May 15, 1996, Senator ROBERT DOLE announced his resignation not only as majority leader of the U.S. Senate, but as senior Senator from the State of Kansas.

Mr. President, I cannot think of any two facts taken in juxtaposition which illustrate better the respective characters of the two candidates for President of the United States, any statement of fact that can better illustrate the different direction in which ROBERT DOLE will take the United States as President.

So, for him, while some have characterized his action as principled, others as unprecedented, the word that comes most quickly to my mind is principles, the same kind of principles which have actuated his entire life—his childhood, his military service, his recovery from a terribly debilitating injury—and his entire political career.

Of course, Mr. President, from a strictly campaign point of view, this gives Senator DOLE the opportunity full time to share his vision of the future of the United States and his ideas about the widest of our public policy questions with the people of the United States who most unfortunately do not know him in the way in which you and I and our other colleagues here in this body know him. That, I believe, will be an advantage to his campaign, a clear advantage to the people of the United States and a terrible loss to all of us who serve here in this body.

We will miss his wisdom, his sound counsel, his never failing sense of humor more than any of us can possibly state on the floor of this body here this evening. But we give him up to a greater cause, the cause of sharing these qualities of character and personality and of purpose with the American people. This is the contrast, the contrast in character and the contrast in direction for America, that this day and this action have so magnificently illustrated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, I rise to join my colleagues in paying tribute to our leader and in just saying from our hearts how much we respect the decision that he made, this bold and courageous decision, and how much we will miss him.

As has been mentioned, there was not a dry eye in our caucus today when he made this announcement. He and Elizabeth and Robin came in, and it was just the Republican Senators, and they said, "This is like family. It's like saying good-bye to family." But this is a man that America is now going to be able to see, who is deeply rooted in this country, and who knows exactly what he wants to say to the American people.

He made the decision by himself. But he could not speak on the Senate floor, talking about amendments to amendments and quorum calls and cloture votes, and get across to the American people how very important his goals and his mission and his vision for this country are.

He knew that he had to go out into America as an American, not as a Senator, and speak from the heart. He made that decision. As usual, he always livens everything with his humor. He said to us today, "I've been thinking about this for 2 months. I made the decision about 30 days ago. The reason that it didn't get out, in a town that is known for leaking, is because I didn't tell one U.S. Senator about it." Of course, we all laughed, because that was true.

He had kept his counsel. He had made this decision, as he so often does, by himself with his wife Elizabeth. He knew it was right. When we first started hearing about it today, many of us said, "Oh, no; that must be a mistake. He's going to step down from leadership, but not from his seat." Then the more we heard about it, we thought, "Well, of course. That is BOB DOLE's genius that he would see so far ahead of the rest of us that, yes, indeed, he was going to give up his seat because he began to see that this election is a crossroads, and he must show the American people who he is, what he stands for, and what integrity and character he has." He knew that he could not do it talking about amendments to amendments. He knew it had to come from the heartland and from the heart.

So every one of us are thrilled for him, thrilled that he has made this decision because we know the mission is the highest of all. That is to make the changes in America that will give every child in this country the same benefits and opportunities that BOB DOLE himself has had by having the great good fortune to grow up in this country.

He grew up in Russell, KS, in a working family. He has known hardship. He has known tragedy. He has stood the test of extreme injury and pain, being told that he probably would not walk again, being told that if he walked, it would be with a limp, knowing that he could overcome this with the grit and determination that the great upbringing in the heartland of America would give him.

He has never forgotten that opportunity. As I go on the campaign trail with him or as I walk down the hall with him, jaunty as he is, I always see that BOB DOLE knows his bearings. He has never had anything easy in his life. He has fought hard. He has stood the tests that have been thrown at him time after time.

He wants every American child to have the same opportunity that he did. His mission is to make sure that they do. So we love him. We are going to miss him. But every one of us are going to be with him on the campaign trail talking about the message that Americans want to hear: What are you going to do for our country? What he is going to do for our country is prepare for the future, to go into the 21st century without a deficit, saving Medicare, with welfare reform, making sure that we take care of the truly needy but making sure that we look to the future for our children and grandchildren.

That is what this man is going to do. He has put that ahead of his own career and his own life, because he knows how important this is to the American people. God's speed, our friend.

Mr. THURMOND addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished President pro tempore.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, today Senator BOB DOLE announced that he will be stepping down as a Member of the U.S. Senate. He has announced his resignation. I have been in the Senate for 40 years. I have been here with many leaders, majority and minority leaders. I can say that he is one of the ablest and finest leaders that this country has ever had serving in the Congress of the United States.

He is a man of principle. He stands for what is right. He felt it his duty, since he is going to run for President, to give his full attention to that campaign. He felt he could not do both, look after the Senate's work and run for President, too.

Unlike some people who have attempted to do both, he will give up all of the power in the Senate. He, as the majority leader here, has served the longest term, I believe, of any majority leader in history.

He has made a fine record. He will give all that up because he wants to do his duty and feels he could not run for President and also look after his duties here in the Senate.

Mr. President, he knows what responsibility means. He felt he could not be responsible to run in the campaign and run the Senate, too. So what did he do? Since he is going to run for President, he decided to resign from the U.S. Senate. He is giving up all of his power, as probably the most influential Member of the U.S. Senate, in his position as majority leader, and as an able Senator giving it all up. How many people would do that? Most people would hang on, say, "Well, I can run for the Senate, I can run for the President, and stay in the Senate and still do my job." Not BOB DOLE. He is not that kind of a man. He does not do things halfway. He puts his heart and soul into whatever he does. That is the reason he resigned from the Senate.

Now, in my opinion, that shows character. I do not know of any quality about any person, man or woman, that is better than that of character. His behavior in public life and in private life has been exemplary. He does not know how to do wrong. We are proud that he is such a man. We are proud that he has lived the life he has and one with such outstanding service to this country.

He is a man of courage. In World War II he served in the armed services in Italy. He was shot in the arm and other parts of his body. They thought he was going to die but he managed to survive. So many people felt he had no chance to recover but he would not give up. He is a fighter. He kept on keeping on until he finally restored his health and then returned to private life again.

Yes, not only did he have physical courage with the enemy but he has moral courage. Sometimes I think moral courage is even greater than physical courage. He could stand up to people when he knew they were wrong and tell them so in a courteous way. I just feel that his courage was one of the strong factors in his life.

Then, too, he is a man of great capacity. He could not have done what he did here in the Senate as majority leader if he had not been a man of great capacity, a man of great ability, who has led this Senate so wise and so well for so long. Yes, his capacity has been a great asset to this Nation.

BOB DOLE is a man of conviction. He knew what he stood for and he stood for it. He knew right from wrong and he followed the right. A man whose ideals were high, a man we could all be proud of because of his exemplary conduct and ideals.

Also he is a man of compassion. He could walk with kings, yet he felt most at home with the common people. I have seen many instances in which he showed great compassion here with employees and with members of the public, with the unfortunate, with the disabled, with the troubled. Everybody at times has a problem. He took pleasure in helping people to solve their problems. He is a man of compassion and a man who loved people.

In all of these things he was courteous. In his position here as majority leader he could have been short with people and he could have said things and gotten away with it. That would not have been characteristic of BOB DOLE. He was always nice to people. He always tried to help people. For that reason, we highly respected him. Because of all these good qualities, the Senate has lost an ideal person. This country has lost a wonderful public leader.

I predict it will not be long until he will, in his campaign, be successful and become President of the United States and render an even greater service. I predict that history will record him as one of the great persons of this century and of history, known for what he has done in the past but also for what he will do as President of the United States. I am proud to claim his friendship. I am proud that he is an American. I am pleased that he took the step he did today which shows strength, courage, and principle. We look forward to his coming back to the Government as President of the United States.

BOB DOLE is blessed with a devoted and lovely wife, Elizabeth. She is a great person in her own right and serves as president of the American Red Cross, former Secretary of Labor, and former Secretary of Transportation.

She has been an inspiration in his life and will continue to be a great asset to him in every way possible in the years ahead. God bless her.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I rise also to pay tribute to Leader DOLE and join my colleagues, the distinguished Senator from South Carolina, as well as others who have spoken out.

Mr. President, there can be no doubt for those of us who listen to Senator DOLE's remarks today that this was truly one of the great events in American history. One had the sense and the feel that great things were taking place.

Great, I suppose, partly because we admire and respect BOB DOLE so much, but I think truly great because what he did is so unusual. Here is someone who has achieved more success in the Senate than just about anyone who has ever served in this body. Here is someone who has been elected Republican leader more times than anyone in the history of our Nation. Here is someone who was willing to risk it all for a higher calling. It is a little like a trapeze artist who goes up to the high wire then instructs the folks to cut down the safety net. Not many people do it.

Yes, there are some, but most political leaders are happy to be secure in a job, to have the paycheck, to have the staff, to have the strength of the office while they run for another. They are not shy about using where they are at to get where they want to go.

What was so unusual about today is BOB DOLE cutting the safety net and putting it all on the line. For those who remember Rudyard Kipling's great poem "If" you are reminded of the line "and risk it on one turn of pitch and toss." That is what BOB DOLE has been doing. He has put everything he has on the line. He said it best: "I'm either going to go to the White House or I'm going to go home." It is so typical of the kind of human being that BOB DOLE is, one cannot help but be thrilled and exhilarated by the sheer determination and the courage that he shows.

This is not a normal politician. This is an extraordinary American who has left the leadership of the greatest deliberative body in the world to champion and seek out the Presidency of the United States. He is different. One cannot help but recall Lyndon Baines Johnson running both for the Senate and for Vice President at the same time. The people of Texas elected him in both offices. They understood someone's desire to have a safety net, to be secure, to be safe, to have a forum before they moved ahead.

While we did not condemn those that seem to be safe, to take the safety route, to preserve their spot, strength of power and influence, we cannot help but admire those who are willing to risk it all, whose commitment to the American purpose and the American cause is so great they put that ahead of their own safety, of their own security, and of their own beloved career. No one should doubt that BOB DOLE loves the Senate. It shows in the way he conducts himself and the things he accomplishes.

Also, it would be a mistake for anybody, anywhere, to think that BOB DOLE is not serious about the Presidency. This is someone who has not been halfhearted in his commitments. He was not halfhearted when he put his very life on the line in World War II. He was not halfhearted when he won a chest full of Purple Hearts. He was not halfhearted when he faced a lifetime of being handicapped. He was not halfhearted when he determined in his own mind and in his own heart that he would walk again and that he would move again and that he would overcome that handicap.

This is not the average person or the normal person who would take the safe way. This is someone of incredible commitment and dedication and personal courage. This is someone who threw down the gauntlet in the Presidential campaign today in a stronger, clearer way than I have ever seen before. This is someone who put behind him not only his beloved Senate, but all of his safety net, to say that what he ran for and what he sought to do for America was more important than anything that affected BOB DOLE.

It is very typical of the kind of human being that BOB DOLE is, because I believe BOB DOLE is a real thing. He is a Kansan—a Kansan who grew up in a way so that he never complains. He is a Kansan who has grown up in a way so that he does not seek excuses. He is a Kansan who grew up being taught to say what was on his mind, to say what he means and mean what he says. That is partly why he is so beloved in the U.S. Senate. Unfortunately, it is partly why he is somewhat unusual in modern American politics.

Some will say there is quite a contrast in the race that BOB DOLE has joined. I am one who thinks so. But anyone who has doubts about that race best look further than the current poll numbers, because BOB DOLE is the real thing. He was the real thing on the battlefield. He was the real thing when he faced a lifetime of being handicapped. He was the real thing when he rose to the heights of politics. Yet, he never let politics be his master.

I suppose I will remember him for his judgment, both now and in the campaign ahead. I recall, specifically, an issue that I think many of us felt very strongly about, and that is the President's commitment of troops to Bosnia. I opposed that with all my heart, and BOB DOLE opposed it as well. He spoke out frankly and honestly about the mistake of deploying American men and women in a way that we did not stand behind them. When the debate was done, and when public opinion was clearly on the side of us who were reluctant to deploy U.S. troops into that theater, and when the President, in spite of all of it, had sent American men and women into that zone, we had the chance to vote on the floor on a vote that would have embarrassed the President by undercutting the funding he would have for an action he had taken. I considered it a tough vote. I did not want to embarrass my President, but I did not want them to have to go and serve in an area where we had not made a clear commitment. I believe BOB DOLE shared my concern about the deployment. He said so, frankly and honestly. But he also was concerned about America's influence and prestige and the President's ability to deal with others around the world. He passed up a chance to embarrass the President of the United States by voting for that resolution, by voting to sustain the President on a policy that he did not like. For BOB DOLE, it was more important to support this Nation and support its Commander in Chief than it was to gain a political advantage.

Some could disagree with his vote. I did. But none could disagree with his motivation. For him, what was important was America and the viability of the Commander in Chief, even though he was someone BOB DOLE disagreed with. That kind of integrity, that kind of honesty, and that kind of commitment to our Nation are surely qualities that are not only rare, but desperately needed.

I do not know what our Maker has in mind for BOB DOLE. He has tested him in ways that many of us have never been tested. But I cannot help but believe that BOB DOLE's service is not finished yet. In an hour when our country desperately needs his integrity and character, I am glad there is a BOB DOLE—the real thing.

Mr. CHAFEE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island is recognized.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I first got to know BOB DOLE well 18 years ago when I went on the Finance Committee and he was the senior Republican on the Finance Committee. The chairman at the time was Senator Russell Long, a Democratic Member, of course, from Louisiana.

During those early years on the Finance Committee, I was struck by several characteristics of BOB DOLE. I had known him to some degree when he had been running for Vice-President, but not intimately. During those early years in the Finance Committee, I had the privilege to get to know BOB DOLE and see him in action. I was struck by several things. First of all, he is very bright. Not only did he know the intricacies of the Tax Code, but when different matters would come up, it was obvious he was a quick learner.

Second, the characteristic that struck me was his seemingly inexhaustible energy. When he became chairman of the committee after several years, he would manage those bills on the floor—tax bills—and, as we all know, in those days, tax bills would sometimes last 2, 3, 4, 5 days, with all sorts of amendments coming from every direction. BOB DOLE had the capacity to stand here always looking fresh and fit, everybody else looking a little bit bedraggled as we would go late into the night, accepting amendments, rejecting those, calling for votes, tabling this, and moving on in totally admirable fashion.

And so, out of that, I came to have a great admiration for BOB DOLE as I saw him in action on the Finance Committee. Then came his leadership here in 1984, succeeding Howard Baker. And, again, BOB DOLE had exerted those extraordinary characteristics of leadership—paying attention to the needs of all of his members, his flock, as it were, and leading us with clear direction and with zest and always with good humor. I suppose there is nobody who made us, as Senators—whether we were in our caucuses, or whether on the floor here—laugh so much, with his quick wit and one-liners, as BOB DOLE.

And now, of course, he has announced this afternoon that he will be leaving the floor of the Senate, where he has served with such distinction for many years. As others have pointed out, he is the longest-serving majority leader in the history of our Nation. To me, it is not surprising that he is leaving. Yes, I was surprised, as everybody was, by the announcement that came today. But when one thought about it, there is no reason for surprise, because it seems to me that BOB DOLE's life has been marked by a sense of duty. And he saw a duty here.

He has received the nomination of the Republican Party for President. But he looked on and weighed the factors and saw he could not be serving the people of Kansas while he was still here trying to do two things at once. Nor could he serve the people of the United States in the fashion and style he felt they were deserving of. And so, in responding to this sense of duty that he give his best to the office he was seeking, while he could not continue to give his best to the people of Kansas and the United States, he chose to resign. It has been pointed out that that is a big decision. But it is a decision that I think we have all come to expect in the style of BOB DOLE.

So I join others in wishing him well, looking forward to doing whatever I can to help him, as he has helped each of us. He came to my State three times to campaign on my behalf in the different elections. I think each Senator on this side could say the same thing. So we wish him well. I share the sense of optimism that others have voiced. I know that with his tremendous energy, with his quick learning ability, with his ability of retention of matters that he has studied, and with the sense of duty I previously remarked on, he is going to conduct an absolutely marvelous campaign that is going to be a great credit to him, to all who nominated him, and a wonderful reflection on the people of the United States of America.

I thank the Chair.

Mr. MURKOWSKI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska is recognized.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. I thank the Chair.

I know it is getting late and my colleagues would like to go home and have dinner, but I am sure that we all share in this extraordinary opportunity to say a few words about our leader, Senator BOB DOLE, and his announcement today of his resignation.

I was there, along with Mrs. Dole and BOB DOLE's daughter. I think all Senators—all 53—there was not a dry eye in the house when BOB DOLE announced his transition from majority leader, relinquishing the office that he loves so dearly. Basically, he laid out for us an all-or-nothing campaign. I think it took a great deal of courage. It was a bold action, and one that indicated, clearly, to those of us who were privileged to be there, an expression of love for this body that he holds so dearly.

I think, too, he cleared the air on the issue of some of the partisanship that we have in this body. I think it is fair to say no longer can some on the other side of the aisle use the excuse of his candidacy and majority leader as a reason for some of the issues that have not moved before this body. It is my opinion that we have lost a great leader in the Senate, but the country has gained a great opportunity to know BOB DOLE as we know him.

Mr. President, over the next weeks and months BOB DOLE is going to be out in America taking his campaign to the American people. I think he is going to be laying out very clearly the differences between himself and President Clinton. He is going to provide, I think, mainstream conservatives and conservatism moral leadership and will be able to point out the differences between the big Government philosophy, which is currently emanating from the White House, and that of the best Government is the closest Government to the people and most responsive.

I have had an opportunity to know BOB DOLE over the 16 years I have been in this body. I first recognized him as a true American hero. He is one who has always put America first. When he was called to battle in World War II—and now, I think, as he leaves the leadership of the U.S. Senate—he certainly has shown sacrifice and what it takes basically to be President.

BOB DOLE has always been there when America has called him, and America is calling him today. He is a man of courage, strength of character, and patriotism. He is gracious.

He came to Alaska to campaign for me. He has been accommodating to me during my 16 years in this body. One of the things that I have always marveled at about BOB DOLE is his patience in trying to accommodate some 99 other egos that are relatively high from time to time. Some of us have encouraged that he discipline—like, perhaps, that which occurs in the 6th grade—those of us who occasionally fall off the turnip truck. But BOB has always maintained an evenhanded approach towards leadership, giving each one of us an opportunity to express ourselves regardless of how our feelings may be in conflict with his own. Instead of, in effect, chastising on occasions when leadership did not receive the support it was entitled to, BOB has always been above that and set, I think, an extraordinary example of what true leadership is all about. That is being subjected to the equivocation and the contradictions that we all have on various issues, but being able to hold fast and stand above it as tall as BOB DOLE has been and will be as he campaigns for the highest office in our country.

So where are we today? This Nation will now have the privilege of seeing and knowing the BOB DOLE that we have come to know and love and, in my own case, have been privileged to work with for the last 16 years. There is no question in my mind, Mr. President, that the electorate will soon be able to define the character of our two Presidential candidates and make the choice that is right for America.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

The Senator from Georgia is recognized.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, I do not believe I will ever look at the desk directly in front of me, or the podium on it, ever again without thinking of the Senator from Kansas. Senator DOLE is a living American hero. He is a Senator of the century. Whenever I have been around Senator DOLE, somehow I always felt that I was close to the heart and the soul of America. I used to introduce him that way. I still introduce him that way. You cannot miss it when you are near him.

I want to thank the other side. It was great seeing them standing behind this great American Senator—Senator DASCHLE, Senator BRADLEY, Senator HARKIN, Senator KERREY, and others. I think it signaled what the entire Nation feels about this man.

I loved what Senator SIMPSON, his great friend from Wyoming, said. He said: Now America will get a chance to know Senator DOLE like his colleagues do. And I think they are going to make him President of the United States.

This has really been a magnificent day—difficult but magnificent. I think on our side we feel a little bit like a family sending off a son or daughter to work on a higher mission. I know that is how I feel.

I have enjoyed so much this evening listening to the remarks of his friends and colleagues. I join them in saying bon voyage, God bless, safe journey, and much success to the Senator from Kansas.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

TRIBUTE TO HANK KETCHAM

HON. SAM FARR

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. FARR of California. Mr. Speaker, it is my great honor to rise in recognition of a man who has brought both smiles and laughter to countless Americans. Henry (Hank) Ketcham, who created the famed "Dennis the Menace" cartoon strip, is being honored Friday with a Lifetime Achievement Award at the Carmel Arts Festival.

A resident of my congressional district, Mr. Ketcham has led a distinguished, artistic life that we all can celebrate. Born in Seattle in 1920, he first became interested in drawing at the age of 7 when a local art director and family friend drew cartoon sketches to make him laugh. With considerable talent, he parlayed this love of cartooning into a number of impressive positions throughout his career.

After entering the University of Washington as an art major in 1937, Mr. Ketcham moved to Hollywood 1 year later where he worked at the Walter Lantz animation studio, home of the "Woody the Woodpecker" cartoon series. Soon after, Mr. Ketcham was lured by the Walt Disney studios, where he worked on "Pinocchio," "Fantasia" and many other famous Disney productions until the outbreak of World War II.

Desiring to serve his country, Mr. Ketcham enlisted in the U.S. Navy and, as a chief photographer specialist, developed a variety of cartoons, magazines, posters, and animated film spots to encourage his fellow Americans to purchase war bonds. To help supplement his military pay, Mr. Ketcham also started cartooning for magazines, including the Saturday Evening Post, which bought a weekly panel.

After the war, Mr. Ketcham fully launched himself into the highly competitive world of freelance cartooning. Because of his immense talent, he quickly became one of this country's most successful artists, selling his work regularly to Collier's, the Saturday Evening Post, Ladies' Home Journal, Liberty, the New Yorker, as well as to advertising agencies. By this time, Mr. Ketcham was also married and the father of a son named, you guessed it, Dennis, whom my sister Francesca, frequently babysat.

In October 1950, the "Dennis the Menace" cartoon strip was created and, less than a year later, it was syndicated to 18 newspapers. Mr. Ketcham received the prestigious Billy deBeck Trophy as the outstanding cartoonist of 1952. Within the past 10 years, "Dennis the Menace" has been read in more than 1,000 different newspapers in 48 countries and has been translated into 19 different languages.

In the following years, Mr. Ketcham expanded his lovable character's popularity through a variety of other media, including books and television. The hit TV show that was produced from 1959 to 1963 is still widely seen around the country and was updated into a popular animation series by the CBS television network. A 2-hour prime-time live action "Dennis the Menace" broadcast was aired in September 1987 and in 114 television markets the following month.

Over the past 46 years, Mr. Ketcham has sold more than 50 million "Dennis the Menace" books, including a four-part anthology, a series of comic books from Marvel Comics and a favorite of Ketcham's, "Dennis and the Bible Kids."

Throughout the years, Dennis' civic-mindedness has also made him a popular spokesman for a number of worthy causes, including the Boy Scouts of America, UNICEF, and the International Red Cross. He has had a starring role in two important public service messages through comic books entitled "Dennis Takes a Poke at Poison" and "Coping with Family Stress."

To this day, "Dennis the Menace" continues to bring joy to children and adults alike. The comic strip is widely read throughout the world and, in fact, is delivered to my doorstep every day I am in Washington in the Washington Post. Though 46 this year, Dennis remains as youthful and entertaining as ever. Of course, this is a tribute to Hank Ketcham and his considerable talent. It is my great honor to salute him as he receives this well-deserved Lifetime Achievement Award.

TEMPLE EMANUEL OF GREAT NECK IS REDEDICATED

HON. GARY L. ACKERMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commemorate the rededication of Temple Emanuel of Great Neck, which occurred on May 5, 1996. This day, hereby known as Emanuel day, culminates a 10 year effort that has served to beautify the synagogue, and enhance it as an ongoing source of inspiration to its congregants and the Great Neck community. Conceived by Rabbi Robert Widom, spiritual leader or Temple Emanuel, the project evolved into the design of six stained glass windows for the synagogue's sanctuary, a new ark and eternal light. The initial project, under the direction of Rabbi Widom, undertook a search that would last for 10 years until the appropriate artist was selected and the creative plans were developed.

Through the combined efforts of the congregation's leadership team of president Lloyd Goldfarb, chair of the refurbishing committee, Paula Held Scharf, brotherhood president, John Holzer and sisterhood president, Carol Cohen, an extensive search was launched that yielded Paul Winthrop Wood, a Canadian born artist. Mr. Wood comes from a family of renowned architects and builders and brought to Temple Emanuel an innate understanding of the Old Testament and the many creative and imaginative themes that flow from it. It was his early upbringing by his mother that endowed him with a rich blend of talent and insight that would be brought to fruition by the many religious building challenges he undertook.

In rising to the challenge of bringing to the synagogue a sense of love, understanding and compassion, Mr. Wood succeeded grandly. It is with great pride and love that the trustees of Temple Emanuel of Great Neck declared Sunday, May 5, as Emanuel day. As the hundreds of congregants of Temple Emanuel gathered on that day, it was most exciting and reaffirming that in the truest tradition of the American spirit, this beautiful congregation continues to so willingly give of itself, to its members and the community.

TRIBUTE TO SARA J. WHITE

HON. ANNA G. ESHOO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I call to the attention of my colleagues the installation early next month of Sara J. White, M.S., as president of the American Society of Health-System Pharmacists [ASHP] at the society's 53d annual meeting in San Diego.

ASHP is the 30,000-member national professional association representing pharmacists who practice in hospitals, health maintenance organizations, long-term care facilities, home-care agencies, and other components of health care systems. The society has extensive publishing and educational programs designed to help members improve their delivery of pharmaceutical care, and it is a national accrediting organization for pharmacy residency and pharmacy technician training programs.

Since October 1992, Professor White has been director of pharmacy at Stanford University Hospital, a 500-bed academic health science center, which I am privileged to represent. She now holds this position with Stanford Health Services, a health care system formed last September. The Stanford Health Services Pharmacy has five inpatient satellites, three outpatient pharmacies, an operating room satellite, and a home pharmacy service. As director of pharmacy, she directs all financial, operational, and human resource components of a service with 100 full-time personnel serving the health care needs of more than 2 million people. She is also clinical professor of pharmacy at the University of California-San Francisco School of Pharmacy. Prior to her current position, Professor White was associate director of pharmacy at the University of Kansas Medical Center from 1975 to 1992.

A prolific author on topics of pharmaceutical management and human and financial resource management, Professor White's research has appeared in more than 100 pharmacy, nursing, and medical journal articles and textbook chapters. She has been an active leader and office holder in several State and national pharmacy organizations and participates in her community through the RotaCare Free Clinic. Professor White received the degree of bachelor of science in pharmacy from Oregon State University. Both her master of science and residency in Hospital Pharmacy came from Ohio State University.

• This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.

Mr. Speaker, Professor White has served her profession with distinction. I extend my best wishes to her as she takes over the leadership of the ASHP.

IN MEMORY OF THE SILENT SERVICE

HON. CARLOS J. MOORHEAD

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Speaker, as Memorial Day approaches, I rise to pay tribute to the men of the silent service and their organization, the U.S. Submarine Veterans, Inc.

The goal of this organization is "to perpetuate the memory of our shipmates who gave their lives in the performance of their duties while serving their country."

These submariners, in the true tradition and fighting spirit of the U.S. Navy, have lived in silence, fought in silence, and died in silence in the cold depths. Through their dedication, deeds, and supreme sacrifice, they have left behind a legacy of the highest standards of performance and conduct. Their actions will always inspire emulation and praise.

The U.S. Submarine Veterans, which ensures the honorable tradition of the submariners in our society, is represented in southern California by Mark James Denger, a submarine veteran, reservist, and active supporter and participant in a number of significant, patriotic military organizations.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to pay tribute to Mr. Denger and the U.S. Submarine Veterans, Inc. They do honor to themselves, our Nation and the memory of Memorial Day.

ENHANCING OUR MILITARY

HON. RON PACKARD

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Speaker, under President Clinton's latest budget proposal, defense spending would remain on a dangerously steep decline. H.R. 3230 moves to counter the effects of the Clinton administration's cuts in defense spending within the framework of a balanced budget.

After a 10-year decline in military spending, this measure revitalizes our Nation's defense, bolstering our national security interest at home and abroad and turning back the hollow military policies of the Clinton administration. A strong, prepared military is vital for the security of this country. In this era of fiscal restraint, it is equally important to get the biggest bang for the buck—but not at the expense of readiness, modernization, or quality of life for our service personnel and their families.

The fiscal year 1997 defense authorization provides a much needed reprieve for the U.S. military from President Clinton's ill conceived budget cuts. My Republican colleagues and I remain committed to ensuring that our armed services are equipped with decent living quarters and the best, most cost efficient equipment, so that when they are called upon to defend their country, they have what they need to get the job done.

AN ARTISTIC DISCOVERY

HON. DAN FRISA

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. FRISA. Mr. Speaker, I would like to recognize five very talented high school students. These students participated in my first annual congressional arts competition, "An Artistic Discovery."

Nur-e-alam Chisty of Herricks High School, Suneet Sethi of East Meadow High School and Melissa Guimaraes of Sacred Heart Academy, submitted exceptional works of art that were chosen as first, second, and third place winners.

Although everyone who participated in the competition displayed artistic talent, two students deserve special recognition. These students are Kenneth Grossman of Lawrence High School and Clarie Thomas of East Meadow High School.

I would like to congratulate these students and wish them the very best in their future endeavors.

SAILING CENTER NAMED FOR YOCUM FAMILY

HON. MICHAEL P. FORBES

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor and celebrate one of our country's most valuable educational institutions, the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, also known as Kings Point. Few realize that this Nation came very close to losing this vital service academy that has served this Nation in times of war and peace. Under the masterful stewardship of Adm. Thomas Matteson, Kings Point is becoming the premier maritime education institution in the world. I fought hard throughout the appropriations process to ensure that the Merchant Marine Academy received its full funding of $30.9 million for 1996 and I am prepared to take up that fight again.

For too long the extraordinary contributions of the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy have been overlooked. The Academy has always been connected to national defense as well as maritime commerce in peace and war. Today, the Academy still promotes a "can do" approach to tasks that is reminiscent of the war days, when cadets and ships were ordered to deliver, no matter how dangerous the conditions.

Thanks to the continued support and dedication of the faculty, graduates, alumni, and midshipmen, the tradition of Kings Point continues. On May 3, 1996, Kings Point christened a new legacy—the Yocum Sailing Center.

The Yocum Sailing Center is the centerpiece of what will ultimately be a fully endowed midshipmen sailing and waterfront professional development program. The building, located at the water's edge with a spectacular view of the Long Island Sound and the Manhattan skyline, was named in recognition of the unprecedented support and service of James H. Yocum, a resident of Reading, PA.

Mr. Yocum graduated from the Academy in 1947. As a cadet midshipman, he sailed with Alcoa Steamship Co., American Export Lines, and Grace Line. After graduation, he sailed as a deck officer with Moor-McCormack Lines and Grace Line. A veteran of the Korean War, Mr. Yocum served active duty in the U.S. Navy from 1952–54 in both Korea and Japan. Having become involved with the Merchant Marine Alumni Association in 1955, Mr. Yocum holds the record for the longest continuous service to this association. He has been awarded the alumni association's Outstanding Professional Achievement Award, the Meritorious Alumni Service Award and, in 1992, was chosen the "Kings Pointer of the Year."

Thanks to Mr. Yocum's enthusiasm and philanthropy to Kings Point, the Yocum Sailing Center was completed and opened in 1994. It houses the classrooms for seamanship instruction, a large boat bay for year round maintenance and repair of sail and power boats, a crew rowing tank, offices for the sailing master, the master of the T/V Kings Pointer and midshipmen staff of the Department of Waterfront Activities. The Yocum Sailing Center is dedicated to the beloved memory of Mr. Yocum's grandparents, William H. Yocum and Emma Kate "Bright" Yocum, his parents, George Lehman Yocum and Helen Yocum and, his two brothers, William Yocum II and George L. Yocum, Jr. At both the north and south entrances to the building there is a beautiful plaque that eloquently pays tribute to the Yocum Family—"So they gave their abundance to education and for that, each received recognition, reward and remembrance that will never die."

I would like to offer my congratulations to Kings Point on its newest acquisition and to Mr. Yocum for his generosity and dedication to the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy. May God bless all who pass through her portals.

HONORING ROSALIND AND JOSEPH GURWIN

HON. GARY L. ACKERMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join with my colleagues and the members of the New York Metropolitan Region Chapter of the American Society for Technion, the Israel Institute of Technology, as they gather on Wednesday, May 15, 1996, to pay tribute to Rosalind and Joseph Gurwin.

The Gurwins have devoted a good part of their lives to the welfare of the Jewish people and the State of Israel. Recognizing the importance of technological development in Israel's future, Ros and Joe have been long time supporters of Technion, Israel's only comprehensive scientific university and center for applied research. In this vein, they have provided funding for Technion's Gurwin-I Tech-Sat satellite, a project stimulating telecommunications, meteorology and x-ray telescope technology, as well as serving as a key link in an Israeli-based computer network.

However, Mr. Speaker, Ros and Joe's philanthropic efforts extend far beyond Technion to encompass the entire New York metropolitan community. The Long Island Jewish Medical Center and UJA-Federation have benefitted greatly due to their continuing support. Furthermore, Ros and Joe's commitment to the elderly has led to the construction of the Gurwin Jewish Geriatric Center in Commack, Long Island.

Mr. Speaker, the Gurwins have come to symbolize the American spirit of volunteerism and generosity. I ask all my colleagues to rise with the grateful people of the Fifth Congressional District in extending to Rosalind and Joseph Gurwin the highest accolades of appreciation and admiration.

IN MEMORY OF LIEUTENANT COLONEL OLIVER

HON. PATRICK J. KENNEDY

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island. Mr. Speaker, I am asking my colleagues today to pause and honor the dedicated service given by the men and women in the Armed Forces. We all know that this is a dangerous and demanding task. In times of peace it is often easy, too easy, to lose sight of these facts.

For my constituents the cold reality of these truths was recently brought home when Lt. Col. Allen Oliver, a native of Bristol, RI, was killed in a helicopter crash in Columbus, GA on March 1, 1996.

Colonel Oliver was a second generation Marine. He learned the call of duty and honor of service from his father, Edward Oliver, a distinguished veteran of World War II. Lieutenant Colonel Oliver was an intelligent, hard working, man who could have pursued any career path he wanted. He chose to serve his nation.

Allen Oliver grew up in Bristol, RI, a small town where everyone is a neighbor. Allen was respected and liked by all who knew him. Whether it was helping to shovel the sidewalk of a friend in need, serving as an alter boy, or delivering papers, Allen Oliver was there. The outlines of his adult career were taking shape in those early activities.

As he grew older, Allen knew the path he wanted to take and sought admission to the service academies. While he did not get in, he continued to pursue a career in the military by enrolling in the ROTC at the University of Salt Lake, UT. He graduated with a 4.0 average and joined the Marines as a second lieutenant. The next stop for Allen was the Marine Corps flight school in Pensacola, FL from which he graduated in 1977 as a first lieutenant.

Service in the corps took Allen Oliver all over the Nation where he touched many lives. After the tragic news of Colonel Oliver's death was made public, his father was warned by the outpouring of calls from people all across America who had known his son. This is Lieutenant Colonel Oliver's legacy.

The loss of life, especially of one so young and vital, is never easy. Words do little to capture the spirit of the person or express the depth of our loss. But I know that we can all learn something from the life and service of Lieutenant Colonel Oliver.

Our thoughts are with the Oliver family at this difficult time. The loss they have sustained can never be measured, but I hope they can draw comfort from the fact the many fine memories of time spent with Allen.

I hope my colleagues will reflect upon the life of this man and draw strength and inspiration from the example set by Lieutenant Colonel Oliver. This is the most fitting tribute we can pay to him and to his family.

A TRIBUTE TO ALLAN HANCOCK

HON. BUD SHUSTER

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, not many of us would be able to accomplish much in the Congress if not for our loyal friends and supporters who have stood by us during the course of our careers in public service. I rise today to pay tribute to such a friend and supporter of mine who has dedicated his life to serving the community in which he lives. The man I am speaking of is my long-time campaign chairman, Mr. Allan G. Hancock of Altoona, PA.

Allan Hancock began his service in 1960 when he entered the insurance business. He actively became a chartered life underwriter, a chartered financial consultant, and a member of the Association for Advanced Life Underwriting. Allan went on to further his underwriting career by becoming president of the Altoona and Pennsylvania State Associations of Life Underwriters. He also served diligently as the State association's national committeeman from 1977-85.

In 1988, Allan was elected to the NALU board of trustees and was reelected in 1990. In 1992, he was elected secretary of NALU and became president of NALU in September 1994. Allan served as past vice chairman of NALU committees on associations, Federal law and legislation and health insurance. Allan also served as a trustee liaison for NALU's Education Committee and Public Service Committee. For all his hard work and dedication, Allan has been awarded both NALU's National Quality Award and the National Sales Achievement Award.

Allan's career of underwriting did not stop here. He became moderator for the Life Underwriting Training Council and served on LUTC's Advanced Sales Content and Techniques Committee. For 24 years, Allan has been a qualifying and life member of the Million Dollar Round Table where he has earned the title of Bronze Knight. He is also a life underwriters political action committee diplomat and a member of the American College's Golden Key Society.

Mr. Speaker, in addition to Allan's success in the insurance business, he has also generously served his community in many other ways. He was elected mayor of Altoona from 1980-84 and delegate to the Republican National Convention three times throughout the 1980's. In 1986, Allan was elected to and served admirably on the White House Conference on Small Business.

Whether serving his customers, his colleagues, or the citizens of Altoona, Allan Hancock has built a reputation as a man of great intellect and character. His more than three decades of work at the Principal Financial Group and in the Altoona area have distinguished him as a selfless individual who has given a great deal back to the community in which he lives. I will close, Mr. Speaker, on a personal note in thanking Allan Hancock for the many years of friendship and guidance which he has given both myself and my family.

A SPECIAL SALUTE TO ARTISTIC DISCOVERY WINNERS

HON. LOUIS STOKES

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to rise today to salute students from my congressional district who participated in the 1996 Artistic Discovery competition. In late June, the corridors of the U.S. Capitol will be filled with beautiful art work from around the country. The Artistic Discovery competition allows Members of Congress to conduct art competitions in their congressional districts for high school students. The winning art work from each Member's district then becomes part of a national exhibition of student art on display in Washington, DC.

From its inception, the Artistic Discovery competition was designed to allow high school students to showcase their creative talents. These young artists have the unique gift of artistic expression, and they are able to produce high quality work that reflects this special talent. I am certain that each participant in the competition puts forth the highest level of ability and energy to produce artistic masterpieces that all of us can appreciate and enjoy.

Mr. Speaker, I can say with pride that this year's Artistic Discovery competition in my congressional district was the best ever. My office received a total of 356 art entries from 10 local high schools. The judge for this year's competition, Ted Sherron, who serves as vice president for student affairs at the Cleveland Institute of Art, faced a difficult task of selecting a winner from the entries submitted. The winning art work, a self portrait, was submitted by Tim McLoughlin. Tim is a resident of Shaker Heights, OH, and he attends Shaker Heights High School. I am proud to salute Tim and I look forward to welcoming him to Washington, DC, for the national exhibition.

I would like to express my appreciation to the Mayor of Cleveland Heights, Carol Edwards. As a result of her efforts and that of her staff, the student art work from the 11th district was on display at city hall during a week-long Salute to Young Artists. On Saturday, May 4, 1995, an awards ceremony was held for the students. I am also grateful to Cleveland mayor Michael White who furnished special certificates for the students. Also, I wish to acknowledge Dick Bogomolny and National Supermarkets; Ernestine and Malcolm Brown; the Cleveland Museum of Art; and other individuals and organizations throughout the community for their continued support of the Artistic Discovery competition.

Mr. Speaker, the 1996 Artistic Discovery competition was a tremendous success in my congressional district. As a supporter of the arts, I recognize the importance we must place on the arts by investing in our artists at an early age. In my opinion, it represents good sound policy. I would like to salute the students who participated in the 1996 Artistic Discovery competition. Each of these individuals are winners and should be duly acknowledged.

DEFENSE SPENDING INCREASES
UNCONSCIONABLE

HON. ELIZABETH FURSE

OF OREGON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Ms. FURSE. Mr. Speaker, I am disappointed with the fiscal year 1997 defense authorization adopted by the House today. I particularly object to the nearly $13 billion spending increase added by the House National Security Committee. That increase is unconscionable.

Even though five amendments reducing the increase in defense spending were offered to the Rules Committee, not one was allowed for debate on the House floor—not even my amendment calling for a reduction of $1. My amendment would have tested whether this body has the courage to cut even $1 from the largest discretionary account in the budget.

What arrogance that was on the part of lawmakers to not even allow us to debate the decision the National Security Committee made to increase defense spending $12.3 billion more than even the Pentagon asked for.

I would like to remind Speaker GINGRICH of what he said in his address to the Nation last year following the passage of the Contract With America. He told America that everything is on the table, including Pentagon spending. House Budget Chairman KASICH said on CNN last year: "I want to suggest something that will ruffle a few feathers. And that is that the Pentagon should be reviewed with the same microscope as everything else in this Federal Government should be reviewed." Apparently, no one wanted to ruffle any feathers.

I would also like to remind my colleagues what Defense Secretary Perry had to say in his March 1996 annual report to the President and the Congress: "Events since the end of the cold war have demonstrated the need for America to retain a strong global leadership role and a prudent defense posture. President Clinton's fiscal year 1997 defense budget, and the strategy and plans on which it is based, support that need while remaining fiscally responsible."

Last year, this Congress increased defense spending by $7 billion, while decreasing all other discretionary accounts. And this year, it looks like we will increase defense spending by almost twice that amount. I find it preposterous that we are considering increasing Pentagon spending at a time when we are asking seniors and students to pay more.

Last year's action was taken despite the fact that the University of Maryland conducted a nationwide poll last November that showed 77 percent of the American public opposed to Congress's addition of $7 billion to the Pentagon's defense budget request.

People can argue about how much funding the Pentagon needs to perform its important role, U.S. defense spending is roughly equal to that of the next six nations combined. We spend twice as much on our military as do all of our potential enemies combined, including Russia and China.

We need to reassess our current strategy of fighting two wars nearly simultaneously without help from our allies. There are two potential war fronts out there. One is the threat of war abroad and the other is the lack of security on our streets.

Since 1980, 1,100 of our police officers have been killed in the line of duty. In the same time period, 530 U.S. soldiers have been killed in action. As crime rates have skyrocketed in this country, spending on police protection has remained constant. As a result, Americans have less than a 10th the effective police power of 30 years ago. We have a responsibility to protect our citizens from threats at home as well as threats from abroad.

This is National Law Enforcement Recognition Week. At this time when all of us are trying so hard to balance the Federal budget, we can avoid increasing military spending without endangering U.S. national security, which must include security at home.

I am pleased that the amendment I sponsored requiring greater burden sharing by our allies worldwide passed by a wide margin, 353 to 62. This marks the third year in a row I have sponsored such an amendment. This year's legislation is a timely call for a fundamental reassessment of our international troop deployments, an evaluation that has been sorely needed ever since the cold war ended.

I will continue to work to reorder our priorities in more commonsense ways. I firmly believe in spending every penny we need for a sound national defense, but not a penny more.

HONORING THE SUFFOLK COUNTY POLICE

HON. GARY L. ACKERMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask all my colleagues to join me in supporting the Suffolk County police during their annual memorial service.

The Suffolk County Police Superior Officers Association, the Suffolk County Police Benevolent Association, and the Suffolk County Detectives Association, will be honoring their fellow officers who have given their lives on the line of duty. In particular, the associations will be dedicating a commemorative footstone in memory of Sgt. Timothy Henck.

Suffolk County Police Sgt. Timothy J. Henck passed away as a result of injuries received in the line of duty on August 6, 1995. Sergeant Henck sustained his injuries during a vehicle chase of a burglary suspect on the Long Island Expressway.

Sergeant Henck came from a family with a history of law enforcement and followed his father, the late Lt. Thomas Henck of the Suffolk County Police Department, into law enforcement. Sergeant Henck began his career in January 1986, as a member of the New York City Police Department, serving in Brooklyn. Later that year, Sergeant Henck joined the Suffolk County Police Department, where he was assigned to the 3d precinct and quickly won 15 departmental commendations.

In June 1994, Timothy Henck was promoted to Sergeant and earned the respect and admiration of all those who worked for and with him until his untimely death last year.

Sergeant Henck showed the full measure of his devotion to law enforcement and made the ultimate sacrifice while in the performance of his duty.

Mr. Speaker, I ask all my colleagues to join me in honoring Sergeant Henck and all the Suffolk County police officers who have given their lives in the line of duty.

AUTHORIZING ACQUISITION OF PROPERTY FOR INCLUSION IN AMAGANSETT NATIONAL WILD-LIFE REFUGE

SPEECH OF

HON. MICHAEL P. FORBES

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 14, 1996

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, as a young man growing up on Long Island I have known of and visited Shadmoor. Purchasing this property is of great importance to me and my neighbors on Long Island.

The Shadmoor property consists of 98 acres of dramatic oceanfront property at Montauk, in the town of East Hampton, NY. Shadmoor supports one of the largest and most viable populations of the endangered and federally listed sandplain gerardia, New York State's rarest plant. Once widespread along the Northeast coast, sandplain gerardia is now known to inhabit fewer than 10 sites in the world, 5 of those on Long Island.

This important population of sandplain gerardia grows on privately owned property.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service [USFWS] targeted this site for acquisition in its 1991 Northeast Coastal Areas Study. But so far, money has not been provided. Meanwhile, the property owners are very close to obtaining final approval for a subdivision that would lead to development of home lots at Shadmoor, effectively ending years of effort to save this population of sandplain gerardia.

H.R. 1836 is a bill authorizing the Fish and Wildlife Service to include Shadmoor in the Amagansett National Wildlife Refuge. Shadmoor is currently threatened by creeping development at its edges and if action is not taken promptly it could be lost.

Over the last 20 years, Long Island, and New York State, have received almost no Federal dollars for the acquisition of lands to protect endangered species. Nationally, few Federal dollars have been used to protect the habitat of critically imperiled plant species, while tens of millions have been spent for other purposes. Saving this property would go a long way toward correcting this inequity.

Shadmoor represents a unique combination of habitat for federally and State endangered species, offering a half mile of Atlantic Ocean coastline and having historical significance. Adjacent to 17 acres of East Hampton Town Parkland, the Northeast Coastal Areas Study prepared by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service [USFWS] in 1991 targeted the Shadmoor property for protection.

The USFWS believes it is critical for local entities to contribute to our important effort and recently the Town Board of East Hampton passed a resolution supporting the Federal acquisition of Shadmoor and agreeing to consider appropriating town money to help acquire the tract. The Nature Conservancy has also pledged funds to help purchase Shadmoor.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to thank Sara Davison and Stuart Lowrie of the Nature Conservancy, Carol Morrison of the Concerned Citizens of Montauk, and Cathy Lester supervisor of the town of East Hampton for all of their hard work to protect Shadmoor.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to bring to your attention H.R. 2005, the bill I introduced to make technical corrections in coastal barrier resources systems map that is also being considered today as an amendment to H.R. 1836. H.R. 2005 is a bill of great importance to the residents of the Point O'Woods community on Long Island. It passed the House under unanimous consent on October 29, 1995. This legislation corrects the mapping error that designated private property on Fire Island as an otherwise protected area on the coastal barrier resources system [CBRS] map of the Fire Island national seashore, making individuals ineligible for flood insurance for new constructions or relocated houses. This designation prevented the Point O'Woods community from proceeding with their 30-year land use plan.

There was never any reason to believe that the mapping error was anything but inadvertent. In any event, common sense and equity dictated that this error be corrected and because CBRS boundaries cannot be adjusted without congressional approval, this legislation solves the problem.

Point O'Woods is a unique community in that it has worked with the town of Brookhaven and FEMA to move up to 17 houses from the beach, and to permit the rebuilding of the dunes for future protection of the community.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1836 and H.R. 2005 are very important to the residents of Long Island and I want to thank you, Chairman YOUNG of the Resources Committee, Chairman SAXTON of the Resources Subcommittee on Fisheries, Wildlife and Oceans for your support of these bills and for bringing them to the floor expeditiously for a vote.

SERVICE ACADEMY GRADUATES,
TOP ROTC HAVE EARNED A REG-ULAR COMMISSION

HON. ROBERT A. UNDERWOOD

OF GUAM

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend my colleagues in the House National Security Committee for their support for my amendment to H.R. 3230 in committee which restores the regular, active duty commissions to graduates of the Military Academy—West Point—Naval Academy—Annapolis—Air Force Academy and top Reserve Officer Training Corps—ROTC—graduates.

As many of my colleagues know, I introduced this amendment as a bill, H.R. 2016, of which Chairman Robert Dornan and Congressman Jack Reed are original cosponsors. I am pleased that my colleagues supported the amendment by voice vote when I offered it on May 1 in the committee.

As a result of a change in the fiscal year 1993 Department of Defense authorization bill, beginning October 1, 1996, graduates of the military service academies and top ROTC graduates will receive a Reserve commission, instead of a regular, active duty commission. At the time of the change, the rationale was that regular commissioned officers received advantages over Reserve commissioned officers during the drawdown. Subsequently, the services received permission from Congress to subject regular officers to involuntary separation on the same basis as officers with Reserve commissions.

The difference for officers between the two types of commissions has become largely honorary, but it is an important incentive. Granting regular commissions rewards the hard work and sacrifices of these top graduates. Service academy and top ROTC graduates deserve the recognition for their dedication and excellence.

The difference for Congress between the two types of commissions is significant. Since it is easier to resign with a Reserve commission, granting regular commissions to Service Academy graduates protects our investment in them. It will also save taxpayer money spent on convening boards to review the applicants for regular commission status. The academies and the ROTC programs currently do a fine job of screening unqualified officer candidates.

As the two Chambers go to conference on H.R. 3230, I urge my colleagues to support the restoration of the regular, active duty commissions. The Military Service Academy and top ROTC graduates have earned a regular commission.

NATIONAL LYME DISEASE
AWARENESS MONTH

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, yesterday I had the honor of participating with some of our colleagues in front of the Capitol Building to help call our country's attention to the devastating effects that Lyme disease has on so many of our citizens and particularly on our young children.

In my remarks at the rally I noted: We cannot permit the minds and bodies of those who are stricken with Lyme disease to simply waste away.

I had the pleasure of introducing as one of the principal speakers Mr. Evan White, a 17-year-old resident of Wesley Hills in Rockland County, in my own 20th Congressional District of New York. Evan was diagnosed with Lyme disease 5 years ago. In 1993, he testified before the Senate Labor and Human Relations Committee regarding the severe impact Lyme disease had on his life.

As I stated at the rally regarding Evan and others like him: The grit and courage that he and so many other young people like him have shown challenge us to ensure that the resources to conduct research into this disease are made available. For these young people, Lyme disease often cuts them down and disables them in the prime of their years. Often, they become ill and don't understand why—a condition that is very fearful for a young child.

When Evan White was first diagnosed with Lyme disease at the age of 12, his life and that of his family were turned upside down. He was confined to a wheelchair and unable to speak, read, or write for 3 years as he underwent painful rehabilitation and medical treatment.

Evan missed 4 years of schooling due to his illness, but his perseverance in the face of this adversity is a lesson to us all. His life, and the lives of others like him, challenge all of us to ensure that the resources to conduct research into Lyme disease are made available.

Speakers at the rally other than Evan underscored the importance of Lyme disease research. Dr. Stephen E. Straus of the National Institutes of Health announced the first intramural research on chronic disease and infection affecting the brain. Dr. Duane J. Gubler of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention announced the establishment of a task force. Karen Vanderhoof-Forschner, cofounder and chair of the Lyme Disease Foundation, Dr. Joseph Burrascano of Long Island, Dr. Anthony Lionetti of New Jersey, and the psychiatrist Dr. Richard Bransfield made excellent presentations regarding progress in the fight against Lyme disease. Ira Maurer, an attorney, discussed the plight of people caught in the middle of health care containment and physicians trying to practice good medicine, and Roberta Bethencourt, addressed the social impacts of Lyme disease. Hillary MacDonald, the daughter of a Lyme disease victim, informed us of the impact the disease had on her family.

In addition, I was joined at the podium by a host of our colleagues who had made names for themselves for their compassion and their leadership in the Lyme disease crusade: Mrs. JOHNSON and Mrs. KENNELLY of Connecticut; Mr. SMITH and Mrs. ROUKEMA of New Jersey; Mr. VENTO of Minnesota and Mrs. LOWEY of New York. In addition, we were joined by Senator LIEBERMAN of Connecticut and Senators BRADLEY and LAUTENBERG of New Jersey.

Mr. Speaker, I am inserting at this point in the RECORD the poignant remarks made at our rally by Evan White:

STATEMENT BY EVAN WHITE

Hello. My name is Evan White. I'm 17 years old, and I have Lyme Disease.

Five years ago, Lyme Disease took from me everything I had—except my spirit. At twelve years old when I was first diagnosed with Lyme, my life and my family's life changed completely. Hampered by, headaches, severe neurological damage and full body atrophy, I was confined to a wheelchair and unable to speak, read or write for three years. Due to this crippling disease I spent the next three years of my life in the hospital, undergoing various painful rehabilitation and medical treatments.

As my will strengthened during this, mentally and physically draining my time, with my family's support I testified to Senator Kennedy at a senate hearing on Lyme Disease. Although I had great difficulty speaking I told the Senator, that the children with Lyme could not think or sleep and that we needed his help.

That was three years ago, after a year of antibiotic treatment and endless rehabilitation and support from my family, I'm fortunate enough to speak with you here today. After much missed school, I now attend school full time and hope to attend college in a year. Although I still have many painful symptoms of Lyme, with your support I keep fighting to someday be Lyme-free.

But I am here to talk about the children across the country who suffer from Lyme Disease as I did. These children are very sick, very scared and they need your help. The most precious years of their lives are being robbed from a disease which comes from a creature that is barely visible. They can't be with their friends, go to school, play sports or even have fun, believe me I know.

It isn't fair that such young children become so sick. It's not fair that our parents should have to fight like soldiers to ensure that our illness is taken seriously. So to Everyone here today, to everyone in the government, help us, take Lyme seriously. We have to and we can not survive without you.

The children of America are in danger! You must help us by finding a cure now! Please don't forget us!

JACKSON STATE UNIVERSITY
GOLF TEAM

HON. BENNIE G. THOMPSON

OF MISSISSIPPI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay special recognition to the Jackson State University [JSU] golf team. JSU is a Historically Black University located in Jackson, MS and recently won its eighth consecutive Southwestern Athletic Conference [SWAC] golf championship.

This unprecedented accomplishment is a result of hard work and determination. When JSU travels to the University of Michigan to participate in the National Collegiate Athletic Association [NCAA] District 6 Central Region playoffs later this month, they will once again be making history as the first HBCU to be invited to participate in the golf playoffs.

Eddie Payton is in his tenth year as JSU's golf coach. He currently holds a career record of 70 wins with 19 losses while compiling a 54–5 record in SWAC play, including a 52–0 record in the last eight years. He has garnered the SWAC Coach of the Year award eight times and the National Coach of the Year award twice.

Coach Payton also had a stellar football career both at Jackson State University and in the National Football League. As a member of the Detroit Lions, he once returned a punt for 89 yards for a touchdown and a kick 99 yards scoring twice in the same game while a member of the NFL's Detroit Lions.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you to join me in congratulating Coach Payton and the JSU golf team for their enormous success during the 1996 season.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION
ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 1997

SPEECH OF

HON. WILLIAM H. ZELIFF, JR.

OF NEW HAMPSHIRE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 14, 1996

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 3230) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1997 for military activities of the Department of Defense, to prescribe military personnel strengths for fiscal year 1997, and for other purposes:

Mr. ZELIFF. Mr. Chairman, the amendment under discussion is being offered in response to the discovery, in late 1995 and early 1996, of serious mismanagement by the White House Communications Agency, and those who share responsibility for oversight of that agency, including the White House Military Office, headed by Mr. Alan Sullivan, and the White House Office of Administration and Management, headed by Jodie Torkelson.

For those who do not know—and most do not know this—the White House Communications Agency is formally charged with providing telecommunications support to the President, and has existed since the late 1940's. However, today this once small office now spends more than $ 100 million annually and employs more than 900 persons.

Recent mismanagement of this office has been significant, and necessitates serious reform. Findings and recommendations are detailed in two inspector general reports that were issued in November 1995 and April 1996. Chairman CLINGER's committee, and this subcommittee, have been investigating this office for almost 2 years. And we are planning a hearing on Thursday, May 16 on this very issue.

What we have now had confirmed to us, after extensive efforts by the White House last year to block any congressional oversight, is this.

The White House Communications Agency, which is funded through the Defense Department's Information Systems Agency, has been unchecked and has wasted millions of taxpayer dollars between 1993 and 1995. White House personnel responsible for oversight have been asleep at the switch, and the Defense Information Systems Agency has been timid in questioning the White House practices.

In particular, the IG's reports reveal that the White House Communications Agency budgets have been unreviewed; the White House Communications Agency annual performance plan has failed to meet Department of Defense standards; acquisition planning has been inadequate, and has included an unwillingness to put millions of dollars' worth of contracts out to bid, essentially ignoring Federal procurement law; wasteful purchases have been made, including the purchase in 1994 of a $4.9 million piece of mobile communications equipment that the White House now admits—and this is something out of the keystone cops—will not fit on the C-141 airplane that transports such equipment for the President, and was also made incompatible with most hotel electricity units; and the White House Communications Agency has also purchased goods and services without legal authority, and without binding contracts.

In short, this has been a black hole, over at the White House, into which we have been pouring nearly $100 million annually without any executive branch oversight. It has also become a pot of money devoted to many things that have nothing to do with telecommunications or the President.

For example, the White House deploys Department of Defense moneys to fund an elaborate frame shop in the basement of the White House, which frames any personal picture with the President or anything else a White House staffer brings in to be framed. It funds stenographic services, audiovisual services, photos, and emblems, podiums and other nontelecommunications expenditures.

What this amendment would do is put an end to the broad-ranging mission creep that has occurred, and start us back toward a degree of accountability.

Now, as a footnote to all this, I must say that I am also greatly disappointed in the White House, frankly. After learning of this level of mismanagement and waste, my subcommittee invited them—in particular, Mr. Sullivan, and Ms. Torkelson—who recently herself negotiated a memorandum of understanding permitting this broad mission—to testify before the subcommittee on Thursday.

They were asked to respond to the IG's reports. They were asked because they are operational and have oversight responsibility—or have had until now. —Instead of complying, as has been the track record of this White House on other matters, they are declining to even appear.

I will, therefore, once more ask them—before other measures are considered—to appear and testify on Thursday. In the meantime, I urge support for this narrowing amendment.

USA TODAY RECOGNITION OF WAYNE VALLEY (NJ) HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT

HON. WILLIAM J. MARTINI

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. MARTINI. Mr. Speaker, I am taking this opportunity today to commend the community of Wayne, NJ and its educators for their commitment to excellence in education. In the third article of a five-part series currently running in USA Today, the Wayne Valley High School District was specifically cited as an education system worth migrating to.

This May 15, 1996, article on education in the United States focused on the importance of residential location and school districting when families make decisions on where to raise families. The story pointed out that "real estate agents, appraisers, home builders, and tax authorities overwhelmingly agree that proximity to high-quality schools is now the No. 1 factor in determining what a home is worth in any given market."

Citing schools as her top priority, the article specifically mentioned Ms. Alice Li of Wayne, NJ. Ten years ago the Li family, with very young daughter Winnie, moved from Pennsylvania to New Jersey. Although her daughter was very young, Ms. Li cited the talented and gifted program of the Wayne School District as an important factor which brought them to the 8th district.

Mr. Speaker, Ms. Li had the foresight to plan for young Winnie's future education. The result: Winnie has scored perfectly three straight years on the National Latin Exam, is the editor of the school newspaper, and will graduate Wayne Valley High with a 4.0 grade point average. It comes as no surprise that with such strong academic credentials, Winnie will attend Harvard University in the fall. I commend Winnie for her achievements and certainly wish her continued success in Cambridge, MA.

Mr. Speaker, this article is just another example of how vital quality school systems are to our communities. Without responsible teachers and challenging curricula in place, towns and cities have very little to offer parents and would be residents. Strengthening education programs remain a top priority for me and I will continue to work toward raising the standards by which our schools measure themselves. I am pleased that Wayne, NJ and one its stand-out pupils have been recognized in this capacity.

Again, I commend Ms. Alice Li, her daughter Winnie, and the Wayne Valley High School District.

ANTI-DRUG EFFORTS

HON. LEE H. HAMILTON

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to insert my Washington Report for Wednesday, May 15, 1996, into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

PROTECTING OUR CHILDREN FROM DRUGS

An estimated 12.2 million Americans consume illegal drugs at least once a month, causing enormous human costs in terms of lost productivity, drug-related violence, and ruined lives. Over 20,000 Americans die each year in drug-related deaths. Fighting drugs is not cheap. The federal government will spend $15 billion this year, and local governments spend far more. Yet half of Americans say that they, or someone in their family, or a close friend, has used illegal drugs, and drug use is increasing among young people. We may not have lost the war on drugs, but neither are we winning it. We must reassess and revitalize our efforts.

Fighting drugs requires a systematic approach on a number of fronts. There are four key elements to drug control policy:

LAW ENFORCEMENT

There is no question that cities have felt the brunt of drug-related crime, but law enforcement officials in our small towns and rural areas express their concern that theft, domestic violence, and juvenile crimes are increasingly linked to illegal drugs. I answer letters each week from Hoosier children who are worried about drugs and violence in their schools.

In southern Indiana, federal funds support local police officers, Drug Enforcement Agency officers, and the Southern Indiana Drug Task Force for undercover operations. The National Guard and the Civil Air Patrol eradicate billions of dollars of marijuana and other plants each year. We must focus on youth, gangs, and domestic violence, and give law enforcement officers, judges, and prosecutors the resources to provide swift justice. Prosecutors must focus on key drug crime figures, and judges should be given tough but flexible sentencing guidelines to ensure that first-time offenders do not become addicts, and that drug traffickers are severely punished.

EDUCATION, PREVENTION, AND TREATMENT

Law enforcement officers tell me that, unless we reduce the demand for drugs, no level of punishment or eradication will be able to win the war on drugs. Drug education programs have helped stigmatize drug use in schools and the workplace, and treatment—when available—has proven successful in getting people off drugs. Federal funds help numerous southern Indiana drug prevention programs in schools and community agencies. Studies show that, for each $1 spent on prevention, $7 is saved on crime, health, and welfare costs. Treatment can be improved with more research, early access to treatment, and compassionate care to the victims of drug abuse. We should also consolidate and streamline the dozens of government prevention programs, working hand in hand with America's religious, community, and educational groups.

INTERDICTION AND ERADICATION

The main focus of U.S. counternarcotics efforts should be here at home, but there is a key international dimension—eradicating drug crops abroad and stopping the narcotics flow across U.S. borders. Most illegal drugs enter the U.S. along the Florida shoreline or the Mexican border. Federal interdiction efforts include border control and interception of drug planes and ships in international territory. We must use the most sophisticated intelligence, technology, and science to shield our borders from the drug threat.

SOURCE COUNTRIES

Drug traffickers can best be stopped by arresting, convicting, and incarcerating them on their own turf, and other countries must do their share. Money laundering, drug production, and organized drug cartels are international problems, and cannot be solved by the U.S. alone. We should strengthen foreign law enforcement and judicial institutions. Cooperation with Mexican authorities has improved, as demonstrated by the recent destruction of a major Mexican-American drug ring. We should reward countries that convict drug traffickers, eradicate cocaine and heroin farms, seize drug shipments, and aggressively pursue illegal drug labs. We should punish countries that do not do their share by linking drug cooperation to trade sanctions and foreign assistance. We must use the U.N. and other multilateral organizations to share the burden and the costs of narcotics control.

YOUTH DRUG USE

Previous efforts to reduce drug use have been moderately successful, but hard core drug users and drug-related violence have proven more difficult to stop. Progress has been made. The number of people who use drugs each month has fallen from 22.3 million in 1985 to 12.2 million in 1994, and drug-related homicides are down 25 percent. It is alarming, however, that drug use is increasing among young people. One in three high school seniors say they have used marijuana, and reports show this figure is rising. In southern Indiana, parents, teachers, and local officials tell me that youth drug use is spreading swiftly in small towns and rural areas.

Protecting our children from the scourge of drugs must be our top priority. Tough penalties for drug violations can help, but communities must redouble their efforts to keep kids from trying drugs in the first place. The Safe and Drug Free Schools Act provides federal funding to help local schools with drug prevention. In southern Indiana, federal COPS community policing grants have helped many law enforcement agencies expand the DARE drug education programs in schools. I oppose efforts in Congress to reduce or eliminate these programs. There are dozens of other efforts, and we should improve cooperation among parents, schools, private groups, and law enforcement to identify, punish, and treat repeat juvenile offenders.

ACTIONS

Congress should take several additional steps to improve our drug war strategy. First, we must streamline the more than 50 federal agencies involved in the drug war. Second, we should increase monitoring of legal "source chemicals", which are used to process raw drugs and to make "artificial drugs" such as methamphetamines. Third, we must ask our foreign allies to do their fair share to fight drugs. I have introduced legislation to impose trade sanctions on countries that fail to control narcotics production and trafficking. We should also strongly link foreign assistance with a country's drug control efforts. Fourth, Congress should commit the necessary resources to crack down on drug trafficking.

We must recognize, however, that domestic and international law enforcement can only do so much. As long as Americans are willing to spend billions of dollars on illegal drugs, the traffickers and pushers will find new ways to meet that demand. If parents, schools, churches, community groups, and public officials insist on personal responsibility and provide support to end the cycle of addiction, we may be able to keep the next generation of young people safe from the scourge of drugs.

TRIBUTE TO DR. TIMOTHY WINTERS

HON. BOB FILNER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize a truly remarkable leader from my 50th Congressional District in San Diego. In the Reverend Dr. Timothy Winters, we find a man who has dedicated his life to improving the socio-economic and spiritual well-being of many of our neighborhoods and communities in San Diego.

In addition to being pastor of the Bayview Baptist Church, one of the largest churches in San Diego, he also holds the position as president of the Baptist Ministers Union. While in this position, Dr. Winters has shown to be a very capable leader in guiding both his church and the ministerial organization to success and high achievement. He was instrumental in the building of the Martin Luther King Jr. School, complete with classrooms, meeting halls, and banquet facilities.

Dr. Winters is also an accomplished speaker, often called upon to speak on various problems and concerns of the African-American community and the city at large.

He lectures frequently on the matters of consumer awareness and debt-free living.

His workshops and finance seminars, which he often conducts from various churches, have helped to improve the lives of literally thousands of those who have heeded his advice and counsel.

Lately, Dr. Winters has been working with other community leaders as a part of a group to charter a new community credit union in the heart of my 50th Congressional District, another indication of his tireless dedication to the social and economic well-being of his—and my—community.

I am also proud of the many fair-lending agreements that Dr. Winters assisted in forging with the many banks, and other financial institutions in our city.

He has often been a great inspiration to me, and I look forward to working with Dr. Winters to raise the quality of life in our community. Please join me in celebrating the great contributions and achievements made to the constituents of the 50th Congressional District by Dr. Timothy Winters.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. MIKE WARD

OF KENTUCKY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. WARD. Mr. Speaker, on May 15, 1996, I was unavoidably detained and missed two rollcall votes. I would like the RECORD to show that had I been present for rollcall vote No. 173, on H.R. 3230, National Defense Authorization for Fiscal Year 1997, motion to recommend, I would have voted "yes." On rollcall vote No. 174, final passage, I would have voted "yes."

TRIBUTE TO HUGH JARVIS

HON. DAVID E. BONIOR

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Hugh Jarvis, a constituent, good friend, and dedicated educator who retired last February after serving for nearly 15 years as president of the Michigan Federation of Teachers and School Related Personnel.

At a time when all of us are working to improve educational opportunities for American families, the work of Hugh Jarvis is an inspiration. For 36 years, Hugh has dedicated himself to improving education in Macomb County and throughout Michigan. As a respected junior high school teacher, coach, and volunteer, Hugh has worked both in and out of the classroom to achieve educational excellence for students, parents, and families in our community.

Hugh graduated from Michigan State University in 1960, and went on to get his masters degree from MSU in 1964. During that time, he started his career as a teacher in East Detroit—where I grew up—teaching junior high school social studies and working closely with students as coach for the track team.

Civic responsibility and involvement are not just ideas that Hugh Jarvis taught his students in the classroom, they are the values that he has lived by example. Quietly, without much fanfare, Hugh Jarvis worked for over three and a half decades as an activist for better education for students.

In 1985, Hugh's work in education was recognized when Michigan Governor Jim Blanchard appointed him to the board of control of Northern Michigan University—a prestigious position which allowed him to help direct NMU and its educational mission. Hugh has also volunteered his time and expertise as a member of the Michigan Public School Finance Commission.

In his distinguished career, Hugh's commitment to students and families has also led him to be a leader in the labor community, and to work for the rights of teachers and educators.

Actively involved in the Michigan Federation of Teachers and the Democratic Party since the early 1960's, Hugh was elected president of the MFT in 1981. During his tenure as president, Hugh distinguished himself as a person who worked tirelessly for better education for our children and better working conditions for the men and women who teach them.

Mr. Speaker, Hugh Jarvis' example is one that all of us should take. His quiet and unwavering commitment to education, and to giving of himself for students and families in Michigan are a testament to him and to his profession.

As we observe this milestone in Hugh Jarvis' distinguished career, I take great pride in calling him a personal friend, and in joining with my colleagues to express my deep thanks to him for his work.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 1997

SPEECH OF

HON. CARDISS COLLINS

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 14, 1996

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 3230) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1997 for military activities of the Department of Defense, to prescribe military personnel strengths for fiscal year 1997, and for other purposes:

Mrs. COLLINS of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by Congressman TORKILDSEN and Congresswoman HARMAN which moves to restore sanity, and bipartisan reality to the U.S. Congress. Last year, the radical GINGRICH-ARMEY Republicans prevailed in inserting their radicalism into the Defense Department authorization and forced upon the U.S. military that it had to kick out valuable experienced, trained U.S. military personnel if and when they were diagnosed as being HIV-positive.

Upon signing the DOD bill for fiscal year 1996, President Clinton instructed the military that it would be the policy of his administration to not enforce that provision. A bipartisan omnibus appropriations conference committee supported President Clinton's position by including a provision to override the discharge mandate. The current DOD authorization bill for fiscal year 1997 has a rerun of the radically conservative, homophobic and punitive measure that is really only designed to further harass persons because of their sexual orientation. It has been widely publicized that the 1,000 plus active military personnel currently known to be HIV-positive reflect a broad cross-section of American life. There are married men and women, single men and women, gays and straights, mothers and fathers among the HIV-positive currently serving in our military, just like there are all across our great land.

The Americans with Disabilities Act [ADA] passed by Congress and implemented into helpful law all across America, prohibits discrimination against and provides for accommodation for persons who are HIV-positive among the many listed disabilities. Our dedicated military personnel deserve the same fair and culturally competent support as any other person afflicted with a physical or medical disability. Logical persons understand that a person can be HIV-positive for 20 or more years without developing AIDS or any further symptom or manifestation of HIV/AIDS. Reasonable persons have learned that HIV is a sexually transmitted disease that cannot be contracted by simple human contact.

In supporting this Torkildsen/Harman amendment, my colleagues are in good company. Let me just list a few of the people and organizations my colleagues have advised us are in support of this amendment: The American Medical Association [AMA]; the Air Force Association; the Veterans of Foreign Wars [VFW]; Disabled American Veterans [DAV]; the Human Rights Campaign; former Senator and former Senate Armed Services Committee chairman Barry Goldwater; Secretary of Defense William Perry; Secretary of Veterans Affairs Jesse Brown; and Gen. John Shalikashvili, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs.

I urge my colleagues to support the Torkildsen/Harman amendment that eliminates the current bill language requiring that military personnel who are HIV-positive be discharged from the service, and to support fairness for all U.S. citizens, including our dedicated military service members.

RECOGNIZING JAMES R. NUNES

HON. BILL BAKER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. BAKER of California. Mr. Speaker, for more than three decades, James R. Nunes has served as an officer of the law. Since 1979, he has been chief of the Pleasant Hill, CA Police Department in my home district. Now, after 37 years of service as a police officer, first with the military and then with three different cities, he is retiring from the force.

Throughout his career, Chief Nunes has worked to make our streets safer, our communities stronger, and our children's future brighter. He knows the meaning of long nights, hard work, and personal sacrifice. His many community activities further reflect his commitment to the citizens of the East Bay community, and are indicative of his devotion to the building of a better society.

It is my sincere hope that Chief Nunes will enjoy a well-deserved retirement from the force. His contributions have been both formidable and enduring, and I know all of my colleagues will join me in wishing him every good thing in the days ahead.

TRIBUTE TO BOB SLIVOVSKY AND KENNY WILLIAMS

HON. WILLIAM O. LIPINSKI

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I wish to pay tribute to two outstanding individuals who have contributed greatly to athletic competition in my district and throughout the Chicago area—Mr. Bob "Slivers" Slivovsky and Mr. Kenny Williams—who were inducted into the Illinois Basketball Coaches Hall of Fame on April 27, 1996.

Slivers Slivovsky has devoted most of his life to athletics at Morton College in Cicero, IL, first as a member of the school's baseball team in the early 1950's, and for the last 24 years as equipment manager, a job title that does not even begin to describe his responsibilities. As Morton Athletic Director George Fejt said of his prized employee: He's our facility manager, sports information director, fundraising coordinator, and goodwill ambassador.

However, it may be Slivers work outside of the school that made the difference in receiving his recognition by the hall of fame as a friend of basketball. For years, he has run and organized the Henry Vais Basketball Tournament at Morton, a two tiered competition for local grade-school players of differing skill levels that is recognized as one of the best tournaments of its kind.

The tournament is his pride and joy—no team is eliminated and the kids enjoy themselves. It provides kids with an opportunity to play and not worry about the wins and the losses, as Slivers describes it.

THE FEDERAL HEALTH PROGRAM BENEFIT CHANGE ACCOUNTABILITY ACT

HON. BENJAMIN L. CARDIN

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today with a bipartisan group of Representatives to introduce the Federal Health Program Benefit Change Accountability Act. This legislation would prevent the Office of Personnel Management [OPM] from making significant changes to Federal retirees' health benefits without first reporting to Congress what those changes will entail, how costs to retirees will be impacted, and how quality will be assured.

This legislation comes in direct response to OPM's decision to allow Blue Cross/Blue Shield [BC/BS] to alter the prescription drug benefit of their standard benefit package for Federal retirees on Medicare. Prior to 1996, there was no cost-sharing for prescription drugs purchased at a network retail pharmacy or through the mail order pharmacy. Starting in January 1996, BC/BS began charging Federal retirees on Medicare a new 20 percent copayment for prescriptions purchased at their network retail pharmacies. The only way this new copayment can be avoided is to use the mail order pharmacy program offered by BC/BS.

Many of us heard from constituents who opposed this change. Most seniors live on fixed incomes and are sensitive to sudden increases in the cost of prescription drugs. They are also the segment of our population that uses the most medications. At the same time, seniors tend to have long standing relationships with their local pharmacists who provide important health care services to them. A local retail pharmacist is often willing to perform services such as color-coding their prescriptions, providing special caps for easy opening, and offering important face-to-face counseling. In addition to being health care providers, local pharmacies play an important local economic role. Sending prescriptions to mail order pharmacies takes dollars and jobs out of our communities. The bottom line is that this benefit change by BC/BS hurts both our constituents' health and our local economies.

More than 70 colleagues joined me in writing to OPM in December 1995 opposing this benefit change. We are still awaiting an important report from GAO that will detail the effect of various prescription drug policies on both enrollees and community pharmacies. We asked OPM to delay implementation of this benefit change until the GAO study was complete and until other cost-savings alternatives were investigated. That letter is attached at the end of this statement.

OPM did not agree with our concerns and went ahead with implementing the benefit change as scheduled. What happened then was nothing short of chaos. The mail order pharmacy company was not prepared for the tremendous increase in business resulting from the new 20 percent copayment at retail pharmacies. We received reports of doctors attempting to submit prescriptions being told that the fax machines had been unplugged and they were not accepting new prescriptions, enrollees were reporting delays of several weeks before obtaining their prescriptions, and there were problems with incomplete or incorrect orders. A constituent of mine in Baltimore stated that she had "literally spent one month on this phone with this company." She also said that when her order finally arrived, her bottle was seven pills short, and her husband's was shy two pills.

To OPM's credit, they immediately moved to correct these severe inadequacies of the program. They allowed a limited number of enrollees to temporarily obtain their drugs at their local pharmacies without the copayment penalty. While it does appear that these extreme problems have been corrected, the fact remains that there are still problems and inequities.

Mail order pharmacies are certainly an appropriate option to make available for enrollees. However, this new copayment structure does not result in a real choice for seniors—it simply increases their out-of-pocket costs. Mail order pharmacies are not an appropriate source for acute drugs because of the length of time it takes to obtain a prescription. This new BC/BS policy imposes a new 20 percent copayment—which can be a significant cost—on enrollees needing acute prescriptions. For them, the mail order pharmacy is not a viable option to avoid this new costs. If the 20 percent copayment is a serious impediment, then the senior may use the mail order option anyway. Their health could be seriously impacted by that decision. In addition, people have been unable to obtain color-coding for their prescriptions—an important service for a frail senior taking a strong regimen of prescriptions.

I, along with several colleagues, have spent months looking into possible remedies to prevent OPM from making decisions on benefit changes in a vacuum as they do today. Our goal is to avoid any repeat performances of the problems we have seen this year. Our legislation is entitled "The Federal Health Program Benefit Change Accountability Act." It details the multiple problems resulting from OPM's decision to make this benefit change and would institute a new reporting process. OPM would be required to provide an annual report to Congress that would describe any significant changes for the upcoming year in Federal retiree health benefits. The report would also provide Congress with the details that were missing this past year. It would explain what cost savings expected to be achieved, how enrollees would be financially affected by the change, and how quality of care would be impacted. Congress would then have time to react if there were concerns with the change.

The bill has been endorsed by the National Association of Chain Drug Stores, the National Association of Retail Druggists, the National Council on Aging, and the National Council of Senior Citizens. The original cosponsors are: Representatives J.C. WATTS, HOYER, GILMAN, MORELLA, PICKETT, LAFALCE, CRAMER, POMEROY, BREWSTER, TIM JOHNSON, MORAN, MEEK, and EHRLICH. We urge our colleagues to join us in preventing OPM from making new benefits changes that negatively impact seniors' health and our local communities.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, DC, December 15, 1995.

JAMES B. KING,
Director, Office of Personnel Management,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. KING: We are writing to raise concerns about the implementation of a new 20 percent copayment for prescriptions filled in local retail pharmacies under the Blue Cross/Blue Shield Federal Employees Health Benefits Program.

As you know, beginning January 1, 1996, this change will make it more costly for almost one million Federal retirees with Medicare Part B coverage if they want to continue to obtain their prescriptions at their neighborhood pharmacy. The only way for Federal retirees to avoid the imposition of this new cost-sharing will be for them to leave their neighborhood pharmacy and send their prescriptions to an out-of-state mail order firm. The rationale for this change is that it is a cost-saving measure. While we commend efforts by BC/BS to lower costs for the Federal Government and their enrollees, we question whether these savings will be passed through to enrollees.

Two aspects of these efforts are abundantly clear to us. Last year, BC/BS's use of a mail order operation diverted $400 million from our districts in sales, revenues and jobs from the local pharmacies. If this new change becomes effective, an estimated $600 million will leave our districts in 1996 and instead be invested in an out-of-state mail order firm. Many local pharmacies are small businesses that cannot afford a shift of their local business to out-of-state mail order firms. Second, Federal retirees, many of whom take multiple prescriptions that require face-to-face pharmacist counseling and close monitoring of prescription use, will lose the medical counseling of their local pharmacists when they switch to the mail order program due to financial constraints.

We have strong reservations about cost-saving solutions that place an economic penalty on the use of local pharmacies. There are alternative approaches that BC/BS could take to achieve cost-savings in the area of prescription drug use. One solution would be to implement a mandatory generic drug program. Another solution could be a reasonable copayment, such as one or two dollars, per prescription drug. Neither of these alternatives would disadvantage our neighborhood pharmacies which play important health care and economic roles in our communities.

You may be aware that the GAO has recently been asked to study the impact of BC/BS's FEHBP's prescription drug program policies on enrollees and community pharmacies. We believe that this is an important study and that the results should be known before this new policy is implemented. Therefore, we ask you to take action to postpone implementation of this change until the GAO study is complete and to consider alternative cost-saving approaches such as those mentioned in this letter.

Sincerely,
Benjamin L. Cardin and 68 Members of Congress.

TRIBUTE TO W.T. WOODSON HIGH SCHOOL CONCERT BAND OF FAIRFAX

HON. THOMAS M. DAVIS

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to rise today and pay tribute to the W.T. Woodson Senior High School Concert Band of Fairfax, which will receive one of the most prestigious international awards for high school concert bands. On May 17, 1996, the W.T. Woodson Band will receive the John Philip Sousa Foundation's Sudler Flag of Honor, an award which recognizes high school concert bands that have demonstrated the highest standards of excellence in all respects of their activities. Under the direction of a very dedicated and talented music director, Mr. John Casagrande, it is one of only two bands from the entire United States and Canada to receive this coveted award this year.

Each year, the John Philip Sousa Foundation awards the Sudler Flag of Honor after conducting a rigorous selection process undertaken by a committee made up of nationally known band conductors. The Selection Committee chooses award recipients based on the following criteria: First, the band's music director has been incumbent in his or her own position for at least 7 consecutive years; second, the band has maintained a high standard of excellence in the concert area for several years; third, the band has received a superior rating at State, regional, or national levels of competition; fourth, the band has performed at significant meetings at State, regional, and national levels; and fifth, a number of students in the band have participated in district and all-State honor bands or similar groups. There is no limit on the number of bands which can receive the Sudler Flag of Honor each year. So indeed, not only is it a remarkable accomplishment that the W.T. Woodson Band earned this honor, it is equally commendable that it is one of only two bands worthy of receiving the award in 1996.

Mr. Speaker, I know my colleagues will join me in applauding the hard work and commitment of Mr. Casagrande and this talented group of young musicians. I congratulate them on receiving this distinguished award and for making their parents, neighbors, and community proud of this exceptional achievement.

50TH ANNIVERSARY OF SACRED HEART CHURCH IN FEEDING HILLS, MA

HON. RICHARD E. NEAL

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. NEAL. Mr. Speaker, today I would like to recognize the Parish of Sacred Heart Church in Feeding Hills, MA which will be celebrating its 50th anniversary on Sunday, May 19, 1996. For the past half century, Sacred Heart Church has been an integral part of the Springfield Catholic Diocese and a mainstay in the town of Agawam. The church began as a small mission chapel for Mount Carmel Church in Springfield and was run by the Stigmatine Fathers. In 1946, Bishop Thomas M. O'Leary declared Sacred Heart a territorial parish in Feeding Hills to be run by the Stigmatine Order.

Sacred Heart had 175 families in its parish in 1946 but its chapel could only accommodate 125 people. The need for a new larger church was immanent and the parishioners immediately began working together to raise the necessary funds for the new construction. After more than ten years of hard work, the diligence of these parishioners was rewarded in 1959 when Bishop Christopher Weldon dedicated the new Sacred Heart Church. The expansion did not end with the new church, however, and in 1964 the men of the parish built the Sacred Heart Restaurant at the Big "E" in West Springfield and the Parish Center was dedicated in 1971. During this period, an athletic program was established for the young people of the parish and a parish library was added, complete with adult bible classes. The parish had certainly blossomed into a major center for community activity in the Feeding Hills area and was a source of tremendous pride for the citizens of Agawam.

Today the parish has grown to 2,065 families and has been transferred from the Stigmatine Order back to the Springfield Diocese. This tremendous growth and the parish's continued commitment to charitable organizations and community development have made Sacred Heart one of the true gems of the Second Congressional District. I would like to salute Rev. Kenneth Tatro, the Pastor of Sacred Heart; Pastoral Minister Sister Eileen Sullivan, SSJ; Deacon James Martone; and the many dedicated parishioners who have donated so much time and energy over the years to ensure Sacred Heart's place among the most outstanding institutions in Western Massachusetts.

Sacred Heart is a tremendous source of pride for not only the Springfield Diocese but for the entire Second Congressional District. I am honored to represent the outstanding individuals who comprise Sacred Heart parish and I join with the citizens of the Second Congressional District in offering a most heartfelt congratulations on this "golden" anniversary. Sacred Heart has truly succeeded in its mission to foster a cooperative and inclusive spirit in the community and I wish Sacred Heart Church all the best for another successful 50 years.

DON'T DISCRIMINATE AGAINST THE HIV-POSITIVE

HON. SAM FARR

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. FARR of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express strong opposition to an unfair and discriminatory provision in the National Security Authorization Act of 1996. This provision would require all HIV-positive personnel to be immediately and summarily discharged from the military.

The provision is based on prejudice and misunderstanding about HIV and the AIDS virus. Being HIV-positive does not mean being bed-ridden. It does not mean you cannot work. It does not mean you are contagious. In fact, it may take years before people who are HIV-positive show the debilitating symptoms of AIDS.

Current military policy is fair and makes sense. Those who are HIV-positive, as with those with disabilities, are not sent in combat. They are allowed to continue their service until they are too ill to serve.

But this provision would remove such persons outright, whether they are ill or healthy. The assumption is, if you have HIV, you are a threat to others, you are sick, or something is wrong with you.

All of those beliefs are false. Magic Johnson is one, more famous example, but there are tens of thousands of HIV-positive Americans who are healthy, working, and contributing to society.

We should not discriminate against men and women in uniform if they are still able—and still want—to serve their country.

50TH ANNIVERSARY OF WAKEFERN
FOOD CORPORATION

HON. ROBERT E. ANDREWS

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to bring to the attention of my colleagues one of the great business success stories in my State, Wakefern Food Corp. of Elizabeth, NJ.

Wakefern, which to many of us is known as ShopRite, was born in 1946. The Second World War was one of the great tragic con-licts of human history, but the peacetime economy that was created in its aftermath laid the groundwork for so many positive opportunities to come. Wakefern was created out of just such an opportunity. In Newark, NJ, eight independent grocers joined together to create a buying cooperative, Wakefern Food Corp., so they could get the benefit of buying discounts. Like so many other companies, their earliest days were filled with endless challenges and difficulties. Yet, through hard work and dedication to a dream they persevered, and the company became the success that it is today.

Today, Wakefern and its ShopRite supermarkets represent the largest retailer-owned cooperative in the United States and are New Jersey's second largest employer. Their 37 members own and operate those supermarkets employing 35,000 associates and serving 500 communities in New Jersey and more than 3 million customers each week. Throughout the region, the firm employs 15,000 more associates.

Wakefern takes its mission of excellence seriously, and it also understands that this mission can only be extended through community involvement. ShopRite's owners and Wakefern have dedicated themselves to improving educational opportunities through programs such as the supermarket careers effort for special needs students. They have worked tirelessly to fight hunger through their support of the Community Food Bank of New Jersey, and they can continuously recognize the spirit of friendship and love through their sponsorship of the New Jersey Special Olympics.

This past March, I was pleased to join with those congratulating Wakefern's general merchandise facility in Jamesburg for winning the Merit Site OSHA Award for workplace safety.

This year, Wakefern is celebrating its 50th anniversary in grand style, with commemorative ceremonies and activities at Liberty State Park and Ellis Island. While we join in this celebration and recognize the dedication of so many that have worked so hard to make Wakefern and ShopRite the outstanding corporate citizen that it has become, we also pay tribute to an individual who helped build this company from the ground up, Tom Infusino. Tom has steadfastly led Wakefern as its chairman for the last 25 years. His vision has helped transform Wakefern from a group of local grocers to the great service corporation that it is today.

Mr. Speaker, I know that my colleagues would join me today in congratulating Wakefern, its 50,000 associates and its great leadership on 50 years of success, and in wishing them 50 more years of service to our community.

CONDEMNATION OF SHOPPING CENTER OUTSIDE AUSCHWITZ

HON. ROBERT G. TORRICELLI

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to condemn, in the strongest possible terms, a proposed shopping mall to be located just outside the Auschwitz death camp in Poland.

The Auschwitz death camp has left a scar in our minds and hearts that can never be removed. It is a reminder of the depths of evil human kind is capable of. And it serves as a warning that we must never let it happen again. For anyone to commercialize Auschwitz or develop its immediate surroundings would be an affront to all of us, and to the memories of the millions of victims of the Holocaust.

Approximately 1.5 million people were killed at Auschwitz during World War II. The 50,000 people who visit the camp sites every year are there to understand the monstrous inhumanity that took place. To exploit the camps for economic gain is an insult to everyone who has worked to ensure the Holocaust's unique place in the world's history and culture.

The Polish Government recently announced that it would temporarily halt further development of the shopping center outside the Auschwitz death camp and set up a special government commission to examine the legality of the planned supermarket. The First Secretary also noted that Poland's President Aleksander Kwasniewski "strongly criticized the proposed construction." The final decision on whether to proceed with the shopping center lies with the town council of Oswiecim-Brzezinka.

There must be no equivocation on termination of this shopping center. The construction must stop permanently. A commercial endeavor so close to Auschwitz would be offensive not just to the memories of those who were murdered there but to the sense that Auschwitz stands as one of the most prominent symbols of the lesson of the Holocaust, "Never Again."

IN HONOR OF OFFICER KEITH BRADDOCK

HON. EARL POMEROY

OF NORTH DAKOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Speaker, this week has been designated National Police Week. In conjunction with this, I would like to take a moment today to honor a North Dakota peace officer recently killed in the line of duty. Watford City police officer Keith Braddock died March 20 of this year after he was shot while responding to an incident at the American Legion Club.

Mr. Speaker, Keith Braddock was a family man. He was married and had three children. While his family must now try to move on from this horrible nightmare, I hope it provides them some comfort to know that every North Dakotan is grateful for his service to the people of our State. Cities and small towns all across America are more secure because of dedicated peace officers like Keith.

The tragedy that unfolded late that afternoon on Main Street has awakened the 1,800 residents of Watford City that they are not immune to the all-too-prevalent acts of violence occurring in our Nation's cities. Protecting citizens from harms way is a dangerous task—both in our urban centers and in rural America. Although peace officers in many small communities may know most of the folks in town, they can't be too cautious. For the most part, these officers are out there on their own—backup can be miles away.

This unfortunate situation has underscored the fact that senseless acts of violence can happen anywhere. We owe a debt of gratitude to those like Keith Braddock who put their own lives at risk to make us a little safer.

MAY IS NATIONAL PHYSICAL FITNESS AND SPORTS MONTH

HON. JOE BARTON

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, May is National Physical Fitness and Sports Month, conducted by the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports. Every American should take this opportunity to celebrate and begin a fitness routine. The benefits from exercise are far-reaching. Studies have revealed that there is a direct connection between exercise and lower death rates from heart attacks, stroke, hypertension, non-insulin-dependent diabetes, brittle bones, anxiety, and depression. However, in lieu of this information many Americans continue to remain inactive, with little or no physical activity in their daily lives.

Even low- to moderate-intensity activities like walking, gardening, or biking can bring benefits. I realize this so I have taken the opportunity to share my love of biking with my constituents. On my home page, you will find "Biking with Barton." This is a detailed exploration on the Internet that allows you to link with other bike pages. I have included all sorts of biking information from biking events and books, to community activities, and details on how to bike to work.

I am also happy to support organizations like the National Coalition for Promoting Physical Activity. They have a long-term mission to motivate more Americans to be physically active. The national coalition is a collaborative partnership of groups who have identified physical activity and health as their primary mission and is facilitated by the American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance; the American College of Sports Medicine; and the American Heart Association. To accomplish its goals the national coalition will use its network to provide leadership to the American public and policymakers to increase the understanding, communication, and promotion of physical activity and health. They seek to develop consistent exercise messages to clarify for Americans the confusing array of information that currently exists and coordinate education efforts between the public and private sectors.

I urge all Americans to challenge themselves this May, National Physical Fitness and Sports Month, to make physical activity a regular part of your life.

TRIBUTE TO EDEN PRAIRIE HIGH SCHOOL

HON. JIM RAMSTAD

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to praise the entire Eden Prairie High School community for being named winner of the U.S. Department of Education's prestigious Blue Ribbon Award.

The Department of Education could not have selected a more deserving high school for this highly coveted honor. When it comes to a comprehensive and successful approach to excellence in teaching, student achievement, leadership and parental involvement, Eden Prairie has, for a long time, set a lofty standard.

Mr. Speaker, this high distinction was well earned. Everyone at Eden Prairie High School played a role in achieving this extraordinary level of educational excellence.

Under the visionary leadership of a most remarkable man, Principal Arne Johnson, Eden Prairie High School has flourished. Arne is always there for each and every student. He provides at all hours of the day a willing ear, an understanding shoulder and a marvelous and diverse source of advice and encouragement.

Former superintendent Jerry McCoy and new superintendent Bill Gaslin have also been instrumental in preparing the fertile ground and providing the necessary resources to grow the special love for learning that exists at Eden Prairie. The students have blossomed under their effective management.

A school board full of caring and committed citizens has selflessly devoted the time, talent and energy necessary to make Eden Prairie High School one of the best in all of America.

This historic designation was accomplished through the pioneering and innovative contributions of a truly dedicated administrative staff and dynamic collection of committed teachers. Their deep and unwavering commitment to the students forms the foundation for a very special relationship with the young people at Eden Prairie High School. The teachers and staff have gone above and beyond all reasonable expectations to help kids, from the extra hours spent coaching and teaching extracurricular events to their efforts to bolster their professional credentials through additional postsecondary education.

Mr. Speaker, another key ingredient in the overwhelming success of Eden Prairie High School has been the precedent-setting and inspiring level of involvement by parents and members of the community. In this day and age when we in Congress hear so much blame being placed on the lack of participation by parents in their children's education. Eden Prairie's parents and other residents stand out as a shining lighthouse of an example of the miracles that can happen when adults take the time to help out at their schools.

But, Mr. Speaker, the No. 1 reason Eden Prairie High School has been chosen as a Blue Ribbon Award winner is its spirited students. This student body is focused in a most impressive way on real achievement and a relentless pursuit of the highest standards of excellence. The students have worked hard to create a safe, supportive and drug-free environment. They have worked hard to establish a record of academic excellence across the board.

From student leadership to participation in public service projects to help people in need in the community, from the heavy emphasis on scholastic achievement to the enthusiastic way they revel in the success of their classmates, the students of Eden Prairie High School deserve to claim this national honor as their own. The students at Eden Prairie High School are the kind of young people any parent would be proud to call their own.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in congratulating the entire Eden Prairie High School Community on a job well done and for setting such a powerful example of what can be accomplished by a school if everyone pitches in and strives to do their best.

Today we salute Eden Prairie High School as a blue ribbon award winner and for proving that schools all across America can succeed if everyone puts their minds and hearts into the effort like they do at Eden Prairie High School.

LEWIS AND CLARK DISCOVERY
EXPEDITION 1996

HON. JAMES M. TALENT

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. TALENT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the Lewis and Clark Discovery Expedition 1996: the reenactment of the world's most noted expedition. This 22-stop voyage will retrace the first 6 weeks of the path of the original expedition which began from St. Charles, MO, 192 years ago.

Meriwether Lewis and William Clark's pursuit of discovery in the newly acquired Louisiana Territory revealed some 168 unknown species of flora and 128 types of animals. They used courage, hard work, and perseverance in overcoming extraordinary obstacles along their frontier exploration. The Lewis and Clark Discovery Expedition 1996, will highlight the historic, scientific, and cultural consequences of this celebrated journey. It will also examine several other important themes such as the development of the United States and the American character.

The primary vehicle for this reenactment is a replica keelboat constructed by boatwright Glen Bishop. The Keelboat, which Bishop spent 10 years constructing, will contain numerous exhibits which highlight the historical, cultural, and scientific discoveries made by Lewis and Clark. It will retrace the original voyage, making stops along the path that the explorers followed during the Missouri leg of their journey.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to acknowledge this fine celebration of American history. I commend the members of the planning committee and all those involved for their hard work to help preserve the memory of this historic expedition.

TRIBUTE TO JOHN F. NOWAK

HON. MARTIN T. MEEHAN

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, May 15, 1996

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to an outstanding author, John F. Nowak from the city of Lowell.

Mr. Nowak is the author of "Jasiu," an autobiography honoring his education and experiences as a child and later his adult years. I know the city of Lowell, as I was born and raised there. It is a proud immigrant city, with a rich history. It was very prominent in the 19th century and was renowned for its robust mill industry. Today, for many families, it remains a symbol for people to work hard and achieve one's goals.

I make this point, Mr. Speaker, for I feel that just as there are many families of this region who have made historic contributions to our country, Mr. Nowak has made his own contribution. Mr. Nowak served as a member of the Armed Forces and was a Federal employee to our Government. I believe that by writing and publishing "Jasiu," Mr. Nowak has achieved a lifetime goal. A goal that few of us ever achieve.

In his book, Mr. Nowak tells a number of interesting stories about his experiences as a young Polish-American boy growing up in the 1930's, his adult years in the Air Force while stationed in North Africa and his volunteer efforts working to preserve the environment. His light-hearted philosophy makes "Jasiu" a work that is spirited and entertaining, despite the trials and tribulations he encounters.

Mr. Nowak graduated from Lowell High School and after returning to civilian life, he earned an associates degree in business administration from Merrimack College. He then went on to receive two subsequent bachelor degrees—one in liberal arts from Merrimack College and the other in sociology from River College.

I commend Mr. Nowak's drive and ambition, as well as his love of learning. His sense of human understanding gives his book a genuine quality and paints a portrait of a man who has lived and accomplished much. I extend my congratulations to John Nowak on the publication of his book.

BUDGET RESOLUTION

Committee on Rules: Granted, by voice vote, a modified closed rule, providing no further general debate, and that H. Con. The rule provides for consideration of only those amendments designated in section 2 of the resolution which may be offered only in the order designated, may be offered only by the Member designated or a designee (except that if no Member offers the amendment designated in paragraph 3 of section 2, then that amendment shall nevertheless be considered as pending at that point), shall be considered as read, shall be debatable for 1 hour equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent, and shall not be subject to amendment.

The rule makes in order three amendments in the nature of a substitute that are: (1) an amendment to be offered by Representative Payne of New Jersey, or a designee (2) an amendment to be offered by Representative Orton of Utah, or a designee and (3) an amendment to be offered by Representative Sabo of Minnesota, or which may be offered by any Member, or which shall be considered as pending. Res. 178 is agreed to allocations of spending and credit responsibilities in House Report 104-575 shall be considered as the allocations otherwise required by section 602(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.
